S&P upgrades county bond rating to 'AA'

Standard & Poor's Global Ratings (S&P) announced that Doña Ana County's revenue bonds rating was significantly upgraded from 'A+' to 'AA', a designation just below the highest possible issuer credit rating assigned.

A higher credit rating provides for lower borrowing costs for public projects, which lowers the costs to taxpayers.

- Eric L Rodriguez, Doña Ana County Treasurer

Criteria for the designation upgrade includes strength and stability of pledged revenue, as well as Doña Ana County's general credit quality. The last rating the costs to taxpayers. assigned to the county was in 2014. Since then, the county has demonstrated extraordinary coverage of its debt from pledged revenue, solvent investments, and robust cash reserves.

In the official S&P ratings report delivered to the county this week, the review noted "Doña Ana County's general creditworthiness reflects the county's adequate economy and high degree of budgetary flexibility provided by a very strong general fund balance, increasing assessed valuations and low overall debt burden."

"Credit agencies look at several factors when assigning a rating, including the county's management structure and financial policies and procedures," said Doña Ana County Treasurer Eric L. Rodriguez. "This unusual twolevel increase savs a lot about our cash management efforts.' For Doña Ana

County residents, Rodriguez says the higher credit rating provides for lower borrowing costs for public projects, which lowers

"The county's financial future is solid," said Doña Ana County Manager Fernando R. Macias. "We have made a commitment to strengthening our internal controls - our policies, procedures, providing clean audits, and management of our budget and we are pleased to know that S&P Global recognizes this with the second-highest credit rating possible."

McCamley brings homeless services to Community of Hope

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Officials from Santa Fe visited Las Cruces in late November to talk about issues related to poverty and homelessness.

"The governor cares very passionately about developing an economy that works for everybody, and that includes our neighbors here who may be down on their luck," New Mexico Department of Workforce Solutions Sec. Bill McCamley said Friday, Nov. 22, as he and officials from two other departments of state government visited Mesilla Valley Community of Hope.

Clients of Mesilla Valley Community of Hope (MVCH) and residents of its Camp Hope Tent City line up for services at the state Motor Vehicle Department mobile unit to get IDs Friday, Nov. 22, at MVCH. New Mexico Department of Workforce Solutions Sec. Bill McCamley (in the white shirt), a former Las Cruces state representative and Doña Ana County commissioner, talks to participants in the event.

Health (NMDOH) and the state Taxation and Revenue Department's Motor Vehicle Division spent the day at MVCH helping clients, including residents of MVCH's Camp Hope Tent City, obtain driver's licenses or other personal IDs, get copies of their birth certificates and flu shots, and help them with preparing resumes, searching for jobs and honing job-interview skills.

NMDOH also had staff from the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program onsite "to both provide services to existing clients and enroll any qualified mothers and children for supplemental nutritional assistance," according to an NMDOH news release.

"Sometimes you have to meet people where they're at," McCamley said, noting that MVCH clients often don't have transportation to state offices to obtain housing and job services.

And because many homeless or near homeless people can't afford pay for the services they need, McCamley made a personal donation of $250 to pay for IDs and birth certificates ($10 each).

McCamley said the state conducted its first homeless services event in Albuquerque's South Valley in October. He then contacted Martinez to see if MVCH could benefit from the same onsite services in Las Cruces.

"It's obviously working," McCamley said Friday morning, as nearly 60 people signed up for help and many were in line shortly after the event began.

gether on the MVCH campus and across the street at the Gospel Rescue Mission, McCamley said. The state will take what it learns from the Las Cruces event and apply it as it takes homeless services to other New Mexico cities.

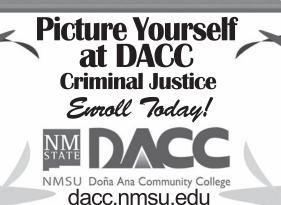

"That's how you get out of being homeless," he said.

"It's unbelievable,"

Martinez said about the event. MVCH provides a lot of the services the state brought to its campus, she said, but "on a much smaller and slower scale." Providing expedited services means clients can get housing, job opportunities and other assistance they need more quickly.

"It's huge," Martinez said. "This has just made it so efficient." McCamley, she said, has been "amazing in spearheading" the initiative.

Resolutions require resolve, but not always reinvention re you seriously thinking about eating that Reese's peanut butter cup? And here it is Jan. 3, just three days after you made a New Year's resolution about cutting back on sweets.

> Well, go ahead, I guess.

About 80 percent of New Year's resolutions fail by the second week of February anyway, according to a study by U.S. News & World Report a few years ago. Losing weight is traditionally the top resolution among Americans, followed by finding love and saving more money.

Statistics show only 46 percent of resolutions last longer than six months. And the older you are, the worse it gets. Among people over 50, only 14 percent achieve their resolution, while for people in their 20s, nearly 40 percent reach the goal.

Perhaps that's because 20-somethings have fewer responsibilities. They are less likely to have children, a mortgage and the many other commitments and obligations that tend to to creep up over time. Or maybe they just have more energy.

I've never done New Year's resolutions, apart from my annual tongue-in-cheek effort to learn the lyrics to Elton John's indecipherable song "Bennie and the Jets."

Last year, though, by accident, I did something akin to a New Year's resolution.

I started practicing yoga. My first practice was Jan. 1 at Indigo Yoga.

I had never done yoga before, and was clueless about every aspect of it. As you might guess, the room was packed New Year's Day, with barely enough space to hold everyone. The instructors were upbeat, however, and helpful to both beginners and longtime practitioners. By late February, consistent with resolution statistics, the yoga crowds were much thinner, and I was worrying less about falling over on the person next to me, or jabbing them in the eyeball with my big toe.

The mindfulness of yoga appealed to me, as well as the breathing aspect, the discipline and the sheer physical workout. I still play basketball regularly, and I was more often sore from the yoga moves than the basketball. I also enjoyed the sweating of the hot yoga.

Still, around March, personal and professional responsibilities began piling up, reducing my yoga frequency, which dropped to zero after August. So, even things we enjoy doing and find helpful and beneficial are difficult to maintain.

Here are some tips to help you keep up with your resolutions, ideas gathered from multiple sources.

1. Don't bite off more than you can chew. If your goal is to diet, this can be literal advice, but I mean it here figuratively. If you're resolving learn a new language, for example, don't expect to be fluent by spring. Set small goals such as learning 10 verbs in January and 10 useful phrases in February. Don't start your running regime by trying to run five miles a day, especially if you haven't run in a while. Maybe you start by running one mile every other day, or a half mile three days a week. Be realistic with where you are.

2. Get help. Whether it's with a professional instructor or a friend or two, things often work better if you're doing something together. It gives you accountability and encouragement.

