Constituent services clinic scheduled in Las Alturas

The Doña Ana County Community and Constituent Services (CCS) Office has scheduled a Mobile Constituent Services Hour Clinic in Las Alturas to help residents who need assistance from local, state and federal government agencies.

The Las Alturas Mobile Constituent Services Outreach Clinic will be held from 5:30 p.m.-6:30 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 30, at the Las Alturas Fire Station at 4145 Cholla Road, Las Cruces.

District 3 Doña Ana County Commissioner Ben Rawson and staff from Congressman Steve Pearce's Las Cruces District Office have been invited to attend.

"The purpose of the Mobile Constituent Services Hour is to make the county more accessible to constituents, especially those who reside in rural areas," CCS Manager Liz Reed said. "We realize that in most cases, we won't be able to solve a problem on the spot, but staff will be able to point constituents toward the right offices and entities who can offer the quickest and most reliable response to whatever issue arises."

For more information about the Mobile Constituent Services Outreach Clinics, contact the Doña Ana County Community and Constituent Services Office at (575) 525-5959.

(Enter the north side of MMC's parking lot from Terrace Drive between Telshor and Don Roser), or the Mountain View Regional Medical Center Children's Wellness Clinic located in Suite 100 inside the Medical Office Building.

To expedite the process, visit www.MountainViewRegional.com or www.mmclc.org to download consent forms to bring with you on the day of the clinic.

The New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) recommends everyone six months of age and older get a flu vaccine each flu season.

Oct. 28 event aims to assist area's veterans

District 5 Doña Ana County Commissioner John L. Vasquez will co-host the second annual 'A Day to Change Direction' on Oct. 28 to promote dialogue on mental health, emotional suffering and access to care for area veterans, their families and friends.

The event is coordinated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States (VFW) and the Give an Hour (GAH) foundation. 'A Day to Change Direction' is also being observed nationally through other VFW posts across the country.

"As a combat veteran and public servant, I want to do all I can to help emphasize the need for improved mental health resources for our veterans in Doña Ana County," said Commissioner Vasquez. "In advance of the Veteran's Day holiday, I encourage those who served and their families to take advantage of this free opportunity to better understand their own mental health, or that of someone they love."

The GAH foundation is a nonprofit organization that provides free mental health services to military members, veterans and their families. It has been instrumental in the development of a community-based approach to addressing the challenges that face our nation's military community.

'A Day to Change Direction' will be held on Saturday, Oct. 28 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd, in Las Cruces.

Brown cites illegal termination

By LYNN MOORER

For the Bulletin

Former Doña Ana County (DAC) manager Julia Brown, through her attorney, notified the county Oct. 23 that she may sue DAC for illegal termination.

Brown was fired April 25 by the county commission, on a 4-1 vote, without explanation. In a letter to county clerk Scott Krahling, her attorney Ben Furth requested an attempt at mediation to resolve Brown's claim under the state Whistleblower Protection Act "before the public spectacle of litigation occurs."

Furth asked that the commission notify him whether it is willing to mediate the dispute.

Ankle monitors purchased

The Third Judicial Drug Court Programs announces the purchase of nearly $25,000 worth of SCRAM ankle monitors and GPS monitoring equipment to better monitor the program's clientele.

The monitors track alcohol usage and real-time GPS location. According to a press release they are "significantly less expensive to taxpayers than incarceration ... allowing defendants to maintain jobs, remain with their families and engage in pro-social activities."

The employment rate among adult participants is 84.5 percent.

"We see this purchase as an investment in our program," said David Borunda, executive officer of the Third Judicial District Court. "We have found that treatment courts and diversionary programs are often successful in helping our participants overcome addiction and breaking the cycle of recidivism. Electronic monitoring holds them accountable and results in significantly higher success rates."

The Third Judicial District Drug Court has partnered with Alcohol Monitoring Systems since 2013.

Habitat for Humanity celebrates milestone

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity (MVHH) is 30 years old.

The homebuilder volunteer organization celebrated its 30th anniversary and the construction of 111 houses (and counting) in Las Cruces on Oct. 17 with a wall-raising ceremony at 4154 Aurora Star Court.

“As we look at what we have accomplished, we are grateful for the support of our volunteers, sponsors, partners and community for 30 years of giving a hand up, not a hand out, to families in need,” MVHH Executive Director Maria Vasquez said. “We will continue to work hard towards our mission and vision of a world where everyone has a decent place to live.”

The wall raising included representatives of the 13 churches/denominations and individuals who founded MVHH in 1987.

Also participating were City Councilors Gill Sorg and Olga Pedroza, and Juanita and Ernesto Torres, who will be the owners of the house on Aurora Star Court when it and four others on the street are completed next April.

During the anniversary celebration, the street was lined with vehicles from New Mexico, Texas, Washington, Montana, Maine, Ohio, Minnesota, Kentucky and other states that are the homes of MVHH’s many volunteers, including “caravanners” – the volunteer home builders who come to Las Cruces throughout the year to help build homes.

MVHH is funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. It also has individual and corporate sponsors.

For more information, contact Vasquez at 575-525-0475 or mariafh@qwestoffice.net. Visit www.lascruceshabitat.org and find them on Facebook.

You can visit the MVHH ReStore at 2301 S. Main St. The ReStore “is a building and personal materials reuse and surplus center open to the public,” according to a ReStore brochure. Find them on Facebook at Habitat for Humanity Restore.

Combining charity, creativity

Las Cruces: amazingly giving, amazingly inventive

You may recall, last December, the Barna Group, in its study to find America's 50 most generous cities, ranked the Las Cruces/El Paso market No. 1.

RICHARD COLTHARP

From the Publisher

Of those surveyed in our market, 92 percent gave money to charity. It's not surprising, knowing the nature of Las Cruces and the opportunities we have to give. It's more impressive since we are not exactly the most affluent market. In fact, in a 2012 24/7 Wall Street study, Las Cruces was ranked the 23rd poorest city in America.

As amazing as the degree to which we give, is the way we do it.

Look around and you'll find an intriguing array of opportunities.

Las Cruces fundraisers seldom just walk up and ask for a contribution, although they are happy to take your check. There are so many great causes and efforts in our community, there is great benefit in any donation.

Our fundraisers, however, know how hard you work for your money, and are focused and dedicated to make sure you get more than just a warm feeling and a tax deduction for your sacrifice.

Some of the best entertainment in our community is provided by our charitable organizations.

Here is just a small sampling of the great events available in Las Cruces.

A common way to raise funds is to have a dinner, and Las Cruces certainly has its share of them. However, our area nonprofits do their best to add a fun and interesting spin.

The Rotary Clubs' Dress the Child dinner raises funds to provide clothes and shoes for needy children in our county. The dinner features several courses, each created by local chefs. The event gives diners a chance to enjoy some unique, beautifully created dishes, and gives the chefs a way to showcase their amazing talents. At the most recent one, the culinary students from Centennial High School worked as servers, giving them a chance to gain valuable experience. Everyone wins.

A month previous, Mesilla Valley Hospice was the benefactor of the annual Men Who Cook event, where local amateur chefs let you sample their impressive dishes.

The Las Cruces Academy has an annual Food for Thought dinner. In this meal, each table is anchored by a local expert in a topic. Guests at the table get to learn something new and different from the inside, or a fresh angle on a traditional subject.

One of the longest standing, and most unique, charitable fundraisers in Las Cruces is the Cowboys for Cancer Research Team Roping. It was established in 1982 in honor of Alma Cohn, who had recently passed away after battling breast cancer. Money raised from entry fees went to cancer research, a project that has grown into million-dollar endowments at both the University of New Mexico and New Mexico State University.

Chances are, you know someone who has participated in the High Heels for High Hopes fashion show, which raises money to help the cause of premature births for March of Dimes. This year's event is Nov. 18, and the shows are always entertaining and the stories inspiring. A great feature of High Heels for High Hopes is the individual events participants host leading up to the big show.

Two examples of the variety: Sandy Tourtillot presented a Helioke event. What's helioke, you ask? It's pretty much what it sounds like, combining the voice-altering effects of helium with karaoke, with predictably hilarious results. And then there's Aaron Perez, who had a slip-and-slide mud kickball game. Each of the models have had, or will have, their own events, ranging from mild to wild, something for everyone's tastes.

A Casa de Peregrinos fundraiser is CANstruction, where participants purchase varieties of canned food, and turn them into sculptures, using the size of the cans and the colors of the labels to create 3-D images. Some of them are simply stunning.

The Bulletin's own Tracy Roy just competed in the annual Look Who's Dancing! show, a fundraiser for New Mexico State University's Dancesport team. Local celebrities dance with skilled student dancers and the results are captivating. While the practices are long and arduous, participants tell you the experience can be life-changing.

If you enjoy golf, you could almost play in a charitable tournament every weekend of the year.

And for each event I've mentioned here, there are 20 more fun and enlightening projects, all deserving of your time, attention and, yes, your money.

Most of the events are reasonably priced, often less expensive than doing what you might otherwise do for an evening's entertainment. Plus, you have the added benefit of helping those in our community.

Vandalizing democracy

To the editor:

Running for public office requires money, time, and energy. Most of that money, time, and energy goes into developing name recognition and getting your message out. One way to do that is to put up signs. Unfortunately, signs are often vandalized. When I ran for Doña Ana county treasurer, I had 30 signs stolen and four large signs destroyed.

It's nearly impossible to determine why this vandalism happens. Is it some random group of kids just out tagging and taking signs? Is it the opposition? It's hard to believe that someone who has no idea who you are and what you stand for just vandalizes or removes your sign.

One of the biggest complaints I hear about our current political process is, "Too many of the politicians who get elected do not represent my interests." Maybe the process of electing people is hindered by attacks on candidates' signs in order to silence the opposition. Certainly, that may have been my experience: No one knew who I was on March 7, 2016, but my signs were damaged almost immediately after I put them up. I had to come to the conclusion that people who supported my opponents must have been responsible.

We are now in the midst of the municipal elections and, already, some signs have been vandalized. Going forward, let's all agree that everyone has the right to his/her personal opinion. Signs represent particular candidates and those candidates' messages. It's part of the democratic process to have a variety of candidates and messages for voters. Let's not damage that process by vandalizing candidates' signs.

For democracy to work, everyone should have the opportunity to fair and equal representation of their ideas. If you feel threatened by this, how will you feel when the shoe is on the other foot?

Support for Flores

To the editor:
Municipal elections are coming up. Early voting at City Hall began Oct. 18. Nov. 7 is Election Day. Some very important decisions will be made by Las Cruces City Council in the next few months and we need a strong District 6 councilor who will make the right decisions. Yvonne Flores is that person.

After over eight years of work, the new comprehensive plan will be coming to the council. Plan4Las Cruces promotes a sustainable natural and built environment that "makes Las Cruces a great place to live, work, and play for all ages, backgrounds, cultures, and economic levels." Plan4Las Cruces will make Las Cruces a city that recognizes the needs of our aging population and that will also make Las Cruces attractive to millennials and the companies they work for. This plan will help the city become economically competitive so that we can compete with other cities trying to attract companies with good jobs.

The next increase in the minimum wage will also come before the council. So far, that increase has not had a negative effect. The city has seen an annual rate of more new businesses than before the increase. The employment rate has gone up and revenue from Gross Receipt Taxes (GRT) has also increased.

