LISD rejects proposed attendance zoning

Leander ISD proposed moving nearly 1,000 students around to various schools under the third scenario proposal for its Elementary School No. 30 attendance zoning map.

BY CLAYTON KELLEY
REPORTER

After district officials were presented with the proposed final scenario for the Elementary School No. 30 attendance zoning map at the Leander ISD Board of Trustees meeting on Jan. 18, the board opted not to go forward with the recommended plans.

The school board needs to adopt a new attendance zoning map before the next school year that addresses overcrowding in the northern portion of the district and factors in which students will go to the new Elementary School No. 30, which opens in August.

District staff have been working on the proposed final attendance zoning map, including obtaining public input, since last September. Under this proposed scenario, nearly 1,000 students would have been rezoned.

The proposed shifting of students under the plan includes:

- 302 students moving from Bagdad to Elementary School No. 30,
- 68 students moving from Camacho to Whitestone,
- 27 students moving from Camacho to Bagdad,
- 173 students moving from Larkspur to North,
- 250 students moving from Plain to Elementary School No. 30,
- 31 students moving from Plain to Camacho; and
- 144 students moving from Tarvin to Parkside.

Four out of the six board members in attendance at the meeting voted against the third scenario, citing that the propositions increased functional capacity at North Elementary while underuti-

Leander MLK March and Celebration draws crowd following rescheduling

BY JOSH MONIZ
SENIOR REPORTER

Despite lingering cold from the freezing temperatures that caused the original event to be postponed, a sizeable crowd turned out Saturday, Jan. 27, for the rescheduled MLK Day March and Celebration.

The event was originally going to be held on Jan. 15, closer to the MLK Day holiday, but it had to be pushed back when the inclement weather was lower than projected and dropped to freezing temperatures.

The event kicked off in the morning with a march from Camacho Elementary to Old Town Park, where the event was held.

Dozens of local residents participated in a march celebrating Martin Luther King, Jr., on Saturday, Jan. 27, 2024. The parade had been rescheduled from Jan. 15 due to inclement weather.

Study: Texans face a bigger burden than ever to pay rent

More than half of the state's 4.2 million renters spend at least 30% of their income on rent and utilities, according to a Harvard University report.

BY JOSHUA FECHTER
THE TEXAS TRIBUNE

Texas renters are under more pressure from the state's high housing costs than ever, according to a Harvard University study released Thursday.

More than half of the state's 4.2 million renter households spend too much of their income on keeping a roof over their heads and the lights on, a report from Harvard's Joint Center for Housing Studies shows.

Some 51% of Texas renters — a record 2.1 million households — are now "cost-burdened," meaning they spend more than 30% of their income on rent and utilities. Of those, nearly 1.1 million are severely cost-burdened, meaning they put at least half of their income toward rent and utilities.

The rise in rents has left tenants with fewer dollars to spend on key household costs — like food, health care and transportation — or set aside for a down payment on a home of their own. The steep increase in housing costs has also fueled eviction filings and homelessness in the state's major metro areas, housing advocates say.

Rents in Texas skyrocketed as the state's population boomed during the COVID-19 pandemic. Rent growth has since cooled as housing construction surged and higher mortgage rates tamped down demand for homes. But rents are still considerably higher than they were before the pandemic struck.

"Housing instability and housing insecurity is higher than it's ever been," said Ben Martin, research director for Texas Housers, a research and advocacy group. "Even as rents have stabilized, they've stabilized at this level that's just completely unsustainable and unmanageable for low-income households."

Low-income earners have borne the brunt of the rise in rents, especially as the state's supply of cheap rental housing has dried up. Nearly 90% of the state's renter households making $29,999 or less were considered cost-burdened, most of them shelling out more than half of their income to stay housed.

It's been increasingly difficult for low-income households to find housing they can afford in recent years. Near the beginning of the last decade, Texas had about 753,000 housing units with rents below $600. By 2022, that number had shrunk to 452,000, driven in part by rent increases amid the state's robust growth.

