'Ground zero' for control of Legislature

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletir

Albuquerque pollster Bruce Donisthorpe thinks the balance of power in one or both houses of the New Mexico Legislature may come down to races in Doña Ana County.

"Las Cruces and Doña Ana County are ground zero for the control of the state Legislature in this campaign," said Donisthorpe, who has been polling local city, county and legislative races for nearly a decade. He owns BWD Global, a strategic communications company.

In 2014, Republicans picked up House seats in Las Cruces area districts 36 (Andy Nuñez), 39 (John Zimmerman) and 53 (Rick Little), and that helped propel them to a 37-to-33 advantage over Democrats.

"Slowly but surely, Republicans picked up House seats in 2010, 2012 and 2014, so they finally took over," Donisthorpe said.

Nuñez is unique in state history, because he has held the District 36 seat as a Democrat, an independent and now as a Republican. He defeated incumbent

Garza: Career benefited from 'clarity and simplicity'

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

Editor's note: This is the second of a two-part story about retiring Las Cruces City Manager Robert Garza. Part 1 published Friday, April 22.

Among the most difficult local political battles retiring City Manager Robert Garza can remember in recent years is increasing the minimum wage, banning smoking in local businesses and removing panhandlers from Las Cruces streets.

Issues are especially stressful for city employees, Garza said, "when city council members are di-

" n o t pick sides or a team, but rather to be a fact-based resource (and) give them all as much information as we can provide."

After eight years as the city's public works director, six as a very hands-on assistant city manager and six as city manager, Garza said he is also looking forward to some privacy in his personal life— being able to go to the grocery store and the farmers' market with his family without having to stop and talk to dozens of people about city issues.

Garza said one of the things he is proudest of during his tenure with the city is the extension of Lohman Avenue east to Telshor Boulevard, to Foothills Road and on to Roadrunner Parkway when he was public works director. Using his skills as an engineer and strategist, he worked with multiple agencies to complete the massive project that helped expand Las Cruces to the East Mesa. Part of that project was getting Las Cruces Dam safely "notched and lowered" on its right side so Lohman Avenue could pass by, even though Garza said he was told, "You're never going to make that happen."

Garza also worked with a developer who built

Lohman Avenue at no cost to the city in exchange for the land where Laguna Seca Shopping Center is now located, he said.

Extending Lohman Avenue, Garza said, was "the most difficult yet rewarding project that I worked

From 'O Canada' to 'Go Aggies'

Longtime assistants look to make their mark on programs

Great moments in Canadian basketball history:

1891 – A young physical education instructor named John Naismith. born and raised in Canada, teaching in Springfield. Mass., invents the game of basketball.

1993 - The world is introduced to a young Canadian named Steve Nash, as his Santa Clara basketball team, a 15 seed in that year's NCAA tournament, upsets 2 seed and perennial powerhouse Arizona. Nash goes on to play 18 years in the NBA, win two MVP awards, and finish No. 3 on the all-time assists list 1995 – Canada joins the NBA, with two new franchises, the Vancouver Grizzlies and the Toronto Raptors. The Grizzlies would later move to Memphis.

2016 (?) - The New Mexico State University Aggies hire Canadian

Paul Weir as their 25th men's basketball coach.

That last one's premature but, best as anyone can tell, Weir is the first Canadian to be named head coach for an NCAA Division I men's team.

As a 13-year old in Toronto Weir began following Nash's career, and began developing his own love, passion and obsession for the game of basketball.

Weir has been with the Aggie program since 2007, when he was hired by Marvin Menzies, who last week left NMSU to be head coach at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas. Weir's recruiting efforts opened up the "Canadian Pipeline" of talent from north of the border to Las Cruces, including such Aggie Canadians as Daniel Mullings, a Western Athletic Conference Player of the Year, and more than 14-and-a-half feet of Bhullar — brothers Sim and Tanveer.

The past five years, Weir has been the Aggies' associate head coach and defensive coordinator.

NMSU Athletic Director Mario Moccia announced Weir's hiring at an April 26 press conference in the Pan American Center.

When Weir came to the podium to address the assembled crowd, he was visibly emotional and had to pause and compose himself before he could speak.

Then he quickly got on a roll.

Quoting and referencing figures as diverse as Winston Churchill and Justin Bieber, it was clear Weir was overwhelmed with joy and gratitude to be named head coach. It was also clear he saw the hiring as a destiny, a mission and a serious personal responsibility.

The Aggie players in the audience appeared pleased and happy for Weir.

Nine years in Las Cruces can turn a person crimson, and Weir is not only an Aggie at heart, but also for the record, having earned his master's degree at NMSU and he's now working on his doctorate. He met his wife, Alma, at NMSU. She's a Las Crucen, and so is their young son, Theodore, named for another of Weir's heroes, Theodore Roosevelt.

"Keep your eyes on the stars and your feet on the ground," Weir said at the announcement, quoting Roosevelt. "We've got our eyes on 1970."

The 1970 reference is. of course, a nod to the Aggies' 1970 Final Four appearance.

Weir's first task will be to fill out his coaching and advisory staff, which he hopes to accomplish in the next couple of weeks. He made one hire already.

"Lou Henson will be in an advisory role, and helping me personally." Weir said. "1970 is the goal." Henson, longtime Aggie coach, NCAA College Basketball Hall of Fame member and the architect of that 1970 Final Four team is a great place to start. . . .

This week another

longtime local assistant was elevated to a head coaching position when Mark Lopez was named football coach at Las Cruces High School.

Las Cruces may be the only city in America where a high school football coaching position is almost as high profile as the NCAA Division I men's basketball coaching position.

Expectations for Weir and Lopez are both high.

Aggie fans expect victories over Texas-El Paso and the University of New Mexico, conference titles and NCAA appearances. Bulldawg fans expect victories over Mayfield, district titles and state championships.

Let's all get out there and watch these two work.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Lost

A source of pride amongst cowboys is knowin' the lay of the land.

And any poor fool that gets lost they figger ain't much of a hand!

They said, "We'll all meet at Bull Crick!"

Then looked at me like a trainee! "Draw me a map and I'll find it! Columbus had nothin' on me!"

Daylight broke into my windshield, headed south and loaded for bear.

I turned at the Grasmere station I should'a shot myself right there!

Nothin' was like they described it, no mailbox where it should be,

No coyote hide on the fence post, now where's Mary's Crick s'posed to be?

Their map showed tourist attractions including, I swear, Noah's Ark! Little ol' tricklin' Sheep Creek was wider than Yellowstone Park!

I crossed the Cow and the Horse Crick and cricks named for Nickels and Dimes

Through Nit Crick, Louse Crick and Crab Crick, Crossed Willer Crick twenty-eight times!

I drove demented and crazy! A'chasin' my tail like a dog!

Coursing through desert and mountain, brush thicket and cattail bog!

Fighting back panic, I'm thinkin', 'I could die and never be found! Worse yet, I'll look like a gunsel who can't find his way outta town!

Harold was the boss of the truckers. I figgered he might set me right. So, I called him up on the two-way and explained my desperate plight.

He said, "Describe yer surroundings." I looked for a landmark somewhere.

"Ain't nothin' but rocks and sagebrush!" He said, "Sonny, yer almost there!"

Voting only for those citizens who care

Four years ago I wrote, "The election this year has felt like going to the dentist and having the same tooth filled every day for a whole year." It is even more so this time around. This election has brought out the worst in Americans rather than the best.

What is either forgotten or never learned by most Americans and the media is that the system of presidential elections is designed to sustain the party bosses and no one else. The media is not telling the truth to the American public.

What is the truth? Our founding leaders did not trust average citizens to select the president so we have rules allowing party bosses almost unlimited power to select who they want. Hilary Clinton will be the Democrat nominee regardless of the votes garnered by Sanders because of Super Delegates. Likewise, Republicans who think they have any control over the party bosses are mistaken.

I like Ted Cruz but realize that he and Donald Trump have little chance to win regardless of how I vote. The party bosses pull the levers at the convention. Occasionally the people's choice wins but not often.

Why did the founding leaders and the subsequent members of Congress make a system where the citizen on the street has little to say as to who will be running for president in the general election? They did not trust citizens to use good judgement. Hence, the Electoral College where influence has been used to steal elections.

Remember, only a quarter of American colonists were for the Revolution. A quarter of the colonists opposed them. And the remaining half of the colonists didn't care either way, they were too busy with their teenagers and making a living to care or take part.

Today the same is true. Half of all Americans either are not registered to vote or do not vote. America votes more for Dancing With The Stars than for president. Perhaps our citizens are not fit to select the winner.

> Several years ago on Election Day I was in a store. One person said that they voted for president. Another asked, "Who is running." That was after millions were spent on ads and television was 24/7 about the election.

Four years ago I wrote, "We, the people, have concentrated on the personal trivia of candidates and the untrue about them. We have not had an authentic dialog about our country's needs."

Still true. Lately people have been talking about how to get young people to vote. That's a population who can name every song from a rap artist but can't tell you when the War of 1812 happened.

How do you get young people to vote? By selling them on their own interest. I am always surprised that young men will register for selective service without the awareness they're in line for war if we need soldiers.

They look so surprised when I mention this to them and say. "Naw, can't happen to me." Well, of course it can happen. It has before and will again. I got a letter from President Nixon greeting me and sending me to an induction center on December 28, 1972. As luck would have it President Truman died two days earlier and they did not take me into the Army because it was a National Day of mourning for Truman. I spent two years in ROTC in college for which I'm glad.

We should not spend our time trying to get young people or, for that matter, anyone registered and to the polls. We should spend our time getting these people to care. If they care, they will register and vote. Caring, not voting, makes the democracy.

What do I hope for this election? I hope people of character and integrity win. regardless of party affiliation. I hope the will of the people triumphs over voter fraud, regardless of who wins. I hope leaders tackle the war on terror, social security, taxes, health care and education with an understanding that political solutions only work for political problems. Never use political solutions for anything else.

Vote if you care. If you do not care, please stay home and watch the stars dance.

on." It took three and one-half years (1998 to 2001) to complete and required multiple trips to Santa Fe and Albuquerque and many conversations with the United States Army Corps of Engineers and the state engineer, he said.

Garza also has been a visionary and driving force in the revitalization of downtown Las Cruces. He remembers the "yellow-brick road, the awnings and the giant walls at either end of the mall that characterized downtown for many years, and the widely held belief that 'downtown is dead."

Working with former Mayor Ruben Smith, community activist Heather Pollard and many others, Garza said engineering, planning, financing and creating a vibrant downtown "became a long-term dream of mine. I took their ideas and turned them into reality," he said.

"For over two decades I have worked with Robert on downtown revitalization," Pollard said. "With his incredible vision, creative problem solving and the ability to figure out how to see projects funded, Robert has guided the opening of Main Street, the new civic plaza and the entire southern portion of the Amador property. He is one of the most honest and respected city managers ever seen in the history of Las Cruces, and I know this, having worked with nine previous city managers. Las Cruces has loved Robert Garza," she said.

