Car show expects largest group yet

By Todd G. Dickson s Cruces Bulleti

Organizers of next month's Wheels of Dreams Car Show said it should be its largest yet, and possibly the largest annual open car show in the state, as it sets up for its 10th year at the Field of Dreams.

"We're expecting up to 300 vehicles this year," said Dick Diaz, member of the Las Cruces Rodrunners Car Club that puts on Wheels of Dreams. "Last year, we had 232 cars, which I think beat Ruidoso's car show, which used to be the largest car show."

Restoring and custom auto enthusiasts from all over the region bring their show cars to Field of Dreams, said Bob Ogas, retired Mayfield High School principal.

Rodrunners invite similar car clubs from as far away as Arizona, northern New Mexico and west Texas, Ogas said.

Last year, a Mustang club from El Paso brought a group of the classic "pony car," he said, and this year the Wheels of Dreams

City officials say vehicle seizures limited to DWIs

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Cruces officials Las assured the City Council at a work session Monday, Feb. 23, that its vehicle seizure program is limited by ordinance to repeat DWI offenders, contrary to controversial remarks made by the city's former chief city attorney last year.

Officer Paul Weyler, in charge of the Las Cruces Police Department's vehicle seizure program, said the ordinance was passed by a past council in late 2003, but not fully put into action until January 2005.

Weyler said the ordinance calls for vehicle seizures only in the cases repeat offenders, of primarily DWIs.

The repeat DWI offenders are often driving without a driver's license, he said, and using a vehicle lacking an interlock device, which keeps a drunken driver from being able to start SEE VEHICLES, PAGE A19

The House voted 42-25 Tuesday, Feb. 24, and the bill now moves to the Senate. Most state department budgets remain unchanged from the current fiscal year, but the bill increases spending for education, child welfare and tourism.

The budget includes pay raises for beginning teachers, increasing their salaries to $34,000 a year from $32,000, and a 5 percent raise for state police, the Santa Fe New Mexican reported.

Vigil, D'Antonio lobby legislators

Sheriff Enrique "Kiki" Vigil and Third Judicial District Attorney Mark D'Antonio were in Santa Fe recently to show support for several bills scheduled to go before committees during the New Mexico legislative session.

They support four bills that would enhance the penalties for crimes against children and one that would remove the time limit on charges brought against second -degree murder suspects.

"Protecting children in Doña Ana County and throughout New Mexico has to be our number-one priority as law enforcement officers," Vigil said.

D'Antonio said stiffer penalties are needed when it comes to crimes against children.

House Bill 132, which has already gone before the House Safety and Civil Affairs Committee, would make it a felony for a person to view or attempt to view a child's "intimate areas in a state of undress." A child is defined as anyone under the age of 18.

House Bill 182 makes intentional child abuse a second-degree felony instead of the current thirddegree designation.

House Bill 101 would make it a first-degree felony for any person who hires or attempts to hire a child 13 years of age or younger to engage in any prohibited sexual act. Currently in New Mexico, sexual exploitation of a child is considered a second-degree felony.

Finally, House Bill 172 would remove any time limits related to second-degree murder. As the law is written now, the crime has to be charged and prosecuted within six years of the date the crime was committed.

Let's pack the Pan Am

Fill the arena in appreciation of Aggie basketball

Be there: 7 p.m. Saturday, March 7, Pan American Center. Have you been to a New Mexico State University men's basketball game this year? If not, here's some of what you've been missing.

- Guard Daniel Mullings making a defensive steal, leading a fast break, then tossing an alley oop to fellow senior DK Eldridge, who throws down a jam
- With time running out and the Aggies trailing, guard Ian Baker calmly pulling up at the three-point line to sink a winning jumpshot
- Senior Remi Barry driving into the lane, spinning then popping up a shot from 10 feet, the ball coming down through the rim, nothing but net
- Freshman post man Pascal Siakim catching the ball in the lane, making a pump fake, dipping his shoulder for a beautiful up-and-under layup
- Senior Tshilidzi "Chili" Nephawe on defense, steps across the lane as an opponent puts up a shot. The shot goes up, then is suddenly misdirected as Chili's big hand sends the ball flying

And that's just some of it. This is an exciting, entertaining team. Successful too. The Aggies are 19-10 on the season and have won 14 of their last 15 games.

The success is not new. Coach Marvin Menzies and his team have won the Western Athletic Conference the past three years and four of the last five. They've gone to the NCAA tournament the past three years and four of the last five. There are 356 NCAA Division I basketball teams, and only 21 others beside

NMSU can make that claim. The Aggies have clinched the WAC regular season title and a victory March 7 against Chicago State will send them to the WAC tournament on the good foot. Why don't we all join them? Pack the Pan Am is the organized effort Aggie Athletics is promoting for the game.

And why not? Let's put 12,000 people in the arena. Sell it out if we can. It's been a mystery to me why Aggie basketball attendance is not better than it is

In 2006-07, Aggie attendance averaged 9,467.

This year, it's less than 6,000.

THF

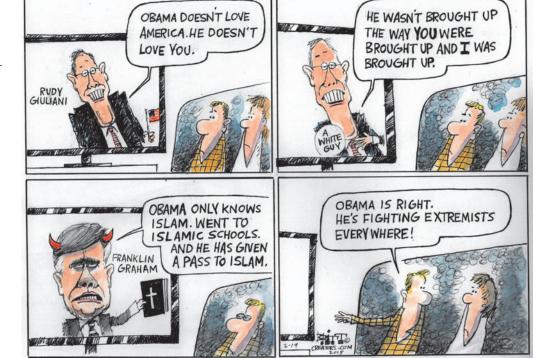

LAS

Twenty-five times the Aggies have drawn 13,000 fans or more to games. However, it hasn't happened since Dec. 1, 1994, more than 20 years ago.

It's time to toast the Aggies, especially those four seniors playing their last game at home. Let's recognize and honor one of the things that makes Las Cruces great: NMSU basketball. See you at the Pan Am 5:30 p.m. Saturday, March 7 – the doors are opening a half hour early. Deck yourself out in white Aggie attire. It's also a White-Out Night. Let's all go celebrate Aggie basketball.

Other ways to Aggie Up: Friday, Feb. 27, is the home opener for Aggie baseball. New coach Brian

- Green, a former Aggie baseballer himself, leads NMSU to a 6 p.m. game against Incarnate Word. Check out the team and the newly renovated Presley Askew Field in the Friday game and/or 1 p.m. games both Saturday and Sunday.
- Saturday, Feb. 28, the Aggie women's basketball team hosts Texas Pan American in the Pan Am Center for a 7 p.m. game. They've won 17 of their last 19 and are in the driver's seat in the women's WAC standings.

Murky waters

People who want to facilitate President Barack Obama's quest for change in America do not always wear suits and work in the D.O.J. Some wear the Army Corps of Engineers uniforms. Now the suits and uniforms are working on a plan to control all waterways in the U.S. and change the meaning of waterway.

Using the 42-year-old Clean Water Act, which allows regulation of "navigable waters," attorneys Reed Hopper and Todd Gaziano of the Pacific Legal Foundation say the EPA now wants to control not just wetlands and other non-navigable waters but any water or normally dry land with a "hydrological connection" to actual navigable waters. These include, arroyos in the desert as well as ditches and culverts hundreds of miles from actual navigable waterways.

Scott Pruitt, Oklahoma's Republican attorney general, and other attorneys general are resisting the EPA's and Army Corps of Engineers' contention that the Clean Water Act has unsuspected capaciousness. They are contesting this bureaucratic imperialism whereby the the EPA, by joining together all the nation's water and much of its land into EPAdesignated "eco-regions," could regulate and stifle much of the nation's economic activities.

The good news about all of this is that federalism remains a fact. Since January 2015, federalism's vitality will be an increasingly inconvenient truth for Obama. Twenty-seven states will have Republican attorneys general who can try to restrain the federal leviathan much as Lilliputians restrained Gulliver.

The tragedy of getting history wrong

Today, race is unjustifiably a major part of our national dialog. Dragging race into other things in our society is an industry in and of itself. The use of the word racism for political purposes by some leaders makes an indecent exposure of their souls.

Slavery ended in the United States 150 years ago and overt racism thankfully ended in the last 50 years. While covert racism may still exist in our country, it is the exception. Our nation's leaders and heroes are not bound by race or gender.

The Civil War sword on my wall was part of Americans abolishing slavery. I cannot speak for my great grandfather Adrian's part in this effort for justice. I know not his thoughts, only his actions fighting those who would enslave fellow humans.

Unfortunately, some Americans in Reconstruction were evil both to minorities and Native Americans. We cannot do justice for people injured a hundred years ago, other than tell their story truthfully. In no way is even one person held in slavery then or now acceptable.

In our country's founding and the next four score and nine years, our politicians did not have the fortitude to end slavery. Many wanted to but could not free all people within the United States. And women were not permitted to vote until seven score and four years passed from the founding of our nation.

A sign in Tombstone's Boot Hill Cemetery, "Hanged by mistake, the joke's on us." That man will never get justice; there's no way to unhang him. All we can do is change the way accused people are hanged. We can never give justice for injustices years ago since those people are dead.

But we can tell the truth. Within our country the notion is most Africans taken into slavery ended up in North America. Not so. According to numerous historical studies, the number of enslaved people sent to North America as part of the transatlantic slave trade was about 388,000 of a total arrived population of human trafficking. 10 million.

That is less than 4 percent of the total. Ninety percent of the unfortunates went to South America as slaves. Their use in the sugar and coffee industries was so dangerous those slaves by themselves could not maintain their population.

The South American slave holders had to bring more slaves every year to replace those who died. It is horrific that the life expectancy of those slaves was three to seven years from when they arrived.

In North America, the slaves were more fortunate, not that being a slave was ever fortunate. Most survived and increased their population. These are historical facts not being discussed.

In England, slavery was abolished 70 years before the United States. Even after the U.S. was free, the slave trade still operated in South America.

Sadly, our country has not taken a leadership role in opposing slavery worldwide. Our heritage needs to seek justice for all people, including those in other countries. The dictatorships today still trade in slavery and

As much as we talk race and slavery in our national dialog, you would think our national mission would be to free all of those humans on our planet who are being held in slavery. Alas, racism is just used as a political lever for more power.

Most of what is presented as racism today is opportunism. Many leaders allow minorities to suffer for their own political gain. Our country has race-baiters and hucksters living off the bones of slavery. It is legal and constitutional for them to distort the past dramatically. Our shining moment came when Martin Luther King Jr. and a generation of majority and minority people ended the bulk of racism in our own country. Dr. King knew racism would end when the majority embraced a racismfree society. People of African heritage could not by force overpower the majority.