Yvonne Flores is an attorney and an educator. She has considerable experience working with immigration issues, has taught in both K-12 and community college settings, supports funding for early childhood education, believes in community schools, will advocate for the growth of the city's small businesses, and is a champion for the Organ Peaks Desert Mountains Monument. In addition, Yvonne is a League of Women Voters of the United States delegate to the United Nations Framework Conference on Climate Control; Bonn, Germany, November 2017. Yvonne Flores is my choice for District 6 councilor.

Support for Levatino

To the editor:

I support Ceil Levatino for Las Cruces City Council. I can't vote for her, because I live outside the city, but I have worked on many city issues, several with Ceil, and I am impressed by her abilities and accomplishments.

Ceil cares deeply about her district and the city. She is proud of the city, she works hard and thinks clearly about the needs of the residents and how best to meet them. I'm a Democrat, she is a Republican, but we work together comfortably. During her four years of service on our city council she has put Las Cruces first without concern for party, or other, lines.

She consistently has the courage to stand up for what's right for her constituents, not just for the most popular talking points. She puts her attention on those issues the city can and should attend to, for its residents (and) not those it can do nothing about.

Ceil stays in touch with her constituents, holding regular meetings throughout her district. She has brought much-needed road repairs, businesses, and good-paying jobs to District 6. The city is still struggling to recover from the Recession of 2008, and Ceil has led the work to grow our economy.

I greatly appreciate that during Ceil's service on city council she has taken every opportunity to get involved. She knows and understands the city, at all levels, extremely well. I am concerned that her opponent, an outsider with no ties to our community, will have to depend on the guidance of others.

Being a city councilor takes tremendous time and commitment; for four years, Ceil has proven that she will be there, whenever and wherever she is needed.

I am glad that Ceil is running again, and encourage everyone in her district to recognize her accomplishments for them, and vote for her.

Support for Vasquez

To the editor:

We are District 3 residents who follow city and county happenings. Let's support our candidate, Gabe Vasquez, and encourage other district residents to vote. He'll move our city and district forward and work to pull the city and county together on possible joint projects to benefit all.

Focusing on smart ways to build locally owned businesses, neighborhood revitalization and memorializing our history, signage, branding and infrastructure will improve the district. We must encourage locally owned small businesses to start up or expand. We need to create a local economy benefiting our families, not just national investors.

Gabe wants to help improve the local job market and ensure a living wage. Focusing on efforts of our local residents, students and families is key.

This district has

much rich history. We admit it; we've learned a lot more American history since moving here. Let's improve the ways we promote our people of Las Cruces; e.g., installing more culturally accurate historical markers and new pocket parks that explore and enrich local history, encourage neighborhood branding and a sense of pride in who we are. Both Cruces and tourists will better appreciate and contribute to our economic development and better quality of life.

Our council districts aren't separate, and more multi-district developmental policy decisions are desirable. Better collaboration with our local border communities and economies to leverage our regions resources are important.

We know Gabe proposes such. Our communities working together can improve and build from the city's strategic plans.

We the residents of District 3 can be "people helping people" through local action. Please come out and vote for Gabe Vasquez during early voting or on Nov. 7. Supporting those who'll engage in change makes a difference.

Too many 'no' votes

To the editor:
My wife and I moved to Las Cruces in 1969, after my military service in Viet Nam, so that I could finish my college education. We liked the town and decided to stay and raise a family here.

We have always taken our voting seriously but have not been very politically active otherwise. This year seems different to me, more important than ever to get my vote right in the local election. So I decided to make a careful review of the incumbent's record in my district. I live in District 6 and was struck, from the beginning, how often my representative, Ceil Levatino, voted against her colleagues on our city council, starting in 2013 when she cast the sole "no" vote against adoption of the first phase of the 2040 Comprehensive Plan for the city.

Reading through the minutes of city council meetings in 2014, I was angered by her cynical manipulation and disregard for the city charter when she and her collaborators managed to prevent the minimum wage from going to a public referendum. As I read, it seemed that whenever a resolution involved raising a fee or tax to pay for needed improvements, Ceil was against it.

In 2015 three council members were attacked with a fraudulent recall campaign. Our city clerk refused to certify the recall petitions, and Ceil was the only vote not to accept the clerk's determination in all three cases.

I like the way my city has improved over the years. I like the way it is run today. From the voting record, I can't tell whom Mrs. Levatino believes she represents, but I know it isn't me, and I don't believe she represents many of my neighbors. The record suggests that her reelection would not contribute to the city's advancement.

*Grant W. Price

Support for Montanez

To the editor:

I am writing to express my frustration with the upcoming city council races and to urge readers to pay attention to this vital upcoming election. As a member of this community who has lived and worked here for years,

I am deeply frustrated by the current state of our city.

Too often vitally important local issues are being determined by individuals that I do not feel represent my views.

I believe we have a great community, but certain councilors are more concerned about voting for an ideology that does not represent myself and many of my neighbors.

This is why I am supporting Steve Montanez for city council – District 5. Steve has been active in our community for years and has been a great example for the type of leadership we need in our local office. I know that he is tirelessly knocking on doors and listening to residents' concerns.

Instead of pandering talking points or claiming he can work on issues the city has no control over, he has actually been fighting for solutions that can make a difference.

He has pledged to fight for a healthy economy, improve our parks, and transform our roads. I have confidence that Steve will fulfill his campaign promises unlike the incumbent who has let his constituents down.

For those of us that want to see a positive change in our community – I highly recommend that we all get to the voting booth on Nov. 7, especially residents of District 5- vote for Steve Montanez.

Message from Hollywood: Solve problems with guns

Every year for decades there have been students bringing guns to school to “fix a problem.” In the days after the school shooting many people speculate on how the kid obtained the gun and got it to school along with many more how-it-was-done questions.

I never hear the question: Why did this kid think using a gun would solve any problems? Rather, it causes more problems than can be imagined. So where did that student get the notion that bringing a gun would make things better?

Was this something the child learned in school? Of course not. It is not part of the public school curriculum. Further, it is not modeled behavior by teachers to shoot problem students, regardless of how irritating students can be.

MICHAEL SWICKARD

In My Opinion

Yet, students are bringing guns to school apparently with the belief that the guns will solve their problems. If they do not learn that notion in public school, they must learn it somewhere else.

Is it in the home?

Most parents reject that premise. “I certainly do not teach my children that shooting someone will solve problems.” But they do. The message is transmitted repeatedly to their children. Under their supervision kids watch hour after hour of television and movies where the solution to problems is to shoot someone.

The average school-age student watches hundreds of “shootings to solve a problem” a week. Heroes as well as bad people, all larger than life, solve their problems with guns. We can thank Hollywood’s culture of violence, the Hollywood that continually sermonizes about gun control to the rest of the country.

Research strongly suggests a correlation of behavior in children exposed to violence. Kids in one research project were observed with fellow students for an hour. Then they watched violent cartoons for an hour and were observed with students for the hour afterwards.

In the second and third hours, the incidence of aggressive behavior increased dramatically. The research is compelling that watching television influences behavior. That is why advertisers spend millions on commercials. It influences behavior.

The responsibility lies with the parents to protect their children from these influences. The copycat syndrome has been established by the police in some types of crimes. It is seen on television and then replicated in society.

Television and movie violence is so pervasive because it is the most easily created form of drama, “Is someone going to die or not?” I’m not saying kids should be kept completely away from all television, but it should be screened.

The issue is not to stop television from showing the use of guns as a solution to a person’s problems, rather, the issue is that parents must stop letting impressionable kids watch hour after hour of this guns will solve problems message.

It is like planting a tree. The best time to plant a tree was 10 years ago, the next best time to plant a tree is now. The best time to screen television programs was 10 years ago. The next best time is now. No, we do not need a law, we need a culture that understands the influences on children.

Veterans group forms

BULLETIN REPORT

The Military Veterans' Grill Club (MVGC) is a new organization in Las Cruces for local veterans.

MVGC is "intended to be a group for veterans to meet up and network with other veterans, strengthen bonds among veterans in the community, and be a vehicle for addressing issues that members might be having with their benefits," said founder Jeff Dray, who is also president of the Veterans' Democratic Council of Doña Ana County.

The non-political group was created, Dray said, to "give veterans going through hard times a group of supportive peers so that they might not have to seek help from the VA or other agencies or organizations."

Interested veterans can join MVGC on its Facebook page, Dray said. Or, contact Dray at 575-805-7012 or jeff.drays1@gmail.com to join.

There is no application process to join the group and no monthly dues, he said.

To join, "simply show up to each meeting with some food, drinks, and/or paper plates and utensils" to share.

Most MVGC meetings will take place at VFW Post 10124, 709 S. Valley Drive, Dray said. He is working on a meeting schedule.

"The centerpiece of the club is the beautiful grill and ice chest built by the Otero County Prison Facility inmates for us," he said.

"The grill was built from a 250-gallon propane tank donated to MVGC by ServiGas-Ikard & Newsom, Dray said. The trailer was donated by Traderman Pawn LLC. The ice chest was built from wood pallets provided by the prison.

"Without these donors, Warden Rick Martinez and the inmates of Otero County Prison Facility, we wouldn't have these great recruiting tools," Dray said.

In addition to MVGC, Dray said the grill and ice chest will be available for use by the VFW, the New Mexico State University Student Veteran Organization and the Third Judicial District Attorney's office.

Clara Belle Williams with two of her sons.

Birthday nears for NMSU's first black graduate

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Clara Belle Williams braved segregation and racial prejudice to become New Mexico State University's first black graduate in 1937.

On Sunday, Oct. 29, she would have been 132.

Born Clara Belle Drisdale in Plum, Texas, on Oct. 29, 1885, she was the oldest child of Isaac and Matilda Drisdale.

She became valedictorian of her graduating class at Prairie View (Texas) Normal and Independent College (now Prairie View A&M) in 1908.

She married Jasper Williams in 1917 and had three sons: Jasper, James and Charles. All became doctors and founded the Williams Clinic in Chicago. James (1919-2016) was a prominent Las Cruces surgeon.

Mrs. Williams took courses at the University of Chicago, then enrolled at the New Mexico College of Agriculture & Mechanic Arts (NMCA&MA, later NMSU) in the fall of 1928.

While teaching at

Booker T. Washington School in Las Cruces, when public schools were segregated, Clara Belle took summer courses and graduated with a Bachelor's degree in English from NMCA&MA in 1937 at age 51.

In 1961, Williams Street on NMSU's campus was named in her honor. She received an Honorary Doctorate of Laws degree from NMSU in 1980.

Clara Belle Williams Day was celebrated Feb. 13, 2005, at NMSU. Among the festivities was the renaming of the NMSU English Building as Clara Belle Williams Hall.

"Clara Belle Williams dedicated her life to education as a teacher, life-long student and devoted mother," according <http://lib.nmsu.edu/exhibits/cbwilliams/bio.shtml>.

"She ... was an inspiration as she succeeded despite significant obstacles of discrimination placed before her while pursuing her higher education."

Clara Belle died July 3, 1994 at age 108.

"There is no alternative to optimism," Williams was quoted. "The only choice we have is to prepare ourselves so we can go as far as possible. Otherwise, we will have betrayed the precious breath the Lord has given us."

