Sidewalk signs OK'd Downtown to allow displays

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council gave a green light Monday, Dec. 16, for A-frame signs and sidewalk displays Downtown.

For now, the signage and displays on sidewalks will only be allowed Downtown because of its unique situation, said Andy Hume, senior planner with the Community Development Department.

When looking at more current development in the city, businesses have larger lots with plenty of room for signage, Hume said. But in the older Downtown area - especially along Main Street - business properties often come right up to the edge of the lot with what planners call zero setbacks, he said. That means many of the Downtown businesses have limited space for signage.

But in the reopened section of Main Street Downtown, the sidewalks are wider than normal - 12 feet wide for the most part. That gives plenty of room for signs and displays on the sidewalk, Hume said, so they won't interfere with the flow of people, impede people with disabilities or present a major hazard.

The ordinance passed by the council would allow the A-frame signs - sometimes called sandwich signs - and sidewalk displays, such as the rack of books seen outside of COAS My Bookstore on occasion.

Hume said the ordinance shouldn't result in a "forest" of A-frame signs, because only one per business will be allowed. There are restrictions to their size - no greater than 6 square feet in dimension on either side and no taller than 3-and-a-half feet high. Displays can take up no more than 100 square feet.

Senators introduce conservation bill National monument proposed

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

With President Barack Obama's presidency entering its final two years, New Mexico's two Democratic Senators have introduced a bill that supports creating a national monument over vast areas of federally owned land in southern New Mexico.

The Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Conservation Act proposed by U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich would create a national monument of 500,000 acres, which would include eight permanent wilderness areas that have been restricted for decades as wilderness study areas.

Former U.S. Sen. Ieff Bingaman had tried to get much of the same land designated as wilderness, but that line of action proved too difficult in the current state of divided government. Supporters of providing great protection of public lands have been urging Obama to declare it

Spaceport tax change would hurt schools Smaller districts crying foul

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

In smaller school districts such as Hatch and Gadsden, allocations from the spaceport gross receipts tax (GRT) have allowed improvements to science education that the state's regular funding doesn't adequately provide.

That was the message from officials of the two rural school districts to the Doña Ana County Commission Tuesday, Dec. 17, reviewing proposed legisla-tion that would have the state Public Education Department take the spaceport GRT portion for schools and distribute those funds statewide.

Three-fourths of the GRT increase passed by voters in Sierra and Doña Ana County goes to help pay off loans to build the $212 million spaceport, but each county was allowed to use a quarter of the revenue for "spaceport-related projects." The two counties that approved the spaceport GRT chose putting the money

Carruthers selection praised

The couple flew in from Denver to attend the ceremony celebrating his selection as NMSU's new president. The investiture followed NMSU's winter commencement ceremony.

Bond issue, mill levy set Voters in LCPS district to decide Feb. 4

On Tuesday, Feb. 4, 2014, registered voters within the Las Cruces Public School district will vote on a $65 million school bond issue and a three-mill public school buildings levy.

If approved, the school district has earmarked the funds to pay for construction of new and renovated classrooms – including the major renovation of Las Cruces High School – safety measures, roofs, heating and cooling, athletic facilities, landscaping, play equipment, a gymnasium, music classrooms and more.

The bond would also partially pay for the development of the Court Youth Center charter campus, scheduled to house Alma d'arte Charter High School, Mesilla Valley Youth Foundation and J. Paul Taylor (charter) Academy.

Superintendent Stan Rounds said the bond and mill levy are structured to avoid any property tax increase.

The current school tax rate of $9.81 for every $1,000 of taxable value of a person's property will remain the same if the two ballot questions are approved. Taxable value is one-third of the assessed value of a person's home or business.

The three-mill levy, if approved, would renew an existing school tax. Rounds said it would generate approximately $9 million a year to fund major repairs and improvements districtwide, such as play equipment, asbestos removal, classroom technology and more. For the first time, three local charter schools would also benefit from the mill: La Academia Dolores Huerta, Las Montañas Charter High School and New America School.

