Desert dumping: dangerous and unsightly

While the beautiful desert landscapes around Doña Ana County provide a vast array of options for conducting target practice, the Doña Ana County Illegal Dumping Partnership (IDP) warns of the dangers of leaving behind shooting debris and other trash.

"Not only is the practice of leaving behind shooting debris and trash considered illegal dumping, but it poses risks to our community," said Vicki Lusk, Manager of Doña Ana County's Animal Control & Codes. "In an effort to leave open spaces clean, we urge all conducting target practice to leave spaces as they found them and to collect all trash and debris before leaving."

According to Cindy Pollock, Range Coordinator at the Picacho Gun Club, the biggest problem they face is shooters leaving glass bottles.

Clerk's Office announces Feb. 12 training closure

Doña Ana County Clerk Scott A. Krahling has announced that the Doña Ana County Clerk's Office, the Bureau of Elections and the Office of the Probate Judge will be closed from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 12, to allow staff to participate in offsite training related to professional development and strategic planning.

The offices will reopen at 8 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 13.

Krahling said frequent visitors to the Clerk's Office are being notified of the closure in advance to minimize inconvenience.

"Staff will finalize our priorities for the upcoming fiscal year. Our goal is to implement an organized plan for success to better serve the residents of Doña Ana County," Krahling said. "This plan holds us accountable to the public, and it will define how the Clerk's Office is utilizing county resources to the best of our ability."

Krahling said he will be presenting the plan soon at an upcoming meeting of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners.

For more information, call 647-7421.

"Not only are the pieces hard to pick up, but they can also ruin tires," Pollock said. "If you are in the desert, the last thing you need is a ruined tire. That doesn't count the fact that we are also out to see our beautiful land, and we have to put up with garbage left behind."

Pollock said the community faces issues with people leaving behind large items, such as TVs, electronic devices, stoves and refrigerators that are not only hard to clean up, but are dangerous and unsafe to use as targets. Discarded glass and shotgun shells also are issues at the range.

According to Harry Stryker, Owner of Stryker's Shooting World, there are large amounts of trash and debris left regularly in areas around the north side of Red Hawk Golf Course and the schools in that area.

"People leave spent casings, appliances, cardboard, plastic bottles, broken glass bottles and an array of items that have been left over from a variety of activities," Stryker said. "It is sad to see such disregard for the desert and for others, so the open space we take for granted here can be used and enjoyed by everyone. Responsible gun owners would never leave their trash and empties behind."

The IDP hopes to bring awareness to the issue to encourage gun owners to be responsible stewards of the desert. For more information on the IDP or to find out how you can help clean up communities around Doña Ana County, visit the organization's website at CleanupWithCarlos.org.

So you want to be a volunteer firefighter?

The first step is a countymandated background check into the applicant's address, education, employment, personal references verification, valid driver's license and criminal history.

Once accepted as a volunteer, orientation is scheduled. Videos are viewed on "Policy and Procedures" and "Preventing Discrimination and Harassment in the Work Place." Tests follow both.

Volunteers are expected to adhere to the same code of cot adhere to the same code of conduct and policies as paid county employees. The importance of the background check and policy adherence is in deference to the fact that volunteers can be responsible for personal property and information during the course of responding to an emergency call.

Requirements for volunteers are not age or gender specific. Volunteers are expected to able to push and pull up to 185 pound weights, swing hammers and axes and use rescue tools that can weigh up to 50 pounds. Each volunteer also must be able to carry 50 pound hoses charged with water for long distances, and then aim and discharge them. They also must be able to raise a 24foot extension ladder and return it to its original position in order to gain access to rooftops. In es-

The Organ Mountains were the site of a tremendous amount of mining and ranching activity beginning at least as early as the mid-19th century. Abundant natural springs provided a good water source. Sugarloaf Spring derives its name from Sugarloaf Mountain, the predominant granite dome rising on the east side of the Organ Mountains. Today, Sugarloaf Mountain is coveted by rock climbers for its technical demands and long granite climbing routes. The peak, in turn, derives its name to its resemblance to a sugar loaf, or sugar cone, a block of refined sugar in the shape of a cone commonly used during the 17th through the 19th centuries as a way of transporting sugar. POTUS quiz: Which American president was born Feb. 9?

If you guessed Lincoln or Washington, you probably had a lot of company, but you're wrong.

Abraham Lincoln, our 16th president, was born Feb. 12, 1809; George Washington, our first, was born Feb. 22, 1732. The quiz answer is William Henry Harrison, our ninth president, born Feb. 9, 1773. He caught a cold at his March 4, 1841 inauguration and died a month later, giving Harrison the ignominious distinction of serving the shortest term of any American president. Age 68 at the time of his death. Harrison was

Mid-February observances span the human spirit

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Our celebrations of three events over two days in mid-February run the gamut from revelry and decadence to love and courtship to a time of faith and reflection.

They also bring brilliant colors to the dead of winter: The carnival purple (for justice), gold (power) and green (faith) during Mardi Gras on Tuesday, Feb. 13; a flood of red and pink hearts, flowers and candy on Valentine's Day; and liturgical purple for preparation and repentance on Ash Wednesday, which also falls on Feb. 14 this year.

MARDI GRAS

"A Christian holiday and popular cultural phenomenon, Mardi Gras dates back thousands of years to pagan spring and fertility rites," according to www.history.com. "It is celebrated in many countries around the world – mainly those with large Roman Catholic populations – on the day before the religious season of Lent begins."

"The origins of Mardi Gras can be traced to medieval Europe, passing through Rome and Venice in the 17th and 18th centuries to the French House of the Bourbons," according to www.mardigrasneworleans.com. "From here, the traditional revelry of "Boeuf Gras," or fatted calf, followed France to her colonies."

The website continues: "On March 2, 1699, French-Canadian explorer Jean Baptiste Le Moyne Sieur de Bienville arrived at a plot of ground 60 miles directly south of New Orleans and named it 'Pointe du Mardi Gras' when his men realized it was the eve of the festive holiday."

originated as a Christian feast day honoring saints named Valentinius, St. Valentine of Rome (226-Feb. 14, 269), who was imprisoned for performing illegal marriages.

"On the morning of his execution, he supposedly sent a farewell message to the jailer's daughter, signed 'from your Valentine,'" according to the Encyclopedia of Saints.

ASH WEDNESDAY

Ash Wednesday is a traditional day of fasting in the Western Christian theology and is the first day of Lent. It falls between Feb. 5 and March 10, always 46 days before Easter – 40 fasting days because Sundays are not days of fast. Lent "is a time of self-examination and reflection," according to archives.umc.org. "In the early church, Lent was a time to prepare new converts for baptism. Today, Christians focus on their relationship with God, often choosing to give up something or volunteering and giving of themselves for others. The 40 days represents the time Jesus spent in the wilderness, enduring the temptation of Satan. Sundays in Lent are not counted in the 40 days because each Sunday represents a "mini-Easter" celebration of Jesus' victory over sin and death." "On Ash Wednesday we are reminded that 'we are dust and to dust we shall return,'' said the Most Reverend Ricardo Ramirez, C.S.B., bishop emeritus of Las Cruces. "Thus our deaths come to mind, not to be frightened but to prepare for the end. For our entire lives are preparation for our death and the glorious risen life we have been promised."

"The local area significance is that the ashes are a visible sign of our faith," said Monsignor Robert L. Getz of Las Cruces. "They are much like our Hispanic Catholic symbols like luminarias, or descansos by the roadsides. These symbols are rich historical reminders of family and community that visibly tell of the passing of our human encounters to eternal life in God's loving."

OPINION LAS CRUCES BULLETIN For the Love of Art ... Even if you're not 'arty,' dive in!

his column is for those of you who don't consider yourselves "arty."

COLTHARP an art collector, From the Publisher an art enthusiast, or an artist, you already know about it and have plans to attend galleries, studio tours, plays and concerts during the month.

However, even if you're not "arty," there is still plenty for you.

Imagine a world without art. Think of a typical day in America.

Many of you wake up to an alarm clock that plays music. Without art, that option would be gone. What about the sheets on your bed? Do they have colorful designs or patterns? Not in a world without art. Paintings on your wall? Photographs? Gone.

Time to get dressed. Colorful designer dress or shoes? Not in a world without art.

As you get in your vehicle to head out for the day, you may not think of your car as a work of art, but many are. The thought and design that goes into creating an automobile is every bit as much art as science. What about your house? It may or may not be an architectural marvel, but many homes are. Look at the buildings you pass by driving through town. Many have design elements that are literal works of art. The federal court building downtown is a work of art itself, and contains hundreds of beautiful works of art by New Mexico artists.

You may not have gone to see a play or musical lately, but even if you've gone to the movies or watched television, you're watching art.

Years ago, I was discussing film with my friend and work colleague Terry V. Johnson, and asked him, "What's the worst movie you ever saw?"

Without hesitation, he said, "The one that didn't get made."

Terry was a big believer in the idea any created work of art had merit. He believed creating something was far better than creating nothing. If that creation can speak to you in any way, it has taken on the role of art.

Having seen some pretty crappy movies in my day, I don't fully subscribe to this theory, but I do understand the point.

I also understand what art is not. Paying my utility bill to the City of Las Cruces is neither fun nor artistic. Although instead of dating it 2018 on my check, I suppose I could write "Year of the Dog" and draw a little beagle in there.

Cleaning the pigeon poop off my porch is not art. Although if someone has an artistic way of driving the nasty, winged rats out of my neighborhood, I'm all ears.

Changing the oil in my car is not art. Although there are some million-dollar paintings out there that don't look much different from the stain left behind when I drop the old filter in the pan and oil splatters everywhere.

There is so much dull routine and drudgery in our day-to-day lives, we need art to refresh our brains and spirits.

At least two of our local coffee houses – the Bean and Milagro – regularly have fresh flowers in the shop or on the tables. That is not art, per se, but it is a beautifully simple touch that makes you smile.

Because the idea of art is so broad – including painting, sculpture, photography, film, mixed media, architecture, landscaping, industrial design, tattoos, plays, music, performance art, cooking – you can find art in almost anything.

So here's a challenge to you non-"arty" types out there.

Look at what's going on this week in the world of art. Pick something out and go do it. You may love it. Even if you don't love it, look for something there. Something to learn, something to feel, something to enlighten.

As a starter, you can turn to Page 37 of this publication to review the art studio tours happening this weekend. Or go see the play "Photograph 51" at the Black Box Theatre. Or go see a movie. Go see some live music at the Rio Grande Theatre or High Desert Brewery. Go have a meal and see what one of our amazing local chefs can whip up for you. Or use your own creativity to stretch the definition of art. Maybe you can test drive an exotic car.

So there's your challenge. Dive into the world of art. It won't kill you. I promise. You might actually like it.

Give a greater voice to local school boards and districts

Amid the exuberance over soaring state revenues thanks to an upturn in oil and gas prices, and duelling budget proposals from Gov. Martinez and the Legislature that both increase spending on education, it is easy to overlook the fact that New Mexico is still massively shortchanging its classrooms. These earnest efforts of legislators from both parties to lift our state from worst-in-the-nation for education may obscure how much more still needs to be done.

Building a modern education system that is globally competitive will demand much greater commitment of resources and willingness to prioritize policies. budget is adopted, this year will see

SEN. ED SOULES

Regardless of which education an increase of between $51 and $73 million more for classrooms after declines during the last few years. It is good news for students, and the educators and schools who support them.

