'Red' film exposed struggles

'Salt of the Earth' 60 years later

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Elisa Sanchez was 10 years old and helping her mother make sandwiches for striking Grant County mine workers in the early 1950s, there was talk of an Anglo man observing the picket line from a hill near the entrance to Empire Zinc Co.

Attention paid the strike wasn't new – the protracted strike was controversial in a time when unionization was equated with communism. Even Republican Gov. Edwin Mechem had gone on the KSIL radio station in July 1951 to urge the workers not to assist "the spreading doctrine of a slave state."

The strike by 174 mine workers, which began on Oct. 17, 1950, wouldn't end until Jan. 24, 1952, but the story of the struggle, that included women taking up the picket line when the miners were forced away by a Taft-Hartley Act injunction, didn't end when the company agreed to higher wages and insurance benefits.

The stranger on the hill turned out to be Paul Jarrico, a blacklisted screenwriter on vacation. He took the story to other blacklisted Hollywood filmmakers, who saw the possibilities of exploring issues of labor organization and gender roles through the eyes of Mexican-Americans, an unheard of combination of movie themes at that time.

These film professionals were struggling to find work after being blacklisted because they refused to cooperate with Congressional investigations of alleged communism in Hollywood. With Jarrico acting as producer, Michael Wilson wrote the screenplay. He would go on to write

Mayors return, new trustees in Mesilla incumbents survive

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

After numerous recounts for more than two hours after polls closed Tuesday, March 4, Mesilla Mayor Nora Barraza won re-election by only three votes.

Jésus Caro Jr., a Mesilla trustee who gave up his seat to challenge her, earned 305 votes to Barraza's 308.

Caro's pursuit of the mayor's job left only one incumbent,

Linda Flores, to run for the two positions elected at large. Flores prevailed with 315 votes, but the big winner of the night was Stephanie Johnson Burick, who took in 381 votes.

An elated Burick hugged supporters after learning of the results.

"I'm going to follow through on what I campaigned on, which was to protect our past for a more prosperous future," she said. "This

Independent audit slams HSD actions Spokesman dismisses findings

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

In the latest turn of the behavioral health debate, State Auditor Hector Balderas released an independent audit that is critical of the state Human Services Department (HSD) in its handling of Medicaid funds, the hiring of out-of-state providers and its expenses and billing practices.

The HSD audit by CliftonLarsonAllen LLP (CLA), looking at the fiscal year 2013, found poor oversight and mismanagement of federal funds by the department, Balderas said in his report.

"Among the findings, independent auditors found that HSD violated its state contracts with five Arizona behavioral health providers by approving payments for inappropriate costs that exceeded $620,000," Balderas said in his report. "HSD used both federal and state funds to pay the costs."

HSD spokesman Matt Kennicott said that only state funds were used for the transition.

Soules declares candidacy

New qualifications inspired run for PRC

Merrie Lee Soules has announced her candidacy for the Public Regulation Commission (PRC) in District 5.

Soules cited the need for integrity and high professional standards as key to her decision to seek the position.

"In 2012, the people of New Mexico overwhelmingly voted to establish high qualifications for PRC commissioners," Soules said. "I am running because I have those qualifications and am eager to restore trust and informed decision-making to our regulatory process."

For 20 years, Soules was an executive for a large division of General Motors. She served as purchasing director, global pricing director and director of product planning, overseeing initiatives throughout the world.

"I regularly evaluated capital projects valued at hundreds of millions of dollars," Soules said. "I know what goes into complex proposals and how they are structured. Rate-payers need that level of understanding and sophistication on their side."

Soules said she is a strong supporter of public financing of campaigns for positions such as the PRC, and she will be running as a publicly financed candidate.

"The PRC makes extremely important decisions involving utilities, telecommunications and transportation," Soules said. "These decisions can affect millions of dollars in potential profits or losses for regulated businesses. It's absolutely essential that commissioners are beholden to no one but the citizens of our state."

Soules said she sees climate change and a rapidly evolving energy environment as key challenges for the commission.

"In my corporate life, I learned to base decision-making on the best data available, and to project the impact of those decisions far into the future," Soules said. Fortunately, our current challenges call on strengths that New Mexico already has: abundant energy resources and strong partners in our state universities and national labs. We are well-positioned to become a leader in this new energy environment."

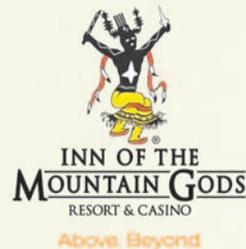

Soules was raised in Las Cruces and attended Las Cruces public schools, graduating from Las Cruces High School. She earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Cleveland State University and holds a master's degree in business administration from Harvard University.

In 2004, Soules returned to Las Cruces where she's employed by a contractor at White Sands Missile Range. She plays in the New Horizons orchestra and has chaired two separate redistricting committees for the Las Cruces Public Schools.

BY RICHARD COLTHARP

Las Cruces step forward Volunteer spirit overflows in Mesilla Valley

My travels take me past the Animal Services Center of Mesilla Valley nearly every day. There are always cars in the parking lot, and often, it's packed.

Many or most of those cars belong to volunteers, I guessed.

To check my hunch, I called Jan Wright, the volunteer coordinator at ASCMV. Wright said more than 130 people do volunteer work for the center, with more than 90 of those regularly active.

"They're primarily students from New Mexico State University, and we also have quite a few seniors, and quite a few families with younger children," Wright said.

The volunteers do a wide variety of work at the center, such as walking dogs and taking care of kennels. A group of seamstresses put in 20 to 30 hours a week, Wright said, sewing high-quality dog and cat beds. Volunteers help coordinate Reading with K9s, a program at Hillrise Elementary that allows dogs to interact with schoolchildren.

You'll find volunteers doing important work all over this city.

There's an amazing group of volunteers at Mesilla Valley Hospice.

The Community of Hope likely could not function without volunteers.

Habitat for Humanity could not build homes without volunteers.

For just about every task in our community, there are willing volunteers at the ready.

The thing is, the work becomes just as important to the volunteers as to the organizations. A good example is Big Brothers Big Sisters of Southern New Mexico. Serving as a big brother or big sister is vitally important to the lives of the little brother or little sister. It's just as enriching to the lives of the bigs.

Saving lives in a literal sense are the 40 members of the all-volunteer Mesilla Valley Search and Rescue crew.

If you ever get the blues, one sure-fire cure is to do something to help someone else. It gets your mind off your worries and makes a positive difference in another life.

A great way to help is to volunteer.

If you've ever considered volunteering, you should check out the Volunteer Fair from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St.

Nearly 40 nonprofit groups will be there, explaining what you can do to help them and, in turn, help our community.

This is the perfect opportunity to see what needs are out there, and how your particular skills and passions can serve those needs.

I've been amazed at what this small city can do. Each year, we raise more than a half-million dollars for breast cancer research, nearly $300,000 for our high schools' activity programs and more than $200,000 for the March of Dimes. There are hundreds of other groups that raise money important to their causes, and hundreds of different causes.

Raising funds, volunteering – what makes Las Cruces so generous in these regards?

One reason may be the size of our hearts.

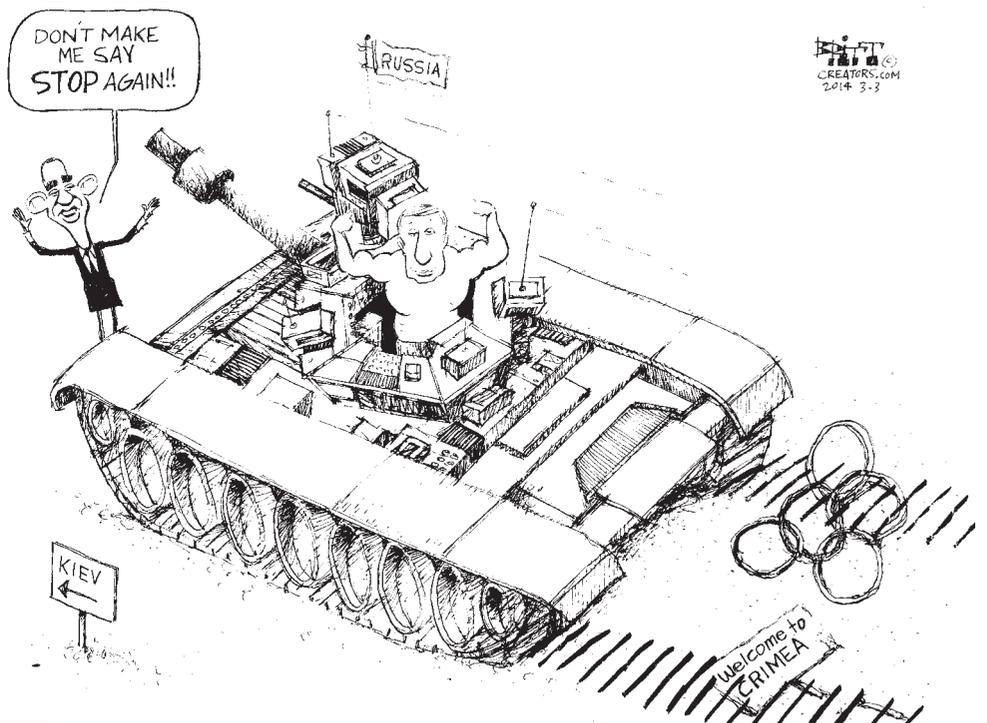

Another reason may be that Las Cruces is a two-newspaper city.

According to a recent Current Population Survey study, civic engagement in Denver and Seattle dropped significantly from 2008 to 2009, when newspapers in those two cities closed. In Denver, the Rocky Mountain News shut down, leaving the Denver Post as the primary newspaper. In Seattle, the Post-Intelligencer ended its print edition and now has a web-only edition with a greatly reduced staff.

Portland State University professor Lee Shaker said the newspapers' demise was a key factor in those cities' drops in civic engagement.

It's rare for a community the size of Las Cruces to have two newspapers, but it probably translates to our citizens being more informed and aware of issues and needs in our region.

Whatever the reason, our hearts or the news, Las Cruces keeps on giving and getting rid of the blues.

Letters to the editor

Spaceport optimism

Let me say, very unapologetically, I am positive about Las Cruces.

We are blessed with spectacular natural beauty, unique history, great people, a potent mix of cultures, growing opportunities and a bright future that is almost unlimited.

However, doubt can trip us up; so, let me present something that recently helped land Las Cruces in 10th place on a list of "Best Cities of the Future" and merits our continued and enthusiastic support.

Spaceport America – some claim that it is only for the rich. A century ago, there were surely those who opposed paving a road between El Paso and Las Cruces because "only the rich" had automobiles, and shortly after that, there must have been those who opposed building airports because "only the rich" could fly.

Now, it would seem that not just the rich are able to travel our highways and skies, and I have to believe space travel, research and exploration are activities that will become more accessible to all of us precisely because of facilities like Spaceport America.

Thus, for the opportunities, for the diversification of our local economy and for the future, let us support finishing our commitment to Spaceport America. Let us get the road from Las Cruces built, and let us take pride in being people who finish what we start!

Social Security worries

It's time for Congress to act so that Social Security benefits can finally start to keep pace with the cost of living.

The average monthly benefit for retirees is $1,269, or about the same as a worker earning minimum wage. With pensions disappearing and cost of living adjustments not keeping pace with our expenses, now is the time to boost Social Security benefits. As a volunteer with the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, I believe bills in Congress to phase in a $70 per month increase will be a big help to seniors and our economy as a whole. Eliminating the $117,000 FICA tax cap on earnings will pay for the increase and will bring us closer to tax fairness at the same time. As things stand now, someone earning $50,000 per year pays more as a percentage of income in taxes than someone earning $200,000. That's terribly unfair. It's time to boost Social Security now!

Carrot vs. stick

Schools need to entice kids

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

There is a lot of talk about getting students to attend school out of a sense of duty. There is a slim chance that some students will thank us in their prayers for teaching them discipline. Don't hold your breath.

I was an English teacher at Albuquerque High School a long time ago. I understand both sides of the carrot or stick issue and it is my opinion that carrots work better.

Even though there is mandatory attendance, there is not mandatory buy-in. Schools may have their body, but not their mind. My father said, "The military cannot make someone do something, but it can make that person sorry they did not." That is the philosophy of the stick. And it works some of the time.

However, it does not work with those students who, when told that if they do not graduate they will end up living under a bridge. For those students, that stick is just a waste of time.

We want the students to enthusiastically embrace education, apply themselves to it and graduate.

These students who do not come to school can learn all of the words to a hundred songs with ease. They learn elaborate skateboard tricks. Many are multi-talented in art and music. Why? Because the reward they want is within their control.

The secret to getting what we want them to do is to use a carrot they want. What do they want that we can ethically provide? Cars rate high on the student cool meter. What if, at graduation, a new car is given away? The keys are given right then to a graduate.

Additionally, to focus their attention, each student could earn extra chances for the graduation car. They have to graduate to get a chance at the car and there is a component for academic performance, such as one entry for each C, two for each B and five for each A. Likewise, attendance could garner extra chances. There is no guarantee someone with a 4.0 and perfect attendance will win, but it increases the odds.

The cost of a car, and maybe some other cool things, is so minuscule compared to the cost of one third of our future walking away from a free education. Schools continually get more money for intervention programs.

At the end of the ninth, 10th and 11th grades there might be a drawing for cool things just to keep the interest up. These are practical carrots rather than platitudes about 20 years from now.

To kids who are 14, four years is a dark enough hole to peer through. Twenty years is beyond comprehension. Do not pull out the one kid who gets the 20-year speech.

The preservation of democracy

Sunshine Week highlights government transparency

By Kathi Bearden
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

March 16-22 is Sunshine Week in New Mexico and nationwide.

Sunshine Week focuses on the importance of open government. No open government, no democracy. No transparency, no government accountability.

I care about Sunshine Week both as a citizen and as a former newspaper employee/publisher for 22 years. We relied heavily upon the State of New Mexico's strong public records and open meeting acts to help keep public officials accountable and public bodies honest.

We have many good examples of open government in our state. If the leader of a local government, school board, state department or other entity is committed to open, professional government, the citizens of that government are well served.

In my career, we used the acts to shine a light on government business, such as inequities in salaries of public employees or incorrect and illegal payment of expenses to government employees. When citizens can't obtain such information, rumors proliferate, trust in our public servants dies and our officials lose the ability to lead.

Our newsroom once requested records about a police shooting that had set the community on edge. Rumors were rampant and police were placed in the position of being the recipients of wild speculation and accusations. The police report was clearly a public document under our state's Inspection of Public Records Act. A law enforcement official refused to turn over the records to our newspaper. Fortunately the district attorney's office faxed the requested records. We then published the story and the community could form opinions based on facts. Rumors were laid to rest.

This district attorney is one of many public servants I have encountered over the years who want to follow the law, do the right thing and conduct open government. They are shining examples of good government leaders and employees.

On the other hand, I am puzzled and sometimes shocked when public bodies or officials choose not to comply with open records and meetings laws. Such decisions may stem from a lack of education or training about our transparency statutes. Noncompliance may arise out of a misguided belief that secrecy is the better path. It never is.

Officials may not realize they have become the lawbreakers when they refuse public information that is legally obtainable. Our country's history has proven on more than one occasion that secrecy always makes problems worse and erodes public confidence in government. Secrecy is the hallmark of a totalitarian society, not a democracy. Secrecy serves only special interests and not the citizens.

Sunshine laws aren't a special benefit for the press. Sure, it's often up to media to be our witnesses in public meetings, to request and inspect records then report news that often protects the public. But all citizens have a right to know. The New Mexico Foundation for Open Government strengthens that right by educating, advocating and litigating on everyone's behalf for transparency. NMFOG can turn the voice of one person into a mandate for government to conduct business with its doors wide open.

