Private space taking shape Virgin Galactic delays not fatal

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Although Virgin Galactic isn't the only company to use Spaceport America, once regular flights get started, area businesses and workers will have a wide variety of opportunities for providing services, said New Mexico Space Grant Consortium Director Pat Hynes.

In a talk to the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) Tuesday, Sept. 2, Hynes acknowledged a concern about how the community can ramp up its capacity to take advantage of those opportunities.

Part of the concern stems from Sir Richard Branson's adamant goal of taking the first passenger flight to suborbital space by the end of the year. But that will require the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) signing off on Virgin Galactic's spaceliner carrying six passengers and two pilots, Hynes said.

Getting FAA approval, she said, will require more than just a few successful flights, as envisioned by Branson, but could be done without a multitude of test flights, as originally envisioned by Virgin Galactic CEO George Whitesides.

Council to vote on $10.10 wage offer

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

In a special meeting at 1 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8, the Las Cruces City Council will vote on a proposal to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 by 2017.

If the council does not approve the proposal by Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé), the question will likely be put on the Nov. 4 ballot. There has been some debate about whether the city could – or should – combine the wage vote with the general election or hold a separate election. The city does not own voting machines, so Doña Ana County voting machines are used for municipal elections. The county, however, doesn't have spare machines on Nov. 4.

College ministry provides a home away from home

By Tara Melton Las Cruces Bulletin

When Janet Loman retired as a music professor from New Mexico State University in July 2013, she knew she was going to miss her students.

"My husband and I love to feed young people," Loman said. "We decided to start a college dinner night and that's how it started."

Loman, who is also a lay pastor at First Presbyterian Church, started hosting a UKirk College Ministry in fall 2013 through her church. Loman gathered young members, inside and outside of the congregation, to not only feed them a nice, home-cooked meal every second Sunday of the month, but to create a support system for them.

"It's really hard to beat home-cooked dinners when

Plane crash injures two

The Las Cruces Fire Department responded to a downed aircraft at the Las Cruces International Airport Monday, Sept. 1, Labor Day, with the crash sending one person to the hospital.

Firefighters were alerted just before 8 a.m. to a report of a general aviation airplane crash on the western perimeter of the airfield. The aircraft rescue firefighting crew based at the airport quickly located the heavily damaged single engine plane and its two injured passengers.

Fire crews along with paramedics from American Medical Response treated the crash victims. One patient was transported to University Medical Center in El Paso and the other declined transport.

There was no fire as a result of the crash. However, crews had to use foam to mitigate a fuel leak.

The crash scene was turned over to the New Mexico State Police and City of Las Cruces airport operations for further investigation.

The non-fatal plane crash followed another plane crash Wednesday, Aug. 27, that killed four people. The twin-engine aircraft was headed to Phoenix at low altitude before it crashed and burst into flames.

State Police identified the crew members killed as 29-year-old pilot Freddy Martinez, 27-year-old flight paramedic Tauren Summers and 35-year-old flight nurse Monica Chavez, all from El Paso.

NEWS

The patient who was killed was identified as 59-year-old Fredrick Green of Las Cruces.

Treasurer censured

Doña Ana County commissioners unanimously voted Friday, Aug. 29, to censure county Treasurer David Gutierrez after he admitted to soliciting sex from an employee.

Commissioners called on Gutierrez to resign as treasurer, but the commission can't order him to quit his post. Gutierrez didn't attend the special County Commission meeting.

A female employee has formally accused Gutierrez, 59, of attempted to solicit sex from her in return for $1,000. The employee said Gutierrez made the proposition after making a bank deposit last month.

Gutierrez, a Democrat, has been treasurer since 2009. He won re-election to the seat in 2012 and has more than two years left in his second term. Gutierrez was county treasurer from 1996 to 2004. Gutierrez and his wife own Old Town Restaurant in Las Cruces.

The glory of story

Since the dawn of time, man has loved to tell stories. Even more so, we have loved to listen to them. Those stories have been told in as many ways as our creativity will allow. This weekend in Las Cruces, three separate events are celebrating the glory of story.

The 10th annual White Sands International Film Festival (WSIFF) started earlier this week and goes through Sunday, Sept. 7. Here's your chance to see an eclectic variety of films from New Mexico and around the world.

A new event, the Mark Medoff Lecture Series, is Saturday, Sept. 6. This will celebrate the work of Medoff, Las Cruces' stellar playwright and screenwriter.

Another new event, Las Cruces Comic Con, brings to life the world of comic books, and all the ancillary projects comics and superheroes generate.

Are you a fan of Star Wars? This is your lucky weekend.

Mike McCormick is a name you may not recognize, but he'll be receiving WSIFF's Enchantment Award for his more than 50 years of design and fabrication. His work includes special effects and puppetry for "Return of the Jedi."

You probably haven't bookmarked Ray Park on your computer, either, but he played Darth Maul in "Star Wars: The Phantom Menace." Park will be a featured guest at Las Cruces Comic Con.

While this will be Las Cruces' first Comic Con, it's safe to say many veterans of other Comic Cons will attend. That means plenty of folks dressed in the style of their favorite comic or science fiction characters.

As you're keeping an eye peeled for a Faux Flash, or a Bogus Batman, also look out for the real Richard Dreyfuss or the live Linda Hamilton, two of the celebrities anticipated for the Medoff event.

WSIFF workshop leaders will include producer/writer Kirk Ellis, who did such projects as "John Adams" and "Into the West," and cinematographer Michael Goi, who has done work on "American Horror Story" and "Glee."

The Medoff event will bring actors Jeffrey Tambor, Chris McDonald and Jesse Plemons, along with producer/writer Don Foster, a former Medoff student who has worked on the "Roseanne" and "Two and a Half Men" TV series.

Another exciting appearance comes from an inanimate object. The 1966 Batmobile is scheduled to arrive from Gotham City at the Las Cruces Comic Con.

Creativity abounds in Las Cruces, much of it spawned by Medoff and his pupils over the years at New Mexico State University. NMSU also boasts the Creative Media Institute for Film and Digital Arts. Doña Ana Community College's department of Digital Imaging and Design Technologies offers Creative Media Technology and Digital Graphics Technology.

So this weekend, let's celebrate film. Let's celebrate Mark Medoff. Let's celebrate New Mexico. Let's celebrate story. Let's celebrate creativity.

Oh, and don't forget the Batmobile.

Letters to the editor TNR not bird friendly Voter ID cost overblown

Greg Lennes (Aug. 29 letter to the editor) mentioned the idea of creating costly voter IDs. Why would that be necessary?

Since anyone who wants a driver's license must present three valid forms of identification and proof of residency, and most people manage to do that, would it be too much to ask voters to simply show their voter registration card and a photo ID?

It is likely that voting citizens have a driver's license or some kind of bank card. If they do not, they could bring two other forms of ID, just like they would to the MVD.

Either of these ideas would cost the state nothing extra.

Rona Paz

Here is one more opinion on the feral cat problem in Las Cruces. Trapping the feral cats, neutering and releasing them (TNR) is not the answer to those of us who want to protect our wild bird population. Wild birds have no way to protect their newly hatched babies in the nest when cats climb trees and take the babies from the nest, one by one – to eat or to play with. The law says we cannot spay or neuter and release our dogs. We should apply the same rules for cats.

Cats can easily adjust to being a "house cat." Feral cats should be treated as a stray dog – taken to the animal shelter, and if not claimed by an owner, either put up for adoption or euthanized.

Geri Tillett

The Las Cruces Bulletin invites readers to submit letters, preferably by email to editor@lascrucesbulletin.com. They can be sent in by fax at 575-526-4621. Letters also can be mailed or dropped off at 840 N. Telshor Blvd., Suite E, 88011. Letters should not exceed 200 words and must include the writer's name, address and telephone number for verification. Anonymous letters will not be published. Letters may be edited for length or content.

Some little mysteries of life

Michael Swickard In My Opinion

It was an interesting moment. At a convenience store I thought to myself, "That must be a bait car, er, bait pickup."

The pickup was idling in front of the store with the windows down on both sides. Clearly visible as I walked by was a six pack of beer on the seat and a pizza was on the dash with the lid up and one slice gone.

My intention was to step inside so I could watch someone jump in and zoom away. But I saw someone I knew and was busy telling a joke when I remembered the pickup. Shuckins, the pickup was gone.

Life is like that, with lots of questions but few answers.

Example: Last Monday morning I noticed a woman pumping up her right rear tire at that same convenience store when I stopped by to buy my newspapers before my talk show. It was still dark. There is a coin-operated air machine.

My first thought was to offer her a can of Fix-aflat, which I carry along with baling wire and duct tape. Since I did not know her, I figured she would get enough air to go somewhere that fixes flats.

The next day, she was there again pumping up the same tire. Again, I did not stop and offer help. But I mentioned it that morning on my talk show. Wouldn't you know, Wednesday I was looking for her and she was there. Thursday, the same thing.

Friday, I decided to take charge, no more fiddling around – a leaky tire is dangerous and all of that. But she was not there. I waited a while talking to the clerk, but she either had fixed that tire or it had come apart. I will never know.

In my role as a daily radio talk show host I get all sorts of question. One stood out last week. It was one of those "what if" questions: What if Winston Churchill had developed a different creative taste, say being a tattoo artist instead of being a diplomat and politician?

Certainly the fate of England and perhaps the free world would have been changed. I am not sure he would have changed the world of tattoo like he changed our world.

This last week a teacher was reciting to me all of the mandated tests she has to administer because the school district is a "testing at all times" district.

I asked something that had bothered me about

LPL Financial David T. Hill, AAMS Registered Principal 545 N. Main St. Las Cruces, NM 88001 (575) 647-5858 DavidHillFinancial.com

this intense mania to test: "Have you taught your students anything yet?"

She said she had not had even one day to teach because of all of the tests, and could not see any teaching in the future.

"This is an all-testing year in our public schools." No teaching.

Finally, last week I heard a story that solves one of life's little problems.

There are times when people asking really do not intend to take no for an answer.

A friend reported to me that two religious men rang her doorbell. They wanted to tell her the good news about their religion. She, like me, likes to talk, so she stood on her doorstep and listened as these two young men went through their practiced speech.

She listened carefully and respectfully so they went for the close: "Will you join us at our church this Sunday?" they asked.

She smiled and said, "Let us pray."

She prayed solemnly, "Dear Lord, thank you for sending these fine two men to my house to give me their testimony. They are both very fine Christians and I do wish them well. Now here is what we need to know, they want me to come to their church this Sunday, should I go?"

A few moments of silence passed and then she said, "Yes, I see. Amen."

