NMSU pushes bond passage Renovations will increase safety

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

With contested elections getting all the attention, New Mexico State University officials are reminding voters there are two statewide bond questions that they would like to see voters approve.

General Obligation Bond (GOB) C will provide more than $139 million in higher education funding, with $25.1 million earmarked for projects in the NMSU system. GOB B will ask voters statewide to approve more than $11 million in funding for the state's public, school, tribal, college and university libraries to update their collections, equipment and databases.

Should GOB C pass, $19.2 million will go toward the upgrading and renovation of Jett Hall, Jett Annex and Rentfrow Hall on the Las Cruces main campus. The rest is for infrastructure renewal and expansion at NMSU's community colleges: $2 million for Doña Ana, $1.6 million for Carlsbad, $1.3 million for Grants and $1 million for Alamogordo.

Most critically needed are the improvements to Jett Hall, said NMSU President Garrey Carruthers.

Originally constructed in 1956, Jett Hall has been home to chemical engineering, which has seen great growth in recent years, especially in the area of bio-fuel development. Jett Hall now has many labs in a building in which ventilation, water and other utilities needed for safe

Local salsa on fire in more ways than one

Bulletin Staff Report

Mesilla Valley salsa is hot. Recently, the traditional salsa from Andele Restaurante in Mesilla was named the best in the state while the Downtown Las Cruces SalsaFest! has gained international attention.

The eatery at 1950 Calle Del Norte had never entered the Battle of the Salsas at the New Mexico State Fair, but decided to do so this year and came out on top. The accolades did not end there, though. In March, Andele bought Las Cruces-based Ol' Gringo Chile Co. and one of its sauces finished in third place as well.

"We're very proud of what we do and said, 'Let's give it a whirl,'" said Rachel Schneider, Ol' Gringo's general manager. Schneider's sister, Andrea, owns Andele Restaurante.

Former defense chief kicks off conference

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

Political gridlock is the greatest threat to national security, former defense and intelligence secretary Leon Panetta said in his opening speech Wednesday, Sept. 17, of the two-day Domenici Public Policy Conference.

Panetta, a Democratic congressman who worked alongside retired U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici to forge balanced budgets, decried what he sees as a lack of leadership willing to put aside partisan politics to forge solutions to the nation's challenges of a growing budget deficit, a broken immigration system and the growing threat of terrorism around the world.

Without leadership willing to take chances and compromise, the country's trajectory will continue to be

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Plant rights!

Beware, connoisseurs! A new discovery may change the way America eats. Love your broccoli? Savor your home-grown tomatoes? Would give your eye teeth for a blueberry pie?

This discovery could create sweeping protests and black markets like marijuana has never seen. Plants feel pain! That's right, plants feel pain.

Science has discovered that a relative of the cabbage plant was proven to be sensitive and react to an insect chewing on it by increasing its "chemical defenses."

Silly, you say? How silly do you think the humane treatment and endangered species congregation takes this new opportunity?

Selected species of fungi, coral and insects have already been declared endangered. There is no reality connected to the extent of damage and sacrifice that must be made by the humans to "save the fungus." Now, there will be zealots who will solicit millions of dollars to "save the fungus."

They will adopt the mantra of: Plants feel pain. Lettuce killers! Save our turnips! Free chile! Have you hugged your kumquat today? Sponsor your own pineapple or bunch of grapes for only $25 a month. Join the Vegetable Protection League.

These anti-plant consumption groups will rise in self-righteous indignation. They will use the tried-and-true methods used today by anti-meat eaters of yesterday. There will be billboards with pictures of a bunch of limp carrots with their top knot sagging, another showing a potato with tears coming from its eyes, an artichoke with a broken heart.

They will seek out the most flagrant violators of the Plant's Rights - vegetarians and their extremist branch, the vegans. Media will pick up the banner covering rallies demanding equal rights for plants. Whole Foods, Sprouts, Trader Joe's will be sued by the Plant Savers of the United States (PSUS) for everything their lawyers can think of. Small growers who sell their fresh produce at local farmers markets will become pariahs; ridiculed, demeaned, cursed and hanged in effigy in their own pumpkin patch ... and on and on.

BLACK

Well, nobody with any sense would even consider something like the Vegetable Protection League or that the PSUS could happen.

What would advocates suggest people eat? The human body can be sustained by mouth or intravenously by taking a slurry of chemicals containing hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, carbon, sulfur and phosphorus. That would be their answer. Which is irrelevant, because all they need is a cause. They don't need to prove anything.

Even if they could convince only 2.4 percent of the population that eating vegetables is ethically bad and unhealthy, it would be a victory for their cause and make them feel good about themselves. They would be their own little industry - and we all gotta make a living.

Today only 2.4 percent of Americans consider themselves vegetarians, who for practical reasons do not include eggs and dairy products. And they feel good about themselves.

I asked in jest if anyone with even half a brain would actually consider plants' rights and the Vegetable Protection League ... and then I remembered Congress.

Aggie fans unite FYI: Not everyone's a Lobo

Get to the game. Cheer on the Aggies. Let's beat the University of New Mexico. UNM comes into the Aggie house Saturday, Sept. 20, for the 6 p.m. game.

We need to pack Aggie Memorial Stadium to the rim and help guide New Mexico State University to victory.

NMSU's football team opened its season 2-0 for the first time in 15 years.

Though the Aggies fell 42-24 last week against Interstate-10 rival Texas-El Paso, the excitement for Saturday's game against Interstate-25 rival New Mexico is at a fever pitch.

Let's build on that excitement and fill the house. A victory over UNM would give us not only the unofficial state championship, but put the Aggies at a nice 3-1 record.

How many seats can we fill?

It's been five years since the Aggies put 30,000 fans in the seats at Aggie Memorial Stadium, and that was a Lobo game. UNM defeated NMSU 35-24 Sept. 27, 2009. I was one of the 30,343 in attendance that evening, and I remember angrily walking out of the stadium to the tune of more Lobo fans than I care to recall yelling, "Everyone's a Lobo."

I remember it being even more painful in 2012, when the Aggies lost here in Las Cruces 27-14 in what was billed as the state's Centennial Game. Despite having what appeared to me the more talented team, NMSU missed several golden opportunities and simply could not sustain any type of momentum or come up with clutch plays.

Now, though, it's a new year.

Doug Martin is in his second year as the Aggie head coach and there's new (artificial) grass on the field.

There's a renewed spirit and energy both in the Aggie locker room and in the community. I expect the student section of the stadium to be loud and crowded.

Former Las Cruces Bulletin colleague and NMSU graduate Gabriel Vasquez used to lament the fact students weren't always true to their school.

Aggie students would saunter across the NMSU campus wearing Duke sweat-shirts or Texas Longhorn T-shirts or UCLA Bruins hats.

Such student indifference can be frustrating.

However, when I was on campus Tuesday, in the midst of Aggie-Lobo week, I saw dozens of students in Aggie gear. I saw none wearing anything else.

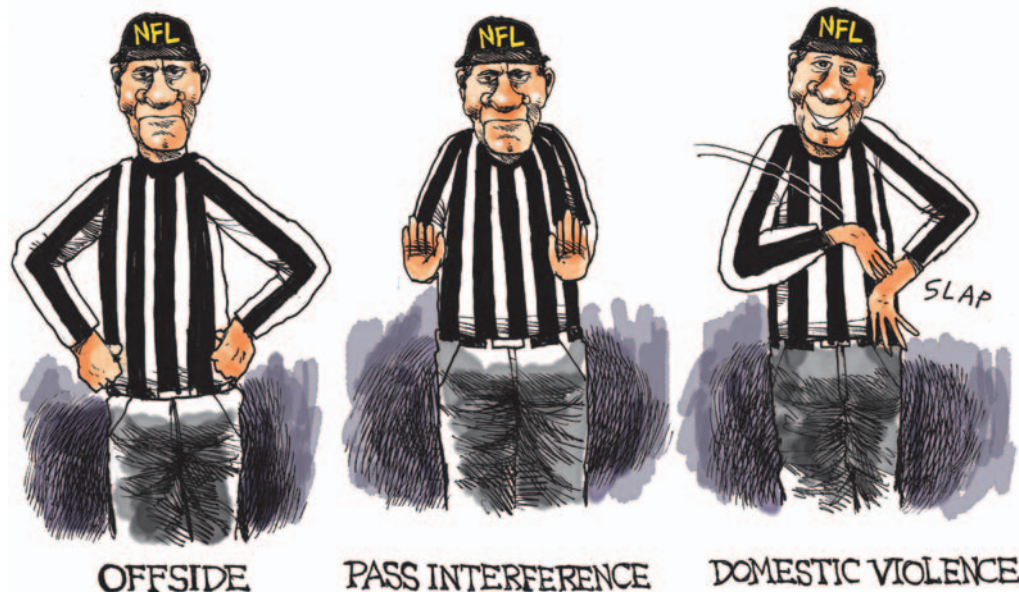

It's a sign.

The fire is back.

The Aggies have more players from New Mexico than they've had in a long time. According to NMSU, there are more than 30 homegrown players on the Aggie squad. UNM's roster shows 26 New Mexicans, so calling it the state championship is legit.

It's nice to see that.

Let's rock the house Saturday night. Aggie Up, Go Aggies, #beatunm.

Letters to the editor Reconciliation? Of what?

The Las Cruces City Council approved CAFÉ's ballot initiative for $10.10 in 2017 and raises for tipped workers. This is now law in Las Cruces. Since this initiative is law as of Sept. 8, why "reconciliation now?" More obfuscation? Reconciliation is for bicameral legislatures; it is also to correct something done unknowingly. The council vote was preplanned and done willingly. It does not meet the conditions for reconciliation. This new law overrides earlier Council action.

Hospice fundraising

As co-chairs of the Mesilla Valley Hospice Legacy Circle, we would like to share the great news that the Mesilla Valley Hospice Legacy Circle has raised $250,000 toward our goal of $1 million by spring 2015.

The Legacy Circle was formed in April in order to raise critical funds for the ongoing operations of hospice and its sustainability in the future. Our community has rallied to the cause with love, commitment and dedication to our beloved La Posada, our in-care patient facility and to our home care operations.

Legacy Circle members are Joe Bullock, Nikki MacDonald, Barbara Hall, Billie Taylor, Frank Leto, Jennifer Kozłowski and Melissa Reeves.

In the coming months the staff, the hospice Board of Directors and the Legacy Circle of Mesilla Valley Hospice will be working hard to ensure that our hospice will always be here to serve the needs of the people of our region.

There will be great media coverage for upcoming Hospice events and we hope everyone will continue to support the efforts to keep Hospice a viable part of our community.

Letter to the editor

Where is the outrage?

David Gutierrez, what part of your job and responsibility as an elected official of Doña Ana County don't you understand?

When you took your oath of office you swore to conduct yourself in a manner that justified the confidence placed in you by the citizens of this county and New Mexico, maintaining integrity and discharging duties ethically.

You also executed a Code of Conduct that required you not engage in any activity that would compromise the fulfillment of your responsibilities or create an appearance of impropriety. Your actions against one of your employees showed disrespect for her and her labor, and violated the trust that the electorate placed in you. It also jeopardized and violated your employee's rights, when she reported this to her supervisor, who also works under your supervision. Both could be subjected to retaliation by you, which would violate the statutes governing employee complaints. To further exacerbate the problem she requested a reassignment so that she would not be subjected to any further inappropriate behavior by you or retaliation for reporting your behavior. What you did was violate the county's policy on preventing sexual harassment, and the statutes prohibiting this behavior in and outside the workplace.

Let me remind the citizens of Doña Ana County of a prior sexual harassment complaint that took place on county property years ago. A county commissioner raped an employee while she was working. This ended up costing the county $750,000 paid to the victim and the contracted county attorney. You were aware of this case Mr. Gutierrez, and yet your flagrantly ignored your responsibility to your constituents, violating our trust. What is ludicrous is that as treasurer, you are supposed to safeguard our tax dollars and insure that they are spent wisely to benefit the citizens. If there is litigation, will it come out of our pockets or yours?

The statues on employers' responsibilities in handling sexual harassment in the workplace require that a policy be in place, which is posted for all employees, elected officials, vendors and anyone who enters the workplace or premises of the county as to their behavior. The employer must provide yearly training on preventing sexual harassment and their policies. When a complaint is filed, the employer must take quick and appropriate action to respond to the complaint.

The county, as I understand, has taken all these steps. However, you cannot force an elected official to take this training. As a responsible elected official, they should understand and be fully cognizant of the policy and statutes regarding sexual harassment. I understand that some of the commissioners attended the training. Mr. Gutierrez chose not to attend. The county has implemented the required statutory procedures, and should be held harmless in this case. However, case law allows litigation against the harasser in the event the victim chooses to pursue this avenue.

Mr. Gutierrez should be removed from office. It is unconscionable that he should remain in this position as treasurer, a position of trust. While he cannot be impeached, he can be recalled and I encourage the citizens of Doña Ana County to pursue this path.

Payday loans may be the better loans

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

One of the political talking points is the payday loan industry. Seems some people cannot save money and cannot keep their finances straight for a good credit score. Therefore they use the loan of last resort with interest rates out of this world.

It is not my business to pass judgment on borrowing money at high interest rates. However, some politicians love to judge other people. To practice for that kind of judgment, spend some time telling people that they should not have married their spouse.

You may be correct with some people, perhaps, but you will also offend said people. Frankly, it is none of your business who marries whom. As far as I am concerned getting married and getting a Ph.D. are both done for the same reason: You cannot stand to not do it.

If you are so wrapped around the axle about getting married that you cannot stand to not get married, do so with my blessing. You will have little problem with the small tribulations of marriage.

I do not criticize things people say they have just got to do. That is, if they are over 21, have relatively full disclosure and are not being forced to make their decision. It is their business.

But with payday loans, do-gooder politicians go out of their minds at the exorbitant interest rates. I would advise people that such a loan had better be for something very dear. Notice I do not say they should not do it. Not my business to run their business. I have a hard enough time running my own life.

