'Hotel Hell' ain't a bad place to be Meson remake gets broadcast

By Brook Stockeberger Las Cruces Bulletin

Three words sum up a sudden thrust into the national spotlight for Las Cruces businesswoman Cali Szczawinski: "Oh my God."

Owner of the restaurant and hotel Meson de Mesilla at 1803 Avenida de Mesilla, Szczawinski went toe to toe with celebrity chef/TV personality Gordon Ramsay for an episode of his show "Hotel Hell." It aired nationwide Monday night, July 21.

The restaurateur hosted a viewing party at Meson de Mesilla, but did not watch the show herself.

Had she taken a peek, she would have seen during the course of the episode, Ramsay criticized the way Meson de Mesilla was operated. Everything from the check-in procedure and the décor to the menu and even Szczawinski's choice for entertainment – she sings! – came under criticism.

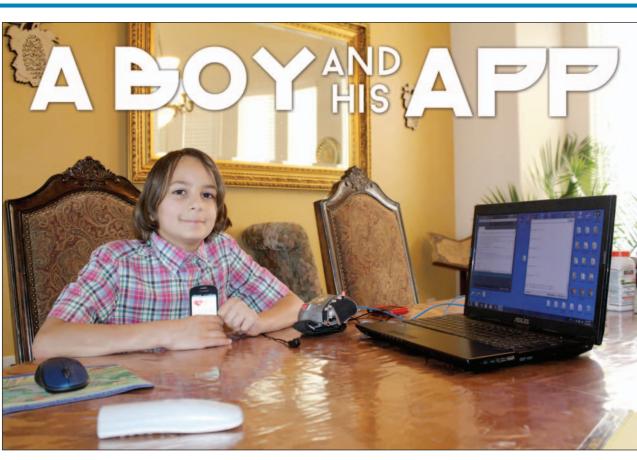

Ever since, she said the phones have been ringing off the hook and the callers on the other end of the line have strong opinions to share.

"Tm literally getting calls from people who've never been to New Mexico, who've never been to the hotel and never heard me sing," Szczawinski said. "People will call and ask about the rooms and the prices and then ask if I still sing."

Some callers have flat out said that if the owner sings, they won't come. "I can't believe it," Szczawinski said.

"I can't believe it," Szczawinski said. "I have a whole new respect for people who are really celebrities.

While most of Mustafa Muhyi's peers at Sierra Middle School spent their summer in the pool or at camp, he took a trip to Massachusetts Institute of Technology as one of the youngest participants in the school's App Inventor Summit, winning first place for his mobile application.

His award-winning app is a health app for children with a goal of combating childhood obesity by making it fun for kids to learn about target heart rate and exercising. Noticing that his peers like smart phones and spend a lot of time on them, Muhyi said he decided he would target them through an app.

"Students don't want to sit in a room and have a lecture, they want to have fun," he said.

Muhyi, an eighth-grader, said he started working on this technology in the fifth grade during a science fair. Muhyi learned See App on page A2

NMSU raises undergrad admisssion standards Hispanic groups object to change

Bulletin Staff Report

At a regular meeting held Wednesday, July 23, the New Mexico State University Board of Regents approved changes to undergraduate admissions requirements subject to the approval of an implementation plan, which will be presented to the board in December.

The new requirements will go into effect for fall 2016.

The approved requirements change the high school GPA needed for automatic admission to NMSU from 2.5 to 2.75. Students who do not have a high school GPA of 2.75 also will be automatically admitted if they have an ACT score of 21 or an SAT score of 990, or they are in the top 20 percent of their graduating class.

Other admission requirements would include four years of English, including two years of intensive writing, and four years of math through Algebra II or higher.

Students who are not offered immediate admission to NMSU may still achieve a four-year degree See NMSU on page A13 about MIT's App Inventor Summit through his mom, Rajaa Shindi, a computer science professor at New Mexico State University and Doña Ana Community College.

"I was very interested in the heart because I've always wanted to be a heart surgeon and I've been studying and researching about the heart and how to incorporate it into something students use a lot, such as phones and apps on phones," Muhyi said.

After he was shown the components he'd need to create his app, Muhyi invented an app and incorporated a heart rate sensor that attaches to the ear and an arm band with light emitting diode (LED) lights that blink in a color code to monitor heart rate. Through the sensor, the app calculates the target heart rate for any age and shows it on the user's phone screen.

"I've done two exercises in the project, which are biking and hula hoop," he said. "Hula hoop, I chose it because it's a very hard exercise to do and learn."

Another part of the app is to teach kids to eat healthier. Muhyi said elementary students can participate in this portion, in which the user selects pictures of healthy or unhealthy food options and the corresponding lights blink.

Mustafa Muhyi works on coding for his mobile health application. After winning first place at MIT, Muhyi is considering continuing work on this project or start another project on elementary and middle school cafeteria food.

when speaking about his experience at MIT July 17-18. Muhyi said he prepared a one-minute presentation to convince people to vote for him. While he was told he had received a "decent amount of votes," Muhyi said he didn't expect much.

When third place went to a college student from MIT, Muhyi said he was nervous.

"I was like, 'Oh, I wouldn't get anything because I can't compete with a college student from MIT who did an app and studied about it every day," he said.

Muhyi said second place went to a team of middle schoolers and he was interested in asking them how they created their app.

Then Muhyi was announced as the first-place winner with one-third of the votes.

"She (Ilaria Liccardi) said my name and I was so, so happy," he said. Muhyi said he would like to thank Dr. Wendi Miller-Tomlinson, thank Di. wendi Minei-Tommison director of Secondary Instruction, and Las Cruces Public Schools staff for sponsoring his trip to MIT.

Muhyi is contemplating continuing to work on his health app or starting a new project that would include a WiFi database to educate Las Cruces elementary- and middleschool students on the food served in the cafeteria.

In the future, Muhyi hopes for a scholarship to be able to attend a technology university.

Muhyi stands in front of MIT, where he demoed his app Thursday and Friday, July 17-18.

"I am planning to move on in the tech field and, if not that, I would like to be a surgeon," he said.

Muhyi will showcase his app to the Las Cruces public at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, July 31, at the Arrowhead Technology Incubator, 3655 Research Drive, Genesis Center Building C. There is not a fee to attend this event, but registration is required by emailing ati@nmsu.edu.

"There's a segment of the population that lives for their tweeting and Facebooking and people are being attacked personally that way.

There has been support. "I'm also getting positive calls, don't get me wrong," Szczawinski said.

The show has already brought people through the door

"Business was double than what it normally is on a Tuesday," she said. "There were people driving through town and a friend told them we had been on TV. They had dinner and had a great time. And then they left and kept going down the freeway."

Szczawinski has owned and operated Meson de Mesilla since 2006 and said she hopes all the attention pays off.

"P.T. Barnum said, 'There's no such thing as bad publicity,' she said.

"For me, it's all about the end result. If the show causes somebody to come in for first time and try our food, and see how good it is and we build return customers because of that, that's great."

Brook Stockberger may be reached at 680-1977.

Las Cruces locals gather at Meson de Mesilla for the viewing party Tuesday, July 22, of "Hotel Hell," which features the historical hotel.

To display the frustration of shooting the Meson de Mesilla "Hotel Hell" episode, cocktail glasses show a crossed-out Gordon Ramsay decal.

Married bartenders, Rudy and Sarah Lopez, hold a special cocktail made for the premier called the Effen Ramsay.

While viewing "Hotel Hell," Joanne Russell wears a face of anguish during a Gordon Ramsay verbal lashing to Meson de Mesilla owner Cali Szczawinski.

After leaving the room during the airing of "Hotel Hell," Szczawinski explains to Savoy and Aqua Reef owner Tatsu Miyazaki, with wife Estella, that she didn't care to relive the "hell" over again.

Life is Good in Las Cruces Unless you happen to be a peacock

Last week in this column I talked about our new community guide, Life is Good in Las Cruces, and presented some trivia questions. The answers to all of those questions and many more are found in this year's guide, and also right here.

1. False. The population of Las Cruces is not less than 100,000. We crossed over in 2013, and the current number is 101,324.

2. Las Cruces' Downtown Main Street was closed to through traffic for 43 years, from 1968 until it was re-opened in 2011.

3. False. The man who killed Sheriff Pat Garrett was not convicted and hanged. Wayne Brazel, the man charged with Garrett's 1908 murder, was acquitted. He claimed self-defense.

4. It is illegal to own a peacock in the city limits. In the question, I asked which was illegal to own: A rabbit, a boa constrictor or a peacock. You can have up to two rabbits. If you have a boa constrictor (or any amphibians, reptiles, caged birds, aquarium fish, caged rodents or caged ferrets), it must be "maintained within the confines of a dwelling unit ... " You cannot keep a venomous snake without proper federal, state and city permits. If a rattlesnake enters your backyard uninvited, I suggest you call animal control. 5. More than 5,500 people each year visit the Holy Cross Retreat Center in Mesilla Park. It's a beautiful setting and a wonderful new chapel is under construction. It's also the site of the annual Franciscan Fine Arts Festival, which this year will be Aug. 30 and 31.

6. Our Lady of Guadalupe Shrine and Parish in the Village of Tortugas celebrates its 100th anniversary this year. This Sunday, July 27, you can participate in the 10:30 a.m. celebration Mass, followed by traditional dancing circles in front of the church at about 11:30 a.m.

7. The Silver City Blues Festival was born in the Buffalo Bar in downtown Silver City 19 years ago. What is something about Silver City doing in a Las Cruces community guide? In each of the guide's sections, we feature a Road Trip, to give Las Crucens ideas on things to do for day trips or weekend getaways in the region.

8. The Las Cruces backlot facility, an outdoor, multipurpose film set, could further enable growth of the film industry in our area. Construction at Corralitos Ranch is set to begin this fall. Several films have already shot scenes in that area, including "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull."

9. The oldest continuously running movie house in New Mexico is the Fountain Theatre on the Mesilla Plaza, built in 1905.

10. The newly restored gazebo, or "kiosko," in the center of the Mesilla Plaza, features art with the Mexican and American flags and the number 54, commemorating the 1854 finalization of the Gadsden Purchase.

11. Roy Moore was the World War II veteran who helped found the Las Cruces Home Builders Association in 1959.

12. Sam Graft, who passed away in April, was the Las Cruces Parks and Recreation director who was responsible for the rolling hills of Young Park and many other amenities that make our parks unique.

13. The UCLA Bruins knocked the New Mexico State University Aggies out of the NCAA basketball tournament in 1968, 1969, 1970 and 1992.

14. Softball coach Kathy Rodolph earned her 300th Aggie victory (and her 500th overall) in 2014.

15. We're growing shrimp here in the Chihuahuan Desert, thanks to research at NMSU.

16. Optometrist Dr. Juan Lucero co-founded Juárez Orphans, which helps children on both sides of the border, particularly the more than 24,000 children in Juárez orphaned by violence between 2008 and 2012.

17. The Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce will soon occupy a beautifully restored Nestor Armijo House in the heart of the city.

Alternative energy myth

One year when I was a young boy, I received a heath kit electronic board for my birthday. It would make about 25 different things, depending on the schematic used.

I found the small solar cell totally fascinating. You could shine a full-size flashlight on this thing and actually make a small light bulb light up, and that is the crux of the problem. You had to put more into it than you got out of it. Even as a 10-year-old I could see this was a bad deal.

we are still in the same situation - too much for too little. The last numbers to conventionally produced electricity. The only reason there is a solar industry at all is because of huge tax incentives and artificially high costs on oil and gas due to this adminis-

As stated, I was in awe of this thing, but just because something is appealing, it doesn't mean it's necessarily workable. I, too, would like to see solar a reality someday, but until it, as well as wind and all the other green energy ideas, can stand on their own in the free marketplace without government help, they are all doomed to failure.

The alternative energy field today is still in the infancy stage, and unfortunately its Henry Ford has yet to arrive. Right now we need to get our economy out of this ditch it has been in for the last eight years, and that will take oil and gas. After the country starts making a profit again, we will have the money for the research and development to produce the breakthroughs needed for these other ideas to become a reality. So, I suggest we quit fantasizing about turning unicorn poop into energy and get back to reality.

Opinions/News | A5 My story of being innocent while presumed guilty Don't rush to judgment based on run-ins with police

Michael Swickard

In My Opinion

Several weeks ago I protested the way the media fosters the presumption of guilt for people arrested. There was lots of pushback from people who know that whomever the police arrest are guilty regardless of our constitution. I did not explain that this is personal. I have not been arrested but there was once that I came close.

At the time I was teaching at Albuquerque High School and it was Christmas. One evening I went to the recreation room at my apartment complex and played Christmas songs for two hours. In the audience was a Bernalillo County deputy sheriff, who was black. That had nothing to do with singing but later was important.

This deputy sheriff was more than an acquaintance but less than a friend. The security guard that night looked in on us singing Christmas songs and then continued his rounds.

About 9 p.m. we broke up. As I was walking out of the recreation room a woman asked for a dime for the pay phone. I handed her the dime. She looked disheveled as if things were not right. I went to my apartment, put my guitar away and grabbed my writing pad. At that time in my life I usually walked a mile to a Vip's Big Boy Restaurant for coffee and writing. It was my preferred place to write.

About half of the way there, on a ditch bank shortcut I was contentedly walking when two Albuquerque Police Department motorcycles came roaring up to me. I stood transfixed as they ran up to me and pointed their weapons at me. My quiet walk turned chaotic.

They radioed, "We have him." That did not sound good. I produced my driver's license. They had not handcuffed me but I could tell that was next. I asked, "What is this all about?"

One officer said, "An hour ago you raped a woman." "Did not!" I said forcefully. "I was playing music the last two hours at my apartment recreation room. Do either of you know Gene, the black deputy sheriff? He was there and will vouch for me."

One of them did know Gene so it stalled them a bit. They were going to handcuff me and have a patrol car take me downtown. But I caused enough doubt. They radioed for a description again as we walked back to the apartments.

Pearce calls for monument changes Legislation ensures law enforcement access to lands

U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce has introduced the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument Corrections Act in response to President Barack Obama's "rushed decision to unilaterally declare the monument while ignoring input from local officials on public safety and other major issues such as environmental and economic impacts," according to a press release.

Pearce said the bill guarantees all federal, state and local law enforcement personnel, including Border Patrol, will have unfettered access to the national monument.

