"All politics is local," former Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill once said, and officials of both the Doña Ana County Republican and Democratic parties know it.

Republican Donald Trump and Democrats Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders may be getting most of the headlines, but once the New Mexico June 7 primary election is over, it will be up to the local parties and candidates to turn out every voter they can for the Tuesday, Nov. 8 general election.

"There's more at stake here than just the presidency," said county Republican Party Secretary Susan Mc-Gonnell. "We focus on our local elections. They're all important," she said. "I not only want to retain the

After more than 50 years of service in higher education, government, politics and business, and now as chancellor of New Mexico State University, Garrey Carruthers continues to apply the same life lessons he learned growing up on a farm near Aztec, New Mexico: be honest, work hard, treat other people well and get a good education.

"I work very hard," Carruthers said. "I try to treat everybody with a great deal of respect."

He has also spent a lifetime developing a reputation for honesty and

Straight talk about DASO

By Julia T. Brown Doña Ana County Manager

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Association (DACSA) recently launched a slick website as part of a coordinated misinformation campaign. The union's apparent objective is to influence voters in upcoming elections. While DACSA and its members are free to engage in political activity, it is equally important for voters to have accurate information. As the county manager, I am responsible for administrative support of all county departments. Here are the facts.

Funding: In 2015, the County Commission authorized collection of 3/8 of 1 percent in gross receipts tax (GRT) as allowed by state statute. The Commission dedicated more than one-third of that tax for support of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department (DASO). The majority of this money was added to an appropriation from the County's General Fund and other funding sources to make up the FY15-16 DASO budget. The remainder was held in reserves (savings) for such items as a new records management system, improved communications, and raises for DASO staff. In total, DASO received roughly a 25 percent increase in funding over the previous year. That's the truth. According to the union's website, the GRT funding was "supplanted" by removing a like amount from "the bottom" of the department's operational budget, thereby violating a pledge made to taxpayers. That statement reveals a profound misunderstanding of the budget process. To the extent it suggests the commission and county management have misled the public, it is also a lie.

Salaries: Across the board, county employees have been seriously underpaid when compared with similar positions in our region. This disparity is well documented in a study by a reputable, independent contractor. Accordingly, the commission decided to bring salaries up to a more competitive level over a two-year period, beginning in 2015. The policy applies to all departments, including DASO. It's a fair approach that is fiscally responsi> ble and objectively verifiable. According to DACSA, the county's salary study did not accurately represent the pay differential between DASO deputies and officers in other area agencies. They make this assertion based on an in-house study by some of the same officers who would benefit from higher pay rates.

> Rural Bus Service: By resolution, the county commission provided that one-third of the new GRT would be used to support staffing shortages at the Detention Center, increase funding for economic development, accelerate equipment replacement and assist with the start-up of a rural transit system. This portion of the GRT is separate from the $4 million specifically dedicated to DASO. The transit appropriation was capped at $750,000. By comparison, $1.68 million from this part of the GRT was spent on new DASO vehicles. When those misrepresenting the truth are law enforcement officers we should all be concerned. We should also be concerned when deputies actively lobby against deci sions made by the county commission. Civilian authority over law enforcement is a basic tenant of American government.

Public Safety: The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department is the largest of our public-safety entities. It is, however, not the only one. Other public-safety aspects include flood management, fire and emergency services, the detention center, and the Office of Emergency Management. More than 40 percent of the FY16-17 budget will be spent on these services. DASO alone will have a budget of more than $26 million next year. And public safety doesn't stop there. It is the main purpose for building code inspections, development standards, roads maintenance and many of our community center programs.

Public safety has many dimensions, and all are important to the wellbeing of county residents. Period. The union has claimed that public safety is not a top concern of the commission or county look at the county budget proves management. A look at the county budget proves this is a lie.

Vehicle Replacement: Since January of 2015, nearly a quarter of DASO's fleet – 54 vehicles – has been replaced, primarily with specially outfitted Ford Explorers and Chevrolet Tahoes, at a cost of $4.9 million. The union states that the county has no fleet-replacement strategy and has not budgeted funds to replace obsolete patrol cars. In fact, the fleet department plans for replacement of all county vehicles and the commission appropriates funds annually for that purpose.

The Sheriff's Department is a highly valued and important part of Doña Ana County's government. Rather than embracing that reality, the Sheriff's Association has chosen to side with Sheriff Vigil's ongoing political dispute against the county commission and county management. This is dangerous and unprofessional. Members of the public should keep the facts in mind when confronted with the union's propaganda.

BaxterBlac THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE Spirited but gentle

Freddy was two hours late. He was supposed to furnish Elroy a horse. Elroy and I sat in the shade while the others had gone on ahead. We waited for Freddy. Elroy was nervous. He hoped the horse would be gentle.

Finally Freddy came strollin' up.

"Where ya been?" exclaimed Elroy.

"I been tryin' to catch yer horse!" he replied. "Wait a minute," said Elroy, cautiously, "He's not a bad one is he?"

"Oh, no. Just a little spirited...but gentle." "Whattaya mean?"

"Well," explained Freddy, "I walked right up to him. He ate the grain right outta my hand. But as I reached to slip the halter shank over his poll, he wheeled, kicked the back of my hand and that buckle on the halter whacked me smack behind the ear!

"I tell you, I went and saddled another horse and chased him plum to the back of the pasture. I got a loop over his head and choked him down. I hobbled his front feet but it's a good thing I left the lass rope and the halter on him 'cause he broke mv hobbles!

"I tied him to an oak tree, sideline the bugger and bounced him off the ground a couple of times to establish a working relationship. I got him saddled and left him to soak a while. That's why I'm late."

"You sure he's gentle?" asked Elroy, his skin blotching.

"Oh, yeah. Spirited, but gentle. 'Specially after standin' there fightin' that oak tree for an hour. I got back and the roots were showin'! I blindfolded him, snubbed him up tight and slipped on a big spade bit the size of a Copenhagen lid! I put a tiedown on him and pulled it down 'til he looked like he was checkin' himself for pinworms! For insurance I added a warbridle I'd built out of a bicvcle chain.

"I swung up in the strirrups, jerked off the blindfold and rode him right up to the trailer. Behaved perfectly! But when I leaned to dismount he broke in two! He stuck a front foot through the windshield of my dually and climbed over the top! I was still hung in the left stirrup when he dove off the cab! I hooked a spur in the side mirror and durn near jerked my foot off, but it stopped him dead in his tracks.

"I hung there 'til my wife come out and put on a scotch hobble. We slid under him with my ol' John Deer bucket and loaded him in the trailer. I believe we got all the salt out of him."

"You sure?" asked Elroy, blanched. "I can't believe you even got him here!"

"No sweat," said Freddy, "You can see him out there in the trailer...or, at least you can see his foot stickin' through the side!"

Make your mark

Voting always matters; exercise your right

Billions of words have been written about this year's primary elections, but the most important word is the one you can write June 7.

In fact, it's not even a word, really.

It's a mark on little circles.

If you are a registered Democrat or Republican in Doña Ana County, you may have already made your mark early.

If not, Tuesday, June 7, is your day. There has been a lot of comment about the dissatisfaction with the two leading presidential candidates, Republican Donald Trump and Democrat Hillary Clinton.

If you are one of those dissatisfied, don't take the dissatisfaction to the extreme and pass on this most important privilege of voting.

There are plenty of local races in the election that arguably have a much greater effect on your life in southern New Mexico than who winds up in the White House.

We have contested primaries in the state legislature for both House and Senate races.

We have contested primaries for county offices, including county commission and district attorney.

Elsewhere in the pages of this week's Bulletin you will find information on the candidates in all of the contested races.

The Doña Ana County Commission race is particularly interesting. Districts 2, 4 and 5 are up for election. All three have contested Democratic primaries, and districts 4 and 5 also have contested Republican primaries. If Republicans were to pull off victories in the November general election in districts 4 and 5, it would change the makeup of the commission from four Democrats and one Republican to three Republicans and two Democrats. Most local political followers would say such a turnover is not likely.

However, most national political followers would have said a year ago the names Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders would have long been out of the public discussion by June 2016.

In other words, we're living in interesting, unpredictable political times.

Early voting in Doña Ana County began May 10, and included the new wrinkle of voting on Memorial Day, Monday, May 30.

I know several people who voted on Memorial Day and were pleased to perform a patriotic act on a patriotic day. Makes a lot of sense to me. Many military members gave their lives to preserve the American way of life, and voting is a big part of that way of life.

This could become a nice local tradition.

As of this writing, 5,835 people had voted early. Total registered voters are around 107,000. Because this is a primarv. only Democrats and Republicans are allowed to vote in New Mexico.

There has been some discussion regarding opening up the primaries to allow independents to vote, and even for party members to vote in a different party. Some states have done this, but don't look for it anytime soon in New Mexico, despite the growing number of unaffiliated voters, which is about 20 percent statewide.

In addition to the early voting opportunities, things are getting easier on Election Day, too.

The establishment of Voting Convenience Centers means any voter can vote in any of the 40 voting locations in the county. So, for example, if your normal voting location is at Santa Teresa Middle School, in the extreme southern portion of the county, but you find yourself driving back from Albuquerque on Election Day, vou can stop at Garfield Elementary School in the extreme northern portion of the county and cast your vote on time. Or if you work in a different part of town from where you live, you can hit the closest center on your lunch break.

It doesn't really matter how, when or where vou vote. Just vote.

Helping Downwinders injured by Trinity test

"In answer to the question: was the development of the atomic bomb by the United States necessary? I reply unequivocally, yes. To the question: is atomic energy a force for good or for evil? I can only say: as mankind wills it."

President Barack Obama was in Hiroshima, Japan this last week and said in a ceremony, "We stand here in the middle of this city and force ourselves to imagine the moment the bomb fell. We force ourselves to feel the dread of children confused by what they see. We listen to a silent cry. We remember all the innocents killed across the arc of that terrible war and the wars that came before and the wars that would follow."

The man who made the decision, President Harry Truman wrote in 1946, "I knew what I was doing when I stopped the war that would have killed a half a million youngsters on both sides if those bombs had not been dropped. I have no regrets and under the same circumstances I would do it again."

Over the decades the debate continues about using the atomic bombs. President Obama stirred the pot by visiting Hiroshima near Memorial Day which commemorates American men and women who died in the service of our country. To families of WWII dead and injured it was the wrong week to visit Japan.

And I have a small part in that history since I am a New Mexico Downwinder. We were injured years later by the downwind radiation left by the first test of the nuclear bomb since it was exploded in New Mexico. We who were born and lived downwind of the Trinity explosion in New Mexico didn't know the deadly effect.

People argue the issues of using atomic bombs, especially against civilians. But we Downwinders are civilians injured in this enterprise. Our government has turned its back on us and our injuries. A politician's representative in exasperation years ago stated, "We beat the Japanese, what do you want?"

I immediately said, "I would like to not have gotten cancer from that effort. Lacking that, would you help me and other Downwinders deal with our injuries?" The representative said that Congress has no will to help us, though they did help the Japanese who were injured by America's use of atomic bombs to end WWII.

To the issue of President Truman using the bombs, everything I have read points to that decision as saving perhaps a couple million lives, both American and Japanese. Operation Downfall: the planned invasion of the Island of Japan was massive as was the will of the Japanese to resist.

President Obama might not have used the atomic bombs to end WWII. Thank God for President Truman. I feel the use of those weapons were justified in 1945 against Japan. Unfortunately, I do have to live with the results of our country exploding a nuclear device here in New Mexico.

We are left with the question: should Downwinders get help for our illnesses? We can debate the use of nuclear weapons, but first take care of those Americans injured the last time America did so.

Three for free: Why finishing school faster is a good idea

There are many issues educators worry about. However, students graduating on time with manageable educational debt keeps administrators up at night and is the reason why finishing college quickly is a good idea.

For community college students, it is best to graduate with a credential or a degree within two to three years. The majority who graduate from Doña Ana Community College (DACC) take more than three years. We have work to do, because from a cost of tuition and an earnings standpoint it is best to finish as soon as possible.

Beginning in the fall 2016 semester, we are encouraging full-time students to take "three for free." DACC tuition costs are the same whether one takes 12, 15 or 18 credits per semester. Those who take 12 hours are being asked to take one extra three credit class each semester, tuition free.

If a student takes 15 credits rather than 12, and gets three credits of tuition per semester for free they would save around $800 once earning a degree or certificate, compared to those who only take 12 credits each semester. But more importantly, the real benefit is the higher wages graduates earn.

Many of our students have jobs, look after parents or children and can't take a full load of classes. If one is part-time and takes six credits each fall and spring, they would earn their degree in five and a half years. This would delay their entry into a career by two and a half years, compared to those who take 15 credits per semester.

Some students get off track by taking classes not aligned with their major. We encourage curiosity at DACC. However, for every additional year to graduate, lost wages are incurred because early graduates are more likely to earn higher salaries because their certificate or degree opens opportunities to be hired into higher-wage jobs. Lifelong learning is vital for graduates. We encourage students to return to take that welding, history, creative media or philosophy class for fun and enrichment after earning their initial degree or certificate.

Financial aid is available to pay for college but in order to stay out of educational debt. students need to borrow cautiously. Some DACC students take advantage of federal aid programs, however funding is limited. Financial counselors strongly encourage aid recipients to implement cost saving strategies to assist them in stretching funds. Students attending full-time tend to borrow less overall than those who attend part-time and those who attend full-time are eligible for the New Mexico Lottery Scholarship to help fund their college education. However, failure to graduate for part-time students, combined with loan debt becomes a financial issue that can haunt them for years.

So come study with us and get a degree or certificate as soon as possible. Completing sooner will help you earn more money and avoid long term educational debt.

Dr. Renay Scott is the President of DACC

integrity, including three years as assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of the Interior for Land and Resources, four years as governor of

is no doubt about his educational credentials: Carruthers has bachelors and masters degrees from NMSU and a PhD. in economics from Iowa State University. Off and on, he has been a student, a professor and an administrator at NMSU since 1957.

And there

And, Carruthers said, whether it's at the state or federal level, running a successful HMO or serving as dean of the Business College or chancellor of the NMSU system and president of its Las Cruces campus, "management is not that big of a challenge." You have to follow a set of principles, you need some structure and "you have to get the right people on the team and vou have to put them in the right seat," he said, paraphrasing author Jim Collins in his book "Good to Great."