A citizen-based "blue ribbon committee" has been organized to assist with election awareness. Chairperson Sherley O'Brien said they will register voters, including high school students who turn 18 years old by Feb. 4.

A list of all bond projects is on the LCPS website, www.lcps.k12.nm.us, and on Facebook, www.facebook.com/lcpsbond. Early voting will be Jan. 10-31, 2014, at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. Voting will take place in 27 consolidated voting locations, also listed online.

A visit from St. Nicholas

Publisher's note: In this edition of the Bulletin, I continue a tradition carried by one of my mentors, the late Tom Reeves, who published newspapers in California, Colorado and Alamogordo, where he hired me as editor in 1995. Around Christmas, he always ran this classic poem, "A Visit from St. Nicholas," by American poet Clement Clarke Moore, who lived from 1779 to 1863.

Here's wishing everyone a Merry Christmas!

Fromthepublisher BY RICHARD COLTHARP

was the night before Christmas, when all through the house Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse. The stockings were hung by the chimney with care, In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there.

The children were nestled all snug in their beds, While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads. And mamma in her 'kerchief, and I in my cap, Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap.

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter, I sprang from the bed to see what was the matter. Away to the window I flew like a flash, Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow Gave the luster of midday to objects below. When, what to my wondering eyes should appear, But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer.

With a little old driver, so lively and quick, I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick. More rapid than eagles his coursers they came, And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name!

"Now Dasher! now, Dancer! now, Prancer and Vixen! On, Comet! On, Cupid! On Donner and Blitzen! To the top of the porch! to the top of the wall! Now dash away! Dash away! Dash away all!"

As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly, When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky. So up to the housetop the coursers they flew, With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas too.

And then, in a twinkling, I heard on the roof The prancing and pawing of each little hoof. As I drew in my head, and was turning around, Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot, And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot. A bundle of toys he had flung on his back, And he looked like a peddler, just opening his pack.

His eyes-how they twinkled! His dimples how merry! His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry! His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow, And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow.

The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth, And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath. He had a broad face and a little round belly, That shook when he laughed, like a bowlful of jelly!

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf, And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself! A wink of his eye and a twist of his head, Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread.

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work, And filled all the stockings, then turned with a jerk. And laying his finger aside of his nose, And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose!

He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle, And away they all flew like the down of a thistle. But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight, "Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good-night!"

A5 | Opinions Las Cru Christmas wishes to all who celebrate Christmas

America is tolerant of all faiths, but still a Christian nation

To all who celebrate their connection to a religion now or at any other time of the year, I bid you good cheer. It does not matter which religion, I am happy for you. Within my circle, I say "Merry Christmas."

Within my circle, I say "Merry Christmas." It is not said to be aggressive toward other religions, I am simply celebrating Christmas.

We who celebrate Christmas must defend Christmas because some in our country would remove it. For example, a few years ago, I wrote my annual Christmas column and was surprised when a local legislator publicly called me an anti-Semite because I wrote favorably about Christmas.

I do not step back from my Christian beliefs despite name calling. That column brought up an interesting question: Congress declared the Christmas holiday more than 100 years ago. They specifically used the word "Christmas." It seems Congress indicated this country is a Christian nation by such a designation.

People of other faiths can protest that our country has no business celebrating Christmas. Perhaps we should put it to a vote. Once and for all, let Congress vote Christmas or not. Then no one could destroy Christmas if Congress affirms.

Yes, I know that our political leaders will not put it to a vote because they have no guts. While I am not trying to force this view upon anyone, I am just stating the obvious. This is a Christian nation that is very tolerant of all religions.

In other countries, there is not much religious tolerance. In the Middle East, you would get your head cut off for your Christian beliefs. My issue is to tolerate other beliefs but not let those beliefs take over my country. I do not want to force my religion on anyone any more than I want to be forced into another religion.

Years ago, I was the board chair of a campus ministry. Our building was rarely used on Saturdays in the summer. A different campus student union was working on their building and asked if they could use our building on Saturdays for a month. I said yes and brought it to the board.

