Summer starting

Weekend events lead into Memorial Day

With school getting out, Memorial Day weekend has been for many the unofficial start of summer, with people heading out to the mountains, Elephant Butte Lake or events closer to home.

Plenty of Las Cruces – as well as El Pasoans and even residents of Juárez – will head to the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday through Monday, May 24-26, for the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival. More than 20 New Mexico wineries will offer samples, along with music and other vendors for foods, arts and crafts. (For more information, see page C2.)

For Memorial Day on Monday, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 10124 will host a wreath ceremony at 8 a.m. at the Picacho Avenue bridge over the Rio Grande. Other events will follow at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens, 5140 W. Picacho Ave., and other local cemeteries.

At 8 p.m. Monday, the Veterans Wall Candlelight Ceremony Committee will host the second annual Candlelight Ceremony at Veterans Park, 2651 Roadrunner Parkway. The park's garrison flag will be raised and lowered at sunrise and sunset.

The Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument is now a reality as the result of a proclamation by President Barack Obama Wednesday, May 21, in Washington, D.C. Critical to getting the president to take action on the proposal was a visit in late January by Interior Secretary Sally Jewell, who was given a tour of the nearly 500,000 acres of federal land by U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich.

President creates national monument

Almost 500,000 acres get status

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

A decade-long effort to create better federal protections for undeveloped federal lands in southern New Mexico came to fruition Wednesday, May 21, as President Barack Obama signed a proclamation to establish the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument.

The president's action will permanently preserve approximately 496,000 acres for their prehistoric, historic and scientific values. It is the 10th and largest national monument the president has designated under powers given him by the Antiquities Act.

"Whether they're hiking or camping or fishing, visitors to our parks and public lands are not only enjoying the bounty of our natural resources, but also promoting jobs and growth," Obama said. "And continuing to set aside federal land for outdoor recreation will drive critical revenue for those local communities, and preserve our pristine land for generations to come."

More than 10 years ago, the effort first began to create wilderness areas, but Congress was

City delays start of wage initiative

Alternative heads to council

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council may act on a minimum wage increase ordinance, but several city councillors said they are open to putting it on hold to forge a compromise with a larger increase being proposed in a ballot initiative effort.

City Councillor Miguel Silva's wage ordinance to raise the minimum wage to $8.50 over two years and then index future increases to inflation came up for a first reading at the council's regular meeting Monday, May 19.

Also at the council meeting were members of New Mexico Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé), who gave the councillors bags of peanuts, saying the ordinance proposal amounted to little change in people's wages.

CAFé is leading the ballot initiative effort to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 over three years and set future increase to inflation. The proposal, which would be put to voters if the council doesn't approve it, was rejected by City Attorney Harry

Cheering each other on at the High school graduations

Photos by Todd Dickson

This past week, high school graduations were in full swing with Centennial and Oñate sending their seniors off into the world.

Centennial graduates are given their diplomas by Principal Michael Montoya.

Remembering those who gave all Decorations, memorials mark the sacrifice

Dec. 17, 2013.

Most of us were busy with the pre-Christmas rush. Who do we still have to buy for? I've got to get that package in the mail today! What will we have for Christmas dinner?

The day was different for six soldiers deployed to Afghanistan.

Terry Gordon, Omar Forde, Peter Bohler, Jesse Williams, Randy Billings and Joshua Silverman, all members of the U.S. Army, ranged in age from 22 to 35.

They each came from different backgrounds, different spots in the country: Elkhart, Ind.; Shubuta, Miss.; Marietta, Ga.; Willow Springs, N.C.; Scottsdale, Ariz.; and Heavener, Okla. Gordon and Forde were black. Silverman was Jewish. Some were married. Some were single. Some had children.

They all had at least two things in common.

They all were serving their country.

They all perished in a helicopter crash that December day in New Bahar, Zabul, Afghanistan, the ultimate sacrifice.

Investigations later determined Taliban insurgents brought down the soldiers' Black Hawk with an improvised explosive.

It was the deadliest day of the year for U.S. forces in Afghanistan.

Many of you may not have heard of this event. None of the soldiers were from New Mexico. If I heard about it, I have forgotten it, as you may have.

That is precisely why we have Memorial Day.

These men deserve to be remembered

The day began in 1868 to honor our Civil War dead. It came to be known as Decoration Day and, in 1971, Congress declared Memorial Day, the last Monday in May, as a federal holiday.

I've always found solace and reverence in walking through cemeteries. One of my favorites in Las Cruces is the San Jose Cemetery. It straddles Espina Street near St. Genevieve's Catholic Church, with distinct contrast on the east and west sides of Espina.

The east side is colorful, with well-tended graves and lots of greenery.

The west side feels just like the desert, with no green and several broken grave markers, some of them wooden.

I like the peace of both sections of the cemetery, but find myself drawn more often to the stark desolation of the west side.

There is a grave there marking the life of Cpl. Lupe Rede Rodriguez Jr. He was a New Mexican serving in the Fifth Infantry in Korea. Born July 9, 1931. Died Sept. 2, 1950. He was 19 years old.

I'd wondered before if Rodriguez died in combat. You never know for sure. My friend Jerico Taylor was a soldier who died in an auto accident while on leave driving home to see his parents. He was also 19. I consider him a hero and honor his grave on my visits to Alamogordo.

Regarding Rodriguez, a trip to www.koreanwar.org revealed he indeed died in action, at the Pusan Perimeter. The site also revealed Rodriguez had been seriously injured in combat just 19 days before his death, but returned to action a week later.

The white marble stone at his grave does not illustrate Rodriguez's life. What was he like? What things did he like to do? Who were his friends? Maybe some of his friends are still around. He would be 82 now.

Even if we don't know him, we can remember him and honor his supreme sacrifice.

This is precisely why we have Memorial Day.

He deserves to be remembered.

Memorial Day will likely be a time for fun with friends and family. You may have the day off. Have a great time and be safe.

Take a little time, though, to remember.

Letter to the editor

Testing stress relieved through homeschooling

Thanks to the Bulletin for the excellent article on how standardized testing hurts our children. As the parent of a third-grader, I can attest to the fact that my child has been negatively impacted by these excessive and useless tests.

Children cannot help but develop massive anxiety around these tests. Weeks are spent preparing for them. They are constantly told how important it is to be in school on test days. Teachers and administrators, no matter how they try to hide it, are clearly stressed, and the school goes into lockdown while the tests are administered.

My child has cried all the way home after taking a test she felt she had not performed well on. Another time she had to be picked up from school because she developed a painful tummy ache in the middle of a test, an illness that disappeared as soon as I got her home.

I finally withdrew her from testing when it became clear that the only other choice would be to homeschool her.

But that is only a solution for my child, and a partial one at that. She reports many of her fellow students have the same anxiety. And even if there were no anxiety, huge amounts of money that should be devoted to teaching are being wasted on test prep, not to mention all the classroom time teachers must sacrifice as they drill students to prepare for the tests.

The school board should act on the recommendations included in your article. Las Cruces Public Schools currently uses standardized testing above and beyond the mandates of the state Public Education Department. They also use testing where other, more sensible measures could be used. This madness has to stop.

Accessing truth

False reports get eternal life through the Internet

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

The first victim of the Information Age is truth. Specifically, it is having access to the truth because there is so much false clutter that no one can be sure what is really true.

Often truth has been hijacked for political or anarchist reasons. There are hundreds of false reports each day. They are either called out or assimilated into the culture of our society. Often they live as slogans, such as "Bush lied and people died."

It is now possible to "prove" or "disprove" any fact or theory. There is probably a blog claiming Elvis is playing golf with Michael Jackson.

I get tons of misinformation such as: Mr. Rogers was a decorated Marine in WWII. Nope, that is a hoax someone made up and laughs every time it circles the Internet.

Every day another group of people on Facebook or somewhere else are taken in by the attack on truth.

My first connection to a wider world was in 1988 when I was a tester for Prodigy while living in California. At first it was opinions and advisories and in the 1990s it changed to data repositories.

In 1992, I was using email at New Mexico State University for a project with a woman in Jamaica and a man in New Zealand. We never met face to face but worked a year together. The data we sent back and forth stayed true on the worksheets and it was great.

Certainly I was aware in 1998 of the Y2K scare which came from the Internet to the media and back. Now it seems mildly humorous that so many people believed that life on this planet was going to end due to a programming problem when the clock struck the year 2000.

Scam after scam tied to the Y2K problem had people petrified that the planet was in for a hard time because almost all business had a computer connection. Billions of dollars were needlessly spent.

Not everyone was freaked out, including myself, but the media played it to the hilt. People started stocking up on food, water and generators. However, I did not stock up or hoard above my normal two weeks or so of stuff.

In 1999, I wrote a column asking how these hoarders were going to deal with their neighbors when they have the only warm house on the block? It was going to get ugly, especially when the lights came back on. Neighbors will have long memories of you shoving a gun in the faces and telling them to scram.

In the last 20 years the instant communication has also driven some political events using the political commodity, FUD. Now FUD stands for Fear Uncertainty and Doubt. In 2014, there is an avalanche of untrue and partially true stories in the media, social media and in our email with access to truth missing.

Some people opine what is needed is more government control of us to assure the truth. I cannot imagine how bad it would get if government was in charge of truth.

Consider with this government we have conspiracies to explore or if you are on the other political side to keep people from exploring such as what happened in Benghazi, the IRS targeting conservatives, Fast and Furious and the demolition of the civility impulse in society.

Then comes the worst FUD about climate. How odd it is that we have global drought in New Mexico while global wetness hits the East Coast. We have lost our access to the truth.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Bronc to Breakfast

"Bronc to Breakfast" is my favorite Charlie Russell painting. The scene represents the typical roundup out west. In the foreground is a campfire with cooking pots and pans on the fire or hanging from the cross bar. A cowboy is sitting with his plate of beans, Cookie's in an apron standing by the chuck wagon and in the background are some cowboys by the horses on a picket line.

The focal point is a bal-faced horse in an arcing trajectory, hind feet in the fire, front legs off the ground and reachin', doin' a nose dive, with his mouth open squallin'! Astride this beast is a cowboy. He's lost one stirrup, his hat and his grip. Chaps and shirttail flappin', he's comin' off the left side, lookin' down as if there was a way out.

In his wake the campfire cooking area is an explosion of smoke, fire and kitchen utensils. The cowboy with the plate of beans is flying backwards like he has been shot. In the background, every horse and every cowboy, cook and all, are watching this buckin' horse tornado tear through camp.

Horse people are familiar with the term "feelin' frisky." The condition is common, but not limited to mornings after the horse has been fed, the weather has turned coolish, and the cowboy is absentmindedly saddlin' his horse and jumpin' on like it was any other day.

Last fall I had my own version of a Bronc to Breakfast. In my painting, it might show my horse buckin' under a mesquite tree. It would be hard to see the rider because of the limbs. Or me lookin' like Charlie Russell's cowboy bursting out of the tree, 8 feet off the ground with branches in my mouth. Or the final ejection, me resembling an Olympic diver in some kind of horizontal half-gainer with a rein still in one hand tight enough to hang clothes on.

Now, in the cowboy world, if you survive one of these bucking horse displays, you can earn a little "cowboy cred." Matter of fact, getting bucked off is a better story. My friend Jim's story would put him in that elevated status.

He needed to gather a small pen of Corriente steers and ship them. He saddled his horse. His wife told him he didn't need a horse, they could use the four-wheeler. They were in a hurry. Well, the four-wheeler spooked the steers, so he went back, got his horse, jumped on and touched him lightly with a spur.

In the time it took for him to think, 'Did I pull the cinch tight?' he was sitting on the pommel, then back on skirts, then leaning to the port like a yacht sailor, then straddling the horse's neck, as the normally gentle, dead-broke, 10-year-old gelding fired him over the fence and into the machine shed.

Jim was no match for the three-point hitch on his tractor. He spent several days in the hospital with CAT scans, radiographs, catheters, IV stands and listening to the music of the whistling, binging, ringing, ticking and buzzing music of the monitoring devices.

He was strong and brave and soon healed up. But he has never gotten over the humiliation that he felt every time one of his cowboy friends came to visit. When they looked at the records posted on the end of his bed, they all saw his diagnosis: "Fell off his horse."

DONA ANA COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Making learning communities DACC instructors coordinate assignments

By Eddie Binder
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Growing up as a twin in Silver City, I remember that elementary teachers and counselors stressed to my parents how important it was for us to be in separate classes for several years so we could develop our own identity. Even though we covered similar material with different teachers, I always wondered how our learning would have been affected if during those formative years we had the same classes with the same teachers. A twin as a built-in study group, support system, editor, not to mention a different perspective on classes might have helped both of us learn and comprehend.

There is research now that suggests that if a group of students share the same classes, and the subjects are intertwined, they will be more successful in these learning communities. Doña Ana Community College has found this true with all students, but especially for those who are in developmental classes.

“By pairing classes or intertwining the course work, it has helped in the retention of students, and some of these students are taking more courses per semester and learning more,” said David Burleson, department chair for arts and humanities. “By taking many classes in a semester, the rigor, the pace and the requirements are more difficult, but students are staying in school by more than 25 percent to 30 percent compared to students not in learning communities.”

The learning communities take more time for instructors who must work together on course work.

“Faculty must ensure that the learning outcomes for a course are met and are interrelated to the other courses,” said Susan Wood, department chair for English and communication.

For a simple example, one assignment in the communication class could be a speech on some aspect of government, such as the federal executive branch. In the government class, one of the assignments could be to analyze a famous speech from a United States president.

“By mastering the core competencies from each class and using them to reinforce the real-world connection between subjects, the student experiences deeper learning,” Wood said.

Classes that have been taught in combination include English, mathematics, communication, history, sociology, library science, criminal justice and government. Students in these learning communities are doing better and comprehending more – so much so, that a learning community coordinator is being sought for DACC.

This effort began in 2009 with six students and is being refined and expanded yearly. More than 1,700 students have been part of learning communities in the past five years and 30 full-time and part-time faculty have taught these classes. The efforts are getting attention by educational leaders and groups nationwide as an innovative and effective way to impact student learning and retention.

So at DACC we cannot provide you with a twin, but we can help students by using innovative and creative approaches to education. If a learning community sounds as if it could help you attain your educational goals please contact us.

Eddie Binder is the director of public relations and foundation for Doña Ana Community College.

“ Students in these learning communities are doing better and comprehending more. ”

Members of Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé) had planned to begin collecting signatures for a ballot initiative to raise the minimum wage at this rally Friday, May 19, in front of City Hall. The city's legal department rejected the measure's setting of criminal penalties for noncompliance, however, so the social justice activists instead rallied to keep pressure on city officials to support the effort. See more photos on page B9.

"Pete" Connelly, who saw issues with enforcement.

The CAFé proposal would set criminal fines to businesses refusing to comply with the increase, but Connelly said noncompliance is really a civil matter, so it shouldn't be enforced by criminal law.

Connelly's comments came in response to questions from councillors Olga Pedroza and Nathan Small, two supporters of the CAFé proposal.

CAFé members at the meeting said Silva's ordinance proposal – which would require only a council vote to become law – was shaped by restaurant lobbyist lawyers. However, Silva based his proposal on language used in Bernalillo County's minimum wage law, with the main objective to raise the minimum wage less drastically in response to concerns from local, small businesses.

Jerry Nachison of CAFé said the objecting businesses have survived previous minimum wage increases. Silva's proposal to raise the minimum wage to $8.50 by 2016 "is a dollar and a half short and a year late," he said.

Sarah Nolan, CAFé executive director, said her group's proposal will do more to create economic wealth and that Silva's proposal leaves out setting higher wages for tipped workers. Silva has said he didn't think adjusting the tipped wages was necessary since workers are paid at least the equivalence of minimum wage if their tips don't add up. Nolan said Silva's proposal lacks language enforcing the wage and would allow some workers to be paid a dollar an hour less if the employer met certain criteria.

Despite the setback with the city's legal department, Nolan said CAFé will continue moving ahead with its proposal.

Rich Ferrary said CAFé followed the proper procedures for getting a ballot initiative considered, so the city attorney rejection was "very disheartening."

Small questioned Connelly on his position about resisting making noncompliance a criminal offense. Connelly said the council could add administrative penalties without making the fines a criminal offense by the second reading in June because it wouldn't change the primary intent of the ordinance, which is to set the minimum wage within city limits.

Silva said he would be willing to postpone action on the ordinance until September if CAFé was willing to work toward a compromise of the two proposals.

Small said he would be willing to look at the two proposals as providing a spectrum of options for crafting an ordinance that was "more tightly calibrated to our community."

City Councillor Ceil Levatino countered there has been ample opportunity to reach compromise in the process up until now.

"We've talked and talked and talked on this issue," Levatino said.

Obama

unable to pass the proposed legislation by former U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman. Supporters added areas with cultural and historical significance to lobby for the presidential decision as U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich introduced legislation.

"Today is the culmination of a community-led effort to preserve, protect and promote these public lands, but it's the beginning of a new chapter for the businesses that will benefit from the tourism and recreation, and the wildlife that rely on this unique habitat," said Secretary of the Interior Sally Jewell.

Along with the Organ Mountains, the national monument encompasses Broad Canyon, Sleeping Lady Hills, Rough and Ready Hills, Picacho Peak, Mount Riley, Peña Blanca and Bishop's Cap. The region contains more than 5,000 archeologically and culturally significant sites, including Geronimo's Cave, Billy the Kid's Outlaw Rock, Spanish settlement sites and numerous petroglyphs and pictographs.

"The Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument will put the unique and spectacular desert landscapes of southern New Mexico on recreation maps around the world," Udall said. "That's a powerful tool to bring tourists to the region, create jobs and generate millions of dollars in tourism revenue."

Udall said there is still work to be done to create permanent wilderness and to widen the buffer that gives law enforcement more flexibility to patrol the border, both of which require an act of Congress.

Congressman Steve Pearce, who has introduced legislation to protect only the Organ Mountains, characterized Obama's decision as "misguided, and shows his contempt for the legislative branch."

"For years, I have worked to find a collaborative solution to permanently protect the Organ Mountains and promote true economic opportunity for my constituents," Pearce said. "With this land grab, the president is once again going out of his way to derail any attempt to form a consensus, and do what local people want. Residents of Doña Ana County deserve the assurance that first responders and Border Patrol can protect the public, flood control structures will be maintained, ranchers will have their grazing rights, and hunters can have the access they've always enjoyed."

Chad Smith, New Mexico Farm & Livestock Bureau chief executive officer, said the new national monument "locks away too much land." Smith said his organization believes the designation will make it more difficult for ranchers to carry on activities, such as maintaining man-made watering holes, which benefits wildlife as well as cattle.

