Court sides with tribe

Ruling symbolizes Fort Sill's return

By Todd G. Dickson

The state Supreme Court ruled Monday, April 14, that Fort Sill Apaches, who have a small reservation outside of Deming, should be recognized as a tribe in New Mexico.

The court ruling stemmed from the tribe suing Gov. Susana Martinez to be included in the annual tribal-state summit, which is required by a 2009 state law requiring sovereign government-to-government cooperation, according to the Associated Press.

Fort Sill requested to take part in the summit after 30 acres of land the tribe bought in Akela Flats in 1998 was deemed its reservation land by the federal government in late 2011. Currently, a smoke shop and restaurant are located on the property, but the tribe wants to open a casino. In 2008, the tribe attempted to begin casino operations with electronic gambling machines, but Gov. Bill Richardson sent state police to the site and threatened a blockade.

According to Fort Sill Apache leaders, a casino on the reservation land would make it economically feasible for tribe members to begin returning to their homelands in New Mexico. Most of the tribe members currently live in Oklahoma, where their ancestors were taken in the late 1800s after being defeated by U.S. cavalry forces. A combination of Chiricahua and Warm Springs Apache tribes, the Fort Sills Apache tribe claims nearly 15 million acres – mostly in southwestern New Mexico – as its homeland.

"Today, we jumped a major hurdle in our path to returning to our home," said Tribal Chairman Jeff Haozous. "We have been fighting to return to New Mexico

AG drops charges in housing scandal

Whistleblower discouraged

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

A series of plea agreements has resulted in the Region III Housing Authority scandal ending without any of the players going to trial for felony charges, outraging local state lawmakers and the woman who blew the whistle on the dealings by the now defunct statewide housing authority.

On Monday, April 7, the state Attorney General's Office decided to drop criminal cases against the Region III Housing Authority's accountant and two attorneys.

Even more disturbing to whistleblower Frances Williams was the AG's decision late last year to allow Vincent "Smiley" Gallegos, a former legislator who headed the housing authority, to plead no contest to four misdemeanors, including attempt to commit a felony and paying or receiving public money for services not rendered. He was given a one-year

Group files paperwork in effort to raise wage

City reviewing proposal's wording

By Todd G. DicksonLas Cruces Bulletin

A group seeking to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour in Las Cruces by 2017 has filed its draft ballot initiative with the City Clerk's Office.

The initiative by Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé) is currently being reviewed by the city attorney and city clerk, who have to approve its language as a proposed ordinance. That review process could take a couple of weeks, said Linda Lewis, deputy city clerk.

Once the initiative's language is approved, CAFé will have 60 days to gather enough valid signatures to get the question put up for a vote, she said. According to CAFé, 2,300 signatures of valid city residents will be needed.

If CAFé gets enough signatures, the City Council will have the option of passing the proposed ordinance, or allowing the question to be put before voters.

The draft ordinance calls for the minimum wage to be raised from the current $7.50 an hour to: $8.40 an hour by Jan. 1, 2015; $9.20 an hour by Jan. 1, 2016; and $10.10 an

Viewing a blood moon at the

NMSU observatory

Photos by Elva K. Österreich and NASA

Lunar eclipse star of special event

Hundreds of curious people showed up at the New Mexico State University Tombaugh Observatory Monday, April 14 to learn about and view a total lunar eclipse, the first of four consecutive full lunar eclipses with the last on Sept. 28, 2015.

Beginning at 10 p.m. the observatory was open to the public with graduate students on hand to talk about the moon and other heavenly objects. People filed past three telescopes set up with Mars, Venus and the binary star system of Castor for the first couple of hours of the event.

As the shadow of Earth began to obscure the moon, one by one the viewing telescopes were moved to the eclipse. By 1:46 a.m. Tuesday, April 15, the moon was at its deepest coverage.

"It was a nice eclipse," said retired NMSU astronomy professor Kurt Anderson. "One of the nice things about lunar eclipses is everyone can see it in the night."

Monday's eclipse was referred to as a "blood moon" by many. Anderson said the red effect is caused by Earth's atmosphere. When Earth's atmosphere is clear, it would appear red if viewed from the moon, Anderson said.

"It's like looking at all the sunrises and sunsets on Earth at once," he said. "That's what makes the blood moon. The clearer the atmosphere, the prettier the eclipse."

Individual community members brought some of their own telescopes to join the fray at the New Mexico State University lunar eclipse viewing event held at the Tombaugh Observatory Monday, April 14.

The first of a tetrad of lunar eclipses, all of which can be seen from North America, a NASA photo captures the spirit of the April 15 blood moon. Three more will occur in the near future, Oct. 8, April 4, 2015, and Sept. 28, 2015. After that, North America will have to wait until 2032 for the next total lunar eclipse.

Community members and NMSU students gather at the campus observatory to observe the eclipse early Tuesday morning. Some sip hot chocolate sold at the event to support the undergraduate astronomy club.

The team from Mayfield High School finished in eighth place and the team from Rio Grande Preparatory Institute finished 22nd in the annual NASA Human Exploration Rover Challenge (formerly NASA Great Moonbuggy Race) in Huntsville, Ala., April 10-12, thanks to funding from the spaceport gross receipts tax funds allocated to Las Cruces Public Schools.

The competition requires students to build a human-powered vehicle that can navigate a one-mile course with 17 obstacles in the shortest amount of time. The vehicle must be built and designed by the students. The unassembled vehicle must fit inside a 4-foot by 4-foot container and must be carried by the two team members/drivers (one male, one female) 20 feet prior to assembly. The students

Thirty-five high school teams from more than 20 states, Puerto Rico, Canada, India, Germany, Mexico and Russia competed in this year's event. The "space race" brought in nearly 600 student drivers, engineers and mechanics.

Adan Sanchez and David Eason and the Mayfield team participated in the challenge for the third time. Jason McNiece and Jason Clark took the Rio Grande Prep team to the race for the second time, including team members from both RGPI and Mesilla Valley Alternative Middle School.

Students in the competition were, from Rio Grande Prep, Bayli Kilgore, Isaiah Silva III, Timothy Padilla, Paige Ritter and Skyler Scott; and from Mayfield, Larami Tesillo, Breana Martinez, Rian Nials, Prescilla Mendoza, Matthew Escalera, Christopher ("Cujo") Trujillo and Zachary Eason.

Reid chimes in on SunZia debate

Move or bury the line for New Mexico's sake

What does Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid from Nevada know about New Mexico? I hope it's more than I know, because he recently made an appeal to the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Interior to push through the proposed SunZia Southwest Transmission Line.

What I know is the currently proposed SunZia route cuts across the northern extension area of White Sands Missile Range. That area provides space for critical missile testing for WSMR and its contractors, as well as for flight training from Holloman Air Force Base.

What the Department of Defense knows, is having big towers and transmission lines cutting across that area renders it essentially useless. The range has said as much as 30 percent of its testing goes through that area. DoD concluded the lines would threaten as much as 30 percent of WSMR's operations, perhaps more at Holloman.

What I know is White Sands Missile Range provides jobs to 10,184 New Mexicans. It has an annual economic impact of $834 million to New Mexico. That's about $2.3 million per day.

Holloman Air Force Base has an economic impact of about $1 million per day, and more than 3,000 jobs. Together that's more than 13,000 jobs.

What SunZia knows is to re-route its lines, or to bury them, as has been suggested, will cost a whole lot of money. They also know they stand to make a whole lot more money if the lines are up and running.

What the Massachusetts Institute of Technology knows is a little murkier. Last fall, Sen. Martin Heinrich requested MIT's Lincoln Labs to study the issue. MIT completed its study a few weeks ago, but the content was not released. Heinrich's interpretation of MIT's briefing was that SunZia and WSMR could co-exist. U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce's interpretation was MIT's study confirmed DoD's findings, that the line must be moved or buried.

What Pearce knows is losing all or even part of the jobs at WSMR and Holloman would be devastating to New Mexico.

What I know, according to SunZia's website, is the 6,200 jobs the lines' construction will bring to New Mexico and Arizona will dwindle to 600 permanent jobs four years later, when construction ends. If New Mexico gets, say, half of those jobs, we're looking at 300.

What I know – based on elementary school math I learned back in Oklahoma – is 300 is less than 13,000.

What does Reid know? Does he know something we don't? That, perhaps, there's another project out there somewhere that could replace the gap for New Mexico if a portion of those 13,000 jobs are lost? We've already lost an engineering battalion at WSMR. Does Reid have something to fill in for us if a large portion of that $3.3 million a day goes away?

What I know from experience is senators and representatives usually look out for their own states. Nevada, Reid's state, could benefit from the energy produced by these lines. There's also lots of military activity, government land and open space in Nevada. Could his state also benefit from military work lost in New Mexico?

What Reid knows, if he has read the DoD's report to Congress, is DoD believes the SunZia project will "have an unacceptable risk to national security."

What I know is I like having WSMR in our backyard. I like the people who work there and I like the positive things the range and its economic impact bring to our community. I also like having a secure nation.

Kudos to musicians

I would like to congratulate the Music Departments of Centennial High School, Mesa Middle School and Las Cruces High School in winning championships for Las Cruces Public Schools.

Daniel Rivera, with the help of Joseph Flores, of Centennial High School won first place in the recent high school symphony competitions. Mesa Middle School won first place in the middle school string orchestra contests. Las Cruces High School won second place in high school string orchestra. Oñate High School also must be recognized as they too participated. These fine, very talented musicians deserve recognition for their outstanding participation and must be commended for the champions they are. They make Las Cruces and its public schools proud.

The majority of New Mexico state champions were from Las Cruces. Las Cruces Public Schools are champions; this has been proven many times by its students. The sports champions get much publicity for their prowess in so many ways and they deserve the accolades. There are other arenas to which the students have dedicated themselves and provided championships for their fellow students. However the media often does not give them the same recognition for their extraordinary efforts and accomplishment.

Please let our proud communities know that champions are everywhere and trophies of all sizes prove that students care.

A rave rebuttal review

On Sunday, April 13, I attended a performance of "The Lion in Winter" at the Las Cruces Community Theatre. Amy Carpenter was amazing as Eleanor, Sam Damon was brilliant as King Henry II and the rest of the cast was consistently outstanding. The sets brought the drama to life in a wonderful sense of the period, and the costumes were rich, colorful and captured the period beautifully. The actors projected so well I could hear every word, and their interaction flowed perfectly. I suddenly felt I was in New York City on Broadway, instead of Main Street in Las Cruces.

Thank you, Monte Wright, director, and all the others involved in this excellent production. I'm sorry, but I didn't appreciate Gerald Kane's tepid review in the Bulletin of April 4. Calling this production "a little bit cold" was a disservice to a very successful performance! Sorry, but there was a wonderful blend of "nuance, clarity and passion."

The right way to deal with feral animals

Free-roaming cats have no place to go in city limits

Michael Swickard

My mother rescued a half-starved feral cat one time. He seemed like any of her other rescued cats, but even after neutering he was anti-social with the other cats. Also, he had a great desire to mark territory pungently, which he did. She had to cage him, where he lived out his days. At no time during his years with us was he able to join her other cats.

There were always about six cats, all inside cats, living in our house. They came into our lives one by one, a rescue here and there. And then there was that feral cat named "Yoohoo," who could not live with domesticated cats.

My mother almost taught her cats to use the human toilet instead of the litter-pan. She lacked just one hold-out, a black female named Witch. We kids had to make sure we left the seat down and the lid up. But that knucklehead Witch would not do it.

I would have drop-kicked Witch through the goalpost of life and then had five cats with no need for kitty-litter. Not my dear mother, who shrugged and went back to full-time kitty-litter for six cats. Anyway, she was always going to have kitty-litter around because of Yoohoo.

Certainly on ranches and farms the most damning comment for man or animal is, "He's undependable." That was Yoohoo. Some days he was almost pleasant. Most days he was not. But he was always undependable.

I was thinking about my brush with a feral cat this week because city leaders in several communities have struggled with the problem of feral cats. These nondomesticated cats live away from humans and prey mostly on wild birds and other small animals. Some people even put out food, which makes the problem worse.

Many of us have watched with alarm as do-gooders want these cats to have freedom and not be gathered up and put down by the town authorities. Feral cats are somewhere between a nuisance and a disaster. The plan has been to neuter feral cats when caught, give them some shots and then turn them loose

Feral cats have lots of liabilities for the community, not the least being that they are murder on the wild bird population. This is especially so for migrating birds. Further, feral cats can and do carry diseases, even if later they get shots from a vet. Feline leukemia is often spread by these feral cats.

So here is the dilemma: Something is going to die. It will be the feral cats when caught by the authorities, or, if they return the cats to the community, then thousands upon thousands of wild birds will die. It is one or the other. It seems more important to have wild birds than feral cats.

More so, it seems important that we do not listen to the people who have a nutty vision of a world free of death where all animals live side by side in harmony. That is not what happens with feral cats.

No, the truth is, as many have written, "nature, red in tooth and claw." You let those killing machines live unmolested in your community and the wild birds will suffer. Some will be wiped out of existence in your community by the predation.

The legitimate role of government in a free society is to maintain order and protect the citizens. I will admit that wild birds do pose a few liabilities. In the late 1960s the then president of New Mexico State University was giving a speech outside when a Grackle pooped on his head.

In a fury the president commanded that all Grackles on campus be shot. A biology professor got wind of this and informed everyone those were protected by international, national and state law. Oops.

What city leaders need to do is capture and destroy all feral animals inside the town limits. Yes, that even means coyotes running through our backyards feasting on poodles. Forget capture and release. Protect our birds and domestic animals from feral animals.

Please do not feed wild animals. For many wild animals, a fed wild animal turns into a nuisance, and subsequently, a dead animal by the authorities.

Clerk explains levy election

A number of legitimate questions have been raised concerning the April 8 election to adopt a property tax levy to fund the activities of the Doña Ana County Soil and Water Conservation District (DASWCD).

The questions include: Why were there only five polling places? Why was voting only allowed for nine hours from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.? Why was there no in-person early voting? Why was the absentee voting by mail period so short? Why was a member of the district's Board of Supervisors allowed to serve as a poll worker, for isn't this a conflict of interest?

Unlike most elections that the clerk's office administers, the April 8 election was conducted pursuant to the state statute governing Soil and Water Conservation Districts. By law, the local Soil and Water Conservation District is responsible for organizing, conducting and paying the costs of the election.

Likewise, the state Soil and Water Conservation Commission is required to issue rules and regulations establishing election procedures.

The rules issued by the state commission specify that at least one polling place must be made available, that it be open for a minimum of eight hours, that absentee voting can only take place for 10 days, and that at least two poll workers shall be assigned to each polling place, one of whom may be a district supervisor. Neither the state statute nor commission rules permit in-person early voting.

DASWCD asked the clerk's office to assist it in conducting the election, as we have done for it in the past. However, in view of the ballot issue being one of taxation, it was pointed out that, unlike in the past, more than two polling places would be necessary. The district determined that it could pay for one poll worker and supply one volunteer at four locations.

My office then volunteered to open an additional Continued on following page

location at the Doña Ana County Government Center (where half of the votes were later cast) and use Bureau of Elections staff to operate it. Hence, the reason for only five polling locations on election day. My office also supplied one additional staff member at each of the other polling locations to assist the district's poll workers, and man the computers. Every staff member of the Bureau of Elections assisted in one way or another in working at the five polling locations and every computer able to access the voter database was used throughout the day. In short, we were maxed out.

In state and local elections run by the clerk's office, pursuant to the state's election law, sufficient funds are budgeted to open dozens of Voter Convenience Centers to the public. However, this was simply impossible for the DASWCD, given its budget limitations. I can assure you that Voter Convenience Centers will be open on primary election day on June 3. These, in conjunction with in-person early voting and absentee voting by mail, will return the voting experience to what you have become accustomed to: fast and efficient.

Obviously, given the importance of this election, state law is deficient and in need of substantial improvement. My office has already contacted our local legislators to look into the problem and make changes where needed.

Finally, throughout the process there was a close degree of cooperation between my office and the district, and, while some may disagree, under the circumstances the election was run about as well as could be expected given the limited resources available.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

A cow hanging

John lives down the road from me. We have cattle across the fence from each other. He is good at a lot of things; carpentry, electronics, sports and hunting, but cows are not his strong suit. He runs a handful on 90 acres.

He called me one day askin' if we had seen a cow of his. I told him we had cleared the pasture and had not seen her in with our bunch. I left town for a weekend and when I returned he had left a message to call. I did. "I found her," he said.

"Good." says I, and then he tells me the story.

His pasture was pretty well grazed-over, so John walked the fence line to see if he could see a break (Yes, he did walk it in his hiker boots, backpack, baseball cap and scope). There was a hand-made cattle guard on an abandoned Forest Service road. The rundown gate (WPA 1968) had been pushed over. John walked through on to federal property.

After a thorough scanning of the hillside, he saw a dark object next to a span of cross fence. He actually used his Swarovski spotting scope. He traversed an arroyo and some rough ground before he reached the dark object. It was his cow, all right. She had tried to jump or claw through the barbed wire fence and got stuck.

Now, anybody who messes with cows has a story to tell about how tough cows are; how they've fallen out of trucks, been pulled out of the mud with horses and ropes, lifted with bucket loaders, hefted from wells by helicopter, rescued from flooded roof tops ... I've seen them crash into a post and wobble off, get hit by a car or fall over a ledge, then roll, jump up and keep runnin. Of course, delivering a 120-pound calf is no "piece of cake" either! John's cow had straddled the wire fence.

John's cow had straddled the wire fence. She was dehydrated, had some lesions from the barbs that were swollen and infected. Her whole weight seemed to be sagging on the wire. She'd been there at least three days.