One of Garza's last projects with the city will be the multi-million dollar renovation of the historic Amador Hotel. Meeting as the Tax Increment Development District, the city council will consider a joint project between the city and GMB, Inc. for that redevelopment work, which will carry a price tag of about $5 million, Garza said. Pollard is the president of the Amador Hotel Foundation.

Garza, in fact, helped put the TIDD in place to bring local, state and federal funding to city projects. One of the projects it has funded, the downtown plaza, will open in August. Another project will reconfigure Church and Water streets from one-way to two-way traffic, beginning in 2017.

Over the years, Garza said he has emphasized customer service to city employees. "Give them what they want, plus one," he said. Customer service training and an annual ethical update have become mandatory for city employees on Garza's watch. He's even started a chartered Toastmasters club for city employees to help them hone their speaking skills.

Garza said "clarity and simplicity" have served him well as he has worked with six mayors and about 30 different city councillors during his career. Garza has mastered what he calls "the art of translation. I know what they're talking about, but I'm not necessarily hearing them say what they need to say."

Part of his role as city leader, he said, has been taking the ideas and proposals presented to him, breaking them down, simplifying them and explaining them "so people can understand."

"If you don't understand something well enough to simplify it, you don't understand it," Garza said.

As he retires from the city, Garza is one of 20 members of the 10,000-member ICMA selected to serve on its strategy-planning council, where he will bring the best practices he has helped perfect in a small city in the Chihuahua desert in southern New Mexico to communities around the world.

"In the coming years, as we see more happening downtown, more happening at the convention center and the aquatic center, as well as on existing streets and in other existing facilities, we will continue to know that Robert has set in motion a wide range of processes to benefit our hometown," Mayor Pro-Tem Greg Smith said.

Grider looks forward to return to Las Cruces

Q and A with country music star Josh Grider, a 1998 graduate of Las Cruces High School, about coming home to perform in the 2016 Las Cruces County Music Festival.

Bulletin: What is it like to come back to Las Cruces for an event like this, coming back to your home town and headlining the festival?

Josh Grider: As I've always said, coming home to play in Las Cruces is always a blast. It's where I learned to play guitar, wrote my first songs and fell head over heels in love with country music. It's always good to get back to your beginnings. It reminds me how far I've come, and how far I still want to go.

B: What songs will you do during the show?

JG: I'll pack as many songs in to the set as I can. We'll make sure to do plenty of stuff that people know, maybe a new one or two.

B: Have you written anything specifically for the country music festival?

JG: I have not written anything specific for the festival, but maybe I should. ... I still have time.

B: After you fly into the El Paso airport. what is it like to make that drive from El Paso to Las Cruces?

JG: That stretch of I-10 between El Paso and Las Cruces has been an emotional drive for me since I left home, from that first morning headed to Texas for college to the drive I'll make back for the festival. There have been times that it hurt so bad to leave, I could barely stand it, and others that I couldn't wait to be gone. What never changes though, is that comforting feeling of the Organs coming into view and passing the dairies and then the pecan orchards, and coming to the University exit and pulling up at my folks' house. For me, there are few things in life as grounding and comforting as coming home. Can't wait to be there ... soon.

Zimmerman and former state Rep. Rodolpho "Rudy" Martinez, a Democrat, will also be squaring off for the third time in three elections. Martinez defeated Zimmerman by 420 votes in 2012. Zimmerman defeated Martinez by 344 votes in 2014.

Little won the District 53 seat in 2010, defeating then incumbent Nathan Cote, a Democrat. Cote defeated Little in a rematch in 2012 and retired two years later. Little won the seat back in 2014. defeating Democrat Mariaelena Johnson.

Another interesting local House race may be in District 37, held by Dr. Terry McMillan, a Republican, since 2010. His opponent for the third consecutive time is Democrat Joanne Ferrary. He defeated her by nine votes in 2012 and by 409 votes in 2014

State Senate Pro-Tem Marv Kav Papen, D- Doña Ana, dean of the local legislative delegation, said she expects some close races for local House seats, and said, "the incumbent always has an edge."

"The Democrats want to take the House back." Papen said. "They're going to have to work really hard."

"We're very optimistic about every race down there," said New Mexico Republican Party Communications Director W. Tucker Keene.

The party, he said, has hired a field director to focus on Doña Ana County legislative races and to "have someone on the ground in that county." He said the state GOP has "a list of something like 10 races that we're paying

Two of the state Senate's most hotly contested races in 2016 likely will be in Las Cruces. "What you've really got is both parties trying to reclaim their heritage," Donisthorpe said.

Democrats will be trying to get the District 36 seat back that former state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia held from 1988 until 2012, when she was defeated by Republican Lee Cotter. Cotter, unopposed in this year's GOP primary, will face the winner of Democrats "may possibly get back" Cotter's seat, Papen said.

"That seat is in play," she said, adding that it's "a very tricky race" because all the candidates "bring something."

Republicans want back the District 37 seat they held for 20 years, until 2008, when four-term incumbent Leonard Lee Rawson was defeated by former state Sen. Steve Fischmann. Fischmann. a Democrat, retired after one term. Former Las Cruces Public Schools Board of Education member Bill Soules, also a Democrat, won the seat in 2008, defeating Republican Cathey Jo Alberson. This time around. Soules' Republican opponent is City Councillor Ceil Levatino.

"I think this is going to be a very tough race," Papen said. "Ceil knows the district. She's worked the district." Soules. Papen said, "was a very effective teacher. I think he's a very thoughtful legislator."

Keene said Republicans are "very excited about our chances" in the Soules-Levatino race, and are "very optimistic" about Cotter's chances for re-election.

In the House and Senate races, "the big difference between 2014 and 2016 is that a presidential election brings more Democrats and Independents out to vote, thereby making the Republicans' job more difficult," Donisthorpe said.

"The presidential year is going to bring out a lot of new voters," Keene said. The New Mexico primary "is going to be very important this year," he said. In other states' primaries, "voter turnout on the Republican side has been through the roof," Keene said.

The NMSU Dean's List Libbin: ACES has 'unique set of goals'

The Las Cruces Bulletin is taking a look at the deans of the various colleges at New Mexico State University

THIS WEEK – College of Agricultural, Environmental and Consumer Sciences Interim Dean James "Jim" Libbin

By Charlotte Tallman For the Bulletin

As interim dean of the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences (ACES) at New Mexico State University, James D. Libbin doesn't take his role lightly. After assuming the leadership position following Dean Lowell Catlett's retirement on July 1, 2015, Libbin hit the ground running.

"Even as an interim dean, you can't just say 'I am only here for a year.' You can't have a dead year in this college," said Libbin, who has served the college as associate dean and director of academic programs since 2008.

Prior to that appointment, he's been a professor in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Agricultural Business since 1979.

"We have a unique set of goals in this college," Libbin said. "Through our cooperative extension service, we are serving the entire state of New Mexico, and we are focusing on research and teaching that fits in with NMSU."

Libbin and the College of ACES are responsible for 50 offices and centers across New Mexico, including 35 county extension offices, three off-campus administrative offices and 12 agricultural science centers. Libbin said the college is constantly trying to find new ways to extend its mission, both across the state and internationally.

"We are really working on growing our international presence," he said. "We think international outreach and collaboration is part of our mission."

Part of that international collaboration is making sure food production is not only accessible, but is thriving, worldwide. To Libbin and many other agriculturists, that focus is important because the demand for food production over the next 25 years is expected to be equal to the demand of the past 12,000 years, leading Libbin to ask, "How can there be plenty and hungry at the same time?"

Another part of the college's mission is keeping up with current technology, genetics and crop breeding. Libbin said it is important to continue building the college on an industry, and not just disciplines.

Libbin's NMSU teaching, research and extension programs have been centered on agricultural accounting, farm and ranch business management and income tax management. He holds a bachelor's in agricultural science and a master's in agricultural economics, both from the University of Illinois, and a Ph.D. in economics from Iowa State University.

Libbin and his wife, Gail, have four children and three grandchildren. When Libbin's son was 6 years old, Libbin took on the role that eventually led to Scoutmaster with Boy Scouts of America.

Little did he or his wife know that he would remain actively involved in Boy Scouts even after his children were grown. Though no longer a Scoutmaster, he remains involved in his local troop, and serves as one of 26 area presidents in the U.S.

"I've been very happy. New Mexico has been tremendous to me and NMSU has been a tremendous place to have a career," Libbin said.

Mesilla Park listed in National Register of Historic Places

Bulletin Report

Mesilla Park was formally recognized as a historic district worthy of preservation by the National Park Service (NPS) on April 12. The district was also listed in the New Mexico State Register of Historic Places two months earlier on Feb. 12, said Janet Clements, Mesilla Park resident and organizer of the effort. The historic neighborhood was developed in the late 1800s and is among the first suburbs of Las Cruces to be developed as a complete town with commercial, industrial and residential areas, all organized along the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe rail line that runs alongside South Main Street. The town site's founder, George D. Bowman, built his red brick home in 1892 that still stands at the corner of Bowman Street and Conway Avenue.

Other historic structures still standing include the Lester/Feather home (1892), the Ralph W. Goddard home (1918), the station master's home (1919), Mesilla Park Depot (1925), Mesilla Park Elementary School (1907; now the Frank O'Brien Papen Community Center), and the brick St. James' Church (1911) with its adobe predecessor across the street (1901).

College hosts research, creative arts symposium

By Kristie Garcia

The New Mexico State University Honors College is hosting the 21st annual Undergraduate Research and Creative Arts Symposium Friday, April 29. Open to the public, URCAS is from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Corbett Center Student Union ballrooms on the third floor.

Undergraduate honors students will display their research projects on large poster exhibits and will also read from their written reports. The poster displays will include summaries of the students' data, research methods, analysis and results.

Honors College Dean Miriam Chaiken said participation in URCAS is beneficial to students for several reasons. Not only does the symposium provide undergraduate students with valuable professional experience, but it recognizes their research and creative projects.

"It's also a great resume builder, particularly for those who are sophomores and juniors who are possiSara Kelley's and Kevin Perez's URCAS presentation will explain the biodiversity of arachnids in the Nutt Grasslands of New Mexico and whether solar facilities have an effect on the ecology of arachnids.

bly thinking ahead to a graduate school in another year or so," Chaiken said.

Nearly 100 students will present their work at this year's URCAS, including 12 students who studied various aspects of climate change in Hawaii during spring break. The 12 students are enrolled in the Sundt Honors Seminar course with NMSU Biology Regents Professor Michele Nishiguchi.

"Our group had two main goals for our presentation at URCAS," said Sundt Seminar student Jacqueline Kieltyka. "The first goal was to synthesize all the information we obtained in Hawaii, including the perspectives from the fishpond, the perspectives from the fisheries and the perspectives from National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration and tie that all together into a consensus of what people should be doing for sustainable fishing.

"The next goal was to apply those practices we found in Hawaii and make them apply elsewhere, so we could take what we learned in Hawaii and have an over-arching goal for global sustainable fishing practices."

Sundt Seminar student Ryan Kirby and his group's URCAS presentation will focus on socioeconomics, specifically, how climate change affects the financial stability of a place like Hawaii.

