Fire marshal: Burn responsibly to avoid danger, fines

The Doña Ana County Fire and Emergency Services Department strongly recommends caution when doing any type of outdoor burning especially when burning for the purpose of waste disposal.

Doña Ana County's 16 volunteer fire districts have been responding to an unusually high number of uncontrolled open burns that have spread to surrounding properties and/or homes, with some of those fires resulting in the total loss of the home.

The following rules have been set in place to help constituents be safe.

The burning of vegetative materials is regulated.

"Vegetative material" means plant material, including: grass, grass clippings, leaves, conifer needles, bushes, shrubs, trees, and clippings from bushes, shrubs and trees, resulting from maintenance of yards or other private or public lands; and wood waste, clean lumber, wood and wood products, including tree stumps (whole or chipped), trees, tree limbs (whole or chipped), bark, sawdust, chips, scraps, slabs, millings and shavings, which have not been painted, pigmentstained or treated with compounds containing chromium, copper, arsenic, pentachlorophenol or creosote. RULES TO FOLLOW DURING COMMENCE-MENT OF OPEN BURNS:

Prior to commencement of open burning, Mesilla Valley Regional Dispatch Authority (Central Dispatch) shall be notified. (575) 526-0795.

Open burning of non-piled vegetative material for purposes of disposal of such material, shall not exceed 10 acres per day, or burning of piled vegetative material, including material gathered in a pit or open container, does not exceed 1,000 cubic feet of pile volume per day.

Burning shall be conducted at least three hundred feet from any occupied dwelling, workplace or place where people congregate, which is on property owned by, or under possessory control of, another person.

Burning shall begin no earlier than one hour after sunrise, and shall be extinguished no later than one hour before sunset. Burning shall be attended at all times.

Additionally, consider wetting down areas around where you will be burning to help prevent unwanted fire spread. You should also have a reliable water source, like a water hose, very nearby.

Never leave a legal burn unattended! BURNING OF THE FOLLOWING MATERIALS IS PROHIBITED:

* Natural or synthetic rubber products, including tires

* Waste oil or used oil filters

* Tar, asphalt, asphalt shingles or tar paper

* Insulated wire

* Plastic, including polyvinyl chloride ("PVC") pipe, tubing, and connectors

* Railroad ties

* Wood, wood waste or lumber which has been painted or which has been treated with preservatives containing arsenic, chromium, pentachlorophenol or creosote * Batteries

* Motor vehicle bodies or interiors

tion in Carlsbad was looking to close its doors and wanted to invest their APRIL funds in a community foundation doing similar work," said CFSNM Executive Director Terra Winter. Once the funds were transferred over to the CFSNM, nonprofit organizations interested in establishing an endowment were invited to match these funds, creating small starter endowments for those organizations.

"These endowments allow organizations and donors to invest in these funds, which in turn grows the principle and yields greater earnings for the nonprofits," Winter said. At the end of the calendar year, agencies can then choose to either receive a payout for the earnings to use for their respective organizations, or reinvest the earnings back into their endowments, further growing the principle.

"In many ways, these funds almost act as savings accounts, allowing the organizations to have access to the revenue from the earnings in perpetuity," Winter said.

At Las Cruces Utilities (LCU) a new internship program is up, running and designed to be a winwin for everyone: LCU needs well-trained people to fill job openings within the utility, and residents need good jobs. The first two interns - Errol Lockett and Brvan Eakins are onsite being trained for jobs at LCU facilities, while they take classes at Doña Ana Community College and pursue an Associate of Water Technology Degree.

It's not just LCU that supports this type of program, it's the entire city.

"We are committed to providing pathways for local youth to develop job skills that allow them to find well-paid permanent employment right here in our beautiful community," says City Manager Stuart C. Ed. "Right now, several City departments are launching internship programs that support education, on-the-iob training and job opportunities."

"This is a competitive program that awards internships to students wishing to, or who currently are, pursuing an Associate Degree in Water Technology," says Adrienne L. Widmer, P.E., water administrator. "We are encouraging local students to discover LCUIP."

In exchange for a paid education and job training, interns commit to working four to eight years with the City of Las Cruces as an operator or lab technician after graduation. The intern graduates will work at LCU in the Water, Wastewater, or Regulatory Environmental Services Sections.

"We also challenge our community business partners in our professional affiliations and associations to cultivate engaging mentorship programs to do all we can as a community to retain our local talent pool," Ed says.

Lockett feels he has gained "purpose beyond a paycheck" with the new LCU work/study internship. Eakins adds, "Many people don't have the experience or education to apply for these kinds of jobs and they can't afford to go get that training. This internship offers not only a way to get an education, but also the opportunity to enter a career immediately after."

The heat is on: Daytime temps can be hazardous

BULLETIN REPORT

Daytime temperatures are predicted to reach the triple digits Friday, June 1 (102 degrees), and remain above 100 for up to six consecutive days, through June 6. Even with a little "cooling," temperatures are expected to top out in the high 90s for the foreseeable future.

Welcome to summer, which officially is still three weeks away.

The Las Cruces Police Department reminds motorists that rising daytime temperatures can cause death or serious injury to children or pets left in an enclosed vehicle.

Research shows that the interior temperature of an enclosed vehicle can rise 19 degrees Fahrenheit after only 10 minutes in the sun. 34 degrees after 30 minutes, and 45-50 degrees in about one hour. The rapidly increasing interior temperature of a vehicle can cause injury to people and pets, even when outdoor daytime temperatures are in the 80s or low 90s.

And studies show the practice of leaving a vehicle window partially open, or "cracked," even in the shade, is of little or no help in decreasing the interior temperature.

People can be critically injured or killed when the core body temperature reaches 104 F and a body temperature of 107 F is considered lethal.

There are measures to avoid serious situations. The Las Cruces Police Department offers these safety tips.

• Do not leave pets or people (sleeping babies, children, elderly) in a vehicle - even with the windows "cracked" or down.

• Place a purse or wallet in the back seat as a reminder that your child is in the car.

• Do not leave pets in the bed of a pickup as surface temperatures can rise quickly.

• Don't let breezes or windy weather fool you. The lack of circulation inside an enclosed vehicle on a warm day, even after sunset, can be deadly.

• Avoid leaving your vehicle running and unattended simply to keep the air conditioning on, such as to run into a convenience store. The vehicle could be stolen in seconds.

 Avoid overexertion of dogs such as walking/ jogging them during the heat of the day.

• Provide proper shade and fresh water for pets.

· Always lock your car when unattended and teach children that vehicles are never to be used as play areas.

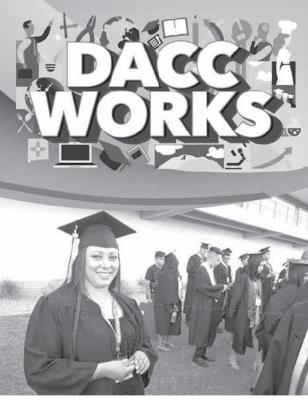

• Call 911 if you see a person or pet left unattended in an enclosed vehicle.

· Seek immediate medical attention for people or pets who have succumbed to the heat.

go vote Tuesday,

most be termed free-for-alls.

Three Doña Ana County races are intriguing.

For the District 1 county commission seat, seven people are running – five on the Democrat side and two on the Republican side. For the Democrats, the candidates are Orlando Antonio-Jimenez, Gene Alvarez, Antoinette Reyes, Lynn Ellins and Arturo Uribe. For the Republicans, it's John Zimmerman and Roberto Martinez.

In the District 5 commissioner's slot, there are four Democrats running: Oscar Vasquez Butler, Karen Trujillo, Manuel Sanchez and Dickie Apodaca. The winner will face incumbent Kim Hakes in November.

And perhaps the most fascinating race of all is the sheriff's race. Incumbent Kiki Vigil will face four challengers in the Democratic primary: Kim Stewart, Eddie Lerma, Carlos Preciado and Larry Anthony Roybal. Regardless of who wins, it sets up another interesting matchup in the November general election against former two-term sheriff Todd Garrison, who decided to throw his hat in the ring on the Republican side.

There's also a five-way race in the District Court Division 8 Judge contest, featuring Democrats Jeanne Quintero, Isabel Jerabek, Richard Jacquez, Dania Gardea and Grace B. Duran. The winner of that primary effectively becomes the judge, as no Republican candidates announced to run.

Former state Rep. Bill McCamley gave up his District 33 seat to run for State Auditor, and will face Albuquerque's Brian Colon in the Democratic primary.

Vying to fill McCamley's representative seat are Mary Martinez White, Micaela Lara Cadena and Geunevere McMahon, who will face each other on the Democratic side. The winner there will face Republican Charles Wendler in November.

The two highest offices up for grabs are the governor's office and representative for U.S. Congressional District 2.

Las Crucen Joseph Cervantes, a longtime state legislator who has served in both the state house and senate is making a strong bid for governor in the Democratic primary, where he will face Michelle Lujan Grisham and Jeff Apodaca. The winner there will have a November date against Steve Pearce, who gave up his U.S. District 2 seat to run for governor on the Republican side.

In that District 2 race, six people have declared to run, two on the Democratic side and four on the Republican side. For the Democrats, Las Crucen Xochitl Torres Small goes against L. Madeline Hildebrandt of Socorro. The four-way race in the Republican primary includes Gavin Clarkson of Las Cruces, State Rep. Yvette Herrell of Alamogordo, Monty Newman of Hobbs and Clayburn Griffin of Lovington.

Other contested primaries include County Assessor (Paul Ponce vs. Leticia Duarte Benavidez on the Democratic side); Public Regulation Commission, Dist. 5, (Democrats Steve Fischmann vs. Sandy Jones, and Republicans Ben Hall, Joseph Aaron Bizzell and Chris Mathys); State Rep., Dist. 34 (incumbent Democrat Doreen Gallegos vs. Jaime Gonzalez Castillo); State Rep. Dist 53 (Democrats Willie Madrid vs. Javier Gonzalez); Lieutenant Governor (Democrats Rick Miera, Billy G. Garrett and Howie Morales); and Commissioner of Public Lands (Democrats Stephanie Garcia Richard, Garrett O. Veneklasen and George K. Munoz).

