How to harvest your own oysters, without overtaking

BY ALLISON MARLOW
Managing Editor
allisonm@gulfcoastmedia.com

Some people hunt for oysters in a boat or scuba dive. Others walk in shallow areas and pick them up with their hands.

THE SEASON

Any way you search for oysters, the first thing to know is that oyster season runs weird, said Scott Bannon, director of Alabama Marine Resources.
Oyster harvesting generally begins in October and is allowed, by law, until April 30. Biologists with Marine Resources conduct pre-season surveys to estimate how many legal size and sub-legal oysters are on the reefs in addition to monitoring how much substrate is available for young oysters to attach to. They also count the number of spat, or baby oysters, on the reef. The harvest effort is monitored, and small areas are closed until MRD season goals are met.

RECREATIONAL HARVESTING

Recreational oyster catches are not required to have a license but must purchase an oyster tag from an MRD Oyster Management Station before they hit the road. Any oyster less than 3 inches in diameter across is thrown back to continue growing. Recreational oyster harvesters are also limited to 100 oysters per person per day during the days and hours the reef is open.

After sharp declines, legislators, private groups work to rebuild Alabama oyster population

BY ALLISON MARLOW

The Alabama Marine Resources office on Dauphin Island sits on what is essentially an ancient trash heap – a mound of discarded oyster shells.

The hollowed-out animal homes were placed there hundreds if not thousands of years ago, by Native Americans who had harvested them for their own meals.

The discarded shells were tossed haphazardly into a pile and have been there ever since.

Oysters have always thrived on the Gulf Coast. Until the last century, that is.

Development and an onslaught of natural disasters in the Mobile Bay area changed things. Everything, in fact.

Scott Bannon, director of Alabama Marine Resources, said as industry grew, and the population with it, the buildup on land impacted the water and with it, the oysters.

Construction of the Mobile Causeway, Theodore Industrial Canal and Gaillard Island, a man-made island in Mobile Bay, changed the way the water flowed.

Commercial development along the shoreline impacted the water too.

Navy Cove building a foundation for sustainable oyster farming

FORT MORGAN — Navy Cove Oysters spawned as a scientific question posed by one scientist to another in 2011. Now, the C-student who became a pioneer in oyster hatcheries because of a choice given by a nun and the lifelong shrimper run a full-fledged farm growing 1 million oysters on a tip of Baldwin County.

The road that brought Charles “Chuck” Wilson and John Supan, both marine science researchers, together is long and winding — and lined with gray and white shells rather than yellow bricks — but they hope telling it will help support local oyster habitat and industry.

THE SHRIMPER

Wilson grew up in Northern Baltimore

County, Maryland, on a farm but spent time fishing and camping on the Chesapeake Bay with his family.

Once he was old enough to drive, he would rent a boat to catch crabs.

“We would fish from whatever beach we were at,” Wilson said. “It was in my blood from a very young age until I was approaching middle high school and early college, and

Gulf Shores students partner with Auburn to boost closed reefs

GULF SHORES — While high school science lessons often involve dissection, Gulf Shores students find themselves busy juggling clubs, everyday life as a teenager and raising baby oysters.

Students in the Alabama Gulf Coast school's environmental science class spend their year with the mollusks, collecting data to counteract over-fishing.

Krista Marcum, environmental science teacher, said she leads a group of around 90 students each year, guiding them through raising the oysters and maintaining a clean and safe water habitat at the school.

“The students are mainly taking growth samples and measurements throughout the cages,” Marcum said. “They also take population estimates and use those numbers to evaluate how much the oysters are worth.”

Marcum said the program works closely with Auburn University by purchasing cages from them and sending numbers and back throughout the year.

“Students start raising the oysters in June, and I have a few student interns that help over the summer,” Marcum said. “It ends with us giving our big collection to Auburn, and they release the oysters in Mobile Bay.”

Marcum said Auburn releases the oysters on closed reefs that can't be fished to help grow and sustain the reefs and keep the population thriving.

Marcum said the inspiration for the program came from her own personal interest in raising that enthusiasm never went away.”

Wilson studied biology at Hampton Sydney College in Virginia. It was a college road trip to visit a friend in Hilton Head, South Carolina, that led him to the trailhead of his own, self-described yellow brick road.

“I went out on a shrimp boat one day, and it just became an enigma to me. From that point on, I wanted to be a shrimper. I never thought about a career. I just wanted to be a shrimper,” Wilson said. “I finished college and put my dog in my hippie van, and we drove down to South Carolina.”

Little did he know the experience he gleaned from working in shrimping and commercial fishing for a year and a half would be valuable to his next steps.

“It was an adventure, but I realized I needed to do something to grow up. It was a tough life,” he said.

When he got engaged to his now-wife, Loula, her father asked if he wanted to be a shrimper for the rest of his life. He knew he needed to go back to school.

While knocking on doors at the University of South Carolina, he encountered a guy who asked if he could run a boat. Turns out he was a microbiologist who had a large project in South Carolina to study the movement of bacteria in and out of the estuary. Wilson was hired and ran a boat, collected data and did a thesis.

