BAY MINETTE — A Bay Minette man is facing torture/willful abuse of a child charges after Bay Minette police found welt marks from head to toe on a 5-year-old boy, the son of his girlfriend. Adrian Delon Likely, 36, of West Hurricane Road in Bay Minette is facing charges after police responded Wednesday to an apartment at Harbor Crossing Apartments on Dobson Avenue, just south of Interstate 65 in Bay Minette at approximately 7:10 p.m. on Wednesday. "Upon investigation officers found that the boy had been switched from his feet up to his head," said Sgt. Ray Dixon, chief investigator with the Bay Minette Police Department. "On examination it was found that he had large welts coming up all over his body." Likely was also charged with possession of marijuana, second degree, after a bag was found on him during a routine search, Dixon said. "When an arrest is made, the officer pats the suspect down, gives them the speech and asks them if there is anything on them that might be considered prison contraband," Dixon said. "Likely chose to roll the dice and, after he was vestigations command, Christopher Paul Corson, 36, of Dyas Court in Bay Minette is being charged with murder in the death of Adell Darlene Rawlins of Robertsdale. On Thursday, the Baldwin County Major Crimes Unit was requested to respond to Highway 59 in Foley to a possible homicide. At approximately 6:10 p.m. Foley Police received a call from a witness that was following a small white SUV south bound on Highway 59 from the Foley Beach Express.

The witness advised Foley PD that there was blood coming from the rear of the vehicle. Foley Police responded and found the vehicle in the parking lot of Hoods Discount Home Center at 1918 N. McKenzie St. As officers approached the vehicle they observed the driver was covered in blood and upon further inspection of the vehicle

Foley Public Library named No. 1 in the nation

You've learned the 'what,' now learn the 'why' and 'how'

By ALLISON WOODHAM
allison@gulfcoastmedia.com

The Foley Public Library recently received one of the highest awards for a library in the nation, a five-star rating that placed the library at the top of its classification — the $400,000-$999,999 expenditure range — in the Library Journal Index of Public Library Service. So, what exactly goes on in the top library in the nation, and how does the staff keep it running? "The primary tracking categories are patron visits, circulation and e-book downloads," explained Foley Public Library Director John Jackson. "Circulation is easy to track; that's people checking out a book. They come in, pick a book off a shelf or get something that comes from another library." The Foley Library has right at 82,000 titles on the shelves.

Jackson said the reason the library excels in e-books is the opportunity. There are two databases the Foley Library has that helps greatly in this category. "We have Abdo, a database with children's and young adult books," Jackson said. "Those books were purchased through a grant that the Foley schools got and they've shared with us, instead of keeping it for just Foley students. We were able to enter into the grant with them and host the Abdo database in our website, so any child that has a library card or is part of school system can go in and check out books." Friends of the Foley Public Library have matched the grant twice, each time the schools have received it. That increases the number of books in that database available. "Something that sets us apart from other libraries, in the county at least, is that we have Abdo," Jackson said. "We have an additional database called Capstone, books focused toward young adults and children." Having more downloads available helps build a patron foundation as well. "Children start checking out books and going to the library when they are young, and they'll continue checking out books for the rest of their life," Jackson explained. "We will continue to build our foundation, our patron base with our community, which in the long run, makes our patron base wider because they will continue to use the library throughout their life." Patron visits is one of the largest numbers per capita for the library because of the array of activities offered throughout the year. "We offer more activities that just walking in the door and checking out a book or picking up a hold," Jackson said. "We have events all the time. Our Halloween Extravaganza, which we are trying to make a yearly tradition, had over 1,800 people in attendance last year." And those are just the number of people who came through the main entrance, not those that parked around back and came in other taken to jail, police found another bag of marijuana in his sock.”

Because of that, Dixon said, Likely was also charged with promoting prison contraband, second degree, another felony charge.

DHR was contacted in the case, Dixon said, and interviewed the child’s mother and uncle, informing them that they needed to have the child checked out at North Baldwin Infirmary. “We have not yet followed up to see if that has actually occurred,” said Dixon in an interview Friday morning.

The torture/willful abuse of a child charge carries a $10,000 bond, with an addition $1,000 for the possession charge and an addition $5,000 for the contraband charge.

Records show that Likely was released on bond Thursday morning.

Sports Tourism Complex releases calendar

SUBMITTED BY STEPHANIE GODLEWSKI

Foley Sports Tourism Complex

The Foley Sports Tourism Complex is excited to announce the release of its 2017 events calendar. For the second year in a row, the complex is boasting a range of sports including soccer, lacrosse and archery, across every level of play, from pro to community. In addition to its 16 state-of-the-art sports fields, the complex will also be hosting events in the brand new, 90,000-square-foot event center, slated to open this summer.

The event center will be hosting one of Foley’s largest competitions the first week of December in the Alabama USA Gymnastics Compulsory Meet. The best young female gymnasts from around the state will be competing in a number events with beam, uneven bars and floor routine, to name a few. The competition is one of the two largest state-held meets the sport has to offer.

While the future looks bright for the event center, other areas of the complex will still be busy throughout the year, especially Graham Creek Nature Preserve. Building on the success it saw in 2016, the preserve will be bringing in over 2,000 archers to compete in the Hoyt Archery Alabama Pro Am from Feb. 16-19. There will be 14 competitive ranges, a practice range and known distance range, each with 20 targets, to take advantage of the different challenging aspects of the preserve’s unique terrain.

In addition to a range of venues and sports on the docket for 2017, Foley Sports Tourism Complex will be home to a number of different levels of play. Collegiate sports are represented many times throughout the calendar, including the Sun Belt Conference Women’s Soccer Championship slated for Oct. 31-Nov. 5. This will be the championship’s second visit to Foley, after a successful event in fall 2016, which aired on the ESPN family of networks.

One unique addition to the calendar is the 2017 USPCA National K-9 Trials. Police dogs from around the country along with their handlers will compete in events including agility, obedience, article search, suspect search and criminal apprehension. Foley Police Officers Carlos Lizarraga and Daniel Hudson were part of a four-man team that placed fifth overall in the competition last year and will be leading the Foley Police Department, all of whom are looking to leverage the home field advantage and be crowned top dog.

Spectators are welcome at all Foley Sports Tourism Complex events. To learn more about the events or complex, and to see the list of events, visit FoleySportsTourism.com.

were reached and programming was enhanced,” Davis said. “The annual meeting is our largest member attended event of the year. We are looking forward to hosting a great evening for our members who make what we do every day possible and thanking them for continuing to support and believe in the work that we do.”

Outgoing President Kimberly Cain will highlight some of the year’s accomplishments and Vinson Bradley, incoming president, will touch on plans for the new year. The meeting is also a time to recognize the Harry B. Still Distinguished Service Award winner, as well as the small and large Business of the Year recipients. The chamber will also recognize its new and outgoing board members.

The event will feature Acting Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Lyn Stuart of Bay Minette as the keynote speaker. Davis said the membership is “thrilled” to have her as speaker.

“Justice Stuart is a true public servant who loves her community, and is an outstanding role model for young ladies everywhere. As a chamber, we are proud that she calls North Baldwin home. She represents who we are as a community so well — kind, helpful, serving and fair.”

Stuart is an Atmore native and a long-time resident of Bay Minette. She graduated with a Bachelors of Arts Degree in sociology and education from Auburn University and her Juris doctorate degree from the University of Alabama School of Law. She spent her early career working for the state in the Attorney General’s Office and the State Department of Corrections, before joining the Baldwin County District Attorney’s Office.

In 1988 she was elected a district judge in Baldwin County and was re-elected in 1994. Then-Gov. Fob James appointed Stuart to the Circuit bench in 1997 and she was elected to the post again in 1998. Stuart was elected to the Alabama Supreme Court in 2000 and re-elected in 2006 and 2012. On May 6, 2016, as senior member of the court, she became the acting chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Stuart has been an active member of the community, serving as a member and past president of the Heritage Junior Women’s Club and the Jubilee Woman’s Club. She served on the Board of Directors of the Alabama Federation of Women’s Clubs for almost 20 years. She is also a former member of the Bay Minette Kiwanis Club. She and husband George have three children and two grandchildren. The family attends First United Methodist Church of Bay Minette, where she serves on the church council, teaches an adult Sunday School class, sings in the choir and plays in the hand bell choir.

Where You Fit In The Temple

When the Apostle Paul writes about the church, he often turns to metaphors to capture the essence of an entity so complex that it defies prosaic, propositional definition. His favorite word pictures for the church are a body, a temple, and people. Thinking of the church as a body emphasizes unity-in-diversity. The church as temple highlights her call to be a beacon of truth to the wider world, the one place to which the surrounding culture can look to find what is real. As a people, the church is to be a definable, distinctive, and interdependent group, a family always looking for new brothers and sisters to welcome out of the loneliness of sin into the fellowship of saints. When the church functions according to these metaphors, then her calling to be unified, sanctified, and word-wide (long ago, we used to say “one, holy, catholic”) is fulfilled.

