DASO unveils new Batmobile

Deputies, civilian staff, members of the media and Doña Ana County residents got the first glimpse of the newest tool against drunk driving in Doña Ana County last Wednesday morning – a state-of-the-art mobile DWI vehicle that will be used at checkpoints and saturation patrols starting as early as December.

The 2018 Peterbilt, fabricated into a mobile DWI processing command station by LDV Specialty Vehicles in Wisconsin, was purchased through a grant from the New Mexico Department of Transportation.

New Mexico Governor Susana Martinez addressed a crowd of about 75 people at the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department on Sept. 26.

"No more excuses," Gov. Martinez remarked. "That's our new motto in New Mexico to ensure our roads are safe from people who choose to get behind the wheel drunk."

"This vehicle will certainly help us do that," said Sgt. Dason Allen, who first began the grant process to acquire the truck in 2017. "Having a sophisticated mobile command station like this one at our checkpoints and saturation patrols will reduce the time it takes to process drunk drivers on their way to jail."

"We now have another tool in the box to keep our streets safe," added Doña Ana County Sheriff Enrique Vigil. "And this department will put it to good use."

The vehicle features 10 holding cells, two breathalyzer machines, six workstations for deputies to plug in laptops and an onboard lavatory.

City hopes color will attract more bike riders

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

The bike racks that were installed when Las Cruces City Hall was built in 2010 just got a major upgrade.

Thanks to a project of the City Art Board, the 10 formerly “drab gray/brown” bike racks have been repainted in vibrant colors “that are evocative of the plantings in front of the council chambers – purple flowers, green cactus, blue skies and a coppery earth tone, said City Art Board Chair Rebecca Courtney.

Courtney and Las Cruces artist Kathleen Squires, a former Art Board member and current member of the Las Cruces Arts and Culture District Coordinating Committee, chose the colors.

“The Art Board asked the city to paint the bike racks so they would attract more use by the public,” Courtney said.

“It is exciting to see that they are already being used by the public. The city has gone to great lengths over several years to encourage people to ride their bikes.

These beautiful bike racks might just bring more bike riders downtown because now the bike racks are art!”

“I have always thought that even small, inexpensive fixes can make a difference,” Squires said. “In my opinion this one definitely did. Perhaps it will bring a smile to the faces of those entering City Hall.”

City Director of Public Works David Maestas “followed through on the request from the City Art Board, and the effect is dynamic, for sure,” Courtney said.

“Through leadership offered by the office of the city manager and city council, the city is working to incorporate additional public art in city rights-of-way whenever possible to provide a better quality of place,” Maestas said. “Therefore, we were pleased to be able to complete this creative and collaborative project brought forward by Rebecca Courtney on behalf of the City Art Board in the hope that cyclists can enjoy.”

Mike Cook may be reached at mike@lascrucesbulletin.com.

The bike racks have been at City Hall since it opened in 2010. City staff and members of the City Art Board hope the bright new paint will attract more bikers to use them.

Pearce I vs. Pearce II

Long-term congressman as governor?

It's unusual for two sitting U.S. Congress members to leave their posts to come home and run for governor. That's exactly what's happening here in New Mexico, with U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce, Republican from Congressional District 2, running against U.S. Rep. Michelle Lujan Grisham, Democrat from Congressional District 1.

RICHARD COLTHARP

From the Publisher

Working at newspapers in Alamogordo and Las Cruces, I've had a front-row seat to Pearce's longtime tenure in District 2. As a political independent and nonconformist, I'm sometimes in concurrence with Pearce's actions and intentions, and sometimes in opposition.

I've been at times surprised by credit and praise Pearce has received in certain instances, but I've been more surprised by some of the venom directed at him. In both cases, his praise and criticism are largely along party lines. The anger with him has not reached anti-Trumpian levels, but I've seen it get close.

Maybe it's a reflection of the times we're living. You don't have to look far to find someone spewing hateful invective at a politician. Or vice versa.

With the exception of a two-year stint in 2009-2010, Pearce has represented his district since 2003. He succeeded Republican Joe Skeen, who held the office for 22 years.

The Second District is, geographically, the sixth largest in the United States, with 69,493 square miles. It also has a very large and active Republican representation. Of the 17 counties District 2 fully encompasses, Donald Trump won 15 of them in the 2016 presidential election, and Hillary Clinton earned more than 50 percent of the vote in only Doña Ana and Guadalupe counties. That explains the success of Republicans Skeen and Pearce since 1981. In Pearce's home county of Lea, Clinton got only 22 percent of the vote, compared to Trump's 70 percent.

Still, anchored by Doña Ana County, District 2 is a Democratic-majority district. According to the Secretary of State's office, heading into the 2016 election, District 2's 158,420 registered Democrats made up 41 percent of the voters, compared to 138,779 Republican voters making up 36 percent. Today, there are slightly fewer Democrats and Republicans, as independents have increased, but the percentages are basically the same. That could make things interesting in the race between Republican Yvette Herrell and Democrat Xotchil Torres Small to fill Pearce's Dist. 2 vacancy.

By comparison, New Mexico District 1 (mostly the Albuquerque metro area) has a 46 percent to 29 percent Democratic edge, and District 3 (everything north) registers 51 percent Democrat and 27 percent Republican.

Despite his party being outnumbered, Pearce handily carried District 2, winning in November 2016 with 63 percent of the vote. His 143,514 votes outnumbered the total of registered Republicans by nearly 5,000. This indicates he tapped heavily into the district's then-74,000 independent voters and drawing some Democratic crossover.

How will history view Pearce's time in Washington? Not surprisingly, he voted along party lines almost all the time. He has shown, though, the willingness to buck his own party, especially if it makes sense for New Mexico's District 2. For example, Pearce is no fan of Trump's Mexican border wall, and seeks more practical ideas regarding immigration. That makes sense, given his understanding the real situation, especially compared to Trump's misunderstanding.

From my perspective, Pearce changed his style and tone between what I call Pearce I (2003-2008) and Pearce II (2011-present).

In Pearce I, you saw Pearce consistently in the district, not just at the usual big events, but out in the field, working with individual families and business-owners, learning about issues and finding ways to solve problems, often through legislation, but also just by getting the right people and entities together to find common ground and answers. Skeen worked the same way.

While he has still made plenty of public and private visits in the district during Pearce II – remember, it's a giant district – he has been more publicly combative and visibly frustrated. He's been verbally attacked more often, too, as people seem more comfortable doing that these days.

The bigger difference, though, I attribute to two national changes:

After the Democrats' success in the 2008 election, and President Obama's initial tactical error in overreaching with his Democrat-majority House and Senate instead of collaborating on both sides of the aisle, the Republicans drew a line in the sand. In 2011, the House majority flipped, as the GOP gained 63 seats, including the return of Pearce.

That GOP-led House in 2011 instituted a ban on earmarks, those addenda representatives would add to bills to bring things home to their districts. This meant Pearce lost one big tool to help constituents, so his local involvement had less benefit.

Those two things, I believe, combined to focus Pearce's voice more nationally than regionally. His attitude was more aggressively partisan, as evident in his press releases, where he condemned nearly every Obama-led action, and framed every action he made in terms of how it countered Obama's policies.

We saw similar attitude changes in almost every Senator and Representative, bashing the opposing party at every chance. It became the new New World Order, at least in D.C.

During his gubernatorial campaigning, however, Pearce's attitude and approach have returned to the more solutions-oriented Pearce I. It seems he'd

Donate water to Victims Assistance Unit

To the editor:

Often, those involved in automobile accidents or other traumatic incidents may need water to help relieve their distress, as it often takes a while to resolve and clean up such unfortunate events. There is a public service effort being planned by the Las Cruces Bahá'í community as a demonstration of support for those who protect and serve our community, our Las Cruces Police.