“It is all about opportunities that open up when you are walking down the yellow brick road. You decide on which way you turn, but you don’t know where you are going to turn until you get to that intersection,” he said.

Wilson solved swordfish age and growth and then worked on blue marlin in Hawaii and sailfish in Costa Rica, publishing several papers along the way. Then a job for fisheries development opened in Louisiana. He said he got the job because of his commercial background and scientific understanding. When he and his wife moved to Louisiana, he told her they would only be there for three years.

Three turned into 27. “It was a great ride. I solved a lot of biological issues related to legislative decisions on how we manage fish. It turns out every fish we touched, they eventually restrained harvest on because regulations were not based on sound biological data,”

Wilson said. “We just went from fish to fish and were funded by many different sources to solve those questions: How old are they when they reproduce? How fast do they grow? How many babies do they put out, and how many babies survive?”

The last fish Wilson tackled was red snapper. He significantly contributed to the general understanding of the fish, and his learnings are still used to make decisions on harvest limits.

During his career, Wilson did a lot of administrative stuff and ran a large research program at LSU called Sea Grant. It was through the Sea Grant that he met John Supan.

THE FISHERMAN

Unlike Wilson, John Supan didn’t grow up around saltwater.

Instead, he spent his youth exploring the fresh waters of the Ohio River and the streams and creeks that ran through his small town of Glen Dale, West Virginia. Early on in his life, Supan said, he was into making a buck.

“I was a commercial fisherman at the age of 12. My granddaddy would pay me a quarter for every carp I caught in the Ohio River and buried in his garden for fertilizer,” Supan said. “Then one day I caught hell from my mom because she found out I was using her clothesline to drag the fish up the alley.”

Supan went to a small Catholic high school and lived in his straight-A sister’s shadow. He was a C student who did well in subjects he enjoyed and not well in others until a chance encounter with the school counselor, Sister Barbara, set him on course for the future.

“It was senior week ... and Sister Barbara caught me in the hallway harassing the juniors,” Supan said. “She called me into her office, and I thought I was going to catch hell for being in the hall when I shouldn’t have been in school. She asked me what I was going to do with my life. I said I didn’t know. She then asked, ‘When you are having fun, what are you doing?’”

He didn’t want to tell the nun the real answer, which was hanging out at the pool looking at girls in bikinis. Instead, he went with his second choice: hanging with the guys at the river shooting snakes and catching fish.

Sister Barbara grabbed a three-ring binder from a shelf, opened it up and handed it to Supan. One page said oceanography, and the other marine biology. After reading about marine biology, Supan said he knew that is what he wanted to do.

At his high school graduation, Supan was surprised to receive a small scholarship to a local Jesuit college just 10 miles up the road in Wheeling, West Virginia. He struck a deal with his parents to work summers at the local steel mill and save to cover fall semester’s tuition, book room and board if his parents would pay for the spring semester. He enrolled to study biology at Wheeling College (which became Wheeling Jesuit College and is now Wheeling University), intending to only be there a year before transferring to the University of Miami to enter their marine biology program.

Supan’s plans changed when he met Betty Thacker, the biology chair. She had received her Ph.D. in marine biology from the University of Delaware. Her advice to Supan was to stay put to get his basics and specialize in graduate school. At the time, he didn’t know what graduate school was.

“She became a very friendly mentor for me,” Supan said. “She helped me tailor the program to marine biology. Every class you had to do a research topic, and while my friends were feeding zinc pellets to rats and measuring how much comes out in their feces, she taught me to wade the local streams and use the same techniques in fresh water to apply to salt water.”

After graduating, Supan hung around Wheeling for a few years, worked as a bartender and met his wife, Karen. They married and three days later moved 1,000 miles to Biloxi, Mississippi. He started on a master’s degree at the University of Southern Mississippi in 1978. His path started to fork toward oysters.

“A guy named Ed Cake took me on as a graduate student. He had just got a big Food and Drug Administration grant to look at purifying polluted oysters called depuration,” Supan said. “I got on as a student worker and grad student on that project, and that is when I got exposed to oysters at an industrial scale because part of my project was to help a local company.”

The professor had two concepts for cleansing the oysters from the polluted Biloxi Bay, but only one received funding. He was assigned to work with Gollotts Seafood on the second concept called relaying.

“Rather than my boss’s project, which was to take oysters, put them in baskets and put them in tanks of flowing seawater with all the capabilities recirculating it and ultraviolet light to kill the bacteria,” Supan explained, “the other concept was simply to put them in containers and take them offshore in clean water, and pick them up 14 days later as required by law. It is called relaying.”

Instead of the past relaying method of dredging or scraping the oysters up, dumping them overboard on a bottom-water lease and then dredging them up 14 days later, Supan worked on container relaying with the Gallotts. They put the harvested oysters in trays and set them out in clean water for 14 days.

The trays made them easier to harvest.

The conclusion of the two concepts was that container relaying was more economically feasible.