In his three years as NMSU chancellor (he began his fourth year on June 1), putting that team together is what Carruthers considers his greatest achievement. "Our team is outstanding," he said. "It's the right blending and backgrounds."

The leadership team includes Provost Dan Howard, Vice President for University Advancement Andrea Tawney, Senior Vice President for Administration and Finance Angela Throneberry, General Counsel Liz Ellis, Athletic Director Mario Moccia, President and CEO of Aggie Development, Inc. Scott Eschenbrenner, Doña Ana Community College President Dr. Renay Scott, NMSU-Alamogordo President Ken Van Winkle and Carruthers' chief of staff, Sharon Jones.

The university also includes "some of the finest deans around," he said.

"Chancellor Carruthers' love for NMSU is infectious, said Doña Ana Community College President Dr. Renay Scott. "I appreciate how Chancellor Carruthers pulls teams of people together to work on complex problems."

Managing a "leading organization" in government, business or at a university is "a pretty simple deal," Carruthers said. You put the right team together, "provide the vision and outline the "goals and objectives."

Carruthers, who turns 77 on August 29, arrives at his office in Hadley Hall at the top of the NMSU horseshoe between 6 and 6:10 each morning. Provost Dan Howard arrives at the office next door even earlier. "He makes the coffee," Carruthers said.

Carruthers works 10 or 11 hours each week day and then attends evening and weekend events for a total of 60 to 65 hours a week, plus a lot of travel around the state and the country.

That's often in one of his six vintage cars. Carruthers' collection includes 1964 and 2002 Thunderbirds, a 1995 Buick Rivera and three Ford mustangs: a 1967 coupe, a convertible and a fastback. "I drive them all but rarely put more than 1,500 miles per year on any of them," he said. "My sentimental favorite is the 1967 Mustang Coupe – my first of the collection. Simple car – six-cylinder engine, radio, heater, threespeed transmission, no power equipment, and it runs like a new car."

"I love to do this," Carruthers said of his job as chancellor. "I love the students, the faculty, the staff." NMSU students, he finds, "like to listen to old, white-haired guys. I really enjoy the environment and I enjoy the people."

Among his many roles at NMSU, Carruthers chairs the university's strategic plan committee, Vision 2020. "It ought to be a simple plan," he said, and "you ought to pay attention to it all the time." The plan has six goals and 30 performance indicators, Carruthers said. Its overarching focus is on increasing graduation, enrollment and community service at NMSU.

Ultimately, Carruthers said he wants to "make sure our students are very comfortable on campus" with an eye toward increase the number of first-year students and the overall student population that live at the university. NMSU's leadership continues "to improve student life on campus," Carruthers said.

Initiatives to aid recruitment, retention and graduation include reducing mandatory degree credit hours from 128 to 120 and modified tuition for students from Mexico.

Part of Carruthers' vision has been NMSU's offices we hold, I want to gain more."

Democratic County Chair Liz Gonzales-Johnson said she doesn't see a split locally or nationally in the Democratic Party because of the hard-fought battle for the presidential nomination between Clinton and Sanders. "I don't think there's going to be a split. I think the Democratic Party is going to come together," she said. "We've got to win it one district at a time, one community at a time."

City and county elected officials have "not represented city voices" on issues like the gross receipts tax and the county transit system, McGonnell said. "Let's get some Republicans on that county commission to help Ben Rawson," she said. Rawson is the only Republican on the five-member commission. His seat is not up in 2016. but three of the other four commission seats are up. and all are currently held by Democrats.

"The huge lesson learned" city and county-wide in non-partisan elections for mayor and city council held last November was that "the monev didn't win." Gonzales-Johnson said. The results showed strong support for individual candidates. The winners, she said, knocked on doors and "it paid off."

The same will apply countywide in the 2016 general election, Gonzales-Johnson said. "We're the Democratic Party of Doña Ana County, not the Democratic Party of Las Cruces." The party holds meetings in communities across the county and is putting together a "strong core of volunteers" to help both incumbents and firsttime candidates, she said.

And, even though more Democrats traditionally turn out for presidential elections than they do in non-presidential years, "we're not taking that for granted," she said. Turnout was higher in 2012 than it was in 2008. We want to turn that around," Gonzales-Johnson said.

Overall, she said, "voter turnout is so poor." It's better in Doña Ana Countv than statewide. "but not good enough" she said. "We're going to do better."

Getting out the vote for every office on the ballot is also a focus for Republicans, McGonnell said. Voters should elect a new county treasurer and clerk - both incumbent Democrats are term limited that "listen to the public and address their concerns," she said. Those elected to county offices should "stand up for what is right. (be) business friendly and citizen friendlv." McGonnell said. It's the party's job to help convince local voters that Republican candidates will do that, she said.

Both parties are aware that legislative races in Doña Ana County could determine the balance of power in the New Mexico Legislature in the 2017 and 2018 sessions.

Mary Jane Garcia, who had held the seat for 24 years. "We're going to take that back," Gonzales-Johnson said. In fact, one of the things that made her decide to run for Democratic county chair (she was elected in April 2015) was seats the Democrats had lost because "candidates were out there on their own." she said.

460 vote early on Memorial Day; June 4 is last day to vote early

By Mike Cook

Las Cruces Bulletir

A total of 460 people voted early on Monday, May 30 – Memorial Day, said Doña Ana County Chief Deputy County Clerk Scott Krahling. It's the first time ever the county clerk's office has been open for early voting on the Memorial Day holiday.

As of Tuesday morning, May 31, 5,041 people have voted early in the 2016 primary, Krahling said. That includes 3,669 Democrats and 1,732 Republicans. In all of 2012, 3,503 voted early, compared to 3,269 people in 2012, he said.

Early voting continues through Saturday, June 4.

You can vote early during regular office hours Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, June 4. Early voting at alternate locations begins Saturday, May 21, 2016 and ends on June 4. You can vote early at alternate locations from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. #### DOÑA ANA COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Candidates advocate accountability at forum

Bulletin report

At a May 26 forum, accountability was the word of the day for candidates seeking county offices.

More than 140 people attended the event at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces sponsored by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. Democrats Isabela Solis, incumbent Wayne Hancock and David Bonner are campaigning to represent District 4, while Republicans Ramon Jimenez and William Jarrod Webb square off for their party's nomination. Hancock, the current chair of the Doña Ana County Commission, defended the commission's record, while challengers questioned its decisions.

"I'm particularly proud the county has had five years of clean audits,"

Hancock said. "No other county in New Mexico has achieved that."

"I don't know how we can have five clean audits without having an internal auditor," Solis said. "We haven't had an internal auditor in four years. An internal auditor would tell us where our money is and let us know we're $15 million in the hole."

She said she's heard a lot of complaints about roads not being repaired for 10 years.

"But before we do roads ... we need to look at accountability," Solis said.

Jimenez, a retired state police captain, said his priorities are economic development, public safety and emergency services and the efficient provision of essential services.

He criticized the current commission for exploiting its employees, paying out "millions of dollars in lawsuits." and creating a comprehensive plan that expands the reach of the county.

"We have the highest GRT (gross receipts tax) in the state, and they implemented a doomed transit system," he said.

County leaders need to respect the sanctity of individual freedom and individual property rights, Jimenez said.

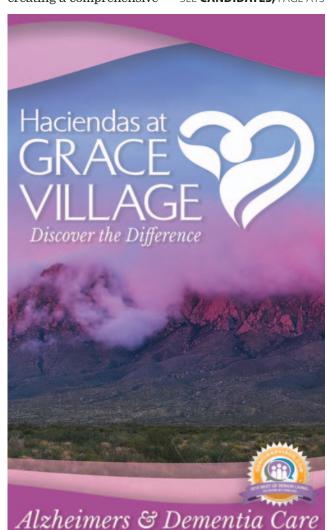

Bonner described himself as "a very conservative Democrat, very conservative fiscally."

"The main thing we need to do is get a balanced budget and get the fighting out of the Doña Ana County Commission," he said.

District 5

In District 5, would-be county commissioners include Democrats Bill Standridge, John Vasquez and Dickie Apodaca. The winner of the Democratic primary will face Republican Craig Wayne Buckingham or Kim Hakes in November.

Apodaca, a civil engineer who ran the county road department, told the forum audience his priorities are open government; professionalism, with commissioners respecting one another and the taxpayers; and economic development that leads to job creation.

He said the county needs to ensure the High Mesa Road is built to connect the industrial parks in Santa Teresa with the West Mesa Industrial Park in Las Cruces.

The road would help "create jobs for our residents so they don't have to leave," he said.

Buckingham, who is due to retire after 28 years in the sheriff's office, said he wants to continue to help people by serving as a commissioner.

He said it's time to get rid of the GRT.

"The commission is ignoring the democratic process when you (county citizens) voted three times not to raise taxes," he said.

Buckingham also called for repeal or modification of the county comprehensive plan.

"It's time to give this commission back to the people, because it has not been there for a long time," he said. "We need accountability."

He said one of the biggest complaints he's heard is that people can't get a hold of their county commissioner.

Buckingham advocated hiring more paid firefighters and increasing the budget of the sheriff's office.

Republican Hakes, a retired banker, said he's running for county commissioner for District 5 because of the "dysfunction and negativity coming out of the county commission."

Hakes said he has identified ways to free up money for the county, including doing away with bus service "started against the wishes of the pubic."

"I am not against buses," he said "I am against empty buses."

Standridge, who served 20 years in the Las Cruces Police Department and worked in private business, said the county's money has been spent unwisely and tax increases need to be repealed.

He advocated transparency, charging the commission has made decisions that have gone against the wishes of the public.

Vasquez, describing himself as a JFK Democrat, said the county should adopt parallel planning so it can better manage its budget and find ways to achieve its objectives "without spending the entire budget."

Also seeking seats on the county commission are Democrats Ramon Gonzalez and David Garcia, who are running in District 2.

Treasurer

The winner of a three-way race for the Democratic

Lance Harkey, owner • lance@lcirrigationrepair.com 575-649-7843 • lcirrigationrepair.com nomination to become county treasurer will run against Republican Jill Johnson in the general election. The competing Democrats are Eric Rodriguez, Eugenia Montoya Ortega and Shannon Reynolds.

Johnson, whose 25-year career with Caterpillar included doing internal audits, said she would bring experience and dedication to the job of treasurer.

Local business owner Ortega said she would work to achieve maximum return on investments, adequate financial reporting and equitable tax collection.

"The current treasurer will not be part of my staff," she said.

"I think we've got process problems here," said Reynolds, who added that's why businesses are not locating here.

"Mr. Gutierrez doesn't have a place in my administration, either," he said.

Early primary voting is underway and will continue until Saturday, June 4, when polls will be open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

On primary Election Day — Tuesday, June 7 — polls will be open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

R.L. Young Park part of Las Cruces for almost 60 years

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

Young Park. Just say the words and it makes most people think of the Renaissance ArtsFaire each November and artist Bob Diven's dragon, Magellan, in the lake. But there's a lot more going on at this wonderful family gathering place at 850 Walnut Ave., right next to Lynn Middle School.

The park is named for R.L. Young (1860-1932), who served as Third Judicial District attorney and was the second mayor of Las Cruces. He also was instrumental in the formation of Elephant Butte Irrigation District, was one of the founders of St. Paul's United Methodist Church and was at one time president of the board of regents of New Mexico A & M College, according to the May 24, 1962 City of Las Cruces proclamation that named the park in his honor. (Edward O. Noble was mayor in 1962 and Gladys Hansen was city clerk.) The official name is R.L. Young Park, but most people today just call it Young Park.

The city received money from the federal Land and Water Conservation (LWC) fund for half the cost of building the park in 1968-69, said Elyn Clarke, GIS technician with the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

According to the provisions of the 1964 act that created the fund, the site must remain a park. "If the city ever uses the land for anything else, they must build something elsewhere the same size... with their own money," Clarke said. She said

Young Park is 21.52 acres in size, including its eastside parking lot. The site of the park was at one time a city dump. Wofford Construction built the park, Clarke said, and Shrickel, Rollins and Associates of Arlington, Texas was the architect, she said.

Burn Construction built the famous pond. Anyone over the age of 12 who wants to fish in the pond has to have a permit, which can be obtained anywhere fish and game permits are sold, Clarke said.

PARK FROM PAGE A14

One of the original designs for the park was to flatten it out, but "city forefathers said no, it would be better with the hills," Clarke said. "The hills and dips from the park are from the original desert landscape," she said.

When the park was built, it originally had gas lamps, Clarke said. Electric lights were added in 1981, on 40foot poles. Tennis courts were added in 1981, again thanks to LWC funding. New restrooms were delivered by semi-truck and installed intact in 2015, Clarke said.

Young Park has two stages. The main stage is covered, while the one at the south end of the park is uncovered. The park's white arches are titled "The Power of Difference," and were built in 1987.

"Young Park is one of two regional parks that the city has," Clarke said. "It is used heavily by our community, near and far. Events are hosted throughout the year in it. People love it because of the openness, shade, walking paths, fishing, playgrounds and just by being in a comfortable-feeling park," she said.

The park also has benches, tables, barbecue grills, drinking fountains, a playground with swing sets and shade structures.

Ask a friend or neighbor, natural gas saves you money! Through the direct use of natural gas over 90% of the possible energy is being used by the consumer. For electric nearly 66%, on average, of the possible energy is being lost during transmission and generation. That means you are paying for energy you can't even use. The best part is that Zia Natural Gas Company is offering free service line extensions to those willing to change over their main heating source and get on the natural gas advantage.

new partnership with Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine, which will bring about 160 medical students to the campus this August and increase to about 600 during the next four years.

Carruthers served as Interior Department undersecretary from 1981 to 1984. He was elected New Mexico's 27th governor in 1986 and served a single four-year term (governors could not succeed themselves in those days). He was president and CEO of Cimarron Health Plan from 1993 to 2003 when he became dean of the NMSU College of Business.

About to retire from that position nearly a decade later, Carruthers was encouraged to apply for the NMSU presidency after the board of regents "excused" former NMSU President Barbara Couture in October 2012. Carruthers "started looking at the criteria" and realized "I can do that," so he applied for the position. The hardest part, he said, was convincing Kathy, his wife of 55 years, that he should take the job.

"Throughout his years of service he has been and continues to be generous with his time, talent and resources. He has a particular talent to bring dispirit individuals and groups together for the betterment of the project – whatever it happens to be."