The Bahá'í community will make an initial donation of bottled water to the Police Department's Victims Assistance Unit and are inviting all those interested to support this effort as well.

The bottled water delivery will take place on Saturday, Oct. 13 at 2 p.m. at the main police station, 217 Picacho Ave., across the street from the Brannigan Library. Representatives of the Victims Assistance Unit will be there between 2-3 p.m. to accept donated water.

The event was organized through the Unit's program coordinator, Judith Baca and with Cory Wieland, president of the Police Officer's Association, who will oversee distribution of the bottled water to the first-responders.

Please consider dropping off a donation of bottled water to help make this a meaningful effort.

welcome the chance to escape the gridlock and chaos of Washington and return to his home state and try to make a difference.

Victory is an uphill climb for a Republican in a statewide race in New Mexico, but there is plenty of precedence, particularly it seems, in the governor's race.

While Pearce will likely still draw votes from independents and some Democrats in his home District 2, it will be far tougher in Districts 1 and 3, where there are far fewer Republicans and where far fewer people know him.

We live, though, in a time of political surprise. Pearce has more money than Grisham and, because he ran unopposed, was not burdened with a costly and strategically tricky primary campaign.

What would a Pearce governorship look like?

Probably a lot like a Pearce congressional office in 2003-2008.

Liquor licensing

The City of Las Cruces is holding a public input meeting to discuss a resolution concerning the sale, transfer and issuance of liquor licenses in New Mexico. The meeting takes place at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 11 at Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St., conference rooms 2007 B & C.

The City is asking residents for input on liquor licensing in the State of New Mexico and a draft resolution which, as written, supports a proposed New Mexico State bill allowing New Mexico-produced spirits to be sold at establishments licensed to serve beer and wine.

The draft resolution and public input will be taken to a city council work session Monday, Oct. 22.

Lawsuit dismissed

Third Judicial District Judge Manuel I. Arrieta has dismissed a lawsuit filed by the Anthony Water and Sanitation District (AWS D) against the Doña Ana County Clerk's Office and Bureau of Elections pertaining to a March 20 special mail-in election on the issue of whether to impose additional gross receipts taxes on business operations with the district's coverage area.

The AWS D had alleged that the Doña Ana

County Clerk's Office mishandled the election by counting some ballots that arrived in the mail after the vote count but before the polls closed at 7 p.m.

The election failed by a one-vote margin, 80-79.

In his Sept. 12 ruling, Arrieta said the New Mexico Elections Code has no provision for challenging a mail-in election.

Circus canceled

After PETA pointed out that Jordan World Circus has a long history of working with abusive animal exhibitors, New Mexico State University canceled the circus' scheduled performance at the Pan American Center and vowed not to host wild-animal circuses in the future.

"New Mexico State University acted quickly and compassionately to block Jordan World Circus from hauling suffering exotic animals into town and forcing them to perform under threat of punishment," says PETA Executive Vice President Tracy Reiman in a press release.

PETA's motto reads, in part, that "animals are not ours to use for entertainment."

NMSU joins hundreds of venues nationwide that now prohibit wild-animal exhibits.

Awareness and planning are keys to fire safety

By CASSIE MCCLURE

For the Bulletin

In a house fire, seconds matter. The Las Cruces Fire Department (LCFD) is joining with the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) for Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 7-13 with the campaign theme of "Look. Listen. Learn. Be aware. Fire can happen anywhere."

In those first few crucial moments of a fire, having a plan is important. While you may feel safe about being in your home, it's the place where most people are at the greatest risk of fire. Four out of five U.S. fire deaths occur at home, according to NFPA statistics.

"Most people really don't think it'll happen to them," explained LCFD Battalion Chief Ted Sweetser. "But for those who do have a plan, they have a better way of stay safe when fires happen."

There three steps you can take to help quickly and safely escape a fire before it starts:

Look for places fire could start. Check around the home and identify potential fire hazards. Make sure electrical cords don't run under carpets or across doorways. Keep anything that can burn at least 3 feet away from heating equipment.

Listen for the sound of the smoke alarm. Once you hear the sound, you might only have minutes to leave.

Make sure everyone knows the sound and that your smoke alarm is in good, working order by testing it. For those who may need a new battery, LCFD Fire Station 1, located at 201 East Picacho Avenue, will be giving away free 9-volt batteries to citizens.

Learn two ways out of every room. Make sure all doors and windows that lead outside open easily. Practice day and night time home fire drills and draw a map showing all the doors and windows to an area.

Take time to practice a plan for escaping safely and establish a meeting place for members of the household to find each other, for example at a light post near the house.

"Once you're out of the home, stay out," said Sweetser. "Many times, tragedies happen where someone goes back for someone who is already outside because there is so much confusion."

Especially children feel more secure after a quick family drill, so they know the plan during scary situations. In order to help educate local children, the LCFD is beginning outreach to local elementary schools with a new inflatable, mock house. The presentation guides students through various situations with the trained firefighters, leaving them with practical tips they can take home to their families across Las Cruces.

For more information about Fire Prevention Week and home escape planning, visit www.fireprevention-week.org.

The Las Cruces Fire Department (LCFD) proudly serves New Mexico's second-largest city with professional firefighters, who are licensed EMTs, and civilian employees. The department responds to more than 17,000 calls for service annually. LCFD is currently accepting applications through Oct. 26. For more information about firefighter recruitment, contact Battalion Chief Adrian Arias at 575-528-3473 or via e-mail at aarias@las-cruces.org

Fire Investigator Michael Danner encourages a child at Booker T. Washington to jump out of the window of the mock inflatable house. The house is a new educational tool that LCFD can use with students across Las Cruces who will have a chance to test their wits while staying calm, and think of a plan for their own home, after training with the firefighters.

Opioioid Crisis: Physical Therapy to the Rescue!

Las Cruces (NM)- In the United States, there are a ton of "national month" events. Businesses, organizations, and special interest groups establish promotions during a calendar month to get their name and message out to the public. So, in October, Physical Therapists observe "National Physical Therapy Month." In looking on websites to find out who Physical Therapists are competing with this month, I found one listing placing us smack dab between Pastor Appreciation Month and Pit Bull Awareness Month, and found several listings where Physical Therapy Month isn't mentioned at all. It's no wonder that a lot of people don't know who PTs are or what we do. There's a lot of competition for your attention, and deservedly so. There are many worthwhile causes - this month we'll also be promoting Down Syndrome Awareness Month in our office - and there are numerous professions other than ours that deserve some extra attention.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends safe alternatives like Physical Therapy for the management of most non-cancer-related pain. Physical therapists (PTs) and physical therapist assistants (PTAs) understand the potential impact of chronic use of opioids on their patients and clients, and are educated and experienced in effective treatment techniques to reduce and eliminate the root cause of pain.

Physical therapy is a safe and effective alternative to opioids for treatment of persistent pain. That's the message that we need to get out. In the articles to follow this each week, we'll be writing about some of the things that you should know about pain. And if you are dealing with pain - be it acute or chronic - we'll offer some ideas that may help you address those issues and get back to a pain-free life.

But this month, Physical Therapists are hoping to jump a lot higher to get some attention. Why? Every year millions of Americans use opioids to manage pain. In some particular cases, physician-prescribed opioids are appropriate (such as for surgical or cancer related pain), but for the large majority of people, the opioids just mask the pain and do not treat the underlying cause. Reliance on opioids has led to the worst drug crisis in American history.

