

Transition alters delivery schedule

Many Las Cruces Bulletin readers are likely to receive copies of the newspaper later than normal this week.

For the past several years, many copies of our Friday publication have been distributed Thursday evening or earlier.

However, as the Bulletin transitions to a new printing vendor, schedules will be altered, most likely for the next three weeks.

100 names suggested for plaza

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

At its Monday, Aug. 1 regular meeting, the Las Cruces City Council voted unanimously to table a proposed resolution that would have named the new city plaza located at 100 N. Main St. (at the corner of Main Street and Griggs Avenue) "Downtown Plaza."

Councillor Jack Eakman moved to table the resolution until the council's Sept. 6 meeting so more public input could be gathered on proposed names for the plaza.

The city Parks and Recreation advisory board had received about 100 suggested names for the plaza,

Burrell College attracts a wide variety of students

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine soon opens on the New Mexico State University campus for its first semester. The school's first class includes 162 students, three of whom took some time to speak to the Las Cruces Bulletin.

CHECK

Larissa Check, 25, is originally from Cameroon, West Africa. She now lives in Germantown, Maryland. She has Bachelor of Science degrees in chemistry and biology from Washington College and is completing a Master of Science in biotechnology at Johns Hopkins University.

Why did you choose BCOM?

I chose BCOM because I felt the school fulfilled all the criteria I was looking for in a medical school. Few medical schools offer international exposure in Mexico or South Africa. Few medical schools are focused and committed to bridging health disparities among medically underserved minority populations. On my interview day, I listened to each speaker discuss the mission of the school and ask each interviewee to reflect on whether this mission aligned with their personal and professional goals. For me, I was exactly where I needed to be. BCOM has a mission deeply rooted in educating culturally competent and empathetic physicians. I am grateful to be accepted as part of this mission. I truly look forward to not only being a part of this community, but to also contributing to making it the best community.

What will you study at BCOM?

At the moment, I have not decided which specialty I want to go into. After our core rotations in general surgery, family medicine, internal medicine, obstetrics/gynecology and psychiatry, I should have a much better idea.

What are your plans after you graduate from BCOM?

I will remain in the Southwest to work as a practicing physician after my chosen residency. I received the Burrell Medical Award, which takes care of a portion of my tuition and requires my commitment and service in medically underserved regions in the Southwest. I am very grateful and absolutely look forward to this experience.

Had you been to Las Cruces and/or New Mexico before you applied to BCOM? What are your thoughts about Las Cruces?

No, I had not. "Welcoming" is the word I would use to describe Las Cruces. On my way to Las Cruces, I boarded a plane with a gentleman and an older lady and had very lengthy conversations with these individuals. In doing so, I told them I was coming for an interview at BCOM. They were so happy for me and wished me well – as if we had known each other for a long time. This is where my love for Las Cruces really started. I want to explore and learn about the culture of Las Cruces.

What are your hobbies?

Exercising really helps me de-stress and I enjoy that. I look forward to hiking and being outdoors (occasionally) in the southwestern mountains!

NGUYEN

Alexander Nguyen is from Los Angeles County, California. He has a Bachelor of Arts in political science from the University of California, San Diego, with a minor in general biology.

Why did you choose BCOM?

I chose BCOM for many reasons, particularly for its physiological systems-based curriculum. This curriculum stems from a proven model that has a history of producing exceptional results for its students.

I was also incredibly impressed by how diligent BCOM has been in expanding graduate medical education in New Mexico. Spearheading the development of new residency positions serves as a testament to BCOM's long-term commitment to the City of Las Cruces, my classmates and me.

What will you study at BCOM?

My first year at BCOM will be comprised of courses featuring the physiological systems of the human body, osteopathic manipulative medicine, population health and clinical skills, among other disciplines.

What are your plans after you graduate from BCOM?

I hope to match into a great residency program that will empower me with the tools to be the best health care provider for my future patients. After my training is complete, I hope to eventually serve as a physician for a federally qualified health center.

What are your thoughts about Las Cruces? What have you learned about it that interests you?

Flying over to attend BCOM's interview was my first time in both Las Cruces and New Mexico. It took me no more than 24 hours to become completely enthralled with the city and its landscape. Those that I had the pleasure of meeting were some of the most welcoming and amiable people I've ever met, and they made me feel right at home the second I arrived. Because the city takes great pride in supporting its students and residents, I couldn't have asked for a better place to spend my years as a medical student than Las Cruces.

On top of my commitments as a medical student, I'm really looking forward to getting involved in the Las Cruces community. My goal is to become an active participant in the city's public school system by serving as a student mentor. I also cannot wait to eventually engage in meaningful research with NMSU. Some of the fields and topics I'd like to investigate include diabetes epidemiology and cognitive impairments.

GONZALEZ

Hugo Daniel Gonzalez, 25, is a native of El Paso, Texas. He grew up in El Paso and San Diego, California. He has a Bachelor of Science in biology with a minor in chemistry from the University of Texas at El Paso. He also has completed a post-graduate program at San Francisco State University.

Why did you choose BCOM?

I had two primary factors in mind when I was deciding which medical school to attend. The first was my comfort level with the school. My BCOM interview stood out well above the other interviews I attended.

The doctors were extremely friendly and the interview environment was very inclusive. They immediately sold me on their vision of providing medical care to areas of need in New Mexico and southwest Texas. Being from El Paso, I could think of nothing better than attending a school that would help me establish myself in my local community. The second factor that I considered was how close the school was to my immediate family. My family is a huge part of who I am and it eases my mind knowing that they are very near should I fall on hard times. Those two factors combined made BCOM the ideal school for me.

What will you study at BCOM?

I'm still tentative as to what type of doctor I well end up becoming. I'm also well aware that students end up changing their minds various times throughout medical school. However, at this time I am very interested in emergency medicine and internal medicine. I worked as an emergency medicine scribe for four years and thoroughly enjoyed my time there. I also worked for an internal medicine physician for around a year and found the experience very rewarding.

What are your plans after you graduate from BCOM?

After medical school and residency, I hope to return to El Paso to set up my practice. If I become an internal medicine physician, I'd like to open up my own clinic. If I become an emergency medicine physician, I'd like to work at a local hospital.

Had you been to Las Cruces and/or New Mexico before you applied to BCOM? What are your thoughts about Las Cruces?

I had been to Las Cruces many times prior to my acceptance. However, I mostly came for events at the convention center or football games at NMSU. I have not yet spent much time actually getting to know the city. From previous experiences, I've learned that the people of the city are very friendly. My early impressions are very favorable and I look forward to getting acclimated very soon.

What are your hobbies?

I'm a huge sports enthusiast. I'm always up for playing sports. I primarily enjoy playing basketball. I'm also an avid reader. I read from all genres but I have a particular fondness for suspense and fantasy.

Any other thoughts?

The only other thing I'd like to express is tremendous gratitude for the opportunity that has been afforded to me. BCOM had a large number of applicants for its opening class and I consider myself privileged to be a part of it. I am very enthusiastic to start and look forward to rewarding BCOM's faith in me by being an excellent addition to the school.

said city Community Development Department Director David Weir. The board narrowed the suggestions to “Downtown Plaza” and “Plaza Las Cruces,” Weir said, and then chose to recommend “Downtown Plaza” to the city council.

Eakman suggested the name “Inspiration Plaza” or “Plaza Inspiración” because, he said, “When I walk by the plaza, it inspires me. My spirits are lifted.”

Councillor Kasandra Gandara suggested the name “Plaza de Consuelo,” which means “comfort” or “solace.”

Former Las Cruces City Councillor Dolores Archuleta was the only member of the public to speak on the proposed resolution at the council meeting.

“I would like to name it “Plaza de Las Cruces,” Archuleta said. “That really describes who we are,” she said.

Construction on the plaza is expected to be completed this month, and a dedication ceremony is scheduled for Sept. 17. Mayor Pro-Tem Greg Smith said the council should vote on the plaza’s name before the dedication date so the name can be applied during the ceremony.

The $5.6 million plaza will measure 180 feet by 320 feet, and it will be expandable by temporarily closing off adjoining streets to traffic. It will be able to seat up to about 1,200 people.

Welcome our new neighbors

Medical students, staff bring excitement to Las Cruces

When school opens on the New Mexico State University campus for the fall semester, there will be a new neighbor on the block.

Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine opens its doors to students later this month and begins a new chapter not only for the instructors, students and staff of the school, but also for NMSU, Las Cruces, the state and our region.

In this week's Bulletin, writer Mike Cook interviews three of the 162 members of BCOM's first class.

Larissa Check, Alexander Nguyen and Hugo Gonzalez are from Cameroon, Los Angeles and El Paso, respectively.

Each have taken a unique route to get to Las Cruces, as did the college itself.

It's been exciting the past year watching the beautiful building rise as drivers watched from Interstate 25.

Just as a reminder, Burrell College has no official affiliation with NMSU. It's its own free-standing entity. There are, however, and will likely be many more collaborative partnerships between the two institutions, starting most obviously with the location. Look also for great opportunities for shared research between NMSU and BCOM.

When you see Cook's interviews with members of the inaugural BCOM class, you'll see some immediate similarities.

Part of the school's vision is to provide quality healthcare and medical attention to underserved areas of New Mexico, West Texas and Mexico.

EDITORIAL CARTOON

That was a definite attraction for the students, who were also impressed with the way BCOM has worked to expand residency positions in New Mexico.

These three students in themselves represent the diversity BCOM seeks to serve both in its education of students and in the provision of health care services.

Another commonality among the students is their love for Las Cruces.

All expressed great enthusiasm for the community, whether they had known of Las Cruces their whole lives or will be coming here for the first time. All felt very welcomed by everyone they met in Las Cruces or, in one case, before they even got here, meeting Las Cruceans on the airplane.

We may forget as we live our day-to-day lives, working in our offices, taking care of our responsibilities, that we live in an amazingly beautiful place with some amazingly wonderful people.

Sometimes it takes an outsider's perspective to remind us of that. And kudos to us for helping visitors get such a positive impression about our community.

The reverse is true as well.

The amazing individuals who are coming to Las Cruces as students, instructors and staff of BCOM are amazing people as well and will add to the richness and quality of life here in the City of Crosses.

It will be a tough year at NMSU, as the university works through declining enrollment and a 2-percent budget cut of more than $12 million.

However, the energy and excitement of BCOM's first year will add a new element to an already great higher educational environment in Las Cruces.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Meatless Monday

Meatless Monday...what kind of person would think something like that up? The same kind of people who would support Breathless Tuesday, Whistleless Wednesday or Jalapeñoless Cinco de Mayo? It is the same cloudy-headed, “we know what is best for you.” starry-eyed finger-shakers that have brought us rubber chickens and the Ice Age of the 70’s. Surveys and trials that support this whole Wizard of Oz Magic Show are based on this contention: “...going meatless once a week MAY reduce your risk of chronic preventable conditions like cancer, (MAYBE) cardiovascular disease, (MAYBE) diabetes and (MAYBE) obesity... and (MAYBE) help reduce our carbon footprint and (MAYBE) save precious resources (MAYBE) like fossil fuels and (MAYBE) fresh water.”

Backed by such phrases as: “...convincing evidence...” “...limited but suggestive evidence,” “...research suggests...” “...this may be in part...” are used to qualify claims that have not been proven.

It’s called “Pop Science.”

The Meatless Monday Mafia have chosen MEAT as the victim, for many reasons. The biggest is that the vast percent of our population has no clue where their food comes from, has no farmer friend to explain the difference between fat and lean and therefore they are gullible to the Meatless Monday Magic Show. Another big factor that drives the Meatless Mafia; people like to eat meat! Humans are omnivorous! And the Mafia hates that! In every community there are people that are against anything that is popular, accessible and good for you. How about oil? How about your pet dog? How about GMO crops? Pasteurized milk? Measles vaccine? How about nuclear power?

Mind you, the Mafia are not against everybody being restricted or abused; our National Health Care system, for instance. The politicians that made it mandatory for everyone except themselves! They are part of the Magic Show too.

I am a scientist myself, as well as a rancher. I respect good science, especially trials and surveys that have statistical significance. As a veterinarian, when the diagnosis is not clear and not confirmed, I am cautious about prescribing treatment. Rule #1 “First Do No Harm.” The knowledgeable men and women working in this area of nutrition and health are entitled to speculate on the value of “Meatless Mondays.” They have some basis to back their opinion either way. But when an issue is overtaken by the politicians, charlatans, Ad Men and their Mafia who deliberately manipulate the facts and blame food producers, that’s when I’m allowed to question their motives.

All of this hoorah between the farmers and the agriculturally/scientifically ignorant consumers (meaning unknowledgeable, not belligerent) would not exist if the Mafia swept the dust off their layers of hubris and indignation. The culprit is not meat. The culprit is the profound abundance of produce, animal and vegetable, available

Veronica and Nguyen's children and their children

Veronica and Nguyen were two high school students I taught years ago at Albuquerque High School. As a young teacher in my first teaching situation my opinion was teachers are the most important component to students learning, but this was before Veronica and Nguyen.

It was the first day of classes. Veronica walked in, looked around and said plaintively, "God, is it boring in here." Every ten minutes for a whole year Veronica announced that class was boring. Nguyen, another student in that same class never seemed to be bored.

Every time Veronica said, "God, is it boring in here," I flinched and kept thinking that if I tried a little harder she would come around. She never did. She graduated and I never saw her again nor do I know what happened to Nguyen. I lost track of both after they graduated.

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

Still, I remember his ready smile as he absorbed lessons. Nguyen was one of the Vietnam Boat People who left ahead of the Communists. Over the semester I got to know him better. His parents were farmers in Vietnam. Neither could read or write but were related to a politician in Saigon so they had to flee.

Until five years earlier Nguyen could not read since he had never attended school. When he arrived in America, he was put in an inner-city school in Los Angeles and then moved to Albuquerque the year before I had him in class. He quickly learned to where he was an on-track junior.

Veronica was born in Albuquerque. Both parents worked and were high school graduates.

Nguyen played on my after-school table tennis team so I saw more of him than just in class. One day I gave Nguyen a ride home after table tennis practice and met his parents. They spoke little English but wanted to talk to me. Nguyen translated, which centered on Nguyen's school work. I said, "He's one of the best students in my class." They beamed.

Later I asked Nguyen what would happen if he got a bad grade. His reply surprised me. "Dad would beat me until his arms gave out. Then Mom would take over until he could continue."

I immediately asked, "Do they beat you often?"

"No," he said, "They don't have to beat me, I work hard to make them proud of me. They don't understand math and English, but know if I've been working. They know I should get an A in each class."

A few days later I scheduled parent-teacher conferences. Over two weeks I called Veronica's parents five times. Each time I got the brush off. Her mother said, "You're the teacher, teach Veronica and leave us alone."

I never met Veronica's parents. I asked Veronica, "What would your parents do if you got a bad grade?" She smiled slightly, "They don't even look at my grades." Veronica got a C and graduated. I asked her if she was going to college. "No, college is boring."

Nguyen, on the other hand, got a college scholarship. The last I heard he was in the field of biology.

Now I did my very best for both students and never quit. In both cases it didn't matter. Nguyen was going to be excellent regardless and Veronica was going to be bored.

I learned that the most important component to student learning is not the teacher, it is the family. Having a good teacher helps, but having parents who care and demand effort is far more important.

It would make a nice ending to this story to say that Veronica is a cashier in a store making minimum wage and Nguyen is a Ph.D. Researcher making big bucks. But as I have said, I lost track of them many years ago. Still, that is the way I would bet - Nguyen has prospered and Veronica is now paying her dues for not working hard in school.

But what of their children? Assuming both got married and have children, I suspect Nguyen will take an active role in the education of his children and Veronica will not. Nguyen's children will do well in school while Veronica's do not. And what about their children's children?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Open letter for Bill McCamley

So glad to see that Rep. Bill McCamley is stepping up to the plate by pushing for a law to allow terminally ill patients to end their lives with help from doctors.

What can we, as citizens, do to help you and other lawmakers accomplish this monumental task within New Mexico? How can we let our law-makers know how many of us believe dignity in death is our fundamental right? Petitions? What?