The New Mexico Foundation for Open Government hotline at 888-843-9121 answers questions from citizens, government employees and even elected officials. We all benefit from an open government collaboration that serves the citizens of New Mexico.

So go ahead and celebrate this week. Celebrate your right to know and help bring 365 days of Sunshine to New Mexico.

Kathi Bearden is president of the New Mexico Foundation for Open Government, a watchdog organization advocating for adherence to open records and meetings laws.

BLM seeks public input on EPE rights-of-way

Transmission line carries Ariz. power

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) and the U.S. Forest Service are seeking comments on a proposed environmental assessment (EA) for El Paso Electric's Arizona Interconnection Project 345 kilovolt-transmission line.

El Paso Electric currently has authorization with the BLM and the Forest Service for the existing 345 kV transmission line and has applied to amend their rights-of-way to include permanent access.

Permanent access is needed for necessary transmission line maintenance activities on public lands administered by the BLM and the Forest Service in New Mexico for Catron, Sierra, Socorro and Luna counties.

BLM is the lead agency and is preparing the EA with direct coordination with the Forest Service. The EA will assess the potential environmental impacts resulting from El Paso Electric's proposed action.

El Paso Electric proposes to use existing roads, where applicable, and to construct new roads that would be necessary to maintain their infrastructure along the project's 345 kV transmission line.

As part of routine line maintenance, El Paso Electric seeks the right to clear a permanent 75-foot by 75-foot work area at each structure, and a temporary pad up to 100 feet wide by 100 feet long on one side of a structure when a structure requires replacement.

The proposed project includes the upgrading of an existing static wire with fiber optic cable along a 20-mile segment between the Luna Substation and the Macho Springs Wind Farm.

The transmission line extends from a tie-in point just east of the Luna Substation near Deming to the Red Hill tie-in point in western New Mexico, east of the Arizona-New Mexico border and near Springerville, Ariz.

The transmission line crosses lands administered by the BLM, Forest Service, State of New Mexico and private lands. This EA will form the basis for the BLM and the Forest Service decisions to issue the right-of-way grant amendments requested by El Paso Electric.

Public comment will be accepted until April 15. Comments can be emailed to blm_nm_sfo_epeaip_comments@blm.gov, faxed to 835-0223, or mailed to the BLM Socorro Field Office, 901 S. Highway 85, Socorro, NM 87801. For more information about this document, contact Project Lead Virginia Alguire at 838-1290.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

The price of ivory

On the north side of Denver abides the city of Commerce City. There, last fall, U. S. officials dumped millions of dollars worth of ivory tusks, carvings, and jewelry into a steel rock crusher and pulverized it into dust and tiny chips.

The officials' objective was to reduce the slaughter of tens of thousands of elephants each year.

ECONOMICS 1: What happens to a commodity's demand and price when you reduce its availability? DUH ... The price goes up!

For instance, cattle prices are at an all time high because ... the U.S. cow herd is down to its lowest since 1952. Average horse prices have plunged due to the elimination of horse slaughter, which flooded the country with unwanted horses.

Ivory's value is primarily intrinsic, meaning it serves no essential purpose, though it does work as a forklift and weapon when still on the elephant. It's unlike other precious stones and metals such as diamonds, silver, gold and uranium, which can be used in all sort of engineering processes, high tech manufacturing and dentistry, in addition to jewelry. The value of these minerals is also increased because there is a finite amount on our planet.

So how can we help the ivory problem? Flood the market, that's how.

Elephants continue to reproduce, thus manufacturing ivory. How 'bout increasing the number of elephants? A great example of this solution is the salmon industry.

Twenty years ago wild salmon from Alaskan fisheries was priced out of the range of the average family. Then the world started "farming salmon" commercially. Now it is readily available.

Would elephant farming be practical? If people want ivory, why not make it available? Maybe grow your own elephant in your backyard. Let capitalism work.

Look at the economics of the illegal drug business. As long as selling marijuana is illegal, the price will be high. Make it available to everyone, as it appears to be doing, and the price will get lower as the numbers of users get higher.

Another solution would be to encourage the farming of alternative sources for ivory; narwhals, hippos, walrus, etc. Workable, you say? Stick up a wanted poster in Mt. Pleasant, Texas for tusks from feral pigs and wild boars and turn the red necks loose. In 20 years people will be farming hogs for ivory. Make pigs a three-purpose animal; meat, hunting and jewelry.

I can see it now, our own Cable Network show. We'll call it... The Pig Dynasty.

Fun Shoot nets $3,000 for 4-H youth

18 teams take part in Butterfield Shooting Range event

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

Doña Ana County 4-H youths gained financial support during the first Fun Shoot on Feb. 8 at the Butterfield Shooting Range, County Extension agents reported. The event drew 90 shotgun contestants on 18 teams and brought in $3,000 for the 4-H youths. The shooters fired at air-borne clay birds, county agent

The winning adult teams by divisions were: Division 1, Metal Building Supplies, first; 2, Salopek and Sons Farms, second; and The Team To Beat, third.

The adult high-point winners by divisions were: Bruce Havenor, 1; Terry Fossberg; and Kipp Garrison, 3.

Division winners in the youth category were: B and G Alignment, 1, and Young Guns, 2.

classics such as “Lawrence of Arabia” and “The Bridge on the River Kwai” under a pseudonym in the late 1950s before being able to write, under his real name, in the late 1960s scripts of “The Sandpiper” and “Planet of the Apes.”

Directing the film was Herbert Biberman, and one of the few professional actors agreeing to work for them was Will Greer, who would become the beloved grandfather on the 1970s television show “The Waltons.”

But when the small production crew arrived in Silver City in early 1953, they were far from beloved, as even during production in the relatively isolated southwestern New Mexico, national leaders and media decried the project. With a meager budget of $250,000, the filmmakers hired local people – nearly all had never acted before and many were from the ranks of the union – and an elderly rancher-miner rented his land for the mine scenes for only $1.

In the March 2, 1953, edition of Newsweek magazine, an article called “Reds in the Desert” reported that “Silver City’s 8,000 citizens were up in arms” because of the film being made there. A California Congressman on the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) denounced the film, its sponsors – a local union helped finance the production – and its creators. Donald Jackson said the film was “deliberately designed to enflame racial hatreds and to depict the United States of America as the enemy of all colored peoples” and characterized the production as “a new weapon for Russia.”

Despite many roadblocks from both anti-communist politicians and the movie industry not wanting to see the blacklisted filmmakers succeed, “Salt of the Earth” was completed and shown at a single New York City movie theater on March 14, 1954. While the same year Elia Kazan’s “On the Waterfront” would be praised and awarded for its more realistic acting, the attention to “Salt of Earth” wouldn’t come until years later, when film scholars would cite its gritty realism and mature themes. The only blacklisted movie in U.S. history, “Salt of the Earth” is now one of 100 films preserved for prosperity by the Library of Congress.

This month, a series of events in Silver City and Las Cruces will mark the 60th anniversary of “Salt of the Earth.” Panel discussions about the film will be held Monday through Friday, March 10-14, at New Mexico State University, followed by a day of events Saturday, March 15, in Silver City.

The NMSU events start with the “Find Comfort in Our Skin” panel discussion at 4 p.m. in Room 11 of O’Donnell Hall. Denise Rodriguez-Strawn will lead the panel of Elisa Sanchez, Jonah Garcia, former state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia, Olga Pedroza and Christina Chavez Kelley.

Philip Lewis and director Rod McCall will talk about activism in film at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 12, in Room 171 of Milton Hall. Sanchez will lead a discussion on women in leadership at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, March 13, in Room 300 of O’Donnell Hall. “Salt of the Earth” will be shown at 4:30 p.m. Friday, March 14, in the O’Donnell Hall atrium.

In Silver City, the schedule of events throughout Saturday, March 15, start at 10 a.m. with buses boarded at the Grant County Business and Conference Center, where participants will be taken to the United Steel Workers 9424 (the former Local 890) union hall in Bayard to start a docent-led bus tour of historic sites, followed by a panel discussion called “From Women’s Auxiliary to Women of Steel” and a showing of “Salt of the Earth” at the Western New Mexico University Fine Arts Center.

Both the Las Cruces and Silver City events are free, but the Silver City events require tickets. For more information about Silver City events, contact 505-455-2853 or info@afsame18.org.

Growing up in the storm

For the NMSU events, Elisa Sanchez is commemorating her mother, Angelina Sanchez, who had been in the union’s women’s auxiliary. Her father, Jose Sanchez, worked at the smelter in Hurley and wasn’t directly involved in the strike.

With her mother active in the women’s auxiliary, Elisa Sanchez remembers making the bologna sandwiches for the strikers and, later, her mother walking the picket line after the men were forced to go back to work. This is a role her mother would also reprise in the movie as one of its actresses, playing a miner’s wife named Consuelo Ruiz, who suggests the women continue the picket line.

According to “The Suppression of the Salt of the Earth” by James Lorence, the Empire

The United Steel Worker’s union hall in Bayard, N.M., features this mural based on scenes from “Salt of the Earth.” The union hall was originally for the mine worker Local 890 that was the heart of support for the strike that lasted more than a year in the early 1950s.

Zinc mine was a low-cost producer that wouldn’t match union compensation deals made with the larger Kennecott Corp., even though Empire’s parent company was the largest U.S. zinc producer. It was also a moneymaker, earning a $5 million profit in 1949, Lorence writes.

Mining management tried to thwart union activities by dividing Anglo and Mexican-American workers, even through segregated communities, according to the book. Elisa Sanchez recalls Hurley being a divided community, with Mexican Americans having to live on the other side of the tracks away from the Anglo-owned stores.

What made the Empire Zinc strikers so resolute was that many of them were returning veterans from World War II, Elisa Sanchez said. The inferior status given to the Mexican-American workers was an insult to the veterans, many of whom performed bravely in war, she said.

“They weren’t striking as much for themselves, as for their children,” she said. “They wanted life to be better for their children, so they were willing to take that danger.”

Some of the images from the strike remain vivid in Elisa Sanchez’s memory, such as cars using their dashboard floodlight to light up the mine entrance road at night to keep scabs from sneaking in under the cover of darkness.

Elisa Sanchez recalls the times – during the strike and during the making of the film – as tense and full of conflict, with physical conflicts and even one miner’s home being burned to the ground.

“The strike went on forever,” she said.

Lorence writes that the Empire Zinc strike was nationally significant even before the film was made.

“By closing ranks across ethnic lines, the men and women of Local 890 anticipated the fervor of the civil right movement, which was soon to transform race relations in the American South,” Lorence writes.

Along with her mother being in the film, “Salt of the Earth” is a special film to Elisa Sanchez, for “depicting the struggle for equality of marginalized people in the unionization struggle – a struggle that they survived.”

Elisa Sanchez has spent much of her life championing civil rights, from neighborhood organizing in black communities in Louisiana to heading a national Hispanic woman’s organization. Her activism goes back to the time of the strike, she said.

“Everything I’ve done comes directly out of that experience,” she said.

That inspiration to speak up took hold early with her. When one of her teachers complained about the “communists” in town making the movie, she stood up and said, “My mother is not a communist – she’s fighting for our rights.”

means so much to me, because I am so committed to this town and its people.”

One of the first to congratulate Burick was Trustee Sam Bernal.

“Welcome to the board,” he told her.

Of the four candidates running, the one who came closest to making the board was Russell Hernandez with 220 votes, followed by Chris Alexander with 178 votes and Charles Bourger Jr. trailing at the end with 80 votes.

In other municipal elections Tuesday, Hatch Mayor Andy Nuñez was elected to return with 90 votes. The former state representative had been appointed as mayor after former Mayor Judd Nordyke died last year. Nuñez had one challenger, Lloyd Burns, who gathered 58 votes.

Winning two at-large trustee seats from a four-candidate field were incumbent Trustee Kathie Marie Franzoy and Corey Watkins, with Watkins receiving the most votes – 105. Incumbent Trustee Roberto Torres earned the fewest votes with 43.

On the Sunland Park City Council, winners were Christian Lira for District 1, unopposed Francisco Jayme for District 2 and Daniel Los Santos for District 3. Incumbent Municipal Judge Lizette Salinas won re-election easily over three challengers

There were only two candidates on the ballot for two at-large trustee seats in the city of Anthony, N.M., but incumbent trustees Betty Gonzalez still received 22 votes and Diana Murillo 21 votes.

Audit

Another audit finding asserts HSD approved nearly $7,000 in payments of federal Medicaid funds to Public Consulting Group Inc. (PCG) for improper costs, including double-billed expenses, duplicate per diem reimbursements and alcohol purchases.

Kennicott said only per diem were covered and did not include alcohol reimbursements.

Balderas said auditors found HSD “circumvented established requirements for investigating and referring credible allegations of fraud related to 15 behavioral health providers whose Medicaid payments the Department suspended in June 2013.”

Kennicott said in a written response the department’s Program Integrity Unit (PIU), which is composed of a total of less than half a dozen employees and one certified coder, couldn’t handle the large scope of the Medicaid fraud audit, so PCG was hired.

Balderas said the independent auditors found more than $60 million in federal funds that HSD failed to collect in order to reimburse the State of New Mexico for Medicaid expenses. As a result, Balderas said, the fund is currently short $72 million.

Kennicott said the $60 million goes back to Gov. Bill Richardson’s administration, and is part of the mess HSD is now trying to clean up after Gov. Susana Martinez’s administration identified the problem.

Balderas said his office has referred the audit’s findings to the New Mexico Attorney General, the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, and the Office of Audit Services (OAS) within the Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Many of the 15 nonprofits cited by HSD via the PCG audit have gone out of business after Medicaid funding was withheld, including Southwest Counseling Center in Las Cruces.

One local agency still standing but no longer providing Medicaid-reimbursed services is Families & Youth Inc. (FYI) in Las Cruces.

FYI President Jose Frieze said the CLA audit was more professional than the PCG audit, and contains citations that are serious in terms of audits with two “material weaknesses” and several “significant deficiencies.”

“These are words you don’t want to hear in an audit,” Frieze said. “FYI has never had any deficiency findings in any of its audits.”

Frieze said he hopes the CLA audit will help the AG’s office move more quickly on clearing his and other agencies of the fraud accusations by HSD. No agency from Doña Ana County has been cleared yet, he said.

“What was done to us was done in a rush to judgment and in haste,” Frieze said.

The CLA audit reviewed the original $36 million in payments to the 15 providers cited in the PCG audit. The CLA audit cites HSD as having the responsibility for oversight of the payments and states that a lack of internal controls in the department resulted in the questionable $36 million in payments. HSD disagrees with this finding, the audit states.

Engineering Without Boundaries hosts fundraiser

Group plans service projects, travel to Mexico

New Mexico State University's Engineering Without Boundaries group is holding a banquet to raise funds for their summer 2014 service trip to Queretaro, Mexico. The public is invited to attend.

Engineering Without Boundaries, formerly known as Engineers Without Borders, conducts local and international service projects each year. The group's annual banquet fundraiser will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Picacho Hills Country Club. Tickets are $35 and may be purchased by calling 646-5499 or via email at ewb@nmsu.edu.

NMSU EWB President Matt Meyers will provide a presentation about EWB's work, followed by the keynote presentation by futurist and NMSU College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences Dean Lowell Catlett.

Engineering Without Borders started last spring to help the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope's homeless camp, Camp Hope, develop a site plan to assist with their rezoning efforts with the City of Las Cruces. The group also spent a portion of their 2013 summer break in Nicaragua rebuilding a dangerous footbridge.

Camp Hope's site plan was approved by the City of Las Cruces in January, and the students have been working since then to lay out and build tent pads at the site, located off Amador Avenue. They also dug a drainage pond and built a berm around the camp.