It seems that this article is a little late . . . after all, LAST month was National Pain Awareness Month! Maybe that's fitting, one month be aware that people have pain, and the next month learn how Physical Therapy can help.

Be on the lookout for next week's article.

Residents asked for input on recycling scenarios

By CASSIE MCCLURE
and SUZANNE MICHAELS
For the Bulletin

The South Central Solid Waste Authority (SCSWA) wants to hear from you. To do that, they're coming to meet you at two "Listening Sessions" in October. The SCSWA will look at possible future recycling scenarios for Las Cruces, especially discussing the growth of domestic markets for recycling, as China has closed its doors.

Two listening sessions:

Tuesday, Oct. 9, 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m., DACC East Mesa Campus Auditorium, 2800 Sonoma Ranch Blvd.

Thursday, Oct. 11, 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m., Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St.

Your recycling questions will be answered and input from residents is highly encouraged. To enable the staff to take back information to construct actionable items, surveys will be available to residents that will help develop what recycling looks like in our community for the next 10 years. The surveys will be short and sweet, digging into what the community knows about how recycling works and how you want it to work in the future of Las Cruces.

For example, one question is: "Do you know your recycling collection day?" The SCSWA can help to find the exact day for your location. Tarkeysha Burton, SCSWA Recycling Coordinator, explains, "The curbside recycling page on SCSWA.net now has a new feature. Residents can use the web-based app at scswa.net/curbsiderecycling/ to look up their recycling service day, schedule service day reminders, etc." You can also download the app to your smart phone via the Google or Apple Store. Now, you'll be able to put out your blue bin and know you've got the day right.

Do you know what belongs in your blue curbside bin?

Another survey question asks, "Which of the following are recyclable in your recycling cart?" Available options are cardboard, detergent bottles, plastic bags and glass bottles. Although you can take plastic grocery bags back to grocery stores for recycling, and you can drop off glass bottles and jars at the SCSWA Recycling Center, you should know that both the plastic bags and glass bottles do NOT go in your blue curbside bin.

SCSWA is also exploring the popularity of its "single stream" recycling, where all recycling goes together (clean and dry) into the blue bin together. Another option is "dual stream" recycling, providing customers with two smaller bins: one for cardboard/paper and one for aluminum cans/plastic bottles and milk jugs.

"Our survey provides answers for us but is also a great way to educate those who may not know some specifics of the recycling program," said Burton. "Also, it's our effort to listen to what customers want out of recycling, the things that improve their quality of life. We want to hear their suggestions and help them understand how our current program works."

Green Connections is submitted by the South Central Solid Waste Authority managing solid waste and recyclables for residents and businesses throughout Doña Ana County. Contact the SCSWA at 575-528-3800 or visit www.SCSWA.net.

Space industry connecting the dots between public, private efforts

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

After years of advancements, the commercial spaceflight industry is approaching a “tipping point.” This fall, leaders and experts in the commercial space industry will gather in Las Cruces for the 14th annual International Symposium for Personal and Commercial Spaceflight to discuss the progress in space travel technologies, investments and policies.

Themed “The Tipping Point,” this year’s ISPCS is Oct. 10-11 at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

Patricia Hynes, curator of the International Symposium for Personal and Commercial Space-flight, has long worked to help grow the commercial space industry. But the purpose of the symposium is shifting, she said.

“I don’t think that needs to be done anymore. The industry is going to go forward. When I hear Neal Degras Tyson talking about Elon Musk and why NASA is going to use Musk’s rocket to go to Mars, I think we are connecting the dots.”

Hynes is adamant about New Mexico’s role in the space industry.

“I want people to remember the space industry started in New Mexico with White Sands Proving Grounds and we haven’t fought hard enough to keep our space heritage. But we are starting to get champions -- Las Cruces, the county, the Spaceport ambassadors, business people. People who care what is going on in space industry need to lead and encourage the people who aren’t engaged yet.”

Commercial capability is being developed by Space X, Virgin Galactic, Blue Origin, Sierra Nevada – all of whom come to ISPCS. They partner with the government but maintain their own customer base.

“We were able to commercialize because individual companies recognized the value,” Hynes said. “The reason is to bring the industry together to help grow that partnership.”

People come to ISPCS because they get relevant information from the prime sources, whether the president of a company or the head of an agency or program, she said.

“That changes the way this conference rolls.”

This year’s group of speakers features about two dozen space industry professionals, experts, academics and government officials.

Jared Stout, executive deputy secretary and chief of staff for the National Space Council, is expected to discuss the Trump administration’s proposed sixth branch of the U.S. military that would be dedicated to national security in outer space.

Other speakers include Andrew Aldrin, son of Apollo 11 astronaut Buzz Aldrin and an associate professor at Florida Institute of Technology; George T. Whitesides, CEO of Virgin Galactic, and The Spaceship Company; Benjamin “Benji” Reed, director of crew mission management at SpaceX; and Matthew Weinzierl, a professor developing a commercial space focused program at Harvard Business School.

ISPCS is open to the public, especially students with interests in space, Hynes said.

“They’re critical consumers of information,” she said of students.

Registration to attend this year’s ISPCS is required and underway at ispcs.com/register. Scholarships for New Mexico students are available. For more information, email kcoogler@nmsu.edu.

Picacho Peak hike is deceptively difficult

By ALEX BURR
For the Bulletin

A featured excursion of the Monuments to Main Street program was a hike up Picacho Peak in late September. A group of about 10 climbed the western trail under the guidance of Howard Dash of the Sierra Club.

The trailhead is at a parking lot on the west side of Picacho. The road to the lot, the parking lot itself and the hiking trail are recently improved because Picacho is among the peaks included in the Organ Mountains – Desert Peaks National Monument. The official designation has increased the number of visitors and improved visitor access.

The hike to the top is not an easy one. From the parking lot to the top of Picacho is about 1.5 miles with a change in altitude of about 500 feet. The trail is narrow but improved with fresh gravel. Hikers climb past an interesting collection of prominent rocks to a secondary peak before a short climb to the top itself.

The climb to the top is well worth the effort. The peak is relatively flat, and the 360-degree panoramic view is noteworthy. You can see into the next county, the next state, even the next country. The guide pointed out the Butterfield stage route and the distinctively colored landscape at the center of the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument.

Wildlife is scarce. Some domestic cattle had obviously been in the area. There were a lot of big black butterflies at the top, but only at the top.

Dash made sure the group stayed together and did not go too fast for the slower climbers. He even improved the path on his way, occasionally kicking aside some large rocks as he walked along.

Three seats contested on Doña Ana County Commission

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Three of five seats on the Doña Ana board of county commissioners are up for election in 2018.

This week, the race for District 1.

District 1

Incumbent Democrat Billy Garrett is term-limited after eight years on the commission. The Democratic candidate is Lynn Ellins; the Republican is John L. Zimmerman. The district includes the northwest part of Las Cruces, Mesilla and south to Anthony. The district is economically diverse, including both Picacho Hills and county colonias. Ellins and Zimmerman live a few blocks apart and have known each other for 14 years, Ellins said.

“John and I are going to stick to the basics,” Ellins said. “I’m a liberal Democrat. He’s a conservative Republican.”

Zimmerman calls Ellins “a nice man. I will never bad-mouth him. I will say I don’t agree with his politics.”

Lynn Ellins

Ellins won 37 percent of the vote in the June Democratic primary in District 1, defeating four opponents. He served deputy clerk and county elections supervisor. Including his membership on the Planning and Zoning Commission, Ellins has more than 11 years of county service.