The fourth mark of the church is “apostolic,” which means, loosely, that she is founded on the teachings of Christ to his first disciples who have handed them on to us through His Word. It means that our unity, sanctity, and reach are not ends to themselves; we are not a social club committed to mere self-perpetuation. We exist for the glory of God alone; we exist to make that glory known to everyone in all the earth. To each of the images described above, Paul attaches a descriptive prepositional phrase: the body of Christ, the temple of the Spirit, and the people of God. The Trinity itself, the non-contingent community of Divine Persons in their unified diversity, grounds the existence of the church. The Fatherhood of God makes possible the family of faith, who live distinctly before the world. The Headship of Christ gives connection and direction to all the members of the body who walk as Christ did in the world. The Power of the Spirit holds the bricks of the temple in place; the temple, in turn, is the launch pad for the Power of the Spirit in the world. The Trinity at work in redeeming creation has caused you to be a building stone, a son or daughter, a body part. Do you know who you are? Do you know how you fit? Do you know what you cost?

Foley PD Officer, Public Servant Employees of the Year named

SUBMITTED

Chief David Wilson of the Foley Police Department is pleased to announce that K-9 Officer Daniel Hudson has been selected as Foley Police Department's 2016 Police Officer of the Year and Correction Shift Leader Brennan Giles has been selected as the department's 2016 Public Servant of the Year.

K-9 Officer Hudson became a member of the Foley Police Department in 2012. K-9 Officer Hudson's selection as Officer of the Year reflects his hard work and dedication to the Foley Police Department and the city of Foley. Hudson is not only an exceptional patrol officer and

Team; one of the few who started this team. His sharp appearance as part of Foley's Honor Guard makes Foley Police Department

K-9 handler (he and his "partner," Titan, won first place in the Two-Man Team Canine Competition during Canine Regionals as well as Best Rookie Handler of the Year), but he is also an integral part of the South Baldwin Special Response Team. He is also on the Fugitive Tracking shine. Hudson's ability to influence others at work has created an atmosphere that conveys the true meaning of leadership.

"It is an honor to be selected and to have the backing of the men and women of this department," Hudson said. "Going on five years ago, I was sitting in the passenger seat of the outgoing Officer of the Year, FTO Mike Powers patrol car as a rookie officer. From that first day, I have chosen to do this job as if someone is always watching, taken every opportunity to learn and better myself, which in turn, betters the department as a whole. I must give at least half the credit to my partner, K-9 Titan who is with me on every call, but somehow disappears and catches a nap when it's time to do paperwork."

Correction Shift Leader Brennan Giles has been selected as Public Service Employee of the Year, and has been a member of the Foley Police Department since 2013. He was promoted to Correction Officer Shift Leader in 2016. Giles is a solid leader on the correction staff. He runs a "tight ship," and has proven to be a good leader over the 55-bed jail with a 13 correction officer staff. He personally has a high success rate in finding unauthorized items during correction operations.

Giles' selection as Public Service Employee of the Year displays not only his professionalism, performance and dedication to the Foley Police Department but also to the citizens of Foley.

"I want to say that it is a great honor to be nominated and selected as Public Service Employee of the Year," Giles said. "I already consider myself being a very self-motivated individual, but knowing that my fellow co-workers have that confidence in me just gives me motivation to work that much harder. It is also a great privilege to be an employee of the Foley Police Department and work with such awesome people that I consider my family. Working with such great people is what made this possible. Go Team Foley!"

Garden Club introduced to blood lily, wisteria

SUBMITTED BY MARY ANN LINDSAY

ROBERTSDALE — The Robertsdale Garden Club met on Tuesday, Jan. 10 at the G. P. Thames Senior Center. The program for the day was presented by Sandra Busby and Cyndi Gisczinski.

Busby gave members an overview of the blood lily and Gisczinski explored the good, bad and ugly properties of wisteria. Members were reminded that Charlotte Zinner has provided several members with a blood lily and will have cuttings for other members this spring.

Katie Warren led a discussion with members on what to do about plants exposed to freezing temperatures. A wait-and-see approach was recommended. She explained that the roots were still warm and plants might rejuvenate themselves in the spring. Cutting them back if frozen would be the next step.

The business meeting included committee reports. Mary Ann Lindsay, publicity chairman, reported that local newspapers are printing press releases submitted. She recommended that members check the internet for previous garden club activities.

Jimmie Lou reported on the ongoing problem of developing a landscaping plan for the center. She has consulted with Mayor Charles Murphy and City Council members Sue Cooper and Ruthie Campbell. Mary Ann Lindsay will draft a letter to Murphy to request that this matter be added as an agenda item at one of the city's monthly meetings.

Jimmie Lou circulated documents pertaining to the scholarship to be awarded to a horticulture student at the South Baldwin Center for Technology. Members had the opportunity to make additions and corrections to the documents.

Mary Frances Boykin was welcomed to the club. Door prizes provided by Sandra Busby and Cyndi Gisczinski were won by Ken Ramey and Linda Morgan.

The Feb. 14 meeting will feature wild flowers and will be hosted by Katie Warren. Robertsdale Garden Club meets at 10 a.m., the second Tuesday of each month, September through May, and invites individuals to join them.

New GriefShare series starts Feb. 4 at Swift Presbyterian

SUBMITTED

Facing the reality of losing a loved one is not something anyone is ever ready for, and talking to someone who is going through the same thing is always comforting. Helping people find ways to start putting their life back together again after a loss is the main purpose of GriefShare. Helping people find hope and support after they have lost a loved one is part of the process. Society puts pressure on people to get on with their lives, which is not an easy task. People don’t know how to face tomorrow. GriefShare offers important tools that make the process of facing tomorrow a little less confusing. GriefShare is a Christ-centered, 13-week program, open to anyone, taking people on a journey of how to deal with grief through a series of group meetings with a DVD, a workbook and sharing. The DVD and workbook help individuals discover the necessary steps needed to deal with the grief and move on with life one day at a time. The sharing helps to realize that people are not alone. It is sometimes scary to enter a meeting alone when you don’t know anyone. If you don’t need GriefShare, be a support system for someone who is dealing with grief and come with them until they are comfortable. Grief has no time limit — so if someone was lost a few weeks ago, or 20 years ago, you are welcome. Walk this journey of grief together and go from “mourning to joy.”

entrances.

“All those people come here to get scared or bring children or whatever, but they come back after the event and see what else we have here,” Jackson said.

Other activities the li-brary has includes a quar-terly Lunch and Learn, Bingo, Patron Pick Movie, speakers and adult coloring classes. Jackson said the meeting room upstairs is booked every day.

“With all that said, what we really try to attempt on a daily basis, is to be more part of the fabric of the community,” said Jackson. “...Where people see the library as something they want to go to, not just a place to check out books, but to be involved in the community events. That’s the key. That’s the key to any library, really, to keep it viable. Or if you want to make a library viable that’s not, entrench yourself into your community and be a part of what your commu-nity wants out of their life.”

Foley Public Library received a Library Ser-vices and Technology Act (LSTA) Grant for $20,000, with a $5,000 match. This grant will help expand the library’s nonfiction collection, anything from computer science, religion, cookbooks, how-to, histori-cal subjects, biography and more.

“We will expand on what we already have or create a section of the collection we don’t already have,” Jackson explained. “We make it more viable for not just students, but for people that are interested in those topics.”

Jackson said the library orders what the com-munity wants, and every library is unique based on its community.

“Me, as a librarian, I have to figure out what the community wants, and that’s what we focus on,” he said. “We give them what they need, whether it’s materials or activities. We’ve been really suc-cessful gauging what the community wants, and the community includes Bald-win County.”

The Foley Public Library has more interlibrary loans than any other library in the county.

“We also have an inter-library loan system with libraries outside the county that other libraries can request books we have,” Jackson said. “We have more requests from this library than any other li-brary in the county. We try to accommodate everyone we can.”

The Foley Library has more holds requested from any other library in the county.

“Meaning we have more activity here by our patron base requesting books from outside the library or outside the county,” Jack-son said. “We’ve just got a more active patron base, so the numbers work to our advantage both ways. We’re just busy.”

Jackson said it’s great to have a busy business, but it’s even better if your library is busy.

“Because it means people are engaged in the commu-nity; they’re reading, try-ing to improve themselves, which, in turn, improves the community,” he said.

All of this adds up to pro-viding a service to the com-munity, not just providing services the library thinks people need.

“We provide services they tell us they want,” Jackson said. “In the end, that’s what makes the li-brary a viable part of the community. It’s a never-ending cycle. You provide those services and they will come. It creates its own life cycle.”

Numbers aside, what makes Foley Public Li-brary a five-star library, according to Jackson?

“I think the people that work here,” he said. I’ve never worked with a more positive, more involved group of people ... ever. If you love what you do, people will come in and ask you for help, or have you do something for them; they can see it. If you go to a store and someone hates they’re there, you know it. You can sense it. They don’t have to say it. The reverse is just as obvious. It’s our personnel. They are will-ing to help our patrons; it’s a team effort. Everybody works together to make this library work as well as it does. That’s what sets us aside. I enjoy working with these people and I enjoy every day of it.”

Jackson has been the director of the library for three years.