HEADING TOWARD THEIR EMERALD CITY

The assistantship taught Supan to handle a boat and sparked his love of sailing.

He received his master’s in 1981 and spent three more years at the lab working in fisheries assessment monitoring. That position exposed him to all the commercial fishermen and sparked his love of being the “gear guy.” He was responsible for taking care of all the sampling gear: beam trawls, plankton nets, shrimp trawls and rods and reels.

He reached the top of the ladder at the lab in three years, so he started looking for his next step.

That next step is where he and Wilson’s paths crossed.

The same funding that created Wilson’s job in Louisiana created a fisheries Extension agent position in Saint Tammy Parish, Louisiana. For the next six years, Supan worked as an Extension agent.

“My job was a teacher. The county agent goes around and teaches but more importantly, you listen and do a needs assessment. Your role is to listen to the needs of your community and go back to the university and have them address those needs. It is the link from the university and the field and back,” Supan said.

Wilson became important to Supan and the other Extension agents because they were trying to help local shrimpers who found out they could take off the to be had in Louisiana. Sack prices that were $8 a sack, which is a bushel and a half, went up to $30 a sack in three years from 1987-1989,” he said. “There were no oysters to shuck, and I had some major shucking houses in my beat. A couple of guys found out they could go up to the Pacific Northwest where their meats were plentiful because they didn’t depend on the wild seed up there.”

They depended on hatchery-produced seed.

Supan knew about hatcheries from his time in Biloxi. They were technically successful but an economic failure on the Gulf Coast because there were so many wild oysters around that they couldn’t compete.

A trip to Oregon with two of his clients would change his path yet again and introduce him to his mentor, Lee Hanson.

“I like to tell the story Moses knew about God, but when he saw the burning bush he came back a changed man,” Supan said. “When I went to Oregon and saw Whiskey Creek Shellfish Hatchery, that was my burning bush. We came back and my two clients wanted to start an oyster hatchery. The first commercial one on the Gulf of Mexico. This was in 1990.”

The three sat down with the Sea Grant director. He helped them tell their story and about the Pacific Northwest. The Sea Grant got on board, partnered with Supan’s clients and created a position for him. His new job was to teach people how to use hatchery technology in Louisiana shrimp gear and put long lines on and catch tilefish and swordfish.

“None of us knew a damn thing about it,” Supan said. “We were hunting down Chuck because he was our specialist when it came to offshore. For me to be able to help a shrimper who has decided to go offshore and catch tile fish, I had to find someone. That is how we first started working together.”

BECOMING THE OYSTER WIZARD

Because oysters are bound to the spot where they settle, they are at the mercy of the water that flows through. Water that is too fresh kills them. Water that is too high in salinity welcomes animals like snails and crabs that like to snack on the mollusks. A snail called the oyster drill can kill 85% of young oysters on a reef, according to the Alabama Cooperative Extension System.

When Supan was working shucking houses on the Mississippi River in the late 1980s, there was no annual flood in the spring for several years in a row. Saltwater intruded into the estuaries.

“There weren’t any oysters and over 12 days in the hatchery, you feed them cultured algae and then they are swimming larvae. You look at them under a microscope and you know when they are ready to cement onto something. You can gather them up and put them in a wet coffee filter and ship them anywhere. You pour them into a tank of clean oyster shells, and they are spat. Make your own seed. It’s called remote setting, spat on culch. That was the project,” Supan said.

Supan worked to teach the local oyster farmers to spat their own shells before they put the empty shells back in the water. Two years after starting the hatchery, the area received a historic rainfall in 1992. By 1993, the wild oyster population returned. By 1994, his two clients didn’t want their own hatchery anymore.

A NEW WAY OF DOING THINGS – GROWING THEIR FEET

Supan had a new problem to solve.

If a hatchery was going to succeed anywhere with wild oyster production, it had to

All while your manager is on the other line, on hold.

Chances are, if you are a mom, this book gets you. And its author, Paula Faris, wants you to use it to first, feel better. And second, use it as a sword to fight the battle against moms being paid less and disrespected in the workforce.

Her book, “You Don’t Have to Carry it All,” is part historical and political analysis, part pep rally and part checklist for the future. The book is an effort to reach out to overwhelmed and exhausted working moms and help them change the current narrative.

“This is your road map towards a better way forward,” Faris said. “I want this to be a rallying cry.”

Faris, draws from her own experience as a working mom and former co-anchor of “Good Morning America Weekend,” and “The View.”

She learned quickly by juggling her own children and a killer broadcast schedule, and through talking with other women, that working moms were not just burned out, they were scrutinized more, paid less and not viewed as valuable leaders in the workplace.

“I manage a basketball team at home, but I can’t run a meeting,” she said. “That’s ridiculous. Being a mom makes you a better leader, and a better employee.”

Faris explores shifts in society, religion and history that led to modern American women still being sidelined in the workforce once they have children, a tradition that seems counterintuitive, she said, since without babies there would be no future workforce.