Middle-income households are facing more pressure, too. Of the state's renter households making between $30,000 and $49,999, nearly three-quarters were considered cost-burdened.

Almost 40% of renter households earning between $45,000 and $74,999 also were considered to be spending too much on rent.

Rent pressures also fall disproportionately on Black and Hispanic households, who are more likely than their white and Asian counterparts to be overly burdened by rent.

What's more, renters no longer have the safety net weaved during the pandemic to shield them from the increasingly hostile housing market. Federal rent relief funds have all but dried up and pauses on evictions intended to keep tenants housed have expired. In addition, a boom in apartment construction in recent years has helped keep rent prices in check, but apartment builders have pulled back in recent months amid high interest rates.

"We're going to see an increase in people paying incredible amounts of their income towards rent, doubling up and losing stable housing, facing eviction and for some facing homelessness," Martin said.

lizing Elementary School No. 30 and over-utilizing Whitestone Elementary.

"I've been on the long-range planning committee since the beginning, this is something I'm very passionate about," Place 4 trustee Anna Smith said. "For me it's not about what neighborhood code goes where or where we move, it's the system and the process here."

"I had so much hope for this (long-range planning) committee. The reason I had so much hope is because it was something different, we're not doing the same thing that's always been done. We were going to save tax payers dollars, we're deferring schools because we're being better planners. I feel like we're (now) resorting back to the way we've always done it. I feel like we're a better district than that. We are truly trying to create a 10-year plan here, and we cannot keep doing the same practices that we've done since 2007."

School board president Gloria Gonzales-Dholakia was in favor of the third attendance zone scenario. She believes that by lengthening this process, it could potentially affect LISD's process of hiring new teachers and transfer students.

District staff are expected to bring back a new attendance zoning scenario with the sought revision at a February board meeting.

CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

Border standoff continues between state, feds

A standoff at an Eagle Pass park continues as the Department of Homeland Security has sent a second letter to Gov. Greg Abbott demanding access to the Rio Grande park that is now under state control.

Abbott contends the state has the right to defend itself from what he called "record-smashing levels of illegal immigration." The Dallas Morning News reported. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last week that the Border Patrol can resume cutting or removing razor wire that the state installed to deter migrants.

Citing that ruling, DHS sent a second letter demanding the state give Border Patrol agents "full access to the Shelby Park area currently obstructed by Texas."

A DPS spokesman said the state is installing more razor wire along the riverbank. U.S. Rep. Joaquin Castro, D-San Antonio, has urged President Joe Biden to federalize the Texas National Guard if the state defies the Supreme Court ruling.

Judge rejects Paxton's motion to block deposition

A Travis County judge again blocked a motion by Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton to stop a deposition in a wrongful termination lawsuit brought by former top aides in his office, the Austin American-Statesman reported. The deposition is scheduled for Feb. 1. The four aides went to the FBI to complain about the embattled attorney general's actions in helping developer Nate Paul. The aides were subsequently fired and filed suit in 2020.

Earlier in January, Paxton tried to end the matter by saying he would no longer contest the facts of the case and accept whatever judgment the court handed down, though he continued to deny any wrongdoing. He condemned the judge's latest ruling, saying Travis County Judge Jan Soifer was "recklessly disregarding legal precedent, abusing the litigation system, and displaying shocking bias."

Before Paxton filed his latest motion attempting to avoid testifying, both the state 3rd Court of Appeals and the Texas Supreme Court rejected his earlier appeals.

Meanwhile, four months after the Senate voted to acquit Paxton in his impeachment trial, which stemmed from an investigation into a proposed settlement of the whistleblower lawsuit, a senator that voted to acquit is accusing Paxton of possibly misleading the Senate during that trial. He urged the Senate to consider reopening Paxton's impeachment.