It took John an hour to walk back to the shed and get a pair of fencing pliers and return

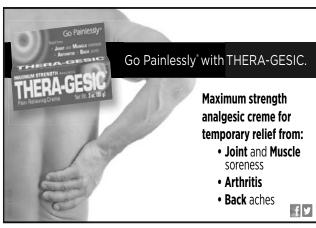

"Wow!" I said, "How's she doin' today?"
"Up and at'um. I've given her Penicillin. She's in the corral, I'm feedin' her. She's actin' like nothing happened."

"Them cows are sure tough," I said. John had a habit of naming his cows, usually after something pertinent to their timing, personality or appearance. For example, he had a calf named Wednesday, a heifer named Rainy, a cow named Dolly Parton and an outlaw steer named Tiffany after his daffy sister-in-law.

"What did you name her?" I joked. "Whataya think? Barbie!"

White Sands tested first U.S. satellite package

Scientists scrambled to catch up with Soviet efforts

By Michael Shinabery

As the United States Navy struggled to build and launch what they hoped would be Earth's first artificial satellite, White Sands Proving Ground (WSPG) was testing the instruments the satellite would carry.

"A tiny needle in the sky with a thread 126 miles long today put man's first stitch in outer space," The Associated Press reported in 1957, in a story the Alamogordo Daily News published on April 11. "An Aerobee-Hi rocket bearing the instruments such as will be used in the Earth satellite soared far over the New Mexico desert probing the fringes of space to pave the way for Project Vanguard."

The package was an aluminum "container about the size of a gallon can" that carried instrumentation to return data, via a radio transmitter, on upper atmospheric temperature, pressure and cosmic ravs.

Winds delayed the launch at WSPG for a week, but when finally aloft the instrument package worked well, a follow-up AP story, dated April 12, said. The only negative seemed to be "some disappointment expressed that the Aerobee hadn't gone higher." A 1956 launch "with a similar payload (had) reached 164 miles."

The Navy also announced they intended to launch an Aerobee, with similar instrumentation, on April 16, The AP reported.

The U.S. began developing Project Vanguard in 1955. Launch was planned for 1957, early in the International Geophysical Year. Success, however, was initially elusive, and the Soviet Union was soon besting the U.S. in the Cold War-era space race. The Soviets launched the first artificial satellite, Sputnik 1, in October 1957. Sputnik 2 went up in November, carrying a canine.

Well, we lost that race," Astounding Science Fiction Editor John Campbell declared in a January 1958 editorial. "Russian technology achieved an important milestone in human history - one that the United States tried for, talked about a lot, and didn't make. Various commentators have tried to gloss over the facts, ranging from efforts to demean the high accomplishment that Russians achieved, to pooh-poohing the importance of getting there first."

The embarrassed Navy quickly "fast-tracked" Vanguard, the website jpl.nasa.gov said. The first launch in December 1957 was a "fiery" failure and "severely shook the morale of the American public." The booster rose 6 inches and exploded. While the satellite was blown off a distance, it did continue transmitting its beeps, NASA said.

What "eased" Vanguard's "national embarrassment" was Explorer 1, said "Rockets of the World: A Modeler's Guide" (Peter Alway, 1993). Launched Feb. 1, 1958, Explorer was the work of Wernher von Braun, who had developed the German V-2 weapon, and then immigrated to the U.S. after World War II; James van Allen, whose radiation detection experiments were conducted post World War II at WSPG; and William Pickering, who headed the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

This put von Braun in the race – not with the Russians but with our second satellite team, the Vanguard group," Erik Bergaust documented in "Wernher Von Braun" (National Space Institute, 1976). "Competition raged" so fiercely between

Suite A Enduring Love, LLC www.EnduringLoveLLC.com America's Army, Navy and Air Force, that "comical subterfuge" sometimes resulted, according to "Space: The Next Twenty-Five Years" (John Wiley & Sons, 1987). There were rumors "scientists actually hid a satellite in a closet so that government inspectors wouldn't detect that they were doing unauthorized work that was supposed to be done by the Air Force."

Not long after, the Navy did successfully launch a Vanguard. Nevertheless, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev continued to ridicule America by pointing out the first Sputnik was the size of a beach ball, and the first successful Vanguard was grapefruitsized. However, while the Vanguard payload weighed only 3.25 pounds, one of its two tracking transmitters, which was solar powered, did continue to operate until May 1964.

The Soviets not only were conquering the U.S. politically and technologically, but educationally as well. In 1957, "the Russians had about 1,500,000 in all the various (scientific) disciplines," Bergaust said. "The comparable United States figure for mid-1957 was 1,300,000. The Russians were ahead in terms of total scientific and technical manpower."

What also "frightened" the U.S. was "the manifest rocket power displayed by the Soviet launchings," according to "On The Seas And In The Skies: A History of the U.S. Navy's Air Power" (Hawthorn Books, 1970). "Only a stupendous blast-off could have shot the Sputniks into outer space. Such a blast-off more than substantiated Soviet claims that Russia had developed an ICBM that could take the Atlantic in its stride and hit any continent anywhere, with an atomic warhead."

While there were more Vanguard failures than successes, before the program ended in 1959 the successes returned data on Earth-reflected sunlight and magnetic fields; took solar Xrays; and recorded the effects of micrometeoroids.

The argument could be made that the U.S. actually launched satellites a dozen days after Sputnik I when, on Oct. 16, 1957, "artificial meteors" were part of an Aerobee payload, Wayne Mattson and Martyn Tagg wrote in "We Develop Missiles, Not Air!" (ACC/USAF Cultural Resources Publication No. 2, June 1955). The "meteors ... were released by a special explosive charge at an altitude of 48 miles." Some of them actually orbited "the sun and eventually burned up when they got closer to the sun."

Those "meteors" were ball bearings.

Whistleblower

probationary sentence with conditional discharge in the plea agreement, according to The Albuquerque Journal.

'One year probation on a misdemeanor – that's all he gets?" Williams said from her home in Las Cruces, where she has boxes of documents related to activities conducted by Gallegos and the regional authority she said were clearly illegal.

Deputy Attorney General David Pederson told the Journal the office decided to dismiss the cases because some of events took place as long ago as 2003, hurting the ability to have reliable witnesses. Pederson also said laws related to government corruption were less refined then.

Williams was a board member for the Las Cruces-based Region VII authority when she began raising objections in 2006 to actions taken by Gallegos, then the director of the Albuquerque-based Region III authority.

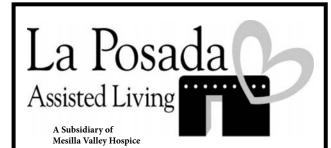

Gallegos created a company called Housing Enterprises Inc. (HEI) to build homes for all seven regional housing authorities in the state. Using financing from the regional housing authority, homes were built and sold for a profit, Williams said, and they were not sold to people with low incomes – the purpose of the financing that came via the State Investment Council (SIC).

"The more I got into it, the more I saw that what was going on was illegal," Williams said.

In one documented transaction, NEI made a $300,000 loan to a company owned by Gallegos to buy land in Las Cruces that the authority already owned. Gallegos repaid the loan, with interest, the day before he resigned in 2006.

Along with the nonprofit agency selling homes for a profit, there were people – including relatives – serving as both program administrators and as employees of HEI, resulting in double-billing of expenses, such as travel reimbursements, she said.

Las Cruces Bulletin

Frances Williams reads through the 2006 special audit of the former state regional housing authority's questionable spending that the report states were in violation of state law governing reimbursements for travel and other expenses incurred by state officials. Williams said she is outraged the state Attorney General's Office decided to let the case go unheard in court and with the authority's former executive director receiving only one year's probation on a misdemeanor charge.

found multiple violations of state law related to travel and per diem reimbursements amounting to more than $15,000.

Eventually, Region III defaulted on $5 million in bonds it owed the state and the statewide regional housing authority system collapsed soon after. Along the way, Williams successfully defended herself against a lawsuit by Gallegos that accused her of libel and slander.

Gallegos, a former state representative from Clovis, had close ties with the late House Speaker Ben Lujan. One of his top aides lived rent-free in a home owned by Region III, even though she was earning more than $71,000 per year, until the situation was uncovered. Lujan claimed ignorance of the arrangement.

Pointing to her boxes of documents she shared with state officials, Williams said she is frustrated that the Attorney General's Office took so long to do so little.

The state is accountable for paying off the millions in bonds that were defaulted on, she said, and there are large amounts of state money still unaccounted for. Williams said she has estimated that the regional authority scandal cost the state - only state money was used, not federal low-income housing funding – nearly $16 million.

"What's the difference if it was only $15,000?" Williams said. "Every penny of it is taxpayer's money.

"How is this not criminal? What more do you want?"

Williams said the fight has worn on her health and money in terms of $5,000 in legal fees to defend herself in the lawsuit before she was given legal assistance from the state, since she was acting as a state official when she raised her objections.

To have the fight end this way has also cost Williams her faith in the government of the state where she chose to live and raise her children.

"It has really torn me apart," Williams said. "New Mexico government is broken – our government is broken. This is just a little, bitty part of what goes on."

Local lawmaker support

The housing authority scandal resulted in stronger government corruption laws being passed with the support of Las Cruces lawmakers Sen. Mary Kay Papen and Joseph Cervantes when he served in the House of Representatives, as well as former Lt. Gov. Diane Denish. One measure championed by Cervantes provides protections for whistleblowers such as Williams.

In an email to a supporter of Williams, Cervantes - who is an attorney – said he and Papen are very disappointed with the lack of prosecution in the case.

"Be assured that over the past years, we regularly asked the AG for an update and report on the housing authority scandal," he wrote. "We were repeatedly told the investigation and prosecution were making progress."

While Cervantes acknowledged there may be factors he is unaware of, he said he feels the AG Office's attorneys failed to serve taxpayers and those in need of assistance for basic housing. Money meant for creating low-income housing, Cervantes wrote, "allegedly went to an expensive trip to Las Vegas, the purchase of luxury goods and other misuses."

since our ancestors were forcibly removed from these lands in 1886 and today we are finally being welcomed home."

In addition to forcing Martinez to invite the tribe to the summit, the state Indian Affairs Department must include the Fort Sill Apache Tribe on the agency's website as part of a contact list for all tribes and pueblos in New Mexico, the Associated Press reported.

By refusing to include it on a list of recognized New Mexico tribes, the tribe wasn't able to apply for capital projects funding and other programs and benefits that the state's 22 recognized tribe had access to, Haozous said

The lawsuit was filed after repeated attempts to obtain legal recognition by Martinez failed, he said.

"Today's victory will open the door to collaboration, benefits and recognition enjoyed by every other New Mexico tribe and pueblo," Haozous said. "We look forward to working with the governor and her staff and are excited to continue our journey home."

Haozous told the AP that tribe is considering opening a tribal governmental office at Akela Flats, but that would require funding from the state for infrastructure improvements. He hour by Jan. 1, 2017. After Jan. 1, 2018, and on Jan. 1 of each year thereafter, the minimum wage would be adjusted according to the increase, if any, in the cost of living.

Also, those earning tipped wages would make increasingly higher percentages of the minimum wage, starting at 40 percent in 2015, 50 percent in 2016 and 60 percent thereafter.

percent in 2015, 50 percent in 2016 and 60 percent thereafter.

"The increase in the cost of living shall be calculated," the draft ordinance states, "based on the percentage increase, if any, as of August of the immediately preceding year over the level as measured by August of the previous year of the Consumer Price Index (All Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, U.S. City Average for All Items) for the West Region or its successor index as published by the U.S."

The minimum wage draft ordinance also would require workers to get paid one-and-a-half times the minimum wage if they work more than 40 hours a week for those hours in excess of 40

In a press release announcing the ballot initiative, CAFé estimates there are 18,000 people in Las Cruces who earn $15,000 annually. Of those low-wage workers, 64 percent are Hispanic, 58 percent are women, nearly 60 percent are between the ages of 23 and 55 and 66 percent are employed by businesses with 100 or more employees, according to CAFé.

CAFé's release noted that Las Cruces Catholic Diocese Bishop Oscar Cantu sent a letter to parishes saying that "wages and work are tied human dignity, family and, ultimately, a stable society."

Rabbie Larry Karol, who is active in the CAFé organization, said the minimum wage proposal would improve the quality of life in Las Cruces.

"As faith leaders and employers, we have to lead and provide in ways that seek out the welfare of as many brothers and sisters as possible," Karol said.

CAFé Executive Director Sarah Nolan said she hopes to begin collecting signatures by early May.

"We are excited that Las Cruces voters and elected leaders can be part of closing the wage gap for women and, over time, help families make ends meet," Nolan said.

also said the state Supreme Court ruling didn't extend to the question of whether the tribe can open a casino there, however. He said the tribe is still in the appeal process against a 2009 decision by the National Indian Gaming Commission that barred the tribe from offering bingo games.

The tribe currently operates a casino in Lawton, Okla., according to the AP.

The Supreme Court unanimously made its decision after hearing arguments from lawyers in the case, but a written opinion will be issued later.

The state's lawyers argued the Apaches are an Oklahoma tribe because that's where government offices are located and most tribal members live in Oklahoma.

The tribe's lawyers countered that the federal census identified 147 tribal members living in New Mexico. There are 712 enrolled members of the Fort Sill Apache Tribe and 47 percent live in Oklahoma, Haozous told the AP.

The tribe maintained that New Mexico must recognize it because the federal government established its reservation in the state.

A spokesman for Martinez told the Albuquerque Journal the ruling requires the state to include the tribe in discussions on education, health care, water, natural resources and capital outlay even though it has "no community or tribal members on its lands in New Mexico."

"The governor still believes that the Legislature intended taxpayer-funded programs to benefit residents of New Mexico, not Oklahoma," spokesman Enrique Knell said, according to the Journal.

Charles Peifer, the Fort Sill Apaches' lawyer, said the governor cannot "pick and choose" which tribes qualify for state programs.

Former state senator shares stories in book

Feldman writes about politics in N.M.

"Inside the New Mexico Senate: Boots, Suits and Citizens," a new book by former state Sen. Dede Feldman, has been variously described as a "how-to" book for reformers or candidates, a primer for how things work – and don't work – in Santa Fe and a legislative history with a human face.

Former state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia and her two-year struggle against cockfighting and former state Rep. J. Paul Taylor and his efforts to get adequate health care for ordinary people are two of the local "heroes" featured in "Inside the New Mexico Senate."

Feldman represented the North Valley of Albuquerque from 1997-2012 in the state Senate where she chaired both the Public Affairs Committee and the interim Health and Human Services Committee.

She is best known for health care legislation, including the creation of a toll-free Nurse Advice line, a Brain Injury Services Fund, a low-income senior prescription drug program, and various measures to control health insurance premiums, as well as ethics and campaign finance reform, such as public financing of PRC and judicial races, limits on campaign contributions. She is a former jour-

She is a former journalist, adjunct professor of political science and currently trains aspiring leaders, reformers and candidates.

"Inside the New Mexico Senate: Boots, Suits and Citizens" is a legislative history with a human face. In it, maverick leaders, shameless special interests, and earnest advocates clash at the Roundhouse. In her book, the state Senate comes alive, with stories of grit and grace, honor and disgrace.

FELDMAN

Feldman will share some of the stories and lessons that went into the book at a series of events Sunday and Monday, April 20-21, in Las

SAG sets plans for end of school year

Appreciation, election coming up

By Donna Rosati

MHS Student Government Sponsor

Mayfield High School is planning some major end-of-the-school-year activities to promote teacher appreciation, celebrate student success and develop the leaders for next year.

Teacher appreciation

The Mayfield Student Government Association (SGA) is busy making plans for MHS Teacher Appreciation Week, May 5-9. Student government will use that week to inspire and thank teachers for all their hard work by writing letters, making special announcements during the week and providing a special student-teacher luncheon.

Students celebrating success

SGA is planning the annual Mayfield Senior Picnic in celebration of the success of the senior class in meeting the State of New Mexico requirements for graduation. This will be the sixth year of SGA providing the fun and festivities for the celebration. Seniors will be treated to lunch, games and rides on campus from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 14.

Elections

SGA is promoting leadership opportunities through the 2014 Student Officer Elections. Election day is Tuesday, April 29. Voting will take place in the MHS commons area before school and at lunch. Qualifying week is April 14-18 and campaign week is April 21-25.

During qualifying week, students have to pick up forms; collect their grade point average, attendance and grade status; and get signatures from 50 classmates and five teachers to qualify and run for office. They must meet the deadlines and agree to the rules of campaigning.

Campaign week is a week of promoting candidates' agendas for office and creating posters and recruiting constituents to vote for them

Offices on the ballot will be student body president, vice-president and secretary; and a president, vice-president and secretary for each class, grades 9-12.

MHS student heads to speech, debate nationals

Simmons qualifies with touching piece

Mayfield High School Speech and Debate Club President Kalei Simmons will represent Mayfield and the Las Cruces Public Schools at the High School National Speech & Debate Tournament June 15-20 in Overland Park, Kan., said MHS English teacher and Speech and Debate Club coach Kristopher Blais.

Simmons qualified for the nationals at the New Mexico District Tournament/National Qualifier April 3-6 in Albuquerque in dramatic interpretation based on her performance of an excerpt from the novel "My Sister's Keeper," by Jodi Picoult, said Blais.

MHS Speech and Debate Club Vice President Sophia Sanchez-Maes competed in the three most heavily contested categories at the state tournament: congress, Lincoln-Douglas debate and original oratory.

"While she performed admirably in each, she was one place short of qualifying for nationals in original oratory," Blais said. Sanchez-Maes will serve as New Mexico's first alternate in that category at nationals. To qualify for nationals, a student had to finish in the top two in the state in each category, Blais said.

