Lane Place is the home of Senator Henry S. and Joanna Lane. The grounds are the setting of the annual Strawberry Festival, free summer concerts performed by the Montgomery County Civic Band and many other events. ROTARY JAIL MUSEUM

225 N. Washington St., Crawfordsville, IN 47933
765-362-5222

The Rotary Jail Museum of Montgomery County was one of 18 rotary jails built in the United States in the 1880's. It was the first rotary jail built in the nation, and is the only one that still revolves. By rotating a giant turntable on which a two-tiered cellblock sits, a jailer could bring one of 16 wedge-shaped cells to the single front opening, allowing a prisoner in or out. The jail is located behind the residence the sheriff's family would occupy during his term in office. The sheriff's residence is home to changing exhibits throughout the year. Behind the jail is the Tannenbaum Cultural Center, a renovated 1887 steam plant that once heated the jail, the sheriff's residence and the courthouse. It is now host to art classes, summer art camps and special events, and can be rented out by local residents for special occasions. The Rotary Jail Museum is open for tours 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and is open to 5 p.m. in the summer from Memorial Day to Labor Day. The museum is closed in the winter from mid-December through February. Check the website for admission fees and information about current programs and exhibits: www.rotaryjailmuseum.org. Tours generally last 45 minutes to an hour. Reservations are not required except for large groups. For more information, call 765-362-5222 or email contactus@rotaryjailmuseum.org.

The existing path to the creek for canoes has been improved. Pheasants Forever will plant a portion of the site with warm-season grasses. The remaining land, owned and managed by NICHES Land Trust, was acquired with funds from the Indiana Heritage Trust, NICHES Land Trust, The Nature Conservancy and Friends of Sugar Creek. That 28.5-acre area, known as Bachner Nature Preserve, also has been planted with native trees and grasses with support from Pheasants Forever. Fishing is allowed on both parcels. Higher Education

WABASH COLLEGE

Wabash College educates men to think critically, act responsibly, lead effectively, and live humanely within a community dedicated to excellence in teaching and learning and built on close and caring relationships among students, faculty, and staff.

There is only one rule of conduct, the Gentleman's Rule, which states that, "A Wabash man will conduct himself at all times, both on and off campus, as a gentleman and responsible citizen."

Each Wabash student learns to understand the connections between the trust the College places in him and the responsibility that goes along with such freedoms.

By taking responsibility for their actions and behavior, Wabash men set a course for life. They learn to think, to communicate ideas concisely and expressively, and to ask questions that need to be asked.