3. Be specific. Using the running analogy, don't just say: "I'm going to run more this year." Create a specific goal. Maybe you want to be able to do a 5K run in March, or if you're more advanced, to do a marathon in October.

4. Chart your progress. Put in a notebook or in your computer what you do

Ranked-choice voting redux

To the editor: This is a response to Patricia Mitchell's Dec. 20 letter. After attempting to research the matter in person at the County Clerk's Office and online, I finally ended up analyzing news accounts of the election. I'll recap rounds 1 and 9. In round 1, the incumbent had 36.98 percent of the vote and Bill Mattiace had 19.49 percent. By round 9, the incumbent had 55.08 percent and Mattiace 44.92 percent. For the sake of argument, I'll accept these numbers.

It was reported that Major Miyagishima won with 37 percent. I was under the impression, as well as others, I believe, that 37 percent was after the last round was counted. According to news reports, 37 percent was the first count, after which his numbers rose as other candidates were eliminated. However, it took till the last round for him to break 50 percent.

The cost of a runoff election may be $100,000 (about 75 cents per person in Las Cruces) but wouldn't that be better than having a mayor elected for whom only slightly over a third of the people voted? I say a third, because that's all who really voted for him in round 1. And what about the votes, like mine, that went into the trash because I didn't vote all nine rounds? Guess my bond-issue votes didn't make it either.

There is also a large discrepancy (about 3,000) in the total vote counts reported by The Bulletin and the daily newspaper. Confusing, isn't it?

The last question is: Why such a low voter turnout? This is only my opinion, but aside from plain old apathy and sloth, I believe many people believe the system is simply rigged – myself among them. Voting irregularities are anything but irregular in Doña Ana County; it happens all the time. Last year's mystery ballots showing up in the middle of the night, most of which went to Rep. Torres Small, come to mind, and now this latest election mess. Unfortunately, this is what goes on here, not just in Banana Republics, or something you saw on the Twilight Zone. Comparing burgers

No doubt most of you in the livestock business have a certain "family affection" for the fast-food chains. Particularly those restaurants whose main attraction is the often disguised but still All-American hamburger. It also is true that each of us has his favorite. Organizations like the National Restaurant Association have attempted surveys to compare the merits of each burger. Readers, you will be pleased to know that the Coyote Cowbov Co. (me) has conducted its own survey. This survey was taken with an international consultant on hand to advise: A Canadian Chianina breeder. The burgers compared were the Double Whopper (hereinafter referred to as the WHOP), the Big Mac (the MAC) and Wendy's Double Burger (the BURG). Each was ordered on a rainy night with iced tea.

The highlights of the survey are as follows:

Patty Evaluation

1. Transparency – The BURG was the only patty you could see through.

2. Yield percentage (Meat/offal ratio) -The BURG again had the highest yield percentage.

3. Patty pull test (for tensile strength) - The WHOP showed resistance to tearing. 4. Circumferential perfection - The MAC displayed the roundest patty. 5. Seaworthi-ness – Both the BLACK WHOP and the On the Edge BURG sank of Common Sense in the iced tea while the MAC floated.

Condiments

1. Color coordination – The BURG showed a certain flair with mustard, tomato and lettuce, although style points were given to the MAC for the special sauce.

Bun Evaluation

1. Swill assimilation test - Measured in BAU (bun absorption units) ... the BURG scored well against the others in the second round. With ketchup it rated 8 BAU.

2. Sesame seed count – The WHOP won hands down with 42 seeds per bun.

3. Light refraction - None reflected light well enough to transmit Morse code messages over long distances.

4. Aerodynamics -The WHOP recorded the longest flight distance but was penalized for slicing to the right.

Conclusion

Our survey found each hamburger to have its peculiar advantages. The BURG rated high in BAUs and color coordination but would be less suitable than the MAC if dropped in water. Neither would be as good as the WHOP if there were ever an ALL-BEEF Frisbee throw in the Summer Olympics.

I hope the information presented here will, in some small way, contribute to the mounds of scientific data now available on the fast-food hamburger. I'm forwarding the results to Consumer Reports.

Positive interactions

To the editor: Thank you to the hard-working and professional City of Las Cruces employees. In the threeplus years I have lived in Las Cruces, all my interactions with City personnel, from parks department to utilities, have been positive. I would especially like to thank Officer Rudy Adame of Codes Enforcement and Officer Madrid of Animal Control for their help when an aggressive dog jumped over a back wall to attack my dogs and me as we were walking by. Officer Adame prevented the dog from a second attack. contacted Animal Control, controlled the situation, and provided guidance on how to proceed. Officer Madrid arrived promptly to secure and collect the dog for quarantine. She followed up with me with additional information regarding the dog's vaccination status. Thanks also to the anonymous neighbor who courageously stopped and helped.

The situation could have ended badly for me and my dogs had these three not stepped in. The City of Las Cruces is fortunate to have employees and residents such as these.

Girl's plea leads to Walmart gifts for homeless vets support second-grader Lillian's (below arrow) quest to assist homeless veterans in the Las Cruces area.

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

As part of teacher Jaime Alvarez's "Passion Project," Lillian, a second grader in Alvarez's class at J. Paul Taylor Academy (JPTA) in Las Cruces, wrote a letter to a local Walmart store manager asking for a donation to help homeless veterans.

As a result of that letter, Valley Drive in Las Cruces Walmart Store Manager Arnold Diaz donated a $200 gift card and 100 blankets to Mesilla Valley Community of Hope (MVCH) and delivered them earlier this month.

But Walmart's giving to MVCH didn't stop there. Diaz suggested to tor Nicole Martinez that she apply for a Walmart store grant. Martinez did so, and MVCH received a $4,000 donation and the involvement of 11 Walmart stores in southern New Mexico. Store managers and other staff brought donations of tents and tarps to MVCH, 999 W. Amador Ave., on Dec. 10.

"We at MVCH are so impressed by how this project has snowballed into an amazing response to helping veterans living on the streets," Martinez said.

"Lillian is a leader in compassion and action, and Walmart managers both local and statewide are champions in their support for this effort. We are truly grateful for JPTA's educational and "We are committed to giving back and taking care of local communities where our customers and associates shop, live and work," said Walmart Southern New Mexico Market Manager Tim Walsh, who was also at MVCH for the donation presentation.

Walsh said the 11 southern New Mexico Walmart stores "got together and combined resources to donate to MVCH at the request of a very special little girl who wrote one of our local stores requesting donations.

"We feel strongly about helping this organization because it does so much to help our veterans in need, as well as homeless individuals in general. We are honored to have been given the opportunity to participate in Mr. Alvarez's passion project and are inspired by the children in his class to do more for each other every day."