"Last year, when I began at MHS, Kalei was enrolled in my speech and debate class," Blais said. "Being a new teacher here (and new to Las Cruces), I had a lot of difficulty figuring out the logistics of running a team/club, finding drivers, raising money and all of the other things educators learn to enrich the high school experience for our students. However, when she pieced together (her national qualifying presentation) and performed it for a grade in class, I was moved to tears.

"The entire class sat stunned at this young lady's talent and depth of character (and characterization). I was so moved that I promised her the opportunity to compete with it to see just how far she could take it. We started that class by watching YouTube videos of competitors at nationals. And now, she is one of them."

The National Speech & Debate Association, which formed in 1925, is the largest interscholastic speech and debate organization serving middle school, high school and collegiate students in the United States.

"It marks the capstone of high school speech and debate activities for nearly 130,000 students around the country. To attend, students must place among the top competitors at one of 110 district tournaments. Qualifiers compete for more than $200,000 in college scholarships in a variety of speech, debate and performance events. Final rounds are judged by blue ribbon panels including CEOs, former Cabinet members, stage and screen celebrities, sponsors and acclaimed community members," according to www.speechanddebate.org/nationals.

Determined students bring Christian film

'God's Not Dead' attracts audience

By Todd G. Dickson

A girl's drive has brought to Las Cruces movie theaters "God's Not Dead" - a Christian film about faith being tested.

About two months ago, 12-year-old Makaela Velarde learned one of her favorite Disney stars, Shane Harper, was in a new film. She followed a link that showed the "God's Not Dead" trailer, but when she checked the movie's website, she learned that it wasn't showing in Las Cruces, much to her disappointment.

mother, Her Keisha Velarde, suggested she make an appointment with Larry Allen of Allen Theatres about what it would take to bring the film to the family's chain of movie theaters. Makaela Velarde ended up meeting with Russell Allen, who told her she would need to pre-sell at least 500 tickets, as well as a commitment letter from a sponsoring organization.

Next, she made an appointment with John Foreman, superintendent of Mesilla Valley Christian Schools, where she goes to school. Foreman said he watched the movie trailer and agreed to back the effort.

"It just kind of snowballed from there," Foreman said.

After getting the school to back pre-selling 500 tickets, Makaela Velarde and her friends at the school made posters and talked to their churches to sell the tickets.

Keisha Velarde was so taken with her daughter's efforts she contacted the film's production company, Pureflix, in Scottsdale, Ariz., where she talked to vice president of operations Randy Maricle.

"He asked my daughter to write him a letter on why she wanted the movie to come to her town and what she was willing to do to get it here," Keisha Velarde said. "He responded that her letter was one of the best 'God's Not Dead' letters they had received."

On Friday, April 11, a two-week run of "God's Not Dead" began at Allen Theatres with sold-out first weekend showings.

For Makaela Velarde and her friends, it was not only great to see the film, but to see how much people enjoyed it.

"It has some really good actors in it," said Paige Smith, 13. "It's very inspiring and emotional."

In "God's Not Dead," Harper plays a college freshman who enters into a protracted debate about the existence of God with his philosophy teacher, played by Kevin Sorbo of television's "Hercules" and "Andromeda" series.

Sarah Owensby, 12, said she believes it is a film that will lead more people to Christ.

For Makaela Velarde there is the satisfaction of getting the movie to Las Cruces, but she was impressed by the emotional impact it had.

There were people crying after it was over," she said.

Foreman said the studentlead effort to bring the film to Las Cruces illustrates how the Christian school instills leadership qualities in its students.

If "God's Not Dead" continues to pull in good crowds, Allen Theatres may run it longer than two weeks. Nationally, as the film has had healthy box office returns. The film's total production and promotional budget was $4 million, but in its fourth weekend, the film grossed $5.3 million, for a total of $40.7 million.

Main Street work begins

Expect congestion at Solano intersection

Work began Monday, April 14, on improvements to North Main Street from Chestnut Street to just south of the intersection of Solano Drive (mile marker 149.2 to 148.3), the New Mexico Department of Transportation announced.

The contractor is G. Sandoval Construction, which will work on making improvements to utilities, erosion control, new pavement and installing new traffic signalization and lighting.

Motorists will encounter lane restrictions for both west and eastbound traffic. A width restriction will be in place at 10 feet in order for crews to work in the median and inner lanes. Speed limit will be posted at 35 mph. Motorists are encouraged to seek an alternate route as these restrictions will pose delays for daily motorists.

Concrete wall barriers will be placed throughout the work zone to provide a safe passage for the traveling public.

Working hours will be from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday Construction crews and heavy equipment will be moving within the work zone. NMDOT will be holding public meetings and is encouraging local businesses and residents to attend.

The City of Las Cruces will be making modifications to their bus route which can be found on its web at www.las-cruces. org/Departments/Transportation/Services/ RoadRUNNER%20Transit.aspx.

Armed robbery suspects sought

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps identify the suspects in Sunday morning's armed robbery at a local convenience

Shortly after 4 a.m. Sunday, April 13, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to the report of an armed robbery at the Pic Quik store at 1770 S. Telshor Blvd. Officers learned that two masked men entered the store. One of the men, armed with a handgun, demanded cash from a store clerk.

The suspects left the store on foot, heading north, with an undisclosed amount of cash. No injuries were reported.

Both suspects were said to be Hispanic. The armed suspect was wearing what appeared to be a short-sleeve, button-up, plaid shirt and khaki pants.

The second suspect acted as a lookout and was wearing a dark-colored shirt and khaki pants and black shoes.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspects is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Shortly after 8:30 p.m. Thursday, April 10, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to the 4200 block of Broadview where a 19-year-old man was suffering from at least one stab wound. The man received first aid at the scene and was then airlifted to University Medical Center of El Paso. His injuries did not appear to be life-threatening.

Detectives learned that the man and his wife were driving home last night when they were accosted by a group of young men, possibly teenagers, who threw something at their vehicle. The 19-yearold stopped the vehicle and confronted the

Witnesses told police a fight broke out

The two to five suspects were all described as teenagers. They were said to be Hispanic, approximately 5-foot-3inches to 5-feet-5-inches tall and thin.

One of the suspects was believed to be wearing a short-sleeve blue-and-white flannel shirt. Another was wearing a white, long-sleeve hooded sweatshirt with a symbol across the chest. Yet another suspect was believed to have a spiked haircut and was wearing a white shirt.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspects is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

Most auto burglaries easy to avoid

Close windows, lock doors

Las Cruces Police have investigated 84 auto burglaries in the past two months and the overwhelming majority were considered crimes of opportunity since vehicle windows were left down or doors unlocked.

Investigators have learned that many perpetrators simply walk neighborhoods perpetrators or parking lots pulling door handles with the hopes of finding an unlocked vehicle.

Once in the vehicle, the perpetrator needs only seconds to rummage and steal valuables left in the passenger compartment or pop open a trunk.

The Las Cruces Police Department recommends community members park vehicles in a garage, driveway or well-lighted area; remove valuables from the passenger compartment; conceal other items normally kept in a vehicle; close all windows and lock doors; remove garage door remote-openers from vehicles; install and use an audible alarm system; and be a good neighbor and report any suspicious activity.

Anyone who witnesses an auto burglary in progress is asked to refrain from confronting the suspects. Instead, witnesses are asked to dial 911 immediately and be prepared to provide the call-taker with an accurate description of the suspect or suspects and the license plate of the vehicle they are in.

evening, stole a 12-pack of beer and threatened to kill the clerk. The man was caught on surveillance video.

Just after 7 p.m., Monday, April 14, deputies were called to the 5100 block of Doña Ana Road, where the clerk said a Hispanic male, believed to be in his late 20s or early 30s, walked in and grabbed a 12-pack of beer.

According to the clerk, the man approached the counter, told the clerk he was taking the beer and that if the clerk called police, he would come back to kill him and that "it wouldn't be pretty."

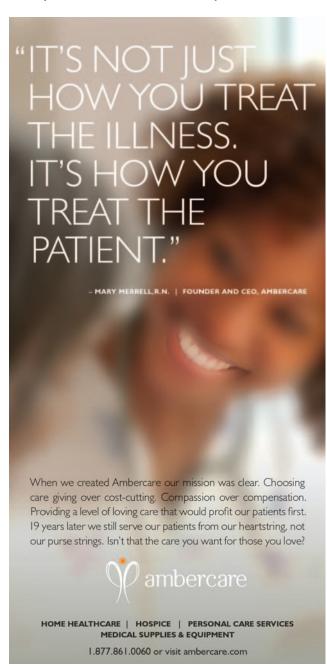

The man is described as having a medium complexion with facial stubble, standing between five-feet-eight and five-feet-10 inches tall and weighing approximately 220 pounds. He arrived in a baby-blue mid-90s Lincoln sedan with a chrome strip along the bottom. Another heavy-set man was said to have been driving the car.

Pima Community College softball player Alexis Dotson recently was recognized for her performance.

The Arizona Community College Athletic Conference cited the outfielder as Player of the Week for March 24-30 when the team was 4-0. The freshman out of Las Cruces High School was honored for the second time this season.

She batted .875 (14-for-16) with nine runs batted in and stole four bases in as many attempts.

"I was surprised," she said. "I'm really happy. I feel blessed. I went up to bat a lot more relaxed. I was patient. I emphasized on that one pitch, which you should do. I saw the ball well."

As of Monday, April 14, she led the conference with a .524 batting average and was sixth with 30 stolen bases. She had 29 RBIs and a .955 fielding average in 66 chances.

Pima teammate Alyssa Montoya, another former Bulldawg, batted .205 with seven RBIs in 27 games. The infielder had a .983 fielding average in 59 chances. Pima freshman infielder Perla Munoz, an Oñate High School product, had four RBIs in 13 games.

Also from Oñate, University of Memphis sophomore Cierra Mangum hit .266, third best on the team, through 42 games. She had two home runs and 12 RBIs.

Freshman Audrey Velasquez led Eastern New Mexico University with a .333 batting average in 45 games. Previously at Las Cruces High, she led the team with 30 RBIs.

Out of Las Cruces High, Elizabeth Velasquez of Eastern New Mexico batted .250 with two home runs and 14 RBIs in 43 games.

Alberta Medina led Eastern New Mexico with a 1.000 fielding average in 123 chances. The former Bulldawg hit .233 with nine RBIs in 32 games.

For Aggie softball sisters, it's all about teamwork

By Tara Melton

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Following their sweep of Western Athletic Conference opponent, California State-Bakersfield, New Mexico State University softball players and sisters Brennalyn and Haley Nakamura are ready for the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

The Nakamuras started playing softball in their home state of Hawaii when they were about 4 years old. As kids, they played every sport they could, and, when they got older, decided to commit to softball.

Aggie head coach Kathy Rodolph discovered the Nakamura sisters through a trusted former player who had met the girls on a travel team. Rodolph was told the girls were "her type of players."

The Aggies signed Haley during the early period signing in November 2012 to join the team in fall 2013.

"I liked the coaches and everyone else when I came to visit. I knew I was going to be taken care of here," Haley said.

Meanwhile, Brennalyn was playing softball for the College of Southern Nevada-Henderson when her younger sister was signed. Rodolph took an interest, and Brennalyn moved to the Aggies during the second semester of her freshman year.

"After being away from my sister, I was looking forward to playing with her," Brennalyn

Aggie football ready for spring game

NMSU defense features several offensive converts

By Jeff Matthews

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

After spring drills, which focused on fundamentals and looking for playmakers, the New Mexico State University football team and head coach Doug Martin are eager to put their hard work on display 6 p.m. Saturday, April 19, at the annual spring game at Aggie Memorial Stadium.

Martin said one bright spot this spring has been the play of Arizona Western Junior College transfer, quarterback Tyler Rogers. Martin is eager for fans to see what he brings to the offense.

"The playbook is just a lot more open because of Tyler and because of his ability. He can run, so you will see the option," Martin said. "You'll also see us throw the ball down the field more. We really couldn't throw the ball down the field last year; we didn't have the arm last year, now we do. So you'll see us stretch the field more."

Martin said the Aggie offensive line, returning four veterans, is looking good and should be a strength of the team.

The wide receiving corps, despite the loss of Austin Franklin, has been a bright

"We have seven or eight receivers we can win with right now," Martin said. "Teldrick Morgan is a guy people haven't seen. He's going to be fun to watch. Adam Shapiro has great speed and Greg Hogan is also one of those guys."

NMSU ranked last defensively in the NCAA against the run in 2013, so a major emphasis this season will be shoring up that deficiency.

Martin hired veteran coach Larry Coyer to coordinate the defense. Coyer's resume reads like a who's who of coaching at every level, including the NFL.

"Hes one of the best fundamental football coaches I've ever been around," Martin said. "You can already see a dramatic difference."

The Aggie defense has been retooled and will have a different look.

"Basically it's a 4-4 style of defense," Martin said. "The big thing you'll see is our guys playing differently. The defense is built on speed and we are running to the football. It's just more fundamentally sound. We are getting hats to the ball. We've got to stop the run before we have any chance at all. There is a lot of pressure on the secondary, so they'll have to be athletic and make plays back there."

The secondary will be interesting to watch Saturday night.

It's made up of a trio of offensive converts; former quarterbacks Travaughn Colwell, King Davis III and Jaden Wright make up three-fourths of the secondary.

"You get what you demand," Martin said.

"You get what you demand," Martin said.
"We are being very demanding of these players and exactly, specifically what we want from them. If they can't do it they aren't going to be on the field. It's pretty cut and dry. Tra Colwell and Jaden Wright are guys that have made plays this spring. We like Davis III back there and Winston Rose has made plays"

There are still question marks, of course.

Martin is counting on 17 freshmen to contribute in the fall, particularly those on defense he says will be plugged in when they arrive before school starts for fall workouts.

The work they've done so far is encouraging.

"I know we're going to be a much-improved football team." Martin said. "We're going to win some football games. Two reasons: The schedule and going into the Sun Belt Conference is obviously going to give us a lot of stability and put us on a more even playing field than last year's schedule and, of course, the talent level."

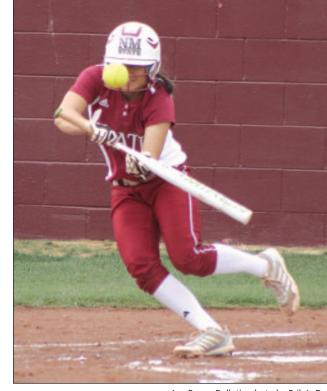

The scrimmage Saturday will feature the offense vs. the

Martin said the Aggies don't yet have the numbers to split the squad into two separate teams with just 73 scholarship players; 85 is the limit and he said they should get there next

Instead, the offense will go against the defense with a scoring system devised to be fair and competitive.

"We did the same thing last year and I think the final score was like 64-62, so it was fair," Martin said. "It does make the scoring part of it work.

The scrimmage, just the second of the spring season for NMSU, begins at 6 p.m. and there is no cost to attend to check out the 2014 Aggies.

said. "The coaches cared and wanted me to be a part of this team."

The Nakamura sisters aren't the first siblings the Aggies softball program has housed. According to NMSU athletic records, identical twins Krysha and Vanessa Fitzgerald joined in 2006 and sisters Kristi and Kylie Randall joined in 2008. The Nakamura sisters assure their relationship doesn't affect their team.

'We don't really act like sisters when we put on the uniform," Brennalyn Nakamura said. "We treat our teammates like we treat each other."

Both Aggies have had a good experience on the team and currently they're 8-1 in the WAC. Rodolph and Haley both agreed that Brennalyn helped her sister make the adjustment from high school to college softball run smoother.

"I'm capable because my sister is doing it, too," Haley said. Brennalyn came in last year knowing she wasn't going to get played very much because there was a senior in her position at

Over the next four years, Collins grew to love his new home at New Mexico State Uni-

"Some of the best years in my life were spent in Las Cruces," Collins said recently. "It was an exciting, adventurous change.

Collins was a pivotal piece in the change at NMSU basketball, as well.

Then-Aggie coach Lou Henson assembled a powerful team, including Collins, Sam Lacey, Charlie Criss and native son Chito Reyes. The group made it to the Final Four in 1970, the only NMSU team to reach those heights.

Thursday, April 24, Collins will return to Las Cruces as the keynote speaker at the annual Lou and Mary Henson Boys and Girls Club Breakfast.

"I'm so looking forward to coming back," Collins said. "Some of the greatest people I've ever met are from right there in the Crosses. Of course, I'm looking forward to seeing Mr. Coach and Mrs. Coach.

The event is an important fundraiser for the Las Cruces Boys and Girls Club, and Collins is no stranger to the organization.

"Thank God for the Boys Club," said Collins, who attended and played basketball at the club as a youth. "It was not yet called the Boys and Girls Club, though in my neighborhood (in Syracuse), girls came. I am very, very thankful to the club. I certainly didn't have the money to go to camps or take trips out of my neighborhood. Had it not been for the Boys Club, my friends and I would not have gotten many of the positive things that helped us later on in life."

"He's a very good speaker," Henson said of Collins, who is not only his former player, but his former assistant coach.

From 1983-96, Collins was an assistant at the University of Illinois when Henson coached there.

"He and I were joined at the hip," Collins said of Henson. "He's a great coach and should rightfully be in the Hall of Fame. I was with him both times he went to the Final Four. Once as a player (with the Aggies in 1970) and once as his assistant (with Illinois in 1989)."

After NMSU, Collins played two seasons with the Chicago Bulls, before settling in Chicago working for the felony probation depart-

"Coach reached out to me and it was a very positive welcome to go from seeing kids getting locked up to seeing kids playing basketball," Collins said. "A lot of times you were dealing with kids from the same neighborhood, but it was a heck of a lot more positive."

