Wage debate splits council

Series planned for Great Conversations

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

The city will be providing a venue for a series of Great Conversations about the minimum wage after a Las Cruces City Council work session Monday, Feb. 24, resulted in little consensus about what course of action to take.

Prompting the need for a working session on the minimum wage issues was a proposal by councillors Miguel Silva and Greg Smith to form an ad hoc committee on the contentious issue. While social justice advocates are pushing the city to raise the minimum wage, local businesses are pushing back, saying raising the minimum wage would make it more difficult – even impossible, according to some – to do business in the city.

At the start of the meeting, Silva said he still backed the idea of forming a committee, calling it “golden opportunity” to bring the different sides together to talk to each other.

“I view my role, as a city councillor, is to unite the community, instead of driving a wedge to divide the community,” Silva said.

The business community knows the minimum wage needs to be addressed, Silva said, and would like to be active participants in the discussions.

But Councillor Olga Pedroza characterized the committee proposal as a delaying tactic, unless the committee is charged with putting forth a proposal. But even that is just the councillors “shrugging our responsibility,” Pedroza said.

“People can’t afford to wait,” she said. “Saying the poor are always with us can’t be used as an excuse to not help them.”

Pedroza said there is ample evidence to show raising the minimum wage will be good for the community, so she didn’t see any reason for the council to delay taking action.

NMSU to revisit on-campus hotel

Interested parties sought

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University is seeking people or companies that would be interested in creating a three-star hotel on campus near the convention center.

NMSU will soon be putting out a Request for Qualification and Development Concepts (RFQ) to begin getting the process back on track for the hotel, which would also give real-world experience to students in the hospitality and tourism program.

The idea for a hotel to complement experience students at the Las Cruces Convention Center was there in the beginning, when NMSU worked with the City of Las Cruces to provide land for the center. But when the center opened in late 2010, the economy was still reeling from the housing market collapse, so the hotel idea was put on hold.

March 4 elections to decide local leaders

Four county communities voting

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

On Tuesday, March 4, voters in Mesilla, Hatch, Sunland Park and Anthony, N.M., will decide on candidates in open races for municipal government positions.

The Mesilla mayoral race between incumbent Nora Barraza and Trustee Jesus Caro Jr. took an unexpected turn a week before voting when the town’s marshal, Tom Austin, accused Barraza of “misappropriation of funds” in a letter sent to trustees but also shared with the news media.

The letter didn’t go into specifics, but referenced variances in overtime expenditures. Barraza is refuting the accusations, saying Austin hasn’t followed her orders to keep overtime down.

In smaller municipalities such as Mesilla, the mayor takes on many administrative duties a city manager would handle, as in Las Cruces. Until Austin’s letter, Caro’s main criticism of Barraza was that she acted too independent of the Board of Trustees

Leadership solid at NMSU Carruthers, Howard bring positive approach

Last week I had lunch with my old friend and colleague, Darrell Pehr, on the New Mexico State University campus.

It was Feb. 19 and yet the weather was nice enough we could eat outside on the picnic tables outside Einstein Bros. Bagels.

Before and after lunch, I ambled the long way, an excuse to enjoy the weather and take in a little slice of college life.

There's always something inspiring and uplifting about a college campus, filled with people actively working on their goals, many of them younger, full of life and promise.

That feeling was enhanced by the sight of several trees that had been coaxed into budding by the recent high temperatures.

A year ago at this time, New Mexico State University was in a state of flux.

An interim president was in place and there was debate about who should take over the university's leadership. Provost Wendy Wilkins resigned, with a letter critical of morale, direction and financial approaches at NMSU.

Then, on May 6, 2013, regents named Garrey Carruthers as NMSU's 27th president.

That did not necessarily settle the debate. The presidency was earned on a 3-2 vote, with regents split along political party lines between former New Mexico Republican Gov. Carruthers and another strong candidate, former NMSU department head Dan Howard.

A short time later Carruthers himself ended the debate. Knowing the quality and popularity of Howard, Carruthers authorized the regents to skip a lengthy, expensive national search to fill NMSU's open provost and executive vice president position. After all, Howard had just been through such a search as a presidential candidate, and was the clear second choice for that position.

So in August, the regents named Howard as NMSU's executive vice president and provost.

Carruthers hit the ground running in June, and has not let up.

With his business and professional experience, Carruthers has developed an outstanding knack for raising money. That has been an important part of his tenure so far, and he has quickly built a good foundation for bringing important funds to NMSU.

Carruthers' affable personality has served him well both on and off campus. He has been open, accessible and active. With his experience as governor, Carruthers moves as easily in the halls of government in Santa Fe as he does in the halls of the NMSU campus. That skill serves him and the university well. Pehr, who regularly visits NMSU's extension offices around the state, said Carruthers' agricultural background and status as the only former Aggie to be president, has made him a hit outside Las Cruces as well.

Howard is not quite the recognizable public figure as Carruthers, but he spent 20 years teaching at NMSU. When he was a candidate for president, he received a great deal of support from current faculty who knew him well. Howard has his own affability and seems quite comfortable in his position.

The president is the university's top administrative official, while the provost is the top academic official.

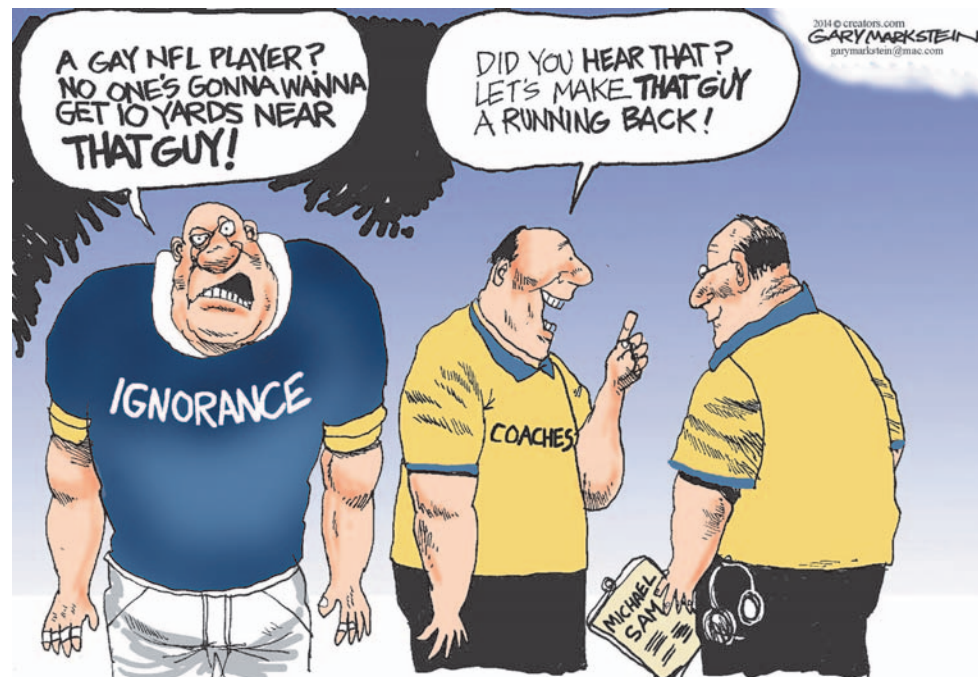

From my observations, it appears Carruthers and Howard are as popular as two in their position can be. While everyone in a leadership position will have detractors, there appear to be few in this case. Each is energized and enthusiastic about their roles.

Their familiarity and experience with NMSU gives them the institutional knowledge to be effective and the pride to move the university forward.

Students typically are more involved with their classes, activities and social lives than with who's actually running the college. While probably many would recognize Carruthers, and some would recognize Howard, they aren't figures who occupy a very big space in students' minds. That's understandable and probably perfectly fine.

The reverse is not true, however. Carruthers and Howard are focused deeply on the students, their futures and the opportunity NMSU provides them.

So while strolling on campus last week felt in many ways like strolling across any campus in America, there was a specific air of promise, an immediate sense of positivity on the International Mall at NMSU.

Letters to the editor

Food stamps can't cure poverty

As a lawyer, I rarely take the time to write a letter to the editor. I was moved to do so when I read the column you ran by Rev. Thomas Baca on Feb. 14. I echo Rev. Baca's observation that poverty is more than "malnutrition."

If you've ever missed a paycheck or lost a job, you know that poverty is more than lack of food – it's the inability to make rent, cover the cost of you or your child's lab, physician and hospital fees, find eight quarters for the washing machine, pay for your books and tuition on time and keep your phone service on.

It's the difference between completing your college degree or staying in a low-wage job and going home each night when you're exhausted from work to care for elderly parents, sick siblings or a newborn child. Poverty is the price we pay, as a community, when we apply a different, lower standard to others than the one we apply to ourselves. It invites despair, and cultural, intellectual and moral reliance on knee-jerk solutions to complex problems, conditions that can't be cured with a food stamp.

WPA writers and photographers documented the effects of The Great Depression that led to the "War On Poverty." If my experience representing abused and neglected children and their parents is any indication, those effects are manifest in local families notwithstanding the presence of Child Protective Services with its various social workers and Holloman Air Force Base with its industry of drones and trained soldiers ready to deploy outside the area on a moment's notice.

When respected colleagues tell me our area's economic problems are due to illegal immigrants "stealing our jobs and taking our licenses," point out with pride that "we even have a Buffalo Wild Wings," speak favorably of creating "tax incentives" for big business rather than supporting small, locally owned concerns, and wish me a "great day" on their way to make a deposit in one of our many, many banks, I'm reminded that poverty isn't confined to the poor.

Thank you, Rev. Baca, for your caring, insightful and deeply touching commentary. I wish there were more people who thought like you.

An ungrateful government

Politicians give veterans little respect

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

"You haven't an arm, you haven't a leg, you're an armless, boneless, chickenless egg. You'll have to be put with a bowl out to beg. Oh Johnny I hardly knew ya." – 19th century Irish anti-war song

The flowers of our youth march off to war carrying the honor of our nation into battle.

Some come back only to be buried; others come back with the ravages of war still upon them. Then, tragically, over the years, the grateful nation that sent them to war with bands playing becomes an ungrateful nation because of the cost of dealing with those war injuries.

I was thinking about this because the U. S. Department of Veterans Affairs has announced, 30 years later than they should have, that a clinic is opening in Las Cruces to allow the large population of veterans in the area easier access to services.

Several veterans spoke last week with guarded optimism about this development. They have every right to be guarded in their optimism about what the Department of Veterans Affairs is going to do for them. Many have spent years not being treated with respect by an ungrateful nation, despite their service to our country.

Politicians who did not serve in the military themselves are fond of saying, "Thanks for your service." But do they mean it? Less than 20 percent of the current Congress served in the military. Recently I quoted in another column the saying, "A man of words and not of deeds is like a garden full of weeds."

That is what I think of our current crop of politicians locally, statewide and nationally. Most, not all, spout their support for the military and veterans, but vote otherwise. They try to get the vote of veterans without actually supporting them.

One of my friends served honorably in Vietnam and is suffering years later the Agent

Orange effects Congress refuses to adequately address. He has worked tirelessly over the many years, when not incapacitated by this illness, for Congress to fix the concurrent receipt problem where veterans are not treated as well as citizens who never went into combat.

There is a strong anti-military climate in our country. Recruiters are not welcome in many high schools and colleges. Supreme Court Justice Elena Kagan restricted military recruiter access to Harvard Law students after U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit ruled law schools could do so. Ask any military recruiter how he or she is treated in schools. It is obvious the disdain for the military by people they protect with their lives.

Example: In every election, overseas serving military are often denied their vote by rules back home. This is something veterans talk to me about often. They note that the military vote could have tipped several elections, but the rules for voting were written such that non-citizens can vote but not the overseas military.

Consider this: In almost every community there are students who in the future might step between us and danger, but they see how the military is treated. Regardless of the fact that the law requires all young men to sign up for selective service, I doubt those men will serve with anything less than a gun to their heads because of the attitudes being inculcated in our youth about the military.

So who in the future will fight for our freedom against the forces of evil worldwide? Congress has left a bad taste in the mouths of the very people (veterans and the military now serving) who could encourage young people to serve their nation. These acts of an ungrateful nation ensure young people who might protect us in the future will do everything in their power to not serve.

I am profoundly grateful for the service to our country by our military and deeply saddened by the treatment they receive from this ungrateful government.

Michael Swickard can be contacted at michael@swickard.com.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

A gift of glasses

We have lots of folks come through our office and home. We try to be hospitable. While cleaning up the office, I found a pair of glasses. They were the frameless kind that make you look like Benjamin Franklin. I asked around the office, yet no one claimed them.

In the midst of all this I had been trying to buy a pair of glasses on the Internet. I had actually bought several pair on Craigslist, but since I have astigmatism in my left eye it was hard to find one with my requirements. I did get a pair whose right lens was for astigmatism (or whatever optometrists call our handicap).

So my choice was to take out the right astigmatic lens, drill little holes on each side big enough to insert a rubber band, and be a one-lens left-eyed bandit - which I did. The right lens looked good on my left eye, except I had to get within 2 inches to get an object into focus.

But then, like manna from heaven, I found those glasses in the office. I can read with them a little out of the right eye and the left eye is fuzzy anyway, but the best part is I got them for free.

I wear good boots (Paul Bond) when I'm on the road, then they graduate down to my spur boots and that pretty much wears them plum out. But for everyday doin' chores, I go to our local western store and look for work boots on sale. A hundred dollars is my top price. Obviously, since price and rubber soles are the biggest factors, the size is never quite right. But, it only costs me $12 at Walmart to get plastic insoles that can change a 9.5 double E to a 10 C. And I only limp for a week or two till I get them broke in. Heck of a deal!

I like wearing my Wranglers when I'm dressed up, but for everyday workin' jeans I get those no-name brands at K Mart. They aren't pretty. They don't fit. But it's impossible to wear them out. They must be made of NASA asteroid repellent. They are like a pair of shark boots I bought one time (yes, second-hand) at Ledy's boots in Ft. Worth. The longer I wore them the uglier they got. But I wore those boots for five years until I put them out of my misery. I've got jeans older than my son and he's old enough to vote. You can't say I didn't get my money's worth.

Every couple of years I buy a new used vehicle. Since I buy on the low end I usually have to buy more of them and buy them more often. It's hard to turn down a bargain. I buy horses that way. Sometimes you have to trade in temperament for high mileage. Seems like if he's old he's a plug and if he's young he'll buck you off.

I guess life is a matter of give and take. Do you want to see well or look good? Like these glasses I found. See or be seen, I always say.

Letters to the editor

Wall Street rules

Michael Swickard's quote from Milton Friedman about the only purpose of a corporation is to make money is contradicted by the remainder of the quote which is to do so while remaining within the rules of honesty. Wall Street sets the economic rules for the whole country, including New Mexico.

For more than 200 years, Wall Street has ignored common moral rules concerning both honesty and violence. Whether it is open bribery to get our government to do their dirty work (gunboat diplomacy), or corrupting our legislatures and courts to simply legalize dishonest, fraudulent behavior, Wall Street has never acknowledged any higher law than to pile up money regardless of the damage done to people.

You cannot have both a free and a dishonest, ruthless market. It self destructs, which is what is happening now.

Charles Clements

Tired of all the whining

I'm getting old and ornery. I lose patience easily with the whiners and the give me folks.

I had to walk to school uphill, both ways, in chest deep snow when I was a boy.

Child abuse was a privilege in those days. You didn't hear about the ravages of "dodge ball." I rode a bicycle all over hell's creation without knee pads or a helmet.

I rode to a swamp miles away from home to swim in a muddy pond infested with snapping turtles the size of Volkswagens – the town called it the City Recreational Lake.

I climbed to the top of the highest pine trees with my friends, at the consternation of the moms who could see us.

There is a bit to say about "raise them to be lawyers and doctors and such," but a tad of cowboy and cowgirl is good for kids.

No sir, the good old days made this country what it is, and don't ever forget it! I say that tongue-in-cheek, of course.

Ronald Keith

Uncivil wars

I have long been interested in what sort of factors contribute to intergenerational vendettas and sectarian warfare. The Hatfields and McCoys; centuries old conflicts between Orange and Green Irish; and millennial old warfare between some sects in the Middle East have always puzzled me. How can people harbor grudges with folks they have never laid eyes on?

A recent letter in this section of the paper helped me to understand how these things happen. Sweeping generalities combined with historic nonsense is always a good start. Our Founding Fathers were genetically predisposed to plunder and piracy? Really? Is that all we can find in the history of this country? Our entire country was built on prison and slave labor? And our story from that day forward is nothing but a scam and an ugly collusion between the worst of our society? Assuming this is anywhere near the reality of our history, then how in the world did we get to where we are? How did we fight and survive a civil war to free those slaves, and how did we bleed and die on foreign shores to save others from despots and how is that this greedy, corrupt society has done more to advance the quality of life for millions than any society in recorded history?

Granted our current crony capitalism (the melding of big business, big labor and big corporations) has some sins to repent of, but in the process do we actually toss out the entire baby with the dirty bath water? Reading a recent comment in this paper it would seem to me that some are content to conclude that nothing good has come from "free market" because there are some soiled parts to that past. Again, if this is true, then what is the alternative, because pointing the finger is not a solution. Adam Smith wrote his book as an alternative to what was known in his time. Are there any other viable alternatives known to us today? There may be something hiding out there, but so far I have not seen it being presented to discussion. Not on this Earth at least.

Ron Cavill

Symposium a success

I would like to thank New Mexico State University's Alpha Phi Sigma National Criminal Justice Honor Society and professor Andrea Joseph for their hard work and commitment to their vision of "together we can protect a child" for the Child Endagerment Symposium Jan. 31.

As Karl Menniger stated, "What is done to children, they will do to society." According to the Annie E. Casey Foundation's 2013 Kids Count Profile, New Mexico ranks 50th in child well being. New Mexico communities must come together to correct this disgrace and address the root causes.

A recent budget report released by the Legislative Finance Committee shows a vacancy rate of 15 percent in the Protective Services Division with 29 unfilled caseworker positions last month.

New Mexico must step up to correct and solve these serious issues.

Tragedy transcends rivalry

Red and blue, green and gold come together

By Jeff Matthews

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

When describing the heat and passion of the Las Cruces-Mayfield high school rivalry, I've often used this line: "They have a mutual respect and a mutual disgust for each other."

What happened Tuesday, Feb. 25, at a boys basketball game – a game the Mayfield Trojans weren't even playing in – transcends athletics, rivalry and everything Bulldawgs and Trojans. It was downright moving and neighborly.

The Las Cruces Bulldawg boosters handed out green ribbons for fans to wear while also soliciting donations during the Las Cruces-Alamogordo District Tournament game Tuesday, Feb. 25. The efforts were to show support for Mayfield boys basketball head coach Tommy Morrow and his family. A devastating fire burned the Morrow house to the ground Friday while the Trojans were clinching the District 3-5-A regular season title against Oñate High School.