Please address these questions in a news conference for all of us to hear, Mr. McCamley!

to Americans, all 300 million of us, you and me, every day, every year, year after year. It's not that they eat too much meat. It's that they eat too much! Period.

You in the Meatless Magic Show have a behavioral problem to deal with! Start there if you want to get serious. Back up and look at the source. It's not the cheese, it's the pizza! The problem is not in their belly...it's in their brain! I appreciate you can't force people to do what you think is 'better for them.' And it probably doesn't help your "cause" that the life span of Americans keeps increasing year after year. To single out and demean farmers is one thing, but to punish all the Armed Forces enlisted soldiers with your Mandatory Meatless Monday plan is shameless. Thank goodness Congress agrees. They have passed a bill to prevent what they called activists groups (with) a "radical agenda," stressing that military personnel should not be subjected to political agendas.

Oh, and by the way, this is America. Nowhere does the law say, "Thou Shalt Not Eat Meat on Monday."

Shooting suspect arrested

Las Cruces Police have arrested the man suspected of firing a handgun at a 33-year-old Saturday, July 30, as the two left a local winery.

VIGIL

Udell Justin Vigil, 32, of the 1500 block of Andrews Drive, is charged with one count each of shooting at or from a motor vehicle and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, both fourth-degree felonies. He's also charged with a misdemeanor count of aggravated battery.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Saturday, July 30, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to the report of a gunshot fired near the Amaro Winery at 402 S. Melendres St. When officers arrived, they found a 33-year-old man who claimed to have been struck in the head with a bottle.

Detectives learned that the 33-year-old man was with friends at the winery during comedy night when an argument broke out between patrons and one of the comedians. As the 33-year-old man left, he allegedly threw wine toward the comedian.

Detectives believe that's when Vigil, who was seen earlier in the evening speaking with the comedian, struck the 33-year-old man over the head with a bottle.

Both parties left the winery and Vigil is suspected of getting behind the wheel of a yellow Jeep. As he left the parking lot, Vigil is suspected of arming himself with a handgun and firing one round in the direction of the 33-year-old man.

No injuries were reported as a result of the gunfire but the victim did receive a laceration to his head when he was struck with the bottle.

Stabbing suspect taken into custody

A homeless man suspected of stabbing a 39-year-old Thursday, July 28, has been arrested and charged with attempted murder.

Marco A. Galvan, 20, who resides at 999 W. Amador Ave., is charged with one first-degree felony count of attempted murder.

At about 7:30 p.m. Thursday, July 28, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to 999 W. Amador Ave., near El Caldito Soup Kitchen, where a 39-year-old man was suffering from multiple stab wounds to his neck and upper back. The victim lost a lot of blood and was in critical condition when he was airlifted to University Medical Center of El Paso.

The victim remains hospitalized and is now listed in stable condition.

LCPD detectives are looking into the possibility that Galvan may be responsible for two additional stabbings that occurred July 27 and July 29.

A 17-year-old boy was stabbed by an unknown man on July 27 as he walked along south Main Street. On Friday evening, at about 8 p.m., a 29-year-old man was stabbed near the area of 590 S. Valley Dr. His injuries were not life-threatening and the suspect in that incident remains unknown.

If your walls could talk, they'd thank you.

Carlos the Coyote wows at National Night Out

By Suzanne Michaels
For the Bulletin

The music was loud and fun during “National Night Out” on Tuesday night in downtown Las Cruces. Kids, adults and Carlos the Coyote were literally all dancing in the street on Main Street, celebrating with law enforcement.

National Night Out is observed every year on the first Tuesday in August. In Las Cruces, Main Street was swamped with hundreds of attendees and multiple law enforcement agencies in an effort to increase awareness of police, codes enforcement, fire, and other emergency response agencies.

Carlos the Coyote is the Doña Ana County (DAC) ACO/Codes Enforcement anti-illegal dumping mascot; he’s the main character in the popular activity book Desert Adventure, distributed in schools and at special events all across the county. Now, he’s come to life in a life-sized costume and is dancing in the street.

On this night, Desert Adventure books were given to kids who stopped by the table and wanted to meet Carlos. “More and more, the kids and adults I talk to already know who Carlos is – they already have the book, and they’ve downloaded the free NoThrow App on their phones to stop and report illegal dumping. Or they know to call 877-NO-THROW. The message is spreading!” said Irene Holguin, Keep Dona Ana County Beautiful and DAC ACO/Codes Enforcement.

The book explains why illegal dumping is bad for all of us, even the animals that live in the desert, like Carlos, and encourages everyone to manage their trash properly by taking it to one of the eight County Collections Centers or the main SCSWA Transfer Station at 2865 W. Amador Avenue. “This is an effort to get parents and kids to talk about why illegal dumping is wrong,” said Holguin.

The project is endorsed and supported by the Illegal Dumping Partnership (IDP), made up of local agencies and non-profit organizations. For more information or to book your school or children’s group for a presentation, you can reach DAC Codes Enforcement at (575) 525-8846.

Green Connections is submitted by the South Central Solid Waste Authority (SCSWA) a founding partner of the Illegal Dumping Partnership (IDP). IDP Partners - including DAC Codes Enforcement - fight illegal dumping throughout Doña Ana County.

Nava steps down as director of Hispanic Chamber

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Eldelisa Nava has left her position as director of operations for the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. Her last day was Friday, July 29.

Nava, who was hired as an office assistant by the chamber in September 2011 and served as membership coordinator before becoming director of operations two years ago, said she wants to devote more time to her family and her business.

Curtis Rosemond, current vice president and president-elect of the chamber's board of directors, will take over for Nava until a permanent replacement can be found.

For the past 10 years, Nava has owned and operated a small business called LegalShield, which provides legal and identity theft protection for families and businesses. She has often been a vendor at the Downtown Farmers' & Crafts Market of Las Cruces to talk about the business, with her children providing entertainment.

"It's just a family thing," Nava said.

Nava has three children: Balan (like his brothers, his name is Mayan; it means "jaguar"), 15, who is a musician and will attend Del Valle High School in El Paso during the coming school year; Kinan ("strength"), 12, is in the science magnet program at Sierra Middle School; and Itsin ("youngest brother") will be at Mesilla Park Elementary this school year and is a soccer player.

Nava said she likes unusual given names, including her own. She doesn't know what Eldelisa means, but said, "When I hear that name at Walmart, I know it's me."

Nava said Hispanic Chamber memberships, committees and programs have all grown during her tenure as the chamber's director of operations. What she is most proud of "is that I've seen on a regular basis how we've helped our members grow their businesses, grow professionally."

Her job at the chamber has been to "connect people with resources or whatever they need to be successful. At the end of the day, we're a part of something bigger here, and I love that," she said.

The chamber, which was incorporated in 1981, has grown to 304 members, Nava said. More than three quarters of its members have 50 or fewer employees or are nonprofits. Small business, "that's what pays the bills every day, that's what drives our community," she said.

"I love my little home-based micro business as much as I love my big corporate business," Nava said.

As an independent associate for LegalShield, Nava said she will remain an active member of the Hispanic Chamber and will continue to serve as a Los Amigos ambassador.

"I'm not going anywhere," she said.

Nava has "been a voice and face for the chamber for the last five years," said Rosemond. "We appreciate all she's done for us and sincerely appreciate all her dedication and passion," he said.

"To all of our volunteers, our members and our sponsors, I appreciate your continued support for our chamber, for me," Nava said. "We are a family here. My heart is here. I love what we do and how we do it."

For more information about Nava, contact her at 571-5716 or enava@legalshieldassociate.com. Visit www.enava.legalshieldassociate.com. Award-winning recipe

Bulletin report

Here is the recipe for McLean Knight's award-winning entry in the Healthy Lunchtime Challenge

Green chile cheese roll and jicama fries

Makes six servings

INGREDIENTS:

For green chile cheese roll:

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 pound ground turkey
- ½ onion, peeled and chopped
- 1 tube canned thick crust pizza dough, whole-wheat if available
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon red chile powder, or to taste
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 1 cup shredded low-fat sharp cheddar
- ½ cup Hatch green chile, or more to taste
- ¼ cup diced pickles

For jicama fries:

- 1 large jicama, peeled and thinly sliced
- 2 avocados, peeled, pitted, and cut into cubes
- ½ cup cilantro, stems removed, coarsely chopped
- ¼ cup olive oil
- ½ cup fresh lime juice
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste

PREPARATION

1. For green chile cheese roll: In a large nonstick skillet, warm the olive oil over medium heat. Add the ground turkey and onions and cook for 10 minutes, or until turkey is cooked through and onions are softened. Drain well, add remaining ingredients, and mix well. Cook for 2 minutes more.

2. Preheat the oven to 425°F. Roll out the pizza dough on a large nonstick baking sheet and stretch to make a rectangle. Spread the meat mixture on the dough. On the long side, carefully fold over the dough and roll it similar to a jelly roll. Pinch seam closed and gently put seam-side down onto the sheet. Pinch ends closed. Bake for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Cut into six slices.

3. To make the Jicama Fries: In a large bowl, combine the jicama, avocado, and cilantro. In small bowl, whisk the olive oil, lime juice, salt, and pepper. Add to jicama mixture and stir gently. Serve with the Green Chile Cheese Roll.

The challenge is open to children ages eight to 12, who collaborate with a parent or guardian to create an original lunch recipe. It's part of the First Lady's Let's Move! initiative to help children and families live healthier lives.

"The best part of going to the White House was all of the entertainment they had for us," Knight said. "There were two awesome jugglers and Disney performed 'The Jungle Book' for us," he said.

"The White House had set up a large coloring board for the children to decorate and it was hung just below a painting of Abraham Lincoln so that it appeared that Honest Abe was watching the festivities," Kristin Knight said. "That was a great reminder of how our amazing American history connects to the 21st century."

All the winners, along with a parent or guardian, attended the July 14 "Kids' State Dinner," hosted by First Lady Michelle Obama. The meal "consisted of various (contest) winners' dishes," Kristin Knight said. "We had watermelon salad from Minnesota, peach chicken from Colorado and a spinach smoothie from Alaska," she said.

A total of 56 winners attended, representing all 50 states, five territories and the District of Columbia.

Knight's recipe "was also selected by Blue Apron as the recipe to represent the contest and was sent out to 100,000 families across the country," Las Cruces City Councillor Jack Eakman said at the council's Aug. 1 meeting.

"Knight loves to help in the kitchen," Kristin Knight said. "His specialty is making salsa. We grow a few vegetables such as tomatoes and jalapenos and Knight loves to chop those up for a chunky salsa. We are a foodie family and if the television is on, it is guaranteed that it is on the Food Network. Knight knows all of the main chefs and their shows. We enjoy watching the junior editions of the various shows, such as Chopped Junior and Master Chef Junior," she said.

Museum offers living landscapes, Community Appreciation Day

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

One of the highlights of August events at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum (NMFRHM) will be a community day on Saturday, Aug. 27, during which visitors will get free admission to the museum, said the museum's communications manager, Craig Massey.

Here is information about three major events at the museum in August

- Culture Series: "New Mexico's Living Landscapes," 7 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 11. A slide-illustrated talk presented by Bull Dunmire explores the state's six ecoregions and state and national scenic byways – "from grasslands to mountains to deserts, focusing on the most interesting landscape features and the plants and wildlife that occur there," according to a NMFRHM news release.

During his 28-year career with the National Park Service, Dunmire served as chief of interpretation and was superintendent of Carlsbad Caverns and Guadalupe Mountains national parks. He also was a biologist for the Nature Conservancy in New Mexico. Now retired, Dunmire is a writer, lecturer and photographer.

Admission to this program is free, but donations will be accepted.

- Exhibit opening: "Narrie Toole: Honoring the Past, Bridging Culture and Sharing Wisdom." The opening reception will be 4 to 7 p.m., Thursday, Aug. 25. The exhibition features the paintings of Santa Fe artist Narrie Toole, "who honors Native American spirituality, wisdom and leadership," according to NMFRHM. The exhibit, which will be on display in the museum's arts corridor through Sunday, Dec. 4, includes five of Toole's "Faces of Our Fathers" series.

- Community Appreciation Day, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 27. The event celebrates the 20th anniversary of the construction of the museum's main building and the creation of "the newest venue on the 47-acre campus, the Heritage Garden," Massey said. Events will include many demonstrations of blacksmithing, wool spinning, sewing, weaving and wood carving; along with $5 pony rides for children, which will be held from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Museum admission is free for the day.

The museum's main building was named in honor of Bruce King (1924-2009), who served three terms as New Mexico's governor, 1971-75, 1979-83 and 1991-95.

NMFRHM, which is part of the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs, opened in 1998. In addition to its main building, the campus includes three large barns, a greenhouse, roping arena, animal pens, the historic Green Bridge, a theater, indoor and outdoor exhibits, banquet and event rooms, an amphitheater and a gift shop and snack bar.

NMFRHM admission is $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens ages 60 and older, $3 for children ages four to 17, $2 for active members of the United States military and military veterans and free to children ages

NMFRHM receives national accreditation

Bulletin report

New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum's (NMFRHM) Community Appreciation Day, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 27, will include a celebration of the museum's founders and its recent accreditation by the American Alliance of Museums (AAM), the highest national recognition available to museums.

"Accreditation signifies excellence to the museum community, to governments, funders, outside agencies, and to the museum-going public," NMFRHM Communications Manager Craig Massey said in a July 18 news release.

"The accreditation reviewers who visited the museum last spring noted the teamwork of the staff and volunteers, as well as the 'high quality' exhibits and collections," the news release said. "The 'living (live-stock) collection program' received special notice. 'From our perspective, this aspect of the museum is a regional and perhaps national model that is strengthened and supported by the knowledge and skill of the well-trained staff,' the reviewers said in their concluding narrative, according to the news release.

"This achievement is due to the enormous dedication of our staff, volunteers, board of directors and supporters," said NMFRHM Director Mark Santiago.

"AAM accreditation brings national recognition to a museum for its commitment to excellence, accountability, high professional standards and continued institutional improvement," the news release said. "Developed and sustained by museum professionals for 45 years, the alliance's museum accreditation program is the field's primary vehicle for quality assurance, self-regulation and public accountability."

"Of the nation's estimated 35,000 museums, just over 1,000 are currently accredited," according to the news release. NMFRHM is the only AAM-accredited museum in Las Cruces and one of only four in southern New Mexico, the museum said.

Chamber of Commerce names new board chair

Bulletin report

Rick Jackson of American Documents Services has assumed the role as board chair of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce.

Jackson, who was serving as the Chamber's chair-elect, will replace current Board Chair Russell Allen and serve until December 2017. Allen had served since November 2014.

Jackson is President/CEO of American Document Services, a company he founded in 2001. In 2015 he was selected as the Business Person of the Year for the state of New Mexico by the Small Business Association and recognized in Washington, D.C., at the White House as being selected as sixth in the nation. He is the incoming chair of the New Mexico Small Business Development Center Statewide Advisory Council. A retired US Army veteran, Jackson most recently served as White Sands Missile Range Post Command Sergeant Major from 1995-1999.

"We welcome Rick Jackson and, at the same time, are so appreciative of the huge personal, professional and financial commitment Russell Allen has made to the chamber," said Debbi Moore, Las Cruces Greater Chamber President/CEO. "The normal term for a board chair is 12 months and Russell has given us a total of 19 months of his time and effort. He's provided the chamber with leadership and stability while guiding the organization through some critical decisions and events."

In addition to the hiring of Moore as chamber president/CEO in May 2016, during Allen's term as Board Chair the Chamber launched an advocacy campaign in favor of a minimum wage increase that was reasonable to Las Cruces business owners. He was also a guiding force behind the chamber's first-ever political candidate endorsements in November, 2015.

Under his leadership, the Chamber has undertaken a collaborative healthcare initiative with New Mexico State University, Doña Ana Community College and the Las Cruces medial community. Allen also restarted a stalled fundraising effort to complete construction of the new Chamber offices at the historic Armijo House.