'Incredible generosity'

"It is an incredible show of generosity by the Walmart stores," said Lillian's grandfather, Craig Fenske, who requested his granddaughter's surname not be published.

"Walmart and the Walmart Foundation help communities through donations of cash grants, as well as through donations of products to organizations that help individuals and families live better lives," Walsh said.

Recycling programs receive statewide training

By CASSIE MCCLURE and SUZANNE MICHAELS For The Bulletin

The New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) and New Mexico Recycling Coalition (NMRC) hosted a threeday Recycling Facility Operator Certification Course in Truth or Consequences in mid-December.

Thirty-two recycling professionals from the South-Central Solid Waste Authority (SCSWA) in Las Cruces attended, in addition to those from Clovis, Angel Fire and Navajo Nation, to learn best practices on safely and sustainably operating recycling programs.

"New Mexico is unique in that our state statute requires that operators of registered recycling facilities obtain certification through this course," said Sarah Pierpont, NMRC executive director. "That means our state's recvcling professionals have a standardized, base-level of knowledge to help them safely run sustainable programs. When I talk to my recycling peers in other states, they're jealous of this unified professional development

"With China having closed its borders to recvcling, now it's up to us at a state level to keep our programs healthy and growing," said Miguel Fernandez, SCSWA Recvcling Services administrator. "We learn from others, and smaller towns can see what Las Cruces is doing to keep its recycling contamination low, meaning no food waste and only taking highquality recyclables like clean and dry corrugated cardboard. Coltharp asked him if he was interested in the position and Racine said he had to sleep on it but "I knew immediately that I would take the job," he said. "I decided to take it a year at a time," he said. "I enjoyed it and it went to three years."

Racine found the Bulletin a good fit for his style of news management. As a weekly instead of a daily newspaper, the Bulletin focuses on features and community rather than breaking news and the scramble of competition. "That's kind of my background," he said. "I left the Houston Chronicle as a music critic and feature writer after 22 years. And that's the Bulletin's calling card - features."

He connected with the Bulletin because he feels it has a demographic that still appreciates paper newspapers; he wasn't much interested in web journalism.

"The working environment seemed to fit where I was at," he said. "Homey." Now that Racine is retiring (again), he will spend more time playing guitar, perhaps writing songs and performing around town with his KTAL radio co-host on the Cosmic Troubadours program, Rob McCorkle, Racine's musical tastes include altcountry, punk-rock, blues and worship songs.

"We will be doing some open mics around town," he said. "I want to get serious about it. I really love doing that."

And this time he will not stop writing. He might write a book, or some feadepth articles," Racine said.

On a personal note, he said. "I want to be there for my family and not be running off to work all the time. I will spend time with those who love me, my wife and dogs, and travel might be part of it."

After Racine gave notice, Coltharp made another call to a close colleague, and another retiree answered the call.

"Richard and I have been friends for a long time. and when a friend asks you to join his team, you have to take such a request seriously," Williams said. "Being on a newspaper team was the first 16 years of my career, and once that ink gets in your blood, it never goes out."

Williams retired about a year ago from almost 21 vears as director of public information for Doña Ana County. Before that, he was in newspapers from 1982 to 1995, having edited the NMSU Round-Up. The Raton Range and the Stephenville (Texas) Empire-Tribune. He also worked stints for the Las Cruces Sun-News and The Albuquerque Tribune. His last editorship was at The Taos News from 1991 to 1995.

"Then my father got ill, and I came home," he said. "I worked on my master's degree and earned it in 1997 in communications studies, then worked a year at University Communications. Then the gig at the county opened up, and I iumped at it."

Williams said he has ideas for the future of the Bulletin.

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN

"I am taking on this job.

The Gift of Renovation A Small Price to Pay for Our Freedom

"This trip was a very profound experience for me. It wasn't just seeing some monuments and bricks and stones and stuff . . it was a very personal journey that I've waited all my life to take." That is one comment from James Ashby of Las Cruces, one of the Vietnam Veterans who went on a recent flight with Honor Flight of Southern New Mexico and El Paso. His comment reflects the feelings of many of the Veterans who go on the flight, and provides fuel for the all-volunteer organizers to continue this effort.

Honor Flight of Southern New Mexico and El Paso is a regional hub of the Honor Flight Network, being one of 140 hubs in 45 states. Each hub is independent; no funding is provided by Honor Flight Network. There is absolutely no cost to the Veteran for this opportunity. Each Veteran is accompanied and assisted by a guardian who pays their own way. Preference is given to WWII and Korean era Veterans, with the remaining available slots going to Vietnam era Veterans. The flight includes a two-night stay in Washington DC, visits to the WWII, Korean War, and Vietnam War memorials, and the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery. Throughout the flight there are multiple special moments planned for our honored Veterans, and the flight culminates in welcome home events on arrival at the El Paso airport and again on arrival in Las Cruces at Memorial Medical Center.

We have observed that our Veterans experience a great deal of healing during and following this trip. For many, if not all, of the Veterans who go on this trip, there is a deep, substantial, and cathartic impact. Vietnam Veteran William Hart of Las Cruces said "Fifty years ago we took a deep breath and went into war. I feel like I've now been able to exhale. . . it was almost worth the wait - to get it all at once all that thanks and recognition and everything all at once - such a relief - such an honor."

For every Veteran who goes on the flight, there is a personal story, and in many cases a life-changing experience. Vicente Duran, Vietnam Veteran from El Paso said "I feel like I've been renovated." The spouse of a Korean War era Veteran from El Paso recently commented "you don't realize how much Honor Flight affects the families too."

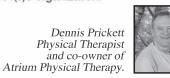

In order to conduct a single flight, generally consisting of 30 Veterans and 30 guardians and support staff, the cost to this all-volunteer organization is $35,000-$40,000 per flight. No participants or members of the organization receive monetary compensation. At this time, we have only enough funds available to plan one upcoming flight, currently scheduled for April 30 - May 2, 2020. Without additional funds, we will not be able to do a second flight in the fall.

We currently have nearly 100 Vietnam Veterans on the waiting list, and we continue to receive new applications. One applicant recently told my wife: "I have to get to the Wall." He is still waiting for his turn to go, and for his own renovation.

I have been involved with Honor Flight for several years, serving on the Board for the last two years. I have seen the profound impact that this effort has on so many of our Veterans. Many of them have waited more than 50 years to be welcomed home.

I hope that you will consider joining me and Atrium Physical Therapy in financially supporting Honor Flight. To support Honor Flight of Southern New Mexico & El Paso, you may send a check to HFSNM, PO Box 14017, Las Cruces, NM 88013. you've finished the dishes, or whatever you're trying to accomplish.