Doc's rule of 14: Essential mental skills

Double the power of your clubs

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

Trying to fathom the absolute essence of what makes a champion golfer a champion is tricky business. Getting to the heart of the matter (and winning does take heart) is complicated largely by the fact golf is different from all other sports.

There's the stationary ball problem for one thing and, unlike in baseball, golfers have to play their foul balls. A decade ago, Dr. Deborah Graham and Jon Stabler came out with "The 8 Traits of Champion Golfers," in which they theorized that, regardless of the perfection of the golf swing and the endless hours of practice, there were eight personality traits found to be essential for a strong golf game.

Graham and Stabler proposed the eight necessary qualities are focus, abstract thinking, emotional stability, dominance, toughmindedness, confidence, self-sufficiency and optimum arousal. Several of the aforementioned traits have also been subsumed under Dr. Jim Loehr's rubric of mental toughness.

Several years ago, I did my own research that led me to isolate exactly 14 mental golf skills that a person should acquire and possess in abundance if he or she plans to be a masterful golfer - one skill for each club in your bag. That means you double your fire power by learning to employ that many mental aptitudes.

At the very top of my list of 14 skills is having a positive attitude. They say "attitude is everything" and they're right. I see plenty of folks who call themselves golfers, but can't hit it out of their own shadow, mainly because their attitude is one where they refuse to learn, don't want to change and disdain improving. Their attitude precludes any coaching.

Others are so negative they defeat themselves before they even tee it up. Staying positive means optimism, which is the same quality that helps people beat cancer and recover from a heart attack sooner. The body and mind respond brilliantly to positive thinking, mostly because of hard wiring - our neurobiological response promotes healthier neurotransmitter flow with more extensive neural connections. The bottom line is better performance.

Next is being an adaptive thinker. Competitive golf is played under changing conditions by golfers with ever-varying swings and on golf courses that are never the same from one day to the next. Awareness and adjustment are indispensable and ongoing features of playing good golf. The more you can be aware of what is going on around you and the conditions you are facing, the better able you are to make the proper adjustments. The quicker you are to adjust to the dynamics of the game from moment to moment, the better your chances of winning.

If you're an adaptive thinker, you are better able to cope with surprises, disappointments, challenges, potential disasters and quirks that happen during each round.

Our third brain-power golf skill is concentration – being able to concentrate on a task for an extended period of time. That's hard for some of us, of all ages. Some folks I see have an easier time concentrating on a text message than on a golf shot.

Going way beyond the ability to focus on this shot or that putt, from moment to moment, the ability to concentrate suggests staying in the game for an entire four- or fivehour round, and perhaps for an entire two- to four-day tournament.

It's easy to let your mind wander. The mind wanders when everything is perfectly still like setting up to the golf ball. Next time you play a match or an important round of golf, try turning off your phone and devoting every particle of physical and psychic energy to your task at hand – that assignment being playing the very best golf you are capable of playing on that particular day.

Mental toughness is our fourth skill, and to be sure, there is some overlap with several of the other requirements for playing masterful and winning golf.

Mostly I'd like you to think of mental toughness as never beating yourself.

Look at it this way: If you wind up on the losing end of things, let it be due to the fact you were playing a better opponent or due to a circumstance that was beyond your control. Perhaps luck. Don't beat yourself.

Of course, there are a lot of subtleties involved with developing a mentally tough way of playing golf. Your first step toward being a mentally tougher golfer is to strip away any doubt or fear that may creep into your mind during your next round of golf.

Doubt and fear are enemies. You must never fear losing.

Number five on my group of 14 skills is resolutely and unblinkingly believing in yourself. When I coached Gerina Mendoza (former UTEP standout and now Gerina Piller), she had tons of talent, but didn't truly believe that she was good enough or worthy enough of making it as a professional.

The next year she was a star on Big Break VII and soon she was making some money on the LPGA Futures Tour. She is now a regular on the LPGA Tour and has numerous top 10 finishes to her credit – just because she learned to believe in herself.

At our PGS golf schools Herb Wimberly and I ask our group of golfers to raise their hand if they think they are a good putter. Not every hand goes up. The point is that you won't be a good putter unless you first think you're a good putter. We all could use improvement, naturally. But you have to believe.

Roger Bannister would never have broken the four-minute mile in 1954 if he didn't know in his heart he would really do it. He believed. I would never have won an Ironman Triathlon Masters championship in Hawaii if I didn't first believe I would do it.

Self-discipline is my sixth most desirable quality for putting yourself in the winning golf zone.

This one isn't complicated at all. It means dedicating yourself to practicing when you should, working out when you should and maintaining the healthy lifestyle you should. It means having a solid pre-shot routine that you go through before each and every shot.

It also means you discipline your mind while playing your own game, and avoid taking unnecessary chances and making dumb mistakes. Discipline and self-control go hand in hand. You must keep your emotions under control at all times; don't let your emotions (such as anger) control you.

Can you grasp how powerful these skills and behaviors are for your successful golf game? If so, send me a like at the Bulletin. I don't do Facebook or any other social media, since I value my privacy more than popularity.

In a week or two, we will look at skills seven through 14.

to coach at Illinois in 1975, the program was in shambles, and had been to the NCAA tournament just once in 24 years, Henson said.

Despite being just a two-hour drive from Chicago, Illinois rarely landed top Chicago prospects.

Collins helped change that.

"I was still playing in summer tournaments and knew lots of coaches in Chicagoland," Collins said.

"He was a tremendous recruiter," Henson said of Collins. "He helped us build the team that went to the Final Four in '89, and we should have gone in '88, when we had one of the best teams in the NCAA. Jimmy helped recruit Deon Thomas, Kendall Gill, Steven Bardo, Kenny Battle and many others."

As a player, Collins was arguably the greatest Aggie ever.

Despite playing in an era when freshmen weren't eligible to play, Collins remains NMSU's No. 3 all-time leading scorer with 1,734 points in 89 games, for a 19.5 average. He still holds the mark for most points in a single season, with 754, when he averaged 24.3 per game in 1969-70. That same year he was named All-America by three different national organizations.

"Jimmy was a finesse player and he had that beautiful shot," Henson said. "He could score against anybody; he could just go over the top of you. You could not stop him. He was one of the most offensive-minded players I have ever coached. Just a prolific scorer."

After his senior season, the Bulls took Collins in the first round of the 1970 NBA draft as the 11th pick overall. The Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association also drafted him

When Henson left Illinois in 1996, Collins moved to the University of Illinois-Chicago, where he built that program up and coached for nearly 14 years.

Under Collins' direction, the Flames won 218 total games, won 20 or more in four different seasons, and earned three trips to the Former Aggie Jimmy Collins will be back in Las Cruces Thursday, April 24. Collins starred for New Mexico State University from 1967-70 and, as a senior, played on the Aggies' Final Four team. He remains the third leading scorer in NMSU men's basketball history.

NCAA tournament.

"I thank all the people who have made my time in coaching so memorable and fulfilling," Collins said upon his retirement from UIC. "I thank coach Lou Henson for my start at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 1983, and all the wonderful people I met and worked with along the way. I thank the people at UIC for their confidence in my ability, especially my former and current assistant coaches, directors of basketball operations and support staff. Aggielnsider

Football finale SaturdayLooking forward to fall play

The big finale of spring workouts for the Aggie football team is Saturday night.

There is no admission charge for the game that starts at 6 p.m. at Aggie Memorial Stadium. Head coach Doug Martin and his staff have worked hard over the last month and a half to get a good foundation down for the seasons ahead. I am talking about coach's long-range plans for establishing a consistent winner here in Las Cruces, not just some flash in the pan. He told reporters that exact thing leading into Saturday's game.

"It's all about fundamentals, especially on defense." Martin said, "We were so poor defensively last year that we had to go back to basics."

Martin pointed with pride to the future: "We are a much better team defensively and that is without incoming freshmen."

Martin thinks the talent recruited for the coming year will be a big dividend on that side of that ball.

"The freshmen we have recruited will help us a lot right away,"

Martin said. "We will be a better defensive team this fall."

Coach is putting substance to his words as he has taken two of his better offensive players and shifted them to the other side of the ball. Martin saw the need to increase the athleticism in the secondary, so King Davis III has moved to cornerback and Travaughn Colwell is now a

Although he didn't say it, this move tells ole Pete that coach Martin is comfortable with the new man at quarterback. Tyler Rogers has been taking most of the snaps in the spring. He will be a sophomore after playing his first season at Arizona Western Junior College.

There are a passel of other quarterbacks coming in as freshmen, too. When I think about the spring workouts, I keep remembering coach Martin's statement at the party announcing the new recruits.

"I am building a program, not just a team," he said and the moves he has made over the last couple of months show me he is walkin' the walk regarding what needs to be done.

The next chapter in the story of Aggie football's growth will unfold for you Saturday night. I'm getting a good seat to take it all in.

Lots to do this weekend In addition to the spring football game Saturday night, Aggie baseball has a home series this weekend as well. The baseball team hosts a three-game series with Seattle with single games Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Keep an extra crimson shirt handy and Aggie up, pardners.

Soccer strength revealed

Hard work leads to championship

Freddy Delgado Head Coach Women's Soccer

The New Mexico State Women's Soccer Program started off the spring season with a new head coach.

I accepted the position in February 2014. After spending approximately 10 months with the team as an assistant, I knew we had the potential to win and become a WAC conference contender.

Our goals this spring were simple in statement, but difficult in application. We possessed the talent, skill and desire, but we needed the most improvement in the most important aspect, the psychological edge.

We needed to learn how to win, to grind out a victory, to push beyond our comfort zone. Overall, we needed to be more accountable and mentally and physically challenge each other on a daily basis.

Our first match was against Cochise College.

The game ended with a 5-0 victory, but more important than the score was the attacking and scoring mentality. The players played with confidence and creativity. Our movement off the ball was excellent and the overall style was very attractive.

The second game pitted New Mexico State University versus a physical Adams State. We were slow to start, but were able to dominate the speed and tempo of the game in the second half.

Although the Aggies created several opportunities, the game winner didn't come until overtime. Again, NMSU impressed in possession and attack. Dividends paid off from fitness training and mental skills. The result was a 2-0 Aggie win.

We experienced a small setback when the University of Arizona came to play at Aggie Stadium. The Pac 12 team left with the 1-0 win and we walked away learning a valuable lesson. We have the talent, speed and athleticism, but we need to continue to develop the mentality, work ethic and posture of a winner.

When you analyze a championship team, and we have quite a few at NMSU (equestrian, men's basketball, women's softball and men's golf), they have the fortitude, mental toughness and resiliency necessary to win on and off the field.

We concluded our spring season versus two in-state opponents, New Mexico Highlands and Eastern New Mexico.

We did not play our best overall, but played well in what we call the "championship minutes." In the first game, we scored goals in the last five minutes of each half, ending with a dramatic goal that sent the game into overtime. The Aggies continued the pressure and scored the game winner three minutes later.

We took on Eastern New Mexico less than 24 hours later. This was a true mental test – battling a good opponent and fighting fatigue.

The team held strong, adjusting and executing a different game plan. Again, NMSU came through scoring two goals in the last 10 minutes of the game earning a 2-1 victory.

Spring has been a valuable time for NMSU soccer.

We improved in several areas, specifically learning what is required to become a WAC Champion.

We are excited about the future of Aggie soccer and can't wait to give our fans a great season.

Paul Denele, a junior from Lille, France, went 2-0 in singles play at the No. 2 court and 2-0 in doubles with junior partner Patrick Pfister. He picked up a twoset win on Sunday, April 13, helping NM State to the 7-0 sweep over University of Texas-Permian Basin. In doubles, the Aggie duo stopped their opponents from Grand Canyon at the No. 2 court 8-4 on Saturday, April 12, to help NM State to the win and finish the season 3-0 in WAC play.

Susana Alcaraz

Junior Women's tennis Aguascalientes, Mexico

Susana Alcaraz, a junior from Aguascalientes, Mexico, had a solid weekend for the Aggies, winning both of her singles matches at the No. 2 spot and winning her doubles match with partner Marie-Pier Thiffault against Arkansas State on Friday. Alcaraz also earned her first WAC win of the season with a three-set victory at the second court on Sunday, April 13, as NM State defeated the Vandals 4-3.

The Oñate High School Knights softball team is currently is the driver's seat in the District 3-5A standings. The Knights started the season on a hellacious 13-game win streak, and won 19 out of their first 20 games.

"They know that every time we take the field, we can play," OHS head coach Fernie Valles said. "It doesn't matter who we play, we will hold our own. We aren't putting any pressure on ourselves, we just play our game."

Oñate kicked off district play "batting 1.000," winning its first six district matchups. The Knights aim on extending that record while the remaining games on their schedule are against district foes.

The Las Cruces High School softball team finds itself in the thick of things in district play. The Bulldawgs got off to a decent start to the regular season, but have two solid winning streaks thus far in the season. LCHS started the season winning 13 out of their first 19.

"We know we have each other's back no matter what," Las Cruces High senior pitcher Dannette Diaz said. "We have a lot of young girls out and it's a different atmosphere at practice and at the games. We had our losses early in the season and I'm glad we got over that. We just have to stay strong from here on out."

The Bulldawgs will face District 3-5A teams from now on in the regular season.

The Mayfield High School softball team has had a .500 regular season. In the Trojans' first 18 games, they finished 9-9, winning one of the first three District 3-5A matchups.

"Sometimes we go out there and look like superstars, and sometimes we look like we have never played before," Mayfield head coach Leonard Almaguer said. "We have a pretty powerful team on offense, but once we start kicking the ball around on defense, other teams start getting out in front of us."

The Trojans will need to make the best out of their remaining district games if they want to contend at a high level come playoff time.

The District 3-4A softball standings find the Centennial Hawks at the number one spot. The Hawks have a commanding lead in district play, but the remaining games on their schedule will be up against District 3-4A teams, and anything can happen.

Centennial High School ended the 2013 season with a 20-7 record overall and fared 10-2 in district play.

Oñate High School softball player Nikayla Rentaria puts her all into the swing, smashing another hard drive for the Knights, already armored by a handful of home runs during the doubleheader games Oñate won Saturday, April 5, by scores of 16-1 and 16-0. Oñate is currently in the driver's seat in District 3-5A standings, winning 19 of its first 20 games.

Aggies host four games vs. Seattle U

The New Mexico State baseball team returns to action at Presley Askew Field this week with a four-game Western Athletic Conference series against the Seattle U. Redhawks from Thursday through Saturday, April 17-19.

Thursday's game is scheduled for a 6:05 p.m. (MDT) start, and Friday will feature a day-night doubleheader beginning at 3 p.m. Friday's second game will be a seven-inning game and will not be considered a conference matchup. Saturday's series finale is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

The series opener Thursday and the closing game Saturday will be broadcast live on television over the AggieVision network. Both games on Friday can be heard over the airwaves on KSNM AM 570 with Jeff Matthews on the call.

The Aggies come into this week's WAC matchup with a 13-19 overall record and 5-4 in WAC play. NM State has not played a game since a 6-9 loss to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., Tuesday, April 8. A four-game series at North Dakota scheduled for last weekend, April 11-13, was canceled due to inclement weather.

Sophomore third baseman Derek Umphres and senior first baseman Kris Koerper will try to help the Aggies improve on a 7-9 record at Presley Askew batting average while Koerper is right behind at .333. Both infielders have seven doubles and three home runs on the season, one behind Ryan Wagner's team-leading four home runs. Koerper leads the team in RBIs with 28 while Umphres has marked 24. NMSU as a team leads the WAC with 181 total RBIs.

Umphres leads the squad with a .350

On the mound, Aggie ace Christopher Bradley has a 4.09 ERA and a team-leading 38 strikeouts in 44 innings pitched. Junior right-hander Riley Barr leads NMSU with a 2.50 ERA and is undefeated at 4-0 in 15 appearances, including one start.

Seattle comes to Las Cruces with a .500 record (15-15). The Redhawks are one game ahead of the Aggies in the WAC standings, sitting at 6-3 in conference play. During its last WAC matchup, Seattle swept a three-game series from Northern Colorado to improve to 6-0 at home in conference play. The Redhawks, however, are winless (0-3) in WAC matchups on the road.

Seattle is coming off a 9-4 victory over Portland Tuesday, April 15, which pushed its winning streak to five games.

AMANDA FORMICA.

Empowerment Congress

On Monday, April 14, Z-Trans, the bus service from Alamogordo to Las Cruces, added four new stops along U.S. Highway 70 in the eastern part of Doña Ana County.

The new stops include the Organ Community Center, Brahman Road, Weisner Road and Holman Road, providing service that terminates at the new Multimodal Center in Downtown Las Cruces.

Easy access will be available there to the Roadrunner city bus system and other transit, according to a press release about the expanded service.

The cost from East Mesa stops to Las Cruces will be $1 each way.

Residents of East Mesa, working through the local Empowerment Congress and the South Central Regional Transit District (SCRTD), worked together to bring the bus service to their communities.

SCRTD, covering Doña Ana and Sierra Counties, was formed to coordinate existing transit services and provide new transit in areas that lack service. The City of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County provided support for the expanding service.

Bus service to the East Mesa is the first of three pilot projects that the SCRTD will initiate over the next several weeks, cooperating with local transit companies and nonprofits to provide service from Las Cruces to Anthony, Sunland Park and Chaparral, via state Highways 28, 478 and 404; and to Hatch and Truth or Consequences via Interstate 25.

Funding for the SCRTD comes from Doña Ana and Sierra counties and eight local municipalities, as well the New Mexico Department of Transportation and La Clinica de la Familia. Capital outlay funding secured by local legislators will provide support for the purchase of buses to serve the routes as they develop.

Amanda Formica of the Empowerment Congress said the access to public transportation provides new opportunities for local communities.