Love your enchiladas? You can thank NMSU chile researcher Garcia

By Amanda Bradford
For the Bulletin

If you've ever sat and admired a perfect restaurant relleno before digging in, or sent up a quiet "thank-you" when you found some New Mexico certified green chile on the shelf in a coastal grocery store, you probably know how important the Mexican food industry is to American consumers. In fact, Mexican cuisine is second only to Italian in its familiarity and frequency of eating, according to research from the National Restaurant Association.

BOSLAND

But you might not realize that the spicy staple of the most popular northern Mexican dishes – the chile pepper – owes much of its widespread popularity to the early work of one of New Mexico State University's pioneering researchers, horticulturist Fabian Garcia.

"Really, Fabian Garcia is the father of the Mexican food industry in the United States as we know it," said Paul Bosland, director of NMSU's award-winning Chile Pepper Institute and a Regents Professor of horticulture. "Until his early research, chile peppers were a regional kitchen garden plant. His creation of the New Mexican pod type changed the food landscape of the United States forever."

Born in Mexico in 1871, Garcia attended New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts, which would later become NMSU, and was a member of the university's first graduating class in 1894. A horticulturist with an interest in many crops, including onions, pecans, fruit trees and others, Garcia began a series of groundbreaking experiments to develop more standardized chile pepper varieties around 1894.

"He looked around the Mesilla Valley and saw that the only people eating chiles were Hispanics, who were growing very spicy peppers in their gardens," Bosland said. "He saw the potential for this crop, and set out to develop a pepper pod that was milder in heat profile to attract non-Hispanic consumers, as well as more uniform in size and shape and better-yielding, to allow for cost-effective processing."

Garcia improved the native chile pepper through hybridization and selection, Bosland said. He selected 14 chile accessions growing in the Las Cruces area from three types: pasilla, colorado and negro chiles. After nine years, only one line – "New Mexico No. 9" – remained, and Garcia said it had proven to be the best. He said although it was "not quite as hot as most of the unimproved varieties, it seems to be hot enough."

Now, instead of needing jalapenos, pasilla, ancho, mulato, de arbol, mirasol and dozens of other true Mexican pod types to make different Mexican dishes, Garcia's "New Mexico No. 9" pod, released in the early 1900s, provided one pod type that served all those needs, from salsa and sauces to rellenos and other dishes, with a dependable pod size and heat level. All New Mexican-type chile peppers grown today, including popular varieties like the "NuMex Big Jim" cultivar, come from the genetic base of Garcia's "New Mexico No. 9."

How many flying discs can you find on this page?

Can you find each of these pictures in the big picture?

PIE TIN TOSS

The students at Yale University loved William Frisbie's pies. They even loved his pie tins!

Tossing empty pie tins became a favorite way to pass time between classes. A firm flick of the wrist and the tin floated through the air.

But the metal pie tins hurt when they hit someone. As a safety measure, students started yelling, "Frisbie!" to alert others that they were tossing a tin to a pal.

MAYBE WE SHOULD THROW THE TIN WITHOUT THE PIE NEXT TIME!

In 1948, Walter Frederick Morrison and Warren Franscioni created a plastic disc that could fly with better accuracy than a tin pie plate.

When Morrison sold the rights to Wham-O in 1957, the company named the disc the Frisbee® (pronounced FRIZ'-bee).

Today, the fifty-year-old Frisbee® is owned by Mattel Toy Manufacturers, only one of at least sixty manufacturers of flying discs.

Engineering departments collaborate on earthquake project

By Tiffany Acosta
For the Bulletin

Keeping structures safe during an earthquake is a goal for one New Mexico State University professor who is leading a team from the College of Engineering in developing a new device.

The self-centering device is the brainchild of Tathagata Ray, civil engineering assistant professor. With assistance from the Manufacturing Technology & Engineering Center, Ray's device was completely designed and built at NMSU.

"If the structure cannot absorb the energy that is produced during an earthquake, then it may fall down. One way to absorb the energy is to insert special devices in the structure so that when an earthquake comes, those very devices will absorb the energy and the structure will remain safe," Ray said.

"The device, which I built, is a combination of friction and self-centering," he said. "These concepts were used 15 to 20 years back but people had used friction devices, special shaped alloys, yielding tendons, etc. When I studied about that, I thought about in bicycling we do the same thing. When we pedal forward we have to apply force and when we pedal backward we rarely apply any force. I adopted the bicycle ratchet-pawl mechanism to build the device. It dissipates energy and it also gives self-centering. In this mechanism, a bicycle ratchet club device is incorporated in both directions."

With the idea and a rough sketch, Ray contacted Anthony Hyde, M-TEC director and engineering technology professor, about constructing the device, which led to engineer Yu-Ping Tang and a team of undergraduate students joining the project.

Tang was then tasked with creating the computer design of the device using Ray's hand-written drawing and dynamic requirements. Tang said converting Ray's rough sketch into a real device required lots of engineering analysis, calculations and design experience. The most important thing is how to use proper mechanical and electric parts to make the device work. Searching reasonable market parts could save cost and manufacturing time. The special parts should be simple, low cost and easy to make.

Ray, who started at NMSU in January 2014, said having the staff available within the university to help construct the device was extremely valuable.

"The transformation from the rough paper to the computer drawing with all the dimensions was very quick," Ray said. "It's very fortunate that we have these type of people at our university."

With the design prepared, Ray approached Charlie Park, M-TEC lab instructor, who assigned four undergraduate students, Matt Dorsey, Adam Heckathorn, Devon Willett-Gies and Steven Brown, to build the special parts.

"Charlie has a good group of students who are young, enthusiastic and eager to learn. I am really impressed by them," Ray said. "They don't have any background with earthquake devices and how it's going to work, how it's going to help us, but with the device they showed real enthusiasm and I really liked their energy."

Park said M-TEC students often assist with re-never do you see a prototype come together right away from the get go," Park added. "It challenges the students to look at the project. If there's problems and there will be problems, because it never turns out the way you think it will turn out when you start building it, then you have to start doing some critical thinking to resolve the problems they have and get it functioning and make it work for the customer."

As with all projects, the self-centering device needed modifications, and Park said he was proud of how his students handled the adjustments.

"It's great to see them rack their brains a little bit trying to figure out how to solve the functionality of this machine," Park said.

"The experience our M-TEC student employees gain by working on technical engineering projects, such as this, is unparalleled and greatly complements what they learn in the classroom," Hyde said. "This is a very important component of the Engineering Technology Department as our students need to have opportunities to apply what they learned."

Currently, Ray's Ph.D. students Jame Alexander and Nabila Sultana are conducting experiments with the device and extracting as much data as possible. They also are preparing a journal paper for publishing and then will write a National Science Foundation grant to build a bigger version of the device and conduct additional experiments.

NMSU's master plan looks ahead to 2027

Bulletin report

New Mexico State University's next master plan will call for the continuation of infill projects in the academic core of campus, moving parking to the periphery and improving on-campus transportation.

"We're just starting on this master plan for the university for the next 10 years," Glen Haubold, associate vice president of facilities, told a public meeting July 29.

"We need to use space much more efficiently,"

he said. "We can do that."

Infill projects can be an important part of using space efficiently.

"We have made a huge amount of progress (on infill) in the past 10 years," Heather Watenpaugh, university architect, said.

She said the new plan will guide the university in the more efficient use of space, enforcement of the Spanish Renaissance style in new construction and preservation of historic campus buildings.

Signature open spaces like the one at McFie Circle, perimeter parking and pedestrian paths will be part of the ongoing campus evolution, she said.

"More point-to-point transportation service will be needed when we have perimeter parking," she said.

Among planned improvements is the construction of Heritage Farm as the gateway at the north end of campus.

Watenpaugh said agricultural education facilities would be developed in conjunction with the farm project.

"It's pretty phenomenal we have opportunities to ... make changes to our gateways," she said. "Very few universities have that opportunity at this point because land is scarce."

The principles that underlie the current planning process are the encouragement of research collaboration, accessibility, engagement and asset development, Watenpaugh said.

She said the planning process is just beginning and is in the information-gathering stage. Crafting the plan will start in September and continue through fall and winter. A draft should be available for review in April or May, she said.

Haubold said the previous plan, developed in 2008 was refreshed in 2013.

"Why are we doing this?" Haubold asked. "We're going through a re-accreditation process and one of the first questions they ask you is, 'Do you have a master plan?'"

He said the university is asking for community input at a designated website.

"We are a caring community — we want to hear from you," he said.

Suggestions for the master plan, as well as the plans for the east campus and Arrowhead Park, may be made at masterplan.nmsu.edu.

Judge oversaw construction, helped select art for city's new courthouse

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Judge Robert Brack moved from Clovis to Las Cruces on July 25, 2003 to become Las Cruces' first permanent United States District Court judge. The next day, he was put in charge of overseeing the planning, funding and construction of the city's new $104 million federal courthouse.

And, because one half of one percent of the cost of the building had to be spent on art, Brack also was placed in charge of selecting the more than 60 paintings, photographs and other works of art that fill the six-story, 240,000 square-foot building that stands at 100 N. Church St. downtown.

For the next seven years, "every day I was involved in some aspect of the building," Brack said. He would wear his judicial robes for court sessions in the morning and don a hardhat and work boots in the afternoon to visit the construction site. He even climbed a 165-foot crane.

The groundbreaking was Feb. 21, 2007, with construction continuing for the next 1,095 days until the building was completed on time and on budget on March 15, 2010.

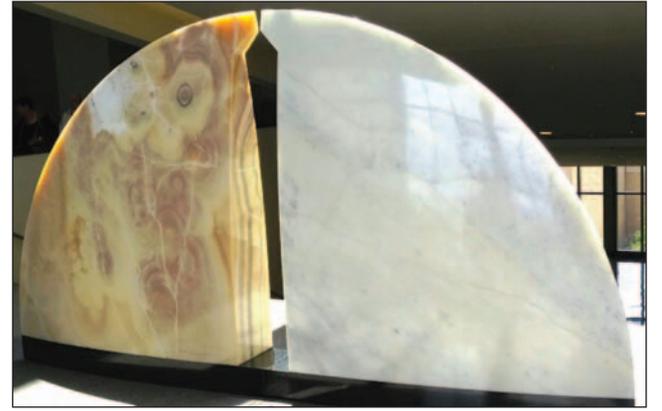

"I'm pretty proud of this building," Brack said.

The building may be best known for its copper exterior. Except, it isn't copper, Brack said. It's copper-colored stainless steel, which cost about $1 million less than copper and doesn't lose its color as it ages, Brack said.

It took nine stone masons using 32 saws and working nine-hour days to shape the moss rock that covers much of the building's interior and exterior. The rock came from a quarry near Santa Fe, Brack said. On the outside

Auditions will run from 10 a.m. to noon on Aug. 10 at the main dance studio of the Las Cruces School of Dance & Music located at 1390 N. Main in Las Cruces. Aspiring company members are encouraged to arrive at least a half hour early.

Complete information, including requirements and online preregistration, can be found at the BBC website: www.borderlands-ballet.com. Call backs will be immediate and all dancers should be prepared to return to the studio for an initial rehearsal and orientation from 3-6 p.m.

The Company will begin developing its repertoire with a number of smaller productions throughout the year, culminating in its first stage production in the spring of 2017 with the premiere of its original show "Café de Vie, Café D'amour."

Art is displayed at the federal courthouse in Las Cruces.

of the building, the living lichen that is a part of the stone still turns green when it rains, he said.

And then there's the art.

The experience begins the moment a visitor walks through the front door and sees photographs of artist David Taylor's border monuments, which number 300 in total and stretch 1,200 miles from El Paso to San Diego, Brack said.

Once a visitor has cleared security, the next thing he or she will see, on the second floor, is a honey onyx and white marble obelisk designed by Larry Kirkland. This and its companion, the portal on the third floor, are Brack's favorite pieces of art in the building, the judge said.

Then there are storyboards giving brief histories of federal courthouses in New Mexico, the jury trial, an independent judiciary and federal and territorial courts in the state.

A huge mural on the second floor is entitled "The American Jury" and was created by artist Dan McCleary. A number of the jurors in the painting attended the courthouse dedication on July 9, 2010, Brack said.

Certainly the most unusual art installation at the courthouse is visible through the window of the second-story jury assembly room. It's the U.S.S. Justice USDC-575 "submarine." The piece is constructed of ductwork left over from courthouse construction. It's yellow and bears drawings of Beatles John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

"Who says you can't have a little whimsy at the courthouse?" said Brack, who helped paint the structure. But, only the side of the sub that is visible from inside the courthouse is decorated. From the street, in accordance with the U.S. General Services Administration, it's unpainted gray. But, you might be able to see the colorful of the sub from the street or a nearby building if the sun is just right and the yellow side is reflected in the courthouse windows.

The courthouse also features two sky bridges and eight courtrooms named for southern New Mexico mountain ranges, including the Guadalupe, which is Brack's courtroom.

The art in his private office includes a framed Brian Urlacher Chicago Bears jersey. Brack, a native of Los Angeles, grew up in Chicago. Urlacher, who was raised in Lovington, New Mexico, graduated from the University of New Mexico and was a Bears linebacker for 13 seasons.

"Working with two judges (retired U.S. Magistrate Judge and state District Court Judge Leslie Smith was the other judge) was a unique experience for me as a member of the Art Selection Committee for the federal courthouse," said Las Cruces arts activist Heather Pollard. "Judge Brack has become a friend and a role model in the past years as I have arranged the tours of the art and architecture and he has been our 'rock star' tour guide. His wife, Sheila, serves on the NMSU College of Arts and Science Dean's Council with me, which is another level of our relationship," Pollard said.

Overseeing courthouse construction "was an educational process in every way," Brack said. "I certainly learned about art in the process."

And, even though "judges and lawyers don't get to build stuff," Brack said he has always wanted to be an artist. "I'm always looking at color and line and form," he said. Brack said he has taken art classes in acrylics and pastels and is interested in painting.

Having beautiful art in the building he works in every day is important, Brack said. "There's not much fun that goes on here. The building itself can be uplifting and inspirational. That was the vision, and I think we stayed true to that," Brack said.

Architect Antoine "Tony" Predock's vision for the building was "light and open to take advantage of the fabulous views, and in that way make it a more inviting, soul-freeing process," the judge said.

Brack has been featured in national news articles because he sentences more people than any other federal court judge in the United States. That's because the five federal court districts, including New Mexico, that stretch along the U.S.-Mexico border hand down 75 percent of the criminal sentences imposed in federal court because they deal with thousands of immigration cases each year, Brack said.

City Hall lions turn 48

Bulletin report

The lions in front of Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St., turn 48 years old on Aug. 9.

The lions were donated to the city by E. J. "Gene" Stern and his wife, Mabel, who were long-time Las Cruces residents. They owned and operated the White House Dry Goods Store in downtown Las Cruces for many years. The lions bear their names – the male lion is E.J. and the female lion is Mabel.

Gene Stern was born

Nov. 11, 1885 in Galszecs, Zemplein Megye, Hungary, according to www.jmaw.org/eugene-stern-jewish-new-mexico. He died Dec. 15, 1981. Mabel was born June 13, 1895 in Nebraska and died Sept. 25, 1966. Both died in Las Cruces.

The couple moved to Las Cruces in 1917 and were in the mercantile business for about 30 years, according to the Doña Ana County Historical Society's January 1996 Southern New Mexico Historical Review

They were also great philanthropists. Their donations include the home of the Las Cruces Boys and Girls Club on west Las Cruces Avenue.

Runners from Alaska sprinting into Las Cruces

Bulletin report

Every four years, Native and non-Native runners gather in Chickaloon, Alaska, and Tierra del Fuego, Argentina, and start a six-month journey that culminates in the two groups meeting at the midway point in Panama City, Panama for the Peace and Dignity Journeys.

The Peace and Dignity Journeys are a 24-year tradition maintained by Native Americans on all three American continents. Runners, some of whom run the whole way to Panama, while others only run with the group until they leave town, start together but often break apart into smaller groups, taking different routes to the same destination, the Kuna Nation in Panama.