Some board members were scandalized, but I held firm. The issue I felt most concerned about at a college campus was the unchurched. I was glad for every member of a student union. I had spent my undergraduate life at this student union. I still went to other campus student unions upon occasion and did not look at them as the enemy.

It was a bit of a tussle, but the board finally approved the use of our student union building by a different denomination while they fixed their building. The interesting thing was, over the next few months we did a couple of joint projects with this other student union and it was great.

At Christmas, I hold all religions in my heart and pray that each serves its believers well. I have room in my heart for a love of other religions, as long as they do not try to take me over.

Again, I am defending my belief, not trying to put it upon anyone else. Further, if someone wants to work on a day I consider holy, all the best to them, and the same for me.

It is the season of giving in my religion. In college 40 years ago, the question of giving came up in one of our Bible study sessions.

Some thought the appropriate gift was 10 percent. Another student thought that we should give until it hurts.

I was sitting next to a student named Randy who shook his head, "You should never give until it hurts. That is ridiculous. Rather, what you should do is give until it stops hurting."

It is my wish that all Americans can worship as they wish. Me, I will be the one singing and saying "Merry Christmas."

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Animal husbandry

Somewhere in the annals of land grant colleges, the ag departments converted from offering a degree in animal husbandry to a degree in animal science.

As far back as 1628, "husbandry" was defined as agricultural produce, land under cultivation, farming. The word husband also implies a caretaker of land and livestock, a hands-on activity.

From shepherds watching their flocks by night as described in the Bible up to farm managers milking cows, showing fat steers and roping at the branding fire, animal husbandry was an appropriate title for a bachelor's degree for a century.

As our knowledge of genetics, physiology, nu-trition and medicine grew, many students began to specialize. Now we have, to mention a few, range management, horticulture, veterinary technology, statistics, parasitology, economics, wool growing, poultry and hogs. To be able to master the information required for a specialty, it became apparent that an animal husbandry degree did not describe the variety and extent of the knowledge required. A basic understanding of math, chemistry, anatomy, biology - both animal and plant – and economics soon became the norm. Their level of learning expanded and eventually the official conversion from husbandryman to scientist became a more accurate description.

I like to think, when I look at the huge industry that animal production has become, the description of "husbandryman" still has a place.

Much of ag production has been mechanized; dairy barns, confinement operations, computer driven self-feeders in chicken houses and in hog barns, hydraulic chutes and covered barns, for example. But no matter the beast, all along the way, the hands-on touch of a human is involved.

Much of ag production has been mechanized.

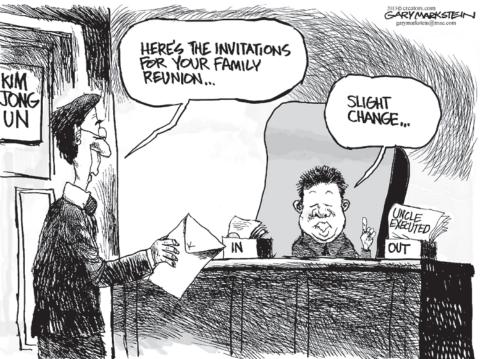

The animal we saw, or felt, or tended to; milked three times a day, observed from a'horseback in a feedlot pen, walked house, checked farrowing crates, layer hens, calving barns, sheep jugs, while feeding hay, plowing snow These procedures cannot be learned from a book. They are learned from experience. It defines the difference between raising livestock with quality checks on a daily basis by a savvy husbandryman versus the derogatory characterization of the process as "factory farming."

You cannot just turn on a button at one end of the hog barn, let robots take over and take him off at the other end cut up and wrapped.

So, though we proudly consider ourselves knowledgeable animal scientists, we could and should still be considered compassionate husbandrymen first. They go together.

Monument supported

Part of what makes the United States so special is the public lands that citizens and visitors from around the world can still explore. From hiking to camping to hunting, our nation holds places that we can visit with our families and create lasting memories.

The Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks region in Doña Ana County is one of those special places. These public lands are currently not permanently protected, but hopefully that is about to change. This month, U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich proposed legislation to protect Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks as a national monument.

I recently participated in a tour of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks with other veterans and their families. It was a special day for me personally, as I gained a deeper appreciation and understanding of just how significant a role this area played in our country's military history, particularly the World War II aerial bombing targets in the Sierra de Las Uvas.

After participating in the tour, I believe more than ever this region deserves permanent protection as a national monument. I salute Udall and Heinrich for their work to make the monument a reality, and hope President Barack Obama will join their efforts.

into public schools to better prepare students for possible jobs at the spaceport.

School systems in the two counties for the past two years have put that money into programs teaching science, technology, engineering and math skills, also called STEM education.

Recently, state Rep. Patricia Lundstrom, D-Gallup, has objected, saying the GRT money for school programs is counter to the state's equalization funding formula that gives the same amount of operational money to school districts based on the number of students, their ages and educational needs. She has introduced a bill to have the local spaceport GRT portion added to the statewide funding formula so that it doesn't create situations where other local governments can increase their taxes and create unequal school systems, according to the county's lobbyist Charlie Marquez.

The question will come down to whether a national monument.

The bill by Udall and Heinrich incorporates much of the local proposal. In a press release announcing the bill's introduction Thursday, Dec. 12, the senators said the proposal would "preserve some of Doña Ana County's most iconic landscapes, while boosting the region's tourism and outdoor economy, creating jobs and improving hunting and hiking opportunities."

The monument would be managed by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) and the senators noted studies that show that predict designating the area as a national monument would generate $7.4 million in new economic activity annually through visitors and business opportunities.

"Designating a national monument would put the Organ Mountains and other spectacular areas of Doña Ana County on recreation City Manager Robert Garza said discussion inside of City Hall about the ordinance has planners looking at ways to open up signage rules a bit, because it can sometimes be hard to find places of business.

Councillor Miguel Silva said he was concerned that the new ordinance would result in prohibitions against other activities on the sidewalks, such as food, beverage, outdoor lighting and entertainment during events.

Hume said special events such as Winterfest could get a waiver to allow these kinds of other activity on the sidewalk.

Silva said he felt comfortable going forward with this, "but we may have to revisit this in the future."

Mayor Pro Tem Greg Smith said he is seeing the city succeeding in developing more interest in Downtown by making the area more engaging and interactive with people, which the money it has received from the spaceport GRT, which for Gadsden totals $2 million.

The way the bill is currently written, it would go into effect July 1, 2014, impacting the school districts' current fiscal year from November to October. If the bill can't be stopped, the legislation should be at least amended to not take effect until the 2015 fiscal year, said Commissioner Ben Rawson.

Commissioner David Garcia said the legislation needs to be stopped altogether.

"This will just be devastating to our children and definitely disrupt the way we operate our schools," Garcia said. "I just want to go on the record saying that this just can't happen. We can't allow this to happen."

Rawson said he concurred with Garcia that the county needs to "fight this any way we can."

Commissioner Leticia Benavidez said she was baffled how after three years of the spaceport GRT being in place that only now a legislator is objecting.

"I want to keep the money for the children because that is what we voted for," Benavidez said.

Robledo and Uvas mountains, home to game animals, such as pronghorn sheep and deer, as well as rare plants and animals, some found nowhere else in the world, including the Organ Mountains pincushion cactus. It encompasses Broad Canyon, Sleeping Lady Hills, Rough and Ready Hills, Picacho Peak, Mount Riley, Peña Blanca and Bishop's Cap. Also in the land are more than 5,000 archeologically and culturally significant sites, including Geronimo's Cave, Billy the Kid's Outlaw Rock, Spanish settlement sites and numerous petroglyphs and pictographs.

Jeff Steinborn, southern New Mexico director for the Wilderness Alliance, said the senators crafted the legislation by talking to all the local stakeholders, including White Sands Missile Range, Fort Bliss and the U.S. Border Patrol. The national monument portions of the proposal would be less restrictive than the wilderness areas.