“Fewer kids mean fewer laborers and if we don’t have a labor market we have an economic crisis,” she said. “It is good for our country to support mothers.”

The best way to stop the mom guilt, she said, is to in fact stop carrying the load.

“The reason we have become mom martyrs is we think we have to and that we can’t ask for help because that means we’re weak, but that’s not the case,” she said. “Moms are burned out at record levels. The community needs to start doing life together.”

Faris will appear at Page & Palette in Fairhope during a ticketed event on Thursday, March 16.

BBB essay contest expands into Baldwin schools

STAFF REPORT

Today's business leaders are in the boardroom, but tomorrow's are still in the classroom. As markets change, new technologies emerge, and up and coming business leaders take charge, one thing remains unchanged, the need for principled, character focused employees and owners to lead not just businesses, but our families and communities into the future.

BBB's Laws of Life Essay Contest aims to encourage and promote core value development for younger generations. BBB believes core values like honesty, transparency, and integrity are at the heart of successful families, relationships, and communities, but are also vital to healthy businesses and careers.

"A lot of younger people don't find out about our organization, resources, and value until after something's gone wrong, which makes this program one of the most critical to our mission," said Carl Bates, President and CEO of BBB Serving Central & South Alabama.

"We can't think of a better way to encourage the development of these core principles for younger generations and have been impressed by the participation we've seen so far," said BBB's Education Foundation VP, Monde Donaldson. "We look forward to every Alabama student knowing and taking advantage of this program because everyone benefits, winning submission or not, from developing strong, proven values and taking those with you through life and business."

2022's sophomore edition of Laws of Life prompted 9th, 10th, and 11th grade students to contemplate how honesty and transparency, or the lack thereof, impact personal relationships and business. Students were encouraged to interview family, business, and community leaders to obtain further insight on the importance of core values in professional settings and how principles drive success in life.

The 2021 pilot program engaged select schools in Mobile County, but 2022 saw the contest expand into additional schools and counties, including Baldwin, Montgomery, and Jefferson.

Thanks to a grant from the Alabama Humanities Alliance, winning participants had cash prizes with first place receiving $1,000, second place winning $300, and third place taking home $200. All winning students' teachers were also rewarded with a cash gift, as well as the school with the most submissions. Program sponsor, and BBB Accredited Business, Herzing University also offered access to their Transitions Program to all participants to allow them early access to post-secondary education credits.

Winning essays were submitted from St. Paul's Episcopal School, McGill-Toolen Catholic High School, and Hoover High School students. The school with the most submissions was Robertsedale High School.

The second-place winner was quoted as saying "I've learned more about honesty in the workplace and how that plays a key role in success, and how I can learn from that".

The 2023 BBB Laws of Life Essay Contest will open for submissions this fall.

Additional information about the contest is available online at: <https://www.bbb.org/local/0463/csal-education-foundation/laws-of-life>

For schools and teachers who would like additional information, please contact BBB Education Foundation VP Monde Donaldson at mdonaldson@csal.bbb.org or call (251) 300-3388.

Scenes from Navy Cove Oysters in Fort Morgan late 2022. Navy Cove Oysters can be found in restaurants in Georgia, Texas, Louisiana and Alabama. They have a moderate brine, rich, creamy, buttery texture and a sweet cucumber-like finish. A unique aspect of the farm is they offer tours throughout the year by appointment. Founders John Supan and Chuck Wilson, seen above to the left and center, both career educators, enjoy teaching visitors of all ages about the ecology and geology of Mobile Bay and how they raise oysters using sustainable aquaculture techniques.

produce something Mother Nature can't. As a doctoral candidate, he needed to write a research proposal to get grant money.

His proposal was on how triploid oysters could be used in Louisiana to increase meat yields.

"In the wild, an oyster gets fat in the winter because of the cold water. If you shuck a bushel and a half of oysters in the winter, you will get 12 pints of meat. They are selling gallons to restaurants that only hold 8 pints of meat so there was a 4-pint profit," Supan explained. "Spring comes in late April or early May and as water temperatures rise, the oysters just naturally spawn in the environment, and they burn that winter fat. By the time they are done spawning two months later, they are skinny and watery. Meat yields drop from 12 pints to 4 pints, so now it takes two sacks of oysters to make a gallon and they are losing money in the summertime."

What is a triploid oyster? "You and I and the birds and the bees, we are all diploids. We have a set of chromosomes from our mother (maternal) and a set from our father (paternal)," Supan said. "A triploid has three sets, and you create that through a breeding process in a hatchery. What that does is it makes the oyster sexually sterile; it cannot reproduce. It gets fat in the winter as all oysters do, but it stays fat in the summer."

During Supan's research, one name kept coming up: Standish Allen Jr. He was doing university research on triploids and asked to collaborate rather than peer review Supan's proposal.

"That was the beginning of the triploid saga," Supan said. "That was the commercialization of the triploid oysters. Everyone that has grown oysters in cages has pretty much grown triploids."