Carruthers, the first Aggie to serve as NMSU president, still has two years to go on his five-year contract as chancellor. If the regents think he is still producing and his health is good, Carruthers said he may accept an extension when the contract expires in 2018.

Of my three professions (business: 13 years, government: 10 to 12 years, higher education: 23 years), "I enjoy this the most by far and away," he said. Carruthers has been on and off the NMSU campus as a student, professor and administrator since 1957.

Furloughs possible as NMSU cuts budget

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

NMSU Chancellor Garrey Carruthers said employee furloughs are "always a possibility" as the university struggles with a $10.7 million budget deficit in FY 2017.

"If our restructuring doesn't have enough revenue in the shortterm," he said, furloughs may be necessary. "My preference is to never do that," Carruthers said. "My goal is to not to have to use that strategy. I think we're making progress."

The university has a $650 million annual budget counting the main campus, Doña Ana Community College and the other NMSU campuses around the state, and about 4,000 employees, he said. It has seen a decrease of 221 (6 percent) in regular and temporary positions since FY 2014, while the three-year average increase (including the proposed FY 2017 budget) in tuition in 2016. and fees has been held to 0.7 percent.

The board of regents did not approve a requested increase in tuition for the coming fiscal year. But, regents did approve a 5 percent increase in on-campus housing rates and a 3 percent increase in meal plans during their April 4 meeting. They also approved a $7.50 increase in parking permit rates.

Staff reductions and fee increases may not be the university's only path to budget cuts. "We'll probably eliminate programs before it's all over," Carruthers said. Even so, he said, "collegiality on the campus right now is very high. We will sail this ship together through the stormy seas," Carruthers said.

NMSU reduced its budget by $7.5 million in non-recurring funds in FY 2015 and by $10.8 million in recurring and non-recurring funds

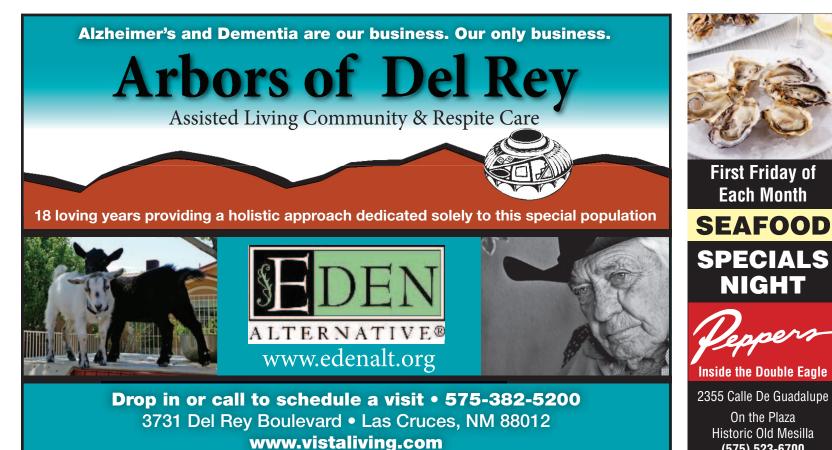

Carruthers said NMSU has taken the lead in developing a new higher-education funding formula for the state, developed and implemented a "linearized tuition model," completed a major staffing study that will lead a complete restructuring and modified its mobile-device allowance policy to create additional savings.

He said declining oil and gas revenues "get the lion's share of credit for declining revenues" in the state. Since the end of the recession that began in 2007, Carruthers said, "our recovery has been much, much slower than any other state." As a result, New Mexico has lost population and that, along with the state's poor high school graduation rate, has contributed to a decline in enrollment at NMSU. This year's freshman class, however, was up 6.7 percent over last year, he said.

Gifts drive renovation, scholarships, athletic improvements

As New Mexico State University struggles with a nearly $11 million deficit as it puts together its FY 2017 budget, the university's donors continue to support the university with major gifts to help pay for student scholarships, new construction and the renovation of existing buildings and athletic upgrades and improvements.

Here are some examples:

• NMSU's Giving Tuesdav in December 2015 raised $5.7 million with match, which helped pay for 82 new scholarships. The next Giving Tuesday is Nov. 29.

• Its five-year $125 million capital campaign continues and has already helped with new construction, including $600,000 for NMSU's new spiritual center, and many renovation projects. "We've made major strides in capital improvement," said NMSU Chancellor Garrey Carruthers.

 Donations have helped pay for turf at Aggie Memorial Stadium ($1 million), football locker room renovation ($500,000), baseball stadium renovations ($1.5 million), weight room upgrades ($700,000), swim and diving team lock room renovations ($500,000) and baseball turf ($300,000). The university's Football Stadium Skybox Club 27 has raised $1.1 million.

War more than just memories for Las Cruces veteran

BY MIKE COOK Las Cruces Bulletin

When retired United States Army Maj. Arthur L. Johnson celebrated Memorial Day 2016 at a candlelight vigil at Las Cruces Veterans Park, his memories went back more than three-quarters of a century and included D-Day, the Battle of the Bulge, liberating a death camp and preparing for an invasion of Japan.

Born in Illinois, Johnson, 95, has lived in Las Cruces for the past 10 years. He met his second wife, Rose, here and married her about eight years ago.

Johnson's father was killed in a boiler explosion in 1928, when Johnson was eight years old. His mother died "four or five years later" in a car accident. Orphaned along with his brother, Johnson worked in a bakery before school and after school and delivered milk. He didn't graduate from high school, but did learn to type, and that served him well after he joined the Army at age 19 in December 1939 and was stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia.

"While attending classes I watched parachute training and decided I would like to join the airborne," he said, adding that the $100 jump in pay soldiers received if they could parachute was an added incentive. He joined the 101st Airborne Division Screaming Eagles, where he became a demolitions officer in his regiment. Johnson was part of the American liberating force that attacked German fortifications along the French coastline during the D-Day assault on Normandy, 72 years ago on June 6. He and other members of the 101st Airborne had no transportation to reach the invasion sight, so they used whatever means were available, including, at one point, a horsedrawn wagon, Johnson remembered. After D-Day, he participated in an assault on German forces in Holland.

Johnson also took part in the Battle of the Bulge, a nearly seven-week battle in December 1944 and January 1945 between the Allies and Nazi Germany. After its base camp was moved to France, Johnson and other members of the 101st Airborne were sent by truck to the defense of Bastone, Belgium as part of the larger engagement.

"As we approached Munich, Germany," we could smell a very bad odor," Johnson remembered. "The closer we came to Munich the odor became unbearable. As we neared Munich we found this very large enclosure with high wire surrounding the compound. There were many people that

NM's first Girl Scout camp is revitalized, reopened

By Billy Huntsman Las Cruces Bulletin

Mary Ballard makes homemade cinnamon buns and orange wedges once a year—when she goes to Camp Mary White, New Mexico's first Girl Scout Camp, located an hour away from Alamogordo, near the town of Mayhill.

For this one week in the summer when she leaves behind the real-world life, along with her "real job" as Southwest field coordinator for the Department of Health's Tobacco Use Prevention and Control Program, where she has worked for the past 15 years, she is no longer Mary Ballard but Kitty.

"We all have camp names," she said. "It's part of the camp culture."

Nobody at camp is called their real names, Ballard said, except if someone gets mad at someone else.

Ballard first came to CMW when she was 8 years old.

"(The camp) was one of the best parts of my childhood," she said. "It was safe, it was fun, it was an escape. The life lessons and the values I learned at camp have proved essential to me growing up."

The camp means so much to her, in fact, Ballard's fiancé proposed to her there last year.

"I was pretty much raised an only child, and it was very lonely, very isolating," Ballard said. "But I knew that there were people waiting for me to come to camp, and I knew, as soon as I stepped off the bus, I was going to get scooped up and hugged."

It was to camp. Ballard said, she went after her grandmother died 15 days before Ballard graduated high school. which left her heartbroken.

To provide future generations with the opportunities afforded people such as Ballard when she was young, the camp is maintained by the efforts of the Friends of Camp Mary White

FCMW is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization formed in 2006 for the purpose of purchasing the camp, which, built in 1927, had formerly been a Girl Scout camp but is no longer associated with that organization.

The Friends bought the camp and have since then performed significant renovations, the most recent being converting the camp to a septic system from cesspools.

The renovations are, for the most part, done by FCMW volunteers—although professionals were brought in in order to install the septic system.

To raise the $35,000 needed to install the system, FCMW started a GoFundMe campaign in July of last year, and although the campaign's webpage says only about $1,500 has been raised, Ballard said the rest of the money was also raised, due in no small part to a grant of $35,000 given to FCMW by the Peyton Yates Foundation.

"(Peyton's mother) had a long relationship with Camp Mary White," said Liz "Lash" Lonngren, president of the FCMW board of trustees.

This relationship resulted in Pevton eventually donating the money to the nonprofit, Lonngren said.

"(The grant) was the catalyst to get us to be able to open," Lonngren said, by bringing all of the camp up to code.

The PY Foundation is based out of Artesia and has benefited multiple causes in southern New Mexico, such as the building of a statue in Artesia and the building of Pete V. Domenici Hall on the NMSU - Las Cruces campus, wherein the S.P. and Estelle Yates Theater is named in honor of Peyton's parents, who made their money in the turn-ofthe-century oil industry in New Mexico. Ballard said the grant is proof that FCMW's cause is not a niche cause.

"There are people who believe in us," Ballard said.

Ballard said the new septic system needs one more inspection before the camp has, what Lonngren called, "a soft opening" to the public July 6 to 26.

"One of the reasons why many of us take a week's worth of leave from our 'real jobs' and the real world and go work at camp is because we know that the work we do now is going to help preserve a place like this for another little girl who needs to get hugged off the bus," Ballard said.

This was Dachau concentration camp. the first opened in Germany, in 1933. About 30,000 people were liberated from the camp. Thousands died there.

One of those liberated spoke English and many other languages. Johnson said, and served as interpreter for the camp commandant. This man. Dr. Samanoff, showed Johnson and other soldiers a building used as a gas chamber and told them the camp guards "had sent many men, women and children into this chamber and turned on the gas" the night before the liberation. Johnson remembers the shaved heads of the prisoners and the bodies of women on top of their children, trying to protect them from the gas. "They were all dead," he said.

"The other building was used as an oven to burn the bodies of many men, women and children," Johnson said. He saw the ashes, with bones sticking up through them.

Johnson and other members of the 101st were then ordered to take Berchtesgaden, "which was Hitler's southern headquarters." He still remembers the sight of it burning as he arrived.

After Germany surrendered, Johnson was one of thousands of soldiers who trained for an assault on Japan. He remembers jumping out of an airplane at 10,000 feet and practicing jumping never took place because Japan surrendered after bombs atomic were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945, ending the war.

After the war, Johnson served four years in the Intelligence Counter Corps in Germany before returning to the U.S. He joined the 82nd Airborne Division and spent a year and a half fighting in the Korean Conflict, where he served as an advisor to the Third Army of the Republic of Korea.

Later, after he had returned to the U.S., Johnson was stationed at Fort nia, where he served as commander of Russian language students at the Presidio. On his second day there, Johnson met a German instructor who turned out to be Dr. Samanoff, the interpreter who had been his guide at Dachau.

Johnson remained at Fort Ord until his retirement from the Army in December 1959.

He worked for the Federal Bureau of Prisons for a time after his retirement and moved to Deming. New Mexico for his daughter's health. While living in Deming, Johnson drove a van for the DAV, taking disabled veterans from the region to the VA hospital in Albuquerque. Over the course of 10 years at that job, Johnson said, he drove about 250,000 miles.

After his first wife died. Johnson followed his son to Las Cruces, and has lived here for the past decade.

Johnson is the oldest member of the Military

Order of the Purple Heart Mesilla Valley Chapter #4. He has a total of six Purple Hearts, all for injuries received during World War II combat. "I was lucky," he said. "None of them were really serious."

Johnson also has received a Silver Star, two Bronze Stars with Valor, two presidential unit citations, recognition as a master parachutist, a combat infantry badge, the French Croix de Guerre with Palm, the Belgium Farragere of 1940 and the Netherlands Orange Lanyard.

Johnson joined the Benavidez-Patterson 82nd Airborne Group based in El Paso about five years ago, he said.

Johnson holds many, many memories of his Army days, of the comrades he lost in battle, of the sights he saw at Dachau. "You get used to it eventually," he said.

Johnson will turn 96 on Aug. 29, and said he is "still doing pretty good."

School board passes budget; 53 teaching positions to be cut

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

After considering three budget options presented by Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds, all of which included a reduction in teaching positions, the LCPS Board of Education approved the option that eliminated the fewest number of positions.

The vote was made at the board's Tuesday, May 24 meeting.

The school district's 2016-17 budget, which includes approximately $187.2 million in state funding known as the operational budget, was approved by a vote of 4-1, with board Secretary Barbara Hall casting the only no vote.

"I voted against the budget because I feel it is wrong to spend down on our reserve so much and unwise to not maintain the fleet of vehicles which transport students," Hall said.

Before giving its approval to the budget, the board made minor adjustments to the bottom line, including removing the purchase of new school district vehicles. The monies 'Until the state begins to return public education funding to previous year levels – levels that provided more adequate funding for our growing needs – we'll continue to face shortfalls. In the meantime, we needed to reduce the size of our staff because the vast majority of the local budget is in people and that's where the savings was possible.'

STAN ROUNDS

Las Cruces Public Schools superintendent

saved will instead save two additional teaching positions. The board also gained assurance from Rounds that should the amount of funds for risk insurance be lower than anticipated, any savings would also be put toward restoration of teaching positions.

In order to balance the budget, a total of 53 teaching positions will be cut, from elementary through high school. But that does not mean employees will lose their jobs. Rounds has said that "all employees who are in good standing will keep a job with this district. Some employees may have to be reassigned to another position. But, there will not be lay-offs," he said. "The cuts will be achieved through resignations, retirements and natural attrition of employees."

Rounds said the reduction in school district employees is necessary because of declining funding from the state. Developing the new budget began with a deficit of $2.9 million, officials said.

"Until the state begins to return public education funding to previous year levels – levels that provided more adequate funding for our growing needs – we'll continue to face shortfalls," he said. "In the meantime, we needed to reduce the size of our staff because the vast majority of the local budget is in people and that's where the savings was possible."

The budget will also provide for state-mandated salary increases for teachers who move to a higher experience level, and it will pay for the minimum-wage salary increase imposed by the Las Cruces City Council, which impacts LCPS classified employees such as custodians, secretaries and security guards.