The majority changed when in their hearts they embraced Dr. King's notion that all people should be equal and free.

We cannot heal the injustices, but we can embrace truth.

Just friends

I can't remember his number. I don't call him often enough.

His birthday always escapes me 'cause I don't keep up with that stuff.

And I'm lucky if I see him even once or twice a year

But I'm really not complainin' 'cause we're still close, we're just not near.

I recognize his daughter's voice. I remember when she was born.

Heck, I was there when he got married! I held the ring his wife has worn

For all these years, his darlin'. Ya know, she hasn't changed a bit. And him and me? We're markin' time by the bad habits that we quit.

Together we're ambidextrous Although we're really not a pair We've got each other covered and, between us, a full head of hair.

We're part of each other's gristle, as inveterate as bone.

It's nice how life can fix it so you don't have to go it alone.

As I sit here blowin' smoke rings from the pipedreams that we've had, I'm wonderin' if I've told him how many times it's made me glad

Just to know he's out there somewhere, like a dollar in my shoe, And how much it would please me if he felt the same way, too.

When I add up all my assets, he's one thing I can't appraise.

Sorg supporter

I would like to thank Mayor Ken Miyagashima for his thoughtful, wellconsidered State of the City Address.

It was refreshing to hear him speak about working together to create a community that will develop in such a way as to be all-inclusive as we move to the future.

Thanks also to the mayor for speaking so eloquently about the events surrounding the minimum wage issue and his request that, in the future, the council "more faithfully follow the procedure outlined in the City Charter." What does amaze me is that it wasn't followed in the first place.

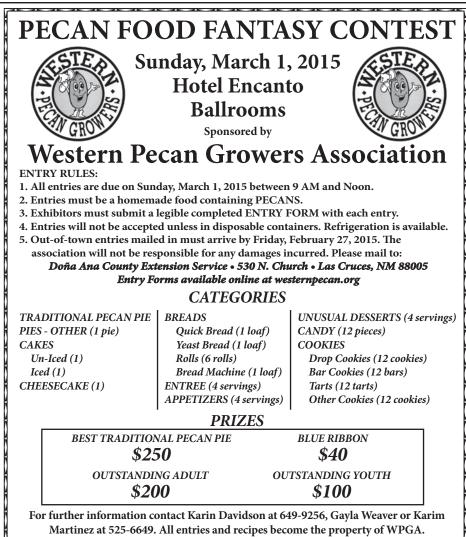

During the time that the City Council and public worked through this issue, I noticed the increasingly divisive atmosphere and how it split the City Council. I believe that the recall initiative has occurred primarily as a result of the business/public divide over this issue. It has become clear to me local business money is being poured into the recall effort to hire people and get the petitions signed (whether truthfully or not). It has but one objective – to oust those on the City Council who are less inclined to follow lock-step with self-serving objectives.

I find the attacks, lies and distortions perpetrated on my councillor, Gill Sorg to be an egregious abuse of the public trust by seven business owners, some who even live outside the city. I, too, was approached by petitioners with misleading and false statements. Fortunately, I knew not to sign.

Gill Sorg is truly an active and connected representative of our district on the City Council. He is, above all, honest and honorable, hard-working and a truth-teller. How incredibly rare in today's atmosphere, and how desperately needed. I will work assiduously to keep him where he belongs – as my city councillor. We will not be intimidated. Roberta K. Gran

New Mexico needs jobs, highway repairs, but not more debt

By John Arthur Smith For the Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico needs more jobs, and we need them now. That is what we hear from folks in the cafes and diners in Deming and across our state

It was confirmed in a recent study by the University of New Mexico's Bureau of Business and Economic Research: We are ranked one of the worst in the nation when it comes to economic and job growth – 48th of 50 states. That is a tough situation for families.

So what can we do to jump-start jobs and get the economy growing again? One simple way is to address New Mexico's huge, unmet highway and road needs.

There is a gap of about $250 million per year between available money for road projects and identified need for new roads and maintenance.

New Mexico is a rural state. Long stretches of desert and mountains separate our cities and towns. Roads and highways are the lifeline, keeping our economy going by connecting workers to jobs SMITH and businesses to customers. Road construction projects create not only better infrastructure, but good jobs. Gov. Susana Martinez proposes a $300 million package of road and highway projects to begin work in July, and Senate Democrats support road jobs. This initiative could create up to 4.000 jobs around the state right away. The workforce does not have to be trained – those who do it are ready to work.

Where we disagree is how to pay for it. It is an important disagreement with consequences for the future.

Federal funding available for road projects has been falling for more than a decade, presenting us with real challenges. Congress holds the purse strings, so we don't know what next year may bring.

The governor wants to borrow the money for the roads plan. That is wrong.

The responsible way is to increase the gas tax today, and to export some of the cost to long-haul, out-of-state trucks that use our roads – and put a lot of wear and tear on them. Think of it as a user fee. Borrowing the money to pay for road projects we need now leaves a future generation of New Mexicans to pay off the debt – for our children and grandchildren. That is what the governor's proposal would do - finance current highway projects by issuing new debt that would be paid off over many years using borrowed money from the state's severance tax on oil and gas production. By contrast, one Democratic proposal would increase the state's gas tax rate from 17 cents per gallon to 22 cents by 2019.

My bill would increase the gas tax by 10 cents, and split the revenues evenly between state and local road repair projects. That is an additional $140 million annually for road jobs.

We can afford to do this: New Mexico has the lowest gas tax rate of all states in the region. And with gas prices down 40 percent since last June, drivers won't feel the pinch as much if we pass it now.

We can get more funds for road projects by increasing the weight-distance fees on out-of-state trucking firms that speed along our interstates and highways on their way to California and other places. The fee is based on vehicle weight and miles traveled on New Mexico roads.

Those heavy big-rigs cause the most road damage, and our taxpayers foot the bill. A weight-distance fee increase could bring in millions more. Borrow-and-spend has

In short, there is no easy answer, and I'm feel pain before this is over.

live in uncertainty waitcome. And make no mistake, it will come.

gotten us into big trouble in the past. Today we are overextended and are paying $165 million every year just for road money that was borrowed by previous administrations. The governor's road repair plan isn't free. We should be more careful with taxpayers' money.

Another good Republican, President Ronald Reagan, sometimes had to make decisions that were unpopular, but were responsible.

In 1982 he called for raising the gas tax - not borrowing – to pay for fixing the nation's roads. "The bridges and highways we fail to repair today will have to be rebuilt tomorrow at many times the cost," he said.

The potential benefits of investment in our roads and highways are clear. We need the jobs. But let's do it responsibly.

a real threat

Since the end of World War II, America has changed to such a degree that our founders would not recognize the nation they founded.

Social change is ongoing, and during the last 70 years has not only been dramatic, but also negative in many ways. We were once a nation that solved its problems, today we manage them down the road until they become someone else's.

Starting with Korea, and continuing to this day, the list is long of unresolved quagmires we have unsuccessfully tried to manage rather than win

After 9/11, I supported our involvements until they turned into neverending nation-building. Afghanistan and Iraq are both tortured examples of this, and have led directly to the Islamic terrorism problem we face today. Terrorism cannot be managed, it must be destroyed, and if we fail to do so, it will destroy us.

Ride right, ride bright

The Optimist Club of Las Cruces, Border Servant Corps and Southern New Mexico Bicyclist Educators are working together on the eighth biannual Ride Right Ride Bright event.

They are raising money for bike lights and looking for volunteers to install lights on bicycles at the Community of Hope from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Feb. 28.

low-income Manv individuals in the community use a bicycle as their only or primary means of transportation and riding at night is often unavoidable. Some of these Las Cruces residents lack the means to properly equip their bicycles for riding after dark.

Ricardo Duarte was struck and killed by a motor vehicle on Vallev Drive in October 2010. Duarte was riding without lights or reflective equipment - both of which would have made him more visible to motorists. Ride Right Ride Bright hopes to prevent similar tragedies by improving bicyclist visibility and helping to educate bicyclists to ride more safely.

To help, drop off cash or a check payable to the "Optimist Club of Las Cruces" with "Ride Right Ride Bright" in the memo section at Outdoor Adventures, 1424 Missouri Ave., or mail to the Optimist Club at P.O. Box 16406, Las Cruces, NM 88004.

Donations will qualify as charitable contributions and all money raised will be used for Ride Right Ride Bright events.

Volunteers can also help install lights. It requires just a passing knowledge of how to use a screwdriver operation and minimal technical skill.

NMSU prepares to 'Pack the Pan Am' March 7 Aggie men's home basketball game to feature Senior Night

By Lewis Harry For the Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's men's basketball team has already clinched a Western Athletic Conference regular season title and hopes to soon snare a fourth-straight WAC postseason tournament.

The school hopes to send the team into the tourney on a high note and also give the team's four seniors an evening to remember during their last contest in the Pan American Center.

The March 7 showdown with Chicago State is not only Senior Night but also the "Pack the Pan Am" game.

NMSU hopes to have a full house of 12,500 fans. Some tickets are as cheap as $5.

"The campus has gone above and beyond and it's going to be fun," NMSU Athletics Director Mario Moccia said. "Hopefully the team takes care of business and we have a nice celebration of season."

The Aggies defeated CSU 69-61 earlier this season in Chicago, giving NMSU its only overtime win.

The NMSU ticket office is located on the north side of the Pan American Center and can be reached at 646-1420.

There's work to be done before Senior Night, though. A week before the Chicago State game, the Aggies travel to Texas-Pan American Saturday, Feb. 28 for their last road outing. NMSU wants to gain momentum to carry into the WAC tournament, which starts Thursday, March 12 in Las Vegas, Nev.

Despite a roller coaster start to the season plagued with injuries to key players, the Aggies have managed to find their game and progress through conference play with few speed bumps.

Coach Marvin Menzies is concentrated on keeping his team's goals in perspective with the postseason rapidly approaching.

"It sounds so cliché and I say it all the time, but it is what it is," Menzies said. "You can't get ahead of yourself, you can't start worrying about who's MVP, first team and second team.

"All those accolades are a result of the team's success, so that's where we will keep our focus and emphasis," he said.

The Aggies are currently on a ninegame winning streak, which includes a 53-48 victory against Texas-Pan American.

"UTPA played us really well," Menzies said of the first encounter between the teams. "They are a very well coached team with some talented guys that are going to be battling for seeding for themselves, so they will have some purpose.

The Broncs are led in scoring by sophomore forward Janari Josaar, who is averaging 17.9 points per game.