All of these people have taken the bold step of putting themselves out there personally, professionally and financially to make our democratic process work. You have a much simpler, but equally important job: Go out and vote!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Justice requires coordination between agencies

To the editor: I am pleased to announce the following information which reflects the exceptional solidarity existing between the Third Judicial District Attorney's Office and the Office of the U.S. Attorney for the District of New Mexico to effectively address criminal conduct in Doña Ana County. On Nov. 27, 2017, defendants Daniel Allen Lowell and Trista Marie Schlaefli allegedly engaged in a crime spree which resulted in the death of Mr. J. R. Stewart, a well-respected, retired Las Cruces Police Officer.

My Office charged defendant Lowell with criminal offenses including but not limited to Vehicular Homicide, Armed Robbery and Child Abuse. Defendant Schlaefli was similarly charged.

From the inception of this case's investigation commenced by the New Mexico State Police, my Office has been working with the Las

Trust the public, BLM on monuments

Editor's note: The following letter to U.S. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke was signed by 35 New Mexico state legislators.

Dear Secretary Zinke, In May 2017, you received a letter from New Mexico state legislators during the comment period for the review of National Monuments per Executive Order 13792. That letter expressed the support of the signatories for leaving both Rio Grande del Norte and Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monuments unchanged, and outlined how treasured they are to the people of New Mexico and to all Americans. Each is deeply valued for its outstanding recreational opportunities, scientific discoveries and cultural histories.

Our previous letter also noted the enormous economic benefits outdoor recreation brings to New Mexico. Now, one year later, those numbers have only grown. 2018 studies show that outdoor recreation provides New Mexico with $9.9 billion a year in consumer spending, and is directly responsible for over 99,000 jobs in the state.

Annual voter survey continually show overwhelming support for public land protection in our state. In 2017, when asked specifically about national monuments, 82 percent of New Mexicans supported keeping them completely intact. This appears to have been an underestimate. During the comment period, your office received over 100,000 comments from New Mexicans, a higher per-capita commenting rate than any other state. 98 percent of comments on Rio Grande del Norte advocated for no changes to the monument. as did 93 percent of comments on Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks.

While your report to President Trump did not recommend boundary changes to either Rio Grande del Norte or Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks, it did recommend focusing management of those Monuments towards particular uses. We strongly oppose this recommendation. The original proclamations establishing these two monuments already broadly allow for continued existing uses including hunting, grazing, and border patrol activities; new proclamations are unnecessary and would muddy the monuments' future. The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) has now begun the public process of developing a Management Plan for Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks, and is in mid-process for developing a plan for Rio Grande del Norte. Please give these planning efforts a chance to work.

Your stated goals for Western land management have always been to listen to the public. The public has made its wishes for New Mexico's Monuments very clear, as have many business owners, religious leaders, tribes, and local elected officials. We urge you to allow the BLM to develop the Monument Management Plans as indicated by the National Environmental Policy Act, Antiquities Act, and BLM guidance, without ordering that specific outcomes appear in a final plan.

The local BLM offices, as well as the public, should be trusted to develop Monument Management Plans which protect their outstanding values, reflect the needs and wishes of the public, and address the uses outlined in the original Proclamations.

(Signed)

University, community have never been closer

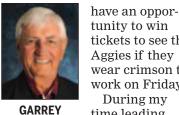

When I first came to New Mexico State University, in 1957, the campus was three miles away from Las Cruces. To get into town, you CARRUTHERS. had to take Espina Street, which Chancellor and was a dirt road back then. Over New Mexico State time, the city and University the campus have grown together, both literally and figuratively. Today, I'm happy to report the City of Las Cruces and NMSU have never been closer.

Perhaps it was most noticeable when NMSU and the city agreed to build the Conference Center on NMSU land. As a result of that. NMSU then entered into an agreement with a New Mexico hotelier to locate a hotel next to the Conference Center. In both of these enterprises, the city and NMSU worked well together to iron out differences and to move the projects ahead.

In just the past year, the city has held a number of celebrations for NMSU in the downtown area at Plaza de Las Cruces. We also saw tremendous support from the city when the Aggies played in the Arizona Bowl last December as thousands of fans made the four-hour drive to Tucson to support our team.

In another show of Aggie Pride, the university has worked with the city to create a "Caught in Crimson" program where city employees tunity to win tickets to see the Aggies if they wear crimson to work on Fridays. During my time leading NMSU, university representatives have met regularly with community members as part of our Town and Gown committee. As a result of those meetings, we've instituted a number of recommendations, including the creation of Sisbarro Community Park and bringing the city's Fourth of July celebration back to the NMSU campus this year.

These are both wonderful opportunities for the general public to come and enjoy our campus. NMSU has grown closer to the Las Cruces Public Schools and the Gadsden Independent School District.

Superintendent Greg Ewing and Superintendent Travis Dempsey have been incredibly collegial and cooperative on a number of fronts to include assisting in recruiting their students to NMSU, supporting our bond issues as we support theirs and working on graduate programs for their teachers and staff. We have always had a good relationship with our local public schools but these two superintendents have been especially helpful in working with our student affairs

Cruces Branch Office of the U.S. Attorney's Office to coordinate the most effective prosecution of the conduct attributed to defendants Lowell and Schlaefli. As the result of that investigation, a federal grand jury recently filed a nine-count indictment charging defendants Lowell and Schlaefli with federal offenses.

On May 1, 2018, both defendants were arraigned on the indictment in the United States District Court. Therefore, according to the procedures and agreements established between the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Mexico and my Office, I am dismissing pending State charges against defendants Lowell and Schlaefli in deference to the pending federal prosecution.

It is vitally important for the citizens of Doña Ana County to know that the responsible agencies of state and federal government are consistently functioning in a coordinated manner to ensure due process for those accused of crime; and timely justice for those adversely affected by criminal conduct.

Renewed faith in the process

To the editor: I've come up for air after more than a year of intensive political work – and I'm not even running for office. Now that voting has begun I can take a deep breath and look back on what seems to be a critical time in our nation's history. As with most people, my living-history perspective is purely local, and personal.

I've come to know dozens of candidates this year, many by their first names. I've seen how hard they work for the opportunity to represent us - neighbor and stranger alike. The more I've gotten to know these political hopefuls, the more I've come to admire their grit. Campaigning in New Mexico requires "road dog" determination. Doña Ana County itself is bigger than the states of Delaware and Rhode Island combined. Knocking on doors, a necessary tenet of campaigning, is rewarding but thirsty work. For candidates. their spouses, moms, and relatives of every stripe are their most valuable supporters. I've met them at countless Meet and Greet events. They are truly gracious, sometimes funny, and nearly always interesting.

I've seen rival candidates sitting elbow to elbow at cafeteria tables answering the same set of questions over and over, responding to each one ever so earnestly.

It's hard to imagine the discipline it takes to make their point in their allotted two minutes. But these exercises also seem true tests of their will, temperament, courage and intelligence. I found myself quietly rooting for one candidate, just as I winced at another's stumble. It doesn't look easy.

I've also stood alongside candidates at rallies with people in sloganeering T-shirts and jeans. We greet each other on the sidewalk holding our signs tight against the wind. At least at the local level, rallies, protests and marches are almost jovous. Politicians seem to relish these public events for the chance to congregate with likeminded people. Like high school students at a carwash, it's also a chance to be outside, yelling and waving at passing motorists.

When I took up this cause more than a year ago, I did so out of moral outrage. But in the months since, I've witnessed courage in my own countrymen and seen regained strength in the common good. Also, I've rid myself of that early righteousness through activism and elbow grease, just as I've traded an obsession with Washington for renewed hope in my own citizen politicians.

Tomorrow I'll go over and vote. In my view, we're going to be okay. Linda G. Harris

Make a difference regarding Alzheimer's To the editor:

New Mexico has 38,000 persons living with Alzheimer's disease and dementia and many of them face the challenges of living in rural and isolated communities without healthcare support or services. The fact that this happens every day is unacceptable and underscores the growing public health crisis of Alzheimer's disease in our state. Did you know that

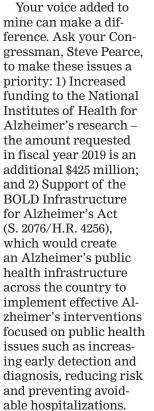

Did you know that Alzheimer disease is the most expensive disease in America at $259 billion annually and that it is the 6th leading cause of death with no cure, treatment or prevention?

I am a volunteer advocate for the Alzheimer's Association, NM Chapter because I believe that the impact of this disease affects us all in New Mexico and in the nation. The time to do something is now. Many voices are needed to let our lawmakers know that Alzheimer's is a priority.

and enrollment group in convincing their students that NMSU is the university of choice.

Additionally, NMSU has grown closer to the local chambers of commerce, Elephant Butte Irrigation District and other important institutions across our community.

Building stronger connections not only increases our sense of community, but also helps everyone achieve greater success.

We're fortunate to live in such a wonderful place and I'm very proud of the relationships we've built with the city and all of the other institutions and organizations that make up what I think is the only place to live on this planet.

The intercollegiate rocket launch competition in various categories will take place at two altitude targets: 10,000 feet and 30,000 feet. This year there will also be several non-competitive teams that will try for 100,000 feet.

On Tuesday there will be an opening ceremony and team presentations at the Las Cruces Convention Center. After that, the action moves to the Spaceport America Vertical Launch Area in Sierra County, through Saturday. An awards ceremony Saturday night wraps up the event at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

Last year more than 1,100 students and faculty consisting of 91 teams participated.

The event is designed around the Intercollegiate Rocket Engineering Competition for student rocketry teams from throughout the country and foreign countries. Students launch solid, liquid and hybrid rockets to target altitudes.