Exact salary implications won't be known until negotiations are completed with the two unions who represent the majority of LCPS employees: NEA-Las Cruces and Classified School Employees Council (CSEC) of Las Cruces. The current year's salaries for all LCPS employees, with the exception of cafeteria employees. were cut by three days' worth of pay as part of a furlough imposed for the 2015-16 school year. That salary reduction was based on limited funding. Jo Galvan, district spokeswoman, said the potential restoration of the furlough days for 2016-17 will be negotiated with both unions.

"There's no doubt, this is the hardest, tightest and most difficult budget we've faced since I've been in Las Cruces," Rounds said. "But with a lot of compromising and feedback from the community and our staff, we've achieved a budget that's solvent and maintains services for our students."

The budget now heads to Santa Fe for a review by the state Public Education Department. The school board will have a final look during a public budget hearing at 4:00 p.m. on Thursday, June 9 at the LCPS Administration Building, 505 S. Main St.

Zia Middle Interact Club hosts food drive

Bulletin report

In late May, the Zia Middle School Interact Club held its first service project since being chartered: a food drive on the school campus that benefited Casa de Peregrinos. Club members collected 125 pounds of food valued at $215 which will provide 114 meals to people in need in the community.

School advisors Linda Knutson and Amy Krohn, along with Rotary volunteers Rosemary Crawford and Elke Wunderlich, were on hand to cheer them on.

"The students chose this food drive as their service project," said Crawford, who helped the student club get its charter. "This was their idea and they followed through."

Lorenzo Alba from Casa de Peregrinos helped the group by providing the barrels to collect the food and advising them as to the types of food that would be most needed.

NMSU's required GPA for admission is changing

By Billy Huntsman Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's new minimum grade point average for freshman admittance will be 2.75 starting in the fall semester of 2016.

The change was announced in 2014, following a Faculty Senate vote of 34-11 in favor of the change.

"The change was made in our efforts to support academic success of our freshman class," said Bernadette Mon-retained at the levels that we would like to see "

Students who do not meet NMSU's 2.75 required GPA are not excluded from admission completely. If they have at least a 2.5 and at least a 20 on the ACT, students can be admitted into Aggie Pathway, where they will take courses first at one of NMSU's five community colleges.

Upon completion of 24 credit hours with a 2.5 GPA, the students can enroll at main campus and pursue a bachelor's degree.

"Through this program, (students) will receive both academic and social support programs, be a part of a learning community, have multiple opportunities to be mentored by faculty, have special advisers to assist with course and career planning, and can transition easily to NMSU to continue with a four-year degree once certain criteria are met," Montova said.

What financial and enrollment impacts the change will have on the university, Montoya couldn't say.

"While this may have an initial impact on enrollment at the university, it will likely increase enrollments at our community colleges, and the university will see a slight increase at the time that the students choose to transition," she said. "At this point, it is still too early to determine any full impact and we won't have an analysis complete until fall admissions and enrollments are complete."

When the change was first announced, it raised concern from some faculty members, who feared the change would hinder the chances of diverse students being admitted to NMSU.

The university issued a response to those concerns in 2014.

"The proposed change in admission requirements would not impact diversity at NMSU," the response reads. "University leaders have looked carefully at this

About 56 percent of students who entered NMSU in fall 2013 were Hispanic and nine percent were American Indian, Asian American, Black, Hawaiian-Pacific, single races or multiple races. Had these new requirements been in effect at the time, these numbers would be nearly the same."

Whether this is true in 2016 remains to be seen. Now that the time to implement the new GPA requirement is at hand, NMSU will wait until the fall census date to determine the impacts of the new GPA requirement.

"At this time it is still too early to do an analysis on the admissions data," Montoya said. "We will continue to invite admissions applications from prospective students through the first week of classes in August."

Police seek armed robbery suspect

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps identify the man suspected of Monday evening's armed robbery at a local store.

At about 9:30 p.m. Monday, May 23, an armed man walked into the Family Dollar Store at 5702 Bataan Memorial East, pointed a handgun at the clerk and demanded cash. The suspect fled the store with an undisclosed amount of cash.

No injuries were reported and the suspect was last seen heading eastbound through the store's parking lot.

The suspect is described as Hispanic with a light complexion, about 5-feet-9-inches tall with a skinny build. He was wearing a black hoodie, a dark-colored baseball cap and white gloves.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspect is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip by text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Man charged for counterfeiting money

Las Cruces Police arrested a man suspected of creating thousands of dollars of counterfeit money and distributing it throughout the area within the past few months. Andrew Barnett, 35, of 3245 E. University Ave., is charged with 16 counts of forgery – eight for making or altering counterfeit cash and eight for issuing or transferring the fake money.

Detectives learned that on April 18 Barnett gave a friend eight $5 bills to purchase items at Sally's Beauty Supply, 2240 E. Lohman Ave. Once the clerk realized the $5 bill were fake. Barnett and his friend were leaving the parking lot. The clerk jotted down the license plate of the vehicle Barnett was driving and police learned that it belonged to his mother.

Detectives also learned that on April 22 Barnett was stopped by law enforcement and was found to be in possession on numerous counterfeit bills.

Detectives interviewed Barnett who indicated that he made the counterfeit bills in his bedroom at the home he shares with his mother. Police obtained consent to search Barnett's home where they located his computer, two printers and counterfeit notes in various denominations.

Barnett was arrested Tuesday, May 24, and booked into the Doña Ana County Detention Center where he is being held on a $10,000 cash-only bond.

Detectives believe Barnett was making counterfeit currency in all denominations.

Police encourage cashiers and others who accept paper currency to carefully inspect incoming cash and utilize a counterfeit money detector pen to help identify phony notes.

Sheriff's department seeks public input on grant funding

Bulletin reports

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department will be applying for federal funds through the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (JAG) Program and will be accepting recommendations from the public as part of the application process.

The JAG Program provides funding to support law enforcement in technical support, strategic planning, research and evaluation, data collection, training, equipment, forensic laboratories and criminal justice information systems.

The grant requires that anyone in Doña Ana County who wishes to give recommendations on the use of the funds has the opportunity to do so. The deadline to give input is on or before Tuesday, June 28.

For input on the JAG Program, call the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department grants administrator, Angie Guerrero, (575) 525-1911 or via email, angieg@donaanacounty.org.

Department holds town hall meetings

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department has launched a series of town hall meetings. The first was held in Hatch on Tuesday, May 31.

According to Sheriff Enrique "Kiki" Vigil, the meetings are designed to provide a platform for people in the rural communities of Doña Ana County to express concerns over public safety and address issues in each of the county's seven districts.

"This department serves the most desolate stretches of Doña Ana County," Vigil said, via a release. "We want to accommodate the residents in those areas and hear directly from them on how we can improve our law-enforcement efforts in their community."

Town hall meetings are expected to be scheduled monthly. Times and exact locations are being finalized.

City renews efforts to grow local businesses

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

Trade missions to distant lands are not on the "to do" list for the city's new economic development coordinator, Mayra de la Canal — at least not in the foreseeable future.

"Travel to different parts of the world will take months, a year, maybe years to implement," she said.

De la Canal, who started her new job in January after a stint as senior economic development specialist for the city of El Paso, is refocusing the department's sights on retaining and growing local businesses.

After that, she will turn her attention to attracting retail to Downtown and industry to the city-owned West Mesa Industrial Park.

Before looking to recruit businesses from distant lands, she will direct her attention to Cuidad Juárez.

INSIDE

Looking across the border, she said Las Cruces intends to work on a regional perspective with its partners in Cuidad Juárez and El Paso.

"It's very important that we look to the south," she said, "and it's fairly easy to do. I have all those contacts and I think they will be happy to work with me."

Addressing local needs

In order to carry out her "local first" mission, de la Canal is putting finishing touches on a business retention/expansion survey "to find out their real needs and trends.

"Small businesses are the ones that drive the economy, so we really need to pay attention to them," she said. "My main goal is to support existing local business community with expansion and retention efforts."

De la Canal said the city's local economic development partners — the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) at Doña Ana Community College, the chambers of commerce, SCORE and WESST — were scheduled to send the survey to their mailing lists June 2.

MSH's Emporium marks anniversary as unique shop

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

Downtown's elegant vintage and fine furniture shop, The Emporium, is celebrating its first anniversary in June.

The shop at 106 S. Water St. looks a lot like antique shops everywhere, but its business model is unique. It was organized under the auspices of Mesilla Valley Hospice, a 501(c) 3.

There's no CEO at The Emporium. Instead, four volunteer managers collectively make the decisions. A cadre of volunteers helps out at the shop.

Heather Pollard, one of the founders of The Emporium, said the shop was established in the aftermath of a financial crisis that nearly crushed the hospice in 2014.

'The Mesilla Valley Hospice was experiencing a $1 million shortfall. Five banks were holding its notes," Pollard said.

To get the hospice past its fiscal crisis, friends of hospice formed the Legacy Circle, which Pollard and Cheryl Nims chaired.

When the emergency passed, "We looked around and asked, 'What's next?"" Pollard recalled.

"The Legacy Circle went into advisory mode and these ladies took the next step forward," said Lorraine Padilla, Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation's executive director.

Pollard, Billie Taylor, Joanne Achen and Lanova Sheets, who had worked together on worthy causes for many years, decided the next new thing would be a shop to provide ongoing support for MVH.

Pollard said they didn't want to compete with established enterprises in Las Cruces that support local charitable organizations.

"Billie and I had volunteered at La Tienda. We didn't want to compete with La Tienda or Safe it would be one of a kind — and because they knew and loved antiques.

Members of the community stepped up and offered family treasures to be sold for a good cause.

"We give people permission to give their loved ones' things away," Pollard said.

Many of the donations come to the shop because people are downsizing, Achen said.

"We always need donations," Sheets said.

"We pray to the furniture gods," Pollard said.

"And they always come through," Padilla added.

Starting out strong

The Emporium succeeded from the start.

"We made $15,000 our first month," Achen said.

"A lady who was furnishing a home in Ruidoso bought $8,000 worth of furniture that month."

Because expenses are minimal — reasonable rent, internet service and a bit of marketing — The Emporium each month writes a check averaging $5,000 a month to MVH.

Pricing is an important function of the operation, the volunteer managers said.

They said they do online research to find comparable items and set prices accordingly.

"We keep our prices pretty reasonable," Achen said.

"One of the things we learned was everything sells eventually. Dishes sell, silver sells, furniture sells," Pollard said. "If something is particularly ugly, that doesn't mean it isn't valuable."

The most expensive item ever to leave shop was a 19th century armoire, Pollard said.

"We had to cut a hole in the ceiling to get it into the shop," Achen said.

"It was walnut with beautiful veneer patina," Pollard said. "It sold for over $2,000."

Organizing for success

"At the beginning, we did an actual inventory," Achen said. "We soon realized that wasn't going to work because every item is unique. Now we keep track of sales by category

Sheets said a group of men who volunteer for hospice pick up merchandise and deliver it to The Emporium every Wednesday.

"They're even willing to move things we moved around the week before," she said.

Pollard's husband, Joseph, is The Emporium's resident furniture repair and refinishing volunteer. Heather Pollard takes home antique linens for rehabilitation.

"I'm the queen of Oxi Clean," she said. Partnerships also contribute to the success of MVH and The Emporium.

"The business community has been great with us," Padilla said. "If we need a service, they're able to help us. We have the ability to partner with Rotarians and citizens in the community to raise money for a good cause.

"All the money goes to support programs and services. We are blessed to have them as part of MVH."

The survey will reach about 5,000 businesses, including home-based businesses.

If each of those businesses creates one job, the result would be 10 times that of one big, new business moving in and creating 500 jobs, de la Canal said.

"We asked them for their help, to reach out to their databases," she said. "With the survey, we will be able to ID the businesses that are hurting most. Then we will create a visitation program in which we will go to visit owners and managers who say they are in need of assistance."

She said once the survey data is analyzed it will be shared with the city's local economic development partners.

"Everyone will collaborate and we will form teams of three so that we can offer the different service options we have available."

Online, personal resources changing

At the same time, the department is revamping its website and making some changes in the online tools available for businesses to help themselves.

She said the city has just uploaded a business assistance guide listing services available through the city and its economic development partners.

Also set for uploading to the website is information on incentives available to businesses wanting to establish or expand operations in Las Cruces.

De la Canal said the incentives for prospects are offered in exchange for job creation.

"We need to include more tools," de la Canal said. "One tool that's up and running — SizeUp - is very expensive and underutilized."

She said she would be adding a "very cool tool" to help businesses, especially small businesses, with online marketing.

Personal assistance also available from the city's economic development department, including assistance with the building permit process. which had been the subject of public criticism for several years.

Donald Bustros is helping permit applicants and has increased the satisfaction rate to 99 percent, de la Canal said.

Targeting retail, industry

De la Canal said a study conducted in 2015 showed the city has the potential to create 100,000 square feet of retail space.

"We're trying to bring a lot of that here to Downtown," she said. "Retail will increase the walkability rate, which makes us even more attractive."

She said she would like to have attended the International Council of Shopping Centers this vear, as retail consultant Bob Gibbs recommended, but will have to wait until next year.

She commented that while the city focuses on retail, the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) concentrates on attracting industry to the area.

Slow Eurozone recovery illustrates power of fiscal policy

The Eurozone has finally recovered from the Great Recession.

Inflation-adjusted GDP has regained the same level as the previous peak in 2007. Meanwhile U.S. GDP is 10 percent above previous peak.

What explains this?

Why has the U.S. economy recovered more rapidly than has Europe's? The answer can be found in differences in fiscal policies. The U.S. had the Obama stimulus, a set of policies that resulted in a trillion-dollar deficit. Meanwhile. the nations of the Eurozone by-in-large have adopted austerity budgets. Lower deficits but slower recovery.

Drilling down, the countries forced by circumstances to cut budgets the most — Spain, Italy and Greece — have yet to recover. Italy's economy remains 9 percent below 2007 levels, for example. Countries able to adopt more expansive fiscal policy have seen more growth. Germany is up 5.5 percent; France is up 3.3 percent.

This creates a dilemma for those of us who don't care for large government.

Faced with an economic crisis, monetary policy just isn't enough. Aggressive fiscal policy is also needed. Economists have known this for decades, at least since Keynes, and the Great Recession has made it more evident. The countries with more aggressive fiscal policy are the countries that have done best since 2007.