"One thing that we were interested in was looking at how environmental policy – in terms of preserving the corals and continuing economic growth in a sustainable manner – played out in a place were it was applicable to corals," Kirby said. "The people at the coral restoration area we visited were using an economic evaluation tool to help predict the monetary value of corals in specific regions."

From coral to alfalfa, and from the blue-throated macaw to spiders, URCAS will have much to offer. Sara Kelley's and Kevin Perez's presentation will explain the biodiversity of arachnids in the Nutt Grasslands of New Mexico.

"It's important to monitor the effects of solar facilities on the environment, because that's the whole point of switching from fossil fuels to renewable energies," Kelley said. "We decided to look specifically at arachnids because they're a stabilizing agent in their habitats in their ecosystem."

Perez said they are in the preliminary stages of calculating the number of different arachnid families that are found in the northern Chihuahuan Desert area near Hatch, New Mexico. "We want to determine whether the diversity of spiders changes as you go further out from the solar facility, or if the facility itself has no effect," he said.

Not only are students involved in URCAS from a research perspective, but students in the Art 355 Special Topics in Design honors class designed the artwork for the event. Winners of the 2016 URCAS art design contest include Kathryn-Mae Eiland, Jessica Lopez, Daisy Martinez, Hector Sarellano and Miguel Valle.

A highlight of this year's symposium will be a presentation by Debra Knapp, director of dance at NM-SU's College of Education, who will speak about the research project Methods in Learning Kinesthetically. MILK is being conducted at Fairacres Elementary School and involves research regarding whether using movement while learning helps students retain information better and, in turn, improves grades and test scores. Also, NMSU's Sol y Arena flamenco and classical Spanish dance company will perform at the event.

Internship program celebrates accreditation

The Dietetic Internship Program at New Mexico State University is celebrating its recent accreditation by the Accreditation Council for Education in Nutrition and Dietetics, making the program one of only two accredited dietetic internships in New Mexico.

The program was created in 2010 by Wanda Eastman and Carol Turner, two professors in the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences. ACEND, the accrediting agency for the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics, accepted the program for candidacy for accreditation in 2011.

In a program designed to touch the hearts of the most cynical of teens, Shattered Lives takes students on a journey of death.

In a staged crash last week outside of Mayfield High School, students (pretend) die as a (pretend) drunk driver has crashed her (set up) car into another (set up) vehicle. Staged injuries, bloody and graphic, are created.

In the meantime, selected students are removed one-by-one from classrooms inside the school as their obituaries are read to the rest of the class. Then the school's students are taken out to witness the mock-up crash and watch as police and rescue personnel do their jobs at the scene in the parking lot.

These "dead" students then are taken on a journey through the system, including a visit to the morgue, to learn more about what happens following a DWI. Finally, they attend an assembly, dressed in black and wearing white paint on their faces, "dead" to their fellow students.

The assembly, held Friday, April 22, brought officials from all walks of life together to talk to the gym full of students about the dangers of drunk driving with a focus on the families of those involved.

"Think," Doña Ana County District Attorney Mark D'Antonio asked the "dead." "Whose lives did you shatter?"

D'Antonio said he would pay for the rides of substance-impaired students, so they could get home after prom, or any time. They should call Uber and use his name; they could get up to a $15 ride for free.

Doña Ana County Teen Court Director Toni Hernandez said Las Cruces has been found to be the drunkest city in the state of New Mexico and begged the students not to add to that statistic.

In addition to officials and other speakers, some of the "dead" students read out letters to their parents and some of their parents read letters to their "dead" students, bringing home the point of Shattered Lives.

Board approves Amador Hotel renovation project

By Mike Cook

Meeting as the city's Tax Increment Development Board (TIDD) on Monday, April 25, the Las Cruces City Council unanimously approved a resolution adopting a $6.5 million development agreement for the city block currently occupied by the Amador Hotel and Mv Brother's Place restaurant in downtown Las Cruces and referred to as the Amador Hotel site.

The agreement calls for the TIDD to provide the funds from hold-harmless gross receipts tax money on an incremental basis to GMB Development NM LLC, represented by Las Cruces developer Max Bower, in a joint project among TIDD, the city and GMB.

With the money, GMB will purchase the land now occupied by My Brother's Place and parking lots north of the restaurant and hotel (the city already owns the hotel.

GMB will then begin renovation with the demolition of My Brother's Place and the parking lots, along with the non-historic portions of the hotel. That work could begin as early as this October, Bower said, and should take 12 months to complete, pending the reconfiguration of Church and Water streets from oneto two-way traffic, another TIDD project which is slated to begin in 2017.

GMB will then construct buildings on the site to house the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau, a full-service restaurant and bar, a martini bar, a pub and taproom and a coffee shop. Bower said the development will also include an outdoor plaza and theatre that could host more than 1,000 people. He said the project will include 250 parking spaces.

When construction is complete, ownership of the property will be transferred to the city, Bower said. He said GMB is working with private developers on the lease of the restaurant and the other businesses for which space will be constructed. However, GMB is not obligated under the agreement to guarantee that the buildings will be leased.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he supports the project, but wanted some assurance that the city would get a return on its investment. "We need to have some leases here," Miyagishima said. "Before we start giving you (GBM) a whole lot of money, we need to see something," he said. "I don't want you to think I'm the bad guy here. I have to take care of the citizens' money."

Mayor Pro-Tem and TIDD board member Greg Smith proposed an amendment to the original resolution based on a suggestion by City Manager Robert Garza that the city manager be authorized to negotiate the development agreement – rather than sign – the agreement on behalf of the city and TIDD. The amendment was unanimously approved by the board.

The TIDD board then unanimously approved the amended resolution. The city council will vote on the allocation of the funds for the project at its May 2 regular meeting.

Approving the development project means the city is "getting to that vision we've had for downtown for a long time," Smith said.

The project is "another good example of a public-private partnership," Councillor Gill Sorg said.

"This is the county seat, said Doña Ana County Commissioner Billy Garrett, who is an ex-officio member of the TIDD board. "I want it to be a great county seat. He said the board should support the project as part of the development of all of downtown.

Street reconfiguration set for 2017

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council as the Tax Increment Development Board received a detailed update on the plan to convert Church and Water and other streets in downtown Las Cruces from one-way to two-way traffic.

The conversion is necessary because people currently "go 'through' downtown," said city Downtown Coor-

State Farm Fire and Casualty Company State Farm General Insurance Company Bloomington, IL dinator Andy Hume. The city's goal is to get them to "go 'to' downtown," he said.

Hume said the project's final design is now being completed and construction should begin in 2017. Project funds must be spent by December 2018, he said. Hume said the "full build out" will cost $16 million.

In addition to two-way conversion, the project will also include street reconstruction, development of three callecitas (decorative walkways that pass through downtown) and the addition of a new street connecting Lohman and Amador avenues in the downtown area, said Matt Dyer of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper Engineering.

Streets impacted in full or in part by the construction, in addition to Church and Water, will be Main, Bowman, May, Griggs, Las Cruces, Court and Hadley, Hume said.

Area students display their money smarts

Bulletin report

Note: Look for the winning essays from the Money Smart middle school competition in the May 6 edition of the Bulletin.

Volunteers gathered Downtown in front of the Rio Grande Theatre to kick off Las Cruces' second annual Money Smart week, a week dedicated to fostering financial literacy throughout the community.

The morning featured a ribbon cutting, the awarding of prizes to students who entered the Money Smart essay competition and games in which children practiced their skills in the wise use of money.

Padraic Nielsen, Paris Gonzalez and Kendra Van Dorn were the winning essayists and received personal computing devices courtesy of Best Buy.

There were a total of 127 entries for the Money Smart Week Middle School Essay Contest on the topic "What is a budget and why is it important?"

"We were very excited with our response," said Eldelisa Nava operations director of the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. "But more than that, it excited us to know that the students and their parents were having conversations about this topic."

The top 15 were given a gallon-size bag of shredded money and asked to create an art project. The projects are on display at the Doña Ana County Government Center on Motel Boulevard.

In 2015, Money Smart Week presentations reached 846 people in Doña Ana County. Some 90 percent found the sessions valuable or very valuable. In addition, 57 percent indicated they were very likely to change their financial management behavior, while 26 percent said they were likely to do so.

Money Smart Week began in 2002 with an initiative by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and has since spread to all 50 states.

Sher-Wood adds staff to assist builders, homeowners

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

When Justin Sherwood arrived in Las Cruces in 2004. he tossed a kitchen cabinet in the back of his truck and drove out to call on residential builders.

"I started driving around to job sites and asking who the builder was," he said.

Sherwood said he also looked at all the building permits being pulled and contacted every builder.

"Now I know all the builders." he said. "I do cabinets for the majority of new homes built in Las Cruces. We take very good care of builders," he said. "Our design and sales team hand holds throughout the process. If there's any question, they know we'll take care of them."

Although the housing bubble burst several years after he opened Sher-Wood Cabinetry in Las Cruces, Sherwood adapted to change and grew his business.

"We kind of saw it coming and tried to get in with more production builders," he said.

Sher-Wood also nurtured its retail business to weather the downturn.

Since the downturn, Sher-Wood has been doing more direct-to-customer business for homeowners who are tackling a remodeling project, he said.

Sher-Wood sells and installs KraftMaid, Sollid, Legacy, Oakcraft and Merillat cabinets, all of which offer multiple lines.

"Within all that, we can take care of everybody from a tight budget to all the bells and whistles," Sherwood said.

Moving and growing

In his first 12 years in Las Cruces, the cabinetmaker from Mesa, Arizona, has sustained his fledgling business and growing family.

"We did $500.000 in revenue our first year. This year I expect it will be $3.5 to $4 million." Sherwood said.

Sher-Wood's first location was at the corner of Seventeenth Street. He said he established the business in a corner of his father-in-law's office.

"We ended up taking over the front as a meager showroom,"

Anna Lueras-Kariem, center, has joined Sher-Wood Cabinetry to help Las Cruces homeowners organize their stuff with systems for closets, pantries and home offices.

he said. "Then we moved to Picacho Avenue and set up an actual showroom.

Sher-Wood later relocated to 609 E. Amador Ave.

The visibility of that showroom on a high-traffic thoroughfare has contributed to the company's continuing rise in sales, Sherwood said.

"We have been in this building two and a half years, and I feel we're finally where we're meant to be," he said. "Before we didn't really expect to get a lot of business from the showroom."

Stretch, stretch, stretch

"When we first came to town it was just me," he said. "Now it's up to 14 — actually 15 — because I hired a new employee this morning."

He said he recently brought a field supervisor on board as a go-between working with both the designers and the customers to make sure the process goes smoothly for both builders and retail customers.

"What we do is stretch, stretch, stretch — until we hit the next plateau," Sherwood said. "Then we ask, what do we need to do to keep climbing to another level."

Into the closet

The latest expansion is into

Mary ladicicco, Lou Ellen Kay of Las Cruces Academy, Jerry ladicicco and Vince Gutschick

closets and organizing systems for home offices, pantries, bathrooms and entertainment centers.

"We'll work anywhere there's a cabinet needed," Sherwood said. "We don't discriminate against any cabinetry."