The Las Cruces Public Schools Foundation has awarded $31,004 in grants to fund 11 innovative, teacher-developed projects which will help provide enhanced educational experiences for more than 2,500 kindergarten through 12th-grade students.

Academy offers information on city projects

The City of Las Cruces is hosting its first-ever Neighborhood Leadership Academy to provide first-hand information about city services and programs to residents. The Academy was initiated by the city council and City Manager Stuart C. Ed, to provide residents greater engagement and connection with their city government.

Academy participants learn about city services, programs and departments. In early October, Las Cruces Utilities (LCU) provided demonstrations about utility services delivered daily to residents and businesses.

“The main purpose is to educate people. What better way than with hands-on training?” Utilities Director Jorge A. Garcia said.

The Solid Waste Section employees brought trash trucks, the Green Grappler, and a residential side loader. They handed out flyers and free bags of composted mulch made from the green waste picked up at the curb and managed at the Old Foothills Landfill. It takes nine months to process composted mulch; LCU produces the product and gives it back free to residents for dust control and water conservation in local gardens. “It’s great to have this new opportunity to explain the many services we provide,” said Robin Lawrence, interim solid waste administrator.

“People are used to turning the tap on, but they don’t know what it entails,”

Water Administrator Adrienne Widmer said.

The Wastewater Section displayed a model wastewater treatment facility enclosed in a glass case to explain what happens to water washed down the drain or flushed down the toilet. Wastewater Treatment Facility Manager Lorenzo Martinez told attendees how wastewater is processed and released as clean (although non-potable) water into the Rio Grande River.

LCU’s Gas Section focused on gas safety and how to respond if you smell gas in your home or business. Calling 811 before you dig is important to avoid destroying gas lines and creating serious safety hazards. Lucio Garcia, distribution and construction administrator, said, “Residents can learn to protect their systems and this Academy helps our residents become more knowledgeable and safe.”

“These classes are designed to be informative and interactive so participants will have a meaningful experience,” said Jamey Rickman, academy coordinator.

A 15-week spring academy will be offered beginning in February 2018, limited to 35 applicants. Applications will be available beginning Jan. 2, 2018, on the city’s website at www.las-cruces.org/nla, or at City Hall, 700 N. Main St. Anyone living within city limits and 18 years of age is eligible.

County commission has various definitions of 'success'

By LYNN MOORER

For the Bulletin

EDITOR'S NOTE: It depends on which Doña Ana County commissioner you ask as to what is considered a commission success and what isn't. In the second of a series, we examine views of the three new commissioners, two veteran commissioners and former County Manager Julia Brown, terminated this year. Viewpoints were obtained from interviews, commission meetings and emails.

Pay increases

Garrett and Brown cited pay increases for almost all county staff as a significant achievement. Brown said county pay has risen from the 18th to 37th percentile in terms of comparability to regional jobs.

"It was a huge jump, so much money that we couldn't afford to do it all at once," Brown said. "I had to break it up over two years."

Garrett says he next wants to increase pay for all represented and unrepresented employees to the 40th percentile.

Gonzalez said the county is "making progress slowly" in paying union members in the sheriff's department "what's right" but thinks they should receive more money. According to Brown, Gonzalez stated during a meeting with her the sheriff deputies' union should be given 100 percent of what it is seeking, which she contended would bankrupt the county. Solis and Vasquez also believe sheriff's deputies should be paid more.

Underwriting DASO

"The Commission has done huge underwriting in modernizing vehicles and equipment" for the Doña Ana Sheriff's Office (DASO), Brown said. "DASO received a 25-percent funding increase in 2016 over 2015 – a good thing," she said, "although no amount the commission does would ever be enough to satisfy the sheriff."

Garrett agreed some DASO equipment needed to be replaced but questions the expense of the sheriff's choices. "We went from sedans that were law equipment built for patrol to Chevy Tahoes that cost significantly more," Garrett said. "He decided to move to a different model Glock" while "hundreds of handguns in the armory are unused. Some haven't even been out of the box."

The commission hasn't done a good job "exercising its responsibility to ground-truth the sheriff's requests and figuring out when to say 'no,'" according to Garrett.

"The amount of money and energy going into the sheriff's office is unwarranted," he said. "I don't think the sheriff has approached his position as managing within limited means" like every other county elected official and department has to. He's been supported in that by the majority of the commission. That's irresponsible."

DAC Sheriff Enrique Vigil did not respond to interview requests.

County manager

As an achievement, Rawson cited firing Brown, who wasn't "the right fit for the position," and the open search process for a new county manager. "We've decided that all of the information will be open to the public, unlike the City (of Las Cruces) did when they tried to hide that information" when hiring a new manager, Rawson said.

Garrett disagreed and does not view the commission's decision to fire Brown (on a 4-1 vote) as a success.

"The new commissioners didn't take time to get to know her, evaluate what she was doing, or clarify formally for her what their expectations were," Garrett said.

(Brown's termination as county manager will be examined in more detail in a later series story.)

Crisis Triage Center

Solis considers the county's actions regarding the Crisis Triage Center less than a success. It "was a project that was not researched well before it was constructed," she said. "It's a beautiful facility" that's "been vacant for years. Now we're finding ways to utilize it to benefit taxpayers."

Gonzalez regards it a success that "things are developing" in staffing it.

Other successes

- Road improvements in Dripping Springs, Baylor Canyon, Soledad Canyon, Las Alturas, Tortugas – Rawson; Roads Department maintaining more than 1,500 road miles annually – Solis.
- Drainage project in Tortugas; drainage plan for Vado – Rawson.

- Support for Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks (OMDP) monument – Vasquez; taking positions on issues outside the board's control such as OMDP, marriage equality, immigrants – Garrett.

- Mesilla Valley Regional Dispatch Authority project with the City of Las Cruces, which has a new facility and its staff situation stabilized – Rawson.

- Hiring an internal auditor – Solis.

- Support for the regional planning initiative, then adoption of products that came out of that process, e.g., comprehensive plan, Unified Development Code (UDC) – Garrett.

- Support for the work at the animal shelter, adoption of a new ordinance in 2015, and "staying engaged with the work since then" – Garrett.

- Improving the way county government operates, including updating and refining Human Resources policy manual; improving documentation about facilities, roads, and infrastructure; working on asset management program and strategic plan; adopting financial management strategy; support for detention center to get accredited – Garrett.
- Programs, particularly in Health and Human Services (HHS) Department that informed residents about available resources and "about information that people need to have in order to survive and thrive" – Brown.
- Partnership between HHS and detention center to provide counseling services in the center, staffed by La Clinica de Familia, for people with behavioral health problems – Brown.

Other nonsuccesses

- Commission hasn't "established a shared vision" of issues that "deserve our attention" – Garrett.

- "Finding each department's mission" – Gonzalez.

- DAC has more employees than it needs. An external auditor needs to investigate each department regarding whether all personnel are actually needed and some jobs could be combined – Gonzalez.

- $12.3 million tax increase in 2014 after voters turned down $10 million initiative for transit district – Rawson.

- A "lot of lawsuits against the county," which "has paid out a ton of money, sometimes for bad behavior and other times in settlements refusing to acknowledge any bad behavior totaling in the last five years close to $25 million" – Rawson.

- Not partnering with municipalities and school districts to coordinate infrastructure development – Solis.

- The need to create an economic development department and become more business friendly – Vasquez.

- UDC "pushed through without getting community buy-in" – Vasquez.

- DAC is doing too much contracting – Vasquez, Solis.

- New commissioners (Solis, Gonzalez, Vasquez) haven't informed themselves on the issues and resisted efforts by knowledgeable staff to brief them – Brown.

City takeover of animal shelter considered

By LYNN MOORER
For the Bulletin

The City of Las Cruces (CLC) may take over the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley (ASCMV), combining the shelter operations and city animal control within one city department.

The ASCMV, established under a Joint Powers Agreement between the CLC and Doña Ana County (DAC) in 2008, has struggled with an unwieldy governing structure. Its board is comprised of three city councilors, two county commissioners, the county's public information officer, and two ex-officio members.

City Councilor Jack Eakman, who has served on the ASCMV board two years, said during a joint city-county work session Oct. 18 at City Hall, "We have the wrong structure in place to try to take care of this important challenge." He noted the ASCMV policy-making board hires an executive director, which hires Animal Services Center staff, but is separate from the city animal control and county animal control. "We need an organization that can get things done—probably in a management role rather than a policy-making role," Eakman said.

Assistant City Manager for Operations David Dollahon presented a proposal, designated Phase 1, to transition the ASCMV into a city department, ultimately reporting to City Manager Stuart Ed through the established chain of command beginning July 1, 2018, in combination with city animal control. "We feel this provides greater administrative oversight and accountability for the shelter's operations," Dollahon said.

"I felt that we could benefit from a unity of command, a unified leadership team," Ed said.

Dollahon said the ASCMV board would be eliminated and shelter employees would become city employees. "No one would lose their job."

Dollahon proposed that the county and city continue to pay $910,000 each for Fiscal Year 2018 for shelter operations. Subsequently, fees based on "the true cost" of service at the shelter for animals picked up in the county's unincorporated areas would be determined, which DAC would pay.

Phase 2

Dollahon also previewed a second phase which the city and county might consider long-term. In Phase 2, the county animal control operations and staff would become part of the city's animal control department under a new Joint Powers Agreement.

"This would allow for enforcement of the county's animal control ordinance by then what would be city staff," he said.

It would also involve transfer of county animal control assets to the city with the county continuing to pay the salaries of former county staff who are transferred to the city.

City Councilor Ceil Levatino said, "An awful lot of the issues that the center faces really have to do with the facility—the tremendous need for a newer, larger, better facility. It's heartbreaking to go out there. The facility is just abysmal." Levatino suggested moving shelter facilities into the old K-Mart building, which is "huge, up and centrally located."

"How would putting everything under one entity help the animals throughout the county so they are not subject to euthanasia?" City Councilor Olga Pedroza asked.

Ed responded that more hands-on, professional oversight of the facility would ultimately benefit the animals.

City Councilor Kasandra Gandara, co-chair of the ASCMV board, said, "I, too, believe we need to look at our structure more closely to better take care of animals." She cautioned that her colleagues who don't sit on the board need a lot of education and data, including the best practices in other shelters.

Ed acknowledged Phase 2 involves "complicated issues." Mayor Ken Miyagishima said it may be possible to "streamline this operation," saving money that could be used to expand programs, such as spay/neuter and transporting adoptable animals to other states.

Noting he wanted fiscal projection analysis for the city before a final decision, City Councilor Gill Sorg said, "It looks on the surface like a good thing to do. Let's proceed."

DAC commissioner Isabella Solis agreed. "Phase 1 sounds like a great idea. I like the fact of having direct oversight and hands on."

Advocacy and rescue groups

ASCMV Board chair and DAC public information officer Jess Williams stated during public comment, "This is a very encouraging dialog" but "without a commitment to Phase 2, I probably couldn't support it ... It's a problem when you have city animal control and county animal control that don't report to the (ASCMV) executive director."

This makes it difficult to achieve the goal of becoming a no-kill shelter for healthy adoptable animals by the end of next year, Williams said. "It's important that the command structure has consistent marching orders and ability to enforce them consistently."

The city should also recognize and value the many animal advocacy and rescue groups that exist in the region, Williams said. "They have to continue. They can help us get us to where we want to be."

