3-man race for District 4 seat

When two-term City Councillor Nathan Small announced he would not seek a third go-round to represent District 4, three potential replacements threw their hats into the ring.

High-tech greenhouse to create 120 jobs

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

In the near future, a Dallas homeowner may make a trip to Lowe's to buy a flat of floral bedding plants grown in the Mesilla Valley.

That's the vision Mark Wong, founding partner of Colorado Financial Holdings, shared with state and local dignitaries Oct. 19 when Gov. Susana Martinez announced New Mexico Greenhouse Holdings LLC (NMGH) will expand into New Mexico.

NMGH is a partnership of Colorado Financial Holdings and Olson's Greenhouse Gardens, a commercial grower with facilities in Utah and Colorado.

The company will invest $6 million to rehabilitate the former Aldershot of New Mexico greenhouse at 4884 S. Main St., which will be equipped with state-of-the-art water purification and recycling systems.

Wong said NMGH will raise plants for the local market as well as major urban markets. Its markets are big-box stores.

NMGH has received $250,000 from the state's Local Economic Development Act (LEDA) closing fund and has pledged to create 123 jobs in the next four years. These new jobs will include botanists,

Coalition plans Oct. 24 anti-bullying event

The Doña County Coalition Against Bullying is sponsoring an event on Saturday, Oct. 24 on the downtown Placita next to Main Street Bistro at 139 N. Main St. during the Las Cruces Farmers and Crafts Market from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

High school art posters that link to a Twitter project will be featured that morning. Event attendees will be asked to sign a poster "lending a hand to stop bullying."

The group Singing Out will perform at 11 a.m.

The national theme – Together Against Bullying – suggests the community can be positively encouraged to stop bullying by working together.

In Doña Ana County, according to the 2013

New Mexico Youth Risk & Resiliency Survey, there is more bullying in middle schools than in high schools.

When asked if they had ever been bullied on school property, 38.6 percent of Doña Ana County 1,298 middle school respondents reported they had; 18.3 percent of 1,122 high school respondents reported that they had been bullied at school.

When asked if they had ever been electronically bullied, 15.5 percent of middle school students said yes and 13.2 percent of high school respondents said yes.

Cyberbullying is changing fast, and data regarding that topic will be collected for 2015.

For more information about the Oct. 24 event and bullying prevention, the Doña County Coalition Against Bullying has resources available at www.communityunitycoalition.org/, and on Facebook at www.facebook.com/communityunity, as well as on Twitter (@upstander575 or <https://twitter.com/upstander575>).

The public is invited to come join the fun on the Placita as the community unites to end bullying in Doña Ana County's three school districts and in every neighborhood. The Coalition Against Bullying meets monthly at the Doña Ana County Government Center. The meeting schedule is on the website, and the public is invited to attend.

Celebrate Pit Bull Month

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley is extending a discounted rate for Doña Ana County owners of pit bull terriers to promote responsible dog ownership and reduce the number of puppies that are surrendered to the shelter.

During the month of October, pit bulls of all ages are available for free adoptions, including the spay/neuter, microchip and all necessary vaccinations. Adult dogs of all other breeds that have been in the shelter more than six months are available for a discounted adoption rate of $50. Puppies (8 months and under) are available for the standard adoption fee of $75.

Pit bull terriers are one of the most common breeds seen at the shelter, and contribute greatly to the number of dogs that are euthanized every week.

Since May 2008, the shelter has taken in more than 13,000 pit bull terriers. Despite aggressive adoption and rescue efforts, about 60 percent were euthanized.

Doña Ana County residents who would like to schedule an appointment to have their pit bull spayed/neutered, microchipped and vaccinated can call the shelter for an appointment at (575) 382-0018.

Sheriff offers Halloween safety tips

While autumn celebrations like Halloween are enjoyable for children, Doña Ana County Sheriff Enrique 'Kiki' Vigil advises parents to check out these tips to help make the festivities fun and safe for trick-or-treaters.

- * Swords, knives, and other costume accessories should be short, soft, and flexible.
- * Avoid trick-or-treating alone. Walk in groups or with a trusted adult.
- * Fasten reflective tape to costumes and bags to help drivers see you.
- * Examine all treats for choking hazards and tampering before eating them. Limit the amount of treats you eat.
- * Hold a flashlight while trick-or-treating to help you see and others see you. Always WALK and don't run from house to house.
- * Always test make-up in a small area first. Remove it before bedtime to prevent possible skin and eye irritation.
- * Look both ways before crossing the street. Use established crosswalks wherever possible.
- * Lower your risk for serious eye injury by not wearing decorative contact lens.
- * Only walk on sidewalks whenever possible, or on the far edge of the road facing traffic to stay safe.
- * Wear well-fitting masks, costumes, and shoes to avoid blocked vision, trips, and falls.
- * Eat only factory-wrapped treats. Avoid eating homemade treats made by strangers.
- * Enter homes only if you're with a trusted adult. Only visit well-lit houses. Never accept rides from strangers.
- * Never walk near lit candles or luminaries. Be sure to wear flame-resistant costumes.

Steinborn eyes jump from House to Senate

Bulletin report

In the 2012 election, Republican Lee Cotter upended Mary Jane Garcia – who had represented District 36 in the New Mexico Senate for 24 years – and now State Rep. Jeff Steinborn hopes to snare the seat himself.

STEINBORN

Steinborn, a Democrat, currently serves in the House of Representatives representing District 35 in the heart of Las Cruces. He announced Tuesday, Oct. 20, he would seek the state senate seat Cotter currently holds next year in the 2016 election. Senate District 36 stretches from central Las Cruces north through Hatch to the Sierra County border. “I am honored and excited for the opportunity to represent District 36 in the State Legislature,” Steinborn said via a release. “District 36 encompasses the best of New Mexico: historic neighborhoods and communities; the Rio Grande valley; and the greatest green chile grown in the world.” He has been the District 35 representative since 2012 and previously served as representative for District 37 for four years.

“I am running to be a strong advocate for my constituents and play a larger role in my service to Doña Ana County,” Steinborn said. “Being in the state senate will provide a greater opportunity to create good local jobs, improve our education system, fight for ethics reform and transparency in state government, and protect our state’s rich natural and cultural heritage.”

While in the House, Steinborn reports he has: Increased oversight of lobbyists; webcast legislative meetings; worked on a constitutional amendment to remove property taxes from veterans posts; increased consumer protections for utility customers and has worked in other areas. In addition to working for greater protection New Mexico’s water, Steinborn pointed out he led the successful campaign to establish the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument, which was formally designated by President Obama May 21, 2014. He is currently the chair of the Regional Film Development Advi-

Emphasizing the 'alliance' in MVEDA

We've heard the saying before: "If you want something done right, you've got to do it yourself."

You might have even said it a time or two, especially if you're a parent.

When it comes to the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance, however, the organization's leader readily admits they can't do it by themselves.

"Some people when they see our name, MVEDA, they think it stands for Mesilla Valley Economic Development Association," said Davin Lopez, MVEDA's president and CEO. "But the 'A,' of course, actually stands for 'Alliance'. And the people who came before me chose their words carefully. It's truly an alliance, with New Mexico State University, the public schools, our private-sector partners, the city and the county all doing their part. We are doing the hard work for economic development. We are at a war for jobs, not only around the U.S., but globally."

MVEDA has five very capable and talented staff members, but the alliance greatly enhances their ability to get things done.

Lopez was speaking at MVEDA's annual report meeting Monday, Oct. 19, at La Posta de Mesilla.

The numbers Lopez and his staff reported were good ones.

During the Fiscal Year 2014-15, MVEDA's efforts — or as Lopez points out, the efforts of the alliance — generated 454 new economic-based jobs in our region. Those jobs will generate a payroll of $16.5 million.

The jobs are a result of eight completed projects through the efforts of MVEDA: Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine; MCS Industries; expansion at Convergys; F.C. Fraunhauber & Associates; Thrush LLC, expansion at Southwest Steel Coil; Certoplast; and Samson Equipment Inc.

We know Las Cruces also lost jobs during that time period, which makes MVEDA's work on landing these jobs all the more critical.

Perhaps as important as the jobs is the capital investment the projects represent: $99.7 million.

While the 454 jobs MVEDA accounted for is less than the jobs created in 2013-14, the capital investment is a significant jump.

In the past few years, a noteworthy area of job growth in our region has been in the southern part of the county, where Union Pacific's expansion and border opportunities have created a boom of sorts in Santa Teresa. In 2013-14, half of the new jobs in our region came from the Santa Teresa area. A year later, the 2014-15 report shows 90 percent of the new jobs came from Las Cruces.

Lopez explains the key reason for that: Nearly all of the available manufacturing and office space in the Santa Teresa area is now occupied. There's no room for a new or relocating company to move in. Most companies are looking for existing buildings rather than building from scratch. And no one as of yet has demonstrated the nerve or the funding to build speculative buildings.

At the report meeting, former MVEDA board chair George Ruth of Citizens Bank pointed out a key piece of data, when he inquired of MVEDA's annual budget.

"It's about $580,000," Lopez said.

"That's not a bad return on investment," Ruth said. "You spend $580,000 and get a combined $116 million in payroll and capital investment."

MVEDA is constantly working multiple fronts to attract new companies as well as retain and grow existing companies.

It's worth noting the bulk of MVEDA's budget comes from the City of Las Cruces ($200,000 per year) and Doña Ana County (which just increased its investment from $100,000 per year to $200,000). Many complain about our tax dollars, but I would venture those tax dollars are ones well spent.

I would also venture that, if we could increase the investment from private sector partners, MVEDA can get even more accomplished.

Demand responsive county government

Most everyone has an opinion about county government. Regular pronouncements from county officials proclaim what a wonderful job they're doing. As a recently retired supervisor from the county, I'd like to offer another opinion.

There are many hard-working county employees trying to do their best in a difficult working environment. The county workplace culture has too many people in leadership positions who are more concerned with personal gain than they are in becoming better at their profession or becoming better leaders. County culture must improve to become more responsive to the public.

The county workplace must strive for excellence and not just barely functional mediocrity. It must foster a culture of respect of employees, and necessitate that public servants act honorably and not in ways that result in large court settlements paid by taxpayers. The public is tired of excuses and public relations posturing. The public pays for county government and they have a right to receive exemplary service.

County citizens, if you are satisfied with how county government is serving you, then do absolutely nothing to change things. But if you believe you deserve a better and more responsive government, you must demand it.

Donald Cillo

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

The Squeeze Chute

The sun shone dull on its metal bars.
The snow lay drifted against her frame.
Behind the barn near the rusting cars
She's ended up all crippled and lame.

An ol' squeeze chute I'd opened and closed
On a hundred thousand heads and horns
Dragged to the bone yard to decompose
Forgotten rose in a bed of thorns.

I lay a hand on the frozen steel,
The head bar polished as smooth as glass.
The mem'ries flowed and the past revealed Itself like magic. I knew at last.

Why, through the years of sweat and toil.
Despite the urge to romanticize,
I hated it just like a boil
That throbbed like the Starship Enterprise!

Its dinosaurial devious brain
Laying in wait for liver and loin
Slipped a ratchet and jiggled a chain
Then rendered me a blow to the groin!

It came to collect its pound of flesh.
A finger here, there, a piece of shin.
The aching ribs, recalling a'fresh
A gleeful, scything crack to the chin!

Hot forged in hell by the River Styx.
It's what they'd make if devils could weld!
They say machinery and cows don't mix
And that truth has never been dispelled,

But maybe I'm being too unkind.
There's some that says she deserves a crown
And, in fairness I could be inclined,
As final tribute, to melt her down

And mold her into a plumber's snake.
A generous way to salute'r.
And pay her homage, for ol' time's sake
Everytime I called Roto Rooter!

Being foolishly fuelish because of politicians

Recently I was moderator of a local candidate forum. While we talked about taxes and how unfriendly the business climate seems in my little slice of heaven, there was something else that makes me see red every day.

While many people do not think of it, I am offended that I must buy ethanol in my gasoline. About five years ago the environmental operatives in Santa Fe succeeded in forcing the adoption of ethanol-laced gasoline by everyone in New Mexico.

I have three major objections to being forced to use E10 gasoline.

First, the BTU (energy) content of E10 is not as high as regular gasoline, so I surrender gas mileage. I already drive carefully and under the speed limit to boost gas mileage. However, I do not want to spend money foolishly. Also ethanol is very corrosive to older engines and therefore causes older vehicles problems.

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

Second, the use of the food crop corn to make fuel raises the price of corn-based food since the production of corn for food competes with the federally subsidized ethanol production. Farmers weigh the value of producing corn for food or for fuel where they get a federal ethanol subsidy.

The reduction of corn in our food chain increases the cost of food both for humans and for animal feed. Increasing the cost of feeding animals results in higher animal-based food costs to consumers.

Taxpayers subsidize the production of ethanol, which in turn raises the cost of our food. While food cost is not a problem for me, I do not want to spend the extra money needlessly. Importantly, the escalating

More so, this artificial increase in food prices have caused riots in Mexico and in other countries with large populations who are mired in poverty, since the increase in food prices is very real to those people and quite catastrophic. There is no reason their corn-based food should increase in price.

And third, closer to home, New Mexico uses its oil and gas industry to fund education. The use of E10 fuels subtracts money from our schools because the ten percent of ethanol used in gasoline is mainly produced in the "Corn Belt." So ten percent of the money that could go to schools is stolen by politicians.