Over the years, I've found myself drawn to construction projects. If, on my daily routines, there's a house or business being built, I try to note daily the progress, and compare it to my own situation. All construction projects start from scratch, and take shape over time until they are finished. There are periods when the progress is unseen, others when it's dramatically noticeable. No building project can be done overnight, but all building projects eventually get completed (unless, of course, it's road construction on Valley Drive). It all boils down to steady, consistent progress. Even builders sometimes have to take a day off if it rains, so you will hit stumbling blocks. Just pick back up and keep going when you can. Here's to your best 2020.

NMSU offers food preserver certification course

By ADRIANA M. CHAVEZ

For The Bulletin

The New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service is offering a master food preserver certification course for people interested in becoming certified master food preserver volunteers.

Ideally, students participating in the course have already taken food preservation courses and are familiar with most preservation methods. An application must be completed and submitted to their local county Extension office to be considered for the program.

The course will be offered in two parts: an online live webinar that will take place each Friday from Jan. 24 to March 13; and a handson, face-to-face lab that will take place from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. March 25-26, and 8 a.m.-noon March 27, at Gerald Thomas Hall on the NMSU main campus. Both parts must be taken in order to complete the course and receive certification.

The course is offered as part of a collaborative effort by Nancy Flores, NMSU Cooperative Extension food technology specialist, and Extension Family and Consumer Sciences agents Cindy Davies of Bernalillo County, Cydney Martin of Santa Fe County, Desaree Jimenez of Los Alamos County and Kelly Knight of Otero County.

Cost of the course is $160, which includes manuals, materials and supplies needed to complete the second part of the course. Lunch, lodging and travel costs are not included. Scholarships may be available through the CES county offices.

Registration is due Jan. 13 for the online portion, and March 13

After months of construction and detours, work is nearing completion on a four-block stretch of Court Street in central Las Cruces, including stretches adjacent to Pioneer Women's Park and the Court Youth Center. Crews installed new drainage and ADA-compliant sidewalks, with accompanying new curbs and gutters. The construction zone stretches west from Armijo to Melendres streets. Paving is now underway.

DAV Chapter 10 schedules free, early morning rides for Doña Ana County resident veterans

LCPD Re-accreditation

The Las Cruces Police Department has received accreditation for the third time from the New Mexico Law Enforcement Professional Standards Council. The reaccreditation was announced

in December during the 25th Annual New Mexico Law Enforcement Conference in Albuquerque. It is valid through Nov. 30, 2022.

The Las Cruces Police Department is the largest law enforcement agency in New Mexico to be fully accredited by the Professional Standards Council.

"I'm proud of the dedication and hard work shown every day by the men and women of the Las Cruces Police Department," said Chief Patrick Gallagher. "Receiving this accreditation, the second re-accreditation for the department, is a good indication that we're on the right track, and meeting and surpassing established professional standards set for law enforcement."

The Las Cruces Police Department first earned accreditation from the New Mexico Law Enforcement Professional Standards Council in October 2013. Each accreditation is good for three years.

Swearing-in ceremony

Following the presentation of colors by the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office Honor Guard, newly elected and re-elected local government officials were sworn into office during a ceremony held Monday morning, Dec. 30, at the county government center. Taking oaths of office were officials from the City of Las Cruces and Village of Hatch, the Las Cruces Public Schools and Gadsden Independent School District boards of education and the Lower Rio Grande Public Water Works Authority. The swearings-in of city officials were conducted by the county for the first time ever because of the implementation of combined local elections that are collectively administered by the County Clerk's Office.

SAR inductees

President Don Williams presents a Sons of the American Revolution membership certificate to Robert Thum after inducting him into the SAR's Gadsden Chapter in November. Thum's induction into SAR came after he was able to show documentation that he has an ancestor who contributed to the American colonies' revolutionary cause. SAR was chartered by Congress in 1906. Contact Williams at 575-644-4215 or CobraCaptain@earthlink.net.

Robert Sherman accompanied by his wife, Mary, was inducted into the Sons of the American Revolution at the Gadsden' Chapter's November meeting in Las Cruces. "I would like to give a lot of credit to my daughter, Laura Reed, who spent several years researching our family history to find out if we were related to a Revolutionary War soldier," Sherman said. "Laura loves history. She lives in Williamsburg, Virginia, which is a hotbed of history ... and she is a member of a Civil War organization that does living-history encampments in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Thanks to her, I am finally a member of SAR."

tonight's picks

Cicely Tyson

6 p.m. on TCM Movie: Sounder

Four Oscar nominations - including best picture, best actor and best actress - went to this beautifully done 1972 film, based on William Armstrong's novel about the travails of black sharecroppers in 1933. Kevin Hooks plays the son, who must help his mother (Cicely Tyson) after his father (Paul Winfield) is jailed for stealing meat to feed the starving family. The youth then meets a schoolteacher (Janet MacLachlan) who introduces him to a larger world.

7 p.m. on HALL Movie: Winter in Vail

Frequent Hallmark leading lady Lacey Chabert steps back in front of the cameras for a new 2020 romance called "Winter in Vail," filmed on location in that favorite Colorado destination resort for ski enthusiasts. The actress stars as event planner Chelsea Whitmore, who impulsively guits her job and moves to Vail after inheriting a chalet there (as one does). As she ponders her next career move, Chelsea falls under the spell of this magical locale and its residents, especially handsome Owen Becker (Tyler Hynes).

9 p.m. on KRWG Austin City Limits

Two adventurous but very different singer-songwriters share the bill in tonight's new episode. First up, New Jersey native Sharon Van Etten performs "Seventeen" and other songs from her album "Remind Me Tomorrow," which dropped last January. Then, Virginia-born Lucy Dacus sings "Night Shift," "Next of Kin" and other cuts from her 2018 album "Historian," her second studio release. Movie: The Aftermath Set in 1945 postwar Germany, James Kent's 2019 adapta-

9 p.m. on HBO

James Kent's 2019 adaptation of Rhidian Brook's 2013 novel of the same title stars Keira Knightley as a woman who drifts into an affair with a handsome German architect (Alexander Skarsgard) while she and her husband (Jason Clarke), a British colonel, are stationed in Hamburg. Martin Compston, Fionn O'Shea, Kate Phillips and Flora Thiemann also star.

10 p.m. on SHOW Movie: The Upside

Bryan Cranston and Kevin Hart might seem like unlikely co-stars, but then that's a character point in director Neil Burger's hit 2017 dramedy about a paralyzed billionaire (Cranston) who hires a recently paroled convict (Hart) to take care of him. Unexpectedly, a friendship eventually develops between these two very different men. Adapted from a 2011 French film called "The Intouchables," the movie also stars Nicole Kidman, Tate Donovan, Aja Naomi King and Julianna Margulies.

tonight's picks

Ricky Gervais

6 p.m. on KTSM The 77th Annual Golden Globe Awards

Break out your best fake smile, all you Hollywood stars! British actor and comic Ricky Gervais, who has a fondness for cracking jaw-dropping, take-no-prisoners jokes at the expense of the rich and famous, returns for his fifth stint as host of this year's ceremony. Among nominees, it was a good year for streaming services: Netflix leads the pack with a combined total of 17 film and TV nods, while the recently launched Apple TV Plus picked up its first Globe nominations for "The Morning Show."