"Connected transit services will provide unprecedented opportunities for our county residents to access medical care and educational opportunities, connecting residents to commercial and community services in the City of Las Cruces and other areas," Formica said. "This is the beginning of a great new era of economic development for the people of our region."

Members of the local Empowerment Congress take a ride on the Z-Trans No. 70 bus Monday, April 12, after cutting a ribbon to declare the start of new stops along U.S. Highway 70 that now connect people living in the outer East Mesa to public transportation in Las Cruces, as well as commuting to Alamogordo.

OBITUARY

RUDOLFO "RUDY" VALENZUELA

May 9, 1955 - April 6, 2014

Rudolfo "Rudy" H. Valenzuela, 58, lifelong resident of Las Cruces, NM, entered eternal life Sunday, April 6, 2014, at his home surrounded by his loving family. He was born May 9, 1955, to Carmen and Guadalupe Hernandez Valenzuela.

Carmen and Guadalupe Hernandez Valenzuela. For 34 years, Rudy was the Director of Plant Operations at University Terrace Good Samaritan Village. He loved the great outdoors and everything it had to offer, such as camping, hiking and exploring his surroundings. An avid fisherman and hunter of both small and big game, he always took the time to share his knowledge with several of the younger family members of the correct and safe ways of enjoying these hobbies.

Rudy was a big Dallas Cowboys fan, a jack of all trades who also loved to cook and grill for everyone to enjoy, shot a mean game of pool and was just an all-around wonderful man who did so much for so many, yet never asked or expected anything in return. He was very kind hearted, compassionate, reliable, protective, and a very hardworking, dedicated man. Rudy had a great love for music; was an accomplished bass guitar player with many local bands including Sama and Mixx Bands, to name a few.

On September 8, 1979, Rudy married Rosalie Chavez; together they raised a family and made a house into a home in their 34 years of marriage. Rudy was highly respected by all who knew him, always leaving a smile wherever he went. As an honest and sincere provider, Rudy was a great husband, father, grandfather, and uncle not to mention mentor and role model to so many.

Without a doubt, it will be a difficult task to fill the shoes of such a good man who was the very solid rock and foundation that held the family together when no one else could or would. He was greatly loved and will be missed but never forgotten, as he keeps a watchful eye on us all from above.

Survivors include his loving wife, Rosalie Valenzuela of the family home; three sons, Rudy Mangum of Albuquerque, Antonio Valenzuela and Javier Valenzuela; two daughters, Jessica Arellano and Valerie Chavez; three brothers, Raul Valenzuela (Vickie), Alfredo Valenzuela (Natalie), all of Las Cruces and Miguel Alba (Liz) of El Paso, Texas; two sisters, Blanca Valenzuela (Andres) and Bertha Montoya (Mike), as well as his maternal grandmother, Angelita Hernandez all also of Las Cruces. Other survivors include 17 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, along with numerous nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his parents, a sister, Genevieve Lucero, brothers, Carmen "Junie" Valenzuela and Arturo "Tudy" Valenzuela, as well as numerous aunts, uncles and nephews.

Services were held Friday, April 11, 2014, at Immaculate Heart of Mary Cathedral, followed by The Rite of Committal and Interment at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens Cemetery, 5140 W. Picacho where he was laid to rest.

Serving as casket bearers will be Matthew Valenzuela, Michael Lucero, Sam Montoya Jr., Michael Sedillo, Michael Rodriguez and Andres Toro.

Service arrangements have been entrusted to the care of Baca's Funeral Chapels, 300 E. Boutz Road, Las Cruces, 527-2222. For online condolences log on to www.bacasfuneralchapeslascruces.com.

Local chambers host expo

Trade and investment event targets Chihuahuan businesses

By Alta LeCompte

When Las Cruces invites potential investors and trading partners from Chihuahua to visit the City of the Crosses, good things can result – heavy industry, advanced technology and even the adult beverage sotol.

The fourth Las Cruces Foreign Investment Trade Mission, scheduled for Friday, May 2, at the Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces is expected to bring some 30 Chihuahuan businesses to town for the day.

Some may even decide to establish a presence here, said Richard Aguilar, president of the Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce.

That's what happened with sotol, a distilled spirit made from a yucca-like plant.

"After the second trade mission, Pro's Ranch Market began purchasing that product at a very good price to distribute in the United States," Aguilar said.

Local businesses are invited to become sponsors, vendors or attendees and check out the opportunities. Those wishing to have a "deeper discussion" with a Chihuahua-based business may do so by appointment, he said.

Attendees can view vendor exhibits showcasing products and services. They also may arrange to participate in the business-to-business match-making sessions from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.

"We want to expose potential investors to existing businesses here in the area, to look at opportunities to expand their product lines, create joint ventures and introduce their businesses to the region," he said.

Chambers join forces

This year, the event will have added greater reach, since the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce will for the first time join the Hispanic Chamber in hosting it.

"One of the reasons we decided to invite the Greater Chamber was we figured we could have an even greater impact on the community," Aguilar said. "We want to make this about Las Cruces, not about the Hispanic Chamber."

"It's important for the community to

TIDD budgets for Downtown civic plaza

Bank of the West to sell site for development

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Rulletin

Downtown's search for its beating heart, the long proposed civic plaza, may at last be ending.

On Monday, April 14, the Tax Increment Development District (TIDD) board, composed of the mayor and councillors, voted unanimously to budget for the $5.5 million project.

"The plaza is central to what people want to see in Las Cruces and what we know needs to happen Downtown," Mayor Pro Tem Greg Smith said following the vote.

A design charrette held in 2013 confirmed the community's frequently voiced interest in making the plaza the next step in Downtown development, which got in high gear with the return in 2012 two-way vehicle traffic to Main Street.

Although the plaza was No. 2 on the TIDD project priority list, second only to the charrette, it had not appeared on the budget list and therefore wasn't eligible for TIDD funds.

"Adding the plaza to the TIDD plan will allow us to access TIDD funds for the entire scope of the project," senior city planner Andy Hume told the board.

Next steps include a council vote on the TIDD budget addition, scheduled for Monday, April 21, and a May 12 meeting during which council will see a signed agreement between Las Cruces Community Partners LLC (LCCP), the investment group purchasing the plaza site, and the seller, Bank of the West.

Street, east by Church Street, south by Griggs Avenue, and north by a reopened Organ Street, Hume told the board.

Bob Pofahl of LCCP told the board the LCCP and Bank of the West have reached an agreement specifying that the partners will buy the site currently occupied by a bank drive-through and demolish the structure to make way for the plaza. The bank and its tenants will continue to occupy the main bank building at 201 N. Church St.

"Bank of the West was tremendous to work with," Pofahl said. "They really have gone the extra mile to make this happen. They believe in Downtown."

In order to make the deal possible, the bank is willing to do without its drive-through but may look for another drive-through location in the future, Pofahl

He confirmed that the old city hall, once thought to be a relocation option for the bank, is no longer in play and no other buildings are part of the deal.

'I think we're starting to see some of the most important and most location-dependent pieces fall into place, "Councillor Nathan Small said of the Downtown revitalization. "This is a key piece."

Mayor Ken Miyagishima, who chairs the board, raised concerns about the status of the deal between the bank and the plaza developers.

He said he had expected to see a signed contract and earnest money by April 14, the deadline the partners had been given to report on their progress acquiring their location of choice for the plaza.

'We need some type of insurance, a contract moving the project forward," Miyagishima said. "The city needs to have this wrapped up and some kind of money changing hands, even if it's just earnest money. It's important for money to exchange hands so council has something they can bank on."

Pofahl said the partners and the bank wanted to know the TIDD board was setting aside money for the plaza before they signed an agreement. He said the parties have agreed on price, done a walk-through and can share details of the agreement with city staff immediately.

He said the parties would, however, need at least 30 days to produce a signed document. In addition, he asked that city staff be authorized to work out the details of the project with LCCP.

Summarizing the discussion, Assistant City Manager Brian Denmark characterized the situation as "a bit of chicken and egg."

He said that while the board raised important questions, "from the partners' position there was a bit of a risk issue on whether the city was really committed to building the plaza.

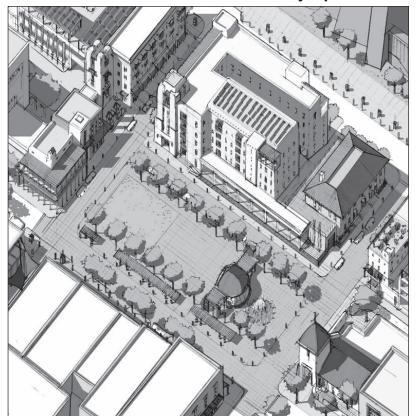

That was the action they were asking for," he said. He expressed confidence the city and LCCP could "bring back all the answers" May 12.

Among details to be resolved are the city's purchase of the plaza when all the improvements have been completed by LCCP.

"We are happy the city committed to 30 days to work out the details," Pofahl said following the meet-"We would rather move it along quickly."

He described the plaza as an additional place for people to gather Downtown for events without having to close Main Street.

"We agree with city staff, the community and the councillors the plaza is an important catalyst to the continued renewal of Downtown," he said.

The site of the Downtown plaza as envisioned by PlaceMakers LLC, the firm that facilitated the 2013 design charrette. A street would be opened to connect La Placita with Church Street. Las Cruces Community Partners LLC intends to use California architect Stefanos Polyzoides to design final concept plans, which would require city approval, according to LCCP's Bob Pofahl.

The event can help marry the two groups together, Allen said.

He cited as an example Virgin Galactic. If the company is looking to buy things not available locally, Mexican companies may be able to supply them, he said.

The two chambers will share the advertising and outreach to members, recruit sponsors and invite participants.

Exploring opportunities

Sectors represented at this year's event will include: tourism, agriculture, manufacturing, retail, food and beverage, film, aerospace, education and real estate.

"One of the big things is to showcase the farming industry, Aguilar said, noting the large number of out-of-state and out-of-country attendees at the recent Western Pecan Growers Association convention at Hotel Encanto.

"Chile also has good potential," he said.

turing move into the area and are partnering with Armando Martinez, a specialist in the Chihuahuan trade office, who is making connections on the southern side of the border. Martinez said his office is contacting key government, non-

He said the chambers also are looking to have manufacgovernmental organizations and private business organizations to invite them to be part of the mission, and also informing the media.

The response so far has being very good," he said.

Aguilar said one group he would especially like to entice to stay in Las Cruces hotels, eat in the restaurants and shop in local stores is business owners whose children attend New Mexico State University.

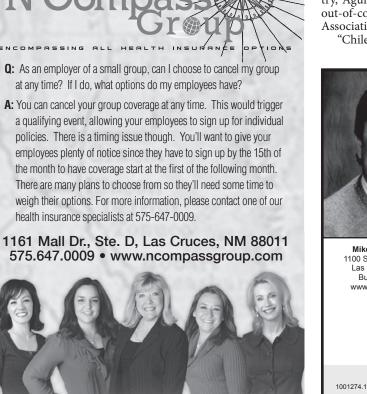

"When they visit some of them jump across the border and meet their children in El Paso," he said.

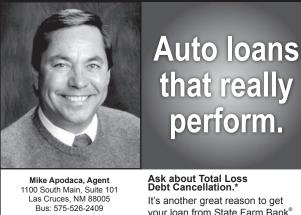

Aguilar said with the expansion of the border zone the trade mission is targeting all the state of Chihuahua to showcase the potential for growth in the Las Cruces area.

We see a lot of commerce at our shared border skipping over Las Cruces," he said. "Some is going north to Albuquerque. We need to put our heads together and make some of that stay. We should open a dialogue with businesses on how to get some of that business to come to Las Cruces."

In conjunction with the trade mission there will be a luncheon for Chihuahuan visitors, a golf outing and opportunities to explore Las Cruces' commercial, cultural and culinary

"We want to show off our beautiful city. We're pretty proud of Las Cruces," Aguilar said.

DOL announces veterans' training grants

U.S. Secretary of Labor Thomas Perez has announced a grant competition that will award an estimated 24 or more Homeless Veteran Reintegration Program grants totaling approximately $6 million to provide an estimated 2,000 veterans with occupational, classroom and on-the-job training, as well as job search and placement assistance, to help them succeed in the civilian labor market.

"Every day, our service members – and their families – make tremendous sacrifices for their country. Yet too many veterans are homeless," Perez said.

"The programs funded through this grant will work to help homeless veterans find good jobs and provide them with opportunities for a brighter future."

Funds are being awarded on a competitive basis to state and local work force investment boards, local public agencies, tribal governments and nonprofit organizations, including faith-based and community organizations.

Successful applicants will design a program that addresses the challenges associated with homeless veterans.

The solicitation for grant applications (SGA 14-02) will be available at www.grants.gov.

For more information, call Cassandra Mitchell at 202-693-4589.

Comments sought for Southline Transmission Line Project draft EIS

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) and Western Area Power Administration (Western) released the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for the proposed Southline Transmission Line Project.

Southline Transmission LLC, proposes building a 360-mile line from near Las Cruces, to Tucson, Ariz.

The line would cross BLM-managed public land, state land and private property. Southline indicates that the line would improve reliability of the electrical grid and help facilitate renewable energy markets in the region.

A 90-day comment period begins with a public meeting from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 6, at Ramada Las Cruces Hotel and Conference Center, 201 E. University

The Draft EIS and maps showing the proposed routes can be viewed at www.blm.gov/nm/southline.

For more information, contact BLM National Project Manager Mark Mackiewicz at 435-636-3616 or mmackiew@blm.gov.

Building Las Cruces Las Cruces High School

Phase I of the Las Cruces High School construction project is well under way and consists of building new classrooms across El Paseo Road from the school, along with a gateway connector (footbridge). A new administration area and media center also will be constructed. The Phase I construction contract was awarded to Wooten/Sundt. The cost of the total project, which will take an estimated five to six years to complete, will be $82 million.

Las Cruces celebrates Earth Day all week long

Fashion show, glass recycling launch and more

Carrie Hamblen Going green

I am always amazed and impressed with Las Cruces.

reative events happening in our community. From the successful Main Street Movie Night last Saturday, the celebration of the fifth anniversary of the Prehistoric Trackways National Monument, the many art openings and an important first step in getting public transportation on the East Mesa, Las Cruces has a lot going on and we should be proud of it.

Another series of events to celebrate all that is wonderful about Las Cruces begins this Saturday, April 19, as we kick off our annual Earth Day activities.

For more than 40 years, communities around the world have been celebrating Earth

The Earth Day movement began with Wisconsin Sen. Gaylord Nelson after he witnessed the damages from a devastating oil spill in California in 1969. Nelson saw the public awareness surrounding air and water pollution throughout the country increase and knew the time was right to begin a nationwide movement.

On April 22, 1970, after a tremendous amount of planning and coordination, a reported 20 million activists took to the streets in communities all over the country to demonstrate for a healthy, sustainable environment.

As a result of the Earth Day activities in 1970, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was created and we saw the passage of the Clean Air, Clean Water, and Endangered Species Acts.

Now, 44 years later, activists and environmentalist aren't the only groups fighting for a cleaner planet.

More and more businesses have been recognizing the value of recycling, reducing their carbon footprint and using renewable energy.

In addition to lessening the impact on the planet, businesses are now seeing how incorporating environmental practices into their business operations can reduce their costs. Recycling cans and paper is great. By doing so, less aluminum and paper goes into the landfill.

However, businesses now are doing more. Printing on both sides of the paper, using ceramic cups and using cloth towels can save hundreds of dollars at the end of the year. Several of our Las Cruces Green Chamber members are doing just that.

In addition, buying local products supports local jobs and reduces the pollution that goes into the air from 18-wheelers transporting goods from one part of the country to the other.

As we head into the beginning of our Earth

Day activities this weekend, the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce is looking forward to celebrating several events.

Saturday, April 19, in partnership with Keep Las Cruces Beautiful, the Las Cruces Green Chamber is co-sponsoring the ReUse and Recycle Fashion show. The show will take place on the Placita of Main Street Downtown. The show, featuring wearable items made from recycled materials, will start at noon. It is free and open to the public.

Wednesday, the second annual Green Chamber membership meeting will take place at the Stan Fulton Center. Green Chamber member Sodexo is providing food and beverages, and we will report the past year's activities, preview where we are going in the next year and welcome member comments and participation. An RSVP is needed by Monday, April 21, for the membership meeting.

The last event will be the annual Earth Day celebration from noon to 5 p.m. at Young Park on Sunday, April 27. The NMSU OASIS club organizes this free event every year and attendees will see a number of locally owned businesses that are doing their part to reduce their carbon footprint, conserve energy and protect the planet.

Also, partnering with the South Central Solid Waste Authority, the Green Chamber is happy to announce the unveiling of the glass recycling program in Las Cruces. For many years, Las Crucens have wanted to recycle their glass bottles instead of throwing them in the garbage

Beginning Sunday, April 27, residents will be able to take their glass bottles and recycle them in the bright yellow bins that will be seen by the public for the first time. Glass bottles will need to be sorted by color.

This is an exciting time for our city and we hope you will stop by the Green Chamber booth or the SCSWA booth to learn more about this long overdue venture. Also, make sure to drop by and say hello to all of the member businesses at the park.

June irrigation likely

Water table drops in region

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

Although mountain snow packs and river water tables not in close proximity, they are connected by agriculture irrigation operations.

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District has scheduled early June as a possible opening for the 2014 season. But no water is running in the river, and snow melt water is needed to recharge the aquifer.

The snow pack in the Upper Rio Grande Basin in Colorado is 82 percent of average, the Natural Resources Conservation Service

'We'll get some of that snow pack from in the higher elevations into the reservoir," New Mexico state climatologist David DuBois said.

The snow pack for the Jemez Basin this spring, however, was only 1 percent of normal for this time of year.

"And that's pretty well melted off," DuBois added.