Supporters of the national monument dismissed the criticism.

"Sportsmen have wanted permanent protection of this entire area for a decade, but the smaller designation offered by Rep. Pearce fell short," said John Cornell, president of Doña Ana County Associated Sportsmen. "After nearly a decade of Congress' inability to act, we were relieved by the president's monument designation."

Carrie Hamblen, executive director of the Las Cruces chapter of the New Mexico Green Chamber of Commerce, said the new national monument will help the local economy by providing new tourism and outdoor recreation opportunities.

NMSU to host film screening of 'The American Nurse'

The New Mexico State University School of Nursing and New Mexico Nurses Association District 14 are sponsoring a free screening of "The American Nurse."

The documentary will be shown at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 31, at Atkinson Recital Hall. For more information, contact Ruth Burkhart at 646-5806 or email her at burkhart@nmsu.edu.

Admission is free and one continuing education unit is available through the American Nurses Association. The goal of the American Nurse Project is to promote the voice of nurses in the United States through personal stories.

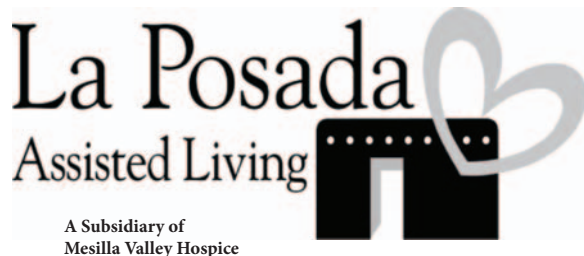

In 2012, photographer Carolyn Jones and her team started a trek across the U.S. and recorded the unique experiences of nurses at work. With stories and photos, the documentary hopes to inspire audiences to think about nurses with a new-found appreciation for this essential figure on the front lines of health and healthcare today.

Nearly all government to close for Memorial Day

Government offices – including City Hall and most other City of Las Cruces offices as well as postal service – will be closed Monday, May 26, in observance of the Memorial Day holiday.

The following is a list of closures:

- East Mesa Recreation Center
- Frank O' Brien Papen Community Center
- RoadRUNNER Transit & Dial-a-Ride
- Thomas Branigan Memorial Library
- All museums
- Senior Programs

Aquatic facilities will remain open. Meerschedit Recreation Center will have limited hours.

Solid waste and recycling services will operate on a normal schedule and the Foothills Landfill will have regular Monday hours.

Police and fire services will not be affected.

The Las Cruces Public Schools Administration Building will be closed in observance of the holiday. All schools will already be closed for the summer holiday.

Memorial Day honors American men and women who have died in military service to their country. It began during the Civil War to honor fallen Union soldiers and was originally called Decoration Day. It expanded after World War I to include all soldiers who died in any United States war or military action.

GOP U.S. Senate candidates holding Las Cruces events

Las Cruces faces former state party chairman in primary

The two Republican challengers to Democrat U.S. Sen. Tom Udall will hold events in Las Cruces Friday, May 23, as the primary Election Day of Tuesday, June 3, nears.

Allen Weh, former New Mexico Republican Party chairman from Los Ranchos de Albuquerque, will hold a meet and greet fundraiser from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at De La Vega's Pecan Grill, 500 S. Telshor Blvd.

That same evening, David Clements of Las Cruces will hold a meet and greet from 7 to 9 p.m. at Andele's Dog House, 1983 Calle Del Norte in Mesilla. Clements is a lawyer who has served as Doña Ana County's Republican Party chairman and a former assistant district attorney.

Weh is an Albuquerque businessman and retired Marine colonel. The 71-year-old earned more delegate votes than Clements, 34, at the party's pre-primary convention April 30.

In recent Albuquerque Journal interviews, the candidates agreed on many points and both stressed runaway spending in Washington as one of the biggest issues facing the nation.

Weh, who ran unsuccessfully for New Mexico governor in 2010, also said the GOP needed a credible challenger to Udall, a former state attorney general.

"I can do this ... not everybody can do this," Weh told the Journal. "If nobody credible stands up to run, we have just forfeited the opportunity to make a small element of change."

Clements said he is running out of a sense of personal obligation.

"With our national debt, government-run health care and the surveillance state - all of these things are affecting us directly, my generation and it's going to affect my son's generation," Clements told the Journal. "I felt like if I don't step up, I don't know if I could live with myself."

Both candidates said they oppose the Affordable Care Act, although Weh said he would prefer to fine-tune the existing law, unless Republicans present a better wholesale change. Clements said he favors repealing Obamacare entirely.

Both candidates acknowledged that New Mexico's economy is struggling. Clements said he favors abolishing income tax and replacing it with the consumption tax, along with lowering tax rates across the board and repealing many federal regulations.

Weh, who is the chief executive officer of CSI Aviation Inc., cited his business experience and would put a strong focus on attracting business to the state.

Neither candidate supports a so-called "amnesty" for the estimated 12 million people living in the U.S. illegally. Referred to as a "path to citizenship," what to do about those living in the country in violation of immigration law has been a key sticking point in trying to reform the immigration process in Congress. Both candidates said they would support more guest worker permits to meet the needs of American business while allowing the government to collect taxes from workers.

Clements said faster processing of citizenship applications would help the problem and relaxing federal marijuana laws would help diminish the black market and related violence along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Weh told the Journal that he opposes legalizing marijuana beyond prescribed use for medical purposes.

Weh holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of New Mexico. Clements earned his juris doctorate degree from University of New Mexico after getting his bachelor's degree in kinesiology from New Mexico State University.

The choice is yours

Senior recalls how new high school took shape

By Micaela de la Rosa
CHS graduating senior

I'd originally planned to deliver a "Go Centennial" sort of speech; you know, about how we're awesome and different and that's why we're graduating in our own gym and all of that... but then I started thinking about what I really need to hear right now, what I really need for someone to tell me while I'm going through this whole crazy roller coaster. So instead of a speech about school pride, I'm going to try to say just a few of the things we need to hear. So here goes:

DE LA ROSA

First of all, you guys have done something incredible – not only have you made it all the way through grade school, but you have opened a school. Think about what that means! As the first, yours are the choices that have shaped Centennial for years and years to come, and yours is the honor and yours is the struggle and yours is the legacy – you're leaving a legacy here. And no matter where you go from here, that is something that is yours, something that is a part of you and that you can always be proud of.

Well, speaking of which, that's the big question isn't it? Where to go from here? It's a tough question. Because you know, and I know, that regardless of what our next step will be, it's not going to be easy. It's not supposed to be. We're too old to pretend that our journey's going to be effortless, or that we can live and act in our own little bubble, or even that when we do come up with a plan, it's going to work out perfectly. Life is going to be hard, and sometimes, it's going to be mean.

A whole lot of things aren't going to go our way, and there's a pretty good chance that we won't even see some of them coming, let alone get the chance to control them. Plans change, and people change. And I'm here to remind you that that's OK.

Yes, life is going to throw you some curveballs, and yes some of them are going to hit hard and yes some will hurt; but you do not have to take it all lying down. You plant your feet and you keep your eyes open and you look for the positive in whatever you do, because there is always something positive.

We've all been given two very important things: the ability to make it, and the ability to choose how we go about it. Our wings and our choice, so even when we falter and even when we fall, we have the choice to get back up, to open our wings again, and to keep going. And when you walk out that door, you walk out with your head held high, secure in the knowledge that you have the ability and the power to choose and keep going. And that is something that nobody can take away from you.

What do you know? It turned out to be a Hawk speech after all!

Graduating Hawks heard from school award winners at the Centennial High School's first robing ceremony held recently at the CHS gymnasium.

First robing ceremony held

Hawks thank those who helped them soar

Centennial High School graduating seniors were asked to bring a special person with them to CHS's first robing ceremony.

Centennial teacher and student council sponsor Melanie Stuart told those in attendance at the robing ceremony:

"Tonight graduates, you are creating a new tradition for Centennial by recognizing those who stand next to you as being an influential and instrumental person in your life. The person you chose may have known you since you took your first steps, who loved you when you were tough to be loved, supported you when you didn't always realize it, or educated you and shaped who you are today. Whomever, you chose, it is an honor.

"Please turn and face that person and repeat after me. 'I (state your name) recognize that you believe in me, that you care, that you inspire, that you dream for me, that you see possibility and potential in my future, that you are here by my side as I embark on a new chapter in my life. I am a Hawk, a champion, and you're going to watch me soar. (As I put on my gown with your assistance), I do this in honor of you'"

Keeping the flame alive at the AIDS Candlelight Memorial

Travis Leyva of the New Mexico Department of Health spoke to audience members of the trials and triumphs he has witnessed during an AIDS vigil held Sunday, May 18, at Young Park.

Matthew Martinez was one of the first to light a candle in memory of those who lost the fight to HIV/AIDS as Pastor Linda Mervine of First Christian Church shared a flame.

The Sunday AIDS vigil concluded as the sun set on Young Park and participants began their procession around the pond, candles in hand. Leading the walk was Mervine as Karuna Warren of the New World Drummers helped marchers keep the pace.

Man sought in beating death

Police also looking for armed robbery suspect

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps locate the man suspected in a May 2013 beating death in Doña Ana County.

Joel Ponce, 36, also known by the moniker Joel Alvarez, has been charged with manslaughter in the death of 41-year-old Juan Perez who was found May 18, 2013, in Berino, suffering from severe head injuries.

Perez was transported to an El Paso hospital where he died a few days later.

Witnesses told Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office investigators that Ponce and Perez had been in a fight.

Ponce is Hispanic, 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs approximately 280 pounds. He has brown eyes and brown hair, but may have shaved his head. Ponce has contacts in Doña Ana County, El Paso and northern Mexico and could be in any of those locations.

Anyone suspected of harboring Ponce could also face criminal charges.

Anyone with information that can help police locate Ponce is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers also is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps identify two men suspected in a recent armed robbery of a pizza restaurant.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Tuesday, May 20, Las Cruces Police were dispatched to a report of an armed robbery at the Domino's Pizza store at 3115 N. Main St. Police learned that two men, one armed with a gun, entered the Domino's store and demanded cash from an employee.

The men received an undisclosed amount of cash and fled, heading westbound from the store.

Both men wore stockings in an attempt to conceal their identities but were described as Hispanic and about the same height, approximately 5 feet 10 inches to 5 feet 11 inches tall.

One of the suspects was wearing a long sleeve white shirt and a red cap. The second suspect was wearing all dark-blue clothing.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Seasons end but workouts continue

An alarm fires off right next to my head at about 5:20 a.m. every morning. Ah, high school football strikes again ... in May.

Yep.

My son Tyler, offensive lineman extraordinaire, is a junior-to-be with the Oñate High School football team. Since January, he's had to be at school by about 6 a.m. for offseason conditioning sessions.

If it is my turn to take Ty, I usually turn on CNN with the remote control – which is always on my side of the bed – and watch long enough to make sure the world did not explode overnight, then switch over to ESPN2 for a little of Mike and Mike sports talk. The next 10 minutes are spent going back and forth.

As the parent of a child involved in high school athletics, I know full well the burden parents carry. So do band parents, cheerleading parents, ROTC parents and others. You'd think as summer looms and school lets out, we'd get a break.

Not so, and that's OK by me.

Studies clearly show that students involved in sports and other activities have lower drop-out rates and are less likely to be involved in nefarious behavior such as taking drugs. Our lives are busy, and we all could use a summer break, but the 5:20 a.m. wake-up alarm and other sacrifices are worth the effort. High school lasts but a fraction of time yet participation in sports can help lay a foundation for the rest of life.

Coffeen finishes career

Trojan helps team bring home state title

By Tara Melton

Las Cruces Bulletin

Brooke Coffeen, a Mayfield High School senior who has helped her team win multiple 5A state championships, said she feels blessed but is taking a step out of the tennis world.

Prior to tennis, Coffeen was a swimmer for five years before her mom urged her to join a high school sport.

Mayfield didn't have a swim team, but it did have a tennis team. Coffeen, who played tennis when she was younger, decided in eighth grade to focus her attention on the sport on the court.

Fast forward to her senior year of high school and Coffeen had an overall record this season of 38-2 and helped the Trojans bring-home three state championships.

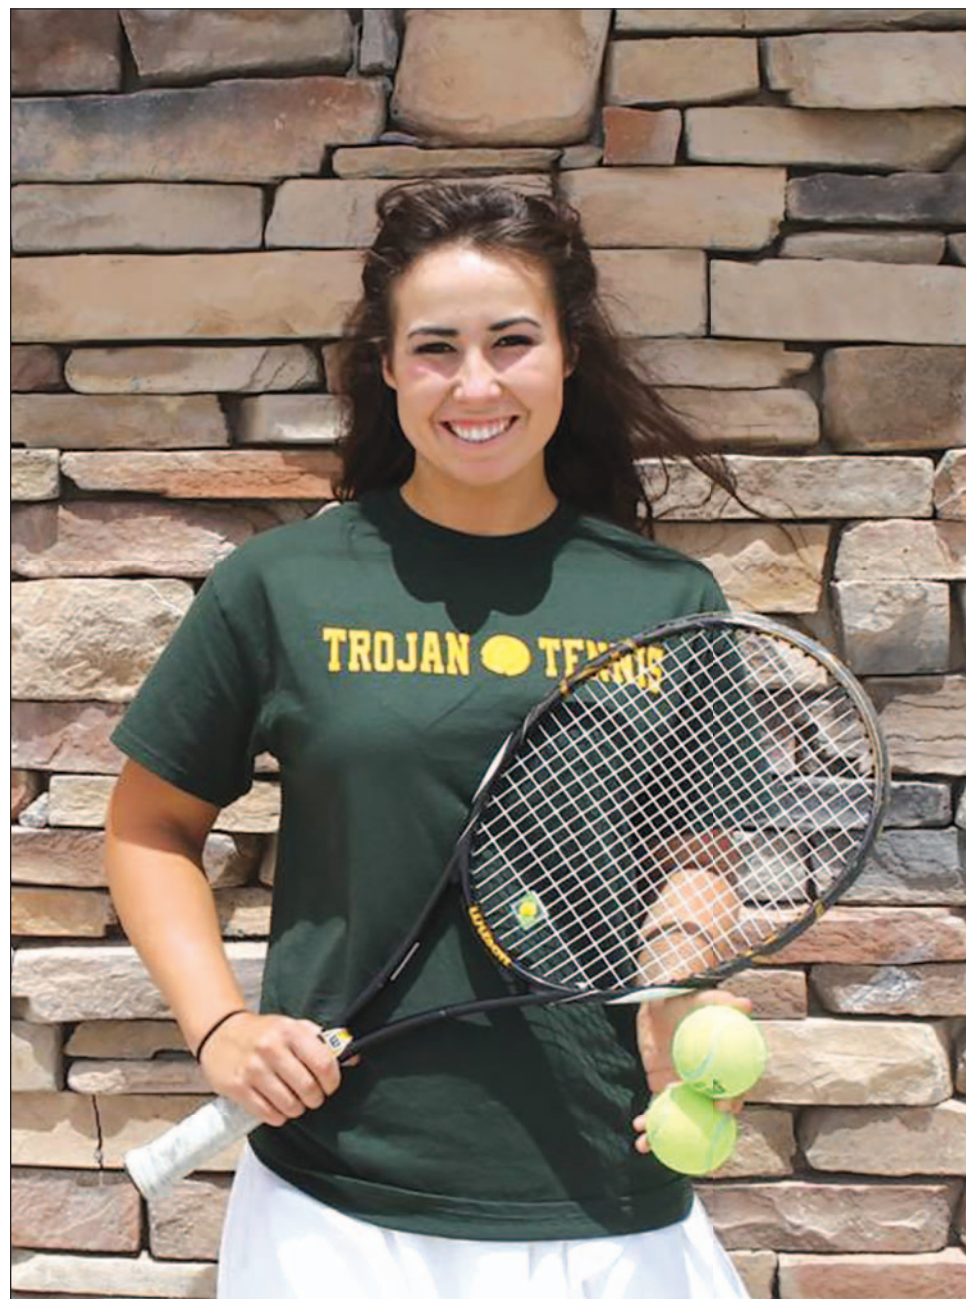

The first two state titles were obtained during 2012, one with the Mayfield girls' tennis team and the second with teammate Lindsay Harlas in the state's individual doubles title. The third team state title came two weeks ago in Albuquerque and Coffeen described the experience as "unreal."

"Most people don't even get to that level but I've been lucky enough to be able to go to the state tournament and succeed with the best teammates ever," she said.

The highlight was watching her whole team contribute to the state title win.

"Every person on the team won their match and it was just really awesome to see us all come together to get to that one goal of ours," Coffeen said.

Coffeen, who graduated from Mayfield Wednesday, May 21, plans to attend the University of New Mexico in the fall to study nursing. She plans to continue to play tennis for recreation.

Former Mayfield High School tennis player Brooke Coffeen helped the Trojans win a team state title.

"It's such a fun sport and you can stay with it your whole life and meet really good people through it. I'll definitely stay involved in tennis throughout my life," she said.

Coffeen compared the togetherness of her team to a "big family" and she hopes her teammates continue to have a good time with each other.

"It wasn't work going to practice every day, it was just getting together and hitting some tennis to get to that one goal we all had," she said.

Ag baseball surrenders 8-1 lead, drops first WAC tourney game

The sixth-seeded New Mexico State University baseball team held an 8-1 lead heading into the sixth inning, but struggled in the last four and fell 11-10 to third-seed Utah Valley, Wednesday, May 21, at Cubs Park in Mesa, Ariz., during the first day of the 2014 Western Athletic Conference Tournament.

NMSU, though, is still alive in the tourney as of Thursday, May 22, when the Aggies were scheduled to take on fifth-seed Seattle University.

In their loss to Utah Valley, they scored four runs in the top of the first inning.

Senior right fielder and lead-off hitter Michael Medina started the game with a lead-off double to right field to get the NMSU bats going.

After the Aggies jumped out to an 8-1 lead heading into the sixth, momentum shift to Utah Valley.

The Wolverines pulled to within one run at 8-7 after scoring six runs on four hits, three walks and three wild pitches in the bottom of the sixth.

Neither team scored in the seventh, and NMSU pushed its lead to 10-7, but UVU scored four runs on four hits, an error and a lead-off walk to go up 11-10, the eventual final score.

NMSU falls to 21-30 on the year after the loss and Utah Valley improves to 26-28 overall. Aggie starting pitcher Christopher Bradley was given a no-decision after working five innings, giving up four runs, allowing nine walks and four runs to score while also posting four strikeouts.