Along the way, runners rest in different Native American nations, where they partake in joint spiritual ceremonies and prayer meant to restore bonds between Native American peoples, as well as to preserve native culture.

This year's journey started at the beginning of May. Runners from Alaska will be in Las Cruces on Sunday, Aug. 7. They will be met at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St. and will be hosted by the Piro-Manso-Tiwa Tribe of the Guadalupe Pueblo.

Every four years' journey, called a "prayer," has a theme. The theme for 2016 is the value of seeds.

NMSU's Grape Day to focus more on the homegrower

By Tiffany Acosta
For the Bulletin

The third annual Grape Day at New Mexico State University will be held from 8 to 11 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 13, at the Fabian Garcia Science Center, 113 W. University Ave., Classroom 158.

This year, Grape Day will include more diverse topics focused on the home grower than in the two previous years, according to Daniel Goodrich, project coordinator for NMSU's Viticulture program.

"In the past our focus was mostly wine grape production," Goodrich said. "This year we have structured our program to be of use to both small scale wine grape growers and table grape growers. We hope to be able to grow this event into an educational platform to cover topics of interest to the grape growing community."

The speakers for this year's event include Gordon Steele, vineyard and winery owner/operator; Cary Hamilton from NMSU Extension Plant Sciences; Dale Ellis, New Mexico Vine & Wine Society, Southern Rio Grande chapter president and amateur wine maker; and Daniel Goodrich, project coordinator for NMSU's Viticulture program.

Discussion topics include grape maturity versus grape ripeness; pest management tools; the home vineyard and plant selection along with small farm and garden safety.

For more information on the program visit <http://aces.nmsu.edu/ces/viticulture/>.

New Mexico State University's Viticulture Program will host the third annual Grape Day from 8 to 11 a.m. at the NMSU Fabian Garcia Science Center.

Public to weigh in on I-10 Arrowhead Drive interchange

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Molzen Corbin engineering firm is seeking public input on a proposal to build an Interstate 10 interchange where Arrowhead Drive ends at Sam Steel Way.

The interchange is intended to improve access to land owned by New Mexico State University and targeted for development by public-private partnerships.

John Montoya, vice president of surveying for Molzen Corbin, presented four options for the interchange at a public meeting July 29 at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

There are three construction alternatives, two of which would control traffic flow with signal lights and one that would require roundabouts, he said.

Roundabouts recommended

Montoya said roundabouts — the least expensive option — would be recommended unless there is significant community objection or there are findings of cultural or environmental issues.

One of the alternatives using traffic signals would leave Sam Steel Way unchanged — that road would run under the new Arrowhead Interchange — and would cost about $20 million. The other alternative would relocate Sam Steel Way for a total project cost of $19 million.

Using roundabouts to direct traffic flow instead would bring the project in at $18 million, he said.

Montoya acknowledged “people are just not happy with them, but they actually function fairly well.”

“The big saving is because you don’t have to do signal lights,” he said.

Montoya said studies based on projected traffic in 2040 will look at how best to minimize delay and travel time and avoid negative impact on the interstates and at other interchanges.

He said adding a new way to access New Mexico State University and Arrowhead Research Park should significantly reduce traffic on University Avenue.

An evaluation matrix for the proposed interchange would consider safety, connectivity, access, impact on economic development, cost, level of service and maintenance.

Five-year process laid out

He said he anticipates the interchange would be a five-year project, with actual construction taking about two years.

The first step would be to get federal approval of the concept, followed by placement of the project on the state transportation plan so the process of seeking federal and state funding can begin.

Montoya said Arrowhead Interchange is not a high priority on the state funding list, but some federal money might

Guatemala-born designer taps into U.S. market

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces resident Maria Mercedes Colato is a job creator — in Guatemala.

When the Guatemala-born designer returned home last year for the first time in six years, she shared a joy-filled reunion with her family living in Guatemala City.

Then, on a trip to the small inland town of Panajachel, she found inspiration for a business that reflects traditional arts of weaving and leather work.

“When I went back, I met a family that was doing leather purses and boots and saw the beautiful things they were doing, I thought people in the United States would really appreciate their work,” she said.

Colato said she asked the mother and son business owners whether they would be ready to make some changes.

She posed the proposition, “If I design something, would you be interested in exporting products?”

They accepted the challenge, and Colato’s business, ROOTS, began to develop.

A dream and a purpose

“Exactly one year ago, I came back to the U.S. and started to draw and design products,” Colato said. “Six weeks after they received the first drawings, they sent me samples.”

Colato said she was “very impressed with the quality.”

“Now they have a little factory and a store and are manufacturing for a couple of different stores around the world,” she said. “Since we started the business, I’m so happy they’re growing and we’re able to create more jobs for them.”

Some 25 young men and women are employed at the factory.

ROOTS products are displayed at LuLu Elements for Living in Mesilla.

Maria Mercedes Colato is the owner of ROOTS and designer of a line of purses, boots and accessories made by artisans in Guatemala for sale in the U.S.

“Having the company is a dream with a purpose,” Colato said. “I love creating jobs for them.”

Homage to tradition

Colato’s business is aptly named ROOTS.

Her Guatemalan colleagues pair her sophisticated designs with vivid weavings and softest leather to create high-fashion shoes, bags and accessories.

The makings of their products — organic cotton, wool and leather — are grown or raised in Guatemala.

The colorful woven materials reflect Guatemalan culture with geometric patterns and motifs drawn from nature.

The weavings resonate in the American Southwest because they are reminiscent of the work of North American Indians, Colato said.

Her products may be found at Lulu by Design in Mesilla, a shop in Denver, one in Ruidoso and three El Paso boutiques, including one at El Paso International Airport.

Colato plans to expand her market to Scottsdale, Arizona, and Santa Fe in the near future, and reach consumers beyond the southwest with an online shop.

“I like stores that promote small companies and local designers and really be available.

He said Ecosphere Environmental Services is doing environmental documentation for the proposal.

Documentation will include a study of the noise level in the neighborhood of the interchange, which Montoya said might actually be lessened because ramps would be located on an embankment. The embankment might reduce the noise level in the neighborhood, he said.

Other considerations include the cultural impact of the use of Tortugas Arroyo and possible obstruction of the view by the elevated ramps.

The interchange first was envisioned in a 1991 study and identified as the Cholla Interchange, Montoya said. It was included in several subsequent studies, including a 2009 interstate justification report.

When the I-10 and I-25 interchange was built, ramps were designed to facilitate construction of the Arrowhead Interchange, Montoya said.

He said the public comment period will extend until August 15.

Comments may be mailed to John Taschek, Ecosphere Environmental Services, 1660 Old Pecos Trail, Suite H, Santa Fe NM 87505 or emailed to jtaschek@ecosphere-services.com.

appreciate quality," she said.

"In one year we have been really good.. "It's growing, and our customers are really happy with our products."

Mesilla roots

Colato said when she received her first samples she called on her favorite local boutique, LuLu Elements for Living in Mesilla.

"When I was at LuLu, I met a lady from Colorado who was there as a manufacturers' rep in four states," she said.

Through that chance encounter, her products are now sold by Fawn Ridlenhour at Simply Spoiled in the Denver Mart.

"It's always meant to be," Colato said of the chance meeting with the rep.

"She comes here only

Weaving in Panajachel

once, twice a year."

In Ruidoso, ROOTS is sold at Michele's.

"I go in and say this is me, this is my business card, this is my product," Colato said. "So far, every store I visited said yes."

Grounded in the arts

Although Colato distributed ROOTS products by calling on retailers, she is by no means naiive.

She previously worked as an interior designer in Guatemala and a sales manager in the U.S.

Colato came to this country with her Salvadoran husband, Dr. Luis R. Colato, who did residencies in internal medicine and cardiology in Texas before the couple moved to Las Cruces in 2011.

"He wanted to come to Las Cruces because it's an underserved area," she said. He currently is affiliated with Las Cruces Cardiology Associates and sees patients at both Mountain View and Memorial medical centers.

While her husband was a resident, Mercedes Colato decided she wanted to continue her career in interior design and completed her studies online with the New York Institute of Art & Design.

"Art has always been a big part of my life," she said. I was a dancer and music art and fashion always were strong for me."

Partnering with Studio G

For assistance with the many details of starting a business in New Mexico, Colato turned to Arrowhead Center at New Mexico State University.

While her son, Luis D. Colato, was completing his high school studies at Centennial, he applied through the EXCEL program to do a dual credit course with NMSU and was accepted by Arrowhead Center.

"He told me, 'Mama, they can help us do everything,'" she said.

"We had a wonderful opportunity for them to guide us in how to do it."

Mercedes Colato said her son designed a web page and developed a social media presence for ROOTS.

"Imagine, being 17-years-old and starting a business," she said.

She will soon lose her business partner, as he will be leaving for Arizona State University to pursue a degree in business and entrepreneurship with a minor in communication.

Colato said, however, she will continue ROOTS' relationship with Arrowhead's Studio G business incubator.

"Studio G has very good seminars and opportunities for local entrepreneurs," she said. "I really like how they work."

Introducing the fall/winter collection

Colato is eagerly awaiting the arrival of her fall and winter line, which should be in stores this week.

"One of the purses I'm really excited about is a clutch that opens to a handbag," she said. "I'm in love with one design in my Lifestyles Collection that adapts for day and night. The leather is really soft and will grow in character over time."

New for fall will be neutral and earth-tone woven fabrics.

The ROOTS line includes wallets, weekenders, backpacks, cross-body bags, belts, camera straps and other accessories.

As the seasons transition, boots will replace sandals on the glass shelves at LuLu.

Meanwhile, shoppers will receive an end-of-season discount on spring and summer merchandise, LuLu manager Lynne Rushe said.

NMSU pushes for commercial development

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's Aggie Development Inc. has unveiled plans for the commercial development of 2,300 acres east of campus.

Aggie Development Inc. was created in 2014 to manage and develop University property.

Elements of the plan for the proposed east campus include mixed-use commercial development, a new golf course, research and academic facilities, medical offices, continuum of care/retirement residences and multi-family residences.

Scott Eschenbrenner, president and CEO of Aggie Development Inc., presented the plan to the public July 29.

"First and foremost, we want to position the land to create value for NMSU," he said, "In addition, the development must create learning experiences for students."

Eschenbrenner told the audience the next step is to develop private-public partnerships "to get this moving along."

Development would start small in Phase 1, concentrating on mixed-use commercial buildings on 36 acres west of the golf clubhouse and east of University Avenue.

"This is land available for development today," Eschenbrenner said. "We're getting a lot of interest, including interest from the medical community."

The vision is to develop 16 acres for commercial use, 20 for medical offices, he said.

Golf and more golf

Phase 2 would feature mixed-use commercial development on 30 acres. A continuum-of-care facility retirement community would occupy 18 acres.

The centerpiece, however, would be a new 18-hole signature golf course.

Eschenbrenner said Jim Engh Design has been selected to design the course.

Engh espouses a minimalist approach, with the use of half as much grass as the average course, Eschenbrenner said.

Planners looked at four possibilities for Phase 2, he said, two of which call for reducing University's 18-hole golf course to nine holes and adding a new 18-hole course.

Eschenbrenner said Aggie Development Inc. could pick up 92 acres of buildable land by removing nine holes from the existing course.

Preserving nine holes of the original course would enable young golfers to discover the game by playing nine holes on a less demanding course, Mitch Scar-

Scott Eschenbrenner, president and CEO of Aggie Development Inc., describes a plan to develop 2,300 acres east of the New Mexico State University academic campus "to create value for NMSU."

'First and foremost, we want to position the land to create value for NMSU.'

SCOTT ESCHENBRENNER

President, CEO of Aggie Development Inc.

borough of Jim Engh Design said. Preserving a portion of the original course also would honor the history of the course and those who play there.

Patio homes would be constructed on a 39-acre parcel adjacent to the golf course.

"Phase 2 would require a lot of things to come together for this to happen," Eschenbrenner told the audience.

A Phase 3 would follow, with additional development and the extension of Sonoma Ranch Boulevard into the area slated for development.

Next steps

Next steps for the development of the east campus include putting together public-private partnerships, exploring the possibility of leasing land and perhaps doing a joint venture with a medical group to get the medical offices built.

Other items on the "to do" list include partnering with the University Foundation and developing town and gown relationships.

Eschenbrenner said the Aggie Development Inc. board Inc. will have the final approval for any projects.

"They'll have the final say over what happens here," he said.

Office park plans for development

During the July 29 meeting, Wayne Savage, executive director of NMSU's Arrowhead Park, gave an update on the master plan for the 175-acre science and technology park on University land near the crossroads of I-10 and I-25.

The goal, he said, is for Arrowhead Park to become a best-in-class mixed-use development.

He said six months of data gathering and three days of community input sessions laid the foundation for a master plan.

"Las Cruces does not have a Class A office park," Savage said. "We feel Arrowhead Park can be a premier office park. We have the location to be a gateway not only to the campus but also to the city of Las Cruces."

Savage said staff will target key business sectors to locate in the park: the life sciences, aerospace, agri-business, water engineering and creative media.

Initial outreach will focus on the life sciences, he said.

Districts within the park would include innovation, research, creative media, a town center adjacent to the Early College High School and retail.

According to the proposed master plan, Locust Street would connect to the town center, Savage said.

"We're looking at how to tie Arrowhead Park into the regional trail system," he added.

The public meeting also included an update on the University's master plan and was followed by a presentation on the I-10 Arrowhead Interchange proposal.

Confusopoly is a comic idea

Confusopoly is a term coined by Scott Adams, creator of the Dilbert comic strip, first put forward in the hilarious book Dilbert Future. It refers to a collection of companies with similar products that intentionally confuse customers rather than compete on price.

In fact, any number of industries are confusopolies.

Dilbert, er, I mean Adams, cites phone plans, new trucks and mortgages, but there are many others. In fact, confusion is a time-honored means of reducing competition. If customers can't understand the product they are buying, they can't compare prices.

Shampoos, for example. Have you ever looked at the shampoo aisle? There are dozens of brands, with each brand having multiple formulations. There is no standardized term, so one manufacturer's fizzy hair formula could be meant for a completely different type of hair than other manufacturer's fizzy hair formula. Or, in fact, given the confusion, it could be that neither formulation really does anything different from standard shampoo, except perhaps smell different or have a different color.

Part of creating a confusopoly is employing poorly trained staff. These staff members

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

may be highly skilled salespeople, or great at after-sales service, but heaven forbid that they be able to answer a question about one product versus another. This way there is no chance they will de-confuse the consumer.

Think I exaggerate? Then consider this: What do you think will be the reaction if you ask a store clerk to explain the ins and outs of different shampoos? You know the result will be most likely a dirty look, or perhaps a look of pitying condescension as the clerk explains that they just stock shelves.

Confusopolies benefit businesses by causing consumers to pay for unneeded features in the mistaken belief that one product is better than another. Because of the many features and combinations of features, there is no real way for a consumer to really know which product is best for them. Besides, the product differences may not be real, but just marketing ploys. There is no government oversight of this sort of thing.

There is another business benefit to confusion, which is choice overload. Faced with an array of bewildering choices, the consumer will simply accept the choice presented them, as making a rational decision is not possible.

The idea of confusopolies actually goes back in economics at least to the 1930s when economist Edward Chamberlain popularized the idea of product differentiation. By differentiating itself from competitors, both the firm and its competitors can charge more for their products.

But the differences don't have to be real or meaningful, and this is where confusopolies come in. By confusing with many options, you can convince the consumer to pay more.

The concept of confusopoly has made it into the mainstream.

Richard Cordray, director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, used the term in arguing for meaningful regulation of the financial system. By standardizing products, Cordray argued that the financial system confusopoly would be tamed.

Cordray is right. The solution to confusopoly is the imposition of standardization through government regulation. But in most cases the cure is worse than disease. A little confusion beats a lot of government bureaucracy.