UTPA head coach Dan Hipsher, though, knows his squad has a tough opponent on its hands.

"They are very, very talented and very big," Hipsher said of the Aggies.

"Its unbelievable, you know (Tshilidzi Nephawe) is a great player and the freshman (Pascal Siakam) is really, really good.

"They play a zone, they are really long and they are hard to get shots off against."

Although the Broncs fell to the Aggies earlier in the season, UTPA holds a 7-3 record at home as opposed to NMSU, which has struggled on the road with a 5-8 mark.

With the WAC regular season title in hand, the Aggies are looking to make the final push and finish the season as strong as possible.

"It's good because it's a benchmark that you hit and you checked it off already. You know, once you do that your immediate focus goes to the next goal," Menzies said.

"Getting better is next, winning the tournament is next and then dealing with the post season when that comes. We have a lot of things to make sure that we are on top of our game. Once you get on top, you do what you need to do to stay on top."

With four seniors preparing for their exit journey as Aggies, NMSU will return home before the WAC tournament for senior night to face Chicago State.

Cruces area golf clubs continue to improve

Here in Las Cruces we are truly blessed to have four. 18-hole championship golf courses available for year-round play. Plus, it's an easy drive of less than an hour in any direction to find quality golf courses for additional variety.

All the golf clubs and facilities have changes planned and already in place as they try to improve things from the golf course itself to the clubhouse services.

Golfers who play our four local facilities can expect changes.

First, let's look at what was formerly known as Sonoma Ranch Golf Club. The biggest news in recent months was the purchase of the entire facility by Las Cruces Country Club, which was finalized on Nov. 15, 2014. It's new name is Las Cruces Golf Club at Sonoma Ranch.

Even though there is a current private membership, as well as membership opportunities available, the golf course is still readily available to the general public. It appears that individual membership is very affordable, and there are other memberships to fit other special categories.

The head PGA professional continues to be Justin Dahrling, who is also general manager of the club on an interim basis. There will continue to be regular tournaments with a variety of formats scheduled.

In terms of the course itself, golfers who have not played Sonoma Ranch in the past few months will notice some changes.

There has been considerable vegetation clearing and removal in areas adjacent to the primary rough on numerous holes. In addition there has been clearing of shrubs and bushes, particularly along the bank of the big arrovo bordering holes number 14 and 15.

I find that such improvements promote a more player-friendly experience while enhancing the pace of play. During this past season, some of the greens fell victim to a tiny weed that tends to show up as dark green spots about the size of an old 45 r.p.m. record. I'm told this weed infestation will be attacked sometime before the real hot weather sets in.

Meanwhile golfers can expect the Sonoma putting greens to roll faster, smoother and the best ever, according to a spokesman on the LCCC board. Further, golfers who are walking the course will have a few pleasant paths as shortcuts between certain holes.

Over on the other side of town, there have been major changes at Picacho Hills Country Club.

Garry Cramer was hired late last fall as general manager. He brings considerable experience in numerous capacities in food and beverage and private club management. Picacho Hills CC also has a new head chef, and Vehicle owners can contest the seizure in an administrative hearing, Weyler said, and may appeal its decision in District Court. In many cases, the vehicles are returned because the vehicle's owner innocently loaned the car to the driver without knowledge of the driver's past DWI record, he said.

"We return a heck of a lot more vehicles than we sell through forfeiture," Weyler said.

Robert Cabello, who handles the vehicle seizure proceedings for the City Attorney's Office, said if the seized vehicles aren't returned to the owners, then they are sold at auction. Since the program began in 2005, the city has made nearly $1.2 million from the forfeitures, he said.

Because of falling oil prices, the additional "new money" estimate is now at about $80 million, a significant drop from earlier estimates that exceeded $100 million.

Local school and district control over the money versus disbursement by the Public Education Department became a contested issue during the House debate. Democrats sought to shift more funding to school districts by nearly $14 million in an amendment that failed on a 37-30 party-line vote.

"Democrats are playing politics with our education system – plain and simple," House Majority Leader Nate Gentry said in a released statement.

The New Mexican reported that Democratic House Leader Rep. Brian Egolf of Santa Fe argued for increasing funding the Legislative for Lottery Scholarship to 95 percent of tuition, instead of the 85 percent recommended in the budget, undoing proposed cuts to public television and giving more money to colleges.

The changes would have relied on savings from unfilled positions departments and wouldn't have affected the overall size of the budget, according to the New Mexican.

Adopting a budget is the main objective for lawmakers before the session ends March 21.

Observers worry that so-called "wedge issues" will stall progress with a Republican majority House and a Democratmajority Senate.

Mandatory retention of third-graders who don't pass standardized reading tests and repealing the law that grants driver's licenses undocumented to immigrants are just two issues in which the two parties are unlikely to find compromise.

While party divisions remain on issues such as Right to Work legislation and a minimum wage increase, there are some bipartisan efforts being made.

Rep. Jeff Steinborn, D-Las Cruces, announced the introduction of legislation with bipartisan support to establish a statewide recreation trail from Colorado to Texas called the Rio Grande Trail. Legislators, tourism officials and small business owners said the new trail would be a boost for jobs along the route, as well as provide a new recreation opportunity for New Mexico residents. HB 563 would

the create STEINBORN Grande

Commission to study and recommend the best paths for a new Rio Trail. Grande The commission, made up of stakeholders along the Rio Grande, including cities, counties, tribes, federal agencies, conservancy districts and private citizens, would help define the best trail routes and reach the agreements to designate a path through the different jurisdictions along the river. The trail would only cross land with the agreement of its owners, according to the bill's sponsors.

Currently there are segments of existing trail along the Rio Grande, including the Bosque in Albuquerque, Taos, Elephant Butte, in and around Las Cruces.

Under current law, the Energy, Minerals, and Resources Natural Department (EMNRD) has the authority to establish state trails. HB Montoya said the city has seen a DWI Resource Center said he was a steady decline in DWI arrests since the ordinance was enacted, prompting Mavor Pro Tem Greg Smith to say it appears to have made streets safer.

Councillor Olga Pedroza said she supports the goal of getting drunk drivers off the road, but wasn't comfortable with classifying the vehicle as a public nuisance.

"It's the person driving under the influence of alcohol, not the vehicle," she said.

said that's why the Cabello ordinance is limited to repeat DWI offenders, because they are then willingly endangering others.

Councillor Gill Sorg criticized news media for raising concerns about the city vehicle forfeiture program without knowing more about its actual limited scope. Sorg said the city needs to educate the public better about the program, which should also add to the ordinance's DWI preventative goals.

"The only concern then was deterrence," Ferrary said. "We didn't care about how much money it made."

Joanne Ferrary, also of the Mesilla Valley DWI Resource Center, said vehicle seizure for repeat DWI offenders is a necessary tool to make interlocks effective in reducing DWI fatalities and injuries.

While there are legitimate concerns about municipalities overreach in property forfeitures, City Councillor Nathan Small said the Las Cruces program applies only to vehicles, not other property, and to people with previous DWIs, so it has a very limited focus.

NMSU Domenici Institute seeks student panelists

New Mexico State University's Domenici Institute for Public Policy now accepting is nominations from faculty and administrators of universities across the state for student panelists to participate in the 2015 Domenici Public Policy Conference. The conference takes place Sept. 16 and 17 and nominations are due by April 30.

"These 20 students from all over New Mexico will have the responsibility of engaging in a meaningful dialogue with some of the top policy minds of our time," said Garrey Carruthers, NMSU president and director of the Domenici Institute. "The students routinely impress me with the way they rise to the occasion."

The Domenici Student

Panelist Program is sponsored for the fourth year by U.S. Bank, providing each student panelist with a $250 U.S. Bank Visa gift card, a two-night hotel stay in Las Cruces and an orientation dinner.

"The student panelist program is such an important part of this conference," said Craig Buchanan, market president for U.S. Bank in Las Cruces. "We're pleased to support it again and really look forward to seeing everything these top students from around New Mexico contribute to the conversation."

NMSU has hosted the Domenici Public Policy Conference each year since 2008. Named for retired U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici, the yearly conference attracts more than 900 attendees and brings together some of the country's top experts to thoughtfully examine and highlight important public policy matters.

Speakers for the 2015 conference have not yet been announced, but past student panelists have questioned some of the nation's top newsmakers, including former U.S. cabinet secretaries Leon Panetta, Ken Salazar, James Baker and Janet Napolitano.

Panelists will also have an opportunity to meet privately, as a group, with Domenici during the conference.

To be considered, students must be nominated by faculty or administrators from their respective universities. Again this year, students are encouraged to submit a brief letter of interest outlining why they'd like to participate as a panelist. Nominees who provide this additional insight into their conference goals will be given first consideration.

All nomination materials and letters of intent must be received by April 30, and student nominees will be notified of their selection status via email on or before June 12.

For more information about the program, including the online nomination form, visit domenici.nmsu.edu and click on the Domenici Conference page. Questions regarding the program should be directed to Sara Patricolo, at 646-2066 or spatrico@ nmsu.edu.

Students plan walkout on new mandated tests

Inspired by student protests in Santa Fe high schools Monday, Feb. 23, students at Las Cruces high schools are planning to walk out of class Monday, March 2, when they are scheduled to be given tests.

While the amount of testing has been the focus of previous debate, the new tests – Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC) – are the target of the sudent protests.

The PARCC tests are supposed to determine if students are learning the new, rigorous Common Core standards by the U.S. Department of Education.

New Mexico participated in a consortium of 12 states that developed the computerized tests.

A social media campaign is urging high-schoolers in the Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) to attend classes Monday, but then walk out prior to the scheduled administering of the PARCC tests.

According to a statement on the Facebook page calling for the walkout, walkout organizers contend it's not just about objecting to a new test.

"Most people don't realize this, but under current policies implemented by the governor and secretary of education, the school systems in New Mexico are centered on testing," it states. "Let's be clear. We're not against testing. We're against excess standardization and ridiculous expectations. We're against what testing has done to our schools. We want an education that will adequately prepare us for the future."

Many educators and students who have seen samples of the PARCC predict that most will fail the tests.

New Mexico plans to replace its Standards Based Assessments exams with the new PARCC tests.

An estimated 250 students walked out of class in the Santa Fe protests.

LCPS does have a policy allowing parents to choose to have their children opt out of testing. LCPS officials warn students that walking out of class could affect their ability to graduate due to attendance requirements.

Warming vehicles could result in car theft

Las Cruces Police are urging motorists to refrain from leaving vehicles unattended when warming them up on chilly mornings.