A native of New York City and a veteran of the U.S. Navy, Ellins served as an elected member of the University of Colorado Board of Regents and was Colorado’s chief deputy secretary of state for a year.

Ellins decided to run in 2018 “because I didn’t like what I was seeing on eight years as Doña Ana County clerk, 2008-16, and served as chief the county commission. It started when they fired [former county manager] Julia Brown.”

He was also unhappy that the commission didn’t appoint interim County Clerk Lindsey Bachman to the position permanently in September even though she “clearly had more experience than anybody else by a mile.”

“I’m used to serving on boards,” Ellins said, who said he understands how they work.

The county commission “should only manage the county manager,” he said. “I don’t micro-manage. It’s the policy-making that’s driving me.”

Ellins said he is “very supportive” of Garrett and wants to “continue what he’s doing.”

He disagrees with the current commission’s decision to accept additional Stonegarden grant funds that support “enhanced cooperation and coordination” between federal customs and Border Patrol and local law enforcement agencies “to secure the United States borders along routes of ingress from international borders,” according to www.fema.gov.

“Once you accept the grant,” the door is open,” Ellins said.

Ellins said he is also “very much concerned” that the commission “still has not funded” the county crisis triage center, built in 2013 but never opened though the county Health and Human Services Department has recommended a local organization to operate the center.

The county must merge some of its 16 fire districts to increase the number of firefighters responding to fire calls and reduce fire insurance rates, Ellins said. Volunteer firefighters should also be given incentives when they respond to fires that would help pay for additional fire-fighting equipment.

Ellins said the commission should petition the state legislature to amend the state constitution to make it easier to terminate a county official for misfeasance or malfeasance. The county currently faces “an impossible situation,” Ellins said, citing the requirement of 22,000 petition signatures to remove former county treasurer David Gutierrez from office. Instead of requiring a percentage of petition signatures from the previous election, the recall of an elected county official should be based on a court ruling, he said.

Ellins said he supports public transportation in the county “100 percent,” noting that the county subsidizes road building and repair. The poor, the disabled, students and others who don’t have vehicles need the bus service to get to Las Cruces for health care, shopping and classes, he said, and that brings business to Las Cruces.

One of a commissioner’s most difficult jobs is choosing between competing priorities for county funds, Ellins said.

“If you don’t have enough money, you go into reserves or raise taxes or cut other programs. It depends on the program.”

John Zimmerman

ZIMMERMAN

Zimmerman defeated one opponent to win the Republican primary for the county commission seat, receiving almost 81 percent of the vote.

Zimmerman served a single term as a state representative, 2015-16, representing district 39, which includes portions of Doña Ana, Grant and Sierra counties. He defeated then-incumbent State Rep. Rudy Martinez to win the seat in 2014. He also lost the seat to Martinez in 2012 and 2016. Zimmerman also lost close races for county commission in 2006 to Oscar Vasquez Butler and in 2010 to Garrett.

A native of Roswell, Zimmerman served 42 years in the Navy, including as a naval commander, and was a missile test engineer for the federal civil service.

Zimmerman said he decided to run again for a commission seat because of “what is happening today in our county.”

County commission District 1 is a “very, very diverse area,” Zimmerman said. “We’ve got a lot of problems in that district.”

“I care very much about this county,” he said. “I know what it is to be poor. I know what it is to do without. I have a lot of compassion for people who don’t have it. I also expect people to work.”

Zimmerman calls himself a fiscal conservative.

“I do support right-to-work [laws],” he said.

Public safety is the “number one responsibility” of the commission,” Zimmerman said, and respect for other elected officials “is paramount in serving,” he said.

Differences that occurred between commissioners and the outgoing county sheriff should have been discussed and settled privately rather than being aired at public meetings, Zimmerman said.

“There’s a time and a place,” he said. “They should have tried to work that out. You don’t have to be ugly to somebody. Be respectful.”

Zimmerman’s other priorities, according to a campaign flyer, are adequate funding for rural roads and maintenance, providing a business-friendly environment and setting clear and concise policy guidelines and goals for the county manager to implement.

“That’s what their job is,” he said. “I like to say it just like it is.”

During his service in the state legislature, Zimmerman said he sponsored four bills that became state law, including three to help veterans. One provided life insurance for members of the National Guard.

“I’m proud of that bill,” he said. “It did away with a lot of red tape.”

Zimmerman also sponsored a bill to provide student-loan forgiveness to medical students who agreed to provide service in underserved rural areas of the state.

During his two years in the state House of Representatives, Zimmerman said he served on five committees and “wore out a vehicle,” traveling more than 100,000 miles throughout his district and back and forth to Santa Fe.

In the legislature, Zimmerman said he “worked across the aisle quite well” and would continue to do so on the county commission.

“I don’t have the market cornered on good ideas,” he said. “I think there’s a lot of cooperation that has to take place. You need to hear all people as opposed to one side. I will admit when I’m wrong. I’m not perfect. You have to be fair and honest in all situations. That’s how I try to live my life.”

75 YEARS AGO 1943

• “One of the hottest legal battles in Lincoln County in years, district court attaches said Saturday, is expected at Carizozo this week when four gambling cases arising at Ruidoso go to trial,” the Las Cruces Sun-News reported in late September 1943. Today, Ruidoso has two casinos in the area, Inn of the Mountain Gods on the Mescalero Apache Reservation and the casino at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

• “Grant County and the town of Silver City plan to use 100 Italian prisoners of war to relieve labor shortage on the farms, for street work in the city and at the municipal airport,” the Sun-News reported. “The prisoners will be worked under guard and will be housed in the National Guard Armory and at the Mangas CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) camp.” The CCC was a federal New Deal program designed to conserve natural resources and provide jobs for young men. The Mangas Camp was located 19 miles northwest of Silver City.

50 YEARS AGO 1968

• “The new business administration and economics building at New Mexico State University was named in honor of Dean G.L. Guthrie Saturday by the university board of regents,” says a Sun-News article in late September 1968. “Dean Guthrie has been a member of the faculty at NMSU for 42 years. The new Guthrie Hall is the first permanent location ever occupied by Dean Guthrie and his college.” Corbett Center, the university’s student union building, was dedicated the same week.

25 YEARS AGO 1993

• “After nearly two years of debates, discussion and study – and a long hiatus where the matter seemed out of the public eye – the county commission quietly passed a solid waste ordinance following a public hearing Tuesday,” the Las Cruces Bulletin reported in its Sept. 30, 1993 edition.

“The ordinance will phase in mandatory trash collection in the more populous areas of Doña Ana County, beginning with Anthony.”

• “The city’s neighborhood watch programs are getting some more eyes, courtesy of the U.S. Postal Service,” the Bulletin reported. “Police have identified three parts of town where burglaries and vandalism are more prevalent than in others. Postal workers delivering mail in those areas – the Telshor, North Alameda and Downtown-Mesquite areas -- will carry cellular phones with them and call dispatchers when they see unusual or suspicious activities.”

WILLIAM MOORE

Bill was born in Kings County, Brooklyn, New York on December 1, 1943 to William Holland and Mary Elizabeth (Nugent) Moore and was the third of four children. His mom was a stay-at-home mom until the 1960's and his dad worked in construction with Bill's grandfather. The construction company, Moore Construction, was responsible for the construction of many of the city buildings in New York City. His grandfather came as a refugee to America from Ireland when Bill's mom was a little girl. At the age of 4, Bill's dad took him to Washington DC, to visit with his grandfather who was the Under Secretary of the Navy where Bill played on the White House Lawn.