Vineyard crew plays defense

Lazaro Trujillo drives a tractor while members of his crew place netting over grapevines in the Mesilla Valley Estate Vineyard to protect the ripening fruit from birds. Trujillo said 11 varieties are grown in the eight-acre vineyard. Muscat harvest will begin in about a week, with most varieties being harvested in mid-September. This is the second year the four-year-old vines will produce grapes for market. "They're looking great," Trujillo said. "We just flooded the vineyard to remove the salt."

Keep Striking employed!

What the heck?

Are we going to lose the services of Striking the Wonder Dog who runs out and retrieves the tee after a kickoff?

Ok, take a deep breath. We're not on that particular ledge just yet.

Brook Stockberger

Still, with all the talk across college football nation about the possible elimination of the kickoff in the sport, we here in Las Cruces might have the most to lose. Sure, New Mexico State University is not the only school to have some cute way to retrieve the football tee after a kickoff. Iowa State and Boise State both have used canines to perform the task.

The Boise State version, though, was known as Tee-Dog. Come on Broncos, you come up with a blue turf on he field, but the best you can come up with is "Tee-Dog"? That's weak.

On the pro level, the Saints have used a pooch named Gumbo, which is awesome.

Still, with all the talk of eliminating the kickoff for safety reasons – a move I am currently against, by the way – there is a very real threat this could be the last season we get to watch Striking run onto the field and bring back the tee.

I personally would miss the doggies as well as the excitement of a kickoff brought back up the field and even the threat of an onside kick.

Hopefully kickoffs will remain.

Prep gridders hit the grass

My son Tyler is torn. A former center for the Oñate High football team, he starts college soon at New Mexico Tech and his days of playing organized football came to an end last October on the turf of the Field of Dreams with a torn-up knee.

Like his old man – who hasn't played since 1989 and who gets tired anymore by just watching others run – he misses the game. He probably will for the rest of his life.

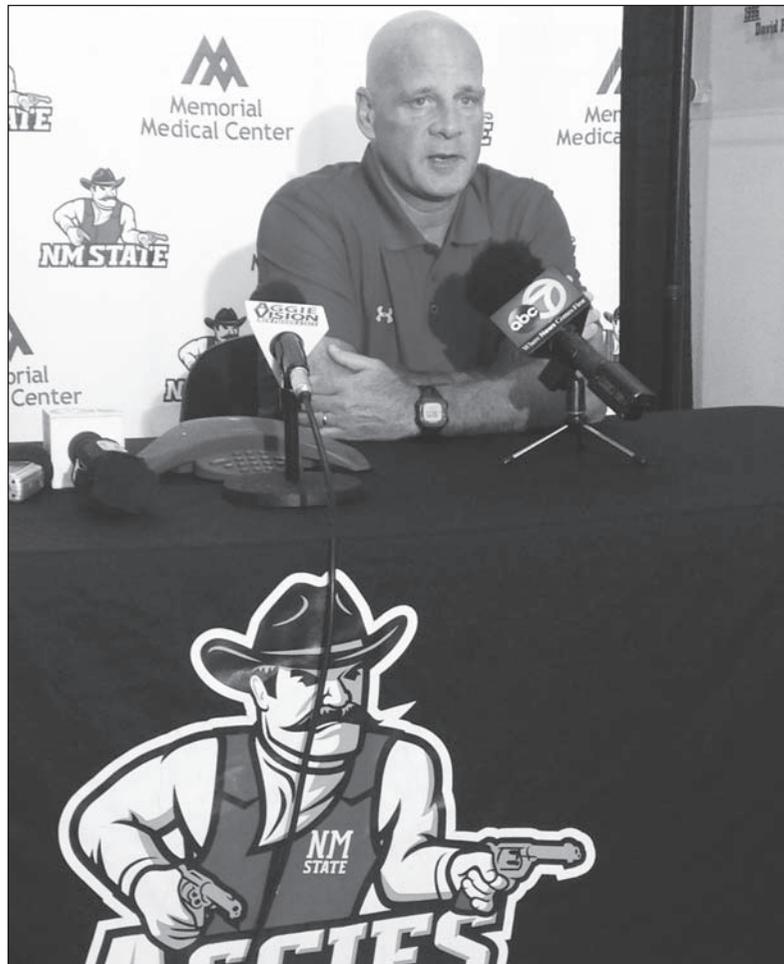

Still, when he thought about all those high schoolers hitting the grass fields this past week with the start of preseason practice, he did smile a little.

"I loved the playing and weightlifting," he said. "The running? Well..."

He can now know the excitement of being a fan.

We are thankful all those high schoolers are out there sweating and grinding and getting ready. There is nothing like a Friday night under the

Rude, ignorant golfers lead to 'A good walk spoiled'

While playing in a casual golf game recently I noticed a few of the other players becoming surly and extremely upset, throwing temper tantrums when the slightest thing went wrong. A shot falling down a false front; a missed four-footer; a chunked wedge shot. Loud staccato expletives disturbed the morning quiet, as clubs were hurled about.

I wasn't hit by a golf club but I was struck by the vehemence of the anger and frustration that exploded at certain times, even though no one was out there trying to earn a living.

As I later reflected on what I had witnessed that day, I was amused at the contrast between grown men out playing a game and the emotional eruptions that turned the serenity of the morning into what Mark Twain called "A good walk spoiled."

"Golfers just out having fun," I joked to one of the calmer members of the group. Yet sometimes tantrums and infantile behavior of weekend golfers can be a drag on the enjoyment that others could be getting from the game. They seem to not really be aware of their own actions and how those actions affect folks around them. Sort of like ignorant aggressive drivers on the roads, the self-contempt and disregard for others I see with a lot of golfers can not only be a disappointing distraction, but it can bring others down as well.

Blanchard
Golf Doctor

There are two other situations that fall into the more dangerous category of awful golfer behavior: one is club throwing and the other is physical attack. Several years ago an infuriated local golfer tomahawked a wedge into the ground, only to have the steel shaft snap off and impale the skull of a fellow player causing traumatic and permanent injury. I have observed club shattering and club throwing multiple times and it's a wonder more serious injuries don't happen. Even the pros do it. In the first round of the Open Championship Rory McIlroy slammed his 3 wood only to have the shaft snap in two. A clubhead that accidentally separates from a shaft is certainly dangerous enough, let alone one that is purposely helicoptered or shattered. Then there is the matter of assaults, fights and brawls on the golf course, which are becoming more frequent at daily fee facilities. Often these brouhas begin when someone hits into or too close to a group playing in front of another. The result is the green grass equivalent of road-rage.

One would think that golf is a recreational activity played by well-behaved, well-spoken, well-dressed genteel folks who wouldn't dare ruffle any feathers. That may be the way it used to be, but not so any more. I've even seen heated arguments erupt between middle-aged country club friends of mine. This is a case where emotional intelligence (EQ) comes in. Emotional intelligence basically is the internal self-awareness that a person has about the perceived effect he or she has on other persons present, combined with awareness of the effect that others have on us. When you think about it, this is socially extremely important to getting along with others. In my view EQ is much more important to success in our modern world than regular "IQ" type intelligence. At one time it was thought that golf was almost certain to teach people social graces and personal values. But that may not be an automatic outcome for regular golfers. The First Tee program for kids has been regarded as a success because it is designed and is transparently focused on utilizing golf to establish those core values such as respect and integrity. Maybe boorish, uncouth adults need a grownup first tee school.

With the thought in mind of raising our personal awareness as golfers I have prepared a set of questions – a self-test, as it were. This is certainly not a scientific project or investigation, but rather just an exercise for you to focus on gaining insight for yourself as a golfer. I will share and explain some 30 questions for you to consider within the next few weeks, expecting that you could benefit from introspectively looking at and self-responding to those questions.

In 2016, Groff went 12-0 with a miniscule 1.06 ERA in 15 starts. The left-hander from Castroville, TX helped the Apaches to their third consecutive national championship and was named tournament MVP.

Taking the pain play by play

Bulletin writer Susie Ouderkirk recently got the opportunity to do something she's longed for all her life: play football. What started out as a story to cover for the Bulletin turned into a journey with an unknown ending. This is the third installment.

I'd survived the tryouts and the first practice with what I thought was a reasonable amount of pain. After a four-day rest, my sore right quadriceps muscle had gone from shouting to whispering when I walked. But I knew it was still vulnerable, and that I could reinjure it just doing the basic warmups required at practice. I had two choices: stand on the sidelines and take in as much as I could visually, or get back into the fray and hope for the best. I'd take it play-by-play.

At the beginning of practice, the coaches explained to us that this early in the season no player was already pegged into a certain position. Everyone would get to try all the positions, and the coaches would watch and evaluate and make decisions down the road. They said we might be moved around a lot.

The Sugar N Spice League, which is the parent organization of the Las Cruces Coyotes, not only uses a smaller ball and a smaller field, the teams play eight-on-eight, not 11-on-11 like most football. So only 16 players would start each game: eight on offense, eight on defense, Coach Avalos explained.

What was this weird feeling creeping up from my gut to my chest? Was I feeling competitive? Already? I found myself surveying my teammates and weighing myself against the other 24 women, counting out how many were obviously better suited to play this game than I was. Was I at least in the top 16? Alas, I knew I wasn't.

As the realization sank like a rock in my gut, I started to plot. Should I bake cookies for the coaches? Should I start to compliment their rugged good looks? Should I cry and play the delicate flower? Should I mope and hope?

I know what my first and most influential coach, my dad Carl Eichstaedt, would say. He'd say, "Be a good teammate. Catch the ball every time. Do your job very time. Work harder. Get there early. Stay late."

But who was I kidding? Just making the team was an accomplishment; actually getting to play in a real Sugar N Spice game against other real Sugar N Spice women was a luxury I might not be able to afford. No matter how many times my head told me I was just as fast, just as strong, just as athletic and just as capable as the others, my body had the last word. And ultimately, Coach had to do what was best for the team.

My right quad muscle was still painful, and I was still working at about half speed for the running drills. I focused on the correct positions with my back and shoulders and arms and hands, since I couldn't be explosive when running. I was determined to be a good team member, do what I could with the pain and carry on. But during the sprint warmups, my left quad clenched up into the same biting rictus as the ailing right, and picking up either knee higher than about five inches created a ripping, slicing pain with every step.

It was painful enough that I stopped thinking about how to handle the situation; rational thought and problem solving fly out the window when pain walks in the door. I told Coach the pain was worse and now doubled. He told me to step aside and call it a night; rest and ice would be on my agenda for several days. I was relieved to stand still and not provoke the pain, but I was disappointed to be unable to finish the drills. Coach Tony said I should give the muscles a full week with no stress and no stretching, and come back slowly.

I stayed through the end of practice, limped sadly back to my car and drove tentatively to my house. For the first time in my

NMSU Track earns academic honors

State Track and Field has been named to the US Track and Field and Cross Country Coaches Association All-Academic Team for the 2015-16 season. Additionally, freshman Kimberly Salinas was named to the individual All-Academic team by the organization.

"In addition to Kim Salinas being named to the individual USATF-CCCA All-Academic Team, we are proud of the entire Women's Outdoor Track and Field Team for, again, making the standard to be included as an All-Academic Team in Division I of the NCAA," said assistant coach Larry Carmichael. "We continue to strive for excellence in the classroom as well as on the field."

Teams must maintain a cumulative GPA of 3.00 to receive this honor. NM State posted a 3.25 team GPA for the 2015-16 season. In total, there were 122 men's teams and 220 women's teams honored by the organization.

Salinas, a native of Las Cruces, N.M., finished her first season at NM State with a 3.54 GPA. In addition, she competed in the NCAA West Preliminary Round in the Javelin and finished with a mark of 41.39m (135 ft. 9 in.). She qualified for the NCAA Preliminary Rounds by the winning the Western Athletic Conference championship in the Javelin with a mark of 46.13m (151 ft. 4 in.).

To qualify for this honor, student-athletes must have compiled a cumulative GPA of 3.25 and have either finished the indoor track and field season ranked in the top 96 in an individual event, the top 48 in a relay event or have participated in any round of the NCAA Division I Championships, including preliminary rounds, in the outdoor season.

A total of 910 student-athletes from 192 institutions earned USTFCCCA All-Academic honors for the 2015-16 season.

Racquetball's perfect for exercise-hating loners

It's difficult to know exactly why I enjoy playing racquetball (and tennis, but it's too hot for that article right now), a game wherein you hit a ball with an oddly shaped stick, but should be so averse to playing baseball, a similar game.

Maybe it's because racquetball is easier in many ways. When I say I "play" racquetball, I mean I find an enclosed court and slap a rubber ball with a netted paddle. When the ball ricochets off the wall, I pursue it, hit it again and this goes on until the ball runs out of momentum and has to be hit to start once more.

I don't play racquetball games. I know none of the rules.

All I know (as with tennis) is that I love racquetball.

My favorite aspect of racquetball (a sorely lacking feature in tennis) is the fact you can play by yourself. And I have. And it was a great workout.

There's something so compelling about focusing on nothing but striking a ball, trying to keep it going.

Racquetball is truly a recreational game, rather than a competitive game. Competitive games—football, baseball, to an extent basketball—have rules that players feel they must strictly adhere to. Moves are analyzed to determine their legality within the established confines of each game's professional organizations.

And if anybody attempts to violate or contest these rules, arguments break out, grudges are made and held, and the entire game is ruined.

While racquetball may also have rules, you don't need to abide by these rules in order to be a "team player" so that other people will want to play with you—because you don't need other people to play.

You don't need to be a good sports(wo)man in order to play racquetball.

You can be a cheater, a conniver, a layabout, a dog (me) and, if you play by yourself, have a grand old time.

Racquetball is the perfect game and exercise regimen for the loner, the hermit, the non-social.

I never thought I would use the word 'adore' to describe my feelings for an athletic game, but I truly adore racquetball. Writing this article, I can hear the thundering thwack of the ball hitting the wall, resounding all around me while I keep my eyes on the blue rubber arcing back across the court and I swing my racket from my side to swipe at it.

If you have never played racquetball, you owe it to yourself to give it a shot. By discovering racquetball, I've simultaneously discovered a way to exercise, which I had previously abhorred because the only way to exercise in Las Cruces in the summer and not die of heat stroke is to go to a gym.

And I detest gyms. I despise them.

But now I don't need to go to the gym. Racquetball isn't going to make me buff, sure, but it'll keep me from dying from a blood clot at 29 (which I was heading straight for prior to discovering my love for racquetball).

There are a number of racquetball courts throughout Las Cruces:

- NMSU Activity Center: 646-2885 (student ID or membership required)
- Meerscheidt Recreational Center: 1600 E. Hadley Ave., 541-2563 (reservations required the day before, $2 per person per hour)
- Stay Fit Fitness Center: 305 Foster Road, 526-4477 ($5 per person)

Maybe we'll see each other out on the courts some time. And if we do, remember: no, I don't want to play with you.

life, I was craving a shot of hard liquor. My husband, Mike, poured me a little glass of bourbon, stuck some ice cubes in it and dropped three ibuprofen into my hand. Purely medicinal. As I iced my thighs and sipped my whiskey, I realized that I still loved being a Coyote. Maybe now more than before.

On the dusty edges of my brain, I considered what would happen if my quads never recovered. If they never got back to the strength they were 15 years ago. If every running step was going to be painful from now on, and the disability would make me too slow to be a productive member of the Coyotes. If, no matter how much I wanted it, I just couldn't do it.

That's what the whiskey was for.

Chris Mitchell brings free magic show to Rio Grande Theatre

Crucen's magical career reaches 45th year

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

One of magician Chris Mitchell's favorite tricks is tearing a copy of the Las Cruces Bulletin into shreds and then making it whole again.

That and about 30 other slights of hand make up the collection of tricks he has been performing for the past 45 years in Las Cruces, New Orleans, Kansas and across the United States and Canada.

Mitchell, 53, said he became interested in magic at the age of eight while watching the television series "The Magic Land of Allakazam," starring Mark Wilson, which came on after Saturday morning cartoons.

Mitchell started buying magic magazines and soon learned to vanish a coin and mastered other tricks during his childhood in Kansas City and Burlington, Kansas. He continued as a magician at Burlington High School, where he won the state championship in improvisational acting.