“I’m just as excited to be here today as I was three years ago,” he said. “Not that it’s easy; it’s reward-ing. I’ve truly found where I need to be. This is it; I just know that. Everybody here wants this library to excel. Not for themselves, but for everyone else to enjoy. That’s why I go back to the staff. They’re fantastic.”

Addiction battles leads woman, 29, to help others

By JOHN UNDERWOOD
john@gulfcoastmedia.com

ELSANOR — Tiffany Grubbs is finally getting her life on track following a decade-long struggle through addiction, recovery, relapse and back again.

GRUBBS

“I thank God that I am surrounded by a support system that is allowing me to pay it forward,” she said. After battling with addiction twice, Grubbs, 29, has now been sober for seven months. Last summer, she enrolled in Faulkner State Community College, now Coastal Alabama Community College, in their pre-nursing program with the goal of one day becoming a nurse practitioner. “I want to do something to make a difference in people’s lives,” she said. It’s a far cry from where she was just a few short months ago. A native of Little Rock, Arkansas, Grubbs moved with her family to Fairhope when she was 15. But after her dad passed away, she fell into a world of drinking and drugs.

Local artist’s debut album set to release in February

SUBMITTED REVIEW

Christina Christian and producer Justin Sable Fobes are proud to present her single release “Quirky Little Thing” campaign party on Friday, Feb. 10 from 8 p.m. to midnight. The “Silent Sea” pre-order campaign party will be at The Hot Spot Music and Grub located at 4780 Wharf Parkway in Orange Beach with a no cover evening. Christian, Americana/Country artist, singer, songwriter, and veteran Gulf Coast musicians join together on “Silent Sea” to produce ballads, a witty song about modern life, a sweet melody on mandolin and guitar, a jazzy R&B number, and then reaches deep for a soulful expression of values in a troubled world. She tops it all with her new single “Quirky Little Thing.” Christian’s all original and skillfully developed sounds blend into a seamless flow of powerful lyrics and modern but traditional sounds. Her debut album “Silent Sea” is due out this spring. One fan said, “It’s music from the heart that hits you right between the eyes.” For more than six years, Christian, a gifted 24-year-old Alabama native, has brought audiences listening pleasure on festival stages and venues throughout Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida. Her audiences have enjoyed original music and talented performances at the world famous Flora-Bama Lounge and Package, Vinyl Music Hall, Frank Brown International Songwriters Festival, Florida, Horse Pens 40, Moonlight on the Mountain, The Listening Room, Veet’s Bar and Grill, Eighth and Rail, and Clovedale Theatre in Alabama. “Silent Sea” is Christian’s debut album featuring 12 of her original songs. On her debut album, with the help of great Gulf Coast and Nashville co-writers, she has hand selected some of her best songs. Not only is the album important to Christian but also to her family of co-writers and close friends. Christian, with her longtime songwriter friend Taylor Craven and fiancé, Nick Biebricher, have been a writing trio for the past four years and have together penned four songs on the album. Currently Christian has logged over 800 live shows and written and co-written over 100 songs. Hearing these songs come to life will be a dream come true for the entire team. Christian will be making waves soon enough. “Christina is a multifaceted artist who stays true to herself and that certainly shines through her music,” according to 30A Songwriter Radio. “It’s not just a wealth of musical styles or Christina’s smooth and expressive voice that have made her a highly favorable young local artist. Her songs, which range from thoughtful to silly to poetic, no doubt this talented young artist will show you that she has a way with Americana Country that will flow right into your heart and remain always and forever.” In addition to “Silent Sea” album debut pre-order information Christian’s single release “Quirky Little Thing,” co-written with Grammy Award winner singer/songwriter, Lynn Langham, will be available at the merchandise table Feb. 10 for $5.

“I found myself in an abusive relationship,” she said, “and that’s when I really started drinking and experimenting with drugs.”

She first became addicted to prescription medication, then a co-worker at a local fast food restaurant introduced her to methamphetamine.

Several years later, she was in another relationship, she said, which put her on the road to recovery.

“He was in The Shoulder,” she said, which is a substance abuse treatment center located in Spanish Fort. “I began looking around to find a place that would help me.”

She found The Refuge for Women, a 27-acre facility, located in the Elsanor Community east of Robertsdale.

Formerly “Saving Grace Home for Women,” the program was re-tooled and reopened a few years ago with a program, developed by Dr. Nancy Robertson and Verlee Young, a licensed clinical social worker.

The Refuge is a non-profit, 10-bed, 90-day residential recovery program for adult women suffering from alcohol and drug dependency. Depending on the individual’s needs, Robertson said, the program can extend from 30 to 180 days.

The Christian-based program works with several 12-step programs to provide counseling. The program also includes exercise programs, nutrition classes, help with daily living skills, cooking, garden, health and wellness, and Bible class. The program has also recently added music therapy and equine therapy programs, Robertson said.

But, Grubbs said, she wasn’t able to join the program right away.

“They won’t let you join if you have outstanding warrants,” she said, “so I had to get that taken care of before I could be in the program.”

There was also a matter of cost.

“When she first approached us, we weren’t really sure how she was going to pay for it,” Robertson said. “At the time she was just coming out of prison. She had no money and no job.”

But, Robertson said, they agreed to let Grubbs sign up for the program with hopes that she could get some time of sponsorship.

“That day, I opened an envelope from the Robertsdale United Methodist Church,” Robertson said. There was a check inside that was enough to get Grubbs started in the program.

‘The way I see it, we’re more than a recovery center, we’re a family. Sometimes you have to give a little tough love, but it all comes from the same place.’

NANCY ROBERTSON

Executive director of The Refuge for Women

“I had been to Brother Steve before asking for help,” said Grubbs, referring to the church’s pastor at the time, The Rev. Steve Spining. “There wasn’t a lot they could do at the time, but he promised he would do what he could.”

They didn’t know when they sent that check through the mail – proceeds from the church’s bi-annual quilt show, among other fundraisers put on by the United Methodist Women’s group – that it would be Grubbs who would benefit from it.

“They actually recently sent us another check,” Robertson said, “which will allow us to afford another young woman the same opportunity.”

The remainder of the cost, Robertson said, was in the form of a loan that Grubbs has been paying back a little at a time.

“We have several girls that cannot afford the cost of the treatment,” Robertson said. “They pay what they can when they can. It may not keep us in business, but it’s not about that. It’s about helping people who need help.” Not only did Grubbs get the counseling she needed to help her get off drugs, she retained a support group that would help her in the future.

“We provide family counseling, which her mother attended,” Robertson said. “She and her mother have a very co-dependent relationship, which can create difficult situations.”

Through the recovery program, Grubbs began attending church regularly at Coastal Church in Daphne.

“They’ve been good to us and good to our clients,” Robertson said.

She was sober for nine months after leaving the recovery center, but it was a fight with her mother, Grubbs said, that sent her spiraling into relapse.

“It ended up being a lot worse than it was before,” Grubbs said. “It is only by the grace of God that I survived.”

It was actually when Grubbs stopped making payments that Robertson said she knew something was wrong.

“It’s about making an effort. If they’re clean and sober they will at least make an effort, even if it’s just a few dollars,” Robertson said. “We have a saying, ‘If you’re not paying, you’re probably playing.’”

She had also stopped going to church.

“It’s the support system that they have when they leave here that keeps them on the right path,” Robertson said. “It’s easy to stay sober and make good decisions while you’re here, but it’s a different story on the outside. As long as that support system is in place, we see a lot of success, but it is when they abandon the support system that problems occur.”

So when Grubbs came back to The Refuge, asking to move back in, Robertson said, she suggested a different path.

“It’s a big world out there and we want them to be able to survive in it,” Robertson said. “And part of that is not to just take them back in when they’re having a difficult time. It’s about encouraging to use that support system.”

Getting back into a church environment, Grubbs said, made a world of difference.

“I actually showed up to church high,” she said, “but pastor Chad Stafford greeted me with open arms and no questions. I know he could tell, but he didn’t say anything, he just welcomed me back. So I just kept going.”

She would eventually get involved with a women’s group at the church. She also kept in contact with Robertson, getting advice and the help she needed to get her life on track.

“The way I see it, we’re more than a recovery center, we’re a family,” Robertson said. “Sometimes you have to give a little tough love, but it all comes from the same place.”

After being back on drugs for three months, Grubbs has now been sober for seven. She has a full-time job and is a full-time student, maintaining a 3.79 GPA while at the same time continuing to pay back The Refuge for her treatment.

“It hasn’t always been easy,” she said, “but I am making it by the grace of God.”

Robertson said she has also been working to help Grubbs with her education through Ecumenical Ministries Director Pam Meredith’s Family Foundation.

“We have connected with them and have already gotten funding for three of our clients,” she said. “We have sent in the paperwork and are hoping that Tiffany will be the fourth.”

Grubbs will also participate in The Refuge for Women’s annual fashion show fundraiser, which is scheduled for April 4 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Foley Civic Center.

“It’s through partnerships with people like those at Robertsdale United Methodist and Pam Meredith and through events like the fashion show that allow us to keep operating,” Robertson said.