Supan became the first person to stud out oysters in the Gulf of Mexico. He would strip sperm out of a male tetraploid (which has four sets of chromosomes), put it in a little vial in ice water and drive eight hours to an oyster hatchery in Florida. He would teach them to spawn their females separate from the males, get a bucket full of eggs and pour the sperm in to make triploids.

"They called me the oyster stud for a while,"

Supan said. "That is how we disseminated that technology to the industry."

"I ran a breeding program for oysters from 1993 to when I retired in 2017. The idea was to establish triploid oysters for the Gulf region, and it was a huge success. That is my legacy from my career at LSU."

FROM LARVAE TO SPAT – SETTLING ON NAVY COVE

Over the years as colleagues, Wilson and Supan became close friends and spent time at Wilson's Fort Morgan beach house. In 2011, while their wives were on the beach, the two men were enjoying the views over Navy Cove when Wilson asked Supan a question that would trigger their future endeavors.

"Do you think we could farm oysters there?" he wondered

They put their wading shoes on and headed across the road.

Navy Cove's hard sandy bottom, waist-deep water and location two miles from the Gulf where all the saltwater was coming from made it a good site. The fact that every house on that cove was on city water instead of a septic tank made it perfect.

"We threw 10 cages in the water for a couple of years and had fun eating them all," Supan said. "Then we got serious about it."

Wilson had retired and moved to Fairhope, but they got serious once Supan retired and started coming every week.

"We didn't feel like sitting on the beach drinking what the girls were drinking," Supan said, jokingly.

"I have always had an entrepreneurial spirit, starting a shrimp farm, so I understood aquaculture," Wilson responded on a more serious note. "I knew we could raise oysters; it was pretty obvious we had the technology and knowledge and willingness to do it. And it was obvious we had a market because oyster production in Mobile Bay has dropped off to a fraction of what it was 50 years ago because of all the environmental noise. It struck me that this might be a good business venture."

The first question was whether oysters would grow at a rate that would be business feasible. Wilson said they grew like banshees. Even better, they were great and salty.

The farm slowly started to grow on the 2 acres they secured in Navy Cove. Wilson took on the role of managing partner and handles all the details, paperwork and communications. Supan settled into the role of overseeing technology and makes sure their farming practices are sound.

In 2016, they brought on a third partner. Eric Bradley's experience working in the restaurant industry at Sassy Bass was important, but he also knew social media. Bradley also grew up on a crawfish farm and was familiar with aquaculture. He is now the full-time farm manager.

They sold 345,000 oysters in 2022 and now have 1 million oysters in the water. It is no longer a part-time job.

A FULLY FORMED CULTCH

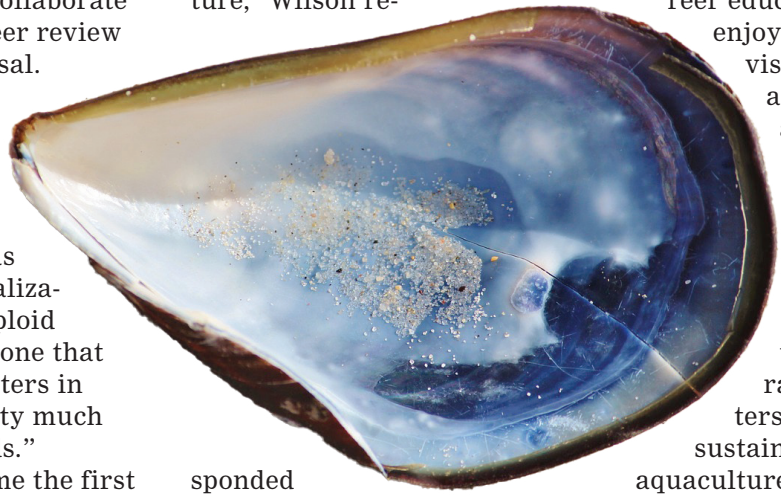

Navy Cove Oysters can be found in restaurants in Georgia, Texas, Louisiana and Alabama. They have a moderate brine, rich, creamy, buttery texture and a sweet cucumber-like finish.

"We call ourselves a for-profit research farm. We invite people who want to do research. This is grant cycle time, and I have gotten three requests in the last month from people asking us to be a collaborator," Wilson said. "We have a research program right now by graduate students from Auburn that they started two years ago."

Another unique aspect of the farm is they offer tours throughout the year by appointment. The career educators enjoy teaching visitors of all ages about the ecology and geology of Mobile Bay and how they raise oysters using sustainable aquaculture techniques. When the weather is warm enough, visitors wade out to the floating cages and see the process up close.

Wilson and Supan are also advocates and want to see more oyster farms on the Fort Morgan peninsula. After all, it's about more than their own survival. The more oysters we have in the Gulf Coast waters, the cleaner the water will be for us all.

HARVESTING

COMMERCIAL HARVESTING

For commercial harvesters, the process is lengthier. Professional fishermen are required to have a license and take part in a mandated education program that teaches harvesters how to keep their catch healthy and safe for consumers.

