Luminarias honor cancer patients

Luminarias burn brightly on the New Mexico State University campus, as the lights of Aggie Memorial Stadium shine in the background, Monday, Oct. 17. A variety of people (inset) turned out to take in the sight as the luminarias were set up to honor those who've battled breast cancer, and kick off Pink Week on campus to bring attention to breast cancer and raise money for research. The NMSU football team will wear pink jerseys in its annual Pink Game against Georgia Southern at 6 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 22, at Aggie Memorial Stadium. Fans are encouraged to wear pink as well.

No campaign signs to be allowed on county property

Campaign signs will not be allowed on the grounds of the Doña Ana County Government Center in advance of the Nov. 8 General Elections.

Doña Ana County Manager Julia T. Brown said her decision to disallow signs is consistent with practices at federal, state and local public buildings.

"We encourage candidates to work with private property owners to manage their signage and campaign messages," Brown said. "As an entity, Doña Ana County neither supports nor opposes any individual candidate for any level of elective office. As such, I have issued a directive disallowing campaigning and/or signage on the Government Center property, including the parking lots. Campaigning on the public sidewalk east of the main parking lot is fine, as long as it does not obstruct pedestrian traffic, but campaigning on the property will not be allowed."

Brown said contracted security personnel and selected staff will be tasked with enforcement of the directive, and the Special Projects Office will be empowered to have unauthorized vehicles bearing political signs towed at the expense of the vehicle owner(s).

She said the Bureau of Elections will remain empowered to disallow any campaigning – including the wearing of political buttons, shirts, sashes, etc. – within 100 feet of the building while it's being used as a polling location.

"The 100-foot rule is a provision in state law that is incumbent on the Bureau of Elections to enforce judiciously," Brown said. "The wider responsibility of keeping campaign materials off the grounds will fall to security and the Special Projects Office, under my authority."

The directive is consistent with municipal law within the City of Las Cruces, where the county building is located, she said.

Open seat: ETZ apps accepted through Nov. 7

Applications for a special open position on the Extra Territorial Zoning Commission are being sought by the Doña Ana County Community Development Department.

The term of appointment will be two years. The Extra Territorial Zoning Commission will make the appointment at its Nov. 17 regular meeting.

The ETZ Commission meets regularly on the first and third Thursdays of the month at 6 p.m. in the Commission Chambers of the Doña Ana County Government Center at 845 N. Motel Blvd., in Las Cruces.

The ETZ Commission oversees development in a five-mile area that rings the city limits of Las Cruces. The commission regularly reviews development sketch plans, subdivision plats, zone changes and special-use permit applications within the ETZ.

Each applicant must live in the county but cannot be a resident of the City of Las Cruces or a resident within the ETZ. To apply, submit a letter of interest, a resume and three letters of reference to the Doña Ana County Community Development Office, 845 N. Motel Blvd., Las Cruces, N.M., 88007. Deadline for receipt of all applications is 5 p.m., Monday, Nov. 7, 2016.

For more information about the position, call Chief Planner Janine Divyak at (575) 525-6130. Residents calling from outside the Las Cruces area may call toll-free at 1 (877) 827-7200 and request office extension 6130.

Remains of 23 people interred at St. Joseph's cemetery

The remains of 23 people whose bodies were not claimed were buried at 9 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 19, at St. Joseph's Cemetery in Las Cruces, with Jess Williams officiating the non-denominational service.

Each of the bodies had been cremated, and the remains and personal effects were in the custody of the Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department for two years, as required by state law.

No family or friends came forward during that period to claim the remains.

"We are reminded today of 23 reasons to live a full and meaningful life that resonates and makes a mark on the world," Williams said during the ceremony. "We have 23 coaches telling us that we don't need to know their stories to honor their humanity. We each have 23 newly restored reasons to cherish every sunrise and drink in every sunset, because we know our individual forevers will come to an inevitable end, and the real Forever will march resolutely onward without asking our opinion."

UDC on commission agenda

BULLETIN REPORT

The Universal Development Code is on the agenda for the Tuesday, Oct. 25 Doña Ana County Commission meeting. The regular meeting will start at 9 a.m. and take place in the commission chambers on the first floor of the County Government Center at 845 N. Motel Blvd. The commission will decide whether to approve publication of title and general summary of an ordinance to adopt the UDC. Daniel Hortert, director of community development, will discuss the situation. The UDC is a compilation of nine existing ordinance documents and has put together, into 450 pages, an essentially new system of rules for developing county property in the future.

Bull rider's limp

When I was a kid we had what we called the "bull rider's limp." If you were entered up the Saturday before, you could develop a limp and make it last for a week. When a good lookin' sweetheart asked what happened, you kinda shuffled and shrugged it off. "Got hurt," you'd say. "How?" she'd ask on cue. "Ridin' bulls," you'd explain nonchalantly.

Jess's injury was not as glamorous and harder to explain. It looked like he'd been snorting raspberries! His nose was the size and color of a ripe plum.

He'd picked up a bale of hay to feed the heifers. With the practiced motion of experience he hefted the bale and dropped it over his upraised knee. But here the story takes a different twist. The baling wire broke! It struck like a snake, whipped around and bit his nose!

The end of the wire penetrated the meaty part of his proboscis on the left side, drilling through the nasal septum and exiting his right nostril! With a climactic flourish, it wound a dally around the other end of the wire!

His daughter and wife looked on dumbstruck! Jess grasped the wire and cautiously moved it side to side. His head flopped back and forth like a hypnotized chicken! While his daughter ran to the shed to get some sidecutters, his wife Shalah, unwound the wrap and tried easing it back through the entry hole.

BAXTER BLACK
On the Edge of Common Sense

It came smoothly except for the little rusty curl right on the end. She laid him over a bale, straddled his chest and wound out the wire like she was backin' out a brace and bit.

He stayed out on the ranch for quite a while, tryin' not to blow his nose and packin' it with ice in the evenings.

Ten years of tough

Say the words; ask the questions

Never underestimate the power of a casual conversation or asking a simple question.

In 2007, June Mumme attended a New Mexico State University rodeo and saw Denny and Geraldine Calhoun wearing pink shirts, emblazoned with and they told her how it was part of a Wrangler Jeans and National Finals Rodeo campaign to promote breast cancer awareness. The sight of rodeo cowboys wearing pink certainly drew attention.

If it could work for rodeo, June Mumme wondered, why not for an NMSU football game?

As it happened, she had a pretty good connection. She was married to the then-Aggie head football coach, Hal Mumme.

Soon on board for the project were three energetic ladies who, like June Mumme, were also breast cancer survivors: Pat Sisbarro, Laura Conniff and Magellia Boston. Boston's husband, McKinley, was the Aggie athletics director at the time. Soon the wheels were turning.

By now you know the rest of the story, and this year will be the 10th edition of the "NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink."

Serving as a logistical arm for TETWP's fundraising is the long-established Cowboys for Cancer Research, now co-chaired by the Calhouns. Since Tough Enough to Wear Pink came on line, the two entities have generated more than $4 million additional in cash and in-kind donations, and greatly accelerated cancer research within New Mexico. C4CR has established endowments at both the University of New Mexico and NMSU, enabling researchers at both institutions to make important progress in learning more about the disease and working toward new treatments and possible cures.

There's probably no way to measure the positive impact the Pink efforts have made regarding breast cancer awareness.

Again, though, remember the power of conversation or asking a simple question.

Because of the increased awareness, more women in Las Cruces are likely to say,

"Maybe I'd better have this checked out." Or, "I think I'll schedule a mammogram." Or to make an appointment and ask their doctor, "Is this normal?"

For many years, this local, southern New Mexico effort has been the biggest Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign in the entire world.

The campaign has also given many survivors the courage to tell their story.

Those stories, in turn, give courage to those going through the fight.

Las Cruces Jodie York, an 18-year survivor, offers words of solace to those recently diagnosed: "It's OK if you have breast cancer," York said. "It's OK if you lose a breast."

Those are far better alternatives to losing your life, especially when you have small children, as York did when she was diagnosed.

Tara Rothwell-Clark, who is barely a one-year survivor, also focused on her young son.

"I just knew that I was not going to let this beat me," Clark said.

"I need to be there for him. There was never a doubt in my mind that I was going to fight it and win."

Then, after a final treatment in August 2016, Clark was able to say those words every survivor fights to say: "I am cancer free."

Until every victim can say that, we should all continue to stay Tough Enough to Wear Pink.

Unspoken terrorism here in New Mexico

This month is the centennial celebration of a large dam in southern New Mexico that was officially named the Woodrow Wilson Dam. Nope, that name didn't stick. We know it as Elephant Butte Dam.

The celebrations this month tell many stories about how the Rio Grande Project was started and how the engineers constructed the first phase of the dam, completing it by 1916. At the time it was constructed, Elephant Butte Dam was the largest man-made dam and lake in the world. Electric generation was added in the 1930s.

But there is more to the story of this dam. If we were alive 100 years ago, we would have been aware of German sponsored terrorism in the United States. Most people remember the Pancho Villa Raid on Columbus, New Mexico in March 1916, but there was more terrorism going on at that time.

There was even an attempt to destroy Elephant Butte Dam which historians note but isn't mentioned in any of the celebrations. New Mexico author Eugene Rhodes wrote a story of this attempt entitled "No Mean City" in the May 17 and 24, 1919 "Saturday Evening Post."

In 1916, America was technically neutral in the European War. However, America leaned heavily toward the Allies by supplying munitions to the French and British. The German High Command considered America an enemy so they created a terrorist organization inside America.

As for the attack on New Mexico's Elephant Butte Dam, after talking to several historians, it seems plausible that the ultimate aim of the destruction of the dam was to keep our country home dealing with this instead of coming to the side of France and England. Our country already had 10,000 soldiers in Mexico trying to capture and bring to justice Pancho Villa.

Even though the Germans were engaged in the destruction it appears there was an attempt to make it seem Mexico did this because of our invasion of their country. Or, worse, British agents did this to try to pin it on Germany.

The eight saboteurs were killed in the attack on the dam.

Still, in celebrating the 100 years of Elephant Butte Dam, we should acknowledge some of the rest of the history. It was a dangerous time back then as it is now.

Be careful because you cannot take back hurtful words

A Jewish folktale, set in 19th century Eastern Europe, tells of a man who went through a small community slandering the local rabbi. One day, feeling suddenly remorseful, he begged the rabbi for forgiveness and offered to undergo any form of penance to make amends.

The rabbi told him to take a feather pillow from his home, cut it open, scatter the feathers to the wind. The man did as he was told and returned to the rabbi. He asked, "Am I now forgiven?"

"Almost," came the rabbi's response. "You just have to perform one last task: Go and gather all the feathers."

"But that's impossible,"

the man protested, "for the wind has already scattered them."

"Precisely," the rabbi answered.

Rabbi Joseph Telushkin cited this classic story in his book "Words That Hurt, Words That Heal." More than 20 years ago, Telushkin took his campaign to encourage appropriate speech to the greater community.

There was good reason for such a campaign then and now. Technology spreads our words quickly. It is next to impossible to "go gather all the feathers," that is, to take back any misleading or inaccurate statements we may have made.

I have heard people say recently, "Well, those were only words, not actions, so it doesn't matter."

Rabbi Telushkin's point in writing a book about speech was that words DO matter.