Last year’s fashion show raised about $18,000 for the recovery center and Robertson said the goal is to double that figure this year.

“As with last year, many of our clients and past clients participate in the event,” she said, “but we are always looking for volunteers and sponsors to help with the event.”

Robertson said they are beginning to make preparations for this year’s event and if anyone wishes to learn more about participating, they can call her at 251-946-3355. If you would like to learn more about The Refuge, visit therefugeforwomen.org.

The mystique of battlefields

There is something mystical about battlefields. I’ve walked many of them, and they all have something in common. If you stop long enough and clear your mind, you can feel the presence of those who were there.

Thousands visit battle-grounds every year. Is it only for the history, the facts? I think not. Most are drawn there because they want to connect with the past, to be part of it, and battlegrounds let you do that, if you let yourself.

I try to be alone for a few minutes, to stand still, be quiet, and feel. The men and women who fought on these fields are there. They are long past, but they have left a bit of themselves behind, not as haunts, but as reminders; we’ve been here, we’ve bled here, some of us died here. I’ve felt it at Little Big Horn, Vicksburg, Port Gibson, Mississippi, Wilson’s Creek, Missouri, Pea Ridge, Arkansas, Fort Morgan, and just up the road in Spanish Fort, at Fort Blakely State Park.

Fort Blakely is the scene of the last full engagement battle of the Civil War. Ulysses Grant referred to it as an “ineffective contribution to the Union war effort” since it was fought only hours after the surrender at Appomattox Court House. Tell that to the 689 Union and 2900 Confederate casualties there. There were 32,000 Union troops in the area, more than Grant had at the siege of Vicksburg, faced by only 4,000 Confederate holdouts.

As I walk through the redoubts, battlements, and rifle pits, especially those undeveloped, I get that feeling of the presence of the soldiers. I can almost smell the cooking fires, the burning gunpowder, hear the songs and laughter of men gathered in a cause, the clash of bayonets on rifles as they massed face-to-face, close enough to smell each other, to see fear. I walk along the redoubts and imagine the earth moving with the firing of artillery, and the impact of the shell some distance away. I feel the shock of those directed at where I stand. I imagine the difficulty of fighting in such conditions having little food, wearing heavy wool uniforms and hob-nailed boots, fighting mosquitoes, and lice, hauling drinking water from the bayou, and sleeping in the mud, fighting in the heat, and shivering at night. It’s all there if you allow yourself to feel it.

Why bother, what difference does it make, what’s the point? Whether you agree with the politics, or who was victorious or defeated, battlefields are part of each of us who claim allegiance to this country.

Each battlefield represents a part of America. We are who we are, our society is what it is, our country stands free for all of us because of what happened on these fields. Here, the game was played for keeps. The stakes were high, and the cause was worth dying for, put up, or shut up. We all should want to connect with that.

When I walked the battleground at Port Gibson, Mississippi, the place where my great-great-grandfather fought and was captured trying to stop Grant’s overwhelming invasion force, the feeling was much more personal. I stood in the house that doubled as a hospital that day, the place where he gave up his freedom after helping a wounded comrade to get medical attention. I could feel his presence, and those of his wounded fellows. I felt of his anguish at giving up the freedom that was so precious to him.

There is mystery on the fields, and stories, and passion, and tears, and if you will let yourself, you can become part of it as you honor those who fought. Their cries echo still, and you can hear them if you listen, “We will be free.”

Women in politics

Hillary Clinton’s failure to break the proverbial glass ceiling in American politics came up a little short. More than 100 men have been nominated for president by the nation’s political parties over the past 220 years. She was the first female to be the nominee of one of the two major parties.

After Hillary became the Democratic nominee last year, former Colorado Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder, who ran for president in 1988, said it best, “It’s been the ultimate tree house with a no girls allowed sign posted on it.”

Nevertheless, national studies have indicated that women still face a double standard when it comes to political campaigns. These surveys reveal that voters will support a male candidate they do not like if they believe he is qualified. However, they are less likely to support a female candidate they think is qualified unless they also like her. Therefore, it appears that for women candidates likeability is intrinsically linked to electability.

However, when it comes to honesty and trustworthiness women have an enormous advantage. Voters simply trust women more than men. A study done by the respected Pew Research Center Poll revealed that 31 percent said women were more honest and ethical than men. Amazingly only three percent said men were more honest and ethical.

I have observed and stated that same opinion for years. My observation when I was in the Legislature was that women legislators were more honest, forthright and more diligent in their duties. Other political experts have espoused this same belief, especially, when it comes to Alabama’s politics.

Inside the Statehouse

In the 1990’s the nation’s business community brought the political guru, Karl Rove, to Alabama to help elect a pro-business state supreme court. He was successful in his endeavor. As he departed the state he left an emphatic statement, “If you want to hold the court in Republican pro-business hands, the best candidate is a conservative female Republican, preferably one who has experience as a Circuit Judge.” Voters simply trust women more and especially for judgeships. We now have a record number of women on our State Supreme Court and Courts of Appeals.

There is no question that women in Alabama have an inherent advantage on the ballot in state judicial and secondary statewide races. If you put the name John Doe on a ballot against Jane Doe in Alabama and neither does any advertising and voters simply show up and vote in a secondary statewide race, Jane Doe will win every time.

However, a survey conducted by the Center for Women and Politics at Rutgers University ranks Alabama 46th in the nation for women serving in the legislature. We are indeed inexplicably underrepresented by women in the State House and Senate. Although today we have numerous ladies in statewide office. Kelli Wise and Lyn Stuart are premier justices on the State Supreme Court. Judges Beth Kellum and Mary Windom serve with distinction on the State Court of Criminal Appeals. Judge Terri Thomas of Cullman is outstanding on the State Court of Civil Appeals. Kay Ivey is our Lieutenant Governor and Twinkle Cavanaugh serves as President of the Public Service Commission.

In the course of history, it has not been that long that women were given the right to vote. The 19th Amendment to the Constitution gave women suffrage. Alabama’s legislature voted to ratify the 19th Amendment in 1953. However, Women began to be elected statewide in Alabama long before other so called progressive states. Beginning in the 1950’s women dominated the offices of Secretary of State, State Auditor, and State Treasurer to such an extent that they became known as “the ladies offices.”

The first woman elected to a statewide office was Sybil Poole who won the Secretary of State office in 1946. She was soon followed by the legendary Agnes Baggett and then Mary Texas Hurt Garner and Melba Till Allen. These women would simply swap the posts of Secretary of State and State Treasurer after their term limits.

By the time Lurleen Wallace became the first female governor in 1967, women held almost half of Alabama’s constitutional offices. It may be time for another female governor. Twinkle Cavanaugh or Kay Ivey or someone else may make the leap. We will see.

See you next week.

Pine Needles Retreat, Fairhope

During the darkest hours of the night, people say they have seen a light in the upper floor of the historic American Legion building on Mobile Bay. Let me tell you the story as it was told to me.

Across Mobile Bay in the port city of Mobile, women have always led active roles in society, as well as politics and business. After the Single Tax Colony had founded the lovely city of Fairhope in 1896, it became a destination for outings and retreats for residents of Mobile. Several hotels dotted the bayshore and religious retreats numbered at least four. It became a place of respite from the big city life in Mobile, and represented relaxation and restoration for the soul. A group of Mobile women had formed the Mobile Business Women's Club.

The group decided that they would like to have a retreat they could use as a group and determined that Fairhope would be the ideal location. They were able to obtain a piece of land, but did not have enough funds to build the retreat. After several years of fundraising, they decided to join the ranks of those women who had learned the power of peaceful protests. They made plans to raise canvas tents on the property and camp out there until funds would be garnered. So they stayed away from homes and families until the husbands grew tired of their womanless states and contributed enough money to build the lovely resort. It was completed in 1912, a wooden three story building with porches on all sides to catch the bay breezes. The third floor had dormer windows on all four sides to allow the flow of air through the building. Windows opened upstairs would draw the cool air from downstairs and expel it, keeping the retreat cool even on the hottest of days. They named the well-loved gathering place Pine Needles. The women considered it a female counterpart of the all male Mobile Yacht Club on the western shores of Mobile Bay.

Pine Needles remained in ownership of the Mobile Women's Club for many years, and some women even lived there year round. A housemother was retained and cooked and cleaned to pay for her room and board. As the club's interest in the resort declined, and financing the maintenance of the building became an issue, rooms were rented out to boarders. Eventually, the Women's Club sold the building and it became rental property. In the 1930s one family to rent it was the Arnold family with their eight children. One of those children has distinct memories of the second floor showers built in the overhang part of the building and the sound of the water falling all the way to the ground. The children learned to swim in the bay and spent hours on the porches of the old place. The fireplace was so large that it would hold immense logs. It is now boarded up, but some say the smell of the smoke from the fireplace is very real at times. The place was used as office space in the 1950s. During this period the third floor was rented out to promoters who held boxing matches there. Seats were placed around a makeshift ring in the center of the room. Clamoring from the spectators could be heard for miles around until complaints caused the boxing business to fold.