Relief pitcher Riley Barr was credited with the loss as he entered the game with an 8-7 lead but gave up four runs and the lead. Relief pitcher Tory Ulibarri was credited with the win for Utah Valley and is 1-0 on the year.

Medina had the best offensive day for the Aggies going 3-of-4 at the plate with two walks, an RBI and three runs scored.

Sophomore Derick Umphres, who just missed a ball that could have given the Aggies the lead in the ninth, also had a three-hit day, his fourth of the year, going 3-for-5 while he crossed home plate to score a run and drove in two RBIs.

Raising $14,000 for a friend and fellow player at the

LCYBA Team Shane Tournament

The Las Cruces Youth Baseball Association (LCYBA) began its 2014 season with a benefit tournament for one of its players. In October 2013, Shane Mora, 14, from Deming, was diagnosed with Hodgkins Lymphoma. Shane and his dad, Sultan Coach Tommy Mora, have been part of the league for many years.

LCYBA President Steve Delgado said the organization could not think of a better way to honor and help Mora and his family, and the Team Shane Tournament was formed.

The tournament raised more than $14,000 and on Sunday, May 11, Delgado presented a check to the Mora family to help with medical expenses.

After months of chemotherapy treatments, Mora has been cleared to play baseball.

In fact, he was cleared to play just in time for the championship game of the tournament, and scored the winning run in extra innings.

Shane Mora, second from the right, celebrates with his teammates after winning the Las Cruces Youth Baseball Association Tournament Sunday, May 11.

Shane was able to return in time to drive in the winning run.

Sports Briefs

Former Aggie Russell-Nava added to staff

New Mexico State University women's basketball head coach Mark Trakh announced former Aggie Cecilia Russell-Nava has returned to NMSU as an assistant coach, while Erica Sanchez has moved into the director of player development position.

"We are excited to add

Cece (Cecilia) to our staff," Trakh said. "She is well known, respected and loved by our fans in the Las Cruces community, having played for the Aggies. She is experienced and is a tireless worker. Cecilia will be an excellent recruiter and floor coach."

"I am very excited for this opportunity to return to my alma mater," Russell-Nava said.

"Coach Trakh is a great coach and I look forward to working with him and his staff, who are not only amazing coaches, but wonderful people. Las Cruces is an area I love and call home.

"I know under Mark's leadership, the WAC title will only be the beginning."

Russell-Nava spent the last three seasons with the Spartans of San Jose State, where her duties included academic monitoring, recruiting, overseeing community outreach and film exchange.

She joined the Spartan coaching staff after four seasons (2008-11) on the NMSU sidelines.

In 2010, the Aggie program accepted its first bid to play in the Women's National Invitational Tournament – the school's first postseason appearance since 1994.

In Russell-Nava's first season of coaching, in 2008, she was a graduate assistant. NMSU won 23 games, the first time since 1996 the Aggies finished with a winning record and won at least 20 games in a season.

During her time on the Aggie coaching staff, 10 players earned all-conference awards.

A starting guard for NMSU from 2005-07, Russell-Nava helped the Aggies reach the WAC Tournament championship game her junior and senior seasons. In the record books, she ranks second in program history in 3-point field goals attempted (543) and third in 3-pointers made (172).

Russell-Nava was the WAC leader in 3-pointers made, hitting 78 her senior season. As a senior, she set a single-season school record for most 3-point field goals attempted and she was named to the 2007 WAC All-Tournament team.

She graduated in 2007 from NMSU with a degree in business marketing.

She is currently pursuing a master's degree from NMSU in curriculum and instruction.

Symington resigns as line coach

New Mexico State head football coach Doug Martin announced Wednesday, May 21, that offensive line coach Chris Symington has resigned from his position due to ongoing health issues.

Symington was just recently named to the position.

There is now a search for his replacement.

"Right now, our concern is for Chris' health and helping him get better," Martin said. "Myself and the staff support coach Symington and will do everything we can to help him."

"His health is more important right now than the game of football."

NMSU football sets free clinic for youths

The New Mexico State University football team will host a free clinic for youths from third to eighth grade, from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 14, at the football west practice field.

Check-in will begin at 9 a.m. at the practice field's south entrance. Parking is available in the gravel lot at the south side of the practice field.

The parking lot is located directly behind Greek housing and Presley Askew baseball field along Wells Street.

Registration will end Thursday, June 12.

Participants should dress in regular exercise apparel. Cleats and or football pads are not required. Water will be provided.

Taking risks, playing for the love of the game

Burning golf questions answered

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Q: The commentators on television often talk about a “risk-reward” on certain holes. Even guys I play with use that jargon on one hole in particular, which I don’t play well at all. I guess I’m struggling with the idea of trying to figure out the risks and the best way to play it.

– John R. from Elephant Butte

A: A typical risk-reward golf hole involves a carry over a pond or ravine, or a dogleg around a lake or some other hazard such as bunkers or woods. Sometimes there’s a tempting shortcut over the trouble, but it is usually fraught with danger. The more shortcuts you bite off, or the farther you must carry your ball, the more you risk failure and a high score on the hole.

The part of the risk-reward equation most golfers don’t fully comprehend is the tendency to over-value the potential reward. Just because you clear the hazard doesn’t mean you’re guaranteed an easy birdie or eagle attempt. You may find yourself with your ball in a very awkward position or a troubled lie.

The second shot on the par-5 No. 10 on your home course, Sierra Del Rio, presents you with that very dilemma: do you try to carry the pond or lay up well to the right. Hole No. 3, also a par-5, that goes 90 degrees right, presents long hitters with the chance of carrying their tee shot over an arroyo and getting close to the green, but at the risk of losing their ball in the hazard covered by dense thorny brush.

No. 18 at Picacho Hills Country Club and No. 18 at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course are designed with the same risk-reward situation when a player hits a tee shot between the 200 and 250 markers (to the green). Both holes, built 20 years apart, feature a pond to the left of the green, while both greens are very tricky.

For those finishing holes going for the green in two can result in a high number even if you don’t hit it in the water, because of out-of-bounds, disturbing positioning of bunkers, slopes and moguls around the greens and the chance of bad lies.

So, ask yourself exactly what shot you are capable of hitting quite well nine out of ten times. Then take that shot.

A couple of months ago, after returning from the PGA golf show in Florida, I did a few articles on the state of the golf industry and a rather bizarre initiative started by Mark King, CEO of TaylorMade golf company, called “Hack-golf,” which basically is looking to reinvent the game of golf for the masses by “thinking outside the box.” Shortly thereafter, I received an email from a teaching professional that I feel compelled to share with you:

“Dr. Blanchard, I enjoyed your article concerning the future of the game. I grew up in El Paso; I worked for (longtime PGA professional) Bill Eschenbrenner and my mom and dad still live there. My dad saw this article and cut it out and sent it to me and wrote on the top: ‘Kim, isn’t this what you have been saying for years?’”

It is not exactly what I have been saying, but it’s pretty close. I’ve been a pro in the Chicago area for almost 30 years now. I think your observations about the usual efforts to revive the game are great. I’m very familiar with the efforts of the First Tee and started a similar program in the inner city in the late 1980s called ‘Share Golf.’

The problem with those programs is always the same. They haven’t got a chance. I’m sorry, but the first tee is a photo op for the PGA. A kid from the inner city doesn’t have a chance to really become a golfer. Not when an average tee time is $50.

I have a hard time getting kids to start in a fairly upscale suburb these days. There simply aren’t places to learn any more. When I was young, a guy could learn the game somewhere for a reasonable rate. Now, it’s very difficult.

I have started a bunch of teaching programs for kids at my current course – Wilmette Golf Course. The kids still love the game; it’s still cool. They just can’t afford it. No one has the money. No one has the time.

I started a class for 5 to 9-year-old kids. It was set to handle 10 kids (10 kids is a lot of 5 year-olds). That was two years ago. I now get over 70 kids on waiting lists for the class. I’ve opened up five extra sessions to handle them and it’s still not enough.

Don’t worry the game is still “cool” enough. We have the PGA, the USGA, the other self-proclaimed “stewards of the game” including (misguided souls like) Mark King, telling us how to get the game going again. The game is just fine, it is still the greatest game ever – there’s nothing even close. But if you raise the cost of automobiles to a hundred thousand dollars a pop, I think you’ll find a sudden loss of interest in driving. General Motors and Exxon will start programs to make driving cool again.

Upscale golf courses and equipment have their place, but not to the exclusion of everything else. Otherwise, all the “For the Love of Golf” programs will not make golf “cool” again. Thanks again for the article. Kim McCombs.”

Q: I have a question. How do you recover from a horrible start? This happens to me, oh, about once every few months. I start out making a snowman and a quad and then start three-putting and I want to quit. The awful play seems to go away in a couple of hours, but the damage is already done. My other question is how can a person have fun when that happens?

– Linda B. from Las Cruces

A: I feel your pain. What you describe is more than a “slow” start, it’s a mentally disturbing period where you are thrown into a fit of completely doubting yourself and drained of confidence. What to do?

First, you can’t undo your miserable play for the first several holes. What’s done is done. What you can do is start over again. Not in terms of score, per se, but in terms of how you are able to approach your normal ability of play.

You may find that you are able to hit extraordinary shots and make a lot of putts once you settle down and get the demons out of your head. And don’t think about money, win or lose. Even the best players in the world have off days and miss cuts in important tournaments.

One pro once told me that I should forget the awful shots, but remember the lessons that I learned from them. Sometimes you have to remind yourself what your love of golf is all about. Is it about impressing your friends? Winning cash? Just participating because it is the thing to do? Or is it because you love the history, tradition, the difficulty and the joy when you overcome the difficulties and tribulations. It’s fun.

Q: Here’s a rules question. I have a ball hit wildly and lodged in the middle of a thorny bush right adjacent to a concrete cart path. I have no shot, since I can’t even get a club on the ball, but there is a hole right next to my ball clearly made by a mole or some animal. Any suggestions?

– Walt C. who plays at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course

A: What you have in the bush is not an “abnormal ground condition.” Under USGA Rule 28, you are entitled to these options. You can go back as far as you want (on the golf course) from the unplayable lie, keeping the point where the ball was found and the flagstick in line and play your next shot with a one stroke penalty.

Or you can get relief from the unplayable lie within two club-lengths from the spot where your ball was found, not closer to the hole, with a one stroke penalty.

Your drop could conceivably be on a cat path in which case you could play it from there or possibly be entitled to another drop from the cart path without penalty. Ordinarily, you cannot drop into a hazard. You can go back and re-play the shot with a stroke penalty, as you can do in every case.

However, there are a lot of special circumstances to an unplayable lie in a bush, plant or tree. You can’t go into brush to try to play a shot where you twist or bend branches or even break branches.

For an interesting read and a full treatise of the situations of unplayable lies I recommend that you consult the current the current USGA “Decisions on Rules,” which is a little pricey but very interesting.

Here, in the desert, you are advised to be aware of snakes, insects and other dangerous creatures. If your ball or stance is on a space inhabited by fire ants you are entitled to free relief. You are also entitled to free relief when your ball is on or close to a burrowing animal hole, providing you are able to take a legitimate stance and have a legitimate opportunity to swing the club.

The rules say if it is “unreasonable to play a stroke then forget it.” A lot of golfers take mucho liberties with these rules, only to find themselves impaled and bleeding from mesquite thorns.

My feeling is that golf courses should vastly increase their restrictions for golfers for entry into “environmentally sensitive areas” in order to prevent idiots from injuring the habitat or themselves.

A last word or two Changes on the way at NMSU

Pistol Pete
Pete's
Ponderings

Well, Pete has one last word or two to share with you before I head to my adobe hacienda to stay cool for the summer. All of the bats, balls, blocking sleds and other equipment have been packed up, but let's look back a little and take a peek forward in NM State athletics.

For starters, the NM State track and field team wrapped up its competition at the 2014 Western Athletic Conference Outdoor Championships in Orem, Utah, with a fourth-place overall finish. The Aggies finished with a total of 120.50 points which was fourth to Idaho with 182.50, Grand Canyon had 164 and Utah Valley scored 128.

Coach Orin Richburg had a good feeling at the end of the day. "Everything went well for us today and we got everything we wanted," he said. "Everything that we were favored in on paper we got, so everything we needed to accomplish today, we did."

"Perkins and the sprinters did well for us. Akuaadasou Ezenyilimba got us some points in the shot put so that helped and the javelin was big for us today, too."

"Overall we did well and we did what we needed to do," he said.

The day was highlighted by sophomore Latrice Brooks, who took first team All-WAC honors with a win in the 800-meter run. She finished with a time of 2:11.25 and earned 10 points for the Aggies while taking the individual championship. Brooks also earned first team All-WAC for her performance in the 4-by-400-meter relay.

The spring seasons for men's and women's golf ended with the programs bringing home a pair of conference championships.

Aggie baseball is looking forward to the remodeling and enhancements coming to their part of the Presley Askew complex.

Mike and Judy Johnson's generosity will help Rocky Ward take things to the next level.

Football coach Doug Martin has got a smile on his face too for the improvements coming to Aggie Memorial. The new turf installation is under way and all sports will benefit from the overall being done to the Coca-Cola weight room.

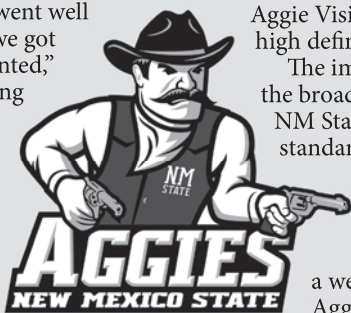

Fans who follow the Aggies from afar will be watching Aggie Vision next year in high definition.

The improvements to the broadcast will bring NM State to the network standard in telecasting.

The road ahead includes Sun Belt football and that is a welcome home for Aggie football with the multiple bowl tie-ins and other pluses the league brings.

Hello old friend: Back in town is Cecilia Russell-Nava as a member of women's basketball coach Mark Trakh's staff.

The former Aggie player was one of the best three-point shooters in NMSU's history and now returns to help guide a new crop of athletes.

Excitement at NMSU AAC drive to bring in new members

By Fred Heinrich
Associate AD for development

As I assumed the role of the associate athletics director for development in late March, I was really excited about the opportunity.

I've never been much of an athlete, but I've always been a fan and enjoy being around people who have a passion for what they do. After a short while on the job, getting to know some of the coaches and staff, meeting some of the student athletes and talking with supporters of the programs, I am more excited than ever. There are many great things happening at New Mexico State University and the future is bright.

Capital Projects: Four main capital projects are under way. Funded by a major gift from Mike and Judy Johnson, NM State's baseball stadium, Presley Askew Field, is undergoing a major renovation, including sun protection and other big improvements.

The women's swim team is getting a much-needed update to its locker room facilities. The Coca-Cola weight training facility is being gutted, with new flooring and all new training equipment added. Much of the equipment is made right here in southern New Mexico by Samson Equipment; thank you Dave and Linda Schroeder and Smoky and Alan Torgerson.

Last, but certainly not least, Aggie Memorial Stadium is getting artificial turf through a generous gift from Stan Fulton. Football Coach Doug Martin sees the addition as a "game-changer," making the Aggie football program more competitive in the important arena of recruiting.

Aggie Athletic Club is NM State's main booster club organization, supporting student-athletes in all sports. The Club is served by a volunteer board consisting of dedicated people from all walks of life. There is a lot of energy at our board meetings.

AAC will be kicking off its 2014-

15 membership drive the next few weeks. There are many different membership levels and benefits. Look for the membership drive and please join the rest of us in supporting the student athletes at NM State. AAC window decals, front license plates and license plate frames will let you show everyone your Aggie pride.

Aggies in Paradise. The evening of Friday, May 16, AAC hosted Aggies in Paradise at the northwest entrance of Aggie Memorial Stadium. On a warm evening with light winds blowing and tiki torches lit, coaches and student athletes from a variety of sports were able to meet and greet fans and supporters of NM State sports.

Athletics Director McKinley Boston told everyone about four WAC Championships (men's basketball, men's and women's golf and volleyball), while President Garrey Carruthers delivered an enthusiastic welcome and worked up everyone's appetite by leading the Aggie Fight Song right before dinner. (Have you ever heard the Aggie Fight Song played by a steel drum band? Pans of Enchantment made it sound great!)

As Aggies in Paradise wound down, and we were cleaning up from a fun night, I couldn't help but ponder all the new people I've met since starting as associate athletics director and how supportive they've been – to me, to the university and to our student athletes.

People contribute in many ways to NM State athletics – their time, talent and treasure – and it is so humbling to experience their generosity and love for NMSU. The other thing that struck me is the pride that people have in our great university – the "Yale of the Yuccas" as President Carruthers likes to call it.

Football tickets will be on sale soon. Come join the fun and cheer on Coach Martin and the Aggies. Watch for the AAC membership. Aggie Pride is alive and well so let's grow the Aggie family and share the fun.

Ume-Ezeoke named to list Division 1 center on trophy watch

New Mexico State University senior center Valerian Ume-Ezeoke has been named to the Rimington Trophy 2014 Spring Watch List.

The list includes 64 of the best centers in Division I football. The athletes included on this list have demonstrated excellence at the center position in the past and are predicted to do so again in the 2014-15 season.

"I'm very thankful and honored for being named to the watch list, Ume-Ezeoke said.

"It's very humbling to be a part of a prestigious group of athletes. I just want to thank God for everything because without him none of this would be possible. And I'm also thankful for the support from my family, coaches, teammates and everybody that supports the NM State football team."

Ume-Ezeoke started at center for the Aggies offensive line during the 2013 season, recording 56.5 knockdowns, the second highest on the team.

He had a season-high 10 knockdowns against Louisiana (Nov. 2). Ume-Ezeoke's play helped the Aggies' leading rusher Germi Morrison rush for an average of 4.1 yards a rush on 109 carries for 451 yards and a team-high four rushing touchdowns.

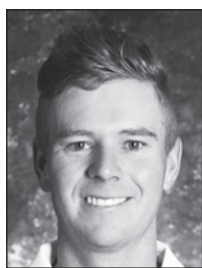

His blocking ability also allowed quarterback Andrew McDonald to lead the Aggies in passing, throwing for 2,497 yards and 15 touchdowns, averaging 208.1 yards a game.

Ume-Ezeoke was also named to the Rimington Trophy Watch List early in the season.

London visit ahead for local graduate

National Geographic photographers give lessons during trip

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

She may be a diminutive 4-foot, 10-inches tall, but recent Centennial High School graduate Nicolette Young is casting a long shadow as she readies to spend part of her summer in London learning from one of National Geographic's best photographers.