The bill preserves existing grazing rights and vehicular access to all roads leading to currently used water wells, troughs and corrals, since the city officially owns the sidewalks. Should someone trip over a sign or walk into a display and hurt themselves, they would likely sue the city, he said. Miyagishima asked city of-those concerns.

County Manager Julia Brown said the Sierra County Commission was passing a resolution similar to Doña Ana County's, objecting to the new interpretation of the spaceport money for the schools, in large part because that's what voters were told the local portion would go to when the GRT increase was put before voters.

Chairman Billy Garrett described Lundstrom's stance as a "very unfortunate reading" of the action taken by the two counties. "Aberrant" is the word Garrett used to describe the possibility of the state forcing schools in the two counties to pay back all the money they've received from the spaceport GRT, as well as a breach of trust with voters, he said.

"It's something that I cannot speak strongly enough about," Garrett said.

People from the two counties concerned about the proposal, he said, need to make their voices heard during the next 30-day legislative session, starting Tuesday, Jan. 21, 2014. At the very least, Garrett said, the effective date of the proposed changed must be pushed back to at least give school officials the chance to prepare.

according to the senators. The proposal would enhance hunting and other outdoor recreation opportunities and strengthen border security in the region by releasing wilderness study areas within five miles of the international border, creating a buffer area for Border Patrol activities and adding an additional road for border security purposes, the senators said.

Opposition to the original wilderness proposal - most ranchers and off-roading enthusiasts - also was against petitioning Obama for designating national monument status under powers given by the Antiquities Act. The Western Heritage Alliance, formerly People for Preserving Our Western Heritage, listed as organizations opposed to broad national monument designation by presidential order as the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, Elephant Butte Irrigation District, several soil and water conservation districts, the state and county farm and livestock bureaus and the Mesilla Valley Sportsmen's Alliance. The opposition supports preserving only the Organ Mountains.

Christmas bird count

The Audubon Christmas Bird Count (CBC) is taking place through Sunday, Jan. 5, 2014.

Tens of thousands of volunteers throughout the Americas will take part in the adventure that has become a family tradition among generations, including more than 35 locations in New Mexico. Families and students, birders and scientists – armed with binoculars, bird guides and checklists – will go out on the annual mission to count birds, often starting before dawn in the freezing cold.

Each year, the Audubon CBC mobilizes more than 70,000 volunteer bird counters in more than 2,300 locations across the Western Hemisphere, from above the Arctic Circle to Tierra del Fuego. The CBC utilizes the power of volunteers to track the health of bird populations at a scale that professional scientists could never accomplish alone.

The Audubon CBC is a citizen science project organized by the National Audubon Society. Even novice birders are welcome on the count. They are teamed up with expert birders who can identify all the birds, but the novice adds another set of ears and eyes. It can be a great learning experience. There is no fee to participate and the quarterly report, American Birds, will be available online.

As the state office of the National Audubon Society, Audubon New Mexico's mission is to conserve and restore natural ecosystems, focusing on birds, other wildlife and their habitats for the benefit of humanity and the earth's biological diversity.

For more information, contact Staci Stevens at 202-294-3101, sstevens@ audubon.org or visit http:// nm.audubon.org.

Utility scams on the rise

El Paso Electric (EPE) warns customers of nationwide utility scams involving individuals falsely representing utility companies, in particular during the holiday season. EPE has seen a rise in customer complaints from scam artists requesting immediate payment or services will be terminated. Other scams involve asking for personal information or simply demanding payment for current balances.

""Customers should be aware that EPE will never ask for payment over the phone," said EPE CEO Tom Shockley. "If there is any question about the authenticity of anyone claiming to represent our company, you should contact us directly and report the issue immediately."

- EPE recommends the following:
- Be suspicious of callers asking for payment, especially if they ask to be paid with a prepaid debit card. EPE has various payment methods through authorized payment options.

Sav-O-Mat robbed

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps identify the man who committed an armed robbery at an El Paseo Road gas station.