Jews around the world observed the Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, on the evenings of Oct. 11 and 12. On that day, Jews fasted and recited prayers of confession during worship. In those meditations on misguided human action, statements about speech are pervasive. One prayer admits that we, as members of humanity, cause harm through our words, make insincere promises, lie, engage in offensive speech, engage in gossip (share true information when we don't need to) and spread rumors (which are often unconfirmed).

Reciting those words on Yom Kippur this year reminded me of Rabbi Telushkin's efforts to take our "ethics of speech" in a more positive direction. In 1995, he pushed for a national "Speak No Evil" day that was embodied in a United States Senate Resolution. That declaration called on Americans to eliminate all hurtful and unfair talk for 24 hours for one day a year; to transmit negative information only when necessary; to monitor and regulate how they speak to others; to strive to keep anger under control; to argue fairly, and not allow disputes to degenerate into name-calling or other forms of verbal abuse; and to speak about others with the same kindness and fairness that they wish others to exercise when speaking about them. In his book on speech, Rabbi Telushkin added that we should try to focus conversations about people on their good qualities, not on their flaws, and that we should try to give criticism in private, using reassuring and non-threatening words. He cited the important teaching that embarrassing another person in public is cruel and inadvisable.

Do these goals for what we say (and do) sound impossible to achieve? Perhaps, but that doesn't mean we shouldn't try to keep our words positive and constructive.

If we are careful with what we say, we will, unlike the man in the story, have no need to gather "scattered feathers" or to lament our inability to take back words we wished we hadn't shared.

Rabbi Larry Karol has been with Temple Beth-El in Las Cruces since 2011.

D'Antonio seeks second term as district attorney

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Incumbent Mark D'Antonio, a Democrat, is seeking his second term as district attorney for New Mexico's Third Judicial District, which encompasses Doña Ana County.

"There are hard-core criminals that need to be locked away," D'Antonio said. Others who commit crimes, he said, including veterans, the mentally unstable and juveniles — "these people need special attention."

A veteran of the U.S. Air Force, D'Antonio was an FBI special agent, an assistant U.S. attorney and a senior advisor to the U.S. attorney general on intelligence and homeland security issues.

"No DA in Doña Ana County history has my background," D'Antonio said. "It's hard to be a good prosecutor without a law enforcement background," he said. As a prosecutor, D'Antonio said, "I know my way around a courtroom."

To the charge that he is soft on crime, D'Antonio responds that his office is "doing the right thing for the right reason. I have proven time and time again that I'm a law and order guy," he said.

And, while 85 to 95 percent of criminal cases result in a plea bargain in New Mexico and nationwide, D'Antonio said, "we do not do a plea unless the victim has been notified and given a chance to comment." Police officers involved in the crime are also given a chance to comment, he said.

Domestic violence is “one of our biggest problems,” D’Antonio said. In dealing with crimes against women and children, the victim must be considered first and additional violence prevented. But, it may be possible to keep the family together, he said. That’s the “balancing out that we do in the office every day.”

Keeping juveniles who commit crimes out of jail and in school through pre-prosecution diversion programs whenever possible is “the smart and the right thing to do,” D’Antonio said.

A veterans’ court and mental health court are also good ways to determine “who the real criminals are and who the people we can help are,” he said.

“We have been extremely transparent,” D’Antonio said, noting that he has conducted “Ten to 12 town halls. I invite anyone to come see me. If they have a problem, come talk to me.”

Attorney Cates challenges for district attorney job

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces lawyer and former Bernalillo County state representative Brad Cates is challenging Mark D’Antonio for the office of Third Judicial District Attorney, which is composed entirely of Doña Ana County.

“I’m not running against Mark,” Cates said. “I’m running because I have some things to contribute. I’m running for what I have to offer.”

Cates, a Republican, represented Albuquerque’s Northeast Heights in the New Mexico House of Representatives from 1975 to 1982.

His accomplishments in the state Legislature included creating a mandatory auto insurance bill and a metropolitan court in Bernalillo County, Cates said, adding that he wrote and got passed the state’s “criminal code as it’s written today” as well as firearm enhancement legislation for anyone convicted of using a gun during a crime.

As district attorney, “it’s my job to keep violent career criminals off the streets,” he said. “Why are they on the street, is what I’m not understanding. It’s the victims I’m concerned about.”

Locking up violent, repeat offenders means “you’ve not only solved that crime, you’ve prevented 10 or 20 others,” he said.

The state also suffers from “over criminalization,” Cates said. As DA, you “don’t want to prosecute everyone who comes through the door. Spend time on the ones who statistically are committing the crimes,” he said.

The DA’s office should help first-time offenders — “direct them so they don’t become career criminals,” Cates said. That includes veterans who are first-time offenders and people who “commit minor crimes because of drugs,” he said.

Cates said he will create an ethics council in the DA’s office so that if “you see something that just doesn’t look right, you bring it to us and we’re going to look at it.” That’s an “inexpensive way for citizens to have redress at the local level” regarding any government official or bidding system in the Third Judicial District, he said.

Cates said he also advocates stronger support for local law enforcement, which he called “our bulwark against bad things in the world.” Agents of the U.S. Customs and Border Protection and Homeland Security departments are “treated like step-children,” he said. Their efforts to combat money laundering, drugs and human trafficking across the U.S.-Mexico border are being marginalized, he said.

Zimmerman defends District 39 seat

By MARTY RACINE
For the Bulletin

John Zimmerman, the New Mexico House Representative for District 39 cites his legislative experience as a benefit.

"My past two years as a legislator, my assignments to (various) committees, have provided me with invaluable knowledge to continue servicing in these capacities," he said.

The Republican lost in 2012 to Rudy Martinez but then returned the favor when he beat Martinez two years later. Now he faces Martinez again for the third-straight election.

Zimmerman served on the House Appropriations and House Health committees and took interim posts as co-chair for Tobacco Settlement and on committees for Economic and Rural Development, Science Technology and Telecommunications, Water and Natural Resources, Military and Veterans Affairs, and Legislative Finance.

Zimmerman, 73, also considers a lengthy career outside politics as an asset. He managed weapons test programs at White Sands Missile Range and spent 42 years in the Navy, 13 as commanding officer of six reserve units. He was a communications operation officer while mobilizing in Bosnia, Kosovo and the Middle East. Since retirement, Zimmerman has managed rental properties

Martinez hopes to regain House seat

When Rodolpho "Rudy" Martinez looks across the aisle in his race for House District 39, he sees the one opponent who interrupted his plans for a long tenure in the State Legislature.

Republican John L. Zimmerman beat Martinez in 2014 after the Democrat had won four consecutive elections to the House beginning in 2006. The two again face off in November.

Martinez's political career didn't begin in Santa Fe. Prior, he was a city councilor and mayor in Bayard as well as chair of the Grant County Commission.

Martinez, 68, also served 10 years as District 7 director of the New Mexico Municipal League. He's a Vietnam veteran and volunteer first-responder.

In attempting to regain his seat, Martinez mentions his accomplishments over the course of four terms.

University graduate (BA in business administration; minor in engineering) emphasizes three issues for his district: economy, education and health care.

Attracting industry and jobs, he said, can be facilitated through reduction of “unnecessary regulations and bureaucratic red-tape.” In education, he would end the practice of social promotion for students who otherwise fail. He’d also limit “unnecessary” standardized testing.

In health, Zimmerman addresses the rising costs of rural care and PTSD legislation for returning military.

Such challenges keep him connected to his constituents.

“I provided my personal mobile telephone number (575-649-1217) on all my campaign literature and it is listed as my primary phone number on the legislative web page. I appreciate comments from those who call me and [know] how important it is to be able to express their concerns and get answers.”

After all, Zimmerman said, the call to public office is honorable.

“My mother always stressed to me as I grew up to be thankful for the blessings you have. I realize we live in the greatest country on Earth,” Zimmerman said. “I felt a need to give back by serving in our citizen legislature. We who are elected, serve at the pleasure of the people.”

Unopposed Gomez looks to continue progress

By BILLY HUNTSMAN

Las Cruces Bulletin

Bealquin “Bill” Gomez is running unopposed for the seat of District 34 representative.

This will be Gomez’s second term in the seat, and he said he has accomplished much in the past year.

“I’ve been really involved in trying to take care of community issues,” he said.

He’s currently on a board in Sunland Park and Santa Teresa that’s working to develop better sewage systems, he said. He has also set aside capital outlay funds for La Clinica de Familia to continue renovating its new office located in downtown Las Cruces.

He’s also working to improve safety along rural roads in Mesquite and he’s working with residents there to improve their road.

“It’s a private road, so you can’t use state money,” he said.

In La Union, Gomez said, he’s helped the people sell water pipes they bought themselves but never got money for from the district in order to install underground.

“By Nov. 26, we’ll have some money to help them improve their water system,” he said.

In Gadsden, Gomez worked with the school superintendent to install air conditioning systems in the buildings before summer classes started.

“The rooms were extremely hot,” Gomez said. “So the teachers are much happier, students are too.”

At the beginning of October, he said, he was trying to help La Mesa organize a health fair, so residents could get flu shots, start a coat drive for children for the winter, as well as disseminate more information regarding health services the state provides.

He said he’s also working with state

Senator Mary Kay Papen to set aside money for Mesquite, San Miguel and Chamberino to renovate their parks.

In October, he attended a presentation by the people of La Union to discuss their ideas to improve the colonia’s flooding and drainage problems, Gomez said.

He said he’s also interested in continuing his work in legalizing industrial hemp. An industrial hemp bill was vetoed by Gov. Susana Martinez during last year’s legislature, “which is unfortunate because Colorado now has 175 commercial farmers growing industrial hemp for sale,” Gomez said. “Which puts (New Mexico) way behind quite a few other states that are just going full-bore because they understand how valuable a crop (hemp) is.” Legalizing industrial hemp would give farmers in the Mesilla Valley a new crop to grow, which, Gomez said, they are sorely in need of. He said the alfalfa and hay crops are no longer profitable because both can be bought much cheaper from Mexico.

Overall, he said, he has a lot to do in his second year as District 34 representative.

“I do a lot more than most of the legislators in my district because I listen to people,” he said.

MARTINEZ

Vietnam veterans, New Mexico and national athletic trainers, and provided recommendations to Congress to keep rural post offices open.”

He decided to again run in District 39, which extends to Silver City in the west, “because I want to make sure the residents of the district get the representation that they deserve. We need to seriously re-evaluate our educational system, our economic plans and our tax structure. I want to help lead District 39 and the entire state of New Mexico into the future, and lead an economy that works for everyone, not just a few.”

Education, in fact, is a key for his district, Martinez said. “Unfortunately, our district faces the same problems that we see in the rest of the state.

Our educational system is currently focusing too much on testing instead of teaching, and our early childhood education programs are extremely underfunded. We are also at the bottom of the nation in unemployment. These issues and concerns are all tied together.”

Hooks wants to defend family values

By BILLY HUNTSMAN
Las Cruces Bulletin

Neal Hooks, candidate for District 33 state representative, declined to interview with the Bulletin.

Via his website, Hooks said traditional values are under assault.

"Today, the traditional values that have held our families, state and nation together for so long are being attacked," he said according to the website. "Out-of-wedlock pregnancies, rampant divorce rates, and the push of homosexual agenda in our schools are destroying us. Therefore, I firmly stand for anything that strengthens the family unit and our values, and I will oppose all legislation that seeks to undermine them."

He advocates for limiting government involvement in the economy, such as "getting rid of over-burdensome regulations and stifling taxes."

When it comes to education, he believes in "choice."