This is depressing news for those of us who dislike big government. Sure, fiscal policy can be used to stabilize the economy, but it also opens up the door for mischief by the big government advocates to permanently expand government programs. This is precisely what happened in the 1930s when Roosevelt used the Great Depression to greatly expand government.

Larger government is not good, both because a larger government sector impinges on personal freedom and also because our best evidence indicates that countries with larger government sectors grow more slowly.

Still, it's hard to reject any policy capable of reducing misery in time of crisis. After all, people thrown out of work by recessions really are the victims of circumstances beyond their control.

Any recession is a failure of the capitalist system; this is allthe-more true when the recession is triggered by a financial crisis as was the Great Recession.

In addition to a fairness issue, there is an efficiency argument. Neither idle workers nor idle factories are contributing to economic wellbeing. The faster we can get people and machines back to work the better.

So here is the problem. Short term, expansionary government can be used to stimulate the economy, shortening a recession, but this opens the door for permanently larger government. Long run, larger government will slow growth and limit freedom. What to do?

One solution is to enact policies that automatically cut taxes or increase government spending in a down turn.

Princeton economist and former fed vice chair Alan Blinder, for example, recently recommended that unemployment benefits and food stamps be made contingent on unemployment rates. The higher the unemployment, the more generous the benefits. The idea is that during periods of high unemployment, there is likely to be relatively less abuse of the system by shirkers and more true need, while at the same time, the macroeconomy needs a push.

Unfortunately, automatic programs like those recommended by Blinder are likely to be inadequate during a true economic crisis such as the Great Recession. The shovel-ready projects funded by the Obama stimulus, projects with set start and a stop dates, are the type of programs that can provide a short run stimulus while not permanently raising spending.

The problem, of course, is that truly shovel-ready projects are hard to come by.

years with Widmeyer Communications' PreK-12 team. During her tenure, she was primarily focused on support for the W.K. Kellogg Foundation's work to support children and families, including its Education & Learning and Family Economic Security portfolios, as well as educational efforts of the ExxonMobil Foundation.

"Ms. Bryan brings to the Bridge the type of visionary leadership and experience necessary for the Bridge to accomplish its mission of enhancing the workforce in Doña Ana County," Scott said.

"Being in Washington, D.C. gave me an even greater appreciation for just how visionary the leadership of this county has been ... not just discussing the need to better connect education and success in the workforce, but devising innovative solutions that work for young people," Bryan said. "Now that the national conversation has caught up with us, there are huge opportunities to equip even more children and youth, unleash their potential, and transform our economy for the long-term."

Bryan steps back into the leadership role after the recent departure of Denni Cheney, who led the organization over the past year.

"Denni Cheney assisted the Bridge in an important time of transition. Her leadership helped the organization continue to support workforce development through partnerships with professional education, post-secondary education and the business community," Scott said.

The Bridge partners with the business community and education leaders to help young people become New Mexico's future labor force, entrepreneurs, innovators and civic leaders.

The Bridge laid the foundation for the state's first early college high school, Arrowhead Park Early College High School in Las Cruces, and now supports four more statewide.

The organization and its network of 25 public and private partners is building a "community of mentors" for students through hands-on business internships. advancing student-focused teacher training and expanding parents' capacity as strong mentors for their children.

'Humble and hungry' NMSU coach excited to sign Oñate star

Bulletin report

The fact Oñate High School basketball standout Johnny McCants was going to stay in town to play for New Mexico State University has been known for a while.

When NMSU head coach Paul Weir announced the news recently, he said the former Knight star was "an exciting addition.

"His combination of length, athleticis, and shooting ability are attractive on so many levels," Weir said. "But what separates him to me is how important it is to him to wear our jersey. To want to be an Aggie is going to be a hallmark of our program for years to come."

McCants, a graduate of Oñate, is ranked No. 1 in the state of New Mexico according to MaxPreps.com, while Rivals.com has him listed as a three-star recruit. The 6-7 forward also led the Knights to the state semifinals his senior season, guiding OHS to a 25-5 overall mark and 8-0 record in district play.

He was named the District 3 Player of the year for the second year in a row after averaging 19.7 points, 12.2 rebounds, 3.3 assists, 4.9 blocks and 2.6 steals in his senior campaign. McCants was a Gatorade Player of the Year finalist after tallying 22 double-doubles to go with his three triple-doubles this year.

McCants was named to the New Mexico High School Coaches Association 5A/6A All-Star Team for the south, which will take place on Thursday, July 28, at Eldorado High School. He was also named to the 2016 NMHSCA 6A All-State team after leading the Knights to the state semifinals.

As a junior, McCants earned second-team all-state honors after leading OHS to the state playoffs. Oñate finished that season 15-14 overall and 5-3 in district play – which was good for second place.

"He is well coached, humble and hungry," Weir said. "And when you put all that together you have a tremendous acquisition for our team."

Check your 'instincts' at the door

Insights and ideas from your favorite shrink

In everyday life, trusting your instincts often serves you well. Like being wary of overly friendly strangers; or like not leaving your car unlocked with the motor running. In golf, however, our initial instinct may turn out to be counterproductive, especially if our golfing talent is modest and one's grasp of the game's nuances is limited (read high-handicapper.) With the intent of helping to temper a few of those usually self-destructive impulses, here are three suggestions explained in a format I hope you will like.

Scenario one: You have a 530-vard par five, where you have just hit a very nice drive, leaving you with 275 yards to the center of the green. Jason Day can his hit his blade three iron that far, but you know very well you don't have a 275-yard shot. Instinct says to hit it as far as you can; so you think you'll hit your "lay-up" maybe 220, hopefully leaving you the shortest possible distance for your third shot.

Insight will inform otherwise. Let's say you do hit a pretty good threewood about 220. As a result, you're left with a 55-yard third shot. But it could be 40 yards or 70 yards, depending on the hole location. You're now looking at the hardest shot in golf for the typical higher handicap player - the halfwedge. Do you practice hundreds of delicate short wedge shots to be able to dial up exactly a spinning 45-, 55- or 65-yard shot that stops on a dime? Unless you are a scratch golfer the halfwedge and semi-lob wedge are not vour best options.

As your golf shrink, here's my idea. Figure out your best third shot strategy on the par five and then plan your lay-up shot to get that distance for a good level lie. Maybe you hit a stock pitching wedge 100 yards with a lot of confidence; you probably hit that shot well eight out of 10 times. So from 275 yards, hit a four-iron or hybrid to 100 yards, then it's money from there. On par fives, try to have your "go to" clubs in your hands. Always play to your strengths – it's just smart golf.

Scenario two: You have just stroked vour 40-foot putt to within a couple of feet of the hole. Pretty good, huh, you're thinking, instinctively followed by, "why, I'll just go ahead and quickly tap this in and get out of the way."

Wrong. Without wasting a moment, rational thinking, namely insight, will tell you that rushing to get your turn over with usually ends up with disappointment. On the putting green if you have a short putt that is not conceded, take a moment to figure it out. This is particularly important if you must stand awkwardly to avoid somebody's line, or if there is a slope involved. I'm not saying you should waste time and stalk a six-incher, but a lot of high-handicappers needlessly throw away strokes by blowing two-. three- and four-footers that aren't gimmie's.

Here's the idea. Often times missing a "tap-in" can be a confidence destroyer, causing an upset for the entire round. Decide ahead of time that, unless a short putt is conceded, you will mark your ball and devote as much concentration to that putt as you would to any other. Be patiently committed to your routine and pay attention

Scenario three: Stepping to the tee on a longish par-four hole directly into a very strong headwind (this is southern New Mexico!) your instinct says, "I guess I'll have to swing really, really hard so that I can get the ball out where it's 'supposed' to be." Upon further examination, insight will tell vou that over-swinging is never good, especially when a gale force wind may exaggerate any slight mistake or mishit. A very slight spin can turn your golf ball into a wild slice. The unthinking tendency is to fight the wind and try to overpower the golf ball. It's delusional to believe that we can bludgeon the ball to overcome a blustery headwind. It hardly ever works.

The shrink-think idea would be to apply the old adage "when it's breezy swing easy." Your best play is to swing at about 80 percent with smooth rhythm and unhurried tempo. Focus your energy into just making solid, square contact, while accepting the fact that you'll have a longer shot to the green.

relav teams much more of a chance.

"What can I say about Ruben?" said Benavidez. "He's a great kid and he's a great teammate and he was humble throughout the year. He's had a wonderful year, and for him to sacrifice himself for the better of the team—it definitely made a difference."

Whelpley qualified for five events at the state meet, and participated in four, bringing home medals in the 4 X 4 (second place); medley (third place); and 4 X 1 (fourth place).

Whelpley also won the Hawk of the Year award in 2015 as a junior.

"I can't say enough how proud I am of Lanie. She came to Centennial's track program as a freshman with so many dreams. She leaves as a senior having achieved many of them," said Whelpley's father. Keith. "I owe it to Frankie and his program at Centennial. I hope Las Cruces Public Schools are as proud of Centennial as I am of my Lanie. They both deserve it."

The acrylic award was embossed with the following: "For your personal courage to always do what is right and for your commitment to personal excellence.'

Ags finish hardball season in WAC Tourney

Bulletin report

New Mexico State University's baseball team did not win the WAC Championship or get a taste of the NCAA Regional tournaments, but the Aggies finished with a lot of momentum.

In head coach Brian Green's second season, NMSU went 34-23, with 23 more victories than the 2015 campaign.

NMSU's season ended Saturday, May 28 in Mesa, Arizona during the WAC postseason tournament with a 12-10 loss to Seattle.

Juniors Austin Botello, Daniel Johnson and Greg Popylisen were named to the Western Athletic Conference All-Tournament Team.

Botello, a native of Galveston, Texas, finished the tournament going eight for 18 at the plate with a home run, four runs scored and four RBI. He registered a .611 slugging percentage and a .474 on-base percentage during the Aggies four games.

Johnson, the WAC Player of the Year from Vallejo, Calif., finished the tournament going nine-for-20 at the plate with one extra-base hit, five runs scored and two RBI. He registered a .500 slugging percentage and a .450 on-base percentage during the Aggies four games.

Popylisen, a Highlands

Ranch, Colo. product, finished the tournament going eightfor-18 at the plate with two extra-base hits, a triple, four runs scored and three RBI. # NMSU names Flores new Ag dean

By Darrell J. Pehr

Rolando Flores, professor and head of Food Science and Technology and director of the Food Processing Center at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been selected as dean of New Mexico State University's College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences.

"Dr. Flores is internationally recognized for his work in food science technology, agricultural engineering and grain science," said NMSU Provost Dan Howard. "Moreover, he has been involved in many international initiatives and has a strong record of accomplishment as an administrator at a land-grant university. We look forward to his arrival at NMSU."

Interim Dean Jim Libbin has led the college over the past year and Howard acknowledged his positive impact on the college and the university.

"I am grateful to Dr. Jim Libbin for his good work as interim dean, which will continue until Dr. Flores takes over in August," Howard said. "Dr. Libbin has been a great asset to the university and we look forward to his continued contributions to NMSU."

Flores will join the college on Aug. 1.

"I'm very honored and humbled at the same time," Flores dream come true."

Flores said the prestige of the college attracted him to the position and he is looking forward to having an integral role in the college's success.

Joining NMSU will follow a pattern for Flores, FLORES

who has worked at several landgrant institutions

during his career, including Kansas State University, Iowa State University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"I'm a true believer in the land-grant system," he said. "Although it's 154 years old, it's vibrant, a model that's been re-engineered."

He pointed to NMSU's location along the border with Mexico, its structure, the challenges it is working to solve and the diversity of its people as factors that appeal to him.

Originally from Costa Rica, Flores brings a lengthy record of university and federal agency experience.

From 2006 to the present, Flores has been a professor and head of the Department of Food Science and Technology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. In addition, he serves as director of the Food Processing

'Dr. Flores is internationally recognized said of his selection. "It's a for his work in food science technology, agricultural engineering and grain science.

Center, a 32-year-old unique outreach program in support of the value-added food and agricultural programs in Nebraska and the nation.

From 2001-2006, Flores worked first as a research food technologist and later as a research agricultural engineer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service's Eastern Regional Research Center in Wyndmoor, Pennsylvania.

Flores served as an associate professor in the Department of Grain Science and Industry at Kansas State University from 1996-2001, where he also held the G.M. Ross Professorship.

From 1993-1996, he was an associate professor and bioprocess engineer in the Department of Agricultural and Biosystems Engineering and the Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition at Iowa State University.

From 1990-1993, Flores was an assistant professor and food engineering extension specialist in the Cooperative Extension Service's Department of Biological and Agricultural Engineering at Kansas State University. He also was an assistant professor at Kansas State from 1989-1990 in the Food and Feed Grains Institute.

From 1975-1986. Flores held various positions at the National Production Bureau in San Jose, Costa Rica, including director of the Administrative Division.

Flores earned a Ph.D. from Kansas State University in grain science in 1989. He has a master's degree in agricultural engineering from Iowa State University (1981) and a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Universidad de Costa Rica (1974). Flores was the first person in his family to attend college and is a strong supporter of the tremendous advantage of higher education. The award-winning academic is the recipient of accolades such as the USDA-ARS 2010 Technology Transfer Award and the 2008 American Association of Cereal Chemists International Stanley Watson Award from the Engineering and Processing Division.

When Flores starts as dean on Aug. 1, he plans to learn as much as he can about the college, focusing especially on its uniqueness and potential.

"We need to exploit our uniqueness to attract students, and strengthen our research and extension programs," he said.

He sees challenges facing the nation as globalization; the need for adequate food and water; the need for new and better foods for human nutrition; the need for new forms of energy; full utilization of human capabilities; improvement of ecosystems; and understanding that business as usual "actually means moving backward."

Flores said he will be committed to being accessible and available as dean and said he looks forward to working together with the college's staff and faculty in their strong commitment to the people of New Mexico

Flores and his wife. Sandra. have two adult daughters. Ana Catalina and Andrea, and two grandsons.

Comedy 'The Nerd' debuts at Las Cruces Community Theatre

Bulletin report

The comedy "The Nerd" written by Larry Shue and directed by Teddy Aspen-Sanchez is slated to finish out the 53rd season at the Las Cruces Community Theatre.