Morrow got first word of the blaze Friday, Feb. 21, during a post-game interview that his house was in flames. He left immediately to check on what was eventually found to be a total loss.

The highs of winning the district championship were quickly replaced with the lows of becoming homeless. Six people lived in the Morrow household. It could overwhelm anyone, but the community has come through from almost the first minute.

"It started that night," Morrow said. "Standing there, looking at the flames, people were stuffing money in my pockets. So that was Friday night. Then Sunday morning was that unbelievable car wash. It was spectacular."

The Bulldawg basketball booster club raised $1,836 from fans who attended the Las Cruces-Alamogordo district tournament game.

The game was halted at the end of the third quarter with Las Cruces trailing by two so Las Cruces head coach William Benjamin could present the cash to coach Morrow. (See photo on page A1.)

Everyone in the gym, Bulldawg fans, Trojan coaches and players, Alamogordo fans and people there without any allegiance rose in unison giving Morrow a standing ovation. Even the game officials were applauding.

You don't see that every day.

Alamogordo guard JoJo Jones went to midcourt to greet Morrow as the ovation continued. Then Benjamin grabbed a microphone and spoke briefly about community and helping others.

"That could've been anybody's house. Any one of our houses," Benjamin said.

"I'm having trouble putting this into words because of this damn game," Benjamin added, drawing laughs as the game was drama-filled and heated at the moment of the presentation.

"I'm pleased how the community came out and supported Tommy tonight. I just wanted to do something. Not only is he a coach, an educator and a leader, rivalry aside, red and blue, green and gold, it doesn't really matter. This is about community in a time of need."

Morrow took the microphone and addressed the standing crowd. He thanked all of Las Cruces on this night in the middle of the basketball floor of his biggest rival. Morrow was truly touched.

"This right here," Morrow said. "It is just so classy."

He accepted the bags stuffed with cash. You want to talk about a feel good moment.

Earlier, Morrow talked about the shock of losing everything balanced by the generosity seen afterward.

"A lot of our friends are teachers," Morrow said. "We know what teachers have. And they are giving until it hurts. Normally we would say, 'No, No.' But everybody knows we aren't in a position to say no. We've had strangers give us significant amounts. And they don't want to tell us their name. They just say, 'No, you need this. We know what you're about; take it. It's humbling, it really is. Every day is a new revelation.'"

By the way, the game Tuesday was exceptional. Las Cruces won 71-64 in overtime.

A lot of people walked away from that game from different parts of Las Cruces, different parts of the state, Alamogordo fans pitched in too, having contributed to a family's uplifting in a rival's gym.

Sometimes it's not about the scoreboard.

Hotel

Ben Woods, NMSU senior vice president for external relations and chief of staff, said the RFQ is for the same 3.8 acres on the southeast corner of University Avenue and East Union Avenue, across from the convention center.

NMSU President Garrey Carruthers has said he wants to see if the on-campus hotel idea can work with the economy now more stable.

Woods said the RFQ is for a three-star, limited-service hotel because that is what a study found the Las Cruces market could use more of – but that doesn't mean it can't be upgraded if the hotel performs well. The RFQ does give respondents the flexibility to submit a proposal for a higher quality hotel and doesn't give a room limit, which the RFQ states should be determined by market conditions.

The goal for NMSU in the RFQ, Woods said, is to see if someone or a company is willing to build the hotel and work with the hospitality and tourism program while ensuring NMSU gets a fair return on the leasing of the land.

The draft of the RFQ is 22 pages long and covers a two-step process in which interested parties can submit their qualifications and concepts for review by university officials and regents. One or more may be selected for further review and interviews. NMSU will then rank the interviewed respondents to determine the preferred respondent.

The RFQ goes into detail about the land, its location next to the convention center and its accessibility to Interstates 25 and 10. The RFQ notes the concept of the hotel is in line with the university's desire to see University Avenue become a corridor more interactive with the community. The hotel should "should reflect the regional influences that shaped the campus, celebrating the links to its agricultural past," the draft RFQ states.

The RFQ states the lease will include details of how the hotel would provide opportunities for "internships, experiential learning and joint programs" with the NMSU School of Hotel Restaurant and Tourism Management.

The draft RFQ does not yet have deadlines or timelines set for the process.

Elections

– and Caro has been critical of over-enforcement by the marshal's department in his campaign.

With Caro running for mayor, that leaves only one incumbent running for the board's two open position – Linda Flores. Four others are running for the two open slots, Christopher Alexander, Charles Bourger Jr., Russell Hernandez and Stephanie Johnson Burick. The trustees are elected at large, meaning the top two vote earners are elected to the board.

Most of the campaign debate has been about how the tourist town can better attract visitors, because the town government gets very little from property taxes and is very dependent on gross receipts taxes.

There's also a mayor's race in the village of Hatch. Andy Nuñez is the current mayor. He was selected by the trustees to finish the term left vacant by the death of Judd Nordyke last year. Nuñez, a former state representative, is also running for the Legislature as a Republican after failing to be elected as an independent after he left the Democratic Party.

Challenging Nuñez as mayor is former village trustee Lloyd Burns.

As in Mesilla, Hatch has two trustee openings to be elected at large, with four candidates running – incumbents Kathie Marie Franzoy and Roberto Torres – challenged by Dave Sment and Corey Watkins.

Voters in Sunland Park will elect a municipal judge and City Council representatives for districts 1, 2 and 3.

Candidates for the District 1 seat are Kenneth Giove, Christian Lira, Alberto Barrigan and Carmen Rodriguez. Only one candidate, Francisco Jaime, filed for the council's District 2 seat. Candidates for District 3 are Jaime Robles and Daniel De Los Santos.

Sunland Park incumbent Municipal Judge Lisette Salinas is being challenged by Gerardo Hernandez and Jesus Soto.

In Anthony, N.M., there are two city trustee positions open. Incumbents Betty Gonzalez and Diana Murillo are unopposed for re-election.

The last day for early voting is from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28.

Voting on Tuesday, Election Day, is from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Wage

Councillor Nathan Small said people who work for minimum wage can't take time off to serve on a committee, so such a group would be, by default, exclusionary. Small noted there is a group currently working on putting a minimum wage question on a ballot, and said the council should not stand in the way of people being actively engaged in their government.

With the committee proposal lacking support on the council, the idea of holding a series of Great Conversations was discussed. Great Conversations are open discussions led by an experienced facilitator that can guide participants to finding common ground on controversial topics.

But Small said he was against anything that could influence the process of citizens attempting a ballot referendum.

"I'm growing increasingly dismayed as what I perceive as subtly subverting the charter process for citizens to be able to determine if they want to do an initiative in our community," he said.

Councillor Gill Sorg said he was against the idea of committee, but could support the Great Conversations if they helped provide a better community dialogue. So long as the forums reflected all sides of the argument, Sorg said they should be televised and shown on the Internet.

The Great Conversations series is credited with clearing impediments to allow some homeless people to live in a tent city at the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope. Great Conversations facilitator Randy Harris said the series of minimum wage conversations could form a compromise, but might not.

"You don't know until you try," Harris said.

Ceil Levatino, the newest city councillor, said she was opposed to raising the minimum wage during the current state of the economic sluggishness.

"I'm not philosophically opposed to raising the minimum wage, but this is a lousy time to be doing it," she said.

Levatino said she found it curious that those wanting to raise the minimum wage appeared to be the most against having a public conversation about it. She said the business community is willing to have the conversation. Many of the businesses in Las Cruces are small and would either have to cut back hiring more workers or reduce the number of workers.

Mike Beckett, president of COAS Book Stores, said raising the minimum wage could put him out of business, which almost happened the last time the minimum wage was raised. Even a $1 an hour raise would cost his used book store business, which employs 35 people, $50,000 over the course of a year, he said, and that could be too much of a cost to keep his doors open.

The minimum wage in Las Cruces is $7.50 per hour – 25 cents more than the federal requirement.

State Rep. Bill McCamley, D-Las Cruces, said any argument made about raising the minimum wage hurting the economy and businesses was reflected in how places fared that did raise the minimum wage independently of the federal government. Idaho and New Jersey raised minimum wages with no loss of businesses, he said. In Santa Fe, some businesses did better, and there has been no statistical drop in the number of jobs in the city, he said.

Adopt a cactus

Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park will be hosting at Plant It! Cactus Adoption and Native Plant Day from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, March 1.

Just in time for spring planting, people can adopt a rescued cactus and learn about native southern New Mexico plants. The rescued cacti can be planted at home or in the desert park.

Spring is the time to get into your garden and plant.

Jack Carter, author of "Trees and Shrubs of New Mexico," will teach people how to identify local plants, and the Las Cruces chapter of the Native Plant Society of New Mexico will provide more information about native plants.

There will also be fun activities for kids.

To get to the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park north of Las Cruces: From Interstate 25, head east on U.S. Highway 70 and take the Mesa Grande Road exit at Oñate High School. Make a U-turn under the highway to head west and stay in the right lane onto the frontage road. Turn right (north) on Jornada Road. Follow Jornada Road for 6.4 miles and turn left at the Chihuahuan Desert Nature Park sign. Follow the entrance road to the parking area and trailhead. The nature park is open from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Monthly model rockets

Join the Fellowship of Las Cruces Area Rocketry Enthusiasts (FLARE) at its monthly Sport Rocket Launch event from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, March 1, at the Waterfalls Launch Site.

Free to the public, all are welcome. Fly your rockets or learn about the hobby of model rocketry.

To find the Waterfalls Launch Site, click on the launches link at www.flare-rocketry.com or contact Thomas Kindig at 201-3336.

Social dancers to gather

The Social Dancers of Las Cruces will host a dance from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at Court Youth Center, 402 W. Court Ave. Music will be provided by Mark Coker. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Admission is $6.

For more information, call 532-9225.

Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park events full

On Saturday, March 1, there will be multiple events hosted at the Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park.

Starting at 8:15 a.m., there will be a guided bird walk in the park.

From 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., members of the geocaching groups of Las Cruces will be providing an introduction to geocaching. Geocaching is a real-world, outdoor treasure hunting game using GPS-enabled devices. Participants navigate to a specific set of GPS coordinates and then attempt to find the geocache (container) hidden at that location. No matter what your skill level, there will be something for all at the Geocaching 101 event. Learn the do's and don'ts of geocaching, geocaching terminology and using a GPS, and participate in finding geocaches. GPS devices will be available to use during this program.

At 1 p.m., the Doña Ana Camera Club will hold the opening of an exhibit of the photographs selected in last year's contest. Several of the photographers will be attending this exhibit opening.

At 7 p.m., John Gilkison, president of the National Public Observatory, will provide a closer look at a variety of objects in the night sky. Of particular interest this evening should be Orion, Sirius and Canopus as they transit the meridian during the program. Jupiter will also be overhead. Telescopes will be on hand for you to view these celestial objects.

Shaded picnic tables are available at the park, but due to drought conditions, no grills are allowed. Standard $5 per car entrance fee will be charged.

For more information, visit www.mvbosquefriends.org or call 635-3735.

Historical actors to liven up Lake Lucero tour

White Sands National Monument rangers will be assisted by living history actors from the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum on a journey through the 10,000 years of human habitation in the Tularosa Basin.

During the hike to Lake Lucero, colorful characters such as the famous lawman Pat Garrett and local dignitary Tom Charles, who led the fight to establish a national monument, will share the rich history of the basin.

Program fee is $3 per adult for those 16 years and older, $1.50 for children and America the Beautiful Senior and Access pass holders.

Reservations are required at www.nps.gov/whsa. All tour reservations must be made through the website. This four-hour program will take place on the Lake Lucero trail. The trail is uneven, rocky and has a grade of 2 to 3 percent.

Toastmasters Clubs to hold Open House

Branigan Cultural Center, 500 N. Water St., opens its doors to Toastmasters clubs from the Las Cruces and Alamogordo area from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, March 1.

The public is encouraged to learn about the Toastmasters mission to empower individuals to become more effective communicators. The City of Las Cruces has a Toastmasters club which will be in attendance to show support of the event.

Harvey Girls film to be shown

The Las Cruces Railroad Museum, 351 N. Mesilla St., will show the documentary film “The Harvey Girls – Opportunity Bound” at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday, March 1.

Between 1880 and 1960, more than 100,000 young women left their homes, mostly in the eastern United States, to travel west and become Harvey Girls. This was a time when few employment opportunities were available to women. These women paved the way for future generations of women in the workplace. Fred Harvey was one of the first American companies to promote cultural diversity and was the forerunner of chain restaurants and hotels.

Included in the documentary are interviews with many Harvey Girls, Stephen Fried, who wrote the book “Appetite for America,” and Maureen McMillan, director emeritus Belen Harvey House.

The video, which lasts 57 minutes, is suitable for all audiences.

For more information, call Joanne at 647-4480.

A star appearance

Decorated American thoroughbred racehorse Mine That Bird made an appearance Saturday, Feb. 22, for the Mine That Bird Derby at the Sunland Park Racetrack & Casino. This was the 14th running of the $120,000 Mine That Bird Derby, which included a field of 10. In 2009, Mine That Bird won the Kentucky Derby, came in second in the Preakness Stakes and third in the Belmont Stakes. The horse is also the subject of a new movie, "50 to 1," which will make its debut Friday, March 21, in New Mexico, including at Allen Theatres in Las Cruces.

Martinez appoints new public safety secretary

Cabinet appointee is a NMSU graduate

Gov. Susana Martinez announced her appointment of Gregory Fouratt as secretary for the New Mexico Department of Public Safety (DPS) Wednesday, Feb. 26.

Fouratt has nearly 17 years of experience as a federal prosecutor, where he prosecuted a variety of crimes, from drug trafficking and racketeering to violent crimes such as assault, child abuse and homicide. Fouratt also retired as a lieutenant colonel after having served for more than 20 years in the Air Force, Air Force Reserve and the New Mexico Air National Guard.

"Greg Fouratt is an effective leader with tremendous legal, law enforcement and military experience," Martinez said. "His talents and skills will serve New Mexico well in our continuing efforts to keep our families and communities safe. I am extremely proud to have Greg continue his service to New Mexicans, this time as a member of my state cabinet."

Martinez appointed Fouratt to serve as DPS cabinet secretary after former Cabinet Secretary Gorden Eden Jr. was selected as Albuquerque Police Department's new chief of police.

"I am honored and humbled to have Gov.

Martinez's support and confidence in this new role," Fouratt said. "I am looking forward to working with the governor and our state's dedicated public safety employees. New Mexico is a wonderful place to live, work and raise a family, and I am grateful for this opportunity to continue working to make it even better."

Prior to this appointment, Fouratt served as senior litigation counsel in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Mexico, where he investigated and prosecuted cases of national and international scope, including capital murder and major fraud. He was also the U.S. Attorney for the District of New Mexico from 2008-10.

In addition to his 17-year career as a federal prosecutor, Fouratt served as an officer in the Air Force, Air Force Reserve and the New Mexico National Guard, retiring as a lieutenant colonel in 2012.

Fouratt holds a juris doctor from Texas Tech University School of Law in Lubbock, Texas, master's degree of public administration from Golden Gate University in San Francisco and bachelor's degree from New Mexico State University.

Pastor killed in accident

A Las Cruces pastor was killed in a wrong-way crash on Interstate 10 Monday, Feb. 24, according to KFOX in El Paso.

Josh Allen, 30, pastor of Grace Bible Church, was driving in a Toyota minivan when he was struck head-on by a BMW X3 driving the wrong way on the eastbound lanes. The news report said he died at the scene while the other driver died before he could be airlifted.

Church employees told KFOX that Allen leaves behind an infant son and wife.

Sheriff's budget tapped

Doña Ana County commissioners Tuesday, Feb. 25, froze 25 vacant positions in the sheriff's department to return nearly $1.4 million to the county's general fund.

County Sheriff Todd Garrison said it was unlikely the department could fill the positions in the next few months, so he accepted the fund transfer.

County Manager Julia Brown said the transfer reflected a broader spending freeze on vacant positions throughout county government to help close a $15.4 million budget shortfall. The money from the sheriff's department will be used on one-time expenses, such as spending by the sheriff's department, Brown said.

The freeze would be lifted July 1, the start of the county's next financial cycle.

Fort Sill suit to be heard

The Associated Press is reporting the New Mexico Supreme court plans a March 10 hearing for arguments on an Oklahoma-based tribe's lawsuit to force Gov. Susana Martinez to recognize its status in New Mexico.

The Fort Sill Apache Tribe was granted federal reservation status for a 30-acre plot in its homelands in southwestern New Mexico and it contends Martinez is violating a state law and discriminating against the tribe.

Assault suspect sought

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of $1,000 for information that helps identify the man suspected of sexually assaulting a 46-year-old woman two weeks ago at her home.

Police learned that shortly after 8 a.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 11, the woman returned to her home on the 700 block of Frank Maes Avenue after taking her children to school.

The woman told police that she fell asleep in her bedroom and, soon after, awoke to the sound of her dogs barking.

The woman told police that as she woke up, she saw that a masked man was standing over her.

Detectives believe the masked man struck the woman, knocking her unconscious. When the woman regained consciousness at around 10 a.m., she realized that she had been sexually assaulted.

The woman described the suspect as either white or Hispanic with a medium build.

He was believed to be wearing a black ski mask and possibly a blue shirt.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspect is asked to contact Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Man shot by police Suspect brandished 'pistol'

Las Cruces Police Department and the Officer-Involved Incident Task Force are continuing their investigation into Tuesday, Feb. 25, shooting on the East Mesa that left a man hospitalized.

The 42-year-old man received a gunshot wound to his upper arm and is being treated at University Medical Center of El Paso. His injuries are not life-threatening and no charges have been filed against him at this time.

At around 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to the report of a possible domestic-related altercation between a man and woman near Porter Drive, north of U.S. Highway 70. The call to dispatch indicated that one of the subjects was armed with a handgun.

The first-arriving officer located the couple believed to be involved in the domestic near the Chucky's Food Mart on the 5900 block of Bataan Memorial West. Preliminary information from the investigation indicates the man pulled out a handgun and refused the Las Cruces Police officer's commands to drop the weapon.

The officer fired at least one shot, which is believed to have struck the man's arm. No other injuries were reported.

Investigators determined that the firearm displayed by the man was an air pistol made by Umarex that closely resembles an authentic Smith & Wesson M&P 9mm handgun commonly used by some law enforcement agencies. The BB gun is manufactured as a replica and looks nearly identical to the Smith & Wesson M&P 9mm, with logos and other identifiable markings.

Centennial brings home MESA awards

Team advances to state contest

By Cindy Ho

Centennial High School sophomore

The New Mexico MESA (Mathematics, Engineering and Science Achievement) program has been a phenomenal experience for Centennial High School so far.