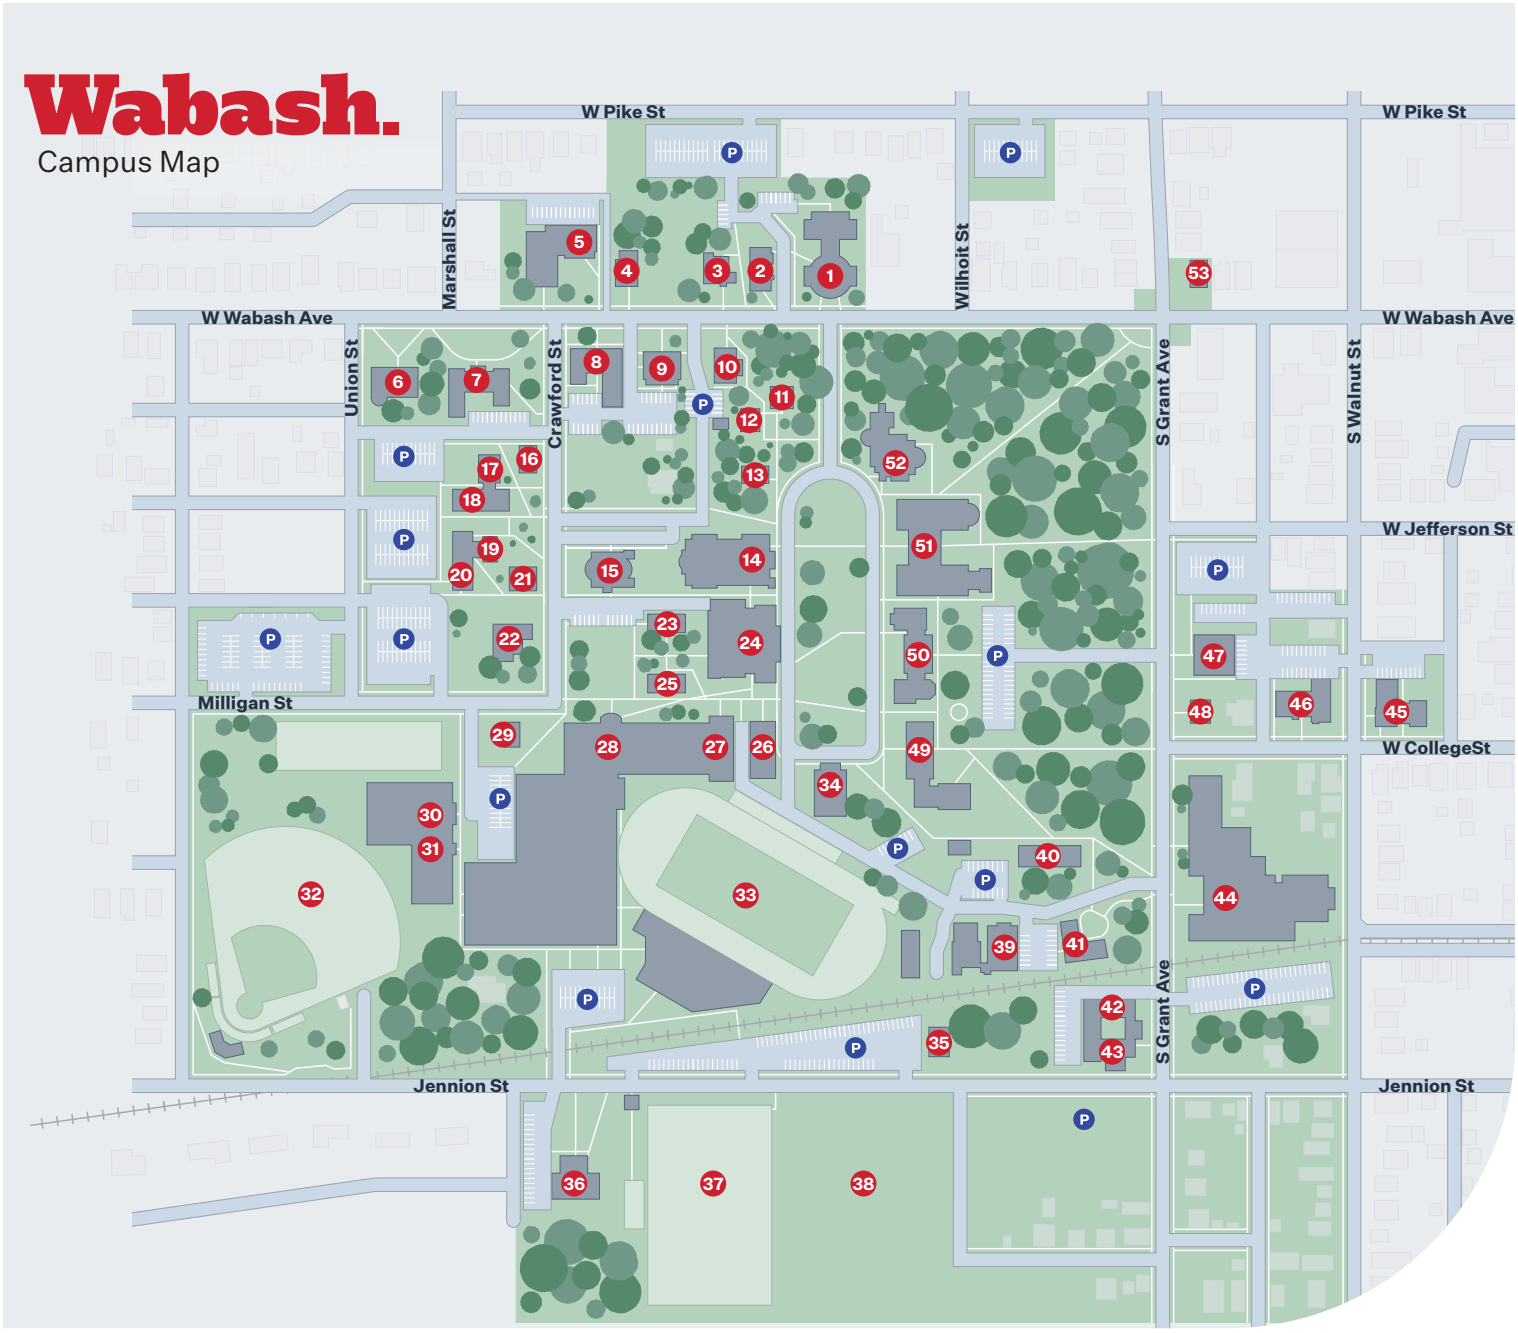

The well-balanced educational model is time-tested and effective. Wabash graduates are able to adapt quickly and efficiently to changing times. One in 10 Wabash graduates goes on to hold a high-ranking position in his field or business such as founder, owner, president, chairman, CEO, vice president or director, and nearly 40 percent of alumni hold advanced degrees.