"I'm buoyed by what I saw today," said Frank Bryce, president of the Humane Society of Southern New Mexico. "If it was working, we wouldn't be here. But it sounds like we got a real good start to make it work better."

Tom Townsend, former co-chair of the Coalition of Pets and People, told commissioners and councilors, "Anytime you can straighten out the lines on your organizational chart, that's a good thing. But don't ignore input from an advisory committee of people in your community. That's where the solutions will be found with people that do animal welfare work every day."

Animal advocate Jackye Meinecke said she hopes to see "a different attitude going forward from the city."

"In the past, the city has not been particularly supportive of our animal issues," she said.

Miyagishima said he supports creation of a city-county advisory board to hear stakeholders' input.

County Commissioner Ramon Gonzalez agreed. "I think an advisory committee would be very vital to have on board," he said.

Proposing another work session to examine additional data, Miyagishima concluded, "It looks like we have consensus from the city to move forward and work with the county."

Open house paints picture of arts and culture district

By MIKE COOK

Las Cruces Bulletin

A co-op art gallery, street plaques in front of local galleries and bringing NMSU students and staff to downtown were among hundreds of suggestions received from visitors to the city's arts and culture open house held at the Museum of Nature and Science Oct. 18.

The city is developing a plan for an arts and culture district (ACD) built on strategies "that have been looked at since 1994 on how to revitalize what used to be the heart of Las Cruces," said Las Cruces arts activist Irene Oliver-Lewis.

Oliver-Lewis is part of the consulting team of SV Pratt Creative Strategies of Santa Fe that the city has hired to draft the plan. Owner Sabrina Pratt attended the open house and a subsequent meeting of the city's Arts and Culture District Coordinating Council.

"I was very pleased with the number of people and diversity of the crowd," Pratt said after the open house. "We received almost 700 ideas and comments that will lead to an exciting community-led plan. Everyone I spoke with was very positive about the direction of the downtown historical area and wanting to make more happen by establishing an arts and cultural district."

Attendees at the open house included elected officials, business owners and artists.

Las Cruces City Council candidate Gabe Vasquez jots down a suggestion for the proposed arts and culture district at the city's open house on Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Suggestions came in response to five questions posed on bulletin boards and included ways a city arts and culture district could enrich a city, a two-word description of Las Cruces culture, education and advocacy opportunities and "conventional, unconventional and crazy partnerships to make things happen."

Suggestions included, "Help small business with meet & greet events," "More 'border art' connections and partnerships with El Paso, Deming, T or C," "Artist residencies downtown" and "Educate art students on creating business downtown."

Developing the plan, Oliver-Lewis said, is "the next phase of growth of the original town site."

She said an ACD will help the city create economic development opportunities through the creative economy generating billions of dollars statewide.

The ACD is "an area of special focus involving art, culture and history," city Downtown Coordinator Andy Hume said. "It's a very targeted plan made to dovetail with the city's master plan."

Eight New Mexico cities are state-designated ACD's, Hume said, including Albuquerque, Los Alamos, Taos, Raton (including Mora), Gallup, Las Vegas, Silver City and Artesia.

Las Cruces' applications for a state-designated ACD beginning in 2008 were denied because of state funding issues, he said, so the city decided to self-designate. With council approval of the ACD plan, he said, the city will be two-thirds of the way toward a successful state re-application.

In addition to bringing state funding, having the plan will help the city identify grants and other potential funding sources, he said.

One significant question an ACD needs to address, Hume said, is how to "pull in satellite areas" in the city where artists work but that are outside the proposed district bounded by Picacho Avenue (north), Mesquite Street (east), Amador Avenue (south), and Water Street (west).

The goal is to "grow the pie for artists and the art community," Hume said. "If we all work together, we all benefit."

The ACD, he said, will be a "collective, creative consciousness."

Hume said city staff will participate and support the ACD, but the district will be community led.

"It's a participatory district," he said. "That's vital. That's really the key to making it successful."

For more information, contact Hume at 575-528-3048 and ahume@las-cruces.org, Armando Morales at 575-528-3476 and armorales@las-cruces.org, or Rebecca Slaughter at 575-541-2156 and rslaughter@las-cruces.org.

As City of Las Cruces Downtown Coordinator Andy Hume looks on, developer Max Bower speaks to the Las Cruces City Council, meeting as the city's Tax Increment Development District (TIDD) board about progress on the Amador Redevelopment Project. The project is "on time and on budget," Hume said. The Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau building at the site should reach "substantial completion" within 30 days, Hume said. "We're very excited about where this project is." Hume also said the city's Church-Water Two-Way Conversion Project is proceeding on schedule, with phase I at the south end of the project expected to be completed by Jan. 31, 2018. The entire project, he said, should be completed before the end of 2018. City Economic Development Department Director Phil San Filippo said the project to expand the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave., should be complete by April 2019.

DRAFT FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

NAME OF THE PROPOSED ACTION: Draft Environmental Assessment for Extended Range Capabilities, White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico.

INTRODUCTION: Pursuant to section 102(2)(c) of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969 and the Council on Environmental Quality Regulations (40 Code of Federal Regulations Parts 1500-1508) implementing the procedural provisions of NEPA, White Sands Test Center, gives notice that an Environmental Assessment (EA) was prepared and a Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) has been issued for extended range capabilities testing at White Sands Missile Range (WSMR), New Mexico. Based on the EA it has been determined that an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) is not required for the proposed action.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED ACTION:

The proposed action is to test a suite of Extended Range (ER) Launch Test Articles (LTAs) comprised of surface-to-air (STA), surface-to-surface (STS), and air-to-air (ATA) articles at WSMR while operating three new extended airspace corridors in and beyond WSMR's restricted airspace over the Northern Call-up Area (NCA) as well as designate and utilize a new 1,000-acre debris impact area (DIA) in the NCA. The proposed airspace corridors are located over portions of Valencia, Bernalillo, and Torrance Counties while the 1,000 acre DIA, would be established in the southern portion of the NCA to receive ground impacts associated with proposed LTA testing as well as serve as the recovery area.

The proposed testing may include interception of either moving aerial, or stationary targets, but may also involve tests where no target is utilized. During moving aerial target testing, the temporary airspace corridors would be utilized to fly target drones north, through the NCA, to a designated turn-around point. At the designated point, the target drone would turn to the south and return toward WSMR, to be intercepted by a LTA in the airspace over the DIA. Additional testing may include deployment of a LTA to intercept a stationary target within the DIA, or tests to simply evaluate the trajectory of a LTA, with no target involvement. All launches would be initiated from facilities within WSMR.

Locations of project features are shown in Figure 1 of the EA. The EA provides additional detail regarding implementation features of the proposed action. The following two alternatives are considered: 1) the Preferred Alternative which would allow the implementation and operation of as many as 25 live-fire extended range LTA tests per year utilizing the three newly designated airspace corridors and the DIA within the NCA; and 2) the no action alternative which would result in no extended range capabilities testing using the 1,000-acre DIA in the NCA, nor would the three airspace routes be active for testing on or off WSMR..

PURPOSE AND NEED:

The purpose of the proposed action is to test various LTAs over long distances in order to examine and advance the usefulness, technology and capabilities of various LTA weapon systems. The proposed action is driven by the need to continually test LTA capabilities against ever improving enemy technology in the form of air-delivered threats under longer range conditions. The tests will provide valuable information on LTA performance in long-range flight and interception scenarios, to test the capabilities for missile defense systems.

ALTERNATIVE TO BE IMPLEMENTED:

The Preferred Alternative is selected for the implementation of the Proposed Action since it is the alternative that best meets the purpose and need of the Proposed Action and the EA concludes that its implementation would not significantly impact the human or natural environment.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONSEQUENCES:

The EA contains the results of an impact analysis of the proposed action and alternative on the affected environment, including airspace and land use; physical resources (climate, topography, geology, soils, air quality, and water resources); aesthetics and visual resources; biological resources (flora, fauna and threatened and endangered species); cultural resources; noise and vibration; socioeconomic resources; utilities and infrastructure; hazardous and solid waste; radiation; and human health and safety. No significant impacts on the environment have been identified for the LTA testing activities and no significant cumulative impacts are expected.

CONCLUSION: Based on the analysis in this EA and consideration of the described mitigation measures and best management practices listed in Chapter 4, and in accordance with the guidelines for determining the significance of proposed federal actions (40 C.F.R. 1508.27) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) criteria for initiating an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) (40 C.F.R. 6.207), WSMR has concluded that the designation of three new airspace corridors and the establishment of a temporary DIA in the NCA at the candidate location will not result in a significant effect on the environment. Applicable federal, state, and local laws and regulations would be followed. The White Sands Test Center and WSMR have determined that an EIS pursuant to the NEPA is not required, and this Finding of No Significant Impact is hereby submitted.

DRAFT AVAILABILITY AND POC: The Final EA is scheduled for completion before the end of February 2018. The Draft EA is available to the public at the following information repositories:

A Step into the Past

Step into the past at the Renaissance ArtsFaire

By CHERYL FALLSTEAD

For the Bulletin

The Doña Ana Arts Council's 46th Annual Renaissance ArtsFaire appears out of medieval ages Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 4 and 5, at Young Park in Las Cruces.

The faire features fine art and handcrafted items created by artists from around the Southwest (not all related to the past), food prepared by area kitchens, entertainment on several stages, a beer and wine garden and the rejuvenated Magellan the Dragon.

Gates are open from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday.

There's plenty for the wee ones at the Children's Realm, featuring activities and entertainment, a scavenger hunt, petting zoo and canoe rides offered as a fundraiser for the Boy Scouts where they can get close to Magellan the Dragon.

Each day at 1 p.m. there is a royal procession; everyone in costume is invited to join the parade.

The Order of Epona returns for two shows daily of jousting on horseback. Jousters will charge each other while mounted on sturdy steeds, seeking to knock each other from their horses. The Society for Creative Anachronism and Amtgard will also show visitors how medieval battles took place.

The Greyhounds of Fairhaven will again be at the faire, spotlighting rescued racing greyhounds now enjoying a life of leisure and showing their regal side.

Hawkquest returns, as well, with an opportunity to be up close and personal with majestic birds of prey.

Young artisans aged 16 and under may apply to peddle their wares in the Children's Realm without a booth fee. Contact the Doña Ana Arts Council (see below) to find out how to participate in the Peddlers' Market.

Avoid parking at Young Park by taking a free park and ride, the Royal Carriage, running between the southwest corner of the Mesilla Valley Mall and Young Park. There is limited parking onsite at the park.

ArtsFaire tickets are $10 per person, with children 12 and under free. Coupons at a discounted price of two for $15 are available in advance at the DAAC Arts and Cultural Center, 1740-B Calle de Mercado.

VIP packages for two people are $60, also available at DAAC or at www.daarts.org. The package includes preferred parking for one vehicle, two vintage T-shirts, access to the VIP area at the tavern with refreshments and up-front views of the main stage, plus a special area to watch jousting. A VIP pass for one person is $35.

More information can be found online at www.daarts.org or by calling 575-523-6403.

HawkQuest non-profit volunteers and raptors are on the scene at the 2016 ArtsFaire.

