A note from the Katy Times editor

Wow! What a year we're having. A year that has tossed everyone about like tooth-picks on an ocean and has seen myriad challenges brought to our community's doorstep. A pandemic. A soured economy at both the local and national levels. The energy industry on its ear because of political maneuverings around the globe. An election filled with strife. Friends, family and even treasured celebrities such as Alex Trebek, Sean Connery and Eddie Van Halen leaving us.

Unfortunately, that year put a delay in our usual printing schedule as well. A minor nuisance compared to everything else our community is dealing with, but we know our readers look forward to the Best of Katy publication from the Katy Times each year.

We decided to put the publication of Best of Katy off to the late fall this year for a few reasons, but the primary reason was that the businesses and restaurants that participate had bigger concerns than being in Best of Katy. Restaurants were struggling to stay open with drive-thru or curbside service as their only options. Several businesses were closing either temporarily or for good. Moving forward with the competition at that time would have been insensitive to the state of the community we serve.

Now that things have begun opening back up and we can see some signs of economic recovery, we wanted to move forward with this annual tradition. Our hope is that through this publication, the businesses listed here can get some much-needed attention and community members can find a new restaurant they haven't tried or be connected with a professional services business such as an accountant that can help them plan their economic recovery.

Because that's what the Katy area is about.

Whether your address is in Katy proper, Cinco Ranch, Fulshear, Brookshire, Pattison or Houston – the Katy area is about helping our neighbors.

When Hurricane Harvey slammed into us in 2017, it wasn't the government that bailed us out and made everything right again. It was neighbors and business owners. People like Bill Bain, owner of KT Antiques in downtown Katy who had crews from his construction company come into downtown and help out his neighboring businesses. It was the churches of all faiths and denominations that stepped up to make sure first responders had places to sleep and locals had food to eat. It was the volunteers at Katy Christian Ministries, their generous activities funded through their resale stores, that ran food distribution and helped area residents get access to the resources they needed to recover.

These businesses and organizations – from Snappy's in downtown Katy where Bobby and Effie Katsabas banter with current and former city officials about hunting season and drainage projects over cups of often-topped-off coffee to Mo's Place on Kingsland Boulevard or The Wildcatter just west of Katy where folks go to enjoy live music and blow off steam – are the heart of our community in many ways. They're the places we'll go to have fun, practice our faith, spend the money that will help rev the economy back up and get what we need to give our families a good quality of life.

The businesses in these pages and all of the other local businesses we pass by on the road every day are the heart of our community. These are the places that will bring back jobs, provide WiFi to our neighbors looking for work, help us teach our children and make sure we have a place to sit down and break bread together during the good times I know are to come.

How do I know? It isn't some journalist's trick. There are no magic projections or anything fancy. It's simple faith in the community the Katy Times serves. Greater Katy is too strong, loving and giving for anything less to happen.

Thank you to each of the businesses that choose to advertise with us, whether that ad is in this special publication or the newspaper. We appreciate your faith in us and please know that we have faith in you and your future success which we hope to be a part of for years to come.

Thank you, also, to our readers. We are committed to providing you news about the community you live in, including information about help available to you during these difficult times and the businesses such as those listed in this publication which can offer you a job, help you with your debt, provide an amazing meal and, across the board, be a neighbor in a trying time.

Sincerely and with appreciation for an amazing community,