6 p.m. on STARZ Power

The midseason finale of this critically acclaimed crime drama's sixth and final season ended on a major cliffhanger, as an unknown assailant gunned down main character James "Ghost" St. Patrick (Omari Hardwick), who was last seen falling to what looked like almost certain death. There are seven viable suspects for who fired that bullet, and viewers will discover the answer - and Ghost's ultimate fate — as the series returns with its final five episodes, starting with tonight's "Still Dre."

7 p.m. on KDBC God Friended Me

Miles (Brandon Micheal Hall) stumbles across a new clue to who is behind the God Account when Joy (Jessica Lu) points out what may not be a coincidence: All Miles' friend suggestions have been clients of the same insurance company. So is the newest one, Abe (guest star Judd Hirsch), a Holocaust survivor desperate to find information about the fate of his long-lost sister, in the new episode "A New Hope." Aaron Yoo and Lynn Cohen guest star.

7 p.m. on FOOD Worst Cooks in America

Alton Brown ("Good Eats") joins chef Anne Burrell as a team mentor as they lead a new class of 16 decidedly unpromising recruits through another rigorous culinary boot camp, which includes some of the craziest challenges ever. In the season premiere, "Bottom's Up," Burrell and Brown gauge the rough talent level of their newbies by having them make a baseline dish, but the results are pretty depressing. After dividing them into teams. the mentors demonstrate a chicken soup and sandwich dish the recruits must replicate.

8 p.m. on DSC Naked and Afraid

Discovery Channel opens Season 11 of its survivalist challenge with a premise more harrowing than ever before. The show invites some of the strongest and most resourceful players ever featured on past seasons and drops them in isolated areas around the globe, leaving them with not even the clothes on their back — and, this time around, no one by their side. Among the featured returning survivalists are Luke McLaughlinx, Gary Golding (California), Lacey Jones (Illinois) and Max Djenohan (Washington).

9 p.m. on HBO Movie: Tolkien

Dome Karukoski's 2019 period biographical drama stars Nicholas Hoult ("Jack the Giant Killer") as English professor J.R.R. Tolkien, who achieved his greatest fame for writing "The Hobbit" and "The Lord of the Rings." The film's primary focus, however, is on Tolkien's early years as an academic, when he discovers his passion for languages. Lilv Collins plays Edith Bratt, Tolkien's lifelong love and eventual wife, who inspired several of his female fantasy characters.

9 p.m. on HMM Crossword Mysteries

Lacey Chabert returns as New York Sentinel crosswords editor and part-time sleuth Tess Harper in a new mystery called "Abracadaver." The story opens as a magician abruptly drops dead in mid-performance, leaving Tess and NYPD Detective Logan O'Connor (Brennan Elliott) to figure out who's behind what they soon ascertain was a premeditated murder. 8 p.m. on KRWG American Experience

Based in part on David M. Oshinsky's book "A Conspiracy So Immense: The World of Joe McCarthy," Sharon Grimberg's two-hour film "McCarthy" profiles the rise and fall of the Wisconsin senator whose ferocious crusade against communists tested the limits of American decency and democracy in the early 1950s. Abetted by attorney Roy Cohn, McCarthy's crusade played out against the backdrop of an intensifying Cold War between the Soviet Union and the United States. The film includes first-hand testimony of witnesses and those targeted by McCarthy's "witch hunt."

9:01 p.m. on KTSM Manifest

NBC's head-spinning sci-fi series about a planeload of passengers and crew who somehow experienced an uncanny time jump five years into the future during a flight from Jamaica to New York returns with a premiere called "Fasten Your Seatbelts," which picks up the action more or less immediately after the events of the Season 1 cliffhanger finale. Viewers will learn who, if anyone, was shot during a gunfight between Jared (J.R. Ramirez) and Zeke (Matt Long) and who is the father of Grace's (Athena Karkanis) baby.

7 p.m. on KTSM Ellen's Game of Games

Ellen DeGeneres launches Season 3 of her giddy verging on deranged reality competition series, in which she welcomes guests who are put through a silly — and surprisingly physical — series of challenges. In tonight's season premiere, those games include "Danger Word," "Blindfolded Musical Chairs," "Don't Leave Me Hanging" and the all-new "Mazed and Confused." In another new episode that immediately follows, games include the new "Dirty Laundry" and "Buckin' Blasters," plus the familiar "Stink Tank" and "See You Later, Alligator."

With only 24 hours to turn around the fortunes of this business, Ramsay pulls off a spectacular renovation and a fresh new menu that offers a glimmer of hope for the future.

8 p.m. on TLC Hot & Heavy

This new docu-series follows three couples that are happy in their mixed-weight relationships, but often feel assailed by those around them. Kristin and Rusty's wish to become parents leads to arguments, and Ricardo must defend true love Adrianna from constant rudeness.

9 p.m. on KDBC FBI: Most Wanted

Dick Wolf's spinoff to his breakout crime procedural "FBI" stars Julian McMahon ("Nip/ Tuck") as Jess LaCroix, the seasoned agent who oversees a crackerjack federal team that functions as a mobile undercover unit that spends its time in the field, tirelessly tracking down those desperate fugitives who are every bit as determined to escape justice. Roxy Sternberg ("Emerald City"). Keisha Castle-Hughes ("Game of Thrones"), Nathaniel Arcand ("Heartland") and Kellan Lutz ("Twilight") also star. Henry Thomas guest stars in the series premiere, "Dopesick."

9 p.m. on KVIA Emergence Karen Conley, a panel from "Three Graces and St. Rose of Lima"

Karen Conley, "After the Shower"

Rokoko exhibit delves below the 'Sur (face)'

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH Las Cruces Bulletin

Artist Karen Conley has been working on a large mermaid, a sculpture that is the centerpiece of an exhibit by Conley and Saul Ramirez exploring what lies beneath the "Sur (face)," opening Jan. 4 at Rokoko Gallery.

Conley creates two lines of artwork, one for more traditional shows – sumptuous fruit and lovely flowers. The other is often disturbing – masks and faces that comprise this show.

"I have sort of this dark side," Conley said. "Dark, but also funny. So, at first you will say, 'Oh my God, this is hilarious,' but a lot of my work is about surface tension and layers and family relationships and false narratives. I do a lot of work with masks, too. I feel like masks are truer than our face, like we are trying to hide something. But sometimes those masks betray who we really are. And that's kind of my aesthetic, where I work from."