In the past 30 days, the Las Cruces Police Department (LCPD) has taken reports of five vehicles that were stolen while their owners left them unattended to warm up. Four of the five stolen vehicles were in the neighborhoods south of Lohman Avenue and north of University Avenue, and between El Paseo Road and Triviz Drive.

Drivers apparently started their vehicles to warm up and then left them unattended. Thieves simply got in and drove away, police said.

Most vehicles need very little time to warm up, and doing so is more likely for convenience of the driver than anything else, according to a LCPD press release about the recent thefts.

If drivers insist on leaving a vehicle unattended while it warms up, police suggest using a spare key to lock all doors.

Vehicles should never be left running while in an enclosed space such as a garage, police caution.

County manager donation restriction held

Doña Ana County commissioners Tuesday, Feb. 24, indefinitely tabled a resolution that would have restricted the county manager from making donations to county candidates for elected office.

The concern was prompted by County Manager Julia Brown's $460.20 donation to County Commissioner Ben Rawson's campaign in October 2014.

Although commission Chairman Billy Garrett had pushed for a restriction, he said Tuesday that after weighing it against personal freedoms for everyone to support what they desire, he was inclined to put the matter on hold in order to allow for full debate on the topic.

Rawson said the debate illustrated that current law calling for reporting of such donations is working.

"We have laws that require reporting where money is coming from, where it's being spent," he said. "This is an example of that process working well. Everyone got to be aware of what was going on."

Commissioner Wayne Hancock questioned the contribution because the county manager is the only employee that the board hires and fires. However, Hancock said he had decided to vote against the restriction following the open discussion about the issue.

"I know everyone has learned from this," Hancock said. "I know I have."

Commissioner Leticia Duarte Benavidez repeated her previously held position that Brown's donation wasn't improper.

"As I've said before, this is a free country." Benavidez said.

DACC to host Run with Your Doc

The East Mesa Campus of Doña Ana Community College (DACC) will host "Run with your Doc," a benefit for St. Luke's Healthcare Clinic Saturday, Feb. 28.

The race will begin 8:30 a.m. at the student resources commons area of the DASR building on the East Mesa campus at 2800 N. Sonoma Ranch Blvd. DACC, as part of the community, supports charities that help underserved populations such as St. Luke's. In addition, the large number of health care agencies and the members of the medical community that will participate in the run provides the opportunity for the college to work with future community partners for the DACC allied health programs.

Slated to participate in the run are all types of doctors including, medical doctors, dentists, veterinarians, New Mexico State University and DACC PhDs and faculty. But you don't have to be a doctor to run, there are races and walks for everyone including a 5K, 10K and one-mile walk/run. Awards will be given in all categories. The team with the most members and their doc will be awarded a trophy.

St. Luke's serves the needs of the homeless, near homeless and indigent in Las Cruces. St. Luke's was responsive to changes to the Affordable Care Act that will help the clinic remain sustainable in the future. However, the transition is costly and the clinic has experienced severe funding cutbacks. Financial support from this fundraiser and other community donations and grants are a great help through this transition period. St. Luke's Clinic at 999 W. Amador Ave. is celebrating 25 years of service of primary care to the homeless and indigent community. This service is invaluable to Las Cruces.

To register for the event, visit www. raceadventuresunlimited.com. To find out about the run, like the Run with your Doc Facebook page at www. facebook.com/RunWithYourDoc.

For more information about St. Luke's clinic, contact Pamela Angell at 202-0795.

Race day packet pickup is from 7 to 7:45 a.m. at the Student Resources Building. The 5K and 10K will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Right to Work compromise passes House floor

The New Mexico House of Representatives passed legislation Wednesday, Feb. 25, to raise the minimum wage to $8 per hour and give workers the right to choose whether they financially contribute to a union.

The legislation – which passed by a bipartisan vote of 37-30 and will now head to the Senate – was the result of debate and a compromise to forge a Right to Work law while also raising the state's minimum wage.

"A vast majority of New Mexicans agree that our workers should never have to financially contribute to a union as a condition of employment," said Rep. Dennis Roch, R-Logan, the bill's sponsor. "Tonight, we stood with New Mexico workers. It is my hope that the Senate will, too."

Bulletin Briday, FEBRUARY 27, 2015 An Iliad' returns to the Black Box Theatre

Review by Marissa Bond Las Cruces Bulletin

Sandra Cisneros, in reviewing a book written by Las Cruces author Denise Chavez, said, "I like this book so much it sounds like I'm lying." That is how I feel about "An Iliad," performing this Saturday and Sunday at the Black Box Theatre – I like this play so much that it sounds like I'm lying.

I first saw "An Iliad," written by Lisa Peterson and Denis O'Hare, during its premiere last year at the Black Box, and at the end of it I felt as though I was struck by Stendhal syndrome. More than appreciation of the fine collaboration of two talented artists in the single, intermissionless breath of the performance, the play seemed to touch on that elusive sense of truth buried in art.

A poet and a musician keep the stage - any stage. The set is created by words and music, transporting the audience to another, ancient place. Though the play is about Homer's "Iliad" - a text most often devoured in high school and then relegated to little more than a selfsatisfying reference – it is not dated. Instead, the poet sweeps the magnitude of the Trojan War into the present. The poet compares the numbers of Greek warriors to boys of Missouri or Kansas. He details the long, blood-slick trail of viscera leading from ancient wars to present conflicts that we believe refusing the title of war will make less so, a buzzing mantra of a list, building vibrations in the bones of the listeners to this thing of violence that erupts inside us - confused and confusing bipedal animals driven to connect with our own kind and then destroy that connection.

The Poet, played by Algernon D'Ammassa, a seemingly homeless man with a battered suitcase, calls forth the muses in ancient Greek and begins his tale. Though he begs, Gethsemane-like, for relief from the obligation of the tale, it is his duty. He tells the story of the Iliad without favor or blame – except, perhaps, on the capriciousness of the gods.

Through the Poet's abilities to become characters such as Agamemnon, Hector, Achilles, Helen and Andromache, the audience begins to understand the power of oral history, and the burden and the power of the ancient poets.

Randy Granger is the Musician. His long and storied career has included performing jazz, rock, opera and Native American flute. In "An Iliad," Granger uses flutes, found instrument percussion (including a xylophone of sorts made from bottles filled with different water levels) and a percussion instrument called a hang to provide background to the Poet's words. He switches between instruments easily, effortlessly blending music and mood to the Poet's story.

D'Ammassa has taken this show on the road to El Paso, Albuquerque, Deming and North Carolina. After this long period of time with the play, I look forward to seeing how it has matured.

"An Iliad" will leave you raw, present and gone, all of these things – perhaps, even as I was, mouth slack, stunned and unmoving in the theater dark, keening some internal, thunderous, minorchord yawp for what creatures we are – the beauty and brutality of our past and present and the fine, deliberate art that can make us know and feel so much more about ourselves as a people than only living will sometimes illuminate.

"An Iliad" will be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 28, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, March 1, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St. Tickets are $12 general admission and $10 students and seniors. For more information and to make reservations, call 523-1223.

'Other Desert Cities' opens in this desert city

Review by Marissa Bond Las Cruces Bulletin

In the program for American Southwest Theatre Company's "Other Desert Cities," director Josh Chenard describes the play as family drama, and it is – but it is also a deeply politically American play.

Isolated in their Palm Springs home, old-guard Republicans Lyman and Polly Wyeth are happy to have their children, Brooke and Trip, home for Christmas, 2004. Brooke is a writer who has just finished a book after a difficult six years that included a divorce and a breakdown but no novel.

Trip is the energetic producer of a hit fake-reality television show, "Jury of Your Peers." Polly's liberal sister, Silda, freshly out of rehab, has just moved in with the Wyeths, and moves in a convivial haze of medication.

The strings of family togetherness are strained by politics, but not in a way uncommon to families. However, when Brooke reveals her new book is not a novel, but a memoir that includes the verboten topic of her late brother Henry, the strength of the ties are challenged to the point that they may come unmoored.

This is a family of privilege, and author Jon Robin Baitz does not let us forget it, though he does seem to insist upon forgiveness.

"I don't care about money!" Brooke insists.

"That's because you're rich," Trip responds.

And that is the truth, behind it all there is a family who has money – lots of it – and their decisions are not constrained by economic want.

Rather than money, depression centers much of the conflict about whether or not to publish the book. Brooke has had a breakdown, and neither she nor her family keep that far from conversation.

Alcoholic aunt Silda, though funny and gregarious, looms as a Ghost-of-Christmas-Future specter of sibling responsibility for Trip. However, Silda, currently resolutely dry though aching for alcohol, was so enjoyably performed by Claudia Billings it was difficult to relate to how she could be a burden.

Rachel Edwards, as Brooke, seems young for the role, but her youth conveys a sense of arrested development reflective of her emotional struggles. Her unreflexive self-absorption and fits of pique aptly convey the character's obliviousness to her own entitlement and how much she is asking of her family.

Younger brother Trip, played aptly by Nicholas Holguin, was a surprising voice of reason and moderation between the family members. He played his role well, superficially unflappable, very much his mother's son in composition and his father's in gregariousness. When he finally responds to the pressures of his mother and sister, it is quick, raw, and entirely believable.

Jeff Peckham plays a warm Lyman – a former actor and G.O.P. chairman, he conveys Hollywood charisma and so deep a love for his children it seems impossible Brooke might miss it.

Deborah Storm is Polly, trained by Nancy Reagan to exercise constant restraint and poise. She exudes it all, but sharpened with sardonic insight and a constant clicking intelligence – ice in a glass smoothed by scotch, warm in the light but burning all the way to your center.

The set of "Other Desert Cities," designed by Jim Billings, is incredible. It is the interior of a classy, modern California home. It is beautiful, but cold in its Spartan affluence, filled with spare and hard lines, just like the family it surrounds.

The play does employ on-stage smoking. The theater is large enough that I could barely smell it – and I was trying – but if you are extremely sensitive then you might want to sit farther back or in the balcony. As an eternally struggling former smoker, I merely missed a few lines of dialogue as I had to convince myself that it was socially unseemly to launch myself onstage and steal the cigarette.

In the play, a great many heavy themes are touched, grasped, white-knuckled – and then let go unresolved, as if the effort of holding them was too great in the face of all they meant.

The audience was engaged. They would inhale, laugh and murmur in response to the action onstage, and if missed a line – perhaps distracted by a focused resistance against snatching a cigarette from an actor – I would be brought back to the moment by its impact on those around me.