She looked up and said, "He said no." They had a look of confusion as she thanked them and stepped back inside.

Now I know how to handle tough meetings. All I have to do is say, "Let us pray about this," and then announce, "He says no."

Fair board drama

I went to America last week ... the middle of America, Kansas, to a county fair. If America has a heart, it's out here on the Plains.

The fair is often the biggest event of the year in many Plains communities. Carnivals, tractor pulls, rodeos, cotton candy – where else can you get cotton candy? And the occasional traveling cowboy poet.

This summer the Plains have turned into a garden. Less rain at the right time is better than more rain at the wrong time, which brings me to my trip.

When I reached the little town in Kansas, the clouds were beginning to huddle, planning their next play. I went by the fairgrounds to greet the fair board and check in.

The show was advertised as a 7 p.m. performance. At 6 o'clock I was back at the fairgrounds. Many of them had driven 50-plus miles to be there. The carnival had temporarily shut down in anticipation of rain. The clouds looked ominous. The storm hit at 6:30.

The next hour and a half was the equivalent of a fair board SWAT team. Can we have it inside? Will the rain quit? Will anybody come? Will the speaker short out? Will people go home? They examined each alternative and waited ... at 7:45 the rain fizzled to a drizzle. The clouds moved south. The word went out ... 8 o'clock in the grandstands, show time! It was still light, the flag was standing straight out in the wind, the crowd was bundled up and I stood with my back to the rain. Cancel the show? Not on your life.

That was the moment we shined. All of us, from the fair board, to the volunteers, the farmer who fixed the sound system, the parents of kids who had projects, the local radio announcer, the county agent and all those in the grandstands who came to see the show.

I began, "I have called you all together here this evenin' to thank the good Lord for the wonderful rain we're havin'."

The crowd cheered and I heard an "Amen."

RAP PROGRAM County training lowers injuries, premiums

Every other Monday, Doña Ana County's workforce gathers in training rooms and conference areas to learn techniques and strategies designed to enhance safety and operational efficiency.

The bi-weekly sessions last about 15 minutes each and are called RAP Sessions: Ready! Active! Positive! Since their inception in 2007, the county has seen accidents and on-the-job injuries steadily decline, which has translated not only into insurancepremium savings from year to year but a more productive and effective workforce. We have also seen an average decrease in auto claims by 25 percent and about a 40 percent reduction in the number of lawenforcement claims.

The RAP program empowers employees to correct hazards immediately and report those that they cannot correct themselves. It has improved internal communication and collaboration between departments to improve safety and service to the public.

Constituent Services Office created for complaints, concerns

Doña Ana County Manager Julia T. Brown has announced the formation of a new division of her office to respond in a timely fashion to constituent concerns and complaints, as well as to facilitate community meetings and to assist individual members of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners in their ongoing outreach efforts.

The Office of Community and Constituent Services will be headed by longtime Doña Ana County employee Edward Lerma, who can be reached at (575) 525-5959.

The office, Lerma said, will provide an improved pathway to address areas of concern while consistently facilitating clear lines of communication and feedback. The office, he said, will handle issues ranging from road concerns and animal control to expedited service provisions and complaints or concerns related to work done in the field by county personnel.

"Working directly with the county manager, the individual commissioners, the constituents and department heads, the goal of this office will be to identify and resolve issues as they arise in a manner that is as expedited as possible," Lerma said. "It will be a challenge, but I'm excited to launch this initiative with the confidence of the county manager."

you're away from home, on your own, you've had pasta for the fifth night in a row because that's about all you can cook," said UKirk member Charlott Anderson.

"From a student's perspective, it's a place where we can go to enjoy fellowship time with other people who have the same beliefs as we do," said Audra Jones, NMSU student and UKirk member said

UKirk is a network of collegiate ministries around the nation that are supported by the Presbyterian Church and charged with reaching, loving and teaching college students so they may be lifelong followers of Jesus Christ.

Loman said when students leave their homes to go off to college, they often must leave their home church as well.

"We just wanted to help them stay focused, if they're Christian, on Jesus Christ," Loman said. "The philosophy of this group is also that we would welcome anyone who has questions about Christianity. We're not here to judge, we're here to show the love of God."

Anderson said UKirk really spoke to her because she was very far away from her home in Massachusets.

"Having a group of relatively sameage people, not in church, but people who are like-minded and accepting of each other, really felt very much like home," she said.

Anderson said she enjoys having a safe place where she can go and be herself and feel supported, but also challenged and held accountable.

"We really care about each other and we really want each other to be doing the best that we can be doing," she said.

Jones said she's proud of how accepting UKirk was when she brought friends along that didn't go to the church.

"I think the ministry just captures the whole spirit of appreciating God and it's a really good demonstration of God's love," Jones said.

While the group's main event is College Dinner Nights the second Sunday of each month, it has also participated in service projects for the church, such as building a playground. The group plans to help Habitat for Humanity and start a Bible study this year.

stems from Virgin Galactic making changes to its propulsion system, Hynes said. The most recent flight of Virgin Galactic's SpaceShipTwo rocket plane was Thursday, Aug. 28, in a simple gliding test over California's Mojave Desert, sans the new rocket motor system. Virgin Galactic Tweeted that the new propulsion system's "plumbing" is being tweeked.

This will not keep Virgin Galactic from taking flight, Hynes said, but it gives surrounding communities more time to prepare for – and take part in – the future increased economic activity.

Creating a time line based on past tests of the of its spaceliner, Hynes said a more realistic time line to expect seeing Spaceport America become a frequent destination for those who have $200,000 to $250,000 to spare for a thrill ride is, at best, a year away.

"That means we can prepare," she said. "We have time."

Hynes' talk previewed her annual, two-day International Symposium for Personal and Commercial Spaceflight (ISPCS) in October. Kicking off ISPCS will be the annual Community Partnership Luncheon Tuesday, Oct. 14, starting at 11:30 a.m. at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, the location of the symposium and its commercial space exhibitors' hall. The luncheon speaker is Stuart Witt, CEO and general manager of the Mojave Air and Space Port, where Virgin Galactic is developing its spaceliner.

Hynes said Witt will give insights into creating a fully operational spaceport. Hynes has been working with the FAA on developing regulatory considerations for a private spaceport.

If someone wants to get a glimpse of economic opportunities beyond hospitality services for the rich astronauts and their entourages, Hynes said, go to the New Mexico State University library's website to see the documentation behind 10 areas: airfield and launch operations; site security; emergency response; visitor management; ground and flight safetv: environmental management: mission readiness; compliance with the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR); international coordination with other spaceports - both in America and internationally for future point-to-point travel; and self-inspection.

For those who haven't been to Spaceport America, the ISPCS Community Partnership Luncheon includes a tour to the spaceport 45 miles north of Las Cruces. Cost is $50, but registration is required by calling 646-6414, or register online at http:// spacegrant.nmsu.edu/lunch.html.

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

Quick fixes rarely work on the links

Most golfers go to their local pro because they have sensed a problem. It's a situation similar to the way folks go to see a psychotherapist or an attorney – they only go because there's trouble.

Golfers know they have faults but don't know exactly what they are and they hope the pro will pinpoint those faults. And they want the pro to fix them. That's why the golf magazines have all the quick fixes and simplified tips. People want fast answers.

Occasionally some pros take the challenge a whole lot further, believing they can remake a student's entire swing and golf game, whether asked to or not.

I'm in favor of long-term game improvement, but this has to be a mutual desire between player and coach. I favor lessons over a longer period of time when everything gets worked on: the swing, intelligent course management, the short game and putting.

That's why returning time and again to one coach makes sense. Furthermore, It takes hitting about 500 balls to turn a "fix" into a habit. Still, getting worse while getting better is a common situation. In his book "The Golf of Your Dreams," sport psychologist Bob Rotella tells us pros need to size up how much time it will take for a student to make the change he suggests along with noting whether the player is "prepared for the possibility of getting worse before getting better." So find an experienced PGA teacher and explain your golf history and what you expect to happen.

New Mexico State University quarterback Tyler Rogers throws a pass against Cal Poly San Luis Obispo during the Aggies' 28-10 season-opening victory Thursday, Aug. 28, at Aggie Memorial Stadium. Rogers' second start as an Aggie will be on the road Saturday, Sept. 6, as NMSU tangles with Georgia State in Atlanta.

Ags open Sun Belt action

Bulletin Staff Report

The first two weeks of the season are a study in contrast for New Mexico State University's football team.

The Aggies defeated Cal Poly San Luis Obispo 28-10 in their home opener Thursday, Aug. 28. Cal Poly's option offense attempted just seven passes and completed two for six yards.

This week's opponent, though, will try to stretch NMSU's defense through the air.

On the road for the first time this year, the Aggies take on a Georgia State team that threw for more than 400 yards and four touchdowns in its opening win against Abilene Christian.

Kickoff is set for noon (MT) Saturday, Sept. 6, in Atlanta's 71,250-seat Georgia Dome.

The contest will mark the Aggies' return to the Sun Belt Conference where the program hung its hat from 2001 to 2004.

In their first game, the Aggies shut out Cal Poly in the second half to secure a 1-0 start as a trio of newcomers led the way. Quarterback Tyler Rogers – a junior college transfer – went 18 for 27 through the air for 158 yards and two touchdowns while freshman running back Larry Rose III led the way on the ground with 150 yards on 30 carries.

On defense, freshman linebacker Derek Ibekwe recorded 14 tackles.

A newcomer stepped up big for the Georgia State Panthers as well.

Quarterback Nick Arbuckle, a junior college-transfer, went 31-for-47 for 413 and four touchdowns.

Still, Georgia State has been a program on the bottom. The Panthers' victory against Abilene Christian was their first since October of 2012. In fact Georgia State went 0-12 last year and 1-10 the year before as a member of the Colonial Athletic Association.

Trio helps set the tone for LCHS offense

By Lewis Harry For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces High School's football team wants to defend its state championship. A 44-18 victory against Montwood (El Paso) in the season opener put the Bulldawgs on the right path.

A trio of upperclassmen set the pace.

Junior quarterback Kameron Miller, senior running back Junshiro Molinar and senior receiver Isaiah McIntyre had big games.

Molinar has become a key part of the Bulldawg offense during his time at LCHS and has stepped up his game on the field since last year.

"My running vision, I've gotten a lot better at that," Molinar said. "It took me a while to get used to the program and learn the plays, but after being here for four years, I have learned them pretty well."

Molinar's dedication to practice has showed early signs of paying off this season, rushing for 164 yards and scoring three touchdowns in the victory against Montwood.