Conley retired from the Army in 2014 after serving as a logistics officer and a public affairs officer. While deployed in Somalia, she, some soldiers "and some gals in the Navy" founded a school teaching English.

"All the Somalis that worked for us wanted to go to America, so they wanted to learn English," she said.

Later, she turned to art – a natural progression; she liked art as a child and has an aunt who is a watercolorist in Pennsylvania and an artistically talented twin sister.

"I was hoping to be a fine-art photographer," Conley said. "But then I started painting and doing other fun stuff. I still photograph once in a while; I go out and do night shoots with a group of friends. But I'm just happier making a mess with paint."

She sometimes gets too attached to her pieces. She sold a painting last summer and is still mourning its absence.

"I don't like to sell work, it's hard," Conley said. "In school we were told you have to learn to lose the preciousness of your work. Some in Rokoko won't be for sale."

Her pieces at Rokoko – for sale or not – include self-portraits, twins, masks and a series of drawings and photographs titled "Moon Man," which depicts Conley's father's progression through life.

"I felt like my dad never really had a strong voice for himself because he came from a really strong family of men who were hunters and everything, and that just wasn't what he was about," Conley said.

"You know, doing these manly things that kind of were required in that time period for men to be. I don't really think he felt like he fit in sometimes. He was so friendly, but he didn't really relate to others that well."

Conley's love of art extends beyond her own work. She serves as president of Picacho Hills Artists, teaches workshops as the volunteer educational coordinator at the New Mexico State University Arts Museum, is involved with the Doña Ana Arts Council, and organizes pop-up events like the recent show of 70 artists at Bank of the West.

"My sisters call me the little general," she said. "I'm always organizing everything. You don't think about the elements of art – content and line and color and shading – [but] I have a knack of looking at a whole bunch of different stuff and seeing how it could come together."

A reception for "Sur(face)" is 4-7 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11, at Rokoko, 1785 Avenida de Mercado in Mesilla. The gallery is normally open noon-5 p.m. Saturdays. Call 575-522-5553.

Fine arts gallery fetes Peacock and Zolto

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery features two local artists for in January: Frank Peacock and Bob Zolto.

The son of a New Mexico pioneer family, Peacock lives and works in the Mesilla Valley. After living and painting in such diverse locales as California, Pennsylvania, Colorado – as well as during his travels abroad – Peacock returned to Las Cruces in 2015.

He has studied and painted the pecan orchards of Doña Ana County, rendering them in a style uniquely his own.

Peacock's paintings of the Stahmann, Salopek and Fletcher farms express the unique personality of each orchard.

Zolto, born in Brooklyn and raised on a New Jersey farm, spent most of his life in and around New York City. He retired to Las Cruces after a 40-year career as an editor at The New York Times.

He was a longtime photographic hobbyist, but he became more deeply immersed in the years between his retirement and moving west. He found the light and spaces of New Mexico inspiring. He began shooting more and more,

Great theater continues in Las Cruces in 2020

Las Cruces theaters had an outstanding 2019, and just wait until vou see what's coming in 2020!

We welcomed

two new theater companies to Las Cruces in the last year with the founding of Junk Drawer Productions, whose principle, Diane Thomas, is a longtime musical theater genius: and The Blank Conversations Theatre Company (BCTC), whose founder, Gus Sanchez, is a freshman theater major at New Mexico State University already making a name for himself as a talented actor and director. BCTC's production of the musical "The Last Five Years" will run from Feb. 7-16 (including a Valentine's Day performance) at Mayfield High School, Find BCTC

 Boba Café and Cabaret's new owner. Angela Stoltenberg, is looking for a new artistic director to continue the long string of outstanding shows that Chris Waggoner started at Boba some years ago. Call her at Boba at 575-647-5900. Boba's "Search for A Star" competition will be Jan. 31 and Feb. 1, 7 and 8, with participants competing for a $500 cash prize. The last audition for the show is 1-4 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 4, 2020 at Boba, 1900 S. Espina St.

 Among Las Cruces Community Theatre's offerings in 2020 is its annual One Act Play Festival in April. It is a great opportunity for local playwrights, directors and actors to showcase their talents. The Bulletin will

MIKE COOK Theatre 101 have more to come on deadlines and guidelines. LCCT kicks off 2020 with its production of "Arsenic and Old Lace," directed by Darin Robert Cabot. Darin is the theater teacher at Centennial High School and one of the best actors I've ever seen. He has a great cast for "Arsenic," and I am especially pleased to see the return of James Boberg, who has done some great work at LCCT. Opening night is Friday, Jan. 31.

LCCT will follow "Arsenic" with "Harvey," directed by my dear friend Gail Wheeler. Everyone knows the 1950 movie starring James Stewart, but the play came first - in 1944 – and won playwright Mary Chase a Pulitzer Prize. "Harvey" ran for 1,775 performances and was in production at the 48th Street Theatre on Broadway at this time 75 years ago.

"Harvey" runs March 20-April 5 at LCCT, followed by the One Act Play Festival, April 24-26, and the season-ending production of "Nunsense," June 5-21. which returns this hugely popular show to Las Cruces. "Nunsense" ran for 3.672 performances beginning in 1985, making it the second-longest running off-Broadway show in history.

2016 is among the best performances I've ever seen.

"The Killing Game" will open Jan. 24 at BBT and continue through Feb. 9. It will be followed by "Bosoms and Neglect" (March 6-22), written by John Guare and directed by longtime Las Cruces actor and director Monte H. Wright.

BBT co-owner Ceil Herman will direct Mark Medoff's "The Majestic Kid" April 17-May 3 during the first anniversary of Medoff's death. Known for the strong women (Sarah Norman, for example, in the Tony-winning "Children of a Lesser God") and anti-heroes (Stephen "Red" Rvder in "When You Comin' Back, Red Rider?") he created, Medoff died last April, leaving a gaping hole in local and national theater that no one will ever fill. BBT will close its season with the musical "Next to Normal," directed by the wonderful and talented Nikka Ziemer.

· Look for "Broadway on Stage 2020" on Saturday, Feb. 22, at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts. Tickets are $20 and $25 and are already on sale. Call 575-646-1420 and visit theatre. nmsu.edu.

directed by Michael Wise, May 1-10. These will be two outstanding productions.

· Doña Ana Repertory Theatre (DART) will produce "Tartuffe" in February, continuing its impressive string of outstanding productions. One of its co-founders is the previously mentioned Darin Cabot. Their 2016 production of "The Last Days of Judas Iscariot" is one of the finest shows I've seen on a Las Cruces stage, and one of best performances of the late and still greatly missed Dick Rundell. It's going to be another great year for Las Cruces theater. If you haven't been to a play or musical, this would be a great time to try it out.