(D-37- Doña Ana)

Still, there are tremendous unmet needs in New Mexico's classrooms. Both proposals fall short of funding needed to meet them. The K-12 education budget will make up about 44 percent of the entire New Mexico budget this vear. as it has in the past. Two competing education budgets now are being considered, one by the governor's Public Education Department (PED) and the other by the Legislative Finance Committee (LFC). Both proposals would spend approximately the same amount on education. but there are significant differences. The PED would like a 12 percent increase in discretionary dollars; the LFC budget is proposing 2 percent. These funds are often the subject of contention because local schools and school boards believe they know better what is needed for their schools. and how money can be used more effectively than PED. The PED uses the discretionary funds to implement policies that are often experimental and unproven. While both the LFC and PED budgets contain small across-the-board salary increases for teachers, the largest pay proposal by the PED is for "merit pay." PED says that merit pay for teachers leads to better student performance. This reward system would apply to only 4 percent of teachers, however, and to virtually no special education teachers.

I have reviewed the recent study used by the PED to support merit pay. The data used in the study did not meet the criteria the PED has established to distribute merit pay. In fact, after a thorough review of all studies, merit pay has only a minimal effect on student test scores. It is a costly $7 million PED policy that could be better used by allowing school districts to decide how to reward high performing teachers and/or incentivize struggling teachers.

Among the toughest decisions this legislative body made last year was to sweep approximately $40 million of cash balances from school districts during last year's state revenue crisis. My hope is that we find a way to restore these monies critical to districts that rely on these funds to carry them until federal dollars are deposited.

Neither budget contains certain key priorities of teachers. principals, superintendents, or the Legislative Education Study Committee. Unmet needs include insufficient funding for student career development, school transportation and textbooks. This is why many education advocates want a greater voice in setting the education priorities of the budget.

Public schools in New Mexico need resources, and it is our responsibility as legislators to deliver them. As chair of the Senate Education Committee. I will continue to champion locally elected and accountable school boards, the districts they represent, and our professional teachers. They usually know best how to allocate the resources to produce real results for our students. To turn around our education system, we must support them, and get them the resources to do the job.

Arts district wants input

To the editor:

We would like to thank some 260 community members who have participated in the planning phase of the development and implementation of the Las Cruces Arts and Culture District (ACD) in the original town site of Las Cruces.

The ACD proposed boundaries are Water Street on the west, Mesquite Street on the east, Picacho/Spruce on the north, and Amador Avenue on the south. This includes the Main Street business area and the Mesquite Street neighborhood of the original town site settled in 1849. The New Mexico Arts Commission is the state authorizer for new arts and cultural districts, while New Mexico Main-Street administers the program. The state districts include downtown Albuquerque, Artesia, Gallup, Las Vegas, Los Alamos, Mora, Raton and Silver City. There have been no new districts receiving state authorization since 2014.

The Las Cruces ACD plan will be a "municipally designated district" using all the guidelines, strategies, and principals of the state-authorized districts. Nob Hill in Albuquerque is also seeking a municipally designated district.

The current Las Cruces planning process started in late September and has included a series of focus groups, one-on-one sessions, interviews at arts venues and events, and an open house in order to obtain a diverse view of what the community would like and expect of the ACD. The participants have included artists, arts and related businesses, nonprofits, city staff, NMSU staff and faculty, property owners, neighborhood organizations, and the general public interested in arts and culture.

The process is led by city staff in the Economic Development Department and a 12-member community ACD Coordinating Council under the direction of two consultants from SVPratt Creative Strategies, Sabrina Pratt from Santa Fe and Irene Oliver-Lewis from Las Cruces.

More than 1,000 comments on a variety of topics - events, collaboration and regional partnerships, streetscape/use of buildings, business and economic development, artist spaces, food and retail ideas, funding, hours, perception, historic preservation, youth, and miscellaneous - were discussed from September to December.

There is still time to include your comments for the ACD plan. We invite you to attend a public input session on Saturday, March 24, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Rio Grande Theatre on Main Street.

Bond meetings

The City of Las Cruces seeks resident input on community facilities and facility upgrades for a bond election scheduled in 2018.

General Obligation (GO) bonds are the main funding source for basic infrastructure including parks, trails, swimming pools, fire stations, libraries and more.

"We can't meet every need across the 76.5 square miles of the city with a single GO bond election, so the community needs to help identify what type of projects to prioritize for improving Las Cruces as a place to live, work and play," said David Weir, coordinator for the City's GO Bond program. "This is why resident input is so essential."

Residents can email input to gobond@lascruces.org by early May 2018. Or, attend one of the following meetings:

Code outreach

Doña Ana County Animal Control and Codes Enforcement, along with Planning and Constituent Services personnel, will go door-to-door in the Anthony area on Thursday, Feb. 15, to offer education on domestic-animal ordinances, recycling, trash accumulation, inoperable vehicles, weed control and other potential environmental and zoning codes violations. The Animal Control and Environmental Survey (ACES) program aims to educate residents how to comply with county ordinances while offering opportunities to beautify their area.

As part of the community outreach, a roll-off and recycling container and tire shredder will be available Saturday, Feb. 24, from 9 a.m. to noon, as well as services for lowcost rabies vaccinations and scheduling of spay and neuter operations for pets.

Contact the Doña Ana County Animal Control and Codes Enforcement Department at 575-525-8846.

Sheriff candidate

Former Doña Ana County Undersheriff Edward J. Lerma, a 40-year veteran in law enforcement, has announced he is challenging his former boss and incumbent Enrique Vigil in the 2018 Democratic primary for Doña Ana County Sheriff.

"I care deeply for this community and I feel that they deserve a public safety agency that focuses on their safety instead of politics and restores their faith in the office," Lerma said in a news release.

"For too long, the Doña

Ana County Sheriff s Department has been led by sheriffs who came from outside the department and tried to transform it into something other than a public safety/service agency, often times with their own self-serving ideas at the front of their agenda," he continued. "Together, we can make our sheriff's department ... a true example of the core principles of the agency: honesty, integrity, ethics, professionalism and fairness."

A New Mexico native, Lerma graduated from Mayfield High School. He began his law enforcement career in 1972 as a dispatcher for the Las Cruces Police Department. He also worked as a police officer in Farmington and served as Chief of Police in Ruidoso Downs and Tularosa.

He lives in Las Cruces with his wife, Barbara, of 44 years.

"In an effort to leave open spaces clean, we urge all conducting target practice to leave spaces as they found them and to collect all trash and debris before leaving."

According to Cindy Pollock, range coordinator at the Picacho Gun Club, the biggest problem they face is shooters leaving glass bottles. "Not only are the pieces hard to pick up, but they can also ruin tires," she said. "If you are in the desert, the last thing you need is a ruined tire. That doesn't count the fact that we are also out to see our beautiful land, and we have to put up with garbage left behind."

Pollock added that people also leave behind large items such as TVs, electronic devices, stoves and refrigerators.

Harry Stryker, owner of Strykers Shooting World, says large amounts of trash and debris are left in areas around the north side of Redhawk Golf Course and schools in that area.

"People leave spent casings, appliances, cardboard plastic bottles, broken glass bottles and an array of items that have been left over from a variety of activities," he said. "It is sad to see such disregard for the desert and for others, as we all have a stake in keeping our entire environment clean and keeping the open areas of the desert trash-less, so the open space we take for granted here can be used and enjoyed by everyone. Responsible gun owners would never leave their trash and empties behind."

The City of Las Cruces needs resident input on community facilities and facility upgrades for an upcoming bond election scheduled later this year in 2018. General Obligation (GO) bonds are a primary funding source for basic infrastructure our growing community requires to thrive. This infrastructure includes items such as parks, trails, swimming pools, facilities for fire stations, libraries and much more. The City of Las Cruces is asking residents to participate and provide input by either attending public meetings or by sending an email with their input to gobond@las-cruces.org. This input will be considered during the project identification process that will be completed by early May 2018.

The first set of meetings will be held at the following times and locations

Open house unveils city's transportation plan

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

The City of Las Cruces transportation plan is about more than streets and vehicles. It's also about making it safe and easy for walkers and bikers.

City officials, including Senior Planner Srijana Basnyat, attended a Feb. 3 open house in the lobby of Bank of the West, 201 N. Church St., to present the plan to the public for the first time.

Visitors could vote (using stickers) for their favorite policy and program ideas, such as creating an online bicycle and trails map, supporting a bike-share system and ensuring that traffic signals promote walking and biking. They could also vote for their favorite "pedestrian treatment toolbox" ideas. like crosswalks, ADAcompliant curb ramps, median refuge islands, street reconfiguration and traffic signals.

City staffers also conducted surveys at the Feb. 3 Farmers & Crafts Market outside the bank during the open house. The survey is also

The survey is also on the city website (www.activelascruces.com) throughout the month of February, Basnyat said.

Basnyat said the draft plan has been discussed with city staff, including how it could impact Street and Traffic Operations, Codes Enforcement and other departments.

The plan, with revisions based on public and staff input, will be presented to the city council, which will ultimately vote on a final draft. If approved, it will be used to guide future street and transportation projects, including capital improvements.

City to hold GO bond meetings

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

The City of Las Cruces will hold three public meetings in February to gather public input for the general obligation (GO) bond election that will be held this August, City Manager Stu-

all begin at 6 p.m., will be held on • Thursday, Feb. 15, at

• Thursday, Feb. 15, at Lynn Middle School, 950 S. Walnut St.;

• Thursday, Feb. 22, at Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St; and

• Tuesday, Feb. 27, in the auditorium at the East Mesa branch of Doña Ana County Community College, 2800 Sonoma Ranch Blvd.

GO bonds "are the main funding source for basic infrastructure our growing community requires to thrive. This infrastructure includes items such as parks, trails, swimming pools, facilities for fire stations, libraries and much more," according to www. las-cruces.org.

For more information on the bond election, contact city Chief Planning Administrator David Weir at 575-528-3066 or email gobond@las-cruces.org.

Retirement haven

At the meeting, Ed also said Las Cruces has been recognized by TopRetirements.com as the 15th best places to retire on its list of 100 communities nationwide.

Deadline looms

Ed also said Feb. 17 is the deadline for Las Cruces youth to submit artwork to be considered for inclusion in the third annual Chaos Collaboration that will be held Feb. 23-24 at the Frank O'Brien Papen Community Center, 304 W. Bell St.

The event is an art show for teens by teens. For more information on the Chaos Collaboration, call 575-541-2454.

Hospital study

Also at the meeting, City Councilor Jack Eakman said the state Legislative Finance Committee has agreed to pay $100,000 for a feasibility study to determine the viability of locating a behavioral health hospital in southern New Mexico.

"I couldn't be more excited," Eakman said.

The project also renovated approximately 2,800 square feet, transforming the existing cafeteria into the school's new music classrooms. In addition, security doors were added in the entrance lobby to ensure that anyone entering the building has to stop at the front office in order to gain access to the school, said district officials.

Hermosa Heights Elementary gets facelift

The school also received a new main entrance canopy, and the parking lot was expanded by 56 parking spaces and six Americans with Disabilities parking spaces. The 30,200-square-foot parking lot expansion was a cooperative project with the New Mexico Department of Transportation, which provided $16,800 in funding.

All additions and renovations were designed to fit with the mid-century style of the school while also bringing a modern aesthetic to the campus. The project was paid for through voter-approved funds from the 2014 bond election.

"This project is a prime example of how bond funds can completely transform a campus," said LCPS Superintendent Dr. Greg Ewing. "Not only did this project improve campus security, it provided the facilities our staff and students need to be successful."

The district hopes to complete similar projects over the next four years at Fairacres, Desert Hills and Hillrise elementary Schools.

NMSU honors stars of arts and sciences

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

Dr. Don Cleveland, John Schutz and Mickey and Jan Clute are the 2018 Stars of Arts and Sciences.

The four will be honored at the New Mexico State University College of Arts and Sciences' fifth annual "A Starry Night – Una Noche Estrellada" – fundraiser Friday, Feb. 23, in downtown Las Cruces.

The event's reception begins at 5:30 p.m. at Bank of the West, 201 N. Church St. The dinner and awards ceremony begin at 7 p.m. across the street at Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

Tickets are $75 each.