"The students get jazzed about doing things to help others," said NMSU EWB adviser Kenny Stevens. "We're not short on people; in fact, we've had to turn volunteers away because 25 people showed up at Camp Hope, but we only had shovels for 10 people."

EWB will travel to Queretaro, Mexico, this summer to improve a water system for an isolated community of about 200 people. The community's and surrounding agricultural lands' water needs are served with a single half-inch poly pipe to bring water down from mountain springs.

"The plan is to make a tank in town with 12 public stand pipes," Stevens said. "When those aren't in use, water will feed the irrigation for the crops below."

Stevens said the materials for the water project cost between $8,000 to $10,000, and the group has spent about $2,000 on supplies for Camp Hope. The cost for 20 students to travel to Queretaro is about $14,000.

"Aggies Go Global has been very supportive of this trip," Stevens said. "But, we still need to

The evening will begin with a happy hour and music, followed by dinner and the presentations.

The public is invited to attend the event.

No charges in bomb scare

An employee at Mesquite Elementary School will not be charged following an incident Monday, March 3, that forced a total evacuation of the south valley school.

Members of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's bomb squad were called out to the 200 block of state Highway 228 shortly after 11 a.m. after receiving a call that a suspicious device was at the school.

The so-called device, which was fashioned to look like an explosive, was removed by the Bomb Squad and has been placed into evidence at the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office.

According to Doña Ana County Sheriff's investigators, the employee, who is also a member of the school's emergency planning team, was hoping to use the lookalike device as an educational tool, but did not effectively communicate his plans to the rest of the administration.

Investigators concluded there was no malicious intent in the incident and no charges will be filed against the employee.

Hatch dismissed two top officials

The Village of Hatch has fired Clerk Administrator Jim Schoonover and Motor Vehicle Department Manager Davene Flores after a special meeting Thursday, Feb. 27.

Schoonover had been on paid leave since Jan. 24 after allegations of harassment and fraud were made against him. The charges are being investigated by State Police.

Hatch officials manage the Motor Vehicle Department office through a contract with the state.

Deputy village clerk Elizabeth Porras is currently overseeing the day-to-day operations of municipal government in Hatch.

Schoonover is a former Doña Ana County treasurer.

Fire restrictions put on state trust lands

New Mexico State Land Commissioner Ray Powell made announced Friday, Feb. 28, that fireworks, open fires and smoking are prohibited on state trust lands until further notice.

"Severe drought conditions coupled with high winds and dense fuel loads can combine to produce catastrophic fires like we saw a couple of years ago in New Mexico," Powell said. "The past three years have been some of the driest and warmest on record. It is important to do what we can to prevent unplanned, human-caused fires on our state trust lands."

Efforts on state trust lands are ongoing to reduce forest fuels and risk of high severity fires, while improving ecosystem function and health. Over the past two years, more than 4,500 acres of state trust land were treated with forest thinning programs and prescribed fire to reduce hazardous fuels.

The State Land Office received $250,000 from the 2014 State Legislature and $500,000 from the 2013 State Legislature to address hazardous fuel loads through forest thinning and fire prevention on state trust lands during the fiscal year.

Powell appealed to agricultural lessees to maintain a clear area around improvements, such as buildings and structures, from debris and excessive dry and flammable materials and to avoid open flames during windy conditions. He also appealed to lessees to use extreme caution when driving motorized vehicles in areas with dry vegetation.

Prescribed burns are planned for the upcoming year to reduce fuels and reduce potential for high severity fires.

Because of the worsening drought, the collaboration between the State Land Office, State Forestry, the Bureau of Land Management, the U.S. Forest Service and the New Mexico Association of Counties will continue to address measures to reduce wildfire risk statewide.

The restrictions announced by Powell apply to state trust lands, but not to state parks or other state lands.

For more information, contact Dan Ware, State Fire Prevention and Outreach Program Manager, New Mexico State Forestry at 505-476-3336 or 505-690-8210.

Texting and driving to be banned statewide

New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez has signed a bill to ban texting while driving.

The law will prohibit drivers from sending or reading text messages and emails, or making Internet searches from smart phones or other hand-held wireless devices. There would be a $25 fine for a first violation and $50 for subsequent violations.

The law will make exceptions for situations such as summoning medical or other emergency aid.

Forty-one other states ban texting by all drivers.

New Mexico already prohibits texting for teenage drivers with a learner's or provisional license

The ban will take effect July 1.

Martinez signs bill to prevent sexual abuse

Gov. Susana Martinez has signed Erin's Law, legislation aimed to prevent sexual abuse by educating students about how to identify and report sexual abuse. The legislation provides for age-appropriate sexual abuse and assault awareness training in New Mexico's schools.

"Every child in our state is entitled to growing up in a safe environment. By signing Erin's Law, we take one step forward in protecting New Mexico's children," Martinez said. "Our educators deserve the training to help our students, and our children deserve to be empowered to stop sexual abuse."

New Mexico becomes the 10th state to sign the bill named after Erin Merryn, an advocate for the law who was sexually abused while growing up.

Merryn could not attend the bill signing Tuesday, March 4, because she was testifying to legislators in Tennessee on the law, but she wrote a letter that thanked Martinez and lawmakers.

"Thank you for giving children a voice and protecting their innocence," she wrote. "This law will save the lives of countless children."

"Erin has made it her mission to provide education in all 50 states in how to prevent sexual abuse and empower our students to not stay silent," Martinez said.

The new law will do the following:

- School employees will receive additional training on how to detect and report child abuse, including sexual abuse and assault
- Require schools to include age-appropriate sexual abuse and assault awareness
- From kindergarten through fourth grade, students will learn about identifying safe and unsafe situations and reporting them
- From fifth grade and beyond, students will also learn how to identify risk behaviors in situations that can harm them

Living history at the Lake Lucero Tour

Pat Garrett, portrayed by Scott Green, talks about Col. Albert Fountain's murder near what is now White Sands National Monument for the Lake Lucero Tour Saturday, March 1. Green was among a troupe of living history performers from the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum that gave a historical journey through the area for the 37 participants of the tour, which visited the source of the white gypsum sand dunes.

Hikers and performers make their way back after winds began to kick up following the performances.

Mark Hammersmith played a technician checking for radiation following the Trinity A Bomb test July 16, 1945, north of the dune field.

Henry Ludwig played the foreman of the Lucero Ranch.

Judy Howard is given an example of a medicine made of local plants by Becky Burghart, portraying a curandera with the Salineros, early Spanish settlers who mined the lake for salt. Later, the sand would be used to make plaster bricks.

Neil Fuller played Tom Charles, an Alamogordo newspaper editor who advocated for the creation of a national monument out of the white sand dunes, status President Herbert Hoover gave them in 1933.

Mayfield students stand up to bullying

Trojans say 'mean stinks'

Mayfield High School Student Government is asking students to participate in a campaign to raise awareness and to stop bullying in their high school. Using the national Mean Stinks bullying campaign, students became aware of what bullying is, what it looks like and how to promote positive ways to end bullying at Mayfield.

Jordan Ehly, Mayfield High School student government member, creates a poster to support the anti-bullying campaign.

Thirty percent of teenagers in America have been involved in bullying, either as a victim or as the bully. National organizations such as Mean Stinks identify bullying as any teenagers engaged in physical bullying, verbal bullying, emotional bullying, and/or cyber bullying.

To prevent harmful effects of emotional and verbal bullying against teenagers, Secret deodorant has created an anti-bullying campaign called Mean Stinks.

Mayfield student government teamed up with this campaign by creating an anti-bullying week Feb. 10-14. Each day of the week was a designated spirit day for students to show their support for the campaign.

Monday was "The golden rule day"

- wear gold. Tuesday was "Team up against bullies day" - Wear your favorite sports team jersey. Wednesday was "Be someone's hero day" - dress up like a super hero to end bullying. Thursday was "Twin up against bullying day" - dress as a twin with someone to help stop bullying. Friday was "Pinky promise against bullying" - paint your pinky nail blue to make a promise to stop bullying or report it when you see it.

On Friday, MHS student government members were painting pinky nails blue in the morning and at lunch. Along with painted pinky nails, Mayfield students signed a commitment poster as a promise to stand against bullying at Mayfield.

Mayfield High School is a bully-free zone, and that was apparent when the student government members filled the hallways with anti-bullying posters. Mayfield High School was proud to "Gang Up For Good" with the nationwide Mean Stinks campaign.

For more information, call Mayfield High School at 527-9415 or visit <http://meanstinks.com>.

Mayfield ENLACE students visit Santa Fe

Gonzalez, Huerta participate in legislative process as interns

Mayfield High School ENgaging Latino Communities in Education (ENLACE) students visited Santa Fe during the legislative session earlier this year.

Two students, Daniela Gonzalez and Kathlyn Huerta, served as legislative interns Jan. 20-23, shadowing state senators and representatives, said Mayfield teacher and ENLACE sponsor David Morales.

Six students from Mayfield and six from La Academie Dolores Huerta also traveled to the state capitol Jan. 22-23 for ENLACE Day in Santa Fe. The students from Mayfield were Peter Gomez, Joshua Morales, Yesenia Macias, Karen Calderon, DeVon Butler and Kelsei Brown.

"We spent the first evening at the 20th annual Tribute to Hispano Legislators dinner at the La Fonda Hotel, where, as part of the ENLACE statewide collaborative, the students were honored and introduced en masse," Morales said. "There were many representatives and senators present.

"We spent the following day at the Roundhouse, where we took a tour of the state capitol. We were able to speak to Rep. Bill McCamley, D-Doña Ana, on the floor of the House of Representatives and took a picture under the Great Seal of New Mexico. On the Senate side, we met with Sen. Bill Soules, D-Doña Ana."

"I was given an amazing opportunity to go to Santa Fe and be an ENLACE legislative intern, representing the southern region," Gonzalez said of her experience. "The experience was phenomenal. During my time there, I was given the chance to shadow representatives and senators. I shadowed Reps. Rick Miera, Alonzo Baldonado and Bill McCamley.

"Also, I got a tour of the Capitol with the other nine interns from around New Mexico. I got to meet University of New Mexico basketball coach Craig Neal, who talked about how they've made a foundation to promote physical activity, nutrition and awareness of the fight against cancer called Coaches vs. Cancer: Suits and Sneakers Challenge. I'm honored that I was given this opportunity. I got to meet many amazing people."

ENLACE began seven years ago through a national grant funded by the Kellogg Foundation with the goal of decreasing the rate of Hispanic high school dropouts and motivating and preparing students to enter higher education.

Mayfield ENLACE students gather outside the Roundhouse during their visit to the 2014 30-day legislative session.

Reward grows in hotel robbery, shooting

CrimeStoppers

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of $1,000 and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives has added $5,000 for information that leads to the arrest and conviction of two men suspected in the Feb. 1 armed robbery and shooting of a hotel clerk.

At around 1:30 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 1, two men entered the Econo Lodge hotel at 2585 S. Valley Drive and confronted the 24-year-old clerk. One of the men jumped over the front desk counter and threatened the clerk while the second man pointed a handgun at the clerk.

The two men then took the clerk to a back office and shot him once in the leg. The two suspects took an undisclosed amount of cash from the hotel and fled, last seen running toward the west side of the nearby Motel 6 on La Posada Lane.

The Econo Lodge clerk was airlifted to University Medical Center of El Paso with a gunshot wound to his leg.

Both suspects are believed to be Hispanic and appear to be in their 20s.

The armed suspect is believed to be about 5 feet 9 inches tall with a heavy build. He was wearing a white shirt, a dark gray zipper-front hooded jacket and blue jeans. He was armed with a small caliber semi-automatic handgun.

The second suspect was also said to be about 5 feet 9 inches tall but with an average build. He was wearing a light gray zipper-front hooded jacket, dark-colored pants and a mask that partially concealed his face.

Anyone with information that can help identify one or both of the suspects is asked to contact Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

That's the Way of the World

It's March 2011. Jay Leno is firmly back at the helm of the Tonight Show following the Conan O'Brien experiment. The Arab Spring rumbles with political unrest in the Middle East and northern Africa. Apple unveils the iPad2. "The King's Speech" wins the Best Picture Oscar. On a sad note, here at the Las Cruces Bulletin, Sports Editor John Keith passes away.

On a more upbeat note, Las Cruces brings three championships home from the state playoffs in Albuquerque.

That March, Mesilla Valley Christian School won the boys 2A state title, their second in a row. Oñate High School, led by two guards who would play at the next level - Terrel de Rouen and Tim Jacobs - won the boys 5A state title.

On the girls side, Mayfield High School captured its third 5A state title, powered by 30 points from Elena Holguin, who is now an Aggie.

This year, four Las Cruces girls teams made it to the first round of the state basketball playoffs.

Centennial High School is the No. 10 seed in 4A. In 5A, Las Cruces High School is the No. 11 seed, Oñate is the No. 16 seed and Mayfield is seeded No. 3.

When they won it all in 2011, the Trojans were also seeded No. 3.

On paper, head coach George Maya's Trojans have the best chance of the local teams to bring home the blue trophy. However, waiting on the same side of the bracket is Clovis High School, a buzzsaw from the eastern part of the state.

Clovis is undefeated at 27-0, ranked No. 1 in the state and ranked No. 5 nationally, according to www.maxpreps.com. The Oñate girls will get a close look at Clovis in round one. If the Trojans win Friday, March 7, at home against Sandia, they'll play again Tuesday, March 11, in Rio Rancho (they could face Las Cruces High if the Bulldawgs win their opener at Eldorado). The winner of that March 11 game would likely face Clovis Thursday, March 13.

The road to a championship

Four local boys teams begin the journey

By Jeff Matthews
For The Las Cruces Bulletin

For local basketball enthusiasts, Las Cruces High School's 2013 state championship basketball run was a breath of fresh air. The Bulldawgs hadn't won a state basketball title in 37 years.

"Man it's hard, it's so hard," said Las Cruces head coach William Benjamin, who won his first state title at Las Cruces last March with a 61-49 win against Clovis. "You need kids playing their best basketball at the right time and you need a little bit of luck," he said.

Oñate High School did it for the first time ever in 2011, going 27-4 and beating Manzano in the championship game 54-48.

Do two basketball titles in three seasons signal a run for the city's big school teams similar to what's happened on the gridiron?

Title Town is splashed on the wall of the Field of Dreams football stadium, home of the Bulldawgs, Trojans and Knights, who have accumulated 13 state titles since 1995.

"They want to win it all," Centennial High School head coach Steve Heredia said of his 2014 squad, which is seeded fourth in the 4A bracket. "Las Cruces has set that standard in all sports, football especially. These kids want to be a part of that."

The local team with the best recent success in basketball is Mesilla Valley Christian School. In 2A, Jeremy Roman is in his first year coaching the already storied MVCS boys basketball team.

The SonBlazers made it to five title games between 2007 and 2012, winning it all in 2007, 2010 and 2011.

MVCS went 21-6 this year, including a

66-54 victory over Lordsburg in the district title game Saturday, March 1. The SonBlazers carry a No. 6 seed and an 8-game winning streak into the state playoffs, when they host Mora in the first round 2 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the MVCS gym.

Mayfield High School head coach Tommy Morrow won a couple of state titles while coaching at Hot Springs High School in Truth or Consequences. "It's so hard to get there. It takes a little bit of luck. One year, we were just the best team and we played that way. The other, we won a couple of shootouts. I had Royce Olney and he hit big shots, a 28-footer in the championship game. You don't count on that, but you take it when it happens."

Morrow has had some deep tournament runs with Mayfield, twice taking his Trojans to the championship game, losing both times. He has 428 wins in his career, and is making his 15th state tournament appearance Saturday.