State Sen. Drew Springer, R-Muenster, said Paxton's decision not to contest the facts of the whistleblower lawsuit point to his culpability. Paxton "cannot admit guilt while claiming innocence," Springer wrote in a post on X. Springer had previous announced plans to retire from the Senate.

State delays vote on proposed land swap with SpaceX

Heat from conservation groups prompted Texas Parks and Wildlife commissioners to delay a proposed land swap with SpaceX. The proposal would have given the space exploration company 43 acres of Boca Chica State Park land in exchange for 477 acres near the Laguna Atascosa National Wildlife Refuge, The News reported. Groups, including the Sierra Club and Save RGV, urged commissioners to delay the vote to allow the public more time to examine the proposal, which will be revisited in late March.

Environmental groups sued the Federal Aviation Administration last year over its approval of the expansion of billionaire Elon Musk's SpaceX's rocket-launch operations. The suit was filed after the company's Starship exploded during a launch and hurled debris thousands of feet into the air. They have also expressed concern for possible loss of wildlife and habitat since the launch site is within miles of the state park and wildlife refuge.

Record number of Texans enroll in ACA

More Texans than ever have signed up for health care coverage under the Affordable Care Act for 2024, according to federal health data released last week and reported by the Texas Tribune. The number of Texans in ACA programs, which offer inexpensive or free health care coverage, rose 37% to nearly 3.5 million – or 1 in 9 residents.

National enrollment is at record highs as well, with more than 16.3 million people signed up for plans under ACA. That is double the number of Americans signing up for ACA plans since it was launched in 2014.

Texas continues to lead the nation in the number of uninsured residents, with nearly 5 million Texans living without health insurance coverage. That's nearly double the national average.

DSHS launches new tools to track respiratory viruses

The Texas Department of State Health Services has created a respiratory virus dashboard at health-data.dshs.texas.gov/Home that shows trends in the three major respiratory illnesses most likely to cause serious illnesses, hospitalizations, and deaths – COVID-19, influenza and RSV.

"Those data points demonstrate the diseases' most severe effects on people, communities and the health care system," said DSHS Commissioner Jennifer Shuford. "The dashboard provides a near real-time look at conditions, so people can make informed decisions on precautions for themselves and their families, and health care professionals can make recommendations to their patients."

Former PUC director is now chairman

The former executive director of the Public Utility Commission was sworn in last week as chairman of the commission. Thomas Gleeson, who has worked at the PUC for 15 years, most recently as the agency's executive director, was appointed to the commission by Abbott in mid-January.

The PUC regulates the state's electric, telecommunications, water and sewer utilities. It was founded in 1975.

COMMENTARY

Will border crisis accelerate or come under control?

Around financial markets, the conventional wisdom is to "let the trend be your friend." What happens in the market on one day will also likely occur on the following. Investors, the theory goes, should ride the "trend" until it "bends," then bail out.

The phrase sums up the southwest border crisis. The invasion continues seamlessly one day after another, and during 2023 ramped up to a record number of migrant crossings with a December seven-day average of more than 9,600, a Homeland Security official told CNN. The record-smashing figure represents the average across the nation's entire southern border.

In November, total encounters stood at 6,800, meaning that the southern border has seen a month-over-month influx of 3,000 more daily arrivals as migrants continue to pour through the border.

During its 2023 fiscal year (which ran from Oct. 1, 2022 to Sept. 30, 2023) U.S. Customs and Border Protection recorded more than 2.4 million encounters at the southwest border and more than 3.2 million encounters nationwide. During the current fiscal year, 169 individuals on the terrorist watchlist were apprehended attempting to enter the country illegally, and at least 1.7 million known gotaways have evaded apprehension since the 2021 fiscal year. Since President Biden took office, there have been 7.5 million encounters nationwide and 6.2 million encounters at the southwest border, in addition to 1.7 million known gotaways.