McIntyre has also found his niche in the Bulldawg offense. Along with steady improvement every season, he has developed into a well-rounded receiver.

"The way I see plays develop and getting reads from tackles has been big for me," McIntyre said. "Seeing how I react to the play and my reaction time has improved."

McIntyre believes that the offense has bonded well and he has put full faith behind his teammates.

"Our offense has developed a lot since the spring. Everything has come together," McIntyre said.

"The linemen, receivers and running backs are studying and putting in the extra work and its coming together."

The extra work is showing a nice return as McIntyre had three catches and a touchdown for a total of 71 yards in last week's victory.

As for Miller, he is looking to capitalize on every opportunity this season to put up big numbers and do whatever he can for his teammates.

Miller threw for 162 yards and completed more than 53 percent of his passes against Montwood.

"Leading the offense to where we have to be, in and out of the huddle, is what's important," Miller said. "If we have a bad play, I need to pick the guys up and keep contributing to score every chance we have."

Keeping the level of energy and team morale is important for a leader and Miller has found the key for his offense. From the practice field to game

Ag volleyball team 'improving rapidly'

Michael Jordan NMSU volleyball coach

I hope everyone is looking forward to another championship season of New Mexico State University volleyball

We graduated five players from last year's championship team, all of whom played quite a bit. Replacing that many veteran players is never easy. There are some things only experience can teach a younger player, and we will be short on experience. We will have quite a few younger players on the court - in fact, in the first weekend of play we played five freshmen.

The great news is they are very gifted athletically and we are certain with hard work they will become great players. In the meantime, we will have to learn to live with some mistakes and embrace our youth. Our newcomers will only get better with time.

Fortunately, we also have a solid core of returners with big-game and postseason experience. We will lean heavily on the athletic ability of Gwen Murphy and Bradley Nash while Taylor Livoti gives us an experienced setter to run the show. All three of these juniors were part of the All-WAC preseason team and will have to lead by example.

Our practice sessions have been impressive. As a coach, the one thing we always hope to have is a team with a great work ethic. It makes being in the gym fun. When it is fun and the atmosphere – or culture as we like to call it – is enthusiastic, people tend to do a good job. This team works very hard. They fly around the floor and they listen well.

We are not as focused as we need to be on specifics at times, but we are learning to be. So far this team is improving rapidly and many of the players are battling for playing time. Settling on a consistent lineup will be difficult for a while, and truthfully, I like it that way early in the season. It gives me many options in the future.

We have another difficult nonconference schedule lined up. The great thing about having a quality team is it's easier to draw quality opponents into the Pan American Center. This season is no exception. We have California, Colorado State and Brigham Young University heading our way soon.

Cal was in the National Championship match four years ago and is a bigtime Pac-12 opponent. Colorado State is ranked in the Top 15 nationally as is BYU, and I believe BYU has Final Four caliber talent.

The New Mexico State Tournament inside the Pan American Center is set for Thursday through Saturday, Sept. 4-6. We will need our home crowd to get us fired up and give us an extra edge in our matches. We hope to see you at the Pan American Center for • Construction on the "big dam" at Elephant Butte reservoir was 70 percent completed "and twelve hundred men are employed finishing up the job," according to a report in the Las Cruces Citizen.

• Anticipation was high as Sept. 30 drew near. "It will mark the opening of the greatest fair in the history of New Mexico. Las Cruces has contributed generously to the success of this magnificent exposition of the agricultural, mineral and industrial resources of the state. It now rests with the people to bring the multitudes hither."

• A report by the AAA Automobile Club showed that "a visit to relatives, or the recommendation of friends, together with climate, scenery and recreational opportunities are the principal influences behind travel to Doña Ana County." The survey showed that "only 6 percent were influenced by the state promotion bureau."

• President H.M. Milton, "of the New Mexico State College" predicted "enrollment for the fall term, which opened this week, will set a new high mark." Classes were set to begin "on Friday."

• Cleaning of the "main ditch through town, running off North Main through to the underground conduit" was to be undertaken by the Bureau of Reclamation. Heavy growth and "fear of disease infestation" along with "obstructions tossed in by people too lazy to make proper disposition of unwanted items" were said to be the cause of the blockage.

• The public was invited to attend "a meeting of vital importance to every citizen of this community" in the staff room of the Memorial General Hospital, by auxiliary president Mrs. Bob. W. Williams, to discuss the closing of the pediatric ward.

• Record heat in June followed by unusually heavy rains in August were said to be the cause of a fungus that claimed 30 percent of the chile crops in Doña Ana County. New Mexico State University horticulturalist Paul Bosland was said to be "developing a chile resistant to the fungus."

Every year in order to maximize the amount you can save over the fall months make sure you are using natural gas appliances. They work harder, and cost much less to operate. Mesilla Valley agricultural leader and business operator Emma Jean Apodaca Cervantes passed away Saturday, Aug. 30, 2014. She was 79.

Emma Jean Cervantes started out in agriculture picking cotton in the 1940s alongside her sister, longtime State Rep. Mary Helen Garcia, on the family farm established by her grandfather, Andres Apodaca in the early 1900s, and expanded by her parents, Jose "Joe" and Genevieve Apodaca.

"Her greatest joy was people," said her son Dino Cervantes. "People remember the impact she made on the community, but the community made an impact on her as well."

She is preceded in death by her parents, Jose F. Apodaca and Genevieve Morales Apodaca. She is survived by her children, Joseph Cervantes and his wife, Jennifer; Dino Cervantes and his wife, Leslie; and Kristina Cervantes-Vanderlugt. She is beloved by six granddaughters: Alyssa, Alexandra, Isabella, Juliana, Jaclyn and Elizabeth. She will also be missed by her loving sister, Mary Helen Garcia.

Emma Jean was born Aug. 5, 1935 in Las Cruces, New Mexico. She graduated from Loretto Academy in 1953 and attended Mount Saint Mary's University in Los Angeles, California, where she obtained a bachelor of science in nursing education. Upon graduation, Emma Jean began her nursing career in New Mexico, where she also served on the nursing faculty at New Mexico State University. Her commitment to health care in our region was evidenced by her service to the community through many health-care organizations. One of her proudest accomplishments was serving as the first female and nurse on the Memorial Medical Center Hospital Board of Directors, where she also served as chairman.

She was instrumental in the creation of Mesilla Valley Hospice, First Step Center, and the Memorial Cancer Treatment Center in Las Cruces. Later, she had the honor of serving on the New Mexico Blue Cross Blue Shield Board of Directors.

Growing up on the La Mesa family farm, Emma Jean was raised to appreciate her roots and value hard work. These ideals served her well as she emerged as one of the few leading women in agriculture. She was an original founder of the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum.

In 1996, she was recognized by NMSU with the Philip Leyendecker Agriculturist of Distinction Award. While she made many contributions to the agriculture industry, her work with chile was foremost in her heart and reflected in her participation on the Chile Pepper Institute Board of Directors for over 20 years. She was blessed to spend her days working alongside her children as president of both J.F. Apodaca Farms and Cervantes Enterprises Inc.

Emma Jean took over the operation of the family business in the late 1960s, with her father in a consulting role. In some cases, it took many years for other businesses to accept her as the head of the operation, but within a short time she had earned the trust, loyalty and respect of people around the world.

Under her third-generation leadership, Cervantes Enterprises grew six-fold in size and revenue since the 1990s. In 1998, the business moved to a new, expanded site in south Mesquite.

New Mexico State University honored her for her success on numerous occasions and bestowed upon her the title of "First Lady of Chile."

Based on a commitment to family and community values, Cervantes Enterprises has involved five generations since Andres Apodaca first acquired 40 acres in Mesilla. A hundred years later, the family was farming 1,200 acres of cotton, corn, chile, pecans and alfalfa.

Emma Jean served on many other local, state and national boards, including the New Mexico Border Authority as an appointee of Gov. Bruce King, as well as the USDA National Research, Education, and Economics Advisory Board as an appointee of President Clinton.

While she was a devoted and tireless community servant, Emma Jean's greatest joy was her children and granddaughters, instilling in them the values of her own upbringing: faith, community service, and lively conversation around the family table. Her most treasured time was spent in the kitchen with her granddaughters, teaching them how to make homemade tortillas and chile colorado, a favorite at every family dinner. Emma Jean leaves a legacy of love to those who knew her and she will be greatly missed.

A private family rosary will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 5, 2014, at the Basilica of San Albino in Mesilla, New Mexico. The funeral Mass will be celebrated at 1 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6, 2014, at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, 1240 S. Espina, in Las Cruces. The right of committal and interment will follow at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens Cemetery, 5140 W. Picacho Ave. Serving as pallbearers are: Alfredo Jose Garcia, Jared McElmell, Rafael Gurrola, Ruben Casio, Charlie Carrasco, and Jim Gonzales. Serving as honorary pallbearers are Felipe (Pito) Roybal, J. Paul Taylor, Lupe Sepulveda, Allan Moorhead, Victor Allee and Luis De La Cruz. Service arrangements have been entrusted to the care of La Paz-Graham's Funeral Home, 526-6891. In lieu of flowers, the family is requesting that donations be made in Emma Jean's name to the following: NMSU College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences, MSC 3AG PO Box 30003, Las Cruces, NM 88003; NMSU College of Health and Social Servic-- School of Nursing, MSC 3446 PO Box 30001, Las Cruces NM 88003; or Cowboys 4 Cancer Research, PO Box 202, Dona Ana, NM 88032

Green Chamber unveils OMDP marketing tools Business, community join promoting national treasure

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

If a tourist asks you which sites in the 496,330 acre Organ-Mountains Desert Peaks National Monument to visit, what would you tell them?

Even if you've never been past Dripping Springs, there's no need to struggle for an intelligent answer: The Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce is unveiling its OMDP marketing toolkit for local businesses at the First Friday brown bag 11:30 a.m. Sept. 5.

Carrie Hamblen, executive director of the Las Cruces Green Chamber, will give a workshop on how businesses can use the toolkit.

Hamblen also will introduce the toolkit at ribbon cuttings, a training session Tuesday, Sept. 9, at Beck's Coffee, a presentation to City Council Monday, Sept. 15, Green Drinks on Wednesday, Sept. 23, and Networks Business Tuesday, Oct. 7.

The toolkit includes OMDP talking points, Visitors Guide brochure with where to visit" information, and "ask me about" buttons for staff to wear, as well as goodies such as magnets, stickers and posters for customers.

There also is a follow-up form to evaluate the success of OMDP marketing.

Hamblen said the kit was planned to reflect the input member businesses provided through a survey.

Each brochure has a place where businesses can affix their logos.