Morrow had a No. 1-seeded Trojan team in 2006 that exited in the first round.

"It was like a perfect storm deal that year," he said.

Valley High School, the Trojans' quarterfinal, opponent packed the Pit in Albuquerque, the site of the game.

"We had a huge crowd against us, your kids get the jitters, anything can happen," Morrow said. "We didn't shoot well, we had that Santa Fe officiating crew that called five phantom traveling calls."

The Trojans' 24-3 season, ended early in disappointing fashion.

In 2002, the Trojans went on a Cinderella run and made the state championship game, facing a Hobbs team they had lost to by 40 earlier in the year. In the state championship Mayfield narrowly missed winning, 101-94

"It's quite an accomplishment sometimes just to get there," Morrow said. His 2010 team played La Cueva for a state title and lost the lead down the stretch, losing 61-53.

For 2014, Mayfield was seeded eighth for the first round after losing to Las Cruces 61-24 in the district tournament title game last week.

"I feel like after the way we played, we were fortunate to get a home game and we're hoping to take advantage of it," Morrow said.

The Trojans drew No. 9 seeded Highland (Albuquerque) High School Saturday night at 7 p.m. at the Trojan gym.

"Danny Brown I love as a coach," Morrow said of Highland's head coach. "His team is very gritty and determined. There will be zero quit in them."

Despite its lopsided victory over Mayfield in the district title game, Las Cruces drew a lower seed (10) and hits the road to take on 7-seeded Eldorado 5 p.m. Saturday, March 8, in Albuquerque. Las Cruces lost 49-48 to the Eagles at home in January, playing shorthanded with Mike Uribe and J.T. Romney both on the mend from injury.

"It's a tough matchup," Benjamin said. "It's going to be difficult. Sam Gentry is a load down low," he said of Eldorado's 6-7 center, who doubles as Eldorado's quarterback in football and just got an offer from Alabama to play college football in Tuscaloosa.

"We're playing good basketball," said Benjamin. His Bulldawgs have won eight

Frustration is guaranteed in golf

Staying positive a critical factor in enjoying the game

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Golf can be an awfully frustrating endeavor.

Lately, I've had more than my share of frustration in golf. I've heard about other golfers and listened to their frustrations, but I never actually felt their pain. Until now.

Golfers who have come to me for sport consultation, and young golfers I have coached, spoke about their frustrations, but I underestimated their feelings.

In the last couple of months of playing golf with scores ranging from 73 to 86, I feel frustrated. So, I began to think more about the problem.

From my point of view, feeling frustrated has everything to do with expectations. If we're expecting a good round of golf, a good shot or a good outcome and it doesn't happen, we become upset. We feel we should have done better.

It's the same in every sport. Maybe public speakers, politicians running for office, concert pianists or CEOs experience the same emotions when they realize, deep-down, they should have done better. Achievers always expect more. They expect to perform at their best every time, and when they don't, they're frustrated. They even may expect to win every time.

It's a matter of unfulfilled needs, because you think privately that you let yourself down. It's a matter of disappointment that often turns into temporary anger.

Self-help guru Anthony Robbins said, "People who fail to achieve their goals usually get stopped by frustration. They allow frustration to keep them from taking the necessary actions that would support them in achieving their desires. All successful people learn that success is buried on the other side of frustration."

It takes discipline, and a certain measure of emotional maturity, to take a step back and look at your circumstances and disappointments objectively, and then commit to a plan for change and going forward.

Sometimes frustration can become permanent. Take the 24 handicapper who gets angry when he makes a succession of bogeys and double bogeys. I don't really sympathize with him, because he's expected to make those scores; otherwise he wouldn't have that high handicap.

But the five handicapper who makes a succession of bogeys and doubles – that's another story. Or the 10 handicapper who makes a few doubles. I can understand that. It's a funny game. You can be on top of the world one day, and down in the pits the next day. The only thing that gets me through is the ID logo mark I have on my golf balls: "It's God's will."

The operative thought here is expectations.

Once we get in touch with our expectations, the better we are able to understand our emotions.

Since my life-threatening injury in February 2011, I have gotten back to playing a lot of golf, but not the way used to play golf. It's been an eye-opener to go through a round making more bogeys than pars.

Exactly a year ago, I shot my age, which at the time was 68. It was a thrill. Now, I have to take a step back and reassess. It's not like I have to learn the game all over again, but I feel like I'm starting again from where I was in 1993 as a 10 handicapper. My expectations are such that I feel I ought to be a two handicapper.

Therein lies the frustration. And there is where I feel your pain. Golf is a sport that is inherently characterized by forcing us to endure unpleasantness, discomfort and frustration, all before we finally to enjoy the thrill of victory.

I tell our golf school students they shouldn't try harder after they become frustrated. I caution them not to over-try during a competitive round on the golf course. Yet, I do favor high effort, discipline and striving when it comes to practice, working out, becoming informed, knowing the rules and managing your time. You have to try hard to master those things.

Trying hard can have its reward. Thomas Jefferson is reputed to have said, "I'm a great believer in luck, and I find the harder I work, the more I have of it." Both Lee Trevino and Gary Player shortened that thought with, "the more I practice, the luckier I get."

Trying harder in football is good; not in golf.

Feeling frustrated can lead to anger. I see that in a lot of patients I evaluate, as a clinical psychologist, who have very serious medical conditions. It doesn't matter the age, be it 45 or 85, the reaction is very much the same.

Let's take a sudden stroke. The individual was all right one moment and then debilitated the next moment; and now in a hospital bed, not knowing if things will ever be back to normal. It's quite a shock.

One only has the experience of the baseline of what normal was, but now not sensing if that normal will ever be experienced again. There is wishing, hoping, anger and paranoia. It's like going through the grief with the loss of a loved one. The steps are disbelief, numbness, bargaining with the Almighty, anger, depression and, finally, acceptance. I've been through all of that – not only with my patients, but with myself.

Golf is very much a mirror of life in that respect. We expect one thing, and when we fall into a different situation, either from injury or disuse or lack of practice or whatever, we lose our ability to perform as we once were used to performing. Our confidence is eroded and we feel it's not fun anymore. Disappointment starts to take over, and soon our composure and self-assurance totally disappear.

Inner insecurity often rears its ugly head. Occasionally paranoia takes over, as in the case where we start blaming bad bounces, a bad golf course, bad partners, bad breaks, bad pace, bad clubs, bad rules, bad teachers, bad equipment, bad conditions and bad luck. The new expectation is that we will be done in by forces that are out to get us no matter what we do.

Then we come to what I call low F, in part, the opposite of low T. Folks who often demonstrate irrational beliefs, self-defeating behavior, failure to learn from their mistakes, reluctance to change and frequent temper outbursts, are usually are plagued by low frustration tolerance.

Ben Hogan was not. He viewed professional tournaments and championship golf as the struggle, a term he used to describe the hard work, discipline and perseverance required to become great. Hogan was willing to tolerate the trials, tribulations and disappointments of a hard and demanding sport. In fact, he welcomed them.

He was like that. Some players can grind and some can't. You would think that low-F folks would avoid situations and behavior that leads to frustration; most don't. Low-F sufferers tend to have poor reality testing in that their perception of true reality tends to be warped

For example, a lot of golfers go out and play using the same faulty swing, the same poor club choices, the same awful putting stroke, the same inferior equipment, the same flawed bunker technique, the same deficient preswing routine and the same mistaken beliefs about their skill level.

And then they wonder why they come home frustrated with golf.

The one solace I can offer for overwhelming feelings of frustration is to remind you to check your attitude. As I've said before, attitude is everything.

Anger is first the result of a negative attitude. We believe things ought to be one way, and they don't go that way. So we get angry. Occasionally clubs are thrown childishly in haste.

In reality, we probably have misjudged the situation.

Take a difficult golf shot. We can misjudge the distance, the wind, the lie, the hole location, the aiming point and a host of other factors.

Then there's the nature of the swing, the club selection and the matter of luck, which have to be flawless, or else the other factors are exaggerated to the negative.

It's a blessed game when all goes perfectly, but it's discouraging when things go dreadfully wrong. Knowing that, some folks would rather not play golf because it's too hard.

Attitude is a matter of understanding the reality of the game, its demons and accepting what is difficult to understand. Remember, things are not usually as bad as they first appear.

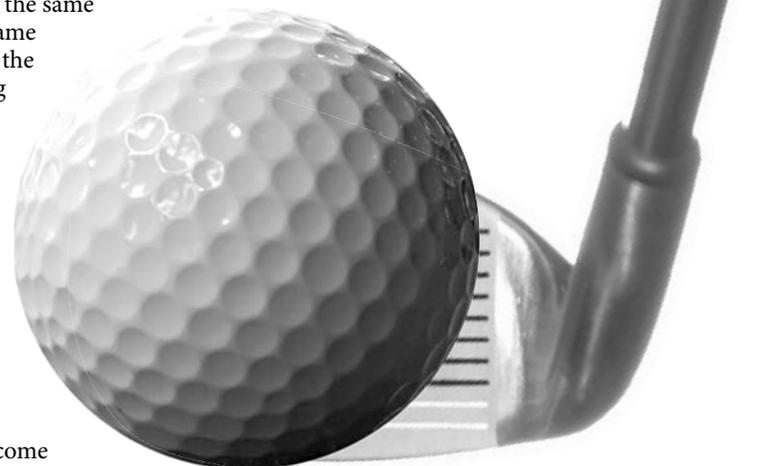

Staying positive is critical to enjoying the game of golf. I try my best not to get angry at all the unfortunate bounces and breaks (which are undoubtedly my fault), but to accept those events as part of the progress to my game improvement.

I try hard to master an improved sense of humor about the game and about life in general. If you are a serious golfer – I mean an obsessed golfer – be careful of attaching your identity to your golf game. It can be overwhelmingly frustrating.

Building a program

Aggie Football returns to Sun Belt

Pistol Pete
Pete's
Ponderings

Now ole Pete knows that summer's heat is a few months away but next season's football schedule is out and it has me jumpin' for joy. It's a return to the Sun Belt and I feel a continuation of the rise of Doug Martin's football program.

Before I get into the specifics of the schedule, I want to remark about the progress Coach is making.

On the night of the announcement of next year's recruits, Coach Martin spoke a great truth. He said he was "building a program not just a team." All but two of the signees were freshman, supporting Martin's statement on seeing a bigger picture not just a "one hit wonder." That is the best news Aggie fans could hear.

Creating a solid foundation that will support a long term of success, Coach Martin has been assembling not only new players but a new coaching staff. Defensive coordinator Larry Coyer and offensive line coach Steve Marshall came on board with impressive resumes.

Coyer has been an NFL assistant with the Broncos, Tampa Bay and the Indianapolis Colts. Marshall has been at a Who's Who of college winners as well. He has spent time at on the Browns and Texans staffs in the NFL along with collegiate assignments at Tennessee, Colorado, UCLA and Texas A&M among others.

Coach Marshall has worked with offensive coordinator Greg Brandon before, so they have a good working relationship that can only move the entire offense forward. Better instruction to better players can only mean an improvement on the field.

The season has 12 games and six of them are at home.

The Aggies will start on Labor Day weekend with kickoff set for Thursday night with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. This will give adult and student fans a chance to see a great opening night of football and then relax for the long weekend. The home season brings in-state rival UNM to town on Sept. 20. The rest of the home schedule is all Sun Belt with Georgia Southern facing the Aggies on Oct. 4; Texas State on Nov. 1; and the Louisiana pair at Lafayette on Nov. 8 and Monroe on Nov. 22.

Season tickets will be available for return to conference play soon. Pete won't let the critical information slip your mind. The Pan Am Box office number is 646-1420 and all the information will be coming your way soon. It's four months of great gridiron excitement and we need to all Aggie Up 'cause this season is gonna be a doozy.

Aronis, Dixon stand out

Exceptional players make headway

Marvin Menzies
Head Coach
Men's Basketball

I can still remember watching the DVD in my office that assistant coach Keith Brown had given me. It was for a junior college point guard he was investigating.

As the game unfolds, one of his teammates is making 3-point shot after 3-point shot. After about the fourth in a row, I stopped the DVD, walked into coach Brown's office, and asked, "What about this kid?" As they say, "The rest is history." Coach Brown did an unbelievable job recruiting Kevin Aronis to the New Mexico State Aggies.

Kevin has been nothing short of incredible since his arrival. An excellent student in the classroom, teammate in the locker room and player on the court – he has been everything we wanted and more. Who can forget his memorable shooting last season in the come from behind win over UTEP in the Pan American Center.

This season he is the No. 1 3-point shooter in the WAC and has given us some amazing efforts in several victories. Furthermore, he has been a great mentor to younger players not only with his play but with his daily work ethic and guidance off the floor.

Renaldo Dixon's sacrifices for New Mexico State can really be traced back to his freshman season.

With several returning post players, Renaldo was brought in to redshirt and develop in his first year.

Unfortunately, injuries to several players left us completely depleted on the front line. However, it was only for a short period until they returned.

We have asked ourselves so many times in the past seven years – did we really need to use that player as a freshman? What could that player have been with one more year? (The names Gordo Castillo, Bandja Sy, Matej Buovac always come to mind.) So we asked Renaldo and left it up to him.

“ He never complained or asked what was in it for him. ”

“You can help us, potentially only for a few games until these other players return, or you can redshirt. It is completely your decision,” we said.

He walked in the next day and said he would play. That moment epitomizes Renaldo's entire career as an Aggie. It was never about him. All he ever thought about was his teammates, this team and whatever needed to be done to win.

He never asked to start, for more minutes, more shots or a greater role. He never complained or asked what was in it for him. All he ever did was come in every single day, give us everything he had and help us in more ways than I could ever describe.

Renaldo's leadership in this way puts him at the top of our list of seniors. And without any hesitation I can state he is the most unselfish player we have had here in my time as an Aggie.

Rodriguez leads NMSU softball bats

Rodolph gets career victory No. 500 in Vegas

The New Mexico State University softball team reached a pair of milestones last weekend at the Eller Media Stadium Classic in Las Vegas, Nev., and improved its record to 13-7 along the way.

Milestone One: For the fourth straight week the New Mexico State softball team earned the Hitter of the Week honor for the Western Athletic Conference. For the week of Feb. 24 through March 2, junior centerfielder Staci Rodriguez earned the honor, her second one of the season.

Rodriguez, a Paramount, Calif. native, hit .700 with five home runs, 10 RBI, nine runs scored and a stolen base. She posted a 2.200 slugging percentage and an .824 on-base percentage, and drew six walks over the five games. Rodriguez smashed two homers in a 13-3 win over Binghamton, including her second grand slam of the season. She also had two bombs in a 14-5 win over Seton Hall and added another in a win over host University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

The team went 3-2 on the weekend. Tuesday, March 5, NMSU fell to rival UTEP in E Paso, 5-1. The Aggies head to Lubbock, Texas, Friday, March 7, through Sunday, March 9, for games in the Jeannine McHaney Memorial Classic.

Milestone Two: On Saturday, March 1, at Las Vegas, the Aggies played two games, winning both. They beat Binghamton and UNLV, and earned head coach Kathy Rodolph her 500th career victory as a collegiate head coach.

The Aggies first defeated Binghamton University 13-3 in five innings. In the second game, NM State defeated UNLV 5-4.

"I really liked the way we came out and played today," Rodolph said. "We came out and put pressure on both teams today, which is just what we wanted to do. To be able to win that second game like that, with them being the home team and making a run in the seventh was big for us. As far as getting 500 wins, I have been truly blessed to coach some great teams and some great young women athletes."

Redshirt sophomore Karysta Donisthorpe also had another strong showing for the Aggies as she pitched six complete innings against UNLV. She struck out five batters while allowing only three hits on her way to earning her fifth win of the season.