In 1961 the building became the home of the American Legion Post 199. It was the first building in Fairhope to be named on the National Register of Historic Places. However, it was soon enclosed with clapboard siding covering the porches, but making more indoor space. Inside rooms are still very much as they were in the earliest days of Pine Needles. Claw foot bathtubs and unpainted walls take a visitor back 100 years to the days of the 1920s or earlier.

Paranormal investigator Barbara has visited the building to glean information about the spirits that inhabit the place from its one-hundred-year history. It is known that there are waitresses at the club who will not work alone in the building, and many people have heard steps sounds from the second floor where the bedrooms were. Barbara spoke aloud introducing herself and the others with her. She spoke in a calm voice encouraging dialogue. She asked if those present were upset that the place had now become a bar. The answer was distinctly, "No, I love it." When asked if she minded that women also drink at the bar, the answer was a definite, "Yes."

Servers say that when they come in to work as the place opens about three o'clock in the afternoon, they often find glasses turned over on their sides and once they came in to find the water running in the sink. Many say that doors are heard opening and closing on the second floor when no one is upstairs. The inhabitant has come to be known as the housemother, reminiscent of the days when the women came there for a little retreat. Perhaps this is because one resident said they repeatedly heard the sound of a broom swishing across the floor.

The most annoying of all the incidents is very loud thumping and pounding on the third floor – not so different from what would be heard at a boxing match. Most who have heard this, have been fearful and do not want to discuss it. Even though the upstairs does not have electricity, occasionally lights are seen from the upstairs dormers. Several motorists have reported seeing them from their cars as they pass by on Scenic 98. People are probably seeing the reflections of passing car lights – or are they?

college football game of the season is usually the least important aspect of the week-long festivities, fans still come from around the country to pour into Ladd-Peebles Stadium to watch the best college football seniors play one more time.

The South team, coached by the Cleveland Browns coaching staff, came away with a 16-15 win over the North team, who were coached by the Chicago Bears staff. The South has now won three of the last four meetings in the series. The North was unable to completely capitalize on five forced turnovers, scoring only 12 points from them.

University of California quarterback Davis Webb came away with MVP Honors after leading the South to a victory on 11-of-16 passing for 165 yards and the game's first SPANISH FORT — Teion Stanton hit a pair of free throws with two seconds left in overtime to put Daphne up by three for the Class 6A, Area 2 win at Spanish Fort Friday night.

For the second time this season Daphne won the neighboring rivalry in overtime. The No. 3-ranked Trojans improved to 24-2 overall and 7-0 in league play. Their only losses were to Spanish Fort and LeFlore in December.

Daphne coach Cedric Yelding said the Toros are always tough, especially at home. "We hadn't won here since 2014," he said. "So to get a win at their home court was huge. It was big to win and clinch (Area 2) in front of this crowd. The kids competed until the end. Teion Stanton stepped up big with two free throws at the end of the game, but that is what I expect of our seniors. We didn't make our free throws during the game, but we made the (overtime) free throws that counted. I am extremely proud of our team. "

Dre Graves led Daphne's scoring with a game-high 20 points while Deontaye Buskey had 10 and Stanton finished with eight.

Spanish Fort was led by freshman Kris Draine with 14 points while Krysta Wright (4) tries a jumper for the Trojans as Savannah Shabel defends the baseline for SFHS.

Briggs McMullen added 10 and Trae Barry added eight for the Toros.

Spanish Fort coach Dru Powell said his team played hard, but fell short in overtime with missed free throws.

"We only hit 4-of-11 free throws from the free throw line in the fourth quarter and overtime combined," he said. "When you are playing a good team like Daphne, it's hard to win when you do that. I'm proud of my guys, though. They played hard, but we didn't make our foul shots

LeBron passes 20,000 career points for Cavaliers

Cleveland Cavaliers' star LeBron James reached 20,000 career points with Cleveland Sunday night in a 107-91 win over the Oklahoma City Thunder.

James needed six points to reach the Cavaliers' milestone in player points. With his 25 points against the Thunder, he totals 20,019 points with Cleveland (27,913 overall) as of Sunday. The Cleveland Cavaliers are the 16th team in NBA history to have a player reach 20,000 points with a team.

This season, James has been an all-around player for the Cavaliers.

He has an average of 25.7 points per game, 8.5 assists per game and eight rebounds per game. James has been playing in both a small forward and a power forward setting in the starting lineup because of his bigger frame and strength. Interestingly, James is leading the Cavs in assists per game ahead of teammate point Guard Kyrie Irving. James has the ball more due

Running back Matt Dayes of NC State scored the South’s other touchdown on a two-yard slice through the middle of the North’s defensive line.

North kicker Zane Gonzalez tied a Senior Bowl record by connecting on three field goals to keep his squad in the game.

With just 1:51 remaining in the game, North quarterback Nate Peterman of Pittsburgh University found Eastern Carolina wide receiver Zay Jones on a crossing route in the back of the end zone to cut the score to 16-15.

Because no one wants to see a tie or overtime in the Senior Bowl, the Bears staff opted to attempt the two-point conversion for the win. Peterman lofted a prayer to the back of the end zone where it was intercepted to seal the South victory.

The University’s of Alabama and Auburn were both represented in this year’s contest. The Tide sent O.J. Howard on offense, Daphne High grad Ryan Anderson, Dalvin Tomlinson on defense and Cole Mazza on special teams, while the Tigers were represented by Mon-travius Adams on defense and Fairhope native Robert Leff.

Howard, believed by many to be the top prospect at the game, totaled 39 yards on four catches while playing much of the first half. Tomlinson chipped in four tackles. Adams tallied six tackles and recovered a fumble for the South.

After finishing the week of practices, interviews and the game, players will now go train to get ready for the NFL Scouting Combine in Indianapolis in March. The Senior Bowl is just the first step in the process for players attempting to make it to the NFL, but time and again it has proven to be a very important step. We’ll have to wait to see who improved their stock and who teams fell in love with come the NFL Draft in May.

Everett hopes to be first Jag to tap NFL Draft

MOBILE — Of all the accomplishments achieved by the University of South Alabama, there’s still one rite of passage the school has yet to achieve: having a player selected in the NFL Draft. Come this May, tight end Gerald Everett hopes to hear his name called and etch his name in the annals of Jaguar history.

A tumultuous collegiate career saw Everett make stops at a community college and a junior college before landing on the roster at the University of Alabama at Birmingham in 2014. After the program was disbanded a year later, Everett followed several teammates and coaches to USA to finish his college career.

Everett turned heads in his one year in Joey Jones’ offense, turning in 717 yards and four touchdowns and tying for the team lead with 49 receptions.

Even though he only tallied one catch for six yards in Saturday’s game, scouts and media alike are falling for what they call the “small school prospect.” In what is considered a weak tight end class, Everett is making sure his presence is known. Getting to practice and play at the Senior Bowl this week alongside SEC prospects O.J. Howard (Alabama) and Evan Engram (Mississippi), only proved to hone his skills, and helped him get noticed.

“O.J. and Evan are great guys on and off the field,” Everett said. “We show each other things in the film room and at practice that are unthinkable. So with us teaming up and making a trio is crazy. We’re kinda like a super group.”

Any quarterback in the country would love to have that trio at his disposal. This week, starting South quarterback Joshua Dobbs did have the “super group” on his side.

“They caught passes great. Deep routes, short routes, they did a great job of getting open,” Dobbs said. “(They are) a very, very explosive group of tight ends. It was a lot of fun throwing to them.”

The week of practices and time in the limelight will undoubtedly help Everett’s draft stock. With a good performance at the upcoming NFL Scouting Combine, the tight end could possibly even vault himself into the top half of the draft.

Red Cross critically needs donors after winter weather adds to severe blood shortage

Following several rounds of severe winter weather in many parts of the country, the American Red Cross urges eligible blood and platelet donors to help restock its shelves to overcome a shortage.

Since Dec. 1, about 300

blood drives across 27 states have been forced to cancel due to inclement winter weather, resulting in more than 10,500 blood and platelet donations going uncollected. Despite the weather, hospital patients still rely on transfusions.

Blood donor Jim Taylor knows how it feels to have a loved one waiting for a transfusion. His son Aaron was born with a rare liver condition. In the short two months of his life, he received 115 blood products. Taylor said each transfusion gave his family more time with Aaron, so he encourages others to give. “When the Red Cross says there is a shortage, they are not exaggerating,” said Taylor. “I now know from experience that what they are saying is somewhere there is a father waiting on the donation that will save his son’s life. When the Red Cross asks for help, what that means is a new dad is praying for a miracle.” To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor

App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). Donors are encouraged to make appointments and complete the RapidPass online health history questionnaire at redcrossblood.org/rapidpass to save time when donating.

How to help

Simply download the American Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) to make an appointment or for more information. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver’s license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age in most states (16 with parental consent where allowed by state law), weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood.

High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements. Blood donors can now save time at their next donation by using RapidPass to complete their pre-donation reading and health history questionnaire online, on the day of their donation, prior to arriving at the blood drive. To get started and learn more, visit redcrossblood.org/RapidPass and follow the instructions on the site.