"When parents can send their children to any public school, regardless of what district they live in, this gives them choice as well," he reports. "Couple this with more of a reward/punishment system in place for schools and teachers, and competition goes up, making schools better. Lastly, we must consider bringing back two Biblical principles to our schools: student discipline and values."

His website said he is in favor of continuing to use fossil fuels as a primary means of energy production, as it brings in more than $2 billion in revenue for the state each year.

Hooks is against illegal immigration, as "I believe the biggest threat to our border is the drug smuggling and human trafficking coming into our state."

McCamley promises hard work, the truth

By SUSIE OUDERKIRK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Incumbent Bill McCamley, Representative for District 33, believes he has a lot to be proud of. His work on the Spaceport as a county commissioner was critical in its development, which is now starting to pay dividends, he said. The Democrat was also part of the negotiated agreement that allowed development at the Santa Teresa Port of Entry, which created "thousands of jobs for people in our area," he said.

He's also proud to be part of the team that sped up the decision to allow for marriage equality in New Mexico.

McCamley's decision to run again for District 33 Representative comes from his concern about the state's course when it comes to the economy and future, he said.

"We need a sense of urgency about our state's problems," he said. "This 'Land of Mañana' attitude cannot continue if we are going to reverse our state's course when it comes to our economy and future. I truly believe this and that is why I am running."

McCamley plans to address his concerns about District 33, and consequently, the rest of the state, in a number of ways. "We need more jobs, and I will continue to work on building infrastructure at NMSU, the aerospace community, and border economic groups to create an economy that works for everyone," he said. "We need to stop over-testing in our schools, and I will continue to introduce legislation to limit the amount of testing schools are allowed to give."

McCamley's take away message is simple: "Any candidate that tells you they agree with you on everything is a liar. I promise to work really hard, listen to everybody deeply and thoughtfully, and always tell the truth."

NM's 2nd Congressional District has interesting history

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

Did you know that in the 48-year history of New Mexico's Second Congressional District, just one person from Las Cruces has ever held the seat?

Ed Foreman, a Las Cruces businessman and Republican, won the seat in 1968 and held it for one term before losing to Democrat Harold Runnels of Lovington in 1970.

Foreman is also the only person in the 20th Century to win and lose a seat in the U.S. House in two states. He won Texas' 16th District seat – which includes El Paso – in 1962 (he was the last Republican to hold that seat) and lost it to Richard C. White in the Lyndon Johnson Democratic landslide of 1964.

New Mexico had two congressional districts from statehood in 1912 until 1913. The second seat was abolished in 1913, and the state had only one at-large congressional district until 1943. From 1943 until 1969, the state had two at-large congressional districts. In 1968, the two seats were held by Democrats Thomas G. Morris and E.S. "Johnny" Walker. The state's First and Second congressional districts were created that year.

Future Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan, a Republican, defeated Morris in the First Congressional District race that year, and Foreman defeated Walker in the Second District. Foreman and Lujan were the first Republicans elected to the U.S. House in New Mexico since incumbent Republican Albert G. Sims was defeated for re-election in 1931.

Following Foreman, New Mexico's Second Congressional District has been held by four men, including two Democrats and two Republicans, three from Lea County and one from Lincoln County.

SKEEN

The first of the three from Lea County was Runnels, who held the seat until his death shortly before the general election of 1980. When Runnels died in August of that year, the primaries were over and the Republicans had not nominated anyone to run against him. The Democrats held a special primary election and chose David King, nephew of then-Governor Bruce King as their candidate.

Former state Senator Joe Skeen, a Republican, ran as a write-in, as did Runnels' widow, Dorothy. Skeen, a Picacho (Lincoln County) rancher and former state senator, won with 38 percent of the vote, becoming one of only a handful of write-in candidates ever to win a seat in the U.S. House or Senate.

Skeen held the seat until his retirement in 2003. That 22 years of service is the longest anyone has ever held a U.S. House seat in New Mexico history.

Skeen and Foreman are the only native New Mexicans to represent the district. Skeen, who died in 2003 at the age of 76, was born in Roswell. Foreman, who turns 83 in December, was born in Portales. (He's now a highly successful motivational speaker in Dallas.) Runnels, who was 56 when he died in 1980, was a native of Dallas. Steve Pearce, 69, was born in La Mesa, Texas. Harry Teague, 67, is a native of Gracemont, Oklahoma.

Republican Pearce of Hobbs won the seat in 2002 and held it until 2008, when he gave it up to run unsuccessfully against Democrat Tom Udall for a seat in the U.S. Senate.

With Pearce running for the Senate, Hobbs businessman Harry Teague, a Democrat, won the seat in the 2008 general election that also saw Barack Obama elected president. Teague lost the seat in 2010 when Pearce reclaimed it. Pearce won re-election to the seat by wide margins in 2012 and 2014. His 2016 opponent is Democrat Merrie Lee Soules of Las Cruces.

Pearce is one of just two U.S. House members from New Mexico to serve non-consecutive terms since New Mexico became a state in 1912. The other was Benigno C. Hernández, also a Republican, who served from 1915 until 1917 and from 1919 until 1921.

New Mexico's U.S. Second is the second largest congressional district of any district in a state with multiple congressional districts. Only Nevada's Second District single-state districts in Alaska, Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota are larger geographically. The district covers 71,739 square miles and has 9.6 people per square mile.

The district is home to the grave of Billy the Kid (Fort Sumner in DeBaca County); Smokey Bear (Capitan in Lincoln County); the Trinity Site, where the first atomic bomb was exploded (Socorro County); the site of the most famous alleged crash of a UFO in history (near Corona, in Lincoln County); White Sands National Monument; and Carlsbad Caverns National Monument; among many other attractions.

Las Cruces City Council approves museum fee change

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

At its Monday, Oct. 17 regular meeting, the Las Cruces City Council unanimously approved an amended fee schedule for the city's museum system to ensure that the museums' fees "are fair and reasonable, encourage participation and offset general fund expenditures," according to city documents.

City Museum System Administrator Rebecca Slaughter said the new structure "is designed to offer cost-effective services to the general public, encourage participation in museum system of offerings and lessen the financial burden on the city." The amended fee structure replaces one adopted by the council in June 2012.

Slaughter said fees are determined by the type of activity or class being offered by the museums, the length of the class or session and the demand for supplies and staffing.

Fee changes will include setting fees – and in some cases lowering fees – for services at Branigan Cultural Center (BCC), Las Cruces Museum of Art (LCMA), Museum of Nature and Science (LCMNS) and Railroad Museum (LCRM).

Reduced fees include those for classes at BCC, LCMA and LCRM and summer camp and spring break camp at LCMNS.

For more information, visit <http://www.las-cruces.org/museums>.

Council recognizes value of public lands

The city council also unanimously approved a resolution "recognizing the value of federal public lands to the residents of Las Cruces."

"This is land for all Americans, plus our visitors," said Councillor Gill Sorg, who proposed the resolution. "I think the people of Las Cruces understand the value of public lands," and recognize that they "are very important to our community," he said.

Functional zero needs work to maintain

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

In 2014 Mayor Ken Miyagishima of Las Cruces accepted the national challenge to strive for zero homeless veterans in the city. The Community of Hope jumped on to the challenge and put in the work, finding the grants and making the connections, that made Las Cruces one of 13 cities that met the goal of reaching functional zero.

Community of Hope Director Nicole Martinez described functional zero as more veterans that are housed than are on the streets.

She called the cooperation between Community of Hope, the Gospel Rescue Mission and the City of Las Cruces, “an awesome partnership.”

“We have services to find housing,” she said. “We have gotten our homeless so low, we can help them quickly with no big backlog. I think it’s something we can celebrate.”

But the functional zero designation has had some backlash in terms of services and funding. People think that because the designation has been reached,

Veteran Michael Barns, who found a home with the help of Las Cruces’ Community of Hope, shows U.S. Sen. Martin Heinrich around the facility including Camp Hope, which provides temporary shelter to the homeless who apply and qualify to live there.

they don’t need the support anymore. But the existing services to those homed veterans need to be maintained and there are new clients coming in.

Veterans become homeless every day, Martinez said. They have mental health issues, lose their jobs and go through divorce and all that contributes to the homeless population.

Martinez said one of the criticisms she hears is that the program draws people from other areas to be a burden on Las Cruces. But, she said, the majority of the veterans can be helped through a VA program, Supportive Services for Veteran Families (SSVF) and that is available in other cities.

“Everyone doesn’t have to come here for this grant, and other cities even have more money,” she said.

“We are not creating a homeless mecca. We are serving the needs of the county here.”

Martinez said Community of Hope programs are client centered. They work for the homeless clients by being smart in targeting of grants, working with landlords, providing counseling and continuing services.

“The last thing we want to do is set someone up to fail,” she said.

She attributes the continued success of Community of Hope to the “amazing staff and team members and the resilient and amazing veterans.”

In August, U.S. Rep. Martin Heinrich visited Las Cruces and participated in a round table discussion at the Community of Hope. Two veterans were part of that discussion and told their stories.

Steve Krog lost his job in Texas and found himself homeless. He made his way to Camp Hope, a tent area at the Community of Hope homeless people can apply for and stay in.

“I’m not a typical person, not a drug addict,” Krog said. “I have had my share of challenges.”

Krog got into Camp Hope and, about four months later, had housing.

“I got my life together then,” he said. “I started functioning and thinking a lot better, stopped drinking so much.”

Now, with a job and a place to live, Krog is able to pay his own electric and a portion of the rent.

“Slowly I am building to where I can be self-sufficient,” he said.

Krog said the staff at Community of Hope “really try to effect change.”

“It’s a very positive experience,” he said. “Trying to get you there (into housing), some of it is a real pain. But I found out the system was responsive — for the most part you can get from point A to point B pretty quickly.”

But even with that financial help, there are needs the community can help with. Krog found himself in an apartment with no furniture, he said he had food but nothing to eat it with.

He has since received those things but Martinez said Community of Hope can always use contributions of furniture and household items for the veterans to start their lives at home with. Cash donations for new mattresses are also always appreciated.

Martinez said many of the veterans they have found homes for are eligible for disability checks but many want to work. One of the ways community members can help is by employing them.

Employers who are willing to help can contact Chris Sowder at the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, 575-523-2219.

Chemical engineering student receives grant

By BILLY HUNTSMAN
Las Cruces Bulletin

A graduate student in New Mexico State University's Department of Chemical and Materials Engineering recently received a prestigious research grant from the National Institutes of Health, which only three other NMSU students have received since 1996.

SAMBRANO

Jesse Sambrano is a Ph.D. candidate researching flow cytometry.

"It is a single-cell analysis tool," said Jessica Houston, associate professor and lead investigator of Sambrano's research team. "It's a method for counting cells for a range of applications."

One of the most significant areas to which flow cytometry contributes is in research on the biology of cancer and circulating tumor cell detection.

Sambrano, from El Paso, has spent the past year designing the instrument, which will be a bench-top tool, something that in theory can be transported in the bed of a pickup truck, he said.

Based on this research, Sambrano last year applied for, and this year received, the F31 Ruth L. Kirschstein Predoctoral Individual National Research Service Award.

"It's humbling and it's an honor," he said.

Satellite teleport, data center to create tech jobs

By ALTA LeCOMPTE

Las Cruces Bulletin

After establishing itself as a wireless satellite network in rural communities around the globe, X2nSat is focusing on serving the rural Southwest from its future facility on the West Mesa.