The penultimate scene's surprise elicited gasps from the audience, and I too bought into it – it brought me back from my waning interest in the "who will make a decision?" into the sharp snap of unexpected plot. However, it was a bit of a cop-out, removing the need for very hard decisions and the moral ambiguity under which most of real life is lived.

But this is theater - reflecting life through entertainment, not living it, and though it was a bit of a cop-out, it was the ending I wanted, the catharsis I as an audience member craved - the belief that, despite our politics, our interests and differences, family does care and is loyal to one another and, by extension, America, as our larger sense of national family, also cares. Unfortunately, in the sucking wake of those feelings is absented justice, and the sense that because our nuclear family has resolved itself, all is fine elsewhere forgetting loss of those unseen, forgetting the punishments shirked were taken by those equally culpable, believing that our domestic dramas adrift in emotional deserts are the summation of the whole world.

And that, perhaps, is the unstated truth of the play, or at least the one as I chose to see it.

"Other Desert Cities" runs through Sunday, March 8. Performance times are 7:30 p.m. Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Tickets are $10 to $17 and are available at the ASNMSU Center for the Arts box office from noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, or by calling 646-4515 or 646-1420.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT LAS CRUCES BULLETIN FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 2015 | B7 'Hello' to the interesting 'Goodbye to All That'

Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Angus Maclachlan is the director of the often disarming little sex comedy "Goodbye to All That," based on the trials and tribulations of a man named Otto, who doesn't pay much attention to what is going on around him at any given time.

He is a creature of now – so much so that a dune buggy accident becomes a great introduction to just how far away he might be.

A bit later, his frustrated wife, with the quite humorous help of a rather one sided therapist, tag team Otto to let him know that she has had enough and is going to divorce him.

Devastated and in fear of losing touch with his very smart young daughter, Edie, Otto tries to make the usual 'too little, too late' amends to no avail. Annie wants out and that is that.

To make things worse, Otto discovers that Annie has been having an affair, which pushes him, far too soon, back into the world of dating. He is a handsome but ordinary guy and the charming and attractive women he dates aren't really wanting what he wants: a new long-term and loving relationship.

They all seem interested in few night stands without much, if any, emotional commitment. One of these dates finds Otto and the attractive Mildred (the names of the characters in this film often provoke mild smiles) sitting in easy chairs across from one another, naked, while Mildred chats endlessly as a sort of odd foreplay for herself. She notes admiration for his calloused hands (he doesn't have such, since he is a Website designer) which is just one of the quirky and eccentric touches added by Maclachlan, whose résumé includes one of my all time favorites, 2005's

"Junebug."

Some of the film might seem sexist and male fantasy driven, with the parade of lovely and odd women Otto encounters, however his attitude helps balance things out. He's not having fantasies about anv of these women, who range from the great Heather Graham, as a slightly older paramour, to another woman who wants to delve into her Bible after an extremely randy bout with Otto and a unique sex toy.

"I wanna read my Bible," notes Debby (Anna Camp). The reaction is most interesting.

Otto the character and director

Maclachlan seem to share the same feelings about women, one of awe filled respect and affection, along with the scratching "Huh?" thrown in for good measure. The film doesn't parade sexuality, occasional head

but rather embraces it in unique and clever ways, making "Goodbye" an enjovable, quirky and beautifully shot (autumn in North Carolina, who knew?) film.

And I suspect viewers will enjoy seeing where this journey that Otto is on ends up.

Cowboy Days rides again at Farm & Ranch museum

For 15 years, Cowboy Days has brought plenty of Western fun to Las Cruces.

As the festival at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum enters its 16th year, more activities are being added to help keep the Old West and New Mexico's ranching traditions alive. This year's event is from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, March 7-8. Admission is $5 for everyone age 5 and older. There are no discounts or passes.

A Cowboy Dinner & Dance is part of the festivities this year on March 7, with a barbecue beef dinner from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. and a dance from 7:30 p.m. to midnight. Las Cruces band The Desperados will provide the live music, and there will be a cash bar. Tickets for this fundraising event are $30 per person and are on sale at the museum.

Old West Thunder will do gunfight re-enactments and Enchantment Historical Productions will do a 19th-century fashion show that progresses to modern times, as well as perform as the Skunk Valley Singers and a living history skit called "Daniel F. Beatty: Purveyor of Pump Organs, Clocks and Sewing Machines."

Another living history activity this year is the annual time travel program in the museum's Horse & Cattle Barn. "Pickles, Pies & Cowpunchers" takes visitors back to a spring fair in Magdalena, N.M., in 1886. Cowboy Days attendees are invited to interact with the characters as the 1886 folks celebrate the completion of the railroad. Miners and cowpunchers are sampling the wares as townspeople set up various booths and offer pickle tasting and a pie auction. The sheriff and his deputies are keeping an eye on everyone. The time travel experience is from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

The new activities this year include mechanical bull rides (for $5 each), and cow bingo, which will benefit its sponsor, Jardin de los Niños, a local shelter for homeless and near-homeless children and families.

The Borderland Pistoleros Cowboy Mounted Shooting Club returns for the second year to demonstrate this fast-growing sport. Riders on horseback go through a course in the museum's Roping Arena firing blanks to pop balloon targets. The museum also will offer its Parade of Breeds program where six different breeds of beef cattle will be herded into the Round Pen where the origins and characteristics of each breed will be discussed.

Cowboy Days also features chuck wagon cooking, stagecoach rides, arts and crafts vendors, food vendors, demonstrations and many children's activities, including the Sheriff's School, Ponv rides for kids are $5 each, in addition to regular admission. Pat Howard's working dogs will show their herding ability on Sunday only, and there will be a plant sale both days at the museum's greenhouse.

Music is always part of Cowboy Days and this year's roster of musicians and singers include James Michael, Gary Colson, Kenny Arroyo, Washtub Jerry, Voz Vaqueros, Eddy Harrison and Jim Jones. Also, members of the Western Writers of America will sign copies of their books, tell stories and do readings. The featured authors are Ollie Reed, Stephen Zimmer and Melody Groves.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT LAS CRUCES BULLETIN FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 2015 | B11 Rio Grande celebrates 10 years with upgrades, celebration

In September 2005, the 79-year-old Rio lighting system included moving 12 lights Grande Theatre began the next stage in its evolution as an entertainment and cultural center in the heart of Las Cruces.

2015 marks the 10-year anniversary of the monumental effort by the Doña Ana Arts Council to restore the historic landmark, with generous support from New Mexico state legislators, the City of Las Cruces and the community at large. To celebrate this milestone achievement, the Arts Council will host a gala celebration Sept. 12.

The City of Las Cruces also has been pulling out all the stops by giving the Rio Grande Theatre a much-needed lighting upgrade, a brand new projector and a new surround sound system.

"This is a big year for the Rio Grande Theatre," said Executive Director for the Doña Ana Arts Council Kathleen Albers. "It started the Downtown revitalization and now we're kicking it up a few more notches. We've got a new management agreement in place with the City and it's a true partnership. We've been recognized as a cultural icon by Heritage Hotels & Resorts and we are partnering with Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces to make the theater a tourist destination. We just got the new lighting system and a high definition projector, which are both top of the line. We can now say we really are "state of the art" and are competitive with some of the best venues in the state. The fact that it's happening in 2015, which coincides with our 10th anniversary, is very exciting."

The recently completed upgrade to the

from the catwalk above the auditorium, along with 10 more lights that had been held in reserve, to a new electrical grid now located on the balcony facade.

"We've been wanting to do this for vears." said Technical Coordinator Bruce Ven. "We really needed low-profile lighting, because any time someone wore a hat on stage, their faces would be in shadow."

The addition of an Electronic Theater Control (ETC) lighting system in the control booth will allow for lighting technicians to program shows in advance, reconfigure and save files and even transfer files from other locations.

"Some performers and groups have all of their lighting cues saved on a laptop or flash drive, so now they can send it to us and we can plug it right in," Ven said. "This is saving us hours of set up time. We used to have to compromise a lot, but this is easier and more intuitive, so we can take our shows to the next level. If we used to be a Dodge, we are now a Cadillac."

"It was a long time coming," Albers said. "We started working on this two years ago after we had to go dark for a couple weeks and ship our old Strand lighting system off to be repaired. It was outdated and we couldn't get parts for it. We realized we were vulnerable and might need to cancel shows. We knew we had to upgrade, so we requested the City add it into their capital improvement plan, and they made it a priority. Now we're set for another 10 years or more."

The projector is also a fresh addition,

The Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St., recently received several much-needed upgrades, including a new projector, surround-sound system and lighting upgrade, just in time for the Friday, Feb. 27, world-premiere of the thriller "Truth."

put into place just in time for the premiere screening of PRC Productions' locally made feature film "Truth" on Feb. 27. Mounted on the balcony facade, just below the new lighting grid, it is perfectly calibrated for correct focal length. The projector is able to project films in High Definition, and the result is a crisp, clean image not seen in the theater since its heyday as the premiere cinema in Las Cruces.

According to Ven, the new addition is "a high definition projector, a 1080, that accepts all three components: PCs, DVD and Blu-Ray players with HDMI. The surround sound system is also new. We don't have to run the audio through the house system, which is only in stereo. Films nowadays aren't filmed in stereo; they're all in surround sound. Finally we can make them sound the way they're supposed to."

In addition to the upgrades, the Arts Council is moving the annual spring Community Arts Awards Gala to the fall, in order to coincide with the 10th anniversary celebration. Taking place Sept. 12 with a dinner and awards ceremony honoring leaders in the arts community outside on Main Street, this year's event will be followed by a headline show still to be determined inside the theater. Award nominations are currently being taken and the nomination form, along with all categories, is available online at www.daarts.org.

"We wanted to make this year special by combining the awards ceremony with the 10-year anniversary of the Rio Grande Theatre's re-opening," Albers said. "The renovation of the Rio Grande Theatre really was the kickoff for the entire Downtown revitalization. I really want to say kudos to the city councilors and to the city staff for recognizing the importance of this building to the rest of the city. There is a lot of wonderful stuff happening all around us Downtown, but we want the community to know we are continuing to up our game, too. What better way to do that than to combine all those efforts in one big celebration on Main Street."

Originally built in 1926 as a vaudeville theater and premiere movie palace, the Rio Grande Theatre closed in 1997, only to be rescued from obscurity by the Doña Ana Arts Council, then renovated and reopened on Sept. 16, 2005, by a community pulling together to restore their beloved historic landmark. The theater now operates as a full-service, 426-seat performance facility, playing host to a variety of performers, from children's theater and dance recitals to legendary musicians and national touring groups. The only remaining twostory adobe theater in the country, the Rio Grande Theatre has been placed on the State Register of Cultural Properties and the National Registry of Historic Places. It continues to be a social hub of activity in southern New Mexico.