While attending Washburn University in Topeka, Mitchell played bass guitar in a college band and assisted the theater program with technical issues like lighting and sound. After graduating in 1987 with a degree in history and political science, he decided to pursue magic as a full-time career, and was hired to do sound and light checks for a 40-week magic tour that took him throughout the United States and Canada.

Mitchell advanced to the role of magician's male assistant on the tour, moving boxes on stage and helping with tricks that included vanishing an elephant – the same elephant that would later appear in the movie "Big Top Pee Wee."

"That's when magic became my career," Mitchell said.

His first professional trick was building a box out of three pieces of cardboard. That and other tricks became part of the magic act he performed at restaurants and other venues and for corporate clients that included Santa Fe Railroad and Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company.

Mitchell said he was at a friend's house in 1992 when that friend received a job offer by phone from a magic shop owner in New Orleans. The friend declined the offer, but Mitchell took it. He wound up managing the Magic Masters Magic Shop in New Orleans, where he demonstrated and sold magic tricks to clients that in-

Mitchell performs free show Aug. 10 at Rio Grande Theatre

Bulletin report

Las Cruces magician Chris Mitchell will perform a free magic show beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 10 at Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St. downtown.

The show is one of the Doña Ana Arts Council's (DAAC) first Every 2nd Wednesday shows, which are replacing its long-running Every Other Tuesday programming so that performances will coincide with downtown Las Cruces activities during Night Market, according to DAAC's Facebook page.

This is a solo performance for Mitchell, whose only on-stage prop will be a box, he said.

Mitchell will perform about 30 different tricks from the repertoire he has developed during his 45-year career as a magician in Las Cruces and across the United States and Canada.

The show will last about one hour, he said.

For more information, call DAAC at 623-6403. Contact Mitchell at info@newmexicomagician.com.

cluded Melissa Etheridge, Howie Mandell, Linda Carter and Billy Joel.

While in New Orleans, Mitchell also served as the magic consultant on "The Big Easy" television series. He also was the resident magician on the Cajun Queen and the Creole Queen river boats, and he performed on cruise ships and in local hotels.

In 1999, Mitchell's daughter, Madeline, was born. His wife at the time, Rozilynn, didn't want their child to be raised in the big city, so the couple moved to Kerrville, Texas, where Mitchell's father had a medical practice. Mitchell continued performing magic and also worked at a radio station.

In 2005, the couple moved to Las Cruces, where Rozilynn had grown up. Madeline is now a drum major at Oñate High School. Mitchell also has a son, Kyle, 26, who is in dental school at the University of Louisville; and a daughter Abigail, who is an eighth grader being home schooled.

Mitchell works for Electronic Caregiver, a home healthcare service, and has performed magic shows for their employees in Las Cruces, Jackson, Mississippi and Phoenix.

In conjunction with the New Mexico State University Kinesiology and Dance Department, he also has put together "the world's first and only mobile gait analysis lab" to study how people walk, Mitchell said.

“The magician is really an actor playing the part of a magician,” Mitchell said. He wears black clothes and Chuck Taylor tennis shoes on stage – no top hat or cape for him. “I am what I feel a magician should be,” Mitchell said.

Mitchell credits French magician Jean Eugene Robert-Houdin with moving magic “from the street to the parlor,” but magician Mark Wilson “will always be my hero,” he said.

Mitchell said he doesn't have a favorite magic trick, but really likes “the ones that engage the audience the best,” which he said is his favorite part of any show. “Every show is different because I feed off the audience. I love the looks on the faces, I love the crowd. The wow factor – the sense of ‘how did he do that?’ is worth it,” Mitchell said.

Misdirection – “that's the essence” of magic, he said.

The best magicians “entertain first; they don't make it about the tricks,” Mitchell said. “It's all about having a style. The good ones tell the best stories.”

Mitchell makes regular trips to Los Angeles and Las Vegas to perform, and said he would “go in a heartbeat” if the opportunity for another national or international tour came along. “I'd love to go to Europe,” he said. “I'd love to go back to Canada.”

Mitchell has performed magic in all 48 contiguous states – New Mexico was his last stop as a performer. He's also done shows in Washington, D.C., and has visited all 50 states and all their capitals.

Mitchell said he also loves attending magic conventions in person once or twice a year, and he just completed a 50-hour online convention.

Even after 45 years in the magic business, Mitchell said he still enjoys performing at kids' birthday parties. “They humble me and they boost my ego at the same time. A kid will ask me for my autograph, and another kid will come to me and tell me he knows how it (a magic trick) was done,” he said.

Mitchell said his advice to any would-be magician is “go back to the old way of doing things.” The internet, he said, “is killing brick and mortar magic shops,” but they are still the best way to learn magic because the people who run them not only sell magic tricks, they teach others how to do them.

“Magic has helped so many people break out of their shells and learn to interact with people. Get your child involved in magic,” he advised, “then he won't have any money for drugs.”

“Magic is an art,” he said. In fact, a bill introduced by U.S. Representative Pete Sessions, R-Texas, would declare magic “a rare and valuable art form and national treasure.” For more information, contact Mitchell at info@newmexicomagician.com.

 PEOPLE HELPING PEOPLE

Clark going strong nearly two decades after retirement

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

If you get into a conversation about music in Las Cruces, Dr. William Clark's name is very likely to come up.

Clark came to New Mexico State University in 1985, first as director of bands and then, for 10 years, as head of the NMSU Music Department. He has also helped create and lead a number of community bands for children and adults that are going strong today.

A native of Prescott, Arkansas, Clark served 11 years as band director at Arkadelphia High School in Arkadelphia, Arkansas and then 14 years as director of bands at Delta State University in Cleveland, Mississippi before coming to Las Cruces.

There seemed to be "a bit more musical mobility here," Clark said.

There were about 120 or 130 music majors at NMSU when Clark arrived. Within a few years, that number had nearly doubled to more than 200 in the band, jazz band, orchestra and choral program. And, during his tenure with the department, NMSU produced about 500 students who are working today as music professionals in New Mexico and across the country.

Students and staff in the music department were willing to try performing any piece of music, Clark said. "I can't remember ever failing," he said. "There was an air about the department that 'we can do anything.'"

In 1987, Clark, former LCPS middle and high school band director and coordinator of fine arts John Schutz and White's Music Box owner Mike White were discussing the need for "a community band, an adult band" in Las Cruces. As a result of that conversation, they created the Mesilla Valley Concert Band (MVCB).

Clark is still director of MVCB, which has 90 to 100 active members with an average age of about 40, he said, although a couple are under the age of 20 and one is nearly 80. The band has many professional musicians and band directors as members, including several from Alamogordo and a retired band director from Lordsburg who makes the two-hour weekly trip to Las Cruces for band practice and for the free Sunday concerts the band performs several times each year, Clark said.

MVCB has performed about 225 free concerts in the past 31 years for more than 150,000 people, according to NMSU. MVCB's most recent concert, on Fourth of July, drew more than 700 people to the NMSU Music Recital Hall, which seats only 506.

Clark started the New Horizons Band (NHB) of Las Cruces in 1997 and served as its first conductor before handing over the baton to John Schutz in 2008. Another nonprofit, NHB just celebrated its 25th anniversary. It has about 50 members with an average age of 70 to 75.

Some 80-year-olds "are playing the best they've ever played in their lives," Clark said. "It is just such a labor of love for them."

Whatever the age or experience level of band members, Clark said the music they perform is "going to be as well done as we can do it. We don't put a ceiling on it."

"Dr. Clark is one of the world's best educators," said Heather Pfeiffer, who plays in both the MVCB and NHB. "He has not only helped me with tone, intonation, precision and technique, but has given me an even greater love of music. Taking lessons from Dr. Clark has helped me to grow as a musician in so many ways, and he is always available to answer that one last 'burning' question," she said.

Clark also formed the Main Street Band for home-schooled students, and served as its director for several years before handing over conducting duties to Roman Chip.

Clark said all the bands he has been involved with have received "phenomenal community support. I feel that I'm just on top of the world when I've done a concert," he said. "People just appear to love it and want more."

Clark has remained close to his NMSU roots since his retirement and continues to work with school and community bands. "We have a good relationship with all the NMSU bands, and with musicians in general," he said.

Clark's personal instruments of choice are the tuba and trumpet. Over the years, he has played in tuba and brass quartets and was a member of the New Horizons Symphony for two years. He still practices the tuba for about an hour a day, and devotes several hours a day to his MVCB conducting duties.

Here's what others are saying

"Dr. Clark is the consummate musician. He is incredibly knowledgeable. He is a talented performer and conductor, and is highly respected across the country as a clinician. I can't think of anybody I respect more than Dr. Clark. He was probably one of the most of the most important mentors I had in my career."

JOHN SCHUTZ

Las Cruces Public Schools retired middle and high school band director and coordinator of fine arts

"Dr. Clark hired me in 1985 to direct the Jazz Ensemble and teach trumpet at NMSU. I worked for and with Dr. Clark until his retirement. Personally, he shaped my entire career giving me opportunity after opportunity to advance, whether I deserved it or not. I will never be able to thank him enough for his understanding, support and guidance. The most remarkable aspect of this scenario is that he has done the same for countless others who (I know) feel the same debt of gratitude that I do. He is one of those rare individuals, if you are lucky, you hope to meet once in a lifetime. He is truly an amazing man."

DR. KEN VAN WINKLE

NMSU-Alamogordo president

"President Carruthers has described NMSU as a 'caring community transforming lives through discovery,' Dr. Clark epitomizes all three facets of this description. He is my mentor, colleague and friend. My first encounter with him was as a high school student where he inspired me to become an educator. The successful areas of my professional development I attribute to his mentorship. Anyone who has worked with him can attest to his sincere caring for those around him. He has transformed the lives of many professional musicians, as well as many avid community musicians where he has guided them to discover wonderful new works of music as well as new levels of personal performance – on and off the stage. I consider him my musical father and an ikon of music education," Fant said.

DR. GREG FANT

NMSU associated vice president and deputy provost

"He is one of the most professional, knowledgeable band directors I've ever come across."

Go see 'There's Room Enough for Two'

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Singers James Taylor and Carole King are on tour in New England and California, respectively, but their music is “right smack dab in the middle of town,” to quote lyrics from a song King co-wrote and Taylor recorded.

Thanks to the musical talents of James Gier and Christine Sanders, the songs that King and Taylor have made famous as performers and songwriters over the past 50 years are coming to life in a show at Boba Café and Cabaret entitled “Room Enough for Two” – also a line from the song “Up on the Roof,” which King co-wrote with then husband Gerry Goffin in 1962 and Taylor recorded in 1979.

Gier and Sanders come from different musical backgrounds, but their voices and musical talents blend so beautifully in this outstanding show. Do not miss it.

Gier and Sanders reminded me – and probably everyone else in the packed house – how many Taylor and King songs I know and how many of their lyrics and musical passages I remember.

In addition to the show's title song, they performed Taylor's “Mexico,” “You've Got a Friend,” “Fire and Rain,” “Sweet Baby James” and “Shower the People,” among others; along with King's “Beautiful,” “It's Too Late” and “Home,” plus other songs that King wrote for other performers, including “Natural Woman,” “Locomotion,” “Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow” and “One Fine Day.”

Sanders also sang a beautiful song she wrote called “Here in the Garden,” which is a sort of tribute to King's “Beautiful.”

Gier performed “Close Your Eyes” as a tribute to his sister-in-law, Tanya Gier. “Up on the Roof” was originally intended as a fundraiser to help pay medical bills Tanya amassed during her three-year battle with renal cell carcinoma. Sadly, however, Tanya died Sunday, July 24. So, some of the proceeds from the shows will go to help her family.

If you go to the show, you can make a cash donation at Boba Café. Or, you can donate online

(as I did) at <https://goo.gl/m3WrX7>. James Gier said a donation of any amount would be greatly appreciated.

Gier and Sanders were joined on stage by Mike Moore on base and guitar, who is traveling from Albuquerque for the performances; Zachary Gier on drums; and James' wife, Victoria Gier, on background vocals.

“There's Room Enough for Two” is a wonderful show, and a reminder of the immense talent we have in Las Cruces. This is a rare chance to see two of our best performing together.

Sanders is a member of the nationally recognized “Hard Road Trio” and is the co-writer of “We Are Enron” the musical.

Gier performed in the musical “Passion” last summer at Rio Grande Theatre. He owns a private music studio called London Cab Music Academy and has appeared in two earlier shows at Boba.

Remaining performances of “There's Room Enough for Two” are Friday and Saturday nights Aug. 5 and 6. There will be two performances each night. The dinner show seats at 6 p.m., with the performance beginning at 7 p.m., and is $27.50. The cocktail show seats at 8:15 p.m., with the performance beginning at 8:30 p.m., and is $12.50.

Make reservations for this show – it will very likely sell out all four of these shows.

For reservations and more information, call Boba Café and Cabaret at 647-5900. Boba is located at 1900 S. Espina St.

“With music, I have to do something the people making the music can grow from and the audience can get excited about,” he said. “Musicians face a really difficult problem in trying to negotiate everyone's value system and match it with their own.”

“Musicians deal with an eternal balancing act,” Clark said. “But they love what they do, and they love what they do for other people. Come and listen to them play. Go tell them if you enjoy it; that's what they live for,” he said.

Clark says hearing from his former students, band and community members about his impact on music in Las Cruces is “very humbling. I just hope I did some right things. I was in the right place at the right time,” he said.

“Clark's honors include Las Cruces Citizen of the Year in 1988 and New Mexico Music Educator of the Year in 1992,” according to NMSU. “He was inducted into the New Mexico Music Educator's Hall of Fame in 2007 and elected to the American Bandmaster's Association – the highest honor for international professional bandmasters – in 1993.”

Last year, Clark returned to his native Arkansas to conduct the all-state band. During his visit, he was inducted into the Arkansas Music Hall of Fame. Last year, he also was selected for the New Mexico Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts.

Clark and his wife, Betty, are also helping to raise the couple's two great-grandchildren, Gabriel, six, and Julianne, two and a half, after the sudden death of their mother and the Clarks' granddaughter, Ashley, about two and one-half years ago, Clark said.

The Clarks have two daughters: Lisa Arterbury, who plays the flute and teaches elementary music in El Paso, Texas; and Robin Madrid, who is a band director with the Las Vegas, New Mexico school system.

“I have a full plate right now,” Clark said. “I remain more active at times than I was when I was working.”

'The Homecoming' opens Aug. 12 at LCCT

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Harold Pinter's "The Homecoming" opens Friday, Aug. 12 at Las Cruces Community Theatre, 313 N. Main St. downtown, and continues through Sunday, Aug. 28.

The play is directed by New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Department Production Stage Manager Mike Wise, who also has directed productions of other Pinter plays, including "The Birthday Party," "Old Times" and "The Lover" for other theatre companies.

"Harold Pinter had an enormous influence on me as a young playwright," said NMSU Creative Media Institute for Film & Digital Arts Distinguished Achievement Professor Mark Medoff.

"He and (Samuel) Beckett and (Edward) Albee were my teachers. The first play I directed was "The Birthday Party" for LCCT. Talk about fun, living large in the Theater of the Absurd," said Medoff, who won a Tony award for best play in 1980 for "Children of a Lesser God."

"I chose to do "The Birthday Party" for two reasons, said Karen Caroe, who directed "The Birthday Party" at Black Box Theatre earlier this year. "First, I had fond memories of doing it in college and I wanted to try it again. Secondly, I think some of the themes in "The Birthday Party" are relevant today when we talk about privacy-invading drones and government spying on its people.

"I also really like that Pinter makes people think," Caroe said. "I believe he is still popular today among savvy theatergoers because they like that cerebral engagement that Pinter forces up on you. Today, there's so much in-your-face comedy and mindless entertainment that we don't really need to engage our minds. Pinter opens up conversation and stays with people for a long time. "The Birthday Party" was in March and I'm still running into people who have a comment to make about it. It's something you just don't forget," she said.