Senior Celisha Walker pitched in relief in both contests. She earned the win against Binghamton and was credited with the save against UNLV. Overall she struck out two batters and surrendered one run in 3.2 innings of work.

Aggie baseball starts road trip at Texas Tech

Blackstone named WAC hitter of the week

Despite the New Mexico State University baseball team losing three of four games against Oakland, infielder Kent Blackstone has been named the Western Athletic Conference Baseball Hitter of the Week for Feb. 24 through March 2.

BLACKSTONE

Blackstone, a sophomore from Vienna, Va., hit .538 (7-for-13) on the week with five runs, five RBI, one double, one home run and three walks for the Aggies, who are now 7-5 on the young season.

Blackstone stood out in the first game of Saturday's doubleheader as he went 3-for-5 at the plate with two runs scored. He doubled and had a home run in the game. He was also impressive in game two of Saturday's twin bill, going a perfect 3-for-3 at the plate with one run and a hit-by-pitch.

NM State will now hit the road for its longest road trip of the season.

The Aggies will play 11-straight games away from home and will not return to Presley Askew Field until Tuesday, March 25, when they host rival New Mexico.

The road trip will take NM State to California for four games with University of California-Davis and to Edinburg, Texas, to play Texas-Pan American.

But the trip begins with a four-game series against Texas Tech in Lubbock, Texas. The series is set to begin Thursday, March 6, with one game each day until Sunday, March 9.

Looking Back

This week in the history of the Mesilla Valley

David Salcido
Reflections

• A petition was filed with Doña Ana County by the residents of the townsite of La Mesa, asking that the running at large of stock in said townsite be prohibited in accordance with chapter 146 of the laws of the 38th Legislative Assembly of the state of New Mexico.

• The many friends of Mrs. E. G. Ascarate were "rejoicing over the fact that she was not seriously hurt when the horse ran away with the buggy in which she and Mrs. Ryan were driving. Mrs. Ascarate was thrown out but miraculously escaped dangerous injuries, although she was painfully bruised."

• Sad news from the Las Cruces Citizen: "Agapito Herrera, an old man, shot himself through the cabeza Tuesday, dying soon thereafter."

• Parking on Main Street was said to have greatly improved with the introduction of parallel parking, by "improving the general appearance of the thoroughfare and making it safer for both persons and property." An unfortunate side effect, however, was the introduction of a "traffic evil known as double parking," which, it was believed was "nothing more nor less than individual selfishness publicly expressed." The town board and police department were said to be busy correcting the issue.

• Cruces Grocery & Market, located at 336 S. Main St., was advertising lard at 8 cents a pound, coffee at 18 cents a pound, 2 pound jars of peanut butter for 25 cents, sirloin steak at 15 cents a pound, butter at 27 cents a pound and lean, sliced bacon at 25 cents a pound.

• Las Cruces insurance agent Jerry Apodaca announced his candidacy in the Democratic primary for the position of state senator from Doña Ana County. It was to be his first bid for public office. In addition to winning his senatorial bid, Apodaca would become governor of New Mexico in 1974.

• Playing at the Rio Grande Theatre was "Man in the Middle," starring Robert Mitchum, France Nuyen, Trevor Howard and Keenan Wynn. The State Theater was screening "The Magnificent Seven," starring Yul Brynner, Eli Wallach and Steve McQueen.

• Las Cruces Mayor Herculano Ferralez stated

during a press conference that emissions testing, along with more car-pooling and increased use of buses, was a "valid consideration for future controls on pollution in the city." The mayor went on to say, "Las Cruces is getting to where we ought to think about starting to plan for something like that." The article reports that the New Mexico Environmental Improvement Division said "it will be quite some time before Las Cruces' air is in the condition of other larger cities, such as Albuquerque and El Paso."

• A hearing was scheduled on the inclusion of Court Junior High School on the New Mexico State Register of Cultural Properties. The school was being "pushed" by state Rep. Ruben Smith as the site for a Las Cruces Youth Center.

ELECTRICITY SAVINGS

Most refrigerated air conditioners are 13 SEER and operating at an Energy Efficiency Rating (EER) of 10. Like higher miles per gallon for a car means you will pay less for gas, a higher EER means you will pay less for electricity. A new geothermal refrigerated air system (EER 16) may increase your electric cooling efficiency by 60%.

EXTENDED WARRANTY

Most refrigerated air system warranties expire after 5 years, before annual maintenance and service costs increase. So after ~8 years of use, as major components like compressors go out, it is usually better to replace the system than to repair it. But a traditional replacement can be from seven to twelve thousand dollars during the summer. These super efficient, incentivized systems include 10 year warranties, and 2 years service at no additional charge.

HOW IT WORKS

You know how a basement stays cooler all summer? The geothermal system runs refrigerant lines through the ground to use the earth's coolness to refrigerate your home with 30% to 60% less electricity than traditional refrigerated air. Most homes have adequate space beside their home for the 25' long x 2' wide x 2.5' deep trench, which is hand dug to minimize installation impact. The refrigerated air is very stable with good indoor humidity control so your home is not "over dried" in the summer. This is why geothermal refrigerated air provides the best indoor comfort, and you can control it from a smart phone if you want to.

QUALIFICATIONS

Homebuyer must: 1) Own the home, 2) Pay New Mexico income tax, 3) Generally have family income above $40K, and 4) Meet GE Capital's credit requirement. Qualified persons may pay $0 down, GE's minimum payments, and 0% interest until they get their tax credit money back.

OBITUARY

JOSHUA MARC ALLEN

Joshua Marc Allen, 30, of Las Cruces, was tragically killed in an accident near the Vinton, TX exit on Feb. 24, 2014. He was en route to pick up his twin brother at the airport when the accident occurred.

Allen graduated from Ephrata High School, Ephrata, PA. He received his undergraduate degree from Liberty University and two post-graduate degrees, Masters of Religion and Master of Divinity, from Liberty Baptist Theological Seminary both in Lynchburg, VA. While at Liberty, he was a Resident Assistant.

During his seminary years, Allen was the Graduate Assistant to Dr. Elmer Towns, the Co-Founder of the University/Seminary. In a recent email to the family, Dr. Towns wrote, "I have had dozens of graduate assistants over the years, but Josh was one of my favorites. I shall miss hearing from him, and I shall miss finding out what he could have done in serving the Lord." Allen continued working for Liberty University as an Adjunct Professor for the School of Religion.

Soon after graduating he moved to Las Cruces, where he became the pastor of Grace Bible Church (a Bible Fellowship denominational church) located at the Bonito Plaza on Missouri Avenue. Allen lovingly shepherded this young fledgling congregation, which more than doubled under his leadership.

Allen was a keen and faithful student of the Bible. He not only loved people, but enjoyed serving them and would give you the shirt off his back. He was a leader among men, often with those old enough to be his dad. He had a compassionate heart. He loved his congregation and they dearly loved him."

Allen comes from good stock, continuing the family business which has included a dozen ministers.

"Josh was driven that people would know the Jesus he came to love and serve," said Rev. Dan Allen, Josh Allen's father. "His message was the Gospel of Jesus Christ. That God sent His son into this world because of our sin.

That Jesus died on the cross taking the sins of the world upon Him and rose victoriously the third day cementing the fact that He had conquered death, sin and Satan. And finally, that the only way one can have their sins forgiven is if they receive the gift of eternal life. This can be done by placing one's faith and trust in Jesus Christ. For more information about how you can know for sure that when you die you will go to Heaven, please contact the church that Josh pastored - Grace Bible Church, 532-1234 or another church which preaches the Gospel."

Josh was well known and loved throughout Las Cruces, as evidenced by the outpouring of love from friends, neighbors and local businesses.

Condolences have poured in from throughout the nation and prayers have been offered internationally. He was known for his sense of humor and down to earth personality. He was emphatic Philadelphia sports fan and often went to games with his family when he was on the east coast or when one of their teams came out west.

Josh is survived by his loving wife for four years, Shelley Allen, and their 9-month old son Josiah Allen, his parents, the Rev. Doctor Daniel and Vonnie Allen, Hatfield, PA, two brothers, Matthew and his wife, Marissa Allen, Lititz, PA, Jason Allen (his twin) and his wife, Annalise, Las Cruces, one sister, Melinda (Allen) and her husband, Ron Ogbin, Ephrata, PA. His grandfathers, Revs. Russell T. Allen and Vonely Day preceded him to Heaven. He is also survived by uncles and aunts, cousins, nieces and nephews.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made for Shelley and her son Josiah at <http://www.powerofhopeministries.org>

NMSU graduate becomes Interior deputy secretary

Connor follows path taken by Garrey Carruthers

Michael Connor, a New Mexico State University graduate, has been confirmed by the U.S. Senate to serve as the deputy secretary of the Department of the Interior. (See related story on page B1.)

"The Senate's vote to confirm me as President Obama's selection to serve as deputy secretary of the Interior is a distinct honor," Connor said.

"In this new role – as the chief operating officer of the Interior and its more than 70,000 employees – I will have the privilege to serve alongside Interior Secretary Sally Jewell, who has established a national reputation as a strong leader with a clear vision for the future of the department.

"DOI's mission reaches into every corner of the nation as well as the people of New Mexico. I am humbled and excited by this new opportunity."

"We're excited to have a New Mexico State University graduate rise to such a high level in the federal government," said NMSU President Garrey Carruthers, who himself once served as an assistant secretary in the U.S. Department of Interior. "We are certain he will do an outstanding job in this position and make Aggies everywhere proud."

For the past four years, Connor has been the Commissioner of Interior's Bureau of Reclamation, which oversees the nation's largest water wholesaler and second largest provider of hydroelectric power in the West with 58 power plants including the Hoover and Grand Coulee Dams.

CONNOR

In his new role, Connor will be the second highest-ranking official in the department. He has statutory obligations as the chief operations officer to help guide the Interior that has more than 70,000 employees and a yearly budget of about $12 billion.

He will continue to serve as reclamation commissioner.

Connor was the counsel to the U.S. Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and senior adviser to chairman Sen. Jeff Bingaman on issues involving energy development, land and water management and tribal nations from 2001 to 2009. Connor also worked at the Interior from 1993 to 2001, in the solicitor's office, and then as director of the secretary's Indian Water Rights Office.

He earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from NMSU and a law degree from the University of Colorado Law School. Connor is a native New Mexican and brother of Bill Connor, a Las Cruces-based executive for El Paso Electric Co.

"Mike Connor has proven himself to be a smart, thoughtful and effective public servant," U.S. Sen. Tom Udall said. "As a native New Mexican with about two decades of experience in the public sector, he possesses a wealth of knowledge about matters that are important to New Mexico and that will be invaluable in his position as deputy secretary in the Interior Department.

"Mike has a deep understanding of issues ranging from land and water conservation, to the impacts of climate change, and the challenges facing Indian Country. His work on water management and sustainable water use have particularly impressed me as he has responded to the ongoing drought."

Hispanic Chamber honors The Bridge

Federal official pledges collaborative approach to southern N.M. issues

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

An over-the-top accomplishment by a Las Cruces deserves an over-the-top celebration in the City of the Crosses; that's exactly what Michael Connor, the new U.S. deputy secretary of the Interior, got Friday, Feb. 28.

The week had been a dramatic one for Connor, who took part in a meeting on drought issues Monday, Feb. 24, in the situation room of the White House and was confirmed unanimously by the U.S. Senate on Thursday, Feb. 27.

He arrived in Las Cruces just in time to give the keynote, as planned, at the 22nd annual awards banquet of the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

The evening turned out to be his party as well as a party in honor of those who have made their mark in local business and the community.

Under the sparkle of the chandeliers in a filled-to-capacity ballroom at the Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, chamber officers presented the following awards:

- Bilingual Educator of the Year – Eva Perez-Rubio Autry, third grade teacher at Desert View Elementary School in Sunland Park, whose students regularly achieve high test scores. She partners with civic groups to provide school supplies and secured grant funding for more classroom days in summer
- Los Amigos Ambassador of the Year – Roger Browning of Master Barbers, who is active in the Gus Macker events, the March of Dimes and more
- Volunteer of the Year – Janet Acosta-Clifton, instrumental in creating the Junior Amigo program and active in March of Dimes High Heels for High Hopes, Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Conquistadores, Leadership Las Cruces and more
- Nonprofit of the Year – The Bridge of Southern New Mexico for its work in bumping up the high school graduation rates and optimizing career and technical education opportunities

Death of the coupon? Deals by text work for small business

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Former Living Social executive Scott Maloney drove into Las Cruces Friday, Feb. 28, to announce the impending death of the Internet-based daily deal industry he helped create.

"You guys are about to, frankly, kill it," Maloney said during his keynote presentation at a ribbon cutting for OneEighty, a no-charge service that gives the community instant access to offers from local businesses through text messages.

"You are changing the game for merchants and customers."

The Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce ribbon cutting was held at the Arrowhead Center business incubator on the New Mexico State University campus where the OneEighty is headquartered.

"The simple premise of the daily deal coupon has a fundamental flaw," Maloney said. "It was meant to liberate merchants but it is slow to market and can be very expensive. On the customer side, it's not topical, not local. Merchants feel taken advantage of and customers have to deal with a cumbersome process.

"These challenges – and more – are addressed by OneEighty, which is fast, targeted, merchant-controlled and provides instant delivery and revenue."

From nowhere to OneEighty

OneEighty began in December 2010 with a phone call from founder and now COO Tim Swope in Las Cruces to co-founder and CEO Jon Forrest, with whom he had worked 11 years earlier in California.

Swope said although he hadn't kept in touch with Forrest, he never deleted his phone number. When he conceived the idea for OneEighty, he knew Forrest was the man to call.

Swope and Forrest talked about the idea for two hours.

OneEighty was on its way.

There were, however, many "how

“We have been around the world 100 times finding out how not to do it,” Swope said. “We got to the point of almost throwing in the towel.”

Las Cruces Bulletin photos by Alta LeCompte

At the ribbon cutting for OneEighty Friday, Feb. 28, at Arrowhead Center, COO Tim Swope said, “Smart phone adoption is only 40 percent in this county, but everybody already knows how to text.” The company offers deals via text. Pictured are Swope, CEO Jon Forrest and CIO Kevin Woolworth demonstrating how OneEighty works.

“We were tying a white flag to a stick,” Forrest added. Then they came across medical software that had been developed for physicians but never been used. They contacted the developer, Derrick Woolworth, who became CIO of their team. “His technological expertise made it happen,” Forrest said.

Getting started at Arrowhead

Forrest said it was serendipity that the fledgling company found Arrowhead.

The opportunity arose because he met NMSU’s Marie Talnack, who was advising a business in Orange County, Calif. “She suggested the incubator and Tim was living just 10 blocks away,” Forrest said.

“In less than 30 days we were putting furniture in the office,” Swope said.

The team felt comfortable with Arrowhead’s nurturing culture and commitment to making everybody’s lives better, he said.

“We have never met such an endearing and caring group,” Swope said. “We could have a four-story building complex somewhere, and we still would have an office here. Even as we go nationwide, we will always tout Las Cruces and always have our headquarters here.

The university setting provided the ideal culture in which to market their new service, as well as student talent to help them connect with that market.

Monica Schwartz received a scholarship from the university to serve as their graphics intern.

“She’s just incredible,” Swope said. “She has an eye that resonates with that age group. Her designs have depth. They aren’t static, they are multi-layered – you don’t find a lot of that in marketing.”

“Working with Monica is great example of being right on campus and able to connect with our target market,” Forrest said.

Welcoming guests at the ribbon cutting, New Mexico State University Vice President of Economic Development Kevin Boberg said OneEighty could have chosen fancier places to grow, but picked NMSU “not for the tangible assets but for the students, the culture, their commitment to innovation.”