Gov. Susana Martinez announced Oct. 14 in a ceremony at the Plaza de Las Cruces that X2nSat would bring 45 new, high-paying data and analysis jobs to Las Cruces.

Martinez said X2nSat would pay up to $100,000 and provide health care insurance coverage for all full timers.

Continuing the governor's theme, Las Cruces City Councillor Jack Eakman said, "They need engineers. New Mexico State, Doña Ana Community College ... graduates will have opportunities to stay in New Mexico where they belong."

Governor introduces appointee to Las Cruces at event

By ALTA LeCOMPTE

Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces welcomed Matt Geisel, Gov. Susana Martinez's choice for economic development cabinet secretary, at a community event Friday, Oct. 14, at the Plaza de Las Cruces.

The event organized by the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance marked the first time the new plaza has been the site of an announcement of new jobs coming to the area.

Martinez quipped that although Geisel is not yet officially on the job, he is on the job.

He will succeed Jon Barela, who left the position Oct. 1 to serve as CEO of Borderplex Alliance, a nonprofit group dedicated to promoting business in the Ciudad Juárez, El Paso and southern New Mexico region.

"This is a great handoff," Martinez said. "Matt will be building on the foundation Jon and his team built. I am getting two for one, not a bad idea — and I only have to pay for one."

Geisel comes to the state economic development department fresh from playing a role in recruiting a Facebook data center to Las Lunas.

Facebook is making a $250 million initial investment in the first phase of the project, according to Albuquerque Business First.

“Matt knows firsthand what it takes to bring new jobs and investment to our state,” Martinez said. “He was with me when we first met with executives from Facebook in the Bay Area; he’s a proven leader who will continue to spread the message that New Mexico is open for business. I’m looking forward to Matt taking on this new leadership role, and I’m confident we’ll be able to continue building on our momentum in growing and diversifying our economy.”

Geisel was formerly Rio Rancho’s economic development and business relations manager. He also previously served as vice chair of the New Mexico Economic Development Partnership, EDD’s marketing arm.

He holds a bachelor’s degree in economics and Spanish from the University of California at Davis, and an MBA from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Geisel said the Martinez administration in the past few years has consolidated efforts to make the state more competitive in recruiting and retaining businesses.

“We have a very strong program in place,” he said. “It’s important to protect and beef up programs like JTIP (Job Training Incentive Program) which regularly ranks in the top five nationally.”

He also praised the administration’s work to make the Local Economic Development Act (LEDA) program viable.

“The governor inherited an empty pipeline and an empty LEDA fund,” he said.

JOBS

Hill described the company as a small business that has fallen in love with rural communities.

He said the company has gateway facilities in northern California and Atlanta.

“This will be the third of these gateways,” he said.

Hill called Las Cruces the perfect location — about as far south as you can get without actually being in Mexico.

“We evaluated locations in four or five states,” he said. “New Mexico and Las Cruces really hit the spot for us. You have a beautiful city and a fantastic state, great people.”

He said X2nSat was looking for a southerly location, dry and storm-free, with an available workforce and affordable building costs.

He also cited proximity to New Mexico State University.

Hill praised the responsiveness of state and local officials.

“We’re a small business. When we go to work with a municipality, the smallest thing (going wrong) can leave a bad taste in your mouth.”

Recruiting X2nSat was a joint effort that included the City of Las Cruces, Wayne Savage of Arrowhead Park on the New Mexico State University campus, the New Mexico Department of Economic Development and the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance.

According to MVEDA, X2nSat will receive $300,000 in state LEDA funds for its new building and utilities, and additional LEDA support from the city.

When the company begins hiring it will likely be eligible for JTIP job training support from the state.

Hill said X2nSat sells its services to the health care industry and to oil and gas companies for satellite monitoring.

“Utility companies are a big part of our operation,” he said. “Smart grids allow companies to make better energy decisions, sensors allow the grid to tell you what’s happening.”

He said X2nSat has acquired 12 acres on the West Mesa with room to grow.

“We could grow to 100 jobs in five to 10 years,”

he said.

Mayor Pro Tem Greg Smith said X2nSat is bringing technology, communication and connectivity with medical endeavors such as Burrell College, as well as Spaceport America, NMSU “and things happening on our West Mesa.”

“There are things coming together here in Las Cruces,” he said. “The communication area is going to ramp up in a big way.”

The company provides wireless and communication services to a variety of industries, according to the X2nSat website.

“X2nSat is an enterprise-specific and government-specific telecommunications and satellite solutions provider,” the website states. “Our ingenious team of in-house experts develops solutions for enterprises, IT, rural telephony, maritime, utilities, pipelines and other mission-critical applications for any industry.”

Reshaping of our community: Real or Artificial?

Over the past few weeks there has been an increased level of coverage regarding in various social media and local news outlets on Data. An County's proposed Economic Development Code (EDC), currently in its final version. Both the comprehensive plan and the EDC are to be guiding documents for all future development in Data An County.

Each document is hundreds of pages. Having read multiple drafts, and now in its final version, we conclude it is neither as easy nor entertaining as it might seem. The end result of all the reading is a deep appreciation of County staff that has been changed with this very difficult and complex task.

The Chamber supports and commends the efforts made by the County to create an environment where business can grow and thrive. Sincere appreciation also goes to the Planning and Zoning Commissioners who have been working on this issue over the past many months. Not only reading the various drafts, additions, etc., but also attending every meeting regarding the subject.

It is obvious that with growth and changing times there must be careful thought on how we progress in an efficient manner.

The questions in these documents truly represent where we as a community want to be in the years ahead? While the Chamber appreciates all the efforts, the Chamber Board recently approved a position of recommending an approval of the current version of the EDC.

Over the past few weeks, the County has been in the process of updating and potentially adopting the EDC. According to the County, the proposed EDC will directly reflect the County as a whole, to include staff and infrastructure.

Additionally, the document would incorporate elements of existing zoning, while offering different development options, including more growth options. The current version has created much disagreement.

The following language is the proposed constitutional amendment that was passed during the 2016 legislative session in SJR1. The amendment will appear and be contemplated on the upcoming General Election Ballot.

A JOINT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO ARTICLE 2, SECTION 13 OF THE CONSTITUTION OF NEW MEXICO TO PROTECT COMMUNITY SAFETY BY GRANTING COURTS NEW AUTHORITY TO DENY RELEASE ON BAIL PENDING TRIAL FOR DANGEROUS DEFENDANTS IN FELONY CASES WHILE RETAINING THE RIGHT TO PRETRIAL RELEASE FOR NON-DANGEROUS DEFENDANTS WHO DO NOT POSE A FLIGHT RISK.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO:

SECTION 1. It is proposed to amend Article 2, Section 13 of the constitution of New Mexico to read: "All persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses when the proof is evident or the presumption great and in situations in which bail is specifically prohibited by this section. Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted. Bail may be denied by a court of record pending trial for a defendant charged with a felony if the prosecuting authority requests a hearing and proves by clear and convincing evidence that no release conditions will reasonably protect the safety of any other person or the community. An appeal from an order denying bail shall be given preference over all other matters. A person who is not detainable on grounds of dangerousness nor a flight risk in the absence of bond and is otherwise eligible for bail shall not be detained solely because of financial inability to post a money or property bond. A defendant who is neither a danger nor a flight risk and who has a financial inability to post a money or property bond may file a motion with the court requesting relief from the requirement to post bond. The court shall rule on the motion in an expedited manner."

SECTION 2. The amendment proposed by this resolution shall be submitted to the people for their approval or rejection at the next general election or at any special election prior to that date that may be called for that purpose.

state is authorized for the purposes and in the amounts set forth in Section 10 of that act.

SECTION 3. BOND TERMS.

A. The state board of finance, except as limited by the 2016 Capital Projects General Obligation Bond Act, shall determine the terms, covenants and conditions of bonds issued pursuant to that act, including but not limited to: (1) date or dates of issue, denominations and maturities; (2) principal amounts; (3) rate or rates of interest; and (4) provisions for redemption, including premiums, registration and refundability, whether the bonds are issued in one or more series and other covenants relating to the bonds and the issuance thereof.

B. The bonds shall be in such form as the state board of finance determines with an appropriate series designation and shall bear interest payable as set forth in the resolution of the state board of finance.

C. Payment of the principal of the bonds shall begin not more than two years after the date of their issuance, and the bonds shall mature not later than ten years after the date of their issuance. Both principal and interest shall be payable in lawful money of the United States at the office of the paying agent within or without the state as the state board of finance may direct.

D. The bonds shall be executed with the manual or facsimile signature of the governor or the state treasurer, and the seal or a facsimile of the seal of the state shall be

Look Who's Dancing back for a ninth season

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico State University Dance Program presents the ninth season of Look Who's Dancing! (LWD), at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 23, at the Pan American Center, 1810 E. University Ave. on the NMSU campus.

The purpose of the event is to promote social dancing in the community as a healthful and enjoyable activity for all ages and all skill levels, and to benefit the NMSU Dance Program. The NMSU DanceSport Company members have been partnered with local community celebrities and began practicing for this event in August. At the event on Oct. 23, the "celebrities" will compete toe-to-toe in a spirited dance contest.

The DanceSport Company students are responsible for creating the dance choreographies, instructing their community "celebrity" partners on how to execute the steps, and performing with them in the LWD event.

Competitors will vie for first, second and third place Mirror Ball trophies, the Entertainment Award, and the People's Choice award. The judges' scores are based on the technical and artistic skill of the dancers. Past LWD winners judge each couple on who has the most entertaining performance and pick one couple to receive the Entertainment award.

Dim the lights, it's time for a Halloween flick

I love a good, scary movie. With Halloween nearly upon us, it's time to log on to Netflix, or fire up the DVD player, pop some corn, turn out the lights and enjoy fear as entertainment.

Sadly, most so-called scary movies are no good. You have to wade through a bunch of blood, screams, demons, special effects ... yada yada yada.

Sometimes, though, a genuine creepy horror movie – or “thriller” depending on terminology – will escape from Hollywood and make it to the movie screens out here in the hinterlands.

Plus, there have been some really good exports from Japan the past 20 years.

Of course, not all good Halloween movies are scary. “It’s the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown,” and “Ernest Scared Stupid” come to mind.

Still, a good scare can make for good times.

So, what are the best movies to watch during the Halloween season?

Classics

While 1973’s “The Exorcist” goes down as one of the best, and most disturbing, horror flicks of all time – it was nominated for 10 Academy Awards for crying out loud – it’s hard to beat “The Omen” for creepiness. The scene with a nanny and a noose – “It’s all for you Damien!” – is not easily forgotten. Having to learn your beloved little boy is the Antichrist is a tough blow.

Harvey Stephens was six when he played the role of Damien and his facial expressions alone ramp up the disturbing feelings that wash over you as you watch this one.

Bulletin Publisher Richard Coltharp points out 1962’s “Whatever Happened to Baby Jane,” starring Bette Davis and Joan Crawford as a movie that’ll “Creep you right out.”

Bulletin Content Director Tracy Roy hits the nail on the head when she says John Carpenter’s 1978 classic “Halloween” with Jamie Lee Curtis, “Never gets old. Never gets less creepy.”

Animated

Take your hand-held device, find the most sincere pumpkin patch in your area, and watch 1966’s “It’s the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown.” You will not be disappointed and you’ll find yourself saying, “I got a rock,” the rest of the night, just as Chuck himself does every time he checks his trick-or-treat sack.

