County ups GRT

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

In a 4-1 vote, the Doña Ana County Commission passed a threeeighths of a percent increase in the gross receipts (GRT) tax Tuesday, March 24, to pay for raising salaries in the sheriff's department, detention center and roads department, as well as for improved radio communications for sheriff deputies, vehicle replacements, capital improvements for economic development and public safety, money to start up a modest countywide public transportation system and $200,000 a year to the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance.

Commissioner Ben Rawson, the lone vote against the increase, said that once the hike is in place July 1, the GRT in Las Cruces – where the City Council also had increased GRT by three-eighths of a percent – will be at 8.3125 percent, making it SEE PROTESTS, PAGE A18

Seats that filled the Doña Ana County Commission Chamber Tuesday, March 24, empty as residents queue up to give their thoughts about the board's proposal to raise gross receipts tax by three-eighths of a percent. The commission could have gone for no increase, or a more modest increase, but a majority of commissioners chose the full increase to improve salaries in the sheriff, detention center and roads departments, as well as a number of other services and expenditures.

Legislative gridlock nixes capital outlay spending

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Experienced Doña Ana County lawmakers are describing the 60-day session that ended Saturday, March 21, as exhausting unproductive and as gridlock restricted the number of bills passed and thwarted capital outlay funding from projects ranging from roads and senior centers to school and higher education improvements. Senate President Pro Tempore Mary Kay Papen said it was the worst session in her 15 years in the Legislature.

"We kept trying to do something, but there were some things we were not willing to do and the governor (Susana Martinez) was insisting on doing it her way," Papen said. "It was the 'my way or the highway' session, really."

Nothing illustrated that dynamic better than the $264 million capital outlay package, Papen said.

Bataan marchers reflect on miracles and losses

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

During a break at the 18mile point of the marathon length Bataan Memorial Death March Sunday, March 22, Eric Baldonado was hoping he could finish the course in the next few hours to catch the closing ceremonies.

In his 10th year on the march, Baldonado said he has always missed the closing ceremonies featuring survivors of the atrocity at the start of World War II. The memorial march has probably a deeper meaning to the Las Crucen than most marchers, as his late grandfather, Juan Baldonado, was a survivor of the death march through the jungles of the Philippine Islands and his likeness featured in the Bataan Memorial statue at Veterans Memorial Park.

"I remember my grandfather telling me about the three miracles of Bataan," he said.

The first miracle prompted the march when the SEE BATAAN, PAGE A4

Saddle block donated to DASO museum

A member of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department Mounted Patrol has donated a handcrafted wooden saddle stand to the Historical Museum of Lawmen as a tribute to a fellow patrolman who died in November of 2014. The stand is part of a new display that features a saddle that belonged to the late William "Bill" Crawford, who volunteered with the sheriff's department since 2001.

Crawford's family donated the saddle to the museum, located inside the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department main headquarters at 845 N.

Motel Boulevard. Sgt. Dan Makens, who leads the horse team for the mounted patrol, decided to make the stand as a gift that would honor his late friend and colleague.

A small dedication was made earlier this week at the museum. In attendance were museum coordinator Jim Beasley, Sgt. Makens and Capt. Bud Lulich, who heads the mounted patrol.

Crawford, 66, was a lifelong resident of Las Cruces. At the time of his passing, he was the longestserving volunteer with the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department Mounted Patrol.

The saddle is on display inside the museum, which is open to the public and free of charge Monday through Friday during regular business hours and also on the second and fourth Saturday of the month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Push-ups fund scholarships

A Doña Ana County Sheriff's deputy has started a campaign to raise scholarship money for local high school and college students with a physical promise: for every $10 raised, he will do 10 push-ups.

The fundraiser - sponsored by Pi Nu Sigma Alumni Chapter, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. and the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department officially started March 5, raising almost $200 among Doña Ana County employees the first day.

"My goal is to raise $2,000," said Deputy Jamar Cotton. "And I'm giving myself until May 1 to get it done."

Seventy percent of the proceeds will be awarded equally to one qualified high school student and one college student. Thirty percent will go to Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, a community service organization which plans to donate 20 percent to other charitable organizations.

Deputy Jamar Cotton

The remaining 10 percent will stay in the local chapter of Phi Beta Sigma.

Phi Beta Sigma supports causes like the Muscular Dystrophy Association, American Cancer Society, the March of Dimes, I Am My Brother's

Keeper, Dress for Success, HIV awareness campaigns and Teen Retreat, an event for kids between the ages of 12 and 17. Teen Retreat offers education on teen pregnancy prevention, gang-resistance awareness, college application assistance and career/resume coaching.

Cotton has been with the sheriff's department since 2010. He joined Phi Beta Sigma in 2006 as a college student, and served as a charter member of the alumni chapter of the fraternity in 2010. He currently holds two degrees from New Mexico State University, a bachelor's in early childhood education and a master's degree in curriculum and instruction.

Donations can be made in person at the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department, 845 N. Motel Boulevard or online via PayPal to alumnichapter.lcpbs1914@gmail.com. For more information on Phi Beta Sigma, visit www.pbs1914.org.

17K voters purged

The Doña Ana County Clerk's Office is purging 17,000 inactive voters from its roster.

Inactive voters are identified when mail from the Bureau of Elections is returned and the voter fails thereafter to vote for four consecutive years.

State law requires each of tabase. New Mexico's 33 counties to purge the voter rolls on a regular basis in years follow- order to recover their ability ing General Elections.

Doña Ana County Clerk Lvnn Ellins said that prior to the 2014 General Election in November, Doña Ana County was showing more than 17,000 inactive voters.

After the purge, Doña Ana County is expected to retain about 99,000 active voters in its registration da-

Voters purged from the roster must re-register in to vote in future elections.

NEW UNITS

The first of several black-and-white Ford Interceptor SUVs was delivered last week to the Doña Ana County Sher iff's Department. Fifteen additional units are expected to arrive at the end of May. Each Interceptor features a blackand-white color scheme with a gold insignia on the door.

Japanese soldiers were simply going to gun down all the American and Philippine captive soldiers. An earthquake struck, damaging some of the tank equipment, but more importantly, spooked the Japanese, who decided to instead march the men through sweltering jungles to prisoner of war camps. "My grandfather guessed they were superstitious," he said.

Juan Baldonado, who was sick and emaciated, and had to be carried during much of the death march by his brother, Jose Baldonado, also featured on the Bataan Memorial statue.

Starving and given only a small ball of infested rice to eat, Juan Baldonado challenged a Japanese soldier to a fight for rations – a can of sardines and some beans. After easily beating the American, the Japanese soldier gave him a can of sardines and beans, telling him, "You are an honorable man." This was the second miracle.

The third miracle came at war's end, when survivors of the POW camps were returning on a ship and arriving at San Francisco's harbor. Even though the dock was packed with people and the former POWs were looking from the upper floor of a large ship, they could pick out family members among the crowd.

"That they could spot their family members out of all those people, that was grandpa's third miracle," Eric Baldonado said.

A little earlier and farther back on the trail, Alexander Blanco was getting a foot blister cared for at the point where the marchers split to continue the 26.2-mile marathon route or a shorter 14.2-mile honorary route back to the White Sands Missile Range base.

Blanco was wearing a full replica 1942 uniform in honor of his uncle, Marciano Ballesteros, a Philippine soldier captured at Bataan, who survived the death march, but died in the POW camp. This was Blanco's third time at the Bataan memorial march and the second in full replica uniform. The inside rim of the bowl-like helmet is laced with signatures of Bataan survivors from last year's march, he said.

There was one marcher who eclipsed all of the other 5,600 marchers at the event. Ben Skardon completed his eighth memorial march along a special 8.5-mile honorary route for the 97-year-old Bataan survivor.

What's happening at NMSU

BY RICHARD COLTHARP

Outside Corbett Center at New Mexico State University Sunday afternoon, March 15, the Aggie pep band roared.

Inside, fans celebrated Aggie basketball. Coach Marvin Menzies' men's team and Coach Mark Trakh's women's team had each won the Western Athletic Conference tournament, earning berths in the NCAA tournament.

The next day, participants broke ground on Pat and Lou Sisbarro Community Park, an 11-acre spot east of Aggie Memorial Stadium that will be a green area for Las Cruces citizens, NMSU students, staff and faculty. Across the street, ground is cleared for the Burrell Osteopathic School of Medicine. You've seen the new turf on the stadium field. Not far away is the new spiritual center, and farther west is the renovated baseball stadium, the new Domenici Hall and renovations to Hardman Hall.

A lot of exciting things are happening at NMSU. New buildings are cool, but a better measure of a university is its students.

Francesca Larson, a freshman from Alamogordo studying music education, plays trumpet in the Aggie marching band, and tutors middle schoolers. I asked Larson what she has discovered about herself since coming to

"Asking for help is OK," she said. "Several professors and upperclassmen helped me with questions I had throughout the year. When I give lessons to middle school students, it is not all about technique or perfection of notes, it is about passion and about having a lot of fun. My main goal is to ensure the student has a positive experience in relation to the world of music

'Several high school students have asked me about NMSU. I start by telling them I love this school and it is relatively cheap to attend if you make sure to do well in high school. College is a lot different than high school, though. There is a lot more freedom, so having self-discipline is a must.'

Larson's energy is infectious, but I wondered how an older, possibly more jaded student might think, so I visited with Amanda Lopez Askin, recently named student regent for the five-member NMSU Board of Regents.

Askin, a Las Cruces native, initially dropped out of college. How did she go from being a college dropout to going back at 22, then getting a graduate degree, to now working on her doctorate?

"There have been specific professors who have gone out of their way to make me feel I could go further," Askin said. "They have taken time out to encourage me and feel like I had something more to offer. Dr. Esther Devall, Dr. Robert Delcampo and Dr. Azadeh Osanloo, each at different steps along the way said, basically, 'If you want to do this, you can.'"

Askin never could have guessed she would one day be a regent. She's humbled and honored by the appointment and excited to have input in the future of the university.

"I'm an Aggie through and through," she said. "It's the backdrop of my life." The regent appointment process included an interview with NMSU President Garrey Carruthers.

"I told him in some ways, we have to start looking at NMSU as a business because it has to be sustainable," she said. "But it's like a family business, because we're so emotionally invested in it. We want it to be successful because so many good things come out of it.'

Letter to the editor Little choice

A few years back, a friend and I were discussing the election process, when he told me a story his wife had related to him about growing up on the farm

On the farm everyone has chores, and part of her chores, being the oldest of the siblings, was to make sure everyone else did theirs.

She explained to him how this was all but an impossible task until she made up a list and began letting her brothers and sisters choose. She told him how she would rotate the list every couple of weeks letting each have a turn at being first, second and so on. This was like night and day she said. He said when he asked her why she thought it made such a difference, she told him because they thought they were now in charge.

I asked him how this pertained to our conversation about the election process?

This is when he told me it was the same as her list back on the farm; although her siblings were happy because they were getting to choose, she was the one making the list.

And this is one of the major reasons why nothing ever gets fixed, no matter who gets elected. The process has been hijacked by big money and the media, and by an ever increasing apathy on the part of the public.

You and I are allowed to vote for one of two preselected candidates who have been allowed to make it through the primaries. This is why every election cycle we end up with the same usual suspects.

Every day is good, some days are better

"Most folks are as happy as they make up their minds to be." – Abraham Lincoln

Recently in a column, I mentioned there were not many happy people in public education. That statement made people unhappy. Many respondents to that column were aggravated people who dismissed the notion of happiness. They thought people working have no hope to be happy.

Typical of what I received was, "I have never enjoyed working and they should not either." My response to each email was that if you do not enjoy what you are doing, then yes, you may not be happy. The trick is to do things that make you happy and hope to combine those with getting paid. You may have to work at doing jobs that make you happy.

Our Declaration of Independence declared, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

Many Americans are convinced they have a right to be happy. That document only allows that we should be able as Americans to pursue happiness. It is a nuanced difference, but significant.