Cleveland will receive the department's Star of Sciences award.

Cleveland, a 1972 graduate of NMSU, is chair of the University of California at San Diego Department of Cellular and Molecular Medicine, distinguished professor Of Cellular and Molecular Medicine, Medicine, and Neurosciences and a member of the Ludwig Institute for Cancer Research.

Cleveland's research focus areas include cell division and cell cycle control and neurodevelopment and neurodegenerative disease, according to medschool.ucsd.edu.

Cleveland is a 2018 recipient of the $3 million Breakthrough Prize in Life Sciences, according to NMSU.

"The 'breakthrough' made by Dr. Cleveland and his associates was understanding the extent of damaged neurons and their supportive cells occurring in neurological degenerative diseases such as amytrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) and Huntington's disease and establishing a gene therapy treatment that targeted and 'silenced' these mutant genes.

Cleveland was born in Waynesville, Missouri, but grew up in Las Cruces, attending Las Cruces High School and NMSU, the university said. "In 1972, he was the NMSU College of Arts and Sciences valedictorian when he received a BS in physics. Cleveland earned a Ph.D. in biochemical sciences in 1977 at Princeton University and his Postdoctoral at the University of California San Francisco.

"Cleveland was the first to clone tubulin genes and discovered the microtubule associated with tau, the protein that accumulates in the brains of patients with Alzheimer's disease and chronic traumatic brain injury, now receiving attention in sports such as football.

"Cleveland has published hundreds of articles in scientific journals (and) serves as a reviewer of these top journals. He is also a popular international lecturer, keynote speaker and seminarian at universities.

John Schutz Schutz will receive the Star of Arts award.

Schutz taught band at Lynn Middle School (then Lynn Junior High) and Mayfield High School, and was Las Cruces Public Schools' first visual and performing arts coordinator. Under his leadership, music buildings were "renovated, remodeled or rebuilt" at every LCPS middle and high school. Before Schutz became part-time arts coordinator for the school district in the early 1990s, elementary-school students in grades five and six attended music classes once or twice a week. Before Schutz retired, there was a full-time music teacher for K-5 at every LCPS elementary. Visual arts teachers were also added.

"As president of the New Mexico Music Educators Association (NMMEA) and chair of the New Mexico Alliance for Arts in Education, an affiliate of the Kennedy Center Alliance for Art in Education Network, Schutz was able to shape music education statewide," according to NMSU. He "has been honored several times by NMMEA, including being named New Mexico music educator of the year in 1996, induction into their hall of fame in 2001 and an emeritus teacher award in 2013.

Schutz, who retired from LCPS in 2012, has played the trumpet in Ray Tillman's High Society Orchestra for more than 20 years. He is cofounder and assistant conductor of the Mesilla Valley Concert Band and former director of New Horizons Band.

Mickey and Jan Clute The Clutes will receive the Stars of Town and Gown award.

"Born and raised in Las Cruces, Mickey and Jan Clute are successful retired entrepreneurs whose businesses were well known in the community," according to NMSU.

"Jan was the co-owner of Georgess. Inc., an upscale woman's clothing boutique. Mickey was one of three co-founders and president of GenCon General Contractors. Established in 1975, the $350 million commercial construction company specialized in constructing educational buildings, including Arrowhead Early College High School. Mesquite Elementary School robotics team advances

By SANDY MONTOYA, SENIOR PUBLICATIONS EDITOR, WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE For the Bulletin

The Mesquite Elementary Sharks in the Gadsden Independent School District were one of eight teams from the Las Cruces area advancing to the 2017 FIRST LEGO® League (FLL) HYDRO DY-NAMICSSM New Mexico Region Championship following the November FLL Qualifier at Oñate High School. The championship event is Feb. 10 at Menaul School in Albuquerque.

Coached by Russell Husson-Matter, a secondyear special education teacher at Mesquite Elementary School, the team practices after school on Mondays and Wednesdays, and even comes in on Saturdays, working to hone their robot game skills in advance of the competition.

Not only is the goal of an FLL competition to have fun, but for students to learn leadership skills and how to function in a team, and learn the science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) skills they need to make the robots work.

FIRST LEGO® League challenges kids to think like scientists and engineers. During the build season, each team chose a real-world problem to solve in the project competition. This year's HYDRO DYNAM-ICS theme involved finding innovative solutions to problems in the human water cycle. The teams also built, tested, and programmed an autonomous robot using LEGO® MIND-STORMS® technology to solve a set of missions in the robot games playing field. This is the second year Husson-Matter has coached a robotics team that qualified for the state championship and he was witnessed the gains in his former students.

"Confidence levels in their own abilities have risen to new heights," said Husson-Matter. "Some of my special education students from last year moved on to middle school and are now on the A/B honor roll in general education classes. These students all have the potential for greatness; they just need someone to believe in them, to let them know that they can do anything, and that their contributions to the world can and will make a difference."

For the project portion of the competition, the Mesquite Elementary team chose a water cycle project centering on how they collect, use, and store water. After observing children drinking at the water fountain, they wondered, "What happens to all the water that doesn't make it into the kids' mouths? Where does that water go? Instead of wasting the water, what if it could be collected and funneled into a community garden that would benefit all of Mesquite?" A project like that could impact Mesquite for generations.

Fifth-grade team member Alexandra Rodriguez likes that they are presenting their ideas to help others in the community, far beyond their team and school. Rodriguez said, "Our goal is to work together as a team and accomplish everything together as a team. I've learned from my teammates and hope they've learned from me." Rodriguez also liked that the team brings kids together that didn't know each other before and they've formed new friendships.

Mesquite Elementary Principal Angela Silvaggio said the school teams this year have included a blend of special education, general education and gifted students and the "lines are blurred" (meaning you can't tell which students are which because they all work hard as a team).

"There is no 'I' in the word 'team'," said Silvaggio.

"Our female students have realized that STEM programs are not just limited to males," Silvaggio said. "Our girls have experienced the feeling of 'yes, I can!' That is the mindset we want for all our students."

"For some of our students, the FLL and other programs offered through FIRST could very well be a life-changing opportunity. It could be what inspires them to go to college, to enter a STEM-related field and to help solve the problems in the world that previous generations are leaving behind," said Husson-Matter.

Husson-Matter voiced his appreciation for the support of his school administration and sponsors Dominguez Farms and Dairies Inc., QED Enterprises Inc., and Ariel Technologies.

Alexandra Rodriguez and Emily Torres

"Without the support of these companies and their belief in our program, the success we have experienced over the past two years would not have been possible," he said.

"I am so very proud of the way students from various grade levels and ability levels come together for a project such as this," said Mesquite Elementary School Principal Angel Silvaggio. "Our students have learned the importance of teamwork while respecting each other's diversity."

Proposed festival brings space down to Earth

"Circling the Earth in my orbital spaceship I marveled at the beauty of our planet. People of the world, let us safeguard and enhance this beauty — not destroy it!" – Yuri Gagarin, first human in space.

By ELVA ÖSTERREICH Las Cruces Bulletin

Southern New Mexico is so related to the history of space exploration and the future of space commercialization that a group of organizations has decided to inaugurate the Las Cruces Space Festival, April 12-14.

"It is going to be a local celebration of our space heritage and the activity that goes on here that is space related," said

Jonathan Firth

On Saturday, the City of Las Cruces has agreed let the group use the downtown plaza, sharing

While Las Cruces Space Festival organizers are ensuring core activities for the event, they invite interested businesses, organizations and individuals with ideas for shows, displays and exhibits to participate.

Academy breaks the ribbon on a new track

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH

Las Cruce Bulletin

When plans were made a few years ago for a new J. Paul Taylor Academy addition, the choice was between a music/ arts room and a track/playground. Since art and music are an integral part of the school's curriculum, Executive Director Eric Ahner explained, they chose the room and hoped to eventually fundraise for the playground.

The new arts facility was completed during the 2015-16 school year. Two years later, on Feb. 2, academy students cut the ribbon for the track by running through it.

It's a place for play and physical education.

"The next phase is to put in grass," Ahner said. "We expand the PE program by having our green space and field games." Ahner said the head of facilities at Las Cruces Public Schools was instrumental in completing the project. The J. Paul Taylor Foundation also raised funds.

"The district was able to help by bringing in dirt, doing the earthwork," Ahner said. "The foundation and school have raised another $45,000 to $50,000 to complete the track and put in irrigation and sod.

"It's been a great effort. It's not about the money always. We need to make that commitment."

The last part of the project, still in need of funding, is installing play structures, he said.

Recycling means doing it the right way

By CASSIE MCCLURE and SUZANNE MICHAELS For the Bulletin

The import ban that China announced for Jan. 1, 2018, has gone in effect, and the South Central Solid Waste Authority (SCSWA) wants you to know that "Recycling Right" is more important now than ever.

Late last year, China declared a ban on certain recycled materials to tackle poor quality and contaminated items being shipped in from around the world for processing. The announcement issued to the World Trade Organization (WHO) sent shockwaves through the global recycling community. Specifically, the country announced it would ban the import of mixed paper and mixed plastics. Anything that China would take would now must have an incredibly low contamination rate.

But, what does low contamination mean for you and your household recycling? If recycling to you means tossing greasy pizza boxes with pizza inside, or plastic bottles with soda still in them, or peanut butter jars with peanut butter inside into your blue bin ... know that food contamination can destroy efforts to create new recycled products.

Recyclables in our area are managed through Friedman Recycling – a regional recycling processor contracted by the SCSWA with recycling plants in El Paso, Phoenix, Tucson and Albuquerque. Friedman must be able to show its U.S. exporter that local recyclables will pass muster for the new, more stringent requirements.

"Right now, this will not change things in Las Cruces, but it's a good time to remind everyone about our recycling mantra: clean and dry," said Tarkeysha Burton, SCSWA recycling coordinator.

To "Recycle Right," double check that plastic bottles (and rigid plastics), aluminum, steel and tin cans, and milk and juice cartons are rinsed and dry. Make sure cardboard is flattened.

China's short notice made finding a solution even more critical. "However, it's a chance to double down on our efforts to build conservation methods in our daily actions and make sure we continue to strive for Zero Waste in our community," SCSWA Director Patrick Peck says.

New Report: "How To Ease Knee Pain And Keep More Active - Without Needing Pills Or Surgery"

- Report By Las Cruces Physical Therapist. Dennis Prickett

- THIS REPORT is annoying, knee pain. The type so nauseated that you feel your only option is to stop what you're doing completely, reach for the pain medication and wonder how long you'll be told to rest this time!

The thing is, all of those pain medications are OK, you get my drift... not good for your stomach - and the long periods of rest you've been told about, is not likely to do you much good either.

Over the last 27 years I've been working on a daily basis to help people aged 45+ find relief from chronic knee pain - and what I can tell you is that the cocktail mix of more rest and more painkillers of chronic knee pain...

frustrated with the number of people suffering instantly. unnecessarily that I've written a 12 page report that details the 7 things any person can do to relieve knee pain naturally ... And I want to send you this report completely at no charge.

Now, I don't know if these 7 things will relieve you of your knee pain completely.

And I can't promise that what has worked for most of my patients and clients over the past 27 years, will work for you too.

However reading my free report is definitely better than spending another day "resting", "accepting it", thinking "it's my age" or worse yet, masking it with pain medications.

If your recurring knee pain is affecting your job, your ability to keep active, threatens your independence, or hinders your family leisure time... Then you really need to read this free report.

Knee Pain "Truths" Finally Exposed

This report exposes how pain medications and injections might be cheaper (for your insurance!) and easy for a Doctor to prescribe, but may not necessarily be right for you in the long run... Have you seen the list of crippling side effects these days?