Pearce and House Public Lands and Environmental Regulation Subcommittee Chairman Rob Bishop issued the following statement after the bill's introduction:

This effort is a simple, targeted solution to secure our southern border and protect local communities, something that was overlooked by the President in his unilateral monument declaration," Pearce said. "Restrictive land management policies can have a negative impact on border security. In Arizona's Chiricahua National Monument, a Park Service employee was brutally assaulted and left for dead last year. The Organ Pipe National Monument in Arizona has long been threatened by drug and human smugglers, as the Park Service readily admits. My goal is to prevent the same scenario from unfolding in Doña Ana County."

Bishop said Democrat Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich recognized the need for Border Patrol, but President Obama disregarded these concerns when he maded the new national monument by executive order.

"Drug smugglers are already trespassing into the United States by way of our federal lands and the president just did them a huge favor by creating new areas that limit the Border Patrol's ability to maintain a routine presence," Bishop said. "This legislation to fix this is imperative?"

Welcome to Holiday. Welcome home.

The radio broadcast, "Six foot, 25 years old, white, close cut hair and he has braces on his teeth."

Yep, that was me. They were just about to wait for the patrol car when the security guard walked out to meet us. He immediately said, "You've got the wrong guy. He was playing Christmas songs the last two hours. A deputy sheriff was in the audience."

One policeman asked the dispatcher to contact the hospital and check the description. In a short while it came back: "Five seven Hispanic dark hair and eyes."

Then I remembered giving the woman the dime. This poor woman had been assaulted and when asked for a description gave mine since I was the last person in her mind. At that point Gene, the Deputy Sheriff, came out and confirmed my story. So the policemen apologized and left.

Consider if I had not been playing guitar for 30 people and as was my habit I decided to walk to the restaurant. Leaving the apartment complex a woman asks for a dime. I would have been arrested for rape.

While I probably would have been cleared at some point, I would have been immediately fired from my job at the high school. It would have been blazed on the front page headline, 'Teacher Arrested For Rape." People would be quoted as saying, "It just goes to show you never know what evil lurks in someone's heart."

At some point I would be cleared of the rape but presumed guilty by most people regardless. I have never told that story before, but for the grace of God I would have had my life ruined.

Let us be careful to give the presumption of innocence in our media for those arrested. Americans are to be presumed innocent until convicted in a court of law.

Guest column Local district court works to improve processing

Judicial duties are realigned By Fernando Macias

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

As we enter into the new fiscal year, the Third Judicial District Court is six months into a bold and innovative realignment of judicial caseload responsibilities to better serve the general public and the legal community by reducing the time needed to resolve cases

When fully implemented, the reorganization should improve outcomes for families and children while creating a more efficient and effective distribution of cases among judges. It also is designed to eliminate the frequent changing of judges in the Domestic Matters Division and improve overall efficiencies for the court's employees. To accomplish these goals, the reorganization is structured in four broad areas, as follows:

Criminal cases

APRENDAMOS

Alegría

While the majority of judges will assist with criminal arraign-ments – which are generally brief proceedings – the number of judges to which new and reopened criminal cases are assigned has been reduced from four to two. Judge Marci Beyer and I will hear all newly assigned criminal cases. Judge Darren Kugler and Judge Douglas Driggers will keep all criminal cases previously assigned to them until those cases are closed. Additionally, Judge Beyer will handle juvenile delinquency cases, and I will continue with civil abuse and neglect cases. The new arrangement makes it easier for prosecutors and defense attorneys to do their jobs by assigning one team to each criminal court. We are putting renewed emphasis on addressing aged cases and defendants who have been in custody for extended periods of time. We are able to make these changes because of renewed and improved efforts by both the Third Judicial District Attorney's Office and the Office of the Public Defender to resolve cases prior to trial.

Civil and domestic matters

Cases will be assigned evenly to the dockets of Judge Manuel Arrieta, Judge Douglas Driggers, Judge Darren Kugler, Judge Jim Martin and Judge Mary Rosner. This realignment allows the Court to maximize the experience of each judge while reducing the overall number of cases assigned to each, thereby allowing for more timely hearings and court decisions. I anticipate that each judge will see an overall decrease in caseload in 2014 compared to 2013, and the caseload will be evenly distributed with each of them handling 20 percent of the new cases assigned. The realignment maintains experience and stability in the area of civil and domestic caseloads, with a fresh approach to both areas.

Child support enforcement

Judge Lisa Schultz will hear all cases related to this critical public need. The assignment of one judge will streamline these cases so that those who fail to meet their obligations to their children are held accountable quickly for any lapses in courtordered child support. We anticipate that this change will make it more efficient for the Child Support Enforcement Division to track cases and interact with the court and its clients.

Legal help office

The Third Judicial District Court processes a large quantity of non-criminal cases each year in which people with no legal background attempt to represent themselves. Under oversight by a staff attorney, the Legal Help Office offers procedural assistance to these people. The office is not an advocate for any party and staff do not give legal advice, but they help provide and explain the proper forms, processes and timetables generally associated with court proceedings of the type being discussed. The improved level of coordination between the court's Law Office and the Legal Help Office will help better enhance resolution of cases before a trial is necessary.

Outreach

The eight Third Judicial District Court judges are available to speak to civic groups, classrooms and community gatherings. They are able to explain the role of the courts, as well as to explain complex legal issues affecting our community. These speaking engagements are free of charge. To arrange to have a District Judge speak to your classroom, civic or community group, call Jana Padilla at 523-8201 or email lcrdjap@nmcourts.gov.

The Third Judicial District Court is one of the busiest and largest districts in the state. We have realigned the court's budget to pursue opportunities to gain greater support for programs that help people and enhance efficiencies. Collectively, with judges and attorneys working closely together alongside court staff, we have begun to improve outcomes and expediency across a wide range of case types while eliminating many duplications of effort that have bottlenecked the system in the past.

To these ends, we will partner closely with the Third Judicial District Attorney's Office, the state's Public Defender Office, the Child Support Enforcement Division, the Adult and Juvenile Probation Offices, the Doña Ana County Detention Center and area law-enforcement agencies, as well as with private attorneys, the media and the general public.

The work and programs of the court are important components of the justice system in Doña Ana County and the State of New Mexico. We're excited about the work ahead to advance justice through efficiency, transparency and innovation.

Fernando R. Macias is the Chief District Judge of the Third Judicial District Court.

By John Stevens

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

I'd like to give you a brief history of the Country Club property.

When the Las Cruces Country Club (LCCC) first got into serious financial trouble (they were always losing money) four out of five Country Club members who owned and lived in properties on Camino Del Rex, which abutted the golf course, submitted a petition to the LCCC board which asked that they not go forward with the "land swap" deal, and proposed ways to solve the debt problem and keep it as a golf course. The board didn't do us the courtesy of replying to our petition, and as you know, the "swap" was passed by a huge majority.

After Connie Potter and I started the Country Club Neighborhood Association, I realized that we also needed an organization that would be citywide in scope, as the change in ownership of LCCC would affect the whole city. People For A Premier Park was formed, and gathered and submitted a petition signed by 2,159 people to the City of Las Cruces at a City Council meeting. The city didn't act on the petition and it was later "shredded."

We worked very closely with Mr. (Philip) Philippou, and he offered to sell all, or any part of the property to the city. City officials declined. Mr. Philippou agreed with us to form a nine-hole executive length golf course on the north end, using holes which already existed, which would be donated to the city. The middle part of the property, about 30 acres, would be sold to the city for about $2 million. This could be added to Apodaca Park. The remaining acres would be developed by Mr. Philippou. Would this have happened on a handshake? Your guess is as good as mine, but I do know that after the meltdown of the financial and real estate markets in 2008, he came to my house in a wheel chair and apologized to me saying "John, I let you down." He didn't have to do that.

Dealing with Mr. (John) Moscato was also interesting. He offered a deal to the city, which I didn't support, but now wish I had. He called it his "Amoeba Plan." It was two flexible pieces of property in the middle of the 110 acres (approximately 55 acres) that would be surrounded by "green space" around the whole perimeter, and down the middle between the "amoebas." The "amoebas" would be developed, but the open space-green space would be donated to the city. His second proposal was to sell the entire 110 acres to the city with his company financing the sale. The city declined both offers. I'd like to mention here Nathan Small) that we helped elect, all signed statements that they would be leaders in making the LCCC into a premier park.

When the third developer (Bob Pofahl) came along, we saw our worst fears were being realized. Both of the first two developers realized that there had to be a lot of open space-green space involved in the development. This developer can't be dealt with, and insists on filling in everything, and will not consider the rights of the people who live in the residential areas of Camino Del Rex and Desert Drive, who will now be looking at twostory townhouses and commercial properties instead of open space.

For those of you who think that developing the property will "broaden the tax base" and lower our taxes, I'm telling you that it never works out that way. Look it up - the bigger the city, the higher the taxes.

A large park in the middle of Las Cruces would be a huge asset, and would bring in lots of tourists who spend money, which is then taxed as "gross receipts tax", otherwise called a sales tax.

People in Albuquerque in their parks department and the director of golf say that they would "kill" for an opportunity like this, and if our mayor and City Council were thinking, they would look into this possibility.

John Stevens is past president of the Country Club Neighborhood Association.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE Stupid is as stupid does

keep moving along.

BaxterBlack

In the movie "Forrest Gump," the hero is a nice man with a low IQ, whose simplistic reasoning usually made sense. His response to anyone who called him stupid was to say, "Stupid is as stupid does." My interpretation of that phrase is, "You don't have to be stupid to be stupid." One can have a high IQ and still be stupid. Which leads me into my observa-tion that we in America have the "luxury to be stupid." And we seem to take advantage of that freedom on a regular basis regarding the Endangered Species Act (ESA), for instance. Another idealistic dream gone septic. Remember the Snail Darter? Extremists have used and continue to use the goofiest reasoning to achieve their goals which usually means, if something is productive and people make money from it, it must be evil. And the most unbeliev-able thing is that the appointed government regulators cower to the lunatics.

When the ESA was conceived, it was a well-intended way to preserve certain species of animals and plants. But it has been subverted into a blind, clumsy, slobbering dinosaur controlled by extremist's intent on driving Americans from public and private land. It is done in the guise of "protecting" a species. These enviro-terrorists have thrown up a wall of legal riprap that blocks any consideration of economic impact or common sense in the discussion. The famous spotted owl fiasco put 90 percent of Oregon's federal forests off limits to logging. Northern California became Appalachia. They have never recovered. Twenty-five years since the owl's devastation began, the population of the spotted own has continued to decline and not a single enviro-looney has said they were wrong. They take no responsibility for the atrocity "Spotted Owl" has wrought. And the Dodo birds just keep moving along.

The Klamath water project in Oregon began in the 1930s. The rivers and lakes became a symbol of American ingenuity and progress In the '70s the Indians and enviros wanted the Ag community shut down. The Indian tribe's mechanism was the Coho Salmon. The enviros and their lawyers found two species of suckerfish. To prove the sucker was endangered and different from the millions of other suckers around the country, they found a minute DNA difference, making it specific to the manmade Klamath ditch in Dodo birds just which they hatched. Dur-ing the drought of 2001 the deferral court judge cut off water to 1,400 farms and 90 percent of the valley's farmland, devastating the whole Klamath eco system.

His explanation: "The need to protect imperiled fish outweighed the economic needs of farmers.

You don't have to be stupid to be stupid. In the Sacramento Bay Delta Plan, envirofites have chosen the Delta Smelt as its next weapon to take out land out of production and turn it back into wetland. They think nothing of the destruction of a good chunk of California's farming bounty.

Greater Prairie Chickens, the Silvery Minnow, Casey's June Bug and the Hay Springs Amphipod are one in thousands of potential symbols for the cause. They'll never run out. ESA leaves no room for reasonable compromise. They use their ability to destroy and trample on their victims. They, like the EPA, are dictators and legal thugs. This disregard for the people's rights demands a slap upside the head. Panda.org estimates up to 10,000 species go extinct every year. Name one.

Saving the species can't be all or none. Common sense and economic impact have to be factors. We do have the luxury to be selective ... but not to be stupid. Just ask Forrest Gump.

Park Ridge plan approved Country club development to move ahead

Bulletin Staff Report

The plan for Park Ridge urban village won final approval of the Las Cruces Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday, July 22, setting the stage for completion of the sale of the Las Cruces Country Club developers.

City planner Susana Montana said cost estimates for infrastructure improvements must be OK'd and the final guarantees submitted. When that happens, she said, the final plat can be recorded and the country club can sell the property.

The $7.1 million deal has been in the works for two years.

Construction could begin in 2014. In the first phase, Park Ridge Medical Center will be built on a 30-acre portion of the 110-acre country club property. City council previously approved rezoning for the medical center site, contingent on the resolution of traffic issues.

The medical center will consist of a hospital, residential rehabilitation and longterm care facilities and medical offices.

Park Ridge Properties LLC intends to develop the remainder of the property at 2700 N. Main St. as multi-family residences, shops and restaurants and offices.

Based on a study by Zia Engineering, the developer committed more than $940,000 to address concerns with intersections in the area, including North Main Street and Camino Real, as well the proposed closure of Camino del Rex.

At Camino del Rex, near existing townhomes, the intersection will be closed to traffic and a gate installed to allow emergency vehicle access. Traffic originating on Camino del Rex will be diverted into the medical center. In addition, the developer will replace the townhomes' septic systems with city sewers at a cost of $140,000. The intersection of North Main Street and Camino del Rex will be widened and the median modified, turning lanes created and traffic signals installed.

A sum of $21,000 will be set aside for trafficcalming measures in the adjacent residential neighborhood.

Some residents told the commission they still have concerns about the impact of the urban infill project on traffic and noise. Others said the property has become an eyesore and must be developed.

"It can't stay the way it is," said Robert Caldwell, president of the Las Country Club board. "It has to be developed. We think Park Ridge is moving in the right direction. The community will benefit, and it will benefit again when we purchase a new facility."

Connie Potter of the Las Cruces Neighborhood Association said her concerns include the volume and routing of traffic. She said the project would increase traffic on neighborhood streets 22 percent.

Edward Martinez of Zia Engineering, which conducted the traffic impact analysis, said the study shows neighborhood roadways are "not anywhere near capacity and speed is not an issue."