The opportunity to learn from photographer Gianluca Colla through a National Geographic scholarship is just the latest accomplishment for the woman who already has a long list of accomplishments.

Besides being Centennial student government president for the new high school's first two years, she recently earned the title of Distinguished Young Woman of New Mexico.

In 2011, while still a student at Las Cruces High School, she earned the title of Miss New Mexico's Outstanding Teen as well as being selected for the Las Cruces Mayor's Top Teen program.

In between, she took her love of dance – nurtured by Michele's Dance Academy and the Las Cruces Chamber Ballet – into the realm of cheerleading, where she also excelled being on teams that took state titles. Young is no stranger to London as she participated the United Cheer Association's show in London's New Year's Day Parade in 2012. That was a quick stay, however, compared to the 12 intensive days she'll be spending in London under National Geographic's Colla.

It was only recently that Young said she took a real interest in photography as she began to work on the Centennial's yearbook staff.

Now, photography is a passion for her. While her college plans are to pursue a business degree at the University of New Mexico, Young said she will also take photography classes and she foresees photography somehow becoming part of her future as a businesswoman.

If all that wasn't enough, Young also has been involved in a variety of community activities, such as March of Dimes, Toss no Mas, Dress A Child and other volunteerism.

While some time management is involved, Young said her successes stem from enjoying what she does.

"I actually like all the things that I'm in," she said.

During a recent talk with elementary students, Young stressed to the children they should strive to be healthy, involved, studious, ambitious and responsible.

Young speaks to students at Hillrise Elementary School's after-school program about the qualities they should develop to be become successful in life. Young has already achieved a range of accomplishments even before beginning her business college studies next fall at the University of New Mexico.

The use of light and focus to give dimension to this landscape photography of the Tortugas and Organ Mountains was the kind of work that caught the attention of National Geographic to give recent Centennial High School graduate Nicolette Young the opportunity to study under one of their photographers in London this summer.

Lambeth earns NMSU 'A' Mountain award for staff

Employee Council honors exemplary workers twice yearly

The New Mexico State University Employee Council honored Alan Lambeth, a lead technology support technician for information and communications technologies, with the "A" Mountain staff award for spring 2014.

Julie Cadena, manager for technology support services, nominated Lambeth for the award.

"Alan is an asset to this university and has saved many departments large amounts of money, because he will take the time to find a part, a piece, an alternative that will keep them from having to purchase new equipment," she said. "He takes his job seriously because he knows that his customers are at a disadvantage or loss without their equipment."

"He diligently works to get their equipment back up and running the way it was before in a quick, efficient way. Procrastination is not in Alan's vocabulary."

The NMSU Employee Council presents the "A" Mountain Staff award twice a year and accepts nominations of exemplary full-time, regular NMSU staff employees who represent the qualities of integrity, dedication, skill, endurance, resilience, determination and passion in performance of their duties.

Nominees are considered for their innovation, responsiveness, service, spirit and teamwork.

"I am humbled to receive this award because almost every accomplishment requires the expertise of several people to complete," Lambeth said.

"We have a great team at ICT and everybody contributes to the success of the organization."

"We work and play well together and have fun doing it."

Lambeth revealed he enjoys working on a team that attempts to repair computer and electronic equipment, which includes both the hardware and software, for the campus community.

"I love helping people," Lambeth said. "People often bring us broken laptops, desktop computers, printers, broken anything really, and sometimes we are able to revive them. My favorite part is fixing something that would otherwise have to be thrown away or recovering data from a failed hard drive or jump drive."

In 1990, Lambeth began working for ICT at NMSU as a student and was hired full-time in 1992.

That same year, Lambeth earned his bachelor's degree in engineering technology.

School year ends for LCPS

Classes let out after half day Friday, May 23

NM joins museums initiative

Military families get in free through Labor Day

As part of the national Blue Star Museums Program, New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs' 16 state-run museums and historic sites will once again offer free admission to active duty military personnel and their families from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

"I encourage all New Mexico's active-duty military members to bring their families and enjoy the exceptional exhibits and facilities our state has to offer," said Gov. Susana Martinez.

"We are proud to offer free admission to the state museums and historic sites this summer in appreciation of the service and dedication of the men and women of our military."

"It is our honor to share our cultural and educational opportunities with our active-duty military members and their families by participating in the Blue Star Museums Program," said Cultural Affairs Secretary Veronica Gonzales.

"We invite you to visit any or all of our many facilities to learn about New Mexico's vibrant culture, art and heritage this summer."

The free admission is available to active-duty military-ID holders and up to five family members. Active duty military includes Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, National Guard and Reserve members.

All state-operated museums will participate, including Museum of International Folk Art and Museum of Indian Arts and Culture located in Santa Fe on Museum Hill; New Mexico Museum of Art and New Mexico History Museum/Palace of the Governors located on the Plaza in downtown Santa Fe; New Mexico Museum of Natural History and Science and National Hispanic Cultural Center located in Albuquerque; New Mexico Museum of Space History in Alamogordo; and New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum in Las Cruces.

The eight New Mexico Historic Sites participating are Coronado in Bernalillo; Jemez near Jemez Springs; El Camino Real Historic Trail Site, south of Socorro; Lincoln and Fort Stanton in Lincoln County; the Bosque Redondo Memorial at Fort Sumner; Fort Selden in Radium Springs; and Taylor Mesilla in Mesilla, New Mexico.

The Department of Cultural Affairs is New Mexico's cultural steward and is charged with preserving and showcasing the state's cultural riches. With its eight museums, eight historic sites, arts, archaeology, historic preservation and library programs, the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs is one of the largest and most diverse state cultural agencies in the nation. Together, the facilities, programs and services of the Department support a $3.3 billion cultural industry in New Mexico.

Blue Star Museums is a collaboration of the National Endowment for the Arts, Blue Star Families, the Department of Defense, and museums across America, including the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and American Samoa. Blue Star Families is a nonprofit organization supporting America's military families from all branches of service.

CARL L. ROBERTS

May 14, 1938 to May 10, 2014

Carl L. Roberts, age 75 of Mesilla Park, peacefully passed away on Saturday, May 10, 2014 at La Posada Mesilla Valley Hospice surrounded by his loved ones. He was born in Las Cruces on May 14, 1938 to Richard L. and Marion Pauline Roberts of Brazito. He was the eldest of two sons.

Carl was married to the love of his life, Jackie Bullard Roberts on Nov. 1, 1958 in Mesilla Park. They were married for 55 years. To this union five children were born, and survive him: Susan (Roy) Garcia of Las Cruces, Barbara (Dan) Gross of Los Lunas, Robin (James) Widner of Melrose, Jeff Roberts and Jason Roberts both also of Las Cruces.

Carl graduated from Las Cruces High School in 1956 and from NMSU with a master's degree in 1965. He was employed at the Agronomy and Horticulture Department at NMSU for 35 years as a research agronomist. After his retirement, he worked for the USDA Cotton Ginning Laboratory as a consultant for 11 years. Over the years he experimented with breeds of cotton, chile, pecans, grapes, crambe and many other crops. His research and his family was his passion. Carl also enjoyed gardening, fishing, hunting, exploring and spending time with his grandkids.

Carl was preceded in death by his parents and brother, James C. Roberts, and his father-in-law, Jack Bullard. He is survived by his wife and children, 15 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. He is also survived by his mother-in-law, Grace Bullard and sisters-in-law, Linda (Herb) Heaton and Margaret Rigsby and their families of El Paso.

The family would like to thank Dr. Constance Wash and her staff, the staff at Mountain View Regional Medical Center and the staff at Mesilla Valley Hospice, as well as all blood donors for the gift of life and for letting us have our husband, dad, papa, uncle and friend a little bit longer.

Carl's Memorial Service was held on Friday, May 16, 2014 at 7:00 PM in Baca's Chapel of Prayer, 300 E. Boutz Road. 527-2222 For online condolences logon to www.bacasfuneralchapelslas-cruces.com

TERECITA L. URANGA

October 15, 1954 to May 9, 2014

It is with deep sadness and heavy hearts that we announce the passing of our beloved sister, Terecita L. Uranga, 59, of Las Cruces on Friday, May 9, 2014 at her home. A lifelong resident of Las Cruces, Terecita was born October 15, 1954 to Vicente and Juanita Villegas Uranga.

Those left to mourn her passing include two brothers, Andres Uranga, Robert Uranga and wife Cecilia; a half-sister, Anniemae Polanco and husband Greg all of Las Cruces; as well as numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. Terecita was preceded in death by her mother, and a brother, Vicente Uranga, who passed on May 4, 2012, and whose cremains will be buried with her.

Visitation for Terecita was held on Friday, May 16, 2014 in Baca's Chapel of Prayer, 300 E. Boutz Road, where the Prayer Vigil followed. The Funeral Service will follow immediately thereafter. The Rite of Committal and Interment will follow in St. Joseph's Cemetery, 100 N. Espina Street where she will be laid to rest.

Serving as casket bearers will be family members.

Service arrangements have been entrusted to the care of Baca's Funeral Chapels of Las Cruces 527-2222. For online condolences logon to www.bacasfuneralchapelslas-cruces.com.

DEATH NOTICES

FLEMING

Jane Johnston Fleming passed away on Tuesday, May 5th, 2014, just short of her 91st birthday. Mary Catherine Jane Fleming was born in Chamberino, May 16th, 1923.

CertoPlast to set up shop on West Mesa

German company to boost Las Cruces manufacturing industry

By Brook Stockberger
Las Cruces Bulletin

Talk of the manufacturing base in Las Cruces, and city leaders and economic developers often take on a figurative, far-away gaze in their respective eyes, as if looking to the horizon for more companies to come and boost the industry in southern New Mexico's largest city.

Now that gaze just has to extend as far as the West Mesa Industrial Park to see what could be the first wave of cavalry.

Gov. Susana Martinez was in town Saturday, May 17, to announce that German-based company CertoPlast will locate its first North American facility in Las Cruces, a move that will create 100 jobs that'll pay an average of $22.38 an hour.

"We will make you proud," Martinez said to the CertoPlast executives at the announcement ceremony. "We have the work force."

The company, which also has a location in China, will make automotive wire harness tapes that will be shipped to factories in Mexico.

CertoPlast will be the first manufacturer to locate in the Doña Ana County Foreign Trade Zone.

The state reports that, as an FTZ user, CertoPlast is able to defer, reduce and/or eliminate import duties. The FTZ allows manufacturers to bring in parts for their products from different parts of the world – tariff deferred – for the purposes of manufacturing. The value of the final product is charged a tariff when it leaves the FTZ.

"This is the first one out of the gate," City Councillor Nathan Small said. "We're excited for the momentum (this gives) our city."

"This is the kind of (announcement) we like," said Job Barela, New Mexico's secretary of economic development. "It's direct foreign investment."

CertoPlast Managing Director René Rambusch said the company will move fast to get the facility up and running.

NM's new port goes live

Santa Teresa to celebrate UP hub

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

In Santa Teresa, one can rent a hotel room or buy a brand new house, eat out 24-7 or even ship goods by rail to northern Mexico's industrial powerhouse.

Just a few months ago, doing any of the above was not a possibility.

Construction of the Union Pacific's multimodal facility created 3,000 construction jobs and set off a flurry of infrastructure growth and economic development. A city is rising in the desert.

The $400 million Union Pacific intermodal facility that opened Wednesday, Apr. 1 is set to celebrate with a grand opening May 28, about a year ahead of schedule.

Spokesman Aaron Hunt said the company is planning a "fantastic event," to be attended by UP Chairman and CEO Jack Koraleski and senior officials from New Mexico.

"It's an excellent opportunity for people to come in and see our facilities and modern locomotives up close," he said. "It's very imposing technology."

The new inland port strategically positions the Santa Teresa/El Paso area as a focal point for rail shipments in the Southwestern U.S.

Hunt said when the facility is fully operational it will handle 250,000 rail cargo containers each year.

"New Mexico offers a great connection to the Los Angeles and Long Beach ports, as well as Portland and Seattle, with excellent connections to Chicago, Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee," he said.

In addition to increasing the railroad's national fluidity, it will increase regional rail capability for southern New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, and create a better opportunity for just-in-time delivery to area industries, Hunt said.

“Building the new facility can act as a magnet for other industries to move in, so opportunities can be leveraged,” Hunt said.

A place to stay in Santa Teresa

Earlier in May, Santa Teresa held a grand opening for the 56-room Oak Tree Inn and adjacent Penny’s Diner, dazzling with more chrome than a ’56 Chevy.

The diner is the first business that serves meals in the area. Bill Mattiace, executive director of the New Mexico Border Authority, called the hotel and diner “hugely significant.”

“It represents features with implications for expanded retail,” he said. “Now you can eat and stay overnight at the border in New Mexico.”

The hotel is located on a 2.28-acre site in the Santa Teresa Business Centre adjacent to the Doña Ana County International Jetport and 3 miles from the UP hub.

It is one of 34 hotels and 24 Penny’s Diners built specifically to serve the needs of a railroad facility.

Santa Teresa’s mixed-use base

Supporting Union Pacific and Oak Tree’s investment in the burgeoning community are a growing industrial base and residential development on both sides of the border.

First and foremost is Foxconn Technology Group, a Taiwanese-owned electronics manufacturer in San Jeronimo, Mexico.

On the New Mexico side, the most significant presence to date is that of Interceramic Inc.’s 80,000-square-foot tile distribution center.

In March, Gov. Susana Martinez announced six new businesses, including Santa Fe Aero Services, which plans to acquire an El Paso company and relocate it to Santa Teresa. The other companies locating in Santa Teresa are:

- ERO Resources container storage and mechanical services provider for rail-related business
 - Transmaritime, handling ocean freight containers
 - Stagecoach Cartage and Distribution LP, with a yard to provide trucking and logistics services throughout the U.S. and Mexico.
 - Kalisch Chatarra, a metals recycling company
- They are among some 15 companies moving to Santa Teresa since FY 2012.

New homes bring construction jobs

Hakes Brothers LLC of Las Cruces is building about 70 homes at The Grove, a commercial and residential community in Santa Teresa.

Kimball Hakes said Hakes Brothers sold about six homes before construction of a model had been completed.

“That’s a really good sign,” he said, adding the company is under contract to build 72 more homes in a nearby subdivision.

Jerry Pacheco, executive director of the Border Industrial Association (BIA), said San Jeronimo Services of Chihuahua City is set to start building 500 homes on the Mexican side before year’s end.

Infrastructure upgrades under way

State and local governments in Chihuahua and New Mexico are addressing the transportation and infrastructure requirements of the burgeoning region.

- Mattiace said completed infrastructure projects include:
- A $1.2 million hazmat facility
 - The county’s rebuilding of Strauss Road, which was opened April 1
 - Runway re-construction at Santa’ Teresa’s Doña Ana County International Jetport

Pacheco said additional improvements are needed at the airport in order to accommodate large cargo planes.

The airport needs a crosswind runway, he said, and the length of the existing runway should be extended.

“Technically, we could land a big jet,” he said, “but we don’t have a crosswind runway.”

Pacheco said the growing area also needs road improvements.

Topping his list is reconstruction of the crumbling main artery, Airport Road. Also needing work are Industrial Boulevard, which connects the business center with the UP intermodal facility and Twin Cities Boulevard connecting the intermodal facility with Domenici Highway.

“Industrial Boulevard and Airport Road were built 25 years ago,” he said. “Those roads are just turning into dust.”

He said BIA has applied for a $10 million Department of Transportation grant and also is looking into private funding.

Next steps anticipated

Mattiace said construction is beginning in May to widen a single southbound cargo lane to three lanes, moving the vehicle bottleneck south of the border.

Mattiace said 81,000 trucks passed through the port in 2013, an increase of 57 percent in five years.

The Border Authority in partnership with the county currently is conducting a traffic survey in order to justify requests for funding for both customs enhancements and road construction, he said.

“The roads need to be concreted and widened,” he said. “A lot of usage equates to jobs.”

Pacheco said the area needs intangible assets, as well – especially a technically skilled work force.

He said the BIA in partnership with Doña Ana Community College is has set a July date for completion of a study of the skills needed.

CertoPlast

“We need to get some equipment in here; there’s a lot of work to come,” Rambusch said. “We will be looking (soon) for good employees.”

He said that location was a big factor to his company’s decision.

“With Las Cruces’ amenities and proximity to the Mexican auto industry, we found this to be the best place for our North American operations,” Rambusch said.

He said that a lot of communities were able to offer a site already built. CertoPlast, though, was attracted to the free trade zone. Also Rambusch said that the company was very impressed with the help from state and local entities.

“There was genuine interest from day one,” he said. “We received much support from Gov. Martinez and the City of Las Cruces.”

Both Rambusch and Small pointed out the effort of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance as well.

“I give a ton of credit to MVEDA,” Small said.

Now that the city has gotten a taste of expansion of the manufacturing base, it wants more. Mayor Pro-Tem Greg Smith said continued collaboration among the government, state and local groups is the key to continued success.

“Those connections are only going to continue to grow,” Smith said. “We encourage everybody to keep our foot on the pedal.”

Union Pacific facility completed

Union Pacific has completed the latest rail facility on its 23-state network, the Santa Teresa Intermodal Ramp (STIR), one year ahead of schedule. Construction of the new facility created 3,000 jobs during the build phase from 2011 to 2014. The site will be home to 300 to 600 jobs permanently based at the facility once it reaches full capacity in 2025.

The facility is located just west of the Santa Teresa Airport and includes fueling facilities, crew change buildings, an intermodal yard, and an intermodal ramp with an annual lift capacity of up to 225,000 intermodal containers. A grand opening will be held for the facility at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 28.

Brewing up a deal for the books

Two prominent Las Cruces business owners prepare for collaboration

By Vicki Nisbett

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Most everyone would agree that good coffee is like a good book: they both make the day seem so much better.

Bernie Digman of Milagro Coffee y Espresso and Mike Beckett of COAS Books understand this and have decided to take their businesses to a new level through collaboration. The concept is simple: Drink Milagro's coffee while you browse for and read a COAS book.

"We've been talking about collaborating and having Milagro coffee in the COAS bookstore for about two years now," Digman said. "We hope to open up in May or (later in the) summer."

Along with the additional food permit that is needed, they will initially be speaking to the New Mexico Environment Department. They want customers to have an enhanced experience going into COAS.

The original Milagro, which serves fresh roasted coffee and food, is located on University Avenue, across from New Mexico State University. The coffee is flown in from international buyers Digman has done business with for several years. They select the best fresh coffee beans from around world.