This 100% FREE report, titled: "7 Simple Ways To Stop Chronic, Daily Annoying Knee Pain ... Without Cortisone Injections, Or Taking Painkillers" (Value $28!) reveals the leading cause of knee pain that is overlooked by 95% of Doctors (hint: there's a chance you do it everyday without realizing!), and even shows how you can get to the bottom of knee pain quickly, naturally, for FREE, and LAS CRUCES (NM) without needing a referral from a Doctor!... More: The report reveals for the first time to for the person who the residents of Las Cruces simple, yet often overis suffering from looked routines that help make knee pain go away the torment of daily, fast... as well as improving posture, all at the same chronic time - I'd say they're perfect if you're a lady aged 45+ and worried about looking "awkward" or losof "ache" and "sharp ing your confident, healthy posture at the hands of pain" where you get chronic knee pain.

I want you to imagine how life will be in five years from now if you DON'T get a grip on your knee pain now.

How will your knee pain affect your job? Your preservation of self worth and your independence? Will you be a fun person to be with? Or live with?

LCU field workers bring innovation to the job

By CASSIE MCCLURE AND SUZANNE MICHAELS For the Bulletin

Matt Anderson was an archaeologist first. With a degree from New Mexico State University in anthropology, he started to learn how technology could enhance his work in the field.

"I started working with computerized mapping and my career progressed from there," he said.

Matt is a graphic information system analyst with Las Cruces Utilities (LCU). He has been able to take his computer mapping skills – along with a later degree in computer science – to enhance the knowledge of the hidden infrastructure in Las Cruces. He was recently taking inventory of surface water features on North Valley Drive, features like fire hydrants. What makes his work so essential, and won him the 2017 Excellence in Innovation Award, is how much it would help the future of the city.

"Matt has mapped out locations within inches rather than several feet, so we don't have to continually dig up lines," said Lucio M. Garcia, P.E., CEM, Gas Section administrator at LCU. "This saves us an incredible amount of time and staffing resources."

"Before, you might be able to get within 20 feet of a problematic gas or water line, but you'd still need to go back to the office to process the data," Anderson said. He now uses a Global Positioning System (GPS) data collector to plot the exact location of underground lines leading to a fire hydrant, or a water or gas line, that runs to a business or residence. When buildings and streets change, the records will be immediately available to designers and those out in the field.

Originally from Alamogordo, Anderson left to work in California for 10 years. He returned and has been with LCU for five years. "I love New Mexico and I thought what better place to raise a family," he said.

"This has been my favorite place to work because of the people I work with," he said. "It's really nice to know that what I do on a daily basis can impact people in a positive way, even years down the line."

Las Cruces Utilities provides gas, water, wastewater and solid waste services to approximately 100,000 Las Cruces residents and businesses. Call 575-528-3500 from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

School bond issue passes by wide margin

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

It passed.

The voter turnout was low, but the winning margin was wide, as Las Cruces Public Schools voters passed a $50 million bond issue on Tuesday, Feb. 6, by a 90 percent margin, 5,030 to 633.

The turnout in the Las Cruces School District was 6.6 percent of eligible voters, almost double the 3.4 percent turnout for the previous bond election in 2016. Turnout in the Gadsden Independent School District was 2.1 percent.

School bonds are funded by local property tax. Holding the bond to $50 million (LCPS has more than $250 million in funding requests for school projects and programs) this year means there will be no increase in property taxes. The current school tax rate will remain at $9.92 per $1,000 of assessed value of a person's property. Taxable value is one-third of the assessed value of a person's property.

The bond will pay for construction and renovation, safety, new classrooms, athletic facilities, playground equipment, furniture and other projects at elementary, middle and high schools throughout LCPS.

The bond includes two projects that will receive nearly two-thirds of their total funding from the New Mexico Public School Capital Outlay Council (PSCOC). Because they are among the PSCOC's top 100 school construction projects in the state. Desert Hills Elementary School, 280 N. Roadrunner Parkway, is earmarked for construction of a new multipurpose room and kitchen and remodeling of the existing multipurpose room into classrooms, while the front office and entrance of MacArthur Elementary School, 655 N. Fourth St., will be expanded and remodeled to enhance security and to include a nursing area. LCPS's share of those two projects will be $2 million for Desert Hills Elementary and $2.2 million for MacArthur Elementary.

The bond includes $2.2 million to expand and remodel MacArthur Elementary School's front office and entrance to enhance school security. The school's nursing area will also be remodeled. MacArthur Elementary, 655 N. Fourth St., was built in 1953.

Other projects will help alleviate overcrowding at Fairacres Elementary, 4501 W. Picacho Ave., and Hillrise Elementary, 1400 S. Curnutt St.

The 2018 bond issue also includes funds to create security-card access at eight elementary schools, enhancing safety for students and staff. It also will pay for safety lighting in the Mayfield High School parking lot ($150,000), and security fencing at Picacho ($140,000) and Vista middle schools ($50,000).

Major damage to Columbia Elementary School, 4555 Elks Drive, due to years of problems with the school's construction, will be rectified.

2018 BOND ELECTION REACTIONS

LCPS Board of Education President Maria Flores

"We are always grateful to the community for its continued support of our students, staff and schools. It benefits everyone to be proud of our buildings, and investing in our infrastructure is a confirmation of our community's support. The buildings that house our students must be sound! We value the trust that the community endows the district to do our best for our students."

LCPS Board Secretary Ray Jaramillo

"I am thrilled to see our community come together once again to support our public schools by voting in favor of this bond. The money generated will allow various sites to improve in ways that make our schools safer, more enjoyable, and more conducive to a healthy atmosphere for both students and educators to be their best. I cannot stress how vital it is to education that our school facilities are adequately maintained; the passing of this bond ensures that some muchneeded work will get done and LCPS can continue to thrive."

LCPS Blue Ribbon Bond Committee Chair Ben Woods

"On behalf of the women and men of the Blue Ribbon Committee. we wish to say 'thank You y muchas gracias' to each and every person that took the time and made the effort to cast a vote today The bond proposal was well developed by our district leadership and the projects to be accomplished are greatly needed. Each will directly impact, and improve, the lives of our students, teachers and staff. We are blessed to be part of a great community that steps forward and supports initiatives that are aimed to make tomorrow better than today."

'Five Course Love' serves up delicious performances

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

This is both a REview and a PREview of Megan McQueen's production of the Broadway musical "Five Course Love."

I was lucky enough to see the student cast (Calvin Chervinko, Xodia Choate and Juan Apodaca) during their final performance of the show on Jan. 28 at Isabel M. Crouch Readers Theatre at NMSU, and I'm looking forward to seeing the veteran cast (McQueen, Brandon Brown and Algernon D'Ammassa) during their final performance of the show on Sunday, Feb. 18 at Alma d' Arte Charter High School.

Calvin, Xodia and Juan were beyond great in their portrayals of 15 different characters in five mini-musicals set in a down-home country BBQ joint, Italian mob hangout, German brewhouse, Mexican cantina and 1950s diner.

None of the three performers is even 25 years old yet, which makes their talents as singers and actors and their onstage presence even more remarkable. That's especially true because Reader's Theatre has no stage; the actors are on the same level with the audience, and often only a foot or so from the front row. I've acted there, and the experience is both intimate and terrifying.

I can't imagine what it must have been like for Calvin, Juan and Xodia – harmonizing with each other, remembering lyrics, lines and dance steps and getting ready for a very quick costume change in a small, dark backstage area. If these guys had any problems, I was never aware of them. The entire production – including musicians James Gier, Mark Klett and Derrick Lee – was perfection, and it's honestly one of the best shows I have ever seen.

Alas, the "kids" won't be performing the show again. But you can still see the "adult" version. It's the same show, but with MUCH older actors. (Sorry, Megan, Brandon and Algernon, but I couldn't resist that one.)

I have acted and been directed by all three. They are immensely talented and giving actors and directors and wonderful people. I've shared some of the best moments of my life – onstage and off – with them. They have all earned my greatest respect and deepest gratitude.

'Five Course Love' served with five-course meal

Don't have plans for Valentine's Day? How about "Five Course

Love?"

Scaffolding Theatre Company's production of the Broadway musical by Greg Coffin has a show beginning at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 14, at Alma d' Arte Charter High School, 402 W. Court Ave.

The price for the "Five Course Love" performance and a five-course meal prepared and served by Roanna St. Clair and her Alma d' Arte culinary students is $35 per person.

If you can't go on Valentine's Day, there will also be $35 dinner theatre performances at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 16-17 at Alma.

The production's final performance will be 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 18, at Alma. Tickets for that non-dinner show are $15 general admission and $10 for students.

All performances star Megan McQueen, Brandon Brown and Algernon D'Ammassa.

For reservations (highly recommended, especially for Valentine's Day), visit www. scaffoldingtheatrecompany. com. For more information, contact Megan McQueen at 575-646-5952.

"Five Course Love" has also played in Socorro and El Paso this year.

Visiting professor to discuss theatre around the world

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

Grand Valley State University Theatre Professor Karen Libman will be at New Mexico State University in February to talk about her theatre experiences in the United States and around the world.

Libman will have a public presentation at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 14 in the Mark and Stephanie Medoff Theatre of the AS-NMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave. The event is open to the public. There is no charge to attend.

Libman served as executive secretary for the International Drama/ Theatre Education Association from 2010-13, traveling around the world as an artistic ambassador. She then lived in India for five months in 2016 as a Fulbright Scholar based in the Assam province but also involved in projects in other parts of India as a Shakespeare and classical theatre scholar, theatre teacher and director.

"The opportunity to collaborate with artists from other cultures to create new forms of theatre is so exhilarating and fruitful, and has resulted in a productions and creative work that are invigorating, enlightening and aesthetically new and pleasing," Libman said. "I have become a global theatre enthusiast and am pleased to share my good fortune and experiences with the NMSU community.

"The world that we

are living in post 9/11 is a world that is in desperate need of people who are willing to truly examine possibilities," she said. "Because of its rich, varied history and canon of literature, and especially because of its ability to empower people to express themselves creatively, reflect honestly and think critically, theatre is an important, if not vital, area of study.

"Mv artistic philosophy embraces the exploration of the relationships between theatre and society to reflect on the potential for such endeavors to successfully promote such goals as a heightened sense of aesthetics. cultural awareness, and social justice. Assisting others in seeing diverse viewpoints while understanding a global aesthetic is critically important to helping students live and Back in Anger" and "Angels in America, Part I."

She frequently directs for the Grand Valley Shakespeare, and conceived the festival's Bard to Go program, pioneering its international tours to China, Jamaica, Italy, The Dominican Republic, The Czech Republic and The Bahamas.

Libman collaborates with translator Diane Rayor on her Women in Greek Drama series, directing premieres of "Helen," "Medea" and "Antigone," the latter two subsequently published by Cambridge University Press.

She has been honored for teaching and directing excellence by the Kennedy Center/American College Theatre Festival, Nebraska Speech Drama Association, Grand Rapids Grand Awards, American Alliance for Theatre and Education and Grand Valley Davis Center for Women and Gender Equity.

In 2010, Libman was named Michigan distinguished professor of the year by The Presidents' Council of State Universities of Michigan.

The mother of two grown children, Libman lives in Kalamazoo with her husband, historian Mitch Kachun.

learn in our changing world."

"I was an actor with Karen Libman many years ago in summer stock in Indiana," said NMSU Theatre Arts Department Head Wil Kilroy, who invited Libman to Las Cruces. "It's an example of how connected theatre people become, and how keeping contacts really influences your future."

In addition to the public presentation, Libman will talk to NMSU theatre students about her theatre work in India, running a Shakespeare summer theatre, hiring union actors and storytelling.

Libman joined the theatre faculty at GVSU in 1999. Her American productions include "Oedipus," "Piano Lesson," "Metamorphoses," "Big Love," "Mother Courage and Children," "Look

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Centennial High School English and theatre teacher Darin Cabot, left, directed "Romeo and Juliet." At right is Monty Moroni, who plays Shakespeare and Friar Lawrence.