Tim Burton’s “The Nightmare Before Christmas” introduced us to the conflicted Jack Skellington in 1993. I could watch this one over and over again.

While “Monster House” and “Corpse Bride” and “ParaNorman” are good, Halloween fun, 2009’s “Coraline” takes the cake. The creepy button eyes drove my then 7-year-old daughter to tears. I guess I was a bad Dad to let her watch it in the first place.

Good fun

How about “The Ring”? Sure, I hear “Ringu” the Japanese movie this is based on is better, but I cannot comment because I have not seen that one. However, “The Ring” had me lying in bed, thinking about the distorted faces of those who had seen Samara in person. Check it out and you’ll know what I mean.

Another one based on a Japanese original is “The Grudge.”

Bulletin staff writer Susie Ouderkirk says, “For a Halloween movie that has a real plot and a twist or two, my pick is ‘Ravenous,’ a darkly quasi-comedic period piece from 1999.”

Do not be turned off by the facts; “The Exorcist III” is a second sequel and “The Exorcist II” was terrible, even with Richard Burton. The third installment has George C. Scott and Jason Miller, who reprises his role as Father Karras from “The Exorcist” in “The Exorcist III.” The drawn out scene with the nurse in a hospital at night is not to be missed.

Filmed in southern NM

If you want to see some local scenery served up with your scary fun, Desert Exposure Editor Elva Österreich suggests “Truth,” “The Hills Have Eyes,” and “Them.”

NMSU filmmaker seeks funds to finish movie

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University Creative Media Institute (CMI) Assistant Professor Ilana Lapid has launched a Kickstarter campaign to raise $15,000 to complete her latest short film, "Yochi."

"Yochi" is one of 10 short films selected for the 11th annual Belize International Film Festival, which will be held Nov. 10-13 in Belize City.

The film tells the story of Yochi, a nine-year-old Mayan boy who lives with his grandmother in a village in Belize. He hasn't spoken to another human since his grandfather died a year before, although he does talk to endangered yellow-headed parrots in the pine savannah of Belize.

Yochi's beloved older brother, Itza, 18, returns to the village after moving to the city because he couldn't get along with his grandfather, a steward of the land whom Itza feels he betrayed by leaving. The grandfather died soon after he left.

Lapid said the money raised through the Kickstarter campaign will help pay for professional sound design, an original score and soundtrack, final audio mix, color timing, marketing and festival entry fees.

"We are organizing a screening tour of the film across Belize, which will be combined with outreach and education about alternatives to poaching in pine savannah communities," she said.

"Any funds we earn above our Kickstarter goal will go to outreach/education, and to support the work of the Belize Bird Rescue," Lapid said. "Yochi brings awareness to the plight of endangered yellow-headed parrots.

"Yochi" is a U.S.-Belizean co-production made with a crew that includes CMI students and graduates, and is currently in post-production. Lapid was inspired to make the film by her experiences leading a CMI documentary filmmaking course in 2013 and 2014, during which she took CMI students to film in Mayan villages in western Belize.

Lapid wrote the script for "Yochi" in April, based on a story by Lapid and Alejandro Horcasitas, "to tell a human story about the pressing global issue of the illegal wildlife pet trade through the eyes of a child," she said. "It's also something of a folk tale," Lapid said.

Lapid said donations of any amount would be greatly appreciated. The Kickstarter campaign expires in mid-November.

Troupe of Cruces actors to perform 'Mary' at RenFaire

By MIKE COOK
Las Cruces Bulletin

A troupe of Las Cruces actors who call themselves Enchantment Historical Productions (EHP) will perform the original play "Mary Queen of Scots (or Who Done It to Darnley)" as part of this year's Renaissance ArtsFaire at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 5 and 6, at Young Park, 1905 E. Nevada Ave., said the play's director, Joe Pfeiffer, and playwright Meghan Berver.

Featured in the Court of the Crimson Bear, about a dozen members of EHP will perform in hand-made period costumes.

The play, a one-hour farce, "is, in fact, a musical," Berver said. "We sing."

Performers will include Cory Gasparich, who is currently pursuing a master's degree in voice at New Mexico State University, and Melody Hagaman-Burns, a science teacher at Centennial High School, Berver said.

"What we do is light-hearted, family-friendly, historically inspired comedy," said Pfeiffer, a long-time fixture of Las Cruces theater.

For all performances, members provide their own costumes. Each renaissance dress takes about one yard of fabric and about a week to make. Seamstresses are Beckie Clawson, Andrea Severson and Berver.

Severson is a graduate student at the University of Texas at El Paso pursuing a Ph.D. in historical fashion, Berver said.

Pfeiffer plays the part of Rizzio, one of Mary Queen of Scots' advisors, in this year's show. Rizzio was assassinated on March 9, 1566 when he was stabbed 56 times. "I will be falling on everybody's sword on stage 'accidentally,'" Pfeiffer said.

In addition to live performances, their Crimson Bear area of the RenFaire will include a ping-pong cannon and other children's activities, along with other live entertainment. The area also has benches.

EHP welcomes new members. You can find an application form on their website, www.enchantmenthistoricalproductions.com. You can also contact Pfeiffer at joseph@pfeifferfamily.net.

Monthly jam forms out of digital world

A pastel sunset warmed the evening of Oct. 3, but it was a stormy Monday inside the Warehouse, formerly Hurricane Alley, 1490 Missouri Ave.

Some blues guys (Blues Messiah, etc.), some country guys (Tom Foster Morris) – singers, string-benders, horn- and reed-blowers, skin-pounders and piano-ticklers have a meet-and-greet and, oh yeah, play a bit, have an open jam.’ They asked me about it and I said, ‘Yeah, let’s just come here and do it.’”

MARTY RACINE

The Chromatic Scale

The response was overwhelming.

“There were

– were stomping through another monthly First Monday jam.

The jam is a byproduct of the Mesilla Valley Musicians Guild, which formed on Facebook four years ago, creator and drummer Dave Jacko said, as a place to network within the Cruces musical community, a place to find fellow travelers. Members (currently numbering around 1,200) share videos, promote gigs and CDs, barter equipment and solicit help in forming bands.

Several months later, the original guilders, most of them longtime friends, agreed to emerge from the digital world into the flesh. Hubbard’s Music, a 37-year Cruces institution on Wyatt Drive, hosted an inaugural meeting.

“We were all just talking on Facebook one day,” store owner Dru Hubbard recalled, “and Will Sadler (KW Sound) brought up, ‘Hey, why don’t we just get this club together and start supporting each other and probably 40 people in this store. After hours, I was sitting there going, ‘Yeah, this isn’t going to work here, so let’s find a venue.’”

Hurricane Alley manager Scott Guthrie offered his club – a 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. slot on Mondays — before the late-night karaoke.

The bar had a high stage, lights and a sound system installed several years earlier. Hubbard’s would supply the backline (amps, drums). Players just needed to bring their instrument.

“You’ve got to have some kind of structure,” Hubbard said. “There’s not going to be 10 guitar players bringing in 10 different amps. I wanted to make it easy for everybody, not to have to set up their rig. You’ve got to keep it revolving.”

Hubbard’s role was crucial, Jacko said. “Without Dru [the guild] would just be a Facebook page that people talked on.”

They considered a weekly jam but settled on once-a-month, Hubbard said. “You don’t want to burn people out. This way, people look forward to doing this, instead of, ‘Oh, I’ll skip this one and go next week.’”

The guild also launched a monthly Saturday band showcase at the Cane, as regulars called it, but it was discontinued. “It was just too much,” Jacko said.

In December 2014 Hurricane Alley was sold, and the new owners, two married couples, rebranded it as the Warehouse. Check it out: garage doors, corrugated metal, black cinderblock walls, an industrial vibe. Yep.

Cruces native Laurie Freilino, who now manages the bar and books the entertainment, reassured the guild of her desire to continue the jam. “Once they saw new ownership they got worried, but they decided to give us a chance,” she said. “They’re easy-going guys, we have such a good relationship.”

“They’re artists, free-spirited, they like to enjoy things,” said her husband, John, who met Laurie at New Mexico State 28 years ago.

Musician Kim Wollard monitors the signup sheet, Mace Priestley or Chris Heyser of KW Sound operate the soundboard, and musician Chris Wollard coordinates.

“Chris does more than 50 percent of everything,” said Jacko, chief MC and schmoozer. “He’s the muscles, he sets the stage up. My job is way easier than his.”

“He’s the one behind the scenes who I don’t think gets enough recognition,” Jacko’s wife, Sherri, said. “Without him, I don’t know what we would do.”

But it’s a collaborative affair. No egos allowed. Whoever’s available pitches in. “Pretty much anybody who’s in there, when they see Chris drive up, us drive up, they come out and help us unload,” said Sherri Jacko.

The music often plows

the deep soil of the blues, a firmament many players intuitively understand, but all genres from jazz to metal, from bluegrass to experimental, are encouraged.

“Everybody gets a chance to play and a chance to play what they want,” Hubbard said. “Doesn’t matter how good or bad you are, everybody is supportive.

On Nov. 7 whoever wants to connect will again have that opportunity.

Famed cellist Yo-Yo Ma shares his talent with a multicultural group of musicians called Silk Road Ensemble in the movie "Music of Strangers."

Yo-Yo Ma reaches out in 'Music of Strangers'

By JEFF BERG

For the Bulletin

"Music of Strangers" is a captivating, first-rate music film focusing on famed cellist Yo-Yo Ma, who puts aside his typical grand performances of classical music to share his talents with a multicultural group of musicians called Silk Road Ensemble.

Directed by Morgan Neville who did the fascinating "Twenty Feet from Stardom" a box-office hit and Oscar-winner a couple of years ago - that doc was about some of the unheralded backup singers for big name musicians - most of Neville's résumé as a director and producer links to musicians via documentary.

Like many others probably were and will be, I was a bit

GRADE: A-

The Fountain Theatre at 2469 Calle De Guadalupe, Mesilla, will host the film "Music of Strangers" for a week run to play 7:30 p.m. daily, with a 2:30 p.m. Sunday matinee, starting Friday, Oct. 21.

taken aback to learn the Ma was never really into music, and mostly "fell into it" because of his childhood gifts and talents. His onstage career amazingly started at age 7, as we learn when he is introduced by Leonard Bernstein on a television show.

As noted by his friend John Williams, it remains a challenge for Ma to keep his interest going and with that in mind we learn that he has played with everyone from vocalist Bobby McFerrin, to Hot Clubs, Stephan Grappelli.

But with the Silk Road Project, Ma may have found another calling.

Featuring musicians who are from around the world, including Spain and Syria, the artists are paired, so to speak, to see where the playing of their traditional music will take them. This way, many cultures are bridged, via this so-called "Manhattan Project of Music," closing gaps and introducing new ways of playing and learning for each performer.

The film spends a lot of its time on the history of this project and on a handful of its most intriguing members, including Wu Man, master of the Chinese stringed instrument called the pipa; Damascus-born clarinetist Kinan Azmeh; Iranian exile Kayhan Kalhor, who plays the bowed kamancheh; and even female bagpiper from Spain, Cristina Pato, who is called "the Jimi Hendrix of Galicia."

Audiences who are as curious about music as I and Mr. Ma are will wish for a little more examination of the mysterious instruments we encounter here — of how they work, maybe even how they evolved. But Neville is smart to focus on the players' stories and histories, which often involve political turbulence and unwilling immigration, as he follows them around the world. Kalhor's biography is one of the more interesting, as we first meet him in May of 2009, living and teaching in Iran, noting that "I can't imagine moving abroad again." However, the next month, politics forces him to do just that, leaving behind his wife, who he only manages to see on occasion to this day.