I have no objection to E10 being sold. Anyone who wants to drive with E10, or E85 for that matter, is free to do so. My objection is that E10 is forced upon me with no chance to get gasoline without ethanol.

While advocates claim ethanol is cleaner burning, I am not convinced it is critical when compared to the harm done to food production and New Mexico schools. Plus, the production of ethanol has many polluting compounds so we are just moving where pollution is occurring.

One advantage of being older is having been through lots of things. In 1973 I suddenly found that the national speed limit was politically being lowered in theory to save fuel. The 1974 Federal Emergency Highway Energy Conservation Act put the national speed limit to fifty-five in some areas and in some states the top speed was limited to fifty miles an hour.

For most of fifteen years the national speed was fifty-five and it wasn't until the late 1980s that the speed limit came up a bit and in 1995 the federal law establishing the speed limit was repealed allowing each state to set its own limits.

This was not sold to the people, it was imposed, much like having to buy gasoline that is 10 percent ethanol is imposed upon us rather than sold. Likewise if I wish to drive the double nickel which is what the fifty-five mph limit was called, no one is stopping me. In years past when ethanol was available but not exclusive, people could buy it or not.

But I cannot find anyone even talking about being forced to be fuelish and suffer the problems that ethanol causes older engines. It is not pretty if you have an older vehicle. Let's not send our money to the Corn Belt any longer. Send that money to our public schools.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Is unified code wise?

Every homeowner and property owner in Doña Ana County will be affected by rezoning plans now being discussed by the county's Zoning and Planning Commission.

The Unified Development Code (UDC), over 250 pages of definitions, regulations, and diagrams, is the subject of these meetings. Anyone in the county who owns property, with or without a house or business on it, will be subject to the rules being established in the UDC.

Last month, our Board of County Commissioners accepted a new Comprehensive Development Plan, the result of a three-year initiative known as Viva Doña Ana 2040. This plan was supposed to include the UDC, but revising the existing zoning codes became so complex that the codes were not ready at the time of the vote.

Some who have studied the code in depth have questioned the wisdom of its adoption. The proposed changes have raised concerns about increased density, more traffic and business placement in rural or undeveloped property, often without public hearing or notice. Additionally, traditional subdivisions are strongly discouraged in favor of small villages and other community types that trump underlying zoning. Adoption of the code will change the nature of Doña Ana County, they believe.

I recognize that growth and change are inevitable. I acknowledge the need for managing growth. However, I also recognize the dangers of micromanagement. Too much of the potential of the UDC seems negative.

(Planning and zoning) commissioners meet on Thursdays, at 9 a.m., in the County Commission Chambers of the Doña Ana County Government Center. I encourage readers to attend and speak up. The proposed code is available at <https://donaanacounty.org/UDC>. Click on "Agendas" on the home page to see which section of the code will be reviewed at any given meeting. Reminder: "Democracy is not a spectator sport."

"Everywhere I look, I see opportunity and I want to be a part of realizing our great potential as a city," Eakman said.

Eakman reports he spent 31 years in health care management, 18 of those as senior administrative officer for a large hospital system in North Dakota. He is currently a consultant for business, government and nonprofits, specializing in strategic planning and organizational support.

Eakman has been active in community service in the Las Cruces area, most recently as an organizer of the Behavioral Health Care Summit, designed to develop coordinated behavioral health services for city and county residents.

He said he is an advocate for well-managed growth for the city, including through the development of vacant and under-utilized land within the city limits and a strong commitment to existing neighborhoods. He is a supporter of workforce development and the many economic development projects currently under way in District 4.

Eakman lives with his wife Delilah in the Tierra Verde area. They have three sons.

Hall said he does "small, light construction" and feels the city needs to be doing a better job for businesses.

"Taxes are high and regulations are kind of strangling business," Hall said.

He reports he has lived in District 4 with his wife and stepson for almost two decades and has been involved in the nonprofit community as well as tended to his business. He has coached gymnastics for 40 years.

Hall said the gross receipts taxes are higher than they should be and impact fees are uneven.

"It depends on location," he said. "Why waive (a fee) in one area and not in another area?"

On his campaign webpage, www.hall4cc.com, he calls for a step back from impact fees, at least until the housing market improves.

"We continue to see steady declines in the number of new building permits issued," he said. "We need to jump start our housing market, make Las Cruces more attractive for future residents, and reverse this downward trend."

Local gun enthusiast finds 2nd career making custom holsters

By Mike Cook
Las Cruces Bulletin

When J.J. Tibbetts retired about three years ago after a career in computer programming, he wanted to pursue his life-long interest in guns as a part-time job by making bullets.

After running into problems with the volume of paperwork required to sell ammunition, Tibbetts pulled out one of his leather holsters and told himself, "I think I can do this."

He made five or six practice holsters before coming up with one he liked.

Tibbetts already knew many gun owners and gun-shop owners in the area, so he showed them his holster, they made referrals and he started taking orders.

Today, at age 65, Tibbetts has a new full-time career, and already has made more than 200 holsters for everything from derringers to a .50-caliber Smith and Wesson Model 500.

He works five to six days a week, and usually produces two to three holsters a week, although more complex designs can take longer. His business, located in Radium Springs, is called Fort Selden Armory.

Tibbetts said his prices range from a base of $47.50 to less than $100 for a more complex holster design. "This way, I don't price myself out of the market," he said. And, even though he isn't paying himself a huge salary, "I love what I'm doing."

Tibbetts also makes ammunition cases, knife sheathes, belts, cell phone holders and tank-rigs, which were developed during World War I to allow soldiers to wear a pistol and holster in front of the body because the narrow opening on a tank wouldn't allow them to enter or exit it with a gun strapped to the side.

One of Tibbetts' specialties is a holster with two-position belt loops so a seat belt can be worn without covering the weapon.

Another type of holster he makes is called a phone case because of its rectangular shape. But, since no part of the gun it holds is visible, anyone who uses a "phone case" as a holster has to be aware that he or she is carrying a concealed weapon according state law.

Tibbetts said his most popular holsters typically feature a client's initials, a ranch brand or maybe a coat of arms. One holster he made for himself has a crusader's shield on it.

He makes holsters and his other products in black, light and dark brown and, occasionally tan.

He can also do turquoise and some other colors for special orders. And, he does some holsters in two colors.

And, it doesn't matter if you are right- or left-handed, if your pistol has a laser sight, if you want a strong-side or a cross-draw holster or if you want to wear the holster inside or outside of your pants, he can come up with a design.

"I haven't come across anything I can't make one (a holster) for," he said.

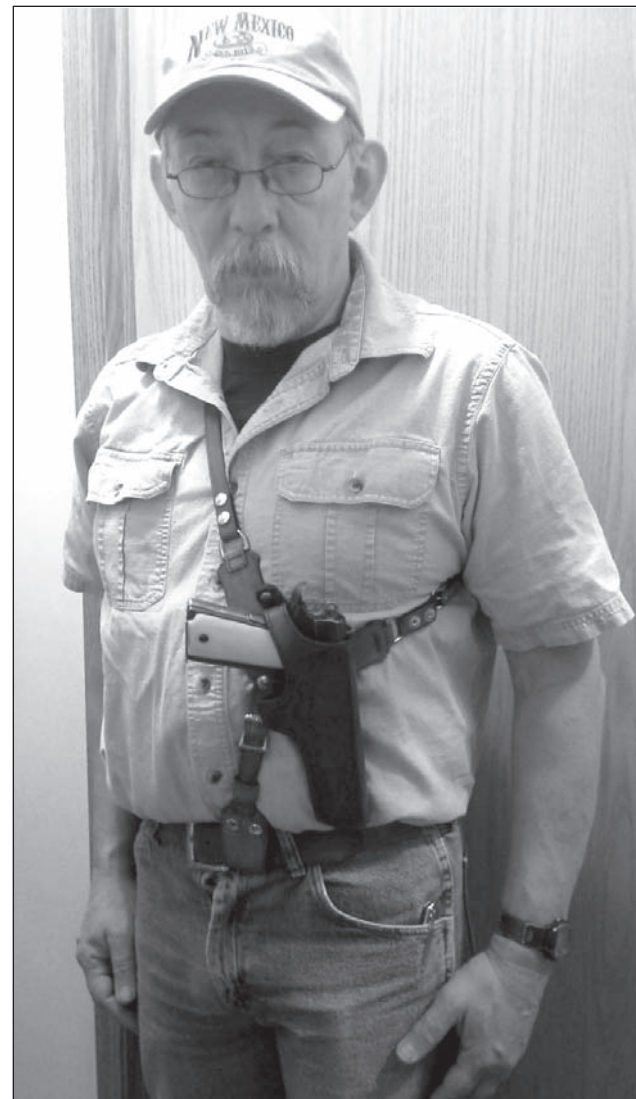

Tibbetts said about his only creative limit so far has been the size of the tools he uses to detail the holster design. "They can only make the tools so small," he said, so extremely intricate designs can be difficult.

Although Tibbetts said he has some holster-making competition locally, "nobody is doing the fancy tool-work that I'm doing that of I'm aware of," he said.

And soon, Tibbetts said he will begin making gun grips, including grips that will match his custom-made holsters.

Tibbetts' wife, Arminda, is an art teacher at Hermosa Heights and Jornada elementary schools. They live in Radium Springs with their four dogs.

For more information, visit Tibbetts' website at <http://fortseldenarmory.com> or contact him at 496-4167.

Vasquez

Vasquez said he was waiting to see someone "step up that I could support."

When that did not happen to his satisfaction, he decided to run himself.

A native Las Cruces, Vasquez lived in Los Angeles and worked there in fire protection for 23 years. Upon retirement, he returned to Las Cruces to be near his parents and raise his youngest son, who is currently a student with Las Cruces Public Schools.

Vasquez reports he stays active as a volunteer at his church. He also supported the initiative to raise the minimum wage last year.

"I want to speak for neglected communities," he said. "I want to talk solutions and listen to people."

Vasquez said, if elected, he will rent the Henry R Benavidez Center on McClure Road once a month to "hear their solutions."

IN THE NEWS

Goats to assist with weed control

The City of Las Cruces Parks & Recreation Department will use about 80 goats for 120 days to remove weeds at Burn Lake, 1855 W. Amador Ave. Starting Oct. 26, the goats will be used to clear away unwanted vegetation such as tumbleweeds, salt cedar, high grass and other vegetation at the lake and at a nearby storm water drainage pond.

The park will remain open and the goats will be in a controlled area throughout the length of the project. The goats will be confined within the park and ponding area and observed at all times to assure they do not wander beyond the project area.

City receives robocalls complaints

The Las Cruces City Clerk's office is receiving calls from registered voters in the city requesting to be removed from automated call lists used by political candidates in the Nov. 3, municipal election.

Neither the City Clerk's office that administers the election, nor Las Cruces municipal government, is responsible for or associated with the calls.

The city reports consumers may contact the Federal Trade Commission's free National Do Not Call Registry at donotcall.gov/.

Suspicious item no threat at Holy Cross

A suspicious item discovered near Holy Cross Catholic Church prompted the temporary closure of the building and the evacuation of students from the on-campus school, Tuesday, Oct. 19.

The item was ultimately deemed to be of no threat.

Shortly after 9 a.m., Las Cruces Police learned that a city utility crew was preparing to work on an underground line when one of the workers noticed a suspicious item inside a utility access point along Miranda, just north and east of Holy Cross.

As a precautionary measure, police helped evacuate the church and school and called in an explosive detection K-9 team from New Mexico State University Police and the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office Bomb Squad.

At around 10:30 a.m., the bomb squad determined that the item was of no threat and removed it from the access point.

Police do not believe this item is related to the two explosive devices that detonated Aug. 2 at Holy Cross and at Calvary Baptist Church.

High schoolers included in roundtables

Doña Ana Community College and two industry partners began quarterly roundtables in Las Cruces several years ago to provide a training program and networking opportunities for public facilities managers.

The roundtable, held earlier this month at the technical studies building on DACC's central campus, is the first time area high school students were included, said Mary Ann Ulik, education and government vertical market leader for TRANE, who partners on the roundtables with DACC and J3 Systems LLC roofing contractors of Albuquerque.

Twelve students from the Gadsden Independent School District and Las Cruces Public Schools participated in the October roundtable, which was expanded into a half-day program and focused on HVAC systems.

Based on the success of the October program, Ulik said future roundtables probably will also include high school students.

For more information, contact Ulik at 505-717-3754 or maryann.ulik@trane.com.

Winter named associate VP for development

New Mexico State University has selected Terra Winter of Las Cruces as its new associate vice president for development in the Office of University Advancement.

Winter most recently served as assistant dean for donor development and alumni relations in NMSU's College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences.

Winter will oversee annual giving, campaign planning, planned giving, development officers and corporate and foundation giving.

She joins Leslie Cervantes, who was named associate vice president for alumni engagement, participation and stewardship in August, and Tina Byford, who now serves as the chief operating officer for University Advancement and the NMSU Foundation.

Winter has more than 13 years of experience in development and earned her certified fundraising executive designation in 2007.

She earned her bachelor's degree in communication studies and master's in public health from NMSU and is currently pursuing an interdisciplinary doctorate in management and educational leadership administration.

If the business grows as planned in the Mesilla Valley, its high-tech, 15-acre greenhouse may even become a catalyst for growing the economy and advancing horticultural research.