"The Nerd" is set in Terre Haute. Indiana in late 1979. It's the story of Willum Cubbert, an unassuming voung architect, who is landlord to friends Tansv and Axel. Tansy is a smart, attractive woman, with a mutual attraction to Willum, but she is determined to leave in order to pursue a career in television meteorology in Washington, D.C. Axel is a know-it-all drama critic who was once engaged to Tansy. Axel and Tansy are at a house party when Willum becomes host to unexpected houseguest Rick Steadman, who saved Willum's life in Vietnam. Willum promised Rick that he could come to him for help at any time. Rick decides to move in and Willum feels that he can't say no. His stay leads to one incident after another until Willum is pushed to the edge, but not before a surprise twist ending.

The play brings several local well-known actors back to the stage. Joel Fisk plays Willum, Karen Buerdsell portrays Tansy, Robert (Bobcat) Young is Axel. Victor Zamora is Warnock. Mike Cruz plays Rick, Mary Huhmann portrays Clelia and Alban Huhmann is Thor.

"Being a former student and current performer of improvisation, I've learned the art of making order out of chaos. This is why this show resonates so much with me as we get to watch the life Willum Cubbert fall into complete disarray, and learn how things get solved in the end," adds Director Teddy Aspen-Sanchez, who has been acting in Las Cruces for 25 years. "The Nerd" is another addition to his resume with hopes of attending graduate school for directing soon. Aspen-Sanchez hopes to one day own his own theatre to produce traditional and improvisational theatre.

"The Nerd" debuts at LCCT on Friday. June 10 and runs through Sunday, June 26. Performances are 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Tickets are $12 for adults, $11 for students/seniors/military, $10 for groups of ten or more, and $9 for children six and under. LCCT now offers student rush tickets for $5 fifteen minutes before show time with a valid student ID. Opening night is Gala Night with cake, wine, refreshments and an opportunity to visit with the cast. Tickets can be purchased at lcctnm.org or by calling 523-1200.

Las Cruces attorney comes to rescue of community theater

By Mike Cook Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces attorney Jose Coronado has, quite literally, given Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) a new lease on life.

Coronado completed the purchase of the building at 313 N. Main St. Downtown earlier this month from a group of families, including Dyne Buckley and Terry and Connie Moss, who live in Las Cruces. Built by the Buckley family as the State Theatre in December 1941, LCCT moved into the space from the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla in 1977.

Last week, LCCT signed a lease with Coronado that will keep it in the building for at least the next 30 years, with an option for 10 more years after that.

"Getting this lease in place is going to make worlds of difference," said LCCT Board President Janet Beatty-Payne, who signed the new lease along with LCCT treasurer Tom Warren. "Jose is really our hero for stepping in to solve this," she said. "His heart is really Downtown."

"I'm not a hero," Coronado said on May 26 in front of the theatre as he met with Beatty-Payne and a number of other board members. Coronado said he read in the newspaper a few months ago that the building might be sold to a church, forcing LCCT out.

"I was surprised. I love it Downtown. It was an opportunity for me to do something. It was really about keeping the theatre here because it's your home," he said.

"We needed a knight on a white horse," LCCT Board Secretary Britney Stout told Coronado.

"We're very excited," said Vanessa Dabovich, board vice president for public relations.

"We're all very excited to make improvements, to go forward with anticipation," said Karen Warren, the board's vice president for membership.

"I don't know Mr. Coronado, but I think it safe to say that all of those who have made LCCT the remarkable entity it has been for over 50 years are deeply grateful to him," said Tony-winning playwright Mark Medoff, whose first play, "The Wager," was produced at the theatre. "LCCT survives to thrive," Medoff said.

"LCCT is a community treasure Downtown and an important part of the cultural landscape," said long-time Las Cruces actor-director Richard Rundell, whose first show at LCCT was "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" in 19972 - he played the governor. "The theatre and its many actors, directors, designers and stage crews over the decades have contributed immeasurably to the artistic quality of life in Las Cruces. We are grateful that it will be able to continue to flourish," he said. Rundell has acted in 20 shows at LCCT and directed three ("Love Letters," "Firebugs" and "Art"). He served as LCCT board president from 1992 to 1994 and later as play-reading chair and publicity chair. Rundell commissioned the LCCT comedy-tragedy logo by an NMSU grad student in graphic design.

"I think it was quite fortunate that Mr. Coronado was willing to purchase the building," Las Cruces stage and film actor and director David Edwards said. "We as a nonprofit organization are probably better off not being in the building ownership business but rather in the making theater business. His willingness to give us a long-term lease really shows his generosity and civic mindedness. I, personally, am truly grateful," he said. Edwards is a member of LCCT's board and is a former board president.

Coronado purchased the theatre for $299,000. His lease with LCCT calls for the theatre group to pay monthly rent of $1,000, which will increase three percent each year.

Coronado also owns his office space just a couple of blocks south of LCCT on Main Street and other downtown properties.

Beatty-Payne said LCCT will continue its capital campaign to raise money for improvements to the theatre through August 2016. She said the approximately $40,000 raised by the campaign since September 2014 will be used for renovations, including the installation of refrigerated air (scheduled to take place in June 2016), the expansion of patron restrooms to make them ADA compliant and electrical upgrades to the theatre.

LCCT's 53rd season concludes with "The Nerd," written by Larry Shue and directed by Teddy Aspen-Sanchez, which opens June 10 and continues through June 26. LCCT's 54th season opens with "The Homecoming" by Harold Pinter, which will be directed by New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Professor Michael Wise. It will open Aug. 12 and continue through 28.

Farmers market offers events under the stars

Bulletin report

Do you like to stroll the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market and browse the booths and grab a snack – maybe even check out some live music?

Do you like the latespring evenings of Las Cruces when it's not too hot?

Now you have a chance to combine the two.

From 5 to 10 p.m., the Wednesday June 8 Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market will be held in Downtown Las Cruces instead of during its usual morning hours.

Las Cruces Mainstreet Director Russ Smith said there will be a host of family activities.

Performances will include Gadsden High School's Pantastic at 8 p.m. on the south stage: Pink Pandas middle school student jazz band; Franky and Friends, who regularly perform at the farmers market, performing two sets at various locations during the evening; two sets of folklorico dance at various locations; the HD2 dance team on the south stage; and a five-minute performance on the south stage by the La Pandilla Feliz salsa dance team.

Alma d'arte Charter High School student Daniela Prieto will be the evening's master of ceremonies, Smith said.

The evening also will include a Desert Garden Art Auction fundraiser for Jardin de los Niños. The auction, which will be held at the placita, will allow participants to bid on artwork by Jardin children. During the auction, visitors can also learn about Jardin and the work it does and listen to live music from KT Neeley, Danny Graves and Mosaic Mountains. Participants can also bring non-perishable food items to donate to Jardin's food pantry. For more information, call Madeline Williams at 323-5151.

For more information on the night market, visit the Facebook page at Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market.

An open house takes place from 5 to 8 p.m., Friday, June 3 at Nopalito's Galeria, 326 S. Mesquite St. for the summer fair trade marketplace which features hand-made gifts and crafts by women from Mexico and the border region. The market will be open from 5 to 8 p.m. Fridays, noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays and 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sundays during June, July and August. All sales go to the women. For information contact Christine Eber at ceber@nmsu.edu.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY

The digital arts exhibition "An Ocean Trapped Behind a Wall" will open May 26 and will run through July 23 at the New Mexico State University Art Gallery. Through experimentation with the architecture of storytelling, the artists in this powerful show perform existential inquiries about the notions of truth and experience as we advance further and further into the digital age. "An Ocean Trapped Behind a Wall" is a group exhibition guest curated by artists Jessica Hankey and Erin Colleen Johnson, and it features film and video works by emerging and established artists such as David Kelly, Jose Carlos Teixeira and Patty Chang, among others.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GAL-

TOMBAUGH GALLERY

presents "Pushing the Edge," featuring more than 20 fiber artists from the Mesilla Valley Weavers. The theme, "Pushing the Edge" reflects the evolving nature of the group over recent years. The Mesilla Valley Weavers have changed from a traditional "weavers-only" group to a community which welcomes textile artists of all types and embraces non-traditional methods and designs. This exhibit is an opportunity to challenge our members to create new works and grow artistically, either by thought-provoking designs or exploration of new techniques. One special feature of the exhibit will be a fashion show of colorful wearable art as Mesilla Valley members will display fiber arts of their creation. The fashion show items will be new and diff erent from the art in the exhibit. Tombaugh Gallery is located inside the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces, 2000 S. Solano Drive. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and by appointment. For more information, call 522-7281.

NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

presents "What's the Buzz? Why Honey Bees Matter," which explores the amazing history of humans keeping honey bees for food and other bee products and the critical role bees play in pollinating about a third of the plants we ultimately consume as our food. The interactive exhibit also takes a look at bees in culture and religion, migration history, the physiology and anatomy of bees, and the future of honey bees and their connection to agriculture. Puzzles on bee body types, pollination and the waggle dance are among the interactive activities that are part of the exhibit. "What's the Buzz?" will be on display through June 18, 2017. The museum in its north corridor "In a Nutshell: Growing Nuts in New Mexico," an exhibit centered on nuts grown here in the Land of Enchantment. Few crops are more diverse and individually tied culturally and economically to the various geographic areas of New Mexico's bountiful nut cans and pistachios - has its own story to tell about how and why it is grown and harvested. The exhibit covers everything from the definition of a nut to its health benefits. In between is a fascinating look at the history, research and uses as well as growing and harvesting techniques. "In a Nutshell" will remain on display through Sept. 25. The museum also presents "The Light Never Dies: Landscape Astrophotography of Wayne Suggs." Living in the Southwest is a paradise for a landscape photographer like Las Crucen Wayne Suggs. He was introduced to the wonders of nature at an early age by parents who knew the importance of having a relationship with the Great Outdoors. They bought him a Nikon camera when he was 14, and 40 years later, he's still capturing and sharing the wonderment of our Southwest landscape. "The Light Never Dies" will remain on display through July. The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum is located at 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Regular hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Regular museum admission is $5 adults, $4 senior citizens, $3 children ages 4 to 17, $2 active U.S. military and veterans and free for children age 3 and younger. For more information, visit www. nmfarmandranchmuseum.org or call 522-4100. The center also presents "Visions of Our Monument," which features paintings and drawings inspired during Freyermuth's term as Artist-In-Residence for the Organ Mountain Desert Peaks (OMDP) National Monument. Freyermuth's work explores the importance of our local ecosystem, the cultural significance of crops. Each of the state's top nuts - piñon, peanuts, pe-

the land for the people who live here, and the complex personal relationship that each individual has to the land that surrounds them. Her dramatic portraits evoke these connections of people and place within the surreal desert landscapes of the Monument. "Visions of Our Monument" will remain on display through Saturday, June 4. Branigan Cultural Center is located at 501 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, call 541-2154.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY MUSEUM,

located inside Kent Hall, presents "Itaa Katsi: Our Life," an exhibition of Hopi art. Featuring nearly 80 works from the permanent collection, this show includes art by Spencer Nutima (Hopi, Old Oraibi), Linda Lomahaftewa (Hopi (Shungopavi)-Choctaw), Ramson Lomatewama (Hopi, Hotevilla) and Jessica Lomatewama (Hopi, Hotevilla). In this exhibition, the museum is honored to share Hopi art with visitors in many forms: as gourd rattles, prints on paper, katsina dolls (katsin tihu), silverwork, wicker and coiled plaques (fl at basket forms), headdresses (kopatsoki), clay ceramic vessels and handblown glass fi gures, among others. Curated by Michelle Lanteri with Spencer Nutima, Lead Advisor, and Anna Marie Strankman, Curator of Collections and Exhibits. "Itaa Katsi" will remain on longterm display through Dec. 17. The New Mexico State University Museum is located inside Kent Hall on the NMSU campus, at 1280 E. University Ave. Hours are noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. # Dance company explores family in 'HOME'

By Adriana M. Chavez For the Bulletin

The Traveling Airs Performance Company, a graduate dance company at New Mexico State University, will host a premiere production featuring both graduate students and College of Education faculty, along with local visual artists, singers and dancers Performances of the production, titled "HOME." will be at 7:30 p.m. June 3 and 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. June 4 at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave. Tickets are $15 for adults and $10 for students.

Performers include faculty members Ana Sufflé, Ann Gavit, Robert Wood, Debra Knapp, Annie Pennies and Tenecia Trammel-Yeboah, and students Jermey Edmonson, Colette Miller, Kelsie Faught, Tim Wood, Artwan Green and Cristina Segovia. Also joining the cast is Tresela Lee Maynard, a Sodexo employee who works at the Corbett Center Student Union and the 3rd Floor Bistro inside the Stan Fulton Athletics Center.

Edmonson and Miller will perform the piece, "Touch." Edmonson and Miller performed their piece, "The Manipulator," at the South-Central American College Dance Association 2016 Gala Performance at West Texas A&M University during spring break. "The Manipulator" was selected as an alternate for the American College Dance Association National Conference in Washington D.C. in June.

Knapp, director of dance in the Department of Kinesiology and Dance at NMSU, said "HOME" is an exploration of family relationships that will take audiences on an emotional and spiritual journey through the jovs and tribulations of life.

Wood, who is the head of the Kinesiology and Dance department, said Traveling Airs came about as a collaboration between faculty members in the College of Education and graduate students in the dance program.

"While Las Cruces is rich in the performing arts, those of us in this company were looking for something different," Wood said. "We were looking for a 'home' where we could invest and nurture our creative selves. Not surprisingly, the theme of our first show 'HOME' is not just a commentary on family relationships, but it is about our own desires to feel and be connected."

Wood said singers in the performance will pursue everything from classical crossover to contemporary, country and spiritual pieces, and highly accomplished dancers will bring the music to life in ways that are sure to move the audience to tears.

"The talent of the performers is second only to the beauty of the message. 'HOME' promises to be a very powerful and emotional production and a great treat for the whole family," Wood said.

Trammel-Yeboah, an assistant professor and coordinator of Clinical Education in the College of Education's Department of Special Education and Communication Disorders, said she's honored to showcase her vocal talents in the first performance of the Traveling Airs.