Hooking together these personal narratives are acts of music — from tender lamentations to lively party jams. Music of Strangers is not a performance film, so regrettably we rarely hear a whole song. But the spirit of the musician's inspiration is catching enough to motivate the uninitiated to find more of each performer's works. Silk Road Ensemble has made six albums so far — and there is more great music still to come if this work is any indication.

St. James Parish Hall is experiencing an epiphany

By SUSIE OUDERKIRK
Las Cruces Bulletin

When you drive up to the St. James Parish Hall off of South Main Street, a charming statue of St. Francis greets you. Lately, however, St. Francis stands guard over repairs being done on the foundation and walls of the Parish Hall.

Chemist Godfrey Crane, the chair of the six-member Parish Hall Restoration Committee for the church, is overseeing the repairs to the adobe façade at 102 St. James St. The committee was set up in 2014 to fix cracks in the Parish Hall because, for several years, “there was a long and wide crack in the stucco of the west wall, near the ground,” Crane said. “Also, in some places the stucco had completely fallen away from the wall. Since the building is of adobe brick, this could not go unrepaired, due to the impact of rain on the bricks.”

Contractor Pat Taylor, who has an international reputation as an adobe restorer, and his masons have been at work for several months, Crane said.

“As he stripped off the stucco, he found erosion of bricks near the foundation, as well as a number of cracked bricks in various locations and also determined that the wall was not adequately pinned to the roof trusses,” Crane said.

Taylor has corrected these deficiencies.

Crane said several years ago the rectangular windows on one side of the hall were covered over. “We have taken the opportunity to reinstall Gothic-style windows (kindly donated by a parishioner) in rebuilt arches, so that the building will be restored to its original appearance,” he said.

All that remains at the moment is to re-cover the west wall with the traditional coats of lime plaster, “not the impervious stucco, which doesn’t let the adobe ‘breathe,’” Crane said. “Since we have almost depleted our building fund, we will have to raise the money for this.”

The committee is about to start a landscaping and drainage project on the west side, which will help water to flow away from the hall, and further in the future the same repairs will have to be made to the east wall, although it’s in much better shape than the west, Crane said.

The feminine aspect of God

Did humans make up God? Or did we sense a presence and give it a form with which we might be able to relate?

CAROL CARNES

Living Consciously

In the Abrahamic religions (Christianity, Judaism and Islam) the form we gave God was one that echoed what we saw in the world, the kingly power of the masculine. God became man-like.

But today we are seeing the effects of the ignored feminine aspect of God (or Source). If we are to feel complete ourselves, we must know that our Source is also whole. The feminine is missing in our world but she is rising in our awareness as we see what untethered masculinity alone has done. The effects produce violence to ourselves and to nature.

This is the most important issue of our times, for how we behave is based entirely on our deeper sense of reality.

If God is a man, then this truly is a man's world, and we will feel justified to exclude from power and influence anyone who does not reflect that image.

We will fear the "other half" of us. Why? Because the feminine is fiercely protective of nature, children, beauty, order, justice, equality, joy, creativity, love, compassion and peace. These are the very qualities that make up a world that works for us all. You can readily see they are not at the top of the list for the lopsided power we have been subjected to in the past.

It is not an either/or proposition. It is a both/and.

Let's take a personal inventory of how we see ourselves. Are we balanced? Do we lead with justice and intelligence in harmony? Are we compassionate and discerning at the same time? Do we value individuality and community and see how they support one another? Are we inclusive in our love and wise in our relationships? Are we both mother and father to ourselves? If only half of us is in charge, we will not be fully expressed and our world will be incomplete.

Passport to the wilderness

By ELVA K. ÖSTERREICH
Las Cruces Bulletin

Creating a yearly booklet of hikes and essays several years ago, the New Mexico Wilderness Alliance (NMWA) shared the little publication with people looking for adventure. But pretty soon the product became obsolete.

"It got to the point where the shelf-life was not very long," said Nathan Newcomer, NMWA Gila grassroots organizer and former associate director. He, and others in the group, began work on a new product.

Now "The Wild Guide Passport to New Mexico Wilderness" highlights the wild spaces of the state, providing descriptions, facts, maps and suggested hikes as well as photos by New Mexico photographers.

Newcomer has been with NMWA since April 2002 and still loves his

"It really showcases all of the New Mexico Wilderness Areas," he said. "There is so much to see in New Mexico. In 14 years, I have not even been to all the areas."

Newcomer said the book provides a snapshot of each of the areas, of which there are 76 in the book.

"You have a really nice write-up on each and each has a suggested hike," he said.

The Wild Guide is the only book that features each of the state's designated wilderness areas and wilderness study areas as well as other public lands treasures such as the Rio Grande del Norte and Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks national monuments.

New Mexico provides a wealth of opportunity for people to get out and encounter nature, Newcomer said.

"Some people do encounter wild nature," he said. "It's the chance to be able to experience some of the last vestiges of wild

Homeowners, master gardeners, landscape managers and turfgrass professionals are invited to attend the Southwest Turfgrass Association Recreational Landscape Conference and Expo hosted by New Mexico State University Tuesday to Thursday, Oct. 25-27 at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave. The event begins with a golf tournament Oct. 25 at the NMSU Golf Course. The conference includes a field trip to the NMSU Turfgrass Salinity Research Center on Triviz Drive.

Bernd Leinauer, NMSU Extension Turfgrass Specialist, said the conference will focus on water and the economic impact of turfgrass, among other topics.

While the conference rotates locations each year, Leinauer said having the event in Las Cruces is important because people are able to visit the NMSU turfgrass research facilities and see the work that's being accomplished first-hand.

NMSU researchers simulate storms to study hail damage to chiles

By JANE MOORMAN

For the Bulletin

While watching a 15-minute hail storm on May 18 disintegrate the leaves on chile plants, Israel Calsoyas realized the importance of research she is conducting at New Mexico State University.

“All you could see after the storm was the main branches left bare,” she recalled. “I thought about the farmers whose main income comes from a chile pepper crop and I realized that my research is really important.”

Calsoyas, a College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences doctoral student studying plant physiology in the Department of Plant and Environmental Sciences, is establishing data regarding the impact of hail damage on paprika chile pepper yield.

Hail is one of the weather risks all farmers face, no matter what type of crop they are raising. It can demolish a crop in minutes. Across the country where hail is a frequent event, farmers often purchase a crop-hail insurance policy to protect high-yielding crops.

“During the last 30 years, New Mexico has had an increase in incidents of severe hail damage, according to the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration,” Calsoyas said. “Because of this, the National Crop Insurance Service and other insurance agencies are interested in data to help them calculate how to refund people for their crop yield loss.”

In 2014, 1,466 of the 8,600 acres of chile peppers planted in New Mexico was insured for hail damage, according to National Crop Insurance Service.

Chile is a broadleaf crop, so it is more sensitive to hail damage than a slender leaf crop, such as corn. For corn, the diameter of the hail has to be an inch or larger to cause damage.

New Mexico State University agricultural researchers are studying how chile pepper plants respond to hail storm damage. Israel Calsoyas, project manager, simulates a hail storm by spraying the plants with water at a pressure of 200 pounds per square inch. She is conducting the simulation at three points in the plant's growth and at three degrees of destruction. The data will help chile growers decide what action to take if their fields are hit by hail.

With chile it can be even less than that to cause damage.

When hail damage occurs the farmer must decide whether to till the crop under and start over with a different crop, mow the chile pepper allowing it to grow back, or ride it out to see what type of yield they get.

“Farmers want to know if hail hits their crop during the growing season how the plants are going to respond,” she said. “Is their yield going to be the same or is it going to be decreased?”

Part of the equation for the farmer's decision is when the damage occurs.

“If it is early in the season, chile is actually really vigorous and will come back. Sometimes, growers will mow down the plants to within six inches of the ground, and the plant will come back.”

Chile pepper plants' growth is partially determined by the air temperature. Optimum growth occurs in the range of 64 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit. In warmer temperature conditions plants develop at a slower pace, if at all. The farmer's action is determined by whether there will be enough days in the optimum temperature range for the plant to recover and produce fruit after hail damage.

To see how the plants recover from damage during the season, Calsoyas has simulated hail damage at three different points in the chile plants' growth by using pressurized water sprayed on the plants at three different damage levels – slight, medium and high.

“What we are trying to create is 30, 60 and 90 percent plant damage at different growth stages – first bloom, fruit setting on and fruit at full maturity,” she said.

Simultaneously, the researcher is conducting a stand production trial where she will see how surviving plants response when a percentage of plants are removed from the plot.

“Typically, research has shown, when you reduce the stand the remaining plants start to grow more vigorously because they have more space and less competition so they put on a lot of fruit and become more bush-like,” Calsoyas said. “However, other research has shown a field with a higher population of plants will produce more per acre than a field with a lower population, even though the field with a lower population may have more yield per plant.”

While yield is important, for red paprika growers, the color of the pepper also is important because of the red oleoresin extracted from the chile, which is used in a variety of products.

“We want to see how hail damage affects the color,” she said. “Since the color is factored into the value of the paprika chile, this information will help the grower while deciding what to do with their field: continue raising the plants or to till them under.”

Paprika chile pepper harvest begins in late September in southern New Mexico. At that time Calsoyas will gather data regarding the yield of the different scenarios. Next year she will repeat the research to gather more information.

“The information we are gathering will benefit the growers with their cropping decisions, as well as the insurance companies in compensating for the crop loss,” she said. “At the end of next year's season, we should have final results that say how much the crop yield will be reduced depending on when the hail damage occurred and the severity of the hail event.”

Richard (KC5EVR) and Charlotte (KC5KWI) Johnson talked about the radio equipped bicycles they used while riding in states and countries from Alaska to Newfoundland. During the talk, Johnson explained how he attached the radios and the large antennas to the bicycles so that they could talk to each other and to other ham radio operators in the area.

Stay warm this Winter

With winter weather comes a few important safety tips that will help keep you safe and warm. Never use your range or oven to heat your home. It is a fire safety hazard, and it can create carbon monoxide a silent deadly killer you can't smell or see. Barbecue grills, camp stoves, and any type of outdoor equipment are not created to be used in a closed environment, so be sure to use properly. Zia Natural Gas Company reminds you to stay warm, but above all stay safe this winter.

As always, Zia personnel are available
24/7 for all natural gas emergencies.

Attendees of Restoring Balance, a women's healing retreat, explored ways to find healing through honoring all the images of the divine in life on Friday through Sunday, Oct. 14, 15 and 16, at Holy Cross Retreat Center, 600 Holy Cross Road. The open-faith retreat was a combination of teaching, small-group discussion and learning through experience. Agriculture street fair warms up the crowd before the game

NMSU REPORT

It's the family-friendly event to beat all others in Las Cruces: on Oct. 22 you'll find farm animals, games and prizes and samples of local food all in one completely free event.

The fourth annual Agriculture Day street takes place from 2-6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 22, in the parking lot between Aggie Memorial Stadium and the Pan Am Center prior to the Aggies' home game against Georgia Southern. Dozens of groups representing almost every facet of New Mexico's diverse agricultural community will participate.