During the announcement ceremony, Wong posed the question of why the company chose to locate in Las Cruces.

He gave a list of reasons, highlighting the local workforce.

"There are hard-working people here," he said. "You can't say that about everywhere."

Wong said the company did its due diligence and heard good things about the local workforce from companies already operating here.

Comfort with the culture and respect for the area's agricultural heritage also played into the company's decision.

"We're a mountain state people," he said. "We feel more comfortable west of the Mississippi River and east of the Pacific Ocean."

The location is ideal for distribution of floral bedding plants to the company's big box customers, Wong said. Shipping time will be cut from six days to two days.

"CFH firmly believes that the future of agriculture lies in bringing production closer to the customer," Wong said.

The long agricultural history of the area is "incredibly important to us," he said.

"We always look to stay ahead of the curve," Wong said. "We are going to try produce here. We've been in the agriculture and seed business for 35 years. We're very excited about trying to do new things ... and doing them in a greenhouse environment."

"Investment of this kind results not only in jobs, but we expect to see significant research and development, potentially with NMSU," said Doña Ana County Manager Julia Brown "This honors our deep agricultural and horticultural tradition in Doña Ana county."

The university's executive vice president and provost, Dan Howard, said according to the company's business plan, it can start immediately with bedding plants.

"What makes it unique developing berry and vegetable seeds that will do well in this area - will create a wonderful opportunity for the students we train in plant breeding and plant genetics," he said.

NMSU expands its role in Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Big things start small, and NMSU Aggies are Tough Enough to Wear Pink is no exception.

The New Mexico State University football game Saturday marks the annual Pink Game when fans are invited to wear pink in recognition of Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Players will also wear pink.

In its earliest iteration, NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink was organized and executed by a small group of community volunteers, led in by the so-called Pink Ladies – Laura Conniff (NMSU Regents Chair), Magella Boston (wife of former Athletics Director Dr. McKinley Boston), Pat Sisbarro (wife of car dealer Lou Sisbarro) and June Mumme (wife of former Aggie Football coach Hal Mumme) – each of them active women dedicated to the Las Cruces community who, together, had beaten cancer.

Though the TETWP campaign was managed privately, New Mexico State University was involved from the start, largely with institutional support – providing venues, manpower and the like – a role that’s grown steadily in the campaign’s eight successful years. And as TETWP outgrows its modest beginnings, so too does NMSU’s involvement expand.

While the early years were successful, TETWP organizers quickly realized they’d need help to keep up with the project’s rapid expansion, especially in terms of infrastructure – a need NMSU recognized it could fill and jumped at the chance. Following the 2013 campaign, it was decided within the university’s administration that NMSU would take on a larger role in the planning and logistics aspects, providing much-needed backup for the all-volunteer group of co-chairs – Conniff, Boston, Sisbarro and Lynda Garcia – which still handles the majority of fundraising.

Heading into this year’s campaign, a newly formed NMSU committee – headed by none other than NMSU President Garrey Carruthers – is ready to take on the challenge.

According to NMSU’s Justin Bannister, also a member of the committee, which includes voices from all areas of the university, the committee’s role is largely one of support.

“There are different entities and different moving parts to this,” he said. “The original folks are Cowboys for Cancer Research, Denny and Geraldine Calhoun and Lynn Arnold. Then there are the Pink Ladies, who do a lot of the heavy lifting when it comes to fundraising efforts around town. Then, recently created here on campus, is a NMSU committee chaired by President Garrey Caruthers, who is taking a personal responsibility for the work of the committee.

“The committee works not quite 12 months a year, but close, to make sure all the different moving parts that comprise the TETWP efforts are executed. There are lots of events, lots of outreach, lots of communication, lots of logistics that have to happen to make sure everything goes off without a hitch,” Bannister said.

The university isn’t just helping, though; some of the funds raised stay right here in Las Cruces.

“Ever since (TETWP was formed), it’s been more and more intertwined with the university,” Bannister said. “One of the things the university is really excited about is that the money raised by these efforts stays here locally – the contributions go to fund cancer-research projects here at New Mexico State University. Not only is this a community effort that really a lot of people take pride in, but also the results of the fundraising efforts benefit the research going on right here.”

In addition to the well-known research of NMSU’s Jeff Arterburn, funds raised by TETWP stay within the university, benefitting work done by the likes of Ryan Ashley, of the College of Agriculture, who works with the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center located in Seattle, or that of husband-and-wife team Kevin and Jessica Houston, both assistant professors – he in chemistry and biochemistry, she in chemical engineering – dedicated their work to cancer-related areas. In fact, funds raised during these community efforts help to fund the continued cancer research of eight different entities on campus.

100yearsago

• The Oct. 23, 1915 Las Cruces Citizen reported Maria Rodriguez and Joe Apodaca, residents in the southern part of the city, “were arrested Saturday night in the midst of a dancing party for having a home social without inviting a special officer to supervise the fights.”

• The Citizen reported a big weekend ahead for Las Cruces, with “quite a few interesting events crowded in,” among them a football game between State College and the EPHS “with special railroad rates from Cruces,” a chicken pie dinner given by the Methodist ladies and the first number of the Redpath Lyceum course in Hadley Hall on the college campus.

• “The people of Las Cruces and vicinity will be given plenty of opportunities to get the theater fever this year,” the Citizen opined. “The college is running a five-number Lyceum course and so is the high school. In addition to these ten high class professional numbers the Birdwell, Katzenstein company is giving frequent treats of good vaudeville and musical numbers in connection with their motion picture show ... Altogether it looks like Las Cruces is becoming a regular show town and we can no longer mourn the fact that El Paso and other big cities have the advantage over us in this respect.

• Many Las Cruces were making travel arrangements for the arrival of Philadelphia’s famed Liberty Bell in El Paso the following month, the Citizen reported.

75yearsago

• The Oct. 24, 1940 Las Cruces Citizen predicted a close race between Doña Ana County Clerk candidates Manuel Chavez, the democratic incumbent, and Jesus Nevarez, the dark-horse republican candidate. Both were born and raised in Las Cruces and were each “efficient, competent men.”

• State College President Hugh M. Milton had recently been notified that the institution would receive a fund of $9,000 from New York’s Carnegie Corporation for the purchase of books for general undergraduate reading. Elsewhere, Milton, along with Dr. Fabian Garcia, also of the college, were appointed as members of the State Council on National Defense by New Mexico Governor John E. Miles.

• The Doña Ana County Clerk’s office announced a countywide draft registration total of 3,521.

50yearsago

• “A New Mexico State University professor is one of three Las Cruces now working ‘full-film ahead’ to make this city the Hollywood of the Southwest” read the first line of the Las Cruces Citizen’s cover story for the week of Oct. 28, 1965. The movie-making trio – Forrest Westmoreland, land developer, Teddy

Gregory, photographer, and Orville Wanzer, professor of English at NMSU, known together as WGW Studios – were set to release their first movie, “The Devil’s Mistress,” filmed in the area “with the serene and moody Organ Mountains as a backdrop for the film” and described as having “an aura of a Hitchcock thriller with the flavor of the Old West of 1870.”

• Duck and Cover: The Citizen reported the University of New Mexico was set to conduct a 16-hour course in Fallout Shelter Management in Las Cruces, which included “nuclear weapons effect and threat, the need for fallout shelters, the National, State and Local Civil Defense Programs, principles of leadership, management and organization, and management and group dynamics under stress and emergency conditions” in its first eight hours. The latter half of the course would consist of “actual living conditions in a qualified public fallout shelter and the many problems inherent in sheltered living under these emergency measures.”

Bowling for Hunger

The lines were very long in the late morning and early afternoon of Friday, Oct. 16, as hundreds and hundreds turned out for the 23rd annual Empty Bowls fundraiser at St. Paul's United Methodist Church at the corner of Griggs and Alameda. The event is sponsored by the Potters Guild of Las Cruces and benefits El Caldito Soup Kitchen. The Potters Guild estimates that more than 18,000 bowls were made for the event even before this year. It raised more than $145,000 for the soup kitchen 2002-13, and this year's and last year's events will add a lot to that total. There was also a pottery-making demonstration, a silent auction and a cap and T-shirt sale. El Caldito has served more than 1.5 million meals since it started in 1984, and now serves meals seven days a week. It is located in the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, 999 W. Amador Ave. Visit www.elcaldito.com for more information or to make a contribution.

Las Cruces realtor brings Berkshire Hathaway to town

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

As a local realtor, Terriane Everhart has been marketing properties in Downtown Las Cruces for 20 years.

Now she's moving her new business, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices New Mexico Properties - Southern Division, into the heart of Downtown.

Everhart says she's passionate about the advantages her affiliation with the prestigious national firm can bring to the people of Las Cruces.

At the same time, she's delighted to be "home" in her new office at 424 N. Main St.

"Downtown brings so many memories," said Everhart, who moved to the City of the Crosses when she was in high school. "Shopping with my grandmother at The Popular, a really nice store. She would get dressed up to go shopping. It was a treat to go Downtown, to meet people and have lunch."

But Downtown is not her grandma's Downtown.

"As an adult, I see changes and growth in Las Cruces," she said. "I felt and still feel Downtown is the heart of the city, historically and in so many ways."

The old becomes new

Everhart's association with Downtown includes serving on the original revitalization task force for the neighborhood that led the effort to re-open Main Street to two-way traffic.

She said through her previous business, Property Consultants, she had marketed the building that houses her new business, leasing it to different clients for 20 years.

The building was - and is - owned by her ex-husband's family, the Chishol-

With his enthusiastic endorsement, she is renovating both the inside and outside of the space.

Her goal is to create a clean, comfortable, contemporary feeling that at the same time evokes harmony with its traditional Main Street surroundings.

She said Berkshire Hathaway is in accord with her vision for integrating the company's national and services into the needs and culture of Las Cruces.

"We don't want to pretend we're from the big city, because we don't think that dynamic works," she said. "They (Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices) expressed to me they wanted me to keep doing things with passion and attachment to Las Cruces's grass roots."

"They work diligently to accommodate us," she said.

Why a franchise?

Everhart said she was skeptical when her Albuquerque business partner, Jim Pitts, approached her about a year ago with a proposal she close Property Consultants and open a southern New Mexico of-office for Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices.

"I've always believed in the grass roots," she said. "I was skeptical about the franchise idea."

She acknowledged, however, that the real estate business had changed: Social media had become its growth engine.

"It was not something I can take on as an individual," she said.

Everhart said in visiting with commercial and residential clients and investors, both home grown and those from other locations, she became convinced there's a role for Berkshire-Hathaway HomeServices in the Mesilla Valley.

"You just say the name Berkshire Hathaway and people know they're going to get a product beyond their expectations," she said. "Berkshire Hathaway has a reputation for being very professional."

Everhart said Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices supports her business with marketing, agent training, trends information and much more.

"The feeling I get is the sky's the limit with this company," she said. "They started about three years ago. They hit the market in the big cities, starting with residential. They're about to start growing their commercial business. The ex-

Poll: NM small business diversifies workforce

A recent opinion poll shows small business hiring of lower-level employees is diverse, but more can be done to increase diversity in the hiring of upper-management employees.

The poll, conducted Jan. 15-Feb. 3 by Greenberg Quinlan Rosner Research on behalf of Small Business Majority, found New Mexico small businesses hire a diverse set of employees among their non-management level staff. The poll found 75 percent of New Mexico small businesses have at least one female employee, nearly two-thirds (62 percent) have at least one Hispanic employee, 16 percent have at least one American Indian or Alaskan native employee, 16 percent have at least one employee with a disability, 11 percent have at least one African-American employee, 3 percent have at least one Asian or Pacific Islander employee and 31 percent report having at least one other non-white employee.

"Small businesses make up 96 percent of businesses in New Mexico and employ more than half of the state's private sector workers," said John Arensmeyer, founder & CEO of Small Business Majority. "New Mexico small businesses can benefit from hiring more minorities and women, especially at the management level, because having a diverse set of employees can bring together new ideas, foster creativity and spur innovation."

While small businesses have a diverse workforce among their lower-level staff, women and minorities are underrepresented at the management level. Among management or non-entry level staff, 38 percent are women, 25 percent are Hispanic, 6 percent are American Indian or Alaskan native, 4 percent are Asian or Pacific Islander, 2 percent are African-American, 2 percent have a disability and 13 percent represent another non-white minority.

Many small businesses do not have management positions outside the owner, and more than 81 percent poll respondents have 10 or fewer employees.

Some New Mexico business owners plan to make it a priority to improve diversity among their high-level employees. The poll found 27 percent plan to hire or promote in order to increase the diversity of their high-level workforce within the next few years.

"It's encouraging to see the findings that small business owners are hiring a diverse set of employees that reflects the demographics of their communities," said Loren Harris, director of family economic security for the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. "However, this polling shows there's more to do around education and understanding the benefits of increasing diversity at the management level for small businesses."

This poll reflects a telephone survey of 500 small business owners from around the country with an oversample of 103 small businesses in New Mexico. Funding for the poll was provided by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Small Business Majority is a national small business advocacy organization, founded and run by small business owners to focus on solving the biggest problems facing America's 28 million small businesses today.

NM film conference sheds light on entrepreneurial opportunities

By Belle Allen

The film industry in New Mexico offers numerous opportunities for entrepreneurs to get in on the "lights, camera, action!"