In essence politicians have destroyed the payday loan industry in New Mexico with rules as to interest and return on investment. Mostly what I see is a group of politicians who have no earthly idea how people who would consider such a loan think.

Are they relieved that the industry is prohibited from doing what it takes to be able to make those loans? No, they just go to a loan shark and pay even more interest with the kicker being they may lose use of a knee. Boy, that made their life better, eh?

Disclosure: I have never taken out one of these loans, but do know one person who ran a payday loan business. That person was fair to the borrowers in that all fees and interest were disclosed several times in the loan process. Further, this person also did not break knees like loan sharks do.

I have never spoken to this person about the business but with the new rules they have stopped making loans. Why? I assume because they would not make money by the rules the politicians want to impose. In essence, the cost of making very small, risky loans is too great to make a profit. As a young man I borrowed a relatively small amount of money on a six-month loan where I did not even look at the interest. More than 40 years ago I had been to an Albuquerque Martin Guitar dealer to buy a companion 12-string guitar for my Martin six-string guitar.

One day I was in my home community three hours from Albuquerque when the guitar store called: A man had paid most of a Martin 12-string special made guitar. Only 70 were made. This guy had just been arrested for drugs and had released the guitar.

The guitar store offered that if I would make it to Albuquerque with $700 that afternoon, I could have it. I called the local bank president and told him what was up. He said to come by, the cash would be waiting and then come in the next day and do the paperwork.

Within a couple months I had paid the guitar note. But, today, the rules that the politicians have imposed upon the bank would not have allowed such a transaction. So, I bet the bank president would have handed me the money in cash and I would have had to go through the bank committee later.

You cannot impose smart upon borrowers. If you know smart you will leave them alone because the alternative is far worse.

AG, PRC candidates square off at Las Cruces forum

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

In the first of a series of forums leading up to the Nov. 4 elections, the Greater Las Cruces League of Women Voters hosted candidates for attorney general and the Public Regulation Commission (PRC) Tuesday, Sept. 9.

First up were the candidates for the open attorney general position. Current AG Gary King, who can't run again because of term limits, is running for governor.

Seeking to be the next AG are current State Auditor Hector Balderas, who also is term-limited, and retired prosecutor and judge Susan Riedel. Balderas, a Democrat, is running on his experience as both the state auditor and a lawmaker. Riedel, a Republican, is running on her experience in the courtroom as a lawyer, prosecutor and judge.

Riedel, who was encouraged by Gov. Susana Martinez to run for the AG office, promised that politics won't influence how the AG office is run, if she is elected.

"I'm going to do what's right," Riedel said. "I have no greater aspirations than AG and I want to leave a legacy that will be hard to match by others who follow me."

Balderas said his focus as a lawmaker and state auditor has

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN PHOTOS BY TODD DICKSON
State attorney general candidate Susan Riedel, Republican, answers a question as State Auditor Hector Balderas, the Democratic candidate in the race, listens at the Greater Las Cruces League of Women Voters forum held Tuesday, Sept. 9, in the Las Cruces City Council Chambers. The league will hold two more forums there in October for legislative and county races.

always been driven by a desire for providing public service.

"I want to make a difference for the right reasons," he said. "I have a solid track record of accountability."

As state auditor, Balderas said he provided some of the best service from one of the smallest offices in state government. If elected, Balderas said one goal would be for the office to issue legal opinions faster and respond to requests for action more quickly.

While issuing opinions is one of many tasks provided by the office, the AG acts as the state's attorney, representing New Mexico in court and all appellant cases, Riedel said. That's why it's important for the AG to know what it takes to prosecute a criminal case, she said.

Balderas said the office also performs an important government watchdog role, such as going after abuses by public officials or taking on scam artists. As state auditor, Balderas said he has experience "taking on those bad actors."

The attorney general also represents New Mexico in interstate disputes, such as the current fight over Rio Grande water with Texas. Balderas said the office needs to have a solicitor general focused on water rights to handle such disputes, as well as other water adjudication cases.

Riedel said the case against Texas is critical for New Mexico, but could have been avoided through negotiations, rather than through court actions that led to Texas challenging New Mexico.

In the PRC District 5 race, Republican incumbent Ben Hall is being challenged by Sandy Jones, a Democrat who had previously held the position.

When he was on the PRC, Jones said he launched the ethics committee in response to scandals that had plagued the commission that oversees business and utility regulation in the state. Jones said he wrote the rules calling for 20 percent of the state electricity to come from renewable energy resources by 2020.

Hall said the PRC was still a "mess" when he was elected to office in 2010 and the PRC hasn't been the source of scandals since. Hall said he is running for re-election to continue making PRC a respectable agency and that he bring business and common sense to commission decisions.

Jones said the PRC must balance consumer and business needs, but should consider "the long view" in certain areas, especially energy and telecommunications.

Hall said New Mexico needs a diversified energy portfolio, which includes traditional energy sources along with renewable energy.

Jones said the PRC plays an important regulatory role for industry safety in the state and, if elected, he would push for bringing back rail inspectors.

In terms of setting utility rates, Hall said he studies the proposals carefully listens to concerns raised by PRC staff and intervenes.

Jones said one of the PRC's main missions is to ensure delivery of safe, reliable energy, but the utilities shouldn't make more profit than needed. If elected, Jones said he would call for a full audit on how fuel costs are set by utilities.

Hall said every business – including utilities – are entitled to some kind of profit.

NMSU enrollment dips again

The systemwide enrollment for fall 2014 at New Mexico State University is 26,694 as of Friday, Sept. 5, the university's census date.

Numbers are down 5.5 percent from 2013. At the Las Cruces campus, enrollment was 15,829, a decrease of 5.6 percent.

"We had several large incoming classes early in the economic downturn, and those students are now leaving NMSU with degrees," said Bernadette Montoya, vice president for student affairs and enrollment management.

"We had our largest incoming freshman class in 2009. Since then, the number of New Mexico high school graduates has declined and we have had smaller incoming classes," she said.

The incoming class of freshmen and transfer students is about the same as last year, at just under 2,600 students. The incoming class of graduate students has increased 7 percent.

Montoya said she expects NMSU enrollment will stabilize.

"Demographic effects are always in flux, but we should see increasing numbers of graduates from New Mexico high schools, although jobs also will likely be more plentiful as the economy continues to improve," she said.

NMSU's community colleges also had a decline in enrollment in fall 2014. The NMSU Carlsbad campus had 1,852 students, down 0.5 percent. Enrollment at NMSU Grants was 942, down 2.9 percent.

NMSU's Doña Ana Community College had 8,448 students, a decline of 4.4 percent.

NMSU's Alamogordo campus had 2,095 students, down 14.8 percent.

For fall 2014, student credit hours tallied 301,144 at all NMSU campuses, down 5.3 percent, and student credit hours at the Las Cruces campus was 188,262 a drop of 4.3 percent.

Volunteers needed to install bike lights

The Optimist Club of Las Cruces, Border Servant Corps and Southern New Mexico Bicyclist Educators are raising money for bike lights and looking for volunteers to install lights on bicycles at the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope from 9 a.m. and noon Saturday, Nov. 1.

Community cyclists and others came together to light up the bicycles of persons using the services of the Community of Hope and the Gospel Rescue Mission.

Many low-income individuals in the community use a bicycle as their only or primary means of transportation and riding at night is often unavoidable. Yet, these Las Cruces residents lack the means to properly equip their bicycles for riding after dark.

Science Café

Come to Science Café 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 25, to "Look Inside Stars With Seismic Waves," at the Las Cruces Museum of Nature & Science, 411 N. Main St.

Stars like the Sun quake continuously, giving us access to information about their interiors, much like earthquakes allow us to study our planet's deepest regions.

Jason Jackiewicz, associate professor of Astronomy at New Mexico State University, will explain how this seismic activity is measured and the goal of understanding a star's age, its composition, and even when it might produce a flare so that predictions of "space weather" become possible.

The talk will give an overview of the exciting field of asteroseismology and how a basic understanding of waves lets us probe these giant objects

Sigma Xi's Science Café is presented by the Scientific Research Society, in cooperation with the Las Cruces Museum of Nature and Science. The free Café discussions are presented to advance greater public understanding and to encourage use of available science. Students and all those seeking greater knowledge of current science are encouraged to be at the Science Café.

lab operations were not centrally planned. The methods employed for creating fume vents and lab showers are more a testament to make-do creativity than modern technology, said David Rockstraw, chemical engineering department head.

The transportation of chemicals through the busy hallways can be hazardous, Carruthers said.

The Jett Hall Annex that was added later has been primarily used for mechanical engineering, but its age and limitations are showing, as well.

Rentfrow Hall, a former gymnasium built in 1957, has become the main location for the College of Education’s growing kinesiology program, an area of study that, for many students, has become a gateway to a health care career. Robert Wood, professor and head of the Human Performance, Dance and Recreation Department, said the building, as it is now being used by 400 students and five faculty, is maxed out and could be put to better use if the dance program didn’t have to share the gym floor with kinesiology classes.

Even at more than $19 million,

Carruthers said the university may have to ask the Legislature for a little more money to do the projects right.

First, New Mexico voters must approve GOB C. A similar bond question failed in 2010 because it would have resulted in a tax increase. This time, the bond’s passage won’t change the portion of property taxes that pay off the bonds. The 2010 failure has resulted in a lowering the total money available for higher education bonds in future.

NMSU training specialist 'flattered' by award

By Ada Ciuca
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Dave Brockmeyer, senior university training specialist at New Mexico State University's Center for Learning and Professional Development, has been selected to receive the 2014 Stephen W. and Robert E. Roberts Memorial Staff Award.

There will be an award ceremony in Brockmeyer's honor from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 16, in the Corbett Center Doña Ana Room.

"I was very flattered and speechless for a moment when it was announced," Brockmeyer said. "I am absolutely honored to know that my efforts are making a positive difference."

The award is presented annually to an NMSU employee who demonstrates commitment and service, functioning as a positive citizen within the community. Brockmeyer, a member of the NMSU community for the past eight years, has left an impression on his colleagues through his human resources work.

"The very first part of my personal mission statement is, 'I will support others without asking for any recognition or reward, and help them achieve their potential by sharing my knowledge and experience, and giving support and guidance within my area of influence,'" Brockmeyer said. "This is very important to me, and setting the example of a strong work ethic is a critical element in helping others achieve their potential."

A nomination letter submitted by CLPD co-worker Dee O'Leary read, "One of Dave's attributes is his ability to listen to others. He doesn't try to tell others what to do, but listens, observes and provides guidance when asked."

"He has a way of helping you see things from a different perspective. A saying that he has is 'What can I do to help?' He doesn't force his views on others; he just wants you to know he is there and ready to assist when you need it. His customer service skills are exceptional. When he communicates with others, he extends a friendly disposition and helpful attitude towards the CLPD customers and the general public."

Another nomination letter, submitted by CLPD co-worker Jennifer Gabel, read, "As team manager, Dave does an excellent job of making each of his direct reports feel a part of the team. He holds team meetings to discuss strategies, projects and goals for the coming year. He created a team operational plan outlining everyone's current and future job duties.

"He never asks us to do anything he isn't willing to do himself. He facilitates annual meetings with our content owners to solicit feedback and works with SME's and trainers to produce the highest quality courses."

The Roberts Memorial Staff Award was established in 1983 in memory of the sons of George W. Roberts, former NMSU assistant vice president for business affairs, and his wife, Ellen Bernice Roberts. Stephen, a 1974 NMSU graduate, and Robert, a student at the time, were killed in an automobile accident in 1978.

shaped by crisis, rather than democratic ideals and the desire to leave a better world for our children, he said.

Instead of providing leadership and engaging in dialogue, lawmakers are too concerned about surviving the next election, Panetta said. Inhibiting political courage is the influence of "a lot of money" on politics and shallow news reporting, he said.

"We don't elect people to Washington to protect their rear ends in Washington," Panetta said.

Panetta said he saw democracy working well when he first came to Congress in the late 1970s when elected leaders were willing to put aside differences to find solutions. That can be hard work, such as when he and Domenici served on a joint committee to produce the last two balanced budgets ever crafted in Congress, Panetta said.

People need to start electing leaders willing to work with others to find solutions, because if the nation continues to be guided by crisis, then people lose faith in government, he said. Current members of Congress, he said, have for the most part given up on trying to truly address problems.

As a result of this resignation, the immigration system isn't being reformed, new energy resources are not being developed, infrastructure is being left to slowly crumble and the military is not being downsized in a deliberative manner, Panetta said.

To address the growing deficit, "everything has to be on the table," including reductions in entitlements, such as Social Security and Medicaid, and increasing revenues through tax reforms, Panetta said. Without taking both approaches, the deficit will continue to grow until it equals 80 percent of the gross domestic production, he said.

Entitlements have grown to account for two-thirds of the federal budget, Panetta said, so cutting discretionary spending won't do it. Congress has put up road blocks to closing bases or changing Pentagon procurement procedures, so the only option is reducing forces, which makes it more difficult to respond to global terrorism and other international threats, he said.

Panetta said he understands the American people are feeling the fatigue of fighting wars since the 9/11 attacks 13 years ago.

"The brutal reality is that we live in a dangerous world," he said. "Terrorism has metastasized and is spreading like a cancer."

Fighting terrorism will likely be a generational conflict and there will always be rogue nations to deal with, he said. That's why the future military needs to be agile, able to project its presence both to the west and east and be armed with the best technology and intelligence, he said. The military can't pull this together without budgetary guidance, he said.

"The worst thing that can happen to defense is budget uncertainty," he said.

Since leaving government, Panetta has created a public policy institute, similar to the public policy institute New Mexico State University is creating in honor of Domenici. Educating young people and these kinds of conferences, Panetta said, are the best way to refocus the system on finding solutions "from the ground up." Conference topics include challenges to bipartisan political solutions, immigration reform and cyber security.