During November 2013, one of our talented groups of four – Ben Hernandez, Dylan Bristol, Sam Gajewski and Nora Rodriguez – brought home second- and third-place trophies from the regional competition, which was held at Gadsden Middle School. They earned the trophies from their “prepared design” and the “on sight challenge.”

We’ve been working and building our way toward the state competition, and we’ll be seeing ourselves in Albuquerque Feb. 24. We’ll have our built cars ready, brains thinking and the excitement just waiting to roar.

We’ve been working significantly hard since September and we’re hoping to bring home another trophy for the team. We want to send Centennial teacher and MESA team sponsor Lorraine Bridges many thanks for giving us her support and for helping us succeed when we struggled.

There are definitely more memories and achievements to come. Now, let’s bring home another trophy; and, most importantly, Go Hawks!

Hawks win at FCCLA regionals

Team earns gold, silver and bronze medals

By Lanie Whelpley

Centennial High School sophomore

Centennial High School's Family Community Career Leaders of America (FCCLA) chapter competed at the Region 1 District Students Taking Action with Recognition (STAR) events Feb. 1 at New Mexico State University.

Centennial had 17 competing members, and chapter member Tyler Morris was the master of ceremonies.

The culinary team (Gabi Bissell, Cynthia Perez and Lanie Whelpley) received a silver rating.

The six crudites tray teams also received silver ratings: Saul Barraza, Jasmin Rosales, Cassie Bustamante, Audrey Bustos, Dominic Zamora, Madison Raess, Gabi Bissell, Parker Lancaster, Yesenia Estrada, Michael Palumbo and Isabella Terrazas.

Three members competed in pastry arts/decorated cake: Cynthia

Priscyla Marquez competed in fashion apparel display, in which she received a bronze rating.

Rachel Kenney competed in job interview and left the competition with gold.

All Centennial FCCLA chapter members will advance to the state Leadership Conference and STAR event competition in Albuquerque this March.

Science Olympiad teams go to state

By Lesli Atchison
and Elisabeth Partin

Centennial High School sophomores

Two Centennial High School Science Olympiad teams went to the regional competition Jan. 25 in Silver City and medaled in eight events, five of which were first place medals and three that were third place medals.

Centennial medaled in Boomilever, Disease Detectives, Dynamic Planet, Elastic Launched Glider, Geologic Mapping, Maglev, Materials Science and Water Quality.

The first team scored fifth place over all out of 15 schools, and the second team placed seventh. They competed in all 22 events that were offered.

The Centennial Science Olympi-ad team next went to compete at the State Science Olympiad competition Feb. 22 in Socorro. The students going to this event are Analyssa Martinez, Arianna Martinez, Elisabeth Partin, Lesli Atchison, Lilia Taylor, Katrina Martinez, Cameron Jones, Andre Gonzales, Aracely Chapparo, Austin Miller, Dallin Loveless, Devon Miller, Sandy Hadfield, Angel Valencia and Deion Badoni.

Centennial High School's FFA chapter competed in the District 6 Public Speaking Contest Day Feb. 3 at New Mexico State University.

Six members participated in two different contests. Members Jorgianna Calderon, Kiera Sanchez and Taylor Sanchez took top 10 in creed speaking. Members Parker Lancaster and Haley Sponeiman also took top 10 in job interview, while Rachel Kenny took first place.

Rachel Kenny will also be representing the CHS FFA chapter at the state competition in June. We are very proud of these participants and hope to see more next year.

CHS student government honored

Young group picked best in the state

Centennial High School was chosen as the Gold Student Government of the Year at the New Mexico Association of Student Councils (NMASC) State Conference at Española Valley High School Feb. 13-15, said CHS teacher and student council adviser Melanie Stuart.

"I am beyond proud of the student government at CHS for becoming student government of the year after only our second year in existence," Stuart said. "These students have gone far and above to create stepping stones for future Hawks by creating pride and tradition."

Twenty-one members of Centennial student government attended the state conference, joining more than 1,000 students representing high schools from all over the state. Attending from CHS were seniors Saul Baraza, Robert Medina, Isaac Melendrez, Maille Mulligan, Shelby Quintinilla, Tracie Taylor, Nicolette Young, Elaina Frachette, Caitlin Artrip, Heather Shoats and Rachael Ingo; juniors Parker Lancaster, Yesenia Estrada and Berbandy Yanez; sophomores Noah Pelayo, Tyler Morris, Christo Luna, Avery Turner and Corrine Hanson; and freshmen Andrea Dominguez and Brighton Turner. Advisers in addition to Stuart are Lauren McManus and LaDelle Hash.

CHS Student Body President Nicolette Young was elected as the second vice president of NMASC in 2013 and also went to the national Association of Student Councils conference in Las Vegas as a representative for New Mexico schools. Three CHS students serve as NMASC Southwest district officers: Parker Lancaster, district president; Tyler Morris, vice-president; and Noah Pelayo, district secretary.

Superintendent's contract extended

Rounds in place until 2016

The Las Cruces school board on Tuesday, Feb. 18, voted unanimously to extend the contract of Superintendent Stan Rounds through June 30, 2016.

Rounds was hired by the board in February 2007. He begins his eighth year as the superintendent of Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) Friday, Feb. 28.

"Stan Rounds has brought a much needed period of stability to our district as our superintendent," board President Connie Phillips said. "Additionally, his knowledge of the budgetary process at the state level has served our district well in these times of diminishing resources."

ROUNDS

Rounds has been a New Mexico school superintendent for 31 years – in Des Moines (Union County in northeast New Mexico), Hobbs, Alamogordo and now Las Cruces. He also served as associate state superintendent for finance for four years and was the financial analyst for the New Mexico Legislative Education Study Committee. He is a native of Albuquerque, where he began his teaching and coaching career.

Rounds said he was honored to work for LCPS and "such an incredible group of professionals."

The comeback

Barbara Boxleitner
Keeping up

Elena Holguin's college career has been plagued by injury.

The redshirt sophomore guard recently returned to action for the New Mexico State University women's basketball team. The Mayfield High School graduate suffered a meniscus tear during a game and underwent surgery.

The knee injury was her second, for she said she tore her anterior cruciate ligament during her freshman year, when she redshirted.

"It's out of your control," said Holguin, who averaged 1.4 points and 1.7 rebounds in 23 games last year. "It's really hard. It's been an adventure."

She had a season-high 19 points, including a season-high six three-pointers in seven attempts, during a mid-November game. She had 18 and 14 points, respectively, in the next two games.

But Holguin was sidelined during December and most of January. She entered this week playing in 15 of 26 games. She averaged 6.8 points, fifth on the team, and 2.4 rebounds.

"I'm usually put in to score," she said. "My knee's fine. I'm just trying to get my rhythm back."

She made her lone start in the team's win Thursday, Feb. 20. She played a season-high 27 minutes and had six points, a season-high six rebounds and three assists. Even before the latest injury, this season required adjustment on her part. The team has a new offensive scheme, so she had to work on her ball handling.

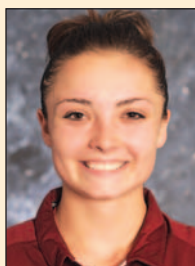

"My freshman year all we had were quick plays," she said. "Now we do it dribble drive. I like the dribble drive. We're really small. The dribble drive helps us out a lot."

The NM State women's basketball team won three of four games to climb back into the Western Athletic Conference race.

The fourth-place Aggies, now 7-6 in conference play, host second-place Bakersfield at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 1, in their final home game of the season.

The Aggies hosted Utah Valley Thursday, Feb. 27, in a game that took place after the Bulletin's press time. NM State closes the regular season March 6 at Grand Canyon. The Aggies are now 8-3 at home.

Madness of March descends

Aggies hit road; final home game March 6

Thursday, March 6, marks the final home game for the New Mexico State University men's basketball team for 2013-14.

It also marks the final game ever in the Pan American Center for Aggie seniors Renaldo Dixon and Kevin Aronis.

The March 6 Senior Night game against Grand Canyon also will be the final Western Athletic Conference regular season game prior to the conference tournament Thursday and Friday, March 13-15, in Las Vegas.

The goal, as always, for head coach Marvin Menzies' squad will be to win the WAC tournament and earn the automatic berth to the NCAA tournament, as they have three of the past four years.

As of this writing, the Aggies were atop the WAC standings, with a 10-3 conference mark and a 21-8 overall record. However, NMSU was set to play twice after press time, road games against Utah Valley (Thursday, Feb. 27) and Bakersfield (Saturday, March 1).

A victory against Utah Valley, which went into the game with a 10-3 conference record identical to the Aggies, would put NMSU in the driver's seat headed into the WAC tourney.

If the Aggies win one or both of those games, and third-place Grand Canyon sweeps its next two games, the stakes would rise for the March 6 game.

Since losing to Idaho on the road Feb. 6, NMSU has earned four straight victories in dominant fashion, winning by margins of 15, 23, 29 and 17.

NMSU is the offensive powerhouse of the league, leading the WAC in scoring (80.5 points per game in conference play), scoring

The New Mexico State University Aggie men's basketball team plays its final home game of the season Thursday, March 6, at the Pan American Center versus Grand Canyon. margin (+12.5 ppg) and field goal percentage (.510).

Dixon, from Toronto, Ontario, Canada, is enjoying a solid senior campaign. The 6-10 forward leads the WAC in field goal percentage at .622 and had the third-highest single-game total in the league this year when he hit his career high of 33 against Kansas City Jan. 18. He's also fourth in the WAC with 1.23 blocks per game.

Aronis, from Sebastopol, Calif., leads the league in three-point field goal percentage at .507, having hit 35 of 69 for the year at presstime.

Las Cruces is title central City hosts five district hoops championships

By Justin Martinez

For The Las Cruces Bulletin

This Saturday, March 1, is high school basketball district championship Saturday in Las Cruces.

Five Las Cruces teams are seeded No. 1 in their district tournaments, earning byes and the right to host title games Saturday. We know the hosts, but not their opponents, as all of the semifinal games took place after press time.

Mesilla Valley Christian Schools boys: The SonBlazers finished the regular season with a 20-6 record and a 7-1 record in District 6-2A. Coach Jeremy Roman and his squad finished strong, winning seven games in a row. They'll host the district title game at 2 p.m. Saturday in the MVCS gym.

Mayfield High School girls: The Lady Trojans, ranked No. 4 in the state, clinched the regular-season District 3-5A title going undefeated (8-0). Their overall record is 23-3 and they finished second in the state a year ago. They'll host the district title game at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Mayfield gym.

"We're undefeated at home this year, so having the district championship on our home court will be a big advantage for us," said Mayfield head coach George Maya. "We're playing pretty good defense right now. Our press has been rotating well and we are moving people with a lot of energy. We have to be able to stop the next team we play."

Mayfield High School boys: The Trojans finished with a 16-10 overall record with a 7-2 record in District 3-5A. The district title game will be 5 p.m. Saturday in the Mayfield gym.

"It's great positioning," Mayfield head coach Tommy Morrow said. "To play our district game at home, that will be very exciting for our guys."

Centennial High School girls: The Lady

Hawks finished with a 16-10 overall record, 6-0 in District 3-4A play and are riding a seven-game winning streak. Their title game will be 8 p.m. Saturday in the Centennial gym.

"This is the second year of the school's existence," Centennial girls' basketball head coach Lori Selby said. "We are a young program and we are experiencing some early success. This year's schedule was very tough."

"We have faced several 4A and 5A power houses including La Cueva, Hobbs, Mayfield, Las Cruces, Carlsbad, Santa Fe and Lovington. The toughness of our schedule has prepared us to be successful in district."

Centennial High School boys: In District 3-4A, the Centennial Hawks finished the regular season on an eight-game winning streak, and an unblemished 6-0 record in district play.

Head coach Steve Heredia led the Hawks to a 19-7 regular season record. Their title game will be 6 p.m. Saturday in the Centennial gym.

Rodolph tops 300

Aggie softball coach notches victories

In the midst of her 11th season as head coach for the New Mexico State University softball team, Kathy Rodolph clinched her 300th career victory in an 11-2 win over Incarnate Word Saturday, Feb. 22.

She entered the 2014 season with a record of 291-281 all-time as the Aggies head coach.

Rodolph joined NMSU in 2004, and now is the all-time winningest coach in Aggie softball history.

In her best season with NMSU, Rodolph led the surging Aggies to their first-ever Western Athletic Conference title and leading NMSU to its first ever NCAA tournament appearance in 2011.

Rodolph has strung together a series of seven seasons with 30-plus victories. Her career high in season wins came as the Aggies recorded 38 victories and she was named WAC Coach of the Year in 2011.

RODOLPH

Including her time coaching before arriving at NMSU, Rodolph has 497 victories. She could earn 500th career win as a college head coach as early as this weekend in Las Vegas, Nev., when the Aggies play five games at the Eller Media Stadium Classic.

Leading the Aggies to a second place finish last season, Rodolph and the Aggies set a record for longest winning streak in program history with 11 wins. The record setting victory came against No. 17 Arizona.

For the 2014 season, Rodolph has led the Aggies to a 10-5 record at presstime, and they ride a current win streak of eight games.

She also coached Staci Rodriguez to WAC Player of the Year in 2013 and former Aggie Valerie Swedberg to conference Freshman of the Year in 2011.

He's outta there!

New Mexico State University junior pitcher Trey Higgenbotham strikes out an opponent Saturday, Feb. 22, at Presley Askew Field. The Aggies, 6-2, host Oakland University in a four-game series Friday, Feb. 28, through Sunday, March 2. The Friday game starts at 6 p.m. There will be two games Saturday, at 1:05 p.m. and 5:05 p.m. The Sunday matinee will start at 1:05 p.m. Oakland is 1-3 for the year.

Snail's pace mires golf

Slow play continues recession

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Continuing my diatribe on the golf industry's need to grow the game, it should come as no surprise that golf has been in a steady decline since before the recession began.

Why? Very succinctly: It takes too much time; it's too expensive; it's too frustrating; and it's no fun.

Having just recently attended the PGA Merchandise Show in Orlando, I was struck both by the exciting new products and also by the stagnation of the golf business.

With the exception of TaylorMade, which launched a loosely conceived California-style initiative they call Hack Golf, there is a lack of any sense of urgency to think and move outside the box.

Compared to, say, leisure walking or bird watching (both alternative activities mentioned in national studies dealing with the death of golf), golf is rather expensive. And I can relate to the negative feelings of frustration from time to time, although that element seems to tap into a more visceral and deeply rooted personality style.

Some folks are better off training for marathons; some are better off playing chess. I know plenty of golfers who can't break 100 but don't leave the golf course angry or ready to explode. Some tour and college players, who want to go low every round, and sometimes have unrealistic expectations, turn into trunk-slammer. I'm not a trunk-slammer, but I do expect to have fun every time I play. And I don't like to wait. Anywhere.

These days the biggest excuse is that "golf just takes too long." Golf's snail pace becomes even more underscored when you consider that the near-term future of golf is not retired geezers playing in Sun City; it's busy folks 20 to 55 who multi-task their way through the day and who are already in a clock crunch.

Part of the difficulty stems from golf courses that are too long and too hard for the average player. Golf course designers, for all their expertise and artistry, have thought for far too long that golf courses should deceive the eye, require perfect shots and achieve a measure of difficulty that humiliates those golfers who are inept.

They trick up courses, make the greens un-puttable, scrape out stupid ponds with their bulldozers and make bunkers that are so wide and deep as if they were made by 16-inch shells fired from the USS New Jersey. For the past 100 years, golf was drawn out by architects who created golf courses that are not golfer-friendly, need over-watering and are much too long for the average golfer.

I'm in favor of more executive golf courses and a pace of play that moves along briskly. But the snail problem goes much deeper and is much more complicated.

Let's start with what chop golfers see on television. TPC Sawgrass, Pebble Beach and televised professional tournaments are not the future of everyman golf. Heck, even Jack Nicklaus says watching golf on television is like watching paint dry.

I think the PGA Tour and the co-conspirator networks are promoting slow play by the way they run and show their tournaments – by example and default that is dreadful for golf. At home watching his 85-inch flat screen, Joe Hacker is naturally fixed on Tiger as Tiger checks and re-checks his club selection for an announced critical approach shot, while a PGA volunteer crowd control Nazi bullies paying spectators 50 feet away to shut up.

Then, after Tiger leaves his shot in a hazard short of the 270-yard carry he had planned, he's waiting for a PGA rules guru to show up to tell him what to do, since he hasn't studied the rule book enough.

He sure doesn't want to make some minute slip-up and have a viewer call in to the tour and then find out he signed for a wrong score and get DQ'd. So he waits, and waits – and we watch him wait. And we haven't even made it to the green, where Tiger is compelled to stalk his now par putt from seven different angles. C'mon, man!

I don't think the slow-play problem boils down to bad golfers. Some hackers play fast, not really fantasizing they are being taped by a CBS-TV camera with Jim Nantz announcing. If golf courses had designated drop areas or play zones at about 150 yards out from the green it might speed things up. Novice players could start from there.

When a beginner tops the ball along the ground three or four times to get to where he can finally get a shot airborne (at about 150 yards), no wonder he leaves the property in frustration. Nor did he appreciate the guys behind yelling obscenities and hitting into them.

I don't have the answer to the slow-play dilemma. I wonder, if golf does not address this as an industry-sensitive issue, will it will spell even further trouble in participation and even deeper losses as time goes on? Emerging market segments, such as teens and young adults, won't have the attention span or the interest to tolerate a chunk of six or seven hours (including car time) to devote to a singular entertainment form. Plus, surveys say kids don't view golf as cool anymore.

Golf courses have tried using signs, advisories, education and cajoling to speed up play. Notices on carts and other tactics to get golfers moving seem to go unheeded. Even marshals and golf course ambassadors have little influence on folks who think it's their rightful entitlement to poke along as long as they bloody well please if they have paid their money or are club members.

Course marshals need all their social skills and assertiveness training in dealing with sometimes over-served and unintelligent Neanderthals with golf clubs in their hands. A few marshals have shared with me they are afraid to anger the regular and club golfers.

One answer may be having a few uniformed bouncers in golf carts patrolling the golf course. I mean guys who are at least 6 feet tall, weigh more than 200 pounds and are under age 55. It's unlikely the snails would be inclined to mouth off with those guys.

Golfers are charged green fees for a certain number of holes, usually nine or 18. But maybe they should be charged for four hours of course occupancy and ushered away when the time has expired.

Plenty of games in town

Former Aggie shot in leg, needs help

Pistol Pete
Pete's
Ponderings

Ole Pete has a couple of tales to tell people and he needs you to listen up.

The women's basketball season is coming to a close and this weekend is the final home stand for Mark Trakh's squad. As Pete puts pen to paper, the women have a winning record in conference play and have some good momentum heading to the conference tournament. This Saturday, March 1, the team has its final home stand and it is one last chance to see a team headed in the right direction.

Coach Trakh has the ladies playing the best ever for him and even though there are no seniors to say goodbye to, it is a great night to say thanks for all of the excitement this season.