"They were drawn by the opportunity to collaborate and compete at a world-class spaceport facility and they represented the best and brightest from more than 70 higher learn-

"I was truly impressed with some of our future space industry workforce. I was also impressed with the sponsors from many big space companies. They had some very energetic recruiting efforts throughout the week."

Blue Origin Senior Vice President Robert Meyerson is this year's special guest speaker. Based in Kent, Washington, near Seattle, Blue Origin engineers and designs projects related to the development and construction of human spaceflight systems.

John Floros: NMSU 'embraced me'

Bv MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

The new president of New Mexico State University's Las Cruces campus, Dr. John Floros, leaves behind a legacy of record growth and expansion at Kansas State University.

When Floros arrived at K State in 2012, he set 12-year goals to increase student enrollment and student success in its college of agriculture, where he is the dean and director of extension.

"We have accomplished every single one of these projects in six years, not 12," Floros said during an April 23 public presentation at NMSU.

Floros' successes include record enrollment, nearly 100 percent graduate placement and a major increase in philanthropic giving. As a result, the K State ag college is consistently rated among the top five in the nation.

"My job there is done," Floros said.

Part of the reason he wanted to come to NMSU, Floros said in a May 18 phone interview, was that, like K State, NMSU is a land-grantuniversity.

"The land-grant mission was definitely an attraction to me," Floros said. "Working for a university whose mission is really to educate the masses, retrain the workforce, reach out to the communities ... that's why I'm in academia." Without land-grant universities "the U.S. "wouldn't be the superpower we are today," Floros said during a May 22 welcome reception at NMSU.

In addition to education, research and outreach, Floros said he and new NMSU Chancellor Dr. Dan Arvizu must "bring a lot of different

What is a land-grant university?

New NMSU Chancellor Dr. Dan Arvizu and NMSU-Las Cruces President-designate Dr. John Floros have made many references to NMSU being a land-grant university. What exactly does that mean?

Land-grant universities were created July 2, 1862, when President Abraham Lincoln signed the Morrill Act into law.

Sponsored by U.S. Rep. Justin Smith Morrill (1810-98), R-Vermont, the act "provided each state with 30,000 acres of federal land for each member in (that state's) congressional delegation." according to the Library of Congress (LOC). "The land was then sold by the states and the proceeds used to fund public colleges that focused on agriculture and the mechanical arts. 6Sixty-nine colleges were funded by these land grants."

"The original mission of these institutions was to teach agriculture, military tactics and the mechanic arts as well as classical studies so that members of the working classes could obtain a liberal. practical education." LOC said. "Passage of the First Morrill Act reflected a growing demand for agricultural and technical education in the United States."

To maintain their status as land-grant universities, member institutions are required to provide a number of specific programs, including disciplines together, a lot of different minds, a lot of different approaches (to meet) the challenges we're facing in society, from food to natural resources to water to energy."

Since 2008, 12 million jobs have been created in the U.S., Floros said. "99.5 percent have gone to people with higher education degrees - at least four-year degrees," he said. "Those are the numbers we need to get out to the public. It's higher education that drives this country."

The challenge has been made even greater, he said, because of reduced government funding and more competition for research dollars.

"We have to change with the times," Floros said. "We have to figure out what that change means to us. We have to be ahead of that change."

Floros said he can help NMSU "connect agriculture to arts and sciences, engineering, education" because his connections to agriculture "go back to birth."

Floros was born on a farm in Greece that he helped his parents and grandparents run. "I am aggie through and through," Floros said. "I grew up in agriculture land and I continue to love the lifestyle. I understand how important agriculture is to NMSU, to the state of New Mexico: that was one of the attractive forces to come there."

Floros earned a bachelor's of science and master's degrees in food science and technology from the Agricultural University of Athens. Greece. and a Ph.D. in the same field from the University of Georgia. Before moving to K-State, he served as professor and head of the Food Science Department at Penn State University, 2000-12. He was a professor of food process engineering and packaging at Purdue University, 1988-2000, and worked as an international food-industry consultant for more than 30 years.

Floros said he and Arvizu have complementary personalities but different backgrounds.

"I am an academic. This is the set of skills that I bring," Floros said. "I understand how a university runs on a daily basis.

"Dan brings in a huge network of connections: an ability to go out there and connect the university to all kinds of places and people. If we can really pay our cards well, we could have that university connected and running in very different ways than it has in the past, maintaining its character of land grant and Hispanic server."

Their first job, Floros said, will be listening "to the people who know the problems, the challenge first-hand before we go the podium, with his wife of 35 years, Patricia, and incoming NMSU Chancellor Dr. Dan Arvizu.

out and say, 'Here's what we want to do."

"I have never seen a campus like New Mexico State," Floros said after his first visit in April. Its unique architecture, he said, is "so appealing, friendly, humane. It pulls you into it. It's the character, the architecture, the way they impost themselves on your spirit."

Buildings on the NMSU campus, he said, "when you look at them, vou feel at home, because they're your size, they're human. That's what I felt. It's my size. I felt at home; it embraced me. "I really feel honored, I'm just beyond words to be the incoming president. I feel in awe of the responsibilities but at the same time I know it's a long history. It's a great institution."

Regents decided on chancellor/ president model

The NMSU board of regents made the decision to hire both a new chancellor and the university's first HICKS ever NMSU-Las Cruces campus president just days before naming Dr. Dan Arvizu and Dr. John Floros, respectively, to those positions.

Expectations are high for the historic partnership, which NMSU Board of Regents President Debra Hicks said is expected to increase enrollment and retention, improve student outcomes, add revenue and expand the university's research and influence.

With interviews of their five finalist candidates for chancellor completed the Friday before, regents gathered early Monday morning, May 7, to begin making the final selection. Hicks said.

Realizing that Arvizu and Floros offered NMSU "two different and distinct opportunities." Hicks said the regents decided that day to "create a partnership ... to build this university." Arvizu and Floros were hired in unanimous votes by the regents May 11. Arvizu started work May 21 and will officially become the new chancellor June 1. Floros is expected to begin his new job in mid-July.

The regents "had the fortitude to invest in this university" to make hires to reverse a 22 percent decline in enrollment over the past six years, Hicks said, and a 30 percent drop in research funding in the last nine years.

Hiring both a chancellor and an NMSU-Las Cruces campus president also mirrors best practices at universities comparable to NMSU, Hicks said.

Arvizu has a background in research and developing partnerships, she said, while Floros brings experience in research as well as the extension service, along with "university outcomes through the budget process."

LCPS calendars

District calendars for the 2018-19 school year have been posted to the LCPS website, lcps.k12. nm.us.

"Every year, we have to start the school year after the K-3 Plus program ends and we try to end the school year before Memorial Day," said Chief Academic Officer Erlinda Martinez. "These dates typically determine the bounds of our calendars."

Martinez said the 2019 spring break holiday will once again coincide with the spring break holiday for New Mexico State University. The Thanksgiving holiday will once again be a full week, as requested by Superintendent Dr. Greg Ewing. Ewing also requested that the calendar include four days where staff members participate in half-day professional development sessions.

Most federal holidays are recognized, with the exception of Veteran's Day, which is celebrated every other year, alternating with Election Day. Election Day will be celebrated during the 2018-19 school year.

The two-day event also includes a concert at 6 p.m. Friday, June 15, at Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St. Johnson is expected to attend.

"We want to expose the national NAACP president to the vast spectrum of talent which is representative of the demographics in New Mexico," county NAACP and concertplanning committee member Dr. Bobbie Green said in the news release. "We plan to highlight some excellent local performers and groups from the Southwest." "Juneteenth has been an African-American tradition in this country since 1865 when slaves were finally told that they were no longer in bondage," according to the county NAACP. "President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation two years earlier on Jan. 1, 1863, but word of the emancipation was withheld from those for whom freedom was intended until a Union officer disclosed the news on June 19, 1865. Since then, annual commemorations of the emancipation have been referred to as Juneteenth.

A native of Detroit, Johnson was elected NAACP president in October 2017. He previously served as vice chairman of the NAACP national board of directors and as president of the Mississippi State Conference NAACP. Jornada Elementary School students, staff, parents and other family members gathered at the school, 3400 Elks Drive, May 23 to celebrate another outstanding year for Jornada Elementary's Walk and Roll to School program.

Jornada Elementary again top walk-to-school program

BULLETIN REPORT

Jornada Elementary School's Walk and Roll to School program keeps running up the big numbers.

"We have had the largest walking program in the district for the past three years," said Las Cruces Public Schools Safe Routes to School (SRTS) Champion Diahn Nevares, who coordinates the program for Jornada Elementary.

More than 130 Jornada Elementary students – walking and riding bicycles and scooters - participated in the school's end-of-the-year walk and roll May 23, Nevares said. It also included 25 parents and teachers.

"We were fortunate enough to have Kona Ice of Las Cruces and Little Caesars donate to our end-of-the-year party," she said. Students got free snow cones and crazy bread coupons from Little Caesars Pizza of Las Cruces. They also got to enjoy a special award-winning performance from the Jornada razzle dazzle cheerleaders, who won first place in their division at the Springfest competition and Las Cruces High School Invite."

Nevarez said 130-150 students participate in Jornada Elementary's walk and roll to school program every Wednesday throughout the school year.

Nevarez has been a SRTS champion for LCPS for the past five years. In addition to Jornada, she coordinates the program at Alameda, Doña Ana, Fairacres, Highland, MacArthur, Monte Vista and Sonoma elementary schools.

City receives recycling bin grant

BULLETIN REPORT

The City of Las Cruces has "Bin" awarded. The City announced in a news release it is a recipient of the 2017 Coca-Cola Foundation/Keep America Beautiful Public Space Recycling Bin Grant.

The City, one of 50 organizations nationwide to receive the award, will establish a public space recycling initiative for city events, athletic fields, parks, and walking trails with bins made possible from Keep America Beautiful and the Coca-Cola Foundation.

Keep America Beautiful (KAB) has been an affiliate of the Keep Las Cruces Beautiful (KLCB) program for more than 20 years.