Others over the years said we cannot pursue happiness. Viktor Frankl wrote in Man's "Search for Meaning," "Happiness cannot be pursued, it must ensue, and it only does so as the unintended side effect of one's personal dedication to a cause greater than oneself."

That is a great thought and a great book. People as they reach old age are separated by having committed themselves to a cause greater than themselves versus those who plodded through life and now are at the end. Those on a mission beyond themselves take every day as a gift.

My usual answer to the question, "How are you doing?" is, "Every day is good, some days are better." Young people often think I am just saying it. No, if I could influence them as to what they must do with their life, I would, like Victor Frankl, point them to things beyond themselves.

While I am painting with a broad brush, the last couple of generations have been so narcissistically pampered that many cannot enjoy

I would like to thank Michael Swickard for a column that spoke the truth on how the public education system country and basically worldwide is not in touch with the reality of tomorrow. I am an advocate for educational reform that is based on mastery instead of merit. The industrialist developed the system we have as a sorting system for the purpose of social engineering to meet the labor demands of the first industrial revolution. It served its intended purpose well back then. The problem I keep running into today is that I am constantly accused of attacking teachers. system to change is the wrong approach. Teachers and administrators are, I am sure, doing a great job of plowing the fields with that old plow. Asking them to change the way they were taught to plow fields is the wrong approach. As they say, it is difficult to teach an old dog new tricks if it doesn't want to learn them.

We need to allow the implementation of mastery or competency based learning models to come in underneath the system we have and disrupt it. Clayton Christensen of the Clayton Christensen Institute for even the small things in life for lack of large ones. Some young people are the exceptions having been born up against adversity.

But, as a group, today's young people seem not to have many goals beyond themselves. One reason for this is that politicians sell the notion that government will take care of everyone cradle to grave, so why worry about your neighbor, let government do it.

In a conversation standing in a grocery store line, several young people told me that they did not want to work, they have to work to get money. Work is not enjoyable for them. Either I am completely crazy (possible) but I have enjoyed almost all of my working situations. There came a time when each job bored me so I moved on, but I didn't move on because I

Disruptive Innovation does a great talk on this topic. His video is on his company's website. Any talks done by Sebastian Thrun, Sal Khan and Ken Robinson are very enlightening on this subject also. A couple of books that are eye opening are "The Third Industrial Revolution" by Jeremy Rifkin and "The Guide to the Future of Medicine" by Bertalan

Mesko. I will leave you two analogies that in my view are analogous to the resistance we are faced with by the public education system:

1) Scorpion needs to

'The trick is to do things that make you happy and hope to combine those with getting paid.' You may have to work at doing jobs that make you happy.'

couldn't stand working. To be fair, some young people do get the notion of a cause greater than oneself. A year ago I interviewed a Peace Corps volunteer who was home for Christmas (2013) from working in Liberia. Her story was fascinating. She certainly lived beyond herself.

Last year when Ebola forced the Peace Corps to cross a river. Frog comes along and scorpion asks him to let him ride on his back across. Frog says, "You will sting me," scorpion says, "I promise I won't.' Scorpion hops on and halfway across the river. zap the scorpion stings him. As the frog is going down he says, "You promised you wouldn't sting me." Scorpion says, "I know I said that, but I could not deny what scorpion's do, sting things. It is because of what I am."

2) Have you ever attempted to teach a pig to sing? If you have, you probably found that the move its people, she came home. I interviewed her several more times. Because I interview for a living, there are some commonalities to interviews. This young person under the age of 30 was very calm. She was like a man I have interviewed many times. He fought in World War Two and Korea and then did a thousand interesting things testing airplanes.

only thing accomplished was to make the pig mad, because pigs do not sing.

Both these analogies define any attempt to change the thought process behind the public education system of today.

By Michael L. Hayes For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Such would be the highly likely, if not inevitable, result of the policy urged by senatorial hawks, many others in the GOP in Congress and Reagan-Bush neo-cons waiting for a hawkish GOP administration.

Obama's reputation for talking big and carrying a small stick, and turning red lines into pink ones, gives them some reason to urge a tough deal or strong measures. But the 47 Republican signatories to Sen. Tom Cotton's letter to the Ayatollah show themselves ignorant, irresponsible and unwise, with potentially dangerous consequences for national and international security. Just consider Sen. John McCain's explanation for signing: He was in a rush to get to the airport to avoid a snowstorm - this trivial reason for risking harm to national interests from a GOP leader on foreign and military affairs.

In its habit of denying ideas and facts contrary to its political ideology, the GOP takes enormous risks without caring about, much less understanding, the technical, economic, political, or military issues.

A war with Iran would be of a kind on scale and scope with consequences not imagined by Congress – and one the American people would not likely approve if they understood the issues or the consequences of GOP risk-taking and warmongering. Presently, they do not understand them. But, then, neither do the majority of Republicans in Congress who want to insert themselves into the negotiations.

What everyone in Congress and the media refer to as "Obama's deal" with Iran is nothing of the sort. The negotiations, which may or may not lead to a "deal," involve two sides: on one side, Iran; on the other, the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council – the U.S., China, England, France and Russia – and Germany. None of these six countries want to see Iran with a nuclear weapon, and none can act alone to reach an independent agreement with Iran.

The claim by some members of Congress in both parties that it has a proper role in these negotiations or the resulting "deal" is contrary to history in such foreign policy matters. Every previous administration, Democratic or Republican, has had the sole authority to negotiate essentially administrative arrangements in accordance with existing treaties. The interest of some members in involving Congress in negotiations is unprecedented and dangerous in undermining future administrations' authority to do what past administrations have always done. Other nations will be reluctant or unable to negotiate with the U.S. with confidence it is participating in good faith or to any good purpose if Congress can modify or revoke any agreements.

Most Democratic and Republican senators seem to know little or care less about the Non-Proliferation Treaty, the enduring, painstaking work of informed officials and experts throughout the world – now at risk of being undone on the initiative of a rookie Arkansas Republican senator.

The treaty, drafted in 1968 and entering into force in 1970, responded to the inherent dangers posed by nuclear energy: Many facilities in a civilian nuclear energy regime can be used by a military nuclear weapons regime. The NPT provides a framework for permitting the use of nuclear energy for civilian purposes and proscribes its use for military purposes, which signatories must renounce. Thus, the NPT, by its signatories' compliance, keeps the world safer than it would otherwise be. As an NPT signatory, Iran is entitled to its benefits. But some violations of NPT provisions give good reason to suspect its avowed purpose to develop civilian nuclear power. What the six nations are negotiating is not a treaty but an arrangement to secure Iran's compliance with, and thereby preserve, the NPT.

Finally, although the 47 GOP signatories to Cotton's letter and their amen chorus of talking heads outside Congress declare the deal a "bad" one, none of them knows the terms of the deal because it is still being negotiated. Their efforts to sabotage these multi-national negotiations reflect the arrogance of their ignorance.

In its idea-free, fact-free approach now characterizing its approach to difficult problems with possible solutions contrary to their partisan interests, Republicans are unwilling to declare their willingness to increase the risk of war by disrespecting Obama, discrediting the United States, disrupting the negotiations and preventing a deal. As Leslie Gelb put it, they hate Obama more than they hate a nuclear Iran, or, I would add, love America.

Nevertheless, under the circumstances, a "distrustbut-verify" deal makes sense. Without it, without inspections and other limitations on Iran's nuclear program, the rest of the world would have little or no timely knowledge of Iran's use of nuclear energy. Iran, with a 'In short, the nuclear weapon/missile threat posed by today's Iran is not unlike the threat posed by yesterday's Soviet Union.'

nuclear weapon in its arsenal, would constitute an existential threat not only to Israel, but also to other countries in the Middle East and beyond.

Without a deal, the threat becomes unmanageable and intolerable. An assumed breakout time of one year from uranium enrichment to nuclear weapon is mistaken; in countries like Iran with expertise, technologies and infrastructure, the breakout time can be three or fewer months – a huge threat to one and all - and perhaps not discoverable in time. Worse still, if a breakout occurs, is discovered and does not elicit a response reversing or undoing it at once, many other countries in the area would likely initiate their own nuclear program for military weapons. The NPT would be abrogated by a consensus of the scared. The shorter time line and broader effects make the threat much greater in the absence of a deal than Republicans realize.

Whatever the final deal, the six countries negotiating with Iran can assure the world that Iran will not be allowed to develop military uses of nuclear energy. It can adopt and announce several principles of action reserved to themselves, separately or collectively, without regard to Iran's views.

First, the right to impose immediate and full-scope eco-immediate and full-scope economic, financial and political sanctions if Iran violates the inspection regime in any way.

Second, the right to define a breakout from civilian to military use as an act of war and to take such action as they deem appropriate, including a devastating response, possibly nuclear.

Third, an announcement of planning for a military response as their preferred option because no country willing to risk severe non-military sanctions by violating the inspection regime will stop the attempt if faced with only them

Finally, the interpretation of the development and deployment of missiles, which exist only as a means to the end of delivering nuclear bombs, as an indication of the likelihood of a breakout and military intent.

In short, the nuclear weapon/missile threat posed by today's Iran is not unlike the threat posed by yesterday's Soviet Union. With that threat comes the need to prevent it by peaceful means if possible, to deter or destroy it by credible military means if necessary. The threat is perhaps greater because miniaturization makes it possible for nonbomber, non-missile delivery of nuclear weapons by substate actors. To the weapons and tactics used in conventional or bomber- or missilebased nuclear warfare, Iran can add those of guerilla and terrorist warfare.

Welcome to the new world of mutual assured destruction, with demonstrated fanaticism assuring us that turning the other cheek will get it blown, or cut, off.

Michael L. Hays consulted to DOD, DOE, and ACDA on nuclear proliferation by means of the civilian nuclear fuel cycle and on nuclear weapons production in the Carter and Reagan administrations.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

A vegetarian's guide to cowboys

Many myths have been promulgated that have fostered a misunderstanding of cowboys by herbivores. It is incumbent on me to shed some light on this subject for my vegetarian readers.

Myth No. 1

Cowboys are mean to cows. This myth may be reinforced by the cowboy's habit of roping cows for sport, branding their young and primping them like poodles at livestock shows. But in their defense, these practices are done without malice. Just sort of the usual predator/prey relationship. Like parents with children enrolled in organized sports.

Myth No. 2

Cowboys are right-wing political fanatics.

Cowboys are suspicious of politicians and, like most Americans, don't vote either. They hold to a muddled Code of the West that forbids associating with known feminists but allows kissing your horse. Very confusing.

Myth No. 3

Cows hate cowboys.

Cows have an IQ somewhere between a cedar post and a sandhill crane. It is unlikely that they lie awake nights plotting revenge.

However, fate has made the cow and cowboy dependent on each other. The same unnatural relationship that exists between politicians and newspaper reporters or lawyers and criminals.

Myth No. 4

Cowboys are a vanishing breed. As long as 97 percent of the population eats meat, there will be cows, and as long as there are cows, there will be cowboys. However, they are hard to see from the freeway.

Myth No. 5 Cowboys eat beef everyday. Or buffalo wings, pigs feet or cheek meat off an old ewe. They'll even eat hay if you put enough whiskey on it. Actually, they'll eat most anything the cook serves up, though I've never seen 'em eat a snail darter or a spotted owl.

Mvth No. 6

Cowboys are not like the romantic image portrayed in Marlboro commercials and John Wayne movies:

Of course they are! 'Specially if you catch 'em between gettin' bucked off before breakfast and losin' their lunch on the way home from the dance.

the Las Cruces Bulletin

Recently, the State Auditor's Government Accountability Office (GAO) released some staggering figures with respect to $4.5 billion of tax dollars sitting in more than 700 state accounts. As a result, many New Mexicans are rightly asking serious questions about whether this money is being put to work to meet the many needs of our state.