Teen suspected of vandalizing middle school Others sought in connection with Lynn damage

Las Cruces police have charged a 13-year-old boy suspected in a weekend vandalism spree at the middle school he attends.

The teenage boy was charged with one count of criminal damage to property. Police believe several other young individuals participated in the vandalism, but they have yet to be identified.

A Las Cruces Police Department school resource officer learned that several teenagers vandalized Lynn Middle School, 950 S. Walnut St., at around 1 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 14. The suspects are believed to have climbed to the roof, where they broke several windows to a skylight above the school's south hallway. The young boys also damaged a surveillance camera and stucco wall.

Damage to the building was estimated at more than $1,000.

The school resource officer identified the 13-year-old boy after reviewing surveillance video from the school.

Anyone with information that can help identify the other suspects is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or email the Las Cruces Police Department at lcpdtips@las-cruces.org.

Rivalry clash offers chance for redemption

Ouch.

I'm sure the word was muttered by more than one supporter of the New Mexico State University football team on Oct. 5, 2013.

The Aggies were beaten soundly by in-state rival University of New Mexico to the tune of 66-17 in Albuquerque.

NMSU has a chance at redemption Saturday, Sept. 20, at home in the friendly confines of Aggie Memorial Stadium.

When asked recently about the 2013 version of the rivalry, senior center Valerian Ume-Ezeoke shook his head.

"It was bad," he said. "I have no good memory of that game."

Head coach Doug Martin said he knows the intensity of the UNM rivalry, but he wants to focus on more than one game as the program builds.

The NMSU fan base deserves a competitive team, he said.

"The fans are too great and have suffered too much," he said.

Here are some facts about the UNM rivalry:

- This will be the 106th time NMSU and UNM have played.
- UNM holds the edge with a 69-31-5 series record.
- UNM has won seven of the last 10 showdowns.
- NMSU won three in a row 2009-11.
- The first game between the two schools was held in 1894, when New Mexico won 18-6 at home.
- The two schools have met every year on the gridiron since 1911, except 1943-45.
- The last win for NMSU came on Oct. 1, 2011, when the Aggies beat the Lobos 42-28 in Albuquerque.
- The last time NMSU beat UNM at home was Oct. 9, 2010, when the Aggies won 16-14.
- The largest margin of victory came in 1917 when the Aggies won 110-3 at home.

Aggies welcome rival Lobos

NMSU football eyes rebound after UTEP loss

By Brook Stockberger
 The Las Cruces Bulletin

One loss does not a season make, but two in a row against hated rivals could throw a campaign off kilter.

New Mexico State University football coach Doug Martin understands and has instilled that knowledge into the minds of his players.

"Great teams don't lose two games in a row," Martin said. "It's a character issue."

The Aggies (2-1) try to rebound from a 42-24 loss to Texas-El Paso during a showdown with rival University of New Mexico Saturday, Sept. 20, at home in Aggie Memorial Stadium.

Kickoff is scheduled for 6 p.m.

Senior center and captain Valerian Ume-Ezeoke said the team did not play well against UTEP.

"We'll try to eliminate all mental errors," he said.

UNM (0-2) has also lost to UTEP as well as Arizona State. The Lobos enter the game after a bye week.

Still, the Aggies expect a motivated, tough opponent.

"They have really good team speed," Martin said. "The quarterbacks run well."

Lobo signal caller Cole Gautsche missed the Lobos' game against ASU with a hamstring injury. He might return to run UNM's option against the Aggies.

The option will not be a new look for NMSU.

The Aggies opened their season against Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, also an option offense. Martin said the two offenses have similar blocking schemes.

"New Mexico does a good job running," he said.

In two games, the Lobos have rushed for 708 yards.

As for the Aggies offense, freshman running back Larry Rose III will play after missing the UTEP game with a knee injury.

Rose is the team's leading rusher with 240 yards. NMSU has a total of 481 yards on the ground through three games.

The Aggies have 734 yards through the air, mostly from first-year quarterback Tyler Rogers, who has seven touchdown throws and four interceptions.

Martin said, while a balanced offense is ideal, whatever path leads to victory is fine with him.

"I'd love to have a 50-50 split," he said.

"(But) I don't care how it gets done, I want to see points on the board. In mid-major football, you gotta score 30 points."

Keeping up

Jalen Bishop is seeing action as a freshman defensive back for the Pima Community College (Ariz.) football team.

The Las Cruces High School graduate is a cornerback with two sophomores ahead of him on the depth chart.

"I'm playing a waiting game," Bishop said.

For now, he has been playing mostly in nickel packages, when opponents are likely to pass the ball. He has been playing right and left cornerback.

"We put an emphasis on pursuit and on gang tackling, being fast to the ball," cornerbacks coach Mark Teixeira said. "He's strong. He can get pretty low on a runner or receiver. He wraps up pretty well."

Bishop has been playing on the punt return and kickoff teams as well. He blocks for his teammates during punt returns and races downfield to try to make tackles on kickoffs. He had one tackle against Phoenix College and one against New Mexico Military Institute.

More football

Another from Las Cruces High, Jeremy Buurma is the starting quarterback for Eastern New Mexico University. Through two games, the redshirt junior has completed 15 of 31 passes for 442 yards and six touchdowns. He rushed 13 times for 55 yards.

Former Bulldawg J.J. Granados is a freshman tailback for Glendale Community College (Ariz.). He has four kickoff returns for 68 yards.

Oñate High School graduate Travis Johnson is a freshman quarterback for Southwestern Assemblies of God University (Texas).

Oñate coach instills intensity

By Lewis Harry
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

When Brent Jaquess took over the Oñate High School football program, he knew that it was time to create a new chapter for the Knights.

Oñate is off to a 1-2 start with a season-opening loss to Centennial High, a victory against Eastlake High from El Paso and a heart-breaking loss to a tough Cleveland High team.

Jaquess still believes his team is taking steps in the right direction.

"We're seeing improvement on a daily basis," he said.

Jaquess, a former Las Cruces High assistant coach, has always had a passion for sports and coaching.

"I actually started out as the athletic trainer for the first five years," he said. "I got into coaching when (former Las Cruces high coach Kirk) Potter came around. He was actually one of my high school coaches."

Under Potter, Jaquess was part of the turnaround of the LCHS program prior to the Jim Miller era. Jaquess became the defensive coordinator and was responsible for the Bulldawgs defense for 15 years, including the 2012 state championship.

After a year out of coaching, Jaquess saw the opportunity for the head coaching job at Oñate and decided to take it.

"I'm never one to chase the dollar, I just wanted to answer some questions and see how I would compete at the next level," he said.

While trying to come up with a formula for success, Jaquess chose former Oñate head coach Kelly McKee as offensive coordinator.

"I've known Kelly for years and have gone up against him several times," Jaquess said.

"It's a tough offense to prepare for in a week and we have a lot of wrinkles, but our team has had a huge improvement since the first game."

Another key piece in Jaquess' puzzle is getting the talent to Oñate year after year.

With Las Cruces accommodating four major high schools, two of which are state powerhouses, it's no easy task to draw talent to the far East Mesa.

"As far as our seniors, we probably have as good of talent as anyone," Jaquess said.

"What's eye-opening to me is the open enrollment, and when you have a school like Mesa Middle School that is only in our boundaries and we lose the top three players out of that school, that's when you realize that there are some rules and others don't follow those rules."

Jaquess is always one to recognize the growth of his players and does whatever he can to motivate each individual.

"You know our linemen have come a long ways, they have gradually improved their knowledge and their skill set and they have gone head to shoulders above everyone for improving." Jaquess said.

Senior defensive end Darren Jackson has been key in the improvement efforts of the team.

"There are going to be some bumps in the road and we are still learning, but over time we are going to get it and it's just going to click," he said.

Jackson, among the rest of his teammates, believes that Jaquess and McKee have brought new life and enthusiasm to the program.

"Coach Jaquess and coach McKee brought a lot of spirit and heart to the team, they have always encouraged us and we like when they do that," Jackson said.

Pine Valley Golf Club celebrates 100 years

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Pine Valley Golf Club is located on a secluded ultra-private tract of rolling, deeply pined forested land in New Jersey, about 40 minutes east of Philadelphia. The course was started by a group of amateur golfers from Philadelphia who picked wealthy hotelier George Arthur Crump to design the course because he knew the area from the hunting he did there. Although Pine Valley was Crump's first and only design project, he did maintain a set of idiosyncratic principles from which he laid out the golf course, to wit: No hole should be laid out parallel to the next; no more than two consecutive holes should play in the same direction; players shouldn't be able to see any hole other than the one they were playing; and he figured a round of golf on his course should require a player to use every club in his bag.

This year marks the 100th anniversary of the opening of Pine Valley. The property is now 623 acres, of which 416 are virgin woodland.

Forty years ago, I played two rounds at Pine Valley. At the time, I was working as a general manager of an industrial plant in Detroit. We went on a customer junket to Pine Valley with our biggest buyer.

Today, there are about 930 members at Pine Valley spread throughout the world. The list is a closely guarded secret. It hosts no tour events because it cannot accommodate the spectators, corporate tents or infrastructure that goes with a big tournament.

The layout of the course is formidable, with waste areas, huge trees and dense underbrush swallowing errant shots right and left. During our play, I'll admit I was distracted some by the fact that we were playing with one of our corporation's biggest customers. Still, I managed to win $200 in bets.

Pine Valley is a par 70 with a slope rating of 155. The main reason the course remains at the top of the rankings is the combination of its monumental difficulty with its natural beauty. If there were expensive homes lining the fairways, it would be far down on the list.

There are no stress-free holes. Gaping and expansive bunkers line the fairways and front the greens. There is hardly any opportunity to run the ball up in front and onto the green.

And it's visually intimidating, with restricted landing areas. There's no other course like it.

NMSU men's tennis aims for conference championship

Carlos Vargas
NMSU men's tennis coach

Although finishing in second place at the WAC Tournament last season was a great accomplishment, it left the New Mexico State University men's tennis team with a sense of unfinished business. We fell ever so short of our goal of winning the conference championship and moving on to the NCAA national tournament.

By no means, however, was our season a disappointment. We had a dual-match winning record, finished the regular WAC season undefeated and reached the finals of the postseason tournament where we lost a heartbreaking match to our rivals from Idaho.

On the academic side, we also received many awards and ended with a 3.30 team GPA.

For the 2014-15 season, we return with a roster led by three seniors: Patrick Pfister, Paul Denele and Germain Degardin. Pfister played five singles matches last season.

Denele has continuously improved and finished last season as a strong No. 2 singles player and produced some very exciting matches for us. We are counting on him to lead us into the WAC championship.

Degardin, who not only is a solid producer on the tennis court but also in the classroom, will be finishing his last year for the Aggies and will receive not only a bachelor's degree of economics, but will have completed his master's degree in business administration as well.

Helping this talented group of seniors is Strahinja Trecakov, Liam Goldberg, Charles Barron, Tom Douglas, Jeremy Harlas and Antonio Ramirez.

Trecakov played No. 1 singles for most of last season and is expected to pick up where he left off. Goldberg continues to improve and is expected to play in the top-half of our lineup. Baron saw limited action as a freshman but has been working very hard during practice and is expected to be one of our top players this year.

Douglas, meanwhile, only played during the fall last year after suffering multiple injuries. He can become a positive asset for the Aggies this year if he stays healthy. Harlas continues to improve every season and with his hard work could break into the lineup soon.

Trying to continue his family's legacy is Antonio Ramirez. He is the brother of Luis Ramirez, our former No. 1 player and now assistant coach. He is a freshman and with hard work and experience, he will soon be an asset to the team.

Our goal is to win the WAC tournament and qualify for the NCAA championships. It's been 14 years since NMSU has qualified for nationals and we have never won a league title.

Friday, Sept 19., we begin our competitive journey at home with the Aggie Invitational. This is one of three events we play in the fall. We'll then play 23 dual matches in the spring.

Las Cruces Community Theatre President Janet Beatty-Payne is flanked by Executive Director of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico Luan Wagner Burn, LCCT patrons J.E. and June Lee, Stephanie and Mark Medoff and LCCT Vice President of Membership Monte Wright. The Lees and the Medoffs contributed $5,000 to kick off LCCT's capital campaign fundraiser on Monday, Sept. 15.

Curtain rises on a new era

LCCT kicks off capital campaign fundraiser

By David Salcido
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) began its first capital campaign fundraiser on Monday, Sept. 15, during an informal ceremony held at the historic State Theater, 313 N. Main St., which has been the organization's home since 1977.

"For those who are not aware, this building does not belong to the community theater," said LCCT President Janet Beatty-Payne in an introductory presentation to the small but enthusiastic crowd. "We have been leasing it for 37 years. We've been really blessed, but now it's time to make this building our permanent home."

After thanking the owners of the theater for their years as gracious landlords, Beatty-Payne said the real expense will be in the much-needed renovations to the building, which would include enlarging and bringing the restrooms up to ADA code, rewiring the entire building and installing refrigerated air conditioning.

Playwright Mark Medoff acknowledged LCCT for giving him his start in theater, before presenting a check on behalf of him and his wife, Stephanie.

"We need a million dollars to do all that," she said.

The evening fundraiser was overseen by Executive Director Luan Wagner Burn of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, which will be acting as fiscal agent for the project.

Special guests were award-winning playwright Mark Medoff and his wife Stephanie, who donated $5,000 to start the campaign.

"I would not be a playwright if, in 1966, during my first year teaching at New Mexico State University, some of my colleagues who were involved with the community theater, which was in its third year at that time, had not said to me, 'Why don't you write a play and we'll put it on.'" Medoff said. "I thought it was an interesting idea. My first play was done at the Fountain Theatre and it changed my life. Truly I would not be the writer I am today, were it not for the people involved in this theater over the years."

Later in the evening, long time patrons and season ticket holders J.E. and June Lee matched the Medoff's donation, to bring the beginning total up to $10,000. Members of LCCT's board of directors were available to talk about the future of the building and accept donations from other patrons.