He said the company branched out into organizing systems that incorporate cabinetry when customers began asking if they did closets.

"We looked around and we found there's not a lot to be had if you want someone to help you with closets," Sherwood said.

Anna Lueras-Kariem, who has 20 years experience in the building industry, has joined the company to launch the closet organizing service.

Sher-Wood's suppliers for closet components include Organized Living.

The company tackles closets of all sizes and for all budgets. Sherwood said. One recent project was outfitting a 20 x 15 foot master closet for an addition a homeowner was building.

"It was gorgeous," Sherwood said, adding the shoe racks were "amazing" and there were doors to cover out-of-season apparel.

The bill for the over-the-top closet exceeded $30,000, he said.

What's behind there?

Another luxury item he finds "cool and unique" is hidden rooms that become visible when a bookcase swivels to reveal another space.

Hidden rooms are often used to store valuables, Sherwood said.

"For some people it's just a novelty," he said. '

Sherwood said he personally designs most of the hidden rooms. Other projects are the prevue of the company's three designers and five installers.

Cabinets then and now

Sherwood said he's a fifth generation native of Mesa and learned his woodworking skills from his grandfather, a teacher at Mesa High School.

He began taking part-time cabinet-making jobs while still in high school.

Sherwood later started his own cabinet-making business in Mesa, because he had a passion for the craft. But the business got bigger and it became difficult to find the skilled employees he needed.

A timely visit to New Mexico turned out to be a life changer.

"We had visited our in-laws over Fourth of July in Roswell. We had been in Las Cruces and I really liked what I saw.

"We went back, and by August we had moved," he said. "We had four little kids. It was nuts."

The family now includes six kids.

Sherwood said his wife of 20 years, Amy, is his business partner and home schools the three youngest Sherwoods.

Amy Sherwood also chose the cabinetry when the family remodeled their kitchen two years ago.

She chose white Shaker-style cabinets and quartz counter tops to replace the home's original 30-year old ones, which Justin Sherwood described as "gross."

The tragedy of the anti-commons interferes with innovation

Finding the right balance difficult

Property rights are a funny thing. Without them you get the "tragedy of the commons," the well-known phenomenon in which multiple individuals, acting independently, deplete a shared resource, even when it is not in anyone's interest to do so. It arises because each individual races the others to exploit the resource before it is depleted.

The solution is to eliminate the commons by assigning property rights, thereby giving individuals an incentive to conserve for the future.

But you can go too far in the opposite direction, assigning property rights that inhibit cooperation.

This can happen when there are too many owners making mutually beneficial agreements difficult, a phenomenon that has come to be known as the "tragedy of the anti-commons."

The classic example is patents.

If a product requires multiple components or techniques, each patented by a different individual, then negotiating with each owner becomes difficult and time consuming. The consequence is that useful products may not be produced.

A single microchip, for example, might embody up to 5,000 different patents. A single holdout can scuttle a project.

Inappropriate awarding of patents can create the "patent trolls," companies that buy up patents then seek to enforce the patents beyond their true scope. Often the troll waits until the product is already successful, then presents the innovator with a bill for a licensing fee.

The innovator has the choice of entering into the licensing agreement, discontinuing the product or engaging in costly litigation that it may not win.

The tragedy of the anti-commons can arise in other settings.

I share a cul-de-sac with 12 other homeowners. Each of us owns the road in front of our house. Said road needs repaving. Each of us could repave our own little piece, but that is wasteful and expensive. Much better would be to have the entire road repaved at the same time.

But it's not going to happen because organizing the neighbors to each pay their share is too much trouble, at least so far. Perhaps if that pothole in front of my house continues to grow...

The problem with both patent law and my neighborhood road is an inappropriate attempt to privatize what are actually public goods.

With patents, it is technology. Once the information underlying a new technology is understood, anyone with the time and energy to do so can learn the new technology and use it to create products. That is, except to the extent they are prevented by patent laws.

Here is where the balance needs to be struck. Patents are necessary to incentivize innovation and invention. But, if trivial or obvious innovations are allowed to be patented, all that is accomplished is the enablement of patent trolls.

Similarly, the problem with my neighborhood road is that it is owned in chunks rather than as a single unit. Better would have been to have, say, the county own the road then charge the residents a fee when paving was needed.

All this illustrates the main point, which is that property rights need to be such as to promote social wellbeing. Neither a system where all property is owned privately nor a system where all is owned in common is best, but rather property rights should be arranged so as to promote the social interest.

Lopez takes over LCHS football

Bulletin report

Mark Lopez, 41, an assistant football coach for the last 18 years at Las Cruces

High School, has been selected as the school's new head football coach. LCPS Athletics Director Ernest Viramontes said Lopez will replace Bulldawg Coach Jim Miller who is retiring at the end of this school year from Las Cruces High School.

"I think the way I look at. I was really lucky to work with (Miller)," Lopez said. "He is obviously one of the best coaches in the history of the state. I was able to learn under him and not be in a rush to go make a name for myself."

Lopez has been the Bulldawgs offensive coordinator since 2007 and he will continue to call the offense. The LCHS team has won three state titles with Lopez coaching the offense.

Lopez changed the Bulldawgs' offensive system following the 2011 season to an approach that allowed the offense to change route concepts at the line of scrimmage based on defensive alignment. The Bulldawgs went 23-2 and won two straight state championships in 2012-13.

Lopez has also coached special teams and the secondary at LCHS, officials said.

Lopez said he will not make wholesale changes, but he plans to put his own stamp on the program that Miller built into a consistent state title contender.

points a game. NM State ranked 11th nationally in field goal percentage defense, as opponents shot just 39.2 percent from the floor – NM State's lowest since the 1960-61 season and fourth-best in program history.

In 2014-15, the Aggies allowed the opposition only 59.8 points a game, ranking 21st nationally in scoring defense. NM State held three opponents under 40 points in the 14-15 campaign, all ranking in the top 10 of fewest points allowed by an Aggie team since 1950.

In addition to his defensive work, Weir also directed the recruiting efforts for the Aggies. He was responsible for signing Daniel Mullings, the first WAC Player of the Year in school history and first AP All-American in 11 years at NM State in 2014. Mullings is the only player in school history to start on fourstraight NCAA Tournament teams. He also landed Sim Bhullar, twotime WAC Tournament MVP and the first Aggie in 24 years to play in the NBA. Bhullar was the first player of Indian descent in NBA history.

Weir came to NM State in 2007 after two seasons as the director of basketball operations at Iowa, where he served under Steve Alford. In 2005-06, his first season at Iowa City, the Hawkeyes won 25 games on their way to a Big Ten Tournament Championship.

He got his start in collegiate basketball as an assistant for Mike McConathy at Northwestern State (La.) in 2004-05. The Demons went 21-12 and won the Southland Conference regular season title.

Weir served as the head coach at Don Bosco Catholic High School in Toronto, Canada, posting a 41-32 record before entering the collegiate ranks. His 2002-03 team was ranked ninth in the greater Toronto area.

Weir was an outstanding player as well, gaining regional and city allstar honors as a point guard and team captain at Iona Catholic Secondary School before going on to play at York University (Toronto, Canada) in 1998-99, where he was the starting point guard for the Lions as a freshman.

Weir graduated with honors while earning his bachelor's degree from York in 2004. He earned his master's degree in health and human performance from Northwestern State in 2005. added a second master's degree in sports psychology from Iowa in 2010 and a third master's degree in business administration from New Mexico State in 2012. He is currently enrolled in the Educational Leadership Doctoral Program at NM State.

Aggie baseball falls 10-4 to The Lobos

Bulletin Report

New Mexico State dropped the third game of the Rio Grande Rivalry Series to New Mexico, 10-4, in Albuquerque on Tuesday, April 26.

The Lobos jumped on the board early in the first inning. With the winds blowing straight out to right, Carl Stajduhar hit a ball to right that the strong winds carried over the fence for a solo home run.

The Aggies tied up the game in the third as Mason Fishback reached on an E5 throwing error to lead off the inning. Zak Felix poked a ball through the right side of the infield for a base hit, moving Fishback to second. Daniel Johnson scored Fishback with a single to center field, knotting the score at one run apiece.

UNM retook the lead in the bottom of the fourth. The tie-breaking run came in on a base hit up the middle.

Things began to unravel for NM State in the fifth. Dalton Shalberg got a ground out and a line out to start the inning. UNM drew a full count walk for the first Lobo base runner of the inning, and advanced to second on a wild pitch during the next at-bat. UNM drew another walk to put two runners on with two outs. During the next at-bat, the Lobos attempted a double steal, and the runner going to third looked to be gunned down by Fishback. Unfortunately the umpire ruled that Trey Stine bobbled the ball on the catch, thus not making the tag in time. After that, UNM hit a shot to second with Zak Felix throwing short of first, allowing two runs to score. Next, Carl Stajduhar hit his second homer of the day to left, this one a two-run blast. After five innings, the Aggies trailed 6-1.

Matters only got worse in the sixth, as UNM led off with a single to short. During the next atbat, a ball was hit to short with L.J. Hatch throwing to second for the out, in hopes of turning the fourth double play of the game for the Aggies. Unfortunately, Felix was unable to field the relay cleanly with all runners safe on the play. The first run of the inning scored on a single through the left side. A double to right center scored two more runs. The final run of the inning came in on a single to right field. After six innings, the Aggies trailed 10-1.

NM State attempted a comeback in the eighth and ninth, with Daniel Johnson leading off the eighth with a single to short. Greg Popylisen followed suit with a single to short as well. Both Johnson and Popylisen pulled off a double steal to put them in scoring position with one out. Dan Hetzel grounded out to second, scoring Johnson. Popylisen scored on a wild pitch during the next at-bat, putting the score at 10-3.

The Aggies added one more run in the ninth, as Mason Fishback led off with a single to right. Trey Stine followed with a single to short. Fishback scored on a wild pitch, putting the score at 10-4. Unfortunately, the comeback was cut short with back-to-back strikeouts to end the game.

The Aggies are back at home Friday to Sunday, April 29-May 1 as they host first place Sacramento State in a three-game weekend series.

Knowledge is power: If you know how to play it gives you a winning edge

Yogi Berra, bless his soul, used to say that "ninety percent of the game is half mental." In a way I'm sure he was right. But "mental" is sometimes a vague and awfully general concept. According to my own personal world view of sports, "mental" suggests a multiplicity of factors and dimensions, which include (at the very least) cognition, memory, personal history, sensory utilization, perception, judgement, relevant knowledge, emotions and personality.

Regardless what sport you're talking about, the totality of how much a competitor knows about himself, the game and other factors, goes a long way to determining his level of success. The late golf legend Tommy Armour made this slightly oversimplified point when he said: "All golf is divided into three parts; the strokes, the course and the opponent." He believed that the more you know about each of these, the more you might win.

Let's start with how much you actually know about your golf swing. One interesting aspect of this factor is that most recreational golfers have never had their swings recorded and analyzed by video. Never having seen their golf swing, golfers think they know what they're doing but don't know for certain. If you don't understand your swing, you can't grasp certain tendencies and limitations to overcome them. For example, famous golf instructor Jim McLean notes that certain points of the swing deserve to be called in his terminology "death moves." He says a "death move is an action or position that is so far from ideal that it will cause you to hit poor shots forever." Relatively few everyday golfers even realize such a violation of golf swing fundamentals that is so dramatic. What concerns me is so few even care.

