With over 30 hit songs, The Rat Pack Lounge will leave you singing and savoring the days of highballs and high rollers. This musical comedy will feature both veterans and newcomers to the MDT stage. The new faces are Cameron Clark Ponce (as William Saunders/Frank Sinatra), Dustin Joplin Gonzalez (George Rodriguez/Dean Martin) and Solomon Kee (Bobby Goldberg/Sammy Davis Jr.). We also welcome back Brett Frederickson (Vic Candelino) and Kristina Swearingen (Katherine Kerr/Angie/secretary/voice over) to the MDT stage. Live accom-

A Parrothead looks back on Mr. Margaritaville

A few of us got together Monday night to remember some traveling.

Jimmy Buffett passed away last weekend, and just like the rest of the world, his many fans in this area were shocked and saddened.

There was a group of us that had basically pilgrimaged to Indy nearly every year for two decades to see this guy, the leader of Parrothead World.

We were from all corners of the city and county, with as divergent a set of backgrounds as can be imagined.

But as I sat with these friends and reminisced, I remembered that there was more to all this than just good music, tiki lamps, Hawaiian shirts and margaritas.

Buffett Day was an event. We played golf (The Greater Buffett Open), there were gatherings at homes and pubs all day before leaving.

And we chartered a bus.

Yes, about 50 of us (over 100 one year) piled on a big shiny bus and went to see this guy play, and be with the 25,000 or so they let into the place, who were all doing the same darn thing.

On the surface, you would say it was just a big party, and in the black and white world, that is very true.

But underneath all this, it was a gathering of 25,000 friends, all just doing what friends do.

We were enjoying each other's company.

Jimmy Buffett never had a No. 1 hit song, but there everyone was, singing the words to every song.

Look at your newspaper, or your computer screen right now and deny that you don't know the words to at least one Buffett song, and have sung along when it comes on the radio or wherever you hear it.

The friends I was with have reached across the years. A couple of them got married and have almost grown-up children, several others have retired from jobs. We took the time to remember one of our founding members of this little group as well. Kevin Thompkins was the biggest Buffett fan I have ever known. He was the driving force many years to get folks together and get the trip to see Buffett organized. I am positive that he was so close to first in line at Heaven's door to meet Jimmy Buffett.

You want to know how long all this lasted - at one concert Kevin came up to me and said my personal song was "A Pirate Looks at 40."

Okay, that was before I was 40, and that was more than a quarter-century ago.

Our trips were quite the thing.

September 11, 2001 was supposed to be Buffett Day.

It was a gorgeous Tuesday, and we had the regular golf and other shenanigans planned, and the bus was supposed to leave around 5.

Then the world changed.

We did get to see Jimmy about three weeks later, and that event was one of the many healing moments in the days after that tragedy.

We got stuck in the mud one year, and had to wait for a tow truck to fight all that traffic to give us a pull out. This was after about 30 burly guys all thought they could push that bus out of the mud and ended up with a mud bath from the back tires.

We turned the bus around once, on the north side of Indy to return to the concert site to fetch a friend and his date who we had left behind because we couldn't find them. In other years, we found several friends who forgot where the bus was parked and ended up in the wrong lot. We made lots of new friends in the security department as we searched for them. Yes, lots of things were different before cell phones and GPS pins.

But at the start and end of all this, and all these stories, are friends.

Jimmy Buffett will live forever because of the impact he had on music in America.

What I will always appreciate about him, besides the easy words to remember, was that he helped cement some lifelong friendships.

Because of him and his music, those friendships will live also forever.

Except for a three-hour delay last Friday getting to Dallas, my travels weren't very newsworthy last week. This weekend I start doubling up, as I go to cover Purdue at Virginia Tech on Saturday and get NFL started with the Packers at the Bears on Sunday. I'm driving to Chicago Friday, then fly east. Its back to Chicago Saturday evening. Looks good on paper.

To our friend Jimmy Buffett — fair skies and sandy beaches.

For all the rest of us — safe travels.