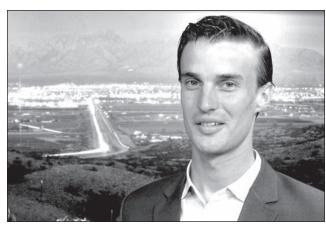

"The Traveling Airs has amassed quite an arsenal of talented individuals, ranging from vocalists, dancers, choreographers and video art technicians. I am honored to serve as a vocalist and to be a part of this very creative and gifted family of artists," Trammel-Yeboah said. "Our debut is a smorgasbord of light, sound, dance and imaging that will take the audience on an emotional journey through the dynamics of the family, and the trials and triumphs familial relationships bring. We invite the community of Las Cruces and the surrounding areas to join us and let us take them 'home'."

For tickets or more information, call the Department of Kinesiology and Dance at 575-646-4067.

New Mexico State University's KRWG Public Media has won two 2016 Excellence in Broadcasting Awards from the New Mexico Broadcasters Association.

KRWG won the award for best website in the large market radio category. It marks the third time in eight years KRWG has won an award for its website: two from the NMBA and one from the Associated Press.

KRWG Director of Content Fred Martino said there has been a 400 percent increase in website traffic over the past six years.

"Like many news organizations, we are putting a lot of work into our website, and the result is that it's very robust," Martino said. "We cover local and state news, and the website is updated seven days a week, including updates throughout the day from the Associated Press."

Facebook and Twitter also help drive traffic to the krwg.org website, which was redesigned in 2015.

"Many public media organizations use their websites for archives of local content," he said. "But we needed it to be a primary source for news."

Martino will accept the website award at the annual NMBA Excellence in Broadcasting Awards Banquet in Albuquerque on June 3.

Simon Thompson, a reporter and producer at KRWG, won the Local Television Programming award for his production "Issues and Answers: Our Water Future." He was competing with much larger stations from Albuquerque.

"I was very flattered that it was regarded as such a good documentary," Thompson said. "I feel like sometimes awards overlook the smaller stations."

Thompson said his one-man production raised many issues that need to be addressed about the

"There is so much science involved in the water situation, and the one-hour format allowed us to articulate the complexity of the issue and to paint the full picture of how dire our water situation really is," he said.

Thompson's reporting has also been picked up by KPBS-TV in San Diego. "KPBS-TV has commissioned Simon to do several TV features for the station, which is another indication of his excellent work," Martino said.

Originally from Australia, Thompson has worked at KRWG for two years. In late May, National Public Radio's "Here and Now" program aired his report about Germany's Luftwaffe Air Force Flying Training Center leaving Holloman Air Force Base near Alamogordo, New Mexico, after 20 years.

Plastics Unwrapped, Fire and Fiber open in Cruces

The Branigan Cultural Center presents Plastics Unwrapped, a new exhibit that explores how material culture was rapidly, perhaps permanently, changed by plastics, and Fire and Fiber, that brings together local clay and fiber artists.

Plastics Unwrapped opens Friday, June 3, and will be on display through Saturday, Aug. 20, with an opening reception from 5 to 7 p.m., Friday, June 3. Fire and Fiber will be on view June 3 through July 2. An opening reception with the artists in attendance will be from 5 to 7 p.m., Friday, June 3. Both receptions take place at the Center, 501 N. Main St.

Plastics Unwrapped is a traveling exhibit organized by the Burke Museum, University of Washington.

Fire and Fiber is a biannual exhibit that showcases the collaborative efforts between members of the Potters' Guild of Las Cruces and local fiber artists. Fired clay and a fiber medium, such as fabric, paper, wood, or yarn, are combined into each piece. The contrasting materials require creative thinking by the artists and result in unique works of art.

The Branigan Cultural Center is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Tuesday through Friday; 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Thursday; and 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Saturday. For information, visit www.las-cruces.org/ museums or call 541-2154.

Annual Mariachi Conference rolls into town

Bulletin report

The 22nd Annual Las Cruces International Mariachi Conference (LCIMC) lights up the town Friday, June 3 through Sunday, June 5 at three venues in and around the city and the Village of Mesilla. The event includes concert performances, an equestrian show, a street dance, Mariachi Mass and a fiesta, all dedicated to the promotion and preservation of Mariaces chi and Folkloric cultural arts.

Ezequiel Pena, "El Nuevo Charro De Mexico" kicks the festivities off from 7:30 to 11 p.m., Friday, June 3 at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds with Mariachi and Banda and his equestrian show, according to a LCIMC release. Pena has recorded 16 albums, including Esa Chica Me Vacila and Provocame. Accompanying Pena, who was nominated for a Grammy Award in 2007, is award-winning Mariachi Aguilas. Tickets to the show are $30 (early) and $35 (at the door) and children under 12 get in free.

A Downtown street dance, featuring the Sangria Band at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, June 4 on Main Street will showcase music, dancers and vocalists. Food trucks and vendors will be on hand for the celebration. Tickets are $10: children under 12 free.

According to LCIMC, a solemn celebration of Mass with Bishop Ricardo Ramirez takes place at 10 a.m., Sunday, June 5 as Mariachi musicians and Folkloric dancers interweave into a colorful procession. Attendees are encouraged to bring lawn chairs and experience the Mass. Finishing out the conference from 1 to 5 p.m., Sunday, June 5 on the Old Mesilla Plaza is the Mariachis y Mas Fiesta, a mix of music and dance in a rustic, outdoor setting. The fiesta is free and open to the public. Bring lawn chairs to ensure a comfortable place to sit.

For more information, call 525-1735 or email office@lascrucesmariachi.org.

Movie keeps an 'eye' on technology of war

By Jeff Berg For the Bulletin

War, or what we are now told is war, is nothing like the "real" wars of the past, such as World War II. The so-called wars that we engage in now are nothing more than guerrilla-style shows of back and forth against hard-to-detect enemies. Weapons have changed, tactics have changed, rules have changed.

New toys/tools of war include drones and related items that can pinpoint targets down to the room of a house, which is where the be-all-and-end-all of "Eye in the Sky" is headed.

Helen Mirren, a Fountain Theatre favorite, plays Col. Katherine Powell, who awakens early and mirthless to attend to her duty of the day in a poorly lit room filled with electronic communication.

Her mission this day is the elimination of a few leaders of Al-Shabaab, one of those dour anonymous groups of radicals. Among them is radicalized British citizen Aisha Al Hady, who is the main target of "Operation Cobra."

She is meeting with fellow terrorists, including an American who has gone astray, to plan and partake in a suicide bombing in Kenya. We know all of this through spies and electronic hummingbirds who keep tabs on these

low budget enemies of state. The prize is suddenly much bigger and juicier because they are actually able to witness the preparation of suicide bombing vests. The mission goes from capture to kill.

Holding things up are a bunch of British politicos who have to decide whether or not this mission will be "legal," so to speak, and how the ensuing publicity will be seen and used.

Back in the USA, two young American soldiers are manning the armed drone, awaiting orders as to where and when and if to fire upon the small house in a residential neighborhood where the enemy meets.

The fourth part of the quotient comes from that Nairobi neighborhood, where a young mother has sent her daughter out to the corner to sell the loaves of bread that she has been baking all morning. The girl sets up precisely on the corner where the drone will be firing once the word is given.

The unusual and well done four-piece story works out much better than one would think. On one hand, we have military bureaucrats who buy into the fallow idea that what they are doing will actually make a difference. Indeed, if they are able to stop the bombers, many civilian lives will be saved. But do they sacrifice the life of the young girl, whose main joy in life is playing with a Hula-Hoop (which is briefly denied her by one of those ultra-conservative clowns who warns her father that she is not allowed to do that and asks why is her ankle showing) or do they drop the mission entirely. Do the political plutocrats really care about any of the lives, or is it just the publicity aspect of the mission?

Will the two U.S. soldiers (one played by Aaron Paul of New Mexico's own "Breaking Bad" fame) be able to overcome their scruples about the possible death or injury of the girl?

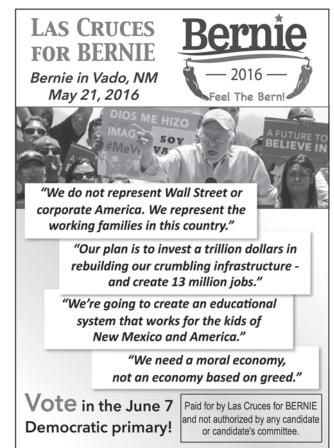

To try and get the girl out of firing range, a local agent is sent to buy all of her bread and send her on her way. This works, but only briefly, as he is espied by someone who knows him and soon the chase is on. And unfortunately, Mom has baked more bread and sends her daughter back to the corner with more loaves to peddle.

The process is at once absurd but fascinating. We get to hear such lively military terms as CDE (collateral damage estimate, more popularly known as civil-

The best quality and diversity in children's programming Lend your support at www.krwg.org or call 1-888-922-5794 ian deaths) and ROE, the "rules of engagement" which someone, somewhere has made up in order to try and regulate warfare.

A tight, compact film, "Eye in the Sky" has a taut and revealing tension but offers no real emotional content beyond concerns for collateral damage and getting the bad guys who will be replaced by more bad guys the next day.

From the ground up

This is the sixth installment in a series that chronicles the building of a New Mexican home, from the ground up.

By Susie Ouderkirk Las Cruces Bulletin

How does a house say "Welcome?"

Bienvenido. Velkommen. Aloha. Selamat dating. Witam. Bem-vindo. Or maybe it just coyly bats its eyelashes and opens its doors.

The From the Ground Up house is blossoming. It has curves and soft angles. It shyly shows off panoramic views, and beckons visitors with unique extras. The house is starting to flirt.

Builder Daniel Kolson walked me through the house last week, pointing out details both in place and on the way.

"At this point, we are finished framing," Kolson said. The house has walls (albeit see-through wooden frames) and doors and windows. The exterior corners of the building are covered in a shiny metal called thermo-ply, Kolson said. "It covers the edges so they have a rounder appearance," which adds to his vision for the house.

The front door provides a view through the house and beyond.

Vigas dress up the front of the house, and pull a viewer's eye to the thick wooden front door, which, when opened, has an irresistible view through the center of the house and out the 12' X 8' sliding glass door that leads to the spacious patio, and eventually, all the way to the mountain.

The great room/living room sports striking

Pleasant arches add style to the ceilings. Kolson saw this design in an old adobe house and added it in to his plans.

arches unlike any I've seen before.

"I saw the arches in an old adobe house and started doing it. They give it that old adobe pueblo style look," Kolson said.

Capitalizing on Las Cruces' abundant natural light, the house has two skylights in the entrance way, one in the main hallway and one in the master bath.

Even though the house is now, obviously, a house, it isn't ready for inhabitants. The wooden bones of the wall frames need to be covered with drywall, a panel made of gypsum plaster pressed between two thick sheets of paper. According to the Diffen Home Improvement website, it is used to make interior walls and ceilings. Drywall construction became prevalent as a speedier alternative to traditional lath and plaster. The most common brand of drywall is Sheetrock, a trademark made by the US Gypsum company.

"Right now," Kolson said, "we're working with the electricians, the plumbers and the HVAC installers." Over the next two to three weeks, the workers will be "putting in everything that goes behind the Sheetrock walls."

The installations and inspections should take two to three weeks, which gives Kolson time to pick out the plumbing and lighting fixtures. Right now, Shawn Brownfield at Sher-Wood Cabinetry is putting together a package for Kolson.

"He came out and looked at the house to get a feel for the style," Kolson said, so the cabinets enhance the Southwestern look.

NMSU student awarded George Lea Founder's Scholarship

Bulletin report

Morgan Cardiel, a graduate student in Anthropology, is one of two recipients of the George Lea Founder's Scholarship sponsored by the Public Lands Foundation. The $5,000 scholarship will be used toward Morgan's education related expens-

CARDIEL Arts degree from New Mexico State University in 2015. Morgan will also receive an invitation to attend the next Public Lands academic vear.

Morgan received her Bachelor of

Foundation annual meeting which happens to be in Las Cruces in September, and an opportunity to spend a day with a local BLM manager. Morgan's scholastic achievements and work experience, along with her desire to pursue a career related to cultural heritage management on public lands, is what made her rise to the top of the list.

"As part of our youth initiative, we look for students who are committed to the management of natural resources and may not otherwise be able to complete their schooling," Public Lands Foundation Board member Mike Ferguson said. The Public Lands Foundation is a non-profit organization which advocates for the professional and sustainable management of America's public lands. The scholarship is named after George Lea who founded the Public Lands Foundation in 1987 after a long career with the Bureau of Land Management.

Memorial Medical Center patients to benefit from improved stent technology

By Susie Ouderkirk The Bulletin

In October, 2015, a progressive new stent, a tiny but powerful tool to combat narrowed arteries, was approved for use by the FDA. In April of this year, Dr. Leon, Dr. Cannon and Dr. Zaeem of Memorial Medical Center (MMC) began treating their patients at MMC with the newly approved Everolimus-Eluting Platinum Chromium Coronary Stent from Boston Scientific. The doctors' patients are the first in the southern New Mexico/ west Texas area to benefit from the new technology.

What is a stent?

A stent is a tiny wire mesh tube that props open an artery and is left there permanently. according to the American Heart Association website. When a coronary artery (an artery feeding the heart muscle) is narrowed by a buildup of fatty deposits called plaque, it can reduce blood flow. If blood flow is reduced to the heart muscle, chest pain can result. If a clot forms and completely blocks the blood flow to part of the heart muscle, a heart attack results. Stents help keep coronary arteries open and reduce the chance of a heart attack states: To open a narrowed artery, a doctor may do a procedure called a percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) or angioplasty. In it, a balloon-tipped tube (catheter) is inserted into an artery and moved to the point of blockage. Then the balloon is inflated. This compresses the plaque and opens the narrowed spot. When the opening in the vessel has been widened, the balloon is deflated and the catheter is withdrawn.

Stenting has become fairly common. Most angioplasty procedures are done using stents. Patients who have angioplasty and stents recover from these procedures much faster than patients who have coronary artery bypass surgery (CABG). They have much less discomfort, too, according to the AHA website.

MMC Marketing Director Anita Rocket said, "It's absolutely fascinating, isn't it, that this can reduce the anti-rejection drugs from years to as short at 90 days? Amazing, frankly."

"We are pleased to be working closely with these doctors and Memorial Medical Center to ensure patients can access this innovative technology," said Kevin Ballinger, president, Interventional Cardiology, Boston Scientific. "In development for over 10 years, the SYNERGY Stent reflects our commitment to bringing meaningful change to interventional cardiologists with the most complete portfolio of clinical solutions to best treat their patients," said Ballinger. "We are excited to bring this transformative technology to U.S. facilities that provide best-in-class patient care."