Also present to show support were Carrie La Tour, executive director of the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership and Carrie Hamblen, executive director of the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce, who also facilitated a ribbon cutting to commemorate the event.

"It's a huge step to purchase a building," Hamblen said after the ceremony. "The Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce is very pleased to support the Las Cruces Community Theatre in their commitment to purchase the State Theater. It's very indicative of their commitment toward creating a vibrant downtown."

MVEDA reports record year

Jobs Council gathers input in southern New Mexico

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

A total of 882 economic-based jobs were created in Doña Ana County in FY 2013-14, making this the best year ever for the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA).

Davin Lopez, president and CEO, reported FY13 results to the New Mexico Legislature's Jobs Council Monday, Sept. 15. The council, gathering input to inform 2015 policy making, met at the Gadsden Municipal Complex in Santa Teresa.

Lopez said in the past three years the county has added 1,829 jobs and generated a new payroll of more than $50 million. Some 49 percent of the jobs are in Las Cruces, 51 percent in Santa Teresa.

Back office and technical support accounted for 63 percent of Las Cruces' job growth, value-added agriculture 37 percent. About 72 percent of Santa Teresa's new jobs are in manufacturing, 28 percent in logistics and distribution. Some 440 jobs are in renewable energy.

Capital investment of almost $115 million led to 27 completed business expansions or relocations in the county.

"We need to keep the momentum going, and we think we can with what is happening in Doña Ana County," Lopez said.

On the other hand, more than 5,000 potential jobs did not materialize in the fiscal year due to lack of available facilities, high utility costs, labor skills issues and incentives, he said. More than 2,000 of those jobs were in manufacturing, and an equal number in back office and technical.

Lopez said Santa Teresa's vacancy rate is 1 percent. Las Cruces is also short on industrial and commercial space.

"We turn away 75 percent of our leads because we don't have facilities," he said, adding, "I look at facilities as infrastructure."

Lopez said MVEDA supports Job Council initiatives for increasing funding for Local Economic Development Act (LEDA), Job Training Incentive Program (JTIP) and the New Mexico Partnership, as well as for local matching for economic development.

He also advocated for economic development utility rates to make the state more competitive, infrastructure development funds and high-wage job tax credit (HWJTC) transparency.

"When we talk to companies, they feel they're getting the runaround with HWJTC," he said. "We've stopped marketing it. What kind of message are we sending?"

The council heard an upbeat report on 2014 job growth in southern Doña Ana County from Jerry Pacheco of the International Business Accelerator and an outlook for the creation of hundreds of future jobs by George Mychaskiw, chief academic officer and dean of Burrell College of Osteopathic Medicine. The college is locating on the NMSU campus.

Bryn Davis, New Mexico operations manager for Sapphire Energy, outlined work force development initiatives of the public-private New Mexico Partnership, touching off a lively discussion on how to better measure the effectiveness of job creation programs and meet emerging work force needs.

Davis said the state will need 50,000 trained STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) employees in four years. Some 93 percent of the jobs will require a college degree.

"We're already behind the curve on that," he said. "We've got to tie supply to demand."

Davis advocated for a fully integrated work force delivery system based on measurement and accountability.

He said the Partnership has completed a state business survey and is "working toward data integration." It also has created a higher education work group and a business engagement committee.

"If we all band together, we can break the cycle," he said referring to the challenge of recruiting companies that need technically skilled employees.

Mark Lautman, lead program consultant with Lautman Economic Architecture, described barriers to developing data on the number of jobs created as a result of programs designed to create jobs, versus the number that would have been created without the programs.

Lack of data and privacy firewalls are obstacles, he said.

Lautman recommended an Economic Development Transparency Act that would require quarterly job creation measurement in order for the state to calculate the return on investment of economic development incentives. He advocated liberalizing Department of Workforce Solutions privacy restrictions and requiring employers who locate to New Mexico with the help of state incentives to make data available.

"We need to get the economic development community to come up with a set of metrics," he said. "This takes a lot of work, time and effort, and most economic development organizations are underfunded."

New Mexico Economic Development Secretary Jon Barela said economic development has to be focused, measurable, non-partisan and sustained over a period of years.

"I would like to see a set of metrics established for the money we're spending," he said. "The devil is always in the details. We have to be accountable, and I accept that for our department."

• R.C. Haile set up shop on North Main Street and was said to be “enthusiastic over the prospects for the establishment of dairies in the valley.” There was such a “great and increasing demand for milk, cream, butter and cheese,” that it was “sure not to fail.”

• An article in the Las Cruces Citizen called for a ban on concealed weapons, stating, “A man with a big gun usually has a small heart, and is a coward. Banish the gun toter. He is a lot more dangerous than the fool who doesn’t know the gun is loaded.”

• Owners of “illegally erected signs along the highways in New Mexico” were reminded by state Highway Engineer B.G. Dwyre, that they only had until Oct. 1 “to remove these offending signs or obtain written permission from the highway department.”

• An ad on the front page of the Las Cruces Citizen proclaimed, “We wish to thank those of you who helped make our opening at Mesilla such a tremendous success and hope that we might have you with us often during the year.” It was signed by Kathryn Griggs Camunez, Prop. La Posta.

• Sewage disposal facilities for “the new high school on the north edge of the city” were under discussion, as Mayor T. J. Graham disclosed “we did not have official notice of intention to build from school district authorities” and, thus, “there is no provision for this particular line in our current five-year development.”

• Earl Nunn, “superintendent of Alamogordo schools since 1958” was named the new superintendent for the Las Cruces school district, succeeding Tom J. Mayfield, who was retiring in December.

• Las Cruces had been chosen to host “rally teams from all parts of the country” as the Rolling High Rally,

• New Mexico State University’s student radio station was set to begin broadcast. The 1,000 watt signal on 91.5 FM was expected to cover a seven-mile radius and would include a format of “college-oriented music including Christian, classic rock, heavy metal, reggae and new age.”

• Massachusetts developer Ben Boldt was waiting on zone changes that would allow 43.67 acres, “located north of Barker Road and east of the Laguna Lateral, from current rural/farm to a general/commercial designation.” The request was said to have “raised controversy among those who value the greenbelt and maintaining the town’s original ambience.”

The Pete Domenici Archives

Elizabeth Titus, New Mexico State University library dean, guides retired U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici through a section of his archives housed at Branson Library Tuesday, Sept. 16. NMSU acquired all of Domenici's documents from 36 years in the U.S. Senate and is in the process of archiving the items, including these gifts and mementos.

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN PHOTOS BY TODD DICKSON

At a public grand opening for his archives, Domenici thanks NMSU for taking on the task of giving perspective to his career through his papers and effects.

NMSU President Garrey Carruthers talks about how a conversation he had with Domenici led to acquiring the papers, which had previously languished at the University of New Mexico. The archives also inspired NMSU's annual Domenici Conference (see story on page A1) and the creation of the Domenici Institute of Public Policy in a new building next to the library.

Joined by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Conquistadores, Domenici cuts the ribbon on his archive collection at NMSU.

Doña Ana County 'Your Partner in Progress'

Residents invited to provide planning input

Residents who want a say in how Doña Ana County grows should make a note of three upcoming opportunities to provide input.

In three locations between Sept. 22 and 27, Doña Ana County, assisted by a consulting team of national experts in planning and policy-making, will be exploring alternative approaches to guiding future growth and development. Everyone's invited to participate.

The series of two-day workshops are part of the Viva Doña Ana County long-range planning project. This phase is designed to frame a new County Comprehensive Plan that will, in turn, inform a new Unified Development Code to implement salient suggestions and plans.

The schedule is as follows:

Sept. 22-23 in Anthony

Women's Intercultural Center
303 Lincoln St.

Sept. 24-25 in Mesilla

Mesilla Community Center
2251 Calle de Santiago

Sept. 26-27 in Hatch

Hatch Community Center
837 West Hall Street (N.M. 187)

Food is available for participants each night beginning at 5 p.m., with meeting programs beginning at 6 p.m. Childcare and English-to-Spanish translation are available both evenings.

In the opening evening session in each location, the consulting team will present a range of alternative growth scenarios for consideration. Then, in the second meeting they'll suggest a "preferred scenario" based on the previous night's discussion. Those preferences, refined during the second evening community critique, will be used to shape the first draft of the Comprehensive Plan.

Steps in the process, together with the backgrounds of the project, are detailed on the website: www.vivadonaanadc.org

Storm-water draft report up for review

Doña Ana County has prepared a draft report describing the county's progress toward achieving the goals of its Storm Water Management Program (SWMP) during the period of July 1, 2013, to June 30, 2014.

The finalized report is due to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) by Oct. 1, 2014.

Residents of Doña Ana County are encouraged to review the draft annual report and comment on it. The report is available for public review at the Doña Ana County Engineering Department, 845 N. Motel Blvd., Las Cruces, N.M. 88007.

Comments may be submitted in writing to René Molina at the above address or by email to renem@donaanacounty.org. Comments are due no later than Sept. 30.

For additional information, contact the Doña Ana County Engineering Department at (575) 647-7108.

Garza says walls will fall

City crafts streamlined processes for developers

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

A new era of timely project permitting, more flexible policies and service-oriented relationships with the local construction industry has begun, City Manager Robert Garza told the Las Cruces Home Builders Association Thursday, Sept. 11.

Walls – both literal and symbolic – will fall. After outlining changes in processes and policies, Garza turned to issues that have plagued relationships between builders and city staff in recent years.

“Part of the problem is the way we built City Hall,” Garza said. “There are walls everywhere – and closed doors.

You can't talk to anybody. Getting something done at City Hall was like buying a movie ticket at a counter from a person behind a glass.

“We're going to take the wall down,” he said. “Let's start working together.”

Garza said he plans to take his recommendations to the Monday, Sept. 22, City Council work session, and have a draft for code amendments on the table by the end of 2014.

“City Hall is open,” he said. “My door is open to you.”

Walking it back

A former Las Cruces city engineer, Garza recalled the boom days when processes worked, in part because of a sense of urgency.

“Four years ago, all the things we were doing got more frustrating,” he said. “We now have a grand opportunity to stop the cycle and do things that are meaningful.”

Garza said attempting to fix the brokenness started when he asked council for their priorities for the next five to 10 years.

“The No. 1 issue council has is economic development,” he said. “The No. 2 is job creation.”

Armed with a mandate to address those priorities, Garza sought input

Alamogordo builder opens Las Cruces office

French Brothers, a production builder based in Alamogordo with an office in Roswell, is expanding into the Las Cruces market.

The company planned a ground breaking ceremony Thursday, Sept. 14, for a model home, complete with a design office and a sales office, at 4101 Council Oak Drive.

Corrine Bachman, co-principal with Tom and Jim French, said the brothers founded the company in 1991 in Alamogordo. They build exclusively in New Mexico.

French Brothers will build primarily in the Sonoma Ranch area, introducing a line of homes that's new to the company.

Ranging in size from 1,800 to 2,500 square feet, the homes will feature Southwest contemporary, Spanish mission or modified Tuscan styling.

This year, for the second time in two years, French Brothers received a National Housing Quality Award, Bachman said.

For more information, visit www.frenchbrothers.com or contact ana@frenchbrothers.com or 642-0355.

Heritage Hotels names CFO

Heritage Hotels & Resorts has announced a new regional financial structure. The restructure names three experienced hotel accountants as regional controllers who will serve as guides and mentors to colleagues in three New Mexico regions where Heritage Hotels & Resorts has properties.

The regional controllers are Alfred Segovia, Shawn Kirchner and Donna Markey.

Markey, a New Mexico resident since 2003, heads the Las Cruces region. She has a bachelor's degree from College of Lake County Illinois and has been with Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces and Heritage Hotels for 10 years.

Segovia, a native of Santa Fe and a 20-year veteran in the hospitality industry returns home to head up the Santa Fe region. He has a bachelor's degree from New Mexico State University in Hospitality and Tourism Services with an emphasis from many outside stakeholders as well as city staff. The result? A list of 400 action items for processes, policies and relationships.

“A lot of what I heard was ‘we and you’ or ‘us and them,’” Garza said. “Who’s our competition? It shouldn’t be the development community against city hall. That’s wrong. That’s a broken system.”

He said the development community told him project reviews were not timely and frequently contained inappropriate comments. Staff complained developers submitted incomplete plans in an effort to get a project underway and ignored reviewers’ comments, which the reviewers then repeated in subsequent reviews.

Clean start, clear process

To prevent miscommunication and delays, Garza said he is proposing each commercial or residential development project of $100,000 or more start with a mandated pre-application meeting between staff and developer.

“Before you bang your head against a wall, we need to sit down and talk with you,” he said.

To make sure the project stays on track, staff will create a plan review committee that will meet “a couple times a week” to deal with pending requests.

The committee will be charged with making sure staff comments are relevant and the city’s position on each pending permit is clear. The project developer will have to deal with only one comprehensive list of city requests.

In addition, an appeals committee consisting of department heads will hear appeals of plan review committee decisions.

“If somebody doesn’t agree with those individuals (on the appeals committee) they can appeal to the city manager’s office.”

Garza also proposes:

- Mandatory staff training, open to the developers as well, on technical issues
- Written guidelines for inspectors and plan reviewers to ensure “predictability and consistency”
- Optional online permitting with a tracking function
- Rewriting the zoning code for clarity only, with no substantive changes
- Revision of parking standards to specify the minimum number of spaces required rather than the maximum allowed
- Code revision to allow

builders to place directional signs at projects

- Elimination of permitting and inspection for rock walls less than 4 feet high that do not serve a retaining function or adjoin public property
- Creation of a business liaison position in the economic development department.

“That person will own your problem until you get a solution,” Garza pledged. “They have to do the homework. They will do the legwork.”

Steve Chavira, executive director of the Home Builders Association, said he and board members have been meeting each month with city officials.

“We are refreshed by the two-way relationship we now have with the city,” he said.

in Hotel and Resort Management.

The regional controllers will share knowledge about accounting and business trends to equip a new accounting staff with the skills to take on greater responsibility.