Wabash graduates are admitted to medical (90%) and law (88%) schools at rates that are nearly twice the national average. The College is also home to the nation's number four-ranked alumni network and the second-ranked internship program.

Wabash offers 27 majors in the following areas: art, biology, biochemistry, chemistry, Classics, computer science, economics, English, financial economics, French, German, Greek, Hispanic studies, history, Latin, mathematics, music, philosophy, PPE (philosophy, politics, and economics), physics, political science, psychology, religion, rhetoric, Spanish, and theater.

Minors are offered in the subjects listed plus Asian studies, Black studies, business, computer science, education studies, environmental studies, film and digital media, gender studies, global health, and neuroscience.

Students may double major and participate in dual-degree programs in engineering with Purdue University, Columbia University, or Washington University (St. Louis). In addition, Wabash has a formal "pipeline program" in accounting with the IU Kelley School of Business for its MSA program, and scholarship programs for Indiana's McKinney and Maurer law schools.

Students take the classical liberal arts instruction they receive in the classroom and round it off with co-curricular initiatives, including Wabash Democracy and Public Discourse, Global Health, and the Center for Innovation, Business, and Entrepreneurship; a wide range of paid internships; and off-campus study opportunities. Wabash men participate in internships in state and national government, law firms and medical offices, advertising and marketing agencies, some of the nation's top research laboratories, and an array of businesses and non-profits.

Wabash students have also traveled with their professors on immersion learning courses to five continents in the last four years.

Wabash balances a rigorous classroom experience with a top-tier NCAA Division III athletics program that competes in 13 varsity sports and is a member of the North Coast Athletic Conference. The wrestling team finished second nationally in 2022, while the basketball team made the 2022 DIII Final Four. The stunning Allen Athletics and Recreation Center and new Little Giant Stadium are a testament to Wabash's belief in a sound mind and sound body.

Students also have access to excellent facilities in the arts, plus more than 75 clubs that are entirely student-directed and student-funded.

Wabash is proud of its award-winning weekly newspaper, The Bachelor; its radio station, WNDY, which airs Wabash basketball and football games, as well as National Public Radio content; and the remarkable level of student involvement all across Montgomery County.

Wabash is home to six centers of distinction: the Malcolm X Institute of Black Studies, the Stephenson Institute for Classical Liberalism, the Center of Inquiry in the Liberal Arts, the Higher Education Data Sharing Consortium, the Wabash Center for Teaching and Learning in Theology and Religion, and the Wabash Pastoral Leadership Program.

CRAWFORDSVILLE ADULT RESOURCE ACADEMY

For many adults, returning to school means balancing work, family and life's unexpected challenges. At the Crawfordsville Adult Resource Academy (CARA), 2255 Phil Ward Blvd., Crawfordsville, those students now have a space designed to help them succeed.

Located in the former Ivy Tech building, CARA has transformed the facility into a center for adult education, workforce training and personal growth, giving students room to learn, connect and prepare for the next chapter of their lives.

The move into the building marked a significant step forward for the academy. Previously housed in the Crawfordsville Community School Corporation's transportation building, CARA now offers larger classrooms, dedicated learning spaces and expanded resources for students pursuing a high school equivalency diploma, English language instruction, career training and college preparation.

The building's layout allows CARA to serve learners in an environment that feels more like a college campus than a traditional classroom. Students have access to quiet study areas, technology, meeting spaces and classrooms designed for a variety of instructional needs.

Beyond earning diplomas or certificates, CARA focuses on helping adults build confidence and create opportunities for themselves and their families. Staff members work one-on-one with students to identify educational goals, connect them with community resources and prepare them for employment or continued education.

Programs include High School Equivalency (HSE) preparation, English as a Second Language (ESL) classes, workforce readiness, digital literacy and career pathway support. Students range from young adults seeking a diploma to parents returning to school after years away from the classroom, along with individuals looking to strengthen job skills or begin a new career.

The academy also partners with local employers, educational institutions and community organizations to help students transition from the classroom into the workforce or higher education.

Today, the former Ivy Tech building represents more than a change of address. It has become a place where adults can pursue new opportunities, overcome obstacles and invest in their futures.

Whether someone is earning a diploma, improving English language skills, preparing for college or exploring a new career path, CARA's mission remains the same: providing adults with the education, support and encouragement needed to reach their goals.

In a building once dedicated to higher education, learning continues, only now with a renewed focus on helping adult learners discover that it's never too late to start again.