Growing up, Bill spent many days at Ebbets Field, the home of the Brooklyn Dodgers or as many fans called them, the Brooklyn Bums. He also made several trips to the Polo Grounds, home of the Giants and into Yonkers, New York, home of the Yankees. The cost of a day game was .25 cents at any of the stadiums and it would cost a dime for the trains. At several of the games Bill and his friends would catch foul balls and wait until after the game was over for autographs. They were able to get autographs from Gil Hodges, Pee Wee Reese, Duke Snyder and Jackie Robinson. Since it was all about the game, Bill and his friends would then go home and play with the autographed balls. When he was a Senior in high school he worked on a co-op plan going to school and working for Smith & Barney Investment Company at 20 Broad St in New York City. Bill played basketball at the old Madison Square Garden when he was in high school in a city-wide basketball tournament and he also ran track at Madison Square Garden.

In 1961 Bill was drafted into the Army. Rather than going into the Army, he enlisted in the Air Force. Basic training was 16 weeks at Lackland AFB followed by 16 weeks at Amarillo AFB for Technical Training. He was then stationed at Holloman AFB, NM and was a Vietnam Veteran. Bill served as an Honor Guard for President Kennedy.

In the 70's, Bill worked for General Dynamics at the Ratscat facility, where the Stealth Fighter/Bomber was developed. He was the property administrator and the security officer for security clearances.

Bill lived in Tularosa, where he was active for 20 years in the City Council, VFW, Elks Lodge, St. Francis de Paula Catholic Church, and owned & operated the J & J Mini Market. When he started gas was .49 cents a gallon and when he left it was $1.89. Bill was proud to call Tularosa his home.

Bill later moved to Rio Rancho, after leaving the store. He worked as a professional lobbyist for New Mexico and later joined Waste Management as Vice President. Later, he worked for Bernalillo County as the Solid Waste Director and then working for Cascade Engineering.

In May of 2016, Bill & his wife, Debbi, moved to Las Cruces and became actively involved in the community. Bill was a devout Catholic attending mass daily after his retirement.

Bill passed suddenly & unexpectedly on Tuesday, September 25th. He leaves to mourn, his beloved wife, Debbi; son Winston Moore & Ginger; daughter Karen Lawrence & Tom; son Tim Moore & Belle; daughter Michelle Moore & Gene; step-son David Blevins & Rachel and step-daughter Anita Tipton & Bobbi; sister Mary Ellen Beggins and brother-in-law David Reddout & Sherlene. He also leaves behind grandchildren, Staci Guerrero (Gloria); Karey Flores (Freddy); Thomas & Todd (Katie) Lawrence; Nicholas, Nathan and Nolan Stogden, Jonathan Niemeyer, Tatum Dunn, Larry & Layla Blevins in addition to 9 great grandchildren, numerous nieces, nephews, cousins & several Godchildren. He adored each one of them.

Bill is preceded in death by his parents, father & mother-in-law, brother Bobby Moore, sister Betty Rogers, nephew Michael Rogers & niece Barbara Beggins.

Funeral Services are being coordinated by Getz Funeral Home. Viewing will be held on Wednesday, October 3rd, 5:30-7:00pm at San Albino Church with Rosary to follow. Funeral Mass will be held on Thursday, October 4th, 11:00am at San Albino Church. Internment will be at Santa Fe National Cemetery with military honors on Friday, October 5th at 9:00am.

Pallbearers will be his grandsons: Thomas, Todd & Tyler Lawrence; Nicholas, Nathan & Nolan Stogden; Gabriel Flores and Jonathan Niemeyer. Honorary Pallbearers will be: Mike Williams, Robert Petruccio, Tom Swisstack, Jimmie Muzzie, Matt DeAverio and Rick Jackson.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations, in memory of Bill Moore, be made to San Albino Catholic Church, 2280 Calle Principal, Mesilla, NM 88046.

Arrangements are with Getz Funeral Home 1410 E. Bowman Ave., Las Cruces NM 88001. Please visit www.GetzCares.com to sign the local online guest book.

Melissa Muñoz: In theatre, a thousand right answers

By MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

If you asked Melissa Muñoz to bleed Mayfield High School green and gold, she could probably come pretty close.

After nearly a quarter century as Mayfield's theatre teacher, there isn't much she doesn't know about using whatever costume items, props and set pieces she could find backstage or at a thrift store to create special effects.

She's also produced some great theatre – and some very successful theatre students.

"A little over 20 years ago, early in her career at Mayfield, Melissa Muñoz had a student, a senior, who used his extra elective period to scholarship to study theatre arts at NMSU. Fast forward 20 years and I am now teaching theatre and English at Centennial High School. I am as proud today to call myself her colleague as I was 20 years ago to call myself her student. She set me on the path that shaped my life and my career!"

A native of Deming, (her father, Carlos Viramontes, was a teacher in Deming Public Schools, Hatch Valley Public Schools and Las Cruces Public Schools), Muñoz took theatre, choir and dance classes at Deming High School before graduating in 1992. She began her teaching career giving ballet and tap-dancing instruction to five-, six- and seven-year-olds.

She enrolled in the Theatre Arts Department and graduated with a degree in education, with an emphasis in language arts and theatre. Muñoz earned a master's in production and design from Southern Oregon University, one of only two schools in the country offering a degree in teaching theatre. She took classes at the school during the summer, took classes online and completed theatre projects through her work at Mayfield.

After two years of student teaching at Mayfield, she became the full-time theatre teacher in 1995. The Mayfield theatre was at one end of the school cafeteria and had almost no wings or backstage area.

With about $2 million in voter-approved bond funds, LCPS built a separate theatre building at Mayfield in 2011.

"Arts was a priority" for then-Mayfield Principal Chris Cook (also a Deming native), Muñoz remembers.

"You're never doing the same thing," is what Muñoz said has helped her continue to love teaching theatre at Mayfield – and, for the past three years, also at Picacho Middle School.

"You're learning different stuff all the time," she said, "building something, coaching acting, doing lights."

A good example, Muñoz said, is "The Insanity of Mary Girard," a play she directed at Mayfield years ago and then coached one of her theatre students in directing two years ago. With each using their own ideas for the demons in the play, the set and the costumes, teacher and student had “very, very different approaches to the same show.”

Muñoz has other former students working professionally in theatre or theatre-related fields, including one who is a scenic designer in New York City.

“Even if they’re not working in the arts,” she said, students “learn important things in theatre.”

“You learn to interact with people, you learn basic skills,” like how to do laundry and sew your own buttons on.

“You learn how to make things work,” in theatre, Muñoz said. “A deadline is a deadline.

There’s an audience here. You fail in front of each other and it’s okay. We’re going to figure it out and keep going.”

With an emphasis on standardized testing, Muñoz said, students have it “beaten into them” that there is always a right and a wrong answer. In theatre, she said, “there’s a thousand right answers and they’re all cool.”

Over the years, Muñoz has taken her theatre students to festivals around the state as well as to Portland, Oregon, Chicago and even the 2007 Edinburgh Fringe Festival in Scotland.

“From the early days at the Black Box Theatre, we have hosted Melissa Muñoz and her incredibly talented theatre students prior to the High School State Theatre Championships,” said Black Box Theatre co-owner Ceil Herman. “When Mayfield built their own theatre and had their own venue at the school, we attended as many events as possible. We have also been fortunate to have graduates from her program working with us onstage and behind the scenes. Melissa has appeared onstage and designed costumes for Black Box shows. She is a multi-talented creative person who we appreciate very much and without whom theatre in Las Cruces would not be the quality it is.”