COAS, located on Main Street in Downtown Las Cruces, is a family-owned business well-known for buying, selling and trading used books, CDs, DVDs, audiobooks, games and more. Beckett's wife, Veronica, takes care of the financial aspect and their son, Brandon, manages the ecommerce department.

"We're focused on customer service," Beckett said. "We don't have an actual date, but (Milagro Coffee) is coming soon."

He said Downtown is growing, which can be seen by the new apartments being built behind COAS and the new CVS pharmacy on Main Street and Picacho Avenue.

"Downtown was always the gathering place of the neighborhoods," Beckett said.

For a short stint – from about July to November 2013

Business owners Bernie Digman of Milagro Coffee y Espresso, Inc. and Mike Beckett of COAS Books, plan to open up another Milagro's coffee house within COAS by summer.

– Digman had transformed a former mail van for use to serve coffee, espresso and food at a location near Main Street and Las Cruces Avenue, which is near COAS. The location didn't have the right traffic, Digman said.

Even before then, however, they had discussed collaboration. Now Milagro coffee will be served with the convenience of browsing COAS books and/or sitting down with COAS books in the Milagro room.

Digman said COAS will have an ornate coffee cart made of solid brass and ceramics, designed and made by Dorothy Zitzler. The cart is 11 feet long and 32 inches wide, weighing 1,500 pounds and includes a sink, a self-contained water holding tank, hand washing capabilities, refrigerator, commercial espresso machine, coffee brewer and grinder.

"It's really a work of art," Digman said.

Founded by former archeology professor Patrick Beckett in 1984, COAS Books started out as an archeology publishing business. Beckett, his son, took over the family business in 2007. Beckett said he had to move items out of his father's northeast archeology room, which took a while and is the room Milagro will occupy.

Beckett said it was Veronica's idea to open up a coffee shop with Main Street frontage, and that several people have approached him about starting a new collaboration, but they always had Digman in mind.

"He's got a great business and product, and he's very successful," Beckett said, adding that they'll run their businesses separately, but have a cooperative relationship.

Beckett said when they owned the successful Claymore's Coffee House, located in the rear of COAS Books in the space now rented by Sally Quillin, his sons Brandon and Brett made the espressos from Digman's roast.

"Everybody thought the roast was topnotch," he said.

Having a great system for craft roasting his coffee, Digman, who has been in business since 1998, only purchases 100 percent Arabica coffee.

"We drink every single batch of coffee that we roast," said Digman.

He and his wife, MaryAnn, who is former chief operating officer and chief executive officer and president of Memorial Medical Center, moved to Las Cruces from Ashville, N.C. in 1997, but Digman was born in Albuquerque and has lived in various New Mexico cities. He served in the Army beginning in 1973 and met MaryAnn in Bavaria while serving there.

When asked what Digman's favorite coffee is, he said his favorite coffee changes with the season because each batch is different from year to year.

When the new coffee house opens at COAS Books, it probably won't have WiFi, Beckett said, but it will eventually. There are also plans in the works to add a front patio area.

NMSU names new dean for College of Business

Hoffman brings extensive experience to position

By Amanda Bradford

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University has selected James Hoffman, a professor and former associate dean in the Rawls College of Business at Texas Tech University, as the next dean of the College of Business.

"I am delighted that Dr. Hoffman will be joining the NMSU team to lead the College of Business," said NMSU Executive Vice President and Provost Dan Howard. "He has strong academic credentials, a background in mediation and a history of planning and initiating innovative degree programs. I am confident that he will continue the tradition of excellent leadership in the College of Business exemplified by former Dean Garrey Carruthers and Interim Dean Kathy Brook."

Carruthers served as dean of the college from 2003 until he was named NMSU's 27th president last May.

"There is nowhere I would rather be the dean than the NMSU College of Business," Hoffman said. "I love New Mexico and feel that I'll be in an excellent position as dean to create value, not only for the students in the College of Business, but for all the students at the university. I have the ultimate respect for the institution and I'm honored to be a part of it."

He taught courses in strategy, management, leadership and information systems for 15 years at Texas Tech, eventually serving as associate dean for MBA Programs and Executive Education. Prior to his time at Texas Tech, he taught at Florida State University.

HOFFMAN

Hoffman earned his bachelor of science degree from Nebraska Wesleyan University and his master's and doctoral degrees in business administration from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, where he focused on business strategy and operations management. His research interests also include entrepreneurship, family business, value creation and assessment and health organization management.

He and his family have traveled extensively in New Mexico and own property in Los Alamos and Ruidoso.

Hoffman said he's always felt a strong connection with the state and he's thrilled to make his home here.

He and his wife, Jayne, have been married for 25 years and have two sons – Jason, 18, and Tyler, 13 – and a daughter, Keeva, 9.

Hoffman will begin his duties at NMSU on July 1. His salary will be $225,000 per year.

Large crowds of people flocked to Main Street for the first Evening at the Market, sponsored in part by the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces, Wednesday, May 14.

Evening market a success

Future evening events to be planned for Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces

The Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces, in partnership with the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau, held its first Evening at the Market event Wednesday, May 14.

More than 80 vendors set up shop, offering handmade goods, including metalwork, woodwork, art, jewelry and fresh produce. Six food trucks were also in attendance – Cruisin' Quesadilla, Bakehouse, Luchador, Happy Dog, La Waffle and Cocina Mexicana.

Entertainment offerings included musicians performing on a stage near the St. Genevieve memorial and aerial dance troupe Project in Motion.

Duane Mosley, market manager for the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces, saw the event as highly successful.

"Our community has really come out to show support for this event," he said. "We saw so many faces we have never seen before. Our vendors had great sales and all of our food trucks sold out."

Main Street merchants were also beneficiaries of the street market.

"We had triple the traffic in our store than we have on our busiest Saturday market hours," said Carlos Rivas, owner of Run Culture, 221 N. Main St. "Thanks goes out to the market for being such community players."

Nick Ray, owner of Main Street Bistro, 139 N. Main St., agreed.

"I would love to see them do this again, it's great for Downtown efforts as a whole," he said.

Because of the success of the evening, and due to requests from attendees who expressed interest in more evening events, due to conflicting work and family schedules during the regular Wednesday and Saturday morning markets, plans are under way to schedule them on the second Wednesday of the month through September. The next Evening at the Market is scheduled for 5 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, June 11.

"The bands will be back, with a rotation of market musicians and the dance entertainment will be there also," Mosley said. "This time around, we have booked Odd-lab, a fire dancing troupe. They specialize in fire juggling, fire hula hoops, fire breathing, pretty much anything they can light up."

Give Grande New Mexico wins hearts

Giving generously instills pride in state and community

By Charlotte Tallman

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

It was a day of impressive giving on Tuesday, May 6, when the New Mexico community donated hundreds of thousands of dollars during Give Grande New Mexico.

Following the 24-hour online fundraising event, the Community Foundation Coalition of New Mexico announced that New Mexicans donated more than $853,000 for nonprofits across the state. The state's first giving day was the largest single fundraising event in New Mexico history. The coalition is made up of the Albuquerque Community Foundation, the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico, the New Mexico Community Foundation, the Santa Fe Community Foundation and the Taos Community Foundation.

Amanda López Askin expressed excitement following Give Grande New Mexico, and shared her wishes to see donations increase every year.

"Professionally, I work in promoting school health, so I gave to them to support their cause of healthy and supported youth in New Mexico. There are so many worthy causes, but my personal connection to these organizations veered our money to them," Askin said, but she didn't stop donating there.

"I'm also a board member of APA and a foster and advocate for them. I strongly believe in their mission of creating a no-kill community in our city and county. Most of our charitable giving goes to animal welfare causes and this seemed like a good way to punctuate and highlight the giving we already do."

Because of people such as Askin, the coalition received 7,880 gifts over the course of the day from 7,799 donors. The average gift amount was $95.92. A total of 409 nonprofit organizations from every corner of the state took part in the event. Each of the participating nonprofits received a contribution.

"This is really about pulling the communities together, and we are finding that it is empowering people," said Denise Gonzales, Give Grande New Mexico coordinator. "We want it to build the spirit of giving in our communities and provide opportunities for statewide nonprofits to grow."

In celebration of the 100th anniversary of community foundations, the coalition participated in the national day of community giving in coordination with Give Local America, which happened the same day.

Luan Wagner Burn, CFSNM executive director, presented educational workshops about Give Grande New Mexico in Silver City and Las Cruces, resulting in an anonymous $2,000 donation to cover the costs of early bird registration fees for small nonprofits (under $250,000) to register. The donation provided priority early-bird registration for Grant County nonprofits, followed by other nonprofits in the six other counties CFSNM serves – Doña Ana, Hidalgo, Lincoln, Luna, Otero and Sierra. As a result of the donation, 50 southern New Mexico nonprofits signed up immediately.

To see the list of organizations that participated, and how much they raised, visit www.givegrandenm.org.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the Foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New Mexico for generations to come. The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. NMSU's AXED Department recognizes top graduates

The student-run banquet an exercise in event planning and served as backdrop to festivities

By Jocelyn N. Apodaca

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Agricultural and Extension Education Department in the College of Agricultural, Consumer and Environmental Sciences at New Mexico State University hosted the second annual spring banquet honoring students, the department, faculty and staff on Friday, May 2.

"The banquet, to me, is a celebration of the year, of our students and those that are graduating," said Frank Hodnett, Department Head for Agricultural and Extension Education. "It serves as a time for the students to sit back, relax and enjoy time with their classmates and peers."

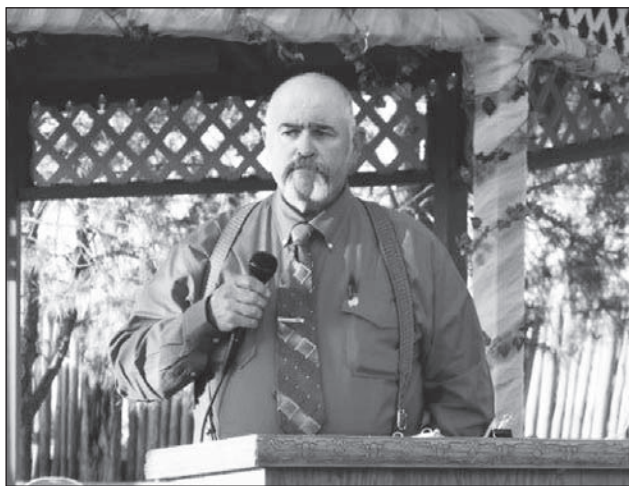

Put on entirely by students, the ACES AXED banquet is a way to gain hands-on experience in event planning. As a requirement for the AXED 445 class, Developing Excellent Programs in Career and Technical Education, students plan every aspect from table decorations, to guest speaker and food selection.

The students chose the department's outstanding alumni Robert Booky, as their speaker. Booky, an agriculture teacher from Cloudcroft High School, spoke on some of the highlights during his 32 years of experience in education and the importance of finding one's passion in the workplace.

"His speech reminded me, personally, that this great profession is the place to be. We make a difference in these people's lives," Hodnett said. "Because of the impact we make, the students take that and incorporate it to when they teach."

The banquet included an awards ceremony, where Taysha Ham was awarded the NMSU Alumni Association Outstanding Senior for the College of ACES award. Ham and Kyra Grant received the AXED Outstanding Student Award for the fall and spring semesters. The Dean's Award of Excellence was presented to fall semester undergraduate Wes Ely and graduate Joshua O'Halloran. Spring recipients were graduate student Hank Hargis and undergraduate Haley Montes.

The Outstanding Academic Achievement Awards went to the students with the highest grade point average in each academic class. Recipients of this award were Matthew Welty, Lauren Schlothauer, Kacey Schurr and Kyra Grant.

Cloudcroft High School teacher Robert Booky addresses the Agricultural and Extension Education Department (AXED) banquet audience as the chosen Outstanding Alumni keynote speaker at New Mexico State University Friday, May 2.

Lane Hand and Caleb Gustin were recognized for the Lil' Aggie Showmanship awards. Outstanding FFA senior and junior members went to Emily Rush and Kwame Ponschock.

Also recognized were the upcoming student teachers for the 2014-15 academic year, Dalli Chavez, Samantha Fisher, Cassie Goff, Madison Landreth, Suzie Taylor and Kassi Simpson. ACES Ambassadors include Augusta Ahlm, Aubrie Brown, Caleb Gustin, Lane Hand, Cassie Jacquez, Morgan Pinnell, Emily Rush, Lance Widner and Cameron Wolfe.

Collegiate FFA Officers were installed at the banquet. President is Cameron Wolfe, vice president is Kwame Ponschock, secretary is Amanda Ball, Brandon Brabson is treasurer and Kelsey Garner will hold the reporter position.

Concluding the ceremony was a special presentation of an award to Kristin Stair, assistant professor in AXED. Stair is leaving NMSU to continue her career at Louisiana State University.

Ranchers debate whether or not to rebuild herds

By Marvin Tessneer

Las Cruces Bulletin

District cattle ranchers will continue to make tough decisions as they look over their sharply reduced herds.

Carol Cooper of the former Tom Cooper Ranch, north of Radium Springs, said her cattle are feeding on grass from last year's growth.

"But it's not the best grazing," she said.

The ranch, which is west of the Rio Grande and includes part of the Las Uvas Mountains, received some rain in April in its higher regions.

"We've had some greening up, but we need more rain," Cooper said. "We're hoping for the typical summer rains."

The summer rains, sometimes referred to as monsoons, are needed to bring soil moisture for forage. They usually start in late June and continue in July and August. If the rains don't arrive, ranchers will have to put out more supplemental feed like mineral blocks.

Ranchers continue to hold their herds down to the same level as last year at this time, according to Leticia Lister, Bureau of Land Management range specialist. Cattle grazing on federal land has been reduced.

"Most ranches are just waiting to see what'll happen," Lister said. "And right now it doesn't look too good."

One of the tough decisions ranchers will have to make is rebuilding herds, a costly investment in money and time. They usually start off with fresh heifers. After they are bred, there is the gestation period, the nine months the cow is carrying the calves.

"And the heifers or cows don't always breed back unless they've had good nutrition," Cooper said.

After the calves are born, ranchers have to feed them until they are mature enough for the market. Until the calves are sold, there is no return on the ranchers' investment in money and time.

Thinning of cattle herds, due to the ongoing drought, has led many to speculate over whether or not to rebuild.

COUNTY SEEKS APPLICANTS FOR LOCAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD SEATS

Doña Ana County Labor Management Relations Board Management and Labor Representatives are seeking applicants for both the management and neutral board member positions. Previously received applications do not need to be resubmitted.

The Doña Ana County Labor Relations Board is a three-member board of volunteers whose members enforce provisions of the Doña Ana County Labor-Management Relations Ordinance and the Board's Labor - Management Relations Rules and Regulations through the imposition of appropriate administrative remedies.

Matters that historically have come before the labor management relations board include designation of appropriate bargaining units, the selection, certification and decertification of exclusive representatives and the filing, hearing, and determination of complaints of prohibited practices.

One member representing management and one member representing labor are appointed by the Board of County Commissioners and the two appointees recommend the third neutral member appointed by the Board of County Commissioners for one-year appointments. During the term of appointment, no Board member shall hold or seek any other political office or public employment or be an employee of a union, an organization representing public employees or a public employer.

Applications will be accepted through 5 p.m., Friday, June 6, 2014.

Applications should consist of a letter of interest, a current resume and three letters of reference. Application packets should be mailed or delivered to the Doña Ana County Human Resources Department, 845 N. Motel Blvd., Las Cruces, NM 88007 Attention: HR Department. Application packets also can be faxed to (575) 525-5888.

For more information, call (575) 647-7210. Residents calling from outside the Las Cruces area may call toll-free at 1-877-827-7200 and request extension 7210.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will on May 27, 2014 at 11:45 AM, Front entrance to the Doña Ana County District Court, 201 W. Picacho, Las Cruces, NM., sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title, and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following described real estate located in said County and State:

Lot 1 of Manzanita Subdivision, located in the city of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on the plat thereof filed for record in the office of the county clerk of Doña Ana County, New Mexico on May 26, 2005 and recorded in book 21 at pages 214, plat records.

The address of the real property is 901 S Manzanita ST, Las Cruces, NM 88001. Plaintiff does not represent or warrant that the stated street address is the street address of the described property; if the street address does not match the legal description, then the property being sold herein is the property more particularly described above, not the property located at the street address; any prospective purchaser at the sale is given notice that it should verify the location and address of the property being sold. Said sale will be made pursuant to the judgment entered on August 7, 2013 in the above entitled and numbered cause, which was a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $94,291.93 plus interest from January 10, 2013 to the date of sale at the rate of 6.250% per annum, the costs of sale, including the Special Master's fee, publication costs, and Plaintiff's costs expended for taxes, insurance, and keeping the property in good repair. Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash.

At the date and time stated above, the Special Master may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned with herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. Plaintiff and its attorneys disclaim all responsibility for, and the purchaser at the sale takes the property subject to, the same valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property, affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land, deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property, if any, environmental contamination on the property, if any, and zoning violations concerning the property, if any.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to

Classifieds

Said sale will be made pursuant to the Amended Default Judgment and Decree of Foreclosure, entered on May 7, 2014, in the above-entitled and numbered cause, which, among other things, was a suit to foreclose a note and mortgage against all secured real property by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $90,319.57 through April 30, 2014, on which post-judgment interest shall run at 10.75% per annum until satisfied in full, which the Special Master calculates to be a per diem of $26.60 for 36 days to the date of the Special Masters sale (the "Sale"), for total post-judgment interest of $957.60, together with attorney fees incurred and costs of sale to the date of sale, and a reasonable Special Masters fee. The Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit their bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash at the sale.

Bidders, to the extent that they do not have a judgment permitted to be bid in lieu of cash, must bid cash at the sale. The successful bidder will be given until the close of the second business day following the determination of the winning bidder to supply to the Special Master cash, certified check, or cashiers check in the amount of the bid. Failure to do so will void that bid, and the Special Master shall either accept the next highest bid, or the Special Master may, in her sole discretion, telephone each bidder who attended the sale, using the telephone number each bidder submits at the sale, and communicate a new date and time for a subsequent sale, without republication of any further notice. Responsibility for reception of notice of any subsequent sale is on the bidder submitting the telephone number.

Notice is further given that the above-described real estate and improvements located on such real estate will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein and all recorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. All prospective bidders are notified that they are responsible for making their own determination as to the extent and nature of the title being conveyed by purchase at the Special Master's sale.

SNM Wine Festival gets better with age

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

The more-than 300-year winemaking legacy of New Mexico dates back to the 1500s, when the first Spanish settlers planted grapes along the fertile banks of the Rio Grande, garnering the Land of Enchantment the honor of becoming the first grape-growing state in the New World.