The brochure will direct people to the website, which links to the Bureau of Land Management site for maps, permitting and other information a local or out-of-town visitor needs for a day of adventure in the nearby mountains.

"Our goal is to get the brochure in as many people's hands as possible - distributed by the CVB, hotels, any business that wants to highlight the opportunity to explore OMDP." Hamblen said.

"People don't need to be Green Chamber members to be a part of this. Ultimately this is about how the entire community can benefit."

Getting out there

Kickstarter is a website that since 2009 has hosted successful campaigns for 68,871 entrepreneurial projects, most of them in the creative arts.

It's all-or-nothing funding, which means the Smiths must meet their goal to in their chosen timeframe - 30 davs.

The Smiths are confident they have a good idea.

Natives of Kansas City, Mo., they met at church. She was a secretary and he worked in security.

Ruth Smith said they did things backwards, marrying and starting a family before they decided to go to college.

In 2007 – after a national search for a university that offered affordable, good-quality housing and reasonable tuition – they moved to Las Cruces.

She earned a degree in journalism and mass communication and he in criminal justice.

Ruth Smith said the idea for The Green Agent emerged from brainstorming sessions to find their niche.

About the time they identified their niche, the Smiths welcomed their fourth child in January.

Ruth Smith said she began to think about a baby crawling on the floors cleaned with toxic chemicals.

The Smiths learned about Better Life plantbased cleaning products that are completely nontoxic, Aaron Smith said. "We tried them at home and we loved them," Ruth Smith said.

Getting started

Aaron Smith said The Green Agent cleaning business became official Aug. 4, when they received their state license. They also are bonded, insured and equipped.

With a mentor who owned a cleaning business in California and the guidance of Manny Morales of WESST Enterprise Center in Las Cruces, they are looking to grow a solid business. Ruth home schools the

They currently are preparing proposals for individuals as well as businesses such as banks and gyms.

The Smiths are placing flyers and coupons in Mountain View Market and at the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces, handing out business cards, advertising locally and via Google and announcing The Green Agent to the world at http://cleaninglascruces.wix.com/ greenagent.

"Our goal is a trustworthy, professional company were people trust us to be in their homes and provide highquality cleaning," Aaron Smith said.

Easing into entrepreneurship

The Kickstarter campaign aims to raise money to purchase a better vacuum and a used truck for the business.

It is scheduled to go live the week of Sept. 1 when Amazon.com completes its work setting up for backers to contribute securely.

Backers who donate $5 will receive a thank-you note, those who donate $10 will receive a website listing and those making larger donations will receive Better Life Products. In addition, the Smiths plan to make food pantry donations and give stuffed animals to the Las Cruces Police Department.

Since its inception, Kickstarter has attracted 6.9 million backers who have pledged $1.3 million to fund successful projects.

Some 44 percent of projects listed at the site have met their goals and received funding.

The Smiths look forward to backers from Las Cruces visiting Kickstarter to join them in making their environmentally friendly cleaning business a Las Cruces success story.

> Q: What are copayments, deductibles and coinsurance - and how do they differ from one another?

A: A "copayment" or "copay" is a specific dollar amount ($15, $20 or $30, for example) that you may have to pay for an office visit or a prescription drug. A "deductible" is a dollar amount (typically between $500-$6000) that you may be required to pay out-of-pocket each year before the health insurance company pays medical bills for some covered services. "Coinsurance" usually describes the percentage of a total bill that you may have to pay for certain services. BUSINESS

Liability, strategy concerns help business owners pick structure

By Finance New Mexico For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The form a new business should take isn't always obvious. Though many self-employed entrepreneurs begin as sole proprietors, an individual can structure her business in many other ways. The best structure is the one that fits her business's strategy and size and offers the greatest protection from liability and taxes.

FLYING SOLO

A sole proprietorship, the simplest business form, is logical for many startups or solo professionals, such as consultants, private investigators or freelance writers. In a sole proprietorship, the business is not separate from the owner and his business income and losses are included on his personal tax returns.

A sole proprietor often has little overhead, and personal assets are used in the business. He operates under his own name or creates a "doing business as" moniker. Because the sole proprietor is personally responsible for all his business's debts and liabilities, he might want to incorporate or become a limited liability company to protect his assets.

À sole proprietor rarely has to do more than obtain a business license and gross receipts tax number, but his business type might require registration with licensing authorities.

CHOOSING PARTNERS

Some solo entrepreneurs evolve into partnerships, LLCs or corporations to limit liability, expand opportunities or attract investors. It takes at least two people to form a partnership, and the arrangement can be general – with each partner's actions binding the entire group - or limited, where the general partner runs the business and the limited partner receives returns but is silent and powerless in business matters.

All gains and losses go directly to individual partners in proportions agreed to in the partnership agreement. Partnerships can be simple arrangements between two or more people, or more formal combinations.

GOING CORPORATE

Both corporations and LLCs offer limited protection from debts and liabilities, and both are autonomous legal entities.

LLC owners are called members. They can run the business or hire managers to run it. A membermanaged LLC resembles a partnership; a managerrun LLC mimics a corporation. Most states require an LLC to have an operating agreement that states the organization's membership and management structure. The LLC isn't required to issue membership shares, hold meetings or record decisions but it is advisable to do so to avoid misunderstandings and conflicts.

Oversight is much stricter for corporations; they must register with the state, adopt bylaws, issue shares to equity holders/owners, hold shareholder meetings and file annual reports, among other requirements. Shareholders don't manage the corporation's affairs or bear personal responsibility for the business's obligations; they vote for directors who hire managers to fulfill these tasks.

C corporations pay taxes on the corporation's earnings, and their shareholders are individually taxed on dividends. If the business qualifies, it can elect S corporation status, avoiding corporate taxes and passing losses or gains directly to shareholders. The rules for organizing as an S corporation are strict, however – not all businesses qualify.

Given the complex considerations involved in starting or expanding a business, entrepreneurs should consult a lawyer or accountant when choosing a structure that offers the greatest advantage.

"Since the national monument was designated, we've had double the people clicking OMDP on our website," said CVB 's executive director Philip San Filippo. "People are excited about it, and so are we."

"The interesting thing is several groups are working together to maximize everything the National Monument can provide," Hamblen said.

"Friends of the Organ Mountains will be bumping up the number of trips it organizes as well as awareness of the monument area. The Green Chamber is getting businesses to capitalize on the benefits as well as to become stewards of the National Monument."

Hamblen said the kit is just the beginning of coordinated efforts throughout the community to create opportunity as a result of the OMDP designation in May by President Barack Obama.

ect can mean "lots of cooks," Hamblen said OMDP team members share a common commitment.

"We all want this to be respectful, to approach this in a thoughtful way," she said.

Hamblen said while the marketing campaign will encourage people to take advantage of the economic opportunities from the monument, it simultaneously will "encourage respect for the lands and those who use them. "We want to do it right," she said.

Hometown adventure

Hamblen said the coalition working to achieve monument status knew once the designation was made county residents as well as people visiting the area to see the sites would need information. The toolkit was created to address the needs of both locals and tourists, while also making it possible for local businesses to benefit.

"There are quite a few trail sites people can go to see wildlife, plant life and cultural and historical sites," Hamblen said.

A bit off the beaten path are trails in the Robledo and Sierra de Las Uvas mountains as well as Kilbourne Hole and Aden Crater in the Patrillo Mountains where members of the NASA space program prepared to drive a vehicle on the moon, she said.

Vasquez assumes new role at Habitat

By Alta LeCompte Las Cruces Bulletin

Mornings are hectic at the Vasquez household as Maria Vasquez, Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity's new executive three director, gets daughters off to school and herself to the office. The action starts at 6 a.m., Vasquez said.

Her very full life includes pursuing prebusiness studies at Doña Ana Community College. where she is a Crimson Scholar. When she completes the program in 2015, she plans to go on for a bachelor's in business at New Mexico State University.

"Education is really important," she said. "I'm fortunate enough to have Habitat support my educational goals. If it hadn't been for the support, I'm not sure I would have gone back to school."

The way she sees it, hectic morning are a small price to pay for educational experiences she and her daughters are taking part in.

While the two older girls attend Las Cruces Public Schools, Aneli, 4, has started an advanced learners pre-k program at NMSU, a collaboration of the university and the school system.

'We've all been very excited for her," Vasquez said.

Growing with Habitat

A native of Albuquerque, Vasquez has found a home at Habitat. The local affiliate of Habitat International serves the southern New Mexico community, where it has built 88 homes with the help of sponsors, contributors and volunteers.

Vasquez joined Habitat in 2009 at the ReStore, which brings in 40 percent of the local affiliate's revenue.

"Time passed and I noticed families doing sweat equity in order to prepare to get into a home," she said. "Meanwhile, I was learning at ReStore.

Maria Vasquez, the new executive director of the La Cruces Habitat for Humanity affiliate, plans to launch a home buyer education program for Habitat families. When an operations she said. Our former position became available, it seemed like a great opportunity to develop my skills in community participation."

Vasquez said she stepped into the operations coordinator position without much previous experience with grant writing and fund raising.

Putting OJT to work

Vasquez said she brought more on-the-job experience than formal education to the position.

"When I started working on the operations side of Habitat, it motivated me to better myself, so I went back to school to be able to give more of myself to this affiliate," she said.

Meanwhile, she continued to learn on the job.

"We have a team approach at our affiliate."

executive director Marie Schwartz was the development officer when I started at the office. I got to see what she did. When she executive became director, I took on some of her responsibilities while still in family services."

Families first

Vasquez praised the cohesiveness of the Las Cruces affiliate's staff of 11, including those at Re-Store. Operations staff includes the executive director, an accountant, construction supervisor, operations coordinator and part-time business manager who oversees community liaison with the city.

"In my training I heard how sometimes it's not as easy for some affiliates as it is for us to communicate among all employees," she said.

The cohesiveness of the Las Cruces office comes in part from the fact that "we're all from here," Vasquez said.

"Our heart is in our mission - that's why we communicate well. Putting families into their homes is our motivation.

"Another thing that makes it work is the community."

The community supports Habitat through both financial giving and volunteering on home building projects.

Vasquez said groups from NMSU work on building, while United Way is a big supporter both with funds and homeowner education for Habitat families. Many local businesses support Habitat builds with cash and in-kind donations.

Although families currently are receiving homeowner education through the United Way, one of Vasquez's goals is to offer education to its families through a home buyer education course she's developing.

The curriculum will include financial literacy, budgeting, property taxes, homeowners insurance and home maintenance – all the things a first-time home buyer needs to know.