Faith is hard to see, but as real as can be

The snow at my feet suddenly started flying. I was trudging in bright sunlight through Glacier National Park with a friend in late February. Then I realized that it wasn't the snow but a pair of Ptarmigan invisible against a glaring white background who took off as we approached. Yes, the disruption was startling, but we both responded with silent smiles. Who would break the quiet of a wintry day?

I'm always perplexed by the question of whether I believe in the Bible. A stranger asked me that question iust the other day. It's not an easy question to answer. I don't "believe in the Bible." I'm GABRIEL not even sure ROCHELLE what the ques-Tales from tion means; the the Cassock Bible is a text > written over the course of a millennium. during which cultures, language and thinking changed. I don't, in other words, believe in a static book.

I don't believe "in" the Bible, because it is first a catalogue of experiences that had a powerful impact on people, who in turn recorded them as startling disruptions in the snow for the next generations. I believe through the Bible as a result of studying it in depth and imagining those experiences that caused people to speak and write about something or someone they identified as "God."

I see the text as the glaring snow and the Ptarmigan as one I couldn't see in advance who has fluttered and flown away at my approach. An elusive presence, flighty and impossible to pin down, and vet real if not directly tangible. To shift the analogy slightly, an elusive presence like the kestrel on a wire who constantly flies just ahead of you when you are cycling along a road. You can see that bird, but you cannot trap it, and he will not sit still for you.

Such musings pose a fundamental question; namely, what does it mean to believe, period? The word is from Old English and originally meant to accept something as valuable or satisfactory, to have faith or confidence in something or someone. It is kin to German lieben, "to love."

I guess you can say you love the Bible if you mean that you care about its contents at a deep level. But as our grammar-school teachers taught us, we don't love things, we love people. Or God, who comes to us personally, depicted as such throughout that flock of writings about human experience.

I don't "believe" in the bird carcasses I have held in my hands, but in the lively fowl who flies up at my footfall and startles me. Yes, the carcass is there, and it is valuable for research, but it is not a real or full experience of the bird. That you can only have with the living animal who flies free.

As so often, I turn to the poets for help, in this case to R. S. Thomas. a priest of the Anglican Church of Wales who served rural parishes for most of his long ministry and wrestled with God throughout his life. He spoke Welsh but wrote his poems in English. History showed us

He was too big to be nailed to the wall

Of a stone chapel, yet still we crammed him Between the boards of a black book.

Like Thomas, despite the agony of unknowing, I won't do that. No bird in a gilded cage. I will continue to search the snow or the sky for the free bird who flies away just before I'm able to lay my hands on him. Happy Christmas season.

Rituals bring opportunities for reflection

I have recently been thinking a lot about rituals and memory.

It might be because my wife Rhonda and I just lit candles for the second night of

KAROL

Chanukah and exchanged gifts with one other. On the first night of Chanukah. a FaceTime call with our son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren extended our reach beyond the confines of southern New Mexico to bring our family together.

I might be thinking about rituals because I recently attended the biennial convention of the Union for Reform

Judaism for the 17th time. At this conference, held in Chicago, I connected with people from all parts of my life, sang songs that I have known for Seeking Harmony years, attended > sessions that deepened my wisdom to enhance my service as a rabbi, and engaged in worship with 5,000 people on one evening. Those are the main reasons I attend.

On the first morning of the convention, we were given choices for special visits to sites in Chicago. As a dedicated baseball fan (the Kansas City Royals are my team), I chose the tour of Wrigley Field. While not religious in nature. there are rituals associated with sports fans who closely follow their favorite teams.

One of those rituals is remembering landmark games and amazing accomplishments from the past. After our tour, I told our guide about the only time I was at this storied stadium. It was a game in 1976, when I witnessed the Phillies' Mike Schmidt homer in the top of the 10th inning (his fourth homer of the game) to break at 15-15 tie on a very windy day. The Phillies beat the Cubs 18-16. The guide asked me, "I have heard about that game! Was it the most historic game you ever attended?" I had to say that it was. All types of rituals and community gatherings generate memories that can last a lifetime. Lighting Chanukah candles every year calls to mind both the present and the past. Rhonda and I can recall lighting candles in our shared home and before we met. Two of our Chanukah menorahs come from our childhood homes. They evoke the lessons we learned during our upbringing formed the foundations of who we are now.

At the convention in Chicago, several large panels displayed the names of every congregation (more than 900) that is a member of the Union for Reform Judaism. Each congregation was represented with a leaf on a tree. I had my photo taken with the leaf that read "Temple Beth-El. Las Cruces. N.M."

At one point, I happened to walk by as members of my home congregation in the Midwest were assembling themselves for a photograph of all of them pointing to their Temple's leaf. I volunteered to take the photo, and I had the chance to meet the youngest member of their delegation, a college student named Ben. I know his mother, and his grandparents and my parents were active participants in the congregation together for many years. My conversation with Ben was a ritual unto itself: a sharing of connection and memory.

That is why we celebrate holidays and life events, and why we commemorate the lives of loved ones who have died, and why we join as community members for important occasions.

May all our rituals and remembrances fill us with light, hope and joy.

Some of my articles for this column have been about special people whom I have met and known throughout mv life. However. people are not the only ones in this category. I've lost count of the interesting pets who have been in and out my life. I have had more experience with cats than dogs. It seems that the cats came and went with greater frequency. That may be because cats seem to be less loyal than dogs and not sure which home to adopt. Also, their personalities reflect their independence.

For some reason, which I never figured out, my father did not want us to have a dog. Therefore, my brother and I borrowed our neighbors' dogs. One was a very appealing white Spitz named Daffy, who would frequently come into our yard. We would enjoy slinging the mop around in a circle and have Daffy chase it.

As an adult with three children, I got Cookie as a puppy, and she was with us for 13 years. She was years, into a couch potato. When we let her outside each evening to do her business, the first thing she would do was start barking at all the imaginary enemies out there in the dark. She must have felt it was her duty to protect us all.

Other dogs of my acquaintance belonged to neighbors or friends. One dog, a basset hound named Missy, belonged to our older son's friend, Karl. Missy visited whenever Karl did, and she would stay even after Karl went home. After a while, my husband would coax Missy into our car and drive her home. Often, she would return.

One Sunday morning, Missy decided to come to church. The back door had been left open after the organist had entered. Missy belonged to the organist's family and must have decided she could go in, too. As the service was in process, Missy walked right up in front of the altar. My husband (the pastor) saw her there and commented that it was good to have a religious dog in the family.