"The purpose of Ag Day is to invite people to learn about New Mexico agriculture through food and fun activities, and highlight the connection between agriculture and NMSU," New Mexico Secretary of Agriculture Jeff Witte said. "This is so much more than a tailgate event – we'll have something for everyone."

"This year, Ag Day partners with the Aggies are Tough Enough To Wear Pink promotion to help raise awareness for cancer research," Witte said.

In addition to the many booths, kids can get a pony ride and interact with other farm animals or try out the jumping balloons at Pistol Pete's Kids Zone.

"We'll also be offering free samples of quesadillas using New Mexico cheese – plus beef sliders, root beer floats, green chile in tortillas, and milk chugs, to name a few," Witte said.

Tickets to the Aggie football game start at $10 and can be purchased in advance online and in person at the Pan American Center ticket office at 575-646-1420, as well as on game day.

New Mexico Department of Health encourages flu shots

Vaccination remains the best protection against Influenza

BULLETIN REPORT

The New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) is reminding New Mexicans that flu season is around the corner and is urging everyone six months and older to get vaccinated.

"Getting flu vaccine every year is the best way to protect yourself and loved ones against getting the flu," said Department of Health Secretary Designate Lynn Gallagher. "When more people get vaccinated, we reduce the chances that flu spreads in our communities."

The seasonal flu vaccine protects against the influenza viruses which are expected to be most common during the upcoming season. For the 2016-2017 flu season, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends use of the flu shot (inactivated influenza vaccine or IIV) and the recombinant influenza vaccine (RIV). The nasal spray flu vaccine (live attenuated influenza vaccine or LAIV) is not recommended and will not be available during the 2016-2017 flu season in New Mexico.

NMDOH recommends everyone six months of age and older get a flu vaccine each flu season, especially people in the following groups who are at high risk or live with and care for people at high risk for developing serious flu-related complications, such as hospitalization and death:

- Children younger than five years old, but especially children younger than two years old
- Pregnant women (any trimester, and up to two weeks post-partum)
- People age 50 and older
- People of any age with certain chronic medical conditions like asthma, diabetes, lung or heart disease, and those who are immunocompromised

- People who live in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities
- People who live with or care for those at high risk for complications from flu, including healthcare personnel and caregivers of babies younger than 6 months
- American Indians and Alaskan Natives

• People who are morbidly obese
People in these groups should also consider seeing their healthcare provider to be evaluated for antiviral medications if they develop flu symptoms. Influenza (flu) is a contagious respiratory illness. Flu symptoms may include rapid illness onset with fever, cough, sore throat, headache, and/or muscle aches.

In addition to the vaccine, New Mexicans can avoid catching the flu or passing it on to others by washing their hands frequently, covering their mouth and nose when sneezing or coughing, and staying home when ill.

Flu vaccines are offered in many locations, including doctor's offices, hospitals, public health offices, and pharmacies, as well as by many employers and some schools. NMDOH encourages those with health insurance to contact their healthcare provider or pharmacist about getting the flu vaccine. The Department offers vaccinations for people without insurance or who are otherwise not able to get vaccinated. Those with Medicaid or other insurance who go to Public Health Offices are asked to bring their insurance card. To find out about flu vaccination clinics throughout the state, call the Immunization Hotline toll free at 866-681-5872 or visit www.flushot.healthmap.org/ to see where the vaccine is being offered.

People should ask their healthcare provider or pharmacist if they need the pneumococcal vaccine which can be given at the same time as flu vaccine. Influenza frequently causes types of pneumonia that can be prevented by the pneumococcal vaccine.

Last flu season in New Mexico, there were 30 influenza-related deaths identified in adults (60 percent among people 65 years and older) and one child, and 219 pneumonia-related deaths reported.

For more information about flu and flu vaccines, visit the NMDOH website at: www.nmhealth.org/about/phd/idb/imp/flu/, or visit the CDC information page at: www.cdc.gov/flu/about/season/flu-season-2016-2017.htm

National group advocates benefits of legalizing marijuana

By BILLY HUNTSMAN
Las Cruces Bulletin

A national marijuana legalization advocacy organization is hosting a series of informational meetings throughout the state prior to the 2017 Legislative Session.

The Drug Policy Alliance (DPA) came to New Mexico in 2000, encouraged by former Governor Gary Johnson's pro-legalization platform. Headquartered in New York, DPA has additional offices in New Jersey, California, Washington, D.C. and Colorado.

"The DPA's legislative successes in New Mexico include helping pass the medical cannabis law," said Jessica Gelay, DPA policy coordinator and the presenter at an Oct. 12

DPA meeting at Doña Ana Community College – East Mesa.

Because of the medical cannabis law, which was approved in 2007 by former Governor Bill Richardson, more than 30,000 people in New Mexico have access to medical marijuana, Gelay said.

Beyond medical marijuana, the DPA is looking to totally legalize marijuana for adult use, Gelay said.

There are two ways marijuana could be legalized in New Mexico, Gelay said. One is a constitutional amendment that would have to be passed by both the New Mexico Senate and the House of Representatives before the people could vote it into law.

The second way would require legislation to be passed by the state legislature and then presented to the governor for her signature.

"At this point, we don't have support from our current governor," said Gelay.

Gelay said legalizing adult-use marijuana in New Mexico could have substantial benefits, such as addressing the massive budget deficit the state is facing.

By the end of fiscal year 2016, the state had a budget shortfall of $150 million. By the end of fiscal year 2017, the shortage is estimated to be an additional $300 to $500 million.

Gelay said, while not a cure-all for the state's budget difficulties, legalizing marijuana would substantially reduce the deficit.

In the first year, the DPA estimates legalized marijuana business could generate $410 million in commerce. By the fifth year of legalized business, the industry could be worth more than $740 million in the state.

Legalizing marijuana would create about 11,000 jobs, Gelay said, as a result of the dispensaries that would open up.

Further, if legalized marijuana sales were to be taxed like alcohol and cigarettes, the tax revenues could be used to fund early childhood education, funding public addiction treatment centers, police and corrections officers, as well as contribute to the state's general fund, which disburses capital outlay funds for public works.

The Oct. 12 meeting's audience of about 50 people all greatly supported these and other avenues that could benefit from marijuana tax revenues.

Whether "adult-use" should mean 18 or 21, the audience was divided over.

Most in the audience agreed, however, that under 18 should not be allowed to use marijuana.

For those worried about more young children using marijuana if legalized, Gelay's presentation presented the findings of a University of Colorado – Boulder report: In 2009, 25 percent of under-18 individuals surveyed said they had tried marijuana at least once in the last 30 days.

By 2011, that number decreased to 22 percent, by 2013—the year marijuana was legalized in Colorado—the number dropped again to 20 percent, and in 2015 rose to 21 percent.

Many states, such as California, Nevada and Arizona, are voting this November whether to legalize recreational marijuana. New Mexico is not among these.

Marijuana use is completely legal in Colorado, Alaska, Oregon and Washington State. Some states, Pennsylvania, New York and New Mexico among them, have legalized medical marijuana. A number of states are voting in November whether to legalize medical marijuana—Louisiana, Florida and Missouri.

Other states have no legislation regarding legalizing marijuana—including Texas, Utah, Mississippi and Alabama.

The DPA's next meeting will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 25, in Albuquerque at the South Valley Multipurpose Center from 5 to 7 p.m.

More information can be found at www.GrowNM.org or by contacting Gelay at nm@drugpolicy.org or at 505-983-3277.

Benefits of cannabis take us back to ancient history

By HILDA LUZ CHAVEZ

For the Bulletin

Let's begin with a bit of Hhstory: Cannabis, like many other herbs, has historically been used as medicine by humans for millions of years, who knows how long. If you care to know more, I invite you to do some research yourself, search the internet. It is a wonderful tool to explore, discover and substantiate.

As history shows, the Japanese and the Chinese recorded the use and benefits of cannabis and many other herbs for more than 10,000 years. There is evidence that India, the Middle East and Egypt used it for many purposes. Look for kanen bosem, anointing oil, it's in the Old Testament.

Most people do not know that there are actually three species of cannabis that exist in the world: Cannabis sativa, Cannabis indica and Cannabis ruderalis (aka hemp.) They are all in the cannabis family, however, they all have different medicinal effects. More on hemp in future columns.

Fast forward to today, scientists have now confirmed the existence of cannabinoids (there are many) and of the endocannabinoid system in the human body.

Prohibitionists and skeptics still claim that there is no medicinal value. Much of this rhetoric is based on ignorance, lack of research, politics and morality issues.

HILDA LUZ CHAVEZ

The Good Herb

The experiential and empirical proof of hundreds of thousands of years of benefit is often dismissed as if experience doesn't matter. Ask any medical cannabis patient if it matters.

Science seems to be part of the problem but will someday prove to be part of the solution. The challenge is to get the prohibitionists, the DEA and the politicians on board the positive train.

Hundreds of thousands of years ago, there were no scientists, there was no cannabinoid research, there were only humans benefitting from nature's herbs. Hence the la yerba buena, the good herb, as my grandmother used to call it. FYI: there are other herbs that contain cannabinoids like hops and hackberry. Look it up.

Historically, the tribal and or cultural healers, medicine men and women, herbalists, curanderas and others, recommended the herbs. Humans used them and got the results they needed for what ailed them. This is still true today in our own back yards, right here in New Mexico and all around the world. Herbs are part of many cultures. Our abuelitas and abuelitos still recommend las yerbas buenas. Most gardens have yerba buena (mint), epazote (jesuits tea), ruda (rue), perjil (parsley), oregano, ephedra (Mormon tea) and aloe vera, etc., and in some gardens, even cannabis is grown legally by patients for their personal and medicinal use.

In New Mexico, approved patients have the right and privilege to grow their own medicine, responsibly of course. It is a medicinal herb—a beneficial remedy that improves health and quality of life. However, to use and or grow medical cannabis, one must be educated. With the privilege comes great responsibility; education is vital to the safety and well-being of the patient.

Let's just say herbs have been here for humanity all along and they are here to stay.

How to show love for horses

The horse lover who does not ride can find contact with horses by volunteering at therapy programs, rescue organizations and retirement farms. All of these stables need dedicated volunteers because they are probably nonprofit programs running on a shoestring to do their good work.

If you find such a place, be certain that their first priority is the wellbeing of the horses or clients and their next priority is the safety of the volunteers. If you are working with physically disabled persons, you will need some training to be an effective helper.

KATHARINE LARK
Stable Woman

If the program is for psychotherapy with horses, most likely you will just help care for the horses and/or the facilities. If the stable rescues abused, abandoned or injured horses, you will need training even just for mucking the stalls and pens because the horses will have seen the worst of humans and may be terrified, unpredictable, aggressive, demoralized, injured deeply or hyper vigilant. The training you receive will keep everyone safe.

The time you spend on outdoor activities around horses and working in nature will increase your strength and stamina, lighten your spirit and build new dendrites.

When you visit stables, look for signs that will confirm that you have found a safe and kind facility. Signs of good management and treatment, I call "Green Flags"; signs of possible danger or neglect (if not outright abuse) I call "Red Flags".

GREEN FLAGS:

- Clean facilities; manure is picked up and composted, spread or disposed of.

- Horses are healthy; not too thin nor too fat, friendly, alert and aware with shiny coats (in the winter their coats will be long for warmth, but should still be soft).

- The horses have clean water always available.

- There is always a knowledgeable person in charge on the grounds.

- A first aid kit is accessible and fully stocked.

- People are firm and kind with the horses, establishing boundaries and letting the horses know when they have done something correctly.