Pinter wrote "The Homecoming" in 1964. It was first produced in 1965 in London and won a Tony award for best play when it premiered on Broadway in 1967.

"The Homecoming" is set in an older house in north London, where Max, his brother, Sam, and two of Max's sons, Lenny and Joey, "welcome" his third son, Teddy home after a six-year absence. Teddy arrives with his wife, Ruth, who used to live in the same area of London.

"The characters in 'The Homecoming' are a vicious lot; they make the villains in Game of Thrones seem almost tame," Wise said.

The cast of the LCCT production of "The Homecoming" is Monte H. Wright ("Sam") Annie Pennies ("Ruth") Mathew Esqueda ("Lenny"), James Travis Kirk ("Teddy"), Spencer Taylor ("Joey") and Mike Cook ("Max").

Performances of "The Homecoming" will be Fridays and Saturdays, Aug. 12 and 13, 19 and 20 and 26 and 27 at 8 p.m. and Sundays, Aug. 14, 21 and 28 at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $12 for adults; $11 for students, senior citizens and military; $9 for children under age six; and $10 each for groups of 10 or more. Student "rush" tickets will be sold to students with a valid student ID card for $5 15 minutes before curtain time if seats are available.

Beatty-Payne combines love of theatre, downtown, family

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Janet Beatty-Payne is well into her third year as president of the Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) board of directors, where she will direct “The Wizard of Oz” musical this December.

She’s also an active member of Mainstreet Las Cruces and helps to coordinate Kids Night Out and other downtown events. She serves as coordinator of the Las Cruces Food Truck Fiesta and co-owns the Green Chile Paddy Wagon with husband, Patrick Payne.

And, she’s about to begin her 20th year as a speech-language pathologist with Las Cruces Public Schools, including the last four years at Monte Vista Elementary School. Beatty-Payne has bachelors and masters degrees in speech-language pathology with a minor in theatre performance from Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville, Illinois.

She also is active with the March of Dimes and is raising a 14-year-old son, Spencer, with special needs, who attends the Low Incidence Special Education Program at Vista Middle School.

Beatty-Payne became LCCT president during the theatre’s 50th season, which was its most successful ever, she said. The December 2013 musical “White Christmas,” directed by Patrick Payne, was the single most successful show in LCCT history. That season also saw “a big jump in our season-ticket sales,” she said.

Beatty-Payne directed “Best Little Whore House in Texas” in 2014 and “Shrek: The Musical” for LCCT in 2015, which were both hugely successful productions.

She has starred in many other popular shows at LCCT and Black Box Theatre, including “Shirley Valentine,” “Hello, Dolly” and “Anything Goes.” She has also choreographed many of these shows and others, and will co-choreograph “The Wizard of Oz” with Karlos Saucedo.

In addition to expanding the number of shows LCCT does every year, Beatty-Payne has focused on developing a long-term plan for making the theatre successful. She negotiated a 40-year lease on the theatre building with new owner Jose Coronado in May, and spearheaded a capital campaign that raised more than $40,000 for theatre renovations that include refrigerated air (already installed), an electrical upgrade and a refurbished lobby and restrooms.

“We’re not going to stop,” because it’s there to be done and we’re going to do it,” Beatty-Payne said.

LCCT is not Beatty-Payne’s only focus in downtown Las Cruces. As a member of the Mainstreet Las Cruces committee, she is working with fellow committee members Russ Smith and Heather Stein, City of Las Cruces Downtown Coordinator Andy Hume and Downtown Las Cruces Partnership Executive Director Arianna Parsons to coordinate and promote events in the downtown area, including the new civic plaza that will open in late summer.

“There’s a lot of new projects going to happen downtown,” Beatty-Payne said, that will increase the number of downtown businesses and enhance its nightlife.

The Kids Night Out events that Mainstreet Las Cruces has been coordinating for more than a year, for example, “have been super successful,” Beatty-Payne said. The next one, focused on back to school, will be held Aug. 13.

Beatty-Payne has for the past two months been coordinator of the Food Truck Fiesta, which includes the Green Chile Paddy Wagon and other Las Cruces food trucks. The fiesta brings the trucks to Allen Theatres and other Las Cruces and Mesilla venues on the first and third Wednesdays of each month, and has grown from four food trucks to a dozen in the last year, and there’s still room for one more, she said.

Her job as coordinator includes finding the locations for the fiestas, getting the necessary city permits, getting the site set up and dealing with vendor inquiries. “The location is key,” Beatty-Payne said, because it has to be accessible to vehicle and foot traffic, be centrally located and have restroom facilities onsite or nearby. There’s a Food Truck Fiesta event every month except January, she said.

Actress/director’s career began at age five

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

“I have been performing since I was five years old, when my parents started a family band back in my hometown of Alton, Illinois,” said Las Cruces actress/director/choreographer Janet Beatty-Payne. “I was the lead girl singer. My brother played guitar and sang. My mom played the keyboards, and my dad was the sound guy. We mostly performed country music back then.

“When I was in middle school, I performed in a couple of operas and was cast in the lead of our middle school musical called ‘Kid’s For America,’” she said. “My first big lead in a musical was my senior year in high school (1989) when I played the role of Rosie Alvarez in ‘Bye, Bye Birdie.’ Then my freshman year in college (1990), I played Sandy in ‘Grease’ at Southern Illinois University in Edwardsville, Illinois.” After that, Beatty-Payne continued to do many plays and musicals in the St. Louis area as she completed her education. She also performed professionally for several years at Six Flags St. Louis and the Robert E. Lee Showboat Diner Theatre in St. Louis.

After moving to Las Cruces 1996, she “auditioned for my first show at the Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) in 1997 (and) was cast in the lead role of Ella Peterson in ‘Bells Are Ringing.’”

Beatty-Payne’s debut as the director of a full-length show was “Dames at Sea” for LCCT in 2013. Since then, she has directed “Meet Me in St. Louis” and “Shrek: The Musical” for LCCT. She will direct LCCT’s “The Wizard of Oz” in December.

Beatty-Payne has been choreographing shows since she was in high school, and has done choreography for a number of shows at LCCT at the Black Box Theatre in Las Cruces. She has also written and directed musical reviews for Boba Café and Cabaret.

“The most fulfilling thing I have done on stage was my role as Shirley Valentine at the Black Box Theatre in August 2013,” Beatty-Payne said. “That was a one-woman play about a 42-year-old woman who was discontented with life, so she made some significant changes to become a stronger, more fulfilled person. Performing a one-person show was such a challenge, but was also so incredibly rewarding to me personally as an actress,” she said.

After “The Wizard of Oz,” Beatty-Payne will take on the role of Martha in Edward Albee’s “Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf?” at LCCT.

“It’s an intense and gutsy role for an actress and I’m so excited to have a role that I can really sink my teeth into,” she said. “It’s a heavy line load, but after having done a full length, one-woman play previously, I feel up for the challenge of a role such as this.” Beatty-Payne’s husband, Patrick Payne, will direct the play, which opens Jan. 22.

Beatty-Payne said her favorite musical of all time is “Gypsy.”

“I have always wanted to play the role of Mama Rose. That role is at the top of my ‘dream role’ list,” she said. “I feel the role of Mama Rose is perfectly suited for my belty voice, and that particular character is complex and challenging. I am the right age to play that role now, so I hope that opportunity comes along sometime in the next few years.”

McQueen returns with 'Over the Rainbow and Straight On Till Morning'

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces actor/singer Megan McQueen returns to Boba Café and Cabaret with her production of "Over the Rainbow and Straight On Till Morning" on Fridays and Saturdays, August 12, 13, 19 and 20.

The show will include 16 songs on the themes of Oz and Neverland performed by McQueen, Amanda Bradford, Ginny May, and Matt Reiter, who is McQueen's husband.

"The incredibly imaginative worlds of Oz and Neverland have inspired countless works of art," said McQueen, who directed the show. "In particular, I listened to over 100 songs inspired by these lands. There are dozens of full-blown musical versions of each tale, but it was especially fun seeking references to them in popular song."

Several of the selections for the revue are familiar from the most famous musical settings, such as "Over the Rainbow," which will be sung by Bradford, "Neverland" sung by McQueen, and a medley of "Following the Leader" and "Follow the Yellow Brick Road" by the company.

More Broadway-style tunes have been selected from the recent musicals "Wicked" and "Finding Neverland."

"One of my favorite finds was Leonard Bernstein's beautiful setting of Peter Pan," McQueen. "Though written in 1950, several of the most stunning songs were not recorded until 2005."

Some other featured songs earned popular radio play, like America's "Tin Man" (1974), Dar Williams' "When I Was a Boy" (1993) and Ruth B.'s "Lost Boy" (2015), McQueen said.

All four members of the company are seasoned musical performers. May is an accomplished pianist and Reiter plays and sings in the band "Chain of Fools."

Performances will be on Friday and Saturday nights Aug. 12-13 and 19-20. There will be two performances each night. The dinner show seats at 6 p.m., with the performance beginning at 7 p.m., and is $27.50 per person. The cocktail show seats at 8:15 p.m., with the performance beginning at 8:30 p.m., and is $12.50 per person.

Reservations are recommended for all shows.

For reservations and more information, call Boba Café and Cabaret at 647-5900. Boba is located at 1900 S. Espina St.

'Dheepan' an appealing but dark, intense picture

By Jeff Berg
Las Cruces Bulletin

Director Jacques Audiard ("A Prophet"), offers up a very distinctive but bleak drama; it's the story of a family who sort of adopt one another, leaving one war and stumbling into another in this French film, "Dheepan."

There are unique expressions of spirituality here, which helps to balance the violence a bit, but perhaps not enough. One of the family offers vespers to the Ganesh, the Hindu elephant-headed god of wisdom and success, while another finds sleep disrupted by dreams of the jungle, where the sad eyes of a real elephant may be attempting to proffer comfort and/or pity.

The film features a refugee family, thrown together by fate with new identities as they escape war-torn Sri Lanka and arrive in France. Dheepan, the head of this family, has lost his real family in the war and has quit the Tamil Tigers, the opposition group in the Sri Lankan civil war, and embarked on what he hopes will be a new, safe and peaceful life. But that is not to be, as he is paired up with Yalini, his make-believe wife and Illayaal, a young girl, perhaps 10 years of age.

Given new passports with the names and IDs of three dead people, they are whisked away to Paris, where, briefly, Dheepan (Jesuthasan Antonythasan) sells trinkets on the street. A helpful interpreter at a social services interview is able to have the official believe the made up on the spot story of why the three have left their homeland and Dheepan is offered employment as a caretaker for a dreadful and crime-ridden housing project.

Not speaking French, Dheepan has to rely on the translation offered by Illayaal, who has learned a bit of the language in school, as he is rushed through the introduction to his new job, with major portions being left out, mostly relating to punks and thugs dealing drugs and bullets just across a courtyard. Due to this, the guide tells Dheepan to only clean in the morning after the brigands have left.

Illayaal's lack of knowledge of French lands her in a class with other children of migrant families, something which she tries to flee but soon adjusts to, much more so than Dheepan and Yalini do to their situation. Soon she is assigned a job where she is to cook and clean for an elderly man whose nephew is a kingpin in the gang. She remains distant and wary of him and announces her plan to Dheepan to go to England to live with a cousin.

The violence flares around this awkward little family—each night there is gunfire and sometimes gunfights right outside their shabby apartment. It is not until later when a former colleague of Dheepan, another Tamil Tiger comes a'calling when things change. Dheepan refuses his efforts to have him rejoin the freedom fighters and soon, Dheepan is literally drawing lines, using chalk lines to create a no fire zone around his buildings. All for naught—and soon the film becomes very much like a French/Sri Lankan version of "Taxi Driver".

The film moves at an unhurried pace until the last 15 minutes or so, when things change. It is well written and the cast, who I believe are all newcomers to the screen, making this an appealing, albeit dark and intense picture.

"Dheepan" won the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival, offering up a visual story of depth, dusk, and ultimately with a sort of happy ending.

'M*A*S*H' star Swit heads to Cruces for benefit performance

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Loretta Swit is coming back to Las Cruces.

Swit, won two Emmy awards for her performance as Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan during the 11-year run of the hugely popular television series "M*A*S*H," will star in two benefit performances of "Me & Jezebel" on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 16 and 17.

The production is a fundraiser to help upgrade lighting/technical/staging equipment at the Las Cruces Community Theatre.

In January 2014, she and fellow Emmy-award winner Edward Asner ("Lou Grant" in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and in his own TV series) starred in two performances of "Eleanor and Franklin," which benefitted New Mexico State University theatre arts scholarships, as well as two other local non-profits, Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary and Singing Out, the local LGBT community chorus.

Swit's co-star in "Me & Jezebel" will be her long-time friend, Las Cruces actor/director Norman Duttweiler. Duttweiler and his husband, Ron Nash, began coming to Las Cruces as "snow birds" in 2008 and moved here permanently in 2014 from Forestburgh, New York, a small town in the Catskill Mountains two hours northwest of New York City. There, they had owned and operated the Forestburgh Playhouse, the oldest professional summer theatre in the state, for more than 20 years.

Nash also had a busy career away from the playhouse directing national tours and other major productions, including "The Wiz," starring Peabo Bryson and Grace Jones; a number of productions of "Murder Among Friends," starring at various times Lana Turner, Tammy Grimes, Swit and Arlene Dahl; and "Janus," starring Joan Fontaine.

Nash met Swit on a cruise ship where he served as production supervisor for the Theatre Guild and she starred in a shortened version of the play "Shirley Valentine," which she was touring nationally in 1995.

Duttweiler produced more than 200 equity summer productions at the Forestburgh Theatre. During his 40-year acting career, he appeared on stage with Jean Stapleton, Claire Bloom, Patricia Neal, Anne Jackson, Eli Wallach, Judy Kaye, Gena Rowlands, Dick Cavett and many others. He also appeared on Broadway in the long-running revival of "Oh! Calcutta!"

At the Forestburgh Theatre, Duttweiler starred with Swit in "Doubt," "Murder Among Friends" and "The Apple Tree."

Local audiences in Las Cruces have also seen his work, including a brief appearance in the American Southwest Theatre Company production of "Our Town," the inaugural work of the ASNMSU Center for the Arts.

"Me & Jezebel" is the true story of Bette Davis' month-long visit to playwright Elizabeth Fuller's home in Connecticut, where Fuller lived with her husband and grandson. Davis had paid an over-night visit to Fuller in 1985 and invited herself for a longer stay a few weeks later when a hotel strike left her without service at the New York City hotel where she lived.

Loretta Swit and Norman Duttweiler star in a production of "Murder Among Friends" at the Forestburgh Playhouse. Duttweiler will be Swit's co-star in "Me & Jezebel" at Las Cruces Community Theatre.

"She took over their lives," Duttweiler said. "After all, she's Bette Davis." Davis (1908-89) played the title role in the 1938 film "Jezebel," for which she won an Academy Award for best actress. Davis was a Hollywood icon for much of the late 20th century.

For the LCCT benefit, Duttweiler, in drag, will play Davis, while Swit will take on the roles of Fuller, husband, John, and 10-year-old grandson, Christopher.

"It's always great fun to play in drag," said Duttweiler, who previously performed in women's clothes in the musical "La Cage aux Folles" at the Forestburgh Theatre and in the 1987 Canadian movie "Too Outrageous."

"The famous mannered acting style of the larger-than-life Bette Davis lends itself to drag performance," Duttweiler said. "I'm trying to capture what became her style, but I'm also walking a line because I want her to be a human being," he said. "I want to make the character of Bette Davis real."

"I'm very excited to work with Loretta again," Duttweiler said. "She's great to work with - a very generous performer and a lot of fun." During their 2014 rehearsals and performances at NMSU, both Swit and Asner stayed in Duttweiler and Nash's home.

Nash will serve as production supervisor for the LCCT benefit, and will create the set and the lights. Robert "Bobcat" Young of Las Cruces will do the costumes.

"Having an artist like Bobcat design the costumes and wig is so critical to the look of the production and helps me as an actor create the role," Duttweiler said. "We couldn't do it without him."