HOMES & SOUTHWEST LIVING

Bulletin FIDAX, FEBRUARY 27, 2015 Homes Southwest Living LCHBA has your home covered evergreen

When you hear the term evergreen, you may think arborvitae, juniper or holly. We may picture these as just green and used as a foundation or background plant.

With newer, improved plants this is no longer the case. The term "evergreen" simply means a plant that will keep its leaves or give the appearance that it keeps its leaves throughout the year.

There are broadleaf evergreens and coniferous evergreens. This article will focus on broadleaf.

Plants such as variegated pittosporum and variegated euonymus will have yellow to cream to white colors mixed with light or dark green foliage. The pittosporum are available in dwarf and standard sizes ranging from 2 to 3 feet tall and wide, to 6 to 8 feet tall and wide. These will not change during the winter months.

Plants such as abelia kaleidoscope, nandina, Oregon Grape Holly, euonymus emerald n gold and emerald gaiety will have a winter flush.

This simply means they will take on a reddish or purple hue during the coldest months of the year, which can dramatically change your landscape by adding color to what may otherwise be a drab green or deciduous look.

The kaleidoscope abelia has yellow and green foliage throughout the summer months, with white flowers. This one typically grows to about three to four feet tall and wide. The nandina comes in a variety of sizes from 1 to 2 feet tall and wide to 4 to 8 feet tall. The Oregon Grape Holly has yellow flowers and grows 4 to 6 feet tall and 2 to 3 feet wide. The emerald n gold and emerald gaiety can grow up to 3 or 4 feet tall, or it can be used as a ground cover.

These monotony breakers can be used as accents or as main

The Las Cruces Home Builders Association will hold the 34th annual Home & Garden Show on March 7 and 8 at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

Spring may be weeks away, but that hasn't stopped Las Crucens from putting together their "honey do's" lists – you know, all of those chores that need to be done around the house when the sun begins to shine again.

Whether it's installing new kitchen tile, converting a grass backyard into rock landscaping or finally taking the leap into solar, community members can learn about these tasks and much more during the 34th annual Las Cruces Home Builders Association Home & Garden Show Saturday and Sunday, March 7-8, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

"Anything you'd want to know about your house, we're a one-stop shop," said Brian Crawford, chair of the 2015 Home & Garden Show. "You can find contacts for what you want to improve on because we have everything from electrical to bath fillers to tile – you name it."

"That's what I like about this show ... everything there is complementary to everything else," said LCHBA CEO Steve Chavira. "So if you want to learn about how to do a new mosaic tile floor, you think, 'I'm going to go to the Home & Garden Show so I can learn that.' But then all of a sudden you're like 'Ooh, I can do solar, too. I can get my front yard landscaped.' There is a whole lot more to it."

When the Home & Garden Show began in the 1980s, it was held at the Oñate High School. Since then, the show has grown in popularity with community members and vendors. It was held several years at Dickerson's Barn before arriving at the Las Cruces Convention Center in 2010.

"Growth has happened steadily," Chavira said. "We've reached the point that people count on it as an annual event."

Choosing a different theme each year, the 2015 Home & Garden Show will focus on the idea of Main Street and providing the community with everything a home would need from the earth to the sun.

"(LCHBA) has had a longstanding love relationship with our community," Chavira said. "For 55 years, we've worked so hard to improve the quality of life in the city of Las Cruces.

"The Main Street theme really made sense to the committee as we started planning on what it was going to look like and what we were going to do. When you think about the idea of Main Street, it's kind of an all-inclusive term in that everything that you can find in a town, you can usually find it on Main Featuring more than 80 vendors this year, the Home & Garden Show is a great place to gain product knowledge as well as connect to experts.

"You can learn what you want to do, or you can find someone to do what it is you want to do," Chavira said.

"Vendors will be displaying their products that they sell with information," said Crawford, adding that visitors will have the ability to sign up on the spot, make appointments and gather information.

In addition to the booths, demonstrations by LCHBA members, Master Gardeners with the Doña Ana County Master Gardeners Program and representatives from the held throughout the weekend. Crawford said topics will range from container gardens to roof coatings and how to stain a door, providing visitors with a wide range of hands-on knowledge.

Also on hand will be a Ninja Turtle, as well as the New Mexico State University men's basketball team.

"We see this as a send-off as they get ready to go off to the WAC Championship," Chavira said.

Chavira said LCHBA has furthered its partnership with the university by beginning an endowment that will ultimately provide scholarships to students interested in a construction trade degree program.

plantings all through the landscape. They really make an impact when used in conjunction with the "old evergreens" with added texture and eye-drawing hues.

Most of these color-producing greens have their best show when planted in full sun. They will also prefer spring and summer feeding with an iron supplement, which will further enhance their winter brightness.

A light shearing once or twice a year will help keep them looking tidy and fresh.

Finding the words to begin Lent

The Orthodox Church does not begin Lent with Ash Wednesday. In our tradition, Lent comes on slow.

First, we contemplate pride, forgiveness, repentance and God's love over a couple Sundays. Then we observe a Sunday when we give up meat for the season. On the next Sunday, we give up cheese.

On Cheesefare – Sunday, Feb. 22, this year – we also observe Forgiveness Vespers. At this service, everyone in the church asks forgiveness of everyone else, beginning with the priest. We exchange words of confession and forgiveness with one another. It is a powerful service; many Orthodox Christians will tell you that it is one of their most meaningful experiences in the church year.

People who have given up on religious observance, or who simply don't get it, may scratch their heads at this. Why would I do this when I'm rather sure I have not offended anybody in this group over the course of the year? When nobody else has offended me? When I'm going to feel silly or awkward?

Let's look at this for a moment from an outsider viewpoint, from the anthropological perspective. The key question is: What is a ritual for?

Rituals enable and enhance our lives in three basic ways. They allow us to do things that we ordinarily don't do. They allow us to say things that we don't ordinarily say. Because of these first two ritual gifts, they allow us to experience things we don't ordinarily experience.

When a person stands in a ritual setting and faces another and says "I take you for my wife" or "husband" or some words like that, the deed is done. Scholars call it "performative speech," meaning that these very words enact a new life situation. The words are a genuine action.

You cross a line into commitment when you say these words. The marriage is created by this word-act. Now apply that to our Forgiveness Vespers.

Rituals allow you to say things you don't ordinarily say. When you go to a funeral it's a difficult situation. You want to say the right thing; you don't want to make a gaffe because of your awkwardness or selfconsciousness. Often, however, you end up mumbling pleasantries or clichés.

The ritual gives you the words to convey both your sympathy and your love for the departed person to the family and other friends. In the aftermath of the ritual, as a bonus, you may find the freedom better to express your thoughts and feelings. Now apply that to our Forgiveness Vespers.

Jonathan Z. Smith is a scholar of ritual. He says that the heart of ritual is about getting things right. Ritual affords the opportunity to create a microcosm in which you do and say the right thing; as a result, you experience what is supposed to be. Yes, it is an idealization to some extent, but it also creates a reality of its own in the moment.

Forgiveness Vespers is about creating a community of forgiveness and love, the only ground upon which genuine community can form. Sure, the thing may fall apart in bitter strife at any moment. All community is fragile. But this right here and now, this is the way it is supposed to be and the ritual demonstrates it.

It doesn't necessarily end there. People who miss the service will offer words to others in the course of the following week. A bunch of emails came through my computer from other priests here and across the country asking forgiveness.

This is not just good form. It is the establishment of a community that has the power to go through the difficult days of Lent and live the truth of Easter.

Power in defending yourself

Marcy Shoberg Self-defense sense

Today's article is about how a Stop Assault FAST course empowers women. Empowerment is a side-benefit to learning nonmartial-arts-based self-defense.

But first, two disclaimers – know these classes also empower men, and similar courses, taught by certain nonprofit organizations, are empowering in similar ways.

The course, approximately two hours long, is taught in many cities throughout the world in both mixed-gender and women-only sessions. Typically, eight to 20 previously unacquainted teens and adults participate in the lifechanging experience.

The following are some course exercises and how women are empowered by each.

First, class members explain why they're attending and how they feel about it. Many women are surprised to realize their self-defense concerns are shared by others. This is especially true in mixed-gender courses, because some wrongly assume men never fear for their safety.

Realizing others also feel nervous to learn something new, or under-prepared to face an attacker, empowers class participants and prepares them to learn with an open mind.

Later, students are led through experiences that demonstrate we have internal alarms that help keep us safe. Students learn how passive, assertive, or aggressive attitudes contribute to their safety during and after confrontations. Here, women realize that self-protection is more about awareness, attitude and choices than about physical strength and skill.

Next, students learn to use their voice as self-defense tool. The trickiest part here is learning to control the adrenaline felt

Going to the dentist may not have the reputation of being a good time, but preventative care can preclude the incapacitating pain of periodontal disease.

On Saturday, Feb. 21, more than 40 oral health volunteers and dental health students participated in Give Kids a Smile Day at Doña Ana Communty College Dental Health Clinic, performing dental examinations, radiographs, teeth cleaning, sealants, fluoride treatments and offering oral hygiene instruction.

Since 2002, the American Dental Association has adopted a national clinic day called Give Kids a Smile, a nationwide gathering of dentists, dental hygienists and dental assistants to provide quality health care for underserved children. The event always occurs in February, which is National Children's Dental Health Month.

The ADA and Henry Schein, a nationwide dental representative, provided supplies for the DACC event, while the DACC student club association donated food and drinks.

"It's not just one day and we're going to solve the problem," Senior Dental Hygiene Clinic Coordinator Cher Lefebvre said. "It's more of we need to bring awareness to our communities and awareness to our politicians that children's decay is the number one disease in children and it's 100 percent preventable."

Give Kids a Smile not only provides free health care to children, but the data gathered nationally over the course of the month of February are used to provide the craggy facts of hard need and bring them before legislators. "We collect all the data and assessments, and say how many patients we saw and how many preventative care services we were able to offer, and then we send (the ADA) back the data and we're able to calibrate with them as far as how many people nationwide we're able to see in one day, or in one month," Lefebvre said.

"We can use these numbers to show that there is actual need, that there are people that are only able to access free dentistry at these special events and that they're not really able to access it in other ways."

Not only is it difficult to afford dental care, Lefebvre identifies a lack of providers, particularly in rural areas. She said the expense of dental school keeps dentists in larger cities, and more loan forgiveness might help bring providers out to the rural areas that desperately need them.