Intimate knowledge of your equipment, its advantages and shortcomings, is critical if we desire to play competent golf. A lot of golfers buy clubs without checking whether the shaft composition (steel or graphite), stiffness, length, weight and flex point are appropriate for their swing speed and style.

Do you know the loft and lie angle of every clubface in your set? Many iron sets come with a three iron through pitching wedge, but most mature players shouldn't even carry a 3 or 4 iron in their bag.

Do you know the best wedge combination that most fits your game? Should you carry a regular wedge, gap wedge, sand wedge and lob wedge? Which other club or clubs would you eliminate? And what about your putter? Do you swing your putter with an "open door/closed door" motion or a straight-back-and-through move or are you a "pop" type putter with an abbreviated stroke? The length of the putter, the head type (e.g. mallet or blade) and the shaft placement (heel or center shafted) are all variables for different putting styles. The bottom line is you have to do some research and studying (read the literature and talk to smart people) and then as a last measure let trial and error tell you what is best for you.

Along the same lines of knowing your swing and knowing your equipment is knowing your game. Are you a risk-taker, a deliberate analyst, a fairways-and-greens kind of player, or perhaps a golfer to whom winning the bet is everything? Just as every golfer has a different physical makeup, requiring certain unique individual swing adjustments, every golfer has a unique personality, demonstrated in predictable tendencies and behaviors. Yet, I have found that golfers fall into certain categories or stereotypes, and usually they are not too hard to figure out.

The point is, if you know your inner makeup and know your game, and play it, chances are you'll do well. Know what you do best and play your game, play to your strengths. Knowing your game certainly includes grasping the distances you hit each club (on average, normally), where your frequent misses land, how you handle adversity, and much more. Get in touch with your golf. In part two we'll look at your knowledge of your own emotions and what role they play.

NMSU team doctor hits the target

By Tiffany Acosta For the Bulletin

Between practicing medicine for 36 years, assisting on the sidelines at athletic events or volunteering in the community, many people in the Las Cruces community likely know Dr. William Baker. But did you know "Doc Baker" is an award-winning marksman?

Baker, team physician and medical director for New Mexico State University's athletic department for the past 26 years, has participated in Cowboy Action Shooting since 2002. A hobby that includes old guns and costumes has filled a trophy case with belt buckles for Baker, who was honored at the Winter Range National Championship in February in Arizona.

"This year I was nominated and given an award for the Classic Cowboy of the Year for 2015, which is to me quite an honor," Baker said.

An interest in the Old West along with a gift of a Colt revolver included in a patient's will helped start his hobby. When the patient's brother gave Baker the gun, he remembered the patient's words 'you always looked like a cowboy, you need a cowboy gun.'

After researching Cowboy Action Shooting, Baker found a shooting club in Truth or Consequences, New Mexico, that didn't conflict with the Aggies' football schedule.

Dr. William Baker, left, New Mexico State University athletics team physician, aka "Doc Baker," and a friend, Michael Phillips, aka "Four Bucks," participated at the Single Action Shooting Society Winter Range National Championship in February in Arizona. Baker was named the Classic Cowboy of the Year for 2015.

"Because of my doing athletics, I'm not here on Fridays and Saturdays. This club happened to shoot on Sundays. I learned about shooting and got into the sport that way."

Competing in the Single Action Shooting Society's Classic Cowboy category, participants are required to wear a costume that includes items such as chaps, spurs and hats; shoot one-handed; fire a .40-caliber or bigger; and shoot a specific type of pistol, rifle and shotgun. In the last few years, Baker has placed in the top 10 at the national and world championships. While NMSU football scheduling can conflict with shooting competitions, later this month Baker will travel to St. George, Utah, to compete in the Four Corners Regional Shoot, before ending his shooting cycle for the year at the world championships in Edgewood, New Mexico, in the end of June.

When Baker is not shooting with a local club, "The Picacho Posse," on Saturdays, he can be found at NMSU athletic events.

Before working with the Aggies, Baker worked with the local high schools. His tenure started at NMSU in 1990 when Ricky Mendini, the head athletic trainer at that time, and Dr. Robert Stack cornered Baker.

"I made sure my wife gave them her permission that I did this and they said sure. I have been working with them ever since," Baker said. "It's kind of interesting that when I got started in medicine, sports medicine was not a residency, not a fellowship that even existed and that has all developed in those ensuing years."

NMSU Assistant Athletics Director and Head and support that has allowed the athletics department to follow the best health care practices. "He is the guiding force of our Sports Medicine

Athletic Trainer Mike O'Larey said NMSU owes Baker for his leadership

Department," O'Larey said. "His focus is on the health and well being of our student-athletes. He does what is best for each person he sees."

"I like working with the healthy athletes because they want to get better and participate. That's what is fun about doing it," Baker said.

Additionally, as a member of the board of trustees for the Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine, Baker said he is excited for the school's opening in fall 2016.

"I think it's one of the neatest things that's happened in this community in a long, long time," Baker said. "I think it is going to help the university expand and grow. I think it's going to help our community, and I think it's going to help the Southwest community, because it will provide an additional source for physicians and physician education that hasn't been available before " here and that culture is something we don't want to change at all," Lopez said. "What may change is just how that message is delivered. My personality is a little different. I have helped develop some of that structure that we have in place now. Strategically, we will look at some different things, but we have always been tweaking things here or there."

Lopez is a 1992 LCHS graduate and Miller was his position coach his last two years as a player. His father won a state basketball championship in 1959 at LCHS and his brother James played quarterback on the Bulldawgs 1999 and 2000 Las Cruces state championship teams.

"It's huge for me and my family," Lopez said. "We have lived the Bulldawg life for so long. That goes for my kids, my wife, my brother, my parents. It means the world to me to stay loyal to the school and the program for this long and be rewarded with this opportunity. I'm excited to keep the legacy alive so to speak."

Lopez has also been an assistant baseball coach for the past 19 years, which is a role that he will no longer fulfill following this season. He also teaches physical education at Las Cruces High School.

Downtown Cruces ready for Avenue Art

By Mike Cook

B2

Las Cruces artist Bob Diven gave a how-to demonstration on Saturday morning, April 23 for the artists competing in the fifth annual Avenue Art, which will be held beginning at 7 a.m. on Saturday, April 30 Downtown on Main Street.

Diven said 16 teams of artists have signed up to compete this year in three categories: young artists (elementary and middle school-age students), high school and college students and professionals, for ages 24 and above. Cash prizes will be awarded to winners in each category, and to an audience favorite.

Positive Solar Energy is sponsoring the artwork Diven will do for the event. He created Avenue Art and serves as its artistic director, but he won't be competing.

Diven said Friends of the Organ Mountain-Desert Peaks National Monument (FOMD-PNM) is sponsoring artist Meg Freyermuth in the competition. She is FOMDPNM's first ever artist in residence. Other artists will also have sponsors at the event

Diven came up with the idea for Avenue Art after winning the grand prize (for his painting "Rex Awakes") in the El Paso Chalk the Block Downtown Art Festival in 2011. He also won best of show and best original painting for a cowgirl likeness he created in Denver's first ever Chalk Art Festival in 2003.

Diven said artists will begin signing in at 6 a.m. and will start their street paintings at 7 a.m. The work will continue until 2 p.m., with an awards ceremony beginning at 2:15 p.m.

He suggested visitors come early to watch the artists start their paintings, then wander the Farmers Market just north of the festival, have breakfast or lunch and come back several times to watch the paintings progress.

Diven said artists can use chalk, pastels and tempura paint (a water-based paint that is often used to create a base coat) for their paintings, but no permanent materials are allowed.

Each participating artist or team of artists has a five-foot by five-foot or four-foot by six-foot (either rectangular or horizontal) section of asphalt to work with. Artists must also deal with whatever weather conditions are present on the day of the festival.

Diven said there will be a special non-competition area for little kids to draw in during the festival. These "aspiring artists" see others creating art on the sidewalk, and, with special chalk supplied by Diven, they can join in.

Blurring the lines between graffiti, art

By Dawn Franco For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Local artists and shop owners are preparing for the 5th annual graffitiand-hip-hop-driven art show.

The "Illegal? Arrowsoul Art Show" is three days of live art, music and culture Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 5-7 with the main events at Barricade Culture Shop, 608 S. Solano Drive.

Artists Saba Pate and Logan Howard, owners of Barricade Culture Shop and past organizers of the event, expect the festival to attract regional artists, families and community.

The event begins Thursday, May 5, with a presentation at New Mexico State University along with guest speakers, live art and hip hop performances. Friday, May 6, there will be a gallery opening at the Branigan Cultural Center showcasing various artists, including Howard. Saturday, May 7, is a block party with emcee battles, live painting competitions, and musical entertainment as well as a skate competition.

Each year organizers strive to make the event bigger, bringing in more attendees, and this is the first year since its inception that Barricade will host.

"Among some of the awesome benefits that Barricade Culture Shop has presented doing community events like Illegal is really a blessing," Howard said. "It is always nice to feel like you're doing something bigger than yourself.

"The only way to really thrive is to do it as a community so why not have fun while doing it?," he said. "Barricade seems to be turning out to be a place for events like this to happen and I hope that this momentum continues and we can help each other, as a community, blossom."

The event surrounds the concept of street art and presenting graffiti in a more positive aspect – less vandalism association and more artistic appreciation – as well as supporting music and culture.

"It's criminal (graffiti), it's all those negative portrayals, negative words you know, and me, as an artist, a graffiti artist, or street artist, or aerosol artist, or whatever people classify it as. The term graffiti is illegal. Just hearing that word, graffiti can bring up all kinds of different feelings for different people," Saba said.

'The Drowsy Chaperone' is NMSU theater at its very best

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

You know any show that opens with Brandon Brown on stage is going to be great, and the New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Department production of "Drowsy Chaperone" is no exception.

As "man in chair," Brown welcomes the audience into his living room and into his own private fantasy world as he brings to life the fictitious 1928 musical from which this show takes its name. Brown, one of the most gifted performers in this part of the world, makes you laugh, makes you think and even makes you cry a little at the end. This is a part he was born to play.

Everyone else in the cast – all 15 of them – is an NMSU student. And, in this ensemble cast, everyone was superb.

I am certain there's not another actor who brings the combination of acrobatic skills (back flips and roller skating), talent and sweetness to the part of the young groom, Robert Martin, that Austin Parrish does. Patrick Leyton, in what I believe is only his second show on the NMSU stage, is delightfully at sea as Martin's best man, George. And, he holds his own as a singer and dancer in "Cold Feets," his terrific duet with Parrish.

Cailtin Artrip was enchantingly ecstatic, then heartbroken, the ecstatic again, as Martin's bride to be, Janet Van De Graff, as she performed "Show Off" and "Bride's Lament." Artrip also joined Parrish for "Accident Waiting to Happen," one of my favorite numbers in this show.