"The City of Las Cruces wants to make recycling as easy as possible at every opportunity, whether that's curbside, trails, parks or City events," says Parks & Recreation Director Sonya Delgado. "This award makes that possible and it's the latest benefit of our long-time partnership with KAB/COCA-COLA."

City departments collaborating on the recycling bin project are KAB, the Sustainability Office, Parks & Recreation, Las Cruces Utilities and South Central Solid Waste Authority. The bins that collect plastic bottles and aluminum cans will be strategically placed along the Triviz Multipurpose Path and Outfall Channel, and at Apodaca Park, Young Park and Veterans Memorial Park.

The bin location map is available on the City website at www. las-cruces.org/KLCB. For more information, call Keep Las Cruces Beautiful at 575-528-4506.

Internationally recognized Las Cruces artist and poet Virginia Romero has combined her love of animals and nature. solitude and creativity to make art that defies labels as it explores culture, religion and a deeply spiritual personal iournev.

A self-taught artist, Romero has created "separate bodies of work" that include retablos and bultos, large-scale acrylics, "a little sculpture," tiles, digital originals and poetry.

Romero, 66, is a native of Sheffield Lake, Ohio, And, al-

ROMERO

New Mexico during the past 35 years, "the primary inspiration for my artwork and poetry comes from growing up in the country in Ohio along the Vermilion River," Romero said in a 2015 interview with Grant Handgis for Brother Coyote Publications, which is based in Tucson. Romero remembers becoming interested in creating art at age 8 or 9, and later won school prizes for her art.

"I've always made things," she said, so becoming an artist "just organically happened. I think I've always used art as a way to express my experi-though she has ences."

> And finding ways to channel her creativity helped overcome "a bit of social anxiety."

Before taking up art full time, Romero was an awardwinning skater. The former Ginny Holley Durand won the Great Lakes Five-State Regional Roller Skating Championship in 1979 and again in 1980 and made the national finals both years. She also earned a first-degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do in 1983.

Holley moved to New Mexico in 1982 and married Alphonso Romero in 1987. They lived in Santa Fe before moving to Las Cruces in 1991. At their home on the edge of the desert, the Romeros have seen a couple of bobcats, some covotes and even a few rattlesnakes.

"In Virginia Maria Romero, we see the light, the spirit of wild nature and the underpinning of the culture that resonates from her beautiful connection to place and the beating current that nature plays in her soul." Bold Visions Conservation Executive Director Stephan Capra said in a letter of reference.

Her work is on permanent display at the Worrell Gallery in Santa Fe. and she began an exhibition in the La Placita Shopping Center at El Paso International Airport that will continue through July 27.

Her tile art was on display at NMSU's Arrowhead Center in 2007 in a collaboration she did with NMSU students who conducted a market analysis and developed a plan for Romero's business, Arte de Romero, according to a 2010 NMSU news release.

'Braceros' explores history of agriculture, labor and migration

BULLETIN REPORT

"Braceros – Melding History and Art," an exhibit of sculpture, painting and historic photographs revealing an underappreciated part of New Mexico history, opens at the Branigan Cultural Center in Las Cruces Friday, June 1.

The exhibit features sculptural works by Deming sculptor Diana LeMarbe, who learned of the Braceros program from friend and mentor Velva Hurt, whose family had first-hand experience with the program employing braceros on their farms. The sculptures are accompanied by the paintings of Las Cruces artist Jeri Desrochers, historical research by Raymond Cobos and photographs from the Smithsonian Collection.

The Braceros program ran from 1942 through 1964 to first meet the demands of agriculture and a railroad industry hit by a massive labor shortage caused by World War II. The effort brought four-and-a-halfmillion legal migrant workers to the United States from Mexico.

The Branigan will be the exhibit's third showing, following installations in Deming and Columbus. It will travel next to Western New Mexico University in Silver City,

The exhibit runs through Wednesday, Oct. 3, at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St. Contact Diana Le-Marbe at 575-544-7708 or Jeri Desrochers at jeri@ jerisstudio.com.

In Las Cruces, she has shown at Branigan Cultural Center and the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum and has created work for the new chapel at Holv Cross Retreat and the Basilica of San Albino in Mesilla.

Romero also did spoken-word performances with Karuna Warren and the New World Drummers at live shows in Las Cruces and for the group's 2012 CD "Iktushiwi: Raven Speaks."

And, Romero has just begun a collaboration with Sinuate Media of Las Cruces to promote her work through e-commerce.

"Ginny's singular artistic tal-

"But it is her commitment to advocacy on behalf of wildlife and advancement of a thriving economy driven by artists and the creative class that is critical for New Mexico as we face our many challenges."

"Virginia's artwork exemplifies the meaning to the words of her poetry, mirroring the shamanic spiritual essence of belief and behavior," Grant Handgis said in a review of her work.

Quirky Albuquerque trio brings their crystal ball

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH Las Cruces Bulletin

Albuquerque's Zoltan & the Fortune Tellers are headed to southern New Mexico to promote their new CD, "Mad as a Hatter." On Friday, June 8, the trio plays Sparky's in Hatch at 3 p.m. and the Rio Grande Theatre in Las Cruces with Alison Reynolds at 7:30. On June 9 they perform in Alamogordo, 7 p.m. at the Flickinger Center for the Arts.

Group leader and songwriter Zoltan Szekely describes the band's style as "fun, family friendly, goofy and weird," with a number of original novelty songs. Their music has been featured on the famed (or infamous) Dr. Demento's weekly radio show.

New Mexico has been Szekely's home for about 20 years and he's been making music with his band for close to a decade, he said.

"I write all the music. It's really a great joy for me."

Inspiration comes to him in bursts, sometimes from dreams, many times from his children.

"A lot of times I wake up very early," he said. "In my head is something I've been dreaming about really weird that I think that would make a great song. Sometimes my kids will say something really off the wall. I work myself up about it, get excited about an idea. I work myself into a songwriting frenzy and out pops a song."

For example, Szekley said his son, 6, and daughter, 4, are always asking for cheese.

"My son was always saying something about cheese this and cheese that and I asked him if he thought I should write a cheese song and he said yes," Szekley said. "I submitted the song to a cheese festival in Wisconsin and was invited to Wisconsin to play the song."

Other Szekley originals include "Heartless Man,"

"Old Fashioned Peepin" Tom," Pickin' Pecans" and "Duke of Fluke."

The best part of live performance is the connection with the audience, the lead singer said.

"It's kind of like an adventure. You never know what's going to happen or who you're going to meet. I really enjoy trying to connect and when my music connects with people, it's great."

Details breathe life into 'The Rivals'

REVIEW

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

Bathrobes.

I must admit, that's what struck me first in Black Box Theatre's production of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's 18thcentury classic "The Rivals."

I'm not sure if director Monte Wright or costume designer Lana Eckman came up with the idea of dressing the characters in different-colored bathrobes – the play is set in Bath. England, after all - altering each one in a unique way to fit the character. It was a brilliant idea. And it set the tone for a wonderful show. I also loved that Wright and assistant director Carvl Kotulak greeted the audience in period costume.

So many bravos for a strong cast and director – watch for a lot of "little" things like the candelabra at beginning and ending of acts – and other details that add so much to the show.

Bobby Senecal, Joseluis Solorzano, Joshua Taulbee (gold star performance here), Gorton Smith, Erin Wendorf, Karen Buerdsell, P.J. Waggaman, Doug Roby, Chris Sedillo and Virginia Ostendorf – they all did a great job.

The character of Mrs. Malaprop is one of my favorites ever and Nikka Zimmer brought the old gal to life in classic style, with lines like "Sure, if I reprehend anything in this world it is the use of my oracular tongue, and a nice derangement of epitaphs!"

Remaining performances of "The Rivals" are 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, June 1-2 and 8-9; 2:30 p.m. Sundays, June 3 and 10, and 7 p.m. Thursday, June 7.

Artist restoring sculpture at Lion's Park

Bv MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces sculptor Andrew Nagem is restoring a large piece of public art he and a group of Las Cruces students created 23 years ago at Lion's Park at the corner of Picacho Avenue and Melendres Street.

Called "The Refuge," the sculpture was made by Nagem and students from pre-school to high school, thanks to funding from the Art in Public Places Program of the Arts Division of the then-New Mexico Office (now department) of Cultural Affairs.

In addition to publicschool students, Nagem also had assistance from students at Doña Ana Community College, who welded the structure's steel frame, and NMSU engineering students, who did a structural analysis.

this year to do his second restoration of the sculpture. He plans to complete it before a June 30 deadline.

The sculpture is painted royal purple for the nearby Organ Mountains, Nagem said, and its shape reflects La Cueva rock shelter at the base of the Organs.

The sculpture includes "elements from the old Mimbres culture to the current," he said.

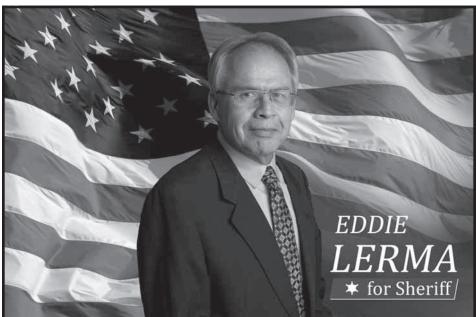

The sculpture is a cooling tower, Nagem said. Wind turbulence and openings at the top of the sculpture cool the air inside. It used to include a water mister, he said.

The original project took about two-and-ahalf years to complete, he said, finishing on May 23, 1995, when Nagem and the students created a "walk of fame" around it by signing their names and leaving their handprints and a description of the project in wet cement.

Nagem was raised on the East and West coasts. earning a bachelor's degree in sculpture and ceramics from Alfred University in Upstate New York. He was drawn to New Mexico by videos about artist Georgia O'Keeffe, he said, and moved to Las Cruces in 1989. He earned a masters in sculpting at NMSU and has been a full-time artist here ever since.