CENTENNIAL HIGH SCHOOL For Valentine's Day: 'Where art thou, Romeo?'

The theatre production class at Centennial High School is putting on the classical love story, "Romeo & Juliet" for five performances, including Valentine's Day.

Shakespeare's 420-year-old classic (first published in 1597) is directed by Centennial English and theatre teacher Darin Cabot. An accomplished actor, Cabot most recently appeared in Las Cruces Community Theatre's production of "Lend Me a Tenor."

The cast includes Gus Sanchez as Romeo and Peyton Matthews as Juliet.

Performances are 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 8, Saturday, Feb. 10, and Wednesday-Friday, Feb. 14-16 in the theatre at Centennial High, 1950 Sonoma Ranch Blvd.

Tickets will run $5 at the door, or $7 for couples at the Valentine's Day performance.

CRYPTOQUIP

This is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Unscramble the letters within each rectangle to form four ordinary words. Then rearrange the boxed letters to form the mystery word, which will complete the gag!

'The Odyssey' opens for two-week run at NMSU

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

With a cast of New Mexico State University theatre arts students and community members, NMSU's production of "The Odyssey" opens with a special 5:30 p.m. preview performance Thursday, Feb. 15.

The show continues through Sunday, Feb. 25 at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave.

The NMSU production is theatre and opera director and playwright Mary Zimmerman's adaptation of the epic Greek poem written by Homer, probably near the end of the eighth century BC, the ancient costal region of Ionia in present-day Turkey. The play is directed by NMSU's award-winning theatre arts Assistant Professor Larissa Lury. "I first started thinking about directing 'The Odyssey' when I was working on a play called 'Grounded,' by George Brant," Lury said.

"Grounded" is about an RPA pilot who struggles to separate war from home, she said. "The Odyssey" strikes a familiar theme.

"'The Odyssey' is largely a story about a man trying to return home after years at war," Lury said. "That journey is not just a physical one, but a psychological one as well. The more I dove into the story, the more I began thinking about how Odysseus' tale speaks to the many ways in which we find ourselves needing to find, carve or invent a way 'home' when home as we know it has been shaken, and also the responsibility we share to help those around us find their way to a sense of home.

"There is an ancient Greek custom of welcoming and helping strangers, since one never knows if a stranger might be a god in disguise. Odysseus would never be able to make it home if it were not for the kindness, hospitality and bravery of those who help him along the way. In the context of our current refugee and migration crisis, that theme rings out throughout the play."

Lury said Zimmerman's adaptation of Homer's work "combines the stunning poetry of the epic, as translated by Robert Fitzgerald, with a contemporary sensibility. It tows an exciting line between honoring the original and an effective and playful spirit of irreverence."

Lury's cast includes

18 actors who play more than 50 human and animal characters, including lotus eaters, enchanted animals, cyclopses, Zeus, Odysseus, Hera and Calypso.

"This is a big ensemble cast," she said. "The play demands a lot from them: physical feats like creating the feeling of flying through the air or moving as a giant sea monster, inventive imaginations, engaging storytelling abilities and truthful, honest acting. This group has jumped into it all with daring and enthusiasm. The process is very collaborative, and it's been exciting to build off of what each individual is bringing into the room. "As usual, the designers and technicians in our department have taken the challenges of this epic by storm and are coming up with ideas that are evocative of the themes of the production, help us tell the story of moving across the sea from place to place, and which come to life through the actors' engagement with them. This is not the kind of design that provides a pretty picture alone, but instead, interacts in a very hands-on way with the performers to help tell the story."

Innovative animator to be featured at film festival Ralph Bakshi's career has routinely left a trail of dust

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH Las Cruces Bulletin

Ralph Bakshi created the full-length animated film "Wizards" (1977) to prove that adult animation wasn't all about sex and violence. That was only five years after he created "Fritz the Cat" (1972), the first adult animated film, X-rated, which was all about sex and a bit about violence.

But that's Bakshi, regardless of the consequences.

Bakshi will receive the Outstanding Achievement in Animation Award during the 2018 Las Cruces International Film Festival presented by New Mexico State University March 7-11. LCIFF will screen his films "Wizards" at 5 p.m. and "American Pop" at 7 p.m. Friday, March 9, at the Allen Theatres Cineport 10, followed by a question and answer session.

Born in 1938 in Palestine, Bakshi was taken to the U.S. as a small child. As a boy in Brooklyn, it was all about the Sunday comics.

"When I was 14 or 15, the comic strips in the Sunday papers were a big deal, I couldn't get enough," Bakshi said. "Then I made the decision to go to art school. It all started when I wanted to be a cartoonist."

He attended the High School of Art and Design and followed that with a career start at Terrytoons, for 10-12 years. He animated 95 episodes of "The Deputy Dawg Show."

Then Bakshi made a change and never looked back.

"'Fritz (the Cat)' brought me to Hollywood, but I was perfectly happy before that," he said. "That was the thing that made a huge difference, the decision to do something other than what (the mainstream) was doing. I got yelled at a lot. It (departing from the norm) wasn't the easiest thing to do in those days. I'm not sure that it's easy today."

The artist in Bakshi, who turns 80 this year, hardly relates to today's need to conform, as in collecting "Likes" on Facebook.

"If you are going to do animation, it doesn't matter what everyone else is doing. You should do what you want to do."

Bakshi was creating, directing, writing animated stories and processing them before computers did the work.

"It was all done by hand," he said. "But how you do it wasn't the issue. What you choose to do is more important than how. The computer is not any better or worse. I don't see that hand drawn is any better than today."

Bakshi is the creator behind HBO's "Spicy City," the first animated series for adults, and voiced three of the characters. The series ended after six episodes when HBO wanted to replace Bakshi's writers and Bakshi said no.

"The studio wanted to hire LA writers," he said.

Bakshi was introduced to New Mexico through his friendship with World War II cartoonist Bill Mauldin. Mauldin, two-time Pulitzer Prize winner, hailed from High Rolls Mountain Park in the Sacramento Mountains.

"He was one of my idols," Bakshi said.

Bakshi occasionally lectures at New Mexico State University's Creative Arts

Institute, for which he has the utmost admiration.

"They are doing tremendous work there. It is sensational. They started with nothing and now are at the top of the line for animation. It's a great environment out here in the West."

Bakshi lives on a mountain, on the edge of a national park, in the wilderness. In 40 minutes he can be in Silver City.

"I love every minute. No cars. No traffic. It's amazing. I always wanted to drive my pickup truck with a dust trail rising behind me."

'MakeShift': Mysteries revealed and hidden on the border

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH Las Cruces Bulletin

Lxs Dos, two artists working together, have created a telling, thoughtful exhibit in "Make-Shift," currently on display at the Branigan Cultural Center.

Ramon and Christian Cardenas create their art by observing people and relationships in the U.S./ Mexico border region.

The pieces, mostly type-cast portraits of imaginary community members, shift from one impression to another as the view looks deeper into the acrylic, spray paint and ink creation. The exhibit questions socio/economic structures and reveals what lies in plain sight that we miss.

"El Semilla/The Seed" depicts a ranch worker, but the field he stands in is cactus. In his hands is a house with people and

"Tres Veces Migrante/ Migrant Three Times" depicts a woman, a Mexican Indian, perhaps Tarahumara. She stands in simple but some kind of traditional clothing. On the front of her is a window to inside, depicting abundance – fruit, a pig eating something green (or throwing it up), sausage and more. Around her head is light, depicted like many images of the virgin or saints are painted. So many questions float to the top with this deceptively simple image. Each of these paintings – "La Pacuhula," "Journalista/Journalist," "Ciudodes Hermanas/Sister Cities (night)," "El Carnicero/The Butcher," and so on – is as complex and storied as a book. So, though there are not a vast quantity of them, they could take some time to read thoroughly.

Another element of the exhibit, a storefront called "El Puesto/The Post/ The Store," is a mixed media installation and multiplies the messages with windows and signs and strange things on shelves. It makes you want to shop there and run away screaming at the same time.

Time spent puzzling over this bright and complex exhibit is time well spent. The exhibit is on display through March 10.

'Crooked House': Who done it? Who cares?

Bv JEFF BERG For the Bulletin

Spoiler alert. Colonel Mustard, with a beer bottle, in the garage.

That's kind of what this film feels like, is a giant game of "Clue."

Curious that this film is plaving at the Fountain this week, since it appears it was never released to theaters upon its initial release late last vear.

The Website, Box Office Mojo, doesn't show any figures a'tall and it is available on Amazon Video on the cheap.

Based on an Agatha Christie novel, this being one of more than 150 films or television shows based on her work, and with a somewhat stellar cast that includes Glen Close and Terrence Stamp, "Crooked House" offers up a dark and mysterious story, albeit one without much spark.

Opening with a shot of a rather large hypodermic needle, which is about to be used on the victim of the plot, we are soon introduced to spyturned-detective Charles Hayward, who has been hired by Sophia to investigate the possible murder of her grandfather. said target of the needle.

massive estate of the Leonides family and, of course, everyone is a suspect. The house must have a terrible aura about it, as everyone within is ravaged by hate, jealousy, and of course greed. As Hayward interrogates each, he really doesn't learn much except for the fact that the rich aren't happy, perhaps most especially Close's character, Lady Edith, who spends much of her day patrolling the lawns of the estate with a shotgun, trying to rid it of gophers. Perhaps she should meet Bill Murray's character from "Caddy Shack," who also had a rodent vendetta.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, we soon learn that Charles and Sophia were once lovers, which kind of puts a crimp in the film, since the backstory is rather uninvolving. It really has nothing to do with the story's end, so one might scratch one's head as to why so much time is

The editing is annoving, and the musical score is ponderous and tries to be too revealing while not be revealing at all. Although the screenplay is well written, the end product is a result of a lot of secrets and is probably not one you will know unless you've read Christie's book.

More mirth could have been added, such as that at a dinner scene, which makes for some good material for the Leonides' to take aim at each other. but all in all, this is just a rather humdrum murder mystery.

Several more of Christie's works might be on the screen soon, including another remake of "Death on the Nile" (which. to my amusement, has also been a video game) and "Witness for the Prosecution."

Let's hope that they are a bit more intriguing rather than handsomely played.

Oh. and it wasn't Colonel Mustard, it was Miss Peach in the fover, with a monkey wrench...

Rare MLK recording to be offered

Temple Beth-El and the local chapter of the NAACP are partnering to present a Black History Month program that will include listening to a rare recording of a speech made by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. not available anywhere else.

The program, "Then and Now: A Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Historic Speech," takes place from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 11, at Temple Beth-El, 3980 Sonoma Springs Ave. It includes listening to a rare recording of a speech made by Dr. King at Temple Emanuel in Worcester, Massachusetts, March 12, 1961. The moving speech has not been made available on any other known database of Dr. King's speeches.

The presentation will also include a choral presentation by the NMSU gospel choir, welcoming remarks by Temple Beth-El Rabbi Larry Karol and NAACP-Doña Ana County President Curtis Rosemond, a presentation by Temple member Frances Williams and how she came into possession of the audiotape of the speech. Dr. Jamie Bronstein will present a context for the 1961 speech, and a panel will offer comments and reaction.

An open discussion will follow. The community is invited to participate. There is no admission for the event.

New gym in town equipping for grand opening

BY MICHAEL SCANLON For the Bulletin

A new Las Cruces fitness center will open in April, taking over most of the El Paseo Road space formerly occupied by the Pro's Ranch Market grocerv store.

A California franchisee of Crunch Fitness has been busy reconfiguring the space, updating the interior and adding restrooms, showers, a classroom for a variety of fitness instruction and more.

In step with the current trend in fitness centers. Crunch Fitness will enforce a "no judgment" policy for people who pursue fitness programs in the gym, said Las Cruces general manager Keith Smith.