Precision medicine: UAB study creates ‘mini-lung’ to study effect of pulmonary fibrosis drugs

By BOB SHEPARD

Pulmospheres, three dimensional multicellular spheroids composed of lung cells from individual patients, were shown to be effective in predicting the efficacy of medications for idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis, according to findings from University of Alabama at Birmingham scientists presented today in JCI Insight, a journal of the American Society for Clinical Investigation. Pulmospheres are tiny spheres — about one millimeter in diameter — which contain all the various cell types found in a human lung and are grown from tissue obtained from a surgical lung biopsy. Pulmospheres give researchers a 3D model to study various aspects of cell biology and disease mechanisms. “Our results suggest that pulmospheres simulate the microenvironment in the lung and serve as a personalized and predictive model for assessing responsiveness to antifibrotic drugs in patients with IPF,” said Veena Antony, M.D., professor in the Division of Pulmonary, Allergy and Critical Care Medicine within the Department of Medicine, and primary investigator of the study. The UAB research team grew pulmospheres from 20 patients with idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis — a devastating lung disease — and nine control patients. They then examined whether the pulmospheres reacted to one of two commonly used medications for IPF. “There is no cure for IPF, but there are two FDA-approved drugs that can help slow the rate of decline caused by the disease and improve quality of life,” said Antony. “Not all patients respond to both drugs, and some don’t respond to either. Having a reliable clinical test that can predict which drug works best for which patient is urgently needed.” The pulmospheres were grown to useable size in about 24 hours following the biopsy, then exposed to the two medications, pirfenidone and nintedanib. Within about 16 hours, researchers were able to observe if the spheres responded favorably to one, both or neither of the medications. “This is a wonderful example of precision medicine,” said Victor Thannickal, M.D., professor and director of the Division of Pulmonary, Allergy and Critical Care Medicine and a study co-author. “Using pulmospheres derived from a patient’s own cells may allow clinicians to tailor specific drugs to an individual patient without exposing that patient to potential side-effects or harm from treatments that are unlikely to be effective.” Of the 20 subjects enrolled in this study, three patient’s pulmospheres responded only to nintedanib and the pulmospheres of four patient’s responded only to pirfenidone. Eleven patient’s pulmospheres responded to both drugs and two patient’s pulmospheres did not respond to either drug.

Researchers confirmed the findings by following the patients over time, establishing that the response predicted by the pulmospheres was clinically observed in the patients. Antony says there is a critical need for a better predictive model for IPF. Animal models of the disease are disappointing, and more traditional two dimensional cellular models are insufficient. “The lungs are three dimensional organs and to truly understand the dynamics of IPF medications on the disease we require a 3D model, one that contains all the cell types found in a lung and that is able to function as a microcosm of the lung,” Antony said. “Many drugs have shown promise in pre-clinical studies, only to fail in subsequent clinical trials. Three dimensional modeling might change that.” Antony says pulmospheres were developed in cancer research as a means of targeting potential drugs. A hallmark of IPF is an aggressive invasion by cells known as myofibroblasts, which mirrors the invasive phenotype of malignant cells, giving researchers reason to think that pulmospheres might work in IPF. The UAB trial was the first to study pulmospheres in IPF. Antony also hopes that modern drug discovery techniques, using high throughput screening technology to quickly screen numerous compounds for disease-modifying properties, will be enhanced by the use of pulmospheres. “There are many potential therapeutic agents for IPF in the discovery pipeline now, and this technique might prove to be a very effective way to determining which are the most promising,” she said. Thannickal serves as the program director of a translational program project grant, sponsored by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, that is focused on identifying novel diagnostic and therapeutic approaches to fibrotic lung disease. “Without support of the NHLBI, and in particular the tPPG funding mechanism, the tissue biorepository which was critical to developing these innovative screening methods would not have been possible,” he said. Funding for the study came from the National Institutes of Health. NIH describes IPF as a disease in which tissue deep in the lungs becomes thick and stiff, or scarred, over time. As the lung tissue thickens, the lungs are unable to properly move oxygen into the bloodstream. IPF is a serious disease that usually affects middle-aged and older adults. IPF has no cure and many people live only about three to five years after diagnosis. The UAB team consisted of Antony, Thannickal, Joao de Andrade, M.D., Ranu Surolia, Ph.D., Fu Jun Li, M.D., Ph.D., Zheng Wang, M.C., Huashi Li, Gang Liu, M.D., Yong Zhou, M.D., Ph.D., Tracy Luckhardt, M.D., Sejong Bae, Ph.D., Ruiming Liu, M.D., Ph.D., and Sunad Rangarajan, M.D.

Leukemia research leads to discovery of cause for childhood syndrome

SUBMITTED

After studying leukemia, cancer researchers at the University of South Alabama Mitchell Cancer Institute confirmed that a mutation in a gene called SON leads to a neurodevelopmental disorder that produces intellectual disability, impaired vision and facial abnormalities in children. The new syndrome, ZTTKS, now bears the initial of one of the MCI researchers, Dr. Jung-Hyun Kim, Ph.D., a post-doctoral fellow in the lab of Dr. Erin Ahn, Ph.D., associate professor of oncologic sciences. Their research, published in September, confirmed that SON is a “master regulator” governing neurodevelopment, and that a mutation in the gene can result in ZTTKS.

“Identifying a previously unknown cause for a syndrome and having that syndrome named after a team member in your laboratory is quite an accomplishment, said Laurie Owen, Ph.D., MCI associate director for Basic and Translational

Sciences. For the Posey family of Beacon, N.Y., identifying the cause of their young daughter’s disability puts a stop to the endless searching for a diagnosis. “This means everything,” said Pamela Posey, mother of 3-year-old Emma. “I’ve already shared the papers with our doctors so they can better treat Emma.”

Emma attends a special-needs preschool with her twin sister, Ella, who has not been diagnosed with ZTTKS. “I was told that perhaps she could catch up with other kids her age,” Posey said. “Now I know that this may not be the case.”

While there’s no “cure” for ZTTKS, identifying its cause can help doctors predict future medical issues for Emma and allow the Poseys to connect with families facing a similar diagnosis. Posey has created a Facebook page to do just that. “It’s very new, and we’re all looking forward to getting to know each other,” she said.

THE SON GENE

As a cancer researcher,

Ahn had discovered that a shortened version of the SON gene was linked to leukemia, a discovery that was published in the prestigious journal Molecular Cell this past spring. Ahn had studied the SON gene since 2004, when she was a post-doctoral fellow at the University of California San Diego. She came to MCI in 2012, and Kim joined her lab in 2013.

The new discovery occurred after a clinician at Valley Children’s Hospital in Madera, Calif., and the clinical genomics team at Ambry Genetics near Irvine, Calif., reached out to Ahn because of her past work with SON. Using DNA sequencing technology, the physician at Valley, together with Ambry, had discovered a mutation in the SON gene of a 5-year-old girl with developmental disabilities. The mutation, they found, had not been inherited from her parents.

Owen said that Ahn and Kim’s work illustrates the importance of conducting basic scientific research, following where it leads, and ultimately applying it in a health-care setting. “The ZTTKS story underscores the inherent value of basic cancer research being applied to solve an unrelated problem related to the underlying molecular basis for a neurodevelopmental disorder in children,” said Owen.

Dr. Jung-Hyun Kim, Ph.D., a post-doctoral fellow, and Dr. Erin Ahn, Ph.D., associate professor of Oncologic Sciences at the University of South Alabama Mitchell Cancer Institute, collected and analyzed the clinical features of 20 unrelated patients who shared a developmental delay and intellectual disability, and narrowed down which genes are closely related to brain development. They collaborated with clinicians, genetic counselors and clinical genomics scientists from all over the U.S. and Europe, including the U.K., the Netherlands, Germany and Austria, to publish their findings.

Ahn and Kim collected and analyzed the clinical features of 20 unrelated patients who shared the developmental delay and intellectual disability. They isolated white blood cells from blood samples taken from patients and their parents, and further isolated RNA to confirm a problem with RNA editing in the cells. “The goal was to narrow down which genes are closely related to brain development,”

Ahn said. “A lot of these genes are downstream targets of the SON gene.”

Ahn and her lab discovered that SON plays a key role in the way a cell translates DNA into protein – in particular, RNA splicing, or editing. She explains it this way: If there’s a mutation in the SON gene, the ensuing SON protein can become compromised and cause mistakes in RNA editing.

Ahn and Kim also confirmed the findings by repeating Ahn’s previous studies with zebrafish, a freshwater fish with regenerative abilities that is often used in scientific research. They confirmed that SON mutations produced developmental problems in the fish: When injected with genetic materials that reduced SON levels, some zebrafish developed with bent tails; others had severe brain malformations. The problems mimicked the clinical features observed in the patients, which meant that the researchers had connected the dots from a SON mutation to the neurodevelopmental disorder.

A WORLDWIDE COLLABORATION

Ahn and Kim collaborated with clinicians, genetic counselors and clinical genomics scientists from all over the U.S. and Europe, including the U.K., the Netherlands, Germany and Austria, to publish their findings. “In research, you can never predict where the experimental results are ultimately going to take you,” said Owen. “But the real magic happens when you have researchers who are thinking outside the box, willing to collaborate across disciplines, communicate openly, and share data—that is the essence of team science.”