“Melissa has been a driving force for inspiring so many young people in this community to love and value the theatre arts,” said Las Cruces Community Theatre President Janet Beatty-Payne. “She has worked tirelessly to build Mayfield’s theatre department and I have thoroughly enjoyed attending shows at Mayfield and working on productions at the Las Cruces Community Theatre with Melissa’s past students and Melissa herself. I have always admired Melissa’s passion and energy for her students and the vast theatre experiences that she has worked hard for 25 years to create for her students! Melissa Muñoz is a fabulous example of an excellent, passionate educator! She deserves much congratulations on 25 years of making a huge difference in the lives of so many.”

Temple Beth-El performance is based on oral histories

By MIKE COOK

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

There is no charge to attend and the public is invited to attend Temple Beth-El's presentation of a new one-act play, "Memories: A Temple in Las Cruces."

The play begins at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 7 at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave.

The cast includes nearly a dozen New Mexico State University theatre students, as well as Theatre Arts Department staff and a community member. It is directed by Theatre Arts Department Head Wil Kilroy, who also wrote the script.

Temple Beth-El asked Kilroy "to create a script based on oral histories they had collected from temple members," he said. "Emilie Rasmussen and Samantha Armstrong, both in the play, also conducted a few of those interviews last year. I went through dozens of interviews to create this piece ... all based on actual stories."

"Several scholarly papers about aspects of the Temple's history have been published during the past 40 years," said Jeff Brown of Temple Beth-El's History Committee. "Temple members and the board saved many documents about the Temple, and some oral history interviews by pioneer members have survived in different archives.

The temple began a new history effort in 2017 by reviving its history committee. The Committee took part in a 2017-19 project funded by the Jewish Federation of Greater El Paso (JFGEP). This project sought to greatly expand the temple's oral history collection and to provide materials for a play about the Las Cruces Jewish community."

The production will include an original song written and sung by Temple Beth-El Rabbi Larry Karol.

There will be a panel discussion after the play and refreshments will be served in the theatre lobby after the discussion.

The project is “a welcome partnership between Temple and the NSMU Theater Department,” Karol said. It was funded in part by a grant from the Jewish Federation of Greater El Paso.

From tbelc.org:

The Las Cruces area began to attract individual Jewish settlers and families during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Many of them were related to each other. This pioneer community underwent new growth before and after World War II, when some Holocaust survivors and university professors came to the region and when White Sands Missile Range and general urban growth brought many new Jewish families to the area. The Jewish community has been a vital part of Las Cruces, and three of Las Cruces’ mayors have been Jewish.

“The first effort to organize a Jewish community began in 1954, when two families with adjoining back yards hosted the first Sunday School. About 20 children enrolled, taught by their parents. By 1956, Jewish women formed a Sisterhood, and the Las Cruces Jewish Community Group began holding lay-led religious services three weeks per month in Las Cruces and once a month at White Sands Missile Range. Services were held in an office building, a public library, the Elks Club social hall, and various churches.

The community began a membership drive in 1960 and raised funds for a permanent structure on Parker Road. Families donated Torah translation volumes, an ark and a lectern. The new structure was completed and dedicated in 1962 at a ceremony led by Rabbi Floyd Fierman from El Paso’s Temple Mount Sinai. The congregation subsequently raised funds for two additions to the Temple, one completed in 1968 and the other in 1981.

Temple Beth-El grew to more than 100 families as the Jewish population of the greater Las Cruces area increased. It hired a nationally prominent retired rabbi and scholar, Rabbi Joseph Klein, as a part-time rabbi in 1977, and hired Rabbi Howard Laibson as the Temple’s first full time rabbi in 1984. Rabbi Laibson served until July 1989. After a year of lay-led services during a search process, the temple hired Rabbi Cy Stanway in the summer of 1990. He served until July 1998. The temple returned to lay-led services during its search before it hired Rabbi Gerald Kane in December 1998. As the temple’s membership grew, members formed a committee in 1994 to determine building needs for the next generation. The temple inaugurated a fundraising drive that led to the completion of a new building in January 2007, which includes classrooms, a library, a rabbi’s study and flexible space for a sanctuary and social hall that enables seating for 400 people.

Rabbi Paul Citirin served the congregation from 2008 until June 2011. On July 1, 2011, Rabbi Larry Karol began his service to the congregation.

'Julia, Naked' is cute and disarming, not disrobing

By JEFF BERG
For the Bulletin

Well, you won't see Juliet naked, or anyone else for that matter, but what you will see is an oft-times charming, impudent and mildly dramatic little story about family, love, and music.

The story, as wispy as it is, tells the tale of Tucker Crowe, an up-and-coming singer/songwriter who mysteriously disappeared just as he was getting notice for his work.

A devoted cult led by Duncan, who lives with Annie (clothed), keeps a flame burning by idolizing his work and following any chip of a rumor that Tucker is somewhere to be found and thinking of a comeback.

Such is not true, as Crowe, disarmingly played by the now omnipresent Ethan Hawke (who has spent a lot of time filming in New Mexico the past few years) is living in rural New York, in the converted garage of an ex-wife, as he cares for his smart and lively son, Jackson.

GRADE: A

You can see Juliet, Naked (well, not really) at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla starting tonight, Oct 5.

In the mail one day, a homemade CD arrives addressed to Duncan. Whether or not Annie opens it by accident or on purpose is a small point of contention later but open it she does and listens to Crowe's work, as apparently, he has been paying some attention to Duncan's rants, raves, and compliments on the Website he keeps for Tucker Crowe.

She doesn't like the album at all and posts a flaming critique on Duncan's Website, which, to her surprise, Crowe himself replies to, agreeing with her commentary.

They begin exchanging emails and before long, Crowe is coming to England (where Duncan and Annie live) to visit his pregnant daughter, one of many children by different mothers. This results in Crowe reuniting with many of said offspring, but not exactly in a loving holiday-type family reunion.

It also results in Duncan meeting his obsession as he happens upon Annie and Tucker on the beach one day. At first, he doesn't think it can be Crowe and then feels that she might be out for revenge (they have separated by now), but at a later dinner arrangement, he and Crowe get into a funny/serious argument about various things, especially the quality of Crowe's music.

One of the more admirable qualities of the film (besides Crowe's rendition of 'Waterloo Sunset' by the second-best band ever, The Kinks) is how disassembled the lives of Tucker, Annie, and Duncan are. None of them live in reality: Duncan's obsession with Crowe, Annie's empty life and Crowe ignoring things that need attention until it is almost too late.

Although the film plays a bit cute at times, it is well written and the leads all feel lively and real.

Even without Juliet, Naked, the film is easy to enjoy and filled with light and life.

The Bible directs us to a life of justice and fairness

On Sunday, Oct. 7, the NMSU Theater Department will present "Memories: A Temple in Las Cruces," based on oral history interviews conducted with congregants of Temple Beth-El of Las Cruces. This program will chronicle the development of the congregation and the participation of the Jewish community in Las Cruces life.

The presentation makes clear that ritual, study and prayer are central to living Jewishly.

We just completed the observance of the High Holy Days, beginning with Rosh Hashanah, the

KAROL

Seeking Harmony

Jewish New Year, and, 10 days later, Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

One of the readings in our new prayer book for the holidays, Mishkan Hane-fesh (a Tabernacle of the Soul), caught my eye this year. The meditation that precedes prayers of confession on Yom Kippur in our previous prayer book, Gates of Repentance, made this declaration: "Our God ... grant that our prayers may reach You. Do not be deaf to our pleas, for we are NOT so arrogant and stiff-necked as to say before you ... that we are perfect and have not sinned; rather do we confess: we have gone astray."