Every oyster caught is tagged, and information about where it was caught and by who is recorded. That log follows the oyster from the moment it is caught to the moment it is served on a plate.

"There needs to be traceability," Bannon said. "If someone gets sick and they attribute it to oysters, we need to track where it was harvested."

Bannon said the detailed information can help environmental managers determine whether there was something in the water that caused the issue or whether it was the result of improper handling post-harvest. "Most illnesses," he said, "occur because of mishandling."

In response to the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, a project from the NOAA, implemented by the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, worked to restore historic oyster reefs in the estuarine waters of Mobile Bay and Mississippi Sound. About 30,000-40,000 cubic yards of oyster shell cultch were placed over about 319 acres in Mobile County. Cultch was placed near other reefs managed by ADCNR within the historic footprint of reefs in the area.

South Alabama Showdown brings top talent to Baldwin County

Robertsdale, Gulf Shores, Orange Beach host 14-team event; half were ranked in preseason top-10

Top-tier players and teams were on display last weekend around Baldwin County at the Prep Baseball Report South Alabama Showdown hosted in Robertsdale, Gulf Shores and Orange Beach Thursday through Saturday.

Half of the 14-team field represented Baldwin County against other top programs from around the state including defending champions from Hartselle in Class 6A and Mobile Christian in Class 4A.

Although it was PBR's inaugural event in the southern part of the state, Alabama Scouting Director Austin Sharp said they hosted a similar event in the Birmingham area to start last year's regular season. For this season, he said they wanted to see some of the top players from this neck of the woods up close and personal.

"(The PBR Kickoff Classic in Birmingham) was our first-ever event that we wanted to have and then we said, 'Hey, why not next year, we go down south and get 14 teams with multiple host sites in the southern part of the state and let them play four or five games against each other and get to see them,'" Sharp said in a Feb. 27 interview.

In addition to the host teams, Baldwin County was also represented by the Fairhope Pirates, Daphne Trojans, Spanish Fort Toros and Bayside Academy Admirals. They all took on teams the likes of the Faith Academy Rams, Saraland Spartans, Spain Park Jaguars, St. Paul's Episcopal Saints and Tuscaloosa County Wildcats.

"In our preseason polls, we had seven of the 14 teams ranked inside the top 10 coming into the weekend. I went back and looked at some of the really good players on those teams too and I think we had probably over 40 players on those teams ranked inside of our top 50 throughout the state," Sharp said. "So it brought in some really good teams but also brought in some really good players that we were excited to see and it definitely exceeded our expectations."

HOST COACHES SHARE APPRECIATION

All three host coaches also spoke about seeing some of those top-tier programs on their home fields where their teams could also see preparation habits before the game.

"How else do you get to watch Hartselle and Tuscaloosa County here? David (Sharp, PBR's Regional Supervisor for the Deep South), I hope he's locked in for this weekend every year for us," Gulf Shores head coach Chris Jacks said after Friday night's game against Orange Beach. "It's great to have that type of baseball here. That was my goal, when me and David started talking about this last year, was let's bring good baseball down here. I need my kids to see good baseball."

"It's great to have some really good, quality teams come down to Robertsdale and play and it's an honor for us to be involved with it," Robertsdale head coach Peter Bezeredi said after Saturday night's game against Daphne. "Today was a good day and we've had some really good, quality teams come to the Gulf Coast and we're just excited to get a couple of wins out of it."

Not only that, but with the scouting reputation of Prep Baseball Report, Mako skipper Ben Slaton mentioned his excitement over the recruiting exposure aspect.

"That's an awesome thing about where we are, and I just love the opportunity for our guys to be able to play on their home field. We've got an awesome facility here and I love having the opportunity to play teams like Hartselle," Slaton said after Thursday's game against the Tigers. "PBR putting on a cool event like this to give our guys exposure and an opportunity to play in front of guys to hopefully turn some heads and get some attention of some college scouts and recruiters is great."

NEXT YEAR'S EVENT ALREADY IN PLANNING STAGES

Before the weekend could finish, Austin Sharp said he already received plenty of positive feedback from the coaches involved and said they hoped to be returning to the Gulf Coast for another showdown next year.

"Some of the teams that were there this weekend were probably wanting to come back next year but we talked to some other teams as well and think that those three host sites were perfect for us and I think they enjoyed it as well," Austin said. "Hopefully we can do the same thing next year."

MONEY QUOTES

"I'm proud to host this down here with Coach Bezeredi in Robertsdale and Coach Slaton in Orange Beach and I hope that PBR continues to choose us to come down here," Jacks said. "We want to bring big-time baseball down here."

"This is every Alabama player's dream out here, to play on their own field in a PBR event," said Gulf Shores senior Brendon Byrd after the 10-0 win over Orange Beach.

"It's great, having this tournament here at home in Gulf Shores is great, it's a fun deal to play good baseball at home," said Dolphin junior Connor Gehr after the Friday win over the Makos.