Dental Hygiene Program Director Laura Moss took the time to explore the realities of need at the provider level.

"Last week I did a little experiment myself, I called five offices that see Medicaid children, and the closest appointment that I was able to get them to say was available was about the end of May," she said.

"So it's obviously a demonstration that we need more community service for free and that we also need to have more avenues of pay for people that have Medicaid."

DACC has participated in Give Kids a Smile for the past five years, but they don't limit their community care to one day – or one age group, either.

The clinics are open Monday through Friday in both the morning and the evening, with occasional Saturday clinics for those during a confrontation, enabling one to make choices likely to keep it from becoming physical.

This segment is challenging and empowering to both those uncomfortable raising their voice and those who tend to err on the side of aggression. Adrenaline management skills are useful in many situations besides confrontations, and empower a woman to feel in control of herself.

Finally, students learn how and where to strike an attacker if necessary. In only minutes, a woman learns to do maximum damage with minimum strength and skill. Realizing she is "enough" to have a chance of fighting off an attacker is, of course, very empowering.

But, the actual experience of striking the mock assailant is probably the most empowering aspect of the class. The student feels the fear and surprise she would feel if attacked, overcomes it, turns her fear into power and uses her body to disable the mock assailant.

You've got to experience it yourself to truly understand it, and I hope someday you have the chance.

who are unable to get out of work during the week or don't want to interfere with children's schooling.

"Initially, you come in just for a screening and kind of a preliminary appointment, and then we get started with all of the other assessments and you do get a dental exam," Lefebvre said.

"We do have doctors that work for us, and every clinic has a doctor that will do the dental exam."

The clinic also takes radiographs and provides oral cancer exams, nutritional counseling, smoking cessation and preventative services for decay, gingivitis and periodontal diseases.

They do not, at this time, do restorative work such as fillings, but the DACC clinic will send the information from these preventative care exams to another local provider.

"We also have 50 percent off for DACC students, staff and faculty," Moss said.

"NMSU has recognized this clinic now as a place where faculty can come and they don't have to take leave to come and use the facilities here ... so that's really nice addition for us." The clinic is also working on taking insurance, and while they do not have a full-time dentist yet, Moss said she is working on acquiring one for the clinic. The clinic is focused on increasing awareness about the importance of prevention.

"For some reason, people think that the mouth isn't included to the rest of the body," Lefebvre said.

"Any time we can get the awareness out that oral health care is just as important for overall care, then we can have a voice.'

Burrell College construction begins

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

With an aggressive schedule that calls for the Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine to open fall semester 2016, the heavy equipment is rolling at the 7.5 acre site of the college at Arrowhead Drive and Wells Street on the New Mexico State University campus.

Construction of the 80,000 square foot, $28-million facility is scheduled for completion in May 2016. The main building will be three stories high. The complex will also include a smaller building with two auditoriums, each seating 250.

New Mexico architectural firm Dekker/Perich/Sabatini designed the building. Gencon Construction Cos. Inc. of Las Cruces is the general contractor.

The chief investor is entrepreneur and former Rosemont Realty CEO Dan Burrell.

Although located on campus, across from the new Arrowhead Early College High School, the four-year medical college is a free-standing entity that leases space from the university.

Burrell College will pay NMSU $268,329 a year to lease the land and give the NMSU Foundation an annual $500,000 gift for student scholarships.

Dr. George Mychaskiw, dean of the college, said the total cost of the project, including construction and operating costs for the first couple of years, will be $103 million.

Construction is projected to generate $87 million in economic activity and directly or indirectly support some 360 workers.

NMSU economics professor Chris Erickson said a study conducted by Pittsburgh consulting firm Tripp Umbach estimates the Burrell College, when fully operational, will generate $78 million dollars per year in additional economic activity, supporting 350 jobs.

Erickson said studies show new medical graduates tend to remain in the area after graduation, which could provide improved local health care and result in fewer emergency room visits.

"All this will reduce local area health care costs, making Las Cruces and southern New Mexico more attractive for business," he said.

Mychaskiw has been in Las Cruces since the summer of 2014, putting in place the academic and personnel resources needed for the college to operate.

Experts say economy strong, but clouds building

Bulletin Staff Report

Eugenio Alemán, director and senior economist at Wells Fargo, worries that his kids' buying habits threaten the future growth of the U.S. economy.

"I have two millenials," he said. "I pay their student loans, and still they have no interest in buying homes. They just don't want to be tied down. My son, Doug, just wants to travel. That's what they do."

Alemán said although high student loan debt and other economic pressures are usually blamed for young Americans not buying homes, it isn't the money.

In order for the housing market to really take off, he said, mortgage lending has to increase at least 10 percent per year, and that isn't happening.

"That's an issue we have to deal with," he said.

Alemán gave the national perspective while New Mexico State University State Regents Professor of Economics and International Business Jim Peach spoke on the New Mexico economy at the fourth annual Economic Outlook conference Feb. 19 at the Las Cruces Convention Center. Wells Fargo and NMSU cosponsored the event.

Both economists had good news to report, but were cautious in forecasting the future.

Alemán said the U.S. economy is on track to grow at about 2.8 percent this year.

The level of household debt is at a nearly all-time low, which he said should lead to a future increase in consumer spending.

The global economy, however, is threatened by possible disruption from ISIL, Russia and the Ukraine, which could thwart continued strong growth in the U.S. economy.

"There are still a lot of clouds in the future," he said. Alemán said the biggest domestic issue is when the Federal Reserve will move to increase interest rates and by how much.

"We have never been there before," he said of the anticipated but unprecedented increase in interest rates after an extended period of near-zero rates.

Peach said New Mexico's

He said associate deans for clinical affairs, academic affairs, learning outcomes and evaluation and admissions and student affairs are on board.

"We hope to have most of the department chairs on board by December," he said.

A simulation center director has been hired and is consulting on construction. The large simulation facility on the first floor will include a mock clinic with exam rooms as well as several operating and emergency rooms.

Mychaskiw said the college received its pre-accreditation from the Commission on O s t e o p a t h i c Accreditation in December 2014 and currently is working toward provisional accreditation.

Burrell College is expecting a site visit in March and a decision on provisional accreditation in April, which will give permission to start accepting applications from students. "Wo're in good above."

"We're in good shape," Mychaskiw said.

Interviews with prospective students would begin in summer 2015.

Meanwhile, Mychaskiw

is establishing partnerships for clinical training and residencies.

"We have relationships from Las Cruces, El Paso, Albuquerque, Santa Fe and even down in Juarez," he said.

He said he anticipates the initial enrollment will include "a handful of Mexican nationals or those interested in practicing in Mexico."

"We are very happy to be in a supportive community in a part of the world where services, especially primary care services, are badly needed on both sides of the border," Mychaskiw said.

Alta LeCompte can be reached at 680-1840 or alta@ lascrucesbulletin.com.

BUSINESS

The Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine is under construction on a 7.5 acre site at the corner of Arrowhead Drive and Wells Street.

Professor Jim Peach carries on the tradition of presenting fellow economist Eugenio Alemán with a "totally useless gift" at the Economic Outlook Conference Feb. 19.

economic indicators rose in the past few months, but growth trails neighboring states and the rest of the nation.

Although most sectors have not performed well in the local economy, Peach called recent growth in the professional and business sector "a healthy kind of sign."

"The federal budget decreases are over, and that's a good thing for New Mexico, but we've got some problems coming," he said.

Chief among them is the decline in commodity prices, especially oil and gas prices.

"Evidence suggests we haven't seen the bottom (in oil and gas prices) yet." Peach said.

The number of active rigs in New Mexico declined from a recent high of 101 to 66 this year, each with a crew of 50 plus 100 more in supporting roles, he said.

"You can expect in the next month or two to see a drop in nonfarm employment in New Mexico," he said.

Peach said 19 percent of the state's direct general fund income, and about 30 percent of indirect income comes from oil and gas.

"The biggest employers in Las Cruces are NMSU and the school district," he said. "Where does that money come from? Oil and gas."

Beyond the oil fields, Peach identified trouble spots less visible than those in the oil fields but with long-term implications for the health of the state economy. They include population levels, education and per capita income.

New Mexico suffered a net population loss of 1,323 in 2013, the first net loss since 1968, he said. During that year, there was net domestic outflow of 14,000 people.

"That's not the sign of a healthy economy," Peach said.

Commenting on the state of education in New Mexico, Peach said the state's high school graduation rate is 68 percent.

"We've got to turn that around," he said, adding the performance of neighboring states' economies is due in part to the success of their K-12 educational systems.

About 27.8 percent of Doña Ana County families are below the poverty level, Peach added. The percentage statewide is 21.9, while the national percentage is 15.8. Las Cruces stands at 71 percent of the national average for per capita income, and New Mexico at 80 percent.

In response to a comment from a member of the audience that per capita income masks a worsening income disparity in the nation, state and city, Peach said: "I think it is perhaps the greatest challenge to the American economy."

Bank tweaks its team to manage for change

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

Change has assaulted banks from every direction in the past few years.

Regulations stemming from Dodd-Frank banking reform legislation emerged, interest rates hovered at record lows and the growing importance of electronic banking created a kind of identity crisis for financial institutions large and small.

In the midst of adjusting to a changing landscape, Citizens Bank of Las Cruces was hit by the unexpected death of its beloved president, Justin Harper, in October 2014. He had been president and CEO since 1996.

While grieving, the leadership and staff of the local bank responded without missing a beat, because they were prepared to deal with the unexpected. The board immediately named George Ruth, senior vice president, as interim president. In January 2015 he was named president and a member of the board.

"Justin Harper trained us all well," Ruth said. "We are his legacy. Our job is to make sure our customers are properly taken care of. We haven't skipped a beat, other than missing Justin dearly."

Ruth, a veteran of 42 years in the banking business, previously served as president of several other banks.

And he was not alone in managing the transition process, because he was part of a corporate culture that encourages putting succession plans in place, even when there's no anticipation of needing them.

Moving forward, the bank in January also promoted Jesse Sanchez to vice president of branch administration, Picacho Branch manager; Nate Olsen, vice president of business banking; Maria Mauricio, assistant vice president; Berna Tirre, bank officer, Country Club Branch manager; and Rhena Phillips, assistant vice president, marketing and business relationship officer.

Who's next?

Citizens Bank manages change by asking not just what's next, but also who's next.

Ruth said at a recent retreat for officers he "looked everybody in the eye – 22 officers – and asked if they have their successor in mind.