The report, which is a compilation of the most recently available audited financial statements of state agencies (fiscal year 2014 in most cases) is the first in a series of reports the Auditor's Office will be releasing to shine a light on fund balances building up in government. Moving forward, the GAO will also report on schools. municipalities and counties.

This effort is aimed at enhancing transparency and accountability for the use of public monies that have already been allocated by the Legislature in years past for a particular use. As our state's only independent office responsible directly to the voters for oversight of public dollars, the state auditor plans to share this information to start a public conversation about the most efficient and effective use of our tax dollars. In the years to come, these reports are intended to serve as a resource for the public, the governor and policymakers to make informed decisions.

This initial GAO report shows that $2 billion has not yet been spent for infrastructure projects, including $700 million for water projects. These taxpayer dollars are primarily from past legislative appropriations and generated fees, and most are designated for a specific purpose and do not revert to the state general fund unless specified in the appropriation. Over time, when these funds are not spent, the money piles up and awaits governmental action.

It is important to note that these dollars are not "new" money that can be used for any purpose – there are typically various restrictions on how it can be utilized. But taxpayers are correct in asking if the money is being spent in a timely manner for the use it was appropriated for, whether that it is to improve education, build roads or create jobs.

There are some legitimate reasons why specific pots of money are not being spent, including the need to maintain emergency reserves and inevitable delay of certain projects due to uncontrollable factors. With greater transparency, and the accountability that this GAO report creates, we can also identify where money is stalled and sitting unnecessarily on the sidelines.

The most straightforward use for these dollars is to simply spend them for the purposes for which they were allocated, pushing them out the door and into the local economy to advance important projects. If the governor prioritizes getting even a modest chunk of these dollars off the sidelines and working to meet the needs of New Mexicans, it would likely be the largest job creation program in recent memory. Since the money has already been allocated, this would also carry no additional cost to taxpayers.

As taxpayers, citizens and New Mexicans, we all want to get the most out of every tax dollar we give to our government. Bringing transparency and accountability to this is the core mission of the State Auditor's GAO office. Together with other government entities, we need to focus on utilizing our state's dollars according to the priorities annually set in the state budget.

Currently, our economy is sluggish. our infrastructure is in dire need of investment and our school system continues to face poor rankings. Now, more than ever, our state should deploy as much of the $4.5 billion as we responsibly can, using these balances as a pre-paid economic stimulus. By cutting red tape, prioritizing projects and focusing more on getting this money moving, we can move the needle on long standing funding challenges in our state.

The full report is available on the State Auditor's website at www.saonm. org/government accountability office.

Bill Porter, former legislator, educator, WWII veteran dies

Special to the Bulletin

William "Bill" Porter, age 89, passed away Saturday, March 21.

He was the loving husband to his wife of 66 years, Caryl. He was the proud father of three daughters: Betsy, Kathy and Kristin, and welcomed their partners, Maurice, Jay and George. He loved his grandchildren, Laura (and Dan), David (and Kristy), Jason, Paul and Brian, and his great-grandchildren Thomas, Lilly, Emma and Zoe.

He was born in Lucknow. India. to missionary parents. His family moved back to the U.S. when he was 3. He was sent to live in a boarding school at age 10 when his father died.

At 18, Bill joined the Army to fight in World War II. He was stationed in London as a guard for Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. After the war, he utilized the GI Bill to further his education. He met his future wife on the first day of classes at Doane College in Nebraska.

After several years of teaching in Kansas, Bill left his position as a principal when his district refused to pay women teachers as much as their male counterparts. In 1955, he moved his wife and daughters to Las Cruces to teach biology.

He worked with his professional organization, the National Education Association. Among his achievements were working to change the district policy to allow women teachers to wear pant suits, fighting discrimination against first black the teacher in the newly integrated schools, obtaining the first worker's compensation policy and establishing the district's first spring break.

Porter was active in the community as well. He was the president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce the year the organization built Apodaca Park. He helped start the first animal shelter as well as the local chapter of Planned Parenthood. He was a member of the Friends of Fort Selden and, with his wife, donated the statue of a Buffalo Soldier honoring the military service of the black soldiers. As a biologist, he was committed to environmental causes.

At the end of his teaching career, he and his wife planted 10 acres of apple trees north of Las Cruces.

He went on to serve southern New Mexico as a state representative for District 36 for eight years. As vice chair helped fund projects for Hatch and Las Cruces. As a legislator, he worked on projects that included tire and bottle recycling bills, saving endangered reptiles, preserving the dark skies, promoting the spaceport, creating a Rio Grande nature park, funding public education and helping support stronger mental health funding.

Porter believed that you could judge the greatness of a society by the way it treated its most vulnerable members. You could tell the greatness of this kind, loving man every day in by the way he of the capital outlay committee, he treated everyone. His actions truly reflected his beliefs. He was a loving family man, a scientist, a fisherman, a community activist, a soldier, an adventurer and a champion of the disenfranchised. Our world is a better place because of him.

A memorial service will be held 3 p.m. Saturday, April 4, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Museum Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Compassion and Choices, the Alzheimer's Association, La Casa or other charities.

BACK-TAXES AUCTION PLANNED APRIL 2 FOR DOZENS OF PROPERTIES

The New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department's Property Tax Division will auction land and houses on Thursday, April 2, at 9 a.m. in the Commission Chambers of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd., in Las Cruces.

There are more than 100 properties planned for auction. Properties from all areas of the county are scheduled for auction, including the Santa Teresa Golf Course and several adjoining lots.

The State of New Mexico is required to conduct at least one public auction in each county every year for delinquent property. The minimum bids concerning the Santa Teresa Country Club are $221,800 for the course and $286,000 for the lot where the restaurant and club house are located.

Any parcel that does not receive bids will be placed on a second property auction that will be announced once scheduling has been finalized.

Taxpayers whose properties are up for auction may pay their delinquent property taxes up until the date and time of the auction. The Doña Ana County Treasurer's Office is accepting partial payments in advance, but all taxes and penalties due must be paid in full before a property can be removed from the auction list.

Bowling Alley Massacre reward set at $25,000

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $25,000 reward for information that helps identify the men suspected of the Feb. 10, 1990, mass-shooting that claimed four lives that day and left three others critically injured.

The "Las Cruces Bowl Massacre," as it's become known, is commonly considered one of the most hideous crimes in the city's history as the gunmen pulled the trigger on four children - two of them younger than 7 - and three adults.

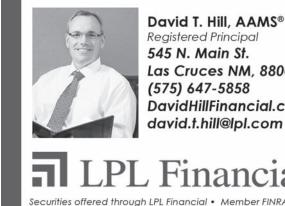

The Las Cruces-Doña Ana County Crime Stoppers board of directors voted unanimously Feb. 17 to allocate the $25,000 cash reward for information that helps positively identify the suspects. The previous Crime Stoppers reward was $1,000 which was standard for murder cases in 1990.

Shortly after 8 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 10, 1990, police were dispatched to what was then known as Las Cruces Bowl, at 1201 E. Amador Ave., where four children and three adults were found shot executionstyle.

Inside the bowling alley, firstarriving officers found three victims already dead: 26-year-old Steven Teran, his 6-year-old daughter Paula Holguin and 13-year-old Amy Hauser. Police found Teran's 2-year-old daughter, Valerie Teran, clinging to life. Valerie was rushed to a local hospital but died a short time after arrival.

Wounded during the shooting were 12-year-old Melissa Repass, her mother Stephanie Senac, 34, and 33-year-old Ida Holguin (no relation to Paula). They were transported to area hospitals and survived.

Senac died years later from complications related to the injuries she sustained.

The two men responsible for the mass shooting have never been positively identified.

Investigators believe the suspects stole an estimated $5,000 in cash from the business before setting fire to the office in what was believed to be an attempt to destroy evidence.

Investigators believe the suspects are Hispanic with dark complexions. Both suspects were said to speak clear English.

In 1990, the older suspect was said to be in his late 30's or early 40's, 5-feet-5-inches tall with a medium build and weighing between 160 and 180 pounds. The younger suspect was believed to be in his late 20's, between 5-feet-6 and 5-feet-8-inches tall with a medium build and weighing around 190 pounds.

Today, the older suspect might be in his late 50s or early 60s. The younger suspect is possibly in his late 40s or in his early 50s. Composite sketches of the men were drawn in 1990 and again in 2005 to depict how they may have aged.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspects is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip by text message CRIMES (274637), to keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

NMSU men look to 2015-16

By Lewis Harry For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Despite falling to No. 2 seed Kansas in the second round of the 2015 NCAA basketball tournament, New Mexico State University men's basketball coach Marvin Menzies and his team are already in the process of preparing for next season.

With the departure of four seniors, Menzies will look to his younger players to step up and guide the team and propel them through the tough stretches.

"I'm really proud of who the seniors have become as people," Menzies said of his graduating group. "That's why I got into the business, to help develop these young men, and mission accomplished with those four guys."

The Aggies begin their offseason by assessing who they will have for next year and what might need to be added to the mix.

"There is a plethora of things that we need to look at as far as evaluating the program - what things we can do better, what we can improve on and things we need to tweak," Menzies said.

Although the Aggies will have no seniors on the roster next season, as of now, the underclassman will bring valuable game experience gained during the Aggies injuryplagued stretch in the middle of the 2014-15 season.

Menzies is expected to add to his program from a recruiting standpoint in the offseason to help develop the next cohort of talent.

"I'd like to see if there is a couple redshirt candidates out there that might be willing to come in and develop their game and get acclimated to college," he said.

The Aggies will also look to add some shooting options to the roster to accommodate the loss of Remi Barry and DK Eldridge.

Key returning players for the Aggies included guard Ian Baker, forward Pascal Siakam and center Tanveer Bhullar, all of whom provided valuable minutes this past season and are looking to be the main impact on the court for the Aggies next season.

"You only have a couple guys that you can look at and have played quality minutes and have been here for a while," Menzies said. "It will be a battle, but the best players will be on the floor."

Senior Daniel Mullings goes up for a layup in second-round NCAA action against No. 2 Kansas. He finished his college basketball career as NM State's fourth leading scorer with 1,677 points and all-time steals leader with 249. The day was bittersweet for Mullings and fellow seniors DK Eldridge, Tshilidzi Nephawe and Remi Barry.

Although many believe the Western Athletic Conference to be a weakened conference in comparison to similar leagues, the Aggies are lined up to prove themselves with tough competition.

They will return to face the Wichita State Shockers in Wichita, Kans., and will play host to the Wyoming Cowboys and California Irvine Anteaters. Next season will also see the addition of a new conference opponent, Texas-Rio Grande Valley.

With four straight WAC championships in the rear view mirror. coach Menzies will begin focus on the future of the program and keeping the Aggies on the rise.

"The future is bright, really bright," Menzies said. "I think that the talent that is here is really special, and I think they are good people with good character.'

For the immediate future, Menzies will take some time with his team to reflect on the season and then its back to the grindstone for the Aggies.

Trakh builds taller team for next season

By Lewis Harry For the Las Cruces Bu

Although the New Mexico State Aggies womens basketball team suffered a loss to No. 1 seed Maryland in the first round of the 2015 NCAA women's basketball tournament, coach Mark Trakh praised his team and looked forward to another magical season in 2015-16.

Many thought the Aggies would have little chance at the postseason this year, after starting the regular season with five straight losses, NMSU went on a streak, winning 22 of the next 24 games and capturing the Western Athletic Conference tournament title for the first time since 1995.

The team won its first first-ever conference tournament crown to advance the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1988.

"I'm proud of these kids, we don't have a senior on the roster," Trakh said. "They came here and its not a very easy place to play against a team that is 18-0 in the Big Ten Conference and No. 4 in the country. I think they competed, they did a good job and I'm proud of them.'

He said the Aggies could have played a closer game if they had "knocked down some more 3's and some more of those open shots.'