"Sixty-six percent of drivers are going bewy the 25 mph speed limit." he said low the 25 mph speed limit," he said. The commission voted 4-0 to approve the final plat. Joanne Ferrary recused herself and Charles Beard did not attend.

Triops occupy a petri dish for New Mexico State University student Rebekah Horn to collect data. Researcher have found evidence of the shrimp species going back more than 250 million years relatively unchanged.

Secrets in the soil uncovered

NMSU researchers add water to find shrimp "You look at the soil and you don't see any-Texas A&M University. A pilot grant from thing, but you put it in water and it comes to life," said David Cowley, associate professor in the Department of Fish, Wildlife and Conservation Ecology at New Mexico State University.

Researching a unique crustacean with a fossil record dating to more than 250 million years ago, the tadpole shrimp, Cowley and doctoral student Rebekah Horn are uncovering new discoveries about the genetic composition and how these invertebrates reproduce.

"The goal is to learn about the ecology and how many species there are in the area," Cowley said. "For evolutionary biologists it's a real oddity. How does a species persist so long in time and not change substantially? It's gone through major climate change, glaciation, etcetera, but the species persists."

The tadpole shrimp colonizes freshwater temporary ponds, such as dry lakes and vernal pools, throughout the Southwest. Females lay eggs that can survive in the sand or dried mud, dormant for several years. When placed in water the eggs hatch over a period of time and the cycle begins again.

"Each pond or playa we have in the desert represents a different population. It's interesting to me that we have all these ponds relatively close together, yet they're all so different genetically – however the species themselves look similar," Horn said.

Funding for the project came from the Rio Grande Basin Initiative in conjunction with Texas A&M University. A pilot grant from the National Center for Genome Resources in Santa Fe was awarded to Cowley and Horn for their specific work in genome sequencing.

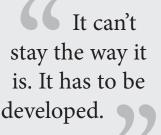

"For the last 20 years people who did research on triops (one genus of tadpole shrimp) agree that there seems to be three reproductive systems," Cowley said. "One is purely female, one with 30 percent 'males' – but we've never proven that they're really males – and one has about 50 percent of both."

Looking at the pouch of embryos located on the extension on the 11th leg of the mother, Horn observes and compares the genetic profile to each of her offspring and samples them using mitochondrial and nuclear DNA. Determining the sequence of the mitochondrial genome, which is 15,000 letters long, will aid in her analysis. This method helps Horn in determining the reproductive system being used by the tadpole shrimp.

Part of Horn's thesis was recently accepted by the peer-reviewed scientific journal PLOS One, of the Public Library of Science.

The information on the reproduction of the Triops will be vital to the ecologists involved with crustaceans and evolutionary ecologists, as there is no existing data on how this species reproduces.

With continued research, Cowley and Horn intend to discern if water chemistry contributes to gene expression among the Triops species.

Students learn architecture at summer discovery camp Visit to LCHS construction site provided

Local sudents completed a two-week Architecture Discovery Camp (ADC) at Doña Ana Community College (DACC) Friday, July 18, that gave the young people a taste of realworld architectural design.

Highlights of the program included two field trips, visits to local sites of architectural interest and an overnight trip to Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Bandelier National Monument, visiting the School of Architecture at the University of New Mexico, architectural firms, museums and plazas.

The second week primarily consisted of applying their lessons to a design competition with formal presentations, judging and prizes.

Instruction is a joint effort provided by DACC professors, Texas Tech University professors, local architects and local government and business leaders. Through lectures and hands-on exercises, students learn about architecture past and present, and gain skills in architectural drawing, computer and manual drafting, model crafting, 3-D modeling, design principles, structural principles, sustainable design and presentation techniques.

On Wednesday, July 9, the Wooten-Sundt construction joint-venture at Las Cruces High School hosted ADC students, accompanied by DACC professor Luis Rios.

About 20 students, garbed in safety vests, hard hats and eye protection, followed Project Superintendent Brian Higgins of Sundt Construction through a site walk at LCHS. Higgins and Project Architect Myles Kraenzel of Alley & Associates explained the architectural and logistical aspects of the project.

The current work represents phase I of the LCHS additions and remodeling project, which will include four new buildings and a significant increase in parking lot capacity. The new buildings will include classrooms, science labs, an auditorium and counseling and administrative facilities, in addition to Las Cruces' first "sky bridge."

Friday, July 25, 2014 Las Cruces Bulletin A11 | News White Sands report: $24.5 million spent by tourists According to the 2013 economic analysis, most visitor spend-National monument saw 490,000 visitors in 2013

A new National Park Service (NPS) report shows that 490,000 visitors in 2013 to White Sands National Monument spent $24.5 million in surrounding communities and supported 307 jobs in the local area.

"White Sands is proud to welcome visitors from across the country and around the world," said Superintendent Marie Frías Sauter. "We are delighted to share the story of this special place and the experiences it provides and to use the park as a way to introduce our visitors to this part of the country and all that it offers. National park tourism is a significant driver in the national economy - returning $10 for every $1 invested in the National Park Service - and it's a big factor in our local economy as well.

White Sands is a destination park. The monument brings visitors from around the world who not only enjoy the monument but the many offerings found in the Tularosa Basin, Rio Grande Valley, and the Sacramento Mountains. We are proud to be surrounded by such engaging and friendly communities that provide important amenities for our visitors.

A national park service ranger talks to visitors during a tour.

We appreciate the partnership and support of our neighbors and are glad to be able to give back by helping to sustain our local communities, which include Alamogordo and Las Cruces, New Mexico, and El Paso, Texas?

The peer-reviewed visitor spending analysis was conducted by U.S. Geological Survey economists Catherine Cul-linane Thomas and Christopher Huber and Lynne Koontz for the National Park Service. The report shows $14.6 billion of direct spending by 273.6 million park visitors in communities within 60 miles of a national park. This spending supported more than 237,000 jobs nationally, with more than 197,000 jobs found in these gateway communities, and had a cumulative benefit to the U.S. economy of $26.5 billion.

ing was for lodging (30.3 percent) followed by food and beverages (27.3 percent), gas and oil (12.1 percent), admissions and fees (10.3 percent) and souvenirs and other expenses (10 percent).

The largest jobs categories supported by visitor spending were restaurants and bars (50,000 jobs) and lodging (38,000 jobs).

Head Start grants awarded to NMSU

The New Mexico State University Doña Ana County Head Start has been awarded a Head Start and Early Head Start grant.

In January 2013, the program, which is in the NMSU College of Education, was placed on the Office of Head Start Designation Renewal System list. The process required the program to undergo a competitive grant process, which resulted in NMSU's selection as the best organization to continue to operate Head Start and Early Head Start grants in the community.

NMSU has operated its Head Start program for 30 years. Currently, the program is funded to serve 245 children ages 3 to 5 in eight classrooms throughout the county.

"Head Start and Early Head Start programs support the mental, social and emotional development of children from birth to age 5," said Amanda Gibson-Smith, program director.

Parents interested in applying for the NMSU Doña Ana County Head Start program can visit www.nmsu.edu/headstart or call 647-8733 for more information.

from NMSU through the university's Guaranteed Pathway.

The Guaranteed Pathway was designed to enhance the success of students who did not achieve a 2.5 GPA in high school by placing them in one of NMSU's community colleges. There, students will have smaller classes in a less competitive environment, and will be part of a cohort taking the same classes. Students in the Guaranteed Pathway will be eligible to transfer to the Las Cruces campus of NMSU if they maintain a 2.5 GPA while earning at least 24 credit hours. After earning 36 credit hours, they can transfer to the main campus with a 2.0 GPA.

Executive Vice President and Provost Dan Howard, who presented the proposal to the regents, said the motivation for the change in policy is the knowledge that five out of six of the students with a GPA below 2.75 do not complete an NMSU degree in six years. Students with low GPAs enter NMSU, incur debt, and a high percentage of them are not awarded a bachelor's degree.

In anticipation of the NMSU action – as well as the University of New Mexico making a similar increase in admission standards – the Hispano Round Table of New Mexico and the New Mexico League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) held a press conference Friday, July 18, in Albuquerque to voice their objections.

Ralph Arellanes, round table president and state LULAC officer, said the organizations are "outraged" and "vehemently against" the two higher education institutions raising their enrollment standards. He called for Gov. Susana Martinez to intervene.

Hispanic students and minority students will be disproportionately affected by the policy change, Arellanes said.

"New Mexico is the poorest state in the country," he said in an announcement for the press conference. "We have the weakest economy in the country. New Mexico came out dead last as far as quality of life for children. Our public schools systems are polarized against the Martinez administration. The median income for a full-time Hispanic worker in New Mexico is approximately $16,000 per year and our entire economic, social and educational systems are far from being fair or even. And our New Mexico colleges and universities have that gall to propose raising enrollment standards?"

Other news from the meeting

In other business, regents approved the non-instruction and general legislative requests for fiscal year 2016, including requests for research and public services, agriculture and athletics. Regents also heard updates about NMSU's community college campuses, including enrollment.

Doña Ana Community College President Renay Scott shared with the board that the Higher Learning Commission visited the campus in April and expects a report in August. She said DACC has sent a request to the Accreditation Commission for Education in Nursing for a site visit in 2015. The campus has worked to address previous challenges and is looking forward to the site visit, Scott said.

Scott also highlighted retention and student success programs as well as the many certificate programs DACC offers.

NMSU Alamogordo President Cheri Jimeno shared campus highlights on infrastructure and reported on the successful submission of a progress report on student assessment to the Higher Learning Commission and the achievement of a Quality Matters National Award.

The campus also has approved four associate degrees and one certificate and hired a vice president of academic affairs. The campus is hosting the 2014 Community College Round Up.

NMSU Carlsbad President John Gratton said Carlsbad is the fastest-growing community in New Mexico, which is impacting their campus. They have added additional online courses, shown growth in dual-credit offerings and have new programs offerings in health information technology and industrial maintenance technology. The campus has also launched an early college high school to begin fall 2014 and received a full eight-year accreditation following a review visit from the Higher Learning Commission in October 2013.

NMSU Grants President Felicia Casados shared highlights of campus renovation projects and information about the student body. The campus has a high enrollment of American Indian students and serves two primary pueblos and parts of the Navajo Nation.

Casados said certificate programs are very important on the campus. She also shared information about the growth in dualenrollment students and said she is particularly proud of the GED programs.

At a planning session Tuesday, July 22, the board presented the Above & Beyond Award to Kevin Boberg, vice president for economic development. The award recognizes employees who go the extra distance in service to the NMSU system.

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of two men suspected of stealing a golf cart from an academic building at New Mexico State University.

NMSU police learned that during the earlymorning hours of Saturday, July 12, two men entered the courtyard of O'Donnell Hall and stole a golf cart belonging to the Learning Resource Center. Evidence from the courtyard indicates the men damaged the golf cart as they drove it through a pedestrian gate on the west side of O'Donnell Hall.

A surveillance camera located outside

O'Donnell Hall captured images of the two men as they took the golf cart.

The men are believed to have driven the golf cart from O'Donnell Hall south through Preciado Park toward a campus residential area.

Anyone with information on this case, or who is able to identify of the suspects, is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Sun Belt a good fit for NMSU

When New Mexico State University was accepted into the Western Athletic Conference about a decade ago, there was much rejoicing in Aggie circles.

Finally, after years of casting its gaze on the WAC, where the Aggies felt they belonged, the time had come. The school would soon leave the Sun Belt Conference to join the league that had spawned No. 1 picks in the NFL Draft, a Heisman Trophy winner (BYU's Ty Detmer in 1990) and even a national champion (BYU in 1984).

The time had come to play with the bigger boys.

Except many of the so-called big boys had moved on to the Mountain West Conference or elsewhere. NMSU joined the WAC, which was now full of former Big West Conference members - a league NMSU used to play in before the Big West dropped football and the Aggies moved on to the Sun Belt.

The Mountain West had become what the WAC used to be.

Still, NMSU joined a conference that was regionally important and held something of its old name recognition.

Oh, but all of that changed. Schools began to take their pigskins and move to different leagues.

Aggie rival the University of Texas-El Paso seemed horrified to be in the same conference as NMSU and joined Conference USA.

Boise State, Hawaii, Fresno State, San Jose State, Nevada and, heck, even Utah State left for the Mountain West, which had itself lost Utah to the Pac 12 and BYU to independence.

The situation became so bad the WAC dropped football altogether and added schools like the University of Missouri-Kansas City - the Roos! - and Seattle and Grand Canyon University and others. In other words, schools that some Aggie fans probably had never even heard of, let alone could get excited about.

So now, after a brief interlude with independence, the Aggies are back in the Sun Belt as a football-only member.

This is the best place for NMSU. The Sun Belt does not look the same as it did during NMSU's first go round as some schools moved on to Conference USA, but the Sun Belt offers competitive,

By Brook Stockberger Las Cruces Bulletin

The Aggies have a lot to prove this season on the gridiron.

New Mexico State University - which starts practice on Friday, Aug. 1 - participated in the Sun Belt Conference football media days Tuesday, July 22, in the Superdome in New Orleans.

NMSU's fellow Sun Belt programs welcomed the Aggies with outstretched arms, but not a lot of respect. The 2014 Preseason Coaches Poll saw the Aggies voted No. 11 out of 11 schools. In other words, last place.

Also, not a single Aggie player was chosen either first team or second team in the preseason, all-conference team.

"Right now all we can worry about is ourselves," head coach Doug Martin said. "There is a reason why you play the games.

"We know that this is a much improved football team right now than from this time last year. We understand the challenges we have ahead of us and we look forward to those challenges and getting back on the football field."

The Aggies went 2-10 in 2013 during Martin's first season as head coach after playing, as NMSU points out in a news release, one of the toughest schedules in the school's history." The Aggies faced five teams that had participated in a bowl game the previous season while also playing two teams ranked in the top 15 in the nation.

The University of Louisiana-Lafayette was selected as the preseason favorite in the conference, garnering all 11 first-place votes in the poll. The Rajin' Cajuns won the conference last year and then beat Tulane in a thrilling New Orleans Bowl showdown.

The rest of the poll, in order: Arkansas State: South Alabama; Troy; UL Monroe; Texas State; Appalachian State; Georgia Southern; Idaho; Georgia State; and NMSU.