The NRCS snow pack report for the Rio Chama Basin was 54 percent of average. With 362,000 acre-feet in Elephant Butte

Reservoir, about 17 percent of a full reservoir, farmers won't have much water to start

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District is tracking the water table. Its ground water research shows that heavy pumping the last four years has brought the aquifer down 1.8 feet in the Hatch and Rincon Valleys and 2.43 feet in the Mesilla Valley.

"March and April are normally dry months, and there's not much chance of getting precipitation during those months in southern New Mexico," DuBois said.

Document spells out owner, investor work relationship

PALLARES

Coming to terms

By Ebetuel "Beto" Pallares

An entrepreneur who's ready to let investors contribute equity to his or her promising venture needs to shape an agreement that allows others to share in the rewards but lets him or her retain significant control over her creation.

The rough draft of that agreement is called a term sheet. It's essentially the template for the legal contract that ultimately spells out the responsibilities and relationships of business partners.

Commonly used by professionals during pre-investment negotiations, a term sheet can also be used by small-business owners to discuss terms with investors, including friends and family members. The document aims to protect the interests of all parties to the deal and prevent the disputes that can destroy personal and professional relationships if things don't work out as expected.

The term sheet is for discussion only; neither party is bound by it until investors have researched the business's financial records and both sides have signed a stock-purchase agreement. Each side, of course, will press for the most palatable terms.

The typical term sheet begins by describing the proposed transaction. It outlines the amount of funding the investor proposes to offer, how much ownership he receives in exchange and what the equity will be used for.

Investors and owners often clash over the statement of a company's pre-investment value. If the parties can't agree on a number, an external appraisal might be required, as owners frequently think their business is more valuable than investors do. An entrepreneur might attract multiple term sheets from different investors, but most investors have the sophistication to arrive at pre-investment values that are not significantly different from each other.

The term sheet notes an ideal closing date for the transaction and sets conditions for the investment, such as investor satisfaction with the findings of due diligence and approval of the company's board of directors. Most term sheets insist that the company maintain its financial health until the deal is sealed at closing.

Investors scrutinize the voting and participation rights the owner is willing to offer, as most expect a say in major business decisions, such as a merger, reorganization, sale, dividend declaration, debt assumption, board of director changes and issuance of other securities such as stocks that would dilute their ownership. Investors often want a seat on the business's board and unbridled access to the business and its financial projections, plans and statements. Some demand to install their own management, though this might be a hard sell for the founder and primary owner.

Term sheet negotiations are all about aligning interests for mutual benefit, so both sides should aim for a compromise document everyone can live with; one that accommodates the desires of owners and investors and is balanced and fair. The object, after all, is to give an embryonic enterprise the funding and leadership it needs to provide a product or service and, in doing so, enrich its creator and financial backers.

'Flash Boys' book tells story of HFTs

Solution is to go back to early 2000s

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

I've been reading Michael Lewis' new book "Flash Boys," a book that has made a big splash in financial circles, including being featured on "60 Minutes."

The book chronicles the rise of high frequency traders (HFTs) and how they take advantage of us everyday investors.

To understand what is going on, one has to realize that in the past decade the old system of a few large stock exchanges - New York, American, and NASDAQ - has been replaced with system that consists of a large number of profit exchanges. The idea of a stock being "listed" on a single exchange has become a quant concept from the past. Every stock is now traded on all the exchanges. The consequence is a highly fragmented market.

This fragmentation is exploited by the HFTs.

Consider an order to buy 100,000 shares that arrives at a small exchange. The buy order is issued via fiber optic cable and scurries off to the various exchanges at the speed of

Suppose it arrives at a small exchange first, where 10,000 of the 100,000 is satisfied. The order is still traveling to the other exchanges, which are marginally farther

The exact time it takes the order to arrive at the next closest exchange can be, and usually is, much longer than the theoretical minimum, as the order will meander here, meander there, depending on the vagrancies of the telecom switching system.

Meanwhile, the HFTs, who have seen the order when it arrived at the first exchange, use dedicated, privately owned and nearly straight lines from the first exchange to the other exchanges, racing ahead by milliseconds to beat the original order.

The trade saunters along, finally arriving at the next exchange, only to find that the HFTs have used their microsecond time advantage to buy ahead of the order, forcing the price up. They will then sell to the original buyer at a marked up price.

The HFTs own the stock only for microseconds – the time between when the HFT's signal arrived and time that the original order arrived. The whole thing is driven by computers and happens at 100 of times faster than the blink of an eye.

All this is to transfer a few pennies per share from the pocket of the buyer, which is often a pension fund or a retail stock broker buying on behalf of the little guy, to the pocket of the HFTs. Multiply by millions of shares a day, and you are talking about real money.

No real value is created in the process, yet think of the resources that are wasted – millions spent on computers, programmers and dedicated fiber optic lines – resources that could be used for something productive, such as building hospitals or feeding the hungry.

The sad thing about all this is that it arises from the fracturing of the exchanges.

In a world of a few large, nonprofit exchanges, that is, in the world as it existed until just a few years ago, each stock would be listed on a single exchange and the HFTs' strategy wouldn't

But Wall Street lobbied for a change in the rules that opened up the market for entry by small for-profits, creating the fractured market of today. The current system is less efficient than the old system; it is this inefficiency, created by lobbying, that the HFTs exploit.

What is clear from "Flash Boys" is that the system is rigged to benefit a few insiders with the ability to lobby for rules and regulations that benefit them at the expense of everyone else.

The solution is to go back to the system that was in place in the early

NMSU inducts alumni into Hall of Fame

El Paso Electric, Johnson receive the Traders Award

Greg G. Maxwell, a top executive at Phillips 66 and a 1978 graduate of New Mexico State University, will be inducted into the NMSU College of Business Hall of Fame.

In addition, the college will present the Traders Award to alumna Judy Gray Johnson and corporate supporter El Paso Electric. The induction ceremony takes place at 6 p.m. Friday, April 25, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

Established in 1997 by the College of Business, the Hall of Fame honors outstanding business college alumni who have distinguished themselves in their careers

Maxwell is the executive vice president of finance and chief financial officer for Phillips 66. He has more than 35 years of experience in various financial roles within the petrochemical and oil and gas industries, having served as senior vice president, chief financial officer and controller for Chevron Phillips Chemical Co., where he also previously served as vice president and controller.

"New Mexico State provided me with an outstanding educational foundation to begin my career," Maxwell said. "During my career, I have had the opportunity to do business in many different countries and to interact and compete with people who attended various universities. In my opinion, NMSU prepared me to be successful."

Maxwell joined Phillips Petroleum Co. following his graduation in 1978 as a staff accountant in the comptrollers group. He held various positions within the comptrollers group until 1989, when he moved to corporate planning and development as a senior planning specialist. In 1991, Maxwell became a senior financial analyst in the corporate treasury department.

MAXWELL

He served as finance manager for the Phillips chemicals division from 1992 to 1994 and as finance manager of the company's plastics division from 1994 to 1998.

In 1998 he was appointed general auditor for Phillips Petroleum Co. and served in that capacity until joining Chevron Phillips Chemical in 2000.

'NMSU is much more than brick and mortar," he said. "It is the professors, the staff and the students who make NMSU so great. I'm thankful that I had the opportunity to not only grow academically at NMSU, but also to experience the kindness and interest extended to Management Institute. Two special awards also will be given out at the Hall of Fame ceremony.

Introduced in 2006, the Traders Award honors individuals who have given exceptional service to the College of Business. In 2010, the Corporate Traders Award began recognizing outstanding contributions by corporations to the college's mission.

This year's Traders Award recipient is Judy Gray Johnson, a CPA who attended New Mexico State University from 1969 to 1972. Johnson went on to earn her bachelor's of business administration degree in accounting at the University of Houston. She was awarded an honorary doctorate from NMSU in 2012.

Johnson's career experience of more than 30 years includes public accounting, private industry and local government.

She and her husband, Michael, have made generous contributions to NMSU, establishing an endowed chair in the Department of Geological Sciences, creating a professorship in accounting, establishing the Daisy Gray Scholarship in the College of Education, contributing to the Center for the Arts and funding significant improvements to the baseball field.

She serves on the Business Advisory Council and the College of Education Board of Advocates. The Corporate Traders Award this year will go to El Paso Electric in recognition of its ongoing generous support of the College of Business and NMSU.

El Paso Electric has contributed to programs including the Domenici Public Policy Conference, the Business Advisory Council and the Center for Public Utilities, as well as a state-of-the-art distance learning classroom in the college's newest building, Pete V. Domenici Hall, set to open this fall.

The company also supports initiatives across the university – since 1985, El Paso Electric has awarded more than $1.5 million to NMSU.

El Paso Electric executives, including CEO Tom Shockley, have visited the campus to speak with business students and provide mentorship. College of Business Interim Dean Kathy Brook praised both Johnson and El Paso Electric as important and continuing contributors to student success.

"Judy Johnson and El Paso Electric have worked closely with the college for years in ways that directly enhance the academic programs available to our students, as well as our ability to serve the broader community," Brook said. "This award is our way of expressing our gratitude for their exceptional service."

Avenue Art brings color to revitalized Downtown area

By Zak Hansen

Last April, Main Street became a masterpiece, when 20 local, regional and national artists sketched and colored their own large-scale works of art directly onto the pavement during the second annual Avenue Art New Mexico.

Now, from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 25, Avenue Art returns bigger and better, with a slate of new and returning artists eager to share their work and artistic processes with the community. The event is free for artists to enter and free for the public to attend, making it a win-win for the artistic and at-large community.

Organized by the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership (DLCP), led by Director Carrie La Tour, and in collaboration with the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces, Mas Art, the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau and the Doña Ana Arts Council, the third annual public art event has more artists this year than ever before – 24 and counting with two weeks left – solidifying Avenue Art as one of Las Cruces' favorite new community events.

The idea for Avenue Art New Mexico first came to Las Cruces artist Bob Diven after attending similar events in Colorado – the Denver Chalk Art Festival – as well as El Paso's first Chalk the Block. He brought this idea and inspiration to La Tour at the DLCP, and in April 2012, Avenue Art New Mexico was born.

Last year, Diven described the event as "a living, growing, energized thing." That trend seems to be continuing, with a new record of 18 adults and six high school and university students participating in this year's Avenue Art, several of them returning for their second or even third year.

Competing in two categories – student and adult/professional – for cash prizes, artists will gather on Main Street at 6 a.m. to begin the grueling seven-hour process, working with chalk or pastel to transfer their mental masterpiece to a concrete canvas for all to see. A panel of three judges, selected by Diven, will judge the submitted works and give out awards accordingly.

Prizes in the adult category for first, second and third place are $500, $250 and $100, respectively, and in the student category,

Event founder and artist Bob Diven puts the finishing touches on "Harvey" at the 2013 Avenue Art New Mexico. The public chalk art festival returns from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 25, on Main Street Downtown, with more than 20 participating artists in two categories.

awards are $200, $100 and $50. In addition to the two juried categories, an audience favorite award of $100 will be awarded based on public input.

Aside from exposing a wide audience to the wealth of talent found right here in the Mesilla Valley, Avenue Art New Mexico gives attendees an inside look at the artistic process, which usually remains relegated out of sight and behind studio doors.

More than that, too, Avenue Art goes hand in hand with the mission of the DLCP, "to create a signature business destination that celebrates our region's rich cultural heritage, local arts and culture and contributes to a thriving, sustainable and economically vibrant

"Avenue Art New Mexico really gets people Downtown," La Tour said, reiterating her group's goal to put "feet on the street" in Las Cruces' refurbished city center.

"Our goal is always to get people Downtown, get them on Main Street and get them excited. We want them to think, if there's something happening, they think of Downtown."

With the continuing success of Avenue Art New Mexico – and all of the cultural happenings making their home in Las Cruces' revitalized Downtown – that dream is closer than ever

Charlie Daniels headlines Country Music Festival

By Zak HansenLas Cruces Bulletin

Get yer boots on, Las Cruces - the Las Cruces Country Music Festival is back.

Following the hootin', hollerin' success of last year's event, which brought artists including Chase Yalkin, Little Texas, Tommy Lee James and Daryl Worley to Downtown Las Cruces in addition to workshops, a cowboy brunch and more, the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau (CVB) has once again teamed with Helping Hands Event Planning, along with New Mexico True and the New Mexico State University Rodeo, to bring some of country music's legends, locals and up-and-comers to the City of the Crosses.

Initially, the CVB "wanted to create a signature event that not only Las Crucens could enjoy and be proud of, but an event that would draw visitors from around the state and region," said Chris Faivre, director of marketing and communications for the Las Cruces CVB. "Country music is very much a part of our culture, and this festival is a way to recognize and celebrate that."

When searching for a location to hold the first Las Cruces Country Music Festival last year, Faivre said the Downtown area - where the CVB makes its home - was an obvious choice.

"We picked Downtown because we thought it would be a perfect event to showcase the newly revitalized area and try to expose visitors and residents to everything going on Downtown," he said. "As much as we wanted to create a signature event for Las Cruces, we wanted to draw attention to what Downtown has to offer."

Much like last year's festival, this year's Las Cruces Country Music Festival will draw a range of country musicians, from the well-known to the up-and-coming, to Main Street Downtown.

'This year's headliners are a mix of country legends and the next generation of country," Faivre said. "What we try to do when we set our lineup is pick a heritage act people know and have not had a chance to see in a while, and an up-andcomer who has just made it big or is about to."

This year's slate of performers includes the legendary Charlie Daniels Band, Cassadee Pope, Casey James, James Wesley, Chase Bryant and hometown queen Bri Bagwell, and, new this year, performances from locals including Border Avenue, Abe Mac Band, Crooked Beaver Creek, Eli James Band, The Mother Tuckers, Tom Foster Morris and Yarbrough Band.

"Everyone knows Charlie Daniels and is aware of his contributions to country music," Faivre said. "He is a legend and people want to see him live before he decides to retire.

"Cassadee Pope is one of country music's rising stars and has already hit it big by winning NBC's 'The Voice.' She has already had one top-10 hit, is on her way to another, and will be hitting the road as the opening act for Tim McGraw this summer."

Aside from the big show, Faivre said there's plenty to do throughout the weekend-long festival.

You can expect to have a lot of fun this year, from the songwriter's workshop Thursday night through the country brunch on Sunday," he said.

"This year, in addition to the music on the main stage, there will be a second stage for the local acts, as well as the New Mexico True Experience area, which will feature vendors from all over the state showcasing all the great things you can do in New Mexico, as well as an appearance of the RV from 'Breaking Bad,' courtesy of the New Mexico Film Office."

and over again.

This year, the CVB partnered with the NMSU Rodeo, which, to Faivre, seemed a perfect fit – and helped deal with some conflicting schedules.

"Last year, because of scheduling issues, the only weekend available to hold the festival was the weekend after NMSU graduation and the weekend of high school graduation, and both of those events affected attendance," he said. "This year, not only do we not have to contend with either graduation, but we planned the event to coincide with the NMSU rodeo.

"This will be great for both the festival and the rodeo – there is an obvious connection between country music and rodeo, so this is a win-win for both events. We planned the schedule so there is very little overlap between festival events and the rodeo, so attendees can go from one to the other and not miss out. And if you buy a weekend pass to the festival, you get admission to the rodeo as well."

In all, the Las Cruces Country Music Festival not only provides Las Crucens with a top-tier weekend of entertainment, but brings in outof-towners to our fair city - part of the Las Cruces CVB's continuing

"Country music is very much a part of our culture, and this festival is a way to recognize and celebrate that," Faivre said. "Additionally, it is about the quality of life for residents, about another great reason to visit

Las Cruces if you live outside. When we conducted focus groups in Albuquerque a year and a half ago, what they told us was that they liked Las Cruces, but needed a reason to

"We hope this event gives people a reason to come, and while they are here, we hope they find reasons to come back over and over again."

Beck's Coffee unveils artist series of labels

Edition features four Las Cruces artists

By Zak Hansen

Las Cruces Bulletin

Java-hungry visitors to Beck's Coffee's Saturday, April 19, are in for an artistic surprise with their much-needed morning brew, as the beloved staple of the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces unveils its new limited-edition artist series of labels

Inspired by the wild success of the business' first two artist collaborations - Halloween's "Wake the Dead Zombie Blend" in October 2013 and December's "Holiday Blend," with labels designed by Emma Henderson – Beck's Coffee co-owners Tyrell Thacker and Arianna Parsons have enlisted the skills of four talented artists - Bob Diven, Jesse Reinhard, Chris Bardey and Parsons' mother, Ivy Case of Ashland, Mo. – to grace bags of the shop's blended coffees with their own masterpieces.

"These labels not only give new life to the packaging, but they also represent our ongoing commitment to the arts and the formation of unique collaborations between businesses and community members, representing the very best Las Cruces has to offer," Parsons said.

"These artists are among our favorites in the area, so we were thrilled when they agreed to lend their talent to our coffee and even more thrilled when we saw their work."

Renowned Las Cruces artist and Renaissance man Diven created the image for Beck's Coffee's house blend, redubbed

"Jacked Rabbit House Blend" in honor of its over-caffeinated jackrabbit mascot. Reinhard, one of Las Cruces' most prolific, subversive and recognizable artists, lent his hand to the shop's "Full Moon Magic," bearing a night owl perched in front of the full moon in the artist's signature style. Bardey, an artist, educator and founder of West End Art Depot, took charge of the "Brekky Blend" with a linotype image of a wombat operating a unicycle, cuppa' joe in hand. Case's work, which first graced the packaging for Beck's' "Bee's Knees" around Valentine's Day, will be re-released.

"The resulting series, as a whole, is so unique. I don't know if Las Cruces has seen anything like it," Parsons said.