Renaissance ArtsFaire flies with birds of prey

Medieval royalty and their birds of prey were seldom parted, and lords and ladies took them hunting, on campaigns of war, and, for some, even to church. Falconry was a practice that spread over the centuries from Asia and Arabia and by the Middle Ages was firmly part of the culture in England, with even the lower classes being allowed to own certain hunting birds.

For some, the practice was sport; for others, a way of obtaining a meal. The lords, ladies and peasants at the 46th Annual Renaissance ArtsFaire will rekindle their long-standing relationship with these magnificent birds when HawkQuest visits the faire for the 12th time.

HawkQuest is a Colorado-based non-profit organization that seeks to educate the public about raptors and their role in our environment, taking them to classrooms and events around the region.

They care for 37 birds of prey that can no longer live in the wild, including eagles, hawks, falcons, owls and a turkey vulture. These birds either have been injured or imprinted upon humans, so now live in safety with HawkQuest and carry on the vital role of educating the public.

Kin Quittugua, a master falconer originally from Guam, is the executive director and founder of HawkQuest. Education, he says, is the goal.

"We do the venue and we dress for the venue, but the bottom line is education. We tell kids these are not pets and we never use their names."

There will be two presentations daily at the Children's Realm stage, at 10:30 a.m. and 2 p.m.

It is quite appropriate, Quittugua said, that they will also be walking in the daily royal procession at 1 p.m.

The complex grudges of a vanishing culture

By JEFF BERG
For the Bulletin

I Dream in Another Language follows a “normal” relationship but focuses on another unusual relationship, one between the last two speakers of a rare language and their 50-year feud.

This film, which was part of the Sundance Film Festival World Dramatic Competition, follows a young linguist who is hoping to research and thus help keep the dying (fictional) language of Zikril alive.

Well aware of the cultural loss if the language disappears, he ventures into a small isolated native village in the jungles of Vera Cruz, Mexico, to do his research.

Quiet and unassuming, Martin (Fernando Alvarez Rebeil), finds that there are three people who speak Zikril, all elderly, one in poor health. The woman he meets is more than happy to oblige him, but she dies suddenly, leaving only two ancient men for him to work with.

Evaristo wants nothing to do with Martin and makes that abundantly clear. He also makes it very clear that he will never speak to Isauro, the other knowledgeable Zikril speaker. Evaristo's educated and vivacious granddaughter at first sides with him and keeps Martin at bay, but it isn't long before she becomes an ally, not to mention a partner in the boudoir.

Isauro, in frail health and considered the outcast of the village since he knows only Zikril and not Spanish, is willing to work with Martin and wants to end the long, long misgivings between himself and Evaristo.

In flashback, we learn that both men loved the same woman, who Evaristo later married. She has since passed away, but the secret part of this semi-ménage-a-trois still exists and Evaristo will not speak of what had happened when the three of them were best friends many years before.

Martin's attempts to have Evaristo and Isauro cooperate finally take hold when he bribes Evaristo with a new television. But the meeting doesn't last long before old hurts return. Isauro's health continues to falter.

Martin knows that there must be more to explain 50 years of bitterness, and he's right, as he finds out through Lluvia, Evaristo's granddaughter, who found out from her grandmother years earlier.

There are some plot holes here, one being why Lluvia so quickly decides to help Martin, unless it is because she realizes that her culture is endangered or maybe because her friends know she has a crush on him, or perhaps a combo of both. The other is why Isauro never learned Spanish and remained mostly isolated.

The tribe also has some very wonderful traditions, especially the “magic cave” where all tribal members who die end up. It is the site of an endless party and makes for pleasant comic relief to help break the tension of this very intense drama. The Zikril people also can converse with animals and birds, as Martin finds out when the elderly woman takes him to the jungle to prove said claim.

The film often moves slowly, but in my mind it matches the lifestyle of such a small, isolated place. The cinematography is superb and the direction and performances, especially by Evaristo and Isauro, are amazing.

Cutter Gallery hosts 'Elemental'

BULLETIN REPORT

The Cutter Gallery hosts a one-woman exhibition of jewelry and paintings by Las Cruces artist Jo-an Smith throughout November.

The opening reception for "Elemental" is 1-4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 4, at the gallery, 2640 El Paseo Road.

The Cutter also hosts two special events in association with "Elemental." The first, "Memories," is 11 a.m.-noon Saturday, Nov. 11, a conversation with Al Tombaugh about his father, Clyde, who discovered Pluto (one of Smith's paintings is of Pluto).

The second, from noon-3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 18, is a discussion and walking tour by Smith.

Smith and her family moved to Las Cruces in 1972, after moving 20 times in 20 years across the Western Hemisphere, according to a gallery news release.

At age 39, Smith became a professional artist. She earned a BA in jewelry and printmaking from UTEP and an MA in jewelry design from NMSU. She became a designer and goldsmith at Cutter Gallery, beginning a long friendship with gallery owners Sally and Glenn Cutter.

Smith had her first solo show with the Cutters in 1976, and continues to exhibit and design custom jewelry for their gallery.

"I like the fact that jewelry is so personal," Smith said in the news release. "It's a type of sculpture – a three-dimensional, wearable art form. And each piece is one of a kind."

In 1990, Smith began painting, with New Mexico providing much of her inspiration. Recently, she has been drawn to photographic images captured by the Hubble Space Telescope, "fascinated by the mysteries of deep space and the night sky," according to the news release.

"Elemental" "embodies the ongoing sense of exploration" at the root of all of Smith's artwork, according to the news release.

"The paintings, some acrylics and some oils, comprise abstracts, miniatures and images of familiar New Mexico landscapes," the release said. "The show's centerpiece is 'Our Pluto,' an oil rendering of the dwarf planet Pluto and Charon, the largest of Pluto's five moons."

'What's in a Title?': The artist's questions and answers

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

What does New Mexico light do when it hits buildings? What if I illustrate a song? What IS in a title?

Watercolor artist Paul Vakselis has taken his curiosity in the world and transferred it to paper with ethereal and intriguing images that hang at the Café de Mesilla in an exhibit lasting until Dec. 5. A reception for "What's in a Title?" will be held from 5-7 p.m. on Nov. 17 (a change from the original Nov. 3 reception date).

"What's in a Title?" not only asks a question but answers it, as Vakselis has carefully documented the reason for each title in the exhibit. One wall has a series of paintings based on John Denver's "Annie's Song," titled individually as "A night in a forest," "The mountains in springtime," "A walk in the rain," "A storm in the desert" and "A sleepy blue ocean."

Vakselis' art reflects the things that touch his heart. Images painted from Biblical quotes like the painting, "My Path," depict a man holding a lantern and a child walking on a forest path away from the viewer and illustrating the quote "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:105).

The reflections of New Mexico color and light on buildings are also attributed to "God's palette of sunset colors ... brushed onto the adobe walls being used as canvases for the artwork."

Vakselis' vision of the world continues to expand with "A Flower of the Field," another Biblical reference, and "Greta Oto," a glass-winged butterfly. Both paintings bring nature close to the observer for insight and delight.

The touching nature of this show not only addresses the "What's in a Title?" theme but also emphasizes watercolor's infinite capacity to depict subtle emotions and blend them into everyday visions.

Café de Mesilla is located at 2190 Avenida de Mesilla in Mesilla. For information, Vakselis can be reached at 575-522-2242.

"Greta Oto" by Paul Vakselis is a painting of the glasswinged butterfly which has see-through wings.

As a 'hart' pants for the edge of the water

Here is a familiar Psalm: "As a hart longs for flowing streams, so longs my soul for thee, O God. My soul thirsts for God, for the living God. When shall I come and behold the face of God? My tears have been my food day and night, while men say to me continually, 'Where is your God?'" (Psalm 42:1-3 Revised Standard Version).

The Hebrew for this Psalm reads, in English, "as a deer longs for the water's edge." This is different. The deer is not looking for fulfillment of thirst; the deer searches to find where the water is. The deer senses the presence of the water and it is enough, for the moment.

GABRIEL ROCHELLE
Tales from the Cassock

This Psalm speaks to our post-modern condition. As Christianity fades in the twilight of American empire, the Psalm begins to make more sense than ever. We are looking simply for the water's edge, for the sniffing out of the Holy wherever the scent may be found. The Psalmist yearns to see the Face of God, but that is forbidden; in Exodus 32, God hides Moses in a rock because no one can see the face of God and live. And yet the yearning remains.

Faith is not primarily a matter of sight. It has more than a significant percentage of hope; in fact, in our time it may be primarily hope.

I am a man of prayer who doesn't know how to pray. I am a man of God who doesn't know much about God. I am a man of faith who struggles to remain faithful. I am a man of hope whose hopes are constantly crushed by the cruelty of contemporary society. Like the deer I come to the edge of the water. I know the water is there, but I am not able to drink.

The Psalmist wrestles with his faith; he is not full of conviction so much as he is full of questions and yearnings and hunches. He hears clearly the words of his interlocutors: "Where is your God?"

The Psalmist yearns for "the living God," and his choice of words clarify that he means the God of Israel, who rescued the people from the house of bondage, the one who remains able to rescue us from the bondage in our lives.

Some of us are honest enough to admit that we live by hope and not by sight. Yet we do not give up. You wake up one day and realize that the yearning is your faithfulness. The edge of the water suffices for the cold drink.

Mocked as all we faithful are by those who lack faith, we continue to cling to our vision, our hope, even when the agony and brutality of life point us away from any and all certainty. Caught between faith and its rejection we occupy a position at water's edge (with) often-unbearable tension. It would be easier to cut the tension and give in to a simplistic faith or an equally simplistic rejection. With neither credulity nor skepticism we stand at water's edge, living in hope with the smell of the Holy in our nostrils.

Play It Again Sports opens on Amador

By ALTA LECOMPTE
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Indiana transplants Justin and Alysha Glick decided to enroll their 5-year-old son in T-ball, they had an unpleasant surprise: Buying the gear would strain their young family's budget. They looked around for an affordable option, such as Play It Again Sports, a store that features gently used, high-quality sporting goods.

"We both grew up shopping at Play It Again Sports in Elkhart," she said.

They learned there was no such store in Las Cruces, so they decided to open one themselves.

Both were employed in human services and were ready for a new challenge, a new way to serve.

"I worked for the state," said Justin Glick, who was a social worker. "There was no career growth there."

Alysha Glick was director of client services at a pregnancy crisis center.

"We knew (Play It Again Sports) was something we needed," she said. "In our heart we knew we could bring something to the community that would help them."

tember at 1021, E. Amador Ave., the former home of ABC Party World. Alysha Glick said they selected the location because it's close to city baseball and soccer fields and has good traffic flow.

"ABC Party World closed in February and we signed in June," Justin Glick said.

He said they did extensive renovations in the 3,500 square foot space, knocking out walls and adding rubber flooring throughout.

Before opening, the Glicks had spent a year building their inventory of high-quality used equipment, visiting with people locally and checking out craigslist and other online sources.

Vendors supply the new merchandise.

"Football, fitness and golf are really popular," Alysha Glick said. "We have a really awesome golf section. A lot of our high end is used."

Concept catches on Justin Glick said Play It Again Sports is headquartered in Minneapolis and consists of a network of more than 300 stores.

Alysha Glick said corporate takes much smaller royalties than most franchises, while encouraging local autonomy.

"We are very locally owned," she said. "We can get input from the franchiser but we have the say."

Used equipment is selling a lot faster than new, Justin Glick said.