The Aggies, who were undersized versus a team that ran the table in its first year in the Big Ten and came in ranked No. 4 in the AP poll and No. 3 in USA Today poll, shot 37.9 percent from the field and were outrebounded 45-20, including 13-4 on the offensive boards.

Forward Brianna Freeman led the Aggies, scoring 15 points against Maryland on 6-11 from the field accompanied by three free throws. However, Maryland standout Brionna Jones proved to be overwhelming for the Aggies as she recorded 22 points along with 12 rebounds.

Mismatched in size when they took on the Terps, the Aggies plan to add some size of their own next year.

The future looks very bright, Trakh said. "We have a 6-foot-4 inch, highly recruited kid that is coming in and another 6-foot-3 inch kid, a guard out of California.'

Among the multiple team and player accolades garnered this season, Trakh joined an exclusive group of coaches when the Aggies clinched their NCAA ticket. He became one of 11 NCAA Division-I women's coaches to lead three different teams to the big dance. Trakh led Pepperdine to the tournament in 2000, 2002 and 2003 before taking Southern California in 2005 and 2006.

Trakh said he is keeping focused on his goal the Aggies winning an NCAA tournament game and expects his team to work this offseason to prepare for another magical season like 2014-15.

In sport, work and life, it's about competition

As many know, I have played at golf for most of my life, starting out beating balls I found on a country club course where I caddied at age 10 or 11.

As a kid, I sometimes went out golfing with my father, my grandfather, my older brother or some school friends at a sort of ragged, compact ninehole course in my hometown in suburban Cleveland. But only lately I took to wondering why we play golf to begin with.

I have asked a lot of regular and avid golfers that very question: Why do you play golf? The replies have mostly seemed superficial, for example, "Golf is a 'challenge.^{*}

If you want a challenge, go climb Mount McKinley, or run a 26 mile marathon, row solo across the Atlantic or just lose weight, I muse.

It seems to me that avid recreational golfers have not fully decided exactly why they play the game.

Perhaps the most interesting and most genuine response to my question came from a 17-year- old-high school girl I had been coaching to better her mental game, at the request of her parents. She was a good player and good student and eventually won a scholarship to a Division I college golf program.

One day, as we walked the golf course during a playing lesson, I pressed her for the real reason she chose golf instead of soccer or basketball or something else. We walked for a few minutes down the fairway before she spoke.

"I decided I wanted to be really, really good at something that was very, very hard," she said. "And I passionately wanted to excel at something that none of my friends could do at all.'

It blew me away, because I realized that was the first time I got a totally honest, unrehearsed, open, articulate answer to my question.

My young student had revealed herself as a competitor.

Ultimately, success in life is about winning at competition. In his partly autobiographical book, "It's Only a Game,"

former PGA pro golfer Jackie Burke Jr. wrote, "The day you stop competing is the day you start the long walk to the graveyard.'

The essence of golf is competition.

For centuries, all golf was match play, with one golfer playing holeby-hole against another player. It wasn't about shooting a low score, or securing as many strokes off your score as possible (i.e. handicap) or producing a birdie-fest for the television viewers.

Besides, back in the day, too much scotch whiskey was being drunk for that. Even today, on the first tee at the British Open, the twosomes are announced as "game No. 22" (or whatever), in obvious remembrance of a time long past when all golf was match play. Until 1958, the PGA Championship had always been strictly a match play event.

The 1953 PGA Championship was won by Walter Burkemo at Birmingham Country Club in suburban Detroit, 21 years prior to my becoming a member there.

In modern golf, the heavy emphasis is on stroke play, and I think it takes some excitement away from the game. Fortunately, there are the Match Play Championships, Solheim Cup and the Ryder Cup. Though we may not immediately recognize it, we all compete.

True, in our work groups and within our companies and organizations we have to cooperate, which is critical for harmony and division of labor. But to survive and to achieve ultimate success, meaning to dominate, we have to compete.

Competing may not be "why" we play at sport or work, but we try to be better than something or someone else. At times the golf course is our adversary. Other times we battle our own demons. Sometimes we're out to beat an opponent, who may be a good friend. In so doing, we learn a lot about ourselves.

higher than the GRT rate in Albuquerque and Santa Fe, as well as the El Paso sales tax rate.

The GRT increase of one, two or three eighths of a percent without a public vote was an option given by the Legislature to phase out state hold harmless payments to large municipal and county governments after removing food and medical expenses from GRT. Three other counties have raised their GRT by the full three eighths and five counties by two eights, said commission Chairman Billy Garrett.

Commissioner David Garcia of Chaparral said the increase of $3.70 on a $1,000 purchase wasn't that much.

Rawson said voters in three previous GRT elections had rejected more modest increases and this action amounted to the largest tax increase in Doña Ana County history. The increase is expected to generate more than $12 million a year, while the state hold harmless payment to the county was at $1.8 million a year, which is, he said, an increase in revenue far outstripping the eventual total loss in state funding by 2030. The state is phasing out the hold harmless payments over a 15-year period with the payment for this fiscal year expected to be about $120,000 less than last year, he said.

"That's an increase of than tenfold,' more

Rawson said. County Commission

Chambers were filled with people for and against the increase for different reasons.

County employees were out in force for the increase, mostly from the sheriff, detention center and roads departments. Uncompetitive salaries officers, for guards, administrators and other personnel were cited as cause for high turnover rates for the sheriff's office and detention center. Supporters of the Doña Ana Sheriff's Office (DASO) also bemoaned poor communication and record-keeping systems.

In addition to the wellpublicized DASO Detention concerns, Center Director Chris Barela said he is losing about five officers per told month. He commissioners he was concerned the staffing level would put the jail's accreditation in jeopardy and increase liability risks.

The Ocotillo Institute for Social Justice and its Empowerment Congress brought in residents from isolated communities to support using some the increase GRT for restarting public а system transportation connecting rural communities to work, medical offices and shopping more readily available in urban areas, primarily Las Cruces.

Opposing the increase were mostly representatives of the business community who said the county GRT increase adds to stresses on economic development put on them by the City of Las Cruces with its threeeighths GRT increase to replace hold harmless payments and an increase in the minimum wage.

NEWS

Commissioner Wayne Hancock of Las Cruces said those who were opposed to the increase were the ones who could afford it the most, whereas those who could afford it the least were demanding improved services from the county.

Hancock said citing the rates of other cities gave the unfair impression that the new rate would be the highest in the state. Hancock said his research showed that Ruidoso's GRT rate is 8.625 and some parts of Santa Fe are charging a 8.8125 GRT rate.

Hancock said the commission had the moral responsibility to take full advantage of the opportunity being given it by the Legislature to begin correcting "clear inequities" in government services. Hancock said he agreed that DASO is underfunded and roads have been neglected for a long time.

In response to criticism that the commission was considering raising the GRT without saying how that money would be spent, the commission first passed a resolution to earmark what the new money should pay for.

Garrett said he was disappointed the amended resolution didn't have more funding earmarked for capital projects to support economic development. He said the amended resolution did reflect the commission's priorities to put resources into making the county a safe place and "making sure our employees are treated fairly and equitably."

Garrett said the resolution did not reflect the final budget, nor would the new money resolve all the county's fiscal pressures. He GRT described the increase as a "bridge" and "first step" to the county finding better and more efficient ways to provide services.

County Manager Julia Brown said her push for the full three-eighths was not to make county government fat because the county has been running lean for many years to keep up with unfunded mandates. The GRT increase was the only resource available to the county to enhance revenues, she said.

State Rep. Bealquin "Bill" Gomez told the commission that the recently concluded legislative session failed to produce capital outlay funding. Hancock said the situation was even more cause for the county to do what it could on its own without depending on the state.

Max Bower, president of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association. said the three-eighths coupled with Las Cruces GRT increase would price 260homes out of affordability. The city also recently raised impact fees, he said, resulting in new home construction at a nineyear low.

Russell Allen, chairman of the Las Cruces Greater Chamber of Commerce board, said the $12 million the county will be making each year is "coming out of the pockets of the I represent," people which he said are business owners and their employees.

"It just went from bad to worse," she said.

After the session ended. Martinez blamed the unproductive session on lawmakers.

"Unfortunately, this session ended in the same fashion it was operated from Day One," Martinez told reporters in a news conference adjournment. after "Senate Democrats chose to obstruct, to delay, chose gridlock, chose partisanship, and they chosenottocompromise.³

While the session was not as productive as most 60-day sessions, some legislation did get passed. For example, Rep. Jeff Steinborn, D-Las Cruces, saw two of his bills get passed. One was for improving transparency of lobbying reporting by putting required filings online in a timely manner, which he hopes Martinez will sign, and the 500-mile-long Rio Grande Trail proposal, which had the governor's support early in the session.

These victories are tempered by the loss of capital outlay spending, which Steinborn said could have helped many efforts in the state, such as health care.

"It was a huge disappointment," he said.

Other legislation passed includes making "revenge porn" a crime, prohibiting the sale of e-cigarettes to minors, revising law enforcement seizure and forfeiture proceedings, housing low-risk prisoners in halfway houses and toughening penalties for sexual exploitation of children.

Lawmakers passed bills to allow brewers wineries and with restaurant or dispenser licenses to sell wholesale, require child-resistant packages for liquid nicotine and lower the maximum speed limit on unposted county roads to 55 mph.

The main job of the Legislature, of course, is to set the budget, which both houses were able to agree upon at $6.2 billion for the 2015-16 fiscal year.

Motorcycle run fundraiser set for musician

Bulletin Staff Report

The sounds of motorcycles revving and music playing usually indicate a good time, but this Saturday, March 28, at the Mesilla Plaza, they will be signs of a good cause, too – the motorcycle run and music in the plaza are part of a fundraiser for local musician Johnny Florez.

If you've wandered through the Farmer's Market, you've heard him – strumming his guitar and singing a mariachi wail, accompanied by percussionist, singer and friend Isabel Aguirre. The community is now banding together to support their native son.

Florez, 86, was in danger of losing his home to back taxes, the family home he himself helped build over half a century ago. Through community efforts organized by filmmaker D. John Young and his wife, April Gonzalez, he will not find himself unmoored in this city – but there is still much more that needs to be done.

"It has been a long process ... the community has really come through," Young said.

The home was without gas or water, and is still in major need of repairs, including a new roof, floors and electrical and plumbing work.

In order to fund these desperately needed repairs, Robyn Rivas, a musician and organizer of the For Musicians By Musicians fundraiser, has organized the motorcycle run.

Rivas said, "When I saw that Johnny was in need – my husband has played with him in the past, a lot of people know him ... to see him about to be homeless, that was just incredible. And to find out that he's been living without hot water and heat, that was even worse. ... So I'm doing everything I can to help."

Bands will be playing on the plaza from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Kenny Arroyos and KW Sound will be providing the sound equipment for the event. The bands include some of Las Cruces' most recognizable names: Rockabilly Strangers, Mad Moe Zell, The Double Clutchers, Bourbon Legend, Los Agaveros del Norte, Victoria Rivas and, of course, Johnny Florez himself.

The fundraiser will include raffles throughout the day, with prizes including a guitar donated by Hubbard's Music-N-More and a laptop computer donated by 20 Dollar Computer Repair.

Sign up for bikes begins at 10 a.m. at Palacio's Bar, and the last bike must be in by 2 p.m. Cost is $10 per bike, $15 per couple on a bike. Music in the plaza is free for all who wish to attend.

For more information, call Robyn Rivas at 850-1944, John Young at 520-4086 or April Gonzales at 520-4084. for auction. Properties from all areas of the county are scheduled for auction, including the Santa Teresa Golf Course and several adjoining lots.

Any parcel that does not receive bids will be placed on a second property auction that will be announced once scheduling has been finalized.

Taxpayers whose properties are up for auction may pay their delinquent property taxes up until the date and time of the auction. The Doña Ana County Treasurer's Office is accepting partial payments in advance, but all taxes and penalties due must be paid in full before a property can be removed from the auction list.

