BASICS OF ESTATE PLANNING

A free class is being offered to the Public, Monday, November 16, 2026, 5:00 to 6:00 PM at the Georgetown Public Library, located at 123 West Pine Street, Georgetown, Delaware. The class covers common estate planning documents you should have prepared, as well as why you should have an attorney prepare them for you. The class will help explain the estate planning documents everyone should have and what each document does for your benefit and the benefit of your loved ones. The sponsor, Delaware Money School, is delighted to be able to provide free of charge, an experienced and well-qualified instructor, Deirdre O'Shea McCartney Esquire, to the public. Having written, spoken and taught on the subject many times, she breaks down what appears to be a complex subject, into simple, understandable layman's terms. This class focuses on what documents the lay person should have, what each document is and how it works. Everyone should be aware of what type of estate planning documents they need and be able to consult with their attorney and financial advisor on a plan for their future. This class teaches how to make better decisions in the context of estate planning.

The Money School (www.demoneyschool.org) is a program of the nonprofit Delaware Community Reinvestment Action Council. They offer more than 600 free, no-hassle personal finance classes a year, throughout the state, taught by volunteers from the nonprofit and corporate sectors.