Also in the 2023 fiscal year, Border Patrol agents arrested 35,433 aliens with criminal convictions or outstanding warrants, including 598 known gang members, 178 of those being MS-13 members. The agency also seized enough enough fentanyl coming across the Southwest border to kill about six billion people, the House Homeland Security Committee

JOE GUZZAARDI

The data are included in the committee's fiscal year-end report titled "Startling Stats," but it's findings did nothing to influence the administration to end the invasion. Not only did the illegal alien influx remain steady, it accelerated unabated. If the House's year-end summary had no effect on the Biden administration's mismanagement of the border disaster, nothing will. Proof that the border crisis will continue unchecked: in December, Border Patrol processed and released 302,000 aliens. Since the start of the new fiscal year, which began on Oct. 1, Border Patrol agents have encountered more than 785,000 aliens at the southern border alone.

As alarming as the raw statistics are, they understate the invasion's inevitable consequences. Factor in chain migration and the certainty that arriving aliens will either start new families or grow their existing ones, and population growth will continue upward. Citizens who live in high density cities should brace for more overcrowding driven by Biden and Department of Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas' criminal disregard of federal immigration laws.

A Center for Immigration Studies analysis detailed that the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey showed the total foreign-born or immigrant population, both legal and illegal, was 49.5 million in October 2023 — a 4.5 million increase since Biden's inauguration and a new record high. At 15 percent, the foreign-born share of the U.S. population is the highest percentage recorded in U.S. history. Since Biden took office, the foreign-born population has grown on average by 137,000 a month, compared to 42,000 a month during Trump's presidency, and 68,000 a month during President Obama's two terms.

These unsustainable population increases generate urban sprawl and drain already diminishing natural resources like water and farm acreage.

Creating an equitable immigration system under Biden that benefits citizens and migrants alike is a long shot, but still possible. Congress returned from its winter recess on Jan. 8, and resumed discussions over numerous thorny issues. At the top of the House GOP's to-do list is, before authorizing funding for Ukraine and Israel wars, to demand that the immigration provisions encompassed in HR-2, which it passed in May, must be included. Key among those provisions is mandatory E-Verify which would end the jobs magnet that lures thousands of foreign nationals to the U.S. with employment expectations and to curb the administration's parole abuse. Parole is intended for extraordinary circumstances, usually granted to one individual, and not intended to be given out en masse.

HR-2 represents the best chance that legislators have to restore operational control of the border. Otherwise, the invasion will continue until at least January 2025. Based on the latest Border Patrol monthly statistics, without HR-2 another 3 million illegal aliens will cross during the 2024 calendar year.

political activist Andy Hogue is challenging incumbent Leander Mayor Christine DeLisle, who plans to file to officially run for reelection in the coming weeks.

In the Leander Place 2 race, Michael Herrera, who founded Pennsylvania-based software consulting for investment firms company CSSI with his wife 30 years ago, is challenging incumbent Esmeralda Matkke Longoria.

In the Leander Place 6 race, Ontada senior director of software engineering Pulla Reddy Yeduru - full name Venkata Pulla Reddy Yeduru - is running against incumbent Becki Ross.

Meanwhile, in Cedar Park, Michael Endres, an Austin police officer, is the only challenger to file for a Cedar Park City Council seat so far. He is running against Place 4 incumbent Eric Boyce.

Karen Wind, a resident of Town Center in Cedar Park and former Cedar Park Economic Development Corporation Type A Board member, recently filed the campaign treasurer paperwork but hasn't officially filed for any Cedar Park seat yet.

Unlike all of the Texas Legislature and U.S. Congressional races up for reelection this year, the local city council races are nonpartisan seats where the majority of their work has no application to any party politics.

LEANDER MAYOR

The Leander mayoral race is already expected to be an interesting contest this year.

Andy Hogue, a political writer and veteran political staffer, is challenging incumbent Leander Mayor Christine DeLisle.