Aylin White was incredible as the Drowsy Chaperone. Her performance of "As We Stumble Along" rocked the entire theatre, and her talent and stage presence singing, acting and reacting is simply astonishing.

I adored Cameron Lang and Calvin Chervinko as the two gangsters/pastry chefs. They were captivating in "Toledo Surprise" and "Messages from a Nightingale," and left you wanting much more of their singing and acting.

Mario Ragazzone was grand as theatre producer Mr. Feldzieg, under constant threat of great bodily harm from the gangsters. I loved him in "Toledo Surprise" and everything else he did on stage.

Torrie Hughes was hilarious as the not-sobright but eager-to-be-astar Kitty, who trails after Feldzieg and eventually saves his bacon. She also rocked in "Message from a Nightingale."

Joey Rodriguez sparkled again as Adolpho, the matinee idol. Rodriguez is fresh off an outstanding performance in "In the Time of the Butterflies" at NMSU, and proved his range as a singer and actor in a completely different part in Drowsy Chaperone. He joined White in "I Am Adolpho" and several others in "Message from a Nightingale," and was wonderful in both.

Brandon Brown as Man In Chair, Austin Edward Parrish as Robert Martin and Caitlin Artrip as Janet Van De Graaff.

Veronica Bissell as Mrs. Tottendale was paired brilliantly with Robby Sciortino, who played the Underling (butler). Like Lang and Chervinko, these two talented performers made the most of smaller parts, and I so enjoyed their work, especially in "Love Is Always Lovely."

The ensemble of Asiah Thomas-Mandlman, Alex Wheeler and Laura Mae Dille was delightful throughout the show. They were vital to many of the musical numbers, and Wheeler was an excellent building superintendent at the very end.

And talk about rocking the house: Marybeth Torres played the small but very memorable part of Trix, the Aviatrix She has an amazing voice that filled the theatre in "I Do, I Do In The Sky," which was another one of my favorite songs in the show. It astonishes me what these performers are able to do individually and collectively in this production. Most are in their late teens or early 20s, and, as good as they are now, they will only continue to grow and improve as actors, singers and dancers.

And let's not forget the contributions to this show of its director, Mike Wise; musical director, Megan Mc-Queen; choreographer Laura Mae Dille (How did she do this incredible job and perform in the show at the same time?); costume designer Megan Thompson; > sound designer Matt Reynolds; scenic and lighting designer Jim Billings; props designer David Hereford; and Stage Manager Kia Ashley.

> Wise and McQueen cast the show brilliantly and used the incredible talents of their actors to create a memorable show that is a fitting sendoff for NMSU seniors Bissell, Dille, Lang, Parrish, Ragazzone, Rodriguez, Torres, White and Wheeler.

> That was the only sad part of the evening for me (although I did get a little teary-eyed at the end): knowing it was the last time these immensely talented students will be on the NMSU stage. But, thank goodness there are the likes of Artrip, Chervinko, Hughes, Leaton, Sciortino and Thomas-Mandlman and many others to continue the work.

You couldn't see it because it was in the orchestra pit, but this show also had an outstanding band, which included the incomparable Ginny May on piano, Danielle Turner on keyboard, Adriel Hernandez on bass, Derrick Lee on drums and Angelica Armagnac on percussion.

All around, in every aspect, this is an outstanding show. Do not miss it.

Drowsy Chaperone continues at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave., through Sunday, May 7. Shows are at 7:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays, April 29 and 30 and May 6 and 7; and at 2 p.m. on Sundays, May 1 and 8. There is also a performance at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 5.

Tickets are $17 for adults (ages 18-64), $14 for seniors (ages 65 and older) and NMSU faculty and staff with valid I.D., $10 for students (ages three to 17 and NMSU students with current school I.D.); and $5 for high school students (with current school I.D.).

'Agnes of God' to be performed at Black Box

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

John Pielmeier's play "Agnes of God" continues its Las Cruces run with performances at 8 p.m., Thursday, May 7 and at 7 p.m., Sunday, May 12 at Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St. on the downtown mall in Las Cruces.

Tickets are $12 regular admission and $10 for students.

The cast is comprised of Amy Lynn Whipple as Agnes, Yvette Crofford as Dr. Martha Livingston and Nancy Clein Tafoya as Mother Superior. The play is directed by Ken Forestal.

"Agnes of God" is presented by Toad Hall Theatre Company, which was founded by Forestal, and Black Box Theatre's resident No Strings Theatre Company. The play had four performances in February in Las Cruces.

"Agnes of God" is the story of a novice in a convent (Agnes) who is accused of murdering her newborn child. Livingston is a court-appointed psychiatrist who must determine Agnes' sanity and find out, despite interference from the mother superior, who fathered the baby and who killed it.

Whipple was seen most recently in NMSU's "Broadway Today" and also appeared in Toad Hall productions of "Pericles, Prince of Tyre" and "Medea."

Crofford also appeared in "Medea" and in "The Women of Lockerbie" and "The Sisters Rosenweig" at the Black Box Theatre, as well as "The Boys Next Door" at the El Paso Playhouse.

Tafoya has performed in Las Cruces theatre for the past 15 years in "West Side Story," "Gypsy," "Look Homeward, Angel," "Barefoot in the Park, "Anyone for Murder," "Enchanted April," "Women of Lockerbie," "Pericles," "Medea" and other shows.

Forestal retired last year from the University of Texas at El Paso Department of Psychology. He was a principal actor with El Paso's Shakespeare on the Rocks during more than 60 performances over a 10-year period.

"Agnes of God" premiered on Broadway on March 30, 1982. Amanda Plummer won a Tony award as best actress for her performance as Agnes. Geraldine Page was also nominated for best actress. The play was made into a movie in 1985, earning Oscar nominations for Ann Bancroft as best actress in a leading role and Meg Tilly in a supporting role. Tilly won a Golden Globe for her performance.

By Dana Beasley

The New Mexico State University Museum will present a free public artist talk by Linda Lomahaftewa, a Santa Fe-based Hopi-Choctaw painter and printmaker, at 6:30 p.m. Friday, April 29. Light refreshments will be served at 6 p.m.

Lomahaftewa is a participating artist in "Itaa Katsi: Our Life," the curtion of Hopi art at the NMSU University Museum. Her monotype print, "Four Rivers No. 3." visualizes a story about the Hopi migration path and is currently on display in the museum's west gallery.

"This is a rare opportunity for the southern New Mexico community and those in surrounding cities to learn about Lomahaftewa's art practice, as described by the artist herself," said Michelle J. Lanteri, exhibition lead curator and art history graduate student in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Now an instructor with Santa Fe's Institute of American Indian Arts, Lomahaftewa was one of the first students to attend the school when it opened in 1962. She later studied at the San Francisco Art Institute, where she received her undergraduate and graduate degrees in Studio Fine Arts.

Lomahaftewa's award winning pieces have been exhibited throughout the United States, and internationally in South America, New Zealand, Germany, the United Kingdom, Canada, Russia and China.

Her work is currently represented in the collection of the Museum of Contemporary Native Arts, the Heard Museum, as well as The James T. Bialac Native American Art Collection at the University of Oklahoma's Fred Jones Jr. Museum of Art

Chekhov acting workshop set for summer

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Department Head Wil Kilroy and partner Lisa Dalton have been teaching the Michael Chekhov acting technique for 23 years, and will offer it for a second time in Las Cruces this summer.

The class, which is for actors, would-be actors, directors, teachers and others, will be held Sunday, June 5 through Friday, June 10. Classes are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. The program's teacher track will continue through Saturday, June 11.

Registration on or before May 15 is $595 per person. The registration fee will increase to $845 after May 15.

The course offers more than 50 hours of intensive training, said Kilroy, who became head of NMSU Theatre Arts last summer.

"I've been acting for 40 years," said NMSU Theatre Arts Department Associate Professor Claudia Billings, who said taking the Chekhov class last summer "was the turning point for me as an actor. It was a life-changing week."

She plans to take the course again this year.

Participating actors get "a lot of instant gratification from the different exercises you do," said actor Cameron Lang, who turns 24 in May, the same month he graduates from NMSU with a degree in theatre arts. "All the tools work together really cohesively," he said. "I left there with more self-confidence than I've ever had as an actor."

The course involves learning Chekhov's 7 Keys to Mastery: "act imaginatively, teach powerfully, direct dynamically, improvise creatively, week. Michael Chekhov, the nephew of playwright Anton Chekhov, created his acting technique as an alternative to Konstantin Stanislavsky's emotion memory acting method, which trained actors to use an internal focus to create characters, Kilroy said.

Chekhov, in contrast, believed an actor "shouldn't have to be suck in character" before and after his or her performance, Kilroy said. "You are an artist creating something. You have not become the character," he said. Chekhov believed not only in making better actors, but also in "creating better human beings," Kilroy said.

Chekhov's method, Kilroy said, shows actors how to find a trigger, or psychological gesture, to help create their characters and then release them.

The trigger is "a physical movement that really embodies your character," Billings said.

"You discover it," Lang said. "You can get that feeling with that movement, then, a second later, you drop it."

"These aren't tricks, they're tools," Billings said. "You do the work. It's really exciting to put it into practice immediately. You have every idea

Learning the technique gives you an "introspection and reflection (that) fuels your whole performance," Kilroy said. "It puts all that theory into action."

Kilroy said the class is not just for actors and theatre people. Doctors have taken it in the past to become more in touch with their patients, and many teachers also have benefited from the course. as it helps them learn about "qualities of movement (and) archetypal gestures," he said. The skills participants learn will help them "deal with difficult situations" and be "more understanding of others."

The Chekhov method has been taught through the National Michael Chekhov Association (MICHA) for decades. The workshop offered by Kilroy and Dalton is unique because they taught the course for many years with actress and teacher Mala Powers. Powers, who died in 2007, was the executrix of Chekhov's estate. "He coached her," Kilroy said. "She was our colleague for decades."

Chekhov (1891-1955), was born in the Russian Empire and fled to Germany to avoid government persecution, and eventually made his way to Hollywood. His students included Marilyn Monroe, Gregory Peck, Ingrid Bergman, Clint Eastwood and Anthony Hopkins.

Chekhov was also a successful actor. He was nominated for an Academy Award for best supporting actor for his performance in Alfred Hitchcock's "Spellbound," released in 1945.

To reserve a place in the workshop and for more information and discount rates, email Kilroy at wkilroy@nmsu. edu. You can also register online at www.chekhov. net. Visit http://www.michaelchekhov.org/.

She learned from Diki Vanhesland, an inspired Batik artist, and immediately discovered she had a passion for the medium. With batik, you cannot expect an exact rendering of your original concept; the wax and dyes work their magic and it is a delight to see how they influences the original design."Two years ago I discovered batik on paper, I have tried a variety of papers: rice paper and brown paper," Greer said."I love allowing the object or the design to take me where it wants to go. I delight in embellishing the finished designed fabric by quilting it, beading it, trapunto-ing it resulting in bags, wall hangings, pillows and clothing." Greer's work will be featured through the end of April.