Las Cruces Police learned that shortly after 9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 29, a man armed with a black handgun entered the Sav-O-Mat store, 920 El Paseo Road, and demanded cash from an employee. The suspect left the store on foot heading westbound through an alley toward Main Street.

Police have reason to believe this is the same suspect who committed an armed robbery at a Family Dollar store the following day, Saturday, Nov. 30, in Anthony, Texas.

The suspect was described as possibly Hispanic, in his late 20s or early 30s, approximately 5-feet-7-inches tall with a thin build. He was wearing a black jacket with what appears to be "Ecko" in white lettering across the chest and white stripes on the jacket sleeves. He was also wearing a gray beanie, black pants and white shoes.

During both armed robberies, the suspect attempted to conceal his identity by covering his face with a white bandana.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspect is asked to contact Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Mayfield student government helps with Stocking Stuffers

Families of prison inmates to get some cheer

Mayfield High School student government has helped with Stocking Stuffers annually for the past six years.

The program is a part of the New Mexico Corrections Department's Family and Prison Services, to help families of prison inmates during the holidays, said MHS social studies teacher and student government sponsor Donna Rosati.

For the Stocking Stuffers program, Mayfield students "brought in small gift items to put in the stockings and Mayfield Student Government Association students bought the stockings with their money from the homecoming dance," Rosati said.

Mayfield High School students help stuff stockings that will be given to family members who have parents currently in prison.

"I think the holiday season should be a special time of year, especially for little kids. I love that I am able to help these children have a happy holiday season," Morrow said. "It feels great to know that we're making a child's holiday just a little bit merrier."

"Giving back to the community, especially during the holidays, makes me feel happy," Olson said. "Being able to help change a life is more than I could ever ask for."

"This is our sixth year providing the stockings for their annual Christmas party for the children while their parents visit spouses. Mayfield Student Government will continue to be involved for many years to come," Rosati said.

Mayfield student government holds a meeting in the high school's media center.

Mayfield National Honor Society gets involved Projects benefit school and community

Here are some of the Mayfield High School National Honor Society (NHS) projects throughout the year:

Alameda Fall Festival

With the help of NHS, Alameda Elementary School students finished their haunted house with a spectacular result. The day of the fall festival, Oct. 24, the Mayfield students also set up booths such as face paintings, and volunteered their help with other organizations as well as the launch of the haunted house.

Keep Las Cruces Beautiful

The Mayfield NHS set aside their Saturday morning on Oct. 18 to participate in the citywide event by keeping Mayfield's campus beautiful. Students joined in by picking up a trash bag and a pair of gloves and scavenging to find anything from gum wrappers to cardboard boxes. Many trash bags were filled during the process.

Campus cleanup events are a fun way for Mayfield NHS members to help their school and bond with other members of the club. The campus cleanup committee plans on scheduling campus cleanups several times during the school year so students can show pride for their school with a litter-free campus.

United Against Hunger Parade

The Mayfield High School-Las Cruces High School Rivals United Against Hunger Parade Nov. 2 was a chance to see the two schools as not just rival teams, but also that they could come together to help a worldwide problem. Mayfield NHS chose to participate in this festivity by building a float from scratch. Countless hours of many devoted students went into constructing and designing a float to drive in the parade. There were bins for canned food donations along the streets of the parade route.

Hot chocolate

The Mayfield NHS has begun selling hot chocolate in the cold mornings of the 2013 fall. Sales begin promptly at 7:30 a.m. to the students of Mayfield High School. Profits from the hot chocolate sales go to Mayfield NHS holiday project organizations.

Blankets

On Dec. 11, Mayfield NHS members began making tie-together blankets for Jardin de los Niños homeless childcare of Las Cruces. Contributions are also being made to individuals in the Gadsden Independent School District area.