The statement in the new prayer book is more direct and eliminates the word "not." It now declares, "We are arrogant and stubborn, claiming to be blameless and free of sin, but in truth we have stumbled and strayed." It is a stark admission.

We are, at times, reluctant to confess to ourselves when we have done something wrong in order to avoid confronting our own failures. We may be afraid to apologize for an action which we know we committed and for which we know we have let ourselves down, not to mention adversely affecting someone else's life.

Fairness, and justice, however, dictate that we step forward and take responsibility for our actions.

At a recent session with our middle school/high school class at Temple, we explored passages from the Bible about justice and fairness. I first had the students identify actions that they see people commit which they believe to be wrong. They listed stealing, hurting, lying, cheating and bullying.

We then reviewed rules in the Bible that list actions that we should do as well as those we should avoid. Chapter 23 of the book of Exodus directs us not to spread false rumors, not to support those who are guilty by lying in order to frame someone who is innocent, to approach people with fairness whether they are rich or poor, and to avoid offering or taking bribes that can undermine justice at its foundation.

Chapter 19 of the book of Leviticus directs people not to steal or be deceitful with each other. Business should be conducted based on honesty. Decisions between people involved in disputes should be made wisely and fairly. We should not bear grudges or take vengeance, but we should love other people as we love ourselves and extend that love to strangers.

Congregants who work in the court and legal system will be coming to speak to the students about how biblical values might relate to real-life cases they face on a regular basis.

So, are we so arrogant to say that we never do wrong? Or do we realize that we might mistakes front time to time? Through study and through prayers that address how we can strive for perfection, we will reach our best potential to be responsible human beings who will make a positive difference in the world.

Business Boot Camp aims to unite public, private sectors

BY MICHAEL SCANLON

For the Bulletin

Some of the top issues facing Las Cruces businesses will come up for discussion later this month as Las Cruces chambers of commerce, business development agencies and the City of Las Cruces team up to stage the first Business Boot Camp.

The free, public event will be 9 a.m. to noon Friday, Oct. 19, at the Rio Grande Theatre. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. It is aimed at business owners, people who are thinking about starting a business and anyone else interested in the issues affecting businesses in Las Cruces. The city is acting as host for the event.

"It's an opportunity to bring a lot of different audiences together," said Mandy Guss, business development administrator at the city's Economic Development Department. "The city is a place where we connect businesses to resources and help them be more successful. We're working in collaboration with some of the chambers, and some different business resource agencies are going to be there."

Cruz Ramos, left, and Mandy Guss of the Las Cruces City Economic Development Department, look over a flyer created to promote the Business Boot Camp event to be held 9 a.m.-noon Friday, Oct. 19, at the Rio Grande Theatre. The event is intended to address some of the top issues facing businesses in Las Cruces.

Those include the Small Business Development Center, the Arrowhead Center at New Mexico State University and Wesst, a non-profit agency that offers consulting, training and lending to people who want to start or expand their businesses.

Keynote speaker at the event will be restaurateur and real estate investor Tom Hutchinson, whose topic will be "Leaders and your business culture."

Jed Fanning, executive vice president at Citizens Bank of Las Cruces, will serve as panel moderator. Panelists will represent a wide range of business interests in Las Cruces, including hospitality, service industry, transportation and accounting.

Panel topics will include:

- Coordinating and collaborating with government agencies.
- Importance of the business plan.
- Knowing your customer.
- Integrating and outsourcing support functions.

Fanning said the boot camp is a good way to help Las Cruces businesses and the community.

"The more we can all do collectively, the more we can make Las Cruces a more business-friendly environment," Fanning said. "That benefits everyone. It's about creating awareness – awareness of opportunities, awareness of barriers."

Jo Ann Garay, director of the Small Business Development Center in Las Cruces, said she hopes business people will take advantage of the event.

"Entrepreneurs who take advantage of the resources available to them have a higher rate of success," she said. "Getting all those resources can help them be stronger in business."

Organizers are hoping the event will not only create awareness, but also help bridge any divides that might exist between public agencies and the business community.

"The idea came up from a couple of different places," the city's Guss said. "The Downtown Las Cruces Partnership suggested putting together some sort of business boot camp for downtown businesses, and the chambers of commerce were talking about some sort of panel on how to do business with the city. All of those came together into what you're going to see" at the event.

The boot camp also will allow the city to show off the refurbished Rio Grande Theatre, a centerpiece of the city's ongoing downtown revitalization work, said Cruz Ramos, economic development specialist at the city.

"We didn't deliberately set out to showcase it, it's just a very nice benefit that results from it," Ramos said. "At the close of the event, the three chambers as well as the SBDC (Small Business Development Center), we offered them tables where they can sit with their resource materials and make them available to attendees."

Guss said the Oct. 19 event will address four of the Top 10 issues business

Mesquite district business owners seek support, common ground

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Mesquite Historic District residents and business owners, elected officials, City of Las Cruces staff and others came together Sept. 24 for the Mesquite District Business Association's (MDBA) meet-and-greet at RETHINK Real Estate, 606 N. Mesquite St.

The MDBA "is a collective of business and creative sectors that have come together to advance commerce, culture and community," according to an event flyer.

There are more than 80 businesses, including six galleries, in the Mesquite Historic District, MDBA committee member Catherine Brenner said at the Sept. 19 Arts and Culture District coordinating committee meeting. Most are "really small businesses that have been there forever," she said.

Las Esperanzas, Inc. vice president and former city councilor Dolores Archuleta says her group, which oversees the preservation, revitalization, renovation and protection of the Mesquite Street Original Townsite Historic District, can relate.

"I concluded that the goals of MDBA for the Mesquite Street neighborhood are very similar to ours and that my recommendation to our membership would be that we work together to keep the neighborhood safe, attractive, innovative and interconnected with art and culture where visitors would choose to live, work and raise their families," she said.

City Business Development Administrator Mandy Guss told those attending that the city wants "to be a resource to help them and, ultimately, their success is our success."

MDBA, which is seeking new members, will participate in the national Small Business Saturday Nov. 24.

Other MDBA committee members are Patricia Gallegos, Padma Valdevit, Michael Ponce, Martha Rodriguez, Lorrie Meeks and John Verploegh.

"We'll address four of them in this one, probably look to address three more in the spring, and perhaps three more next fall. I think that's the vision we see now for the future, pending on how the event goes on the 19th. We're hopeful that we'll be able to do this on a regular basis," she said. "Our chambers have some similar things, and we don't want to step on their toes or do their work for them, so we see this as a different type of focus.

"Our goal will be, if it's successful and businesses find value in it, we would want to do more in the future."

Is it time for a tune-up?

At least once a year visually inspect your furnace to look for excessive soot buildup. Turn up your thermostat to turn it on and look for steady bluish flames. If you see mostly yellow or orange flames that flicker, then call a professional to have your furnace serviced or replaced. Remember to change out filters at least once a month during the heating season to reduce your costs and maintain peak efficiency. Zia Natural Gas Company, the smarter energy option.

Holding onto grudges is a foolish way to live

When somebody hurts us, forgiveness is one of the hardest things we must do to get along with others and have peace within ourselves. We mistakenly believe that by refusing to forgive the person who hurt or wronged us that we are getting even with him. Someone has said that refusal to forgive is like taking poison and waiting to see when the other person will die.

RUTH MOORER
Not for Sissies

I have lived long enough to observe the devastation caused by refusal to forgive. When I struggle over the offense and hurt which I feel, my first reaction is one of anger and feeling the need to hit back in some way. But that does not make me feel any better. I have learned that the sooner

I forgive the person, the sooner I can move on to better thoughts and feelings.