To share information about state resources and growing industry trends with filmmakers, producers, accountants, studios, vendors, crew, actors and emerging media innovators, the New Mexico State Film Office is hosting the 2015 New Mexico Film and Media Industry Conference, Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 29-31, at the Isleta Casino & Resort in Albuquerque.

Established players in the state's vibrant film industry aren't the only ones who could benefit from the workshops and sessions being planned: The event is a setting for savvy creatives and go-getters to find a niche in established service areas and to learn about unmet needs their products, properties and talents might fill.

Nurturing a growing industry

Production crews that make movies, TV shows, video games, webisodes, apps and commercials in New Mexico have obvious needs: places to stay and eat (including on-set food services), office and building supplies, furniture rentals, digital support services and travel agents, as well as location scouts to identify sites that match the needs of their script or project.

But there are less apparent needs that New Mexico production crews often struggle to meet, and that's where an ambitious business or individual can get a toe-hold.

Movie and TV crews frequently need to build sets and acquire props. They need costumes and stylists. When the landscape needs rearranging (and later, restoring), they require heavy equipment and people to operate road graders, backhoes and front loaders. Offices, production locations and sets need to be cleaned and maintained, and garbage needs to be hauled away on a regular basis. Adding to the extensive list of vital services are portable toilets, massage, chiropractic and other basic health care. Crews need dry cleaning and laundry services; florists, couriers and pet groomers; security personnel and traffic controllers.

In New Mexico, there are many creative inroads into the film industry. Parking lot owners have rented their properties as staging areas for urban shoots. Barricade companies have provided signs and message boards to detour traffic, close streets or communicate other safety information. Art galleries have rented out paintings or photographs used as set dressings, and antique stores have done the same with period props. RAKS Building Supply credits the film industry's need for nails, lumber and other set-building supplies with helping it survive the recession.

Fortunately, the film industry shows no signs of cooling off in New Mexico. But the opportunities and the repeat business will go to those who are agile and flexible

China slowdown has implications for New Mexico

One of the puzzles in economic development is the so-called middle income trap. What is observed, over and over again, is countries growing rapidly, then as they reach middle income status, between 20 to 40 percent of U.S. per capita GDP their growth slows dramatically. It happened to Mexico in the 1980s; a growing consensus thinks it's happening to China right now.

One explanation for the middle income gap, put forward by noted Minnesota professor Tim Kehoe, holds that there are stages of economic development.

In Kehoe's theory, the initial phase of development involves traditional industrialization. During this phase, governments make massive investment in infrastructure and in education. The UK experienced this phase in the mid-19th century; the U.S. in the early 20th century; China right now. Initially growth is rapid, but ultimately the gains from industrialization play out and growth slows dramatically. This slowdown is the middle income trap.

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

During the initial phase of rapid growth, those who control access to the go-go economy provide ample opportunity for corruption. Entrenched interests, such as labor unions, drug gangs and business oligarchs, become more prevalent.

Eliminating the negative influence of entrenched interests is necessary if rapid growth is to resume. But doing so is easier said than done. After all, it is political power that has allowed rule by corrupt officials and entrenched special interests, and they will seek to use their political power to thwart reform.

Countries that can't tame their entrenched interests will remain mired in the middle income trap, according to Kehoe.

The history of Mexico is consistent with the theory. Mexico, after 30 years of growth, slowed down in the 1980s. Official corruption was recognized as an increasing problem, so on taking office in 2000, Vincente Fox proposed reforms modeled after a successful effort in Singapore. Officials' salaries would be dramatically increased, coupled with stepped up enforcement of anti-corruption laws. Previous corruption would be ignored, but any backsliding would be ruthlessly prosecuted.

Problem: Fox's reforms were rejected by the Mexican legislature. Those who benefited from the status quo were able to use their political power to thwart Fox.

As things stand now Mexican beat cops can't survive on their salary and have to turn to bribes to feed their families. Higher ups benefit from the system via kickbacks and pass-ups. Corruption continues.

The theory seems to also apply to China. Beginning in 1979, China has engaged in a state led program of investment, devoting as much as 50 percent of GDP to capital formation.

But this program is running out of steam.

There is a shortage of unfunded profitable projects. Indeed, the net return on new investment in China is thought to be a negative number. The Chinese growth model has run out of steam.

Further growth will require not more capital, but capital used more efficiently. So anti-corruption has become a major theme of the leadership of General Secretary Xi Jinping. Whether Xi will succeed, and, if he does, whether that will be enough to reignite China's growth remains to be seen.

China's ability to continue to grow has important implications for New Mexico. China is a big user of copper, oil and potash, all products produced in New Mexico. We are already seeing layoffs.

Community Foundation extends support through scholarships

By Charlotte Tallman
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Each year, the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) manages a variety of scholarships that were created through endowments as a way to leave a legacy.

This year, the endowments distributed more than $74,000 to students.

Graduating seniors at high schools in Luna, Hidalgo, Grant, Sierra, Lincoln, Otero and Doña Ana counties benefit from the scholarships, but the CFSNM scholarships don't just help high school students head to college. They help nontraditional students realize their dreams to further their education.

The SpringBoard! Scholarship program was established in 2004 to help improve the lives of women in southern New Mexico by providing opportunities for advanced education. This scholarship is awarded to female, typically non-traditional, students from throughout southern New Mexico who are pursuing higher education at a southern New Mexico community college in preparation for a career. SpringBoard! also provides financial support for women wanting to get their GED.

This year's selection of students included those studying in the fields of criminal justice, education, dental hygiene, nursing and business office technology.

"It has been encouraging to see the various areas of specialization these students are focusing on. It tells me women are going into unconventional areas," said Ammu Devasthali, who was responsible for the establishment of the SpringBoard! Scholarship program in 2004, and still sits on the award selection committee.

In addition to SpringBoard!, the Over the Rainbow Scholarship was established by Nancy Baker to honor the memory of her mother, Dorothy Ellen Baker, a daughter of an Appalachian coal miner who valued higher education for women. The scholarships primarily provide advanced education opportunities for nontraditional students.

When Mellow and Janet Honek considered how they could best impact the community, they decided providing educational opportunities was the way to go so they created the Sunspot Solar/Mellow and Janet Honek Scholarship.

"The Community Foundation made it easy for Sunspot to establish the scholarship for Native American education. We really appreciated the program's low overhead, high growth, simplicity and flexibility. Because the program is well managed, we can help more young Native Americans gain the tools they need to be successful," Mellow Honek said.

Like Devasthali, Baker and the Honeks, Jon Wynne had a desire to support education. The dedicated CFSNM volunteer and board member left a large planned gift through a bequest in his will/trust. When he passed away, the CFSNM created the Jon Wynne Scholarship Fund through his estate, showing Wynne's generosity and vision for years to come.

SpringBoard!, Over the Rainbow, Sunspot Solar/Mellow and Janet Honek Scholarship and the Jon Wynne Scholarship Fund are just three of the 20 scholarship opportunities within the CFSNM

"Starting an endowment is a great way to have an impact," Devasthali said. "The benefit is you can start an educational scholarship with very general parameters. An educational scholarship is of so much value because it has the power to transform the life of an individual."

For more information on scholarships at the CFSNM, visit www.cfsnm.org or call 521-4794.

She said she especially appreciates working with Berkshire Hathaway's relocation department, which she described as "really robust." "My first week with Berkshire Hathaway, I referred three really good clients and I was able to help one of my clients list investment properties in other states," Everhart said.

Everhart said her office already has placed 200 "for sale" signs on properties "in Las Cruces, Caballo Lake and everywhere."

There are 10 agents on board, each with their own specialties, including residential, buyer representative and commercial.

"I really enjoy putting together a founding team of dynamic personalities, each whom bring a lot to the table," she said.

A record in the community

Everhart said she knew from a young age she wanted to focus on her career.

"In junior high I babysat for every person in the neighborhood so I could buy my first moped," she said. "I supported myself through college as a waitress at El Sombrero. Ofelia Carillo was a strong female mentor who taught me how to work hard. I worked there 10 years and graduated without any debt."

Everhart said she started her professional career at Southwestern Abstract & Title Co., where she "worked her way through the firm learning how real estate transactions look."

She said prior to starting Property Consultants, she spent a lot of time learning from David Steinborn and other established developers their perspective on the business.

Throughout her career, Everhart has contributed her energies to community projects.

She said from its founding she was on the board of First Step Center, which provided health services for women and children. Prior to its merger with La Clinica de Familia, it delivered more than half the babies born in Doña Ana County.

"It is very dear to me and my family," she said.

Everhart has also served on the boards of La Casa, Big Brothers Big Sisters and March of Dimes. She currently sits on the board of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) and the New Mexico Health Exchange (NM HIX).

"People are my passion," she said.

Her sons, students at Holy Cross School, also volunteer in the community and help her with her commitments, Everhart said.

"My kids live it with me," she said. "They're helping me put up signs, decorating, picking up trash."

"I'm really blessed by good people in life - family, friends and extended family."

NMSU volleyball storms past UTEP

Bulletin report

The New Mexico State University volleyball team cruised to a 3-0 sweep of rival University of Texas-El Paso in the Battle of I-10 on Tuesday, Oct. 20 at the Pan American Center.

The Aggies notched their 17th victory out of the last 18 meetings, third straight, with the 25-21, 25-14, 25-15 decision over the Miners.

“What we wanted in these matches was competition and competitiveness, maybe an opportunity to experiment a little bit. We did that a little,” Head Coach Mike Jordan said, “I think when nobody gets hurt in a nonconference game and you beat your rival, you have got to be happy with that outcome.”

The senior tandem of Nathalie Castellanos and All-America candidate Gwen Murphy lead the way for NM State. A Vado native out of Gadsden, Castellanos had probably her best match of the season with 14 kills and a stunning .650 hitting percentage. Murphy continued to show why she is one of the best players in the conference with 10 kills and a hitting percentage of .643.

Tatyana Battle also played a large role in the win. The freshman registered nine kills and a .438 hitting percentage.

Junior Tatum Winter set the pace for the Miners with 7 kills and a hitting percentage of .429.

The Miners kept the first set close with four ties and only letting the Aggies jump out to a five-point lead at the most. However, NM State claimed the set 25-21.

The second set was all Aggies, as they jumped out to a 10-2 lead to open the frame. However, UTEP battled back to make it 12-7, but NM State ran away with the set winning it 25-14.

The Miners didn't go down without a fight, as they forced six ties in the third set. UTEP kept it close all the way to 12-10, but the Aggies took the set over and clinched the victory with a 25-15 decision in the set.

NM State is back in action on Saturday, Oct. 24 as they travel to UTRGV to start the second half of the WAC schedule. First serve is set for 11 a.m.

“I expect us to improve. I don't expect us to stay the same. We are going to challenge them in practice. We've been pretty good at resting people. We're going to start going a little bit harder now. Making two or three days a week productive, hard practices that challenge us. I expect to see improvement,” said Jordan.

Ags host Trojans for Homecoming, Pink Game

The Aggies hope to gnosh on some home cooking Saturday, Oct. 24.

New Mexico State University's football team has not played in the friendly confines of Aggie Memorial Stadium in more than a month and the squad is still looking for its first victory of the season as it takes on Troy at home.

Kickoff is scheduled for 6 p.m. and the game will aired on AggieVision and will be broadcast on 570 AM.

Saturday's game is not only homecoming but also the annual Tough Enough to Wear Pink Game, when the team and many fans wear pink in recognition of Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

The Aggies (0-6 overall, 0-2 Sun Belt), lost 56-26 the previous week at Georgia Southern and now take on a Troy squad that has just

NMSU softball announces schedule

Following a record-breaking season that featured a 14-1 conference record, the defending WAC champion NM State softball program announced its 2016 schedule.

Coach Kathy Rodolph's squad opens the season Feb. 12 with the New Mexico State Invitational Tournament which will feature Incarnate Word and Battle of I-10 rival UTEP. The following weekend, NM State will hold the Troy Cox Tournament as it plays host to Campbell, Creighton, Western Michigan and Oklahoma. The Sooners finished the 2015 season with a 49-9 record and a No. 12 national ranking

All in all, the Aggies will face 27 non-conference opponents prior to league play.

"This is by far our most aggressive schedule in the last 13 years at least," Rodolph said. "We will play 10 games against teams with a top 20 RPI. We will play six games with a top 50 RPI. One of the highlights is attending the Mary Nutter Classic in Palm Springs, Calif. This is the most prestigious pre-playoff event for Division I softball. We are excited for the challenge."

NM State will take its first road trip of the season Feb. 25-28 for the Mary Nutter Classic. The Aggies will take on Northwestern, BYU, Cal State Fullerton, Oregon State and Boise State.

Rival UNM visits Las Cruces March 8.

The Aggies will turn to conference April 1 as they host Seattle U on back-to-back days.

The Aggies will conclude regular season conference play April 29 with a road trip to Missouri-Kansas City. The WAC Tournament is scheduled for May 11-14 in Seattle.

Ag men's golf finishes sixth

The New Mexico State men's golf team struggled in final-round action in the 2015 Herb Wimberly Intercollegiate Tuesday, Oct. 20 at the NM State Golf Course, finishing sixth as a team.

The Aggies posted a final-round 298 to finish at 877, just two strokes behind third place Wichita State and one out of a fourth place tie between Lamar and Colorado State at 876.

UTEP won the team title after a 2-under-par 282 on Tuesday for a final of 2-over 854.