Local rivalry is No. 2 nationally N. Carolina rivalry beats Cruces versus Mayfield Bulletin Staff Report

Testing issues dominate town hall

Poverty, parents affect student academic performance By Todd G. Dickson tests and giving tests that it's getting harder for teachers to be

Las Cruces Bulletir

As part of a town hall series by KRWG TV Channel 22, the New Mexico State University television studio was filled Wednesday, Dec. 18, with students, teachers and parents to talk about the status of education.

From statements by the town hall panelists and audience questions, the issue of testing continues to be a topic of high concern.

State Sen. Bill Soules, who is a teacher, said there are two main concerns about testing. For teachers, it's what he called "misuse of the data," because test scores are now going to be factored into teacher evaluations.

'That's not what the tests are for," Soules said.

The other issue is how much testing is going on, he said. Teachers are spending so much time preparing students for creative in the classroom, he said. "Education is much richer than a score you're getting on a test," Soules said.

Jane Asche, who did a study on schools for the League of Women Voters of Greater Las Cruces, said socioeconomic status is the greatest factor in student outcome and there is a high number of students living in poverty who attend Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS).

Also critical to student performance, she said, is parent involvement. LCPS is trying to reach out to parents through efforts including training to help them be more involved in their children's education.

Patrick Sanchez, president of the Las Cruces National Education Association and Andrea Fletcher of LCPS were the program's other panelists. The one-hour program will be aired at 5 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 21, and at 11 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 22.

This season, the sophomore guard for AIB College of Business in Iowa has the green light to shoot.

The Oñate High School graduate is the team's primary perimeter shooter. He has converted 19-of-53 three-pointers, both team highs, starting in 10 of the 11 games he has played. He averaged seven points, fourth on the team, and was second in assists.

"He has a nice looking jump shot," AIB coach Cory Jenkins said. "I rely on him to shoot a lot of three-pointers."

The 6-foot-2 Rosales played in 26 of 31 games last year and averaged 5.1 points per game. He converted a team high 27 three-pointers.

He spent the off-season doing a lot of running and lifting to be even more fit this year. His skills work centered on honing his shooting.

"I worked on getting to the basket and on my three-point shooting," Rosales said.

Thus far, he's been more aggressive offensively, ranking second on the team See Rosales on page A18

Cazares selected on defensive team; Franklin in draft

The 2013 FBS All-Independent Team has been named by the nationwide media panel responsible for the Football Bowl Division (FBS) Independent Player of the Week awards. Five members of the New Mexico State University football team earned recognition.

Senior safety Davis Cazares was named to the All-Independent Defensive team, while offensive linemen sophomore Andy Cunningham and senior Davonte Wallace, along with junior wide receiver Austin Franklin and senior linebacker Trashaun Nixon, earned honorable mention honors.

Cazares led the Aggies in tackles for the second straight season with 109, ranking him in the top 10 in the country in total tackles. Cazares also led the team with two interceptions. He ended his career in crimson and white with 245 total tackles, six tackles for a loss, six pass break-ups, two forced fumbles and a blocked kick.

Nixon recorded 93 tackles on the year, leading NMSU with 14 tackles for a loss and three sacks. For his career, Nixon tallied 189 tackles in just two seasons with NMSU, adding five sacks and 23 tackles for a loss.

Franklin caught 52 passes for 670 yards and seven touchdowns in just eight games this season. He played in 33 games for the Aggies over the past three seasons, catching 160 passes for 2,439 yards and 19 touchdowns, all of which ranks him in the top 10 in school history. NMSU overcomes Lobos in The Pit experience on our team. It is great to come out UNM rally falls short, Aggies win 67-61 with a win like this one." NMSU shot 7-of-12 from behind the

Bulletin Staff Report

The New Mexico State University men's basketball team (9-5) ended their grueling fourgame road trip with a solid win over in-state rival University of New Mexico (7-3) Tuesday, Dec. 17, in The Pit to give the Aggies their second win over the Lobos in Albuquerque in three years.

Junior guard K.C. Ross-Miller helped hold off a late Lobo rally by hitting 8-for-8 from the free throw line, keeping his composure in front of 15,411 loud fans. Six of Ross-Miller's free throws were made at or under the 30 second mark in the second half.