It's not the only game in town this weekend; baseball has another four home games at Askew Field. So far, Rock's squad has tallied a 6 and 2 record in the young season. Again this weekend, baseball hosts Oakland in a single game Friday, a double header Saturday and a get away game on Sunday.

While we are talking tickets, it is time for Pete to talk to you about Las Vegas. Not the same-day wedding chapels, or the two-dollar buffets – Pete is getting his bags packed for the Western Athletic Conference post season tournament.

Ticket jefe Patrick Kennedy has been busy selling WAC tourney tickets at a record pace. It is like the gold rush all over again and Aggie fans are going in the largest numbers ever. It is going to be a great party and you can be a part of it all. Give Patrick a call at 646-1420 or just swing by the Pan Am box office in person. You can also get your favorite seat for these and any Aggie games at www.nmstatesports.com

Aggie in need: Basketball fans may remember Shawn Harrington from the 1995-96 men's team. Shawn was a versatile point guard who was the team's leader at a time when leadership was hard to find. He has been coaching high school hoops in Chicago and now needs an assist from you.

He was shot in the leg while he was driving his family to school. Random gunfire broke out, Shawn leaned over to protect his daughter and was hit. Now Shawn is hospitalized and the legs that moved so gracefully on the court are paralyzed.

He has hope and courage, but could use prayers and any financial assistance you can spare. His fund is accepting donations at Chicago's Fifth Third Bank at 2710 North Narragansett Avenue with a 60639 zip code. One of our own is in need; it's time to Aggie Up for Shawn.

Women's golfers on road

Spring season started out in Texas

Jackie Booth
Head Coach
Golf

The NMSU Women's Golf team has just started its spring season.

The week of Feb. 17, we were competing in San Antonio, Texas, at the Texas State University tournament. We played the Bandit Golf Course against 14 other universities. The golf course was a challenge and required excellent course management and to be below the hole on the putting greens. Being a young team with one freshman, two sophomores, and two juniors we definitely learned more about our strengths and our shortcomings.

We finished seventh, with eight wins and six loses for the tournament. In hindsight, we know we have to turn our bad shots into bogies and not follow a bad shot with another bad shot. It requires having a plan to get the bogey and then committing to that plan and not getting greedy over having to make up a shot to salvage a par.

We are headed to El Caballero Country Club co-hosted by the University of California-Los Angeles and Pepperdine. This tournament will have the strongest field we will see this spring and will definitely challenge us to play our best golf. This year's team has made some huge strides so far. Just from last year, we have made the following progress with our scoring averages: Amelie Buhl has improved from a 81.87 to a 79.67 scoring average. Laura Barron has improved from an 81.52 scoring average to a 79.17.

Barron had her best tournament ever at Texas State, shooting 75-80-73-228. We are very proud of her hard work and leadership. Paige Darwin has improved from shooting 83.71 last year to 76.56 this year. Kacey Dalpes scoring average has dropped from 77.17 to 77.08. Vivi Macias has improved by more than 5 shots, lowering her 82 average to a 76.5 average. Our last three players are freshmen, so they do not have a record from last year, but their scoring averages are; Cami Orito 79.83, Kristen Cline 75.67 and Vale Macias 78.08. The team scoring average has dropped by 13 shots per tournament over last year.

Our grades last semester were outstanding. We had three of our eight-team members with perfect 4.0 grade point averages. The other five team members also had very good grades with grade point averages around 3.5.

If you think you would like to help our team, we have a golf booster club we would love you to join. We can be contacted at the following addresses: coach Jackie Booth: jackie77@nmsu.edu and coach Danny Bowen: dbowen@nmsu.edu. You can watch us play the UCLA/Pepperdine Invitational March 3-4 online at www.golfstatsresults.com.

Reflections

• On the front page of the Las Cruces Citizen was a report that the Elephant Butte dam, currently under construction and “about 50 percent complete,” was “of stupendous proportions and a magnificent conception of engineering skill.” It was reported to be “the biggest and finest irrigation project ever undertaken by the United States reclamation service.”

• It was reported a committee of the “most eminent medical men of Europe” had been appointed to study the climates of the world, “with regard to their beneficial effect upon healthseekers.” After nine months of travel and investigation, this “body of experts agreed unanimously that this particular portion of New Mexico, was as nearly ideal for an all-year-round climate as could be found.”

• Martin Malcolm, 23, also known as Martin Malkemus, was taken into custody on a bigamy complaint filed against him by Mrs. A.E. Clark. Malcolm's young bride, “the former Isabel Peacock, who will be 15 next month, was with him when he was arrested.” She was turned over to Mrs. Clark, her mother. Mrs. Clark told officers she filed the complaint against Malcolm when she learned that he had a wife and child in Missouri at the time he married the Peacock girl in Las Cruces.

• The 57-year-old Las Cruces Daily News was sold to the Las Cruces Sun Publishing Co. The last issue of the Daily News was published on March 3. Publisher David Bronson said his reason for selling the newspaper was, “It has been evident for some time that two daily newspapers could not operate profitably in this field.”

50yearsago

• A public hearing was scheduled by Chief Highway Engineer T.B. White to discuss the proposed alignment of “Interstate 10 with U.S. Highway 70-80 west of the city and with the existing U.S. 80-85 in the vicinity of Mesilla Park.”

• A Doña Ana County grand jury investigating the Las Cruces city administration condemned county jail facilities as “obsolete, crowded and worn out.” Grand jury inquiries showed the facilities had been purchased by the county in 1938 from El Paso and were 20 years old at that time.

• Hoping to strike a balance in enrollment between local high schools, Las Cruces Public School officials drew up new high school attendance zones, effective the following school year. The most significant change was the dividing line between the Mayfield and Las Cruces zones, which moved from Amador Avenue to Picacho Avenue.

• A group of 68 wild horses were rounded up from White Sands Missile Range and sold at a livestock auction in Socorro. The horses, “from among an estimated 1,400 roaming the range in several herds, brought from $50 for smaller animals to $300 for adult horses in good shape.”

Harrelson selected as advancement VP

Administrator also heads foundation

New Mexico State University has selected Cheryl Harrelson as the next vice president for university advancement and president of the NMSU Foundation.

"I'm delighted to offer this position to Cheryl," NMSU President Garrey Carruthers said. "Fundraising, and other advancement activities, will play an important role in helping us move the university forward."

"The comments regarding her initial visit to Las Cruces were overwhelmingly positive. She is charming and displays a quiet confidence that will benefit NMSU. She has a fantastic resume and I'm certain she will become our newest, best Aggie as head of the NMSU Foundation."

"I am absolutely ecstatic about joining the NMSU team. I think there are great synergies between myself and those I have met," Harrelson said. "I am looking forward to working with the university and the community and building a great advancement program."

Harrelson is a 20-year advancement professional, having worked in multiple facets to include fundraising, advancement services, alumni relations, donor relations/stewardship and events. Her career has been in higher education serving James Madison University and two different land-grant institutions: North Carolina Agricultural and Technical State University and Washington State University.

Harrelson currently serves as the associate vice president for annual and special gifts, stewardship and special events at Washington State University. She is a member of the Foundation's senior leadership team and oversees an annual giving program that raised a record $16.5 million in fiscal year 2013. She also is involved in Washington State University's $1 billion dollar campaign.

HARRELSON

Harrelson received her bachelor's degree in mathematics and applied science from UCLA, a master's in higher education from UNC-Greensboro and a master's degree in computer information systems from the University of Phoenix.

Harrelson will start at NMSU May 1 at a salary of $220,000.

For additional information about the NMSU Foundation, visit <http://foundation.nmsu.edu>.

NMSU Foundation members set

New leadership in place on board

The New Mexico State University Foundation 2014 officers and newly elected board members have begun their service to the organization.

John Cordova will serve as chair of the board; Nick Franklin, vice-chair; Lee Ellen Banks, secretary; Brenda Porter, treasurer; and Jo Raabe-Asprey, past chair.

Cordova is director of sports transaction management for the Coca-Cola Company in Atlanta, Ga. He has bachelor's and master's degrees in business from NMSU. He also serves on the board of New Mexico State Sports Enterprises Inc. Cordova is an avid supporter of NMSU.

Franklin is a retired senior vice president of public affairs, and lives in Newport Beach, Calif. He was interim vice president for university advancement and NMSU Foundation president from 2008-11. He has a bachelor's degree in government from NMSU and a law degree from the George Washington University. He has been a long-time supporter of NMSU.

Banks is the finance controller for Varay Systems in El Paso. She has a bachelor's degree in accounting from NMSU.

Porter is a retired elementary school teacher and now an associate broker with Steinborn and Associates Real Estate. She has a bachelor's degree in elementary education, with a certification in early childhood education and a minor in counseling and educational psychology from NMSU. She also received her master's degree from NMSU.

Raabe-Asprey was owner and president of Adventure Aviation in Las Cruces. She and her late husband, Robert Asprey, were recipients of an honorary doctorate in 2002 and have been long-time supporters of NMSU.

The board elected Presley Askew, Raquel Bone, Christian Hendrickson, Pat Lamb, Alma Levy, Gary Poling, Richard Ridings, Joseph Salopek and Marianne Shipley as new members for a three-year term.

Askew graduated from NMSU with a bachelor's degree in education. Although retired, he is an active volunteer in several Colorado organizations.

Bone earned two degrees from NMSU, including a bachelor's degree in finance and international business in 1991 and a master's degree in finance in 1993. She also holds a master's degree of public administration from the University of Southern California. She is a senior product manager in Treasury & Securities Services Liquidity Solutions.

Hendrickson graduated with honors from NMSU with a major in government and law and society. He received a law degree from the University of Colorado in 2000. He is a civil trial lawyer and partner with Sherman & Howard, the oldest law firm in Colorado and one of the largest with offices in Colorado, Arizona, Nevada, Missouri and Georgia.

Lamb is a former member of the NMSU Foundation Board, serving from 1996 to 2012. A former marketing director for Wells Fargo, he is semi-retired, working as a consultant on various projects.

Levy earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in electrical engineering from NMSU in 1984 and 1987, respectively, and her law degree from Loyola Law School in Los Angeles in 1998. She serves in the Intellectual Property Practice Group in the Orange County office of Haynes and Boone.

Poling earned a bachelor's in chemical engineering from NMSU in 1981 and a master's degree in business administration from the Monfort College of Business in 1983. He is the president of True North Capital Group, which provides financial coaching and investment management for families and individuals.

Ridings came to NMSU to play football then transferred to the University of Texas Arlington to complete his degree in civil engineering. He later attended graduate school at Southwest Texas State University earning a master's degree of public administration and recognition as a distinguished graduate in 1980. He currently serves as vice president, central division, for HNTB based in Austin, Texas.

Salopek graduated from the NMSU College of Agricultural Consumer and Environmental Sciences with a bachelor's in agricultural economics and agricultural business in 2004. He is actively involved with the family farming business Salopek 6U Farms Inc. A fourth generation pecan farmer, he currently assists with management of the farm.

Shipley graduated with honors from the NMSU College of Business in 1983. She utilizes her experience in strategic marketing, communication and corporate brand positioning at Baylor Scott & White Health.

NMSU endowment funds perform well

Returns follow national trends

Like many university endowments across the country, the New Mexico State University Foundation endowment once again saw increased returns in 2013 and averaged similar returns to many endowments of a similar size, according to a joint study by the National Association of College and University Business Officers (NACUBO) and the Commonfund Institute released Jan 28.

The NMSU Foundation is a separately incorporated, nonprofit organization existing solely for the benefit of NMSU. The purpose of the Foundation is to secure, manage and invest private gifts for the benefit of NMSU's teaching, research, extension education and public service programs.

The average annual total net returns for institutions having endowments of $101 million-$500 million for fiscal year 2013 was 11.9 percent. For that same time period, the NMSU Foundation return was 11.4 percent. The endowment in total is valued at $197 million.

"Once again, the NMSU Foundation Investment Committee has done an excellent job of growing the endowment and providing returns critical to NMSU's mission," said Tina Byford, interim NMSU vice president for university advancement and NMSU Foundation president. "Growing our endowment is perhaps the single most important role the foundation plays on behalf of the university."

The 2013 NACUBO-Commonfund Study of Endowments (NCSE) gathered data from 849 U.S. colleges, universities and affiliated foundations. The average return for endowments of all sizes was 11.7 percent, an improvement over fiscal year 2012.

The study also looks at participants' asset allocation and spending. The NMSU Foundation's asset allocation model is heavily weighted to domestic stocks, international equities and fixed income. Only 23 percent is invested in the alternative market. This is a common practice among endowments of NMSU's size. Larger endowments tend to invest more in alternative markets. NMSU's spending rate, as a percentage of beginning market value, was 4.05 percent, which compares to the 4.4 percent overall average for all public institutions participating in the study.

The NCSE for fiscal year 2013 is the result of a research partnership between NACUBO and Commonfund.

NMSU Corbett Center to see 14-month renovation

Work makes building more 'student friendly'

Construction for New Mexico State University's Corbett Center Student Union renovation is scheduled to begin by Feb. 28 and will last approximately 14 months. Wooten Construction Co. of Las Cruces was awarded the contract earlier this month.

"The scope of the project is pretty extensive. The goal is to create a student-friendly, student-centered building, so a lot of the project is making it the kind of space students want," said Julie Weber, NMSU director of housing and campus life. "Some of the criticism we've always taken about this building is that it is a heavily meeting-space building, and students can't use it and can't feel at home here. There's not enough drop-in space, not enough lounge space."

Weber said student concerns will be addressed in the project, including converting the old bookstore space at the west end of the building into a giant, two-story multipurpose student lounge that can be used as drop-in space, an entertainment venue and a programmatic space. All of the direct student-involvement offices such as Campus Activities, Greek Life and Associated Students of New Mexico State University will move into that space, centered in the complex.

Most of the meeting rooms will be removed from the second floor, relocating the majority of the conference facilities into one location on the third floor. The second floor will contain more study nooks, but many of them will be private study rooms surrounded by glass.

"The glass study rooms will allow students to be right at the heart of things, but still have quiet," Weber said.

The Dean of Students office and Campus Activities will move to where ASNMSU currently is, and the computer lab will move from the periphery to the center of the building. The current computer lab location will revert to a game room, as it once was.

The whole second floor will change to a curved promenade look, rather than a long, straight hall. Many glass features will give the building a more open feel, and the second floor will look over into outdoor space, instead of the hallway ending of abruptly.

"We are very fortunate that the budget for the project will allow us to fix some infrastructure things and get in some projects that we weren't sure would make it into the budget," Weber said. "For example, the outdoor stage on the east end of the building is getting a canopy and sound system built into it so it's easier for us to use that venue for events."

Infrastructure improvements include converting the building's electrical system so that a backup generator can be used in the event of a power outage, which is a key update, as campus residential foodservice is located at Corbett. The ballroom floor and ceiling will be replaced, along with the roof of the building.

"Probably the thing that we've heard the most positive reaction to is that we are going to improve the technological infrastructure of the building," Weber said. "Right now, our biggest complaint is that if there's a conference upstairs on the third floor and everyone is trying to access wireless, very quickly the wireless system in this building is full."

Corbett will go from the current wireless capacity of about 300 users to about 1,700 once the project is complete. The technology upgrades will also allow users to have continuous access while in the building, rather than getting knocked off one of 26 current wireless access points and not being able to access the next while walking through the building. There will be 70 wireless access points enabling continuous service while in the building.

Other features of the renovation project include a nondenominational, nonreservable meditation space on the second floor that can be divided into two private rooms with curtains, and three "cones of silence" that will allow students working under the cones to listen to audio or video without anyone nearby hearing the audio.

ELECTRICITY SAVINGS

Most refrigerated air conditioners are 13 SEER and operating at an Energy Efficiency Rating (EER) of 10. Like higher miles per gallon for a car means you will pay less for gas, a higher EER means you will pay less for electricity. A new geothermal refrigerated air system (EER 16) may increase your electric cooling efficiency by 60%.

EXTENDED WARRANTY

Most refrigerated air system warranties expire after 5 years, before annual maintenance and service costs increase. So after ~8 years of use, as major components like compressors go out, it is usually better to replace the system than to repair it. But a traditional replacement can be from seven to twelve thousand dollars during the summer. These super efficient, incentivized systems include 10 year warranties, and 2 years service at no additional charge.

HOW IT WORKS

You know how a basement stays cooler all summer? The geothermal system runs refrigerant lines through the ground to use the earth's coolness to refrigerate your home with 30% to 60% less electricity than traditional refrigerated air. Most homes have adequate space beside their home for the 25' long x 2' wide x 2.5' deep trench, which is hand dug to minimize installation impact. The refrigerated air is very stable with good indoor humidity control so your home is not "over dried" in the summer. This is why geothermal refrigerated air provides the best indoor comfort, and you can control it from a smart phone if you want to.

QUALIFICATIONS

Homebuyer must: 1) Own the home, 2) Pay New Mexico income tax, 3) Generally have family income above $40K, and 4) Meet GE Capital's credit requirement. Qualified persons may pay $0 down, GE's minimum payments, and 0% interest until they get their tax credit money back.

Senators back effort to secure water resources

Legislation supports water conservation, drought relief

U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich are backing legislation to conserve water resources and promote sustainability.

The SECURE Water Amendments Act of 2014 would expand grants and increase funding for water conservation and drought projects, and provide resources for better data collection and analysis of water supply and use.

The bill, introduced by U.S. Sen. Brian Schatz (D-Hawaii), chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee on Water and Power, was heard in committee Thursday, Feb. 27.

UDALL

"As New Mexico deals with the sixth consecutive year of drier-than-average conditions, the provisions in this bill to conserve water and improve efficiency are more important than ever," Udall said.

"Funding the SECURE Water Act was one of the recommendations made during the New Mexico Water Conference, which I hosted in Las Cruces, and contained in the Water Report I issued last spring. This bill would build on that recommendation and ensure critical resources are available to help New Mexico adapt and respond to water scarcity, and it's one of several measures I will continue to support to address

HEINRICH

New Mexico's water needs."

"The ongoing drought has taken a heavy toll on our state," Heinrich said. "This bill will provide New Mexico with resources to plan for and combat drought and to assist in developing a comprehensive national water strategy."

"Expanding funding for projects that conserve and use water more efficiently will help create much needed long-term solutions to save water and money in our communities suffering from the impacts of years of drought."

To conserve water and promote sustainability, the bill:

- Increases funding for WaterSMART grants. The bill will increase funding for the Department of the Interior's WaterSMART grant program, which supports local water management projects that conserve and use water more efficiently, increases the use of renewable energy, protects endangered species and facilitates water markets.
- Provides resources to plan for and combat drought. With droughts in New Mexico, and across the country, this bill makes sure projects that prepare for and respond to droughts are prioritized for funding under the WaterSMART grant program.
- Helps to develop a comprehensive national water assessment. The bill will provide resources for states to gather and analyze water supply and use information in a consistent manner to help develop a uniform national assessment of water availability and use.