The SYNERGY Stent is being studied in more than 15,000 patients worldwide, and has doc-

NMSU researchers identify top commercial mosquito repellents

By Dana Beasley For The Bulletin

As Congress haggles over how many millions or billions of dollars to spend to help stop the spread of the Zika virus in the U.S. before summer. researchers at New Mexico State University are already testing wearable mosquito repellent devices to determine which ones can best help us protect ourselves against these insects

"The goal is to find out what works and what doesn't," said Immo Hansen, an NMSU associate professor of biology involved in the investigation. "There are so many products on the market that simply don't work, so I think it's really important to test them in a scientific way."

This month, a group from Hansen's Molecular Vector Physiology Lab, in the College of Arts and Sciences, began a series of tests to determine the effectiveness of a dozen commercially available wearable repellents, including clip-ons and wristbands. Though the study is ongoing, preliminary data revealed that citronella-based bracelets and wristbands have little effect on mosquitoes.

search facility. After taking baseline readings, the researchers put on the repellent devices and position themselves upwind of a series of test cages. Depending on the product's repellency, the caged mosquitoes either fly away from the test subjects or toward them.

The wearable devices are being tested against the same two species of mosquito used in the spray repellent study: the Asian tiger mosquito (Aedes albopictus) and the yellow fever mosquito (Aedes aegypti), both of which carry the Zika virus.

"These two mosquitoes have very different levels of attraction to even one certain individual," Rodriguez said. "Since attraction varies, repellency is also going to vary, so it's important

NMSU researchers receive state grant to map Zika-carrying mosquitoes

While the rest of the world is keeping its distance from the mosquito that carries the Zika virus, two New Mexico State University professors are seeking out this mosquito, which carries not only Zika but also a host of other diseases as well.

Thanks to a grant through the New Mexico Department of Health, NMSU biology professor Kathryn Hanley and NMSU geography professor Michaela Buenemann, both in the College of Arts and Sciences, and their graduate students will begin a project to trap mosquitos in different locations around New Mexico and generate a species distribution model that health officials can use to identify where the disease-carrying insects are most likely to be.

to test multiple species when you're looking at repellents and their efficacy."

Thanks to body chemistry, mosquitoes are also more inclined to someone who bite "smells" good to them.

"Everybody has a different bacterial flora on his or her skin." Hansen said. "The bacteria break down components of sweat and produce a different set of olfactory clues for the mosquitoes. Some people just smell better to mosquitoes than others, and there's really nothing you can do about that except wear repellents. There's nothing you can do to change the bacterial flora on your skin."

Consequently. these chemical differences can impact which repellents work best for you.

"Something that might work for one person because of his or her body chemistry, might not work for somebody else because he or she has different chemistry," Rodriguez said.

While the Asian tiger mosquito hasn't established significant populations in New Mexico, Aedes aegypti – one of the primary vectors of dengue, Zika virus and yellow fever - can be found in your backyard in Las Cruces.

Las Cruces elementary counselor awarded Counselor of the Year

Bulletin report

Conlee Elementary School counselor Beverly Tenorio, MA, LPCC was awarded the New Mexico School Counselor Association's School Counselor of the Year. She was chosen based on her "comprehensive" application which was "reflective of all the great work" she does on behalf of the students, families and other school counselors, according to a news release from Conlee Elementary.

Tenorio will represent New Mexico when she travels to Washington D.C. in January.

"Conlee is a great school to work at and I am lucky to be supported by an awesome administration, staff, families and students," Tenorio said. "I feel very humbled to have received this honor, especially because there are so many very hard working and deserving school counselors in Las Cruces and throughout the state." She has worked at Conlee for nine years.

Highlights of Tenorio's work include her advocacy efforts on behalf of school counselors outside of Conlee in the area of professional development, her extensive and varies background in the counseling area while still keeping her focus on counselling and the various ways she shows a positive impact on the Conlee climate, according to the release.

Tenorio's name will be submitted to the American School Counselor Association for consideration for the national school counselor of the year award, said NMSCA School Counselor of the Year Award Chair Charlene Lutz.

Hansen said. "Get yourself a good repellent, wear long sleeves, long pants. Try to avoid getting bit."

The mosquito that carries the Zika virus can breed in as little as one centimeter of standing water, Hansen explained. For those with ponds, his recommendation was to get Gambusia, or mosquito fish, from the Doña Ana County Vector Control to keep backyard mosquito populations at bay.

Next fall, Hansen and Rodriguez plan to investigate mosquito attractants for use in baits. Surprisingly, even though humans attract mosquitoes all the time, Rodriguez explained that creating a chemical to attract mosquitoes is actually harder than repelling them.

"We have such complex odors that it's actually hard to emulate that in cream or a bait trap," she said. "It's actually much more complex than creating something that disguises your human smell."

Transcendental Q&A

In the Doña Ana Community College (DACC) Community Ed course "Transcendental/Metaphysical Q & A with the Lightbody Tailor" find answers to what is considered "too peculiar for normal discussion." Come for support, guidance and laughter moving into higher realms of consciousness. Subjects range from dreams, astral travel and viewing auras to receiving divine guidance. Course meets 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday, June 11, or July 9 at DACC Workforce Development Center. Cost for either session is $19. For information about this course, email commed@dacc.nmsu. edu or call 527-7527.

Care for your aura field at DACC

"Energy tools to clear and protect your aura field" will be held from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday, June 11, at the Dona Ana Community College Workforce Center, room 119, 2345 E. Nevada. Techniques will be presented to clear and protect your aura/energy field. Learn to take back what has been lost or given away, release what is not yours, and prevent energy drains or leaks from happening in the first place. A great course for healers and anyone with energy sensitivities to get to know their aura space more intimately. The cost is $26. For information or to sign up, email commed@dacc.nmsu.edu or call 527-7527.

Aggie Cupboard summer hours

The Aggie Cupboard is open for summer food distribution hours from 3 to 6 p.m. every Wednesday through the summer. To receive a free bag of nonperishable food, bring your NMSU ID to Regents Row, Room B114. The Aggie Cupboard is open to all current NMSU and DACC students, as well as faculty/staff. If you require food assistance and those hours do not work for you, email aggiecupboard@nmsu.edu to make alternate arrangements.

Memorial Day a tradition of honor

By Penney McClarin For The Bulletin

Getting ready for the Memorial Day Service at Good Samaritan - Las Cruces Village reiterated the importance of traditions and reflection in all of us. Our turn out for the tribute to honor our fallen men and women and thank those still with us who have served was tremendous. While the stories shared from the veterans who had served was heart wrenching and emotional, it also was a time of reflection and another step in the process of healing.

A reception followed the Memorial Day Service which brought with it recanted memories of friends and family members lost as well as hugs, tears and a closeness of camaraderie from those who had lived through tumultuous times in our world.

The close of this gathering brought home the importance of being able to share experiences with others who had similar stories to share and could empathize with what each individual had been through. Through this time of sharing the process of healing continues. The handshakes, heartfelt "thank yous," and comforting hugs were evidence that remembering and honoring these men and women in this manner continues to be an important tradition in our country.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES Voice your opinion

The Branigan Cultural Center invites community members to share what they think is important about Las Cruces history, culture and identity at a post-ramble dessert and discussion from 7 to 8 p.m., Friday, June 3, or from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 4, at the Center, 501 N. # Soup Kitchen's Veterans appreciation dinner is June 18

Bulletin report

tion and another step in the process of healing.

El Caldito Soup Kitchen will host its 14th annual Veterans Appreciation Dinner from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 18 at El Caldito, which is part of the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, located at 999 W. Amador Ave., behind Horse 'n Hound, said Gabe Anaya, the soup kitchen's interim president.

The Oñate High School Navy JROTC color guard will perform a flag ceremony at the dinner, and will help serve the brisket dinner.

Anaya said El Caldito is contacting as many local veterans as possible to encourage them to attend the dinner.

For more information, contact Anaya at 312-1916 or Scott Murray at 642-0888. Visit https://elcaldito.word-press.com/.

Pamper yourself locally Seniors deserve special treatment

By Dawn Franco For The Bulletin

Stress management, fitness and personal care can be achieved at many locations around the city, you just have to be willing to pamper yourself. Methods including acupuncture, massage and yoga are just some of the ways you can treat yourself and manage a healthy lifestyle right in your own backvard.

Locals Masaaki Nakano, Beth Duncan. Colleen Boyd and Deidra Schaub are all experienced practitioners in the fields of relaxation and energy therapy.

• The Oriental Medicine Clinic, 755 S. Telshor Blvd., Suite 202 F, was started in 1991 by Nakano, a published author on the topic of synergy therapeutics, who utilizes acupuncture in the clinic's treatments.

Acupuncture can be used as a treatment for a variety of healthcare conditions including chronic pain, infertility, allergies, sciatica, bulging disks and movement and speech impairment resulting from stroke.

With a combination of Chinese herbs and intense patient care, Nakano believes the cure, not the diagnosis, should be the focus. The clinic features calming music and sliding doors to create a peaceful, Eastern atmosphere.

"Western doctors cover symptomatic treatment. Acupuncture [is] more curable because we look for the root of the problem." Nakano said. "Western doctors can make a diagnosis from tests, but only they can do operations, medications and injections-those three things—so most people believe those three things cure the diseases, but they just cover symptoms. Cure the body."

Nakano can be reached at 647-0406.

nation methods including medical spa practices, salon services and Ayurveda (ancient Indian medicine) healthcare. Beth Duncan, owner, creates herbal tinctures and is planning to transition the spa to include even more holistic services

A former ER nurse, Duncan is currently studying Eastern medicine to be an Ayurvedic physician and transition the spa into an Ayurvedic wellness center. The spa introduced Ayurvedic facials last December as a phase in the transition.

"Ayurveda is the most ancient healthcare practice known to man; it's more than 5000 years old and older than Chinese medicine. It's based out of India. What Avurveda means in Sanskrit is 'the knowledge of life or longevity." Duncan said.

The salon currently offers diverse treatments including European facials, hot stone massages and detoxifying wraps. A truly relaxed atmosphere with tranquil plants and fine décor, the spa has certified, friendly staff that can be reached at 526-9219.

• Colleen Boyd, owner of Downtown Desert Yoga, 303 S. Alameda Ave., gives instruction along with other teachers to unite the body and mind.

"Taking care of yourself is pampering, even if you're doing a workout," said Colleen Boyd. "Yoga is not only strength-building, but helps to reconnect the body and mind. The bigger picture is balancing out the mind, the body and the spirit; that's what is at the essence of yoga."

With registered, certified staff and a touch of Namaste, the studio has been instructing Las Crucens in the art of breathing and connection for six years. "As a yoga teacher, the thing that I was really struck with when I first started teaching—and I'm still struck with—is seeing people with very little body awareness, being very much outside of their own body and not really connected to their bodies and then seeing the reconnection to their bodies." instructor Deidra Schaub said.

The studio doesn't just instruct classes in meditation, baby yoga and hot voga, but also includes several modalities such as microcirculation (known as Bemer). Reiki to raise the body's vibration, aromatouch and energy therapy services. These modalities help to improve well-being, autonomic function, immune function, sleep, energy and even can reduce pain, Schaub said.

There is a mobile application to simplify signing up for classes. Call the studio at 647-9642 (YOGA).

These aren't the only facilities that offer opportunities to pamper yourself and better your well-being. Many other local locations, such as Gent's Barber Spa, an upscale, old-world gentleman's barber parlor at 232 N. Campo St., Daugherty Chiropractic & Family Wellness, at 1685 Don Roser, Suite D and Spa Downtown at 440 N. Main St. also provide stress relief and relaxation services.

Summer camping in your own backyard

By Deborah Stevens For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) Aguirre Spring Campground is right in your backyard and offers a sweeping view of the eastern side of the Organ Mountains towards the Tularosa Basin and White Sands National Monument. The multi-purpose area accommodates camping, hiking and equestrian trail riding in one of BLM's most popular developed campgrounds in southern New Mexico.

What you need to know The access road to the campground is 14 miles east of the Interstate 25/U.S. Highway 70 interchange, or 1.1 miles east of the San Augustin Pass. Daily summer hours are from 8 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. The entry gate is closed after 7:30 p.m. to ensure campground occupants can experience a camping experience free from latenight arrivals, parties and disturbances.

Aguirre Spring offers the choice of 57 camping and picnicking sites, two group sites, a horse corral and two recreational trailheads, for experiencing the immediate area or venturing out to other parts of the BLM Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument. Restrooms are available.

Campers/hikers can stay out in the area for up to 14 days.

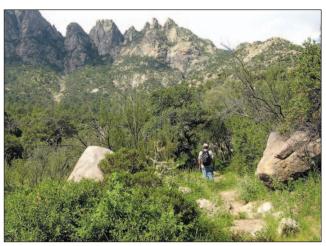

Bring your own fire-wood

The campground access road can accommodate most RV/campers, except for units longer than 23 feet. Visitors can bring their own firewood for campfires in designated areas, as well as charcoal or gas grills for cooking. However, the cutting and gathering of wood or vegetation for campfires is strictly prohibited.

Dogs are allowed in the campground but visitors are required to have them on a leash at all times and to clean up after them.

Fees for Aguirre Spring Campground are collected at the self-pay station at the entrance, including day-use fees of $5 per vehicle per day, and overnight camping fees of $7 per vehicle/RV/camper per night. However with an annual pass, the dayuse fee is free, while the overnight camping fee is reduced to $3.50 per night. The collected fees go to maintain the campground amenities, and BLM advises visitors to bring correct change or a check to cover the fees. For more information or to purchase an annual pass, visit the BLM Las Cruces District Office at 1800 Marquess Street or call the office at 525-4300. ABOVE: Shaded picnic areas with grills are available on a first-come-first-served basis.

LEFT: Aguirre Spring offers numerous hiking trails of all levels of difficulty.

PETS OF THE WEEK

Apply today to adopt Trey at shaspets.com or call 575-805-5338.

This handsome soul is Teggy. He's a second-timer here at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley. His owners never came to get him. This big pile of love has been with us for almost a year now, and he's ready for a family to call his own. This brown and white, 4-year-old Pitbull mix is dog friendly and does pretty well on a leash. All he needs to know is, when will you come by to rescue him? Hours of operation are noon to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, at 3551 Bataan Memorial West. Call: 382-0018.