Vanessa Hudgens stars in “Powerless,” premiering Thursday on NBC.

Protecting the public from superhero damage in NBC’s ‘Powerless’

By George Dickie
© Zap2it

In the world of DC Comics, superheroes duke it out with supervillains in a battle to protect humanity from the forces of evil. But what happens with all the collateral damage that results?

The good people at Wayne Security are there to help.

In “Powerless,” a satirical half-hour comedy series premiering Thursday, Feb. 2, on NBC, it falls to this subsidiary of Wayne Enterprises to create products that make innocent bystanders feel a little safer. It is here that recent business school grad Emily Locke (Vanessa Hudgens, “High School Musical,” “Spring Breakers”) begins her first day as director of research and development, full of big ideas and confidence, which of course runs counter to the agendas of her well-entrenched new co-workers.

Chief among them is her boss, Van Wayne (Alan Tudyk, “42,” “Death at a Funeral”), a spoiled rich kid who’s never had to work hard a day in his life and thus has difficulty relating to the rank-and-file employees beneath him. There are also cynical co-workers and underlings (Danny Pudi, Ron Funches, Christina Kirk) she must motivate if she is to lead them to their full potential and prove that you don’t have to have superpowers to be a hero.

“She is extremely positive and just wants everyone to do their best,” Hudgens explains. “And she becomes the boss at Wayne Security and is met with a couple of characters that don’t really love working and she’s just trying to inspire them to change the world. And they’re dragging their feet the entire time.”

Emily’s primary responsibility is overseeing the creation of products that protect the general public from superhero/supervillain activity in Charm City, among them a device called “the rumbrella.”

“It protects people from rubble,” Hudgens says with a laugh, “because one of the main (hazards) in Charm City is falling rubble. So it’s something that everyone definitely needs.

(The writers) come up with a bunch of really funny, interesting products that they feel will make a difference. ... Some of the stuff they come up with, I’m cracking up every single time I read a new script. I mean, the writers are just killing it. It’s so funny because its just like so left of center. Like they’re really doing stuff that I would never think of.”

Hudgens also calls Tudyk a “comedic genius,” and counts herself lucky to be working in an environment where she’s laughing all day, though she strives to keep a straight face during takes.

“It’s one of my strong suits, I think,” she says. “... I’m pretty good at keeping a straight face because there’s stuff that Alan comes up with sometimes and just says that I have to keep a straight face for. It’s just so ridiculous that at times I applaud myself for not cracking up because he’s just too funny. I’ll be standing next to the cameramen and I’ll see the cameramen are cracking up during the take. It’s hysterical.”

Powerless
This sly new action comedy is set in a world where humans must cope with fallout from all the superhero and villain clashes. In the series premiere, Emily Locke (Vanessa Hudgens) starts work at Wayne Enterprises, but is unimpressed by her boss (Alan Tudyk, "Firefly") and colleagues.

NFL Honors

On the eve of the Super Bowl the NFL acknowledges its best from the 2016 season, as it has done since 2012. Seven player awards come from the Associated Press and include the AP Most Valuable Player Award, Coach of the Year, Comeback Player of the Year, Play of the Year, top offensive and defensive players as well as the top offensive and defensive rookies. Among those nominated for the Walter Payton Man of the Year Award are Eli Manning (New York Giants) and Rob Gronkowski (New England Patriots).

10:29 p.m. on 13 NBC
Saturday Night Live

Since Kristen Stewart hasn't guest-hosted this show before, a spoof of that franchise could be in store as she makes her "SNL" debut with this new episode.

Super Bowl LI

Tom Brady and the New England Patriots head for a record ninth Super Bowl appearance as they face Matt Ryan and the Atlanta Falcons in Super Bowl LI from NRG Stadium in Houston, Texas. Brady overcame a four-game suspension this season while the Falcons explosive offense led by Ryan dominated in the playoffs.

Joe Buck and analyst Troy Aikman will call the action.

9:30 p.m. on 10 FOX 23 FOX
24: Legacy

This new series gets a post-Super Bowl premiere before entering its regular Monday slot. The clock-ticking format remains the same as Corey Hawkins plays a military veteran pursued by followers of a terrorist leader he killed. He seeks help from a former CTU official (Miranda Otto) whose senator husband (Jimmy Smits) is running for president.

The Otto family faces the possibility that they may have to leave Westport when the home they are renting is put up for sale in a new episode called "Then and Now." Inspired by fact, this new drama series from producers including Len Wiseman and Matt Nix casts Justin Kirk as a wealthy engineer prompted by the murder of a close friend to reshape a Chicago police precinct. He turns it into a private, technical-ly upgraded operation, forcing the city's beat cops to approach their jobs in a new way. Natalie Martinez, Caitlin Stasey and Ernie Hudson also star.

Maybe it's true that aspiring advertising men Sam (Sam Richardson) and Tim (Tim Robinson) have little in terms of money, connections or, if we're being honest, talent. What they do have is optimism and ambition to build a local ad empire, as long as these longtime friends can stay based in their beloved Michigan hometown. This new comedy series is executive-produced by Lorne Michaels and Jason Sudeikis.

The Alabama Law Foundation announces new Fellows

At the start of every year, the Alabama Law Foundation selects Alabama Bar members who have shown outstanding dedication to their profession and their community by inviting them to become “Fellows.” The Fellows banquet, scheduled for Saturday, January 28, 2017 at the Renaissance Hotel in Montgomery, Alabama, is held in their honor. Plans include a cocktail hour at 5:45 followed by dinner at 7:00. During the event, those Fellows elevated to “Life Fellows” status are also recognized.

The Fellows program was established in 1995 to honor Alabama Bar members for outstanding service and commitment. Since no more than 1% of bar members are invited into fellowship, the selection committee chooses new members from an exceptional group of lawyers. President Board of Trustees of the Alabama Law Foundation Joe Fawal explains, “The Fellows of the Alabama Law Foundation are selected from the ranks of the Alabama State Bar and represent our brightest and best. The fact that they are selected is in and of itself an honor. But the contribution that they make in defense of the poor in civil matters in Alabama is a much greater honor.” Fellows are given the opportunity, as leaders in the legal community, to provide financial and personal support for the Alabama Law Foundation, the charitable arm of the Alabama State Bar.

customers will continue to enjoy shopping at Dollar General’s new location.”

Dollar General’s new location features a fresh layout, designed to make shopping easier and simpler for customers. STRANGE BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was 20th-century American writer and political activist Max Eastman who made the following sage obser- vation: “It is the abil- ity to take a joke, not make one, that proves you have a sense of humor.”

• Have you ever won- dered why a “down” in American football is called that? In the early days of the sport, when the ball carrier was tackled, he was sup- posed to yell “Down!” to avoid getting hit by other players.

• If you’re like one- third of American vac- ationers, you spend at least some time clean- ing your holiday lodg- ings upon arrival.

• In many Mediterra- nean countries, a typi- cal breakfast consists of some combination of the following: to- matoes, olives, cheese, bread and hard-boiled eggs.

• The Guinness Book of World Records (now known simply as Guin- ness World Records) is so named because in 1951, Sir Hugh Beaver, the managing direc- tor of the Guinness Breweries, wanted to settle an argument over whether the golden plo- ver or the red grouse was the fastest game bird in Europe. Unable to find the answer in reference books, Bea- ver realized that there must be many such questions debated in pubs, but no reference book to settle them. Another Guinness em- ployee recommended professional fact-find- ers (and twin broth- ers) Norris and Ross McWhirter to compile such a book. The first edition was printed in 1954, and all 1,000 cop- ies were given away.

• It was a New Yorker named William Shep- herd who patented the first liquid soap. The recipe? One pound of soap, 100 pounds of ammonia solution and enough water for the mixture to reach the consistency of molas- ses.

FAMOUS HAND

This deal occurred in the quarterfinal match between Italy and the United States at the 2004 world team championship in Istanbul. The Italians defeated their longtime rivals by the slender margin of 12 IMPs in the 80-deal clash.

The Italy-U.S. confronta- tion was an up-and-down affair, with the lead chang- ing hands many times. Today’s deal helped put the Americans into the lead at the end of the second 16-board segment.

The bidding shown took place when Norberto Boc- chi and Giorgio Duboin were North-South for Italy. Duboin ruffed the open- ing spade lead and had to decide how to broach the trump suit.

West’s four-spade bid indicated a distributional hand with few high cards, so it would seem that declarer would do best by leading a low diamond from his hand to see whether West had a singleton honor. In the actual case, this would have resolved the issue immediately. If an honor did not appear, declarer would play the king, and if it lost to the ace, he would have to decide whether to finesse East for the jack when the suit was next led from dummy.

Instead, Duboin crossed to dummy with a club at trick two and led a diamond to the queen. When this lost to the singleton ace, he had to go down one.

At the other table, Bobby Levin and Steve Weinstein of the U.S. also reached six diamonds and got a spade lead. Here, too, the Italian West had bid four spades at his first turn.