TO THE CITIZENS OF DONA ANA COUNTY

We the undersigned understand how truly important it is to ensure that the residents of Dona Ana County have a Sheriff that they can trust to provide adequate public safety services to our citizens. We understand that managing and leading a department the size of the Dona Ana County Sheriff's Department takes someone with executive level management experience and the knowledge that can only be obtained by having that level of experience. We understand that our next Sheriff must have the vision and trust of his employees and of the public to do the right thing no matter what the personal cost to him or herself, and to work well with other government entities. It is for these reasons that we endorse Sheriff's Candidate Eddie Lerma to be our next Sheriff of Dona Ana County. Eddie is the ONLY candidate that has the executive level management and the leadership experience coupled with the knowledge base to right the ship at the Sheriff's Department. It is our opinion that Eddie is the clear choice in this election to be our next Sheriff. For these reasons we ask all of you to vote for Eddie Lerma as our next Sheriff of Dona Ana County. Thank you for your consideration and support.

Event tells story of wartime NM Japanese-Americans

BULLETIN REPORT

Nisei (knee say): A person born in the United States or Canada whose parents were immigrants from Japan.

As performed by the Japanese American Citizens League Players, the New Mexico Japanese American Citizens League (NMJACL) present "Nisei, The Greatest Generation: Soldiers, Protesters and Prisoners of WW II."

The free event is 6-8 p.m. Thursday, June 7, at Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St.

The production will include "authentic stories of the American-born sons and daughters of Japanese immigrants who experienced WW II in a variety of ways: as soldiers, protesters and survivors of a mass incarceration by their government," according to an NMJACL news release.

It includes author/ director Nikki Nojima Louis' memories as a child of WW II prison camps and of her father's incarceration in Lordsburg and Santa Fe.

The multimedia performance is dedicated to Mike Miyagishima, "who witnessed and experienced history through the times portrayed," according to the release. The father of Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima, Mike Miyagishima died in March.

The performance consists of three parts:

• Soldiers: "Japanese-Americans who tried to volunteer for the military at the beginning of WW II were turned away ("We don't want Japs")," the NMJACL news release said.

"But as the need for troops increased, an all-Japanese-American fighting unit was created, the 442nd Regimental Combat Team/100th Infantry Battalion – the most highly decorated unit for its size in military history, with one of the highest casualty rates."

• Protestors: "In 1942, three young Japanese-American men, Min Yasui of Oregon, Gordon Hirabayashi of Washington, and Fred Korematsu of California, were jailed for civil disobedience. Their test cases are now landmarks of constitutional law. Other forms of protest by Japanese Americans were enacted by the so-called 'No-No Boys.'"

• Prisoners: "Approximately 120,000 persons of Japanese ancestry were unlawfully removed from their homes on the West Coast and incarcerated in 10 War Relocation Authority "family" camps. In New Mexico, Department of Justice and U.S. Army controlled "enemy alien" camps for imprisoned Japanese men who had lived in the U.S. for years, and had fathered American children, but were denied citizenship due to Asian exclusion laws."

The performance is approximately 90 minutes long and will be followed by a half-hour "talkback" among the presenters.

A great film that you see at your own risk

Bv JEFF BERG For the Bulletin

"You Were Never Really Here" is easily my favorite for 2018 so far. It is immensely likable mostly for one reason, the performance of Joaquin Phoenix as Joe, the main character, which won the Best Actor award at last year's Cannes Film Festival.

Joe is an enforcer of sorts – quiet, unassuming but emotionally empty, quite possibly due to childhood trauma shown in brief flashbacks.

He has a thick beard, thick arms and an intense dislike for those who misuse children. Essentially, he provides the death wish for those who do so, almost always off-screen, thus upping the tension of the entire film.

The picture opens with small fragments: a plastic bag over an out-of-focus face, a hammer, a roll of duct tape, a necklace with a girl's name on it. Nothing is clear, but it sets the tone for the next 80 minutes.

Suddenly, we are in Joe's house where he lives with his sickly mother. He tends to her needs and she of course has no idea what he does.

COURTESY PHOTO

Despite his profession, Joe (Joaquin Phoenix) is immensely likable.

Joe works for a private investigator to take out the miscreants that his clients want eliminated. He is smart, quick and efficient. His weapon of choice is a hammer, leaving little evidence, excellent in close quarters. It frightens everyone.

He is hired to rescue the young daughter of a state senator caught in a sex-trafficking ring. The sleaze operates out of an upper-crust condo. which Joe is soon staking out, after purchasing the tools of his trade.

But things go terribly wrong.

Joe grabs a messenger leaving the house and threatens him just enough to get the information he needs. Some customers are eliminated. but in the meantime, the senator is also dead. As is the PI. As is Joe's mother.

Soon, Joe and the girl he rescues are on the run. As he tries to fathom why they killed his mother and the PI, the story becomes more complex, but easy to follow.

Director Lynne Ramsay owes a debt of gratitude to Martin Scorsese for his work in "Taxi Driver," to Michael Winner ("Death Wish") and perhaps most of all to Luc Besson, who directed one of my favorite movies ever, "Leon the Professional.'

Ramsay's previous work is also dark and ominous and includes the nihilistic "Morvern Callar" and "We Need to Talk about Kevin." This film, for which she wrote the screenplay (based on the book by Jonathan Ames), is her best to date.

See this film at your own risk. It is dark and heavy. You won't have a second to breathe as Joe whisks through the streets of New York toward what some might consider a happy ending.

Jeff Berg has been reviewing movies for the Bulletin since 2002. He lives in Santa Fe and may be reached at nedludd76@ hotmail.com.

Joy from moments of blessing extend to clergy members

I am probably not the only clergy person who enjoys being present at landmark celebrations in people's lives.

There are some who say that clergy may be among the happi-

At celebrations of birth, the beginning of religious education, coming of age (Bar Mitzvah/Bat Mitzvah in the Jewish tradition), and at weddings, I recite, in Hebrew and English, the passage from the book of Numbers known as the One young woman at Temple Beth-El recently recited this very passage as part of her reading from the Torah (the first five books of the Bible) during her service. In the middle of the service, I, in turn, spoke those words to pass on to her the blessing of our heritage.

On May 6, I pronounced those same words for my daughter-in-law, Juli, just after she had been ordained as a rabbi during a service at Congregation Emanu-El in New York City, culminating her five vears as a student at the New York campus of Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion (HUC-JIR).

The day before Juli's ordination service. Rabbi Aaron Panken, president of HUC-JIR, suddenly and tragically died in the crash of a plane he was piloting along with an instructor. Rabbi Panken had been set to officiate at the ordination of each new cantor (trained musical clergy) and rabbi. Another faculty member was chosen to offer individual charges to each ordained.

That turn of events required everyone present to take a different view of those moments of blessing. School alumni who were present to participate in the processional for the ceremony comforted faculty, students, college staff and each other. Before and during the service, the message was conveyed that, even after the death of a beloved teacher. mentor, leader, and friend, it was still a day of celebration on which it was appropriate to feel pride and joy.

Rabbi Panken wouldn't have wanted it any other way. The blessing that he gave to his colleagues, students, and members of audiences and congregations who heard him speak, was his commitment and enthusiasm as he communicated timely lessons embodied in the ancient texts that were his specialty.

His legacy was very much evident at ordination, as was his enduring presence in the way in which he touched the lives of so many in attendance.

The blessing from the book of Numbers reminds us that it is both our privilege and our responsibility to transmit to our peers and to the next generation significant gifts from the essence of who we are.

The person who utters those words serves as a conduit through which the one who is blessed receives gifts of affirmation, security, confidence, kindness, patience, acceptance, peace and wellbeing that can endure well beyond that poignant moment.

May we remember that there are always ways in which we can give one another blessings that can accompany us along our life's path.

Rabbi Larry Karol has served as spiritual leader of Temple Beth-El (www. tbelc.org) in Las Cruces since July 2011. His writings are available at rabbilarrykarol.blogspot. com.

For an entire generation, Las Cruces youngsters have found a place to climb, jump, swing, dance, cheer, learn, compete and be ninja in a gym committed to keeping it all fun.

Gym Magic, in a 23,000-square-foot cube of a building tucked behind the Best Buy store on East Lohman Avenue, will celebrate its 25th anniversary Saturday, June 2, with a variety of family-friendly activities.

"We're going to have food trucks here, we're going to have a little petting zoo, a jumping castle, we have a 40-foot inflatable obstacle course, face painting, balloon animals, Magic 105 will be here," said Sergio Telles, director of operations and marketing at Gym Magic.

The celebration will be from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The first 50 visitors will receive a free gift, and drawings for door prizes will be held throughout the event. The gym's address is 2341 Entrada del Sol.

Dr. Nancy Bates founded Gym Magic in 1993 to offer competitive gymnastics to young athletes. Today, it offers a wide range of competitive and recreational gymnastics activities, preschool gymnastics, "Tummy Tyme" and other developmental programs for infants, toddlers, preschoolers and older children.

The gym has about 1,000 enrollments, which includes children enrolled in more than one program there. It serves more than 800 families. Some have been participating throughout childhood. When programs are in session, the school has as many as 150 children taking part in its activities.

"In the summer, we have our camps," Telles said. "We have gymnastics camps, we have dance camps. Our theme camps are popular. We offer daily and weekly options. This one's a Passport to Fun, where we're traveling the world. So all our crafts and games and activities are based on where we're going to be. We'll be in Brazil, we'll be in New Zealand, we'll be in Greece, and we'll be in China. We take weekly field trips, and we try to match our field trips up with the theme of the week. For instance, week two is Beach Blast, so we're going to go to White Sands. It's the closest thing to a beach. "Our mission statement

On June 10, the Swiss will vote on moving their economy to "Vollgeld." This referendum asks whether the Swiss banking system will be converted from a traditional fractional reserve system to a 100 percent reserve system and establish debt-free money. Many are skeptical as Vollgeld represents a radical change, but Vollgeld is a viable alternative. Fractional reserve banking involves banks lending deposits up to a given level of required reserve. For example, in the United States, banks are required to hold 10

Swiss Vollgeld proposal, Swiss banks would be required to hold 100 percent reserves, dramatically reducing banks' ability to create credit.