Hogue has wanted to run for a local office for years and use his years of political experience to benefit his own community. But, he was unable to run in the past because he was either busy with his family or had a conflict of interest that prevented him - either he was a journalist at the time, or he was working with a political campaign. Now that his children are more grown up, he feels the timing is finally right in recent years.

He is running to keep the city focused on keeping city spending, water rates and taxes down so Leander can remain affordable. He also wants the city and the city council to do a better, more proactive job of communicating with local residents about the big issues facing the city. He also feels his experience in political communications and facilitating meetings will make him effective at running city council meetings.

He filed for Leander City Council in 2022 and filed to run for Leander ISD Board of Trustees in 2023 but dropped out of each race before the campaigns began when other conservative candidates filed. He also helped recruit two candidates for one of the two separate but overlapping slates of conservative challenger candidates who ran for the school board last year.

He is running for Leander City Council specifically this year because his friends on the council wanted help with electing a new council majority, and this year's large number of seats up for reelection creates a unique opportunity. He also said that talking with other potential challenger candidates, including some who didn't end up filing, led him to run for the Leander Mayor seat because he had more experience than the rest due to his history in political communications and policy analysis.

Several candidates confirmed Leander City Council member Kathryn Pantalio-Parker had put out a general call at area Republican organization meetings, seeking anyone willing to run as challenger candidates this year. However, the candidates running this year who spoke with the Hill Country News also confirmed that several other individuals and groups had also separately approached them about running this year.

"Even though it may look like I'm parachuting into a race for partisan reasons, I'm just a normal guy who loves living in Leander and wants to serve," Hogue said. "Let's try to look for a better way forward."

While Hogue, communication director for the Travis County Republican Party and media contact for the group Move Candlewood, doesn't have any experience serving on local government boards or commissions, he pointed to his community involvement as a Boy Scouts leader, a Toastmasters International club officer, and a part-time minister with Church on the Hill in Jonestown. His prior experience includes serving as chief of staff and campaign manager for Austin County Council member Mackenzie Kelly, constituent liaison with former Austin City Council member Don Zimmerman, a campaign advisor for former Cedar Park City Council member Tim Kelly, communication and speechwriting roles with prior commissioners of the Texas General Land Office and Texas Workforce Commission and a year as the communication director with anti-LGBTQ+ advocacy group Texas Values.

Hogue originally worked as a newspaper journalist for about a decade before getting into politics. He is a freelance writer who has done ghostwriting work for scripts and research projects while also writing blog posts for a variety of right-leaning, theological or outdoor websites.

avid supporter of the Leander Public Library and has served on several city commissions, including the Leander Public Arts & Culture Commission. She currently serves as a Transportation Policy Board member on the Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization and has represented the city on the Capital Area Council of Governments.

She previously served with local Republican organizations, including on the Board of Directors for the Williamson County Republican Leaders.

DeLisle is excited to be running for another term and feels the council has accomplished a lot in recent years.

"It's an exciting time for the city. We're trying to keep the ship steady. We got water projects in the pipeline...that will address our long-term water needs. We're in the process of hiring a new city manager and we have some great candidates. We have the Senior Center finally happening this year. We're just focused on keeping things steady and accomplishing these important projects," DeLisle said.

She touted one of the goals of her 2023 State of the City address - finally revamping the city's sign ordinance - being completed last year. She also pointed to her goal in this year's address - finally finishing the construction of the long-sought Senior Center - as already underway since it was recently put out for bid with the expectation it will come back for council approval in April and begin construction at the originally selected 611 Municipal Drive location this summer.

"We are going to make sure shovels are in the ground this year. It's over - we're done waiting!" DeLisle said.

WATER

Leander plans to proactively impose Stage 4 water restrictions, which prohibits all nonessential outdoor water usage, starting Feb. 12 to coincide with the Brushy Creek Regional Utility Authority (BCRUA) - which is jointly owned by Leander, Cedar Park and Round Rock - shuts off its aging, deteriorating raw water intake pipeline so it can install a replacement pipeline. Unlike the unplanned pipeline breaks that caused issues for Leander in recent years, taking the pipeline offline for the replacement project has been planned for more than a year. The project is intended to permanently solve the reoccurring pipeline issues.