Property tax and payment information can be found online at www. donaanacounty.org/ treasurer or by contacting the Doña Ana County Treasurer's Office at 877-827-7200 Ext. 7433 or 647-7433.

Police shooting panel

The New Mexico State University Library invites the public to "Police, Public and Press: Shining Light on Officer Shootings" 5 p.m. Thursday, April 2, on the third floor of the Zuhl Library.

The event will be held to commemorate Sunshine Week, which celebrates the public's access to information, open records and open government

Panelists are New Mexico Foundation for Open Government Executive Director Susan Boe, Las Cruces Sun-News Opinion Page Editor Walter Rubel, Doña Ana County District Attorney Mark D'Antonio, constitutional law expert and trial attorney Michael Stout, retired Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office Capt. Michael Kinney and NMSU Police Chief Stephen Lopez.

The panel will be moderated by writer, photographer and lawyer Peter Goodman. It will examine how open records laws have been affected with recent officer-involved shooting occurrences in our region. Arbor Day

The City of Las Cruces Parks and Recreation Department will hold its annual Arbor Day celebration from 9 a.m. to noon, Saturday, April 4, at Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N Main St.

There will be an appearance of Arbor Day founder J. Sterling Morton, played by NMSU professor John Mexal, who will do a tree planting and dedication at 10:30 a.m.

A free tree raffle will be held at 11 a.m. Must be present to win. Get your tree raffle ticket from any LC Tree Steward or at the tree steward information table.

Local organizations will have information tables and will provide various activities.

• "In one of the hardest fought city elections ever held in Las Cruces Tuesday Mayor Sam Klein was returned to office by a margin of 479 votes over Frank Knight," the Las Cruces Citizen reported. Klein, heading the Greater Las Cruces ticket polled 1,465 votes, while Frank Knight, heading the Citizen's Non-Partisan ticket, received 986. Every member of the Greater Las Cruces ticket, all Democrats, were swept into office by large majorities.

• "J.P. Church of the State Highway Depratment has advised city officials that as soon as West Las Cruces, or Picacho Avenue, is graveled, the State is ready to proceed with the oiling program," the Citizen reported. The highway was to be widened on both sides, officials said, "since this stretch of road carries practically as much heavy traffic daily as any other stretch in the state." The work of graveling the highway was expected to start at once.

• According to a report from the Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock, new home contsrutction continued at an active pace throughtout New Mexico, the Citizen reported. Loans totaling $104,421 were made in the previous month to 62 homeowners by the insured associations to assist them in the building, buying, repairing and refinancing of their homes. Loans for the construction of new dwellings in February aggregated $55,825, bringing the total of loans made for that purpose in the three months previous to $150.253.

• "In paying their federal income taxes on April 15, residents of Doña Ana County will benefit, for the first time, from the cut in tax rates that was voted last year," the Citizen reported. The 1965 rates were from 16 percent to 77 percent, compared with the previous range of 20 to 91 percent. "However," the story continued, "for families whose incomes increased during the past year, the tax reduction, in dollars and cents, will not be as great as expected." Personal taxes paid by Doña Ana County residents, including the amount collected from them via withholding taxes, added up to approximately $8,653,000.

• A survey completed by the New Mexico Credit Union League showed the 124 credit unions in New Mexico had a total membership of 78,465 people and combined assets of $51,109,223, the Citizen reported.

· Las Crucens were headed to the polls Tuesday, April 6, to vote on a proposed $1 million school bond issue, which would go to expansions at Mayfield High School, a new 12-classroom elementary school in the Loma Heights-Country Club area, minor additions to the School Administrative Offfices and the purchase of properties for future schools.

• The City of Las Cruces was set to spend $400,000 on a cost-of-service study to determine if the fees it was charging utility customers were enough to cover the cost of providing utilities, the Las Cruces Bulletin reported. Taking up to two years, it would be the first study of its kind to be conducted in Las Cruces.

• Three Mesilla officials - Town Clerk David Gutierrez, Mesilla Marshal Manny Flores and Deputy Lorenzo Martinez - were abruptly fired as the first order of business by new Mayor Nelson "Dyke" Clayshulte and Trustees Roman Aranda III and Ed Southworth, joined by returning Trustees Ella Alvarez-Nelson and Michael Cadena. They were likely to appeal their terminations, the Bulletin reported. Clayshulte refused to elaborate to the Bulletin the reasons for the employees' terminations, saying only, "The whole thing is, they're not suited to do this type of work.'

• Approximately $2.4 million worth of commerical frontage land along North Telshor Boulevard, from Lohman Avenue north to a self-storage facility, was facing foreclosure following the Feb. 9 takeover of ABQ Bank by the Office of Thrifts Supervision, the Bulletin reported.

Coach: NMSU rodeo team 'unstoppable'

The New Mexico State University rodeo team continues to lead the pack in the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association's Grand Canyon Region, picking up another win in Tucson, Ariz.

'I'm proud of the teams' performance this past weekend," head coach Jim Brown said. "They continue to outshine the competition and bring championships back to Las Cruces. I have no doubts our success will continue through the rest of the season."

The Aggie men's rodeo team earned first place by gaining more than 200 points over the competition at the University of Arizona Saturday, March 21, while the women's team placed in third.

Josh Davison of NMSU received the All-Around title for excellence in the arena.

Riders to take first place were Ryan McCauley in saddlebronc riding, Zoe Billings in breakaway and Wyatt Jurney in steer wrestling.

The Aggies took 17 wins in the nine categories.

Billings became involved in rodeo at the age of 6, following in her father and grandfather's footsteps. She credits her neighbor with teaching her barrels.

The next rodeo will be Thursday and FridayApril 3-4 in Window Rock, Ariz.

Las Cruces Community Theatre One - Acti Play Festival

Continues Friday through Sunday, March 27-29

See feature in Arts & Entertainment, page B2

Bulletin FRIDAY, MARCH 27, 2015 B2 LCCT One-Act Festival showcases local directors, writers

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Community Theatre's One-Act Play Festival continues for three more performances, at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 27-28, and 2 p.m. Sunday, March 29.

The One-Act Play Festival not only serves to expose a wider theater-going audience to the art of short-form storytelling, a departure from the Las Cruces Community Theatre's regular performance series and its roster of multiple-act plays, but also helps to showcase the talents of local directors, playwrights and actors.

"The whole idea is to give people an opportunity to get directing experience and do that without having to do a fulllength play," said Las Cruces Community Theater's Janet Beatty-Payne. "It also gives our playwrights who are writing these short plays the opportunity to have their works done. It's tough to find a venue to stage a play you've written, so the whole idea of the one-act is to allow people to write and direct and put up their short plays, because there's really no other place to do it here."

Funds raised from ticket sales to the

One-Act Play Festival will go to LCCT's Capital Fund Campaign, which began in September and aims to raise $1 million for the company to purchase the historic State Theatre on Main Street, LCCT's home since 1977.

Aside from the purchase of the building, funds raised from the campaign will go to much-needed upgrades and renovations to the space, including expanded bathroom facilities, new wiring – enabling the company to utilize the latest technology – and to replace the theater's poorly functioning swamp cooler system with refrigerated air – a must when audiences of up to 200 crowd into the space during the summer months' 110-degree heat.

"With that money, we are going to purchase the theater and take care of the major issues our patrons have brought up," Beatty-Payne said. "That's going to take us a lot of money to do, and a lot of time to raise that money, so we thought we would put on the one-acts this year and use that as a fundraiser.

"People love coming to the Community Theatre, and at $10 a ticket, every little bit helps us reach that goal."

This year's festival features one previously published work performed alongside four original works written and directed by local playwrights and directors and starring casts of local actors and actresses.

Taking the global tensions created by World War II and using them to explore his own existentialist views of the human condition, French playwright Jean-Paul Sartre's 1944 "No Exit" revolves around the afterlives of three characters doomed to spend eternity locked in a room together – the source of Sartre's oft-misused quote "Hell is other people." Festival organizer Grady Easterling directs.

"Chess," written and directed by Julian Alexander and based on conversations between Alexander and Keagan Karnes, revolves around questions of right and wrong; of perspective, perception and point of view.

David Salcido's "The Real Thane" spoofs William Shakespeare's "Macbeth," asking: "What really happened on that foggy night in the tangled moors of Scotland? Was it a prophecy uttered by three weird sisters, meant to launch the county into a spiral of corruption, paranoia and war? Or was it a simple misunderstanding by a henpecked nitwit with delusions of grandeur. Sometimes prophecy is a simple matter of perspective." "The Real Thane" is directed by Erica Krauel.

In Robert Geller's "Lox and Feygelehs," Alec, a gay man, visits his Jewish father each Sunday for dinner. These weekly meetings have become strained, however, since the passing of Alec's mother, through whom son and father always communicated. Rorie Measure directs.

Finally, in writer/director Autumn Gieb's "Wanting Daisy," Patrick and Daisy have ended their relationship after college, a choice Patrick has ever-since regretted. Now, at a meeting years later, he has one chance to win her back.

The Las Cruces Community Theatre is located at 313 N. Main St. Admission to the One-Act Play Festival is a minimum $10 donation at the door. No reservations will be taken for the festival, and all seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. The box office will open one hour before showtime. For more information, call 523-1200.

This project is supported in part by by New Mexico Arts, a division of the Department of Cultural Affairs and by the National Endowment for the Arts William Darrow

It's experience, commitment, and understanding.

Mike Cheney has all the qualities we expect in a market president: proven leadership, deep banking expertise, and most importantly, a dedication to customer's needs. That starts with listening to the customers, understanding where they are, and where they want to be.

For over 25 years, Mike has devoted his entire career to banking, right here in New Mexico. He understands the local economic environment, and the things our customers care about. He serves our community in many ways including as Chairman of the NMSU Board of Regents.

We're proud Mike Cheney represents our values at WestStar Bank; it's more than banking to Mike, and to us.

The Greenhaus offers healthy food truck fare

By Zak Hansen

Ana Ordaz, chef and owner of The Greenhaus food truck, has parlayed a lifelong love of food into her own little slice of the American dream.

Ordaz, who was born and raised in Juarez, Mexico, said food has been part of her life since her earliest years.

"Growing up in a Mexican family, there was always lots of food, all the time," she said. "All my aunts were really good cooks, and every year we had the tradition of getting together to cook and bake for the holidays."

Ordaz immigrated to the United States after graduating from high school, landing in Phoenix, Ariz., to attend the Scottsdale Culinary Institute. Fifteen month later, upon completion of her program in Arizona, Ordaz made the move to the Mesilla Valley, attending the College of Hotel, Tourism and Restaurant Management at New Mexico State University.

Upon her December 2013 graduation from NMSU, Ordaz worked at several Las Cruces and El Paso restaurants before her big break came.

"Working in El Paso, I met someone who was interested in investing money in a restaurant," Ordaz said. "It's always been my dream to own a restaurant, and when I started looking into it, I saw that food trucks are a fraction of the cost of a restaurant."

Thus, The Greenhaus was born.

In crafting her menu, Ordaz said she chose to go for healthier, greener options – as opposed to standard food truck fare – after both her mother and grandmother faced – and, thankfully, beat – serious health concerns.

"The shift for me came when my grandma and my mother were diagnosed with breast cancer," she said. "For me, I didn't want to be condemned to the same thing happening and there had to be a solution. I started getting really into the healthy stuff.

"Coming here, I was very disappointed in the food system and the way everybody is always sick. I'm trying to change the world in any way I can, and I feel like my way of doing that is educating people to eat better."

Favorites on The Greenhaus' menu are the Vegan sandwich – avocado, cucumber, sprouts, red onion, tomato and jalapeño with Dijon mustard on sprouted-grain bread – the Eggwich – eggs, carmelized onion, tomato, avocado, spinach, arugula and Swiss cheese on a fresh-baked croissant –and my own list-topper, the burger – a juicy, grass-fed beef patty topped with bacon, Monterey Jack cheese, tomato, arugula and green chile aioli on a whole-wheat bun. If you haven't tried grass-fed beef, you don't know what you're missing – The Greenhaus currently holds the title for my favorite burger in town.