“Next week and beyond, our focus will be strictly on bringing in new merchants,” Swope said.

Forrest said what matters most is to provide real value to small main street businesses, which have always been underserved by the technological revolution.

“We are dedicated to the main street economy, the mom and pop, brick and mortar businesses that send their kids to school with our kids,” Swope said.

With OneEighty, a customer stores a payment profile online and then everything else happens via text.

Customers choose the kind of deals they want to be notified about. They also can search for and buy deals on anything using only text messaging. There is no need to print anything.

“When you get to the business offering the deal, simply tell them you did a 180 and text the redeem code. The merchant will receive a secure payment confirmation,” for180.com explains.

“It’s very safe, closed communication,” Forrest said. “This finally eliminates a lot of noise that exists in the world of advertising, getting right down to the signal for people who want a good deal and people who want to sell them a good deal.”

President Richard Aguilar inducted Mary Garza, president of Solar Electric Co., into the Hispanic Chamber Hall of Fame. Garza was the chamber's first president in 1992. The recipient of the U.S. Small Business Administration Award of Excellence and many other state and national business honors, she serves on the Memorial Medical Center board and in other community leadership positions.

Aguilar commented that the theme of the evening, Moving Forward Together, implies recognition of the heritage that makes the future possible.

Moving forward together

Family, including "big brother" Bill Connor and sister-in-law Dolores, the emcee, surrounded Mike Connor at the head table.

At the podium, he recognized not only his family, but also the community where he began his journey.

"The small, close rigorous environment of the (New Mexico State University) engineering department prepared me for the job I have now," said Connor, who later earned a law degree at the University of Colorado.

"None of us, achieving any level of success ... does so without people encouraging you along the way," he said.

He said he received that encouragement in his first job as a janitor and later at GE, where he "started to go from asking 'why me' to 'why not me."

Connor said the Hispanic Chamber's successes in business and community leadership are great examples, especially to young people such as middle school awardees and participants in Junior Amigos.

"Through your efforts, one day we will have a Secretary of Commerce," he said.

Moving forward in Washington

Connor, formerly the commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, said in his new capacity as deputy secretary he will work alongside Cabinet Secretary Sally Jewell, "a tremendous business leader, a banker and an engineer" from whom he has learned a lot.

He said the department has a huge, $16.8 billion footprint in New Mexico, mostly in energy and recreation, which accounts for about 25 percent of the state's gross domestic product.

"One of our biggest priorities now is in New Mexico and the West," he said, adding the state is in its sixth year of drought.

"We're not where we want to be."

Priorities include achieving a negotiated settlement with Texas over the right to use water from the Rio Grande.

Commenting on the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument Proposal, Connor said the department "wants to work with the New Mexico congressional delegation to come to an arrangement that meets the needs of all parties."

"Our goal in any area is to act after conferring with local communities," he said.

Connor said there has been progress on oil and gas development issues and that the proposed SunZia alternative energy transmission has to be resolved in cooperation with the people of southern New Mexico.

"If the drought breaks, I will still have plenty to do," said Connor, who has led the Department of the Interior's efforts to promote sustainable water use and address issues of water supply.

He said his department wants to partner with local business while carrying out its obligations.

Stimulus leads to United States recovery

Austerity pushes Europe into recession

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

It is the five-year anniversary of the Obama stimulus and Warren Buffet announces the best year ever for Berkshire Hathaway, attributing his success to a bet on the U.S. economy.

Experts expect 2014 U.S. economic growth of around 3 percent. Meanwhile, Europe is mired in stagnation, having suffered declining gross domestic product through the third quarter. And the outlook for next year is anemic, with expected growth of only 1 percent.

Why is it that the U.S. is in recovery while Europe is continues to wallow in stagnation?

The answer is austerity. Europe adopted it. The United States, instead, decided on stimulus.

Austerity, of course, refers to a set of policies that include tax increases and spending cuts aimed at reducing sovereign debt. For mainstream macroeconomists, including myself, the results of austerity were predictable. Europe, already suffering from financial crisis, was pushed into recession.

Those countries adopting the most extreme policies – Greece, Spain, Italy, Ireland and the UK – are suffering the sharpest downturn. The spillover effect has been sufficient to push the Euro area into a sustained recession.

For Greece, Spain, Italy and Ireland, the reason for austerity arises from excessive external debt. No longer able to borrow from traditional sources, last chance lenders – Germany in some cases, the International Monetary Fund in others – have required sharp cuts in spending coupled with sharp increases in taxes.

For the UK, austerity is self-inflicted, a result of the ideologically driven Conservative party policy.

Back in the U.S., in retrospect the data are pretty clear. The Obama stimulus was key to the turn around.

Take the stock market, generally considered to be the best single indicator of future economic activity. The stimulus went into effect in March 1, 2009. The S&P 500 hit bottom on March 9, 2009. Since then, it has increased by 2.7 times.

Other economic indicators have shown similar recovery. Real GDP is up 11 percent. Unemployment is down and capacity utilization is up.

As a mainstream economist, I see all this as textbook. Indeed, once monetary policy hit the zero lower bound, monetary policy became much less effective. The only real choice was fiscal stimulus. Sure, the recovery is slow, but all this means that the stimulus was too small. I think twice as large would have been better.

All the above doesn't mean everything is rosy.

The problem was not Barack Obama's stimulus, but with the profligate spending during the eight years of the George W. Bush administration. Bush inherited from Bill Clinton a surplus of $236 billion and left Obama with a deficit of $459 billion. Had Bush continued Clinton's policies, the extra surplus would have paid for two times the Obama stimulus, which many economists recommended.

So Bush left Obama with a tough hand to play; Obama did the best he could with it. Obama avoided a second Great Depression, but had he inherited a surplus as had Bush, his actions could have been more dramatic and the recovery stronger.

NuMex Easter chile named All-America winner

NMSU wins for ornamental pepper

Just in time for Peter Cottontail, NuMex Easter, an ornamental chile pepper plant bred by New Mexico State University's Chile Pepper Institute, has been named an All-America Selections winner.

The recognition highlights the plant's ability to flourish in different climates across the country. This is the first time any plant bred by NMSU has been named an All-America Selections winner.

"We started breeding ornamentals as something fun for our students, but also as something for the potted plant and nursery industries," said Paul Bosland, an NMSU regents professor and director of the Chile Pepper Institute. "It's exciting to be able to commercialize something developed at NMSU. It's another way to foster economic development."

All-America Selections (AAS) is a nonprofit organization that tests new varieties of flowers and bedding plants, and then introduces the best performers as their winners.

The organization has nearly 200 gardens in geographically diverse areas across the country where judges score the performance of the plants.

NMSU's Fabian Garcia Science Center in Las Cruces became an AAS evaluation site in 2013. According to the organization's website, "AAS winners offer gardeners reliable new varieties that have proven their superior garden performance."

"This means that whether someone is in New Mexico, California or Maine, NuMex Easter should do well," Bosland said. "This plant is heat-tolerant, drought resistant and makes for a nice container plant."

Like other ornamental chile varieties, NuMex Easter was selected for dwarfing characteristics, giving it a compact stature ideal for garden beds or indoor pots. The plant was also selected for having colorful, upright fruit, which spread across the top of the plant. The peppers for NuMex Easter are pastel purple, yellow and orange.

"Our students enjoy working with the ornamentals and developing new colors and color combinations," Bosland said. "They also learn a lot about genetics because the plants have so many obvious traits to work with."

NMSU began developing holiday ornamental chile plants in the 1990s and today has more than a dozen different varieties.

Its Valentine's Day plants have peppers that turn from white to red. St. Patrick's Day chiles go from green to orange. Halloween chiles go from black to orange. Other color combinations can be found for April Fool's Day, Memorial Day, Earth Day, Cinco de Mayo, Thanksgiving, Veterans Day and Chinese New Year.

It takes about 10 years from making the first hybridization until a plant is ready to be released to the public.

The Chile Pepper Institute's first two ornamental chile plants were the NuMex Twilight and NuMex Centennial, released in the late

1980s to correspond with NMSU's 100th anniversary.

All chile plants are frost-tender and, if kept outside, won't survive the winter. If kept indoors, with adequate light and water, chile plants can last 10 years or more. Their peppers also are edible and pack a punch when it comes to heat.

Some of the score sheet comments for

NuMex Easter included the phrases: "exceptional plant, love this little pepper, striking color, eye-catching, so easy to grow, loaded with pepper fruits in fun colors and a favorite of garden visitors."

For more information about NuMex Easter or other ornamental chiles, call the Chile Pepper Institute at 646-3028. NuMex Easter seeds and plants are available at the institute.

Farmers briefed on outlook

Weather, water storage, releases discussed

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District is conducting a series of briefings to inform brokers of what to expect for the coming irrigation season.

The EBID delivers water to about 8,000 farm-tract and small-tract farmers, district manager Gary Esslinger said.

The meetings started in Hatch and will continue south to Anthony, N.M.

"We're going to try to brief the growers on the weather for the next three months and, the reservoir storage," Esslinger said.

With a good snow pack and runoff the district normally starts releasing in February, but this year water will not start running in canals until June 1.

"But it'll depend on the weather and storage before we can announce a final allotment," Esslinger said.

The Rincon and Mesilla valleys have been under drought stress since 1999.

"There hasn't been a February release in about 10 years," he said, emphasizing the drought conditions.

The district has 600 miles of ditches and drains and about 5,000 turnout field gates to maintain, and all have been cleared.

"All canals, pipes and construction work have been completed," Esslinger said.

As maintenance chief Leo Bartlett said earlier: "We're ready to go when they start running water."

The EBID is planning to hold another growers' briefing before June 1, hydrology consultant Phillip King said.

"We're trying to get the word out," King said. "The EBID is aware of the problems and these briefings are opportunities for growers to know what's coming to ask questions."

Pecan industry professionals and their families from across the Southwest and other locations, including Mexico and Georgia, attended the conference. Fair artists share tricks of the trade

Weekend fair features continuous demonstrations

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

As the Las Cruces Arts Fair rolls into the Las Cruces Convention Center for its fourth outing Friday through Sunday, March 14-16, it will be more than just a chance to view and purchase stunning works of art created by the more than 80 regional, national and international artists in attendance.

Beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, March 15-16, a number of artists working in a variety of media will host artist demonstrations and share their expertise with those interested in beginning or improving their own works of art.

On Saturday, the day's demonstrations begin at 10 a.m. with "Hand Papermaking How To's," hosted by Martha Duran. A self-taught artist, Duran has been working in the book arts – especially paper making – for more than 40 years, incorporating recycled paper, cotton pulp, plants and flowers in her creations, and spends time passing on her skills to a new generation of creators as an instructor at Doña Ana Community College's community education programs.

At noon, Las Cruces painter Nancy Frost Begin will present "Creative Jumpstart for Your Watercolors." Begin, who moved to Las Cruces in 2007, works primarily in watercolors, but also spends time creating folk art, woodcut prints and oil paintings.

English-born Julie Ford Oliver, another Las Cruces-based artist, will give a demonstration titled "Landscaping in Oil" at 2 p.m., sharing her expertise as an oil, acrylic and egg tempera painter.

Saturday's demonstrations close with a 4 p.m. talk from interior designer Connie Hines, well-known in Las Cruces, centered on "Innovative and Creative Ways to Introduce Art into Your Home." The discussion will focus on giving those in attendance a certain level of comfort when it comes to displaying works of art in the home. With so much wonderful art available for purchase during the Las Cruces Arts Fair's three days, this is one you may not want to miss.

Arts fair demos continue Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m. with DACC art instructor Jan Archey's presentation, "Clay Isn't Just for Kids." Archey has a lengthy history working in clay, and shares her experience with students as the longest-running teaching career in DACC's Community Education program.

Indian-born Las Cruces printmaker and fabric artist Sudeshna Sengupta will give a presentation at noon titled "Silk Painting and Block Printing Techniques," offering her expertise in the medium and sharing some of the inspirations behind her own work.

The weekend of artist demonstrations closes with a 2 p.m. presentation of "The Process of Painting a Still Life in Pastels" by art educator Wayne Carl Huber. Huber brings more than 50 years of experience teaching art, and is well-known around Las Cruces for his teachings at both a private studio and out of the New America School located Downtown.

With so many demonstrations running throughout the weekend, presented by such an array of talented and award-winning artists and educators, who knows – maybe at next year's Las Cruces Arts Fair, you'll have your own masterpieces on display.

In addition to work by more than 80 artists on display at the Las Cruces Arts Fair – including George Coll's "Western Sunset" – several renowned local artists will hold demonstrations and give presentations throughout the weekend.

The color of a culture

James Tsoodle returns to LC Arts Fair

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Some images just grab you.

Perusing the nearly 100 booths at last year's Las Cruces Arts Fair, one artist – the German-born, Oklahoma-bred and Albuquerque-based James Tsoodle – seemed to keep a steady stream of art lovers in thrall with his stark, vivid portraits of warriors and peoples of the Northern and Southern Plains; stoic, fierce and powerful, but also deeply human, a certain intellect and intensity clear in their painted gazes.

After winning the Outstanding Booth Award at last year's fair, Tsoodle is returning to the fourth annual Las Cruces Arts Fair, held Friday through Sunday, March 14-16, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, as this year's featured artist.

Tsoodle was born in Frankfurt, Germany, to a military family, which necessitated their mobility. After a youth spent outside of Carnegie, Okla., the ancestral homeland of Tsoodle's own Kiowa people, Tsoodle's family relocated to northern New Mexico.

"My father was stationed here for a short time, and we liked it so much we came back," he said. "This has been my home ever since."

Tsoodle recalled the struggle growing up unable to read, with a case of dyslexia that went undiagnosed until he was nearly matriculated. Through the difficulties he experienced – or perhaps in spite of them – Tsoodle discovered his inherent gifts for the visual arts, both as a way to communicate and to discover his own worth.

"Communication was certainly a part of it, but it also had a lot to do with approval," Tsoodle said of unearthing his talents. "I think everyone, to some degree, is looking for something like that, something you excel in."

Tsoodle's youthful difficulties led him to hone another skill and, in time, he was forced to choose which of his two strongest talents to build a career from: painting or fighting. His chosen path away from the streets into the studio has been fulfilling, "and it's a lot easier on the body," he said with a laugh.

Committing to the visual arts, he worked first in pencil, drawing true-life portraits of children. He then worked in pen, then watercolor and, now, acrylic on canvas. Tsoodle's paintings of the Native American warriors of the Plains region are startlingly, stunningly colorful, far removed from the more subdued, muted earth tones of art reflecting the Pueblo and Navajo cultures that populated New Mexico, reflecting both his own ancestral heritage and his love of pigment.

"For one, myself, I just like color," he said, "but as far as the people, the subject matter – which right now is the Northern and Southern Plains warriors – if you look at the lifestyle and the way they actually dress, all that went on in the late 1800s, you get an understanding of why it was I went that more flamboyant direction.

Aside from the prominent boldness of tone present in Tsoodle's work, the eyes of his subjects, too, are striking, drawing the viewer in and holding them in their gaze.

"There's really something interesting about some faces that just grab you," he said, and that's what I've been drawn to

"He Brings the Thunder" by James Tsoodle, featured artist of the 2014 Las Cruces Arts Fair

– capturing that expression in portraits, that quick glimpse of something that really grabs you and holds you there in the moment. One thing I look for is a certain intensity in an individual. There's a lot that can be said without anything spoken."

Tsoodle's subjects are drawn from the remaining photographs of the Plains peoples taken in the 1800s, as well as the folkloric traditions passed down by his family.

"The ideas for subjects are basically endless because, one, stories were handed down to me orally by my grandfather and, two, there are archives of what pictures are out there still today," he said.