"We didn't start very well and things didn't get a whole lot better," said NM State head coach Mike Dirks. "We wanted to win our home event playing on our home golf course. But it's one of those things in competition golf that sometimes you don't have your best, and we didn't it and it really showed."

The Aggies were paced by junior Luis Medina who fired a 1-over 72 to finish in a tie for 11th at 4-over 217.

Senior Kenneth Fadke II of Hobbs and Oñate High grad Isaac Merry both posted 4-over 75's on the par 71, 7,242-yard tournament course to finish tied for 16th at 6-over 219. Freshman Davis Chung out of Las Cruces High tallied a 5-over 76 to finish with a 222.

The top NMSU performer for the tournament was sophomore Mike McGilton who was not in the team lineup and played as an individual. McGilton carded a 3-over 74 in the final round and finished tied for eighth at 3-over 216.

Playing the golf course as if it were a sales customer may close the deal

A close friend who is a certified financial advisor recently urged me to read a book entitled "The Mind of the Customer" by training gurus Richard Hodge and Lou Schachter.

The book begins with a parable about a paper boy who loses all of the customers on his paper route but one.

When he took over his route the paperboy had figured he could just keep on flinging papers in the vicinity of his subscribers' houses, wet or dry, inserts or no inserts, and he could get a new bicycle soon enough.

The papers were often delivered late, but he wasn't late to collect.

He figured payoff first – a new bike – customers last. (Like some big companies.) He figured wrong. It doesn't work that way. And now he was down to one last paper on his route. Finally our paperboy made a mind shift. He decided to find out about the customers on his street and get to know what people in town wanted. He then went out of his way to do more than they expected.

As I continued to read on I began to wonder, "what if my golf course were my biggest customer?" Then

Golf Doctor

I mused, "I probably would have to understand the golf course intimately, down to every tiny detail and nuance."

Perhaps I was on to something. I began to sense that, as a serious golfer who wanted to win – like a dedicated sales person – I would have to play golf in a way that gave my golf course what it really wanted. As I continued on with the image of the golf course as it came into view, it was dictating what I should do with each particular shot. I got excited because it was directing me to sense what I should do with my game, and it seemed like a whole new paradigm shift.

It's a shift like the one a company makes when it stops pushing the idea "this is our product and we'll try to force you to buy it," and starts believing "we'll make what you want to best satisfy your expectations and deliver it at a price and a manner that fits your needs best."

Looking at golf like this – intelligently rather than forcing – means to me making solid golf swings, executing quality golf shots, striking excellent putts, committing very few errors and taking care of the golf course grounds.

And doing all this with enthusiasm and integrity, which is paramount. I had never considered the game of golf in quite those terms before. I had always thought in terms of results first; namely, fairways, greens, pars, birdies, scores, winning. Now I'm thinking, "do what the golf course wants without grousing about the layout."

In golf, as in sales, results come last, not first. Golfers are well advised to learn the game, practice the swing, work on certain shots, understand their own capabilities, gain playing experience, compete with passion and master good behavior.

These antecedents all come before wonderful results materialize. Do the work first, including practice, the good scores will follow.

According to the authors of "The Mind of the Customer," the "secret" to successful selling, whether it be a used car or a multimillion dollar service contract, is found in understanding the mind, perception and needs of the customer.

The more golf I play, the more I am now convinced that when we look closely and cleverly, and consequently give the golf course what it calls for, therein may lie our secret to much better and satisfying golf performance.

One of the best examples I can offer is on the putting greens. I've stopped focusing only on the golf hole, 4 1/4 inches in diameter, as an obstacle, and then trying to somehow force my golf ball into that opening. The hole is now an invitation. It says, "Look closely, understand the variations and the ball will disappear."

Yes, the green talks to us, telling us that if we investigate the grass texture and nature – like grain and firmness – and contours of the land closely enough, there is a discernable slope, angle and speed. The clues are there.

In effect the green is saying to us, "study me (quickly); give me a solid, intelligently and confidently struck putt, and I will give you back the result you want, nearly all the time." Tune in next week for more surprises.

with the option defense," Martin said. "Now we are going to go into spread offenses, teams who really spread you out and throw the ball well. We have our issues with the passing game too. We have to get an identity on defense. We have to line up and keep people from getting the big plays."

On offense, the Aggies are still without starting quarterback Tyler Rogers, who has missed the past two weeks with a thumb injury that will still keep him sidelined.

Against Georgia Southern, Andrew Allen made his second career start behind center – his first this season. The sophomore was 20-of-37 for 253 yards and three touchdowns with one interception. After stepping in for quarterback Nick Jeanty against then-No. 13 Ole Miss, Allen is now 30-of-51 for 308 yards this season.

Undead overrun Main Street during sixth annual Zombie Walk

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

“They’re coming to get you, Barbara” – for the sixth year in a row.

That’s right; thousands of moaning, groaning, gasping and grabbing zombies will once again descend on the heart – or is it brains? – of Downtown Las Cruces, shambling their way down Main Street as the outbreak begins with the sixth annual Zombie Walk, returning from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24.

Since its inception in 2009, then under the auspices of the Doña Ana Arts Council, the annual Zombie Walk has grown exponentially – not unlike the outbreak of some unholy, undead-raising virus – from a few hundred shambling striders to more than 1,000 registered participants last year, and a total crowd, survivors included, of more than 4,000.

This year, zombies will gather in the quarantine zone – safely penned behind “impenetrable” fencing from Tractor Supply Co., doing their part to stem the undead outbreak – at the northern end of Main Street Downtown, where they’ve been corralled and catalogued, not unlike cattle. What could possibly go wrong?

In the hours leading up to the 7:30 p.m. sirens, calling the undead to stable, entertainment will be provided by The Beaux Peep Show playing dance and rock hits from the past five decades, along with beats from DJ Dislexican and a performance of Michael Jackson’s “Thriller” by students at Alma d’Arte Charter High School.

For those with a hunger and thirst for more than brains and blood, a selection of the city’s beloved food trucks will line Main Street, and a beer garden will be set up by High Desert Brewing Co. for zombies and survivors 21 years of age.

Of course, even the undead need a safe ride home, so event organizers Project Mainstreet have partnered with Uber to offer a free first-ride home from the event with download of the app at <https://get.uber.com/go/PMNOW>. Code is PMNOW.

free; however, those participating in the walk must register. Registration begins at 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24, before the event. Early registration at will be held at Run Culture, 221 N. Main St., from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23, a day prior to the event, and is $1 per person. Day-of registration is $2 per person, $5 per team of four or more and free for children age 12 and younger. ## Artists get together for one-of-a-kind sale, show

Las Cruces Bulletin

There may be no better way to help support the arts in Las Cruces – and adorn your own walls with a one-of-a-kind work of art – than the New Mexico State University Department of Art’s bi-annual Project: Postcard exhibit and sale.

Opening Thursday, Oct. 20, and on display for just nine days, the 2015 Project: Postcard exhibit culminates with a sale and silent auction from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 29.

NMSU Art Department Academic Head Julia M. Barello brought Project: Postcard to life in 2011, inspired by a show held by London’s Royal College of Art, as not only a fundraiser for the oft-underfunded department, but as a way to engage with the community at large.

“At large” could not be more apt – each year, Project: Postcard draws submissions from not only NMSU alumni, students and current and former faculty and staff, but from local, regional, national and international artists ready and willing to donate their artwork anonymously and free of charge.

This year, with an expanded call for submissions by UAG Director Marisa Sage, Project: Postcard contains 342 postcard-sized pieces created by artists from far-flung locales including Mexico, China, Japan, Switzerland, Chile, France, Turkey, Italy and England, right alongside works of art by our own local creators.

On par with the stunning geographic scope of the work, the work contained in Project: Postcard could not be more diverse; pieces are in nearly every media conceivable, not to mention several surprises, ranging in theme, subject matter, style and presentation but each a unique expression of the individual artists, wherever and whoever they may be. Working within the proposal's strict size guidelines seems to have inspired many of the Project: Postcard artists to push against the boundaries and explore the furthest corners of their craft.

All of these more than 300 5-inch-by-7-inch pieces will be up for grabs as Project: Postcard closes with a silent auction and sale.

So how does it work?

Simple. Attendees may purchase $40 tickets now through the day of the event at either the Department of Art, Room 100A on the first floor of D.W. Williams Hall on the NMSU campus, or at Cutter Gallery, 2640 El Paseo Road. Each ticket entitles the ticketholder to one piece off the Project:

Postcard walls. During the closing event, tickets are taken and chosen, one-by-one and at random; when your number is pulled, it's your turn to choose your masterpiece – if someone else hasn't snagged it first.

To ensure you get the perfect piece, a few suggestions:

First, keep an open mind. There's 342 works of art on the UAG walls, from all over the world, in too many different media, styles and subjects to count; if you don't get your first – or tenth – pick, there's bound to be another ten you'll love.

Second, it helps to know what's there. Give yourself an hour or so to stop by the gallery – regular hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday – and take your time with the work. With each pass, it's likely something new will catch your eye. The work in Project: Postcard can also be viewed online (<https://uag.nmsu.edu/project-postcard-2015/>), but nothing beats the real thing.

In addition, a dozen pieces have been selected by the six-person Project: Postcard committee to stand aside in a silent auction.

All funds raised by this year's Project: Postcard sale and silent auction will go to the much-needed, long-overdue renovation of D.W. Williams Hall, one-time gymnasium – the current gallery space was formerly a basketball court, and has the concrete bleachers hidden away to prove it – and home of the NMSU Department of Art, which just got a recent bump at the department's Gym to Gem fundraiser and auction held Oct. 17.

The event, which featured 27 works up for auction generously donated by alumni and past and current faculty, drew more than 70 people and raised $27,000, in part matching funds by hosts Ammu and Rama Devasthali, longtime local patrons of the arts and benefactors of the Devasthali Family Foundation Fund, a fund in the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico.

These funds go to the renovation of the aged D.W. Williams Hall – to “raze” the gym and “raise” the gem of the UAG.

Of that event, Gallery Director Sage said, “As a department, we might not have monetary resources, as many of us are artists and teachers, but the fact that every single one of our faculty supported by giving their work for free, buying tickets... it was impressive and so much fun.”

Exhibition juror Marcia Selsor will give a gallery tour and talk at 4 p.m. and will present awards at 5:15 p.m. "From the Ground Up XXVII" will remain on display through Oct. 24.

Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, call 541-2137.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY presents the 2015 Project: Postcard exhibit and fundraiser, benefiting the renovation of D.W. Williams Hall, and featuring postcard-sized works created by alumni, faculty and students along with regional, national and international artists offered for sale. The show will run through Thursday, Oct. 29, culminating with the postcard art sale and silent auction from 5 to 7 p.m. Tickets are $40 per and entitle the ticketholder to one postcard for each purchased. Tickets are available at the Department of Art, room 100A inside D.W. Williams Hall, and at Cutter Gallery.

The gallery also presents "Your General Store." The public is invited to trade their art with the work of Northern New Mexico, Colorado, New Jersey and New York based artists, as the NMSU University Art Gallery unveils an interactive installation by artist Jason Middlebrook, known as "Your General Store."

In this trade-based installation, Jason Middlebrook has altered an old shipping container to create a replica of a nineteenth-century general store — reminiscent of an era when early towns in the west relied on the general store to carry supplies of all kinds. "Your General Store" relies on the exchange of goods and services, rather than the use of cash or credit. Middlebrook's general store features handmade and salvaged objects created by artists from around the country available through barter in an alternative economy chosen by both the clerk and the visitor. "Your General Store" remains on display through Saturday, Nov. 7.

The NMSU University Art Gallery is located inside D.W. Williams Hall, at the intersection of University Avenue and Solano Drive. Regular gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, visit <http://uag.nmsu.edu> or call 646-2545.

TOMBAUGH GALLERY presents "Re-Awakenings," an exhibit of new works by Las Cruces artist Georjeanna Feltha. According to Feltha, "Re-Awakenings reconnects the past by attaching a golden thread from it to my future." "Re-Awakenings" is about finding that common thread between art, music, love, spirituality and life. As she meshed together materials and techniques that initially had nothing in common, she suddenly realized that some aspect of them make up the person that she has become. "Re-Awakenings" will remain on display one extra week, featuring new artwork including assemblages, paper weaving and more, through Friday, Oct. 30.

Tombaugh Gallery is located inside the

"Batik" will remain on display through the end of October.

Utilizing mediums of fiber rag paper and canvas, photographer McMahon has built a portfolio of the wildlife of New Mexico titled "Coyote Tales: Wildlife Photography by Ann McMahon." Inspired by Native American folklore, McMahon has captured images of native birds, elk, deer, sheep, rabbits, horses and, of course, coyotes throughout New Mexico. Images are accompanied by excerpts of Apache, Navajo and Zuni stories.

Presented by The Borderland Fridas, "More Than Sugar Skulls: Dia de los Muertos in the Borderlands" brings together artists from California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to express their deep ties to El Dia del los Muertos (Day of the Dead) and its cultural significance – it is so much more than sugar skulls. It is a time for remembering ancestors, family members, friends and pets who have left this world. # 'Haunted America Suite' encore concert set for Oct. 29

Celeste and Jim Shearer, with University of Texas-El Paso faculty pianist Dr. Dean Kay Jones, will offer a special encore performance of "The Haunted America Suite" for French horn, tuba and piano at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, in the New Mexico State University Atkinson Recital Hall, along with performances of two exciting new chamber music compositions.