Event from man's past troubles current wife

DEAR ABBY: Two years before he met me, my husband of four years did something I feel was morally repugnant: He solicited a prostitute. When he committed this act, he was going through a dark period in his life. He was divorcing a woman who had cheated and left him for another man, raising his young son and dealing with immense feelings of insecurity.

He told me all of this while we were dating, and I thought I would eventually get over it. However, almost five years into our relationship, it still haunts me and makes me question his character. I hate that he was capable of doing something like this, regardless of what he was going through.

I have tried therapy, and we've tried couples therapy — nothing has helped me to move on. He says this is not the type of person he is now, but I just can't seem to separate the man who did that awful thing and the man I fell in love with. Are some actions so awful that they stain a person for the rest of their lives? Are we doomed? — WRESTLING WITH IT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WRESTLING: Your husband was honest with you from the beginning of your relationship and has been, I presume, a faithful partner. As you stated, he was under a lot of pressure when that happened. I can't name one person who hasn't made a mistake sometime in the past, including me. Use some common sense and quit judging your poor husband for his one "slip," or PLEASE free him to find a woman who will appreciate him for who he is.

DEAR ABBY: My spouse and I are retired. I thought we would spend our retirement doing things together, but all she wants to do is sleep. It is not unusual for her to stay in bed for two days straight, getting up only to use the bathroom and get a drink. She does not help with the housekeeping or other household chores.

I've asked her why she sleeps so much. She tells me she doesn't know why. I have gone with her to her doctors, and they have run tests. Physically there's nothing wrong to account for all her sleeping. This leads me to believe she's taking prescription medication to be able to sleep as long as she does. When I asked her if this was the case, she denied it.

My wife was sexually abused as a child and is currently being treated for depression. Her doctor and I have wanted her to see a psychiatrist, but she absolutely refuses. I've talked to her on several occasions and let her know I'm unhappy with how this is affecting our marriage. She seems not to care.

I'm thinking of getting a separation. Do you think this is advisable? Or do you have any other ideas? I love her dearly and being apart is not what I desire. She deserves all my efforts to help her before I just no longer care and give up. — FRUSTRATED IN INDIANA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Losing interest in things someone used to enjoy and sleeping for "two days straight" are classic symptoms of SEVERE, CHRONIC depression. It may have been triggered by her retirement.

Your wife definitely should be talking to someone. If it's not a psychiatrist, then certainly a psychologist who works with a psychiatrist who will prescribe medications if they are needed. You and her doctor should insist upon it, because your wife appears to be very ill.

Robert H. Schuller, who was a televangelist, said, "High achievers spot rich opportunities swiftly, make big decisions quickly and move into action immediately. Follow these principles and you can make your dreams come true."

That also applies to bridge experts. How should South play to try to make four spades? West leads the diamond jack, and East overtakes with his queen.

North was tempted to rebid two spades, but with 4-3-3-3 he settled for one no-trump. South bid what he hoped he could make.

South has nine top tricks: seven spades and two minor-suit aces. Maybe East will have the heart ace — but as you are seeing this deal in a column, you know it cannot be that easy. Similarly, West is not going to have the club king. Can declarer get home if both of those honors are offside?

Yes, if he notes the invaluable clubs. South wins trick one because if he ducks, East will shift to the heart queen, and the defenders will take the first four tricks.

Declarer overtakes his club 10 with dummy's ace and continues with the club queen (or nine). Here, East will cover with the king. So South ruffs high, draws trumps ending on the board and plays the club nine. When East covers, declarer ruffs, plays a spade to the eight and cashes the club eight.

Note that if East does not cover one of the clubs from the board, South discards his remaining diamond.

Finally, if West has both the club king and jack, declarer is still all right. He will lose only two clubs and one heart.

Farmer sentiment dips amid weaker view

Journal Review

WEST LAFAYETTE — Producer sentiment was notably lower in August, as the Purdue University/CME Group Ag Economy Barometer index dipped 8 points to a reading of 115. This month's decline was fueled by producers' weaker perception of current conditions both on their farms and in U.S. agriculture. The Index of Current Conditions fell 13 points to a reading of 108. The Index of Future Expectations also declined 5 points in August to a reading of 119. This month's Ag Economy Barometer survey was conducted from Aug. 14-18.