Orange Beach sophomore Bryce McCollum fires a pitch against the Hartselle Tigers in the Makos' opening game of the South Alabama Showdown Thursday, Feb. 23, at home as part of the 14-team event produced by Prep Baseball Report. Orange Beach was one of three hosts alongside Gulf Shores and Robertsdale.

Robertsdale junior Chris Weeks dives back into first on a pickoff attempt Saturday in South Alabama Showdown action against the Daphne Trojans at home. Robertsdale closed the three-day event with a Saturday sweep following its win over Daphne in the nightcap.

Spanish Fort sophomore Lakelon Ray lifts a pitch in the third inning of the Toros' tilt against the Spain Park Jaguars at the Orange Beach Sportsplex Friday, Feb. 24, during the South Alabama Showdown run by Prep Baseball Report.

Daphne senior Kalee Holder looks to finish off a headlock against Spanish Fort's Sarah Edgar in the title bout of the 165-pound weight class at the Baldwin County Championships in Gulf Shores Jan. 6. Holder was one of three Baldwin County wrestlers named to the South All-Star roster by the Alabama Wrestling Coaches Association ahead of Saturday's North-South dual meet.

In the final coaches' rankings released by the ALWCA, Holder was the highest individually at No. 2 in her weight class where the Lady Trojans were also the top-ranked team entering the state championships Jan. 2.

Cross Country runners celebrated Kailee Cox's signing with the Faulkner Eagles during a Feb. 28 ceremony at Baldwin County High School. Head coach Matt Beckett said Cox was the Tigers' first female cross country runner to sign with a college team.

The newest Faulkner University cross country signee is a four-time state qualifier from Baldwin County High School, Kailee Cox. After she became only the fourth female runner to compete in four state meets, Cox became the Tigers' first female cross country runner to join the college ranks.

Baldwin County's Cox becomes 1st female cross country signee

Baldwin County senior Kailee Cox puts pen to paper on her National Letter of Intent to join the Faulkner University cross country team after her time with the Tigers. A four-time state qualifier, Cox has also played four years of varsity soccer at Baldwin County High School.

STAFF REPORT

Baldwin County senior Kailee Cox once again made school history after she signed a scholarship to run cross country at Faulkner University in Montgomery during a ceremony at the high school Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Tiger head cross country coach Matt Beckett said Cox is the first female cross country runner to sign with a college team. It was not long ago when she etched her name in the record books after she became only the fourth female runner from Baldwin County to qualify for four straight state championship meets.

Cox qualified with the Tiger team as a freshman then qualified individually her final three years. In addition to four varsity letters in cross country, she was also a member of the varsity girls' soccer team for all four years of high school where Beckett was also her head coach.

"She is gifted and talented enough to where she could be a two-sport athlete in college if she so chose," Beckett said. "In addition to her athleticism, she also exhibits the grit and demonstrates the dedication that you really want and need to see in an athlete – especially if they want to be successful at the next level."

For her efforts, Cox was recognized with all-county distinction from Baldwin County Public Schools and also served as a captain of the cross country team.

Also a member of the National Honor Society, Cox served as an athletic trainer on the sidelines of football games as well.

Before she signed her scholarship, Cox thanked her parents, teammates and coaches for their "support, dedication and encouragement."

Goran Bogdan and Adnan Maral also star. (ORIGINAL)

“Sex/Life”

Sarah Shahi returns for Season 2 of this comedy drama in which she plays Billie, whose decision to relive her past as a wild child clashes with her present as a suburban mother of two and wife of Cooper (Mike Vogel). Adam Demos and Margaret Odette are also in the cast. (ORIGINAL)

“Chris Rock: Selective Outrage”

Many eyes will undoubtedly be on this stand-up special streamed live in real time at 10 p.m. (ET) on this date from the Hippodrome Performing Arts Center in Baltimore, as it could potentially be the first time since being slapped by Will Smith at last year’s Academy Awards that Rock directly addresses the incident. (ORIGINAL)

“Movie: Luther: The Fallen Sun”

The Voice

We might be saying hello to the Season 23 premiere, but we'll all be getting ready to say goodbye to coach Blake Shelton in his final season as coach. Alongside Kelly Clarkson, this season features Chance the Rapper and Niall Horan as coaches as America looks to discover the next great singer while not blatantly handing Shelton one more win for Team Blake.

8 p.m. on HGTV
Rock the Block

Four teams of HGTV's awesome experts come together in Berthoud, Colo., in order to battle it out in the name of renovation in the Season 4 premiere. Hosted by carpenter/design expert Ty Pennington, the six-episode round features competitors Bryan and Sarah Baemler ("Renovation Island"), Michael Smith Boyd and Anthony Elle ("Luxe For Less"), Jonathan Knight and Kristina Crestin ("Farmhouse Fixer"), and Page Turner and Mitch Glew ("Fix My Flip"), as they take on the biggest houses and the best budgets in the show's history.

8 p.m. on HBO
Perry Mason

The child of a powerful oil family is brutally murdered in the Season 2 opener. When the District Attorney goes to the city's down-and-out to look for the most obvious of suspects, Perry (Matthew Rhys), Della (Juliet Rylance) and Paul (Chris Chalk) find themselves swirling in the center of a case that will uncover far reaching conspiracies and force them to reckon with what it truly means to be guilty.