- The staff members are willing to guide and instruct you constructively or refer you to courses, clinics and books to help.

RED FLAGS:

- No one of authority is on the premises.

- There is manure piled up in the horses' pens/stalls (obviously weeks' worth).

- There is no water for the horses or it is slimy and green.

- Tools are strewn about; there are nails, glass, trash and dangers all around.

- People are yelling at the horses or obviously thrashing them (aggressively, in anger as opposed to "popping" the pushy horse on the shoulder as another horse would to teach him manners for safety).

- People are aggressive toward each other.

The type of facility or program you choose, as a horse lover, will depend upon your own goals. If you plan someday to learn to ride; an academy or a riding school will be a great place to volunteer. If you do not want to ride and you have been a therapist or enjoy helping people and children; many programs use horses in therapy – both physical and mental health. If you want to help save abandoned and abused horses; an equine sanctuary or rescue will be in need of your help!

You may want to have your own horse as a companion and not to ride. Horse rescues are a great place to find kind, unwanted horses who cannot be ridden but have so much to offer to someone. Consider getting a compatible pair of horses. They are gregarious herd animals and need companions (Goats, calves, even chickens are better than no friends).

If you take on the care of a horse or horses, there will be expenses. You can figure that one horse needs two tons of hay per six months if that is his only source of food. A small horse/pony needs less, a horse higher than 17 hands tall will need more...it is just a guide. And you may need to feed supplements. His hooves will need attention every 2 months. A de-worming program is essential (as non-toxic to the horse as possible). There will be veterinary bills.

Your horse also needs room to move around, shelter, fresh water, salt and lots of attention from you. While they seem like expensive, time consuming projects, they are actually profound healers, companions and family enhancing beings. Horses are worth it.

Yet, you must be sure that you can continue to provide for your horse(s). Too many equines are suffering and unwanted. We need to change how we breed, buy and retire our equine partners who helped us build our countries. We try to set that example at Dharmahorse Equine Sanctuary through compassion, kindness and how we value all equines.

Oñate football players erupt with exhilaration as Interim Superintendent Steven Sanchez informs them that the NMAA Board of Directors will allow Oñate to keep its four wins that were previously forfeited. The athletes got the news during their lunch period, Monday, Oct. 17.

LCPS wins appeal; Oñate gains back forfeited wins

BULLETIN REPORT

Steven Sanchez, Las Cruces Public Schools Interim Superintendent, announced Monday, Oct. 17, that the New Mexico Activities Association (NMAA) Board of Directors modified an NMAA ruling based on an appeal by Las Cruces Public Schools on behalf of Oñate High School, which reverses the previous forfeiture of four games by the Oñate Knights football team. Sanchez informed the team during a lunchtime gathering at Oñate.

The reversal now restores Oñate's overall record to 5-2 and 3-0 in district play and gives back the program's historic victory against Mayfield High, the first since 1993.

"The NMAA Board listened intently to Oñate's appeal which was transparent and honest as to how a student who was ineligible was allowed to play in four games," Sanchez said. "The ruling was clear that the NMAA does not want to hurt students for adult mistakes. They proved that commitment by modifying the previous decision."

Also as part of the decision, Sally Marquez, NMAA executive director, informed LCPS that the Oñate Athletics Department will be on probation for two years, as will the school's athletics coordinator.

There was a deafening roar when Sanchez told the athletes that they "have their wins back." The school's football

Aggies hope for Pink power

BULLETIN REPORT

The NM State football team looks to return to the win column at 6 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 22, when it plays host to Georgia Southern for its Tough Enough to Wear Pink game.

The Aggies host Georgia Southern.

NMSU (2-4 overall, 1-2 Sun Belt) is licking its wounds after surrendering more than 50 points in a game for the third time this season when the Aggies fell 55-23 at Idaho, Saturday, Oct. 15. After taking a 13-7 lead, the Aggies watched the Vandals take control with a 20-0 run.

The task to return to the win column will not be easy.

Georgia Southern (3-3, 2-1) beat the Aggies 56-26 last season and is coming off a hard-fought loss at Georgia Tech.

The Eagles love to run the ball and have chewed up the grass to the tune of 1,600 yards so far. Saturday's battle on the gridiron will see two styles of offense with Georgia Southern attacking from the ground

Stay mentally strong throughout all 18 holes

If you happened to look at “Doc’s Mental Toughness” on page 70 of the Oct. 7 Bulletin, which consisted of 12 items asking for “yes” or “no” responses, you may have gotten a sense of some of your strong areas and also your mentally weak spots.

These items had little to do with physical strength, power or even your skill in the long game. They had everything to do with how well you manage your inner self. A score higher than 7 is an indication that you probably play the game with inner confidence and discipline. Last week I offered observations and suggestions regarding questions 1 through 7. Here I’ll do the same for 8 through 10.

CHARLIE BLANCHARD
Golf Doctor

Item 8 concerns how disciplined you are about your pre-shot routine, including using visualization. If you watch the tour pros, both men and women, you will notice that they go through the same ritual and rehearsal before every single shot and every putt. They are trained that way and they practice that way. Doing that keeps them in what I call a “comfort bubble” serving to quiet their mind before every shot in spite of crowds and chaos around them, not to mention the pressure of big-time tournaments. The same thing helps us cope with nerves and emotions in the middle of our weekly golf games, thereby avoiding meltdowns. Visualizing your swing (or putting stroke) and the shape of the shot you are figuring should actually be a portion of your pre-shot routine. You can read more in “Visual Golf” by Kenneth Van Kampen.

Coping with the unexpected is required of any competitor in any sport, so question nine asks you to rate yourself about routinely exhibiting exceptional coping skills and problem-solving ability. Thanks to the PGA Task Force and Davis Love III and his five vice captains, the U. S. Ryder Cup Team demonstrated strong coping strategy while facing the mounting pressure from losing three straight to the Euros, including the debacle at Medina. Davis Love III, who enjoyed the ultimate Mulligan, with a do-over from 2012, deserves an A+ in problem-solving due to his masterful pairings for the individual matches. The secret to coping is never giving up.

When Dr. Bob Rotella came out with “Golf Is Not a Game of Perfect” (1995) he was speaking to not only tour pros but every day chumps who love golf. Question ten is about sinking into the abyss of perfectionism and then beating yourself up. We’re not talking about OCD; more like a misguided belief in the form of private logic. Ask yourself: Am I actually good enough, skilled enough, practiced enough to think that I can hit perfect or almost perfect shots most of the time? No you’re not. Belly-aching about misplayed shots falls into the category of vanity excusing.

Next comes the closely related item concerning your belief that you have substantial control over your own play and performance. This is not the same as being a control “freak” or a control “enthusiast,” as the National Car Rental spokes-guy calls it. Get used to the fact that you can’t control conditions around you (e.g. weather, grass, bunker sand, etc.) and you have no control how other golfers play. You can only influence how you perform. And there’s something to be said about staying out of your own way!

Lastly comes probably the most important item in Doc’s mental quiz about being secure with properly managing your emotions, reactions and behavior during a round of golf. Don’t be fooled by the theatrical antics demonstrated by both Ryder Cup teams. Unlike us chops these guys are GOOD! They didn’t misbehave; with 50,000 golf fans watching, they deserved a little excitement. Our team won partly because of the emotion and enthusiasm, which has been sorely missing over the past 16 years. Understand, they all have mental coaches, and they are instructed to keep their inner senses in check when they are about to play a shot. Do we?

players yelled out loud, hugged one another and their coaches. Following the announcement, Coach Brent Jaquess told the team “we’re not done,” referring to the games ahead: Hobbs High on Friday, Oct. 21; Las Cruces High School, Oct. 28; and Centennial High School, Nov. 3, all at the Field of Dreams.

“We are overwhelmed by this decision,” said Principal Jim Schapekahn. “Our team has been so strong this season and they have kept their heads high despite what’s happened. We’re grateful that the NMAA put the students first and allowed the students to maintain the wins that they earned.”

Ernie Viramontes, LCPS director of athletics, said the competing schools that are impacted will be notified of the reversal. They are: Atrisco Heritage Academy of Albuquerque played on Sept. 3; Sandia High of Albuquerque played on Sept. 9; Gadsden High played on Sept. 23; and Mayfield High played on Sept. 30.

Sanchez also said the district will be vigilant in reviewing all policies, procedures and athletic rules to ensure this type of incident won’t happen again. Marquez informed LCPS that NMAA will work with the district on strengthening its policies and procedures.

“This has been tough for everyone and I’m grateful that everyone, including the NMAA board, put the kids first,” Sanchez said. “Collectively, our district took responsibility for our mistakes.”

Centennial and Las Cruces rolling into City rivalry mode

By JEFF MATTHEWS

For the Bulletin

Back to back rivalry games are tough on anyone. Even NFL teams can struggle with emotions on that kind of a grind. But there is no time for a letdown for the Bulldawgs and Hawks. Centennial (7-1) plays Las Cruces (6-1) in a battle of undefeated district 3-6-A teams at 7 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 22. For Centennial, the matchup comes a week after beating Mayfield in a game that came down to the final minute.

“We’re lucky this year,” said Centennial Head Coach Aaron Ocampo. “We play all three city teams in a row and (the Bulldawgs) do too. So it makes for a very interesting end of the season when you’re playing all those games.”

While the Hawks have the Mayfield game behind them, this is the first of the three-game gauntlet for the Bulldawgs. “It’s a challenge,” said Las Cruces Head Coach Mark Lopez “But one of the things we’ve tried to do all these years is to focus on the task at hand. If we can keep them contained within a one-week period, then we’ll be OK.”

Centennial leads the burgeoning overall series with the Bulldawgs 2-0 with wins in exciting games in 2014 and 2015. The Hawks have the Bulldawgs’ attention. “Obviously, the big rivalry is the Cruces-Mayfield game, but yea, it’s definitely turning into a rivalry,” Lopez said.

The Hawk quarterback situation was unsettled going into the week. Centennial junior Quarterback Noah Bartlett came in off the bench to lead the Hawks on a game-winning drive last week after starter Dante Lopez was shaken up and couldn’t return.

“I don’t know who we’re gonna have out there, but it was good that Noah made some plays at the end of that Mayfield game,” Ocampo said.

The game features some outstanding match-ups. Las Cruces High’s Brandon Baeza and Centennial’s Junior Pena both return kicks, are big play threats on offense and play in the secondary on defense.

Fans should see a lot of both Saturday night.

“Two big time playmakers for each of their teams,” said LCHS’ Lopez. “I think Pena has really exploded this year in their offense. They’ve isolated him quite a bit, they’ve found ways to get him the ball,” he said. “Bunz (Baeza) is one of our top playmakers now and has been for a while.”

Ocampo isn’t sure that Pena and Baeza will directly match up across from each other.

“I’m curious where they’re gonna put their secondary guys on our receivers,” said CHS’ Ocampo “That’s part of the fun part of playing football games. You get a chance to adjust and make decisions on the fly” he said.

“It’s going to come down to a few plays, hopefully we’re in the thick of things with it,” he said.

It’s an intriguing matchup. Both teams share a lot of the same qualities, though Las Cruces had to battle to pull out a 21-7 win against 2-6 Carlsbad Saturday afternoon.

“We have to execute a little better than we did last week to have a chance,” said Lopez.

“You have two offenses who have done a pretty darn good job. Two defenses that have got better as the year has gone along. It’s going to be a barn burner.”