"Rising interest rates and concerns about high input prices continue to put downward pressure on producer sentiment," said James Mintert, the barometer's principal investigator and director of Purdue University's Center for Commercial Agriculture. "This month over half (60%) of the producers we surveyed said they expect interest rates to rise in the upcoming year."

When asked about their top concerns for their farming operations in the next 12 months, producers continue to point to higher input prices (34% of respondents) and rising interest rates (24% of respondents). Even though crop prices weakened significantly this summer, only one in five producers (20% of respondents) chose declining commodity prices as one of their top concerns.

The Farm Capital Investment Index was lower this month, falling 8 points to a reading of 37. Increasing prices for farm machinery and new construction along with rising interest rates continue to be the two most commonly cited reasons for their negative view. Meanwhile, producers' rating of farm financial conditions changed little in August, as the Farm Financial Conditions Index declined just one point to a reading of 86.

Despite increasing concerns about rising interest rates, producers remain cautiously optimistic about farmland values. The Short-Term Farmland Value Expectations Index rose one point to 126, while the long-term index was unchanged at a reading of 151. About 4 out of 10 (39%) respondents said they expect farmland values to rise over the next year, while 13% said they look for values to decline in the next year. When asked about their longer-term view of farmland values, more than 6 out of 10 (63%) respondents said they expect values to rise over the next five years, while 12% said they expect values to fall.

To better understand the usage of carbon contracts in row-crop agriculture, corn and soybean growers were asked about the types of conversations they have had with those companies. In the August survey, 6% of corn and soybean growers said they have engaged in discussions with companies about receiving payments to capture carbon on their farms, while just 2% said they had signed a carbon contract. Nearly half (47%) of the farms who discussed contract terms with a company said they were offered a payment rate of $10 to $20 per metric ton of carbon captured. Among the farms who engaged in discussions but chose not to sign a carbon contract, half said it was because the payment level was too low.

Retirement open house planned for Howland

Jeffery B. Howland will retire Sept. 17 from Lakeside Book Company (formerly LSC). To celebrate the occasion there will be an open house 2-6 p.m. Sept. 24 at the Darlington American Legion on South Street.

Howland graduated from North Montgomery High School in May 1976. He started with RR Donnelley & Sons on June 2, 1976, as a material handler on a bindery line. In 1992, he accepted a position in the press room as a board cutter. The past 30 years Howland has been a baler operator at both plants.

Life insurance isn't a baby step

Dear Dave,
I just discovered you and your teachings a couple of weeks ago. I'm already on Baby Step 2, and I was wondering if I should buy life insurance now or wait until I've finished paying off debt. I'm single with no children, and I owe a total of $44,700. I have a $25,000 company-funded life insurance policy through my employer. What do you think I should do?

— Elizabeth

Dear Elizabeth, If you have a life insurance need, it's not a Baby Step. It's a necessity in your budget and something you need to put in place as soon as possible. But from what you've told me, you don't have a great need for life insurance at this point. No one, except you, is depending on your income, and the $25,000 policy you have through your employer is more than enough to take care of any final expenses if something happened to you. The main purpose of life insurance is to take care of those you leave behind when you die. If someone is financially dependent on your income, I recommend having 10 to 12 times your annual income wrapped up in a good level term life insurance policy. That means if you make $80,000 a year, you should have a policy worth anywhere from $800,000 to $960,000. If I were you, I wouldn't buy another life insurance policy at all right now. If you get married or have kids somewhere down the road, then buy it immediately. In that case, both you and your spouse should have 15- to 20-year level term policies of 10 to 12 times your individual incomes. And never buy anything except level term life insurance.

Let's bring back wise sayings from the past

Young people learned wise sayings in mid-20th century by word of mouth before mass media. Sayings came from a few books commonly found in homes — the Bible, Shakespeare's works, and perhaps Ben Franklin's Poor Richard's Almanac.

A few memorable wise sayings were drilled into me and my peers.

"A stitch in time, saves nine." (Of course, that was a time when holes in old clothes were stitched to keep them presentable, before holes thought hip were slashed into new clothes.)

"Waste not, want not."

"A penny saved is a penny earned."