Sides include chipotle sweet potato fries – sweet and salty with just the right amount of spice –and truffle fries (my favorite), along with fruit and yogurt parfaits.

Smoothies are another of The Greenhaus' unique food-truck fare, with four options – Berry Delicious, Tropical Delight, Protein Power and the ever-popular Green Detox, made with green apple, cucumber, avocado, celery, parsley, spinach and kale.

There's a lot more to the menu than this, and as time goes on, you can be sure The Greenhaus will have unique new offerings in store, especially as Ordaz continues to build connections with local producers.

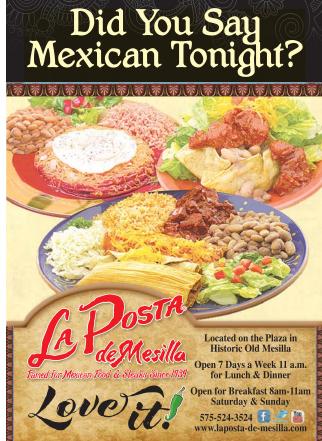

Whenever possible, The Greenhaus' fare utilizes locally sourced products – bread from vendors at the Farmers and Craft Market of Las Cruces, gluten-free options from Yummy Bakery, buns from Bella Sucre bakery in El Paso and produce from La Semilla farm in El Paso and Mountain View Market Farm in Mesilla – and as the winter months give way to spring and summer and fruits and vegetables become more plentiful, options are only going to get fresher and closer to home.

"Here in this area, we have a lot of agriculture and have the opportunity to be more in touch with our food," Ordaz said.

The Greenhaus can be found from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. six days a week – Monday and Friday at Martin Tire (1271 E. Amador Ave.), Tuesday in front of City Hall (700 N. Main St.), Thursday at Walgreens (3990 E. Lohman Ave.) and, come April, the bright green truck will become a regular fixture of the farmers market on Wednesday and Saturday mornings on Main Street Downtown.

Keep up with The Greenhaus on Twitter (@ TheGreenhausNM) and Facebook (The Greenhaus) for specials and locations.

'Leviathan' a bleak, hero-less drama

Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Certainly one of the darkest movies I've seen in many a moon, "Leviathan" squashed any delusions I had about ever traveling to Russia. A few years ago, I spent a very brief time on the far eastern coast of the country and had always thought it would be a great place to visit, but maybe not anymore.

"Leviathan" covers drinking, corruption, adultery, bad parenting, bleak settings and possibly murder – mostly in that order.

Kolia lives with his wife, Lilya, and his son, Roma, in a bleak rundown place in northern Russia, somewhere on the Barents Sea. He owns a small auto repair shop and his home on a piece of gravel not far from the gray and demanding

se

Lilva is his second wife, but seems like his third, since Kolia seems married to drink as he washes away every day with a bottle of vodka. He is not a "mean drunk," per se, but the behavioral changes that his imbibing causes are to be noted here. Lilya is depressed, bored and starting to get tired of their life. Roma is just coming of age, hanging out with friends in the shell of a long-abandoned church, telling stories and starting to drink as well.

The corpulent, powerful mayor of the town has made a major move, trying to snatch Kolia's land and home from him, supposedly in the name of community development. There is a short and amazing courtroom scene where one of the judges on the panel of Ko-lia's soon-to-be-lost appeal, reads in a dry and legal monologue the entire judgment against Kolia, who is about to lose everything, including the millions of rubles offered to him initially for the property. Those millions convert to about $50,000 in U.S. money as I write this.

Enter Dimitri, Kolia's lawyer friend from faraway Moscow. Dimitri is good, darn good, and finds a lot of dirt on the mayor and his cronies that he confronts the tubby little jerk with, demanding fair exchange for Kolia's land, not to mention that Kolia be let out of jail, since he was unfairly jailed while making a scene at the police station.

The mayor agrees and things start to look up for Kolia, except for the fact that Dimitri has started to have sex with Lilya.

A major scene opens the second half of the film. During an outing with all of the main characters and a couple of Kolia's family friends is an excursion to the hinterlands to relax, target shoot and of course, drink, it is not long before a really confusing tragedy occurs, one that is never really explained. Rest assured, from here on out, a film you couldn't think bleaker manages to find ways to have things worsen for those involved.

The mayor, quite threatened by Dimitri's demands, soon takes back control of the situation in a way you would certainly expect. Lilya's behavior catches up with her and Kolia is trapped in a crime he didn't commit.

Many things in this fine film point to what is said to be happening in Putin's Russia. Corruption running rampant, freedoms once taken for granted since the end of the Communist era being usurped and most of the country is awash in vodka and other mind-altering chemicals.

"Leviathan" opens at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla Friday, March 27, for a one-week run.

If that is all true, then one could easily see why people would want to flee this oligarchic and vicious realm. There is not one happy moment in this film, though some reviewers have looked harder than I to see black comedy. I didn't see even a wisp.

It is evident in every scene of "Leviathan" that this fictional town is filled with nothing but depressed, dour and hopeless people. Even the church is in on it, with the local man of the cloth comparing the situation to that of Job, basically saying, "Don't question, just accept, and maybe you, too, can live to be 140."

I don't think I'd want to in a place such as this.

"Leviathan" is a terrific and aptly titled picture, but not one for those who need happy endings. As one of the characters notes, "Man is the most dangerous animal." Da.

Pecans, pistachios subject of NMFRHM April program

One of the Mesilla Valley's main crops is the subject of the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum's monthly Culture Series in April.

Richard Heerema, New Mexico State University pecan and pistachio specialist, will speak about the unique botany and ecology of pecan trees, the fascinating history of the pecan industry in North America (and New Mexico specifically) and the basics of pecan horticulture in southern New Mexico.

The "All About Pecans" presentation is at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 9.

Heerema grew up in the northern San Joaquin Valley surrounded by agriculture and developed an interest in plants and horticulture at a very young age. He received a bachelor's degree from Dordt College (Sioux Center, Iowa) in 1998 with double major in biology and agriculture (plant science). He worked in tissue culture propagation of orchard trees (including pistachio, almond and walnut) for Dry Creek Laboratories in Hughson, Calif. from 1998 to 2000.

He received a Ph.D. in plant biology (pomology) from University of California-Davis in 2005 – with dissertation research in almond physiology – and has worked as the NMSU Extension Pecan and Pistachio Specialist since that time.

Admission to the presentation is a suggested $2 donation.

The other activities and events on the schedule for April follow.

Crafts for Kids

10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, April 4

Children of all ages are invited to come by the museum and create their own Easter crafts to take home. Regular museum admission is required for all family members: $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, $2 for children 5 to 17 and free for children 4 and younger.

Basic Dowsing Class

1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 11 Learn the basics of dowsing – questing, divining, water witching – how to use the four basic dowsing tools and the benefits associated with dowsing. Frank Geisel is the instructor. The cost is $15 (Museum Friends members pay $10). Dowsing tools will be available. Cash or check only and pre-registration is encouraged. Checks should be made payable to Friends of the NMF&RHM. Call 522-4100.

Exhibit opening: Ronald Kil: "Spanning the Range"

6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 16 The colorful, historical West-

The colorful, historical Western art of Santa Fe artist Ronald Kil is featured in a new exhibit to open on April 17. The show includes 30 works that are historical in nature, but with wide-reaching boundaries – from the paleo Indian hunters of 7,000 B.C. to the cowpunchers of the 1920s. He works in oil, watercolor and ink, and was chosen to illustrate the official State Centennial Calendar in 2012. A former ranch cowboy, he became a full-time artist and illustrator in 2001. While the official opening is Friday, April 17, there will be an artist's reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 16. Admission to the reception that evening is free and will include refreshments. The show will be in the museum's Arts Corridor through Aug. 2.

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum is located at 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $5 adults, $3 seniors 60 and older, $2 children ages 5 to 17 and free for children 4 and younger. For more information, visit www. nmfarmandranchmuseum.org or call 522-4100.

Auditions for 'Arabian Nights' April 6-7

Auditions for the Black Box Theatre production of "Arabian Nights," directed by Karen Caroe, will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, April 6-7, at the theater, 430 N. Main St.

Needed are five men between the ages of 18 and 60 and four women between the ages of 18 and 60.

"Arabian Nights," adapted by Dominic Cooke, is an ensemble piece in which each actor plays multiple roles. Auditions will consist of cold readings from the script and ensemble improvisation.

"Arabian Nights" is the beautiful story of Shahrazad's wedding night in the palace of King Shahrayar. Like thousands of young brides before her, the new queen is to be put to death by morning.

Unlike her misfortunate predecessors, Shahrazad has the one gift that can save her life: the gift of storytelling.

Her stories are those we have come to know and love — the stories of Ali Baba and Es-Sindibad. With her mischievous imagination, Queen Shahrazad paints a dazzling array of stories and characters.

"Arabian Nights" employs a mixture of song, dance, puppetry and illusion to summon magical, enchanted worlds full of wild beasts, singing trees and sneaky thieves. It is a celebration of imagination and storytelling ... but is it be powerful enough to save Shahrazad's life?

The show will run from June 1-21 with a possible extension through June 28. Rehearsals are tentatively scheduled for 6 to 9 p.m. Sunday through Thursday.

For more information, call 523-1223 or visit www. no-strings.org.

Tombaugh Gallery seeks 2016 proposals

The Tombaugh Gallery is calling for regional artists within a 300-mile radius of Las Cruces to submit proposals for exhibitions for the 2016 calendar year. Nontraditional media or subject matter are welcome.

All artwork must be for sale.

Submissions should contain a letter of proposal with information about the artist, type of work to be shown and a USB drive containing eight representative images as JPEG files.

For group shows, list all members and include one or two images from each member.

If a show theme is being considered, explain it fully.

The Tombaugh Gallery has 44 linear feet of wall display, along with several pedestals.

Submissions should be postmarked no later than April 1. Submissions will be reviewed, and applicants will be notified May 1, at which time possible show dates will be discussed. Artists and shows not selected will also be notified at this time.

Submissions should be addressed to: Judy Licht, committee chairperson, C/O Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces, 2000 S. Solano Drive, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Artists who prefer to send an electronic submission may contact jelicht@gmail.com for instructions.

For more information on Tombaugh Gallery, visit www.uuchurchlc.org/2013/10/exhibit-your-art-in-thetombaugh.

West End Art Depot seeks submissions

Friends of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument, the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce and West End Art Depot are teaming to present a show about the newest national monument, to open May 1 and continue through the end of the month.

The gallery is seeking original works by artists from southern New Mexico and west Texas having to do with any aspect of the monument, which includes the Organ, Sierra de las Uvas, Robledos, Doa Ana and Potrillo mountains, Killbourne Hole and Aden Crater. Works can be in any media, and especially nontraditional materials, including installation, digital media, assemblage, performance, etc.

Digital submissions are due by Thursday, April 16, to nmartco.op@gmail.com. Submit one to three JPEG or TIFF images and a short artist bio. Entry fee is $5 per piece. Accepted works must be to the depot by April 27.

For more information, visit www.we-ad.org, call 312-9892, email nmartco.op@gmail.com or visit the gallery at 401 N. Mesilla St. Gallery hours are 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, noon to 3 p.m. Sunday and by appointment.

Potters' Guild calls for submissions

The Las Cruces Museum of Art and the Potters' Guild of Las Cruces call for submissions for "From the Ground Up XXVI" Regional Juried Ceramics Exhibition. Submissions are open to ceramic artists living and working in states in the Rocky Mountain Time Zone region of the U.S.: New Mexico, Texas, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana. The exhibition runs Aug. 7 through Oct. 24.

Artists may submit up to four works for consideration. The submission fee is $30, payable to the Potters' Guild of Las Cruces. Awards include cash prizes and Museum Purchase Awards. This year's juror is studio artist Marcia Selsor. The deadline for submissions is postmark-date May 8.