The Las Cruces region includes Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces and Hilton Garden Inn-Las Cruces, which is also operated by the company but not part of the Heritage Hotels & Resorts collection.

Santa Teresa to receive federal funds for strategic plan

The Santa Teresa border area will receive $400,000 to develop a strategic plan to improve transportation infrastructure.

The grant was awarded through the U.S. Department of Transportation’s (DOT) highly competitive Transportation Investment Generating Economic Recovery (TIGER) Discretionary Grant program.

The funding will create an opportunity to strategically address the transportation needs of Southern New Mexico’s border area, helping identify the most beneficial and efficient planning, maintenance and improvement projects for the area.

“This investment in the Santa Teresa area will help to address immediate transportation needs, as well as to lay out a plan for continued improvements that will support future growth and jobs,” U.S. Sen. Tom Udall said.

U.S. Sen. Martin Heinrich said, “This investment will help better manage regional transportation, ease congestion and support a more coordinated transit network for workers attracted to the expanding job centers in Santa Teresa.”

Given the increasing economic development and employment opportunities in the Santa Teresa border area, the awarded funding will provide residents with expanded transportation options to commute to work, and help the NMDOT to quickly establish a strategy to address the community’s transportation needs both in the short term and the future.

SNMSHRM to host 30th Employment Law Update

Southern New Mexico Society for Human Resource Management (SNMSHRM) will hold its 30th annual Employment Law Update Thursday and Friday, Sept. 25-26, at the Las Cruces Convention Center. For more information, contact Eldelisa Nava at 571-5716 or anmshrmel@gmail.com.

On the move with Sasha Azua

Edward Jones recruits former insurance specialist

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

The second week in September, Sasha Azua said she was looking forward to her first weekend at home in Las Cruces since Father's Day.

The weekend would begin, she said, cheering for her husband, Stephen Azua, shortstop on the Strange softball team.

Always in motion, she is best known for her role as a model in High Heels for Hopes March of Dimes fundraiser and frequent appearances for the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Conquistadores and Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Los Amigos.

In truth, she works on many other community causes and isn't content with just one job.

Azua, who was a sales associate and agent with Farm Bureau Financial Services for eight years, recently switched her day job to financial adviser with Edward Jones.

"Edward Jones just happened," Azua said.

She said someone called her about the opportunity, and she liked what she saw.

"Edward Jones is all about helping people reach their financial goals," she said. "I can use my finance degree to help people on a deeper level than I could before."

Silver City start

Raised in Silver City, Azua moved to Las Cruces to study at New Mexico State, where she augmented her finance major with minors in insurance and banking.

The oldest child in her family, she set her sights on college at an early age and pursued that goal.

"I did everything," she said of her high school career. "I even took chemistry my senior year, just because I had always wanted to take chemistry."

She graduated as valedictorian.

Her parents encouraged her, but told her she would have to work hard to achieve her objective.

"It was basically all paid with scholarships," she said. Her college financial package included Regents, National Merit, Rotary, New Mexico Lottery, Phelps Dodge and Miss New Mexico scholarships, to name just a few. She was a Crimson Scholar.

Azua also worked while attending high school, getting her introduction to the insurance industry during a summer job as a receptionist with State Farm in Silver City.

"I got to see what it was like day to day, helping people with claims," she said. "I fell in love with it."

Building a business

Joining Edward Jones in April, Azua has participated in an extensive training program in Tempe, Ariz., as well as in Las Cruces. Her local adviser, Liz Medina, has guided her in learning about the company products and evaluating clients' portfolios and helping them reach their financial goals.

In addition to insurance licenses she attained while working in that industry, Azua holds a Series 7 license to sell all forms of securities.

The top concern of clients, she said, is planning for retirement and saving for a college education.

"It's amazing how many people out there are not supplied with a 401k retirement plan at work," she said.

She currently is assisting clients who live in New Mexico, Colorado and Colorado, most of whom have sought her out.

Azua said the best way to build a business is to "get out and meet people face to face," something that comes easily through her participation in two chambers of commerce and a host of other organizations and charities.

Dollars and dancing

Her activities include Junior Achievement, primarily teaching elementary school children some financial literacy.

"They don't just listen," she said. "They play games and do activities to learn the concepts."

With Eldelisa Nava and Steve Chavira, she co-founded Masterminds LLC in 2010 and continues to participate in the group created to help local businesses grow.

Azua quit one of her favorite activities – dance – "cold turkey" when she graduated from NMSU and began her career.

"I just didn't feel like myself anymore," she said.

Later she discovered Jazzercise, which enabled her to get back dancing. She teaches several classes each week, which she said gives her an opportunity to "pass it forward."

The prince and princess of Silver City

Azua met her future husband when they both were members of the high school homecoming court in Silver City, she as a freshman princess and he as senior prince.

HFT generates profits with no social gain

Is it time for a financial transaction tax?

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

Well-functioning financial markets are critical to a well-functioning economy.

To make this point completely evident, one need only think back to the onset of the Great Recession, triggered by breakdowns in the short-term bond market.

When markets are operating efficiently, they provide critical information that helps channel resources to the most valued uses. A rising stock price signals a shortage of capital in a particular industry, prompting existing firms to expand and new firms to start up. Falling prices signal the opposite.

It is speculators who make sure that prices reflect current information. They buy undervalued stocks, pushing up the price, and sell overvalued stock, pushing the price down – a process called arbitrage. The result is markets that quickly reflect relevant information.

This is extremely valuable to business decision makers, who can rely on stock prices in making decisions.

Here is the problem: Speculators make a profit by arbitraging between high and low prices, not by providing information to business decision makers. That speculating does provide information is just a by-product.

It's similar to TV and advertising. TV exists to sell ads. To sell ads you need eyeballs. If good-quality TV attracts eyeballs, great. We get "Breaking Bad." If bad TV attracts eyeballs, also great. We get

"American Idol."

It's the same with speculators. If speculators can make a profit by providing useful information, great. If they can make a profit doing nothing useful, also great – at least as far as the speculator is concerned. From society's point of view, however, the resources used by the speculator in pursuing profits become an issue. If the speculator isn't producing a useful service, then the resources used in speculation are a waste.

This brings us to High Frequency Trading (HFT), a relatively new phenomenon popularized in Michael Lewis book "Flash Boys."

HFT involves massive spending on infrastructure and computer technology aimed at shaving a few nanoseconds off the time it takes to make a trade. But so doing, the HFT firm can front run, either buying or selling ahead of incoming trades to lock in an almost sure profit.

All this happens extremely rapidly and is run by computers.

HFT does reduce the time it takes prices to reflect new information, but only by nanoseconds. The benefits of such a small savings in time – on the order of magnitude of one-two millionth of an eye blink – does not justify the huge expenditures needed to achieve such small savings. Moreover, HFTs cause prices to change so rapidly that the price reported on the computer screen of regular traders is out of date before the transaction can be executed. Regular traders are, in effect, trading in the blind.

The consequence is increased aggregate risk, which potentially can discourage investment and reduce financial market efficiency.

A number of proposals for regulating HFT have been put forward. Among the most prominent is the proposal by the European Union to

"If speculators can make a profit by providing useful information, great. If they can make a profit doing nothing useful, also great – at least as far as the speculator is concerned."

impose a transaction tax on certain trades between financial institutions. The idea is that such a tax would reduce the profit from small price changes that drive HFT. It may be time for U.S. regulators to consider a similar tax.

CVB honored for destination marketing

The Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau (CVB) has again been awarded accreditation from the Destination Marketing Accreditation Program (DMAP), one of the highest honors in the visitor industry. In earning this recognition, destination marketing organizations (DMOs) communicate to their community, buyers and potential visitors that their DMO has attained a significant measure of excellence.

"We are extremely honored to have received this award yet again," said Las Cruces CVB Executive Director Phil San Filippo. "We are very pleased to have been recognized by the destination marketing community for our hard work, commitment and dedication to the tourism industry's high standards. Our staff put an incredible amount of work into the process to achieve this recognition."

DMAP accreditation standards cover a wide range of topics, including governance, finance, management, human resources, technology, visitor services, group services, sales, communications, brand management, destination development, research/market intelligence, innovation and stakeholder relationships.

"DMAP accreditation requires DMOs truly evaluate and define not only their policies and procedures, but also determine their guiding principles and solidify their importance to their communities in all they do," said Jack Wert, DMAP board chair. "These committed organizations must demonstrate compliance across 16 disciplines, composed of 53 mandatory standards and is globally recognized by the destination marketing industry as the highest achievement in destination excellence."

DMAP is an independent international accreditation body and a leader in defining quality and performance issues in destination marketing developed by Destination Marketing Association International (DMAI).

The Las Cruces CVB is a City of Las Cruces department dedicated to attracting meetings, leisure and business travelers to Las Cruces in the most economic and efficient manner possible in order to stimulate the local economy.

For more information about DMAP, visit www.destinationmarketing.org or call the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau at 541-2150.

Defining what it means to be 'green'

Carrie Hamblen

Going green

I think it's safe to say that most of us understand, at some level, what it means to be "green."

In general, it means incorporating lifestyle choices that help us protect our planet from further damage. We can do this by recycling, using clean transportation to travel, conserving water, using alternative energy to power our homes and businesses and purchasing our goods and services from locally owned businesses. In many cases, it's simple to do.

In other situations, we may need to be creative.

At the very general level of "green," many of us try to recycle. The blue curbside recycling bins make this very easy for Las Cruces residents. And since the beginning of May, residents have been able to drop off glass bottles at the recycling centers on West Amador Avenue and South Sonoma Ranch Boulevard rather than throw them in the garbage.

At the moment, the South Central Solid Waste Authority's big blue glass crusher is going through test phases in order to check the functioning of the machine and ensure a quality level cullet, the pieces of crushed glass. Soon, local residents will be able to use that cullet for landscaping, art projects, interior decorating and more.

We can also recycle in other ways: turning old furniture into new pieces or modifying it for new purposes (Pinterest is a great idea creator for this), repurposing electronics and technology and implementing other creative ideas.

The way in which we use natural resources offers another opportunity to be green. With the availability of fresh drinking water becoming a huge issue (51 percent of Las Cruces' "drinking water" is used on landscaping), and the ongoing scarcity of water in general, rain barrels are terrific for harvesting rain water for use on our plants. Using gray water from washing dishes and clothes cuts down on freshwater use. Changing out green lawns for xeriscaped lawns reduces how we use this vital resource.

Another natural resource we can make the most of is our sun. As residents of an area that receives sunshine more than 350 days a year, we have an incredible opportunity to harness solar energy and turn it into electricity and even extra cash.

The price of a photovoltaic solar system is becoming much more affordable and pays itself off on average in about six and a half years. Plus, there is low-rate financing available through local solar companies to help purchase a system.

"By buying and shopping locally, we can have one of the greatest impacts on our community."

In our house, we haven't paid an electric bill for more than a year since getting our photovoltaic system installed. With the 30 percent federal tax incentive plus the additional 10 percent state tax incentive, a PV system will provide free or almost free power and reduce your electrical bills.

Other ways of "greening" our homes is to increase the energy efficiency. Installing Energy-Star appliances, improving the insulation in the attic spaces and replacing single-pane glass windows with double-pane, energy efficient windows always helps.

In the process of improving the energy efficiency of our 1948 house made of cinderblock, we found when we "wrapped" the house in 3-inch-thick Styrofoam sheets and re-stuccoed the exterior, our energy bills dropped significantly. Additionally, using a clothes line to dry clothes helps us save a tremendous amount of energy, as electric clothes dryers are one of the most power-using appliances. Plus, the hot Las Cruces sun naturally whitens whites, without the use of bleach.

In addition to the solar tax credits the federal and state governments offer, the federal government also has a bike to work tax benefit, encouraging employees to bike rather than drive their car to work. If employees of a business bike to work more than 60 percent of the year, the business gets a tax benefit that can be incorporated back into the business. Plus, it is encouraging a healthy lifestyle for employees.

Another cleaner way of getting around town is to use the public transportation system. This method can reduce the amount of cars on our roads and thus reduce the amount of pollution in our air.

Perhaps one of the biggest disconnects of being "green" is how we spend our money in the community.

By buying and shopping locally, we can have one of the greatest impacts on our community. When we buy locally, we are supporting local jobs, maybe even our own.

Local businesses give back to local charities 350 percent more than national chains. When we spend $100 at a local business, $48 to $64 dollars stays in Las Cruces. When we spend $100 at a national chain store, an average of $14 stays in our community. By shopping locally, we are keeping money in the community.

In addition, local businesses are invested in our community. They give to charitable causes, sports teams, campaigns, fundraisers and other community events. They care about the community and in turn, the community cares about them.

We like to say, "Think local, give local, buy local."

We all can be green. There are so many ways to do so. It's not difficult. It's not rocket science. It's the right thing to do.

For more information on how to support our local businesses, explore networking opportunities, or how to join the Las Cruces Green Chamber, contact me at carrie@nmgreenchamber.com or 323-1575.

Witte to be voice for farming, ranching in the West

New Mexico Secretary of Agriculture Jeff Witte has been elected to preside over the organization that unifies the voices of state departments of agriculture in the West.

WITTE

Witte assumed leadership of the Western Association of State Departments of Agriculture (WASDA) during the annual meeting of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) in Burlington, Vermont. He will serve in the role, as well as on the NASDA board, from now until September 2015, while continuing to lead the New Mexico Department of Agriculture (NMDA).

"Agriculture is so different in the West compared to agriculture in the Midwest, say, or even in the northeastern states," Witte said. "WASDA assimilates the voices of Western departments of agriculture – which are themselves assimilating the voices of farmers and ranchers in their respective states – in order for us to have strong, unified representation before USDA, Congress and other entities that affect farming, ranching and other forms of agriculture."

WASDA is composed of the commissioners, secretaries and directors of agriculture from New Mexico, Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, as well as Guam and Samoa. Both WASDA and NASDA focus on issues related to animals and plants, marketing and trade, financial security and infrastructure, food regulation, environment and conservation and the Farm Bill.