Fast forward several hundred years to the late 1970s, when, after a lengthy absence, wine began its resurgence in New Mexico, with large, commercial-scale vineyards making their way back into the Mesilla Valley, which thrived – and continue to thrive – in a warm, sunny climate perfectly suited for growing award-winning wine grapes. As the crops thrived, so did the winemakers, honing their craft over the past 30 years, perfecting the wines available for sample and purchase at the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival.

Returning for its 22nd year, the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival will pour it on from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 24-26, at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds, 12125 Robert Larson Blvd., bringing three days of live music, arts and crafts vendors, food and, of course, wine, built on centuries of proud tradition.

“The New Mexico Winegrowers Association started putting on the wine festival 22 years ago to increase the awareness of the quality and prevalence of New Mexico wines to their home market – New Mexicans,” said Rob Sharp, spokesman for the New Mexico Winegrowers Association.

With more than 15 Land of Enchantment wineries participating, including Dos Viejos Winery, Cottonwood Wine and Brewing, Luna Rossa, La Esperanza Vineyard, Rio Grande Winery, Amaro Winery, Tularosa, Wines of the San Juan, Heart of the Desert, St. Clair, Soileil Mimosa, DH Lescombes, DHL VIP, Specialty Wines and Slushies and the Grove, you’re sure to find something to love among the flowing fruit of the vine.

There’s much more to the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival than great New Mexico wine, though. The Memorial Day weekend is packed to the brim with live music from Muddy Hands Blues Band and Latin Funktion (noon and 3 p.m. Saturday), Border Avenue and A Thousand Horses (noon and 3 p.m. Sunday) and Fastlane and Prime (noon and 3 p.m. Monday), in addition to a slew of arts and crafts vendors peddling their finest wares and food offerings from around the world – French, Caribbean, Cajun, German and more – and here in the Mesilla Valley.

Also returning this year is the University of Wine, with three daily classes covering all things wine. The course-load kicks off from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Saturday with Shirley Baca’s “Summer time & The Wine-ing is Easy.” Bryon Kelly will host “Tasting like a Wine Snob” three times over the weekend, from 3:30 to 4:15 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Monday.

Kelly will also host “Wine Tasting and Wine Trivia” from 4:30 to 5:15 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and again from 3:30 to 4:15 p.m. Monday. Herve Lescombes will present “The History of Wines in New Mexico” from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Sunday, and the University of Wine closes out with “Moscato, Moscato, Moscato” hosted by Judy Baca.

Admission to University of Wine classes is free with paid entry to the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival.

“For those who haven’t ever been to the wine festival, it’s really a wonderfully relaxed, family-friendly venue to get away from all the hubbub of Memorial Day weekend,” Sharp said. “There’s lots of things for kids to do, games and activities and the like, and of course there’s lots for the grownups to do. People really look forward to this festival every year.”

Admission to the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival is $20 at the gate or $15 in advance by purchasing tickets online at www.snmwinefestival.com. Admission is for adults “Minimal Horse Sky” by Michael C. Gutierrez. A documentary on Gutierrez and his work made by filmmaker Ed Breeding recently aired on PBS affiliate KRWG-TV in Las Cruces, and is available for viewing online.

Pushing the medium forward

Photographer Gutierrez works with no limits

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Photographer Michael C. Gutierrez lives by a simple, unbending mantra: No limits. Push your medium forward.

That maxim has carried Gutierrez through a long and successful photography career and, most recently, landed him center stage in a documentary about his work, by filmmaker Ed Breeding, which premiered Friday, May 9, on KRWG-TV.

The film, “Genius Sky,” follows the photographer as he works to capture the stunning energy formations of the New Mexican skies for his current series, “Imprint.”

Living in 11 states and traveling around the world taught Gutierrez early on that “one person’s truth may not be your own.”

“When you look past the obvious and acknowledge self, you can see your truth and manifest your reality,” he said. “Travel has given me an understanding of others, myself and my work.”

Predating those treks around the globe, though, Gutierrez said his interest in art developed in utero – “too crazy to believe, for sure, but I was aware in the womb and have always known why I chose to be here” – and his early life was “the usual American story: two families, good times and bad.”

“The one thing that sticks out to me (about growing up) is that my parents loved me and showed it not by giving me stuff, but by loving me,” he said. “My parents recognized who I was and validated me. That was huge, because like many creatives, I was told at least once a week that it wasn’t possible to be an artist for a living.”

Gutierrez honed his art through several years of formal training and working as a photography assistant in New York in his early 20s, utilizing his downtime to work in the studio, perfecting his technique and building on the storytelling of his work.

Like all great artists, though, there came the impetus for Gutierrez to break the rules he’d dedicated himself to learning and make his own way.

“Formal education taught me technique,” he said, “but I had to destroy the perception of who I was to acknowledge myself and tell my own stories.”

That loss of ego and subsequent breakthrough came, Gutierrez said, when he found himself reconnected with a universal spirit, “the whole of nature ... any name will do.”

“When I quit looking within as a singular vessel and could see my singular self as one energy with everything, that truly set me free,” he said. “I let go of influence and became my own greatest influence. I didn’t have to look for ideas; they found me – endless, universal ideas, like scripts for projects, that I could choose to take or someone else might choose to do.”

That reconnection with a universal, all-encompassing spirit led Gutierrez to form his mantra, which has served him well and spurred him on to push his craft to new, unknown places.

Gutierrez’s work, at least on the surface, seems dichotomous, with some work focused on the human form and other series centered on nature – especially the skies of New Mexico.

“Both are different in their subject matter,” he said, “but similar in their stories,” with projects arising in tandem and in time with what Gutierrez calls a “natural rhythm.”

One series, titled “Women are Perfect the Rest is Bulls” is Gutierrez’s celebration of the feminine energy.

“(That series) is my acknowledgement of the beauty, power, fragility, darkness and life-giving light that is most amazing to me,” he said. “One of the greatest lessons I learned was while photographing an amazing woman.

“We were lost in the desert, and as we were talking, I realized most people in our society can’t communicate with one another, not because they are saying something wrong, but because they aren’t communicating with the person – or with any species for that matter – in the way that it receives information. That realization was a gift – to see an even higher form of beauty, not just in women but in everything.”

That same underlying theme – the reconnection and acknowledgement of self and singular as one with an omnipresent energy – lies just under the surface of all of Gutierrez’s work.

Much different from the “Women” series is Gutierrez’s “Imprint” series, which stemmed in turn from his work on “Manifestation,” which, in his words, “empowered and freed, opened me up, as an artist.”

Finishing that series, Gutierrez began to notice, disbelieving at first, faces popping out at him from the otherworldly cloud formations he’d photographed around the state, and “Imprint” was born.

“That’s when I knew I had to make a choice about taking on this project,” he said, and that, it turned out, was the right choice.

Of “Imprints,” Gutierrez said the series “not only recognizes the amazing, vast skies here, but it also acknowledges one of the Land of Enchantment’s greatest gift – history, energy formations in plain sight, if you choose to look, and reconnection to nature with guides above, below and within.

“We live in the sky, and yet people still separate and disconnect from this fact. Above the ground is the sky; we are literally a part of the sky,” he said.

As a visual artist Gutierrez considers being a visual storyteller his job, his obligation, his “service to all.”

“When I started listening and acknowledged who I am, it all came together. To know that, for better or worse, this is my path, is freeing, and to have people connect with my work lets me know that I am doing my job.”

In the coming months, Gutierrez plans to open a small, pop-up gallery inside West End Art Depot, and in September, he will open a show of his work at Aa Studios.

Breeding and Gutierrez’s documentary “Genius Sky” is available for viewing online at <http://michaelgutierrez.photoshelter.com/#!/video>. For more of Gutierrez’s work, visit www.michaelgutierrez.photoshelter.com.

We are 138!

138 Sandwiches offers new type of food truck fare

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Maybe it's our newly minted 100,000-resident status, but in the past few years, Las Cruces has seen an influx of a luxury many larger cities have been long acquainted with: the food truck.

These mobile eateries, largely absent from the local dining scene for some years, have started popping up all over town, proferring their finest culinary creations at businesses, markets and special events.

While the staples of southern New Mexico dining are largely covered thanks to a few veterans versed in the art of mouth-watering Mexican food, a new food truck has appeared on the horizon, and its fare is decidedly different. Given it's on wheels, too, there can be little surprise it's miles ahead.

138 Sandwiches first opened its shutters at the end of March, with owner and chef Ben Wood and sous chef Mina Smith treating Las Cruces to a variety of fare unlike that offered by any other food truck – or, for that matter, any other brick-and-mortar restaurant.

Fast becoming a staple of the Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces each Wednesday and Saturday morning, 138 Sandwiches is poised to be the next big thing in Las Cruces' fast-rising mobile-dining market.

The menu at 138 Sandwiches is unique in a number of ways, starting with its dedication to quality and variety, creating on-the-go masterpieces utilizing the finest local ingredients available. Wood, who attended culinary school in Kansas City before spending time working at a butcher shop and charcuterie, developed a deep love and respect for well-prepared meat. It was there he opened his first truck, through the butcher shop, using only ingredients found in a 100-mile radius.

Wood has returned to Las Cruces, his hometown, with that same abiding love for high-quality, in-season local ingredients, transforming the available into the incredible. Vegetables picked locally Tuesday make their way on to 138's sandwiches Wednesday, and Wood and Smith take the time to prepare every ingredient – sauces, toppings, meatballs, you name it – from scratch.

138 Sandwiches' menu, which changes daily, offers choices unheard of in the City of the Crosses. On one particular Tuesday, the truck dropped anchor at Convergys – where it's found each Tuesday and Thursday, at the request of the company – offering the Smoked Pork Meatball sandwich, with apples, ranch, lettuce and battered and fried golden-brown onion straws; the Cheesesteak Meatball, loaded with sautéed vegetables and provolone; and "The Burger," topped with cilantro aioli, provolone and baby lettuce.

A regular menu item and Wood's and Smith's personal favorite, the Banh Mi Meatball sandwich, is a new twist on a Vietnamese culinary classic. Meatballs made with ginger, Thai chile and fish sauce are cooked then piled with a mix of pickled carrots, cucumbers and jalapeños and topped with coconut jam, Sriracha and cilantro, served on bread baked daily at another of Las Cruces' favorite eateries, Popular Artisan Bread Bakery, housed inside Zeffiro Pizzeria Napoletana.

Of the Banh Mi, Wood extols the combination of flavors.

"You get the richness of that meatball, the really fresh salad with the cucumber and carrot, some spiciness from the Sriracha and the sweetness from the coconut, so it really hits on all the flavors," he said.

The Banh Mi is only one of many examples of 138 Sandwiches pushing the culinary envelope in Las Cruces, hoping to expand diners' horizons without intimidating.

"We're trying to do things a bit different," Wood said. "You know how it is here in Las Cruces – you can get a great green chile burger or a burrito anywhere. We're trying to offer some flavors that go together well and hopefully aren't too out-there for people – that are still accessible but always something different, fresh and exciting. We want to be on the forefront – that's part of the reason our menu is always changing."

Another offering from the revolving menu described by Wood include the Green Posole Meatball sandwich, with the flavors of that classic New Mexican comfort food – pork, hominy and chiles – ground together and cooked to perfection, topped with a selection of local greens.

Being fully mobile, 138 Sandwiches can be found all over town on differing days, taking full advantage of the age of social media and keeping their rapidly growing fan base updated on its whereabouts each day via Facebook (www.facebook.com/138foodtruck) and Twitter (@138foodtruck).

King of the Monsters?

‘Godzilla’ a dark disappointment

Review by Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Gareth Edwards’ “Godzilla” isn’t close to the worst film in the 60-year-old franchise – that dubious honor goes squarely to Roland Emmerich’s 1998 critical and commercial disaster of the same name – but that’s small praise. Suffering from a bloated, two-hour running time, this reboot squanders its strongest actors on stock roles, relying instead on its weakest links to pile on the tepid family drama and, most egregiously, lacks the one thing a Godzilla film needs the most: Godzilla.

The King of Monsters’ return to the big screen starts promisingly, at least. The opening credits are chock full of jargon redacted too fast to make out, run over footage of the Bikini Atoll nuclear bomb tests. When the blast clears, a gargantuan, spiked behemoth can be seen rising from the water.

Fast forward a half-century to 1999, where scientists Ishiro Serizawa and Vivienne Graham (Ken Watanabe and Sally Hawkins) have been whisked away to the Philippines, where a massive industrial accident at a quarry has unearthed an immense, reptilian skeleton, along with a duo of embryonic vessels, one intact and the other hatched, its inhabitant making a beeline for the sea.

At the nuclear power plant at Janjira, Japan, seismic activity is up and supervisor Joe Brody (Bryan Cranston) is called in to investigate, bringing along his wife and co-worker Sandra (Juliette Binoche). While Sandra and her team investigate damage to the reactor core, an explosion rips through the plant, threatening an imminent meltdown and irradiation of the surrounding area, trapping them to die as Joe, unable to save his wife, looks on.

It’s a tense and deeply sad scene, and Cranston and Binoche, separated by a few inches of glass, absolutely nail the anguish and helplessness of watching the final, fatal separation from a loved one unfold right before your eyes. The devastation that follows on the outside, the implosion and catastrophic collapse of the Janjira plant, is gripping and terrifying, cut with sirens and schoolchildren making their way to safety as reactors crumble to dust in the background.

These two scenes – the wrenching separation of the Brody family and the full-scale, effects-laden destruction of the plant – set the stage for what could have been the perfect summer blockbuster in a post-Nolan film-scape, full of human drama and punishing action.

Once “Godzilla” gets going, though, it throws it all away.

Fifteen years after the Janjira incident, young Ford Brody is all grown up, now an EOD officer with the Navy played by a dead-eyed Aaron Taylor-Johnson, and home on leave visiting Pretty Blond Wife and Precocious Son, played so two-dimensionally by Elisabeth Olsen (a Mary Kate and Ashley consanguine) and Carson Bolde as to not even warrant names.

Joe, it seems, has spent the interim investigating what really happened that day, what took his wife from him, much to the chagrin of local security forces, who’ve arrested him once again. Ford flies to Japan to bail out his father, and within what seems to be minutes, he’s out in the quarantine zone helping pop look for old files. The duo is promptly arrested and taken this time to the plant, where Serizawa and Graham have isolated the second, unhatched chrysalis for study. Then it hatches and a massive, winged creature emerges, wreaking havoc on the plant before taking to the skies.

This creature, dubbed by Serizawa a MUTO – Massive Unidentified Terrestrial Organism – is an ancient monster that feeds on high levels of sweet, sweet radiation, covered-up for centuries by worried scientists frustrated with its seeming invulnerability to nuclear weapons. And they’re breeding. Whoops.

What’s more, Serizawa reveals, there’s a much larger, much more dangerous creature hunting the newly released MUTOs, one unleashed by the nuclear tests of the 1950s, dubbed ... Godzilla. This alpha predator, Serizawa insists, has awoken to “restore” the balance and send the MUTOs back from whence they came.

The MUTOs make their way to a new city, wreak some havoc, Godzilla shows up, at least for a couple seconds, and beats them back; then it’s another 30 minutes of the half-cooked tale of Ford Brody and his boring family. Repeat.

“Godzilla’s” solid cast is almost utterly squandered, either killed-off too soon – Binoche and, later, the stellar Cranston, trying his best to keep this sinking ship afloat – or relegated to one-note parts, especially Watanabe and Hawkins, two astounding actors given nothing to do here but act concerned.

Most troubling is Taylor-Johnson as the film’s lead. The “Kick-Ass” vet is too bland to carry the weight of this kind of film on his shoulders alone, but with his costars all singing their one-note tunes, the focus falls squarely on him and he simply doesn’t deliver.

The biggest problem of all with “Godzilla,” though, is Godzilla himself – or, rather, the lack thereof. The titular monster doesn’t figure much into the first two-thirds of the movie, and when he finally does, it’s only in part, in glances and glimmers, before the scene cuts and the hokey melodrama resumes.

Here, the King of Monsters is more deux ex machina than the star of his own show. Most of the onscreen destruction is handled by the MUTOs – so much so the film would have been much more aptly titled around them.

While the trick has worked in the past – “Jurassic Park” and “Jaws” both hold the viewer for an hour-plus before the monsters take center stage – with “Godzilla,” the payoff just isn’t worth it. Every striptease has to have its reveal, and “Godzilla” never delivers the goods.

Running time: 123 minutes
Starring: Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Bryan Cranston
Director: Gareth Edwards

“Godzilla” aims high but crumbles under its own bloated run time, weak human drama and a lack of the titular monster.

Marriage on the rocks

‘Le Weekend’ boasts strong cast

Review by Jeff Berg
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Anchored by two fine thespians, Oscar-winner Jim Broadbent and the interesting but lesser-known Lindsay Duncan, “Le Weekend” should be much better than it is.

Meg (Duncan) and Nick (Broadbent) are introduced to us as they travel on a train that will hopefully take them to a place, both physical and emotional, that will eliminate some of the staleness that permeates their 30-year marriage.

It’s not looking good, since she is more involved in her book than in Nick, who fidgets around, checking their itinerary and fretting about some cash he may have misplaced.

In a way, the film is a geezer version of “Before Midnight,” the fine piece directed by Richard Linklater last year, a continuation of a relationship between Julie Delpy and Ethan Hawke, except this one has a lot more snark and darkness to it.

Upon arriving in Paris, the first misstep is taken when the couple arrives at their dingy low-priced hotel. Meg is not about to stay an hour in this dump, let alone for the entire duration of their trip. Hence, they are soon off to a fanciful place that even allows a view of the Eiffel Tower, along with an accessible mini-bar that may be put to good use.

To me, the trailers indicated “Le Weekend” was a comedy about a marriage going sour, but alas, it is most anything but. The initial half hour or so has some dry and pointed humor, but as the film develops, the humor turns to darkness and spite, as it becomes quite apparent that this reconciliation trip may be the last trip Meg and Nick take together.

Meg wants fun and excitement on this trip, while Nick is still kind of stuck at home, fretting about what tile to use in their recently remodeled bathroom and longing for the return of sex to their marriage. At one point, he turns to begging, while she remains distant and totally uninterested to the point of ridicule.

As they visit the sights of Paris, they argue and debate many subjects – whether they should allow their financially challenged son to move back in with them, Nick’s possible forced early retirement from the university where he teaches and Meg’s none-too-subtle statement that she has been considering spending her retirement without Nick. There are moments of kindness and love between the two, but they are few and far between, and fade considerably as the situation becomes direr.