The SECURE Water Amendments Act of 2014 is supported by the American Planning Association, the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership and the Western States Water Council.

Economists predict light growth

NMSU hosts economic forum

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

An undecided Eugenio Alemán and a cautiously optimistic Jim Peach shared their 2014 forecasts at the third annual Economic Outlook Conference Thursday, Feb. 20, at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

The pair of economists spoke at the program sponsored by the New Mexico State University and Wells Fargo.

NMSU Regents Professor Peach predicted modest growth for the state economy, which has remained flat since the Great Recession. He stressed, however, that what happens in New Mexico depends to a great extent on what happens in the U.S. as a whole.

Alemán, senior economist for Wells Fargo, voiced some uncertainty for the national economy.

He said he recently added a question mark to the title of his talk, "The U.S. Economy: Better Times Ahead" following the release of poor economic data for January.

"I will probably take it in and out a number of times over the course of the year," he said of the question mark.

Slow growth likely

The duo addressed the outlook for economic output, jobs and individual and government income and spending. In addition, Peach touched on issues of special concerns to New Mexico – water, child poverty and education.

Alemán said the national economy grew at a rate of 1.97 percent in 2013.

"I expect it to grow 2.5 this year, a little stronger than last year," he said.

"When the nation does well, New Mexico does well," Peach said. "Some economists are forecasting growth a bit higher than 2.5 percent for the nation, but it could be – might be – as high as 4 percent."

Jobs a long-term concern

Alemán said the biggest national issue is how long it will take the U.S. economy to recover the 9 million jobs lost over a two-year span during the recession.

"Government is the only sector not growing jobs, but government accounts for 14 percent of all employment and is the second largest sector in the economy," he said. "Government destroyed 1.5 million jobs. These are local and state governments that shed jobs. Only 13 percent of total government jobs are federal."

He said the national unemployment rate, which has fallen to 6.6 percent, "is coming down for the wrong reason: a reduction in work force participation."

Alemán said boomers are retiring at the rate of 10,000 a day, while discouraged workers are exiting the job market.

"People get tired of looking for jobs and drop out of the job market. People are going back to college," he said.

Jim Peach, regents professor of economics and international business at New Mexico State University, at the Economic Outlook Conference Thursday, Feb. 20, told the audience the bleeding of jobs at all levels of government is over in New Mexico.

He said the average length a person is unemployed has declined from more than 40 weeks to 35.5 weeks, but long-term unemployment is becoming the biggest problem in the U.S. labor market.

MVEDA invokes creativity

Community video, photo competition underway

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

If you're always talking about why you love Las Cruces, this is your lucky moment.

Between now and May 1, you can share your story with a wider audience, and perhaps win a prize for your expressing how you feel about the City of the Crosses.

The Mesilla Valley Economic Development

Alliance (MVEDA) is sponsoring a video and photography competition wrapped around the theme of Mi Vida – what I love about my life in Las Cruces.

Cash and other prizes will be awarded to the top three winners in each category.

Although she's not eligible to compete, Tara Rothwell-Clark, a member of MVEDA's new marketing committee, is excited about making a Mi Vida video of her own.

"I'll be riding my bike around town, visiting various businesses. That's all I can tell you," she said.

Rothwell-Clark is a committed Las Crucean and has lived here 20 years.

"I inherited Las Cruces, but I love it and chose to stay," she said. "I had several opportunities to leave, but I chose not to."

Growth

Cruces employment in 2014, and 1 to 2 percent for the state.

He said it will take until 2019 for the state to regain the jobs it lost during the Great Recession.

Despite "tremendous activity" in Santa Teresa, employment in Las Cruces has flatlined since 2007, Peach said.

He said he anticipates a small increase in government employment locally as well as growth in commercial real estate.

The underlying problem with New Mexico's jobs picture, according to Peach, is the structure of employment in the state.

"In New Mexico, the largest sector is government, with over 20 percent of direct employment," he said. "Like most of the nation, most of that is state and local."

He added, however, the percentage of federal government jobs "understates the importance of those jobs in southern New Mexico."

Peach said most White Sands Missile Range workers, for example, are contractors rather than government employees.

He called oil and gas a leading sector for New Mexico, forecast a lot of activity in the San Juan Basin in the next two years and stated: "We need more leading sectors."

Local challenges unique

Peach said one issue of local concern "the worst multi-year drought since before Pat Garrett shot Billy the Kid," which will have an impact on at least the agriculture sector.

Another concern is youth poverty, at more than 41 percent in Doña Ana County.

PEACH

"We know those people have a lower chance of finishing high school than others," he said. "New Mexico's educational attainment is a deficit. We don't have the trained work force modern, 21st century employers need."

He did, however, cite reasons to be hopeful about the local economy, pointing to the possibility of manufacturing taking off in the Santa Teresa area, the proposed SunZia energy transmission line and Spaceport America.

Following various attempts over the years, Downtown Las Cruces revitalization is taking off, Peach said.

"It's happening," he said. "It's really important for the future growth of Las Cruces."

National challenges misunderstood

Alemán said manufacturing is relatively strong nationally and is expanding, as is the service sector, which pays poorly.

"We have been going down in our savings rate in order to support consumption," he said. "This is not sustainable. We need more income."

Alemán said the federal government, too, needs more income.

"It's not true that the federal government has been spending more every day," Alemán said. "Actually, we have been lowering expenditures for the last five years."

"Federal spending as a percentage of the economy was at 24.5 percent before the recession. Today it is at 19.7 percent, which is the average for the past 50 years."

"The biggest issue is revenue, which fell apart during the recession."

The country, like individuals, must pay its debts by earning more than it spends, he said.

"We pay our politicians to decide who pays taxes, but they don't even like to do that."

Creativity

Anyone can play

Rothwell-Clark said she thinks this is a great place to raise a family, and her son, Javin, apparently agrees.

A student at Mesilla Valley Christian School (MVCS), Javin is already using his iPhone to shoot a video.

"This is great for all ages and it's a great classroom project," Rothwell-Clark said.

She said the marketing committee is enlisting the participation of students in Las Cruces Catholic Schools as well as media students at New Mexico State University and in Las Cruces Public Schools. Billboards, posters, ads and promotion by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce will solicit participation.

The outreach will acquaint people with the competition and steer them toward the MVEDA Facebook page where they will submit their entries – three-minute videos or as many as three pieces of still photography.

"I'm excited to see what people come up with – I'm always surprised by their creativity," Rothwell-Clark said. "And it will give a taste of what it's like walking in someone else's shoes."

A new perspective on marketing

Terianne Everhart, qualifying broker with Property Consultants and a member of the committee, said the competition will support the branding of MVEDA within Doña Ana County.

MVEDA, the 20-year-old economic development organization supported by the city, county and area businesses, historically looks beyond the valley in its marketing efforts. The focus has been on recruiting large businesses from other locations that are looking to expand or relocate to open up shop in the Mesilla Valley.

"To me, I don't think anyone understands the value of MVEDA's work in keeping jobs alive in Doña Ana County," Everhart said.

By adding high-quality jobs, the locality gives talented and educated people, such as those who graduate from NMSU, "the incentive to stay in this beautiful place," she said.

"The reach they (MVEDA) have, the data they have on Las Cruces and the surrounding area is really outstanding," Rothwell-Clark said. "The fact they can go into global companies and recruit is really impressive."

What has not been a high outreach priority for the small staff and tight budgets with which MVEDA operates is the local community, she said.

The marketing committee identified that gap and set out to fill it with outreach such as the Mi Vida competition.

Rothwell-Clark said that by doing business-to-business outreach within the community, leads for MVEDA automatically will be generated.

The process should also build local support for MVEDA, including financial support from businesses, which may be increasingly important as government funding becomes less of a given.

"The Mi Vida competition will get a pulse on what people really like about Las Cruces," Rothwell-Clark said. "It will also generate content for future marketing efforts – and it will generate excitement."

She said the competition will put MVEDA in contact with small businesses and give them an opportunity to ask the question, "What can MVEDA do for me?"

Rothwell-Clark acknowledged while she has pursued a career in Las Cruces and served on the boards of a number of organizations, she really didn't know what MVEDA did until she joined the marketing committee in December 2013.

"A lot of people are in the same boat," she said. "Our focus will be reaching out to small businesses."

The message will be that MVEDA supports business, and by helping retain and recruit businesses to the area it stimulates economic development and job growth and also broadens the tax base.

Businesses large and small benefit from its economic development work as well as its advocacy of legislation that benefits business, she said.

Harrell receives national recognition

Jerry Harrell, general manager of the Double Eagle Restaurant in Mesilla has successfully completed the required coursework, passed the Food Protection Manager Certification Examination and was recently re-certified in the ServSafe Sanitation curriculum by the National Restaurant Association Education Foundation.

"Many people don't realize the work that goes in to complying with all the rules and regulations for food service," Harrell said.

He is one of four Double Eagle employees who have earned the certification.

The program is sponsored by the New Mexico Restaurant Association in conjunction with the National Restaurant Association Educational Foundation and is accredited by Local design franchise named in U.S. top 40

Interior designer Sherry Franzoy, owner of Decorating Den Interiors of Las Cruces, was in the top 40 interior designers in the U.S. for total sales in 2013, the firm announced.

"Our franchise owners produced the highest monthly sales average in the company's history," said James Bugg Jr., president and CEO. "Sherry was instrumental in helping us achieve that significant accomplishment. She is truly a leading design and sales professional."

"I have been privileged to have wonderful clients in this area," Franzoy said. "I love having my own business and being part of this company for 14 years. No one does all of what we do to make rooms more beautiful and provide such extensive convenient service."

In the past three years, she has won two International Design Awards.

NMSU hosts Western Pecan Growers

Conference, trade show set for March 2-4

Global trends in nut production and consumption, the diagnosis of pecan nutrient disorders and a survey of pecan consumers' preferences will be among the presentations at the annual Western Pecan Growers Association conference and trade show Sunday through Tuesday, March 2-4, in Las Cruces.

"Pecans are very important to New Mexico," said John White, director of the association. "The New Mexico pecan benefits from our ideal growing conditions. We're usually one of the top states in terms of pecan production."

The statewide pecan crop generates a significant amount of agricultural economic activity each year in New Mexico. New Mexico State University's Cooperative Extension Service will host the 2014 Western Pecan Growers Association conference and trade show at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, 705 S. Telshor Blvd.

This will mark the 48th year the organization, which represents growers in California, Arizona, New Mexico and west Texas, has sponsored the event. NMSU is a co-sponsor.

The annual event attracts about 500 people from the region, elsewhere in the U.S. and even from other countries. The trade show runs from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 2, and then runs in tandem with the educational program Monday and Tuesday, March 3-4. It will feature about 70 vendors.

The popular annual Pecan Food Fantasy baking contest will also take place on Sunday.

Richard Heerema, NMSU pecan specialist, is the organizer of the conference's educational program, which takes place Monday and Tuesday. The program will include 17 presentations by researchers from NMSU, other universities and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, as well as representatives from Farm Bureau and the pecan industry.

Topics range from the diagnosis of nutrient disorders, invasive pests and weed competition to the economic benefits of western agriculture and a panel discussion on industry-wide funding for pecans, moderated by the president of the U.S. Pecan Council. Other topics include the health benefits of eating pecans and a survey of pecan consumers' nutritional knowledge and pecan purchase preferences.

In addition to the educational program, trade show and baking contest, the program includes a Sunday welcome reception from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Azul Ultra Lounge Bar in Hotel Encanto, as well as a Monday social hour at 6 p.m., immediately followed by the 7 p.m. banquet and awards ceremony.

Continuing education credits will be offered to attendees by Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Parking is limited around the hotel and overflow parking can use the Mesilla Valley Mall designated parking area and take the hotel shuttle to the event.

Presentations from several previous conferences are archived at <http://aces.nmsu.edu/ces/pecans/pecan-management.html>.

This year conference registration is either online or at the door. For more information or to register and pay, visit www.westernpecan.org or contact White at 640-7555 or email director@westernpecan.org.

Heavy ground water use forecast for 2014

Elephant Butte Reservoir improves

By Marvin Tessneer

Las Cruces Bulletin

Agencies' indications are the Elephant Butte Irrigation District could be dealing with another short water year.

Last summer, the EBID release was 168,000 acre-feet, the lowest amount since the dam was completed in 1916.

Water content percentages in all snow pack basins are below average for this time of year, state climatologist David DuBois said.

Current water content is as follows: Rio Chama, 64; Jemez River, 38; and Sangre de Cristo and Pecos River, 58.

The Elephant Butte Reservoir has been boosted to 325,170 acre feet, or 15 percent of capacity.

In early January, the storage in Elephant Butte was 280,000 acre feet.

The Bureau of Reclamation reportedly is running water in the river from northern reservoirs as a maintenance measure. The Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration forecast is for a continued dry conditions.

"The NOAA is calling for below average precipitation for southwest New Mexico in March," DuBois said. "There's the possibility of a weather pattern change after March, but not favoring below average precipitation."

No rain has been recorded on DuBois' gauge on the New Mexico State University campus in the past 30 days.

The last recorded rain was on Dec. 21, 2013, a mere .08 of-an-inch, DuBois said.

Heavy pumping of ground water last summer dropped the water table slightly, and conditions indicate that district farmers will have to turn again to wells this summer.

Last summer, the water table in the Mesilla Basin declined an average 2.4 feet because of the low surface water release, according to Erik Fuchs, EBID ground water specialist.

The decline in the Hatch and Rincon valleys was an average of 1.8 feet.

"Hatch and Rincon benefited from the heavy mid- and late-September rains they had in Truth or Consequences, and when farmers didn't pump as much as much," Fuchs said. "It looks like we're going to have less than a foot of surface water this year, and we expect a lot of heavy pumping again this summer."

2014 brings fewer sales

Tight credit, low inventory dampen markets

Local Realtors sold 1,327 new and existing homes, townhomes and condominiums in 2013, 71 more than in 2012.

Last year's combined median sales price also showed improvement over 2012, exceeding that year's median price by around $7,000.

Low mortgage interest rates and plenty of inventory fueled additional sales activity for the better part of 2013. By the end of the year, however, the number of Las Cruces area homes offered for sale had declined to a 10-year low.

The reduced inventory put upward pressure on prices as buyers began to compete with one another to purchase the best homes for the money.

That trend continues today.

Through the first two months of this year, a total of 115 new and existing homes, townhomes and condominiums were reported sold by the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR). That's a significant decline from the 157 properties sold during the first two months of 2013. New-home sales were responsible for just over 21 percent of total during January and February of 2013, dropping to just under 13 percent during the same period in 2014.

“ Now is a great time ... to explore purchasing a home. ”

So what's in store for buyers and sellers as we enter our 2014 selling season?

According to a recent press release from Lawrence Yun, the National Association of Realtors (NAR) chief economist, "We can't ignore the ongoing headwinds of tight credit, limited inventory, higher prices and higher mortgage interest rates. These issues will hinder home sales activity until the positive factors of job growth and new supply from higher housing starts begin to make an impact."

While Yun's comments reflect the state of the nation's housing market as a whole, New Mexico's poor economic conditions provide little optimism for relief in the short term.

Be that as it may, I'm a firm believer that now is a great time for investors and those contemplating long-term ownership to explore purchasing a home.

See you at closing.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will on March 11, 2014 at 11:00 AM, Front entrance to the Doña Ana County District Court, 201 W. Picacho, Las Cruces, NM, sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title, and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following described real estate located in said County and State:

Lot 19 in Block F of Sandhill Center Heights Phase 5, located in the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on the plat thereof filed for record in the office of the County Clerk of Doña Ana County, New Mexico on November 2, 2005 and recorded in Book 21 at Pages 392-393, Plat Records

The address of the real property is 4469 Hillsboro Loop, Las Cruces, NM 88012. Plaintiff does not represent or warrant that the stated street address is the street address of the described property; if the street address does not match the legal description, then the property being sold herein is the property more particularly described above, not the property located at the street address; any prospective purchaser at the sale is given notice that it should verify the location and address of the property being sold. Said sale will be made pursuant to the judgment entered on June 29, 2012 in the above entitled and numbered cause, which was a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $240,126.23 plus interest from October 14, 2011 to the date of sale at the rate of 6.375% per annum, the costs of sale, including the Special Master's fee, publication costs, and Plaintiff's costs expended for taxes, insurance, and keeping the property in good repair. Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash.

At the date and time stated above, the Special Master may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned with herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. Plaintiff and its attorneys disclaim all responsibility for, and the purchaser at the sale takes the property subject to, the valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property, affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land, deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property, if any, and zoning violations concerning the property, if any.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above-described real property subject to rights of redemption.

may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER
GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to the Judgment in Favor of Plaintiff entered on January 21, 2014, the undersigned Special Master will sell at public auction, for cash or certified funds, at the hour of 10:00 a.m. on March 5, 2014, at the front steps of the Doña Ana County District Court-house at 201 W. Picacho Ave., Las Cruces, New Mexico 88005, the real property situated in Doña Ana County, New Mexico described as follows:

LOT 4, BLOCK 19, KALAR AND TIMBERS ADDITION TO ANTHONY DOÑA ANA COUNTY, N.M., IN THE COUNTY OF Doña ANA, STATE OF NEW MEXICO, AS SHOWN AND DESIGNATED ON THE PLAT THEREOF, FILED IN THE OFFICE OF THE COUNTY CLERK OF SAID COUNTY AS PLAT NO. 333 ON DECEMBER 16, 1946 IN BOOK 6 PAGE(S) 50 OF PLAT RECORDS.

(the "property"), which is commonly known as 1019 Madison Street, Anthony, New Mexico 88021 (if there is any discrepancy between the property address and the legal description, the legal description shall control).

The property will be sold subject to rights of redemption; easements, reservations and restrictions of record; taxes and governmental assessments; any liens or encumbrances not foreclosed in this proceeding; the valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property; affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land; deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property; environmental contamination, if any; and zoning violations concerning the property, if any. No representation is made as to the validity of the rights of ingress and egress. Transfer of title to the highest bidder shall be without warranty or representation of any kind. ALL PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS AT THE SALE ARE ADVISED TO MAKE THEIR OWN EXAMINATION OF TITLE AND TO CONSULT THEIR OWN ATTORNEY BEFORE BIDDING.

This action is a suit to foreclose a mortgage secured by the real property described above. The total amount awarded by the Judgment to Plaintiff, with interest to the date of sale, is $58,130.19; plus its costs and attorney fees through the date of sale of the property and any amounts advanced by Plaintiff to protect its interest in the property before sale, including insurance, maintenance, taxes, assessments or other expenses relating to the property.