"We don't want to set them up to fail," Vasquez said. "Classes are an effort to help them succeed once they own their first home."

Community service starts at home

While Vasquez describes her family as "an adventurous bunch" that goes on mountain hikes in Ruidoso, they also participate in community activities.

They attend community fairs, where the girls get acquainted with other nonprofits.

"I think it's very important to be aware of the needs in the community and the resources the community provides," she said.

Her oldest daughter, Destiny, started a Cans for Homes program at Lynn Middle School, because the school wanted to help Habitat.

Students collected cans through the Builders Club, Vasquez said.

"I'd like to mention that's my favorite," she said of the students' charitable projects.

"The cans amount to a front door for a house.'

D/P/S competes for office design award

What does the office of the future look like?

The NAIOP commercial real estate development association posed the question in its 2014 Build-Out/Interior Design Competition. Design firms from across the country submitted ideas for the next generation of workspaces, and three winning submissions have been selected to move into the finals. Among the finalists is Southwest-based architecture firm Dekker/Perich/Sabatini (D/P/S).

D/P/S's winning entry focuses on sustainability and flexibility. It repurposes existing office buildings by reimaging them as sustainable, urban centers. The office of the future, according to Dekker/Perich/Sabatini, is one that offers an exceptional employee experience, providing live and work options and access to amenities ranging from advanced technology to child care.

"To create a truly sustainable office building, we decided to design around basic human needs rather than focus on today's specific trends," said Emily Thaler, director of interior designer at Dekker/Perich/Sabatini. "The design works for businesses today and in the future because the solutions center on constants: safety, reliability, flexibility and wellness."

The D/P/S design team developed a concept that includes functional workspace, walking paths, views and natural light, a grocery and other spaces that contribute to work-life balance.

The NAIOP competition finalists – Dekker/ Perich/Sabatini, DLR Group and Ware Malcomb – will present their design concepts at Development '14: The Meeting for Commercial Real Estate. The event will be held Oct. 28 in Denver.

With offices in Las Cruces and Albuquerque, Phoenix and Amarillo, Texas, D/P/S specializes in architecture, interior design, landscape architecture, planning and structural engineering. For more information visit www.dpsdesign.org or call 521-9700.

Convergys hosts Back to School Carnival

Convergys Corp. contact center in Las Cruces in August put on a back to school community carnival. Nineteen community agencies participated, providing carnival games.

The agencies had educational materials regarding resources for parents, and the Las Cruces Police Department added 70 new children at its Identify a Child booth.

Convergys provided 60 children school supplies that will last until the end of the 2015 school year. Supplies were paid for by $2,700 raised in March at a spring festival.

"We were delighted to host this community back to school carnival at Convergys," said Alan Baker, site leader for the Convergys contact center in Las Cruces. "We had a terrific turnout, and are looking forward to future events to come."

As part of the Las Cruces business community since 2008, Convergys encourages its employees to support the communities in which they live and work. Convergys employees support the Spring Fest Easter Egg Hunt, United Way and Colonias Development Center.

Reservoirs improve with runoff Erratic rainfall reported

By Marvin Tessneer

Las Cruces Bulletin

Summer rains have been scattered, but some of the runoff from higher ground has been received in the reservoirs, said state climatologist David DuBois.

The storage at Elephant Butte Reservoir is reported at 145,860 acre-feet, only 6.6 percent of capacity.

"But on Aug. 12, the storage was 139,000 acre-feet," DuBois said. "That's a gain of several hundred acre-feet of water in a few days."

The Elephant Butte Irrigation

District ended its season on Aug, 1. An example of erratic rainfall was reported in the Uvas Mountains area.

"Our cattle are doing well," rancher Carol Cooper said. "The northwest part of our range, especially against the Uvas Mountains, we've been getting a lot of rain this year."

The rains have been spotty, Bureau of Land Management range specialist Leticia Lister said.

"Right now, we're not hearing any reports of increasing herd numbers by ranchers," she said.

St. Clair Winery receives $50,000 grant

Bulletin Staff Report

St. Clair Winery is the recipient of a $50,000 grant to help expand production of its Hatch chile-infused wines and support New Mexico's agricultural industry.

The funding will help the winery to boost revenues and grow its customer base for its chile-infused line of wines by reimbursing production, marketing and distribution costs.

The funding was awarded through the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development Value-Added Producer Grant program, which helps agricultural producers grow their businesses by turning raw commodities into value-added products.

St. Clair Winery's Hatch chile line of wines is produced using premium chile from Hatch Valley, creating a uniquely New Mexican product. The winery's vineyard is located 47 miles west of Deming.

The company, owned and managed by the Lescombes family, operates St. Clair Winery & Bistro locations across New Mexico, including one at 1720 Avenida de Mesilla. Its products are sold at locations throughout the Southwest, and the grant Florent Lescombes, vice president of St. Clair Winery, said the popularity of the spicy wines along with the growth in the company's full range of fine wine varieties has been a vital economic driver for Luna County and the State of New Mexico.

"We use the best Hatch Valley red and green chile to make these wines, and bottle them here at our winery in Deming," he said.

"St. Clair Winery's Hatch chile-infused wines are a distinctly New Mexican product, and I'm proud to support funding to help the winery grow its business and expand the market for this unique specialty product," said U.S. Sen. Theater companies kick off 2014-15 season

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

Fall marks the start of the 2014-15 performance season of three of Las Cruces' beloved theater companies, American Southwest Theatre Company (ASTC) at New Mexico State University, No Strings Theatre Company at the Black Box Theatre and the Las Cruces Community Theatre.

AMERICAN SOUTHWEST THEATRE COMPANY/ NMSU THEATRE

ASTC's 2014-15 season begins with a new play, Meridith Friedman's "West Highland Wye," running Friday, Sept. 26, through Oct. 25. In it, Jane, reeling from a broken engagement, sets out on a 95mile walking tour in Scotland with her father. When a chance encounter with a charming Irishman reopens her heart, Jane must choose between her old life and the uncertain future ahead.

Playing Nov. 21-Dec. 7, the ASTC production of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" takes the stage of the the NMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave. Based on Charles Dickens' unfinished novel, this Tony Awardwinning musical follows the exploits of the Theatre Royale Music Hall Company as it attempts to complete the unfinished story of Edwin Drood. The audience will be part of the action, too, as each night, they help choose a different ending to the story.

The conservative Wyeth household's family Christmas erupts when liberal daughter Brooke arrives bearing a soon-to-be-published memoir detailing the family's many secrets in Jon Robin Baitz's "Other Desert Cities," running Feb. 20-March 8, 2015.

ASTC's 2014-15 season closer is a favorite: William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night." After surviving a shipwreck, Viola arrives in Illyria and disguises herself as a man. But when Lady Olivia falls in love with her and her twin brother, Sebastian, suddenly appears, chaos and comedy abound. "Twelfth Night" will run April 17-May 3, 2015.

NO STRINGS THEATRE COMPANY/ BLACK BOX THEATRE

The No Strings Theatre Company, which makes its home in Downtown Las Cruces at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St., began its 2014-15 performance season with "Rocket Man," which continues its run through Sunday, Sept. 14. For Gerald Kane's review of "Rocket Man," see page C3.

Ron Hutchinson's "Moonlight and Magnolias" plays at the Black Box Theatre Oct. 10-26. In 1939, Hollywood is abuzz. Legendary producer David O. Selznick has shut down production of his new epic, "Gone with the Wind." The screenplay just doesn't work, so what's an all-powerful movie mogul to do? He locks screenwriter Ben Hecht and director Victor Fleming in his office, closes the shades and, on a diet of bananas and peanuts, the three men labor over five days to fashion a screenplay to one of the most successful and beloved films of all time.

In "A Tuna Christmas," playing Nov. 21-Dec. 7, it's Christmas in the smallest town in Texas. Radio station OKKK news personalities Thurston Wheelis and Arles Stuvie report on various Yuletide activities including hot competition in the annual lawn-display contest. Many of Tuna's most colorful denizens – some of whom you may recognize from "Greater Tuna" and some appearing here for the first time – join in on the holiday fun.

Starting off the New Year, "Impossible Marriage," playing Jan. 30-Feb. 15, 2015, deals with an impending, ill-fated wedding set at a country estate in Savannah, Ga. It is a melodramatic black comedy of manners, full of over-blown gestures and witty observations. In its simultaneous comedy and seriousness, "Impossible Marriage" also has a flavor of Russian playwright Anton Chekhov. The main theme of the play is the conflict between civilization and passion.

"The Hothouse," by Harold Pinter, is a tragicomedy set in a vague "institution," between a rest home and a sanitarium. The professionalism and even sanity of the institution's director, Roote, are undermined by his subordinates: the efficient and ambitious Gibbs, the aptly named alcoholic Lush and Miss Cutts, Roote's calculating and shrewd mistress who is also involved with Gibbs. After the reported murder of one patient and the rape and resulting pregnancy of another, Roote orders Gibbs to find the perpetrator, and his discovery will send the institution into mayhem. "The Hothouse" plays March 13-29, 2015.

Running May 10-17, 2015, "Mad Gravity" is a comedy about two Dada performance artists who have built a theater in their living room. Tonight, the home theater is hosting a dinner party. Things go quickly awry when they discover the other couple wasn't told about the live audience, and get worse when then discover an asteroid is headed toward Earth.

Closing NSTC's 2014-15 season is "Arabian Nights," playing June 5 to 21. Written by playwright Dominic Cooke, the play is a simple and inventive retelling of the stories from Arabian Nights.

LAS CRUCES COMMUNITY THEATRE

Ahead of the pack, Las Cruces' oldest theater company, the Las Cruces Community Theatre, is already well in to its new season, with performances of "The Full Monty" gaining rave reviews. There's still lots more in store at the LCCT through the next months, though.

Running Oct. 10-26, "Death Trap" centers on Sidney Bruhl, a successful writer of Broadway thrillers desperate to overcome a dry spell, a series of failures and a shortage of funds. A possible break in fortune comes when he receives a script from a college student making for a potential hit. He offers the young man collaboration, who quickly accepts, but tension mounts as the plot begins to twist and turn.

"Meet Me in St. Louis," running Dec. 5-21, revolves around four attractive sisters blazing with excitement over the World's Fair, soon to open right there in St. Louis. The girls are in a state about the love life of their only brother, whom they suspect of ditching his girl for a snob from the East. In the midst of this, > their father announces he's taken a job in New York City, meaning they must to leave home and miss the impending fair.