"When the community comes in and understands, they're so overjoyed. One customer came to see what we had and then came in five more times in the next few days. Another literally earned $800 in store credit," she said. "He emptied out his entire garage and attic."

Couple embraces lifestyle change

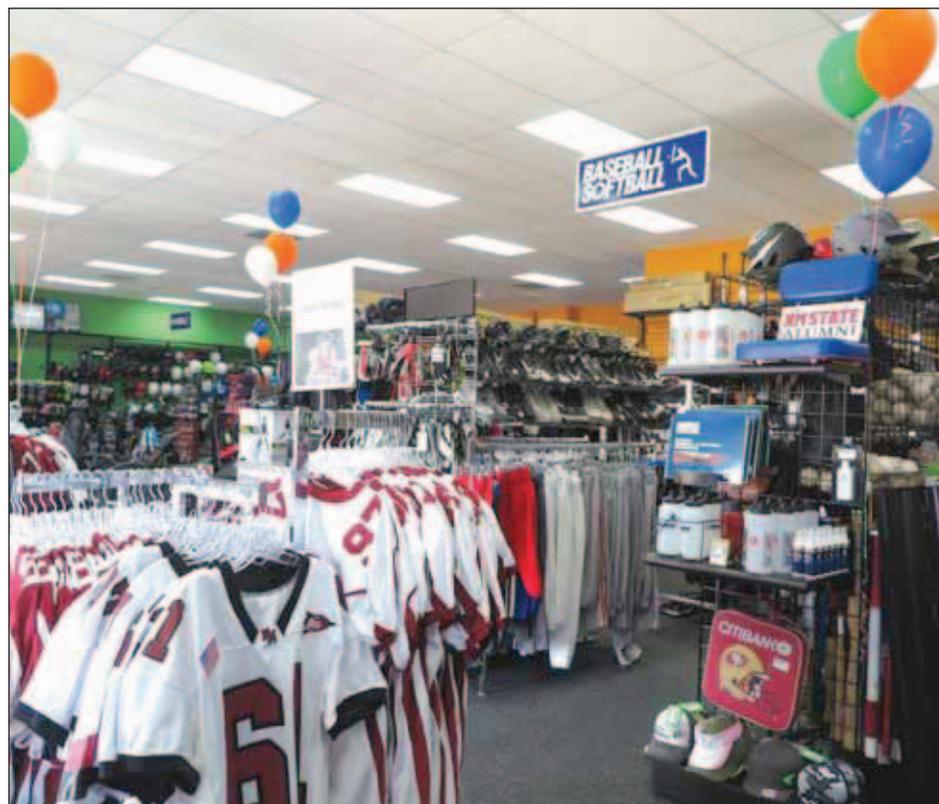

Becoming business owners is profound for the couple, whose youngest son has a crib for napping in the store's office.

"We work very hard to stay balanced. We focus on the children and each other. We do fun things with the kids in the community and spend time with one another.

"We try to give each other grace.”

For a young couple, they share a lot of history.

Justin and Alysha Glick were born in the same hospital. They attended the same church and knew of one another before actually meeting when she was 15.

“We met in the critical care unit of the hospital,” Alysha Glick said. Both were visiting seriously ill family members.

She was raised in an entrepreneurial family. He was an athlete.

He earned a master’s in counseling from Liberty University where she received a bachelor of science in psychology.

Their business and their lives are works in progress, Alysha Glick said.

After 10 years of marriage, they have three children, ages 8, 4, and 11 months.

As a family, they play together and are personally acquainted with much of the equipment they sell.

“We love to take the kids hiking and swimming,” Alysha Glick said. “We go on family hikes and bike rides.”

In fact, their idea of an enjoyable evening at home is jumping on a trampoline.

Because family time is precious to them, she said, they strongly value their eight employees’ time with their families.

State’s gross receipts tax: It’s complicated

New Mexico’s gross receipts tax is admittedly confusing, but the state still expects businesses to follow the law and pay what they owe from the sale of property or services.

In a nutshell, GRT is a substitute for the traditional sales tax that shoppers in other states pay when they make a purchase. In New Mexico, the seller pays the tax on the sales price of a product or service even if the seller doesn’t collect it from the buyer, and even if the buyer lives out of state.

GRT was intended to widen the tax base by taxing more items at a lower rate than would be typical in states with a sales tax. Over the years, though, cities and counties have responded to reductions in local revenues caused by state-allowed exemptions and deductions by loading on their own assessments. The combined tax rate in some towns is now – or is about to go over – 9 percent.

Until lawmakers agree on an alternative system, businesses should know how to comply with the status quo.

GRT applies to the gross receipts of businesses or people who sell property, perform services, lease or license a property or franchise in New Mexico, and sell certain services delivered outside New Mexico when the resulting product is initially used here. Some transactions are tax exempt, and some are deductible. A detailed explanation is available from the state Taxation and Revenue Department (TRD); ask for “Gross Receipts and Compensating Taxes: An Overview” (FYI-105).

The state takes the bulk of GRT proceeds – 5.125 percent – to provide services; the balance consists of “local options” taxes that counties, municipalities and special districts assess to underwrite public services such as police, fire, water and jails. In some municipalities, GRT revenue represent 70 to 85 percent of the budget; in counties, it can account for 30 percent of revenue. A business ordinarily bases its GRT on the rate that applies to its physical base of operations, but many companies transact business online or in multiple places and thus register each site separately and pay different GRT rates.

In most cases, the tax revenue benefits the municipality in which the business is physically based. TRD publishes site-specific GRT rates that itemize all state, local and special taxes being assessed (such as those for water dis-districts or improvement districts). Businesses pay the applicable taxes via the online combined reporting system (CRS) portal, and TRD disburses local portions to each local entity.

A business based in a municipality pays the municipality's rate; a business outside an incorporated municipality pays the county rate. A business with no physical location in New Mexico but with a resident representative considers the in-state location as the business headquarters. Companies with no physical location or resident salesperson pay tax at the rate for out-of-state businesses: 5.125 percent.

Registering a business helps the state know that a business is charging the appropriate local GRT rate. Businesses that evade GRT by dodging registration should understand that laws allow government entities to assess stiff penalties. For example, for each day a business is out of compliance, its municipality can fine it up to $500 and jail the owner for 90 days. That translates into about $15,000 and more than seven years in jail for each month the business is under the radar.

To help businesses navigate the rules of the GRT system, the TRD offers workshops and other materials. For a workshop schedule, visit <http://www.tax.newmexico.gov/workshop-schedule.aspx>.

Lessons from Arizona State University: Do's, don'ts and can'ts

Arizona State University has a reputation for innovation, styling itself as the “New American University.” Recently, a group of NMSU faculty and administrators, including yours truly and also Provost Dan Howard, traveled to Tempe to see what lessons ASU might have for NMSU.

One thing that jumps out is that ASU is a massive enterprise. It serves 100,000 students – about 70,000 in residence and another 30,000 on line – with more than 2,000 faculty. Depending on how you measure these things, it is the largest university in the country.

ASU also pays top dollar for their faculty and staff. This is partly driven by their huge student body. This allows cost savings that are partially passed on to faculty and staff in the form of higher salaries.

Breaking down silos is an ongoing theme at ASU. The idea is to organize around problems rather than around disciplines. While easily said, silo deconstruction is not easy. ASU has done so by encouraging “dotted line” relationships between faculty in one discipline with departments or schools in another discipline. We meet one professor, for example, who had a primary appointment in the School of Religion, Philosophy and History, and a secondary appointment in engineering institute. He worked on the ethics of new technologies.

CHRIS ERICKSON
State of the Economy

The extent of change at ASU is uneven. There is the School of Sustainability that was started de novo about a decade ago. Many were skeptical of its long-term potential, viewing sustainability as a wool-headed concept. But in fact, the school is a great success, having developed a truly interdisciplinary program that utilizes faculty from across the campus. Its graduates are finding good-paying jobs. NMSU is developing a sustainability program; ASU success in the area provides a model for a path forward by our program.

The biological sciences took a different tack, merging several existing departments into a single School of Life Sciences. Again, the outcome is viewed as positive. Then there is the College of Engineering that was forced to reorganize in the wake of the Great Recession. There was initially a great deal of disgruntlement, but in the end, at least among the faculty members we talked to, the consensus is that the reorganization has worked out well. And ASU saves money by having fewer larger units.

Driving all this change is Michael Crow, ASU's president. In conversation after conversation, people kept invoking his name, almost as a sort of mantra. Crow's personality and vision permeates the place. Crow is clearly a transformative leader. He is also the highest-paid college president in the country. Whether NMSU can identify and then attract such a transformative leader is problematic. They don't grow on trees.

ASU has some advantages that make change easier than it might otherwise be. It has a huge budget, in which small tweaks can fund significant new initiatives. ASU has a growing student body, having recently expanded aggressively into the online market. And over 15 years, Michael Crow has managed to create a culture of change. He has achieved this in part by force of will, in part by recruiting new personnel that share his vision, and by demonstrating the benefits of change through success.

Christopher A. Erickson, Ph.D., is a professor of economics at NMSU. He is member of Team 6, the task force charged with recommending changes to the academic organization of the University. The opinions expressed may not be shared by the other member of Team 6, the regents or administration of NMSU. Chris can be reached at chrerick@nmsu.edu.

NMSU students assist community with plant problems

New Mexico State University's Diagnosing Plant Disorders class held a community outreach event on Monday, Oct. 16.

The event began with a plant diagnosis neighborhood walk along Idaho Street, starting at Locust Street and ending at Young Park. Students discussed with homeowners any plant problems or questions they may have. At the park they fielded questions from people in the community.

Soum Sanago is the course instructor of the Diagnosing Plant Disorders class in the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences.

"The event is about challenging students and giving them the opportunity to serve the community using the skills they have acquired in the classroom," Sanago said.

The students were assisted by Sanago and other professors and professionals from NMSU, including entomologist Carol Sutherland, plant diagnostic clinician Jason French, Extension weed specialist Leslie Beck and professor of horticulture and plant mineral nutrition Geno Picchioni.

Ximena Tapia may be reached at 575-646-6233, xtapia@nmsu.edu.

Honoring Veterans

Here are just some of the ways you can honor military veterans on Veterans Day.

- ★ Draw a picture about Veterans Day and send it to your newspaper. Maybe it will be published!
- ★ Make a card to thank veterans. You can send your card to a local VA Medical Center.
- ★ Ask your teacher to invite veterans to your classroom. You can learn a lot from your guests!
- ★ Have your school make a poster with the names (and pictures) of relatives and friends who are veterans.
- ★ Write an acrostic poem using the words "THANK YOU." Begin each line with a word that starts with the letter shown and give it to a friend or family member who is a veteran.

Scaring up some ghoulish delights

If you're in quest of monstrously delicious recipes for a boo bash, aka Halloween party, I share several that will scare noisy, scratching bats from attics and send screechin' witches on unplanned flights.

SUNNY CONLEY

Chile Knights

cha infused hummus
½ -1 tablespoon pumpkin puree
¼ teaspoon habañero powder

Mix all ingredients and serve with veggies or tortilla chips. Or use as a topping for baked or grilled chicken or substitute hummus for mayonnaise when preparing chicken salad for sandwiches.