The proceeds from the judicial sale will be applied first to the payment of the costs and expenses of the sale; then to the payment of the Judgment in favor of Plaintiff, including additional fees, costs and expenses as stated in the foregoing paragraph. Any excess funds shall be deposited with the Clerk of Court. Plaintiff may apply all or a portion of its judgment towards the purchase price. Otherwise, terms of sale shall be cash or certified funds.

Las Cruces Arts Fair celebrates four years

Eighty-five national artists gather for juried event

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

The fourth annual Las Cruces Arts Fair kicks off with a gala reception from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday, March 14, and continues through the weekend, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, March 15, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 16, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

Now in its fourth year, the Las Cruces Arts Fair has recruited 85 artists from 12 states and Canada – 34 of whom represent New Mexico – each with their own unique styles and media. A number of artists are returning to the Las Cruces Arts Fair, wowed by the success of the event in previous years, but there's plenty of new artists and works this time around, keeping the event fresh from year to year.

"There's a very wide array of art on display this year," said event co-organizer Glenn Cutter of Cutter Gallery.

Art in all its many forms – weaving, textiles, leatherwork, jewelry, painting, drawing, print-making, photography, porcelain, glass, pottery, woodwork, metal, sculpture and more – will be on display throughout the convention center. With so many artists showing such a wide variety of work, everyone is sure to find a masterpiece on display perfect for that empty space on the wall.

For Friday's gala reception, live music will be provided by Rosa y Ray Renato Duetto Krystal and Remember Then ... A Class Act, along with opening-night festivities, a cash bar and a sneak peek at the hundreds of beautiful items on display – the perfect way to ring in a weekend filled to the brim with all things art.

It's not just art for sale at the Las Cruces Arts Fair, though. Throughout the weekend, there will be near-continuous artist demonstrations and workshops taking place, on topics ranging from handmade paper and watercolors to landscape painting and pottery.

In addition, select pieces from each of this year's arts fair exhibitors will be available in a silent auction in the front lobby of the convention center.

All proceeds from the Las Cruces Arts Fair support the many community programs offered by the Doña Ana Arts Council as well as the continued upkeep and operation of the historic Rio Grande Theatre in Downtown Las Cruces.

The arts council is a nonprofit organization on a mission to "improve the quality of life in Las Cruces, Doña Ana County and southern New Mexico by ensuring that the performing, visual and literary arts are an integral part of education, economic growth and community development."

The impact of the Las Cruces Arts Fair is inestimable, but Sally Cutter said she sees the importance.

"With the Las Cruces Arts Fair, we bring the best quality artists from all over to the area," she said. "We're different from a lot of the other arts or crafts fairs. We're more geared toward fine art."

Aside from the influx of beautiful art, Glenn Cutter said the arts fair also brings with it economic development benefits, with artists and attendees staying in hotels, eating in restaurants, pumping gas and adding value to the local economy.

"I think this year is going to be even better than previous years," Sally Cutter said.

Tickets to the Las Cruces Arts Fair are $6 per person, and $10 weekend passes are

Cowboy Days

Get along, little dogies

NMFRHM celebrates 15th Cowboy Days

By Craig Massey
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

For the 15th year, the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum will be consumed with everything Old West during its annual Cowboy Days celebration Saturday and Sunday, March 8-9.

The fun is from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 8, and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 9. Admission is $5 for everyone 5 and older. There are no passes or free admission for this event.

An exciting new addition to the festivities this year is the Borderland Pistoleros Mounted Shooting Club. Riders on horseback will demonstrate the fast-growing sport of mounted shooting, using rifles, shotguns and pistols. Black-powder blanks are used as the riders weave quickly through a course, firing at balloons. The demonstrations will be from 11 a.m. to noon and 4 to 5 p.m. each day.

"It's the Old West," said Borderland Pistoleros member Jim Huff, when asked why the competition is so popular for spectators. "It's as John Wayne as you can get ... riding fast and blasting away with a smoking six-gun."

Speaking of six-guns, Flying Cloud Productions returns this year to perform gunfight re-enactments twice each day, and also will hold an Old West Medicine Show and a 19th Century Fashion Show. The gunfights are at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Sunday.

Museum staff members and volunteers offer interactive, living history fun each year and the story this year will be the Trial of Samuel Cooper, who is accused of cattle rustling. Visitors are invited to interact with the characters as the fate of Cooper is decided. Will there be a hanging? The living history will be from 1 to 1:45 p.m. and 2 to 2:45 p.m. each day.

A new addition to the children's activities this year is the Sheriff School, where kids go through a brief training to see if they have what it takes to be a sheriff in the Old West. There also will be Cowboy Boot Camp craft activities throughout the day, and pony rides from noon to 4 p.m. There is an additional $5 charge for pony rides.

Demonstrations are always a big part of Cowboy Days as the museum pays tribute to the state's ranching history. The Parade of Breeds takes place from noon to 1 p.m. and from 3 to 4 p.m. each day. Cowboys on horseback bring cattle from each of the museum's six different breeds of beef cattle into the Round Pen and talk about the history and specific characteristics of each breed. Tours of the livestock facilities will take place at 1:30 p.m. each day.

Other demonstrations include blacksmithing, sewing, weaving and dowsing. On Sunday only, Pat Howard and his working dogs will be here to demonstrate how they herd livestock. The Back Country Horsemen and New Mexico State University Horseman's Association also will be on hand.

Chuck-wagon cooking by Dave Harkness and cowboy music are also part of the festivities. The musical performers on the schedule are Tom Foster Morris, Chris Baker, Randy Granger, Bruce Carlson, Washtub Jerry, Kenny Arroyos, James Michael, the Stagecoach Troubadours and Skunk Valley.

Members of the Western Writers of America will do readings and talk about their works in the museum's theater each day. They include Thomas Bryant, Linda Jacobs, Melody Groves and Johnny Boggs.

The museum's greenhouse will be open for business both days. A variety of home-grown plants, shrubs and flowers will be for sale; Cowboy Days admission is required to shop at the greenhouse.

Arts and crafts vendors will be set up around the 47-acre facility, and there will be plenty of food choices.

For more information, visit www.nmcowboydays.com or call the museum at 522-4100 or Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232.

Gunfight reenactments will be held twice daily during the 15th annual Cowboy Days, Saturday and Sunday, March 8-9, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

Art Obscura Gallery is located at 3206 Harrelson St. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. For more information, call 494-7256.

BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER presents "Prairie View Furniture" by Doug Ricketts and "For the Love of Art," presented by the ArtForms Artists Association. "Prairie View Furniture" features the work of cabinetmaker and artist Ricketts, who creates regionally inspired furniture that incorporates landscape and weather events, profiles of farm implements and buildings into their designs.

Branigan Cultural Center is located at 501 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, call 541-2154.

MAIN STREET GALLERY presents the annual Egg Tempera Exhibit. Long before watercolors or oils were developed, egg tempera was used. In Las Cruces, members of the Artists Guild of Southern New Mexico have devoted themselves to this ancient technique and are proud to show the fruits of their work. Artists include Margaret Pedreny, Marie Dwyer, Lucia Wilcox, Holly Goettelmann, Mary McCoy and Mayanna Howard. The exhibit will remain on display through Saturday, March 1.

Main Street Gallery is located at 311 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 647-0508.

QUILLIN-STEPHENS GALLERY will feature artists Kim and John Gaskill for the month of February. Kim Gaskill works in paint and stained glass, and John Gaskill creates bird baths and other yard art. In addition, work by gallery artists Sally Quillin, Mike Stephens, Jay Foster Savage and Aline Fister will be on display.

Quillin-Stephens Gallery is located at 317 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday and Saturday. For more information, call 312-1064.

MOUNTAIN GALLERY presents the Las Cruces Arts Association (LCAA) "Creative Totems" exhibit. As a community project sponsored by the LCAA, youth groups created totem poles approximately 3 feet tall to be exhibited at the gallery. They will remain on display through the end of February, and will be up for silent auction throughout the month, available for pickup on Friday, March 7.

In addition, Mountain Gallery has selected Dean Lively as its featured artist for the month of February. Lively is a retired high school teacher working in a variety of media including fiber, watercolor, pastels, acrylics and oils.

Mountain Gallery is located at 138 W. Mountain Ave. Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. For more information, visit www.lascrucesarts.org.

A tale of art and artists

Decade of work pays off for 'Aunt Raini'

Review by Gerald M. Kane

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

In most theater works, the first scene sets the tone for the entire plot. Audience members are usually thrown into a situation portrayed on stage, and have an inkling of what to expect for the remainder of the performance.

Whenever there is a cultural lull in our community, or after I've reviewed a production that did not live up to my expectations, I've fantasized that I had access to one of Harry Potter's portkeys to transport me to the best seats in the house in a Broadway theater in New York to review a performance of a show with an exceptional cast about which I have read. The new production of "Pippin" comes to mind, or maybe the upcoming revival of "Of Mice and Men" starring James Franco.

Fortunately, I had no need for a portkey last Friday, Feb. 21, as I watched the opening night production of "Aunt Raini," an exceptionally well-conceived and adeptly directed play by Tom Smith, head of the New Mexico State University Theatre Arts Department and managing director of the American Southwest Theatre Company.

Ten years in the making, "Aunt Raini" has had a variety of incarnations in a number of cities and workshops. This decade of persistence and tinkering paid off, and this "final" version is a show I firmly believe can easily find an audience in New York or any other major city ... and I hope it will.

To my thinking, the core message of the play is how important it is for us to grapple with the question of what constitutes great art, and whether it is possible to create and view art in a purely objective way, separating the artist's political ideologies from the work itself.

Smith cleverly weaves his plot around elements in the life of the enigmatic Leni Riefenstahl, close friend and purported mistress of Adolf Hitler. She was a film director, photographer, actress and dancer widely known for directing the Nazi Party propaganda films "Triumph of the Will" and "Olympia." Only after her death in 2003, at the age of 101, was her work praised, and she was glorified as an acclaimed pioneer of film and photographic techniques.

The plot of the play is deceptively simple. Katherine, a sophisticated young gallery owner in New York, is visited by her Aunt Raini from Germany, who raised Katherine after her mother's death. From the moment Aunt Raini enters Katherine's well-appointed apartment, she finds much to criticize, most especially the photography of Joel, Katherine's current boyfriend. We soon learn that Aunt Raini is ill.

Without disclosing too many details, so as not to take away your enjoyment of the play, Aunt Raini's identity is discovered and Katherine's life unravels. By the play's end, Katherine finally begins to reconstruct her life and "inspire."

The dialogue is natural and flows effortlessly. The script is tightly constructed, with mystical cello interludes between scenes, which add a haunting element to the action.

In the hands of Mark Medoff and an exceptional cast, we leave the theater at the play's end, with much to contemplate about our own identities, our own struggles to assert ourselves and inspire others and our experiences with art and our roles as beneficiaries of many artists' inspirations.

Kudos and a large bouquet of virtual rose are sent most especially to guest artist Chicago actress Stephanie Monday, whose charismatic and nuanced portrayal of Aunt Raini takes ones breath away. What a privilege to see a polished actress "do her stuff" in our presence and at once display arrogance, muted affection and cope with her own demons. In her bio in the program it states that Monday played Blanche DuBois in "A Streetcar Named Desire." I could easily see her in this role and can only imagine what skills she brought to that portrayal.

NMSU senior Claire Koleske, whose work I have followed over the years, comes to full fruition as an accomplished actress playing the role of Katherine. She understands the many layers of Katherine's complex character, and brings a certain degree of innocence, business acumen and compassion for her aunt. I must also say that from certain angles, Koleske bears more than a passing resemblance to Sarah Jessica Parker.

Aaron Hernandez is the perfect foil, portraying Joel, a Jewish photographer and Katherine's current "squeeze." His interactions with Katherine and most especially with Aunt Raini are full of artistic and romantic passion. I look forward to seeing more of Hernandez in other productions.

In a small role as The Director, Joshua Horton's portrayal is adequate.

As expected, the scenic and lighting design by Jim Billings is excellent. Julio C. Hernandez's costume design is spot on.

Words can't fully express what a privilege it is to see the work of Distinguished Achievement Professor Mark Medoff. How fortunate are his students and colleagues to work with him firsthand. His guidance in this project is so apparent. Together with Smith, another gift to our community we must celebrate the richness and beauty which is right here in Las Cruces waiting for us to enjoy.

I urge you to make every effort to see this outstanding play. It is one of the most significant productions in this community I have been privileged to review.

Showtimes of "Aunt Raini" are 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday, through Sunday, March 9, in the Medoff Theatre at the NMSU Center for the Arts, 1000 E. University Ave. Tickets are $10-$17 and available at the Center for the Arts box office from noon to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, through Ticketmaster or by calling 646-4515 or 646-1420. Performance times are 7:30 p.m. Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. For more information, visit www.nmsutheatre.com.

LCCT HOLDS ONE-ACT FESTIVAL AUDITIONS

Auditions for the One-Act Play Festival at the Las Cruces Community Theatre will take place at 7 p.m. Sunday, March 2, at the theater, 313 N. Main St. The One-Act Play Festival will run from Thursday through Sunday, April 24-27.

For "Dinner with Romeo and Juliet," an original play by Marissa Bond, two men and two women ages 30 to 60 are needed. For "The Actor's Scenebook," another of Bond's original plays, four actors, any age, any gender are needed. Both "Dinner with Romeo and Juliet" and "The Actor's Scenebook" will be directed for the Las Cruces Community Theatre by Bond and Les Boyse.

Auditions will consist of cold readings from the scripts. For more information, contact Bond at mcamillebond@gmail.com.

FILM FESTIVAL SEEKS PROMO SHORTS

In its continuing efforts to provide opportunities to film students in the Las Cruces area, White Sands International Film Festival (WSIFF) announces the 2014 WSIFF Student Promo Film Contest. To enter, students are asked to write and produce a 30- or 60-second promotional video for the WSIFF, including the official event logo, event dates, location and website. The deadline for contest entries is 5 p.m. Saturday, March 15. No late entries will be accepted.

"This is a fantastic opportunity for students at all levels of the filmmaking process," said WSIFF Artistic Director David Salcido. "Not only will it provide an occasion for them to showcase their work in a public setting, it will also allow them to put their learning to use at a professional level. One of the biggest complaints most film students have is not being able to use their skills in a real world setting. This contest provides the opportunity for them to do just exactly that, while at the same time broadening the WSIFF's reach within the community."

Entries are encouraged from students in film or production programs, or students who are interested in independent film production. Winners of the contest will be selected at three levels – middle school, high school and college – and will have their shorts regularly screened at Allen Theatres to promote the upcoming WSIFF, Sept. 3-7.

In addition, each contest winner will receive two VIP all-access passes to the event, which includes free admission to all films, workshops, parties and meet and greet events. For full details and entry forms, visit www.wsiff.com.

WSIFF, this year celebrating its 10th anniversary, brings together films from across the state of New Mexico and around the world to showcase the skills and talents of amateur and professional filmmakers alike. The festival is a five-day event running with film screenings, workshops and VIP parties.

For more information about WSIFF, visit www.wsiff.com or contact Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232.

GROUP SHOW CONTRIBUTORS SOUGHT

Border Book Festival celebrates jazz great

Join the Border Book Festival (BBF) as it celebrates the life of jazz great Stan Getz at 6 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28. The evening dinner fundraiser will feature jazz music by Just Friends, a talented Jazz Quintet comprised of Emilio Vargas, saxophone, Dwight Goetz, trumpet, Andrés Hernández, guitar, Adriel Hernández, bass, and Andrew Anaya, drums.

Food from the Ukraine, Getz's parents ancestral home, will be served. The evening will be a festive tribute worthy of this iconic jazz saxophonist. Tickets are $35 per person, limited to 50 people, and reservations are necessary. The event will be held at a private home at 6 p.m. and participants will be given directions.

Each month, the BBF will feature special Cenas Culturales/Cultural Dinners. The Cenas will raise awareness to global cultural traditions and feed both body and soul. The Cenas will lead to the 20th annual Festival, Maíz: Honoring the Corn Mother, April 24-27.

Previous Cenas have included Fiesta

Navideña, a holiday Mole Fest and most recently, Festa Italiana, a tribute to Mario Lanza.

The February Cena will feature a special tribute to Getz, born Stanley Gayetsky. Getz was known as "The Sound" because of his warm, lyrical tone, his prime influence being the wispy, mellow timbre of his idol, Lester Young. Coming to prominence in the late 1940s with Woody Herman's big band, Getz is described by critic Scott Yanow as "one of the all-time great tenor saxophonists". Getz went on to perform in bebop, cool jazz and third stream, but is perhaps best known for popularizing bossa nova, as in the worldwide hit single "The Girl from Ipanema" (1964).

"My life is music, and in some vague, mysterious and subconscious way, I have always been driven by a taut inner spring which has propelled me to almost compulsively reach for perfection in music, often – in fact, mostly – at the expense of everything else in my life," Getz once said.

Two hours to waste '3 Days to Kill' is a tone-deaf mess

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

"3 Days to Kill" is a bewildering, jumbled, tonally inconsistent mess, equal parts schmaltzy family drama, black comedy and overly complex spy thriller, stretched to a nearly unbearable two hours.

The somehow-still-employed Kevin Costner stars as Ethan Renner, a play-by-his-own rules CIA agent with a hacking cough, which in time is diagnosed with terminal cancer of the just-about-everything.

Post-retirement, Renner tries to reconnect with his estranged wife, Christine (Connie Nielsen), and daughter, Zoey (Hailee Steinfeld), whom he excised from his life long ago for alleged reasons of safety, but mostly because "3 Days to Kill" needs them to reconnect, and the absentee father is a standby trope. With just a few months to live, Renner is given an offer he can hardly refuse. A fellow CIA operative – the terribly, terribly named Vivi Delay (a vacant-looking Amber Heard) – offers him an unproven, highly experimental new drug capable of curing his cancer if he'll come out of retirement for one last job: catching the elusive "The Wolf" (Richard Sammel) and his second in command, "The Albino" (Tómas Lemarquis), a melanin-challenged arms dealer ... or something.

From there, Renner has to balance the newfound demands of fatherhood with killing people, a much-loved scenario of writer Luc Besson. A brief peruse of Besson's filmography is telling: The man pretty much makes this movie over and over again – hitman (or woman) tries to toe the line between domesticity and danger – twice successfully ("La Femme Nikita" in 1990 and "The Professional" in 1994) and many, many more times in the 20 years in the interim, each outing illustrating the law of diminishing returns.

Besson's weak, convoluted and now-cliché script suffers even more from the direction of McG, a man whose ego was so inflated from a few successful music videos for now-joke '90s acts, including Smash Mouth, Sugar Ray and Korn, along with a couple commercials for Gap, he willingly dubbed himself something as pretentious as McG before making the leap from small-screen trash to big-screen trash with

3 DAYS TO KILL

"Charlie's Angels." Following the somewhat inexplicable success of "Charlie's Angels," McG followed with "Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle," "Terminator Salvation," "This Means War" and "We Are Marshall," each with his trademark high-gloss, no-soul style perfected in the heyday of MTV.