Unger and Madison are at it again – Florence Unger and Olive Madison, that is – in Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple (Female Version)," running Jan. 23-Feb. 8, 2015. Instead of the poker party that begins the original version, Ms. Madison has invited the girls over for an evening of Trivial Pursuit, and the Pidgeon sisters have been replaced by the two Constanzuela brothers, but the hilarity remains the same.

Tony Award-winning playwright Mark Medoff will premiere a new directorial work at the Las Cruces Community Theatre March 6-22, 2015.

In "Shoulders," playing April 24-May 10, 2015, the McClintocks, a family in 1942 San Francisco, have come through the Great Depression thanks to the grit of eldest daughter Lorraine, a shipyard welder upon whom her mother and younger siblings rely. As the news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor reaches the family and fear of invasion creeps across the beaches of California. Lorraine helps their Japanese-American neighbors prepare for internment while forced to choose between a life with a man who has declared his love and the responsibility she has to her family, unable to survive without her.

Closing out the 2014-15 LCCT season, "Company" contains a series of vignettes in which Big Apple bachelor Bobby learns the perils and pleasures of love, marriage, dating and divorce from his married friends. "Company" plays June 12-28, 2015.

See you at the theater!

'Rocket Man' takes flight

Review by Gerald M. Kane For the Las Cruces Bulletin

It is never my intention to place spoilers in my reviews so as to pre-empt plot surprises. And yet, in order for audience members to acquire a better understanding of the many subtle themes at work in Stephen Dietz's oftentimes dark, sometimes funny 1998 work "Rocket Man" it is necessary to lay some sort of foundation.

Let me go on record and say "Rocket Man" is not "ha-ha" funny, but the humor ranges from dark to light-hearted – a rather bizarre mix.

Ceil and Peter Herman are big fans of Dietz, having produced four productions of the quirky, popular American playwright.

In my opinion, "Rocket Man" contains many thought-provoking, dark, disturbing and humorous elements. This should not dissuade you from attending the opening production of Black Box Theatre's 2014-15 jam-packed season containing a variety of comedies, romances and fables.

"Rocket Man" plays through Sunday, Sept. 15. It will give you much to ponder.

Two days have passed since I saw the opening, and I am discovering that the further I chronologically distance myself from the play, more questions come up and more challenges present themselves about what I saw.

At points in the play we are witness to some beautiful albeit frightening life outcomes, thanks to Peter Herman's exceptional scenic design. We suddenly enter into a cosmic space that becomes part of a parallel universe in which characters and time move forward and back. It is important to suspend disbelief at times in order to better understand all the plot ramifications.

"Rocket Man" begins with its central character, middle-aged Donny Rowan, a failed landscape architect, realizing the humdrum quality of his life has left him empty.

As Ceil Herman points out in her plot summary, "Typical of his entire life, Donny has been pressing the same crosswalk button at the same traffic light on the same street corner for 20 years." He ultimately opens the crosswalk button box and learns that the crosswalk button box is empty. This is the last straw.

As an act of desperation, he places all his possessions on his front lawn with a sign reading "Here's my life, make me an offer." He attaches the infamous crosswalk button to the easy chair in his attic and uses it to take him into an alternate universe.

Those of us with counseling backgrounds hear the sirens and see the flashing red lights.

Donny does have a support system, but those who reach out to him are simply slapped away.

Herman has assembled an exceptional cast who understand all the nuances of the play. Shawn Shawn Whitty as Donny, Julia McClenon as Rita, Lauren Jacobs as Trisha and Gorton Smith as Buck in the No Strings Theatre Co. production of "Rocket Man," playing at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St., through Sunday, Sept. 15.

Whitty, whose "day job" is a counselor in the Las Cruces Public Schools, makes an exceptional Donny. He has a wealth of professional acting training and performance work in the San Francisco Bay area.

The depth of Donny's friendship with Buck, played with remarkable empathy by Gorton Smith, transcends words. Smith's work is getting better and better.

Donny's other special relationship is with another work colleague, Louise, who becomes a member of the clergy and brings out a nuanced performance with great skill by Jamie Bronstein.

The other characters, all of whom seem to have forged a professional bond throughout the rehearsal process, are Donny's ex-wife, Rita, played with an edge by Julia McClenon, and his teen-aged daughter Trisha, played sympathetically by Lauren Jacobs.

At one point in the second act, Jacobs delivers a soliloquy that reminds me of Emily Webb's "Our Town" recollection. I am certain Deitz had this soliloquy in mind when writing Trisha's words.

Wisely, Herman has placed information on a table in the lobby about depression. Perhaps the sudden death of Robin Williams was the catalyst, but still, it is imperative to put this information out there for audience members to read and pass along. One must not stand idly by as a neighbor bleeds. If one takes anything away from "Rocket Man," let it be this all-too-true observation.

Performances of "Rocket Man" take place at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, Sept. 5-6 and 12-13, 2:30 p.m. Sundays, Sept. 7 and 14, and 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 11. Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for senior citizens and students, and all seats on Thursdays are $8. For reservations, call 523-1223 or email nstcreservations@gmail.com. Season tickets for the 2014-15 will be on sale through the run of "Rocket Man."

Gerald Kane has reviewed theater, film and opera for National Public Radio stations and newspapers in New Orleans, Phoenix and Kansas City as well as for the Las Cruces Bulletin for the past 11 years. A former member of the American Theatre Critics Association, he has taught "Jews on Screen" at New Mexico State University. He is the Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El in Las Cruces.

Bravo Mic launches new country format

Bravo Mic Communications, parent company of radio stations KVLC (101 Gold), KXPZ (The All New Zia Country, 99.5), KMVR (Magic 105) and KOBE (AM 1450), brought a new format into its broadcasting cluster. As of Tuesday, Sept. 2, KXPZ is Southern New Mexico's New Country.

The Rocket, which formerly occupied the 99.5 FM frequency, began broadcasting online exclusively at www.therocketonline.com. It will keep its original active rock format and focus heavily on new music.

Bravo Mic General Manager Michael Smith said, "Our research indicated a real demand for a second country music choice for both listeners and the advertising community." The 100,000-watt signal covers much of southern New Mexico and brings the format to outlying communities such as Hatch, Truth or Consequences, Deming and Alamogordo. Smith said no jobs were lost as a result of the format change.

"All of Las Cruces' favorite Rocket Jockeys will remain as a presence at Rocket after its transition to an internet station," he said. They are also participating, along with all of Bravo Mic's air talent, in the launch of the new station, which can also be heard online via its website, www.ziacountry.com.

For more information, contact Smith at 527-1111 or mrsmith@bravomic.com.

NMSU students summer vacation stories

Visiting a Buddhist temple in Shanghai. Learning a new language. Riding a camel. Fighting forest fires. Saving lives. These may sound like items on someone's bucket list, but they are just a few of the experiences students in New Mexico State University's College of Arts and Sciences had over the last couple of months.

For the second year, the college sponsored "How I'm Spending My Summer Vacation," a contest challenging students to share pictures and details about what they'd be doing their summer break and how it relates to their education.

The result was more than 20 entries from students across the college's diverse departments. Some stayed close to home while others traveled around the U.S. or to far-flung locations around the globe.

"It's a thrill to hear about the accomplishments of our students outside the classroom," said Christa Slaton, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "This contest helps us learn more about how they are continuing their education over the summer and how it relates to what they are learning here at New Mexico State University."

On her trip to China, Sally Goenaga was inspired not only to visit the famous Buddhist Jing'an Temple in Shanghai but also to find an internship.

"I went to China, not only to learn the language, but also to see what is waiting for me down the road," she said. "I am a government major interested in international relationships. I want to understand others' points of view, and I am doing so by meeting and talking with people from all over the world here in Shanghai. I met so many people who shared their knowledge with me and have inspired me to aim higher."

Students whose photos garnered more than 100 "likes" on the Arts and Sciences College Facebook page were entered into a drawing. Two students were randomly selected to receive a $100 Barnes & Noble gift card. Goenaga and Marie Ghasempour were this year's winners.

Ghasempour, a creative writing graduate student, visited New York City. The photo she submitted showed her enjoying Central Park and posing with a statue of her "childhood friend," the title character of "Alice in Wonderland."

Cristal Carey, a biology major, spent part of her summer learning Spanish in Costa Rica.

"I believe that becoming immersed in a culture different than your own is a great way to learn about the great things the rest of the world has to offer," she said.

Art major Monica Schwartz interned at the New Mexico Lottery. In addition to designing signage and digital advertisements, she participated in some of the company's events, such as Lottery Night at an Albuquerque Isotopes baseball game.

Students Aubrey Strobel and Daniel Rael were chosen as Dean's Office favorites.

Strobel, a journalism major, worked in a clinic in Port Au Prince, Haiti, caring for sick and malnourished children.

"I am writing about my life-changing experiences and hope to remember all the wonderful people I met," she said.

Christopher Trujillo, a service member in the U.S. Air Force deployed in the Middle East during Operation Iraqi Freedom, continued his New Mexico State University studies online. Trujillo was chosen as Honorable Mention in the NMSU College of Arts and Sciences' "How I'm Spending My Summer Vacation" photo and story contest.

Rael, an anthropology graduate student, interned for the Bureau of Land Management and spent his summer fighting forest fires across the western United States. He was trying to prevent fire from destroying archaeological sites within the Wenatchee National Forest.

Honorable mention went to Christopher Trujillo, criminal justice major. As a service member of the U.S. Air Force, he was deployed in the Middle East in support of Operation Enduring Freedom while continuing his education online.

'As Above,' so stupid

Review by Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

A word of advice: abandon all hope, ye who enter "As Above, So Below."

The film centers on Scarlet Marlowe (Perdita Weeks), a fearless tomb raider following in her deceased father's footsteps, trotting the globe in search of the philosophers' stone – a legendary alchemical artifact capable of turning base metals to gold, along with the powers of rejuvenation and reanimation.

Joining her and filming her exploits is cameraman Benji (Edwin Hodge), whose devotion to holding on to the camera at all costs far outweighs even his most basic of survival instincts.

Scarlet will stop at nothing in her search. Desecrating crypts, shattering priceless artifacts for the secrets contained within – nothing is off limits for our headstrong heroine.

When a series of cryptic clues leads Scarlet to believe this all-powerful alchemic creation is hidden somewhere beneath The City of Lights, she enlists the help of a former flame, George (Ben Feldman), a skilled translator chilled to Scarlet for their last time together, ending with him in Turkish prison. Reluctantly, George agrees despite his aversion to caves – his brother drowned in one, apparently, in one of the movie's more stunningly tonedeaf reveals – and he and Scarlet team with a trio of achingly hip urban explorers. Why does Hollywood still think every group of five or more twenty-somethings includes at least one who beatboxes?