Proponents of the system argue that 100 percent reserve banking would dramatically reduce the potential for financial crisis. Such a requirement would eliminate bank runs as depositors would know that their deposits were fully covered.

There is also a subtler way in which Vollgeld would improve stability. Bankers, so the argument goes, tend to lend too freely in good times. exacerbating the boom, and are too tight in downturns, contributing to recessions. By requiring 100 percent reserve, bankers' ability to lend in boom times and the incentive to pull back in recession would be greatly curtailed.

The major argument against Vollgeld is that it would impede banks' ability to lend, hence, provide funding for small businesses, which, after all, are the main loan customnot be the case, however. In principal, a 100 percent reserve system can operate in the same way as a fractional reserve system. The amount of loans issued by banks would be the same. What would be different is that the reserves issued by the Swiss central bank would be much greater.

ers of banks. This need

Most countries already have 100 percent reserve banks. They are called money market mutual funds. They work by holding 100 percent reserves in the form of highly liquid short-term debt. The debt backing these is often U.S. government securities, but privately issued commercial paper is also com-

States.

Sandy Moulton, who wears multiple administrative hats at Gym Magic – including gym director – has a daughter, 12, who has been in programs there since she was 3, and a son, 9, who has been participating since he was born.

"They're both in competitive gymnastics, and they both won state titles this year, which is unusual for siblings," Moulton said, adding that their programs not only have kept her children physically fit, but they are more outgoing and confident.

"They're willing to try things even if they might fail," Moulton said. "We teach them they have to get back up and try again."

The more controversial aspect of the Vollgeld proposal is to move to "debt-free money." Traditionally, central banks increase money supply by purchasing government securities and issuing base money to pay for it. The Vollgeld proposal would have the Swiss central bank issue directly to the Swiss Confederation government, to the Cantons, or even directly to Swiss residents, perhaps in the form of a guaranteed income.

Running monetary policy this way would be different from how things are done now, but again, in principle, it can be done. The difference is that instead of creating money out of thin air to pay for assets, money would be created out of thin air to give away.

The main issue is loss of independence of the central bank as monetary policy will be more about funding governments and checks for families than about stable prices and low unemployment. How the political economy of this would work out is uncertain.

Gym Magic's educational programs, called Ashley's Garden Preschool, include statefunded pre-kindergarten and early pre-K classes that are free for eligible families.

"We're a 5-Star Preschool," Telles said, "and it's not that easy to become a 5-Star. It's an amazing program."

The gym currently is in the early planning stages for an expansion that would add another administrative offices. Gym Magic has 50 to 60 full-time and part-time employees.

The main gym occupies 10,000 square feet of the building and features two Olympic-sized spring floors, a 30-foot in-ground tumble track and an inground foam pit, among other things.

"Everything here is Olympic-standard quality equipment," Telles said.

Gym Magic's competitive gymnastics team brought home 17 state championships in the past year. Despite the success, the gym does not press its students to pursue highlevel competitions, like the Olympic Games.

"What I don't think will allow for that to happen is the ideology here," Telles said. "Nancy is really into just rec-based fun, playbased things. "We lose a lot of kids

New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez announced this week that Corrugated Synergies International (CSI) is expanding to Santa Teresa, creating 120 new manufacturing jobs. The company will invest more than $31 million in infrastructure, production equipment, and the renovation of their new facility.

CSI, founded in 1982, is headquartered in Renton. Washington. and is an innovative leader in sheet feeding for the corrugated cardboard industry.

In November 2017, Martinez and staff members from the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance and the New Mexico

Partnership visited CSI's corporate headquarters to discuss the benefits of expanding to New Mexico.

"We are proud to be making a long-term investment in New Mexico." said John Perullo CEO of CSI. "New Mexico's business-friendly climate made the decision to come to New Mexico an easy one. The governor's visit to our corporate headquarters in the Pacific Northwest underscored the state's commitment to welcome us."

"MVEDA is excited to welcome Corrugated Synergies to Doña Ana County," said Davin Lopez, President/CEO of MVEDA.

"Their choice to invest in the region and create jobs is not only a testament to the friendly business policies that have been put in place in New Mexico but also provides further evidence that the Santa Teresa area is now recognized as a premier location for manufacturing and international trade in the United States."

"CSI is exactly the type of value-added manufacturing operation that we want in Santa Teresa," said Jerry Pacheco, President of the Border Industrial Association. "It will help increase New Mexico's exports to Mexico, become a supplier to our existing industrial base, and provide good-paying jobs for New Mexicans."

Potential tasks include structural design. foundation design. roadway and parking lot design, site development of underground utilities, computer network analysis, water and wastewater design, drainage and hydrological studies, and expert witness services. SMA's team includes Vigil and Associates of Albuquerque and Las Cruces for architectural design, and Bath Engineering, with offices in Texas and New Mexico, for mechanical, electrical and plumbing design.

Karl E. Tonander will serve as SMA's principal officer on the BPA.

"Our Las Cruces office has been on the doorstep of NASA and White Sands for more than 20 years and we have been privileged to provide a variety of services in the past," Tonander said. # Prominent oil and gas industry leader visits

By ANGEL MENDEZ

For the Bulletin

From oil rig roughneck to president and CEO of Panther Energy Company II, LLC, Berry Mullennix credits his time at NMSU for growing his entrepreneurial spirit. Mullennix recently shared his story with dozens of students in the College of Business as well as those pursuing their own businesses and inventions in partnership with the Arrowhead Center. Mullennix started flipping burgers at age 13 – a characteristic of hard work that carried on while he attended NMSU to pursue a business administration degree. "I struggled," he said. "My Dad passed away when I was 19. I slept in my car because I couldn't rent a room. I could barely afford the $800 tuition. Let's just say, I ate a lot of ramen noodles." Eventually, his part-time job to pay for college, driving to the San Juan Basin along the Colorado and New Mexico border and working as a roughneck drilling holes every weekend, became priority. Yet, his drive to start a business never faded. A few years later, Mullennix's first company, a local construction and remodeling business in Dallas, was just over a year old before a European corporation purchased it from him. That's when Mullennix re-entered the oil and gas industry, starting and selling four exploration and production companies during the decades that followed. Today, Panther Energy Company out of Oklahoma is a leading oil and gas company, specializing in the horizontal exploration of unconventional zones as well as in developing conventional reserves of both oil and gas. "Mv life is easy now." he said. "I use the time I have as an opportunity to help students, the nation and the energy industry by giving back." Students at Arrowhead Center showed curiosity in the challenges the oil and gas industry face, specifically toward the negative perception of fossil fuels and the environment.

"We will be using fossil fuels for a long time," Mullennix said. "We use it for trade, we use it for power – everything. Right now, the most promising alternative hasn't been invented yet. In fact, we should be pouring money into universities like this and students like you to find that replacement." A few students shared their business models and prototypes, including a 3D printing cast company and an aerial imaging system.

"We could've used you 30 years ago," Mullennix told them after presenting their ideas. "My advice is that you keep thinking spatially. Keep your options open, be tenacious and remember that luck looks a lot like hard work." Mullennix hadn't been back on campus since 1983 but was eager to visit and share his experiences when invited by the NMSU Foundation. Mul-

City takes major steps on historic preservation

Bv MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

Funding for its first-ever historic preservation coordinator is in next year's proposed city budget and Las Cruces could soon join a handful of other New Mexico communities with a historic preservation ordinance and commission in place.

The city consolidated several similarly missioned groups when it created an ad hoc committee on historic preservation (CHP) in August 2016, said Committee Chair Beth O'Leary, PhD, a retired New Mexico State University anthropology professor.

Hopefully, she said, the next step will be city council action this summer to approve an ordinance to guide historic preservation, create a commission and open the door to grants, tax credits and other benefits.

The committee is working on a draft ordinance.

O'LEARY

Historic and Mesilla Park Historic districts) and other significant sites.

O'Learv is hopeful the ordinance will be in place before a new law takes effect Sept. 1, 2018 that allows cell phone devices to be placed in public rights of way. The law permits design measures that comply with standards set by historic districts, she said, but the historic preservation city ordinance would be a crucial element.

The ordinance will include an inventory of local historic sites, both inside and outside designated districts and the city limits, O'Leary said, such as the Armijo House. Amador Hotel, Phillips Chapel, COAS bookstore, Rio Grande Theatre, Las Cruces Community Theatre, the Las Cruces railroad depot. the ruins of a tuberculosis sanatorium site at Dripping Springs Natural Area, Chope's in La Mesa and more.

"You have to know what you have," she said. "That's what historic preservation does."

Other sites like the John O. Miller House (aka the Pink House) located near NMSU, the Phillips Chapel parish hall, St. Genevieve's Catholic Church and historic buildings designed by El Paso architect Henry C. Trost were lost to urban renewal and other development before their historic status could be established. she said.

O'Leary said her committee is modeling the draft historic preservation ordinance on best practices of other New Mexico cities. Albuquerque, for example, formed the Landmarks

Commission in 1977 after the Landmarks and Urban Conservation Ordinance was adopted by the city council, according to www.cabq.gov. The commission "provides guidance for development in historic districts and on sites and structures that have been designated as City landmarks."

In addition to protecting community landmarks. historic preservation has important economic benefits, O'Leary said. Visitors come to communities with historic buildings and designated districts because they want to get the feeling of being in that area at that time, she said.

"Authenticity is critical whenever heritage or history is involved. A community's cultural, historic and natural resources are valuable and often irreplaceable."

In addition to O'Leary.

Me an' Flynt can't thank you guys enough for letting us pick up every one of the bills down at the cafe. It never occurred to us to order steak for every meal. Thanks for the tip.

Remember when we were sitting in that bank president's office and you were telling how all the smart bankers out west were calling in their unstable cow notes? Well sir, you won't believe this but that banker thought that was such a good idea that he's doing the exact same thing here. By not having any cows to feed or interest to pay there's no telling how much money we'll save this year.