Things are building to an emotional crescendo when Nick happens upon an old friend, an American author named Morgan, now living in Paris, played with aplomb by Jeff Goldblum. Morgan invites the couple to a dinner party at his home, wherein the insults and confessions fly ceaselessly between the couple, with Nick making a bravado toast about his life, making it clear that it sucks to be him. Meg nearly sleeps with a much younger man she has met, while Nick drinks with an acquaintance, pouring out his emotional pain while sitting around in his boxer shorts.

All in all, “Le Weekend” isn’t a bad picture, but somehow it grated on me. There was a lot of it I found irritating, since it felt like director Roger Michell (“Hyde Park on Hudson”) was taking it in one direction and then, all of a sudden, I found myself jerked in another direction. Broadbent and Duncan offer fine performances but the source material feels a bit sour.

However, things liven up near the end when it comes time to pay the hotel bill and the tab for an expensive dinner.

Nick and Meg find common ground here, and celebrate it in a pleasant and sly fashion.

They renew their commitment. But maybe not – it depends on your definition of happy.

'Greyhound Therapy' book signing and reading

Remember that interesting bus journey? Ever wonder the life story of the person seated next to you? Our bus journeys may be not as frequent these days, but still we hold the memory of those trips. Join the Border Book Festival for the world-premiere book launch, signing and reception of "Greyhound Therapy," by J.R. "Joe" Conway from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday, May 31, at Casa Camino Real, 314 S. Tornillo St.

Overcrowding at a state psychiatric hospital? Just give patients a sack lunch and a one-way bus ticket out of town. Around the overrun state mental-health facilities, staff psychologists sometimes called the decision to relieve overcrowding via a one-way bus ticket – "Greyhound therapy." Considered by many as not cruel or controversial, it has been understood by many to be a realistic way of opening precious bed space. Patients from out of state are stabilized, then escorted to the downtown bus station, handed a one-way ticket and occasionally a sack lunch and sent packing back to their town of origin.

How many times we have wished to do the same with our own unstable, jangled and out of control neighbors or family members. Yet, we cling to the hope for them and for us, of other, better days. Sheriff Craig Spence from Rock Springs, Wyo., is a man of our time, a good man with the unpleasant but accepted task of confronting evil and dealing with it as he struggles with his wife's serious illness.

Life is not disposable, nor are people, and yet we farm out the least desirable each and every day. We wish we could give those who we can't control or explain away with a one-way ticket to another place. The deeper implications of this concept of disposing and dismissing unwanted and often unstable persons has led to Conway's insightful, honest, hard-hitting yet compassionate look at the fragile threads that hold human lives together, driving some to healing and others on those fateful journeys down the dark, dead-end roads of self-destruction.

Join the Border Book Festival at its home base, Casa Camino Real, for the launch of this powerful book featuring a cast of memorable and haunting characters from the Western U.S. – a West alive and full of rich story.

Copies of "Greyhound Therapy" are available from XLibris at <http://bookstore.xlibris.com/Products/SKU-000908658/Greyhound-Therapy.aspx>. The cost is $19.99 for paperback and $29.99 for hardcover.

For more information, contact the BBF at 523-3988 or bbf@borderbookfestival.com or Conway at jcon3006@comcast.net.

Career Art Path program set for June

Career Art Path (CAP) is a two-week immersion program in the visual arts for middle school students. The program is designed for students entering the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth grades and will run two weeks, from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday, June 16-27, at the Court Youth Center, 402 W. Court Ave. Tuition is $100 per student for the two-week program; partial and full scholarships are available.

The Doña Ana Arts Council and program founders, Marian and Jordon Wolle, donate financial support to any student who has an expressed interest in the visual arts, but who is unable to pay the full tuition.

This is the 28th anniversary of a remarkable program conceived by Marian Wolle, who believes middle school is the time for youth who are interested in the arts to realize the potential career opportunities in different arts forms, including theater set design, costume design, architectural design and graphic design. At the core of the program are daily workshops in a variety of visual art forms including photography, ceramics, digital art, painting and drawing.

Each day, students meet guest speakers who are working artists from a variety of private, educational or non-profit

Character study and audition techniques workshops at BBT

Want to nail your next audition? Do you want to improve your chances of getting a dream role? Want to get rid of that nervous feeling every time you walk in to a room?

The Black Box Theatre is hosting a series of workshops on character study and audition techniques from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays, June 7, 14 and 21, leading up to a final showcase at 7 p.m. Monday, June 23.

In this workshop, you will learn audition techniques in a fun and personalized workshop setting from Amy Lanasa, local actor, director and writer. We'll refine all the details of your audition technique, from how you walk in the door to your choice of material to how to handle adjustments. You'll leave the workshop with the confidence that you know exactly what directors and producers are looking for during your three minutes in the room – and that you can give it to them.

Each participant in the workshop will get a chance to perform two contrasting monologues in a final showcase for an invited audience. Workshops will be held in the Black Box Rehearsal space, with the final showcase at the theater.

Cost is $100, including a $25 deposit due by Monday, June 2.

For more information about the workshop or to register, contact Lanasa at 680-6108.

Summer workshops: Traditional arts of New Mexico at Branigan Cultural Center

The Branigan Cultural Center presents its summer workshop series for 2014. With a focus on the traditional crafts of New Mexico, the workshop series will introduce students to gourd art, piñatas, coiled baskets and cornhusk figures. Sign up for a single workshop, or join the cultural center for all four.

The classes each take place from 2 to 4 p.m. on consecutive Thursdays and Fridays in June. The cost is $10 per two-day workshop and children ages 7 to 12 are invited to sign up. Details and registration forms for summer classes at all the Las Cruces Museums can be found at <http://tinyurl.com/lcmuseums>.

- June 5-6: Gourd Art: Gourds were domesticated in central Mexico and became an important part of Pueblo culture as storage, rattles and scoops, among other uses. Today they are often made into birdhouses, vases or decorations. Bring your imagination and turn a gourd into a work of art inspired by one of these New Mexico gourd traditions.
- June 12-13: Piñatas: Did you know that the piñata has roots in Chinese, Italian and Mayan cultures? This beautiful craft, associated today with Mexican celebrations, developed out of a long history of travelers sharing their traditions as they moved throughout the Old World and into the New. Make your own piñata to celebrate a special event. We will building the body on the first day and decorate our piñatas the next afternoon.
- June 19-20: Coiled Baskets: Baskets were one of the earliest crafts made in New Mexico and have a rich history dating back thousands of years. Learn the art of coiled basketry, one of the earliest forms of baskets. We will work with new materials – yarn and cord – to make small, colorful baskets. Finishing a basket will require both afternoons.
- June 27-28: Cornhusk Figures: Cornhusks have been used to make figures and decorations since corn was introduced to the Southwest, over a thousand years ago. Learn how to make a range of figures inspired by colonial New Mexican crafts and Pueblo tradition.

The Branigan Cultural Center is located at 501 N. Main St. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. For more information, contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit www.las-cruces.org/museums.

Register now for summer art classes at the Las Cruces Museum of Art!

Registration for summer art classes at the Las Cruces Museum of Art is in full swing. Four-day children's classes begin Tuesday, June 3, with new sessions starting each week. Class schedules and registration forms are available at the museum and on the website www.tinyurl.com/lcmuseums.

Perennial favorites such as comic book art, nature drawing, puppet making, ceramics, world art and mixed media are on tap. A new class titled "Chicano Art Infusion" draws inspiration from the Museum of Art's summer exhibition "Chicanitas: Small Paintings from the Cheech Marin Collection," open through July 19. Still-life and figure drawing are great options for blossoming teen artists.

Classes for adults include ceramics, glass fusing and two workshops with artist Michael Poncé on beginning painting and painting from photography.

All children's classes are $60 and adult classes range from $60 to $110. The Museum of Art accepts registrations with credit cards, checks and cash during business hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. The Museum of Art is closed Sunday and Monday.

Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St. For more information, call 541-2137 or visit www.las-cruces.org/museums.

Affordable and efficient, the home at 3646 San Clemente Ave. is built to the highest standards of sustainability, without sacrificing style, spaciousness or comfort.

Bringing the savings home

NetSolar Homes offers energy-efficient living with style

By David Salcido
Las Cruces Bulletin

Not too long ago, when searching for a new home, one often had to choose between affordable housing and energy-efficient living.

They rarely coincided, but NetSolar Homes is working hard to change that paradigm, striking a balance between the two and opening the door to conscientious affordability.

Completed in March, the home at 3646 San Clemente Ave., in the Metro Verde subdivision, is a working example of that harmony.

With standard features such as light emitting diode (LED) and compact fluorescent lamp (CFL) lighting inside and out; double-paned, low-emissivity glass; WaterSense certified faucets; a full alarm system; and solar panels to generate electricity – not to mention the use of structural insulated panels (SIPs), a revolutionary building material for outside walls – NetSolar homes are already a step above the rest. Competitive pricing is what tends to surprise many.

“We’re not the cheapest, but we are around the median,” said NetSolar co-owner Javier Cabrera. “There are several houses throughout Las Cruces with the same quality of building materials, at about the same size and priced the same way, but our houses have all of these energy-efficient, water-saving features.”

Upon entering the 2,214-square-foot, three-bedroom, two-and-a-half-bath Spanish-style home through the walled courtyard and inviting 8-foot doorway, the impression is one of spaciousness and comfort.

Straight head, across tiled floors mimicking dark wood in the wide open living area, is 12 feet of sliding glass doors looking out onto a patio, the centerpiece of which is a freestanding wood fireplace.

To the left of the foyer is a hallway entrance leading first to a small powder room, then into the main hallway with its guest bath, two bedrooms and the master suite.

All bathrooms feature travertine-tiled floors and showers, quartz countertops and solid wood cabinets with full extension, soft-close drawers and doors. Floor-to-ceiling tile backsplashes add a riot of festive color in the Spanish style, and the thresholds feature a zig-zag pattern that marries both the travertine and wood plank tile, so one segues easily into the other.

Back in the great room, the true beauty of the home is realized with an open floor plan, cross beams inset into the ceiling and high entryways with soft arches. A state-of-the-art gas fireplace occupies one wall.

“It has ventilation and a built in fan to blow the heat out into the room,” Cabrera said. “Because it’s sealed and direct vented, it is completely energy efficient. It won’t send any toxins into the house.”

Another marvelous piece of technology is the Nest thermostat, a circular digital panel that is also a standard feature in all NetSolar homes. Completely WiFi ready, it can be controlled remotely through an app for iPhone, iPad or laptop computer, so everything can be regulated before the owner returns home from work, shopping or running errands.

The kitchen is another technological marvel. Separated from the living room by a stand-alone counter with granite countertops and a double-bowl apron sink, it features stainless steel appliances, such as a dishwasher, microwave, convection oven, French-door refrigerator and stove vent with travertine tile backsplash and glass accents. The showstopper, however, is the stove, an electromagnetic induction cook top with five burners.

to heat and is 30 percent more efficient than a gas range. It will only heat metal, so you cannot burn yourself. The electromagnetic field makes the particles in the metal pan vibrate so fast it heats up, so you can boil a gallon of water in less than a minute.”

On the far side of the kitchen, toward the back of the house, is the dining area with three windows looking out onto the patio and into the back and side yards, offering plenty of natural light during daytime hours. Rustic looking lighting fixtures, hanging over the dining table and countertop keep with the Spanish theme.

In this home, it’s all about the details. For instance, in the laundry room just off the kitchen, the washer and dryer are recessed into both the wall and the floor, something Cabrera is very proud of.

“That step down is a standard feature in our homes, just for the added protection of our customers,” he said. “If a hose gets disconnected, you won’t flood your laundry room and your house. That one inch drop

See Efficient on page C14

An open floor plan, wood plank tiles, a beamed ceiling and faux-finished walls lend elegance to the energy-efficient qualities of the great room, with its sealed and direct vented gas fireplace and low-e glass panes.

A state-of-the-art kitchen features the latest in energy saving devices with Spanish-style accents.

Efficient

keeps the water in one area and the drain in the back gets rid of it, adding to the durability of the house.”

Motion sensor exhaust fans in the laundry room and the two-car garage ensure humidity, fumes from exhaust or any other toxic gasses never enter the house.

Another amazing device is the water softener, which Cabrera points out in the garage as a foot-long length of silver tubing, suspended between copper pipes jutting from the wall.

“It’s a new kind of water softener,” he said. “It’s a scale pre-venter. When the hard water passes through, it has some sort of special metal alloy that changes the polarity of the minerals so they don’t stick to anything. This little thing will prevent your dishwasher, your faucets and your sinks from getting those white mineral deposits. No service or maintenance necessary and you can leave it there forever.”

A free-standing fireplace dominates the open air patio with cedar beam pergola and natural stone columns.

The water heater is a hybrid and “one of the most efficient water heaters on the market, right now,” Cabrera said. Its special quality is it captures the heat from the garage and transfers that heat to the water, then blows out cool air into the garage. It can also be programmed to shut off at certain times, or when the owners are on vacation.

One final stop, the outside patio, reveals more of the stylish design that makes the house special. In addition to the free-standing fireplace, the patio features a two-level pergola with cedar beams and natural cantera stone columns, imported from Mexico. Landscaping using native, drought-tolerant plants fit perfectly into the sustainability aspect of the home.

The best part of all is the savings. Because of its energy-efficient construction, this house, like all NetSolar houses, will save its inhabitants money. Lots of it.

“This house has a HERS index rating of 25,” Cabrera said. “There are homes out there below that, but they’re not affordable. We’re making homes in the HERS index 20s that are the same price as everybody else. So, why buy a more expensive home, when you can buy a home that’s 70 percent more efficient for less? This home will save you approximately $2,800 a year in utilities.”

With estimated heating and cooling costs of approximately $10 a month, it’s easy to see where the true savings lie. Under the watchful eye of forward-thinking construction companies like NetSolar Homes, making sustainability attainable with an attention to comfort and style could easily become the new paradigm.

Artists blossom at the Art in the Garden Tour

The blooms of summer

Shade and color can be yours, even in drought

Here is a small list of summer flowering trees that not only give beauty to our harsh climate, but also thrive in our summer heat.

One of the easiest trees to grow on the list is the desert willow. Usually in shrub form, this plant can be trained into a small- to medium-sized – and quite picturesque – tree. The color of its flowers ranges from white to pink to burgundy. There are seedless varieties for those wishing for minimal maintenance. These trees can be pruned virtually any time of year to keep them in the shape you desire. They are very drought tolerant once established, but will continue to grow faster if watered more. Aphids can be a problem on over-watered specimens, which will be evident with the presence of ants.

The golden rain tree is a medium-sized tree growing to about 20 to 25 feet tall and almost as wide. This one, as the name suggests, has yellow to golden flowers growing at its outermost tips. The flowers turn into seed pods that resemble small Japanese lanterns. This tree is slow to start, but after a couple of seasons, it becomes a beautiful and gracefully branched tree that offers dappled shade. The large black seeds are generally easy to propagate.

The mimosa or silk tree adds a tropical or semi-tropical look to just about any landscape. This one has pink or almost red fuzzy blossoms that become quite fragrant at night. It usually is multi-trunked and has a very open canopy. Most cultivars have deep green leaves which contrast nicely with the pink flowers. However, there is a variety named “summer chocolate” that has purple foliage contrasting beautifully with any green surrounding foliage. The mimosa has a bad rap as being an undesirable weed tree, but this is in areas that receive quite a bit of rain fall. For obvious reasons, we will not have to worry about this tree ever becoming a “weed tree.” This tree can produce full or sporadic shade depending upon how it gets pruned. This widens the variety of vegetation that can be planted underneath it.

The vitex, with its purple upright flowers, resembling the butterfly bush, often grows with its own individual characteristics. Its unusual and gnarly branching habit can mimic a bonsai when viewed from afar. This one really loves the desert heat and needs it to help keep it in bloom. Younger, newly planted trees need additional watering to get them established, while older trees need only occasional summer water. Most are offered in shrub form, but can be easily trained into a multi-trunked or even single-trunked tree. It is rarely offered with a blush pink or white blossom.

The magnolia is an evergreen tree with large, white, fragrant flowers. Although not considered a “desert tree,” the magnolia will thrive with regular summer watering. This one is going to need some additional fertilizer and iron to look its best. If at all possible, place this tree in an area away from the prevailing winds, such as on the east side of building or other large trees. It will do best on a drip or watering system that can saturate the entire root zone. Specimens that have been planted in the ground for three years or more actually do become drought tolerant if watered deeply when young. Insects are generally not a problem but for obvious reasons hail is its worst enemy.

We can’t forget the crape myrtle. Although usually grown as a shrub, they are also available in a single- or multi-trunk tree form. This flowering gem loves our hot summer temperatures as long as it has root moisture. The varieties “muskogee” – which has a light lavender color – and “natchez” – which is white – are the easiest cultivars to grow. They both resist marginal leaf tip burn and have brilliant red-to-orange hues in late fall. Single trunk specimens typically grow about up to 20 to 25 feet tall and about 15 to 20 feet wide. Other colors of crape myrtles are red, pink, purple, fuchsia and shades in between. Crape myrtles love well amended soils and regular feeding throughout the growing season. They will also have deeper, greener foliage and vivid colored flowers when iron chelate is used in addition to fertilizer.

All in all, these trees will provide a large splash of color during the summer months, as well as providing shade and a place for our fine feathered friends. Fertilizers with a large amount of phosphorous and the prompt removal of any seed pods will assure that your trees continue to bloom to their fullest potential.

So, cool your place down and liven it up at the same time, just by planting one or more of these or any other flowering beauty your eyes desire.

Gary Guzman, owner of Guzman's Color Your World Gardening Centers, can be reached at gary@lascrucesbulletin.com.

The golden rain tree is a slow starter, but will grow into a gracefully branched shade tree.

The mimosa is a popular choice with its pink and white fuzzy blossoms and open canopy.

Life is not all about comfort and security

Learning from experiences is the true spice of life

Gabriel Rochelle
Tales from the Cassock

Last Sunday's New York Times carried a front-page article on a proposal to warn college students in advance of disturbing messages they might find in required readings or audio-visuals. The idea was to cosset students who had suffered particular emotional or physical trauma from confrontation with other experiences of the same ilk.

One can sympathize with the concept to a point, but the idea that this should be a blanket policy speaks against academic freedom in a rather strange way. This "last straw" fueled this column, but I want to focus on what, for me, are issues besides academic freedom.