"Our team is excited for the upcoming season," Martin said. "We look forward to putting a quality football team on the field. Aggie Football games provide a fun family environment for all ages and we hope to see (a lot of fans) out at Aggie Memorial Stadium this season.'

respected football.

Sure, regionally NMSU is not as connected to schools from Georgia and Louisiana and Alabama, but there is some familiarity. Heck, former University of New Mexico coach Dennis Franchione is now the head coach at Texas State and even former WAC commissioner Karl Benson is now the jefe for the Sun Belt. ESPN3 covered last week's Sun Belt Conference football media days in New Orleans.

- The Sun Belt does afford NMSU opportunities, the most important of which are:
- Stability. The Sun Belt may still lose a program or two to Conference USA, but you can bet it will not drop football. The Sun Belt is a strong, stable second-tier league.

Coca-Cola Weight Center and new field turf as well as a meet-and-greet with the Aggie staff.

Former NMSU football players can call the Aggie Athletic Club at 646-5151 for information.

Tough enough

The annual Tough Enough to Wear Pink game is scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 4 as the Aggies face off against Georgia Southern. This year marks the eighth season that NMSU will team up with Cowboys for Cancer Research to raise money for cancer research. Since 2007, more than $3 million (cash and in-kind contributions) has been raised and the school reports that the NMSU Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign has become the largest event of its kind in the world.

- · Competition. The Sun Belt has an automatic bowl appearance for its champ the New Orleans Bowl - where University of Louisiana Lafayette beat Tulane. Arkansas State, meanwhile, beat Ball State in the GoDaddy Bowl.
- Chance for advancement. If NMSU can right its ship and become a winning program, maybe it could even be picked up by Conference USA. Such a scenario would have the double benefit of driving UTEP nuts.

So, the Sun Belt might not be perfect, but NMSU was dang lucky the conference took it in as a football-playing member. The competition level is just right for the NMSU program and the Aggies have at least the future potential to thrive.

What are the three hardest golf shots?

You'll be surprised by what most players struggle with

In the 19 or so years I have been doing golf schools and coaching recreational golfers to improve their performance, I have come to the conclusion there are three specific golf shots higher handicap golfers find the most difficult.

When I posed this issue to one of my teaching pro friends, he said, "That's simple. They are the shot out of a cactus, hitting the submerged ball and the six iron through the tree branches that are 90 percent air." Cute.

During the past few months, I have asked golfers of all abilities to tell me which were the hardest shots. I got all sorts of replies.

"Any shot where I have to think," said one.

"Deep rough," responded another.

"Lag putts," someone told me.

"It's my mental game," said a player who has played golf for 30 years. "I can't stand the first tee shot with everybody watching. It's unnerving."

I assured him there would be much written in future columns about nerves and the "mental game."

One interesting response to my query was, "My toughest shot is when it's a recovery shot, and I know I'll be embarrassed if I miss it badly."

That brings a whole lot of negatives into the picture I told her.

One golfing friend surprised me with this: "I don't know the hardest, but the easiest for me are the Mulligan, the Shapiro (a do-over) and the conceded putt."

Everyone has their Achilles-heel golf shot, but there are a few that most golfers can relate to. In my experience – this is deadly serious now – the three most difficult shots are: No. 1, the long sand bunker shot from a fairway bunker; No. 2, the half wedge shot from inside of 60 yards to the green; and No. 3, the fairway wood or long iron shot – as you might hit for the second shot on a par five – from a downhill lie. I'll take each of these shots and help you learn how they are done.

Let's take first, the long sand bunker shot. The main reason so many folks struggle with this is that they don't understanding the proper technique. For most normal long bunker shots, the idea is to hit a crisp shot with a full swing, taking very little sand. This is vastly different than an explosion shot from a greenside bunker, where you are lifting the ball out by blasting the sand underneath it.

Here in the Southwest, we have a lot of sandy waste areas that are played very much the same as a flat fairway bunker. The principle is the same. The first two considerations are how high the forward face or "lip" of the bunker is, and what kind of lie the ball is in. Bear in mind that the very top priority is to get the ball out of the hazard – yes, a bunker is a hazard – and advance it in the direction of the target. A lot of people forget the priorities and try for the heroic shot as seen on TV.

If there is a raised bunker face in front of vou, be sure to take a club with enough loft elevate the ball over the bunker lip, even if the ball won't go as far to the target. If you're under a deep bunker face, chip out and simply accept the inevitable dropped shot – but don't compound the error by leaving the ball in the bunker.

For most long bunker shots, play the ball in the middle of your stance or just slightly back of center, and take at the very least one more club than the actual yardage measures.

Swing with a smooth motion, keeping your lower body "quiet" and your hands slightly ahead of the clubface. This technique is to promote being able to contact the ball before the sand.

In the case of the long fairway bunker shot, unlike the greenside bunker, you must hit the ball before sand. Don't over-swing or try to scoop the ball. Remember to select more club to compensate for the slight impact with the sand. This is a case where you have to trust the club to do the work.

Short game guru Dave Pelz said, based on his extensive research with high-handicap golfers, the half-wedge shot is absolutely the hardest shot for regular folks to hit consistently well. This is partly due to existing swing flaws and partly due to misunderstanding of the technique required.

Most golf teachers would agree the secret to the short wedge shot is acceleration. The mistake many players make is that they "quit" on the shot, feeling they have taken too much swing or too much club.

For most golfers, a 60-yard shot to the green requires wedge, a sand wedge or a lob wedge. It's a shot that must be hit with what amounts to a full swing that is downsized or abbreviated. The half-wedge shot must be practiced to provide give you some confidence in the real situation. When you're on the range, practice hitting shots to a target 50 or 60 yards away by taking a three-quarter-length swing (club not to parallel), gripping down the shaft almost an inch.

Be sure to hit the ball with a descending blow, trapping the ball and the grass simultaneously, and taking a divot. It's what they call "pro contact." Yes, it's a "feel" shot, but one that is played with almost a regular golf swing. To avoid hitting behind the ball, and taking a big divot but no ball, focus on making a good weight shift and a small hip turn. You'll be amazed how fast you can learn this shot.

Third, let's take the case of the second shot on a par five hole, in which the situation calls for a "lay-up" shot short of a pond or other looming hazard. Inexperienced as well as higher-handicap golfers all seem to struggle with long fairway shots, mainly because they instinctively think they have to hit the ball a long way, or they fail to focus fully on the shot in the same manner they would as they would a shot to the green.

A lay-up shot demands precise accuracy for direction and controlled distance. My suggestion is that you get the sense of a controlled straight shot, to a particular target. Usually a long fairway shot on a par five is the second shot. It's a position shot. Your priority is positioning your ball so that your approach shot to the green is one with which you can hit your favorite short iron, or at least a relatively easy one. Hybrid clubs are now the club du jour for these lay-up shots.

When you have a slight downhill lie, simply align your body along the down-slope so your swing is now more level. That means tilting your shoulders, hips, knees and eyes on the same angle as the slope. Swing along the slope, "chasing" your follow-through along the downward angle.

Finally, on the long fairway shots, swing easy. Don't try to kill the ball or think you have to hit it as far as you can. As the late Julius Boros once said, "Swing easy and play hard."

I would be remiss if I didn't share the three hardest emotions we have to face during a competitive round of golf.

One is most certainly anger. We get mad because our preconceived expectations are not met. We expect to play our best – or at least competently – on every shot on every hole. When we don't, or when breaks go against us, it can lead to angry outbursts born of frustration. Just like feeling disheartened and feeling anxious, anger comes mainly from fear.

The second difficult feeling is one of being discouraged when things don't go our way – in golf and in life. We get discouraged when we fall into a "slump," when we are losing to an opponent, when we feel the cards are stacked against us, when we believe all our luck is bad luck. Feeling down is kind of the flip side of anger, since we blame ourselves and have the growing sense of not measuring up and not being good enough to win. Repeating the same mistakes over and over again can lead to both dejection and anger. It often depends on the individual's basic personality as to which emotions will show up at any given time.

Our last challenge is the problem of getting nervous, feeling stressed and overly worrying, all falling under the rubric of "anxiety." This is probably the most surreptitious and insidious of the performance-related emotions because we are often completely unaware of what is happening inside us or of the destruction being done to our game. We don't even know we're nervous.

What to do? Try practicing the very shots we discussed above: out of fairway bunkers, inside of 60 yards to the green and accurate layup shots. That will lead to more confidence and less nervous tension.

In addition, focus on becoming much more aware of your inner senses throughout the day. If we can raise the threshold of our awareness more to the surface the more able we become to deal with these emotions.

Finally, there are anger management classes around town.

Ins, outs of driving in local school zones LCPD has 35 school crossing guards

Every driver knows to slow down to 15 mph in a school zone when the lights are flashing. But did you know it is illegal to change lanes in a school zone, or to pass another vehicle traveling in the same direction in a school zone?

The Las Cruces Police Department (LCPD) employs 35 crossing guards at 21 school crossings in the Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) district during the regular school year to help get children safely to school, said LCPD School Crossing Guard Supervisor Kendra Brunson.

School crossings operate from 7:10 to 8:10 a.m. each school day morning and from 2:15 to 3 p.m. in the afternoon. Crossing guards also man school crossings during the afternoon on school days near the intersections of Lohman Avenue and Del Monte Street and Missouri Avenue and Thomas Street. Also, school crossings are in place at many elementary schools during after-school programs throughout the school year, Brunson said.

During the 2014 summer break, there will be school crossing guards on duty until Monday, Aug. 4, at 16 elementary schools during the Kindergarten through Three Plus program. Those schools are Alameda, Booker T. Washington, Central, Conlee, César E. Chávez (kindergarten, first- and second grades only), Columbia, Doña Ana, East Picacho, Hermosa Heights, Loma Heights, Jornada, MacArthur, Mesilla Park, Sonoma and Sunrise (third grade only) elementaries.

School zones at those schools will have school-zones flashers active 7:10-8:10 a.m. each school day morning and 2:15-3:00 p.m. each school day afternoon.

Here are State of New Mexico and City of Las Cruces (CLC) laws regarding drivers and school zones:

- "No person shall drive a vehicle on a street or detour at a speed greater than fifteen (15) miles per hour on all streets when passing a school while children are going to, or leaving school and when the school zone is properly posted."
- Establishment of speed zones is what allows CLC to designate where to place school zones. Speed zones may be marked by a sign containing a flashing yellow light, and when the light is in operation, the speed limit, instructions or regulations on the sign are in effect.
- A school zone and speed zone extends from the road sign announcing the start of the school zone to the road sign announcing the end of the school zone.

- A crosswalk is defined as "that part of a street at an intersection included within the connections of the lateral lines of the sidewalks on opposite sides of the street measured from the curbs or, in the absence of curbs, from the edges of the traversable roadway," and/or as "any portion of a street at an intersection or elsewhere distinctly indicated for pedestrian crossing by lines or other markings on the surface."
- "Whenever a vehicle is stopped at a marked crosswalk or an unmarked crosswalk at an intersection to permit a pedestrian to cross the street, the driver of the vehicle approaching from the rear shall not overtake and pass the stopped vehicle." In other words, it is illegal for one vehicle to pass another vehicle in a school zone.
- It is illegal for a driver to change lanes in a school zone.
- "When traffic-control signals are not in place or not in operation the driver of a vehicle shall yield the right of way, slowing down or stopping if need be to yield to a pedestrian crossing within a crosswalk when the pedestrian is upon the half of the street upon which the vehicle is traveling, or when the pedestrian is approaching so closely from the opposite half of the street as to be in danger."
- Notwithstanding any provisions, "Every driver of a vehicle shall exercise due care to avoid colliding with any pedestrian upon any street and shall give warning by sounding the horn when necessary and shall exercise proper precaution upon observing any child or any confused or incapacitated person upon a street."

And, the law regarding overtaking and passing a school bus states, "The driver of a vehicle upon approaching or overtaking from either direction any school bus which has stopped on the roadway, with special school bus signals in operation, for the purpose of receiving or discharging any school children, shall stop the vehicle at least 10 feet before reaching the school bus and shall not proceed until the special school bus signals are turned off, the school bus has resumed motion or until signaled by the (school bus) driver to proceed."

Volunteers needed There are many ways to help

There are many ways parents and interested community members can volunteer with Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS), including serving on school advisory councils (SAC), acting as chaperones during school events, assisting with fundraising, reading to students and other school and classroom activities.

LCPS Policy IJOC: School Volunteers and Regulation IJOC-R: School Volunteers, can be found on the LCPS website: www. lcps.k12.nm.us. To find them on the website, click on "Policies and Regulations" in the second yellow box in the upper left-hand corner of the home page. Then, click on the "I" (for Instruction) section of policies and scroll down to IJOC (the policies are in alphabetical order). The policy and regulation will help prospective volunteers understand the process that must be followed by the school district with regard to the use of volunteers in classrooms and schools throughout LCPS. It lists the school district policies and regulations that volunteers must read, the forms they must fill out, the background check they are subject to and other important information.

Every public school in Las Cruces has a SAC, which assists the school's administration with school-based decision-making and involves parents in their children's education. Each school holds a SAC election in May, with SAC members elected by a vote of their school's parents and staff. Members serve two-year terms that begin June 1 and end May 31. Each SAC must have at least seven members, including school staff and community members. Visit http://lcps.k12.nm.us/Committees/ DAC/index.shtml for more on SACs. You also can refer to LCPS Policy KCB: School Advisory Councils and Regulation KCB: School Advisory Councils. Visit http:// lcps.k12.nm.us/Committees/Policies/policies_k.shtml and scroll down to KCB

Volunteers also are needed in the schools to act as chaperones on field trips and during certain school activities. Volunteers also can help organize and conduct school fund-raising events such as pancake breakfasts, enchilada dinners and jog-a-thons.

Often, volunteers are needed to read to and/or tutor students in the classroom or help out in the school library. And, schools always need volunteers who are bilingual and can assist teachers in dual-language classrooms.

Anyone who volunteers for LCPS more than five times in a school year or who chaperones at one or more school events is required to obtain a security clearance from the LCPS Central Office, including fingerprinting and a background check. (See Policy and Regulation IJOC: School Volunteers, outlined in paragraph two above.)