The blame isn't all McG's, though, as much as I may want it to be. "3 Days to Kill" also sucks thanks to phoned-in performances from all its principals. Costner is as wooden and boring as ever, shooting for gruff-but-lovable, maybe, and failing. Whatever it is he was going for, he didn't achieve it. Nielsen is acceptable, or would be in a Lifetime Original; all this script calls for is for her to seem concerned, perturbed or shed a painfully forced tear at the sight of her husband teaching their daughter to dance before prom – pass the barf bag, please. Steinfeld is atypically awful for a movie teen, and I hate movie teens. Every emotion seems feigned, from attraction to affection to indignation, and she tries on each face with equal lack of aplomb.

Worst of all is Heard as agent Vivi Delay, vamping about and chewing scenery with all the charisma of a plastic doll. She may be the least convincing CIA agent I've ever seen on film, and that's saying something.

The final nail in the coffin of "3 Days to Kill" lies in its slapdash, schizophrenic construction. It seems to follow a painful, rote formula – Renner kills guys, spends some family time, gets a new lead, kills more guys, spends more family time, and on and on – without ever settling into a groove. Each of its parts, too, seems to be worse than the other. The action is mean spirited, flashy and bland, though competent; the comedy cliché, forced and unfunny; and the family scenes are sub-CW schmaltz of the worst kind.

Balancing this kind of thing would take a director along the lines of Guy Ritchie or Malcolm McDonald, skilled and subtle in their schizophrenic movie-making, not a guy with a made-up name whose best film was either "Charlie's Angels" or the music video of Sugar Ray's "Fly." Just don't see it.

The secret life of Charles Dickens Fiennes' 'The Invisible Woman' is tastefully sensual

Review by Jeff Berg
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

What is it that makes an industry viable within a community?

A moody, tasteful and slightly sensual piece, "The Invisible Woman" made me think that if Charles Dickens – the focus of the story – were alive, this is how he would have directed it himself.

The film is based in fact, unfolding slowly and in flashback, starting years after Dickens' passing in 1870. It stars and is well directed by Ralph Fiennes, as we find ourselves as observers of a part of Dickens' life that would have been plastered all over the Internet and gossip magazines nowadays, since he has probably fallen in love with a much younger woman, Nelly Ternan, played with a gentle stillness by Felicity Jones.

The time is the 1860s and Dickens is enjoying immense popularity in the literary world. He is also much into theater, and this is how he meets Nelly, one member of a family – including her two sisters and mother – of actresses. Dickens likes them all, and soon enjoys the company of all of them for dinner and on other placid outings, but he has also taken a particular liking to Nelly, finding himself attracted to her shy, quiet primness.

His popularity has brought him fame and fortune, but he also tends to a rather dowdy wife, certainly his intellectual inferior, which probably results from the fact that she has borne 10 children.

There is no love in their relationship. At one point, the stark and pointed Dickens literally divides their home into two separate living quarters.

His wife, Catherine, is dispatched to Nelly's home to deliver a birthday gift to her that was mistakenly delivered to Mrs. Dickens. Catherine seems resigned to the fact that she is trapped in a loveless and sad marriage, while announcing to the young and centered Nelly that she will never really be with Charles, since it is somewhat apparent that he is more in love with his public than with Nelly.

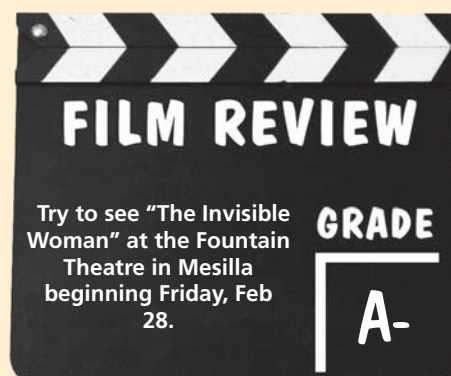

Even though the film is about an affair, so to speak, it is handled much differently than any I have seen on film in the past. There are no scenes of pants-less, panting rutting, and nary a kiss passes between Nelly and Charles for most of the film. When that does happen, it is most tasteful but has heartbreaking results.

At first, I didn't really like this film, but after leaving the theater and thinking about it, I grew to appreciate the presentation and dignity of the piece, which tells a slightly tawdry tale with grace and forbearance. Jones is a fine up-and-coming actress, and Fiennes is easy to watch and believe on the screen.

Fiennes as director has also created a superb view of the fashions, times and mores of the era, while not becoming a scold about the many double standards that loomed in society and for Dickens himself. Dickens, always fond of his adoring public, went as far as to write a letter to the London Times denying the presence of Nelly in his life.

The opening and closing shots perfectly bookend the picture, but do not go expecting to see heaving bodices and fisticuffs. "The Invisible Woman" has no room for that.

Opening Friday, March 7, at the Fountain: "The Past" (French, English subtitles)

Superbly crafted but relentlessly bleak, "The Past," Iran's submission for an Oscar for Best Foreign Language film this year, is the story of Ahmad, Marie and Samir.

Ahmad has returned to Paris to finalize a divorce from Marie, only to find out that she is living with Samir and is heavy with his child. There are three children involved as well: Lucie, Marie's depressed and withdrawn daughter from an even earlier relationship; Fouad, Samir's young son who relentlessly acts out due to his despair from Samir being with Marie; and the very quiet Lea. Samir's wife lies comatose in a hospital after drinking detergent in front of her children, adding to the emotional complexity of the plot and to the understated and moving closing scene.

Similar in tone and placement as "The Separation," director Asghar Faradi's last film which won an Oscar in 2012, "The Past" uses many of the same intriguing methods to bring out the best in its actors, all of whom are believable and easily draw empathy, except maybe for the often harsh and unsmiling Marie.

"The Past" is a hard drama that may be off-putting to some, but for those who stick with it, there are many rewards.

Master Gardeners Marjie Snell and Tracy Thompson work the organization's booth during the 2013 LCHBA Home & Garden Show.

During last year's show, a large emphasis was placed on gardening, with one ballroom filled with various plants and garden features.

The LCHBA Home & Garden Show explores sustainability

By David Salcido
Las Cruces Bulletin

Since 1983, the Las Cruces Home Builders Association's Home & Garden Show has been a staple of the spring season, heralding innovation and advancement in the way home repair and décor is conducted.

This year, a new theme is being introduced, which plays upon a growing trend in southern New Mexico: green living and sustainability. Called the "green mile," it's more an evolution than it is a transition, said Home & Garden Chairman Max Bower.

"The green mile was a concept that came up while meeting with the committee and trying to come up with something that would tie the two rooms at the Convention Center together a little bit better," he said. "In the past two years, we've been expanding the garden area in the ballroom and we've got a lot more interest this year from different vendors. That allowed us to move the garden area out of the ballroom and into the breezeway. That was always something we wanted to do, but we didn't have the vendor count to pull it off."

"The idea of the green mile is a conglomeration of different ideas," LCHBA Managing Director Steve Chavira said. "We call it our co-op space. It allows different businesses that have complimentary focuses to be able to work together to create a themed space."

"What we've tried to do over the years was incorporate less of a pipe and drape feeling and more of an open floor-plan as a dynamic kind of approach to the trade show. This is the latest permutation of that effort, which is to create an atmosphere for businesses that, on the surface have different focuses, but when you partner them up with other businesses, suddenly puts a system in place that demonstrates to consumers how each of these products work together."

To complete the transition of the garden aspect of the show into a true green experience, Bower explains that he and his committee reached out to the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce, along with business focused on energy efficiency and sustainable living.

"There's always been a photovoltaic presence at the show," he said, "but by bringing the Green Chamber in and picking their brains, we were able to expand on that idea of sustainable living, because there is a lot of interest in 'green' construction out there. We wanted to get as big a cross-section of vendors that would fall into that category as possible."

Another aspect being introduced this year is involvement from the New Mexico State University Athletics Department.

"We're going to be hosting the Aggies as a send-off to the WAC tournament," Bower said. "This is the first year that I've been involved that we're working with NMSU Athletics to create awareness for our event and also support the Aggies. We're going to have both the men's and women's basketball coaches, along with several members of the teams come in and do a radio remote on the green mile."

"We've been trying to work out some ideas on how to work together, marketing-wise, because, being an alumnus, I look at NMSU Athletics as something that feeds the business community as a whole. Really what we are is an association of hundreds of businesses, whether it's banks or builders and it's a good leap off for NMSU Athletics to get more local business sponsorship. They can get a lot of bang for their buck working with us."

It's all part of what Chavira calls an "interactive aspect" of the show that has been growing over the years. He cites demonstrations from vendors and groups like the Master Gardeners as other highlights of the event, though it is the environment of the show itself that he believes will be the real draw.

"We have a lot of new vendors who have come aboard because they've seen what we've done in the past, they've seen how it worked and they want to get involved because it's not your typical tradeshow setup," he said. "We've created an environment, more than a setting. It's sensory, it smells good and it's aesthetically pleasing. It's an environment where people are more relaxed and able to be more conversant with the exhibitors."

Both Bower and Chavira believe that this year's event will surpass all others, owing to its fresh approach to the trade show atmosphere and sustainable living aspect. They both admit that the economy has been an issue for the Home Builders Association, but see more homeowners taking the plunge and making changes they may have been putting off for the last few years.

"I've seen a definite upsurge in leads over the past couple of years," Bower, who owns and operates Red Mesa Design, said. "We've had everything from people redoing their backyards, to maybe doing a water feature, to maybe doing a bedroom addition. I expect that to continue this year, especially if the weather holds out and it continues to be as nice as it's been."

It's this optimism that is a trademark of the Las Cruces Home & Garden Show and has been for the 32 years it has been in existence. This year's offering raises the bar considerably, by reaching out to those interested in making a positive impact to the environment, while still having an enjoyable, interactive experience.

"There's going to be a lot going on," Chavira said. "It's not going to be exactly like every other home and garden show. There will be a lot of opportunities for people to win door prizes and get involved. I think it's going to be a lot of fun and a great weekend."

Tiny critters can do big damage

The common aphid sets its sights on spring gardens

Scott Svenheim
ACE Pest Detective

With spring just around the corner, it's time to start thinking about guarding our gardens against one of the most pervasive of pests: the aphid.

Also known as plant lice, aphids are the bane of novice to professional gardeners. There's a variety of aphid for just about every plant with about 4,400 different species. Their sap-sucking habits will cause leaves to curl and yellow and can do the most damage in warm weather, up to 80 degrees. Grown plants can most often withstand the damage, but it still warrants controlling. Aphids can also spread viruses among crops such as pumpkins, melons and cucumbers.

The tiny insect measures anywhere from 1 to 10 millimeters long and emits a sticky substance known as honeydew. There are many natural predators to aphids, giving gardeners a choice other than a chemical attack. Insecticides will kill beneficial bugs right along with aphids.

A pervasive pest, the aphid can do a lot of damage as the weather warms up, including the spread of viruses to some crops.

Other insects, ants in particular, may work to protect the aphid as honeydew is a source of food. According to the University of California Integrated Pest Management Program Online, the presence of ants as well as insects that are the aphid's natural predator – ladybugs and lacewings to name two – may be a clue that you have a large aphid population.

Check for aphids often, at least twice a week, to catch evidence of the insect before the population gets out of hand. Aphids become more difficult to control when damage appears, because they can take refuge from chemicals and predators behind the curling leaves.

Before planting your garden, make sure to check surrounding plants and trees for aphids. If you find any, clip leaves and discard them.

Ladybugs, lacewing and syrphid flies can help control aphids. The offspring of lacewing, called aphid lions, have a voracious appetite for aphids. The best enemies are those native to your garden, but buying a batch of ladybugs from your local nursery may help control the population, even if they fly away in a few days.

You may want to research reflective mulches that can help protect against aphids. Meanwhile, blasting plants with a hard spray of water will knock many aphids off as well as clean the plants of honeydew.

The safest of the chemical control available for do-it-yourselfers are insecticidal soap, neem oil and narrow-range oil. Buyers beware: Often these chemicals will also kill natural predators. Spraying a product such as insecticidal soap with water will only kill the aphids (and predators) that are present on the day of spraying – it won't kill the insects that come in after the application.

Early vegetable gardening

Avoid the frost by knowing what to plant and when

We can still have cold freezing nights this time of year, so don't be tempted by the warm days to plant items that are not frost tolerant. This includes, but is not limited to tomato plants, peppers, squash and melons.

If you still insist on planting the aforementioned now, you can use a product called "Wall O Water" season extenders. These are clear plastic columns, that when filled with water, will provide frost protection and will allow fruit development and harvest up to 30 to 40 days sooner. If you can't find this convenient garden apparatus then a large pail, blanket, or frost proof cloth will work as well. Just remember to remove them immediately after the freezing temps subside.

Vegetables safe to plant now are: broccoli, peas, lettuce, collards, radish, mustard, spinach, onions, kale, kohlrabi, turnips, celery, Chinese cabbage and Brussels sprouts. These plants will take our typical Las Cruces cold temperatures without damage. Just make sure the plants you use are "hardened off," which means they are acclimated to cold temperatures before they are planted in the ground. In other words they are not just out of "greenhouse" conditions.

After the likelihood of frost is over, which is typically late March or early April, you should be able to plant tender veggies. One of the best indicators that we have had our last frost is when the local mesquite shrubs begin to leaf out. Keep in mind nature can break its own rules, so use this strategy only as a guideline.

You should be prepared to cover new seedlings just in case Mother Nature changes her mind. That said, tomatoes, cucumber, melons, squash, corn, okra, and sweet potato are some vegetables that should be safe to plant, again after the leaves on the native mesquites have emerged.

Peppers and eggplant are usually better off when the soil warms up and the nighttime temperatures are consistently above 50, so you may want to hold off on these until mid- to late April.

Before planting a vegetable garden it is most important to apply generous amounts of organic material. You can use compost, manure, peat moss and or any combination of the above. Do not use fresh manure. The salt content in the manure could burn tender seedling roots and may have weed seed to boot. If you use fresh manure it is suggested to apply it in the fall months so that it has time to break down.

Our soil, if you can call it that, has very few nutrients in it. In most cases you should supplement the ground with fertilizer. There are many forms of fertilizer application. There are water soluble, granular, dry organic, liquid organic and vegetarian organic forms available. Choose whichever works best for you.

Some granular or powder forms typically last longer in the soil, but may bother allergy sufferers when applied during breezy days. Water soluble fertilizer can help avoid this problem, but will have to be applied more often.

Organic fertilizers come in dry and liquid forms. Some organics may be in all-vegetarian form, as well. Some of the drawbacks of organic fertilizers are that they may take a longer time to work and are generally more expensive to use.

Whichever fertilizer you choose, read and follow the recommendation on the label.

Knowing how much water to use is always a challenge. We live in a very dry climate so some soils can dry out very quickly. As a rule it is best to keep the soil evenly moist but not soggy. Sandy soils need frequent light watering, while heavy clay soils benefit from slow irrigation.

The use of mulch is recommended to help keep moisture in for any soil. This can be in the form of shredded bark, compost, pecan shells etc. The application of this organic product will not only help maintain soil moisture, it will also help reduce or even prevent weeds and erosion.

Watch the Weather Channel to help you plan your veggie garden. This is a helpful tool, but keep a "frost protection kit" handy just in case Mother Nature doesn't tune into it.

Gary Guzman, owner of Guzman's Color Your World Garden Centers, can be reached at gary@lascrucesbulletin.com.

It's best to wait until the frosty temperatures are completely behind us before planting "tender" vegetables such as tomatoes.

Church Listings

UPCOMING EVENTS

SOUP SUPPER AND OPEN HOUSE

St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Church, 518 N. Alameda Blvd., invites the community to an open house introduction to Orthodoxy, along with a simple soup supper from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28.

Friends who have been reading Father Gabriel's columns in the Las Cruces Bulletin and listen to his podcasts on Ancient Faith Radio are invited. Those who don't know anything about the Orthodox Church are also invited. Register in advance by calling 524-2296.

COWBOY CHURCH

St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 7050 McNutt Road, will hold Cowboy Church at 3:30 p.m. Saturdays, March 1, April 5 and May 3. Riders are invited to ride in for the service, or bring their horses in horse trailers.

"Cowboy Church is an idea that people just love," Father Daniel Cave said. "So, we are bringing it back. Come and wear your favorite cowboy hat or boots. We welcome everyone."

Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 874-3972.

CHILI COOK-OFF AT CROSS OF CHRIST

Cross of Christ Lutheran Church, 1485 N. Main St., will host a chili cook-off as part of its Mission Festival Sunday, March 2. The 10 a.m. worship service will feature guest speaker Gonzalo Delgadillo, who was a missionary in Bogota, Colombia, and is assisting with the WELS Multi-Language Publications program.

A chili tasting contest will follow immediately after the service. The creator of the chili with the most votes will be commemorated in the Cross of Christ Chili Cook-Off hall of fame. For more information, call 649-5458 or visit www.crossofchristlc.org

ASH WEDNESDAY

Peace Lutheran Church, 1701 E. Missouri Ave., will offer Ash Wednesday services at 12:10 and 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 5. Eucharist and Imposition of Ashes will be offered at both services. All are invited to attend. For more information, call 522-7119.

LENTEN SERVICES

Mission Lutheran Church, 2752 Roadrunner Pkwy, will celebrate Lent beginning Ash Wednesday, March 5, with services each week until April 9. Lenten services will start each week at 5:15 p.m. with a soup supper, followed by a 6 p.m. church service. Regular worship schedule is 6 p.m. Saturday, 9 a.m. Sunday and a Spanish language service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

For more information, call 522-0465.

PRAISE AND GOSPEL CONCERT

David Beam, chaplain with the Good News Jail and Prison Ministry at the Doña Ana County Detention Center, will present an evening of praise music and gospel singing at 6:30 p.m. Friday, March 7, First Assembly of God Church, 5605 Bataan Memorial Highway West.

Musicians and vocalists from many local churches will participate. Admission is free, though a love offering will be taken to benefit the Chaplaincy.

For more information, call 647-7636.

RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD INTRO

Have you ever wished you had more knowledge about other religions? The Baha'i Information & Reading Center, 525 E. Lohman Ave., will offer an eight-week introductory class titled "Religions of the World" from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, March 11 through April 29. The class is free and all faiths are welcome. Entry is through the back of the building. For more information, call 522-0467.

SONOMA SPRINGS CHURCH FUNDRAISER

The Hope and Care Ministry of Sonoma Springs Church, 3940 Sonoma Springs Ave., will hold its annual spaghetti dinner fundraiser from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 15. Cost for the tickets is $6 for adults and $3 for children ten and under.

This year, gluten-free pasta and regular spaghetti will be offered as well as to-go dinners. Other highlights of the evening will be a baked goods sale and a 50/50 drawing for $1 each, or a book of six tickets for $5.