Academy Award nominee 'Embrace of the Serpent' a taut yet flexible film

FILM REVIEW

GRADE

This Academy Award finalist starts a week run tonight, April 29, at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla. It is in Spanish, Catalan and German.

By Jeff Berg For the Bulletin

A finalist for this year's Oscar for best foreign film, "Embrace of the Serpent" would have easily won in a less competitive year.

Even though it didn't win, this superb black-and-white work is a favorite of mine for this year (since it really wasn't available until recently).

The film will undoubtedly be compared to films by Werner Herzog ("Aguirre the Wrath of God", "Fitzcarraldo" etc.) since it focuses on the intrusion of white men into lands in South America, where they haven't really been invited.

Nature takes pride here, with the chaos created by human beings being secondary, which makes it a far more interesting piece to view.

Embrace looks at two Anglo explorers, visiting the same place via flashback, years apart. Both are looking for a plant, a fictional one, called Yakruna, which is hoped to be used for medicinal purposes, in spite of its mind altering properties.

Colonialism continuously raises its ugly head to both men, via wacked out missionaries, a man who sees himself as the Savior, and most especially, those who came to the Amazon to seek and exploit rubber trees.

The film is based loosely on two real life explorers/invaders, Theodor Koch-Grünberg, a German ethnologist who studied the native peoples of the area, and Richard Evans Schultes, an American biologist and studier of hallucinogenic plants and such.

Although, in real life, they tried to work with the native peoples, there always comes a point when exploration turns to exploitation.

In the film, both are secondary to the character of Karamakate, the last of his peoples, who insists on using a strict set of "laws" during interaction with the jungle, which stretches from diet to the way of travel through the area. He is forthright and very suspicious of all Anglos, believing that they all have the same goal – the destruction of nature and native peoples.

Reluctant to help, he does finally help both men, albeit decades apart, as a guide and interpreter. He even tolerates another local native who has "turned white" and is escorting Theo (the earlier of the two explorers), who is gravely ill and hopes that finding the elusive plant will help him as well. And as he has aged (there is a 40year time separation in the story), Karmakate has also lost something... his memory of many of his tribe's rituals. He worries that he will become like Theo's guide, a "Chullachaqui", described as "a hollow mirror image that's lost in time, drifting without purpose." "Embrace of the Serpent" is nearly flawless in its presentation and believability. At once, it is an adventure story, a cultural story, and a look at social norms and graces of two very different cultures. It works in part because it doesn't take a clear stance on science vs. tradition vs. spirituality. Rather, it notes that all three subjects are braided together, even though sometimes the pieces seem to be in battle with one another, but all of the subjects can feel as taut or flexible as you want them to be.

Arthropod Museum one of NMSU's hidden gems

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

Behind an unassuming door on the first floor of the Skeen building on the New Mexico State University campus is New Mexico's largest collection of beetles, butterflies, roaches, praying mantises, walking sticks, scorpions, vinegaroons, centipedes, millipedes, termites, tarantulas and other invertebrates with exoskeletons, segmented bodies and jointed appendages classified as arthropods.

The Arthropod Museum, part of the NMSU Department of Entomology, Plant Pathology and Weed Science (EPPWS), has more than 500,000 arthropods (the Greek word means "joint" and "foot") pinned and glued to cards in glass cases or preserved in alcohol, with the occasional mosquito suspended in amber.

About 300 species of live arthropods are housed in the museum's quarantined zoo and taken out when staff visit schools.

"I didn't like bugs until college," said Museum Curator Jennifer Shaughney. "Now I love them."

A native of Maryland, Shaughney got a masters of Entomology (the study of insects) degree from the University of Nebraska before accepting a job last summer in the EPPWS Department. Her favorite arthropod is the scarab beetle. which was the subject of her master's thesis.

Helen Vessels, who runs the arthropod biology lab, raised beetles as a child growing up in El Paso. She was delighted to discover entomology classes, and now has undergraduate and graduate degrees from NMSU in agricultural and cultural biology. "I've taken pretty much every course here," said Vessels, who has worked at the museum for three years.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT ARTHROPODS

Walking sticks are leaf eaters; praying mantises are predators;
Many insects are brilliantly colored in iridescent blues and greens because they glisten like wet leaves when it rains – a perfect disguise from predators;

• The fossil record for insects is incomplete because most of an insect's life stages are softbodied and don't leave traces behind;

• There are about 350,000 known species of coleoptera (beetles) in the world today. In fact, one in four of the world's animals is a beetle.

• Most beetles are in the larva stage for one to two years, but only live for about two months as an adult. Some never eat in their lifetimes, they only breed and die.

• The Hercules beetle has a huge proboscis, which the males uses to flip over his opponent in a fight for dominance. It doesn't sound lethal until you realize most battles take place in trees hundreds of feet above the ground.

• The giant Atlas moth has designs on the tips of its wings that resemble a snake's head to warn off predators.

NMSU's "bug" collection dates back to the 1890s, when university staff began gathering samples. Most of the original specimens have been lost or damaged, but some have survived. The oldest specimen still on file is a checkered beetle, native to New Mexico, which was pinned Oct. 14, 1895, Shaughney said.

In the 1970s and '80s, State Entomologist Carol Sutherland and Professor Emeritus Dave Richman, both PhDs, began pulling together specimens from the botany and biology departments that would become the Arthropod Museum. The collection includes insects from throughout the Southwest, other states and from countries as fall away as Italy, France and Belize.

In fact, Museum Director Scott Bundy takes a group of NMSU students to Belize for 10 days every other spring to gather insect specimens. The small country has "so many different environments," Vessels said.

Shaughney, Vessels, Sutherland, Bundy and graduate students are studying and restudying the specimens that fill hundreds of cases in the 900-square-foot museum, doing DNA work and selective breeding, taking photographs for an online database (it currently includes about 78,000 records), using the specimens in university classes and sharing them with universities across the country.

The museum gets about 100 requests a year to share its specimens, Shaughney said.

"The insect community is large, but it's also a small world," she said. "We all know each other."

Local scientists have even discovered some new species of insects, including a robber fly. Shaughney also named two new species of scarab beetle while at the University of Nebraska. One of her career goals is to write a key to New Mexico beetles.

Shaughney and Vessels also visit up to four public schools a week in the county during the spring and fall, taking along the museum's teaching specimens – what Shaughney calls the "Oh, My" collection. It includes some of the largest insects in the world, like the African goliath beetle and the elephant beetle. Many children are reluctant to get near the living, nonpoisonous insects that Shaughney and Vessels bring to schools and other locations, but most soon realize "they're not that scary," Shaughney said. The school programs she and Vessels present are designed to "supplement what they're teaching about biology," she said.

And, hopefully, some students will become "interested in biology and insects," Vessels said.

"We share the planet with these things," Shaughney said. "We need to respect them. I try to get people to understand them."

"They're here for a purpose," Vessels said.

The Arthropod Museum is located in Room 168 of Skeen Hall on the NMSU campus. It is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, but it's best to visit the museum website, arthropods.nmsu.edu, beforehand to make sure someone will be there when you visit.

The City of Las Cruces has received a $50,000 grant from the New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) that will be spent on "way-finding signage and education" on major walking and biking trails in the city, said city Parks and Recreation Director Mark Johnston.

The city has spent about $500,000 in grant funds in the past 20 years to provide signage for trails throughout the 78-square miles that comprise the city, Johnston said.

The public-trail mapping system began on the outer edges of the city and is now moving to the city's interior, including the downtown area, he said.

Free movie at St. Paul's shows power of prayer

Bulletin report

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs, will present two showings of "The War Room" on Friday, May 6.

Sherri Fredrickson, communication director at St. Paul's, said, "Through resources available to the church, we had the opportunity to buy a license to show this movie with the condition that admission would be free. We felt that providing this opportunity to as many people as possible was important."

The Roger Ebert webpage, which features current movie reviews, writes that director Alex Kendrick, who co-wrote the script with his brother Stephen, illustrates that victims of domestic abuse may find their respite through God. "This is the lesson that real estate agent Elizabeth (Priscilla C. Shirer) must be taught in extended conversations with her client-turnedfriend, Miss Clara (Karen Abercrombie). When Elizabeth tries opening up about the unabashed cruelty she endures on a daily basis from her loathsome husband, Tony (T.C. Stallings), Clara...urges the long-suffering wife to go back home, empty out a closet and plaster the walls with Bible verses. There, she will summon God to help fight her battles. thus transforming the space into the titular 'war room.'"

"This is a powerful movie about the power of prayer," Fredrickson said. "The War Room" is open to the community. The first showing is at 2 p.m. and the second showing is at 6 p.m.

Spring fashion gets cool at Barnett's Harley Davidson

This gear not just for bikers

By Susie Ouderkirk Las Cruces Bulletin

Are you gonna' get your motor running and head out on the highway? Are you looking for adventure in whatever comes your way?

If these words strike a chord with vou. then you're surely familiar with the name Harley Davidson. With spring officially here, maybe you're unpacking that vintage leather jacket, dusting off that retro black helmet and gassing up your own bike for the first ride of the season. And where better to get ready for the warm Las Cruces weather than at the ultra-cool Harley Davidson motorcvcle store?

Barnett's Harley Davidson, 2600 Lakeside Drive, is stocking the shelves and both floors with the hottest trends in motorcycle culture for the summer of 2016. From leisure wear and accessories to the iconic motorcycles themselves, Barnett's has anything you could image for bike fans and aficionados.

First, every cyclist needs rad gear. Spring and summer styles in the motorcycle world mean one thing: the color black.

"Summer is all dark," said Mando Martinez, motorclothes associate at Barnett's. "Black goes with everything. It's the color everybody loves."

Just because the clothing tends to black doesn't mean there isn't a wide variety of designs and styles on the floor at Barnett's. The warm weather necessitates cooler fabrics, so much of the spring

'Ride bells' keep evil away

Sparkling from a jewelry showcase on the front counter are several dozen bells, each about an inch and a half high, decorated with various designs from the Harlev Davidson logo to wolf heads, skulls and eagles. These "ride bells," also known as biker bells or guardian bells, are legendary good luck charms for keeping evil road gremlins at bay, according to Harley Davidson literature.

"Ride bells are a powerful symbol of friendship and biker brotherhood" that protect the owner from the gremlins that "bring bad luck to your ride by creating mechanical problems and scattering road debris into your path."

The good luck is doubled, Martinez said, when a bell is given by a friend.

inventory, though dark in color, is made with 100 percent cotton or mesh, with moisture-wicking properties and UV protection right in the fabric.

The Black Label Collection, which is geared toward 18 to 28-year-old men, is a newer clothing line at Barnett's. Martinez said, "A lot of younger riders like to dress up to go riding. With the Black Label Collection, guys look cool on the bike, and they look cool when they get to the party."

Zuhl Library administrative assistant and graphic designer Erica Bautista said that the newest edition of the magazine is out, both in hard copy and online, showcasing a variety of library-related news and events. "You can pick up copies at the library on the second floor in suite 223," Bautista said, but she also suggested that she would be willing to send copies to interested readers by calling 646-1508.

"We send them out to all of the library donors, and, of course, it's available online," she said. The website address is lib.nmsu. edu.