If a volunteer changes the school at which he or she serves, his or her security clearance information can be transferred from the old school to the new one by contacting Maria Holguin in the LCPS Human Resources Office at 527-5973 or marholguin@lcps.k12.nm.us. The contact can be made by either the volunteer or the principal at the volunteer's new school.

All volunteers' security clearance information is on file at the LCPS Administration Building, 505 S. Main St., Loretto Towne Centre, Suite 249. Each volunteer's security clearance remains valid unless he or she has not volunteered for a period of one calendar year or more. In that case, a new security clearance must be conducted.

"Background checks on any adults having contact with LCPS students are very important," said LCPS Director of Communications Jo Galván. "However, the services that volunteers provide in every school in our district are invaluable. They do everything from making copies to reading to students to working in school libraries to accompanying students on field trips. We couldn't succeed without them. We want, therefore, to continue to make it as easy as possible for these volunteers to transfer their security clearance information from one school to another," she said.

The Citizen reported "the growth of this town has been rapid and encouraging," adding "The dream of 10,000 in 1915 can and must be made a reality." Among the many virtues listed were "Business is good, crops are plentiful and market prices high; climatic conditions are more than pleasing" and "the population is composed of wide-awake business and professional men, kindly women and promising youths and maidens."

• In a front page report, it was revealed that "Rev. Lewis, who is an ardent admirer of the simplicity of rural life, armed himself with a hoe and sickle this week and attacked the weeds and superfluous shrubbery in his church yard." When the task was completed, it was further reported, he had accomplished "a newness and beauty fit to delight the color dream of a poet."

• The City of Las Cruces had a balance of $61,203.32 "in all its funds as revealed in an audit submitted to Mayor Klein and the Council by Auditor A.S. Roberts." The audit covered the fiscal year from July 1, 1938 to June 30, 1939 and "highly praised the board of trustees for the manner in which the municipality is operated."

• Congressman John J. Dempsey, in a speech given in Washington D.C., was quoted as saying, "Americans who are wondering where to spend their vacations would do well to consider visiting one of the Spanish sections of our country." He was particularly taken, he said, "by the great outdoors of New Mexico, where large numbers of American citizens have clung to their native customs and traditions, which are both charming and highly enjoyable."

• A Juarez-based car-theft ring was reportedly cracked by Las Cruces police detectives after suspects were tailed and arrested before being brought back for sentencing. Two of the six suspects were sons of Mexican customs agents who allegedly used customs badges to get stolen cars across the border.

• District Attorney Doug Driggers called for a two-pronged investigation into the death of 89-year-old Mesilla woman Julia Peterson. Though there were no official reports of suspicion in Peterson's death, it had been revealed that five months prior, Lee Bach, who had been doing errands for Peterson, had asked state District Court to name him legal guardian. After Peterson's death, a courtappointed lawyer filed a civil lawsuit asking that Bach be made to account for how he had used Peterson's money.

NMSU creates corporation to manage land, property, assets

New Mexico State University's Board of Regents approved the creation of Aggie Development Corp. during its regular meeting Wednesday, July 23. The newly formed corporation will allow NMSU to better manage and develop its land, property and water assets.

^{''}The creation of Aggie Development Corp. allows New Mexico State University to operate in a more business-like manner when we look to develop our assets," said NMSU President Garrey Carruthers. "This makes it easier for us to turn some of our fiscal assets into revenue streams for the university."

Aggie Development Inc. is a 501(c)3 tax-exempt nonprofit organization created under the University Research Park and Economic Development Act. The new corporation will be tasked with real estate development, effective management of NMSU's real estate and water assets and the creation of new public-private partnerships to benefit both the university and the surrounding community. All of the corporation's net revenue will be contributed to the university.

Ben Woods, NMSU's special adviser to the president, will lead the effort in establishing Aggie Development Corp.

"I'm honored to be given the opportunity to serve in this capacity," Woods said. "I think this project will tremendously benefit the institution. With just a modest investment of effort, we will gain value for the assets we have in excess of our needs. Credit for this belongs to our regents, in particular (regent Chairman) Mike Cheney, and President Carruthers."

During the meeting, regents appointed a seven-person board of directors to oversee Aggie Development Corp. The board of directors includes Cheney, regent Kari Mitchell, Carruthers, NMSU Senior Vice President for Administration and Finance

Perry calls in the National Guard

Texas Gov. Rick Perry is deploying up to 1,000 National Guard troops to the Texas-Mexico border over the next month to combat what he said Monday, July 21, were criminals exploiting a surge of children pouring into the U.S. illegally.

Perry, a vocal critic of the White House's response to the border crisis who is himself mulling a second presidential run, said the state has a responsibility to act after "lip service and empty promises" from Washington.

"I will not stand idly by while our citizens are under assault and little children from Central America are detained in squalor," Perry said.

The deployment of National Guard troops, which may act in a law enforcement capacity under state authority, will cost Texas an estimated $12 million per month, according to the Associated Press. The troops will simply be "referring and deterring" immigrants and not detaining people, Texas Adjutant General John Nichols said. He added the National Guard could take people into custody if need be.

Cameron County Sheriff Omar Lucio said he didn't know if troops would be coming to his part of the border and questioned what good they would do if they did.

"Those people are trained for warfare, not for law enforcement," said Lucio, whose county includes Brownsville, Texas. "I think the money would be better spent if they would give it to the local law enforcement that is close to the border."

More than 3,000 Border Patrol agents currently work in Texas' Rio Grande Valley, but Perry had repeatedly asked President Barack Obama to send the National Guard to the border amid an influx of immigrants.

Since October 2013, more than 57,000 unaccompanied children and teenagers have entered the United States – more than double compared to the same period a year earlier. Most have been from Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador, where rampant gang violence and intense poverty have driven tens of thousands of people outside their borders. Obama administration officials have said the flood has slowed to fewer than 500 children a week compared to as many as 2,000 a week last month.

A24 | News NMSU to host Discovery Days program for freshmen More than 100 expected for new orientation

For many freshmen, going to college brings a number of changes.

In addition to a new school, students can have a new address, friends and freedom, and New Mexico State University has a new program to help students with the transition.

The Discovery Days Bridge Program has been developed to help students build a strong foundation for their college careers.

A select number of incoming freshmen have been invited to participate in the threeday program that begins Thursday, Aug. 14, at no cost to the students. Invitations were based on students' majors listed on their NMSU application. Discovery Days organizers are expecting 100 students from the College of Arts and Sciences, College of Engineering and College of Health and Social Services to participate.

"The students will form a learning community and engage in a variety of activities to prepare them for a successful first year at NMSU," said Terry Cook, assistant vice president for student engagement. "The goal is to provide students with the knowledge and information about NMSU's resources to support their success - these include places like the student success center, writing center and math center."

All Discovery Days participants will have the residential life experience by staying in the residence halls.

"We know from our data that students who live on campus tend to have higher retention rates, because they become more integrated and involved in campus life," Cook said.

The inaugural Discovery Days will be filled with a variety of programming, including student success skills, opportunities to meet NMSU officials, sessions with faculty and peer mentors, along with social events during the evenings.

Four NMSU professors have been selected by their respective deans to work with the Discovery Days students. Each professor will work with a group of 25 students.

Eric Morgan, communication studies associate professor, and Laura Williams, director of the women's studies program and assistant professor, were chosen from the College of Arts and Sciences. Maria Ortiz, social work college assistant professor, hails from the College of Health and Social Services, and Steve Stochaj, electrical engineering distinguished professor, was tasked with representing the College of Engineering.

Cook said the program will continue through the fall semester with plans for at least one activity per month.

Visit http://discoverydays.nmsu.edu to learn more about the program.

Business Friday, July 25, 2014 Section B Boot camps aim to help job seekers

Challenge is to fill 1,000 entry-level jobs

By Alta LeCompte

When 95 percent of the Job to Career Readiness Boot Camp applicants told Rosa De La Torre-Burmeister they were unemployed, she knew she was on the right track.

De La Torre-Burmeister, Doña Ana County Community College (DACC) director of career services, was recruiting prospective entry-level workers to attend a free, full-day jobs boot camp. The purpose was to prepare them to apply for jobs.

The first camp was held Wednesday, July 16, at the DACC East Mesa campus.

Jobs Boot Camp was created as a result of De La Torre-Burmeister and Davin Lopez, president and CEO of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA), brainstorming to solve an urgent and completely unfamiliar challenge. The challenge is to fill as many as 1,000 entry-level jobs. Pronto.

An influx of new companies into the Santa Teresa and Las Cruces job market is inflating the demand side.

Boot camp aims to inflate the supply side with workers who can fill positions in manufacturing, secretarial/clerical and call-center environments.

The Boot Camp hopes to address appropriate etiquette and the Dos and Don'ts of the application and interview process," Lopez said. "By

Bank project puts home ownership in reach for buyers

Bulletin Staff Report

Third-grade teacher Amanda Apodaca has moved into a new three-bedroom home of her own at 4493 Valle del Lutz, thanks to a program undertaken by Bank'34 in collaboration with the nonprofit Tierra del Sol Housing Corp. and the City of Las Cruces.

Apodaca is one of five Las Crucens who have realized the dream of homeownership through a new $3.5 million portfolio set aside by Bank'34 to help low-income borrowers receiving down payment assistance through the city with a grant Neighborhood Stabilization grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Renewal (HUD).

'It's very exciting," Apodaca said. "I didn't think I would be able to afford a home, especially since I'm only 26, but with the grant money it became possible."

She said she had to wait about a year and a half – until she qualified by getting a full-time job teaching at Booker T. Washington Elementary School.

Especially happy is her son, 3-year-old Josh Corrales Jr., who loves his playroom and backyard play area.

Some 35 buyers will finance homes through the project, said Marcos Montes, vice president of mortgage lending for Bank'34.

Montes said the program came about because the housing provider, the nonprofit Tierra del Sol Housing Corp., was not approved to work buyers

He said normally the loans of low-income buyers who receive down payment assistance from sources such as the New Mexico Finance Authority are underwritten by a local bank and then sold on the secondary market. In the case of the HUD Neighborhood Stabilization loans, Bank'34 will hold the mortgage rather than sell it.

State adds jobs; rate stuck at 6.5 percent

New Mexico's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 6.5 percent in June 2014, unchanged from May but down from 6.9 percent in June 2013.

The rate of over-the-year job growth, comparing June 2014 with June 2013, was 0.3 percent, representing an increase of 2,500 jobs.

Gains in six industries more than offset losses in seven others, pushing growth into positive territory for the first time in nine months. The private sector growth was nearly 1 percent, while government was down 1.7 percent.

Education and health services led all industries with an increase of 3,500 jobs, a sharp uptick from May's year-over-year gain, likely due in part to seasonal variability.

NMDA's Gomez brings home Distinguished Service Award

New Mexico Secretary of Agriculture Jeff Witte has said there are people behind the scenes who play a major role in the fair buying and selling of goods.

One of those people, Joe Gomez, a 30year employee of New Mexico Department of Agriculture was recently honored with the 2014 Distinguished Service Award from the National Conference on Weights and Measures.

"The next time you're running errands, look around and you just might see a round sticker showing that the device – whether it's the produce scale at the grocery store, or a fuel pump at the gas station – has been certified by NMDA," Witte said. "This is the kind of service that enhances consumer confidence and enables New Mexico businesses to compete fairly at home and abroad – both of which go a long way in strengthening the state's economy."

Gomez is the division director of standards and consumer services.

He has been honored at the national level for his service in the field of weights and measures. People in that field work to ensure marketplace fairness by testing and certifying devices used to weigh and measure products for sale – everything from scales that weigh the produce consumers buy to the fuel pumps that measure how much gas or diesel they pump at the gas station.

Gomez directs NMDA's Standards and Consumer Services Division.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology estimates that "sales of products or services impacted by weights and measures laws in the United States represent approximately 50 percent of the U.S. Gross Domestic Product."

Gomez was hired at NMDA in 1984 as a fruit and vegetable inspector, and then switched to become an inspector in the Standards and Consumer Services Division. In the latter role, Gomez checked all manner of weighing and measuring devices, from scales used to weigh cattle and other livestock for sale, to scales used to measure the weight of produce at the grocery store.

He also checked milk, bread, meat and other items to make sure that they were labeled appropriately and that they rang up at the register with the right price-tag.

New Mexico Department of Agriculture's Joe Gomez holds the 2014 Distinguished Service Award presented to him by the National Conference on Weights and Measures in Detroit. Flanking Gomez are NCWM Chairman John Gaccione, NMDA Director/ Secretary Jeff Witte and National Institutes of Standards and Technology Acting Director Willie May.

The High Desert Discovery District (HD3) – New Mexico's first privately led high technology start-up accelerator – will partner with the Association of Commerce and Industry (ACI), Roswell Chaves County Economic Development Corp. and Delicious New Mexico to host the next HD3 Discovery Day, "Innovation and Discovery in Agriculture and Food," Nov. 5-6 in Roswell.

The event will focus on statewide innovation and commercialization opportunities within or that impact the agriculture, valueadded food products and food industries.

Roswell Discovery Day will be hosted at the Daniels Leadership Center on the campus of the New Mexico Military Institute.

Innovators from all over New Mexico are welcome to apply to present their agriculture, agriculture-related discoveries, including those related to water, irrigation and biomass.

Between 12 and 15 are typically selected to present at an HD3 Discovery Day. All panel presentations are conducted in a private setting to allow for the maximum of sensitive and proprietary business and technological information to be shared.

The purpose of Discovery Day is to offer New Mexico innovators and entrepreneurs the opportunity to vet and discuss their innovation, challenges, strategy and market promise in front of a highly experienced group of business achievers.

The application deadline is Oct. 3. Presenters will be announced by Oct. 10. For more information about HD3 and application details, visit www.hddd.org.

Chef Tatsuya Miyazaki: Preparing for Virgin Galatic

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

Whatever a space tourist's dining preference, they're likely to find it on a menu created by chef Tatsuya Miyazaki of Savoy de Mesilla for Virgin Galactic astronauts embarking from Spaceport America.

Miyazaki's company, World Class Gourmet LLC, has been named Virgin Galactic's first exclusive catering partner serving the astronaut's needs.

He has drawn upon his international experience to create 300 menu items for Virgin Galactic.

"Richard Branson and his two kids will be on the first flight – which we're hopeful will be before the end of the year," Miyazaki said. "We'll be ready."