"As an organization, we try to promote from within," Ruth said. "We try to hire talented people, and if we do that properly, they'll be ready for new responsibilities when the Phillips has worked at Citizens Bank for 13 years, six of those years with Ruth. She said she appreciates the corporate culture and the example Ruth sets.

"He trusts his staff to make decisions and encourages the growth of the individual," she said. "He is a very strong mentor."

She said the bank leadership is "very willing to discuss your ideas and challenges."

Marketing associate Natalie Bitting, who recently relocated from Albuquerque, got a good feeling about the bank with her first encounter.

"I loved that you couldn't fill out an employment application online," she said. "I had to come in and talk to a person. That meant the world to me – that I was not just data on an online application."

As a newcomer, she responded to a colleague's request for help with a computer program and the word got around that she enjoyed and was good with computers. As a result, her position evolved.

"It's neat that they build on the strengths of employees, to tailor a position to best fit the employee and the bank," she said. "They don't try to put you into a box – they say, 'Here's your opportunity for growth.""

Phillips and Bitting believe in what Citizens Bank has to offer as a local bank – making loan decisions locally and thus quickly, customizing accounts to meet customer's special needs, and providing personal customer service.

"Delivering the best financial services the first time, every time means listening to the customer," Phillips said. "We receive appropriate training so we can provide solutions to individual problems rather than tell the customer, "This is how it's done.""

Maintaining the balance

Ruth said the bank needs to take care of its shareholders, employees, customers and community.

"We're a community bank, locally owned for 45 years," he said. "We pride ourselves on being an integral part of the community. If we care for our customers properly, not one group benefits at the expense of others," he said. "It's a balance."

David T. Hill, AAMS® Registered Principal 545 N. Main St. Las Cruces NM, 88001 (575) 647-5858 DavidHillFinancial.com david.t.hill@lpl.com

The bank is a survivor.

Ruth said that while in 1980 there were 18,000 banks in the U.S., there now are fewer than 7,000 and mergers and consolidations are likely to continue.

The bank continues to serve consumers, but Citizens finds a niche in commercial banking and mortgage lending.

While maintaining its balance, Citizens Bank is called upon to respond to changes in the larger banking world, including regulations that can have unintended consequences, and rapidly evolving technology that pushes banks to redefine their relationships with customers.

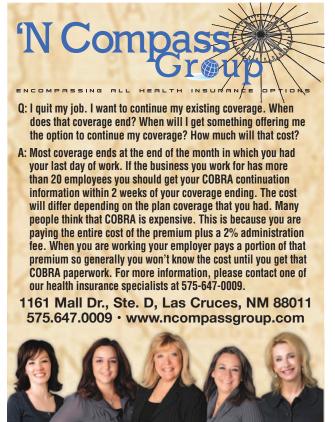

Ruth said small banks are at a competitive disadvantage dealing with regulations because they can't afford huge compliance staff.

Small banks also face the challenge of competing with credit unions that don't pay taxes and can offer products at a cheaper rate.

"I told our officers and staff we have to be managers good at managing change – we have to be very nimble," he said.

Technology transforms banking

When it comes to technology, Ruth said the goal is to be a fast follower and offer "all the bells and whistles of technology any bank offers."

While the percentage of online transaction per month is creeping up in comparison with in-person transactions, currently 18,000 compared to 45,000, the bank looks to technology to increase efficiency, directing its human resources toward helping customers who want and need their attention.

"I think we need to be more of a consultant with our customers going forward, advising them on products and services," Ruth said. "Banking is evolving into being less transaction oriented."

It's another kind of balancing act.

"Almost everybody likes to look at their account at 12 at night," Ruth said. "I was in Lubbock, Texas, this week and paid all my bills on my iPhone.

"Our success in the area is because people like to open accounts at a bricks and mortar facility. They may never come back in – but they like a face they can come in and talk to. And any one of our customers can make an appointment and come in and talk with me."

Praising the excellent competition in the Las Cruces market, Ruth said Citizens tries to differentiate itself from others by its service, a core value.

"We're high touch," he said. "That's what made this bank so successful."

Audit brings accountability, transparency

By Charlotte Tallman For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) believes accountability and transparency are extremely important when building a better community through philanthropy. To live by its standards, the foundation undergoes an independent audit each year.

Independent audits are completed to make sure procedures are being followed and donor money is being handled according to generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP), as described by Kirk Patterson, a CPA with Gibson, Ruddock, Patterson, LLC, and the partner in charge of the CFSNM audits.

"We issue an opinion on their financial statements indicating whether their financial statements are in accordance with the generally accepted accounting principals in the U.S.A," Patterson said. "Because it is public money, their bylaws have requirements for the management of the money. We see if they are following the requirements they set up."

In past audits, the CFSNM has received an unqualified opinion on its financial statements, meaning the organization was following GAAP.

The 2014 audit for the CFSNM will begin in March.

In 2013, the CFSNM acquired and managed permanent assets of $13,631,435 and total invested assets of $9,837,641 through 193 endowments, of which 39 are local nonprofits.

They awarded $143,237 of endowment earnings to various causes and local charities; $50,570 through designated and unrestricted endowment funds to local charities, and 38 scholarships totaling $25,386.

The CFSNM granted $171,212 in grant funds to local nonprofits.

Audited statements are used by the CFSNM board of directors to verify the financial statements presented by the organization are consistent, reliable, comparable and accountable, and are often required by major donors, grantors, creditors and regulators.

Independent auditors often look at significant accounting policies and how they are applied to the nonprofit, including management judgments and accounting estimates. During the audit, individual third parties, such as banks, investment companies, brokers and grantors, are contacted to make sure they have the same balance as the CFSNM.

Once an audit is complete, the auditor will note any audit adjustments arising out of the audit and address whether or not the adjustments were recorded, as well as any disagreements with the organization that may have occurred over the application of accounting principles to specific transactions or events. If the auditor finds any illegal acts during the audit, the auditor will communicate that to the appropriate party, presenting fairly the nonprofit's activities and financial position.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New CFSNM can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. ## Managing creative employees

By Sandy Nelson For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Managing creative people can be confounding to business leaders who prefer order and structure. But learning how to manage or lead "creatives" is critical to recruiting and retaining the natural nonconformists whose unconventional ideas can lead to transformative products and services.

The trick is to balance a business's need for ontime, on-budget work with the nonlinear thinker's need for challenge, risk and meaning.

Some companies have famously figured out how to foster a culture of creativity and profitability, whether they're producing forward-thinking commodities (think Apple and Samsung), services (Google, Facebook), business models (Virgin Group), operational designs (Southwest Airlines) or manufacturing processes (Toyota).

All these industry leaders encourage exploration and experimentation to create products and processes that identify and solve pressing problems, thus rewarding the businesses financially for their investment and risk.

Even companies with more humble ambitions can learn to get the most from the creative thinkers in their workforce by hiring the right mix of people and emphasizing teamwork, objectivity, flexibility and passion.

Creatives as team mem*bers:* While members of creative teams should take work goals seriously, the process of reaching the desired result should be open, flexible — even playful. Creative people need the freedom to be absurd without being judged; in this way, they can share ideas without becoming too attached to one proposal and remain open to the ideas of teammates.

Curbs on freeform creativity should be applied diplomatically and collectively. For example, rather than dismissing an unfeasible idea outright, the manager of a creative team challenges the group to work together to improve it — even if it means starting over. When the process fails, as it inevitably does from time to time, the manager doesn't assign blame or make it personal; rather he asks the creative team to consider what the experience taught everyone and offers to help the group recalibrate and move forward.

A symbiotic blend: Creative people aren't cut from a uniform cloth, even if they share a tendency for dynamic thinking. Personalities will differ, but each member of the team should share a few characteristics: He or she should prioritize the best solution to the problem the team is working on, even if the best idea is not their own.

This sometimes means teaming creatives with co-workers who are a bit more conventional and willing to attend to details and bring order to chaos. Teammates who are too similar often trip over their own egos, to the detriment of a project. But a proper blend of freethinkers with people who are a bit more grounded produces a team of collaborators rather than competitors.

Make the work important and structure loose: Drudgery and predictability are intolerable to the born innovator, who seeks meaningful, inspiring work in a spontaneous setting. While external rewards, such as a respectable salary and benefits, are appreciated, they're no substitute for praise and unambiguous support, which run the internal combustion engine of the creative thinker.

Creative employees should be allowed to shape their own space and time for work as long as business goals are met. It might be as simple as letting them work off-site and off-hours if that's what produces the best results for a company that lets its people run on the fuel of change, ambiguity and complexity.

Pecans, shown here in an orchard at New Mexico State University's Leyendecker Plant Science Center south of Las Cruces, will be the subject of discussion at the annual Western Pecan Growers Association conference and trade show Sunday through Tuesday, March 1-3, in Las Cruces.

Pecan conference, trade show set for March 1-3

An update on the proposed pecan marketing order, tips for success in doing business in China and a look at mechanical pruning techniques will be among the presentations at the annual Western Pecan Growers Association conference and trade show Sunday through Tuesday, March 1-3 at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, 705 S. Telshor Blvd.

"Pecans are very important, especially to Doña Ana County," said John White, director of the association.

"The western pecan is a superior pecan to others sold in the international markets," he said.

"We need to continue to build those international markets and it is important that our growers are knowledgeable on these marketing practices."

New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service will host the conference and trade show.

This will mark the 49th year the association, which represents growers in California, Arizona, New Mexico and West Texas, has sponsored the event. NMSU is a co-sponsor.

The annual event attracts about 500 people from the region, elsewhere in the U.S. and even from other countries.

The trade show runs from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 1, then continues during the educational program Monday and Tuesday, March 2-3. It will feature about 70 vendors.

The annual Pecan Food Fantasy baking contest will take place on Sunday.

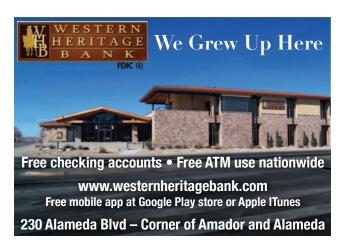

The educational program includes 17 presentations by NMSU experts, experts from other universities and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, as well as representatives from the pecan industry.

Topics such as pre-emergence herbicides, interpreting soil and water analysis reports, the Australian pecan industry and lessons of the almond, walnut and pistachio industries will be presented.

In addition to the educational program, trade show and baking contest, the event includes a Sunday welcome reception from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Azul Lounge in the Hotel Encanto, as well as a Monday social hour at 6 p.m., immediately followed by the 7 p.m. banquet and awards ceremony.

Continuing Education Credits will be offered to Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to attendees.