"My grandpa used to tell us the stories about our people. Most of the time, he didn't think we were really paying attention, but I was. I was picking up on those stories he passed down, and then from my father and from the other elders among our people. Now, it's almost a dry well – many of the generations coming up now, those stories are completely lost."

As the oral traditions of Tsoodle's people fade into the past, the artist said, in a way, his work helps to make those quieting stories heard.

"A lot of the stories among my people, they're not going to offer those things up," he said. "I think of my work as a way to share that with people and show them it's there – show them that strength, that beauty, that power."

Moving forward, Tsoodle said he sees a change in his work, which is becoming at once darker and lighter.

"At this point in my work, I see aspects of both, that light and that dark," he said. "I think of it this way: Sometimes a night can be very dark, and a morning extremely bright. If you don't have that dark night first, you cannot really understand how good that morning can be, how bright it can be. There's a brightness creeping into my work, and I'm very appreciative to God for that."

Museum events celebrate mathematics, archeology

Pi Day and Archeology Day set for March

By Barbara Chamberlin

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces city museums will offer two special events in March, one celebrating mathematics and the other uncovering the past.

The number pi begins 3.14, and Friday, March 14 (3-14-14), is Pi Day. In celebration, the Museum of Nature & Science, Museum of Art and Branigan Cultural Center will join the international party. All three museums will stay open late – until 7 p.m. – and offer a fun selection of activities that highlight the role of math in everyday life, art and culture.

Stroll through all three museums and learn how the Egyptians calculated fractions, marvel at the mathematical patterns all around us and try your hand at math trivia. Events start at 3 p.m. and run until 7 p.m. Take advantage of the special extended hours and plan a family event with a pizza dinner

– it is Pi Day, after all – or a meal at one of the Downtown restaurants.

On Saturday, March 15, the Branigan Cultural Center and the Bureau of Land Management host their annual Archeology Day in the courtyard. From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., join local archaeologists from the Bureau of Land Management, the U.S. Forest Service, New Mexico State University and regional archaeological firms to celebrate ancient history.

Learn how to make ancient tools, weave, make yucca string and coiled pottery and map an archaeological site. The event will feature demonstrations, hands-on activities and artifacts for you to examine.

All museum Pi Day and Archeology Day events are free and open to the public.

If you have an interest in supporting the educational efforts of our local museums, consider becoming a member of the Foundation for Las Cruces Museums (FLCM).

The FLCM is a nonprofit organization of individuals who choose to support the museums with financial and volunteer contributions. To join the foundation or to get more on events at all museums, visit www.foundationlcm.com or www.facebook.com/foundationlcmuseums.

Economy-class entertainment 'Non-Stop' explodes midair

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

It's best to think of the most recent annual Liam Neeson action offering, "Non-Stop," as what it is: a cobbled-together flying machine, made from the disparate parts of other, better films, somehow staying shakily aloft until finally falling to pieces under its own weight in the final leg of its flight.

Neeson stars as Bill Marks, a U.S. federal air marshal with an illustriously tragic past, which includes, but is not limited to, the death of his 8-year old daughter, the subsequent implosion of his marriage and his suspension from the NYPD that led him to enroll in the Air Marshal Service despite his debilitating fear of takeoffs and landings. And you thought your job was bad.

Strapped into a chair at 30,000 feet, London bound via New York City, Marks receives a text message on his secure line from an unidentified source threatening to kill one passenger every 20 minutes until the sum of $150 million is electronically transferred into a bank account. For the next hour, "Non-Stop" is a perfectly serviceable thriller, all trashy, Hitchcock-lite fun composed of fragments of that which came before.

At times, it's like "Speed" in the air, rather than "Speed 2," which was "Speed" in the water. Other times, there's shades of Neeson's better-known action roles in "Taken" and "Taken 2," except instead of his daughter, this unknown assailant has taken ... well, a plane full of people. There are pieces of "Air Force One" here, as well, which is a much better film and is probably, like, 99 cents to rent. Finally, there's a heavy dash of "When a Stranger Calls" – the call is coming from inside the plane.

Neeson spends much of his screen time texting, which, even with the stakes this high, is still just about as much fun as watching someone you know texting. Once the bodies start stacking up, though, "Non-Stop" finally takes off.

In its first hour, the film sticks to a fairly consistent cavalcade of red herrings: Is the culprit Marks' seatmate, the chatty but suspicious Jen Summers (Julianne Moore)? Is it the shifty-eyed co-pilot Kyle Rice, or perhaps his hush-hush flame and flight attendant, Nancy? Maybe it's Marks' fellow disgruntled brother in blue, Austin Reilly; maybe it's the bespectacled, Amsterdam-bound Tom; maybe it's Marks' fellow coke-smuggling marshal Jack Hammond. Heck, it could even be Marks himself, given his history of alcoholism, money and marital problems, not to mention the fact the account number in question is in – gasp – his name.

None of this makes much sense, none of it has to, and "Non-Stop" is at its best when the filmmakers leave it to its nonsensical devices. Dumb fun exists as a legitimate form of entertainment, and "Non-Stop" manages to maintain this balance for the first two acts. Things take a hard nosedive, though, when they have to pull together all these loose ends, and explodes in midair at the precise moment of its big reveal, which manages to be contrived and foregone but still completely unreasonable. It's predictable and out of nowhere all at once – the worst thing it could be.

In an attempt to make "Non-Stop" topical, the hijackers' motives – hint: it's about September 11, just like every other movie – instead commit theatrical terrorism on what was, until that point, a relatively smooth but pleasantly incoherent ride.

Neeson is typically good here, displaying a grizzled, tough fragility he hasn't shown on-screen since, well, last time he was grizzled and tough on screen. "Taken 2," probably. Moore is more-or-less interchangeable, and she isn't given much to work with to set herself apart.

The supporting cast is rather fun, given you'll recognize them from other things and wholly forget their roles in "Non-Stop."

"There's that guy from 'House of Cards,'" you'll say, "and there's Executive Assistant District Attorney Mike Cutter from 'Law & Order,' and that one guy from that other thing!"

It's a veritable who's who of "that guys."

Bewilderingly enough, Lupita Nyong'o, who just won an Academy Award for her heartbreaking performance in "12 Years a Slave," shows up as a flight attendant with exactly one spoken line, and that line is, "That was crazy." It's a real shame to follow-up her Oscar win with something so poorly conceived, but luckily for Nyong'o, the wave of support she's received will likely wash this silly little trifle out of anyone's minds.

All told, "Non-Stop" is a middling thriller, enough fun in its first part and terrible in its finale, with so many crosses and false leads your head will spin. Best to take your seat, strap in for the ride and don't think about it too much.

Just like air travel.

Checking the gate WSIFF gears up for exciting year

David Salcido
Through the lens

This year marks the 10th anniversary of the White Sands International Film Festival, and though it is still six months away, Sept. 3-7, work has already begun to make it the most exciting festival yet.

Why talk about that now? Because this is my first year as artistic director of the WSIFF and I believe there's no time like the present to start getting the word out about some of the developments currently in the works.

To begin with, we are marking 2014 as the year the WSIFF goes back to its roots. The original mission of the WSIFF was to draw attention to local filmmakers and the wonderful work they are doing in New Mexico. We still plan to showcase works from all over the world, but really, the idea of placing our local filmmakers next to their international brothers and sisters really appeals to us.

The thing I'd like everybody to remember is that this is your film festival. That's right. Not every city in the country has one, though sometimes it seems that way. The fact that we have something like this in Las Cruces, means it's the perfect opportunity for working filmmakers and students to put their best work in front of a receptive audience.

As for those who are not filmmakers, but who have a deep love for the medium, this is your chance to witness the future of filmmaking, not just in southern New Mexico, but the rest of the world as well.

Right now, we are rapidly approaching the deadline for the Student Promo Film contest. We've asked students at all levels, from middle school through college, to create 30- or 60-second spots promoting the WSIFF.

The winners of the contest will not only receive two VIP passes to the festival, they will have their promos showcased in Allen Theatres across the state for the months leading up to the festival. As an added bonus, the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau will use their connections with Cox Communications to have the spot aired throughout the state on cable, too. Talk about great exposure.

Another event we have coming up is our annual Flicks At The Farm fundraiser, taking place Thursday, April 3, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. In addition to announcing the Enchantment Award recipient and workshop leaders, as well as screening the winners of the Student Promo Film contest, this year we'll also spotlight a locally produced film.

Which one that will be is still to be determined at the time I'm writing this, but we'll make an announcement soon, with plans to have the filmmakers present to talk about their project and give it the kind of reception every locally produced film should get.

Tickets are already on sale for that event and I would encourage you to get yours now. The space at the Farm & Ranch Museum isn't huge and there's always a possibility that we will sell out. To get yours, call Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232.

Last year, we introduced the 48-Hour Film Frenzy, a contest in which filmmakers had 48 hours to write, cast, film and edit a short film. We had 10 teams enter and the results were pretty spectacular. We'll bring that event back, but this time around we'll have two different categories: one for students and one for professionals. You'll get to decide which category you want to compete in, but we are really encouraging middle and high school media students to get involved this year. We'll be presenting two separate awards to the winners, which will be given out during the awards ceremony for this year's WSIFF.

One thing we're doing a little differently this year is rearranging the schedule. We'll still have our opening film night on Wednesday, Sept. 3, but the screenings of festival entries will begin earlier that day, rather than on Thursday.

On Thursday night, we'll screen all of the film frenzy entries, just as we did last year, but hopefully with no glitches. Afterwards, we will host an after party for all of the entrants.

Friday, Sept. 5, will be the Awards Gala and this year the Enchantment Award, will also be given out that night, rather than on a separate night. The VIP party will be held afterwards.

Our workshops will be held on Saturday, Sept. 6, and we are working with industry leaders to make them not only informative, but memorable as well. Another new addition and something we are very excited about is the filmmaker mixer later that evening at White Sands National Monument. It'll be a great opportunity to show off some of our spectacular landscape to visiting filmmakers. We'll also do a screening of the festival's Audience Favorite award-winner right there at the dunes.

As always, festival entries will be shown Wednesday through Saturday, during the day, with Sunday dedicated to re-screening of the award winners.

That's a lot to digest all at once, but hopefully it will give a better understanding of what the board of directors for the WSIFF is busy working on, right now. As this year's artistic director, I want to welcome you all to the WSIFF's 10th anniversary. A little early, perhaps, but it's never too early to start letting you, the public, know what's in store for you over the coming months. Watch this space for more information as it develops.

Sustainable lawn care

Even in the desert, proper preparation is a green approach

By Aldo Grantham Finch
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Spring is right around the corner, which means it is now the time of the year to start thinking about your lawn.

Even in New Mexico, despite the ongoing drought, there are many who prefer a lush grass lawn to rocks, sand or xeriscaping. There are many benefits to this choice. Lawns absorb water and have a significant cooling effect. They provide oxygen, trap dust and dirt and prevent erosion, among many other boons.

A preponderance of dandelions in a lawn could be an indication that the soil's pH balance is severely off.

Because water is an issue in New Mexico, as is the trend toward moving away from dependence on chemical fertilizers, the best course of action is to improve the natural health of the lawn, so that it is effectively resistant to weeds, insects and diseases.

Knowing how and when to water will also decrease waste, without sacrificing the beauty a lawn can provide.

Here are a few tips to help achieve these lawncare goals:

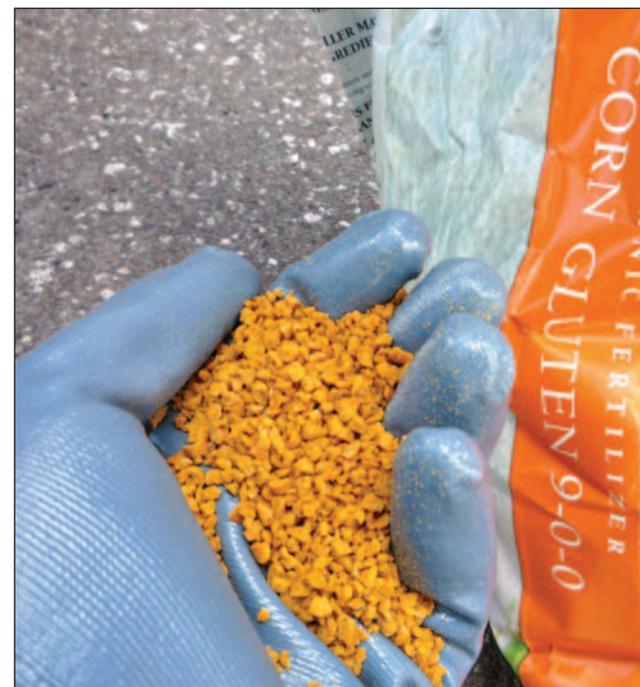

Choose the right grass to plant: Grasses vary in the type of climate they prefer, the amount of water and nutrients required, shade tolerance and more. Pay a visit to a local garden center and ask for a recommendation on the grass that is best suited for the area. Extra points for asking about Eco-lawn grass seed, a drought-resistant blend of grasses that require little or no mowing and no fertilizer.

Don't cut grass too short: There is a school of thought that says the shorter the better, but this isn't true. If grass is mowed too close to the ground, surface roots become exposed, the soil dries out faster and surface aeration is reduced. Most grass is at its healthiest when kept between 2.5 and 3.5 inches in length.

Don't water too often, but water deeply: Deep watering encourages deep root systems, which will make the lawn more drought resistant. Let it dry out completely before watering again. A clever way of controlling water usage is to put a measuring cup in the sprinkler zone. Most healthy lawns only need about 1 inch of water per week. When the cup fills to 1 inch, turn the sprinkler off. Another rule of thumb is to water early in the morning to avoid evaporation.

Leave clippings on the lawn: Instead of raking up all of the shorn grass and tossing it away, recycle it. For best effect, don't mow the lawn until it's about 4 inches tall, then set the mower to remove only 1 inch off the top. The clippings will settle down into the lawn, providing nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus equal to one application of fertilizer.

Become a weed watcher: It may sound silly, but homeowners can learn a lot about their lawn by the kinds of weeds that are growing there. Dandelions thrive at a pH level of about 7.5, which means gardeners sulfur may be needed to lower the pH. Clover and medic may be signs of a nitrogen deficiency, requiring compost or nitrogen rich fertilizer.

Corn Gluten meal is a healthy alternative to herbicides on the lawn, with a much greater kill rate for weeds.

Don't use pesticides or herbicides if at all possible: Pesticides kill the soil organisms that contribute to a healthy lawn. Corn gluten meal, a nontoxic byproduct of corn processing, has been researched for years at Iowa State University as a naturally effective alternative. The findings show that it not only adds nitrogen to your soil, it kills weed seedlings within days of application. Just one application before weeds begin to sprout, according to the study, reduces the weed survival rate by 60 percent. After a few years, the survival rate is reduced as much as 90 percent.

There are many more ways to enrich life naturally without giving up pleasures in favor of austerity. Homeowners doing their part, by keeping their lawn green and healthy, is just one example of sustainable living in modern times.

Aldo Grantham Finch is an ex-pat Brit currently living in the southwestern land of enchantment that is New Mexico, where he is a regular contributor to various magazines and newsletters on the subject of sustainable living. His book, "Sustainable Living In A Time Of Crisis" will be released sometime in 2015.

A bit o' the green and spicy

St. Patrick's Day recipes go for pot o' gold boldness

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

St. Patrick's Day is chock full of all things green – leprechauns, top hats, shamrocks and more.

For us wee green chileheads, 'tis our lucky day. We ignite traditional recipes with bits and bites of our favorite hot pods. Here are a few classic examples.

Slainte! (To your health!)