And Baxter, I don't want you worrying about backing into the carport and knocking it down. In the first place, it's hard to stop any type of vehicle going 55 mph in reverse and secondly, as you remember, Beverly only had that one big gash over her eye when we lifted the roof off her.

We were sure sorry to see vou go but since our livestock was about depleted and a good portion of our standing structures leveled I guess it was as good a time as any. Oh, by the way, the folks from the car rental place came by and picked up the Lincoln and were kind enough to set us up on a monthly payment plan until the $6300 in mileage and damages were paid off.

HERITAGE

Taylor and instructor Pat Taylor began working with NMSU students in the DACC Adobe Restoration class to restore the adobe chapel, according to an NMSU News Center story written by Susan Prosoco.

More than 50 DACC students participated in the project during three semesters, said David Chavez, who taught one of the classes and is vice chair of the city's ad hoc committee on historic preservation.

All told, Chavez said, preservation on the chapel took about five years and was completed in 2013. Chavez and fellow committee members Sandra Marshall and Beth O'Leary (chair) were part of the group that led preservation efforts, he said, which relied entirely on local volunteers and private fundraising.

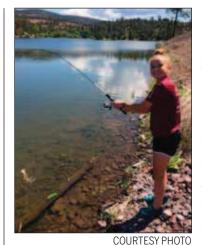

The group also included the late professor, teacher and Las Cruces native Clarence Fielder (1927-2015). In 2005, Fielder received an award from the New Mexico Historic Preservation Division for his contributions as a New Mexico historian "sharing the little-known history of African Americans in New Mexico" and for preservation of Phillips Chapel, according to a 2015 NMSU News Center story by Minerva Baumann.

The chapel served as Las Cruces' first segregated school, from 1924 until the U.S. Supreme Court's 1954 landmark Brown v. Board of Education ruling that separate public schools for black and white students was unconstitutional. NMSU's first black graduate, Clara Belle Williams (1885-1994) was the school's first teacher, O'Leary said.

The chapel was named for the Rev. Charles Henry Phillips (1858-1951), first presiding bishop of the Colored Episcopal Methodist Church. (Founded in 1970, the church changed its named to Christian Episcopal Methodist in the 1954.) Phillips Changl's nomi

Phillips Chapel's nomination for NRHP designation was prepared by Terry Moody, then a student of O'Leary's in the NMSU Department of Anthropology. Another O'Leary student, Norma Hartell, prepared the 2014 application that got Chope's Town Café and Bar - the oldest extant Mexican restaurant in New Mexico - in La Mesa on the NRHP. Both sites are also on the State Register of Historic Places.

THE CAT'S MEOW Cat ownership comes with healthy benefits

By EILEEN WHITACRE For the Bulletin

Pring good 1

Bring good health and happiness to yourself and your family by sharing your home with a cat. A list of the many health benefits of kitty adoption can be found at one of my favorite websites, PETMD. You might have a family member or friend that is suffering from depression, isolation or loneliness. By sharing their home with a cat, many of these concerns can be eased. The activities of feeding and brushing a cat can give a depressed or lonely person a sense of purpose. Spirits can be lifted when you play with the resident feline by throwing a foam ball or a string of yard. A purring lap cat can decrease anxiety, lower blood pressure and lift the mood.

Just knowing that your kitty friend is waiting for you at the end of the day can be comforting and give you something to look forward to. Do yourself or a loved one tremendous good by opening your heart and home to the wonderful world of cats.

BULLETIN REPORT

Rita, the Cat's Meow poster kitten, is now 1 year old. In celebration of her birthday and the recent designation of the Cat's Meow Adoption and Resource Center as a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization, "Bellissimi Gattinni (Beautiful Kitten)," the organization's lasagna fundraiser, will return 6-10 p.m. Saturday, July 28, at The Cat's Meow, 2211 N. Bellissimi Gattinni iII will celebrate all things feline in a sumptuous and rich evening of food, art, and music benefiting The Cat's Meow, Las Cruces' only feline adoption and resource center.

Last year, more than 200 people attended to the event, which serves lasagna, Italian salad, Italian sodas and dessert served up by area restaurants and vendors.

The public is invited to bring a homemade lasagna to donate for the dinner. Donors get in for free. One of last year's winners was a wild mushroom wonton lasagna. Prizes will be awarded for best lasagna in various categories including traditional, vegetarian, vegan and your mama's special. Lasagna judges will be on hand for tastings.

The evening will feature entertainment and a Cattastic Silent Auction. Silent auction donations are being collected now and should be taken to Casa Camino Real Bookstore, 314 S. Tornillo St.

The evening will be held al fresco in a climatecontrolled tent. Allergic to cats? Not a problem. Cats are housed in a nearby facility. Tickets cost $15 per person or two for $25.

Money raised will contribute toward the purchase of a building, adding an office and resource/ meeting center where the organization can feature informational workshops like "Kittens 101: How to care for a newborn cat," as well as "Crossing the Rainbow Bridge: How to Respect and Care for An Elderly Cat."

A volunteer meeting will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 2, at Casa Camino Real. The meeting is open to anyone who would like to volunteer.

For information or to get involved, call The Cat's Meow at 575-640-0011 or Casa Camino Real at 575-523-3988.

Project serves developmentally disabled in Las Cruces

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

"We were invited to do something non-traditional," said Kay Lilley about the start of a Las Cruces organization that calls itself a grassroots endeavor to build community for young adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities (DD) like autism, cerebral palsy and Down syndrome.

Beloved Community was created in 2013 after state Sen. Bill Soules, D-Doña Ana, introduced state Senate Memorial 20, which created a task force and generated state funding for a demonstration project to serve community residents with DD.

Of an estimated 6,000 people with DD who are awaiting services statewide, there are about 200, ages 17-25 in Doña Ana County, Lilley said. Beloved Community works with about 10 clients on a regular basis.

Lilley, an inclusive community organizer for Beloved Community, and a small group of volunteers put together the program with no model to guide them except the traditional service system, which she said didn't work well.

"We didn't presume anything about what was important to people," said Lilley, who had previous experience as a special services teacher. "We had learning conversations with young people and their families. The whole project really unfolded in that way."

Instead of focusing on what its clients couldn't or wouldn't do, they looked at what they were doing and what they wanted to try, Lilley said.

"(Young clients) had no vision for the future beyond high school graduation," she said. "Now they actually see a future. Everybody thought about and talked about their hopes and dreams and goals."

Beloved Community's contract for services began in January 2015. State funding lasted for 3.5 years before ending last July. Since then, Border Servant Corps (BSC) volunteer Meg Brauchmann was sponsored as a community organizer. Lilley continued working as a volunteer for several months after state funding stopped and now receives a small stipend.

Beloved Community has an incredible network in the community, said Brauchmann, of Baltimore, Maryland. She said she likely will stay for a while even after her contract with BSC, a local nonprofit, ends in July. Another BSC volunteer is already lined up to join Beloved Community this summer.

"The community is invested in this work," Lilley said. "They seem to understand that this is about doing what's right for our fellow community members." Beloved Community, she said, is not a service provider project, but rather a community building project.

One of its clients, Randi, a young woman with cerebral palsy, has become involved in the theatre workshops the group has partnered with the NMSU Theatre Arts Department to create, Brauchmann said.

"Beloved Community drew her out of her shell," she said.

Randi has participated when volunteers help distribute food at the Henry

The Developmental Disabilities Supports Division (DDSD) of the New Mexico Department of Health oversees three home and communitybased Medicaid waiver programs: developmental disabilities, medically fragile and Mi Via (self-directed) waiver. The division's intake and eligibility bureau manage the central registry for individuals waiting for services.

DDSD's mission is to "effectively administer a system of person-centered community supports and services that promotes positive outcomes for all stakeholders with a primary focus on assisting individuals with developmental disabilities and their families to exercise their right to make choices, grow and contribute to their community."

They helped collect information on downtown art for a new Visit Las Cruces app, helped with an occupancy study about the inclusive tional care by choosing home and communitybased services waivers, according to Beloved Community. That saves the state hundreds of thousands of dollars, but for some on the list, the wait for those services exceeds 10 years.

Beloved Community said 3,700 people (56 percent of those on the waiting list) "have applications marked 'complete' and are simply awaiting allocation; another 28 percent have registered and are in the process of determining eligibility or backlogged; 11 percent are pending (including children under age 8 who do not yet have documentation required for eligibility) and five percent are on hold."

Health secretary promotes good personal choices

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

The challenge of making New Mexicans healthier touches on a wide range of personal and government issues, including nutrition, exercise, education and, in some cases, poverty.

"It isn't one thing," New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) Secretary Lynn Gallagher said during a recent interview in her Las Cruces office.

Gallagher became assistant secretary of NMDOH in 2013 and was appointed secretary by Gov. Susana Martinez in 2016. Although she's always maintained a presence outside Santa Fe, Gallagher has spent more time in Las Cruces since January, when her husband, Patrick Gallagher, was named the city's new said,

Viewing

the state,

has more opportunities for access to health care than the south because of its greater population density and fewer gaps in broadband connectivity.

But, even though finding a "nexus of care," including a complete trauma system, is less likely here, southern New Mexico has far more exercise opportunities, Gallagher said, and a wealth of locally grown foods.

Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine (BCOM) at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces is helping to redefine what access to health care means in a rural state, Gallagher said, including remote diagnosis and treatment. Tele-medicine has the capacity to give a rural doctor of osteopathy the skills to treat a patient with Parkinson's disease or a carcinoma, she said.

Gallagher said NMDOH has identified four key priority areas to improve health care across the state: obesity, diabetes, substance misuse and teen births.

She also is working to expand farmers markets to increase New Mexicans' access to fresh fruits and vegetables.

She also wants to see an improvement in access to dental care, especially in the state's rural areas.

Personal choices are always an important part of good health, Gallagher said.