Mesilla Valley Teen Singers present free concert

Bulletin report

Choral music lovers will be pleased to know it's time for the Mesilla Valley Teen Singer's (MVTS) spring concert, scheduled for Friday, May 6, at 7 p.m. at University Presbyterian Church. The group is made up of 50 students who practice weekly all semester in order to present a professional-level performance for free.

This year they're focusing on music from the rich and unique tradition of American spirituals, such as "I Got a Key to the Kingdom," "Down in the River to Pray," and "Didn't My Lord Deliver Daniel?"

MVTS founder and director Terry Kay Gilbert, a former public school music teacher, says of their choice for this semester, "There are so many great spirituals. They are both great fun to sing and great fun to hear. But it's always hard to choose just one for a concert. So, I decided to have a concert comprised of all spirituals. But the ones I've chosen are from a wide range of sources: some are from what is thought of as the "traditional" type of spiritual, from the period of American slavery; others are spirituals from the Appalachia area and what's known as "Sacred Harp" tunes. "In our concert, there are older, traditional types of music, while others are more contemporary, but done in a traditional way. And we're singing a wide variety of styles slow, up-tempo, joyful, meditative, mournful."

This choir has been part of the Las Cruces community for over 10 years, made up of students from all the local high schools, plus home-schooled students and the occasional NMSU student who hasn't yet turned 20. Students don't need a musical background to join, but by the time they perform, they are seasoned veterans of choral music.

Gilbert says of this year's singers, "This particular group of teens seems unfazed by the complexity of music I throw at them. They are enthusiastic participators who are eager to work on improving each piece. It's evident that they love the music, and that they are really enjoying singing."

That love of singing comes a through in their performances. Then after the music is over, they mingle with the audience at a free dessert reception they've provided.

The group will take the summer off and begin rehearsals for their winter program in August, when new members are welcome. For more information about MVTS, go to mvteensingers.blogspot.com.

University Presbyterian Church is located at 2010 E. Wisconsin, which is the street than runs behind the shopping center with Lorenzo's and Milagro's.

The Black Label clothes come in a "slim" size to better suit the demographic. And for the older guys who are "not so slim," Martinez said, vintage designs are a big thing this year.

"These new shirts all have snaps and buttons, like from years ago," he said. The basic plaid shirts also sport manmade "oil stains" to mimic the look of a garage mechanic. The shirts, adorned with retro decorations and faux oil stains, along with the Harley Davidson name, run in the ### $65 to $80 range.

Accessories like gloves and jackets come in a lightweight mesh material which allows cooling airflow during the ride. One smart new item is the "hydration vest," which gets soaked in cold water for a few minutes, and when rung out and worn, acts like a mobile evaporative cooler that stays cool for up to three hours. Hydration head wraps and caps also are available.

Barnett's has on display 10 different iconic Harley Davidson leather jackets, ranging from $160 to $895. If you can't find a leather jacket that makes you look cool at Barnett's it's just not going to happen.

Let's not forget about the ladies who ride just as hard as the men. The store has a surprising number of items that will appeal to women: purses, carry bags, suitcases and pet supplies, as well as home furnishings and comfort items such as towels, robes, blankets and jewelry.

Chris Belarde, HR manager and marketing specialist, expects the retro shapes and colors of the bikes themselves will appeal to women. A Heritage Deluxe Soft Tail motorcycle, which demands to be the center of attention, is detailed with a turquoise reminiscent of the 1950s. "That color is called "Teal and Crushed Ice," he said.

"The larger fender in front and the leather saddlebags have a nostalgic look," Belarde said, which brings back memories for riders of a certain age.

Brand name products often come with a high price tag, but Belarde mentioned there's a whole upstairs area that features "last chance items," which are not made any longer but carry the high quality of the Harley Davidson Company. Shopping has never been cooler.

Pancho Villa talk set for May 2

By Cassie McClure For the Bulletin

New Mexico State's Branson Library announces a talk by William B. Boehm, historian at the National Guard Bureau in Arlington, Va., and former archivist and curator at the New Mexico State University Archives and Special Collections Department.

Boehm's talk, "Passage to the American Century: Pancho Villa, The National Defense Act and National Guard Mexican Border Service" will be at 10 a.m., Monday, May 2, on the fourth floor of the Branson Library on the NMSU Campus. It is free to the public.

Boehm argues that Villa's raid of Columbus, N.M., on March 9, 1916 brought about the wrath of the United States. "Less known, but of equal or greater importance, was the National Guard's response immediately following mission into the state of Chihuahua, part of a campaign formally known as Mexican Border Service," said Boehm. "It was the first such mobilization of its kind without the formal declaration of war in the country's history."

His presentation will discuss the aftermath of the Pancho Villa raid and the events following the start of the Punitive Expedition in March 1916, focusing on the efforts to strengthen the U.S.-Mexico border and create legislation to effectively put state National Guards into federal status for the national defense, which resulted in the national mobilization of the entire Guard to the U.S.-Mexico border in May to June 1916.

William B. (Bill) Boehm grew up in Alamogordo, N.M., and completed undergraduate work at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque in 1987. He enrolled at the graduate history program at New Mexico State University. Boehm worked on various writing projects that focused on Fort Bliss, White Sands Missile Range, and Holloman Air Force Base, and other cultural resource projects. He later joined the staff of the New Mexico State University Library in 2000, working as an archivist and curator.

October in Germany

Lucari Jordan, a student at Centennial High School, has spent the last nine months as an exchange student in Las Cruces' sister city, Nienburg, Germany. Jordan's scholarship is from the Las Cruces-Nienburg Sister Cities Affiliation. The Bulletin is sharing his monthly journal entries.

By Lucari Jordan For the Bulletin

One of the best things this month in Germany is the great variety of colors: orange and red in the trees, vibrant green on the fields and a beautiful grav in the sky. The mornings are wonderfully crisp and the nights chilly to the point that I really get in the mood for Thanksgiving. The mounds of leaves lying on the ground around trees bring to life all those times Charlie Brown jumps into a pile of leaves. It is quite an odd experience to have the sun rise at 8 a.m. and set at 4:30 p.m.

On Oct. 19, I had some big plans. It was time for a concert! The band in question. "Metric! Metric!," is an indie/alternative/electronica band and their performance was just stunning. I was also able to acquire a limited edition double LP crystal vinyl record of their latest album.

After the concert, I tradition.

During the fall break, Wolfgang, Simon and I took a trip to the state of "Nordrhein-Westfalen" (North-Rhine Westphalia) and visited the cities of Köln (Cologne), Düsseldorf, and Remscheid.

(Cologne Cathedral) was an obvious first destination. The history, beauty and detail on this cathedral is the most amazing architectural feat I have ever seen. The pictures I took were better than any touristy trinket. Our starting point in Düsseldorf was the TV tower, which is akin to the Sky Needle in Seattle, a great photo outlook over the entire city.

The rainout shelter project is part of the long-term research. The distances between the shingles on these structures purposely vary, in order to control precipitation. Some shelters intercept 50 percent of incoming precipitation and some intercept up to 90 percent. Acting as simulators, the shelters intercept precipitation representing drought conditions and route precipitation through pipes to a plot that is irrigated, simulating wet conditions.

"We've run this rainfall manipulation for almost 10 years now," Sala said. "During the first four years of rainfall manipulation, we didn't see any significant difference. But by year seven or eight, we started seeing that in the drought treatments, there was a sharp decline of the grasses. That would have been impossible to predict based on the short-term experiments. What's even more interesting is that declining grass was accompanied by an increase in shrub production. And that only could be seen after 10 years of manipulation."

One of the next steps is to develop a simulation model that incorporates all of the water and vegetation data collected thus far. The NMSU College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences has committed to funding a two-vear research assistant position to work on the simulation model.

Operated by the Department of Agriculture Agricultural Research Service, data have been collected on the Jornada Experimental Range since 1915. Data have been collected for the LTER project, administered by NMSU, since 1983. The Chihuahuan Desert Rangeland Research Center is operated by NMSU.

Hundreds of rainout shelters on the Jornada Experimental Range are helping researchers predict what arid and semi-arid ecosystems will look like in the future. The rainout shelters serve as simulators of climate change. and they are just one part of a 20year and ongoing Chihuahuan Desert study.

Osvaldo Sala, the Julie A. Wrigley professor at Arizona State University, has been a part of this project for more than 10 years.

The Jornada Basin Long Term Ecological Research principal investigators live in various locations. Among others, Sala is working with lead principal investigator and New Mexico State University adjunct plant and environmental sciences faculty member Debra Peters and Northern Arizona University Professor of Environmental Science Laura Huenneke, who have been a part of the project for almost 20 years. The research team is in the process of writing manuscripts about all of its discoveries, and various groups of researchers convened on the NMSU campus in February to discuss their findings.

"The writing process is finding a story," Sala said. "We have a hypothesis, we collect all the data, we perform statistical analyses,

Senior Olympians strut their stuff

Eugene Pettis finished far ahead of the competition in the 200-meter race.

PHOTOS BY ALEX BURR The Doña Ana County Senior Olympics track races were run on Saturday, April 9 at the New Mexico State University track. There were 20 events with dozens of participants, most of whom qualified for the state games to be held in Roswell in July. Above, contestants break out for the start of the 100meter race.

Married, but no longer in an intimate relationship

Dear Neil: Some people decide to not have sex with their spouse. So why do these same people get upset when their husband or wife has sex with someone else?

- Not Sure I Understand

Dear Not Sure: Some people have negative associations with sex. Although they desire to be married, they don't desire sex, or they've given up on having a close erotic relationship. Other people may enjoy sex, but for a variety of reasons withhold it. They may be punishing their partner to make a point or to settle a score. Perhaps the relationship has grown distant and disconnected, and they no longer feel close enough to want sex. They may be married, but they're no longer in an intimate relationship.

But add another sexual partner to this mix, and you have a potentially explosive situation. This is because your spouse most probably assumes you belong to him or her and would feel that another lover would violate the relationship and would therefore be grounds to hang you for treason. (Maybe I'm exaggerating, maybe I'm not.)

If one person withdraws sex, very often his/her partner will not give up romance and sexual desire-he or she will simply go elsewhere to get it. If you wish to avoid this scenario, don't let romance, connection and eroticism fade from your relationship. And if it does, confront it forcefully, and do everything you can to assist the two of you in reconnecting.

Dear Neil: My sister-in-law has all these excuses why she can't work. She takes money from my elderly mother-inlaw and has children that the state pays for. I want to know why she feels entitled to an elderly person's income and a free ride from the government

— Fed Up in Florida

Dear Fed Up: Some people use assistance to get on their feet or to jump-start their lives, and others just game the system. The bigger question is about how you can stop your sister-in-law's sense of entitlement. There are essentially two types of people who feel entitled: those that are embarrassed they're on the take and are motivated to get back on their feet as soon as they can. and those who will take a free ride as long as they can. If your sister-in-law is in the first category, somebody in the family might help her explore how she might take control over her life. If she fits the second description, she will be resistant to any changes.

If your mother-in-law is giving money to her daughter, there is nothing you can do. But if the daughter is stealing, you could call social services and report her for elderly abuse.