Dracula's Pumpkin Chili

2 habañero peppers, chopped
¾ pounds ground beef
8 ounces canned pumpkin
1 (15 ounce) can red kidney beans
1 (15 ounces) can peeled tomatoes
4 teaspoons chili powder
½ teaspoon cumin
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ to 1 cup chicken stock*

Turn slow cooker to low heat. Heat a large pan to medium heat and add ground beef. Cook, stirring occasionally, about 8 minutes, or until beef is nicely browned.

Break beef apart with a wooden spoon and add to slow cooker.

Add remaining ingredients to slow cooker and stir well. Cover. Slow cook about 3 hours and serve! *For a thicker consistency, use less chicken stock

Mummies Nightmare Brownies (Yield: 16 squares)

8 tablespoons (1 stick) unsalted butter, plus more for pan
6 ounces bittersweet chocolate, chopped
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼-½ teaspoon habañero pepper
½ teaspoon salt
1 ¾ cups sugar
4 large eggs
1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract
1 ¼ cups solid-pack pumpkin
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ cup chopped hazelnuts or other nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Butter a 9-inch square baking pan or dish. Line bottom of pan with parchment paper; butter lining.

Melt chocolate and butter in a heatproof bowl set over a pan of simmering water, stirring occasionally until smooth.

Whisk together flour, baking powder, habañero powder, and salt in a large bowl; set aside. Put sugar, eggs, and vanilla in the bowl of an electric mixer attached with the paddle attachment; beat until fluffy and well combined, 3 to 5 minutes. Beat in flour mixture. Note: This can also be done by hand with a whisk but it will take longer to get desired consistency.

Divide batter between two medium bowls (about 2 cups per bowl). Stir chocolate mixture into one bowl. In other bowl, stir in pumpkin, oil, cinnamon, and nutmeg.

Transfer half of chocolate batter to prepared pan smoothing top with a rubber spatula. Top with half of pumpkin batter. Repeat to make one more chocolate layer and one more pumpkin layer. Work quickly so batters don't set.

With a small spatula or a table knife, gently swirl the two batters to create a marbled effect. Sprinkle with nuts.

Bake until set, 40 to 45 minutes. Let cool in pan on a wire rack. Cut into 16 squares. (Adapted from Martha Stewart and Inspired by The Kitchen Sink)

Chilling Chocolate Chip

Dessert Cheese Ball

1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
½ cup butter, softened
¾ cup confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons brown sugar
¼-½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract
¾ cup miniature semisweet chocolate chips
¾ cup finely chopped pecans

In a medium bowl, beat together cream cheese and butter until smooth. Mix in confectioners' sugar, brown sugar, cayenne pepper, and vanilla. Stir in chocolate chips. Cover, and chill in the refrigerator for 2 hours.

Shape chilled cream cheese mixture into a ball. Wrap with plastic, and chill in the refrigerator for 1 hour. Roll the cheese ball in finely chopped pecans before serving. Serve with graham crackers or chocolate wafers.

Festus and the Coon

Doc had escaped his busy Omaha practice and met his friend Stevo west of Eustace for a little sport. "Ever hunted coon on one of these?" Doc asked as he jumped two mules outta the back of his pickup stockracks.

Billy and Festus were sensible mules who could handle most anything. The two hunters saddled up, sheathed their rifles and released the hound dogs.

It was good and dark by the time they set out across the open fields. The dogs were soon shiftn' and sniffin' through the creek bottom, checkin' the brush and cottonwood trees.

Pretty soon they set up a racket down through the draws and off they went with the mule riders in hot pursuit.

It wasn't long 'til the howls turned into a baying chorus. They had the coon treed!

Dismounting, they tied up the dogs and mules. The hunters turned their attention to a big elm tree. "Wil-ya shine the light up there, Stevo," asked Doc.

The coon sat on a limb twenty feet up. Doc brought him down with one shot.

It was a good sized boar coon with a thick pelt. Doc put a slip knot around the coon's hind legs and dangled him from the saddle horn.

They reorganized, released the dogs and were just fixin' to mount up when the

BAXTER BLACK
On the Edge of Common Sense

coon came back to life! He bit Festus's flank!

Festus broke into seventeen pieces! He went buckin' and squealin'. The saddlebag burst open scattering sandwiches, skinnin' knives, bullets, snuff cans, ear muffs, gloves and toilet paper into a tornado-like up-draft.

A canteen whizzed by Stevo's head! He hit the ground.

Festus tore up half an acre of underbrush as Doc held tight to the halter shank.

Festus managed to kick the coon and knock him out.

He hung loose as the spooked mule danced around and Doc tried to calm him down.

"Bring my gun and shine the light!" yelled Doc. He locked in a cartridge and was tryin' to aim the shakin' rifle when the coon struck again!

Festus bogged his head, brayed like a donkey and run flat over Doc! The hounds were circling the whirling dervish, barkin' like house dogs and gettin' kicked on a regular basis.

The coon loosed his grip and swung straight up.

The loop around his feet came loose and slingshot him into the night sky.

Festus and the dogs slowed to a walk down the creek a ways.

Doc picked himself up and took off behind them.

Stevo shined his flashlight around the scene. It looked like someone had drug a battleship through the woods.

He picked up the salvageable litter and, as an afterthought, guided his beam into the tree above him.

Two yellow eyes reflected in the flashlight. The coon sat in the crotch lickin' his hind foot.

Stevo cocked an ear and listened to the ruckus on down the creek. He glanced back at the coon, gave him a salute and switched off the light.

Student-led volunteers create pollination garden

BULLETIN REPORT

A volunteer project led by Oñate High School sophomore and Boy Scout AJ Klomp has resulted in the creation of a pollination garden in the city-owned Desert Trails Community Park, 3492 Sonora Springs Blvd.

Klomp, a Life Scout, is working toward the rank of Eagle Scout. That effort includes a service project that demonstrates leadership, planning and organizational abilities. He chose the pollination project at Desert Trails as his project.

"The purpose of the garden and the plants in it will be to attract helpful insects that will spread pollen around the park, and also to help beautify the park a little," Klomp said. "The plants are almost all native to the area, and attract a variety of different pollinators, such as bees, hummingbirds, butterflies, ladybugs and moths.

"I hope to benefit the city and the neighborhood as much as I can with this project, and with many more projects to come."

For the project, Klomp got rock donated for mulching the plants from J.A. Gamboa Materials. Plants were donated by Robledo Vista Nursery.

The City of Las Cruces Parks and Recreation Department will run irrigation lines to the plants, said the city's new community forester, Jimmy Zabriskie, who helped create the garden.

BCOM student finds meaning on Himalayan expedition

By JESSICA SALOPEK
For the Bulletin

In the summer of 2017, after his first year of medical school, Gabriel Pontipiedra admits to feeling a bit lost. “Whether it was finding out what specialty I wanted to go into or what I needed to do to get the ideal residency, I hoped a new purpose would present itself to give me direction,” he writes. “I had joined almost every specialty club my school has to offer, shadowed various medical professionals, and threw myself into each subject and organ system, hoping to find whatever it was I was looking for.

Alas, all of it proved futile. So in a desperate attempt, I turned to travel, in hopes that getting thrown out of my comfort zone would help me find my way again.”

Through a friend, Pontipiedra discovered the Himalayan Health Exchange and spent three weeks in Spiti Valley in the state of Himachel Pradesh, India, as part of a medical relief expedition.

“All it took was one late-night burst of courage and before I knew it, I was soaked in sweat on a packed bus in the humid Delhi summer weather with nothing but the scrubs, passport, and stethoscope in my backpack,” he remembers.

While working in a rural clinic, Pontipiedra received a crash course in direct patient care and dealing with language barriers. His most memorable patient, a 63-year-old farmer with chronic back pain, came in on one of Pontipiedra’s last days at the clinic. Upon hearing that the clinic planned to discharge the patient with a one-week supply of Ibuprofen and a directive to rest, he volunteered to try some Osteopathic Manipulative Medicine (OMM) techniques on the man.

“I diagnosed him and performed thoracic muscle energy, like I had been taught during my first year,” Pontipiedra said. “What happened afterwards was like magic. He stated he felt less pain and had regained motion in his back, which he had not had for years. While I was teaching him the procedure so that he could replicate it again at home, I could not help but think about how much I took away from learning osteopathic medicine. Osteopathy provided me an insight nobody else in my company had.”

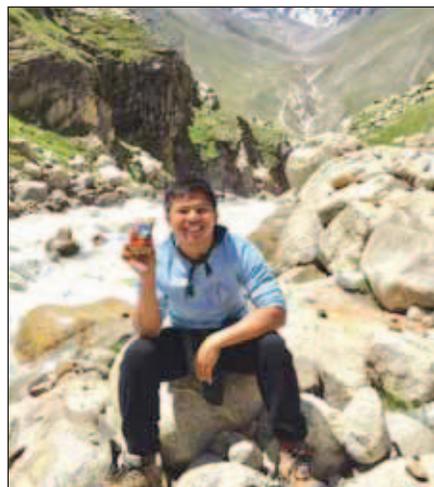

Upon returning to the States, Pontipiedra submitted his experience to the Narrative Medicine Essay Competition held by the American Osteopathic Association’s Bureau of International Osteopathic Medicine (BIOM). This inaugural BIOM competition was “aimed at letting osteopathic medical students and residents explore global health and clinical medicine through the written word.”

Pontipiedra’s submission, titled “Para la Gente y el Futuro,” details his experience in the health exchange program, including working with 27 students from around the globe, of which he was one of only two osteopaths. He recalls his MD student peers questioning his choice to apply to an osteopathic school instead of an allopathic, and asking questions like, “Are you more like a chiropractor then?”

The Himalayas provided the backdrop for soul-searching.

Yet, by the end of the expedition, Pontipiedra said the MD/DO titles no longer mattered. He wrote, “We were all just people striving for one common goal: to care for those who are not able to get help, and to share knowledge with those who can benefit from it. I could not help but think this could be a goal I could work towards for the rest of my life ... in order to truly make a lasting impact, we must care for the people and future on a global scale. I had finally found my new purpose, which is to use and promote osteopathic medicine in the realm of global health.”

Pontipiedra’s essay was selected as the first-place winner in the narrative medicine competition. He was awarded $750 and invited to speak at the 19th Annual International Seminar, “Innovation in Osteopathic Medicine and Outreach,” held in Philadelphia in early October, where he gave a presentation detailing his experience.

“It truly was an amazing experience and I was extremely proud to represent not only myself, but BCOM as well.”

Knee Pain: What You Can Do To Ease It

Las Cruces (NM)- For the past several weeks we've been offering a free report to people who are suffering from knee pain. We have heard from a lot of people requesting the report, and we here some repeating themes:

"...even walking has gotten excruciating!"

"...stairs have become intimidating!"

"I just can't stand for any length of time anymore."

And it's not just the pain in the knee that they talk about - they also say that what's more frustrating is...

...missing out on spending quality family time with their spouse, kids and grandkids.

...giving up on hobbies...golf, bowling, tennis, shopping, or just plain going out to dinner.

...feeling discouraged because they don't feel that they're not the same person anymore.

There's been so much interest in our free report, that I'm hosting a

Making life easier for the special-needs horse

Many of us have a beloved equine family member who may be facing health or physical challenges. These are often related to aging. There are many thoughtful, logical ways in which we can make life easier for these horses as long as their quality of life remains positive.