While Beck's Coffee will continue to roast and serve its beloved blends for the time being, this series of packaging is available in extremely limited quantities.

Only 250 pounds of each of the four blends with these labels will be available, and only from Beck's Coffee's location at the farmers market or the business' new bricks-and-mortar location overlooking Klein Park, 130 N. Mesquite St.

Beck's Coffee is open from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. The business is also present at the bi-weekly Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday and Saturday on Main Street Downtown.

For more information, visit www.facebook.com/beckscoffee or call 556-9850.

Las Cruces artist Bob Diven created this label for Beck's Coffee's "Jacked Rabbit House Blend," available starting Saturday, April 19.

Beck's Coffee will unveil a limited-edition series of its blended coffees with labels designed by artists Jesse Reinhard, Chris Bardey, Ivy Case and Bob Diven.

LCCT AUDITIONS HELD

Auditions for "The Full Monty" at the Las Cruces Community Theatre will take place from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 19. The theater is located at 313 N. Main St. "The Full Monty" will run Aug. 15-31.

Adapted from the 1997 film of the same title, "The Full Monty" features a book by Terrence McNally and music and lyrics by David Yazbek. When the travelling Chippendales perform to a sold-out growd in Buffalo.

Adapted from the 1997 film of the same title, "The Full Monty" features a book by Terrence McNally and music and lyrics by David Yazbek. When the travelling Chippendales perform to a sold-out crowd in Buffalo, a motley crew with a lot to overcome, including body image issues, depression and a general lack of talent, set out to put together a routine that will tantalize the town's working women. This wildly funny musical also has a very touching outcome, as the journey to this unlikely evening of stripping brings together the entire community. It is a large-cast comedic show requiring both energy and sincerity. Rehearsals will be Monday through Thursday nights beginning July 14, with an additional weekly meeting to be determined.

Seeking six men between the ages of 20 to 60 (all roles sing individually and must be fully nude in the final moment of the show); one boy between the ages of 11 and 12; and four women of varying ages.

An ensemble of three males and three females is also needed. Each play named characters with lines and would double in numerous small singing and speaking roles.

All men should prepare a one-minute excerpt of a sincere ballad that demonstrates both vocal range and emotional depth. It can be popular music or from a musical.

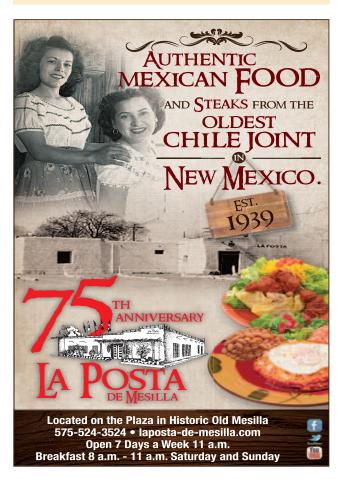

Men interested in one of the stripper roles should also prepare a one-minute strip tease to a song of their choice. You can either bring in a CD or a laptop/mp3 player/phone that can play off an 1/8-inch cable. Full nudity is an essential part of the show, but is not encouraged in the audition strip tease. Showing comfort moving and having fun is the key.

Women should prepare a one-minute excerpt of a sassy, belty song with attitude. It can be popular music or from a musical.

All auditioners should bring sheet music in the appropriate key for the provided accompanist or an accompaniment track on a CD or on a laptop/mp3 player/phone that can play off an 1/8-inch cable. Please bring your calendar with your availability for the rehearsal period. Sides will be provided for cold readings. For more complete descriptions/ages of all the characters in the show, visit www.lcctnm.org.

The art of giving back

Border Artists team with local homebuilders to stage art benefit

By David SalcidoLas Cruces Bulletin

They say home is where the heart is, but what of those who have no homes?

This is a question encountered every day at Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, 999 W. Amador Ave., and its tent city annex, Camp Hope. It's also an ever-present specter in the minds of caring individuals within the community at large, which is why this year, the Border Artists and Soledad Canyon Earth Builders are teaming up to create a unique art event addressing this very issue, called The Art of Giving. What better way to call attention to the plight of the homeless than to create a benefit event within the framework of the annual Las Cruces Home Builders Association Spring Showcase of Homes?

"I was talking with photographer David Shaw," she said. "He started a project about nine months ago where he's photographing people living in a tent at Camp Hope, then again when they are transitioning into their new permanent homes. I thought that was

One thing led to another and soon Bellestri-Martinez was cooking up an idea. According to her, the year before last, the Border Artists had been invited to hang their art in Soledad Canyon's showcase house. It was such a success, she was interested in doing it again. This time, however, since Shaw is a member of the group, she thought about making his work a focus of the show. She talked to the Border Artists and they agreed.

"It just came together after that," she said. "It's going to take everything we have to pull it off, but I'm excited. David's work is so compelling. He will have 100 photographs displayed in our garage gallery. What he has captured in those photos is a story of the strength of the human spirit. He brings a close up view of life at Camp Hope, in every weather condition. It's a view Las Crucens usually only see as they drive by on Amador or Valley Drive."

For his part, Shaw calls the experience of putting his 30-plus years as a photographer to work on this universal issue a humbling expe"I realized almost immediately that any of us could end up there," he said. "I'm touched by how ordinary a lot of these people are. One man, who still lives there, has a Ph.D. from Stanford. The number of homeless veterans is staggering. One out of every four veterans in the United States is homeless. It's an eyeopening experience. Having driven down Valley (Drive) so many times, seeing the tents off in the distance and wondering what goes on there and who these people are - I'm sure many people wonder the same thing. People need to know. This little event is the first of its kind, but it won't be the last."

Opening its doors from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, April 25, the newly finished rammed earth home located at 4396 Isleta Court will serve as a showcase gallery for the event, featuring the works of several Border Artists, on display and available for purchase throughout the house.

Sharing the spotlight with Shaw are such local luminaries as Carolyn Bunch, Sherry Doil-Carter, Rosemary McLaughlin, Winfrey Hearst, Amanda Jaffe, Cassandra Lockwood, Jo Rango, Jeanne Rundell, Jo-an Smith, Scott Weaver and Jean Reece Wilkey exhibiting in a variety of mediums, including acrylics, etchings, abstracts, landscapes, pottery, photography and portraits.

Live music and refreshments will also be featured on opening night. The artwork will be available throughout both weekends of the Spring Showcase of Homes and a portion of all proceeds will benefit Camp Hope.

For more information on The Art of Giving, call 527-9897. To learn more about the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, or to volunteer, call 523-2219 or visit www. mvcommunityofhope.org.

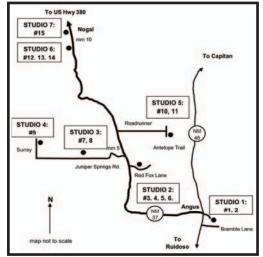

Umberto Bustamante, whose picture graced promotional materials for the Art of Giving show, recently passed away at the age of 84 years old. A Korean War veteran, he was the oldest member of the Camp Hope community. The Border Artists will hold a memorial for him during the event Friday, April 25.

The rise and fall of the Grand Budapest

Wes Anderson's latest, greatest film is a delight

Review by Zak HansenLas Cruces Bulletin

"The Grand Budapest Hotel" opens like a Russian nesting doll, with narratives hidden inside narratives hidden inside narratives.

A young girl stands looking reverently at the bust of a famed Eastern European author, clutching his memoir, accredited to, simply, "The Author."

Opening the book, she begins to read the first chapter, and the narrative abruptly switches to The Author himself (Tom Wilkinson) attempting to address an unseen audience while contending with a house full of rambunctious children. As he speaks, the story moves backward to a time many years before, as The Author, then much younger (Jude Law), recounts his first meeting with the elusive owner of the once-luxurious, later-downtrodden and now-extinct Grand Budapest Hotel in the fictional Republic of Zubrowka, a European alpine state, named Zero Moustafa (F. Murray Abraham).

Over dinner, Zero begins his story, kicking the frame back even further to when he was a young, newly hired lobby boy (Tony Revolori), recounting his experiences under the tutelage of renowned concierge Monsieur Gustave H. (Ralph Fiennes).

As the central narrative begins, it is 1932 and entering the final years of the renowned hotel's glory days. The Republic of Zubrowka is perched on the edge of war, which makes little difference to the hotel's concierge or any of its colorful guests.

Gustave is a concierge of the old-world, fiercely committed to service, going so far to please his patrons and guests as to regularly "service" the elderly female guests of the Grand Budapest, as long as they fit his criteria: rich, old, insecure, vain, superficial and blonde.

"She was dynamite in the sack," Gustave tells his bewildered pedagogue Zero, who returns, "She was 84."

"I've had older," Gustave fires back, unfazed.

Refined, clad in a purple tuxedo and elegantly perfumed, Gustave is the very picture of reserve – aside, of course, from the occasional torrents of expletives that pour from his mouth.

One of Gustave's women is none other than the wealthy heiress Madame D (a nigh-unrecognizable Tilda Swinton), who, one month after her departure from the Grand Budapest, is found dead of mysterious circumstances. Traveling to her wake with Zero by his side, Gustave is bequeathed a priceless painting titled "Boy With Apple," a move that infuriates her money-grubbing extended family, none more than son Dimitri Desgoffe-und-Taxis (Adrien Brody) and his malevolent, cold-blooded assassin/bodyguard J.G. Jopling (a glowering Willem Defoe).

Sneaking away with the invaluable painting, Gustave makes young Zero a proposition: In return for his help, Gustave will make the simple lobby boy his sole heir. Soon after, Gustave is arrested and sent to prison for the alleged murder of his former lover.

To say much more would ruin the surprises Anderson has up his sleeve, all of which are executed perfectly, imbued with his singular visual style and narrative structures familiar to fans of his previous work.

Anderson has well established himself as a virtuosic filmmaker, with works that straddle the line of funny and sad without falling completely to one or the other. His works are undeniably funny, but also imbued with a deep level of sadness and longing just beneath the candy-coated surface, and never before have these two tendencies been so perfectly balanced as in "The Grand Budapest Hotel."

Anderson's humor has always been quiet and understated. Not so with his latest offering, which stands as the director's most broadly comedic work since, well, ever. All the best elements of his earlier films are here, but never have they been so fully realized. Many of the gags in "The Grand Budapest Hotel," and there are myriad, wouldn't seem out of place in a Marx Brothers movie or even a Three Stooges outing, but they, too, are gently, sweetly funny.

Amid all the madcap comedy, though, is a darker strain than we've seen before in Anderson's work. All of his pictures are built on foundations of longing, despair and uncertainty, and "The Grand Budapest Hotel" is his most complete exploration of those feelings.

Visually, Anderson is among America's most iconic directors, and "The Grand Budapest Hotel" is no exception. His artistic vision seems fully realized here, its gentle, storybook style wielded with all the subtlety and grace of a true auteur. Bathed in Anderson's light, airy pastels, the horrors and dread of approaching conflict are all the more troubling.

Working with a typically talented array of performers – another of Anderson's strongest suits as a filmmaker – "The Grand Budapest Hotel" features some of his best characters to date, and enough one-offs and cameos from his frequent collaborators to keep die-hards thoroughly entertained.

At one point in Anderson's film, Agatha (Saoirse Ronan), pâtissier and love interest to the young Zero, who bears a wine-stain birthmark the exact shape of Mexico on her cheek, helps to break Gustave out of prison by smuggling a set of rugged escape tools in her immaculate, pastel courtesan au chocolats from her job at Mendl's Bakery, a stack of three chocolate-filled profiteroles frosted in delicate hues hiding the makings of a prison break.

Much like Anderson's latest, and possibly greatest, film, Agatha hides the difficult inside the light, the ugly inside the pretty – an airy, delicate trifle with a hard reality just below the surface. Only Anderson could pull it off.

Hotel" may stand as Wes

Anderson's most ambitious and successful work yet.

Family dynamics in an unusual setting

'Run and Jump' proves irresistible with patience and commitment grow, that Fielding begins to fill in as father and husband, not to

Review by Jeff BergFor the Las Cruces Bulletin

"Run and Jump" does an odd thing by starting in the middle of the story, with the lively and redheaded Venetia leaving the hospital with her husband Connor, who has been recovering for several months after a stroke and a month in a coma.

Then, oddly, the couple collects Ted Fielding, an American psychologist who becomes the family's houseguest as he charts Connor's progress through the lens of his camera.

Connor's medial frontal lobe damage becomes apparent almost immediately in a myriad of unsubtle ways. Before his illness, he was a highly skilled carpenter, but now withdraws into a solipsistic state, spending all his time making nonviable wooden spheres instead of the beautiful furniture he once crafted and sold. Ignoring his wife and children, Connor makes a fork and spoon out of wood, the only practical things he concocts, then uses them to touch people and things, allowing him to avoid all forms of personal and impersonal contact.

Director Steph Green and co-writer Aibhe

Keogan carefully share occasional moments that flash back to Connor's earlier life as an active, creative and loving man, often seen from Venetia's point of view – or the rare moments he can reconnect to present day.

Soon, we see Connor is not alone in his emergence from isolation. Fielding, who at first keeps a safe distance from Venetia and her children, a teenage boy and his younger sister, soon finds himself coming closer, a bit unsafely in an emotional manner, as he is taken in by Venetia's strong spirit. They share some loco weed, take a long and invigorating bike ride in the rain and even have a brushing of lips as romance, tentative and uncertain at first, begins to develop. Fielding also begins to take an interest in the kids' lives and needs, as he slowly but surely starts to fill in where Connor is unable or unwilling to be during his recovery. It is not without difficulty, as disquieting questions of loyalty and commitment grow, that Fielding begins to fill in as father and husband, not to mention becoming a go-to guy for Connor as well. This creates havoc among Venetia and Connor's friends and family.

It soon becomes clear that these issues are actually enriching for all involved as they expand the close inner circle of a family in need to someone who is caring and helpful and accepted. Green and the cast create a believable and strong warmth among the characters, but not one that escapes all problems. Certainly the family, before and with Fielding has flaws, but these are issues to be overcome, not to be something that engulfs the film in an unbelievable parody of a unique and likeable family.

The film skirts instability, allowing "Run and Jump" to find a reserve of potency and joie de vivre that should prove irresistible to patient viewers.

The title sounds like what my PE coach used to yell ... jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com.

Light up your life

Maureen Villmer Practical Design

I look at a lamp like I look at a piece of jewelry. Lamps are not the main items showcased in a room, but they can really make or break your room, just as the right jewelry can do with your outfit.

Unlike jewelry, however, lamps keep you from tripping over exercise bikes in the middle the room, wearing mismatched shoes to work or doing homework by computer glow. The real key is to find the ideal combination of how it looks and how it lights.

Let's break it down into table lamps and hanging lamps. I am going to give you a few guidelines – no rules, just guidelines. All rules are made to be broken.

The first guideline is to always measure first; don't just eyeball it to determine the height. If you know me, you know that I could function as a tape measure, but I still measure for a lamp. Measure your table height and the circumference of your lamp. It should be no more than about one and a half times the height of the furniture it sits on. The lampshade should not be larger than the table it sits on or it will look top-heavy

Hanging lights or chandeliers should be sized to the space they occupy. If it is a long narrow space, fit the chandelier to that space. If there is a round table in the space, then fit a round chandelier into it. Don't get caught up with one chandelier for one table. I recently had a large dining table that had just one chandelier; very under-scaled for the space. We converted it to two chandeliers that fit the space more appropriately because the table was so long. Standard height from the top of the table to the bottom of the chandelier should be 36 to 42 inches.

When thinking about the primary function of your lamp, consider how many watts it will take and how it will be used. If it is mood lighting, it needs fewer watts. If it is going to be used as my main reading lamp, I will want to increase my wattage and position the light or lamp for task lighting, coming just over my shoulder to read.

I have many clients that think recessed-can lighting will do for reading. It does not come close enough for the

You have my permission to not be so matchy-matchy when you're selecting lamps for your room. All the lampshades you put in your home do not have to be for just function. If you are using an all-white décor in your room, use whiter shades to give you maximum illumination.

Remember that you can put lamps in unexpected places. How about the laundry room? How about on your counter in the kitchen? How about in the small powder room on the counter? The size and shape of the lamp will be dictated by your space.

When considering the right lampshade for your room, think about whether you want to make a statement or just want your lampshade to blend into your surrounding decor. Don't overdo the wattage on your lamp if you need a lot of light find a lamp that will accept a three-way that you can take it up to 150 watts.

In the modern world of Pinterest and do-it-yourself projects, you could embellish your own lampshade with fabrics being used in your room or hand-painted. Look in Etsy and other craft sites for simple customized lampshades that you just love to "steal the look."

I hope you have fun finding just the right lamp and lampshade for your space.

The house at 9320 Soledad Canyon Drive, built by Planet Development Co., achieved El Paso Electric Co.'s Energy Star New Home certification and was featured in the Spring Showcase of Homes in 2012.

Raising the standards

Energy-saving program sense, we're raising the bar with this program." The philosophy behind the program is that picks up speed locally

By David Salcido

The numbers are in and, for those whose business is increasing the energy-efficiency quotient in Doña Ana County, they look very promising.

Launched in September 2010, El Paso Electric Co's Energy

Star New Home Program, created as a way to encourage local builders to construct more energy-efficient homes, now has three full years to its credit. Statistics gathered from those years show a steady increase in the number of energy-efficient homes being built in the Mesilla Valley as well as the number of home builders constructing them.

In 2011, 134 energy-efficient homes were built by 12 home builders. In 2012, those numbers increased to 147 homes from 15 home builders. 2013 saw a leap in homes built to 196, from the same 15 home builders. 2014 is expected to be a banner year for EPE, however, with more than 200 homes anticipated from 27 registered homebuilders.