The sextet descends into the Catacombs of Paris. Things go from bad – cave-ins, collapses and calamities galore – to worse – the tunnel may or may not lead to the gates of Hell – in record time, and just as quickly, "As Above, So Below" descends into formulaic, supernatural shaky-cam nonsense.

It's a shame, too: The film's first act builds a respectable amount of tension, despite its hackneyed pseudo-intellectual archaeo-babble dialogue and unconvincing performances. As the crew enters the ossuaries of Paris, there's a palpable sense of claustrophobic dread, and, of course, the scenery couldn't be better for a horror film. Bones, rats, dark, dread, being around six million dead folks: These all really make the skin crawl, but as the film inches ever closes to its inevitably stupid supernatural climax, it becomes a by-the-numbers fright flick.

As a found-footage movie – still no damn idea how this footage was found – it's expected the camerawork isn't great, but "As Above, So Below" has, for the most part, two speeds: nauseating or too dark to see. When something scary is about to happen, you can barely see it; when it finally does happen, the camera jerks away too quickly to give the audience a look. What a waste.

The film's score, too, is numbing, filled with the requisite creaks, cracks, crunches, chants and occasional crashes par for the genre course. It's as if the whole thing was soundtracked to a Halloween spookysounds tape from 1992. I can let you borrow one if you don't believe me.

When facing a door marked with the script over the gates of Hell ("Abandon all hope, ye who enter here") tucked away hundreds of feet below the Earth's surface inside a labyrinthine and structurally unsound system of tunnels and caverns stretching more than 200 miles and containing the remains of more than 6 million people, take the other door.

So, too, should you find another door at

What about that film liaison?

David Salcido Through the lens

Probably the most asked question of those in the local film industry today is: "Do we have a film liaison yet?"

Good question. To date, we do not, and have not since June 2013, when the last film liaison was mysteriously terminated. Word is that we should have one by the end of September. Sort of ...

It's no secret that the brain trust behind the Regional Film Development Advisory Council, spearheaded by state Rep. Jeff Steinborn – the people who made the backlot a reality – have been concentrating their efforts for the past six months or so on helping the city define just exactly what a film liaison would do, if and when one is hired.

They have gathered information, both locally and nationally, put together powerpoint presentations and staged several work sessions with the City Council in order to portray the full spectrum of possibilities that would be opened up should the position be filled. They even brought the Albuquerque Film Liaison Ann Lerner – who just received an award from the Location Guild Management Association (LGMA) citing her as the best film liaison in the country – to speak before the Council. By all accounts, her presentation was very well received.

As a result, the city says we will soon have a film liaison. The problem may be, however, that the position isn't exactly optimal to service what Lerner calls "the highly competitive nature of the industry."

Set up as an economic development assistant position, the job as it now stands has been described as 70 percent economic development and 30 percent film liaison. That has a lot of filmmakers and advocates for the industry up in arms.

New Economic Development Director Gary Camarano has gone on record stating "it doesn't make sense" to dedicate a full-time position to the pursuit of film development. The way he sees it, the new position should be set up to attract new companies to the area and focus on such varied areas of concern as agriculture, aerospace, defense, call centers, renewable energy and tourism, to name just a few. All very important, to be sure, but what does that have to do with filmmaking?

He's even gone so far as to dismiss concerns presented by film advocates like the RFDAC, which state that the film liaison must be knowledgeable about the industry and have a background in film. Camarano believes, according to a Sun-News article in which he was quoted, that "whoever is hired can get up to speed on the lingo and culture of the film industry quickly."

In response to that article, members of the RFDAC immediately fired off a letter to the Council urging them to hire a person "already Film and Television knowledgeable" and to make the position "full-time and fully supported." It was further pointed out that "there is no downtime in a film liaison's office and not just anyone, especially at part-time, will do."

That was two weeks ago, on Aug. 25. To date, there has not been a response from the city.

As the 10th annual White Sands International Film Festival continues through the first weekend of September – hosting films and filmmakers from all over the world and presenting workshops and seminars geared toward educating the community about what a successful film industry could mean for Doña Ana County and southern New Mexico – one has to wonder what the future really holds.

Is it enough to advocate, present statistics and bring in experts to discuss the ramifications of a fully operational film office in Las Cruces if the powers that be ignore the information and reconstruct it to better fit their needs?

A better question is, are we setting ourselves up for self-fulfilling failure by being too timid to actualize the full scope of the opportunity before us?

There is no denying the stakes are high. In just 10 short years, the City of Albuquerque has realized hundreds of millions of dollars in direct revenue to its business and civic community. Those numbers are on record. All we're asking for is our piece of that rich and very desirable pie.

It is my belief, as a veteran of the Hollywood studio system, an advocate for the local film industry and artistic director of the White Sands International Film Festival, now is not the time to be thinking about starting a diet.

Solar homes sell faster

Bulletin Friday, September 5, 2014

Mellow Honek Living Better Solar Powered

So I've been thinking about adding a solar system to my home. It makes sense, right? I get 40 percent of the cost of the system back in tax credits, and electric rates are going up again next year, so this is a great time to buy.

But I have a concern; I want to sell my house in the next few years and am worried about what a solar system will do when I put it on the market.

Well, studies released over the past few years in Colorado and California find that houses up for sale with solar systems do great on the market for two reasons.

First, homes with solar sell for more. Why? Because the home buver saves money. Sure, the house has a higher price tag and mortgage payments. But the new buyer actually pays less each month than a homeowner with the monthly burden of the mortgage plus the electric bill of a house without solar. In the most recent study from the Denver area, a solar system's contribution to the home's sales price easily exceeded the basic cost remaining in the system. In short, the solar owner enjoyed a bigger profit at the sale.

Second, I will sell my house faster. Buyers now put a higher priority on homes that are energy efficient and use solar, so a system on my home will make my house stand above the rest of the market. This is especially important in Las Cruces right now, with so many homes up for sale.

Cash or loan makes no difference. I do great either way. If I use cash, I add instant value to my home and my cost basis drops by 40 percent in just a few months, because of the tax credits.

A loan works, too. The monthly payment is lower than my electric bill, so I save money from day one. I still get the tax credits, and my home sells for more. What's not to like? Plus, interest on the loan payment is tax deductible. I won't get that from my electric bill.

There's more. While my electric bill always goes up, my loan payment never will.

I must think back on why I bought a home. I was tired of throwing money away on rent every month and wanted to get more value from my payments. Without solar, I am simply renting my electricity from El Paso Electric. With solar, I increase my home's value and then sell it faster at a higher price – which is exactly why I bought a home in the first place.

How will my home be appraised? More and more real estate appraisers are using "PV Value Tool," a simple resource developed right here in New Mexico. This program calculates the netpresent-value of a solar energy system and adds it to the price of a house. It isn't standard yet, but with more than 1,600 homes in Las Cruces with operating solar generators it won't be long until all the appraisers are using it to deliver an accurate value assessment of solar on a home.

Homes Southwest Living Reinventing the stone A unique alternative to block construction

By David Salcido

Las Cruces Bulletin

Flagstone patios, winding paths, retaining walls, decorative bridges and musical waterfalls - these are the elements that can make a backyard garden look and feel special.

Wouldn't it be nice if there was a one-stop shop to do it all without the headache of dealing with several different stone treatments?

As it turns out, southern New Mexico now has that alternative, via Southwest Stone Creations. Based in Deming, the company is an affiliate of nationally recognized hardscape specialists StoneMakers Inc., which has spent the past 25 years replicating, in hue, complexity and texture, the look and feel of actual stonework using a proprietary concrete process that allows for molding, sculpting and fast-set design.

"As far as I know, there isn't anybody else even close to this area doing what we do," said Southwest Stone Creations owner Jeremy Wainwright. "I think the closest is Colorado Springs."

A veteran of the armed services, Wainwright acquired the skills and his resulting business through a Veterans Administration-approved program that allowed him to be trained in the specialized area that would put his construction background to good use. Now out of the Army, he is moving full-steam ahead with a new career and a product he can feel proud of.

"We make retaining walls, waterfalls, walkways, patios, you name it, using solid concrete," Wainwright said. "But it's carved and textured. We can do bridges over ponds. We can do stone firepits, or make it look like a tree stump. They don't always have to look like stone. We can do benches that look like logs and posts holding a pergola up that look like trees. We can do pretty much anything you can think of."

Though the secret to StoneMakers success in the hardscape market is proprietary, Wainwright gives some insight into how the process works.

"We add a super plasticizer, then let the concrete sit for 10 or 15 minutes after we pour," he said. "That lets it crystallize, so we can stack it. Really, what it does is speed up the crystallizing process that already occurs in concrete, but multiplies the speed by days. It hardens up a lot quicker, but it stays soft enough that it can be carved. After a couple weeks it hardens to about 6,500 to 10,000 pounds per square inch, instead of traditional concrete which is between 3,000 to 4,000 psi."

Working as trained artisans, the hardscape specialists

Firepits and benches can be crafted to look like stone, brick or even wood, depending on the location's needs.

Fashioned entirely from concrete, waterfalls, bridges and ponds are specialties of Southwest Stone Creations.

create the illusion of stone, flagstone, brick, block or even wood, all by hand, carving and molding as they go, based on sketches created to the specifications of the property owner.

As an example, Wainwright describes his largest project to date.

"It was a triple spill waterfall with four retaining walls," he said. "There was a patio and a walkway, with a fire pit and bench, then a stairway onto a railroad tie bridge over a pond with a ledgefall and a small patio on the other side of the bridge. It was all one project and it took three days from start to finish."

The result is a custom-designed living space built to harmonize with any exterior landscape, done in a fraction of the time at reasonable rates.

"Nobody that does real stone can work at the pace we work," Wainwright said. "They can't get as much square footage done as we can, for the simple fact that we are the only business in the area that can stack walls without forms. The StoneMaker product I use is the only one that will allow it. It's also real quick. Our price per square foot is pretty competitive, because we can charge lower than most, depending on what kind of stone we're carving into it."

Currently taking orders in Deming, Silver City and Las Cruces, Wainwright and his Southwest Stone Creations team are offering introductory specials for those Bulletin readers quick enough to pick up the phone and give them a call.

"Right now, we've got 15 percent off deal on the first four firepits and benches that call in, then 10 percent off the fifth," Wainwright said. "We also do a deal with businesses, like landscapers, nurseries and places like that. If they let us install a waterfall or pond in their building, any jobs that come off that, they get 10 percent. Call and we'll talk prices."