"We get into a rut or we create a process: 'This is who I am. This is what I do,'" she said. It takes 20 days to create a bad habit, Gallagher said, but it takes 30 days to break it, and that includes eating habits.

Lifestyle choices are also important for children, Gallagher said, and it is a focus of NMDOH's Healthy Kids New Mexico program.

"New Mexico has every single thing that it takes to be the healthiest state in the nation," she said.

By MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

The City of Las Cruces has received a $40,000 grant from the New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) to continue the department's Healthy Kids Healthy Communities initiative in Doña Ana County.

The purpose of the grant is to "expand opportunities for active living for children and adults where they live, learn and play," according to a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between NMDOH and the city that was approved in March. "Active living is a lifestyle choice that helps prevent obesity."

The grant will continue to implement "a wayfinding signage system for local parks and trails. monitor and increase use of the trail system, pilot an Android smart-phone application for the parks system and increase the city's status as a Bicycle Friendly Community," according to city documents.

Most of the funds will be spent in the city's East Trail System, which includes Sage Crest, Dam Trail, Desert Trails and Veterans Memorial Park. according to the MOU.

The smart phone app will be implemented to "promote citywide usage of physical activity spaces like trails, swimming pools, splash pads, bike parks and ball fields.

The grant also should help the city's Bicycle Friendly Community Task Force and partner organizations apply for a League of American Bicvclists bicvcle friendly community silver award designation in 2018, the MOU said.

The grant requires no match from the city. For information, visit nmhealth.org.

Retiring? You have a choice to make on Medicare

By BOB MOOS For the Bulletin

When you retire and qualify for Medicare at 65, you'll need to decide how you'd like to receive your health care benefits.

Because you'll be new to Medicare, you may not realize you have two options.

One is to join the government's fee-for-service program that's existed for 53 years. The other is to buy a Medicare Advantage plan from a private insurer.

The choice may seem bewildering at first, so let's go over each option.

With traditional fee-forservice coverage, you may go to any doctor, hospital or other provider that accepts Medicare. Medicare pays the provider a fee for the service you receive. Once you meet your annual deductible, Medicare typically covers 80 percent of the cost for your care.

You have a few choices for covering the other 20 percent:

You may use your retiree health plan from your former employer, if you're retired and have such a policy. Some retiree plans may cost less or provide more benefits than other supplemental coverage.

You may qualify for Medicaid, if you have limited income and savings. Besides helping with your out-of-pocket costs like deductibles and co-insurance, Medicaid may pay for your monthly Medicare premiums.

If neither of those applies, you may buy a "Medigap" policy from a private insurer to cover what Medicare does not. There are 10 kinds of Medigap plans, with different benefits, so you'll need to decide which is best for you.

If you choose the traditional fee-for-service program, you'll probably also want to buy a prescription drug plan to go with your other coverage.

Traditional Medicare remains the favorite among people wanting the broadest possible access to doctors, hospitals and other providers. When coupled with a supplemental plan, it also makes your health care costs relatively predictable.

Still, 33 percent of all Medicare beneficiaries - including 33 percent of New Mexico residents with Medicare — now prefer to get their health care benefits through a private insurer. The number of people buying private Medi-

With Medicare Advantage, insurance companies contract with the government to provide care. Every private plan must cover all the benefits that traditional Medicare covers. In some cases. Medicare Advantage plans may offer extra benefits, like routine hearing or vision care.

Many plans charge a premium on top of the amount vou'll pay each month for Medicare's Part B medical insurance, but there's no need to buy a supplemental Medigap policy. Likewise, most Medicare Advantage plans include drug coverage with their other benefits.

ibles and co-payments will vary from one Medicare Advantage plan to another.

But all plans, by law, must have annual limits on their overall out-of-pocket costs. Unlike the traditional feefor-service program, most Medicare Advantage plans require you to go to doctors and hospitals within their network of providers or pay more for getting care outside the network.

Still, the private health plans have been especially popular among people with low to moderate incomes. They provide relatively affordable supplemental coverage, with lower premiums than those for Medigap policies.

So, which is better — the traditional fee-for-service coverage or a private Medicare Advantage plan? That depends on your own circumstances and preferences. What's best for one person may not work as well for someone else.

To find out more about your options, you can visit www.medicare.gov and browse through the "Medicare and You" handbook. The website will also give you detailed information about the Medigap and Medicare Advantage policies available in your area.

Becoming informed will help you select the health care option that best fits your needs. It will also help you avoid mistakes that may cost you money.

The New Mexico State baseball team joined their softball counterparts in winning the 2018 Western Athletic Conference Tournament by toughing out a 4-3 victory over Sacramento State May 27 in Mesa, Arizona. The Aggies took two of three from Sac State in the tournament.

Unlike the women, who have been accustomed to winning the WAC, the men won their first-ever WAC Tournament. The Aggies play in the Lubbock Regional of the 2018 Division I Baseball Championship, opening the double-elimination format against host No. 9 Texas Tech at noon Friday, June 1, on Dan Law Field at Rip Griffin Park. In Saturday's second game they face either Kent State or Louisville.

The Red Raiders won both regular-season games against the Aggies, 12-0 and 2-1.

North-South all-star game hits Field of Dreams

BULLETIN REPORT

The 43rd Annual Bob Ogas North-South All-Star Baseball Classic plays out at the Field of Dreams in Las Cruces Friday-Saturday, June 8-9. The series features top high school baseball players from throughout the state, providing a final venue to showcase their talents before junior college, university and professional scouts.

The New Mexico Baseball Coaches Association selects the All-Stars through a series of committees. The final selection is made on Thursday night during the State Baseball Tournament. Numerous past ballplayers have gone on to distinction in college or professional play.

The North leads the series, 22-20, though the South has won four of the last five.

The tournament was born in 1976 after three years of discussions between Bob Ogas, then a coach at Mayfield High School, and Al Sutton, a coach at Highland High School in Albuquerque. They obtained an endorsement from the New Mexico High School Coaches Association (NMHSCA) and the New Mexico Activities Association (NMAA). A Hobbs radio station offered to sponsor the event, but the NMHSCA and NMAA required a not-forprofit sponsor.

The Optimist Club of Las Cruces stepped up to the plate, offering to sponsor the event without soliciting money from either the NMHSCA or the NMAA. The club agreed to donate surplus funds to the Sam Stratton Scholarship Fund and continues to donate $300 each year to the fund.

In 2013, the Coaches Association voted to rename the series in tribute to founder Ogas. Since that time the series has been called the "Bob Ogas North-South All-Star Baseball Classic."

The series has grown through the years. Optimist Club members once put up players in their homes. Eventually, arrangements were made to house players in NMSU dormitories and more recently at the Hampton Inn.

The schedule

• Thursday, June 7, players and coaches arrive in Las Cruces and will be housed at the Hampton Inn. The Optimist Club of Las Cruces hosts a barbecue for the players, coaches and the families of Optimist Club members.

• Friday, players have their meals at the Golden Corral. Each team holds a practice session and team photos at the Field of Dreams, after which they return to the hotel to prepare for the opening game of the series. Gates open at 6 p.m. for Game 1 of the best-of-three series, which begins at 7:30.

• Saturday, players, parents and coaches have brunch at the Las Cruces Convention Center. Gates open at 11 a.m. for the start of a doubleheader beginning at noon, with the second game starting around 3 p.m.

Junior league helping to grow golf

The PGA of America wants to "grow the game" and now they're doing it right – with kids.

It's called PGA jr.league, for aspiring young golfers ages 13 and under. Introduced in 2012 as golf's first recreational team format for kids, the program has mushroomed nationally to 42,000 boys and girls playing on 3,400 jr.league teams. Thanks to the 2,300 PGA and LPGA professionals captaining PGA jr.league teams, more kids are golfing, says PGA President Paul Levy.

In Las Cruces there are three PGA jr.league programs, the largest of which is at Red Hawk Golf Club (575-373-8100). In 2017 Red Hawk's jr.league started with seven players. It has grown to 74 players, with expectations for more. The Red Hawk program is the largest in the PGA Sun Country Section encompassing all of New Mexico and Far West Texas including El Paso. A regular season of team play consists of 12 teams competing in a two-person scramble format along with developmental skills competition such as drive, chip and putt. Local sponsors include PGA Sun Country Section, Jim Bob Lack, Burger Time, The Game and Optimist Club.

Two other jr.league programs are at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course (575-521-1818) and NMSU Golf Course (575-646-2457).

This whole concept began when two gentlemen were watching the baseball Little League World Series seven years ago and thought they could do that in golf. The idea so partner, and Hiteist, Carlaway, TaylorMade, Ping and Cobra/Puma as "supporters." Four tour professionals are "ambassadors": Rory McIllroy, Michelle Wie, Rickie Fowler and Lexi Thompson.

Uniquely, PGA jr.league is captained by PGA and LPGA professionals rather than by parent volunteers. With their expert instruction and experience, captains create a supportive environment for boys and girls to learn the game of golf as well as core values of the sport; the value of lessons and practice; that golf that golf is social and that it's not a failure to miss shots.

The scramble format greatly reduces the pressure on individual players. Boys and girls often play on co-ed teams, creating an inclusive environment that kids of all skill levels can enjoy. While the cost varies by facility, registration includes team jerseys and goodie bag. One happy parent said, "Now my daughter is getting her friends into golf."

There are two types of scholarships – military and financial need – available to those parents who qualify and apply through their local program. With a Dick's Sporting Goods Sports Matter Foundation grant, in partnership with PGA REACH, nearly 400 under-resourced youth were assisted in 2017.

Nicole Fuchs, a Program Manager at Families & Youth, Inc., has recruited five kids for the PGA jr.league at Red Hawk, recognizing that the program "offers an opportunity to learn a new sport and be exposed to an experience where they can develop their personal values and be part of something." Nicole reports that two of the FYI youth come from a situation involving homelessness and domestic violence. "These two sisters are especially excited to be involved in the golf program, and they are ready to enrich their lives."