The proceeds from this event will be used to help purchase food for 50 families in need within the community.

For more information, or to purchase tickets, call the church office at 526-4907

New century of interfaith relations

Expanding understanding of other religions key

Gabriel Rochelle
Tales from the Cassock

We are moving toward a new phase in interfaith relations, at least among people who are learning to become more open to such matters and, according to recent studies, particularly among college students.

I have been involved in theological dialogues with Muslims and Jews for years now, and also spent a number of years in Buddhist-Christian dialogue. The main result is a deepening of both my understanding and my appreciation for my own tradition of Christianity. I am not threatened by other traditions, I have not sought to convert to other pathways, nor have I spent time lamenting any shortcomings in my own tradition. The incredible gifts received have been in expanding my own understanding of the world of faith without any sense that I must agree with another tradition lock, stock, and barrel in order to appreciate its gifts for its adherents.

In conversation with others, I see that new pathways must be followed if we are all to survive into the future as faith-traditions. Interfaith relations are central to the movement forward. We cannot afford any longer to act as if our world does not contain Buddhists, Pagans or American Indian religions, let alone the "big three" – Christianity, Judaism and Islam. Half a century ago, the sociologist Will Herberg could sum up United States religion as Protestant, Catholic and Jew (the title of his book), with no glance in other directions. This is no longer possible without putting on blinders.

The issue is how to go about negotiating this new interfaith milieu. Specifically the question that arises first and foremost is: How can I show respect for another tradition, even if I don't agree with it, or I find its understanding of God inadequate or, by my standards, simply wrong?

Most religions make truth claims. If my religion is true, the issue becomes: How can competing, or other religions, be true? Doesn't a truth claim cancel out the option for other religions to be true? Can we affirm "multiple truths" and, if so, how? What are the criteria we can use?

The Abrahamic traditions not only believe in special revelation (the idea God has communicated to us in actual ideas and/or words beyond the silent witness of the creation and its workings), but they have particular interpretations of overlapping traditions of revelation. Christians interpret some Old Testament texts differently from, and even contradictorily to, Jewish interpretations; Islam's rendition of Old Testament history and the story of Jesus is different from either Judaism or Christianity. How do we deal with this?

Does the mere act of granting respect to another tradition in some way nullify your own? Do we feel awkward about the activities – especially the prayer – of another religion if we feel that it is bogus?

Then there is the matter of etiquette: If I visit another religious group, what are the pitfalls to avoided? Do I have to do everything the members of that group do? What is expected of me? What can I expect of others?

This last question may be easiest to answer, but it assumes that you will visit the houses of worship of others, and that may be the principle hurdle to overcome. Most places, however, have people who are more than willing to help you not put your foot in your mouth, religiously speaking, and they offer guidelines and pamphlets to help the cause.

You must work out the answers to the other questions I posed in this article, and I invite you into the process of doing so. Your life will be the richer for it, I promise, as we enter further into this century of interfaith relations.

Paradox in training

Marcy Shoberg
Self-defense sense

Females and males of any age able to communicate can be educated and trained to protect themselves from bullies, kidnappers, angry people and more.

This is generally called self-defense or personal-protection training.

In classes that effectively teach these skills, participants learn to use their brain, voice and body for self protection. In the best classes of this type, participants complete exercises that actually train the self-protection skills to come to their mind when needed.

It's one thing to understand options available to a person facing danger, but another to actually be able to quickly make decisions and act.

For various reasons, most people never seek out training of this type. Some don't realize it exists; some don't want to admit they may someday face danger; some assume the police or someone else will protect them; and some believe they, personally, could never acquire enough skills to actually be able to protect themselves.

A few in fact don't even see the value in people learning to protect themselves. You see, there is an inherent paradox in the teaching of self protection skills, which instructor Lynn Marie Wanamaker has been credited with identifying.

When a person bullies, abducts, rapes or otherwise physically assaults another, they alone are responsible for their actions.

Sometimes, however, there are things the victim could have done differently that would have caused them to not be victimized. Therefore proponents of self-defense classes are sometimes accused of victim blaming.

Complicating the issue are myths such as the beliefs that fighting a rapist always makes injuries sustained by the victim worse.

Myths that exist such as thinking men only rape women they find sexy, ignoring a bully will make them leave and fighting a bully will make them back down.

Actually, the best course of action in any situation depends on unpredictable situational factors only apparent to the person in the situation.

Truthfully, self-defense instructors are choosing the easier path. It's much easier to improve the world by teaching potential victims to make good self protection choices than to cause rapists and

Team Zane Celebrity Waiter celebrates five years

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

If you see sweatbands, spandex and side-ways ponytails, you might think you are in a cheesy workout video from the 1980s.

But you might be attending the fifth annual Team Zane Celebrity Waiter held at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

In its fifth iteration, one of the most popular events supporting a nonprofit organization – the Southern New Mexico March of Dimes – has adopted the theme “Back to the ’80s.”

“It’s a chance for people to come see the people they normally see in their business environments completely out of their element,” said Jeffrey Silva, father of Zane Silva, the reason behind the event.

Expect to see re-enactments of “Top Gun,” “Risky Business” and “Footloose.” The celebrity waiters are responsible for getting their tables to participate and join in the action.

While it’s designed to be a fun time had by all, the funds raised from the event go directly to supporting research to a delicate cause. The March of Dimes is designed to help new mothers and infants survive to their highest potential – especially in the face of a premature birth.

“We never expected to be in the situation we found ourselves in six years ago when Zane was born prematurely,” Silva said.

Born prematurely and immediately rushed to a neonatal intensive care unit (NICU) in El Paso where he spent almost the next year of his life, the prognosis for Zane was not good.

“They didn’t think he would survive, and if he did, he would have a lot of problems,” Silva said.

At that time, there was not a NICU in Las Cruces equipped to handle the depth of problems premature babies have. Now, with the help of organizations such as the March of Dimes, MountainView Regional Medical Center and Memorial Medical Center both have achieved higher NICU levels to be prepared for situations such as the one the Silvas found themselves in.

An incredible emotional trauma for Silva, Zane’s mother, Diane, and the couple’s two older sons, Silva said he made a promise to himself and to God that if his son pulled through, he would do anything he could to support those who may face similar situations.

When Zane was miraculously released from the hospital, the journey was still not over for the Silvas.

“It was a tough year when he got out, because Former Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Elisa Cundiff serves drinks and dessert 1960s style at the 2013 Team Zane Celebrity Waiter event. The 2014 dinner will take place at 6 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

he was still in the hospital quite a bit,” Silva said. “A common cold could have meant pneumonia for Zane.”

Now a lively and vivacious 6-year-old, Zane Silva is the face of the Celebrity Waiter event – a smiling face at that. Every year, Zane opens the event with a performance of his own.

But for his dad, the best part is watching the opening video, a compilation of pictures from the precious beginnings of Zane’s life, to then watching the ball of energy on stage.

“People see the reality of a little infant in critical condition, with all the tubes in his mouth, and it tells a story,” Silva said. “It shows how he was to how he is today.”

In 2009, the event started as an intimate gathering of community members and businesses at La Posta de Mesilla, and before long the event needed a bigger venue to accommodate the growing number of participants.

The 2013 Celebrity Waiter welcomed more than 700 guests, and played a role in Team Zane achieving honors as one of the top 10 teams in the nation, securing a spot in a March of Dimes conference held in Washington, D.C.

Out of more than 25,000 teams in the nation, Team Zane representatives were able to meet with members of Congress and spread the word about what little Las Cruces can do to support their community.

“Almost every single one of them asked, ‘Where’s Las Cruces?’” Silva said. “Everyone else was from these big, metro cities and had never heard of us.”

Paring down this year’s attendance to 500 available tickets, Silva said he wanted to get back to the heart of what makes this event truly special – having fun, being silly and supporting an organization that can help stop premature births.

“I really think this is going to be the best year ever,” Silva said.

Registration deadline approaches for nurses

NMSU program offers new doctorates

The New Mexico State University School of Nursing is accepting applications for a new specialty, family nurse practitioner (FNP), in the doctorate of nursing practice (DNP) program for the fall 2014 semester. The application deadline is Saturday, March 15.

The FNP specialty degree option in the DNP program is an online curriculum offered through the College of Health and Social Services. This degree plan is completed in three years of full-time study. All accepted students must be enrolled full-time and must be able to attend the Doctoral Summer Seminar May 19-23.

"We have been encouraged by the administration to offer the family nurse practitioner program," said Pamela Schultz, school of nursing director. "With the Affordable Care Act, there will be an increased need for primary care providers in New Mexico. The Family Nurse Practitioner is prepared to diagnose and treat a wide variety of primary care health conditions across the lifespan, either in collaboration with other health care providers or as autonomous providers in New Mexico."

Schultz said the addition of the new specialty is a good fit for NMSU because the school of nursing has several family nurse practitioners already on faculty. She anticipates the new program will be a popular degree.

The FNP specialty trains nurses for advanced practice in the care of families across the lifespan. Courses focus on advanced health assessment, advanced pathophysiology, advanced pharmacology and management of acute and chronic illness in families.

The program includes seminars and clinical experiences emphasizing the physiological and psychosocial impact of illness on the patient and family. Graduates prepare for the Family Primary Care Nurse Practitioner certification exam.

Surviving addiction crisis

Problems and issues affect not only you

Michael R. Hurst,
MS, LADAC, CEAP
Life and Work Solutions

Addiction, and the associated problems and issues that accompany it, have a devastating impact on families and society.

Unfortunately, the problem is so vast, this article only serves to provide an overview. Researching the topic in greater detail is recommended.

Research is vital to fully understand the ramifications and pursue a solution. Addiction is not a new problem or issue, it has been around for a long time.

According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse, addiction is defined as when a person uses psychoactive chemicals, such as alcohol and drugs, or participates in compulsive behaviors including gambling, internet, sex and spending money.

Addiction is the loss of control of taking psychoactive chemicals or the compulsive behavior. Addiction has this affect on a person due the rewarding sensation on the brain chemistry. This explains why an addicted person continues to use alcohol, drugs or compulsive behavior in spite of negative consequences. Addiction is not the start point for a person; it is the result of a progression of substance abuse.

Given the recent research on brain functioning and the impact of substance use, we have a greater understanding of addiction. Addiction is the end of the road for a person's progressive alcohol and drug use or compulsive activities.

In addition to the impact on the individuals, addiction has an estimated combined medical, economic, criminal and social impact cost of more than half a trillion dollars.

This makes addiction the largest health care and societal problem we face today. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, approximately 80 percent of all crimes were committed by a person who used alcohol or drugs before, during or after the offense. Less than 30 percent of individuals who need treatment will actually seek effective and efficient treatment.

The Department of Health & Health Services and Office of National Drug Control Policy do very good job of keeping track of the problem of substance abuse that leads to addiction.

What the policymakers do a terrible job of is following through on the research to conduct an effective solution for the problem. History and research has proven time and again what effective treatment should look like.

“Addiction is not a new problem or issue.”

Recent federal government data estimates addiction costs at $420 billion a year.

The second part of sizing up the situation pertaining to addictions is asking yourself, “What does effective addiction treatment look like? Will your new health insurance plan cover the issue?” The answer to the first question is a minimum stay in an in-patient treatment program is 90 days with appropriate after care and comprehensive follow up.

The second answer is that very few treatment options available offer this and most insurances do not cover it. The few exceptions are the people fortunate enough to get into a drug court or are able to pay for the treatment out of pocket. Length of stay in treatment is also a common denominator.

A person must review their insurance in order to see if coverage exists for the research-based solution of the problem. One of the new caveats to the new health care law is that the individual must take more control of their problem or issues.

People with addiction issues are famous for not taking control or even admitting that a problem exists. Unfortunately, the jails and prisons will get more crowded with people in treatment vs. incarceration.

A simple study of the math involved proves that the currently newly devised solution will fail. You, the individual, must size up the situation and develop an appropriate course of action to solve the addiction treatment crisis.

This is critical if a person is to survive the addiction treatment crisis. This course of action is for yourself or a family member.

Michael R. Hurst is a retired U.S. Army Special Forces captain and licensed alcohol and drug abuse counselor. He is a contributing author to the recent book “Living and Surviving in Harm's Way: A Psychological Treatment Handbook for Pre- and Post-Deployment of Military Personnel” and numerous articles addressing substance abuse, suicide, PTSD and life skills/transitions since 2002. APA hosts low-cost vaccinations ACTion Programs for Animals (APA) will hold a low-cost dog and cat vaccination clinic from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at Sutherlands, 845 El Paseo Road.

Rabies vaccines will be $8, dog combo vaccines will be $12, cat combo vaccines will be $10 and microchips will be $10. Services are offered on a first-come, first-served basis during that timeframe.

For more information, call APA at 644-0505, or visit www.actionprogramsforanimals.org.

Pet of the week

Slash is an awesome, two-and-a-half-year-old, 12-pound Chihuahua mix. He is affectionate, playful and, most of all, cute. Slash is everything you could want from a new family member.

SLASH

He is a black-and-tan-colored rock star.

For more information about Slash or other animals available for adoption, call the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley at 382-0018.

Animal adoptions scheduled

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla

Valley will facilitate dog, cat, puppy and kitten adoptions Saturday, March 1. In addition to adoptions from the shelter site, adoptions also will take place at off-site pet adoption events.

Adoptions will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces. Dogs available for adoption will be located at the north end of Main Street. Cats can be adopted from the offices of the Center for Spiritual Living, across from the dog adoptions.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., adoptions also will be facilitated at PetCo, 3050 E. Lohman Ave.

Adoption fees are $75 for dogs/puppies and $50 for cats/kittens. The fee includes the first set of vaccinations, spay/neuter and microchip.

At the PetCo event, microchipping for pets that already have homes will be available to the public for $20, and city pet licenses will be available to neutered pets for $5 each. Licenses for unneutered pets are $25 each.

Proof of spay/neuter is required before a $5 license will be issued. Pet owners also must bring current proof of rabies vaccination for each animal to be licensed.

Daily cat adoptions are available at both PetCo, 3050 E. Lohman Ave., and Pet's Barn, 1600 S. Valley Drive.

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley also offers low-cost spay/neuter operations at the rate of $35 for dogs and $25 for cats. Appointments can be scheduled by calling the shelter offices.

Health Briefs

Hatch health and education fair scheduled

Doña Ana Community College center in Hatch will host a health and education fair from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, March 8.

The fair will feature health screenings, children's activities, health insurance information, fire safety, dental demonstrations, prizes and food. The Hatch center is located at 210 E. Hill St.

John Walker serves as the associate vice president for academic affairs at DACC and said he is excited to host the event.

"We are part of this community and want to let everyone know about DACC's center in Hatch," he said. "Not only will there be activities, food and prizes, but also information on health and public services programs at DACC."

Information will be provided on dental assistant, dental hygienist, health care assistant, emergency medical services, fire science, pharmacy technician and veterinary technician programs.

"Graduates from our programs and certificate options are highly sought after by businesses in and around Doña Ana County," Walker said.

MountainView hosts health expo

MountainView Regional Medical Center will host a health expo from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28, in the Community Education Room.

Glucose screening, blood pressure screening, cardiac education, cholesterol screening, bariatric services, wellness services, orthopedic services and help with signing up for the Affordable Care Act will all be available free of charge.

Cancer Awareness and Education Dinner event

American Cancer Society and the Relay for Life of Doña Ana County presents the Cancer Awareness and Education Dinner event from 6 to 9 p.m. Saturday, March 1, at the Sunset Grill, 1274 Golf Club Road.

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based, voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives and diminishing suffering from cancer through research, education, advocacy and service.

Relay for Life represents the hope that those lost to cancer will never be forgotten, that those who face cancer will always be supported and that one day cancer will be eliminated.

Money raised from this fundraising event brings awareness of cancer prevention, early detection, treatment and local patient support and services. Tickets are $25, and are available at Make Believe Jewelry, 1900 S. Espina St.

Multiple sclerosis walk

Las Cruces area residents will unite to join the movement in creating a world free of multiple sclerosis at Walk MS: Las Cruces April 12 at Young Park Pavilion.

This signature event for the national MS Society raises funds to support MS research as well as programs and services that impact thousands of New Mexicans living with the disease.

Walk MS: Las Cruces offers family, friends, neighbors and co-workers the opportunity to mobilize in support of New Mexico families impacted by MS. Participants can choose among a one-mile, 2.5-mile or 5-mile walk, and are welcome to bring along their canine companions. Participants will enjoy complimentary food and entertainment both before and after the event.

Visit www.walkmsnewmexico.org to register to walk, volunteer or make a donation. Online registration is currently open. Registration is free, however, all participants are encouraged to actively fundraise.

The dollars raised support promising research to stop disease progression, restore function that has been lost and to end MS forever. Your dollars also help fund local programs for people living with MS right here in our community.

The average participant raises $225 and fundraising prizes are awarded beginning at the $100 level. On-site registration and check-in begins at 8 a.m., followed by a 9 a.m. official start time.

Local receives state AAUW honor

Ruth Benjamins, a member of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) is the 2013 recipient of the Terry Sleight Award given by the New Mexico AAUW.

The presentation was made at the February branch meeting by Mary Rita Chapman, AAUW-NM finance chair and member of the local AAUW branch.

In memory of Terry Sleight, a long-time women's advocate, AAUW-NM board member and lobbyist, the Terry Sleight

Mary Rita Chapman presents Ruth Benjamins with the 2013 Terry Sleight Award by the New Mexico chapter of the American Association of University Women at the February meeting.

Memorial Award was established in 2005. It is given to an individual AAUW-NM member or group of members in recognition of their efforts in advancing women's issues.

Benjamins served as AAUW Las Cruces branch president 2000-04 and is currently the public policy chair.

'Pipeline to Proposal' will promote health habits in border colonias

New Mexico State University School of Nursing Associate Professor Becky Keele is the lead investigator for a "Pipeline to Proposal" funding award from the Patient-Centered Outcomes Research Institute (PCORI).

This was only one of 30 proposals approved for funds intended to develop communities interested in advancing patient-driven health research. Keele's objective is to increase the capacity of Mexican-American families residing in the colonias of the southern New Mexico border region to discover strategies to promote healthy eating and physical activity to reduce health disparities related to overweight and obesity issues.

Members of the work group will be recruited from the education and health care systems, business and policy-making sectors and families living in the colonias.

"The primary aim of this work group will be to create a work group structure, develop goals and objectives and to do some initial brainstorming related to the challenges and strengths within the colonia community structure that impact the ability to participate in healthy eating and regular physical activity," Keele said.

Hispanic families residing in the colonias are at a higher risk for health disparities because of substandard housing, safety issues, high poverty levels and lack of basic infrastructure. Increased poverty places families at high risk for food insecurity, which is the inability to access sufficient, safe and nutritious food.

Children in food-insecure homes are significantly more likely to be overweight. The lack of access to needed resources makes healthy choices about eating and physical activity very difficult.