The concert will also feature UTEP tuba professor Steve Haddad. Works on the concert will include pieces commissioned by the Shearers, including "The Haunted America Suite" by Justin Raines and Las Cruces French hornist and tubist couple Celeste and Jim Shearer will present an encore performance of "The Haunted America Suite" Thursday, Oct. 28, at NMSU's Atkinson Recital Hall.

"Faraway, Nearby" by Dr. Lon W. Chaffin, along with two Southwest premiere performances, including "Azure Dawn" by Frank Gulino and "Requiem for Wounded Knee: For Tuba Duet, Narrator and Piano" by noted Canadian composer Elizabeth Raum.

"Requiem for Wounded Knee" is a powerful composition that tells the story of one of the greatest tragedies in Native American history. In discussing the work, composer Betsy Raum said, "The tessitura of the tuba lends itself to the tight-throated falsetto that the Natives use for their singing, which is accompanied by the rhythmic beating of the drum. . . .The narration in Requiem for Wounded Knee tells the story of the plight of the Indian people who had lost everything to the white settlers and were facing starvation."

Both "Haunted America Suite" and "Faraway, Nearby" were featured on a recent CD recording by the Shearers, which is currently available on the Summit Records label and via all standard electronic media. This recording project started over ten years ago with a single work by Justin Raines titled "The Bell Witch," a piece based on an old Southern ghost story. The work was later expanded to include three other movements titled "La Llorona," "Ghosts of Gettysburg," and "Spook Light" and was retitled "Haunted America Suite." A more recent commission was the work "Faraway, Nearby" by NMSU Music Department Head and Composer-In-Residence Dr. Lon W. Chaffin. This three-movement suite was inspired by the paintings of Georgia O'Keeffe and offers vivid representations of the Southwestern landscape in sound.

For more information about the concert, please contact the Music Department at New Mexico State University at 646-2601 or via email at jshearer@nmsu.edu.

Photographer McMahon captures Southwestern 'Coyote Tales'

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Photographer Ann McMahon's careers have taken her a lot of places – from the Gulf Coast of the United States to the deserts of the American Southwest; from soaring through the skies, capturing the world from above, to spending time on the ground, spending hundreds of hours amid the animals with which we share our desert home.

McMahon and her husband resided in the Gulf South for nearly four decades, where they owned and operated a small business. As business grew, the couple needed a way to efficiently travel around the region, which at the time offered no commercial flight options.

So, in 1983, McMahon became a private pilot, going solo with her instrument rating two years later. This allowed her to "conduct the same amount

ASTC presents two performances of 'A Wrinkle in Time'

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

The American Southwest Theatre Company (ASTC) and New Mexico State University Department of Theatre Arts presents beloved children's classic "A Wrinkle in Time" at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30, and 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31, at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave.

"A Wrinkle in Time" tells the story of two children who must rescue their scientist father. "Just when Meg Murry wants to curl up in bed and hope for someone else to solve all of her problems, she gets launched into the adventure of a lifetime," reads press materials provided by ASTC. "Traveling through space-time to distant planets, together with her extraordinary little brother and their new friend, Meg sets out to rescue her father from a force so powerful it threatens to control everything in the universe and beyond."

Written by Madeleine L'Engle in 1963, "A Wrinkle in Time" was awarded the prestigious Newbery Medal, Sequoyah Book Award and Lewis Carroll Shelf Award, and began L'Engle's successful series about the adventures of the O'Keefe and Murry families, known together as the Time Quintet. The book was adapted for the stage by John Glore in 2010.

NMSU Theatre Arts Professor Larissa Lury, said the sci-fi story of "A Wrinkle in Time" is ultimately about "how members of a family can travel through their own separate adventures and can come back together stronger and more caring than before. The show is suited primarily for fourth- to sixth-graders.

Lury directs an all-student cast, with student designers Dena Hurab (set), Megan Thompson (costumes) and Drew Kelley (lights).

All tickets are $5. For more information, call 646-4515 or visit www.nmsutheatre.com.

University of Texas-El Paso mezzo-soprano Cherry Duke, pictured, will be joined by pianist Casey Robards for "Come Sunday: Songs of Faith and Joy" Sunday, Oct. 25, at St. Paul's United Methodist Church. The concert of adventurous and uplifting music will benefit Musicambia, a nonprofit devoted to establishing a network of music conservatories within prisons and jails in the United States.

Sunday vocal concert benefits music education in prisons

University of Texas-El Paso mezzo-soprano Cherry Duke and pianist Casey Robards will perform "Come Sunday: Songs of Faith and Joy" in Las Cruces Sunday, Oct. 25, to benefit Musicambia, a nonprofit devoted to establishing a network of music conservatories within prisons and jails in the United States.

"Come Sunday" features uplifting, adventurous and moving music that will inspire people of all faiths, featuring Duke Ellington's iconic tune "Come Sunday" and anchored by a captivating song cycle by Jake Heggie based on the words of Catholic nun Sister Helen Prejean, author of "Dead Man Walking."

"The music we selected blurs the boundaries between classical, musical theatre, pop and jazz," said Michigan pianist Casey Robards. "These are songs about humanity, compassion, finding joy and connection in unexpected places, with unexpected people."

The beneficiary of "Come Sunday," Musicambia, is a New York-based initiative establishing a network of creative music conservatories within prisons and jails across the United States. In a world where everyone is forced to stand alone, Musicambia creates a positive environment by using collaborative musical activities to promote individual growth. Participants learn to redefine themselves by their potential rather than their past, creating dedicated and passionate human beings with the confidence and work ethic required for successful reentry into society.

"It's changing a lot of lives and giving hope to families while raising awareness about prisons in the United States," said Nathan Schram, founder and director of Musicambia.

One participant said, "I personally have been encouraged by the [Musicambia] program in being able to release my soul from deep within by the inspirational music and learning tools made available; part of me that had been long lost. Thank you."

Cherry Duke joined the UTEP voice and opera faculty this semester and has sung principal roles in operas around the world. As a concert soloist, she has performed at major venues such as Carnegie Hall and Avery Fisher Hall.

"Last year I met and worked with prison choirs in Ohio; I saw firsthand the power of music to transform incarcerated people," Duke said. "Making music gives inmates hope, courage and healing, which they take with them after they are released. I urge everyone to attend 'Come Sunday' and give generously."

"Come Sunday: Songs of Faith and Joy" will be performed at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25, at St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave. Admission is free, and donations of all sizes are welcome. All profits go directly toward Musicambia's mission. All are welcome.

Reda Kateb and Viggo Mortensen star in director David Oelhoffen's "Far from Men," based on Albert Camus' "The Guest," now playing at Mesilla's historic Fountain Theatre through Thursday, Oct. 29.

'Far from Men' is far from being bad

Review by Jeff Berg
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Beautifully shot in Morocco, starring as Algeria, "Far from Men" takes place in 1954, when the Algerian people are rising up to throw off their French colonial masters.

Viggo Mortensen, who recently starred in a similarly character-driven picture, the semi-Western "Jauja," is the force behind this drama. He plays Daru, whom we first meet in splendid isolation at his teaching job at a one-room school. He likes his job and the quietude that goes with it, but that is soon interrupted by a local policeman, who drops off Mohamed (Reda Kateb, of "Zero Dark Thirty" and "A Prophet"), instructing Daru that to take the man to a nearby village for arrest and sentencing.

Daru is not overjoyed by this project, since the man has been accused of killing his own cousin, but when the schoolhouse is attacked by local rebels, the two men are soon on the road.

One might say "Far from Men" is a French Western, with serious nods to "3.10 to Yuma" (the remake of which was shot in New Mexico, by the way). It looks like a Western, with barren but beautiful landscapes; a man (Daru as sheriff?) charged with a prisoner whose guilt he doubts is trying to get someplace else while avoiding the local picaroon's along the way. It sounds like a Western, since most of the sparse dialogue is about survival, and it feels like a Western, something that can truly be enjoyed more on the big screen.

Daru and Mohamed are followed immediately, which creates some classic action scenes and soon Daru has to kill one of the militiamen. However, the journey is harsh and soon they are captured and held prisoner.

Along the way, of course, they become friends of sorts, with Daru finding that helping Mohamed helps him to overcome his quiet disdain for most people. Mohamed, wanting to follow the law of the land, continuously reminds Daru that he must turn himself in, since that is the culture of the country.

The tale is loosely based on the short story "The Guest" by Albert Camus; "Far from Men" is at once a morality tale and one of honor and honesty.

It is not punctuated with humor or sentimentality, and the violence is brief and harsh. No women are in the film until the last few minutes, and that only takes place briefly – they are not exactly given plum roles.

"Far from Men" is another hidden and understated gem of a movie, carrying on the recent rash of European-type Westerns or could-be Westerns, very well.

of business in a day that took me a week of long drives," she said.

Aloft above the southern coastline of the United States, McMahon began working in aerial and air-to-air photography, combining her love of aviation with a gift for photography inherited from her father, one of the first people to use the then-revolutionary, now-legendary Kodachrome film in the years following World War II.

"Probably the most interesting job was teaming with an old Air Force officer friend and photographing the building of the John James Audubon Bridge over the Mississippi River," McMahon said. The bridge, completed in 2011 and linking the south-central Louisiana parishes of Pointe Coupee and Feliciana, lays claim to the second-longest cable-stayed span in the Western Hemisphere and was named for the famed naturalist, ornithologist and painter.

To shoot the in-progress bridge, McMahon was given only a set of coordinates to plan an approach, and "had to make a guess on the lens, its setting and the field of view, then exactly duplicate that each month to document construction as work progressed" over the bridge's years of construction.

Later, McMahon teamed again with her Air Force buddy, this time photographing pilot members of the Experimental Aircraft Association flying their crafts in Baton Rouge and Memphis. These images would be later utilized by BrownTrout Publishers – "The Calendar Company" – for its 2007 Airplane calendar, sold worldwide.

After nearly 40 years in the Gulf it came time to retire, and McMahon and her husband wanted a change of scenery, prompting them to spend two years exploring the country. In that time, a friend from years past invited them for a weeklong stay at his house in Silver City, smack in the midst of the Gila Wilderness and Gila National Forest.

"We were hooked," McMahon said of viewing the New Mexico landscape for the first time, and the couple relocated.

Though she spent years shooting photos from high in the sky, McMahon's new work is much more grounded – literally – as she and her husband make themselves more at home in the desert Southwest.

For several years, McMahon has trained her lens on the animals of southern New Mexico – native birds, elk, deer, sheep, rabbits, horses and, of course, coyotes, to name just a few – culminating in "Coyote Tales: Wildlife Photography by Ann McMahon" now on display at the remodeled and recently reopened Branigan Cultural Center in Downtown Las Cruces through Nov. 28.

"My love of aviation is exceeded only by my love of animals," McMahon said. "When animals are cared for and provided for, they open up themselves to you individually and you learn a lot more about them. For me, they are magical and I can see why our Native Americans found them so. That is what 'Coyote Tales' is all about – appreciation, respect and love of animals."

"New Mexico, because of its vast wilderness areas and lower population, provides opportunities for wildlife that exist in few places," she said. "Over the years, in association with my photography, I have been privileged to work with three of the finest wildlife sanctuaries in the United States – Fossil Rim (in Glen Rose, Texas), Black Beauty Ranch (Murchison, Texas) and Global Wildlife Center (near New Orleans, Louisiana).

The images contained in "Coyote Tales" represent nearly five years of work taking place throughout the Land of Enchantment, though McMahon said within the past year, she "made an effort to obtain images to associate with specific Coyote Tales that capture my imagination, spending several very cold days, for example, at Bosque del

"Coyote Tales: Wildlife Photography by Ann McMahon," currently on display at Branigan Cultural Center through late November, features images of the native wildlife of southern New Mexico including, yes, a coyote.

Apache (National Wildlife Refuge, located outside of San Antonio, N.M.) watching and following eagles."

To capture these stunning images of native wildlife in their natural habitats, McMahon said, requires "a lot of the same skills used by hunters," so she utilized the deep knowledge of a good friend and "superb hunter who coached her in this regard."

Part of McMahon's piqued interest in the local fauna were the oral histories and folktales of the region's numerous Native American tribes, especially New Mexico's Apache, Zuni and Navajo peoples, which she describes as "filled with stories of great wisdom and learning" and often incorporating a deep love and respect for nature, thankfully preserved.

"It impressed me that three different peoples would find a commonality of appreciation in the same animal," she said – the coyote, who appears in the mythology of many indigenous North American people. Though stories and attributes vary from culture to culture, coyote is often seen as the archetypal trickster hero, and in many traditions, he possesses magical powers of resurrection, transformation and even creation.

"As I read, it became more fascinating. Very, very fortunately, there were key individuals at the turn of the 19th century who cared enough to learn Zuni, for example, and sit down with our native people and transcribe their tales. Because it was an oral tradition, it would have been lost had they not done this."

Accompanying McMahon's "Coyote Tales" photographs are excerpts she's chosen from the stories of the Apache, Zuni and Navajo cultures. Among the most pertinent of these to McMahon are "The Hunter's Song," a Zuni religious song, and a Navajo medicine man's good luck song for horses.

"To me," McMahon said of these centuries-old stories and songs, "they are inspirational, and give one the feeling of how important animals are to our well-being and how they affect our lives. Be sure to spend some time with them at the exhibit."