The full prospectus and submission form are available at www.pottersguildlc.com.

WEST END ART DEPOT presents "Not Another D.A.N.G. Art Show" featuring works from the D.A.N.G. (Doña Ana New Ground) Art Gang – Coy Lowther, Emmalee Henderson, Jesse Reinhard, Sonia Payan, Jennifer Craig and Meg G. Freyermuth. The D.A.N.G. Art Gang has been a studio member at West End Art Depot for more than a year, and this is their farewell show before they move on in April. "Not Another D.A.N.G. Art Show" will remain on display through the end of March.

West End Art Depot is located at 401 N. Mesilla St. Gallery hours are 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, noon to 3 p.m. Sunday and by appointment. For more information, call 312-9892 or visit www.we-ad.org

MAS ART presents Margaret and Rick Berstein as its featured artists for the month of March. The Bersteins' work will remain on display through the end of March.

Mas Art is located at 126 S. Main St. Regular hours are 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 526-9113.

CROSSROADS COMMUNITY SUPPORTED HEALTHCARE

presents Emma Henderson as its featured artist for the month of March. Of her work, Henderson said, "This body of work is representative of universal relationships. Individual strands of hair grouped and formed. Some strands may stray, navigating individual paths, but they are all connected to the same body. They divide ways, create patterns and come together in the end. This concept is broad, applicable to many facets of the human condition and our universal connection, but mostly, braids are pretty." The exhibit will remain on display through the end of March.

Crossroads Community Supported Healthcare is located at 130 S. Main St. For hours and more information, call 312-6569 or visit www.crossroadsacupuncture.com.

LAS CRUCES COMMUNITY THEATRE presents "9 Year Deviation," an exhibit of the work of Chris Bardey, following a meandering creative thread from 2005 to 2014 revealing a preoccupation with saturation, in general: rich textures, bold colors and dense compositions. "9 Year Deviation" will remain on display through the end of March.

Las Cruces Community Theatre is located at 313 N. Main St. For hours, showtimes and more information, call 312-9892.

BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER presents "Enchanted Gourds," an exhibit featuring the work of 11 gourd artists living and working in the region. Many of the artists have lived around the country, but now find the Southwest a place of inspiration, creativity and an abundance of gourds. Participating artists include Pat Black, Brenda Blackwelder, Joanna Bradley, Karin Bradshaw, Barb DeRungs, Judy Folkman, Sylvia Hendrickson, Karen Phillips, Steph Ross, Wanda Sparks an Kathe Stark. "Enchanted Gourds" will remain on display through Saturday, March 28.

A little history lesson about orthodoxy

Gabriel Rochelle Tales from the Cassock

In the ninth century, the patriarch of Constantinople commissioned two brothers, Cyril and Methodius, to carry Christianity west.

They got as far as the contemporary Czech Republic. These intelligent monks not only learned the local unwritten languages, they enabled literacy by devising an alphabet. Today, most Slavic languages are written in the alphabet named after St. Cyril.

In the 10th century, Prince Vladimir of Kievan Rus adopted Christianity as the religion of his expanding empire. Orthodoxy became the Christian faith of Ukrainian and Russian people. In 1988, the millennium of Christianity was commemorated, not insignificantly, as the communist regime crumbled at last.

Orthodoxy came to America through the northwestern route. In 1792, a group of monks set out from Valamo monastery in far western Russia. They walked across the entirety of northern Russia and crossed the Bering Straits in rowboats to arrive in Alaska for missionary purposes. Despite incredible setbacks, the mission was established by 1794.

The great migrations to America in the 19th century brought countless people from Orthodox lands to these shores. Many were incredibly poor and lived as smallholders or miners or factory or steel workers. They built onion-domed churches in towns small and large from New York to Montana.

Orthodox Christians have known oppression for centuries. Part of the reason for westward expansion was the ongoing incursion of Islamic regimes in regions with large Christian (and Jewish) populations: today's Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Syria, Russia, Ukraine and so forth, including Greece.

Many of those areas experienced subjection since the eighth century, from powers as varied as the Ottoman Empire, the Turkish regimes and ultimately Communism, where the state policy was to destroy all religion in the name of militant atheism. Despite persecution, which continues in some areas unabated, Orthodox Christianity survived.

Josef Stalin reputedly oversaw killing 50 million of his citizens, many of them deacons, priests, bishops, monks, nuns and countless unknown, unnamed faithful. In Ukraine alone, at least 7 million people – Jews and Christians - died in the early 1930s through Stalin's enforced famine. Ukrainians, along with others, remember it annually as the Holodomor - extermination by starvation. We cannot imagine what it took to keep the fires burning through the awful times into the 20th century.

So you can forgive us if the hair on the back of our collective neck stands up when we hear of protestant groups flying to, say, the Ukraine to "convert the people to Christianity," when Christianity was there centuries before your particular notion of church was invented. Look it up.

You can forgive us if we are incensed when the press fails to report today's atrocities against Christians in the Middle East or Egypt. We suspect that they're probably not the "right kind" of Christians. But they have been suffering for centuries. Look it up.

You can forgive us when we shake our heads at the historical ignorance in much American Christianity, where churches were invented last week, so to speak, and where the absurd proliferation of sects threatens to make the whole enterprise a laughing stock. Check that out.

Spare us ideas of moral equivalency Orthodox Christians had no hand in the Crusades, the Spanish Inquisition or post-Reformation persecution of minorities. We'll take responsibility for our bad deeds, but not those in which we had no part. The Western Crusaders harmed us immeasurably. Look it up

You can forgive us, if you are offended or skeptical, for claiming that we are the Church that goes back to the age of the apostles. But check it out.

Fr. Gabriel Rochelle is pastor of St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission, Las Cruces, and teaches at St. Sophia seminary, South Bound Brook, N.J. The church site is www.stanthonylc.org.

Magnolia, fragrant flowering evergreen

Few trees that are both evergreen and flowering will successfully grow in this area. The magnolia is one of them. Although they will require regular watering during their newly planted years, they will become somewhat drought tolerant once they are established.

This tree has beautiful, glossy leaves and large, fragrant flowers during the early summer months.

Magnolias will require a fair amount of soil amendments before they are planted to look their best.

You may use compost and/or peat moss to help build the soil before planting. This will not only expedite quick root growth, but will also help retain soil moisture and nutrients as well. Additional amounts of iron or a soil acidifier will also help keep the leaves deep green. These additions are to be used in conjunction with a water soluble or granular fertilizer.

If you have trouble getting your magnolia to bloom, you may add triple or super phosphate to your soil. This product will help just about any flowering plant bloom to its maximum potential. If you prefer a water soluble fertilizer, look for one with a high middle number, above 50.

Although this tree is thought of as growing mainly in temperate climates, it has taken some of our toughest winters yet, including the 2011 winter blast. They did look winter bitten, but most in the area seem to have made a full recovery. This is contrary to what has been written about them – I guess the magnolias do not know how to read. This year, I drastically reduced the amount of water, and my magnolias look better than they have in past winter months.

There are now several cultivars to choose from. Some will grow under 20 feet upon maturity and some will grow beyond 30 feet tall with age. There are varieties with a brown color on the undersides of their leaves and some that are completely green on both sides.

Most that are labeled 50 to 60 foot or higher will not attain that height here in the Southwest because of our climate, soil and lack of rainfall, so don't take too much stock in the tag or label.

The cons to planting these trees are thrips in the flower buds and water spots on the leaves. The thrips can be easily controlled with a spray that lists them on the label. The water spots can be eliminated with a light horticultural oil spray. This spray should not be used during the hottest time of the day, however.

All in all, the magnolia is worth planting if you enjoy year-round interest and the sweet fragrance produced by this tree.

NMSU's program recognized nationally

By Janet Perez For the Las Cruces Bulletin

A health care program at New Mexico State University that not only provides care to underserved communities, but also trains health care workers to be more culturally aware is receiving national recognition.

The Ph.D. Program in Counseling Psychology, part of the Counseling & Educational Psychology Department in the College of Education, was recently featured in a national report from the Patient-Centered Primary Care Collaborative (PCPCC) for its grant activities.

The PCPCC is "dedicated to advancing an effective and efficient health system built on a strong foundation of primary care and the patient-centered medical home."

The report, "Progress and Promise: Profiles in Interprofessional Health Training to Deliver Patient-Centered Primary Care," looks at federally funded health workforce training programs such as the Ph.D. Program in Counseling Psychology.

The NMSU program's training activities are funded by the Health Resources and Services Administration through its Bureau of Health Workforce, and more specifically through the Graduate Psychology Education program.

For 11 years, Eve M. Adams, associate professor and director of training for the Ph.D. Program in Counseling Psychology, has been the principal investigator of the grant, which has been funded for more than $1.5 million. The grant requires that students in the program be trained along with other health care disciplines including family medicine, nursing, pharmacy, social work and public health.

The students receive specialized training as they serve "low-income and linguistically diverse populations" at primary care sites such as the Southern New Mexico Family Medicine Residency Program, La Clinica de Familia and the Las Cruces Public School District's schoolbased health centers. In 11 years, 66 psychology doctoral students have been trained alongside 127 other healthcare trainees to provide more than 12,000 direct service hours at community

Marcy Shoberg Self-defense Sense

Bad self-defense courses

I recently took a weekend self-defense course that prompted me to tell colleagues, "You couldn't make a worse course if you tried."

Although I was exaggerating, let's today consider the qualities of bad self-defense courses.

First, know I firmly believe no course is so bad that attending it makes a person less able to protect themselves. Any time spent acknowledging danger increases a person's awareness, enabling them to notice it sooner. The earlier you notice danger, the easier it is to protect yourself.

There are, however, ways some courses fall short of being good use of training time and money. One is when attending is likely to result in injury or mental trauma – people learn self-defense to avoid pain and anguish suffered in an assault. Teachers must walk a fine line, pushing students without injuring them.

The most common mistake, made by martial artsbased courses, is training for fights rather than attacks. Older arts developed to help students win duels common in their times or places of origin, and modern ones generally train students for competitions. A situation where both parties are mentally prepared for blows is completely different from the surprise assaults students train for in a good self-defense course.

Classes making this mistake may emphasize closedfist striking, kicking and fighting stances. Closed-fist striking is a legal and physical risk, kicking is unrealistic on many types of ground and standing like a fighter can escalate situations in which physical contact would be avoidable.

Another mistake is emphasizing memorization of responses to attacks. The problem with this is the chances of a student facing that exact attack before they have forgotten the memorized response is too small to make it good use of training time. It's better to train students to think quickly, creating responses to attacks.

Really bad classes compound this mistake by teaching ineffective techniques. In my recent experience, small women practiced questionable techniques by pretending to attack each other; of course, none attacked with great effort.

One mistake made even by courses I consider excellent is implying that there are absolutes in personal protection. I've heard, "If a man attacks a woman he will punch or slap her," and seen it implied that rape is the motivation in all attacks on women. Some courses encourage running from attack; others, striking until the attacker is unconscious. The best courses educate and empower students with a range of options for a variety of situations.

The primary NMSU instructor and supervisor for these training activities, Daubney Harper, cited an example of the program's effectiveness. If a 39-year-old Hispanic woman with Type 2 diabetes isn't exercising or eating well, a student in the program will work to help her make positive and lasting lifestyle changes. This type of work allows students to see how the mind and body interact.

"It's an 'aha' experience for trainees," Adams said in the report. "They just really understand the biopsychosocial model on a totally different level."

Students in the program are required to take classes in primary care psychology, behavioral health practicum, a mindfulness course and a geriatric immersion.

LegalShield offering services, looking for associates

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Seeking legal consultation on issues from guidance on wills and identity theft to help for small businesses handling complex tax questions may be too costly a route for entrepreneurs and startups, but there is an alternative to hiring a lawyer.