"It's a great honor to represent New Mexico on both boards and to provide input on important policy issues impacting our farmers and ranchers, our food processors, and our retailers," Witte said.

Given Witte's leadership of WASDA, New Mexico will host the group's annual conference next July.

Witte grew up on his family's ranch between Moriarty and Las Vegas, NM. He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural business and economics from New Mexico State University.

He started his career in agricultural policy, then served as deputy director and biosecurity director of NMDA. After launching the Southwest Border Food Safety and Defense Center at NMSU, Witte was selected to lead NMDA in May 2011. For more information about NMDA, visit www.nmda.nmsu.edu.

The Whole Enchilada Fiesta celebrates 34 years

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Whole Enchilada Fiesta returns Friday through Sunday, Sept. 26-28, to the Meerscheidt Recreation Center Complex, 1600 E. Hadley Ave., for three days of entertainment, fun and most importantly, food, all centered on the creation of the record-setting, three-layer flat enchilada by chef, restaurateur and festival founder Roberto Estrada.

Now in its 34th year, The Whole Enchilada Fiesta has been held the last weekend in September since it first began in 1980, drawing anywhere from 40,000 to 60,000 people over the course of its three days.

That enchilada – the 2000 Guinness Book of World Records largest flat, three-layer enchilada – takes a tremendous amount of time and energy to prepare, and an even more staggering load of ingredients.

On Sunday afternoon, the festival's final day, Estrada and his team use 750 pounds of stone-ground corn to create the enchilada's three massive tortillas, which are cooked in 175 gallons of heated vegetable oil. Once those tremendous tortillas are cooked, they're stacked and piled with 75 gallons of red chile sauce and 175 pounds of shredded cheese before being topped with 50 pounds of chopped white onions, 48 heads of lettuce and 2 full boxes of sliced tomatoes.

Though Estrada's enchilada is undoubtedly the centerpiece of the celebration, there's much more to The Whole Enchilada. The festival kicks off Friday with the opening of the Fiesta Garden at 4 p.m., beginning with opening ceremonies until 6 p.m., followed by an evening of live music beginning at 6:30 p.m. with the Joe Barron Band from El Paso.

At 8 p.m., Las Cruces' own Eli James Band takes the stage, followed at 9:30 by hometown hero Josh Grider, by way of Nashville, Tenn.

On Saturday, the celebration kicks back in to gear at 10:30 a.m. with the annual TWEF parade down Solano Drive. At 11 a.m., fiesta games and activities open. Live music on Saturday will be provided by Mariachi Las Caponeras at 1 p.m., Latin Funktion at 2:30 p.m., Radio la Chusma at 4 p.m., Severo y Grupo Fuego at 8:45 p.m. and closes with headliner Malo at 10:15 p.m.

The fiesta garden reopens at 10 a.m. Sunday, when Estrada and his crew set to work on their enormous entrée, but there's plenty else going on throughout the day. Las Cruces' Flat Blak play at 11:30 a.m., followed by Rockabilly Strangers at 1 p.m., Remember Then ... A Class Act at 2:30 p.m. and headliner Shelly Lares from 4 p.m. until the festival's close at 6 p.m.

Aside from live music and entertainment, carnival games, vendors and, of course, lots of food, TWEF has a full lineup of fiesta activities throughout the weekend. From 4 to 6 p.m. Friday, contestants on the Roberto's Karaoke Stage will belt out their best country tunes and vie for a chance to perform on the main stage at 9:20 p.m., just before headliner Josh Grider sets up to close the show. On Saturday, the karaoke stage will be filled with the sounds of Mexican regional music from 1 to 2:15 p.m., and the winner will perform at 7:15 p.m. Sunday's karaoke contest, a variety show, will take place from 11:30 to 12:45 p.m., and the winner will hit the stage at 12:50 p.m.

In addition to these karaoke contests, since 2011 TWEF has hosted an enchilada eating contest, this year beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Tickets to The Whole Enchilada Fiesta are $10 for adults, and admission for kids 12 and younger is free. For more information, visit www.enchiladafiesta.com or call 523-3111.

“Light in the Desert: Photographs from the Monastery of Christ in the Desert by Tony O’Brien” is one of three exhibits opening at the New Mexico State University Museum with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19. Along with the exhibit of O’Brien’s work, the museum will host “O’odham Himdag: A Way of Life” and “Cloth as Community: Hmong Textiles in America.”

Exhibits open at NMSU Museum

The University Museum of New Mexico State University will host an opening reception for three new exhibits from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19.

The first, “O’odham Himdag: A Way of Life,” features 40 baskets from the University Museum collection created by historic and contemporary Akimel O’odham (Pima) and Tohono O’odham (Papago) weavers of central and southern Arizona and northern Mexico.

The O’odham Himdag, or desert people’s life way, encompasses cultural knowledge, values and beliefs, all which are woven into each basket. This exhibit showcases the materials, techniques, designs, functions and several identified individual artists behind this innovative and rich ongoing tradition. “Cloth as Community: Hmong Textiles in America” features 28 textiles – flower cloths and embroidered story clothes – by those in the Hmong community. Hmong flower cloth (or paj ntaub) is one of the world’s great textile traditions and an excellent example of cloth as community.

Despite its deep roots in Hmong culture, this complex art was not widely known outside Asia until after the Vietnam War, when Hmong refugees arrive in the United States. The works illustrate the profound relevance of textiles as infrastructure in the Hmong culture, an art form that shifted as it adapted to fit new realities.

The story of Hmong textile production reflects the shift in the creation of textiles with traditional abstract patterns created for family and ceremonial use to its evolution as a source of commerce and telling of a new life abroad. The works also reveal the radical upheaval Hmong refugees experienced, as many crossed the Mekong River to Thailand.

Hmong women traditionally produced complex clothing that established clan identity through abstract geometric designs, created by embroidery, appliqué, reverse appliqué and indigo batik. These patterns continue to influence the aesthetic choices of contemporary makers, even as those choices were mediated by refugee experience and economic concerns.

Historically, textiles in village life were not sold but they held important spiritual protections. In refugee camps and beyond, the sale of textiles generated important income for families, and this creation of textiles for commerce brought on changes to this centuries-old art form. Story cloths emerged with pictorial art, sometimes sharing escape narratives of those in refugee camps.

The third and final exhibit, “Light in the Desert: Photographs from the Monastery of Christ in the Desert by Tony O’Brien” was organized by the New Mexico History Museum, Department of Cultural Affairs, State of New Mexico, Santa Fe. The exhibition features 20 selenium-toned silver gelatin prints of photographs that will be displayed at the museum through Jan. 31, 2015.

After being imprisoned in Afghanistan while on assignment for Life magazine in 1989, photojournalist O’Brien sought solace and perspective at Christ in the Desert Monastery.

During his year-long residency, O’Brien was granted rare access to traditions dating back to the Middle Ages. O’Brien’s camera became an instrument of contemplation and spiritual healing, his reverent photographs reflecting, as well, the harsh beauty and austerity of monastic life.

In 1995, O’Brien began a year of living and photographing in the secluded Benedictine Abbey of Christ in the Desert, near Abiquiu, New Mexico as a practicing member of this small contemplative community situated in the Rio Chama valley about 75 miles north of Santa Fe. The monastery is surrounded by miles of government-protected wilderness, thus assuring and promoting solitude and quiet for the spiritual way of life.

During his stay, O’Brien was given free access to photograph the rituals and daily activities, both contemplative and secular, at the monastery. The resulting images not only portray a continuing relationship between the photographer and the community of monks at Christ in the Desert but constitute an important body of creative work.

The museum is located on the New Mexico State University campus in Kent Hall at University Avenue and Solano Drive. The University Museum is open from noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, Museum admission is free. For more information about exhibits or programs, visit <http://univmuseum.nmsu.edu/> or call 646-5161.

Trumpeter and New Mexico State University graduate Hugo Moreno will return to Las Cruces with Latin American group Jarana Beat for a performance at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Jarana Beat to play at NMSU

Latin American group Jarana Beat is set to perform a concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 23, at Atkinson Recital Hall on the New Mexico State University campus. The performance marks a homecoming of sorts for trumpeter Hugo Moreno, who was born and raised in Sunland Park and graduated from NMSU before embarking on an extensive musical career.

Now living in Brooklyn, Hugo Moreno enjoys freelancing with some of New York City's best ensembles. Versed in many styles, Moreno has been featured as a soloist with the Chelsea Symphony and Yale Philharmonia, performed at Marlboro and Spoleto USA and the Philharmonic Orchestra of the Americas.

Further downtown, Moreno plays with Jarana Beat, a group whose Mexican roots fuses elements of Mexico's African and Amerindian traditions with other Latin American rhythms in a present-day take on folkloric music. Moreno is also a graduate of Yale, where he studied cornetto and baroque trumpet with Allan Dean.

In addition to its Tuesday evening show, Jarana Beat will present a master-class on their distinctive styles and roots at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24. The class will also take place at Atkinson Recital Hall.

Jarana Beat has been involved in teaching and performing in venues such as Berklee College of Music, The Bowery Ballroom, Symphony Space, Dollywood's Festival of Nations, given an interview on NPR's "Tell Me More," and held an official showcase at SXSW 2012 in Austin, Texas. The percussive footwork of dancers dressed in traditional costumes, the rhythms of world music blending with the regional sounds of son jarocho from the Gulf Coast, son guerrerense from the Southern Pacific Coast, son huasteco from the Central & North-Eastern region, mexika from the Central and norteña from the North all converge into the point of departure for Moreno's musical creativity, opening an environment for expressing the unique music of the band members' homelands.

In addition to his work with Jarana Beat, Moreno has also played with Cumbiagra, The Gregorio Uribe Big Band, and has performed at the Bang on a Can marathon, with the acclaimed gospel musicians at the Emmanuel Baptist Church, with artist Rachel Mason, and as Principal trumpet of the Daejeon Philharmonic Orchestra under Shinik Hahm.

Admission is $15 general admission, $10 for students and all proceeds will benefit the NMSU Music Business program.

FUSION Theatre Co. returns to Rio Grande

The Doña Ana Arts Council is once again partnering with FUSION Theatre Company, the professional stage company of Albuquerque, to bring Las Cruces the 2014 Tony Award-nominated Best Play "Outside Mullingar" by John Patrick Shanley.

The play, written by the Academy Award ("Moonstruck"), Pulitzer and Tony Award-winning ("Doubt") author, will continue its regional tour at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 20, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept 21, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

This production, just off the Broadway stage, is a romantic comedy featuring two eccentric souls, Rosemary and Anthony. They stumble and bumble toward love and passion while in the froth of a neighborly feud over a piece of land the size of a postage stamp.

Set in contemporary Ireland, Shanley plays with the heartache and hilarity that only families can conjure up as they vie for love and respect. "(Outside Mullingar) represents Mr. Shanley's finest work since "Doubt," the winner of both the Tony Award and the Pulitzer Prize in 2005," said Charles Isherwood in the New York Times.

FUSION's production is directed by co-founder Jacqueline Reid ("Tribes," "Red," "Doubt"). The incredible cast features Washington, D.C., residents and multiple Helen Hayes Award-winners Thomas Adrian Simpson and Sherri L. Edelen, as well as long-time professionals and recent New Mexico transplants, Robert Benedetti and Nancy Jeris.

For more information about the award-winning FUSION Theatre Company, visit www.fusionabq.org. FUSION will again return to the Rio Grande Theatre in December for performances of David Sedaris' outrageously funny NPR classic, "The Santaland Diaries," and in May for "The New Electric Ballroom," written by Enda Walsh.

Doors open 30 minutes before performance time. Reserved seat tickets for the two shows are available by visiting www.riograndetheatre.com or at the box office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, upstairs at the Rio Grande Theatre; advance tickets are $32.50 for the main floor and $23.50 balcony (all fees included); day-of-show tickets are $39.50 & $28.50 (all fees included); $10 Student Rush tickets, subject to availability at the door, 10 minutes prior to show time.

For more information, call 523-6403 or visit www.riograndetheatre.com.

Multiple Helen Hayes Award-winner Sherri L. Edelen will perform in "Outside Mullingar" at the Rio Grande Theatre at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 20, and 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 21. Produced by Albuquerque's FUSION Theatre Co., "Outside Mullingar" is a romantic comedy featuring two eccentric souls, Rosemary and Anthony, who stumble and bumble toward love and passion while in the froth of a neighborly feud over a piece of land the size of a postage stamp.

Beer, Bacon & Bourbon Festival kicks off Friday

By Zak Hansen

Las Cruces Bulletin

Mark Twain said, "Too much of anything is bad, but too much good whiskey is barely enough."

Benjamin Franklin supposedly said, "Beer is proof that God loves us and wants us to be happy," and although Franklin didn't actually say that, the sentiment certainly stands.

Months ago, Marci Dickerson of the Dickerson Group, which operates some of Las Cruces' hottest watering holes including The Game Sports Bar & Grill and M FIVE among them, Justin Hodges, owner of PartyTenders Inc., and several representatives from Adams Radio Group Inc., which recently purchased four Las Cruces radio stations, gathered for lunch and a meeting of the minds as to how these three entities – restaurateur, party promoter and radio group – could come together for an event, building off the huge successes of recent food- and drink-themed events.

As they tucked in to lunch, Hodges recalled, one rep bit into his BLT and the conversation turned to the city's recent local beer festivals.

"I was looking at him and said, 'Why don't we throw bacon into a beer festival,'" Hodges said. "Marci (Dickerson) added on to that and said, 'Let's add bourbon, too,'" – and the rest, as they say, is history, with beer, bacon and bourbon together at last.

Satiate your craving for all three with Las Cruces' first Beer, Bacon & Bourbon Festival from 5 to 11 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

Expanding on the tried-and-true successes of the area's wine and beer festivals and taking into account bacon's relative recent popularity as a pop culture phenomenon, attendees will have their pick of 140 different beers and 30 bourbons to sample, along with 10 bacon creations from The Game.