From competition to execution

Miyazaki said several companies had been asked to apply. "We did our best to get this contract," he said. "We worked so hard."

The staff traveled to Sierra County to present their creations to the Virgin Galactic team to pick the menu items.

We were so excited, a little curious, because we had never seen the spaceport before," he said. "It took six hours, because we did this during meetings."

The final menu is being fine-tuned in partnership with a physician who is an expert on the affect of space travel on the human body.

Miyazaki will ensure that the offerings meet special needs, such as maintaining sugar balance for diabetics.

The cuisine will be primarily a wide range of American and European dishes, with Arabic, kosher, and Asian choices.

People from other countries will have a customized menu. We have great vegetarian, gluten-free and dairy-free choices, a few in every category," Miyazaki said.

"Now the fun begins."

Serving for spaceport

He said the Savoy team will prepare the food for the future astronauts during their three days of on-site training, as well as for a celebratory reception and dinner for a larger group after the flight returns.

The "fun" includes hiring and training a staff to get the job done.

Training already is underway for the management group, and hiring and training for additional staff will begin shortly. "We like to be ahead of the game," Miyazaki said.

Savoy de Mesilla's staff of about 28 will swell to about 100, not all full time.

All will have background checks and meet other special requirements.

'The most important thing is it's going to create more jobs," Miyazaki said.

He anticipates new staff members, like the current staff, will come mostly from the New Mexico State University School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management.

Miyazaki said he has a close relationship with the NMSU program and welcomes an opportunity to extend to students and graduates an experience outside the classroom.

Training will take place at Savoy and will include how to deal with cultural differences, since the future astronauts will be coming in from all over the world.

"For some people, there are gestures you may not do," he said.

Bringing world flavors home

Miyazaki began his restaurant career as a chef in Japanese restaurants, including stints as sous chef at Japanese Kitchen and head chef at Minato, both in Albuquerque in the early 1980s.

"I opened a traditional Japanese restaurant in 1982 in Las Cruces, Tatsu," he said. "At that time people were thinking because I'm Asian that would be my specialty.

"But my background is actually French cuisine, and I thought, 'Some day I'm going to open something different."

His first opportunity came in 2007, when he opened Aqua Reef, a European and Asian restaurant on Telshor Boulevard.

"I love both cultures," said Miyazaki, who continues to serve as Aqua Reef's CEO.

With both Aqua Reef and Savoy, he created a serene environment rich with natural elements such as stone and wood.

"I wanted to create a clean, contemporary look so people can forget about Las Cruces for two hours while they're here," he said.

On or about August 4, 2014 the City of Las Cruces will submit a request to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the release of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds in the amount of $350,940.80, under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, to undertake a project known as the Home Rehabilitation Program. The purpose of the program is preserving and protecting housing conditions for the low income residents of the City of Las Cruces, New Mexico.

The activities proposed are categorically excluded under HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58 from National Environmental Policy Act (NE-PA) requirements, but are still subject to the provisions in 24 CFR Part 58.5 and 58.6, and will receive an environmental review per the above listed statutes on a case-by-case basis. The Environmental Review Record (ERR) that documents the determinations for each Home Rehabilitation project is on file at the City of Las Cruces City Hall, 700 N. Main St., Las Cruces, NM 88004, Room 1137A, and may be examined or copied weekdays (8) A.M. to (5) P.M. (575)-528-3094.

PUBLIC COMMENTS Any individual, group, or agency may submit written comments on the ERR to the City of Las Cruces, Community Development Dept. (Attn: Mr. Raymond Burchfield), P.O. Box 20000, Las Cruces, NM 88005. All comments received by August 4, 2014 will be considered by the City of Las Cruces prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds.

ENVIRONMENTAL

CERTIFICATION The City of Las Cruces certifies to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that Mr. Brian Denmark, in his capacity as Assistant City Manager, City of Las Cruces, New Mexico, consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows the City of Las Cruces to use Program funds

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will consider objections to its release of funds and the City of Las Cruces certification for a period of 15 days following the anticipated submission date or its actual receipt of the request (whichever is later) only if they are on one of the following bases: (a) the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer of the City of Las Cruces; STATE OF (b) the City of Las Cruces has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part DOÑA ANA THIRD JUDICIAL 58; (c) the grant recipient or DISTRICT COURT other participants in the have committed project funds or incurred costs not JUDGE Douglas R Driggers authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; or (d) another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint environmental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR Part 58) and shall be addressed to Renee Ryles, Acting Director, CPD Division, U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development at 500 Gold Ave. SW, 7th Floor, Suite 7301, NM Albuquerque, 87103-0906. Potential objectors should contact HUD to verify the actual last day of the objection period.

BACK-TO-SCHOOL WITH NO STRESS? MAKE IT HAPPEN!

When the warm summer months begin to wind down and the days become a little shorter, you can almost smell it in the air-back-to-school time is here! And, just as fall and cooler weather approach, so does back-to-school anxiety. Between kids fearing they'll miss the bus and won't make new friends, and parents feeling stressed about hectic mornings and carpooling chaos, how can anyone get excited about the first day back to school? Parents, however, can set the tone for a smooth transition from summer to the new classroom by protectively addressing their children's concerns.

Here are a few tips to help ease your family's back-to-school anxiety.

- Be enthusiastic. If you are excited and confident, your child will be, too.
- Prepare yourself. Note your child's reaction to separation. If possible, visit the new setting together and introduce your child to the new teacher in advance.

- Start daily routines. Encourage . kids to become involved by packing their own lunch and laying out their clothes. Also, begin an earlier bedtime at least one week before.
 - Pack the night before. Kids
- should pack their book bag every night before bed. This eliminates the morning rush and trying to locate stray items.
- Always say good-bye to your child. Be firm, but friendly about separating.
- Never ridicule a child for crying.

Instead, make supportive statements like, "I know it's hard to say good-bye."

Send a photo of your family or write a reassuring note and put it in your child's backpack or lunch box.

Annual Mesilla Valley Hospice fundraiser set for Saturday, Aug. 9 C1

CITIZE

Rollout the red carpet Medoff fundraiser draws film, stage and television luminaries

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

Come September, Las Cruces is going to look a lot more like Hollywood, with a slew of stars headed to town to honor one of the Mesilla Valley's most acclaimed residents during the Mark Medoff: "Far From Finished" Celebrity Fundraiser at 8 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6, at the New Mexico State University Center for the Arts.

With a roster of special celebrity guests, the gala event will honor the acclaimed writer, director and educator and raise funds for the Mark Medoff Lecture Series at NMSU, which will draw world-class professionals from the film, theater and television worlds to Las Cruces to share their knowledge and industry savvy with NMSU students and the community at large, the performing arts answer to the Domenici Conference.

According to event organizer Ross Marks, "There will be performances by the Las Cruces Symphony, under the baton of Maestro Lonnie Klein, we'll have dancers, a chorus, live music, we'll be doing scenes from some of Mark (Medoff)'s plays, showing clips from some of his movies and, of course, the celebrities he's worked with over the years will be there talking about their experiences working with him, maybe even roasting him a bit. It's going to be a gala spectacular."

On hand for the star-studded dinner will be a number of Medoff's previous collaborators, among them Richard Dreyfuss, Chris McDonald, Linda Hamilton, Jesse Plemons and NMSU graduate and producer-writer Don Foster, along with celebrity master of ceremonies Jeffrey Tambor and, perhaps, an appearance from invited guests Gov. Susana Martinez and actor Neil Patrick Harris, who was discovered by Medoff and cast in the 1988 film "Clara's Heart."

Medoff first made waves as a young man with his 1980 play "Children of a Lesser God." It premiered at NMSU produced by the American Southwest Theatre Company, which Medoff cofounded. The play, a romantic drama surrounding the relationship between a deaf woman and a speech pathologist and former professor, ran for two years – 887 performances – on Broadway and earned the playwright widespread critical acclaim.

"Children of a Lesser God" went on to win three Tony Awards and three Laurence Olivier Awards, along with a number of other accolades, before Medoff adapted his script for a 1986 film.

The silver-screen adaptation of Medoff's play starred William Hurt and Marlee Matlin, whose performance earned her the Academy Award for Best Actress, and was nominated for an Oscar, BAFTA and Writers Guild of America Best Adapted Screenplay Award.

Since then, Medoff has published more than 30 plays and a dozen or so screenplays, along with writing, acting and directing on top of a busy instructional schedule.

Through all this, Medoff has remained a proud, loyal Las Crucen and Aggie, teaching at NMSU for 30 years, co-founding both the American Southwest Theatre Company and the Creative Media Institute and, along with his wife, Stephanie, donating a quarter-million dollars to fund construction of the NMSU Center for the Arts, which now houses the Mark and Stephanie Medoff Theatre.

Beyond raising funds for the lecture series, "Far From Finished" stands as a way to honor Medoff and all he's done.

"Mark came to NMSU and Las Cruces in 1966, and in spite all of the successes he had – at one point he was the most in-demand, soughtafter screenwriter in the world – he always continued to teach," Marks said. "First and foremost, Mark considers himself an educator. When New York and Hollywood tried to draw him away, he wouldn't do it. Every play he's done he started in Las Cruces, most of them at NMSU. He's stayed loyal and committed to the university and the community, and this is our way of letting him know how much we appreciate him."

Tickets to the Mark Medoff: "Far From Finished" Celebrity Fundraiser are $50 to $100 and can be purchased at the Pan Am Ticket Office and Ticketmaster. Tables for dinner before the event, which will include a live auction, are $5,000 and seat 10 people.

For more information on tickets or to reserve a table, call 646-6419.

Call to Artists

JULY 29, 2014

00 ON AIR 00 COMCAST CABLE

TOMBAUGH GALLERY CALLS TO REGIONAL ARTISTS

Tombaugh Gallery is calling for regional artists within a 300-mile radius of Las Cruces to submit proposals for exhibitions for the 2015 calendar year. Non-traditional media or subject matter is welcome. All artwork must be for sale. Submissions should contain a letter of proposal with information about the artist, type of work to be shown and USB flash drive containing eight representative images as JPG files. For group shows, supply a list of all members and one or two images from each member. If a show theme is being considered, please explain the theme fully. The Tombaugh Gallery has 44 linear feet for wall display, and in addition, has several pedestals.

Submissions should be postmarked no later than Oct. 1. Submissions will be reviewed, and applicants will be notified by Nov. 1, at which time possible show dates will be discussed. Artists/shows not selected will also be notified at the same time.

Address submissions to: Judy Licht, Committee Chairperson c/o Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces, 2000 S. Solano Drive, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

29TH ANNUAL PURCHASE PRIZE AWARD EXHIBIT SEEKS PAINTERS

Grant County Art Guild is calling New Mexico artists and inviting their entries in the 29th annual Purchase Prize Award Exhibit. Four media categories of realistic paintings done in oils, acrylics watercolors and pastels, are eligible for the show. The deadline for entry forms is Monday, Aug. 4.

The theme for this popular show is "A Journey to Realism" and offers $1,500 as the grand "purchase prize" for the entry judged the "Best in Show." Other cash prizes are $200 for first-place winners, (other than the category from which the Best in Show was chosen), $100 for Most Popular and $200 for Award of Excellence. Judging and reception will be Sept. 23, and the show will continue to hang at the Grant County Art Guild's Pinos Altos Art Gallery on Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Oct. 5.

For more information or for an entry form, visit www. gcag.org or contact Donna Schmidt at 534-2899.

A world-class culinary tour St. Clair hosts Signature Table event

By Zak Hansen

St. Clair Winery & Bistro is well regarded in Las Cruces, its award-winning New Mexico wines and fresh take on French countryside cuisine drawing those far and wide. But during a Signature Table dinner held Tuesday, July 23, hosted at the Las Cruces bistro by Shamrock Foods, the restaurant truly outdid itself, with five courses unlike anything else found in Southern New Mexico paired with the winery's DH Lescombes wines, it's highest-eschelon of wines, some of which are presented in very litmited releases.

Hosted by Christian Gallagher, a representative of Southwest Wines, along with two of Shamrock's best statewide corporate chefs, Donald Burns and Starson Roy, the dinner drew about 30 people, among them an honored guest - Herve Lescombes, founder of St. Clair Winery who bottled the now-renowned company's first red wine in 1984, making this the winery's pearl anniversary.

After being greeted at the door with a flute of DH Lescombes Brut, a crisp, mildly acidic sparkling wine with notes of honeydew and kiwi - the perfect way to start an evening - guests made their way to crowded tables, many seated next to strangers and all the happier for it.

To start the meal and cleanse the palates of the room's excited guests, the amuse-bouche - literally "happy mouth," a single, bitesized hors d'oeuvre served before a meal at the chef's selection was a goat cheese truffle, made with three kinds of cheese blended with sundried tomato and basil and rolled in crushed almonds, paired perfectly with the crisp, acidic wine.

As guests settled in and introduced themselves to their neighbors - we were seated with a retired aerospace purchaser named, truly, Ronald McDonald - "not the rich one," he joked - and his wife, Olivia, who had been instrumental in founding Las Esperanzas, out for dinner to celebrate Ron's birthday along with friends - the first course was served, an achiote beef Carpaccio.

Carpaccio, if you don't know, is a dish of raw meat or fish, typically beef, veal, salmon or tuna, sliced razor-thin. Topped with a fig-balsamic gastrique and micro cilantro, the food paired perfectly with the DH Lescombes Chenin Blanc, a crisp, clean, tart AUTHENTIC MEXICAN FOOD AND STEAKS FROM THE OLDEST white wine with notes of flowers, honeydew melon, green apple and citrus fruit.

Moving to the second course, the blush of wine blooming in me and my fellow diners' cheeks, we were treated to a baby beet salad, made with candied walnuts and Maytag blue cheese on a bed of baby arugula finished with a blood orange vinaigrette. The salad was paired with a glass of DH Lescombes Chardonnay, a drier white wine with aromas of stone fruit, vanilla and flowers and flavors of peach, green apple and even crème, aged half in French oak barrels and half in French oak sur lie.

Moving on to our third course and moving in to the red wines, diners were presented a truly magnificent sight: five-spice duck breast, seared medium/medium-rare, atop a bed of duck confit fried rice with red wine figs, pea tendrils and a cherry-balsamic glaze, imparting the needed sweetness to balance out the rich, fatty flavors of the duck. This dish was paired with a DH Lescombes Petit Verdot, a rich, robust limited-release wine and one of St. Clair's most unique, with flavors and aromas of currant, leather, wood, spice and black cherry and a round finish.