Weinstein considered his first play in the trump suit very carefully and found the winning line by leading low from his hand at trick two. The appearance of West’s ace gave the Americans a 16-IMP pickup on the deal.

Chilly Run, chili cookoff set for Feb. 18

SUBMITTED

BAY MINETTE — The Bay Minette Rotary Club and Heritage Junior Women’s Club will again join forces to put on fundraisers for the North Baldwin Coalition for Excellence in Education. The events will be held Feb. 18 at the Community Kids Park in Bay Minette.

The Rotary Club’s ninth annual “Chilly Run” will begin at 9 a.m. for the 5K run/race walk and 10 a.m. for the 1-mile fun run. The chili cook-off sponsored by HJWC begins at 10 a.m.

Both clubs again chose the coalition as beneficiary and proceeds will help fund teacher grants for the nine schools in the Baldwin County High School feeder pattern. Last year, NBCEE awarded more than $10,000 in grants using funds from these two events. Since its inception in 2008, NBCEE has presented more than $80,000 to teachers in north

Baldwin schools. “The Heritage Junior Women’s Club believes in and supports the community in which we all live and play. As an organization, we believe that a strong education system builds strong communities; we are proud to continue to host this annual event,” said Ashley Davis, event chair. “The Chili Cook Off is one of my favorite events of the year! This is my fourth year chairing the cook off side of the event, and every year I am continued to be blown away by the support from the community.”

The HJWC Chili Cook-off will feature several prizes including best overall chili, best non-chili chili, hottest chili, crowd favorite and other categories. Teams can be formed in clubs, organizations, businesses or among friends. Booths are $25 and entrants must provide at least seven gallons of chili. Admission tickets are $5 to sample chili. To register a team, or other information, call Ashley Jones at 251-937-5665. The day’s activities will also include performances by area school groups.

Rotary Club member Karmen Still said these two events held built community support. “The chili run and cook-off unite our community around a common goal: to resource our teachers and students,” Still said. “Being part of hosting such an event is a way I am able to give back to a community which has played such an instrumental role in my life and career.”

Registration for the Chilly Run is $15 for students and $20 for adults by Feb. 10. After that date, the price is $20 and $25 respectively. Pre-registered runners are guaranteed a T-shirt and all others will be given out on first-come, first-served basis. Participants will also receive one ticket to the chili cook-off.

Fruits, snacks and beverages will also be provided.

Race packets will be available for pick-up Feb. 17 at the North Baldwin Fitness Center or at the park on race day. Prizes will be awarded to first-, second- and third-place male and female for overall, race walk and by age groups. The top three male and female fun run winners will also receive awards. The Rotary Club will also present a $200 prize to the school with the most pre-registered participants and $100 for second place.

Registration is available online at active.com or forms are available at the North Baldwin Fitness Center, Bay Minette City Hall, from Rotary Club members or by emailing Karmen Still at Karmen@sfmco.com. For more details, call Still at 251-421-3073.

Sponsorships are available for the day’s events including Hot Pepper/Sprinter Sponsor, $500; Walker/Mild Pepper Sponsor, $250 and Heartburn/Muscle Cramp Sponsor, $100. For more information about sponsorships, contact Still or Davis.

The Teacher Grant program was started by the Heritage Junior Women’s Club and was eventually turned over to the education foundation after it formed in 2008. The women’s organization has continued to support the grant program through the years. NBCEE will award its teacher grants in the spring, following an application process. The grants are awarded in $500 increments and applications are open to any teacher serving in one of the nine schools in the north Baldwin feeder pattern. Last year, more than 20 educators were awarded grants through NBCEE using funds generated from the Chilly Run and Chili Cook-Off.

Ashley Davis, Chili Cook-Off Chair, said that’s why it’s so important to back our local schools and educators. “Our schools are wonderful, and our teachers work hard, this event to raise funds for supplemental grants for them is the least we can do as an organization,” said Davis. “Our teachers and students deserve so much more, and by helping to fund these grants we are helping teachers have the means to bring to life the extra pieces of the vision they have for their classrooms.”

Registration opens for free basic carpentry course beginning Feb. 14

MONTGOMERY — The Alabama Home Builders Foundation has partnered with North Baldwin Center for Technology to offer a free basic residential carpentry course to local adults. The course will take place on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from Feb. 14 through April 13 at North Baldwin Center for Technology, 505 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., Bay Minette. The class will cover the basics of residential carpentry such as safety instruction, construction layout and reading blueprints, framing, window and door installation, and siding and exterior trim. All who successfully complete the course will receive a certificate of completion from the Home Builders Association of Alabama. “With the housing market on the upswing and the construction workforce aging, there’s an ever-increasing need for qualified, skilled tradespeople entering the home building industry,” said Foundation board member Todd Slyman. For details about the program and to register, contact Artemis Moore at 1-800-745-4222 or email artemismoore@hbaa.org.

BAY MINETTE — Pine Grove Elementary School's Resource Officer Deputy Lucas Jones recently trained in Meridian, Mississippi, to be a D.A.R.E. instructor.

He has been teaching fifth grade students about D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education). He will also cover the following topics: peer pressure, bullying, communication, risks and much more.

Students are now learning about the D.A.R.E. Decision Making Model. The model encourages students to DEFINE (describe the problem), ASSESS (What are your choices?), RESPOND (Make a choice) and EVALUATE (Review your decision then ask did you make a good choice?). The students are enjoying practicing the D.A.R.E. Decision Making Model with situations and scenarios written in their booklets. They have the opportunity to use the model to write meaningful responses. The students also enjoy defining important terms in the glossary. Pine Grove School fifth grade students feel so fortunate to have Jones visiting and teaching D.A.R.E. on its campus. Jones shared with the students, "As your D.A.R.E. instructor, I look forward to being in the classrooms and being a part of our school community. Your teacher and I know that you will be successful D.A.R.E. graduates and joining students around the world who have chosen to make smart choices."

Council rejects contract for electrical training for city employees

john@gulfcoastmedia.com

ROBERTSDALE — The Robertsdale City Council voted Jan. 17 to reject a contract to training of the city’s electrical employees after the city’s attorney expressed concerns about the contract.

At its Dec. 5 meeting, the council voted unanimously to contract with the Electric Cities of Georgia for its line-man school.

“I don’t have any issues with what they are charging or with the type and quality of the training,” said city attorney Ken Raines. “It is the contract itself that I have an issue with.”

According to Raines, the city would be locked into a 12-month contract and would have to give notice before the contract is up that they do not wish to renew the contract, without specifying what the terms of the new contract would be.

“Essentially, we could be locked into another 12-month contract without knowing how much we are paying or anything else,” said Raines, “that’s not something I would recommend we do.”

There is also no escape clause in the contract, Raines said, allowing the city a certain time period to give notice if they do not wish to continue the contract.

The contract also includes several pages regarding the settling of disputes between the town and the electric company which, according to the contract, would require city officials to go to Georgia for arbitration between the city and electric company.

“There are certain things that can be negotiated,” Raines said, “but there are other things that just aren’t negotiable and it’s not just in one place, it’s through the entire contract.”

In December, Scott Gilbert, the city’s director of Public Works, said the city is currently sending employees for training to Montgomery, but the Electric Cities of Georgia offered to come to Robertsdale and train employees using the city’s own equipment.

“We’re still doing training through AREA (The Alabama Rural Electric Association),” Gilbert said during the most recent meeting.

City engineer Greg Smith

said the city could also choose to use the Electric Cities of Georgia for training as a non-member.

The city is continuing to work on upgrades to the electrical system after approving three bids in October, including bids for poles, transformers and pole line hardware.

The electrical system expansions, which were approved last year, include:

- Retain the 115 KV service point at the County Road 48 Substation, located just west of College Avenue.
- The East Substation, which is currently built to step down from 46 KV to 12 KV, will be dismantled, leaving the County Road 48 Substation as the only delivery point.
- All remaining downtown four KV distribution lines would be converted to 12 KV distribution lines.

- The city’s two four KV substations, the North Substation, located at St. Paul Street, just south of Michigan Street; and the South Substation, located on St. Paul Street, just south of Nebraska Street, would be dismantled using in-house labor.
- Several of the existing distribution lines would be upgraded.

The city will also begin an eight-year contract in 2018 with the Municipal Electric Association of Georgia (MEAG), which was approved in September.

The contract will run through Dec. 31, 2025. The contract covers only power generation fees, not power transmission, or SEPA fees, which are fixed by federal law, said Mayor Charles Murphy.

The city will continue to contract with the Southern Company for those fees, officials said, while the new contract with MEAG should bring the city’s electrical rates back to 2012 levels.

The council also voted in September to approve bid results with Stewart Engineering electrical consultants, based in Anniston, for system upgrades.

Besides approving minutes from previous minutes and paying monthly bills in the amount of $409,179.90, the only other item on the agenda for Jan. 17 was the approval of a request to surplus a trash truck for the city’s Utilities Department.

The truck would be placed on govdeals.com with a minimum purchase price of $15,000, Gilbert said.