Robin Ribble-Harder, account manager with ICF International, which contracts with EPE to implement the Energy Star New Homes Program, explains the sudden surge in interest.

"At the beginning it moved slower than expected, but last year we started gaining momentum," she said. "It was a real challenge for most Las Cruces builders, because the city and county adopted new building codes and there was a learning curve associated with that. Understandably, many of our builders didn't want to take on a new certification program until they figured out how those new building codes were going to impact them. Now that they've got that building code under their belt, above code programs are not as intimidating as they might have been a year ago, which is why we see an increase in our homebuilder participation, this year."

Initially created to help homebuilders construct energy efficient homes by providing training, guidance and financial incentives to help offset the cost of energy-efficient upgrades, it has become, according to EPE Senior Energy Efficiency Program Coordinator Billy Massie, a way for contractors to "build to a higher standard than code."

"It's an educational process to get builders on board and help them realize that the additional cost that goes into the home to meet Energy Star standards is an increased value to their home at the end of the day," Massie said. "It's a process of getting them to understand that Energy Star is a standard they can stand behind that will help them sell their home once its complete. In a

The philosophy behind the program is that using less energy for heating, cooling and water heating leads to savings on utility bills. To get there, homebuilders incorporate a variety of specialized features, including proper and effective insulation systems, high-performance windows and the inclusion of Energy Star-qualified products such as lighting fixtures, ventilation fans and appliances, but it goes much deeper than that.

We look at the house as a system and we look specifically at building a tightly built home that's well insulated, that has the right size heating and cooling system," Harder said. "That system is tested to make sure the ducts have minimal leakage. The way an Energy Star home or an El Paso Electric High Performance home is set up is the consumer knows that 94 percent of the air that is either heated or cooled by the HVAC system goes to the room where it is designed to go to."

Once completed, each home is tested by a home energy rating system (HERS) expert and given an individual rating.

"Code, right now, is 83," Harder said. "High Performance homes are designed to be 15 percent above code. Energy Star homes, on average, are 20 to 30 percent better than code.

Most homebuilders are using what she calls a "tiered approach," in which "most builders are taking their first steps with the high performance homes, because there are fewer requirements and they can figure out how to offer that certified home, before moving into the Energy Star homes."

In the end, Harder said she sees it as a two part equation that is self-perpetuating, which means the numbers should continue to rise as awareness does.

"Given the option of buying an energy-efficient home or a non-energy-efficient home, 82 percent of consumers will go toward the energy-efficient home," she said. "As the buying public begins to ask about it, the builder realizes that more and more consumers do care about that energy-efficiency, and therefore you begin to see an increase in the participation of builders.

"I think most builders are finding that consumers are becoming more educated and care about energy efficiency. When you purchase a home, regardless of whether you pay cash or finance that home, there are two costs you will have as long as you own that home. One is property taxes, the other is utility bills. Most consumers are looking to keep their monthly expenses as low as possible. By purchasing an energy-efficient home with a HERS rating, they have a very good idea of what those utility bills are going to run on a monthly basis. When you can have homes that have utility bills that are similar to the cost of your cell phone bill, there is a lot of confidence on the

> These dishes taste especially delicious after an exhausting, early

Delight guests this Easter week with scrumptious and lively dishes that typify our enchanting land. Enliven ham and egg dishes with hot sauce, paste, powders and pods. Roasted ham punctuated and glazed with orange juice, brown sugar, coffee liqueur and red chile garlic paste is a main meal event.

Add minced ham and hot sauce drops to deviled eggs for a salty and sizzling punch. Or, dress up curry-deviled eggs with al dente asparagus tips. Serve the bites on a nest of chilled alfalfa sprouts.

Easter Bunny's Egg-licious Ham and Chile Bake morning Easter egg hunt.

This traditional dish is always a hit at brunch time and it's easy to prepare.

6 large eggs 1/2 cup heavy cream or whipping cream

1/4 teaspoon salt 1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper 1 (4-ounce) can medium-hot green chile peppers, drained and chopped, or 6 roasted green peppers, peeled, stemmed and seeded 1/2 cup cooked ham, minced 4 ounces Cheddar cheese, shredded

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. In a bowl, combine eggs, cream, salt and pepper; beat until smooth and well blended. Stir in chopped chile

Lightly grease a shallow 1-quart baking dish. Sprinkle cheese over bottom of prepared baking dish then pour egg mixture over cheese. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until set. If desired, broil for a minute or two to Serve with plenty of your favorite hot salsa as a topper. Serves 4 to 6.

Red Chile Glazed Ham

1/2 fully cooked lean ham (about 8 pounds) 1 quart fresh orange juice 1 tablespoon orange zest, grated 1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed 1 cup coffee flavored liqueur 1 tablespoon red chile paste with garlic 1/2 teaspoon fresh ground black pepper 1/4 cup brewed espresso or 1 tablespoon espresso powder Garnish: Fresh pineapple chunks

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Place the ham in a roasting pan. For easier cleanup, line the pan with aluminum foil to catch glaze drips. Roast ham for 1 hour.

While the ham is roasting, make the glaze. Combine the orange juice and zest, brown sugar, liqueur, chile paste and pepper in a large saucepan. Bring to a boil over high heat, then reduce the heat to medium and simmer until mixture is reduced by about half and has the consistency of maple syrup, about 35 minutes.

Whisk in the espresso or espresso powder. You should have almost 2 cups of glaze. Half of the glaze will be used to brush the ham while it is roasting; the other half for brushing on the ham after it is sliced. After the first hour of cooking, brush the ham with the glaze. Roast for another hour, brushing with the glaze every 15 minutes. Since the ham is already cooked, you just need to warm it all the way through. Check for an internal temperature of 130 to 140 degrees using an instant-read thermometer.

Remove the ham from the oven when it is nicely browned and warmed through.

Presentation suggestions: Arrange sliced ham and pineapple chunks on a serving platter. Brush slices with remaining glaze and

Deviled Eggs and Ham

A "deviled" dish means to combine a food with various hot or spicy seasonings such as red pepper, mustard or Tabasco sauce. (Recipe adapted from Food Lover's Companion.)

12 eggs 1 teaspoon prepared hot mustard 6 tablespoons mayonnaise 3-4 thinly sliced sandwich ham, minced Several drops hot pepper sauce Pinch cayenne pepper 2 teaspoons paprika Cilantro sprigs

Put eggs in a large saucepan. Add enough cold water to cover eggs. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer 10 minutes.

Salt and pepper if desired

Drain eggs and rinse under cold running water until cool enough to handle. Shell eggs and cut each in half lengthwise with a stainless steel or silver knife (carbon steel leaves black marks on egg whites). Remove egg yolks and place them in a bowl. Add mustard, mayonnaise, minced ham, hot pepper sauce, cayenne pepper and paprika. Using a fork, mash ingredients together and whip until well blended. Season with salt and pepper if desired.

Refrigerate mixture. Place halved egg whites in a bowl and cover with cold eater. Refrigerate until chilled. Before serving, drain egg whites and pat dry with a paper towel. Fill whites with egg mixture and garnish each halve with a sprig of cilantro. Makes 24 halved eggs.

Asparagus Curry-Deviled Eggs

Create a nest of alfalfa sprouts on a colorful platter and arrange eggs on top.

6 hard-boiled, medium-size eggs 2 1/2 tablespoons mayonnaise 2 teaspoons lemon zest, grated 1/4 teaspoon salt 1/8 teaspoon curry powder 1/8 teaspoon dry mustard 12 cooked asparagus tips, al dente 1 (2-ounce) can pimientos

Peel shells from eggs and cut lengthwise. Remove and mash the yolks with a fork. Add mayonnaise, lemon zest, salt, curry powder and mustard. Whip until creamy. Fill egg white with seasoned yolk mixture. Using a knife, spread the mixture level to flat edge of egg. Place one asparagus tip across the center of each half. Cut pimiento in thin strips and place 2 strips across each asparagus. Makes 12 halved deviled eggs.

Most minor injuries horses receive are of the bump or scrape variety and can be treated at home by an owner.

When large areas of skin are removed, or deep wounds cause profuse bleeding, the veterinarian must be called at once. Things such as non-weight bearing of a leg, inability to move forward or extreme distress in any form are emergencies.

For simple, acute injuries, cold running water is the treatment of choice. Ice can actually damage tissue if applied for long periods and heat exacerbates the swelling at a fresh injury, which impedes healing. Bruises and wounds that have stopped bleeding can have a low stream of cool water from the hose run over them for up to an hour with beneficial effect; we suggest doing so under a tree to keep from wasting water.

Horses can receive heat, friction or chemical burns and the cool water is often a good choice for those, after consultation with the vet. We make our own herbal ointments with calendula-infused olive oil, melted beeswax and lavender essential oil. This is used on any dry, abraded or old wound. We use organic, powdered rosemary herb on weeping, wet or lower leg wounds (this forms an antiseptic scab).

A wound that is bleeding heavily needs pressure applied while waiting for the vet. Such wounds on the leg can be bandaged with a leg wrap over a clean pad. Body wounds need hand pressure over a clean pad or towel.

With objects stuck in an eye or a hoof – it is best to leave it in place if no further damage will occur. When the vet arrives, he or she will be better able to assess the situation and remove the object properly. When a horse gets cactus spines or splinters in his skin, we use Icthammol ointment to draw the spines to the surface.

Become familiar with your horse's normal mannerisms and vital signs pulse, respiration and color of mucus membranes – so a deviation is easy to

A dehydrated horse will have tight, dry skin that does not snap back when pinched on the neck. Pink gums are healthy; yellow gums, signaling liver trouble, are an emergency; bright red gums can indicate stress from exertion; blue gums signal heart, renal or respiratory trouble and are an emergency; white gums could mean anemia.

First aid for horses Las Cruces lights up blue Autism awareness a world-renowned effort

By Rachel Christiansen

On Wednesday, April 2, the Empire State Building, White House, Eiffel Tower and Azul Night Club and Ultra Lounge inside Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces turned their lights and patrons blue in honor of Autism Awareness Month and World Autism Awareness Day.

Such a world-wide effort would not have been possible without local efforts such as the Hearts for Autism Fund, the hosts of Camp New Amigos – a summer camp for children with autism spectrum disorders - and the annual Masquerade Ball, as well as community trainings for caregivers and those who suffer from autism.

On Wednesday, April 16, the Hearts for Austism celebrated a ribbon cutting for the first Autism Resource Library that will now be open to the public at Centennial High School.

"It's filled with materials on anything autism, and they're all free," said Marisa Čano, board coordinator and parent liaison with Hearts for Autism Fund. "It's supposed to be a one-stop shop to learn autism and get resources, and it's open to the public."

The Autism Resource Library is an example of how the Hearts for Autism Fund is trying to further reach out to a community that has, up until a few years ago, been short of resources and information regarding autism spectrum disorders.

The library is a collection of books and materials from Las Cruces Public Schools, which was previously located at Head Start Early Childhood Center, as well as toys, games and learning materials the Hearts for Autism Fund contributed.

"It's an opportunity to educate the community and unite them through that education," said Abel Covarrubias, CEO of Aprendamos Intervention Team. "They can network and build a support system between themselves."

According to the latest numbers from the Centers for Disease Control, one in 68 U.S.

children now have some form of autism, up from the one in 88 reported two years ago.

Cano has two boys, ages 4 and 7, both of whom have autism.

"It's been a journey of acceptance, of living and dealing with it and constantly trying to learn what to do and get the services they need." Cano said.

Each individual is different, however, thus requiring significant testing to even make the determination that a child does indeed suffer from autism.

This is where resources such as The Hearts for Autism Fund come in, Covarrubias said, to help parents along this journey, and to not just give up on what can be a lengthy process.

"If you give them the tools and the resources

they need, they can blossom," Covarrubias

A big part of the awareness piece, Cano said, is getting everyone else to accept autism and know more about it.

"The biggest thing is that acceptance piece," Cano said. "Show interest, compassion and understanding when you see someone, and ask

Help the colonias

Many people living in New Mexico are concentrated in the colonias. A great number of these do not have access to services the rest of the society takes for granted.

According to New Mexico Center on Law and Poverty,

New Mexico has 141 federally recognized colonias, which collectively house at least 135,000 people.

Many colonias have inadequate water supply and lack sewage systems, which leads to illegal trash dumping, crumbling infrastructure and unsanitary and unsafe conditions.

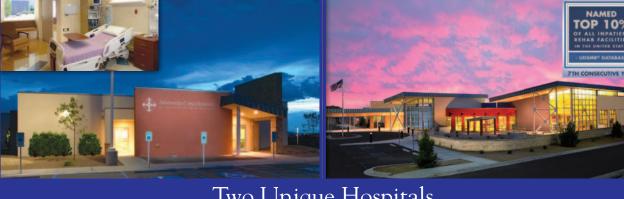

Due to these environmental and socioeconomic problems, the community members who live in the colonias are facing infectious diseases and health threats such as tuberculosis.

According to the New Mexico Department of Health, tuberculosis is an airborne disease and is the second-most infectious disease killer in the world, killing more than 1.3 million people every year.

In 2013, New Mexico had 50 cases of people who were infected with tuberculosis. These health and societal issues should not be happening, and can be reduced by the strengthening of the existing programs that can assist in prioritizing the health statuses of these members of society.

rigid or they can only handle certain levels," Cano said. "There's a saying, though, that if you've met one child with autism - you've met one child with autism, because they are all so different.

"I wouldn't change them, I would change the world to be kind to them."

The Hearts for Autism Fund has several upcoming events, including the 5K and Fun Run at 8 a.m. Saturday, May 24, and Picacho Hills Country Club, 6861 Via Campestre. Cost for registration is $25. Slots are also available for the Camp New Amigos summer camp that will be held on the New Mexico State University campus Monday through Friday, June 2-6.

Care

First aid for colic or digestive trouble while waiting for the vet can include slow walking in hand, gently pulling the horse's ears from base to tip and covering the loins with blankets in cool weather.

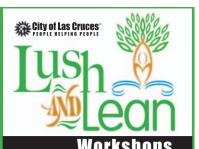

For bruises anywhere on the body, we apply comfrey root infused oil and if we suspect bruising of the hooves, say, after a trail ride we dose homeopathic Arnica Montana pellets in pieces of apple. For pulled tendons, we dose homeopathic Ruta grav. For joints, we use homeopathic Rhus tox.

Any blow to the head is an emergency, as is any potential back injury. These require keeping the horse calm and still until the vet arrives. If you see any swelling of the face, insert a soft piece of hose/tubing into a nostril since horses cannot breathe through their mouths.

In emergencies, remain calm, handle the horse safely while you wait for the veterinarian and be sure to give all the information you possibly can so he or she can arrive prepared.

Mayor: 'Etched in memory' Impressions that last a lifetime

By Elaine Stachera

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Sometimes childhood events leave an impression that never goes away.

Besides being a sound community strategy, Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima's support for the Coalition for Pets and People/ Zero in 7 initiative is, in part, a reflection of memories that have been with him since he was – as they say – a pup.

When Miyagishima was a young boy, about 7 years old, he said, he would go to the landfill with his father.

Still "etched in (his) memory" from those visits is the sight of hundreds of dead animals constantly stacked in towering piles, maybe 30 or more feet high. As a child, he couldn't fathom why this was being done to animals. After all, his own little mutt-Pekingese got to wear a green crocheted jacket made by Miyagishima's mother.

Another significant event Miyagishima recalled from his young life was a night long ago when he and his brother were camped out in a tent under a tree in their backyard. It started to rain, and lightning began to flash across the sky.

Out of nowhere, Blackie, the neighbor's dog, came tearing through the yard and raced into the tent just seconds before it took a direct hit from one of those lightning bolts. Miyagishima's brother was knocked unconscious, but Blackie took a fatal blow from that bolt. To this day, Miyagishima said he credits Blackie with saving their lives.

On Miyagishima's watch, some good things are happening for animals. The mayor said he recognizes there are many stakeholders in a humane community, including government representatives, animal advocates and, of course, caring citizens.

The Coalition for Pets and People brings these people together to the table. Bringing everyone to the table to work together is the best bet to "cut into the euthanasia rate," Miyagishima said.

This has started to happen – the local shelter's euthanasia numbers, while still heartbreaking, are indeed declining.

Throughout his political career, Miyagishima said he has taken note of community reaction to animal cruelty cases and the euthanasia rate, and, in his capacity as mayor, has given animal issues a place on the community agenda so the work can be done at municipal and citizen levels.

The Coalition for Pets and People/ Zero in 7 created the I Promise pledge card. The promise pledge reads, "In exchange for companionship, loyalty, and love, I promise that every animal I care for will be spayed or neutered, microchipped, vaccinated, and treated humanely. I will never abandon my animals or ity for the full natural life of my animals."

The purpose of the Coalition for Pets and People is to eliminate the killing of healthy or treatable animals at our public shelter by the end of 2018 and to promote humane, respon-allow them to run loose. I accept this responsibilsible pet ownership.

Miyagishima has made the promise for the animals of Las Cruces. Will you?

The Coalition for Pets and People was formed for the purpose of transforming the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley to a no-kill shelter within seven years. Coalition member Elaine Stachera is a university advancement officer for NMSU.

Running in color at the CAASNM ColorDash5K

John Bunt, ColorDash race director, DJ and emcee, presented a bracelet to Kaylee Keaty for her enthusiastic dancing.

Not content to wait for the official dash, Tanya Vanderbeen and Michelle Looker tossed puffs of powdered color back and forth.

The first group of color runners breaks out of the gate, with Community Action Agency of Southern New Mexico CEO Dawn Hommer, center, in her multi-colored tutu Saturday, April 12, for the ColorDash5K Fun Run. The event raised $9,200 for CAASNM.

Zachary Park tried to be the last hula-hooper standing in one of the events held before the ColorDash.