The fourth course and the evening's entrée was truly a sight to behold: a cut of brown sugar-cured buffalo tenderloin, cooked a perfect medium-rare, served with mashed Yukon Gold potatoes with gorgonzola and roasted shallot haricot vert (green beans), topped with crisp-fried shallot rings and a red wine butter sauce. With this – truly, a wonder – was paired a DH Lescombes Petite Sirah, a deep red wine, rich and with heavy aromas of flowers and ripe red fruits along with wood and earthen tones, easily my favorite of the evening's selections and suited perfectly to the dish.

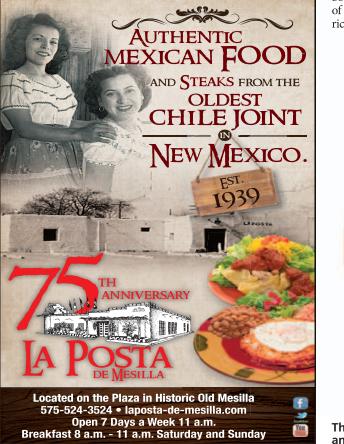

Fat and happy, we still had one more course to go - dessert - and what a course it was: roasted vanilla bean pear with a hazelnut-mascarpone mousse, drizzled with a lemon-lavender honey and topped with a single ripe raspberry, imparting not only color but a hint of tartness, balancing the rich, sweet flavors of the pear and mascarpone. This was served with DH Lescombes Ratafia, a sweet, white fortified dessert wine - meaning a small amount of brandy is added in the creation process, which stops the fermentation and raises both the sugar and alcohol content. Somewhat viscous, this wine imparts aromas of honeysuckle and melon and the rich, sweet flavors of honey, spice and citrus, a perfectly sweet end to a sumptuous evening.

Given the success of this dinner and the diners' enthusiastic applause for both Gallagher and Chefs Burns and Roy - and of course, the wines and food they presented - Gallagher indicated Shamrock and St. Clair Winery & Bistro will likely host another similar table dinner in September, though no dates are confirmed yet. For more information, including upcoming special events like this, visit www.stclairwinery.com - I highly recommend you do.

Release the beast 'The Purge: Anarchy' tops predecessor

Review by Zak Hansen

Las Cruces Bulletin

2013's "The Purge" was in every way a sleeper hit. With a budget of $3 million – a pittance in the age of the mega-blockbuster - the dystopian future/home invasion flick went on to gross more than $60 million, thereby guaranteeing a sequel.

The only problem? "The Purge" wasn't very good. Its premise, about an annual 12-hour period of government-sanctioned bloodletting enacted by America's so-called New Founding Fathers as an outlet for the rage, hatred and vitriol bubbling up inside the populace, was utterly wasted when the movie turned out to be little more than a run-of-the-mill home invasion flick tempered with some heavy-handed social commentary

The film, directed by James DeMonaco, focused on a wealthy home-security salesman and his family, who have hunkered down in their expansive estate for the annual Purge, only to be beset by a gang of young elites out for blood.

"The Purge" had some things to say about class, race and violence, but it did so loudly, stupidly and most of all, ineffectively. Its best, most disturbing sequence was the opening credits, with strains of classical music lilting over security camera footage of all manner of atrocity.

Despite the film's shortcomings, it made a boatload of money, and its preordained sequel, "The Purge: Anarchy," manages to be better than its predecessor in nearly every way. Eschewing the first film's focus on one family of beleaguered bluebloods, "Anarchy" drops us directly into the fray, and while DeMonaco's film is far from perfect, it manages its stated intents perfectly and its 103-minute running time breezes by, an overlooked asset in a time when Michael Bay's Transformers" movies are nudging the threehour mark.

'The Purge: Anarchy" begins just hours before the beginning of the annual purge, and televised news reports herald the program's successes - low unemployment and poverty levels – as residents of Los Angeles prepare themselves for the night, either by barricading themselves indoors or prepping themselves for a night of mayhem. "Stay safe," the greeting goes, as those not participating rush home.

Eva (Carmen Ejogo), a struggling waitress, rushes home to her teenage daughter Cali and elderly, ailing father. As his daughter and granddaughter make the night's final preparations, Papa Rico slips out, leaving them a note explaining his departure. Knowing he is not long for this world, he's auctioned himself to a wealthy family as a "Purge offering" to the tune of $100,000. This is the world of the Purge, when the rich, too afraid to participate in the bloodletting raging outside their windows, are still able to sate their bloodlust with the help of some cold, hard cash, and the poor - unable to afford the high-end security systems and gated communities of their betters are left to largely fend for themselves.

Meanwhile, a young couple on the verge of divorce, Shane and Liz (Zach Gilford and Kiele Sanchez), are en route to his sister's house to wait out the storm when their car dies, stranding them outdoors just as the Purge commences. As they flee a gang that had previously taunted them - and may be responsible for their car troubles they take refuge in a well-armored car belonging to a mysterious man with vengeance on his mind called simply The Sergeant. As the streetwise, bloody-minded and resourceful Sergeant becomes the unwitting guardian of both Shane and Liz and Eva and Cali, who have fled their tenement following the arrival of a riot gear-clad group of mercenaries, the group has 12 hours to stay alive by any means necessary.

If "The Purge: Anarchy" sounds a tad familiar, that's OK. It's simplistic premise - survive - places it along a continuum of B-movie classics like 'The Warriors" and "Escape from New York," video games like "Final Fight" and any other piece of media about people running and fighting in a city. But where DeMonaco's first film floundered, "Anarchy" really excels. Placing the focus on the chaos of the city during the annual Purge, he's opened up this world to us, very literally. While its predecessor only teased at what life - and death - was like outside the confines of the Sandin home, this sequel is all action.

THE PURGE: ANARCHY Rated: R Running Time: 103 minutes Starring: Frank Grillo, Carmen Ejogo Director: James DeMonaco

With no violence for the first 30 or so minutes – a feat, for the genre – "Anarchy" manages to build a steady sense of tension and dread before exploding into full-on fear. The streets of L.A. are horrific; burning buses roll unpiloted through intersections, darkened alleyways tease glances of almost inhuman savagery, the staccato pop of gunfire and the terrified shrieks of victims ring out in the night, at random. This is not to say "Anarchy" is scary, by any means. It's tense, dark, violent and cheesy, making it an almostguaranteed cult classic, and DeMonaco manages to squeeze some surprisingly solid performances from his cast, especially considering the field. Grillo, as the grizzled, revenge-minded Sergeant, is best of all, and it's a wonder he hasn't played this type of role for years already.

Of course, "Anarchy's" premise is roundly stupid, its lapses in logic and narrative continuity at times startling, its dialogue over-expository, its climax rather contrived and its social commentary just as bludgeoning as before - this time around, though, there's just more, well, bludgeoning to go with it.

Film Review "The Purge: Anarchy" is Grade dark, violent, silly and in B every way an improvement over its predecessor.

'Fading Gigolo' an unlikely, likeable scenario

Hardy's 'Locke' a spectacular one-man show "without a bit of grimacing. All goes well as the deed

Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletir

I suspect that few people, if any, would ever think that casting John Turturro and Woody Allen together as gigolo and pimp would work.

Two of the homelier gentlemen in the movie business, not to mention a tad, hmmm, old, shall we say, (Turturro is 57, Allen, 79) what, besides vanity would allow these to veterans to play these parts?

Whatever the idea behind it was, it works, and works very well, with "Fading Gigolo" being an interesting and often funny look at these two guys going into business during personal financial crises.

The film opens with their situation, with Fioravante (Turturro, who also deftly directs and wrote the screenplay as well) as a florist and proprietor of a soon to close NYC rare book store, chatting away with Murray (Allen) about a conversation he (Murray) recently had. Seems his dermatologist, played by Sharon Stone, and her friend were talking about the possible fun and luxury of arranging a ménage a trois. Stone herself is 56, so this adds to the intrigue that people of my "generation" - besides myself! - still even think of such things.

Murray is queried by Dr. Parker (Stone) about a possible gentleman - not him, thank you – who might fit the bill, shall we say. Murray's response? Yes, he can do so for $1,000. She accepts.

Much to Fioravante's surprise, Murray says, "I was thinking of you."

Unlike the normal male ego, which might immediately jump at such an opportunity, Fioravante is quite opposed to it. But when he and Murray look at their personal finances, things change a little. Dr. Parker hesitantly confirms her interest, but not

All goes well as the deed is consummated, and soon the two men are entertaining any number of offers

If you are thinking this an off-putting film because of the general lack of sex appeal of Turturro and Allen, think again, pilgrim.

Thanks to the character development by Turturro, it becomes sweet and charming, greatly aided by the presence of some additional characters, including Murray's own domestic situation, which includes four kids and a single mom, and Dovi, played by Liev Schreiber, who adds greatly to the comedy aspect as a member of a Jewish neighborhood watch group that supports the rabbinical courts. A Hasidic widow adds a bit of balancing drama, becoming friends with our two main characters.

There is definitely a touch of Allen-type directing as well, which is not a bad thing, but on its own merit, "Fading Gigolo" is a charming and tender look at some mighty interesting characters.

'Locke'

One man, in a car, on a cellphone. This hardly sounds like a concept that would work as a movie, since it is seen all too often in real life, but "Locke" turns out to be one of the best movies of the year, thanks to an outstanding performance by actor Tom Hardy.

The film opens with some night shots of a large construction site in London. As it turns out, it is a 55-story building that Ivan Locke (Hardy) is in charge of, which will also be the site of the largest concrete pour ever seen in Europe.

Locke gets in his car and the action, such as it is, begins.

He is on his way to a hospital in the outskirts of the city. It is here a woman he had a one stand with is giving birth to their child. Along the way, almost always using the calmest of voices and most logical reasoning, Locke must deal with setting up the concrete pour with a couple of worthy assistants, including one who has been drinking, finally tell his wife (and son) about the incident which has caused him to not head home to watch an important soccer game with his family and maintain an imaginary conversation with his long dead father.

It all sounds banal, but the camera work which rarely leaves the car but offers lighting and effect that sometimes jar us back to the moment - along with Hardy's amazing performance allows one to truly appreciate this long night's journey into day.

A faded gigolo himself, you can reach writer Jeff Berg at nedludd76@hotmail.com.

Sage advice

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

Often referred to as purple sage – although not a true sage – you will probably see these plants blooming all around the Las Cruces area. Now that we have been blessed with some rain, these shrubs burst with purplish hues in medians as well as private landscapes.

Leucophyllum, Texas ranger, Texas sage, purple sage or barometer bush, whatever you call them, they are a great choice for our hot and dry climate. These beauties come in an array of colors from white and lavender pink to blue. The names include, but are certainly not limited to, white cloud, heavenly cloud, thunder cloud, nube green, green cloud, Lynn's legacy and Rio Bravo, or Brave River, to name a few.

These plants do best in full direct sunlight and bloom during the summer months and into the fall season. Some varieties tend to bloom when it rains, hence the name "barometer bush." Most of the newer varieties bloom off and on during the heat of the season.

bloom off and on during the heat of the season. The variety labelled "leucophyllum compacta" will typically remain at a maximum height of 3 to 5 feet tall and wide. Most other varieties will grow from 5 to 8 feet or more, depending upon care. You can let these grow into a natural form or they can be sheared as much as you wish. It is best to trim or prune leucophyllum after they have bloomed. When pruning or trimming try to remove as little foliage at a time as possible. Don't worry, they will soon bloom again. They can be cut back severely in late spring if you wish to rejuvenate the look of an older specimen, which may be the way to go, especially after a harsh winter.

Once established, older plants are very drought tolerant, and usually do not need additional feeding. However if your plant seems to be growing unusually slowly or does not bloom, you should use an all-purpose or high-phosphorous fertilizer. New plantings will do best with a drip system and older plants will thrive with an occasional watering. It is important to remember not to disturb the delicate root ball when transplanting out of their containers. This rule applies to all new plantings except for root balls that are extremely root bound. If, and only if, the root ball looks like a bowl of "spaghetti," you should gently separate or lightly and vertically cut the outer layer of the roots. This will help in better root distribution upon planting.

The plants with light grayish or silver leaves use less watering than ones with greener leaves, however, the ones with greener leaves seem to grow faster.

Most have a very light fragrance with the exception of Sierra Bouquet – this one has a very sweet candy-like scent, but may not be as cold hearty as some of the other cultivars.

If you decide to plant one of these in your landscape, try to keep the tag in a file, as there are so many variations of this sage-like bush. This might come in handy if you need to replace one or want to match it with one you already have. Of course, this is recommended for anything you plant, just in case.

I have seen only a few ailments kill these shrubs: Too much fertilizer, too much water, grub worms or a very harsh winter. The first three on the list we can control. The last one, well, that's another story.

Colorful shrubbery and planters, offsetting energy-efficient windows and a clean fiberglass door can do wonders for increasing the curb appeal of your home, especially if you're planning on putting it on the market.

The look that sells Tips for National Curb Appeal Month

Curb appeal is important in setting a welcoming tone, and if your home is for sale, an attractive exterior becomes crucial.

"Realtors tell us that potential home buyers make a 'street decision' in less than 12 seconds on whether or not to view a home," said Niki Decker of Fypon, a leader in the synthetic millwork industry. "That's a very short time to make a good impression."

August marks the first National Curb Appeal Month, a great time to focus on ways to add value and design appeal to your home's exterior, whether or not you have plans to sell.

The experts at Fypon are offering their top exterior upgrade tips:

- Swap a rotting wooden porch system with a new structural synthetic balustrade system that includes porch posts, top and bottom rails, balusters and all the other pieces essential to create a weather-resistant porch.
- Trim out exterior windows. Use crossheads for over a window and top with a solid, decorative or recessed panel keystone accent piece. On the sides and below the window, use moulding pieces with plinth blocks in the corners to eliminate miter cuts.
- Replace older, rotting wooden louvers with low-maintenance polyurethane louvers. Such functional louvers should have a noncorrosive fiberglass screen backing to keep insects out while allowing maximum airflow and ventilation to enter an attic.
- A conventional older wooden door may be inefficient, worn out or plain ugly. Consider replacing your old wooden door with a solid fiberglass door, which is up to four times more energy efficient and resistant to rot, rust, dings and weather. Constructed as a complete system of components, Therma-Tru fiberglass doors, for example, are engineered to work together for lasting performance, security and energy efficiency. Throughout August, homeowners can enter the online "Door Do-Over Sweepstakes" for the chance to win a new Therma-Tru fiberglass entry door. To enter the sweepstakes, visit www.todayshomeowner.com/ DoorDoOver.