KATHARINE LARK CHRISLEY
Stable Woman

knows where you are (starting at his shoulder). Leave his whiskers and feeler hairs on his face long so he can feel before he bumps his face on fences or trees and the like. Remove objects he could stumble over, bump into or fall onto. Wrap pipe fences with spongy insulating foam to cushion a bump.

LOOK where you are leading him! Never leave a long lead shank and walk away from him, allowing him to “float” out on his own. He will think you are still guiding him and could have a bad accident.

Laminitis/Founder
The horse who has foundered starts out with a lot of pain and, even when healing well, will be tender in his hooves for a long time. It is imperative that the coffin bone is supported and there are many pads available for use inside of boots or to be taped on the bottom of the hooves. The goal is to reduce concussion, support the coffin bone that is inside the hoof itself and work to get the layers of hoof wall to reconnect and grow out a “normal” hoof again.

The foundered or Laminitic horse should be led on straight lines with huge curves to turn around; any stepping sideways can be extremely painful as the hoof wall is not properly holding the bones inside the hoof in alignment. Exercise is vital to healing, but sharp turns and stepping on stones, ditches or uneven ground will HURT.

Therapy includes diet details, supplementation to maintain good circulation and many methods to restore the energy flow in the legs and encourage restructuring of the hoof capsule. Hard ground, rough or uneven footing and going downhill can all be torturous for the foundered horse! Protect him as he heals.

Back issues

This horse can have trouble moving in small spaces, getting up and down, urinating or reaching down with his neck to eat or drink. Obviously, large paddocks with soft bedding are necessary. Containers for feed and for water should be elevated.

Professional chiropractic and massage work can help with mobility, and phytotherapy (healing with plants) can assist with pain management. Herbs like White Willow Bark, Meadowsweet, Devil’s Claw and Turmeric are anti-inflammatory and analgesic. An equine herbalist can help with which herbs to choose.

If the horse can be worked in-hand for gentle exercise (promoting circulation of blood and lymph) – rear end, loins and hip problems are helped by walking “shoulder-in”; neck, wither and mid-back problems benefit from “haunches-in” at the walk for short periods of time. A spasm in the back needs to walk straight forward immediately.

With all special-needs horses, common sense can serve us well. We must stay alert to avoid being accidentally injured by a horse moving in an unpredictable way. If you are not experienced with horses, get help for any horse experiencing troubles with perception or coordination. Always consult with a health care practitioner for medications and therapy plans.

Katharine and Mark Schreiber are founders and officers of the Dharmahorse Equine Sanctuary in Las Cruces where unwanted horses are cherished and special needs people can interact with these gentle beings. They can be contacted at www.dharmahorse.org and 575-541-0137.

Time again to shop for best Medicare deal

By BOB MOOS
For the Bulletin

Now's the time for New Mexico residents with Medicare to check their health and drug coverage for 2018.

Medicare's open enrollment period runs from until Dec. 7.

Open enrollment is the best time to make sure health and drug plans still meet individual needs, especially if you've had any changes in your health.

By now insurers should have notified you of any adjustments in your health or drug coverage or any changes in your out-of-pocket costs for next year.

Even if you've been satisfied with your health and drug coverage, you may benefit from reviewing all your options. Shopping around may save you money or improve your coverage.

Medicare Advantage remains a strong alternative for people who prefer to receive care through a private insurer rather than through Medicare's original fee-for-service program. Most plans include drug coverage.

The number of people buying Medicare Advantage plans is expected to grow by 9 percent in 2018. Thirty-three percent of New Mexico residents with Medicare now opt to get their health care benefits this way.

Many Advantage plans charge a separate premium on top of the Part B premium you'll pay for Medicare's medical insurance. Nationally, the average monthly cost for that separate Medicare Advantage premium will be $30 in 2018.

New Mexico residents in Medicare's traditional fee-for-service program who want to add prescription drug coverage can choose from 24 drug plans with monthly premiums ranging from $17.40 to $153.40 – about the same range as last year. Look beyond premiums, though. The only way to determine the true cost of your drug coverage is to consider factors like deductibles, co-payments and coinsurance.

Medicare's website – www.medicare.gov – has the best tool for helping you narrow your search for a new health or drug plan. Click on "Find Health and Drug Plans." After entering your ZIP code and the list of your prescriptions, use the "Medicare Plan Finder" tool to compare your coverage and out-of-pocket costs under different plans.

The quality of a health or drug plan's customer service should be considered, too. The Plan Finder provides ratings for each plan, ranging from five stars (excellent) to one star (poor); three stars are average.

Higher-rated plans deliver a higher level of care, such as managing chronic conditions efficiently, screening for and preventing illnesses, and making sure people get much-needed prescriptions. Higher-rated plans also have fewer complaints or long waits for care.

Besides using Medicare.gov, you can call Medicare's toll-free help line at 1-800-633-4227 or consult your "Medicare & You 2018 Handbook," which you should have recently received in the mail.

One-on-one benefits counseling is also available through your State Health Insurance Assistance Program. In New Mexico, call 1-800-432-2080.

Medicare's drug benefit continues to improve. You'll enjoy more savings on your prescriptions in 2018 once you land in the coverage gap, known as the "doughnut hole."

You'll receive a 65 percent break on your brand-name drugs and a 56 percent discount on your generic drugs while in the gap. The doughnut hole begins once you and your drug plan have spent $3,750 for your drugs.

If you're having difficulty affording your medications, you may qualify for extra help with your drug coverage premiums, deductibles and co-payments. The amount of help depends on your income and resources. To learn if you qualify for extra help, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/prescriptionhelp or call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213.

Any changes you make will take effect on Jan. 1.

RIVALRY!

The annual crosstown showdown between Las Cruces' two oldest high schools – Las Cruces and Mayfield – plays out Friday, Nov. 3. The rivalry, arguably the biggest in the state, is no match for the Field of Dreams. It moves, instead, to Aggie Memorial Stadium, where veteran observers say it sometimes outdraws New Mexico State University NCAA games.

On paper, Las Cruces is favored. The Bulldawgs come in 6-1 pending their Oct. 27 hookup with Oñate. The Trojans are 2-6 pending their Oct. 28 contest with Hobbs. But, as they say, you can throw out the record books in this one.

LCHS owns a slight 8-7 advantage in the past 15 games between the two schools, including a 21-14 victory in 2016.

National anthem, freedom of speech and the PGA

The Code of Laws of the United States of America is the official compilation and codification of the general and permanent federal statutes, containing 52 titles. Title 36 covers the U.S. flag and national anthem: "During rendition of the national anthem when the flag is displayed, all present except those in uniform should stand at attention facing the flag with the right hand over the heart."

Uniformed military should salute. Although kneeling may be all right in church, it appears that it is patently against our country's code. Fortunately we don't live in China, which throws you in jail for 15 days for disrespecting or mocking their national anthem.

CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Golf Doctor

The kneeling gesture by NFL players is intended to call attention to what they see as racism with the treatment of blacks by police. The NFL has allowed the practice.

Speaking of hypocrisy, the NFL made Tim Tebow remove his eye-black printed with "John 3:16;" and in 2014 it made Robert Griffin III cover a T-shirt he wore to the post-game press room that said "know Jesus know peace."

In 2015 the NFL fined DeAngelo Williams for "Find the Cure" (for cancer awareness) printed on his eye-black, while also fining William Gay for wearing purple cleats to raise awareness for domestic violence, not that the NFL should care about those things.

In 2016 the NFL prevented the Dallas Cowboys from wearing a decal on their helmets in honor of the five (yes, 5!) Dallas police officers killed in the line of duty by a single shooter. The logical conclusion would be that the NFL, the PGA and almost all mega-corporate entities are not passionately concerned about freedom of speech and expression; only as they see their private interests and their brands.

Now what about golf?

In early 2013 longtime PGA club professional Ted Bishop had just been elected by his peers as president of the PGA. Then English golfer Ian Poulter came out with a book critical of Sir Nick Faldo and also Tom Watson for their captaincy of their respective Ryder Cup teams in 2008. Bishop took issue, tweeting: "Faldo's record stands by itself. Six majors, all-time Ryder Cup points. Yours vs His? Lil' girl." Bishop was just calling out Poulter using common vernacular. Bishop was summarily fired! It's hard to tell which "rules" businesses and other organizations will choose to play by. "Freedom of speech," then, is not without its consequences.

So what's the PGA Tour going to do about new tour player Peter Malnati (one top 25 in 29 PGA Tour starts in 2016-17) who tweeted a lengthy message about President Trump's suggestion to fire football players who refuse to stand for the national anthem: "Those who kneel during the national anthem aren't disrespecting the heroes who sacrificed to defend the United States."

As a Vietnam veteran I am deeply offended by the kneeling and by Malnati's insensitivity. Perhaps golf legend Jack Nicklaus (winner of 18 majors) said it best when asked about the NFL protests: "I suppose everybody has the right to display their First Amendment rights ... But I think there is a time and place ... and I don't know that the sporting field is the right place."

NMSU fall rodeo a learning experience

By SAVANNAH MONTERO
For the Bulletin

In mid-October the New Mexico State University rodeo team headed north for the Mesalands college rodeo in Tucumcari.

The men's team placed fourth and the women's team placed third for the final rodeo of the season.

"You're either winning or learning and we've done a lot of both this semester," NMSU Rodeo Coach Logan Corbett said. "I'm excited to see how the student athletes use their time off this winter to better themselves."

Tyler Muth, junior of Murrieta, California, had a great semester of rodeo and finished first in the average in the steer wrestling for the weekend. He is leading the Grand Canyon region.

Anna Barker, senior of Rochester, Washington, made two quick runs resulting in a first-place finish in the barrel racing.

"My first couple of rodeos didn't go exactly how I wanted, but in Tucumcari I really just decided to trust Rios (Barker's horse) and let him work the way I used to," Barker said. "He ended up winning each round by over three tenths of a second. Trust is key! Blessed to own such a talented horse."

Cauy Pool, freshman of Klamath Falls, Oregon, rode two bucking horses, scored high, and finished first in the average for the bareback riding.

Justin Neill, freshman of Edgewood, New Mexico, won the bull riding event with an 82-point ride on the bucking bull Mano-y-Mano.

"It felt good to get one ride," Neill said. "I'm feeling healthy and good about my riding and was grateful to win. I am ready for the upcoming semester."

A freshman from Prescott, Arizona, Baylee Johnston received the women's all-around title for the weekend. Johnston split second in the long round in the goat tying with a 6.6 second run and took second in the barrel racing. Later qualifying for the short-go, she placed in both events and received average points. The 2017 season has ended and the 2018 rodeo season will return in February.

Aggies face Arkansas State

It's not only Homecoming for the New Mexico State University Aggies. It's a chance to even their record at 4-4 as NMSU tries to become bowl-eligible for their first time in years with at least a .500 record by the end of the season. Kickoff is 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 28, against Arkansas State, which comes in with a 4-2 overall mark, 3-0 in the Sun Belt Conference. The Red Wolves rely on their defense, led by linebacker Kyle Wilson and defensive back BJ Edmonds. The Aggies simply try to outscore opponents with an offense driven by QB Tyler Rogers, receiver Scott Jaleel and running backs Larry Rose III and Jason Huntley (pictured).