What are these bacon creations, you ask, and could anything sound more appealing?

First, the evening's bacon-besotted menu features bacon-wrapped corked-bat bites, mini hot dogs with bacon relish, bacon mac 'n' cheese, bacon mashed potato bites, chocolate-covered bacon, maple bacon donut holes, candied bacon chocolate chip cookies and more; second, no, in fact, nothing could sound more appealing.

The festival also features live music on two stages. The Jack Daniel's No. 7 stage will feature an evening of rock, country and folk with Triple Jack, Crooked Beaver Creek, DAMN Union and headliner Border Avenue. The Verizon Wireless stage will feature a completely different style of music, with DJs Phat Tony (5 to 7 p.m.) and Espy and Gene-E-Ous (7 to 11 p.m.) on the decks all evening.

In addition to food, drink and live music, the Beer, Bacon & Bourbon Festival will feature vendors of all kinds, along with a bacon-eating contest, water pong and cornhole tournaments and play and a bacon-creation contest, with food vendors creating new bacon dishes. The winning vendor is set to receive $1,000 in free radio credits from Adams Radio for its prizeworthy pork provisions.

The festival's $20 admission fee includes five samples of beer (1 oz. pours) and bourbon (.25 oz. pours), along, of course, with beaucoup bacon.

Advance tickets for the Las Cruces Beer, Bacon

& Bourbon Festival are available at Horse N Hound Feed N Supply Store, 991 W. Amador Ave.; Boot Barn, 700 S. Telshor Blvd.; Adams Radio Group, 1355 California Ave.; or online at www.180tix.com. Advance tickets will be available at these outlets until 5 p.m. Friday.

For more information, call 525-9298 or visit www.beerbaconbourbonfest.com or www.facebook.com/beerbaconbourbonfest.

On February 1, 1896, Albert Jennings Fountain, prominent attorney and politician, and his 8-year-old son were run off the road between White Sands and Las Cruces, presumably murdered. The bodies have never been found and the case remains New Mexico's premier murder mystery. Against the political background of the times, which included the dominance of the Santa Fe ring, the struggle between syndicated ranches and small cowmen, and Anglo/Hispanic rivalry, Karl Laumbach sets the stage and shares insights gained after 30 years of tracking a very cold case.

ART OBSCURA GALLERY presents "Relinquish" by Joshua Flores, a collection of work previously unseen by the public and new work created just for this exhibition. TOMBAUGH GALLERY presents "Soul of Silk," an exhibit of silk art and wearables by Las Cruces artist Judy Licht. In her work, Licht delights in watching dye and silk merge, creating a single entity that is both vivid color and sensuous fabric, drawing inspiration from the natural world, especially the contrast between the harshness of the desert and the softness of the silk. "Soul of Silk" will remain on display through Oct. 24.

Tombaugh Gallery is located inside Unitarian Universalist Church, 2000 S. Solano Drive. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and by appointment. For more information, call 522-7281.

NMSU UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY presents "Off the Wall," an exhibition inspired by the minimal wall drawings and sculptures of Sol Le Witt. This two-part exhibition will trace the history of Le Witt's relationship with New Mexico State University, as well as show the extent of his influence on a new generation of artists who use the surface of the wall as their canvas. In addition to the work of Le Witt, "Off the Wall" features the work of Allie Rex, Judith Braun, Christie Blizard and Nathan Green – four contemporary artists from across the country who've traded traditional supportive media such as the canvas, panel and paper for the challenge of working directly on the wall. "Off the Wall" will remain on display through Dec. 6.

The Cutter Gallery exhibit of the work of painter Linda Gendall, including "Rock Ola," above, closes Thursday, Sept. 25.

NMSU University Art Gallery is located inside D.W. Williams Hall, at the intersection of University Avenue and Solano Drive. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. For more information, call 646-2545.

Fike referencing early botanical studies and embracing contemporary techniques; and "Distorted Senses of Proportion," a mixed-media installation by Brooklyn artist Rachel B. Abrams including sculptural installations and mixed-media drawings and collages focusing on how ecosystems and life cycles are affected by climate change, overpopulation and invasive species. UNSETTLED GALLERY presents Raul Dorn's "am/pm." The body of work presented in "am/pm" was developed during a period in which the artist initiated a major life change. Dorn, a teacher of secondary studio art, decided to retire. "Teaching," Dorn said, "had been at the core of my identity."

As the process unwound, he experienced the highs of anticipating freedom from the structure of daily classroom activities and anxiety from not fully knowing what comes next. This dichotomy of feeling is reflected in the styles and subject matter of "am/pm." The exhibit will remain on display through the end of the month.

'No Good Deed' punished

Review by Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Colin Evans (Idris Elba) is undeniably charming.

Standing before his parole board, pleading for his release from prison after a barroom brawl led to a manslaughter conviction for which he's served five years, Evans, tall and commanding, speaks, soft and measured, about remorse and guilt and redemption. He seems in earnest, casting the intensity of his eyes downward.

He may be a bit more than charming, though. One sharp-tongued member of the parole board seems to think so, calling Evans a "malignant narcissist," and the five families protesting outside the prison's gates seem to think so, too, mourning the disappearances and deaths of each of their daughters at what they believe to be Evans' hands – though trial evidence proved illusory.

Their voices heard, Evans is denied parole and told to report again in five years, but in the transport van back to prison, he proves them all right, killing both guards in a cunning and cold escape.

In the wooded suburbs nearby, as a storm approaches, housewife, mother and former prosecutor Terri Granger (Taraji P. Henson, "The Curious Case of Benjamin Button") is preparing to spend the weekend alone with her children, a toddler and a newborn, while her husband, Jeffery, spends the weekend out of town on "business."

After his escape – and brutal immediate murder of an ex-girlfriend – Evans steals a truck and heads toward the suburbs, but the storm has closed in and, unable to see, he plows the vehicle into a tree.

Minutes later, Terri Granger's doorbell rings and ... if you've seen a family-in-peril thriller in the past three decades, you know who's at the door, what they'll do and how it will turn out in the end.

So promising are the first few minutes of "No Good Deed" and so capable its leads, its remaining 70-or-so minutes are that much more unbearably disappointing. It's lazy, uninspired filmmaking tackling unpleasant subject matter for the umpteenth time without adding anything new or interesting to the discussion. If you're going to do something that's been done to death, at least do it differently.

The story, if you can call it that, plays out in all the most familiar ways – director Sam Miller has checked all the boxes in the "Cape Fear" manual – without feeling anything more than inevitable, and its third-act reveal is "Days of Our Lives"-style surprising at best.

Perhaps worst of all, Elba as predator and Taraji P. Henson as prey are talented actors working well below their talent level, squandering their considerable chops on static, one-dimensional characters. Elba absolutely nails his role, his natural appeal and charm nearly oozing out of his imposing frame. Unfortunately, his character, as cunning and dangerous as he may be, is ultimately as stock as can be, too. Henson seems too quick to allow this stranger into her empty home, and doesn't manage to give her role – woman in peril – much emotional depth at all.

"No Good Deed" is unpleasant and uninspired throughout, wasting the talents of its two capable leads.

It's simple coincidence "No Good Deed" landed in theaters the same week video surfaced of the NFL's Ray Rice slugging his now-wife in a Las Vegas elevator. While the country is talking about and tackling issues related to violence against women and domestic violence as a whole – for now, at least – the film may seem topical. Unfortunately, "No Good Deed" doesn't say anything new, and doesn't say it very well at that.

'Frontera' more than just a border film

Review by Jeff Berg
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"Frontera," which was shot in New Mexico (mostly around Albuquerque), has a unique perspective, perhaps using a real life incident of a few years ago, as a story line.

Michael Peña stars as Miguel, who, along with his friend (of sorts), Jose, jumps the border from Mexico.

Ed Harris, a former sheriff in the area, has retired and has a pleasant ranch on the border, one where he dislikes border crossers, but his wife isn't afraid to help people such as Miguel and Jose, even considering his past profession. Roy (Harris) is quiet and somewhat taciturn, but fair and firm.

One day, his wife, Livy, saddles up her favorite horse for a ride in the desert. Unbeknownst to her, Miguel and Jose are cowering in the nearby desert themselves, as three local lads, out on a 'lark', have started taking potshots at them from a nearby ridge. Redneck-peckerwoods-in-training, the threesome is just out to scare any border crossers they happen to find.

Hearing the shots, Livy comes upon the scene and speaks with Miguel and Jose, who are catching their breath after the boys stop shooting. The boys are unaware of Livy's presence, and after she gives the two Mexican men a canteen and blanket, one boy takes a last shot, hitting a rock near where the two men and Livy are talking. It spooks her horse, which rears and throws her, with the fall nearly killing her. The boys take off and Miguel, dumbstruck with guilt and fear tries his best to comfort Livy, as Jose encourages him to run now.

But it is to no avail, as Livy dies.

The whole area is soon in an uproar, as Miguel is caught and jailed, accused of being responsible for Livy's demise.

Eva Longoria plays Miguel's wife, and when she finds out that he is in jail, she pays a coyote (a person who helps others across the border for pay, but this doesn't turn out well for her).

Vigilantism is about to raise its head, as is local corruption and cover up. Roy, in spite of his own distaste for migrants, suspects something is amiss and starts to investigate Livy's passing on his own. He is soon to find out the truth, none of which is very pleasant.

"Frontera" is very well carried by the performances, the harsh cinematography, which showcases the debris and true life that is on the border rather than the quiet beauty that is also part of the region.

Harris, Peña, Longoria, and Amy Madigan – in a brief appearance as Livy – all perform magnificently, allowing the film to be tense and believable, while skipping most of the clichés of similarly themed works.

Then there is that ending – one you will have to see to believe.

Don't miss this interesting piece of work. "Frontera" has its weak moments, but all in all, it works on all levels.

Dedicated to a true teller of the truth, Charles Bowden. Jeff Berg can be reached at nedludd76@hotmail.com.

"Frontera" opens for a one-week run Friday, Sept. 19, at the Fountain Theatre.

Maximum livability

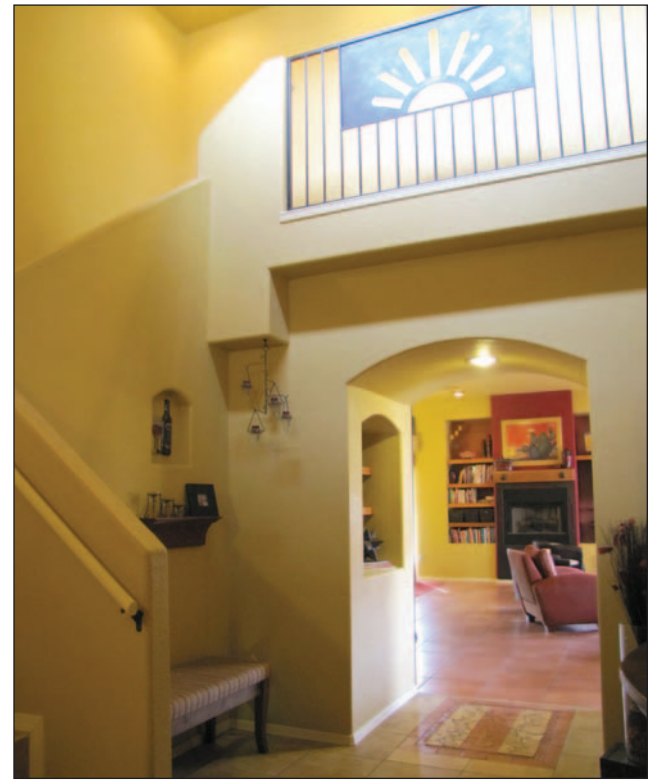

With an eye toward maximizing space through convenient work areas and high storage capacity, coupled with built-in design elements lending style and comfortable elegance, the home at 591 La Melodia Drive, in the Las Ventanas a Los Organos subdivision, is the perfect residence for busy, social urbanites.

LAS CRUCES BULLETIN PHOTOS BY DAVID SALCIDO
Tucked back off the main road on a shared extended driveway, the home features angled flower beds inside tiered retaining wall gardens, two-car garage with ironwork accents and a custom designed gate opening into a small courtyard.

Inside, an open floor plan for the living and dining area includes a buffet wine rack and a radius wall in the great room. "It's sort of a signature design element that my wife puts in a lot of the houses she designs," the owner said. Adding to the comfort elements, the home is wired for 5.1 surround sound inside and stereo outside.

Custom designed by the owner, the home includes accents such as railings, tile mosaics, nichos, built-in work areas and an upper landing for the staircase, lit by high windows letting in natural light.

The spacious kitchen includes alder cabinetry with full extension drawers, pot racks, a dual-fuel professional series range with custom hood vent, granite composite sink and stainless-steel appliances. The owner said the countertops are "paperstone made from recycled paper held together with a non-fossil fuel-based resin, so it's very green. It's a solid surface, it's not a laminate." Tile work over the stove was made by a friend in Seattle. "These are all custom-made. Absolutely one of a kind," the owner said.

Included are two bedrooms downstairs with walk-in closets. The downstairs bathroom has a free-standing glass bowl sink, a snail shower with glass block and extensive tilework. The layout also includes a hobby room behind the spacious laundry, with a Murphy bed, which makes it the perfect extra guest room.

The covered patio maximizes living area with a grill and refrigerator; manicured, easy-to-care-for yard with retaining wall garden space.

Snail tales

Gardeners and poets tell much different stories

Scott Svenheim
ACE Pest Detective

The beauty of snails and slugs is most definitely in the eye of the beholder.

Cartoon adventure movies like “Turbo” personify snails to another level, especially to children. Children and poetry lovers see them as what little boys are made of: slugs and snails and puppy dog tails. A snail is a cute little creature that carries its home on its back in a swirl of a shell, right?

But ask gardeners their view and watch out. Slugs and snails will be in the pumpkin patch nibbling at the very young, still-soft growth of what you hoped to be your jack-o-lantern. They can be excised from the garden by cultivating and minimizing moist areas or picking them out, among other methods.