Keep calm and practice yoga

Laura Smart Health Smart

For those who have never attended a yoga class, I'm asking vou to stay with me to the end of the column. There are a lot of misconceptions about yoga. I've heard some people say they're not in to "mantras" or "zen". I've heard some say they could never do yoga because they would fall asleep. Some believe it's too easy and not challenging enough for them. That was actually what I thought. Well, until you've tried it with the right certified instructor, you have no clue that all of these preconceptions are inaccurate.

I'm going to discuss my personal experience with yoga since September 2013. I've always been an aerobic fanatic and wanted to burn calories and lift weights to tone my body. I even got my American Sports and Fitness Association certification to be an aerobic/bootcamp instructor so I could substitute teach for a friend of mine while she was away on vacation and I wouldn't have to search for another aerobic class .

I take classes taught by Nora Bailey, a certified Hatha yoga instructor for the city. She teaches at the Aquatic Center on Hadley. I've been attending Nora's classes five days a week.

When I first began taking Nora's class, I admit I couldn't imagine a class without music, light and lots of noise in general. As she begins her classes, she asks you to "Close your eyes and be still." That concept is generally foreign to most people. To "be" without multiple distractions in a public place, is extremely difficult to find. But what a welcome practice I've much needed and thoroughly enjoyed.

During the early classes I attended, I realized there were several students who could do every pose and hold each one for Barbara Berger and Nancy Cathey of the Las Cruces Public Schools' nutrition department work diligently to ensure local children receive the freshest fruits and vegetables possible, as well as bringing educational programs into LCPS that teach children how to maintain healthiness throughout their lives.

Obesity sought to be rectified in LCPS

NM children rank higher for childhood obesity than national average

By Tara Melton Las Cruces Bulletin

One in three American children is obese, which puts them at risk for diseases previously seen only in adults, such as type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure and heart disease.

According to data from the National Survey of Children's Health 2011-12, New Mexican children rank higher for obesity than the national average.

Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) plans to continue vigilantly working to ensure children eat the healthiest fruits, vegetables and grains possible as well as helping them to a healthier adulthood.

About 15 years ago, said Director of Nutrition Services Nancy Cathey, LCPS began integrating whole grain products into the food it served in hopes students would get a better appetite for them.

As well, LCPS has incorporated fresh fruit and vegetables, dependant on annual availability, to students at every meal.

"We serve a lot of fresh fruits and vegetables in the months August, September, about half of October, April and May – all we serve is fresh because "We set up all these habits that encourage people to eat at all these different times and then we wonder why we have weight issues. Well if everything goes bad or everything that goes good, we teach them to eat, then that's what they're going to do,"

NANCY CATHEY

Director of Nutritional Services for Las Cruces Public Schools

the availability is there," Cathey said. "In the interim months, we use a combination of fresh and frozen, we don't ever use any kinds of canned vegetables. We try to use a wide variety of fruits and vegetables to expose kids to new things."

The new changes were made to LCPS' menu to meet federal mandates to meet sodium regulations. Thanks to frequent upgrades in the menu, LCPS didn't have to change much.

As well, salad bars in a couple middle schools are piloting this year. If they continue to make progress, they will be expanded to all of the district's middle schools. Cathey said LCPS students have always taken to the fruit served, yet they've struggled to have the same results with vegetables. By allowing middle school students to self-select vegetables, the hope is that students may consume more.

In 2006, the district cracked down on what foods can be sold in vending machines, snack bars and fundraisers that target students. Schools of the district have been encouraged to break away from celebration accomplishments several minutes. I introduced myself to a lady named Cathy and asked her if she lifted weights since her arms were so sculpted and buff. She said all she did was yoga. I was on a mission to get the results she had achieved by just participating in yoga classes. I learned that another student named Jean had been with Nora for more than 10 years, too.

Yoga increases your flexibility, your balance and your inner peace. I believe the practice makes you a calmer, kinder person as well. When Nora goes into her closing poses at 50 minutes, she repeats, "Be kind to yourself, love generously, laugh, drop anger, with food, and if they do have a food element within the celebration, to have healthy options.

"We try to get away from candy as a reward because we want kids to be motivated in other ways besides eating something unhealthy," said Barbara Berger, health and nutrition specialist of the district.

In the years Cathey has worked in the district, she said she's seen a 90 percent decrease in teachers who use food or candy as rewards for students.

"We set up all these habits that encourage people to eat at all these different times and then we wonder why we have weight issues. Well if everything goes bad or everything that goes good, we teach them to eat, then that's what they're going to do," Cathey said. "We think that's a pattern you develop as a child that carries on through your life."

Educational programs have also been implemented in elementary schools around the city that teachers use as core-curriculum lessons on healthy food. The Tasting Program focuses on fruits, vegetables and whole grains and highlights students learning the history and recipes of a healthy food, but also allows students to try it. I leave the class each time with a huge smile on my face and feel like my entire body has stretched and flexed as much as I am personally capable of without splitting open.

The best part of yoga comes a few months later after you have been consistently following Nora's routine.

You can put your left foot in your right hand, you can stand on one leg with your arms overhead, and you can squat and sit between your legs.

Oh the joy I felt when she quietly said to me "Laura, you're ready for the next position."

There is no competition in yoga except with

"We're trying to redefine (a healthy meal) because McDonald's tried to define it as a happy meal with fries, a Coke and chicken nuggets"

"If you go in and watch, the kids are all excited," Cathey said. "They get to touch, feel and discuss and in that setting kids get to taste things they wouldn't get to in another setting."

Past lessons include students growing sprouts and cilantro and receiving recipes for salads.

Cathey and Berger said they agree their favorite lesson was on whole grains. The district was able to get sheafs of wheat for each classroom and students yourself. I have no idea what anyone else in the class can do since most of the time I've got my eyes closed and am too focused on my own body moving in to some unimaginable position.

If there's anyone out there who has trouble sleeping at night, make a commitment to attend three months of yoga classes and I guarantee you, you will be sleeping like a tired dog. Nora's 72nd birthday was July 15.

She's an inspiration to me and in ten years when I'm 72, I hope I'm still taking her class.

were able to ground wheat berries into flour. This helped create a bond between students and their food as well as farming.

"It's a positive approach to changing their eating habits. Instead of 'don't eat this, don't eat this,' it's 'eat this, eat this," Cathey said. "I think that's a better, healthier approach and one for people to be able to maintain throughout their lives."

Students have also learned to examine barriers in their environment that keep them from being healthy, such as Las Cruces not being walker friendly, and reach out to policy makers with their ideas.

"Society did a lot of things to cause our children to be in the situation they are, where they can be obese so easily. So we have to start changing those pieces. The city is doing a lot of work to make Las Cruces friendly as far as walking paths, biking paths," Cathey said.

The district has gone as far as to flip recess and lunch periods to ensure students get everything out of their meals and the exercise they need. Studies have shown there is an increased consumption in all categories of food served to students when recess is held first.

"Kids eat more everything when they have recess first," Berger said. "Kids eat more of their main dish, they drink way more milk because they're thirsty."

While much of their eating habits are taught by parents, childhood obesity impacts schools because better nutrition equals better students.

"We're trying to redefine (a healthy meal) because McDonald's tried to define it as a happy meal with fries, a coke and chicken nuggets," Berger said. "We're trying to define what kids think of as a meal, which is a main dish, fruits, vegetables and milk."

LCPS isn't the only entity working hard to postively impact childhood obesity. After an increasingly obese youth population, New Mexico came up with a response in 2007. The state's answer was Healthy Kids Healthy Communities, which began in Las Cruces and has since expanded to different areas throughout the state. Healthy Kids Healthy Communities is a community-driven effort bringing local leaders and community members together to develop action plans with goals of decreasing childhood obesity.

The Healthy Kids Healthy Community model is to not only motivate kids, but to educate them on making healthy choices. In 2009, Healthy Kids Las Cruces was named as one of the top 10 models for reducing childhood obesity across the nation.

Piperweb TRAIL

On February 1, 1896, Albert Jennings Fountain, prominent attorney and politician, and his 8-year-old son were run off the road between White Sands and Las Cruces, presumably murdered. The bodies have never been found and the case remains New Mexico's premier murder mystery. Against the political background of the times, which included the dominance of the Santa Fe ring, the struggle between syndicated ranches and small cowmen, and Anglo/Hispanic rivalry, Karl Laumbach sets the stage and shares insights gained after 30 years of tracking a very cold case.

Shelter seeks volunteer photographers

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley (ASCMV) is looking for volunteer photographers to help advertise animals at the Center. The ASCMV is hoping to find photographers who are up for the challenge of capturing snuggly, fluffy animals on digital format for release to the public.

Candidates must be available two days a week and provide their own camera and samples of work, animal action shots preferred.

Volunteers must be at least 18 years of age, have photography experience and provide their own transportation, camera and photo cards.

Those interested may fill out a volunteer application at the ASCMV. Volunteer coordinators will contact the applicants and set up interviews. At time of the interview, volunteer candidates will need to bring their photographic samples. Days and times of the week will be scheduled.

For more information, call Janice Wright at 382-0018 or email jwright@lascruces.org.

Safe Haven hosts Summer Saturdays

Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary will hold Summer Saturdays at the Sanctuary from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m on the first two Saturdays of each month.

Safe Haven is a "no kill" animal facility. This adoption event will include tours of the sanctuary and visits with the pets. Hot dogs and refreshments will be available.

Driving directions to Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary are as follows: Take U.S. Highway 70 to the Holman Road exit, then drive north to El Centro and right to 6890 Eagle Road.

Safe Haven needs foster homes for animals

Fostering can be a wonderful and rewarding way to enjoy the companionship that a pet provides without having the permanent commitment that goes along. By bringing a foster pet into your home, you are helping socialize the pet, making it more adoptable.

For more information, call 527-4544.

Pet adoptions held at Farmers Market

Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley staff and volunteers are facilitating dog, cat, puppy and kitten adoptions from 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturday, Sept. 6, at 100 N. Main St.

Dogs up for adoption will be located at the north end of the block. Cats can be adopted from the offices of the Center for Spiritual Living, across from the dog adoptions. Fees are $75 for dogs/puppies and $50 for cats/kittens. The adoption fee includes the first set of vaccinations, spay/neuter and microchipping for the animal.

Shelter struggles to fill open appointments

Despite population numbers that continue to grow and an abundance of puppy and kitten litters at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley, Shelter Director Beth Vesco-Mock said appointments for affordable spay and neuter procedures at the facility remain vacant.

If you are a resident of Doña Ana County, the cost for spaying and neutering at the clinic is $35 for dogs and $25 for cats.

To make an appointment, call the shelter at 382-0018.