LegalShield has been described as "legal insurance" in that, through monthly payments, subscribers gain access to lawyers and legal consultants without that having to pay a hefty retaining fee and steep hourly rates an attorney usually requires.

"At some time in our lives we all are going to need a lawyer, but with this is like getting a lawyer and a law firm," said Alfred Gutierrez, who is a LegalShield associate along with his wife, Terry.

Along with personal legal advice, LegalShield associate Stan Blitz said just starting a business requires legal considerations, even in its earliest stages – such as should the new business be a limited liability company or a subchapter S corporation?

For those looking for part-time work, LegalShield also is seeking more associates such as Blitz and the Gutierrezes.

"We want people to know this is another possible avenue for looking for ways to bring in new revenue." Blitz said.

Blitz and Gutierrez said they also will be working on developing seminars for the community to learn more about such things as the need to draw up a proper will or identity theft threats.

Wills and identity theft are two areas that Blitz said she sees many average people can benefit from LegalShield services, he said.

"There are a lot of hidden costs people aren't aware of," Blitz said. "You have no idea until it happens." Other areas where people can use some legal advice include banking, repossessions, handling bad debts, responsibilities of landlords and bankruptcies, they said.

"There's a big difference between a Chapter 7 bankruptcy versus a Chapter 11," Blitz said, "The key is people have to be educated."

Small businesses can often use legal advice when they enter into contracts, Gutierrez said.

In disputes, both personal and business, sometimes all that's

A: Because of the Affordable Care Act there are many new regulations which have edged rates up. It's really a trade off and deductibles are higher but there have been some benefits added. For individuals (not employer insurance), in the past maternity and mental health were not covered benefits. The carriers are now required to cover them on all plans. For both Group and Individual coverage there are no longer any preexisting condition clauses, and preventive services are now covered at 100%. role the market the market played, he said, "The plaza had been dead for four or five years. Then Pro's Ranch came in and other businesses started to open."

The Ranch Market opened as Pro's Ranch Market in 2011. When the company went bankrupt, CNG Ranch, a businessformed by two California market chains with the expectation of providing about 170 jobs, took over in February 2014.

"We opened three years ago when the Ranch Market opened," said Eddie Orozco, owner of Crystal Optical.

"We came here because we knew that store was opening. This place was supposed to be a magnet for Hispanic people."

He said Crystal Optical co-located with the ranch Market in El Paso, and the arrangement has been successful, as he believed it had been in Las Cruces.

"There are a lot of rumors about a new store coming," he said. "If it doesn't, we'll have to go back to El Paso or look for

City looks for silver linina

While businesses mull what action, if any, to take in the short term, city officials expressed hope some good may come of Los Altos' demise.

Gary Camarano, city economic development director, said he was as surprised as local business owners by the anchor store's announcement.

"It just kind of popped up," said Camarano, "No one ever approached us with any problems.

He said the closing validates the importance of the city conducting surveys of businesses in the community, in order to address problems before they become lifethreatening to existing business.

He said the survey was discontinued during the recession. Camarano currently is constructing questions for a 2015 version.

is. "We've got to start doing some retail recruiting."

"There is disappointment when it appears a business is not succeeding," said Community Development Director David Weir, whose department is coordinating Realizing El Paseo. The project gave its first public presentation Feb. 28, with New Mexico State University engineering students outlining options for road and traffic changes intended to improve traffic flow and safetv and stimulate commercial activity.

The engineers are finalizing their recommendations, incorporating public input.

In addition, the Urban Sustainability Accelerator at Portland State University in Oregon is conducting an economic study of the 1.7-mile El Paseo corridor linking the NMSU campus with Downtown Las Cruces.

Blitz said LegalShield also will represent its clients when they have been audited by the Internal Revenue Service. Depending on how long a subscriber has been paying in to LegalShield, it may even go to court for its subscribers. According to a LegalShield brochure, by the fifth year, a client would have access to four-and-ahalf hours of pre-trial services and 295-and-a-half of trial time.

Legislative bickering leads to failure of capital

State of the Economy

For the second time in five years, the capital outlay budget failed to pass, leaving $264 million on the table that could have been used to fund needed infrastructure projects.

Those funds would have also provided a stimulus for the economy.

Every $1 in construction spending generates approximately $2 in economic activity, so the failure to pass the capital outlay budget represents a hit to the state economy equivalent to approximately a half billion dollars. This translates into about a 5,500 jobs.

The capital outlay bill appears to have been the victim of – surprise – partisan bickering.

Democrats argued for a mix of projects similar to previous years', while Republicans argued for less spending on senior centers and more funding on roads and other infrastructure.

Republicans may have a point, but this doesn't justify the failure to pass a bill. Where is the governor in all this?

Meanwhile, according State Auditor Tim Keller, another $1.2 billion of capital outlay funds that have been authorized in previous years remain unspent, which accounts for another 25,000 potential jobs. While it is unclear exactly why these funds haven't been spent, Keller pointed to one cause being red tape.

Some 30,000 jobs remain unfunded because of either political scrabbling or bureaucratic inaction. This is particularly sad as construction jobs are the type of jobs that New Mexico needs – jobs that can be filled by primarily male high school graduates, precisely the demographic that suffered most during the Great Recession.

The system is broken. New Mexico appears to be unique among the 50 states in allocating to each legislator a set amount that can be budgeted as the legislator sees fit, allowing each legislator to indulge in pork barrel spending in their district unhampered by spending priorities. Often 'Some 30,000 jobs remain unfunded because of either political scrabbling or bureaucratic inaction. This is particularly sad as construction jobs are the type of jobs New Mexico needs.'

projects are inadequately or incompletely funded, resulting in waste.

A number of reforms have been proposed. SB 430 sponsored by Sen. Pete Campos would have created a Capital Outlay Division within the Department of Finance and Administration that would be responsible for identifying and prioritizing capital projects, providing a list of priorities to the legislature. The division would have had responsibility for identifying stagnant projects for potential defunding, helping to whittle down Keller's $1.2 billion in unspent funds.

Other suggested reforms would create a state board, similar to those in Oklahoma and Utah, to identify possible projects. The board would submit a list of projects to the Legislature. In some versions, the Legislature would be required to vote the list up or down; in other versions, the Legislature could subtract projects, but not add projects.

The current system is antiquated, a holdover from a time when there was little central control of spending, but it does have its advantages. It is transparent and it assures that pork barrel spending, which is inventible in any legislative process, is spread evenly among legislative districts. These advantages, however, don't justify the costs in inefficiency and waste.

New association samples Las Cruces hospitality

New Mexico Hospitality Association, an organization formed in January by the merger of New Mexico Lodging Association (NMLA) and Tourism Association of New Mexico (TANM). held its second quarterly meeting of the year in Las Cruces.

Members mingled at an exchange event Thursday, March 19, at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces. The following day, area industry representatives gave attendees an overview of the industry in southwest New Mexico. Panelists were Gregory Blanch of the New Mexico State University School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management, Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau Executive Director Phil San Filippo, Brandon Rettke and Chelsea Green of Virgin Galactic and George Julian Dworin of the Silver City Arts and Cultural District.

"New Mexico Lodging Association (NMLA) and

NEW MEXICO HOSPITALITY ASSOCIATION

Tourism Association of New Mexico (TANM) recently merged. The newly formed organization, New Mexico Hospitality Association, now represents an industry that generated over 87,900 jobs and is responsible for bringing 32.2 million visitors to the state in 2013," said Jen Schroer, president and CEO of the New Mexico Hospitality Association (NMHA).

She said NMHA unites all segments of the hospitality industry and represents its interest ensuring New Mexico communities and businesses thrive.

Land, homes golf course auction set

The New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department's Property Tax Division will auction land and houses at 9 a.m., Thursday, April 2, in the Commission Chambers of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd.

There are more than 100 properties planned for auction. Properties from all areas of the county are scheduled for auction, including the Santa Teresa Golf Course and several adjoining lots.

"The State of New Mexico is required to conduct at least one public auction in each county every year for delinquent property," said Chief Deputy Treasurer Rene Barba. "The minimum bids concerning the Santa Teresa Country Club are $221,800 for the course and $286,000 for the lot where the restaurant and club house are located."

Any parcel that does not receive bids will be placed on a second property auction.

Taxpayers whose properties are up for auction may pay their delinquent property taxes up until the date and time of the auction. The Doña Ana County Treasurer's Office is accepting partial payments in advance, but all taxes and penalties due must be paid in full before a property can be removed from the auction list.

For more information, visit, www.donaanacoun-ty.org/treasurer or call the Doña Ana County Treasurer's Office at 647-7433 Ext. 7433.

MVPHA hires executive director

The Board of Commissioners of the Mesilla Valley Public Housing Authority (MVPHA) announces the hiring of Juan A. Olvera as the new executive director.

Olvera comes to the Housing Authority with more than 25 years of executive management experience in c o n s t r u c t i o n , development, finance, compliance and procurement.

Since 2008, he has served as the director of development and capital projects at the Housing Authority of the City of El Paso.

Olvera was instrumental in securing funding for the development and construction of the Paisano Green Community in El Paso. This was the first NetZero, fossil-fuels-free, LEED Platinum, affordable housing community in the United States.

He holds a bachelor's degree in chemical/industrial engineering from the Monterrey Institute of Technology, Mexico and a master's in engineering management/industrial engineering from Stanford University.

The Mesilla Valley Public Housing Authority provides rental assistance to approximately 2,000 individuals and families in the City of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County.

Shop, dine and spend some time Downtown

Arianna Parsons Executive director, Downtown Las Cruces Partnership

A New Gathering Place

Recently, many of us have had an opportunity to view the next-to-final plaza design as imagined by architect and Downtown advocate Steve Newby. The plaza design, featuring a permanent, expandable stage, shaded multi-use areas, mosaic work and a splash pad water feature, will be up for review by the Tax Incentive Development District) TIDD Board on Monday, March 30.

We've heard wonderful feedback about the design so far and are looking forward, along with the rest of the community, to a groundbreaking on this project that will bring a good deal of attention back to our Downtown area. If you can't make it to the TIDD Board meeting but would like to view the design concept, stop into our Downtown Las Cruces Partnership offices at 138 S. Water St. to take a peek.

A SmartCode?

The City of Las Cruces Community Development Department scheduled a public input meeting March 24 regarding the proposed Downtown SmartCode.

The 30-day public comment period continues through Tuesday, March 31. The a "form-based" code will ideally allow for more flexibility in building uses while creating more consistency in building-tobuilding use. This is an important change in our Downtown code and we hope you will share your opinions with city planners by Tuesday, March 31. The code is available at the city government website, www.las-cruces.org. Provide comments to Andv Hume, the city's Downtown coordinator, at ahume@las-proposed code, also known as

The Food Truck Revolution (or at least a revelation) cruces.org.

As you begin to spend more and more time Downtown, be it for a festival or just for a day of shopping, you will start to notice the many food trucks Las Cruces now has to offer

These trucks have a wide range of variety of foods -and they are delicious! From the gourmet sandwiches of 138, the healthy smoothies of The Greenhaus, the chile-driven cuisine of the Green Chile Paddy Wagon or the mouthwatering meals of Luchador, there is something for everyone. The next time you are searching for something new, you won't have to to head out to El Paso or Albuquerque, just keep your eyes peeled – the taste you crave may be closer than you think!

The 2014 Avenue Art event drew from the talents of local sidewalk artists of all ages, including the Ten O'Clock Club.

Avenue Art

The weekend of April 25 is a big one - it will have you wondering why you aren't living right Downtown.

Artists, art lovers and kids of all ages will enjoy watching art being created before their eyes during the fourth annual Avenue Art. This family friendly event takes place at the southern end of the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces on Main Street Downtown. Professional/adult, students and youth working individually or in teams will astound you with what they are able to create with chalk. This vear we are offering small businesses and individuals the unique opportunity to sponsor these artists - an excellent and fun way to support the arts.