Most, but not all snails, whether of land or marine varieties, are herbivores. They’ll eat holes in all sorts of plants and lay eggs in the garden soil. The marine-based snails are viewed more kindly for eating algae and other nuisance greens.

The snail is synonymous with slow in our culture. You’ve probably heard it before, “You’re moving at a snail’s pace!” If you have the chance to watch one travel, you can clearly see why. The garden snail moves at about 0.03 miles per hour. You may be most familiar with this creature for lending its name to snail mail – the old-fashioned, takes-a-while way to send a note.

Both snail and slug – a snail that’s evolved without a shell – produce a silvery slime that helps them move and protects them when they creep over glass or other sharp objects. They live most everywhere and, depending on the species, their life span can be as short as a year or occasionally up to 30 years in captivity. They can be very tiny, but some sea types can grow as long as 30 inches and weigh 40 pounds. Land snails are hermaphrodites, producing both sperm and eggs. Some marine or freshwater varieties are separate sexes.

Predators are numerous. Everyone loves a snail, including birds, snakes and, yes, people. The ooh-la-la escargot prepared in French cuisine comes to mind, although they are also commonly used in dishes throughout Spain and Portugal, among many other countries.

Scott Svenheim, is an expert for Truly Nolen of America and Associate Certified Entomologist, with 27 years of experience in the pest control industry. For more information, visit www.trulynolen.com.

Author offers zen retreat

Buddist priest, prolific blogger and Huffington Post columnist Karen Maezen Miller will spend a weekend transporting followers to “a realm of calm assurance and infinite patience” during her Paradise Now Weekend Retreat in downtown Las Cruces, Friday through Sunday, Oct. 3-5.

Miller, a Zen priest and teacher at the Hazy Moon Zen Center in Los Angeles, has gained a large following by writing about spirituality in everyday life with a straight-forward and accessible style, which has been captured in the books, “Paradise In Plain Sight: Lessons From a Zen Garden,” “Hand Wash Cold: Care Instructions for an Ordinary Life” and “Momma Zen: Walking the Crooked Path of Motherhood.”

Eminently quotable, Miller often gives her followers slice-of-life mantras to help them not only get through the day, but rearrange their lives to become more accepting and at ease on a regular basis.

In “Hand Wash Cold,” she writes,

“Every bit of life comes with instructions, when we are attentive enough to notice.”

Miller will pass this homespun wisdom on during a zazen (seated meditation) and dharma talk from 6 to 8 p.m., Friday, Oct. 3, at Casa de Mi Alma, 920 N. Alameda St. Admission is free to the public and donations are welcome.

MILLER

For those wanting a deeper connection, she will conduct a zazenkai (all-day sitting) – including zazen, kinhin (walking meditation), lunch and dharma talk – from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 4, at Clear Mind Zendo, 642 S. Alameda St., Suite

E. Admission is $35 and registration must be done in advance.

Miller’s final installment will be another zazen and dharma talk at 10 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 5, at Clear Mind Zendo. Admission is free to the public and donations are welcome.

For more information, or to reserve a seat for Miller’s zazenkai, call Kobusshin McLeod at 903-279-4301.

You might smell sulfur or rotten eggs, you may notice dirt or debris shooting up out of a hole in the ground, dead or dying vegetation in an otherwise green area, and a loud hissing or roaring sound near pipeline markers. These and many more are all telltale signs of a natural gas or pipeline leak. Use all your senses, even common sense and report any possible leaks to Zia Natural Gas Company. When in doubt call us out!

Three herbs for healing horses

Katharine Lark Chrisley
Stable Woman

My three favorite herbs for healing horses are comfrey, yarrow and rosemary.

Comfrey is a plant that is easily grown and is the premier herb for injuries of all kinds. It is used externally to heal bruises, broken bones, lacerations (cuts), abrasions (rubbed sores), contusions (wounds with bruising), burns (heat, chemical and friction) and any swelling or inflammation.

Comfrey leaves are brewed as an infusion: Steep one handful dried leaves (two fresh) in 2 quarts pure water just off the boil, covered in a non-metal pot. Let steep for 25 minutes and strain well. The infusion of leaf is mild and used for infants (externally only, always), small and delicate animals or elderly people.

Comfrey roots are boiled to make a decoction: One handful dried roots (two fresh) to 1 quart of pure water in a non-metal pot. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer for 25 minutes. Then let sit, covered for an hour before straining. Squeeze all the moisture from the herb. Apply these by sponge or sprayer cold to acute injuries; warm to old chronic injuries.

Comfrey oil is made by heating the roots and leaves in safflower oil.

Comfrey ointment adds beeswax to the infused oil to form a salve.

The root of the comfrey plant stimulates the growth and healing of bone cells. It contains allantoin to soothe and stimulate skin cell growth. It used to be called "bone knit" and is a profound healer of bone fractures and injuries to the skull or blows to the eye (especially in homeopathic form). Do not use comfrey until a fracture has been set. Do not use comfrey on a wound that has debris in it. Comfrey can heal things too quickly.

Homeopathic symphytum is made from comfrey and is the first thing to dose when a severe injury occurs (along with homeo-

Olympic physician opens sports injury clinic

Morris worked with gold medalist Michael Phelps

By Tara Melton
Las Cruces Bulletin

After caring for members of the U.S. Olympic Team, Dr. Olivia Morris has opened a sports injury clinic for Las Cruces athletes.

"To be a U.S. Olympic Team physician, you have to go up to Colorado Springs to train, so that's what I did," Morris said. "I got invited up and I was up there for two and a half weeks and we learned all the rules and regulations of the Olympic committee, security measures, we learned about doping and learned how to do drug testing the athletes."

Morris, who is a board certified orthopaedic surgeon, said she learned how to prevent athletes from getting hurt while with the Olympic athletes. During her time in Colorado Springs, Morris took care of Michael Phelps, the most decorated Olympian of all time.

"He was having some tendonitis, so we did the Kinesio Taping on him," Morris said. "It's not so new now, but it was then."

Though Morris had taken care of high school and college athletes at Michigan State, Colorado Springs had a completely different patient population.

"They were so idealistic and really wanted to go for the gold and keep the country who were in Colorado Springs to try out for the games.

"Their bodies are above norm because they go overboard taking such good care of themselves," Morris said. "They're like super humans ... it was just an honor and a privilege to take care of athletes like that."

Recently moving to Las Cruces, Morris opened the Bone + Joint Saturday Sports Clinic for Las Cruces' high school athletes who are injured during Thursday or Friday night games and need assistance over the weekend.

"We're trying to get them into the office, get them diagnosed real early," Morris said. "If they need an MRI we can do it that day with the report in

Somnia to provide anesthesia services to MMC

Somnia Anesthesia Inc., a physician-owned company that provides clinical anesthesia services throughout the United States, has been selected to provide anesthesia services to Memorial Medical Center.

Following an intensive selection process by hospital officials – a team of local physicians and surgeons and the hospital's board of directors – the decision to award the contract to Somnia was announced.

their hand on Saturday so we can start treatment on them or take them into surgery if we have to on Monday or Tuesday. It's all about turn around and getting them in the office quickly so you can make a diagnosis quickly so you can initiate treatment quickly – and if you can shorten that whole process, you can get them back into the game quickly.”

Morris did a fellowship in sports medicine at Michigan State University and went around the Big 10 Conference to do sideline coverage at football and Women's basketball games as well as gymnastic and track meets.

“Basically, when you're on the sidelines, you learn how to quickly triage or identify an injury,” Morris said. “Every sport has maybe the same injuries, but also every sport may have an increase in other injuries.”

For instance, football has more collisions, so there might be an increase in fractures and ligament problems and concussions, while in gymnastics, athletes see more back problems due to tumbling and arching, she said.

The Bone + Joint Saturday Sports Clinic is open to athletes from all the local high schools.

The clinic runs from August through November this year, but if there is an increase in basketball-related injuries in the spring, the clinic might be extended next year, she said.

Until then, Morris will be waiting to hear if she'll be chosen from a national list of doctors to go to Rio de Janeiro for the 2016 Olympics.

Tara Melton can be reached at 680-1973 or copyeditor@lascrucesbulletin.com.

“Historically, the hospital has utilized a model operated solely by MDs, which can be challenging for larger surgery units with a limited number of anesthesiologists,” said Dr. Marc Koch, chief executive officer and president of Somnia Anesthesia Inc. “Assigning one doctor to one patient can really cause a bottleneck in the surgical program.”

Somnia will utilize an anesthesia care-team model, which assigns highly experienced certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNAs) to a single patient, under the care of a supervising MD at all times.

Somnia has assisted many hospitals and ambulatory health care facilities across the nation in adopting this care-team model to provide better clinical service, quality improvement and raise overall efficiency.

This increased level of service means shorter response times. This model is currently being utilized in all El Paso-area hospitals.

There will be full-time, around-the-clock, in-house coverage for obstetrics. Maternity patients won't have to wait for an anesthesia provider if labor starts in the middle of the night. The care-team model allows Somnia to provide the best level of care 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

“This exciting new patient care development is the result of careful consideration by leading surgeons in the community and the leadership of Memorial Medical Center,” said MMC CEO John Harris. “I believe it will dramatically enhance the quality of care for our patients and their surgeons.”

It's the goal of Somnia to retain existing anesthesia professionals, and every effort will be made to do so. Over time, the company hopes to bring more medical professionals to the community, improving the overall medical-care environment for everyone in the region.

pathic arnica or bellis). It is good for excessive pain, injuries to the cartilage and periosteum that covers the bones. Use it for any injury to the eyeball or head.

Homeopathic remedies are usually in small pellet form and you dose humans, horses or dogs the amount suggested on the container – it is not the amount that determines the strength of the healing, but how often it is dosed. The little pellets can be added to bland treats, mixed with water and placed in the mouth or put under the tongue.

Yarrow (achillea millefolium) is an important healer and made from the plant's flowers.

I have used it as an infusion to drench (dose horses orally) my horses when the barn where they boarded was overcome by a severe respiratory tract infection. My geldings were the only horses not on antibiotics and they recovered first. A strong tea brewed from the flowers was used many times per day and I actually bathed their bodies with the “tea” and covered them with anti-sweat coolers to break their fevers.

Yarrow steam from a pot of boiled water can be inhaled to break up mucus. Yarrow blossom infusions are used orally after giving birth to slow the bleeding.

Rosmarinus officinalis, better known as rosemary, is a Mediterranean shrub with powerful medicinal properties.

The powdered or ground rosemary “leaves” are used on oozing or weeping sores. It is packed into cleansed wounds to act as an antiseptic “scab” while healing takes place rapidly beneath it. It is especially useful for wounds on horses.

'It all starts with community'

Population supervisor urges community to unite for animals

By Barbara Alvarez
For The Las Cruces Bulletin

Due to the large numbers of animals at the Animal Services Center of Mesilla Valley, Curtis Herring, population control supervisor, is often responsible for the daily task of choosing which animals will be euthanized – that is, killed.

Herring said the path to the euthanasia room (aka the Blue Room) starts long before the animal gets to the shelter.

Herring said an animal that comes in with no identification – microchip or tags becomes shelter property at that point.

An animal with identification is given five days. This allows owners time to come in and identify the pet. If an animal hasn't been claimed after five days, it becomes shelter property.

Every dog is evaluated on intake, if it is human-aggressive, it's euthanized within three to five days. Animals that are well socialized may become candidates for adoption.

"It all starts with the community," Herring said. "We need better pet ownership responsibility. So, when your animal comes up missing, come to the shelter and pick it up."

Herring is responsible for kennel care, but he also has to kill healthy animals that have not been reclaimed or are no longer wanted by former owners.

"Every day is different. It's painful to see a healthy dog sitting on the table, wagging its tail, licking its lips. You definitely hold back your emotions then," he said.

Herring admits to leaving the Blue Room immediately after confirming that an animal is clinically dead because he doesn't want other employees to see his emotional responses.

"You build up a little tolerance, but it even still bothers me," he said. "Especially because it's not the animals' fault. I tell every one of them, 'I'm sorry.'"

"If you're a true animal lover, it's gonna absolutely tug at your heart. These people who dump their animals because they've moved or whatever, I don't think they are true animal lovers. I was always taught to take care of my animals to the end. You're either born an animal lover or you're not."

Some aspects of community mentality towards animals are, justifiably, unhappy topics with Herring.

"Many people here look toward animals as nothing. They would throw a rock at a dog in a heartbeat."

Herring said one of the worst animal abuse cases he remembers was a case in Mesilla.

"They had horses in horrible condition," he said. "One was already dead and the other ... its hooves had not been groomed in who knows how long. That horse was walking on its ankles."

Herring notes grimly that he has spoken to people relinquishing their animal to the shelter who think their pets should be put up for adoption right away. Herring's response is, "Why should your dog (or cat) go to the top of the list above the other 500 dogs we have waiting? I have to think of an animal to sacrifice when an adoptable animal comes in."

Sometimes, Herring said, pet owners can't afford to take care of the pet, so they call Animal Control.

"Animal Control brings it here and I kill it at taxpayer expense," Herring said. "If the owners would bring the animals in themselves and pay the $25 fee, the city's taxpayers wouldn't have to pay. We need people to step up to the plate."

Herring described how a euthanasia happens.

"Cats and dogs don't know what's happening," he said, "I can kill a cat in 1.5 seconds. It's horrible, isn't it? At least I know those animals won't experience any more pain."

Herring fosters dogs and cats waiting for adoptive homes, which helps him deal with the stress.

"I'm fostering a tiny little kitten right now. I was getting ready for work this morning and the kitten jumped onto my pant leg and climbed up to get to me. There's nothing more precious than that."

"Until Animal Control, the city and county unite, we won't get rid of our overpopulation problem. We all have to come together."

The purpose of the Coalition for Pets and People is to end the killing of healthy or treatable animals at the public shelter by the end of 2019 and to promote humane and responsible pet ownership.