For many years now, I have had the suspicion that we are becoming a society for which our main goal is never to be bothered, never to be surprised, never to be unsafe and certainly never to be moved out of our "comfort zone." You may remember that ugly phrase from the 90s, when people who did not want to do something that might push them in a new direction constantly invoked it. Nothing wild, erratic or crazy must be allowed to intrude upon our carefully protected lives. Life must be predictable, manageable, comfortable and "safe."

The pursuit of safety signifies the end of adventure, to me. By encasing yourself in protective devices to take away all risk, you have little chance to be surprised by anything novel. But there is more.

If everything in life becomes predictable and manageable, the end result is not enjoyment or fulfillment, but total boredom. Isn't it clear that life itself is a risk? Isn't it clear that life is an adventure? We mustn't lose sight of these insights; they are formative for our passage on this earth. We are called to what verve, spontaneity and compassion we can muster, given our bracketed beginning and end. We can learn to see the world for what it is, a mix of good and bad, sickness and health, life and death. It's not all pretty out there and we do ourselves, and others, a disservice to pretend it could be if we always wore our seat belts and our helmets and had a soft surface under our play structures.

We've tried to make death predictable and manageable. Some of that is a good thing, but for years, we tried to hide death. Fortunately, a movement is under way to reclaim the experience this side of the grave. As one who has sat with many people at the point of death, I can testify to the truly awesome nature of that passage. It is a genuine spiritual moment for which no religious language is necessary. We need to give death back to families and their homes, as much as we can. Thank God for the hospice movement.

If we were to develop our souls as much as we try to protect our bodies, perhaps we would be more appreciative of spontaneous, erratic and unusual experiences of life. I see my faith as an adventure in this life, first of all, not in the next, whatever it might hold. I see the message of the resurrection as a call to action, not inertia, as a call to overcome challenges, not a way to avoid or avert them.

Other religions may give that hope and courage their own way; I am citing my own because I know it best. Don't lose the point: The spiritual pathway prepares you for adversity and obstacles; it does not take them away, but enables you to overcome them with good heart and inner strength. So you don't have to go for safety or comfort; you can take risks and learn from your discomfiture.

Know signs of bad guys

Marcy Shoberg
Self-defense sense

Protecting yourself is about more than knowing how to hit someone who attacks you.

Last month's column outlined four strategies a con man, dangerous stranger or anyone else could use to trick you into doing something against your best interest. These were elicitation, pretending to need help, making a threat and pretending to be an authority.

There are four more and recognizing them may make you safe, way before it's time for strikes.

Reverse psychology is when a person inclines another to do something by telling them they can't, or by accusing them of not being somehow capable enough to do it. A kidnapper might ask a child for help then say, "Never mind, you're not old enough to do it," to make the child feel like proving this stranger wrong. A man attempting to pick up a woman might offer her a drink then say, "Never mind, I can see you're too good to talk with the likes of me," so she would feel guilty if she doesn't accept the offer.

Faking becoming friends is done in the same ways a person actually makes friends. Ways to make friends include finding something in common with you, complimenting you, giving you a gift and talking about random things such as the weather. If a person starts making friends with you while waiting in line at the bank, they are most likely doing it out of boredom. If, however, a person starts making friends with you in the parking lot of the bank, question their motive.

Promises, like threats, inform you about the thoughts of the person who speaks them, but should not be taken literally. When a person promises you something, they do it because they fear that you think the opposite.

"Just meet me to talk, then I promise I'll leave you alone forever" actually means "I think I could get you to meet with me, but I fear you think you'll never get rid of me."

Pushing is my term for not taking "no" for an answer. This "no" may be given verbally or with body language. Certainly there can be times in your life when you are glad someone convinced you to do a thing you first resisted, but my advice to you is this: If you notice someone trying harder and harder to convince you to do something, try harder and harder to decide for yourself.

Associated Students of New Mexico State University President Wesley Jackson helped come up with a solution to give disabled students transportation to and from campus and from class to class. Scheduled to be implemented in the fall, Aggie Para-Transit could be extended into 2015 and beyond.

School creates Aggie Para-Transit

ASNMSU president hopes idea helps disabled students

By Tara Melton
Las Cruces Bulletin

If you've ever walked around New Mexico State University, you understand how big the campus can seem.

Now imagine being disabled and trying to navigate the same area.

Blind student Letticia Martinez knows the struggle all too well.

"I have to ask people for rides all the time, and since I live so far from school, I don't want to make people drive out this far, so my mom gives me rides," Martinez said.

Some days Martinez has no choice but to wait on campus for long periods of time, due to canceled classes or her mom's work schedule.

Associated Students of New Mexico State University President Wesley Jackson has come up with a solution scheduled to be implemented in the fall.

Called Aggie Para-Transit, the purpose of the pilot program is to provide transportation for students with disabilities to and from their homes as well as rides from class to class.

"We'll see students with walkers, and it takes them 20 to 25 minutes to get to class, and that's something that only takes us normally five minutes to do," Jackson said.

“We'll see students with walkers, and it takes them 20 to 25 minutes to get to class, and that's something that normally takes us five minutes to do.”

WESLEY JACKSON,
Associated Students of NMSU president

"That's something I really wanted to help those students (with)."

Jackson said if you have a temporary disability, the pilot program is also available for you.

"If you break your leg or tear your ACL or a MCL, or you break your foot or ankle or anything like that, you can utilize this service, as long as your injury (lasts) longer than six weeks," he said.

Martinez said she is excited about the Aggie Para-Transit system.

"It will be an awesome opportunity for me to use," she said.

Jackson and Gerald Nevarez, the executive director of the Office of Institutional Equity at NMSU, thought up the idea a year ago.

The two looked into ways to transport students with disabilities on campus, and thought of using golf carts.

Cost, staffing and liability issues led to the rejection of the idea.

The next plan was to use the Las Cruces Roadrunner Transit system in order to transport disabled students.

The year long effort concluded last week as ASNMSU signed an agreement, using money from the Aggie Transit Account, which is specifically designed for transit services.

"As a student government, we should want to help those who want our help the most, and this is what this program does the most," Jackson said.

He said he hopes the Aggie Para-Transit system puts disabled students at ease. The goal is to extend the program's contract into 2015.

If you are a student interested in the service, contact Dial-A-Ride at 541-2777 for more information on how to apply.

NMSU gains $335,000 for cancer research

Annual Cowboys for Cancer Research fundraisers lead to check presentation

By Justin Bannister
For The Las Cruces Bulletin

Cancer research at New Mexico State University is about to get an additional shot in the arm, thanks to the annual fundraising efforts by Cowboys for Cancer Research and NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink. This year, for the first time, a portion of the money raised will be made available immediately to fund new and ongoing research projects.

The two groups presented a check for $335,000 to New Mexico State University on Friday, May 16. Of the money donated, $210,000 will be contributed to the Cowboys for Cancer Research Endowed Fund at the NMSU Foundation. The additional $125,000 will be immediately available to fund cancer research projects at NMSU during the 2014-15 fiscal year.

"I continue to be impressed by the amount of cancer research projects conducted by our researchers here New Mexico State University," said NMSU President Garrey Carruthers.

"It's outstanding and these donations will help us take this important work even further."

work even further."

The combined 2013 efforts of Cowboys for Cancer Research and NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink generated $961,063 in cash and in-kind goods and services. During the ceremony, UNM also received donations for its cancer research endowment, as well as funds to be used immediately.

Traditionally, 100 percent of the money raised was placed into endowments at New Mexico State University and the University of New Mexico to fund cancer research projects.

"In 2013, Cowboys for Cancer Research and Tough Enough to Wear Pink generated a combined $671,644 cash and $289,419 in-kind goods and services," said Lynn Arnold, president of Cowboys for Cancer Research.

"This year, rather than depositing all of the cash into the endowments at NMSU and UNM, our board has voted to make $334,000 immediately available to researchers at both institutions."

"Tough Enough to Wear Pink has partnered with Cowboys for Cancer Research since 2007 and we are very proud of the work we've done together," said Pat Sisbarro, a cancer survivor and co-chair of the NMSU Aggies are Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign.

"The $1.5 million commitment that was made to the Cowboys for Cancer Research Endowed Fund at the NMSU Foundation is more than 75 percent complete, and researchers like NMSU's Dr. Jeff Arterburn now have access to cash for their projects. This is why we do what we do."

The funds donated to NMSU will support a wide range of cancer research, from basic laboratory science to clinical and translational studies. These projects are headed by both new and established researchers from across NMSU.

"This new funding will have huge positive impacts on the cancer research done at New Mexico State University," said Jeff Arterburn, a Regents Professor in NMSU's Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry.

"The origin of these funds from our local community provides a direct connection to the research, and places personal context to the impacts of cancer on our families and friends that is extremely motivational for the researchers.

This is a crucial time when advances in science and technology make it possible for new research breakthroughs but federal funding rates are at all time lows.

This new funding will stimulate important cancer research at NMSU and promises to lead to significant advances in understanding and ultimately improvements in the treatment of this devastating disease."

Yoga workshops offered in June, July

Las Cruces Fitness and Dance is offering a series of yoga workshops this summer. Next in the series is inversion yoga by Amber Costilow from noon to 2 p.m., Saturday June 14. The final workshop of the series will be held 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, July 20.

The workshops will offer practice inverting, or bringing the head below the level of the hips, which increases blood flow to the brain and improve immune function. These workshops are not recommended for those with uncontrolled blood pressure, glaucoma, epilepsy, heart conditions, neck injuries, recent strokes or detached retinas. Each workshop has a fee of $25. They will take place at 650 Montana, Suite H. For more information, contact Kristie Garcia at 496-1250 or Skristie@lascrucesfitnessanddance.com.

Cancer survivors celebration scheduled

The fourth annual Cancer Survivors Day Celebration will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 31, at Memorial Medical Center, 2450 S. Telshor Blvd, in the annex conference rooms.

Come celebrate survivorship with friends and family and enjoy a wee bit of Irish cheer. Attendees will enjoy stories, smiles, music, refreshment and happiness. For more information, call Kristina Benavidez at 521-1554 or Jacque Saldana at 556-5800.

Senior Olympics launches Walk4Fitness

The New Mexico Senior Olympics and Aging Matters are looking for seniors who enjoy walking in an organized group around their community during a six-week period. Walk4Fitness is a health promotion activity that engages seniors to walk three times a week for an hour. Seniors in the program are also encouraged to log their walking distances each week to show progress that comes from walking. For more information, call Katherine Kloos at 571-7873.

Market to start Lunchtime Yoga

Mountain View Market will host a program in June called Lunchtime Yoga. For beginners and experienced alike, there will be a tailored and exclusive 45 minute yoga class, followed by a lunch from the MVM Downtown Kitchen.

The cost is $12 cash or check for yoga and express lunch from Mountain View Market Kitchen, or $6 for those who wish to just participate in the yoga class.

No pre-registration necessary. Participants may just show up to Downtown Desert Yoga at 303 S. Alameda Blvd., fill out your lunch order, and your lunch will be ready for pickup at the Downtown Kitchen after your yoga class.

For information, call 647-9642 or visit downtowndesertyoga.com.

D.A.R.E. advisory board seeks representative

The New Mexico Drug Abuse Resistance and Education (D.A.R.E.) Officers' Association is accepting applications for a position on its Youth Advisory Board.

Applicants must be either freshmen or sophomores in high school at the time of selection and must be graduates of either an elementary or middle school D.A.R.E. program.

In addition, candidates must also have a history of demonstrated academic achievement, be articulate and comfortable with public speaking and cannot be related to any current D.A.R.E. officers.

The Youth Advisory representative will work with other board members on media relations and special committees, and will serve as a role model and public speaker at D.A.R.E. functions across New Mexico and at the national conference at the Quantico Marine Base in the Washington, D.C. area.

Application forms can be picked up at the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office, 845 N. Motel Blvd. In addition to the application, interested candidates must also write a one-page essay detailing their interests and qualifications for the position.

Applications and essays can be dropped off or mailed to Ret. Sgt. Ronnie Granados, Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office, 845 N. Motel Blvd. Las Cruces, NM 88007.

The deadline to apply is Saturday, May 31. For more information, contact 525-8847 or email ronnieg@donaanacounty.org.

Wildfire resources available

The New Mexico Department of Health advises residents to learn how to protect themselves and their families from smoke exposure this fire season. The Department of Health has prepared a website, <https://nmtracking.org/fire> with information to help you protect your health and plan your actions during emergencies.

"Wildfires can spread rapidly, and the smoke can quickly affect air quality," said Department of Health Secretary Retta Ward, MPH.

"It is important to understand the health hazards that can come from these fires."

As drought conditions continue in New Mexico, fires are likely to occur in the state this season.

Free DIY smoothie class scheduled

In this do-it-yourself class scheduled for noon to 1 p.m. on June 7, the staff at Mountain View Market Co-op will teach you how to go beyond your typical smoothie creation and incorporate vegetables ("green smoothies"), protein powders, and healthy additives (chia seeds, flax seeds, bee pollen, etc.). This class is free for members and $3 for non-members and will be held in the Co-op Community Room. Sign up in store, over the phone, or online. For more information call 523-0436.

Hydration Wellness class offered

The wellness department at Mountain View Market Co-op will lead a class detailing the ways you can stay cool and hydrated this summer. As the temperatures stay well into the 90s, it is very important to stay hydrated, and it's easier to do than you think. Classes are free for members and $3 for non-members, and will take place in the Co-op Community Room. Sign up in-store, over the phone or online. Don't forget about the corresponding cooking class the following Thursday. For more information, call 523-0436.

Exercise = Energy

Wellness program off to healthy start

By Becky Ellis

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

To promote health and wellness in our school community, Mesilla Park Elementary School has a program called Exercise = Energy to encourage our staff to exercise.

Regular exercise has been proven to have multiple health benefits, including reducing the risk of high blood pressure, diabetes and some cancers. It also improves mood, helps with problem solving and increases energy levels. School staff members spend so much time working for their students that they frequently neglect their own health.

We have had a successful semester of this program; nearly 20 staff members participated and completed hundreds of hours of exercise, including Zumba, biking, walking, running and volleyball. We have sticker charts on a bulletin board in the nurse's office for keeping track of the time we spend exercising and have had monthly incentive drawings. It has been motivating to watch the charts fill up.

We have had gracious support from community companies who have donated prizes for the monthly incentive drawings, including Allen Theaters, La Posta de Mesilla, Timeless Tranquility Spa, Guzman Sport Karate/Kickboxing, Starbucks and Barnes and Noble.

Having this incentive program has increased the participation in our Exercise = Energy program, creating healthier, happier staff members who teach and care for our students. Since we have had so much fun and success with it, we are planning to do a similar program next school year. For more information, call me at 527-9615 or send an email to rdonaldson@lcpes.k12.nm.us.

Pet Briefs

Pet of the Week

The Pet of the Week is Macey, a heeler/pitbull mix who has never met a person before that she didn't like.

She will shower you with love and kisses all day if you let her, and her most favorite thing to do is to go on walks. Don't let her size mislead you, because she definitely thinks she is a lap dog.

If you are interested in Macey or other animals available for adoption, call 382-0018.

MACEY

Daily cat adoptions are available at both PetCo, and Pet's Barn at 1600 S. Valley Dr.

For information, call the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley at 382-0018, or visit the website ascmv.org. People who are hearing-impaired can call 541-2182. Shelter hours are noon to 6 p.m. Monday to Friday, and noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

You can also visit the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley's Facebook page for information about the Pet of the Week and other services and news items. The facility is in need of donations of dog crates, towels, blankets and long-strand shredded paper.

Paws 'n' Claws Road Rally scheduled

Hop on the bike or rev up the car and join us for the first annual Paws 'n' Claws Road Rally June 7. Register from 9 to 10 a.m. Saturday, June 7, at The Body Works, 124 Westgate St. Cost is $10.

There are four stops scheduled before heading back to The Body Works for prizes, food, music and more. There will be an after party at 1 p.m. at The Body Works. Non-rally participants may attend for $20. For sponsorship information, to donate prizes or for more information, call 642-2648.

Shelter struggles to fill open spay/neuter appointments

Despite population numbers that continue to grow and an abundance of puppy and kitten litters at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley this spring, shelter director Beth Vesco-Mock says appointments for affordable spay and neuter procedures at the facility remain vacant.

Since Jan. 1, 2014, the shelter has taken in more than 1,000 puppies, just 20 less than the same time period in 2013.

"If you didn't know already, we're here to tell you now," Vesco-Mock said, "there is no reason for responsible pet owners to not get their animals spayed or neutered. We are here to help."

If you are a resident of Doña Ana County, the cost for spaying and neutering at the clinic is $35 for dogs and $25 for cats.

To make an appointment, call the shelter at 386-0018

'Get Pet-Riotic' adoption specials announced

ACTion Programs for Animals (APA) and its Doña Ana Pets Alive! (DAPA) campaign will celebrate Memorial Day and the opening of its first adoption facility at 800 W. Picacho Ave. with "Get Pet-Riotic Adoption Specials".

From Friday, May 23 to June 15, all adult animal adoptions are free, and kittens and puppies less than 6 months of age are $25. The animals come with all age-appropriate vaccinations, a microchip and are spayed or neutered.

The opening of APA's first adoption center comes at the two-year anniversary of its rescue program, which is made possible by generous volunteers who house and care for the animals in their homes as fosters until they are adopted, as well as generous donors, supporters of fundraisers held throughout the year and grants from national sources.

During this adoption promotion, dogs, cats and kittens can be adopted at the following locations/times:

- Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon at Calista

Animal Hospital, 1889 Calle de Niños

- Sundays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at PETCO, 3050 E. Lohman Ave.
- Saturday, May 24, and Saturday June 14, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Sam's Club, 2711 N. Telshor Blvd.
- Saturday, June 7, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at PetSmart, 2200 E. Lohman Ave.
- Cats and kittens are also always available at Better Life Pet Foods, 365 Avenida de Mesilla, as well as at Enchanted Gardens, 270 Avenida de Mesilla
- Tuesdays to Saturdays from noon to 5 p.m. at APA Furrever Home Adoption & Education Center, at 800 W. Picacho Ave.

For more information, contact APA at 644-0505 or 571-4654, or visit the organization online at actionprogramsforanimals.org or on Facebook at facebook.com/APALasCruces and facebook.com/DonaAnaPetsAlive

Purina Days Fundraiser to benefit shelter

Purina Days, a pet adoption fair and car wash, is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. from Friday, May 30, to Sunday June 1 at Tractor Supply, 1440 W. Picacho Ave.

The event is intended to boost adoptions and funding for the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley.

The event will feature off-site pet adoptions as well as a car wash and bake sale. All proceeds will benefit pet adoption efforts in Doña Ana County.

For more information, contact the shelter directly at 386-0018.