8 p.m. on ID
Jared from Subway: Catching a Monster

Charting Jared Fogle's rise from morbidly obese teenage outcast to beloved Subway spokesman, this new three-part series reveals the shocking, previously untold story of the investigation that exposed the monster lurking behind Fogle's charming persona and how his true nature as a child sex predator was finally revealed in 2015. It also explores the charges brought against Russell Taylor, the former director of Fogle's charity, The Jared Foundation, and how that investigation ultimately led to the raid of Fogle's home that uncovered child pornography.

9 p.m. on HBO
Rain Dogs

This rather bizarre and inventive love story showcases Costello (Daisy May Cooper), a working-class single mother, her 10-year-old daughter Iris (Fleur Tashjian), and Selby (Jack Farthing), a privileged young gay man as they try to navigate deep-rooted friendships and brilliance regularly thwarted by poverty and prejudice. Why won't the world just let them be great? The dark comedy series also stars Ronke Adekoluejo and Adrian Edmondson.

Conversation and drinks: When talk shows get spirited

It's no secret that a few drinks can loosen lips and bring out the motormouth in even the most cloistered introvert. So imagine what it can do for folks who perform on camera for a living.

For makers of talk shows, that can translate to ratings gold as tipsy celebrity guests let their hair down, get silly and/or real and create the kind of buzz and publicity that money can't buy. And for viewers, it can be downright fun to watch.

A new entry joins that subgenre with "The Wine Down." Airing its second hourlong special Wednesday, March 8, on BET, it places R&B/soul/hip-hop icon Mary J. Blige in the role of host as she cracks a bottle of wine and engages in raw, provocative, insightful and real conversations with guests from the worlds of entertainment, sports, politics and social media.

So while few other details were available at this writing, it has been announced that

Mary J. Blige

Curtis "50 Cent" Jackson will be this week's guest to be engaged (and served) by Blige, who created the series with her production company Blue Butterfly.

OF 'TRUE LIES' ON CBS AND PARAMOUNT+

In assuming the role played by Arnold Schwarzenegger in the 1994 movie version of "True Lies," do you have any desire to channel him into your performance?

I said that I would never, out of respect for the man, do the impersonation. I've never done it, not once, and I never will. It's an iconic actor and an iconic man, and it's an iconic film.

We just wanted to do something on our own, you know? We couldn't mirror the movie. We didn't want to do it exactly. We wanted to bring our own flair, and I think we did.

Because of the nature of the show that it is, "True Lies" involves a lot of different aspects. How has it been for you to play all of that?

This action/drama/comedy, the elements that we were doing, all the cast dreamt about doing something like this ... so while we were doing it, it was like, "We're doing it. This is amazing."

But it's so much work. I don't even know how to say it, but we were supporting each other, and it was fun. We had laughs and tears and broken bones, all of the above.

How did you deal with all of that during those long work days?

Well, I think you have to compartmentalize, especially if you have a family. My kids were in L.A. and I was in Atlanta. We were in Atlanta for five months, so that was tough – but, you know, Daddy had to be an action star. So that was the priority.

Actually, I saw the pilot with my son, and he was very complimentary. He said, "You're a good dad on the show." And I said, "Oh, wow. Thanks." And he goes, "Yeah, it's probably because of us that you're so natural at being a good dad." And I was like, "You're right. Absolutely right."

"Wreck"

From Great Britain comes this comedic thriller series that follows Jamie (Oscar Kennedy, "Ladhood"), who goes to work on a luxury charter cruise ship to search for the sister who disappeared while also working there. Thaddea Graham ("The Irregulars"), Harriet Webb ("I May Destroy You") and Jodie Tyack ("The Window") are also in the cast.

"Movie: Batman Begins"

Christian Bale assumed the role of Gotham City's caped crusader — or, more accurately in this case, Dark Knight — in director Christopher Nolan's ("Memento") 2005 reinterpretation of the saga. Batman's alter ego, Bruce Wayne, is assisted by several mentors (Liam Neeson, Morgan Freeman, Michael Caine) en route to teaming up with a childhood friend (Katie Holmes) to stop the fearsome Scarecrow (Cillian Murphy).

"History of the World: Part II"

More than 40 years after director Mel Brooks' seminal anthology "History of the World: Part I" comes this sequel series that features more historical comedy skits with a talented cast headed by Brooks, Danny DeVito, Wanda Sykes, Nick Kroll, Ike Barinholtz, Sarah Silverman, David Duchovny and Ken Marino. (ORIGINAL)

"Unprisoned"

From creator Tracy McMillan and executive producers Kerry Washington and Delroy Lindo comes this dramedy series about a messy but perfectionist relationship therapist and single mom (Washington) whose life is turned right-side-up when her dad (Lindo) gets out of prison and moves in with her and her teenage son (Faly Rakotohavana, "Raven's Home").