Friday, July 25,

- Make smart upgrades with a proven return on investment. For example, adding energy-efficient vinyl windows, like those from Simonton Windows, as a mid-range project to a home can have a cost recoup value of 78.7 percent, while adding vinyl siding can have a 78.2 percent recoup rate, according to the 2014 Cost Versus Value Study conducted by Remodeling magazine.
- Add "top down" color to the home by starting with the roof. Polymer slate and shake roofs, like those from DaVinci Roofscapes, come in 49 standard colors and unlimited custom colors.
- Color plays a major role in creating curb appeal. Add and maintain colorful shrubbery and planters to give your exterior a natural burst of color. Look to the front door, your shutters and trim to add pops of color that complement the rest of the exterior.

For more tips, visit www.fypon.com. Throughout August, Fypon will include daily curb appeal tips, along with detailed curb appeal information and color advice from national color expert Kate Smith of Sensational Color.

This National Curb Appeal Month, make your home a more welcoming place by giving its exterior a facelift.

A chilling broth

Keep it cool with a refreshing Spanish dish given a spicy Southwestern flair

When temps hit the high 90s and the three-digit mark, a bowl of hot soup is most likely the last thing on your menu.

More inviting is icy-chilled soup spiked and infused with piquant chile pepper. It's a Land of Enchantment summer rush. Pairing cold or tepid liquid with a pod's searing heat is the ultimate endorphin high.

Gazpacho is a favorite of mine, especially sweet watermelon tomato made chunky with diced cucumbers and onion and zesty with tender bits of fresh serrano. Another favorite is ripened avocado and cucumber pureed with a dose of sweet Sriracha sauce.

My most thrilling kicker, however, is chilled tomato-habanero topped with a generous swirl of sour cream. Goose bump delicious!

For the best results, serve soup in icycold bowls (or margarita glasses) straight from the freezer. About 20 to 30 minutes before serving time, put bowls in freezer. Chilling out has never tasted so good.

Sassy Watermelon Gazpacho

3 cups watermelon, seeded and diced 3 medium sized tomatoes (about 1 1/4

- cups), peeled, seeded and diced 1 small cucumber (about 3/4 cup), peeled, seeded and diced
- 1 to 2 serrano peppers, stemmed, seeded and diced
- 1 small white onion (about

1/3 cup), minced 2 tablespoons fresh ginger, minced 1 tablespoon red wine or balsamic vinegar 2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil Salt and black pepper to taste

Garnish:

In a small bowl, toss together: 1 cup canned sweet corn kernels, drained 1 medium sized onion, minced 1/4 cup cilantro leaves, chopped

In a large food processor or blender, blend the watermelon until smooth. Work in batches if blender is small. Add the diced tomatoes, cucumber, serrano peppers, white onion and ginger and purée until well blended. Finally, add the red wine or balsamic vinegar, olive oil and salt and black pepper to the mixture, and pulse once again for a couple of seconds to combine. Taste and adjust the seasonings, adding a bit more salt and pepper if necessary.

Pour soup into a large bowl. Cover and refrigerate for at least a two hours or until well chilled. To serve, pour the soup into chilled bowls or glasses. Garnish with 2 to 3 tablespoons of the corn and onion mixture on top. Serves three to four.

Chilled Cucumber Avocado Soup

1 pound cucumbers, peeled and roughly chopped

- 2 small ripe avocados, peeled, seeded and cut into small pieces
- 1 tablespoon Sriracha hot chile sauce 1/4 cup limes, freshly squeezed
- 3/4 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt, preferably sea salt 1/2 teaspoon black pepper

Garnish: tomato and cilantro, chopped

Place the cucumbers, avocados, lime juice, water, salt and pepper into a blender. Process ingredients until smooth. Taste, adding more salt and pepper if desired.

Transfer the soup to a large bowl or Tupperware container and chill in the fridge for at least an hour before serving. Garnish with chopped tomato and cilantro (optional). Serves four.

Chilling Habañero-Happiness Soup

4 medium red bell peppers

2 pounds tomatoes 1 sweet onion (about 1/2 pound), chopped 2 garlic cloves, chopped

- 4 to 6 fresh habanero chiles, stemmed, seeded and finely chopped (2 to 3 tablespoons),
- 1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons extravirgin olive oil, divided

1 3/4 cups reduced-sodium chicken broth Garnish: Dollops of Greek yogurt or sour cream and sprigs of cilantro

Roast bell peppers on a broiler pan about 2 inches from broiler, turning with tongs until skins are blackened, 10 to 12 minutes. Transfer to a bowl and cover with plastic wrap. Let stand 20 minutes. Peel, then halve lengthwise, discarding stems and seeds.

Cut a shallow X in bottom of each tomato, then blanch tomatoes in simmering water 20 seconds and transfer to an ice bath. Peel and coarsely chop, reserving juices

Cook onion, garlic, chiles, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper in 2 tablespoons oil in a 3- to 4-quart heavy saucepan over medium heat, stirring occasionally until softened and pale golden, about 8 minutes. Add tomatoes with juices, bell peppers, broth and 1/4 teaspoon salt and simmer, covered, until peppers are tender, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and allow to cool for about 5 minutes.

Purée soup in two or three batches in a blender, drizzling remaining 1/4 cup oil into first batch with motor running. Soup can be quick-chilled in a metal bowl set in an ice bath, stirring often, 10 to 15 minutes. Season with salt. Serves three to four. (Recipe adapted from http://epicurious. com.)

On high, contemplating one world at a time A slower pace, surrounded by the wonders of nature, reveals the best of creation

Gabriel Rochelle Tales from the Cassock

The cawing of crows and the squawking of Steller's Jays, the chatter of chipmunks scampering across the drive, the tattoo of white-headed woodpeckers on a distant tree and the hooting of a solitary owl in late afternoon – all this would be symphony enough, but there is more.

A nuthatch creeps down the bark of a Jeffrey pine searching for insects in the crevices. The voices of people are distinctly audible at a distance of 7,000 feet, where the air is thin and sound carries so easily.

The clarity of light at this elevation is mesmerizing. Trees are sharply delineated, distinct from one another in their majesty. Everything from insects to mountains is illuminated and magnified. The fly on the back of my hand as I write is a beautiful iridescent flying machine, not a pest.

I came away to rest, but too much is going on for that, in a way. This world is a busy place filled with incessant wonders. Work and love are the foundation stones. As 20 quail cross the road in search of pickings, I am reminded of the former activity and see the visible effects of the latter one.

The author Pearl Buck wrote, "I am so absorbed in the wonder of Earth and the life upon it that I cannot think of heaven and the angels. I have enough for this life."

This slower pace of life on holiday enables contemplation and allows for introspection. As we look outward to behold the wonders of creation we also look inward. We are stripped to the basics and all is well.

The slow pace also encourages relationships. We can see others in our sphere with greater clarity and depth, just as we see so-called objects apart from us.

Whatever it is that the structures and symbols, the rituals and regalia of religion point to (like that finger pointing at the moon in the Zen proverb) becomes silently audible and invisibly evident up high at 7,000 feet or so.

As my eyes rise another 600 feet up the hillside in front of the house I am one with the Psalmist who wrote, "I lift up my eyes to the mountains whence comes my help. My help is from the Lord who made heaven and Earth" (Psalm 120). Whatever those verses may mean to you, because of your belief in God or the absence thereof, they are meant to tell you that the universe is not as hostile as you may think. We inhabit a place where room can be made for us, and it may even bring warmth and succor.

Julian of Norwich, 14th century British nun, lived in a century of plague, pestilence, famine and seemingly endless war. It was as harsh as hell. Julian herself suffered illness to the point of death when she was a young woman of 30, and barely survived. In her contemplative years she saw lessons in the little stuff of nature. The hazelnut was an icon to her. From this little nut in her palm she drew three lessons: God made it, God loves it and God will preserve it. If so small a thing is fashioned thus, how much more are we?

So Pearl Buck's comment rings true, at least for me and at this time. No need to go beyond the present moment or place to another realm. This one affords enough wonder, enough transcendence. One realm at a time. Just behold the hazelnut ... or that hummingbird that just buzzed by ... or that loving touch on your hand.

Combat human trafficking

Bulletin Friday, July 25, 2014

C18

Marcy Shoberg Self-defense sense

The founder of The Isis Group Project, Vandy, who was once a victim of child sex trafficking in the US and now helps others overcome such trauma, notes that most people rarely think about human trafficking and consider it a problem for other countries, or other types of people. But, more than 300,000 minors are at risk of being trafficked in the US every year.

Another staggering fact: Super Bowl Sunday is the largest single day event for child sex trafficking in the US

Human trafficking, or modern day slavery, occurs when a person is forced to labor, sexually or otherwise, for someone else's profit. Traffickers control their victims through drugs, abuse, threats, and coercion.

People may become slaves to those who help them illegally immigrate. Some are forced into slavery by their parents: Parents barely capable of taking care of themselves have used their children this way, or sold them to others. Runaways are, of course, prime targets for traffickers. And, even in the US, people have been abducted and forced into sex slavery.

These examples are not intended to convince you of some high likelihood you will ever meet a human trafficker or their victim, but there is the potential. (Thirtyfive Disney World employees were recently arrested in connection with a child sex trafficking ring.) Several police officers and one old friend had a chance to help Vandy, but did not recognize her need: Having been drugged by her traffickers for years, Vandy fit their idea of "just another addict." If you notice someone, especially a child or woman, whom you suspect may be in a desperate living situation with no hope of escape, I ask you not to turn away: Notify the authorities or speak to the person. Vandy suggests if you choose to speak to the person, offer food rather than money. Accompany them to a public place, like a restaurant or store, for your safety and theirs. Then, converse, open to hearing anything they feel like sharing.

If appropriate, in New Mexico, call the 505-GET-FREE hotline or, nationwide, call 888-373-7888 or text BeFree (233733). The National Human Trafficking Resource Center (NHTRC) is a national, toll-free hotline, available to answer calls and texts from anywhere in the US, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Vandy also urges us all to lobby for stiffer penalties for trafficking offenders and customers of sex trade victims.

Men Who Cook holds hope for Hospice Seventh annual event hopes to reach a goal of $100,000

By Tara Melton ne Las Cruces Bulleti

Seven years ago Kay Laurel Fischer retired to Las Cruces and brought with her an idea that turned into Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation's single biggest fundraiser: Men Who Cook.

Last year, Men Who Cook raised $65,000 for Mesilla Valley Hospice. In two weeks, Men Who Cook will kick off its seventh annual event with hopes to raise $100,000 for hospice.

The event features prominent business men and leaders in the community preparing their favorite dish for sampling. Las Crucens buy tickets to the event and get to sample all the food. While the chefs cook, they gather tips and the chef with the most in tips wins the Kay Laurel travelling trophy. A silent auction is also held. This year, The Ghetto Blasters will provide musical entertainment for the event. All of the proceeds from Men Who Cook are donated to Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation.

Dawn Starostka, the event planner said, "You come and you eat and you mingle and you eat and you eat and shop, we hope, and afterward you can dance it all off."

Starostka and her crew have been working hard to get 60 chefs and all their food permits in order, as well as organizing the silent auction.

"If you're doing a dinner with a caterer, you tell them, 'I want this meal,' and you're done but this is all these people. We try to balance so that we don't have all of the same type of recipe," Starostka said. "It's a bunch of crazy logistics, but it's fun."

Most important, Starostka said Men Who Cook is about Las Crucens showing support and helping Mesilla Valley Hospice, which has greatly impacted the community.

Hospice is having a tough time right now, they always need the money but they need it more than usual this year," Starostka said. "We've got to do everything we can with this and other campaigns to keep them around."

Tickets to Men Who Cook are $75 and are available at Mesilla Valley Hospice, 299 E. Montana Ave. or online at myhfmenwhocook.org. Silent auction items and sponsors are still needed for this event. For more information call 522-1232.

Shepherd puppy 'Ariel' named Pet of the Week

Ariel is a very spirted little shepherd puppy who has a sweet face and a wonderful personality to match.

She may be young, but she is a very obedient little pup and a fast learner, too. Train her with treats and you will have her doing amazing tricks in no time.

For information on Ariel or other animals up for adoption, call the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley at 382-0018.

Shelter struggles to fill open appointments

Despite population numbers that continue to grow and an abundance of puppy and kitten litters at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley this spring, shelter Director Beth Vesco-Mock said appointments for affordable spay and neuter procedures at the facility remain vacant.

If you are a resident of Doña Ana County, the cost for spaying and neutering at the clinic is $35 for dogs and $25 for cats. To make an appointment, call the shelter at 382-0018.

Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary hosts Summer Saturdays to showcase pet adoptions

Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary will be holding Summer Saturdays at the Sanctuary on the first two Saturdays of each month, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Safe Haven is a "no kill" animal facility as well as a nonprofit organization. There are about 80 cats and dogs awaiting a new home. This adoption event will include tours of the sancutary and visits with the pets. Hot dogs and refreshemnts will be available.

Driving directions to Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary are as follows: Take U.S. Highway 70 to the Holman Road exit, then drive north to El Centro and right to 6890 Eagle Road.

Safe Haven needs foster homes for animals awaiting adoption

Fostering can be a wonderful and rewarding way to enjoy the companionship that a pet provides without having the permanent commitment that goes along. By bringing a foster pet into your home, you are helping socialize the pet, making it more adoptable.

For more information, call 527-4544.

Pet adoptions held at Farmers Market

Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley staff and volunteers are facilitating dog, cat, puppy and kitten adoptions from 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturday, July 26, 100 N. Main St.

Dogs up for adoption will be located at the north end of the mall. Cats can be adopted from the offices of the Center for Spiritual Living, across from the dog adoptions. Fees are $75 for dogs/ puppies and $50 for cats/kittens. The adoption