"That automatically implies that you belong with us," Smith said at the nowopen sales office a couple of doors south of the gvm in the strip center at El Paseo Road and Wyatt Drive.

"The hardest thing anvone can do is walk through the gym doors for the first time," Smith said. "We ask people when they come in. 'What are your goals?' If we can help people really see the results they want, they're going to stay forever."

Crunch fitness will have all the usual cardio exercise and weight-training machines, along with freeweights and other equipment. It also will offer classes in yoga, Pilates, aerobics, dance and more.

Keith Smith, general manager of the new Crunch Fitness in Las Cruces, points to the functional training area as he shows a floor plan of the new gym, which is expected to open in April. A grand opening event will be held May 5 – Cinco de Mayo.

"We revolve around classes and personal training," Smith said. "We're very relationshiporiented."

Crunch Fitness also offers online classes for those who prefer to work out at home.

There's also an area of the gym dedicated to "functional training," where gym-goers can climb stairs to a "bridge," carrying a 10-pound weight in each hand, walk across the bridge and down the stairs on the other side, loop around and do it over and over again. The idea for that and other programs is strengthen parts of the body that aren't exercised with machines.

"Everyone knows machines," Smith said. "These are the basics - just biologically what we are designed to do."

Smith worked in Los Angeles and requested the move to Las Cruces because he has enjoyed previous visits to New Mexico. "I truly love it here," Smith said. "The people are remarkable."

Crunch Fitness has locations throughout California with others scattered across Texas, Arizona, Colorado and elsewhere, he said.

The company's website for Las Cruces - www. crunch.com/locations/lascruces - lists introductory prices ranging from $9.95 a month to $29.95 a month, and those are subject to change as the opening date approaches, Smith said. As of Feb. 1, about 1,000 people had signed up.

People who sign up for membership at the introductory rates will lock those in for as long as they remain members of the gym.

Member services representative Nigel Lopez said he went to work for Crunch Fitness because he liked the company culture.

"What's cool about this is that you're really able to speak with people at the corporate level," Lopez said. "I came over here because I thought it would be a really cool place. I interviewed with the vice president."

The company signed the lease on the space in January 2017 and is just now getting close to opening.

"We take a lot of time moving into a new market because we don't want to make a mistake." Smith said.

No firm date has been set for the gym to open, but it will be sometime in April, he said.

"We were originally slated to open in May, but we are a little bit ahead of schedule," Smith said. "We're still having our grand opening on Cinco de Mayo." To him, that makes perfect sense.

"It's a holiday and the timing is perfect," he said. "It's the beginning of summer, it's a Saturday. It gave us time to come in and set everything up. This parking lot – we're going to turn it into a giant party."

New Mexico graduation rate an embarrassment

What does New Mexico and Washington, D.C. have in common? Not much you might think. Cowbovs vs. lobbvists; arrovos vs. back alleys; deserts vs. urban canyons. But one thing they have in common is being dead last in high school graduation rates at 69 percent.

That the next generation will be more prosperous than the previous is the essence of the "American Dream." Graduation from high school has been and remains an essential element in achieving this dream. New Mexico is failing its children. Our low high school graduation rate more than anything else explains why New Mexico is falling behind.

Growing wage differentials between high school graduates and drop outs have made a high school degree even more important. The real wage of high school dropouts has declined since 1970, while those of skilled workers have increased. Currently, the rate of return on a high school degree compared to dropping out is approximately 50 percent.

The dropout rate is contributing to economic inequality. There is an increase gap in the wages earned by high school graduates compared to dropouts and an increase gap between high school and college graduates. Dropouts earn less; college grads earn more. Education contributes to inequality.

One issue that isn't often fully appreciated is that the official high school graduation rate includes those who GED provides no economic value. That is, a GED is not a substitute for a high school degree in terms of earning power.

Nationally, about 8 percent of new "high school" graduates are recipients of a GED. We don't have a comparable figure for New Mexico, but we do know that a higher percentage of the New Mexico population takes the GED.

Targeted high quality early childhood programs can go a long way to help solve New Mexico's education problems. Carefully done studies of these programs find a return on investment from birth-to-five programs if 17 percent.

One of the main reasons for this high rate of return is improved high school graduation rates. These programs are effective because they supplement the environment of children from economically disadvantaged homes.

Birth-to-5 programs are expensive, but focusing on cost only misses the point. The benefits more than recoup the price. Society benefits from increased productivity. The individual children benefit from a better life and entry into the middle class.

New Mexico has the resources to fund early childhood programs, which are the permanent funds. The reluctance of the state to make these funds available escapes me. We are last in graduation rates. We know a policy that works.

Birth-to-5 programs can equalize the disadvantage imposed on children by poverty. In this way they exemplify the American Dream. opening up to all.

Arrowhead Center to send entrepreneur to global summit

By LAUREN GOLDSTEIN For the Bulletin

Arrowhead Center at New Mexico State University is sending one competitive entrepreneur to compete at the Global Agripreneurs Summit in Istanbul, Turkey, in April 2018. Arrowhead was selected as the only location in the United States to hold a competition as part of the Future Agro Challenge.

Summit participants will meet world-class investors and mentors, engage with potential customers, gain access to new market opportunities, and command media attention. Previous finalists have received investment from celebrities such as Ashton Kutcher, while others have managed to secure up to $15 million within three years of the event.

Arrowhead's exclusive hosting opportunity grew from its AgSprint accelerator program sponsored by the New Mexico Gas Company and U.S. Economic Development Administration. AgSprint ventures received five months of customized support tailored to each entrepreneurial team's unique path to business development and financial success. The program culminated in AgAssembly. a conference held at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum in August 2017, which brought together an exceptional statewide coalition in agribusiness and local talent in agricultural entrepreneurship.

To capitalize on the momentum of the AgSprint accelerator and the visibility of AgAssembly, cofounders of Future Agro Challenge contacted Ag-Sprint program director Zetdi Sloan to host a competition for entrepreneurs to compete at the global summit.

To select a summit participant. Arrowhead Center hosted a six-minute pitch contest between entrepreneur contestants from across the U.S..

The BLM awards oil and gas leases for a term of 10 years, or longer if there is production of oil and gas in paving quantities. Fifty percent of the revenue from lease sales goes to the state where the oil and gas activity is occurring, while the rest goes to the U.S. Treasury.

ACTion Programs for Animals (APA) has received $30,000 from PetSmart Charities. the largest funder of animal welfare in North America, to help fund the organization's spay and neuter efforts in Doña Ana County.

According to an APA news release, the donation will help APA work with volunteer support from the Coalition for Pets and People to spay and neuter 500 cats.

APA is an animal welfare organization seeking to reduce the number of unwanted animals impounded and euthanized at the municipal shelter. More than 3,300 animals have been rescued since May 2012, according to the release.

"Thanks to the generous funding from PetSmart Charities, we will be able to increase that number by spaying and neutering hundreds of cats," said APA Executive Director Michel Meunier.

PetSmart Charities, Inc. is a nonprofit animal welfare organization that finds homes for almost 500,000 shelter pets each vear through its in-store adoption program in all PetSmart stores across the U.S. and Puerto Rico. Tips on coping with a loss of a pet

BULLETIN REPORT

The loss of a pet can bring as much grief as the loss of some human friends and family members.

"When we lose a pet, we lose a relationship unlike any other," says Ken Dolan-Del Vecchio (www. greengateleadership. com), a family therapist and author of "The Pet Loss Companion: Healing Advice From Family Therapists Who Lead Pet Loss Groups."

"Many of us love our pets the way we love our children. But in the immediate aftermath of this unique loss, too often family members and friends say things like, 'Just get another one.' Instead of devaluing your grief over the loss of this important relationship, as others may advise, embrace your sorrow. Your grief is important, for it will lead you to healing and teach you important things about what matters most in life." Dolan-Del Vecchio offers these tips for those grieving the loss of a pet:

• Share your grief with empathetic friends. Spend time with people who understand your closeness with your pet. Be careful to avoid "get over it" types of people.

• Attend a pet loss support group. Pet loss groups provide a concentrated dose of social support.

• Keep moving. Exercise is a healer. It boosts feelings of well-being and calm, improves sleep and brightens your mood.

• Be creative. Whether vou lean toward writing. scrapbooking, ceramics, photography or making collages, creative projects may contribute to healing.

• Spend time in nature. Nothing quiets the mind and soul like a stroll through a park, nature preserve or by the seashore. "The natural world brings special benefits when your heart has been torn by grief," Dolan-Del Vecchio says. "This experience brings solace to many people."

Care-A-Vanners travel so that others feel at home

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

They're called Care-A-Vanners.

They travel in their RVs to Las Cruces and other cities to volunteer with Habitat for Humanity, building homes – 275 homes last year alone.

Some have been coming to Las Cruces almost since the Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity (MVHH) program started 30 years ago.

MVHH has built 111 homes in Las Cruces, including five now under construction on Aurora Star Court. Qualifying homeowners are selected based on economic need, ability to pay their share of the costs and willingness to help with the construction, MVHH Executive Director Maria Vasquez said.

In Las Cruces, Care-A-Vanners spend their leisure time visiting golf courses and the city's vast trail system. They attend live theatre productions. Among them:

The physical therapist

The T-shirt Kurt Newton is wearing during one of his volunteer building days in Las Cruces in January says it all: "A world where everyone has a decent place to live."

A native of Trinidad, Colorado, Newton has traveled to Las Cruces each winter since 2010 to volunteer with MVHH. The retired physical therapist has also logged thousands of air and ground miles building homes elsewhere in the U.S. and in Cambodia, Poland, Hungary, Kyrgyzstan and Zambia. He returned from his latest building project in Vietnam in December.

The one-room, 15-by-20feet, brick home he helped build in Cambodia in 2012 is centered around six pillars, with a corrugated metal roof, and has shutters – but no glass – for the windows. The house is one of about 30 percent in the country that connects to a nearby toilet. The total cost of materials for the project was $2,500.

In a Nicaraguan fishing village, Newton helped build three six-by-16-foot cement-block houses. Each has two windows, two doors and a sheetmetal roof. The woman who got one house – and pays its mortgage – was particularly thrilled with the indoor cement walls, Newton remembers, be-

Touching Truffles

Yield: 18 truffles ¹/₂ cup heavy cream 1/2-1 teaspoon cayenne powder or to heat tolerance 8 ounces good quality dark or bittersweet chocolate chopped into small pieces ¹/₄ cup unsweetened cocoa powder (for rolling)

Put the cream in a small saucepan. Add cayenne powder. Heat the cream until it comes to a simmer, and then turn off the heat. Let steep for about 15 minutes.

Put the chocolate pieces into a microwavable bowl. Heat the cream back up to a simmer. Add cream to chocolate. Let it sit for about 5 minutes, and then stir until the mixture is smooth and glossy. Note: If chocolate hasn't completely melted, heat in microwave bowl in 15 second increments until melted, stirring well each time.

Cover bowl with plastic wrap and set the bowl in the refrigerator to cool for about 30 minutes, or until chocolate and cream mixture reaches a thickened texture.

Blushing Bites

Yield: 25 bites 10 ounces bittersweet chocolate chips or coarsely chopped baking chocolate 1 (14 ounce) can sweetened condensed milk 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon ¹/₄ teaspoon ground nutmeg ¹/₄ teaspoon cayenne pepper 12 ounces white chocolate chips heart-shaped sprinkles, optional

Combine the baking chips and sweetened condensed milk in a microwave-safe bowl. Heat on high for 1 minute. Stir until the chocolate is completely melted. Heat in increments of 10 seconds if additional heating is needed. Stir in the cinnamon, nutmeg, and cavenne.

Spread the fudge mixture evenly into the bottom of an 8x8-inch pan lined with parchment paper. Refrigerate for 2 hours or until set.

Lift the parchment paper and fudge out of the pan. Slice the fudge into 1-1/2 to 2 inch pieces.