Leander anticipates its other water plant, the Sandy Creek Water Treatment Plant, will sufficiently cover the city's water needs during the project. However, since the BCRUA water plant provides 60% of Leander's water, they are using the water restrictions as an additional precaution to avoid any water outages. The BCRUA is completing the project at this time because it wants to complete the project as quickly as possible but had to spend 2023 building the pipeline support structure, so this is the earliest possible time to start the final phase.

The BCRUA also plans to finally begin construction on its massive Deep Water Intake Pipeline project in April 2027, which will increase how much water the plant can pump from 42 million gallons per day to 145 million gallons per day and make the plant more drought resilient by pulling from a deeper part of Lake Travis.

DeLisle said the two projects combined with water system improvements the council has passed in recent years means Leander's reoccurring water issues could finally be solved for the next several years, unlike cities to the north who could be facing a water crisis in coming years.

Hogue criticized the city and the council for being in a place as a city where they have to declare Stage 4 water restrictions for this project, claiming it is too severe and that solutions should have been tackled sooner. He explained that he is a big supporter of encouraging water conservation and will comply with the water restrictions. He accuses the city and the city council of not effectively communicating to the public about why the restrictions are being imposed and how they hope to solve the problem.

The multi-decade expansion and build-out of the BCRUA water plant and pipeline has been going on since construction first began back in 2012. The deep water intake pipeline project is part of the $290 million Phase 2 improvements to the plant, which will have taken nearly a decade to complete by the time it is finished. The member cities spent several years raising the funding for this phase, and it was held up for most of 2020 when the previous council sought to conduct a water study before approving its share of the project's funding. A third and final phase will begin planning once the Phase 2 improvements are completed.

CAPMETRO

Hogue also opposes Leander's membership in the Capital Metropolitan Transportation Authority (CapMetro) system, arguing the Leander Station rail service ridership is too low, and Leander receives too few benefits at this time to justify the price of being in CapMetro.

He is also very skeptical about the $715 million Northline development's expectations that Austin-area shoppers will start utilizing the CapMetro line in significant numbers to bypass the growing traffic on U.S. 183 when visiting it starts coming online in the coming years. He feels that having to choose between continuing to invest in CapMetro or having to give up forever is a false dichotomy. While he acknowledged he and other residents have benefitted from the rail service, he argues the city and the city council are foolishly "playing Choo-Choo" by expecting the rail to eventually pay off for the city in the coming years based on current usage, claiming they are "idealists, not realists."

He wants Leander's membership in CapMetro to be put up for a vote again in 2027 - the next time it can legally come up for a vote - and he plans to personally vote to leave the system.

Currently, CapMetro provides a single rail service from the Leander Station to the center of downtown Austin, which has been criticized in the past for being slow, and a variety of busing services. The system was originally to receive a massive amount of federal funding to build an extensive network across the area, reaching out to South Congress and to the Austin airport, but an Austin vote in 2000 to approve it failed by less than 2,000 votes. Without new federal funding in the subsequent two decades, CapMetro's rail system has largely been limited to the single rail.

However, CapMetro has added several expansions in recent years as spike area growth has increased revenues for the system, including double-tracking that speeds up the trip near the Leander Station and a new rail station close to the Q2 Stadium that opened Feb. 24.

Under state law, CapMetro requires cities to provide the revenues of their 1% sales tax - half of the sales tax it can levy - in exchange for membership, and it must immediately stop providing rail service and other services once canvassing is completed on a city's vote to leave the system. Additionally, in 2022, Leander would have legally been required to keep paying CapMetro for three to four years in exchange for no service in order to pay off its share of the debt CapMetro accrued while Leander was a member. CapMetro cannot change or renegotiate changes to these terms with member cities unless the Texas Legislature passes changes to the state laws that govern it.