Of her years spent in close, quiet proximity to the animals that populate the area, McMahon said, "I have found over the years that a majority of animals, from ravens to mule deer to coyotes, are very much aware of individual people. This leads to a second quality in wildlife photography – patience. If I pursue individual animals over a period of time, they learn to know me and not fear me. As a result, they will eventually make the photograph possible for more."

McMahon notes an example of this in her artist statement for "Coyote Tales," in which a coyote – who else? – the artist had been tracking approached her and walked alongside her on a road near her home.

The animal was "not ill," McMahon said – "He knew me and was teasing me because I was not paying attention, enabling him to get close" – a noble trickster indeed.

The places where time and eternity cross

Think about the thin places, as they are called in the Celtic realm, those places where the lines between this world and the next, time and eternity, are blurred and overlapping.

If you have some background in biblical studies, you will likely think of thin places recorded within those pages, as well. Think of the bush that burned but was not consumed, where Moses sheds his sandals because he is on holy ground. Think of Mount Sinai, covered in cloud and smoke, where Moses meets God and receives the commandments. Remember Elijah who, seeking the presence of the Lord, is told that he will not find it in all the noise and clangor. Instead, he finds it in the “still, small voice” which, in Hebrew, reads as “the voice of silence.” Remember Isaiah in the Temple, having the vision of God “high and lifted up,” surrounded by the seraphim. Remember Ezekiel with his vision of wheels within wheels.

No, thin places are not limited to the

Gabriel Rochelle
Tales from the Cassock

Celtic realms. In fact, they have precedents in the hallowed pages of that book which was so central to genuine Celtic spirituality.

It may be, however, that within the Celtic realms it is most evident that there are, indeed, places where we can taste and touch holiness, where eternity pierces the veil of time. I myself have felt this on Lindisfarne, the Holy Island, off the northwest coast of England. I have felt the thinness while standing at St. Cuthbert's tomb, past the lion's head pulls on the gates of Durham Cathedral. I have known the thin places in a wonderful megalith park, a magical place called Columcille outside Bangor, Pennsylvania. I have known thin places on the top of a hill in the Ring of Kerry where, for a moment, it was impossible to distinguish between earth and heaven.

To this day, Winifride's Well in Flintshire, Wales, remains a thin place for pilgrims from all over, but especially from within the British Isles. St. Meilangell's sanctuary for animals in North Wales gives the same sort of experience. There is something special about the sanctity of a place that has been touched by those who bear the mark of Christ.

For Americans, there are places close to hand, like Chaco Canyon and the kivas of the pueblos. Elsewhere, people journey to places like Machu Picchu, Angkor Wat, and Hagia Sophia to experience the transcendence that accompanies such monuments. It is not merely antiquity that sheathes these spots in silent reverie; there is a holiness of place that we often miss in our hustle-and-bustle, tear-it-down-and-build-it-anew society.

Perhaps the most obvious thin place, for those of us within the great tradition of the church's faith, is the altar where Christ becomes real to us in the bread and wine of the Eucharist. Truly the altar is the “axis mundi” — the still point of the turning world where matter takes on spirit once again, where time crosses into eternity, and where the enclosed space of the sanctuary opens onto the panoply of the heavens — angels, archangels, seraphim and all present with us. “Oh taste and see that the Lord is good...” The words of Psalm 33 echo in our hearts as well as resound on our tongues as we continue to discover the depth in the sacrament.

We owe gratitude to our Celtic forebears for keeping the awareness of thin places alive. Their testimony rings true to this day. Let us find our own thin places, returning to them physically if possible — or if not, let us do so in contemplation.

KRUX celebrates antenna, College Radio Station Day

By Kristie Garcia
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

It was 10 years in the making, but the KRUX radio station at New Mexico State University had a new 3,000-watt directional antenna installed on the Corbett Center Student Union roof Oct. 1.

Replacing the previous 1,000-watt antenna, the new antenna has significantly greater power and reach. In Las Cruces, the student-run station has a clearer and stronger signal. Now, listeners as far as Fort Bliss, Texas, and approximately 52 miles north of the NMSU campus can enjoy the station with the “swimming against the mainstream” motto.

“We’ve wanted to increase our power to cover more of the El Paso area, as we have a lot of commuter students from El Paso,” said general manager Joe Pestovich. “We’ve been trying for a few years now to reach that area with our airwaves.”

KRUX 91.5 FM is still in the testing phase to determine exactly how far its airwaves reach.

In past years, efforts to install an antenna on A-Mountain or at the Southern New Mexico Fairgrounds were unsuccessful due to financial and location issues.

This past fall, however, KRUX received approval to proceed with applying for a construction permit.

“It was a pretty huge process,” KRUX fiscal assistant Ignacio Salcido said. “We first had to apply to the FCC to undergo construction, so this is a big deal.”

According to KRUX programming manager Austin Martin-Likes, the signal strength and fewer dead spots are not the only benefits of the new antenna.

“It also helps us bring in additional revenue,” Martin-Likes said. “It affords us more value to the university and to the sponsors. The university became more valuable as a result of the new antenna, and it may generate future revenue. To say that we have a 3,000-watt antenna that can reach into El Paso may attract more people willing to fundraise with us.”

In addition to the 10-year effort of previous KRUX leaders, the antenna cost approximately $35,000. While the majority of the funding came from student fees over a period of two fiscal years, $5,000 was allotted from the NMSU student technology advisory committee.

KRUX staff members say it is worth the investment, especially in regards to attracting potential students to NMSU.

“Having the new antenna gives more opportunity to students,” Pestovich said. “Having the station be heard in El Paso allows prospective students in El Paso that might be interested in journalism, broadcast journalism, media production, business or marketing to say, ‘Oh, wow, I heard this radio station at NMSU, and that’s something that UTEP doesn’t have, a student-run radio station.’ It adds value, as far as prospective students are concerned.”

The installation of the antenna came at the perfect time. Just one day later, New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez proclaimed Oct. 2 as College Radio Station Day in the state. Nationally, it was the fifth annual celebration of College Radio Station Day.

A new 3,000-watt antenna was installed on the Corbett Center Student Union Oct. 1 for the student-run KRUX college radio station.

The College Radio Day Foundation is a non-profit organization that works with college stations across the United States to bring solidarity among stations.

“Because we’re the headquarters for New Mexico, the foundation wanted to see us get some recognition,” Martin-Likes said. “So they contacted our state government, and Susana Martinez responded in-kind by recognizing the whole day through a proclamation. It’s important that our government is highlighting this.

“It hadn’t been recognized by our governor before, and the College Radio Day Foundation is trying to bring more legitimacy to the movement.”

Institute to host ‘Border Justice Baile’ dance, book drive

Deep violence and poverty are pushing asylum seekers to our borders in growing numbers. The Southwest Asylum & Migration Institute (SAMI) of Las Cruces is one of a handful of nonprofits in the region in place to help this population navigate legal recourse.

At the end of October, the SAMI office is hosting a benefit Día de los Muertos dance and book drive to raise funds and resources for the immigrant population it serves.

The event will be held from 6 p.m. to midnight Thursday, Oct. 29, at the Community Enterprise Center, 125 N. Main St.

Entrance is a $5 suggested donation or a Spanish-language book donation. Cash donations will go to cover the legal fees of immigrant families supported by SAMI and Spanish-language books collected will be delivered to detained immigrants in the El Paso and Otero ICE detention facilities.

Come enjoy the Latin music, dance,

Día de Los Muertos altares, the High Desert Brewing Company cash bar and food from the Luchador food truck.

The Southwest Asylum & Migration Institute is a nonprofit providing affordable and often probono legal aid to immigrants in our community.

The office’s primary focus is to serve the legal needs of asylum seekers fleeing violence and persecution.

The office also provides legal immigration service to “dreamers” (those who were brought to the U.S. as children and who do not have proper legal documentation), and to detained immigrants. Besides direct immigration legal services, SAMI is dedicated to educating our community around issues in immigration and to advocating for systemic change in our immigration system.

Motorcyclists tour state to learn about programs

By Jane Moorman
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

New friends. Beautiful scenery. Learning about the impact of New Mexico State University across the state. Becoming aware of county 4-H youth development programs and their impact on young people.

These experiences are a few of the memories NMSU's "Motorcycle Gang" have taken home from the annual Ride for the 4-H Clover motorcycle rally.

For three years, cyclists from across New Mexico, El Paso and as far away as Dallas have gathered on the last weekend of August for a two-day ride through rural New Mexico.

The pack has grown from 60 participants in 2013 to nearly 100 this August.

The ride is the brainchild of Mike Cheney, chair of NMSU's Board of Regents, following a trip to Santa Fe with

Motorcyclists take a break at the Valles Caldera National Preserve during this year's annual Ride for the 4-H Clover motorcycle rally hosted by New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service. Participation has increased during the first three years from 60 to 90.

Jon Boren, NMSU's College of Agricultural,

Consumer and Environmental Sciences assistant dean and director of the Cooperative Extension Service, during the 2013 legislative session to discuss funding for NMSU and the New Mexico Cooperative Extension Service.

"Jon was sharing some very interesting facts that I thought others should be aware of," Cheney said. "Students in 4-H are twice as likely to be involved in our communities, half as likely to get involved in drugs, and five times as likely to graduate from college."

Cheney realized there was a need to raise awareness of what the Cooperative Extension Service does for New Mexicans.

"Since I ride motorcycles, I thought what the heck — maybe we should do a rally," he said. "We could take folks around to meet the Extension agents at different locations and see all the great things they are doing — and have some fun in the process."

Each year, a caravan of motorcycles, cars and trucks rolls through the beautiful countryside of the state.

During the last three years, riders have visited county Extension offices in Doña Ana, Catron, Socorro, Lincoln, Sandoval, Rio Arriba, Taos and Santa Fe counties.

Along the way they have also visited NMSU's Agricultural Science Centers at Corona and Alcalde and learned about the research being conducted at the ranch and farm.

"The folks on the ride come from all walks of life," Boren said. "This has been an absolutely wonderful venue to build awareness amongst the riders and our university's leadership of the Cooperative Extension Service and our flagship program, 4-H. Our Extension faculty reach a third of the state's population — around 650,000 New Mexicans — annually with our educational programs."

The riders are not the only people becoming aware of NMSU's far-reaching extension program. Politicians are also joining in the activities.

This year, the three mayors of Sandoval County communities — Gregory D. Hull of Rio Rancho, Jack Torres of Bernalillo, and Steve Lucero of San Ysidro — were at the Friday evening reception, and Santa Fe Mayor and former NMSU Regent Javier Gonzales was at the Sunday conclusion party in Santa Fe to meet the riders and NMSU leaders.

3 easy ways to reduce food waste in your daily life

“What’s for dinner?”

For many, the question is asked nearly every evening, and the answer is easy.

But for 795 million people in the world — those who don’t have a reliable meal to look forward to, according to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations — the question is more open-ended.

An important step in the fight to end hunger is to reduce food waste; 1.3 billion tons of the food produced around the world goes to waste each year, ac-ording to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

The severity of the issue recently prompted the United States Department of Agriculture and Environmental Protection Agency to establish a goal to reduce 50 percent of U.S. food waste by 2030. The country’s first-ever food waste reduction goal calls for the federal government to join forces with local governments, charities, faith-based organizations and the private sector to find ways to conserve the country’s resources in order to improve food security.

Here are three simple ways to cut back on food waste in your daily life.

- Pay attention to packaging. Increasingly, high-performance food packaging makes it possible to better protect food as it makes its way from grocery store shelves to your pantry. Resealable packaging allows you to use what you need and safely save the rest for later, preserving the remaining portions and making food last.

- Call on technology for new recipe ideas. Download an app on your phone or research on the internet to help inspire new dishes that use up last night’s leftovers. It will help you look at the food in your refrigerator as delicious opportunities rather than garbage-bound.

- Donate to local organizations. Find a local food drive to donate non-perishable foods to those in need. Start by organizing your pantry and piling the items you likely won’t use in the near future. Rather than tossing the items, turn your waste into an opportunity to feed the hungry in your community.

TOUR

Cisneros, D-Taos; and Rep. Bobby Gonzales, D-Taos, have attended the Saturday evening banquet that was held in their county seat.

While Chancellor Garrey Carruthers has not ridden a motorcycle, he has been on the ride in one of the chase cars.

“The administration sees the value of going out into the state to look around and talk to folks about the great things that NMSU does, even outside of the Cooperative Extension Service,” Cheney said. “There are a lot of people in the state who have not met the university’s leadership. It’s good for people to hear straight from the chancellor how we can make a difference.”

For Carruthers, who celebrated his birthday

during this year’s ride, it’s a joy revisiting the communities he has served as governor, and now university president.

“Understanding what the people need is very important to an engagement university like NMSU,” Carruthers said. “I’m thoroughly enjoying the rides because I’m running into so many young people doing marvelous things in terms of leadership training and projects.”

At each stop along the way, 4-H members share what the program means to them. Each Saturday evening banquet, 4-H members entertain the riders with their many talents, from playing classical piano to singing.

“I’m impressed with many of the things we see on the trips,” Cheney said. “Some of the neatest are hearing how 4-H has made a difference in the young people’s lives — that doesn’t happen without

New Mexico State. That is truly gratifying to me.”

Halloween recipes to send a chile up your spine

Ghoulish greetings, chileheads! With Halloween only a pumpkin patch away, now is prime time to ponder “what to dress as” and “what to bring to” the bash(es). Dress as you like, but allow me to suggest some frightfully good and chile-ing treats that keep spooks at bay and cackling, annoying witches toppling.