Place white chocolate in a heatproof bowl and set over a pot of barely simmering water. Stir continuously until chocolate is fully melted and smooth.

Using a fork, dip each fudge piece into melted white chocolate. Tap the fork on the side of the bowl and wipe any excess off on the rim. Place the fudge bite on parchment paper.

Top with heart-shaped sprinkles if desired. Allow fudge bites to set at least an hour before serving.

Captivating Chocolate-Chili Cookies

Yield: 18 cookies 5 ounces bittersweet chocolate, (60% cacao chips) 34 cup all-purpose flour ³⁄₄ teaspoon ground cinnamon 1/4 teaspoon baking powder ¹⁄₄ teaspoon kosher salt 1 pinch black pepper 1 pinch chili powder 1 cup granulated sugar ¹/₄ cup butter softened 1 large egg 1 teaspoon vanilla extract 1 tablespoon honev ¹/₄ cup powdered sugar, sifted Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Line a cookie sheet with parchment paper and set aside.

Place chocolate in a small microwavable glass bowl. Microwave on high in 15 second increments until melted. Allow the chocolate to cool to room temperature.

In a medium sized bowl measure ³/₄ cup of flour, then sift. Whisk together flour, cinnamon, baking powder, salt, black pepper and chili powder.

Combine sugar and softened butter in a separate medium sized bowl.

Beat with the paddle attachment at medium speed until well blended. about 1 minute. Add the egg and beat well about 30 seconds. Add cooled chocolate, vanilla, and honev: combine until just blended, scraping sides of bowl as needed, about 30 seconds.

Add flour mixture to the wet ingredients, and mix until just combined. about 30 seconds. Dough will have a stiff texture.

Measure out 2 leveled tablespoons of the dough. Add 1 chocolate chip in the center (if they are large chips) or 2 chips (if smaller), and then roll gently into a ball.

Place each cookie 2 inches apart on the baking sheet. Slightly flatten each ball to achieve a flatter cookie after baking.

Bake for 10 minutes or until almost set. Note: Cookies are done baking when the surface appears crackled. Remove from oven.

Cool, the cookies on the pan for 2 minutes or until set. Remove cookies from the pan and cool completely on a wire rack.

And howl, you cannot know the word. She never lets him sleep

And on his peak she wrecks her wrath. He reaches Heaven-bound But she has placed a crown of ice and turned Hell upside down. My parka hood is fringed with frost. It's hard to get my wind. I stand hard on the timberline feeling freshly skinned.

The sweat is drippin' down my neck. It's just twenty-two below.

I came to tell the Mountain top, "Just three more months to go."

"You're not alone," I shouted to him, "There's others just like vou

Who make their stand upon the Earth and see the battle through

The daily grind to just get by against all Earthly odds

And keep the faith though they might feel forsaken by the gods."

My words are snatched up by the wind and shatter in the air.

Winter scatters spoken broken pieces everywhere.

I strain to see the highest ridge that climbs the steep terrain That's whipped until its frothy edge is like a horse's mane.

Then disappears into the storm, the maelstrom, the shriek,

That smothers and obliterates the nearly hidden peak.

The Winter bellows out her rage. She's comin' down the face. I turn downhill and cower in the timber's tall embrace.

Her blizzard fingers flow around the trees and follow me.

I stop and squint back toward the top but white-out's all I see.

I meant to bring some small relief. I wanted just to say No man or mountain stands alone. We're all the Maker's clay.

"But I can only cringe and squeak," I whispered up the slope

But then the Mountain answered back, "Go, friend. You left me hope."

In Zambia, Newton helped build a 10-by-30foot cement-block home for a woman and her four children who'd been living in a hovel with plastic and sticks for a roof. With funding from a program that benefits African children devastated by AIDS and HIV, the total cost of the house was $1,200, Newton said.

His visit to Ho Chi Min City, Vietnam, for two weeks last December was his first time there since his service in the U.S. Army in the early 1970s, when Vietnam was still divided and the city was called Saigon.

In every country he volunteers in it's the same, he said. Parents want their kids to thrive, get an education and "do a little better than they did."

Newton already knew some Spanish and has used language CDs to help him learn rudimentary Vietnamese, Polish, Hungarian and Russian. He also pays his own expenses for each oversees trip – about $2,100 for the return to Vietnam, for example. The Air Emirates flight to Zambia cost $1,200.

"It's just amazing," said MVHH Development Officer Candice Butler. "Not only are they giving their time, they're paying their own way to help people." The UPS driver evening and weekend gatherings in the RV parking lot at MVHH headquarters on Santa Fe Street and at restaurants and other locations around town. That includes a devotional each morning before Care-A-Vanners head out to the construction site.

Michael Ash, a retired UPS driver, has been traveling to Las Cruces from Ohio to volunteer with MVHH every winter for the past seven years.

"I can't not do it," Ash said.

The personal benefits of volunteering include low blood pressure and a lack of illness and depression, he said.

"We have a real light heart because everybody's giving their best."

Ash said he "didn't know squat about anything" when he started building houses for MVHH. At the end of his first two weeks, Ash was able to "take ownership" of his work and realize his own capabilities.

Now, he tries to take new MVHH volunteers "under his wing."

"People are amazed at what they did," Ash said, remembering a mother and daughter drywalling for the first time on the house they would own.

"They were so frickin' proud of that. That's the kind of thing we see week after week. You become like

The nomads

Tony Campbell and his wife, Mary, have been Habitat volunteers for 25 years. Not only have they helped build hundreds of houses, they helped save the national Care-A-Vanners program several years ago.

The Campbells, who had bought an RV to attend their son's college athletic events, learned about the Care-A-Vanners program from a friend in Michigan.

"This could be fun," Mary told Tony.

Before long, they had caught what Tony called "infectious habititus," and became full-time, year-round Care-A-Vanners.

In late 2000, budget issues had forced Habitat for Humanity International layoffs at its Americus, Georgia, headquarters, threatening the survival of the Care-A-Vanners program.

So, the Campbells took the Care-A-Vanners program on the road, Tony Campbell said, farming out various aspects to volunteer Care-A-Vanners all over the country. Mary Campbell oversees the program's newsletter, and Tony helps with financial work.

The Campbells, who sold their Michigan home in 2001 and live year-round in their RV, have built homes in all 50 states. They spend six to eight weeks each winter in Las Cruces.

Las Cruces is "one of the best Care-A-Vanner places you could come to," Tony Campbell said.

Quieting the mind is not exclusively an 'Eastern' practice

By AVRA ELLIOTT For the Bulletin

On Tuesday evenings, with late afternoon light illuminating the small room on the corner of East Mesa and Chaparral Street, Joe Murray arranges a small mat on the floor in the middle of a circle of chairs. There is a golden bowl on a table nearby and a candle, and, less expectedly, a portrait of a priest hanging on the wall in the background.

This is where Christians gather to meditate.

A member of the World Community for Christian Mediation, Murray moved to Las Cruces recently, bringing with him the practice of Christian meditation. In December 2017 Murray began leading Christian meditation groups, meeting Tuesdays at The Bridge, and Wednesdays at Nopalito's Gallery from 5:30 to 6:20 p.m.

"Most people say this is an Eastern practice, and indeed it is," Murray said, "But what we have discovered in delving into the history of Christianity is that this practice has been around since the third century. Most spiritual writers believe this was the practice Jesus knew when he went into the mountains to pray."

Murray was a seminarian for many years, studying to become a Jesuit priest, but he left shortly before completion. Murray said he first learned what is called ignatian meditation, a practice more focused on reflect-meditation to the West. lost the s

"I think during the post-enlightenment period we began putting more emphasis on what you can feel, see and measure," Murray said. "We lost the sense of silence and stillness that's essential to prayer."

Murray began meditating on his own, and after 10 years decided this was something he should bring to others, eventually beginning a Christian meditation group at a college in Connecticut, where he lived at the time.

"Parents told me, 'You have no idea what this has meant for my child," Murray said, "It really gave me a sense of how important the student audience is."

The Las Cruces group is primarily attended by non-student members of the local Christian community, but Murray believes students and other community members would benefit as well.

"Discovering the self is crucial to discovering why we are here on Earth," Murray said. "It is how we face our personal realities and find our role in life."

Murray said the practice is the same as what you would find in a Buddhist monastery.

"We sit the same, they have silence, they have a candle. The difference is the theological underpinnings."

In Christian meditation, Murray explained, in finding the self we find God.

"This is in all the great spiritual writing," Murray said. "We can make this statement because of the Last Supper. Jesus said he was going to send his spirit to be in you. This indwelling of the Holy Spirit is at the heart and rationale of Christian mediation. We discover the self and find and touch God."

Murray begins the sessions with a short reading or recording to orient those present. He said the silence of meditation can be disconcerting initially.

"Being quiet for a half hour is foreign to us," Murray said, explaining that some might initially miss the distraction of noise.

After meditating for 20 to 30 minutes the group then discusses the practice.

"In some ways it's a support group," Murray said. "We talk about the difficulty or success of our meditating."

When asked what he hoped for the group, Murray said putting expectations on meditation can easily defeat the purpose.

"As soon as you put an objective in front of the meditation, it fails," Murray said, adding that sometimes people turn to meditation with specific health goals in mind.

Studies have shown a correlation between good health and meditation, but Murray said for himself he finds one of the greatest benefits of meditation to be how he now relates with other people.

"Something about meditation makes me open and loving," Murray said. "When we open ourselves to the self, we become capable of opening ourselves to others and seeing them in a different light."

Memorial Medical Center introduces acid reflux procedure

BULLETIN REPORT

A new procedure is being offered at Memorial Medical Center for people who suffer from chronic Gastroesophageal Reflux Disease (GERD), commonly known as acid reflux. In December, Memorial surgeon Dr. C. Aitor Macias was the first in southern New Mexico and far west Texas to perform the minimally invasive LINX® procedure.

More than 15 million Americans suffer from acid reflux, according to the American Gastroenterological Association. But many who use overthe-counter or prescription medications are not having their symptoms controlled. When left untreated, reflux disease can lead to serious complications, such as esophagitis, stricture, Barrett's esophagus and esophageal cancer.

The relatively new LINX® Reflux Management System uses a flexible band of titanium beads with magnetic cores implanted around the patient's esophagus just above the stomach. The device is approximately the diameter of a quarter. Once implanted. the flexible ring of magnets opens to allow food and liquid to pass to the stomach and then closes to prevent contents from moving back up into the esophagus. Unlike the traditional fundoplication, a surgical technique that strengthens the barrier to acid reflux when the sphincter does not function normally, LINX® does not alter the gastric anatomy. Manufactured by Torax Medical, it has been implanted in almost 10,000 patients nationally after receiving FDA approval in 2012.

"Sometimes GERD symptoms cannot be controlled by over-the-counter medications," said Dr.

Cannabinoids are beneficial for all ages

HILDA LUZ

CHAVEZ

The Good Herb

Using cannabinoids medicinally is a learning process, especially for patients who have never smoked cannabis. There are recreational users, medical patients and some who are both.

Keep in mind that medical experts say that smoking cannabis is not medicinal. Though you may get benefits, smoking anything is harmful to the lung tissue. Alas there lies the dilemma.

I am often asked by new patients, is cannabis an option for me? Do I have to smoke it? I will share some cases to help you understand that cannabinoids are effective and beneficial to patients of all ages and that you do not have to smoke it or use THC – the only cannabinoid that produces a high – if you don't want to.

One of our youngest patients is a 3-year-old boy diagnosed with seizures. He was taking anti- seizure meds, which often produced sedation, and he was unable to function. And he was still having seizures. His mother was concerned about the long-term effects of the seizures and contacted me.