Approximately 60% or more of Leander voters cast a ballot in favor of joining the CapMetro system in 1985 and in favor of remaining in the system in 2000 and in 2022. Leander originally received significantly more services from CapMetro than it paid, but its 1% sales tax revenues have grown to over $10 million annually.

During the 2022 vote, Leander negotiated a new Interlocal Agreement with CapMetro that gives back $2 million and growing each year - the amount of funding Leander pays CapMetro in excess of its share of the system's costs. Leander has used the funding to finance improvements to streets in the Old Town district, an Old Town District Master Plan and an upcoming U.S. 183 Corridor Study.

Leander's $715 million Northline development, which is building its first commercial portions this year, aims to utilize the CapMetro rails system to draw in tourism by using the rail to bypass the growing traffic on U.S. 183.

Hogue explains that he isn't against mass transit or rail service but feels it still isn't worth it for Leander right now, even with the Interlocal Agreement. He envisions Leander leaving the system, reinvesting the funds into local infrastructure projects and seeking to return sometime in 2040 or beyond - once the system is built out and infrastructure can be built to mitigate its local traffic impact.

CapMetro has declined in the past to comment on what it would do if a smaller city member like Leander left the system, including whether it would or wouldn't maintain the Leander station and whether a member who left would ever be allowed to rejoin.

DeLisle, a frequent critic of how CapMetro provides service for Leander, voted in favor of putting the CapMetro system up for a vote in 2022. She said Leander voters had made their preferences heard with the 2022 vote, so the focus needs to be on making a serious push to change state laws so CapMetro can be more responsive to Leander's needs, including reducing how much small city members have to pay in exchange for membership.

She argues that the city and the previous city council have not made a strong effort in the past to push for legislative changes. She feels Leander has a great chance of seeing law changes in the 2025 legislative session since she and Council member Becki Ross, who represents Leander on the CapMetro board, shocked state officials at a conference discussing mass transit last September with details about how the current system wasn't working for Leander. She said they expect the issue to be mentioned in a multi-modal, statewide mobility study being produced by the state this year, so Leander can use the study's findings plus Leander's increased number of representatives following redistricting to make a case for law changes next year.

LGBTQ+ ISSUES

As Leander grows more diverse, the city's growing LGBTQ+ population is increasingly calling on the city and the city council to recognize their community and stand in solidarity with them, especially in the wake of several high-profile anti-LGBTQ+ hate incidents in the area last year - including people calling them pedophiles or claiming they deserve death during the public comments for last year's Pride Proclamation.

When the Leander Public Library canceled a planned drag queen storyline event in 2019, a local church rented a library room to host their own private, family-friendly LGBTQ+ inclusive event, which drew a 300-person protest split between mainly out-of-city protests against the event and Austin-area supporters.

DeLisle, who was a city council member at the time, read a children's story at the event in solidarity. She criticized the previous council for not standing with local LGBTQ+ residents who were targeted with hateful comments by protesters against the event, and criticized the previous council for "punishing the victims" by banning library room rentals after the event.

After being elected mayor in 2021, DeLisle led the repeal of the rental ban, issued Leander's first Pride Month proclamations and spoke at the first Leander Pride event. The Leander Pride organization was formed by local residents in response to the library protest.

In late 2019, in response to a Hill Country News article about the library's annual LGBTQ+ inclusive storyline for Pride Month being more peaceful than the event protested earlier that year, Hogue shared former Leander residents' post, which criticized the event, criticized the library for stocking "politically correct content," compared the storyline to sexualizing children and claimed the library was "guilty of child abuse."

"(She) is saying what we're all thinking about this stunt," Hogue wrote.