My cauldron of recipes guarantees a spicy and spooktacular Halloween.

Bone Rattling Brandy (Serves 8)

Two (12 ounce) bottles pumpkin ale
 2 1/4 cups apple brandy
 3/4 cup dark rum
 3/4 cup fresh squeezed lime juice, strained
 3/4 cup fresh squeezed orange juice, strained
 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper or to taste
 3/4 cup maple syrup
 Cinnamon stick, for garnish
 Ice block, for serving

Combine the beer, brandy, rum, lime juice, orange juice, cayenne pepper and maple syrup in a punch bowl and chill in the refrigerator, preferably for several hours. To serve, mix in the cinnamon and add the ice block to the bowl.

Ladle from the punch bowl into Halloween decorated plastic cups filled with ice.

The Monster Mix (Yield: 8-10 servings)

10 slices bacon
 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
 1/2 teaspoon paprika
 1 teaspoon cayenne
 6 cups popped popcorn
 1 cup pecans
 1 cup small pretzels
 1/2 cup raw shelled pumpkin seeds (pepitas)
 Salt, to taste

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Place the bacon on a parchment-lined sheet tray and bake until crisp, about 15 minutes. Strain the rendered bacon fat through a fine sieve into a small bowl and set aside. Yields about 1/4 cup of bacon fat. Reserve the bacon slices for another use. Reduce the oven to 250 degrees.

Add the Worcestershire sauce, paprika and cayenne to the bacon fat. In a large bowl, combine the popcorn, pecans, pretzels and pepitas and toss with the spiced bacon fat until evenly coated. Season with salt, if needed. Divide the popcorn mix between two parchment-lined sheet trays and bake, stirring every 15 minutes, until the mix is toasted and fragrant, about 45 minutes. Remove the pan from the oven and serve warm.

Dip bacon strips into melted chile-flavored dark chocolate. Put chocolate drenched strips on a paper towel and sprinkle with ground hazelnuts or other finely ground nuts. Once chocolate has set, nibble and enjoy.

A Goblin's Goop (Yield: 28 servings)

12 ounces sour cream
 2 (3 ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
 1/2 cup chopped green onions
 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 5-10 drops hot sauce to taste

8 ounces shredded sharp cheddar cheese
 1 1/2 cups cubed fully cooked ham
 1 (1 pound) round loaf sourdough bread
 Chopped fresh cilantro
 In a saucepan, combine sour cream, cream cheese, onions, Worcestershire sauce and hot sauce; cook and stir over low heat until blended. Add cheese and ham; cook and stir until cheese is melted and ham is heated through. Cut off top of loaf; carefully hollow out top and bottom, leaving a 1/2-in. shell. Cut bread into cubes. Pour dip into shell; sprinkle with parsley if desired. Serve with bread cubes.

Morticia's Drop Dead Pumpkin Seeds (Yield: About 12 servings)

6 tablespoons sugar
 2 tablespoons baking cocoa
 2 teaspoons ancho chile pepper powder
 1 tablespoon instant coffee granules
 1 egg white
 2 cups salted shelled pumpkin seeds (pepitas)

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Place sugar, cocoa, ancho powder and coffee granules in a small food processor; cover and pulse until finely ground. In a bowl, whisk egg white until frothy. Stir in pumpkin seeds. Sprinkle with sugar mixture; toss to coat evenly. Spread in a single layer in a parchment paper-lined 15x10x1-inch baking pan.

Bake 20-25 minutes or until dry and no longer sticky, stirring about every 10 minutes. Cool completely before storing in an airtight container.

One Hot and Haunting Cheese Ball (Serves 6-8)

1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
 1/2 cup butter, softened
 3/4 cup confectioners' sugar
 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
 3/4 cup miniature semi-sweet chocolate chips
 3/4 cup finely chopped red chile pepper seasoned pecans

In a medium bowl, beat together cream cheese and butter until smooth. Mix in confectioners' sugar, brown sugar and vanilla. Stir in chocolate chips. Cover, and chill in the refrigerator for two hours.

Shape chilled cream

cheese mixture into a ball. Wrap with plastic, and chill in the refrigerator for one hour. Roll the cheese ball in finely chopped red chile seasoned pecans before serving. Serve with graham crackers, chocolate wafers.

It's the Great Pumpkin "Pie," Charlie Dip (Yield: About 3 1/2 cups)

1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
 2 cups confectioners' sugar
 1 (15 ounce) can solid pack pumpkin
 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
 1 tablespoon cayenne pepper
 1 tablespoon pumpkin pie spice
 1 teaspoon frozen orange juice concentrate

In a medium bowl, blend cream cheese and confectioners' sugar until smooth. Gradually mix in the pumpkin. Stir in the cinnamon, cayenne pepper, pumpkin pie spice, and orange juice until smooth and well blended. Chill until serving.

Serve with bagel chips, crackers or for an extra spicy bite, with ginger snaps.

USDA, 'Alvin and the Chipmunks' team up to reduce foodborne illness

Bulletin Report

In an effort to educate children and their families about the importance of food safety, U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Ad Council are joining 20th Century FOX to launch a series of public service advertisements featuring Alvin and the Chipmunks. The PSAs use footage from the upcoming film "Alvin & the Chipmunks: The Road Chip" to introduce viewers to four steps to food safety: clean, separate, cook and chill.

An estimated 1 in 6 (48 million) Americans get sick from foodborne illness each year, resulting in roughly 128,000 hospitalizations and 3,000 deaths, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Children are among the most vulnerable to food poisoning because their immune systems are still developing, so caregivers need to take extra precautions when preparing food for children under five.

The partnership includes TV, radio, out-of-home and web advertising.

Parents and children can also find kid-friendly activities that further reinforce the food safety steps by visiting FoodSafety.gov.

"Young children are at a higher risk for foodborne illness, and keeping them safe is a top priority for FSIS," said Deputy Under Secretary for Food Safety Alfred Almanza. "These familiar characters offer USDA a great opportunity to communicate this valuable public health message in a way to get the attention of children and parents."

The new PSAs are an extension of USDA and Ad Council's "Food Safe Families" campaign, which aims to raise awareness about the risk of foodborne illness and encourage families to learn and practice key steps that will help everyone stay safe from foodborne illness through the following safe food handling behaviors:

- Clean: Wash hands with soap and warm water before and after handling raw food. Clean all surfaces and utensils with soap and hot water. Wash all produce under running water before eating, cutting, or cooking.

- Separate: Use separate plates and utensils to avoid cross-contamination between raw meat, poultry, seafood and eggs and foods that are ready to eat (like already cooked foods or raw vegetables).

- Cook: Cook foods to the safe temperature by using a food thermometer.

- Chill: Chill foods promptly if not consuming immediately after cooking. Don't leave food at room temperature for longer than two hours, or one hour if temperature is above 90 degrees.

Consumers can see these new PSAs and learn more about key food safety practices at Foodsafety.gov, by 'following' @USDAFoodSafety on Twitter, and by 'liking' Facebook.com/FoodSafety.gov. Consumers with questions about food safety, can call the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-888-MPHotline (1-888-674-6854) or chat live with a food safety specialist at AskKaren.gov, available from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern Time, Monday through Friday, in English or Spanish.

If you have questions about storage times of food or beverages, download USDA's new FoodKeeper application for Android and iOS devices.

In an effort to encourage a safe and healthy approach toward bike riding, the New Mexico State University Environmental Health and Safety Department will host its third Aggie Family Bike event from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Aggie Express Community Center on the corner of Stanley Drive and Williams Avenue.

The event will take place following the NMSU Homecoming parade, which attendees are invited to join. Participants will be able to enjoy free smoothies from a bicycle blender, learn how to change a tire, paint and listen to music while their children ride on the course set up for them and learn about bike safety.

“The purpose of this event is to see more families riding together safely and enjoying themselves,” project coordinator Jamie Lakey said. “The most fulfilling thing is when I see the change that has been created by the event.”

Lakey hopes the event will help students and their families learn to ride in a safer manner and handle minor repairs on their own.

“Riding a bicycle is one of the best ways to spend time with the family and exercise at the same time,” she said.

The Las Cruces Codes Enforcement will hold a bike rodeo for children, focusing on safety in turning and riding on busy streets.

With the help of local donors, there will be a raffle taking place every 30 minutes throughout the event.

Communication with your horses

I am feeling keenly aware of the disturbing nature of miscommunication in my own life and this makes me think about how we need to maintain clarity, consistency and compassion in our dialog with horses.

My phone went down and the calls to me were broken up into every third or fourth word. This is likely how we sound to our horses when we become distracted or simply inconsistent with our requests while working with them. It can be difficult enough to communicate with a member of our own species in a shared language, let alone try to convey our desires to a 1000-pound prey animal whose instincts tell him that we are predators.

How we accomplish the almost-magical feat of rapport with a horse is by not only putting our desires forward but by listening as well. And when we work with a new horse, it is imperative that we find out as much as possible about how that horse was schooled. This will help us avoid triggering fears (in a horse who perhaps was in a wreck while riding in a trailer), confusing the horse (one might neck rein in western style, another may direct rein in English style) or simply asking more of the horse than he has been prepared to do.

Communication with a horse is actually dialog, and not the mechanistic force of signals used as if driving a car or riding a motorcycle. The dialog must be clear so the horse has no doubt that it is meant for him. We must get fully present to engage with a horse. If we are not, he will be distant emotionally, because he can only be as present in the moment as we ourselves are present.

Consistency is the real key to gaining the horse's respect and attention. If we allow something, such as eating grass on a trail ride, then the next day we punish the horse for eating grass but allow it the day after, we will set up confusion and disrespect.

We must “be the same person” day by day. Equine mental health is absolutely tied to how calm, compassionate and consistent the human handler remains.

My advice when anyone acquires a new horse is to ask the previous humans about not only diet and exercise programs, but to ask things like if the horse ties or needs a quick release snap; does the horse stand at a mounting block; does he accept being sprayed with fly repellent;

those type of questions — considering your own plans and routines — can help to avoid some serious, even dangerous miscommunications.

We can always change an equine's routines and responses — we just must remember to do so gradually and with clarity, consistency and compassion. One cannot take a horse who is used to having his stall door opened, allowing him to run out on his own, and expect calmness when we try to catch him and lead him out instead. He will be a product of his conditioning and habits and these can only be changed by teaching new habits as substitutes, leading to understanding, safety and rapport.

What to ask when adopting a shelter dog

October is national Adopt A Shelter Dog month, and there prospective pet parents need to have questions in mind — not only for themselves, but for the shelter — as they take the big step of adding another member to the family.

Thousands of lovable dogs in shelters are eagerly waiting families to give them forever homes. But that does not mean every dog is a good fit. Adopting families should ask as many questions as possible about a shelter dog's history, said Dr. Jill Sackman of BluePearl of Veterinary Partners.

And don't stop there. It's just as important to ask some questions of yourself, Sackman said.

Sackman is a BluePearl clinician who offers behavioral counseling and serves as senior medical director of BluePearl's Michigan hospitals. She also is in charge of the behavioral medicine service. She offered these tips for families getting ready to adopt their new best friend from a shelter:

Ask if the shelter has done a behavioral assessment of the dog.

It's standard procedure at many shelters, and can give you valuable insight into whether a certain dog is right for you, and whether you are right for that dog.

Ask for as much information as possible about the dog's history.

Dogs grow up to be less anxious if they are exposed to a wide range of new and pleasant experiences before the age of 16 weeks, the puppy's socialization window. Less anxious, less fearful dogs are not nearly as likely to become aggressive as adults. Your shelter dog will likely be older than 16 weeks, and this is one reason you want to learn about the dog's background.

"You have to ask the question, what's my home like? How will my other pets respond? What are my needs? What's my time investment?," Sackman said. "Prepare a list of questions about a potential pet. And then ask a lot of good questions about the dog's history. Why was he surrendered? Was he found as a stray? Was he surrendered from another shelter? Any information that you have can help you better understand how well that animal will fit into your house."

Ask if you can spend a little time with the dog in the shelter.

It is preferable to spend your time with the dog in a quiet setting, away from a noisy kennel. If the dog is friendly and playful, that's a great sign. If the dog is standoffish and nervous, that's something to take into consideration. But remember, even wonderful shelters can be stressful environments for dogs. A dog's behavior can change after getting to your home.

Consider your own family's ability to care for a dog.

If you have small children, it might not be the best time to adopt a dog who tends to be nervous, aggressive or needs a lot of time-consuming training. On the other hand, if you're single with time to devote to training, this might be a challenge you can take on.

Prepare your family for their new dog.

Children, with their rapid movement, high-pitched voices and a tendency to jab fingers anywhere, can be alarming to some dogs. This can sometimes cause dogs to become anxious and snap. So involve your children in the care of your dog — such as helping with the food or water, or having the kids train the dog in basic tasks such as sitting or lying down. But also teach children when to back off — not to hug dogs while they're eating, for example.

Give the pooch a little space.

"After bringing your dog home, you might keep them in a laundry room or a confined kitchen and not immediately throw them in with all your other pets, if you have other pets. Establish relationships and give them and other pets some time to acclimate," Sackman said.

What if in spite of everything, my dog acts aggressively to family members or neighbors?

Seek help from your family veterinarian, or a veterinarian who is trained in behavioral medicine.