The mother became his required caregiver in the NMDOH medical cannabis program. He started drinking cannabis pineapple juice made from fresh cannabis leaves (high in CBD, low in THC). The child noticed the benefits himself and asked his mother for his medicine whenever he felt a seizure coming on. He then started using Colorado hemp CBD oil (no THC). This approach was also beneficial. We collaborated with his pediatrician and were able to reduce and even completely suspend some medications. Three years later, he is thriving, no longer taking prescription meds and is seizure-free.

Another, one of our oldest patients, is an 80-yearold Vietnam vet. He had been smoking cannabis and cigarettes for years but wanted to learn how to use cannabis medicinally without smoking. He suffered from numerous conditions, such as COPD, pain and PTSD. He learned how to eat the cannabinoids, realized the benefit to his lungs and the reduction of pain. He has been able to smoke less and benefit more. His quality of life is improved.

A 68-year-old woman diagnosed with pain, insomnia and PTSD referred to us was taking six or seven Ten toddlers sit in rapt attention every Wednesday as Chris Chaput reads them a story in the cheery back corner of Tutti Bambini clothing store. Afterwards they use colored paper and crayons to make art projects. Before they go home they will choose a book of their very own to take with them.

Wonderful partnerships for children's literacy are forming all over the valley as more readers turn their own personal enjoyment of literature into action that benefits children.

Las Crucen Chris Chaput has found a beautiful way to honor her mother, 98 years old. Chris created Wednesday story time at Tutti Bambini children's clothing store because, "My mother was a single parent who struggled and gave up a lot to get me through school. I have always wanted to give back to children and the community."

A happy alliance between Chaput, Tutti Bambini and the Children's Reading Alliance enriches lives through stories and creative play. Chris and her husband Jim have built a cozy learning corner at Tutti Bambini located at 300 El Molino Blvd. There, every Wednesday at 10:45 a.m., little ones are engaged in story time and crafts activities while their parents get a 50 percent discount on purchases.

Tutti Bambini itself is needs. Income from sales and events are shared with other organizations to improve quality of life and enhanced opportunities for children in Doña Ana County. The store is stocked by donations of clothing, toys, books, stuffed animals and other furnishings. Through the careful and creative efforts of Jenny Segura and other volunteers, the shop is colorful and inviting with neatly displayed new and gently used items for sale.

There are other reasons that make the work of Tutti Bambini, Children's Reading Alliance and individual efforts of people like Chris Chaput so important.

Reading and craft projects are great for building large vocabularies, developing selfconfidence for learning as well as developing powers of mindful concentration. Reading aloud to children creates positive loving experiences that build brain health and resilience. Mindful concentration can be defined as paying attention on purpose and focusing on the present. Being mindful opens us to novelty and new information. No matter our age, or level of stress, getting lost in a book is a wonderful way to escape for a while and to practice "staying in the moment." A story engages the mind, transports the spirit, and suggests alternatives to our current problems.

Unfortunately, not all children experience enough of these gentle moments. In fact 25 percent of children are exposed to so many risk factors that their cognitive and emotional well-being can be compromised for life.

Christina Bethell, a professor in Population, Family and Reproductive Health at Johns Hopkins University, is studying the consequences of exposure to adverse childhood experiences (ACEs). Data from studies strongly suggest that an accumulation of emotional or physical neglect, abuse and household dysfunction often results in a higher levels of chronic physical and mental illness and death. According to Bethell, "Ours is a social brain, and neurons that fire together, wire together. Moreover, ACEs can impact not only early brain development but also lifelong health.

In a December 2014 Health Affairs study, my colleagues and I estimated that half of U.S. children have ACEs. Nearly a quarter have two or more. As with adult studies, our research found ACEs were linked with higher rates of health problems among kids and youth, including asthma, ADHD, depression, anxiety, obesity and autism spectrum disorders. We also found alarming negative effects on school engagement.

With intervention these effects can be mitigated. Harvard mindfulness researcher Ellen Langer says, "Wherever the mind is, the body will follow, suggesting that resilience specifically, and well-being overall, can be learned. Mindfulness plays a central role. Mindfulness a mental state achieved by focusing one's awareness on the present moment."

Books provide momentary escape from stress, can transport us into other worlds, and provide our imaginations with alternative ways of coping.

Reading and practicing mindfulness help unlock, integrate and heal embedded stress, interrupt harmful reactions to daily stress, open possibilities to rewire the brain and begin to heal the heart.

Which brings us back to the importance of the work being done by the staff and volunteers at Tutti Bambini. The money earned at the store is directed back into the community through organizations that serve families suffering the stresses of poverty in hopes of breaking the cycle for generations to come.

NMSU Rodeo Team Coach Logan Corbett competing in bareback bronc-riding professional rodeo events.

Horse sense, heart are keys to coaching NMSU Rodeo

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

"Have a good ride." That's the text message professional bareback rider Logan Corbett gets from his father before every rodeo he competes in.

It also pretty well sums up the younger Corbett's philosophy as New Mexico State University's rodeo team coach.

"My goal is to set them up for success in life," Corbett said. "I love winning, but it's not why I'm here."

A Kentucky native, Corbett "grew up traveling to rodeos" to watch his father, Hub, compete in bull riding and team roping events.

"I got on my first bull at 15," Logan Corbett said. He competed in bull, bareback and saddle bronc riding for the Tennessee High School Rodeo Association and then opted for bareback riding at Murray State University in Nashville, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees and served as assistant rodeo coach.

And, despite suffering serious injuries in two incidents at age 19 - a broken ankle, leg and wrist the first time; damage to his right eye socket and two sinus cavities and a broken nose six months later – Corbett has continued the pro rodeo circuit for the past decade.

"If you're gonna be dumb, you gotta be tough," said Corbett, now 29.

He's also been lucky.

That second round of injuries resulted from his going "out the back door" – coming off the back of his horse after his hand came loose from the reins – and being kicked in the face. He was airlifted to a nearby hospital but didn't require surgery. And, except for occasional sinus problems and a small scar, Corbett

NMSU Rodeo celebrated 75th anniversary in 2017

It was the year of the horse in 1942, according to the Chinese zodiac, and the year New Mexico State University started its first rodeo team.

The Aggie Rodeo Association operated for 60 years with a faculty member serving as team advisor before NMSU hired its first rodeo coach, Jim Dewey Brown, in 2002. Brown left to become tourism director and events manager for the City of Socorro, with Logan Corbett succeeding him in January 2016.

There are 3,500 student members annually and 137 member schools and universities in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA), organized in 1949, according to www. collegerodeo.com.

NIRA schools are divided into 11 geographic regions. NMSU is one of eight teams in the Grand Canyon region, along with Mesalands Community College in Tucumcari and Navajo Technical College in Crownpoint, New Mexico; Adams State University in Alamosa, Colorado; and, in Arizona, Central Arizona College in Coolidge, Cochise College (Douglas), Dine College (Tsaile) and the University of Arizona (Tucson).

The NMSU rodeo team is ranked No. 6 six in the nation, according to one poll.

Each region holds 10 college rodeos a year (in separate fall and spring seasons), and crowns a men's and women's champion. The top three individuals from each event in each region compete at the College National Finals Rodeo in June in Casper, Wyoming.

After the 2017 fall season, NMSU men are second and the women third in their region.

made a full recovery. "Luck is huge in rodeo," he said.

And that's not just in avoiding injuries; it can also be the deciding factor in winning events and making money.

In bronc riding, for example, if the rider draws a horse that doesn't buck (half the final score) he can't win. And a calf that doesn't move as expected can cost a roper precious seconds in a timed event like tie-down roping.

At a recent rodeo in Denver, for example, first place in team roping was worth $4,000 and came in at 4.7 seconds for the second run (the healer). The eighth-place team had a time of 5.1 seconds. In the tie-down event, first place was 6.8 seconds; eighth place was 8 seconds.

Rodeo is also "a very mental sport," Corbett said. "You have to be a tough competitor."

"Rough stock events" like bull riding and bareback and saddle bronc riding, can be particularly challenging, he said. "You're trying to stay on top of something that wants you thrown off."

There's also a lot of skill involved in roping events, he said. Riders have to learn to jump off a horse while it's still running, throw a calf (weighing about 200 pounds) or goat on its side and tie three of its legs together in under 10 seconds.

"Each event has unique challenges and difficulties," Corbett said.

Tools like goal setting and visualization can be very useful. Proper training and muscle-memory development are also crucial, because once you climb on that horse or bull, "you don't have time to think about it," he said.

students have six years from the date of their high school graduation to complete four years of National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) eligibility.

There are 60 students on the NMSU rodeo team – 35 men and 25 women. They're all ages 18-22, and 85-90 percent come with high school rodeoing experience. Some are naturally talented, Corbett said, and didn't have to work very hard to win high school rodeo events.

"It's a very different story in college."

Corbett also gets rodeo "walk-ons" with no previous riding or roping experience. Some have become his best students.

Being the NMSU rodeo coach is "my dream job," Corbett said. "There's no place I'd rather be than right here."

He sees his role not only as teacher and mentor. He and his wife, Lacey, often invite students to their house for dinner.

"The job is just to do life with people," Corbett said. That means perfecting their riding and roping techniques and helping them build confidence and develop life skills like time management and staying in shape.

And while he and his student athletes "give each other a hard time," Corbett said, "I respect them and they respect me. We're close like that."

The belt buckles rodeo riders and ropers win will rust in time, Corbett said. "Investing in other people, that legacy, that's what lasts."

"I want to invest in young men and women," he said, "and help them the ways I've been helped."

Hopefully, he added, "someone will be benefiting from something I learned the hard way."

Slowing the game is not growing the game

One of the reasons some regulars have quit playing golf, and others are reluctant to take up the game, is the complaint that golf is too slow. They're right. Golf is played at a pace far slower than it ought to be, mainly because many folks don't make it a habit to do the simple things that prevent wasting time. We can all save a few minutes per hole and perhaps half an hour a round.

The surest method for a group to not waste time golf." Regardless of who's "away," if you're ready to hit, you should go ahead and play your ball, on the CHARLIE tee or elsewhere. BLANCHARD Just be aware of Golf Doctor other players and is to play "ready

Another time-waster is looking for a "lost" ball. Most golfers assume that if one player in the group hits an errant shot into the weeds it's their obligation to assist in the search. Fine. That may be courteous, but play your shot before you wander over to help. If you think a ball will be hard to locate, hit a provisional ball.

Pre-shot routines for some golfers take longer - yawn - than a basketball game's final minute. Watching tour golf on television seems to foster that. The final round of the 2018 Farmer's Open Tournament took six hours. But recreational golfers often forget that they are not playing golf for a living. Too many practice swings. Too many club switches. Too much chit-chat. Too much time.

That goes for lining up putts. Tour players pace around the green, consult green layout booklets, mark and re-mark their balls and spend a lot of time lining up. They also have caddies. You and I don't' need to do all that; and we don't have greens books. When you get out of the cart start looking at the putt as you approach the green, not waiting until you're next to the ball. If vou can't reasonably estimate the distance at 10.30 or 50 feet, you should be back with the pro taking lessons on the practice green.

Resort courses in Arizona and Florida have roving "ambassadors" (marshals) whose mission is keeping the pace of play moving, even if it means halting a slow group and ushering a faster group through. (Incidentally online reviews of resort courses that mention slow play are a death sentence to those facilities.) We need more assertive marshals in our town. Trouble is, some patrons turn violent when confronted and warned.

One small thing that everyone might do to avoid wasting time is to get back into the cart immediately following their shot. Not toweling off your club, blabbing with your cart partner or checking your text messages. Get back into the bleeping cart and do those things after you move out of the line of sight of the group behind.

Many high-end clubs and resorts issue written instructions and cart placards about maintaining suitable pace of play. Notices appear on the cart video relative to your pace. Some pro shop staff speak to patrons about the importance of pace. Playing faster is, of course, futile if everyone else is slow. Goosing the pace of play is the quickest way to grow the game. Period.