Grudges, hung onto for years by families, make life miserable for all involved. What a foolish way to spend one's life! I believe that God created us to enjoy life and to bless others. Evidence is strong that refusal to forgive has a detrimental effect upon our bodies and minds. Many illnesses can be traced to carrying grudges, hatred and generally negative emotions.

Little do we realize that by forgiving another, no matter how gross the offense, we help ourselves and also help the other person to realize that he/she may be in the wrong.

My father tells of an incident when he was a child of 6 years. He and his siblings were all put to work out in the field shocking oats. He was the youngest of 13 children and was rather bossy to his older sisters. He was unhappy that sister Bessie was not shocking the oats in the "right way," and he struck her across the face with a bundle of oats. Fortunately, she was wearing a sun bonnet with side shades which protected her face to a degree.

My father related that he would not have remembered the incident except for the fact that Bessie did not hit back; she just stood there and took it! Right away he felt shame for what he had done.

Retaliation is not a sign of strength but of weakness; while "turning the other cheek" is a sign of real power. By forgiving, we open the door for transformation.

Coming home: Aggies seek second straight win

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico State football team emerges from a bye week with a homecoming matchup against fellow independent

ADKINS

Liberty Saturday, Oct. 6. Kickoff inside of Aggie Memorial Stadium is 6 p.m.

The contest is the first of two matchups between the Aggies and Flames during the 2018 season. The second game is Nov. 24 in Lynchburg, Virginia.

The Aggies, 1-4, are coming off a win in El Paso over I-10 rival

The theme for this year's homecoming celebration, to be capped by Saturday's football game against Liberty, is "A Moment in Time."

UTEP, 27-20. Josh Adkins started his first game at quarterback for NMSU, replacing earlier starter Matt Romero. Little-used Christian Gibson was given an opportunity and had a breakout game at running back.

Although the adjustments did result in the first win of the season, 14 of the Aggies' 27 points were scored by the defense (fumble recovery) and special teams (blocked kick).

Liberty is 2-2 on the season after beating New Mexico in Albuquerque last Saturday 52-43. The Lobos are the only common opponent for the teams, having beaten the Aggies in Las Cruces earlier.

The Flames look to the air on offense, with 1,354 passing yards on the year against 566 on the ground. Liberty quarterback Stephen Calvert has a 143.43 passing efficiency while completing 54.9 percent (84-153) of his passes with 10 touchdowns. Calvert has a reliable target on his receiving corps in 6-4 Anton Gandy-Golden, who leads the team with 25 catches for 382 yards and four scores.

Liberty has scored a touchdown on 10 of 15 attempts in the red zone. They are 2-of-3 in field goal tries.

On defense, Liberty has allowed 138 points (34.5 per game) with seven scores coming through the air and 12 on the ground. The Flames have allowed 1,922 yards of total offense, giving up 787 passing yards and 1,135 rushing.

The Liberty defense features 15 players with double-digit tackles, led by Solomon Ajayi and Juwan Wells, each with 26. The defense has forced 21 tackles for loss, with four sacks. The secondary has four interceptions.

Liberty's defensive numbers have been trending downwards with the team allowing more total offense each week, with the highest total (580 yards) coming at UNM. The Flames have also allowed 18 touchdowns (11 rushing, seven passing) over their past three games.

Saturday's game will be aired on the Aggies flagship, KXPZ 99.5 FM, with Jack Nixon on the call and Cory Lucas as analyst.

Following Liberty, New Mexico State travels to Lafayette Oct. 13 to face Louisiana.

AGAINST UTEP

- Christian Gibson's blocked punt at the end of the first drive of the game was the first blocked punt for NM State since B.J. Adolpho against Utah State in 2009.

- The blocked punt returned for a score by Izaiah Lottie was NM State's first since Chris Williams did so against Alcorn State in 2008.

- Billy Nipp recorded the first fumble recovery of his Aggie career.

- Malik Demby got his first defensive touchdown on the 55-yard scoop and score. It was the first touchdown on a fumble recovery for the Aggies since DeMarcus Owens took one back 50 yards against UTEP in 2016.

- Christian Gibson rushed for a career-high 103 yards.

- The Aggies recorded eight sacks against UTEP, the first time the team had 5-plus sacks since doing so against Idaho in 2017.

- Roy Lopez set a career-high in tackles for loss with two and recorded his first forced fumble with the Aggies.

- Austin Perkins made his first career interception to end UTEP's final drive.

- The win over UTEP marks the eighth time in program history that NMSU's first win of the season came against the Miners.

- The victory is the first time NM State has beaten UTEP in back-to-back seasons since 2007-08.

- The win was NMSU's first in the Sun Bowl since 2008.

Anguish and joy headline the news in golf

Just a couple of weeks ago the golf world was ecstatic over Tiger Woods' epic win, while days earlier reeling from an unspeakable tragedy.

Tiger had his first win in five years, at the Tour Championship held at East Lake Golf Club in Atlanta. It was PGA Tour win number 80 for Tiger, and almost a major, since the Tour Championship puts a cap on the year. It's also the final leg in the pursuit of the $10 million FedEx Cup, which Tiger almost won. Just 17 months removed from spinal fusion surgery (his fourth back operation) Tiger's win was one for the ages. It had been 1,876 days since he last won on tour. According to Ron Green of Global Golf Post, "As a professional golfer, Tiger was dead and buried, the grandest master taken down by a bad back, leaving us to watch his brilliance through the video archive and our memories of the way it used to be. But Tiger being Tiger, he turned into Lazarus. He let a surgeon weld a portion of his spine together and he re-engineered his golf swing by tapping into what may be the deepest well of resolve and determination any athlete has ever possessed."

Now 42, Woods served as an idol to many young stars who grace the leader boards at tour events. Some weren't even born when Woods won his five USGA amateur tournaments. And as Tiger marched through 14 majors he kept the public at arm's length. As Green puts it, "He awed all of us but when the world wanted a hug from him, all he gave is a fist bump at most."

That's all changed. We see a kinder, gentler Tiger in the media room. He's finally embracing his fans warmly, while responding to reporters' questions in a friendly, almost humble manner. A few steps away from the 18th green at East Lake, after Tiger showed his appreciation by waving to his adoring fans, some of his fellow competitors were there to greet him and pat him on the back.

On Sept. 18 the golf world awoke to the brutal murder of a female golfer at Iowa State University. News sources reported that Celia Barquin Arozmena, European Ladies' Amateur champion, was practicing on Coldwater Golf Links near the Iowa State campus when she was assaulted and fatally stabbed. Her body was discovered in a pond on the course a short distance away. Within hours police dogs tracked Barquin's scent to a tent in the forest adacent to the golf course occupied by a homeless man named Collin Daniel Richards. Richards had multiple scratches on his face, consistent with a struggle, and lacerations on his hands he attempted to conceal. Richards was well-known to police and had recently completed a seven-month prison sentence. According to police, Richards has a long record of violence and he had told an acquaintance that he had a strong urge to "rape and kill a woman." He is charged with first-degree murder.

Celia was due to graduate in December with a degree in civil engineering. She was the reigning Big 12 conference women's golf champion and was on her way to the second stage of LPGA Qualifying School. She was to be honored days later at halftime during the Iowa State-Akron football game in Ames as the Iowa State Female Athlete of the Year.

Was this senseless and horrific murder preventable? In my opinion, yes. It will undoubtedly be determined that the suspect, Collin Richards, is mentally ill. Therein lies the problem.