However, Hogue is also critical of the previous council banning library room rentals outright and supports that policy's revision. He pointed out how difficult it is to find rental space for meetings in Leander, leading most local organizations to have to go to Cedar Park to find a space. He wants an expanded policy that opens rentals at all city public rental facilities to all local individuals and organizations, including political and religious organizations of all types, and he wants city staff to look for ways to add public rental options to future city facilities and parks.

Regarding city proclamations, Hogue claimed the council has been "too focused on pushing a social agenda in past years... and we need to roll that back," stating he will only issue proclamations requested by Leander residents.

He clarified that he would be willing to issue a proclamation requested by Leander Pride, a local church or any other local organization if the proclamation is focused on how the organization has contributed to Leander. However, he would not be willing to issue a request proclamation if he felt the organization was "using the bully pulpit to sermonize to Leander residents about how they should live."

However, he is still researching the volume of proclamations issued each year and how they are approved before finalizing his policies on this issue.

MAY ELECTIONS

Regardless of what happens in the local municipal elections this year, the winners will have to scramble to manage their respective cities' growth this year. In Leander, the Northline project and other commercial developments coming online mean a rush of new businesses coming to the city - and a lot of infrastructure needs to be built to meet those needs. In Cedar Park, the city already being more built out than Leander means the city council will have to be thoughtful and choosey with what they approve for the final undeveloped lots in the city - all while managing the completion of construction this year on the first elements of the Bell district, including the new Cedar Park Public Library.

The Cedar Park and Leander municipal elections will be held on May 4, with Early Voting starting on April 22.

Vandegrift, Rouse assistant coaches depart for head coaching positions

STAFF REPORTS

The staffs of Rouse and Vandegrift's football programs will see some new faces on the sideline in the upcoming season, as at least three assistant coaches have departed for head coaching opportunities so far this offseason. Rouse offensive coordinator Dustin Pleasant was recently named head coach at Fort Worth ISD's Carter-Riverside High School.

Pleasant will replace Philip Murray, who spent five years at Riverside improving the program's competitiveness. Murray is now an assistant athletic director within FWISD.

Keri Timmerman, who spent the last four seasons at Vandegrift, was named head coach and athletic director at Marble Falls High School, where he will take over a program that went just 3-17 with no district wins over the last two seasons. Former Marble Falls coach Brian Herman resigned in November after five seasons with the Mustangs, in which the team amassed a 21-32 record.

"I'm very thankful for the four years that the Timmerman family gave the Vandegrift community. I know he will do well in his new endeavors and we wish him the best," said Vandegrift head coach Drew Sanders. Timmerman was the passing game coordinator for the Vipers.

Vandegrift will also look to replace longtime offensive coordinator Blake Mouser, who was just this Former Westlake head football coach Todd Dodge retired after leading the Chaparrals to a third straight Class 6A state championship in 2021. Dodge was named the new head coach at Lucas Lovejoy earlier this month, replacing Chris Ross. week officially named head coach and athletic director at Tolar High School.

Mouser takes over for Jeremy Mullins, whose Tolar Rattlers finished 14-2 last season, falling to Timpson in the Class 2A Division 1 state title game.

In other offseason moves, former Cedar Park High School head coach Chris Ross (2005-2012), who served as Leander ISD's athletic director from 2012-2015, was named the new offensive coordinator at Stephen F. Austin.

Ross returns to the college ranks for the first time since a three-season run as director of program development at Boise State University. During his time with the Broncos, the team won a Mountain West Conference title and made two bowl game appearances. Ross most recently led Lucas Lovejoy to a 45-9 overall record since taking the program over in 2020, including three district championships and two appearances in the Class 5A regional finals. Ross's departure from Lovejoy opened the door for legendary Texas high school football coach Todd Dodge to end his retirement and return to the sidelines. A seven-time state championship winner, Dodge retired after bringing a third straight Class 6A championship to Westlake at the end of the 2021 season. Former Leander High School defensive coordinator and later Marble Falls head coach Tony Salazar was elevated to head coach at Westlake after Dodge's retirement.