Recently, we welcomed into our home a young dog named Lucy (who is still a puppy at heart). She is part terrier and pit bull with a happy disposition. She has revolutionized – or should I say terrorized - our back vard, which never was a pristine place, but did have grass. Now it looks like a large child's playpen.

Lucy chews on everything she can get her teeth into-the wooden picnic table, the locust tree, plastic milk jugs, a lilac bush (which is no more, thanks to her), rugs and even the plastic frames around our automobile license plates. She enjoys digging. Some days it seems like she is on her way to China. Almost all our close neighbors have dogs; out of 11 houses there are 17 dogs and three cats (that I know of. It seems like we may be "going to the dogs." The popularity of dogs is probably because most of them like people and help people to feel appreciated. They are good company to have. Also, they may help people feel

Years ago, when I was serving a small church south of Omaha, Nebraska, I made a pastoral call on an elderly woman who lived in a somewhat isolated area. As I approached her house, I saw a "Beware of Dog" sign." I saw a woman outside tending to her flower bed. Running around near her was a very small dog. I rolled down my window and inquired if that was the dog of which I should beware. She rather sheepishly replied in the affirmative. (To be continued.)

SOCIAL SECURITY Benefits expected to increase in 2020

safer.

By RAY VIGIL

For The Bulletin

Each January, the Social Security Administration (SSA) announces the annual cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) that will be implemented for the year. By law, federal benefits increase when the cost of living rises, as measured by the Department of Labor's Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W). Usually, there is an increase in the benefit amount people will receive each month.

Nearly 69 million Americans will see a 1.6 percent increase in their Social Security benefits and SSI payments in 2020.

Other changes that will happen in January 2020 reflect the increase in the national average-wage index. For example, the maximum amount of earnings subject to Social Security payroll tax will increase from $132,900 to $137,700.

The earnings limit for people turning 66 in 2020 will increase to $48,600. (The SSA deducts $1 from benefits for each $3 earned over $48.600 until the month the worker turns age 66.)

Civil War history provides insight into financial markets

What where the turning points of the U.S. Civil War? A list of the most important events of the war typically has the first battle of Bull Run, the capture of New Orleans and Gettysburg, among others. In retrospect, we can evaluate the significance of an event in a historical context. But at least as interesting is what people living at the time thought. That can markets reacted to events - particularly the Greenback market. Greenbacks were issued by the Union government as a mechanism for financing the war. They came with a promise of redemption for gold at some unspecified time after the war's end.

The promise of gold redemption was critical. The longer the war lasted, the further in the future was redemption: the more costly the war, the less likely would the Union be able to afford redemption.

Thus, the Union's progress toward defeating the Confederacy was key in determining the market value of Greenbacks. When the war was going well, Greenbacks rose in value: when things went against the Union, Greenbacks fell.

Economists Kristen Willard, Timothy Guinnane and Harvey Rosen have looked at Greenback markets to determine turning points. What they found is interesting.

The near simultaneous Union victories at Gettysburg and Vicksburg in July 1863 were collectively perceived at the time (and today) as the turning point of the war. The Greenback market reflected this with an upward shift in value.

Another turning point was Antietam and the formal announcement of the Emancipation Proclamation in September 1862. Rumors of peace talks late in the war caused Greenback values to rise.

Most modern Civil War buffs would not view as a turning point the defeat of Confederate Gen. Jubal Early's attempted raid on Washington, D.C., which is viewed as an interesting side note of no strategic significance. Financial investors reacting in real time did not agree.

Events that one might expect to see include

Lincoln's re-election and the surrender at Appomattox. That these are absent may reflect more their historical inevitability rather than their lack of financial significance.

The New Year's resolutions I promise to keep – this time

It's that time of year gain. Incessant articles, news clips and advertisements for things to get us organized and help us lose weight. This happens inexorably as each new year begins. We buy storage boxes to get our junk out of the way. Fitness clubs sell most of their gym memberships in January, fully knowing that most of the purchasers will suffer loss-of-interest and loss of will power within a few weeks. Gyms aren't over-crowded. We see the opportunity to start over, with our diets, our projects and sometimes with our relationships.

So, too, it is with golfers. Just like tour players, we are about to start a new season. I love this time of year because it signals and meltdowns that have been popping up for months. And I like to make New

rebirth for my golf game. I can forget all those blunders for my golf. So, I'm going to share some of my resolutions with you in hopes that you'll get an idea for your own golf game resolutions.

Year's resolutions

First, I'm resolving to minimize my complaining - about everything. But mostly about the course I'm playing at the time. Here in the rural desert of Doña Ana County, we are not playing on closely manicured pieces of overly expensive golf ground, like the folks who belong to Oakland Hills, Firestone, Sherwood, Pebble Beach, Seminole or Augusta. No, we have some harsher climate conditions and therefore have harsher golf courses. Yet, we do have golf year-round.

I sometimes find my attitude and my game being challenged regarding my low tolerance for lack of good turf, lousy stonefilled bunkers, massive clumps and mistreated greens. I resolve to be more understanding and more forgiving. The same holds true with my complaining about folks wearing blue jeans on the golf course (jeans in church are worse), folks who play at a snail's pace and folks who should have booked lessons before setting foot on the golf course. I had actually made this resolution over a decade ago, but it didn't hold up. But in 2020 my complaining will end. After all, many of the snails and jeans-wearers are friends. Moreover, I know our greenskeepers are doing the best they can every day, and they deserve more charity on our part.

I also realize, and you must also, that the most convenient excuse available is to blame the golf course for all the bad shots we play. So, no more grousing about bare lies. No more references to a "goat farm." No more griping about three-day old cups. No more whining about unfair bounces caused by hole setups. No more bellyaching that no two greens are alike for speed. No more groaning about hole locations on windy days. No more grumbling about players who don't know how to replace the flagsticks cleanly. And no more blaming management for failing to mark massive "ground under repair" areas in white paint.

Last, I'm resolving to play my game more as a process and less as an outcome. When I was coaching young golfers, as well as conducting Performance Golf Schools with Coach Herb Wimberly, I grew to understand how destructive and maladaptive it is for a player to focus most of his or her attention on the result (score) of a golf round or a tournament. For you and I we are prone to worry about saving par or a putt for a win. Better to focus on the process of how we are going to play today, not about what we are going to shoot. This leads us to center ourselves on things like concentration, leveled emotions, discipline with our routine and sharpening our senses so we make good decisions. These are process variables. In the end, when we get the process right, the score will take care of itself.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 2020 35

Haven't you noticed, when you're playing extremely well, you aren't exactly sure what score you're shooting? The fear is gone. You're in the zone. So, this is the year I'm taking my own advice and making sure the process comes first.

Have a happy and blessed New Year.ay all your resolutions come to pass.