"Don't be penny wise and pound [or dollar] foolish."

"Neither a borrower nor a lender be."

"Costly thy habits as thy purse can buy."

"Finish your food; remember the poor in China."

You might recall some wise sayings passed along to you.

Those from my youth came from parents who had struggled to raise a family during the Great Depression. They urged prudence, frugality, and careful attention to the use of resources. Don't throw away food or anything that might be useful to you or others. Deal with small problems, like a small puncture before everything is lost. The main teaching is not to be extravagant in expenditures because wastefulness leads to becoming a pauper. Don't spend money you don't have because that requires begging or borrowing. The king's advice to Hamlet as he left for France was not to live on borrowed funds because that dulls the edge of financial prudence. Nor should he lend to others, which often results in loss of both money and friend.

Such echoes from the past raise the question, do they have any relevance or value in our current context when such norms and wisdom are being ignored or discarded. Indeed, some might argue that our economy could not survive without credit cards and increasing debt that supports extravagant lifestyles. Much of our media is supported by ads, the goal of which is to cause us to yearn for things that do not contribute to wholesome or satisfying lives.

Some argue that what we call wise sayings arise from the devil's workshop. Results become apparent in greed, avarice, miserliness, and selfishness. In fact, the poor were generous in a time before any safety nets existed other than those provided by churches. An elderly man without legs 'sold' pencils from a blanket on the sidewalk of my hometown. Perhaps his injury was during WW I or while working in coal mines or on the railroad. My dad never failed to place some money in his cup. Indeed, saving pennies produced the freedom to spend dollars to help others. A religious group known for what used to be called 'puritan virtues' asserts that money wasted by others on vices — alcohol, drugs, gambling, and immorality — is sufficient for a member's flourishing and generosity.

The thrifty poor are often more generous than the wasteful rich. Such generosity is stressed in a corresponding set of wise sayings.

"The best place to put extra food is in your brother's stomach."

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Lay up treasures where neither moth nor rust corrupt and where thieves do not break in to steal."

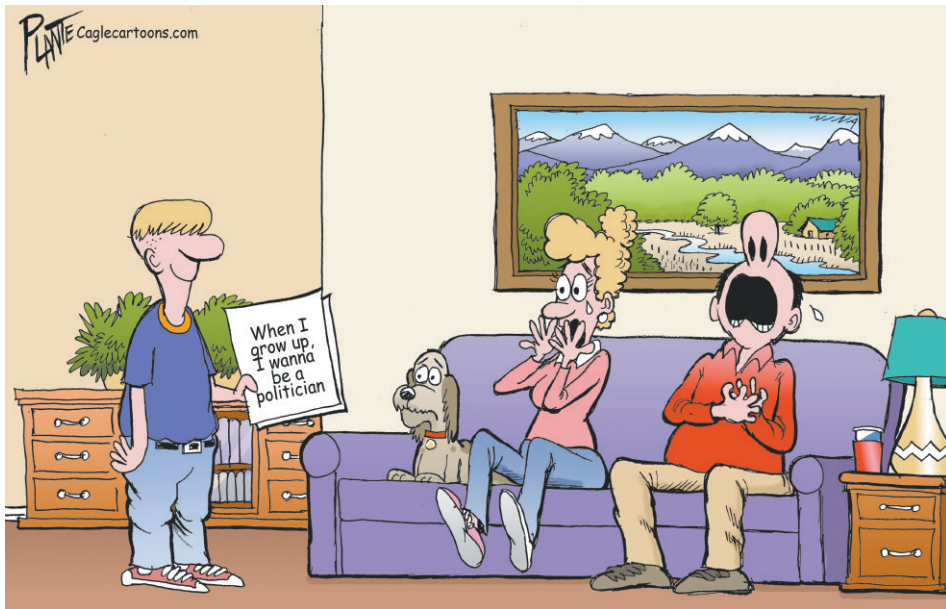

"You make a living by what you get. You make a life by what you give."

Such wise sayings from the past are well-worn and might seem utterly out of date. Nevertheless, give them a try. Little by little that might contribute to a more flourishing and satisfying life for you and our neighbors.