Duttweiler serves as play reading chair at LCCT, and said Swit's fundraiser is an important part of the renovation of the theatre that is now underway. Las Cruces attorney Joe Coronado bought the theatre in May. Since then, refrigerated air has been installed in the theatre, which also has a new roof.

"I am so excited to have Loretta Swit gracing the LCCT stage," said LCCT Board President Janet Beatty-Payne. "I grew up watching her on M*A*S*H every week, and now to have her here, in Las Cruces, doing a benefit to help our wonderful community theatre, is just such a thrill! With the money raised from this benefit, we are going to continue to upgrade our lighting system and get some much needed new curtains, legs and skirting for the stage area. We at LCCT are just so grateful for Loretta's heart to help us out!"

"A more successful LCCT is going to get people downtown," Duttweiler said. "It's good business. Arts in general are an integral part to any downtown revitalization."

"Me & Jezebel" will be performed at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 16 and 17 at LCCT, 313 N. Main St. in downtown Las Cruces.

Tickets are $45 each or $60 for the show and a post-performance reception with Swit.

Staying hydrated while in good company

As we head straight into those steamy 100-degree summer days in Southern New Mexico, it is extremely important to remember to stay hydrated.

As one thinks of staying hydrated, one usually thinks of a delicious quenching glass of frosty ice cubes swirling in crystal clear water with perhaps a lemon or lime wedge on the side. Interestingly, many experts agree that a cup of tea, iced or steamy hot, also helps to replace the necessary fluids that the body loses.

As an added benefit, that cup or glass of tea also contains antioxidants, specifically flavonoids. According to Michelle Castillo of "Time Magazine," flavonoids can help to lower the damage done to cells within our body from everyday living as well as helping to avert some types of cancer as well as heart attacks.

With that in mind, Good Samaritan Las Cruces Village's resident Marcie Palmer recently came up with a great way to hydrate, spend quality time with her neighbors while building strong lifelong friendships. Marcie started a twice-monthly get together open to all the residents and their family members. The group is fondly known as the "Mad Hatters Tea Club." Each get-together encourages the ladies to bring their own cup for filling with hot tea, cold tea, juice, sparkling cider, or water. Notable is that all of these beverages are items one is encouraged to drink to stay hydrated.

As each person arrives, their cup is filled with the beverage of their choice. Halfway through the two-hour get together, participants are encouraged to tell the story of where their cup came from and/or to tell a story of the topic of the day.

At the last meeting the topic was, "Tell a story of your first vivid memory."

As a privileged participant, I can tell you with great sincerity that the historical information shared of times in the past were astounding and heartwarming. I personally look forward to each and every get-together with these amazing women as something new and interesting is learned each time we gather.

So, whether you are enjoying an icy cold glass of lemonade in a hammock under the shade of a tree, a thirst-quenching glass of

Principles of self-mastery applicable to everyone

Until recently I had never heard of Matthew Buchinger. He lived in the 17th century and was widely known as a master entertainer, an athlete as well as a fine dancer and musician. He played a dozen instruments and had stunning skills as a magician. Not only was he a superb bowler and a marksman, but also a skilled calligrapher. What made him noteworthy was his stature. He stood two-feet-four-inches. Oh yes, he had no arms or legs.

I report this in the "what's our excuse?" department.

Our problems may seem insurmountable until we hear about someone like Matthew Buchinger. Yet, a tiny part of us may feel he was special in some way, possessed some attribute we do not, did not live in such a complicated world or had more family support.

But his is not an isolated case. The world is replete with everyday heroes who overcome the worst kind of challenges.

Carol Carnes
Living Consciously

Why we consider ourselves less capable or believe our problem is too great to overcome is simply that we have forgotten that the principles of self mastery are applicable to everyone.

It has everything to do with our mental perception of who we are and what we can do.

What is the principle that gives us the power to make all things new? It is the threefold principle of clarity, desire and interest.

These three mental states, combined, are the precursors to healings, manifestations and profound changes in circumstance. When we have a clear goal, (such as feeding ourselves without hands) we get intensely interested in learning how to do it. When we possess an intense desire to be self sufficient, and an interest in discovering how, we will stick with it until we succeed.

If we are clear that there must be a way, we will access our deeper intelligence. This is about being focused on our desire, clear that it is possible and willing to be taught from wherever the answer may come. It is about trust in the inner core of our being which is greater than the outer form we find ourselves to be, or to be challenged by.

Whatever it is, not only is there an answer, there are multiple possibilities. Make a decision to transform your outlook. Get clear about what you want to experience and get interested in expressing it in some way right now. Keep your desire in the present tense, first person, as if it were already complete.

The simple truth is that we are always greater than the experience we are having. If that were not true we would not survive a cut finger. But there is an innate intelligence in our body that knows how to overcome injury. Just so, that same intelligence permeates our mental field. We can access its greater knowing by simply deciding that our desire is possible.

We are clear that it can be done and we remain intensely interested in finding our way. This is the way to leave victimhood and enter self mastery.

Rentals thrive at the beginning of the school year

By Susie Ouderkirk
Las Cruces Bulletin

In early August, as about 20,000 students make their way back to campus to start another year at New Mexico State University, Beth Johnson, owner/qualifying broker of Las Cruces Homes and Land (LCHL), answers questions about renting to this particular group.

Las Cruces Bulletin (LCB): How are you preparing for the influx of students coming into town and wanting rentals?

Beth Johnson (BJ): We have already had students inquiring and it is not unusual to have students go ahead and rent in July or even June in anticipation of the shortage of rentals in August. Normally students waiting until the month of August will have a harder time finding available properties.

LCB: What are the challenges of renting to students?

BJ: Really no different than the overall challenges of managing tenants. We (LCHL) are careful to ensure that a tenant is aware of the basic laws of being a tenant by giving them a copy of an abbreviated version of the Landlord Tenant Relations that is published by the City of Las Cruces. Besides signing the actual lease, we also include individual Rules and Regulations that go in length to explain pet policies, no-smoking policies, utility policies and over all maintenance policies. By being so detailed up front, it lessens the chance of properties being damaged.

Also each property is completely photographed inside and out before a tenant moves in (the Move-In Inspection). A copy of this inspection is given to the tenant if they wish and we also encourage them to document anything that they find in the first seven days that we may have missed in our initial inspection.

A challenge that may be more likely with students would be internal roommate issues. Sometimes we have to remind our tenants that we are not referees.

LCB: What is the best thing about renting to students?

BJ: I enjoy seeing them get so excited about their first place.

LCB: What price range are most students in?

BJ: $795 to $995

LCB: How do you feel about the new rule that, starting in 2017, all freshmen will have to live on campus?

BJ: Hasn't impacted us at all. Maybe if I had a large apartment complex near the university I would see a difference. My properties are all over town, though, and we are currently at less than 5 percent vacancy.

Johnson can be reached at her office at 1701 Calle de Mercado, Suite 1, by calling 805-4383 or 526-9515 or by emailing BethInNM@Gmail.com.

Turf specialist helps golf courses save water

By Jane Moorman
For the Bulletin

Drought conditions and water shortages are having an impact on all sectors of society, including recreational landscape areas. In arid and semi-arid environments across the Southwest, the golf industry is trying to find ways to conserve water while maintaining playability and course quality.

For the past five years, the Club at Las Campanas, a luxury golf community in Santa Fe, has been working on implementing water conservation strategies for its two 18-hole courses, designed by golf pro Jack Nicklaus.

Recently, club management turned to New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service turf specialist Bernd Leinauer in Las Cruces for suggestions on how to resolve a lingering issue.

"In addition to using effluent water, we have reduced the amount of turf on the courses by a third, redesigned and updated the irrigation system and started using wetting agents to help conserve water," said Tom Egelhoff, director of agronomy at Las Campanas. "However, we are still battling wasting water on the tee boxes."

The main problem when irrigating the relatively small area of turf on a tee box with sprinklers is that the water overshoots the area or is blown in the wind, causing it to water the desert around the tee box, which not only wastes water, but increases labor costs as plants start to grow in a much larger area.

Leinauer's advice was to use subsurface drip irrigation for the tee box turf.

"Subsurface drip irrigation can save water from 20 to 90 percent of what is used by sprinkler systems," Leinauer said.

"It is not yet economical to use this method for the fairways or greens, but is perfect for tee boxes," he said. "Las Campanas is one of the first golf courses in the nation to install this type of system in tee boxes."

Bernd Leinauer, NMSU Extension turf specialist, right, attaches two subsurface drip irrigation lines as Matteo Serena, NMSU research assistant professor, assists. They directed the installation of one of the first golf course tee box subsurface drip irrigation systems at The Club at Las Campanas in Santa Fe. They will compare two commercial drip systems to a traditional sprinkler system for water efficiency and turf quality.

Las Campanas is collaborating with NMSU, the United States Golf Association and irrigation system manufacturers Toro and Rain Bird to install subsurface drip irrigation on six tee boxes. The manufacturers each donated the materials for their systems. USGA awarded a grant to off-set the travel cost to install the system and collect research data.

Leinauer and his colleagues, Elena Sevostianova and Matteo Serena, spent one week at Las Campanas to assist Joel Krause, irrigation superintendent, and his crew with installation of the subsurface drip systems.

"We installed Toro and Rain Bird systems in three tee boxes each," said Leinauer. "We will collect real world data on water consumption and quality of turf in these boxes compared to a standard sprinkler system."

Drip lines with emitters 12 inches apart have been installed four inches below the turf at one-foot intervals across the tee box area.

"This system is fairly new for turf areas," Leinauer said. "However in the irrigation industry, it is not new at all. We've had subsurface drip irrigated agricultural fields for decades. It's been shown numerous times that this system delivers water efficiently."

While it is not yet practical to have subsurface systems in the fairway and greens, it has been used on bunkers where the slope does not allow water from sprinklers to infiltrate the soil, according to Brian Whitlark, an agronomist with USGA Green Section who assisted with the project.

"Because of the data that will be gathered from this project, USGA awarded NMSU a grant to aid the research," Whitlark said. "USGA supports about a million dollars in research across the country each year."

Both Toro and Rain Bird are working to identify new technologies that allow more effective and efficient irrigation management.

"Collaborative projects with a university like this one are important to us," said Joshua Friell, principal research scientist at Toro's Center for Advanced Turf Technology. "It allows us to have a third-party verification of the technology and the resulting water savings."

"I hope that we will be able to get meaningful results from this field test and we will be able to document significant water savings, which then can also be implemented on other golf courses across the world," said Samir Shah, Rain Bird marketing and international sales manager.

Butterfly Flutterby happens Saturday

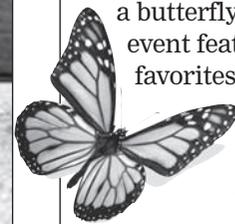

The Asombro Institute for Science Education announces its 14th Annual Butterfly Flutterby from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Aug. 20, at the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park. New stations this year include lifecycle maze, build-a-butterfly game, butterfly identification relay and making a butterfly necklace. The event features family favorites such as face painting, butterfly experts, butterfly gardening with Doña Ana County master gardeners and bucket auction. Rain or shine. Admission is $3.

The Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park is located northeast of Las Cruces. Directions: from I-25, head east on Highway 70. Take the Mesa Grande Road exit (at Oñate High School). Make a U-turn under the highway to head west and stay in the right lane. Turn right (north) on Jornada Road for 6.4 miles and turn left at the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park sign. Follow the entrance road to the parking area and trailhead.

Stress-reduction class series begins Aug. 24

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces registered nurse Gerri January will offer her fourth Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) class series from 6 to 9 p.m. beginning Wednesday, Aug. 24, and continuing for the next seven Wednesday evenings through Oct. 12.

All classes will be held in the Rotary Room at Mesilla Valley Hospice, 299 Montana St. The series also includes a day-long retreat from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 1, at the hospice.

An orientation session will be held at a date to be announced.

The cost of the classes is $119. "If cost is a significant difficulty, I encourage those who are truly interested and able to attend the full training to speak with me," January said.

She is offering the course at a reduced rate of $79 for those aged 18 to 34.

January has been a registered nurse for 40 years and has a master's degree in nursing. Adult psychiatric/mental health has been her primary area of focus throughout her career. She most recently worked part-time at the hospice.

January has been qualified by the Center for Mindfulness at the University of Massachusetts Medical School to teach MBSR. She has been training with the school for the past three years.

"MBSR is a program that has been shown to help with a wide range of chronic medical conditions and mental health challenges," January said. "In a world as complex and fast-paced as ours, MBSR offers tools that can assist us in coping with complex stressors within ourselves and our communities.

"The premise in MBSR is, 'There is more right with you than wrong with you as long as you are still breathing,'" she said. "We are already whole, even if we carry around scars from long ago.

"MBSR can help an individual experience the full range of what it means to be human. We work with whatever comes up despite the difficulty. Practicing mindfulness means grounding yourself in your body and more fully recognizing the experience of being alive in the present moment, which is the only time we have to really live, learn and change if we choose," she said.

"MBSR is not a cure-all by any means," January said. "In fact, we don't strive to 'get rid of' anything. Through practice, we can come to know who we are in the face of upset and change. We turn toward difficulty and begin to know it more fully, and in that process, we come to see we are more than we believed and that we have choices.

"MBSR is a challenging program and not right for everyone," January said. "I would welcome anyone who is willing to work to improve their own well-being to attend the orientation session."

Contact January at wild-desertmindfulness@gmail.com or at Gerri January, P.O. Box 168, Radium Springs, New Mexico, 88054.

HERB OF THE WEEK

Nettle well known as treatment for allergies

By Trish McCaul
For the Bulletin

Herb of the Week: Nettle
Latin Name: Urtica dioica

Nettle is native to Europe, but is now widely naturalized throughout the world. It is also known as stinging nettle, a fitting name. Due to the presence of tiny hairs on the plant, which contain compounds such as formic acid, when touched, the plant does in fact produce an intense stinging sensation. However, the plant loses its sting shortly after being picked.

Nettle is one of the most important herbs in Western herbalism. The above-ground parts are very high in vitamins, minerals and chlorophyll. It is rich in calcium, magnesium, potassium and iron. It is also one of the plants highest in protein. For these reasons, it is traditionally taken as a nourishing body tonic and rejuvenator, often for anemic or under-nourished individuals.

Nettle offers support for the respiratory tract, digestive system, immune system, the urinary tract, circulation, the nervous system and the endocrine system. Its restorative characteristics are used to return normal function to inactive kidneys, thyroid, menstruation, hormones, nerves and muscles. It also helps curb appetite, cleanses toxins out of the body and improves energy.

One of the most well-known uses of nettle is as a treatment for allergies. It increases the body's resistance to pollens, molds and environmental pollutants and calms the production of mucus resulting from allergies. It calms overactive mucous membranes throughout the body, and is used for chronic digestive, respiratory and urinary tract ailments, which involve excess mucus.

Nettle also helps eliminate uric acid build-up in the body, and has proven beneficial in cases of gout, muscle soreness and arthritis. Arthritis and gout sufferers have engaged in a traditional practice called urtication, dating back some 2,000 years, which involves intentionally stinging oneself (on areas of the body experiencing pain) with fresh nettles. The sting of nettle reduces inflammation and offers pain relief. While it may seem counterintuitive to sting an area in pain, this actually works. Urtication, however, is not for the faint of heart. Luckily, the herb is commonly available in freeze-dried capsules, which can be taken internally without the sting.

Nettle has an affinity for the kidneys and urinary tract. It is often used in the treatment of cystitis, nephritis and kidney stones. Because it aids the body in the removal of protein waste materials, it is often used to treat kidney disease.

Clinical studies have also shown that nettle root is highly effective in treating enlarged prostate. This is partly because the root contains high amounts of sterols, compounds that stimulate the production of white blood cells, which counteract inflammation and infection. It is often combined with pygeum or saw palmetto for a prostate treatment.

To use nettle for its nutritional benefits, a tea or capsules of the herb are fine. For various ailments, it is best to use capsules of freeze-dried nettle, or tincture of fresh nettle, as these preserve the vital compounds only present in the fresh plant (but they won't sting).