Irish Nachos

1 package corned beef points with seasoning

1/2 white onion, chopped
1 bottle pale ale
Hash browns, frozen
Jalapeno cheese, shredded

Combine onion, seasoning pack and pale ale in a Crock-Pot large enough to hold the corned beef. Add the corned beef and cook on low for 4 to 6 hours. Remove from Crock-Pot and shred the meat using two forks and pulling them apart.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Arrange hash browns in a 9-by-13-inch casserole dish and layer with shredded corned beef and jalapeño cheese. Bake for 7 to 10 minutes, or until cheese has melted. Top with veggies and sour cream, or other toppings of choice.

Top Hat Casserole

1 pound processed cheese, cubed
1 (13-ounce) can evaporated milk
1 pound cooked corned beef, shredded
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon garlic salt
Vegetable oil
12 corn tortillas
1/2 cup to 1 cup roasted green chile, chopped
1/2 cup onion, chopped
2 cups canned black beans, rinsed and drained

Melt cheese in evaporated milk in a heavy saucepan at low heat. In a medium-sized skillet, brown beef over medium heat. Drain. Season beef mixture with salt and garlic salt. Heat 1/2 inch of vegetable oil in a heavy pan at medium-high heat. Quickly dip each tortilla into the oil to soften. Drain on absorbent towels.

Layer all ingredients except cheese sauce in a greased, 2-quart casserole dish, beginning with a tortilla. Pour cheese sauce over layered ingredients and cover.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Serve with sour cream laced with green chile hot sauce if desired. Makes enough for 6 to 8.

Vegetarian Irish Whiskey Stew

2 cups carrots, peeled and sliced diagonally
2 cups leeks or onions, diced
1 cup parsnips, peeled and diced
1 cup sweet rutabaga, peeled and diced
2 cups green cabbage, shredded
1 cup barley
1 Anaheim or poblano green chile, stemmed, seeded and chopped
1 tablespoon paprika
1 (46-ounce) can

tomato juice
1/2 cup brandy or Irish whiskey
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon veggie broth, or water, your choice

Heat sautéing liquid in a large pan then add leeks and barley. Sauté until leeks soften, then add tomato juice. Stir and bring to a boil. Add remaining ingredients except brandy and salt. Cover; lower heat to a simmer.

Cook until vegetables are tender, about 30 to 40 minutes. Add brandy and salt to taste. Serve with mashed potatoes seasoned with garlic salt. Makes 4 to 6 generous servings.

Pot o' Green-Chile Cheddar Cheese Soup

1/2 cup onions, finely chopped
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
4 cups chicken broth
4 cups milk
1 cup carrots, cooked and chopped
1 cup celery, cooked and chopped
1/8 teaspoon paprika
1/2 cup roasted green chile, stemmed, peeled and chopped

1/2 pound cheddar cheese, finely shredded
Chopped cilantro
Salt to taste

Sauté the onions in butter until tender and transparent. Add flour and cornstarch, blending well. Add stock and milk gradually, stirring constantly. When boiling, add carrots, celery, paprika, green chile and cheese. Cook over low heat until cheese is melted. Add salt, if necessary.

Serve hot with finely chopped cilantro and sour cream spiked with green chile hot sauce. Makes enough for 6 to 8.

Serrano Cabbage Slaw

1 cup shredded cabbage
1 serrano pepper, stemmed, seeded and shredded
Juice from half a lime
2 teaspoons champagne vinegar
Red pepper flakes to taste

Add all ingredients to a mixing bowl and toss to combine. Refrigerate until ready to use. Makes 1 cup.

Money from the sun

Saving energy pays back big dividends

Mellow Honek
*Living Better
Solar Powered*

OK, so you're enjoying electric bills with a zero balance and regularly depositing checks from the electric company. Now that the financial impact of your solar power system is proven, wouldn't you like to take the next step and make it better?

It's not complicated, since it's all about the electricity. You can increase the financial win if you use less, make more, or both. Let's take a look at both of these options.

You can use less by just using less. Turn lights off and unplug the appliances not in use or rarely used in your home. Set the summer thermostat 1 or 2 degrees higher. Replace less-efficient appliances with higher-efficiency models when the time is right.

Perhaps you've tried a few of these ideas, but weren't sure if you were seeing results. After all, electric bills change every month and all you ever see is a 30-day-old total – not very good feedback when trying to alter behavior. If you could just see the results in real time, this would be much easier. The good news is, you can.

What you need is an energy monitoring system. Depending on your situation, they will pay for themselves in less than a year by helping you save kilowatt hours. These tools are easily found on the Internet and come in two varieties. One is a whole house energy monitor that lets you see the impact of every light switch. They're cool and easy to use.

A card-deck-sized monitor sits on your kitchen counter and shows your real-time electricity usage. After a while, you'll know just by looking at it what unnecessary appliances may be operating inside your home. One of my favorite devices is TED (The Energy Detective), which you can find on Amazon for about $250. If you have a pool, you can use TED to help fine tune your pump's run time and save lots of kilowatt hours.

The other tool is a Kill-A-Watt meter. These can also be found online, but they'll only set you back $25 to $50. Simply plug the meter into a wall outlet and plug the appliance to be tested into the meter. It has simple readouts showing how much electricity the appliance uses and will even translate that into dollars per year.

Either one of these devices will easily pay for itself.

The last way to use less electricity is to continue replacing those incandescent light bulbs with Compact Fluorescent Lamps (CFL) or switch to the newer light-emitting diode (LED) variety. The prices on LED lights have fallen through the floor and, in some cases, they could be the last bulbs you'll ever buy.

If you get your electricity from El Paso Electric Co., you can make the most of your current incentive program by taking advantage of the drastically lower solar panel prices.

If you installed a system on your home or business between 2009 and 2013, you have a Renewable Energy Certificate incentive, somewhere between 4 and 15 cents. You can expand your system, keep your incentive and watch your checks get bigger. In fact, you can expand for no money out of pocket with easy financing. The payback will be even faster than your original system.

There you have it. Make more, use less, or both, and leverage your great solar investment.

SIGNS OF A LEAK!

Do you know how to identify a natural gas leak? You might smell sulfur or rotten eggs, you may notice dirt or debris shooting up out of a hole in the ground, dead or dying vegetation in an otherwise green area, and a loud hissing or roaring sound near pipeline markers. These and many more are all telltale signs of a natural gas or pipeline leak. Use all your senses, even common sense and report any possible leaks to Zia Natural Gas Company. When in doubt call us out!

Humble beginnings

Rachel Christiansen
Defining moments

On Monday, Feb. 24, I got the email confirming my entry in the 25th annual Bataan Memorial Death March, to be held at White Sands Missile Range Sunday, March 23.

One month – that’s how much time I had left to prepare myself for what is quite possibly going to be one of the most physically challenging tasks I will ever undertake.

Truth be told, after reading the safety precautions regarding the 14- and 26-mile trek through the Chihuahuan Desert, I re-considered my decision. The weather conditions alone – which may include frigid a.m. temperatures inevitably leading to a sweltering desert afternoon, mixed with possible tornado-force winds – are enough to make me throw in the towel.

I also have quite a bit of work to do to get my body ready for the miles I’m about to force it to endure. Make no mistake, I’m no G.I. Jane. My weekend leisure activities typically include copious amounts of fried foods, cold beer and intermittent naps.

I do understand, however, that the thanks for the ability to enjoy these indolent activities are due to our armed forces, which protect our borders and fight our wars so the rest of us can feel safe to do whatsoever we please.

No amount of running is ever going to repay what some sacrifice. But the humility that occurs after completing an honorary run, as with the Bataan Memorial, is one I’ve only heard is overwhelming. It’s a feeling I want to experience first-hand.

In the case of the Bataan Death March, which began April 9, 1942, in the midst of World War II, 75,000 American and Filipino soldiers were forced to walk a treacherous 70 miles with little to no food and water.

Between 7,000 and 10,000 men died during the march, and about 25,000 died in the days following, in what is considered one of the worst atrocities in modern wartime history.

Those men were not given the time and supplies to prepare for what lay ahead of them, and they certainly did not have a choice in the matter.

I feel fortunate to have all of the above, and my freedom and health. Those two things have immeasurable value, and are things many are not lucky enough to have.

That’s my motivation to drag myself

Finding Las Cruces’ niche

Volunteer opportunities start from A to Z

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Charles Redman warmly meets and greets visitors of the Las Cruces Railroad Museum every Thursday and Friday morning.

From 9 a.m. to noon, Redman is there helping the visitors who may be passing through the area, have an interest in trains or are looking for some kid-friendly entertainment.

“It’s just interesting to see all the people who come in,” Redman said.

Redman has volunteered at the railroad museum for the past year, as well as several choirs that sing to residents in nursing homes and hospice facilities. A World War II Navy veteran, he will turn 95 in July.

Redman moved to Las Cruces in 1951, where he was an electrical engineer at White Sands Missile Range for 33 years before moving to New Mexico State University for a 13-year career working in solar energy.

“Older people need to get out and do things,” Redman said, adding that he also makes it a point to walk 1 mile every day.

After volunteering with the Bureau of Land Management for 15 years greeting guests and guiding youth tours at recreational sites, Redman said a bout with bad health disabled his speech for a few years, preventing him from doing the volunteer work he had grown accustomed to.

In 2013, Redman heard of the City of Las Cruces’ Volunteer Fair, and decided to check it out. That’s where he met the representatives of the Las Cruces Railroad Museum, and he has been showing up every week since then.

Held at the Branigan Cultural Center, last year’s Volunteer Fair placed more than 150 people among 36 nonprofit organizations needing the help of volunteers.

The attendance record is proof of not only the need for volunteers in the community, but of the willingness of Las Cruces citizens to lend helping hands.

The City of Las Cruces Network Volunteer Center coordinator Genevieve Kirk said the event is geared toward all ages, with the goal to help local nonprofits with recruitment for a variety of programs and services.

“A lot of college classes are requiring volunteer service now as part of their course, and this is a great place to get connected with those agencies,” Kirk said. “We also see a lot of retired volunteers, whether they’re new to this community or looking to make new friends.”

“There have been a ton of studies about the health benefits of volunteering, talking about lower levels of depression and higher levels of happiness associated with people who choose to volunteer.”

Volunteerism also contributes to lower levels of loneliness, she said, something that can pose high levels of emotional stress, especially in elders.

This year, there’s going to be ice cream involved. With Caliche’s Frozen Custard as the main sponsor, attendees of the volunteer fair can take a punch card, speak with five agencies about volunteer opportunities and redeem their punch card for a free frozen custard.

The event will also feature a kid’s activity table, in which they can participate in a service project and create get well cards for seniors at the Munson Senior Center, or just take one of several souvenirs home.

Kirk said the fair is a “one-stop shop” for those looking at how they can give back to their community.

“A lot of people, when they come to this community, they’re not really sure what’s out there for volunteer work, and this is really unique in that they can come one-stop shopping and explore volunteering with a wide array of opportunities,” Kirk said. “Whether it’s mentoring kids, office work, giving tours at city museums, there’s really something here for everyone.”

With already more than 40 nonprofit organizations signed up to attend the Volunteer Fair, the chance to get involved and give back to worthy causes is at Las Cruces’ fingertips.

The Volunteer Fair will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St.

Medical cannabis program adjustments

The New Mexico Department of Health announced proposed adjustments to the Medical Cannabis Program regulations within the confines of the current statute.

The department commissioned a survey in 2013 that addressed supply of medical cannabis relative to average patient use. The results showed that average patient use is exceeding available supply.

The department announced two adjustments to the program in order to meet the needs of qualified patients.

No. 1, the department is proposing to increase plant limit from 150 total plants and seedlings up to 150 mature plants and up to 300 seedlings. This will require a rule change and public comment before implementation. No. 2, the department plans to open the applications period to add up to 12 licensed, nonprofit producers. There are currently 23 licensed nonprofit producers. The application period will begin after the rule changes are finalized.

Currently, there are 10,621 patients in New Mexico's Medical Cannabis Program. For more information, visit www.nmhealth.org/mcp.

out of my peaceful slumber for 5:30 a.m. workouts. With a couple of weeks of training under my belt and my longest hike to date – 15.6 miles through the Doña Ana Mountains – I have realized some very important things.

No. 1, I need new shoes. Blisters the size of half-dollars are enough to awaken depths of despair not previously known. With the rocky and sandy terrain, I'm going for some new hiking boots. Let's just hope I can break them in on time for the march.

No. 2, I realized what it feels like when my body is at maximum physical capacity. You can't think of anything else, not one thing, but how bad it hurts.

And I've still got to muster up 11 more miles.

I'm sure somewhere my grandfather, a World War II Navy veteran and survivor of eras such as the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression – is laughing his butt off. He was always amused by my generation's ideas of hardship.

This one is for him.

Bone up on bone health

Calcium, exercise crucial to foundation

Julie Maager
Caring Decisions

The foundation for our body, the structure that holds us up, is our bones.

Up to about age 30, we are continually adding bone and building bone mass. These bones not only hold us up, they protect our organs, anchor our muscles and allow us to move. After age 30, however, we are gradually and continually losing bone mass, putting us at risk for osteoporosis and fractures.

For tips on how to keep bones healthy, I talked to Good Samaritan Society-Las Cruces Village's Registered Dietician Rachel Mackintosh and Director of Rehabilitation, physical therapist Shane Sheehan.

The most important nutrient to build and maintain bones is calcium. Adults need about 1,000 milligrams of calcium a day; the recommendation for women older than 50 and men older than 70 is 1,200 milligrams.

"Milk is probably the cheapest and easiest way to get calcium," Mackintosh said. "An 8-ounce glass of milk has 300 milligrams of calcium, so three glasses a day will get you most of the way there."

If you aren't a milk drinker, there are still ways to get calcium from your diet. Other dairy products – yogurt, cheese and (yes!) ice cream – are all good sources. Almond milk is also a calcium-packed alternative. Other good choices are calcium-fortified orange juice or tofu.

Fish with the bones, such as anchovies or sardines, are also good, Mackintosh said. When preparing to sauté vegetables or other foods, she suggested throwing an anchovy into the olive oil before adding your ingredients.

What should you not consume? Cola. "Colas are high in phosphorus," Mackintosh said.

Your body is constantly balancing the ratio of calcium to phosphorus in your system. If you drink an excessive amount of cola, "your body will actually pull calcium out of your bones to offset the phosphorus," Mackintosh said.

Is surpassing your recommended calcium intake even better? No. Mackintosh said there has been no benefit shown from higher levels of calcium intake. Excessive calcium intake interferes with iron absorption and will make you anemic.

Vitamin D helps your body absorb calcium. Milk is fortified with vitamin D and many calcium supplements also contain vitamin D. It is also the one nutrient your body can make with the help of the sun.

"Twenty minutes a day of sunshine will produce enough vitamin D to prevent a deficiency," Mackintosh said.

Another reason to stay physically active – it is good for your bones.

"Putting weight through your bones strengthens them," Sheehan said.

Yoga, weight training and tennis are all great, but one of the best choices is also cheap, accessible and suitable for almost any fitness level: walking.

"One of the best things you can do is just walk," Sheehan said. "Walking puts a tremendous amount of pressure through your joints and strengthens them."

So, put on your walking shoes, get moving and reward yourself afterward with a nice glass of chocolate almond milk. Your bones will thank you.

Emma Graley and her mother, Ashley Graley, are part of this year's March of Dimes Ambassador Family in Las Cruces. Emma went through spina bifida surgery while in the womb. Now 7 months old, Emma is meeting all of her developmental milestones. The Graleys attended the March of Dimes Kickoff Breakfast Thursday, Feb. 27, at the Las Cruces Convention Center. The organization is recruiting walkers and fundraising teams for its annual March for Babies, held Saturday, April 26, at Young Park.