Senior forward Renaldo Dixon contributed a huge block on UNM star Kendall Williams with 11 seconds remaining to help seal the victory.

Junior guard Daniel Mullings played well on both ends of the court, posting 14 points while going 5-of-6 from the free throw line and adding five assists and four steals.

The Aggies narrowly outshot New Mexico 37.5 percent to 34.6 percent, but the Lobos had one more rebound than NMSU (37-36). Three different Aggies scored in double figures, and sophomore center Sim Bhullar was huge on the defensive end with five blocks.

The Lobos made it interesting in the final minute of play, pressuring the Aggies into two turnovers, which led to UNM points. The Lobos got to within two points at 61-59 with 51 seconds on the clock, but great free throw shooting by Ross-Miller and the Dixon block put the home team away. The Aggies held UNM without a 3-pointer, the first time a team has held the Lobos without a three since 1991.

"We kept the crowd at bay for most of the game, but they stepped up there at the end, which made it hard for us," NMSU coach Marvin Menzies said. "It was good that we had some guys step up and that is because we have 3-point arc in the first half, helping the Aggies take a halftime lead in The Pit for the first time since the 2005-06 season. Kevin Aronis led the Aggies with nine first-half points going 3-of-5 from 3-point land. Junior Tshilidzi Nephawe added eight points in the first half, including 4-of-6 from the free throw line.

Menzies said Wednesday, Dec. 18, that it was good to be back in Las Cruces.

'It's good to sleep in my own bed and obviously, getting back in the comfort zone of our own gym," he said. "We'll get back to work to fix a lot of the blemishes.

"Life is good right now."

The Aggies return to the Pan American Center for two games during the holiday season. NMSU plays Northern New Mexico at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 21, and then has a week off before taking on South Alabama at 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 28. Both games are scheduled to air on 103.9-FM with "Voice of the Aggies" Jack Nixon calling the play-by-play action.

while leading the team in receiving in 2012 and 2013.

Wallace was a four-year starter for the Aggies, starting in 48 straight games, most at the left tackle position. In 2013, Wallace allowed only six sacks and recorded 50 knockdowns, while helping his team to a national ranking of eighth in red zone offense.

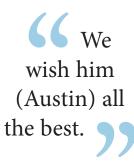

Cunningham led the Aggies in knockdowns in 2013 with 87, recording three games with double digit knockdowns. On the year, Cunningham allowed only two sacks, while playing both offensive guard and tackle.

Aggie coach Doug Martin announced Tuesday, Dec. 17, that Franklin has declared himself eligible for the 2014 NFL draft.

"It was brought to my attention that Austin (Franklin) had declared for the NFL draft, after doing some research I found this to be true," Martin said.

with 77 attempts from the field. "Last year I couldn't really get him to shoot," Jenkins said. "He's more confident in the jump shot. He definitely knows when to shoot."

The team's motion offense works to the advantage of Rosales, whose quick release can exploit a defense that is off-guard.

We do a lot of passing and cutting," the coach said. "He gets a lot of his shots off the fast break."

Rosales has scored 10 or more points three times, including a team-high 14 in the second game, but he sometimes has been inconsistent, having games with more misfires than baskets.

Defensively, he holds his own, Jenkins said, though that remains an area for improvement.

"He tries to get the job done," he said. "He definitely works hard."

Three classic films give us lasting inspiration

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

My three favorite movies during the holiday season are "It's a Wonderful Life" "Miracle on 34th Street" and "A Christmas Carol." All three are classics. All three are inspirational. All three offer lessons we all can use to be better people.

"It's a Wonderful Life" tells the story of a small town businessman, George Bailey (Jimmy Stewart), whose savings and loan bank comes up short of cash on Christmas Eve after a confused clerk loses the deposit.

Faced by a surprise bank audit and gripped by panic, Bailey is struck by the thought that, as far as providing for his family, he is worth more dead than alive, due to a small life insurance policy. Standing on a darkened bridge high above the freezing, roiling waters below, George's guardian angel, Clarence, takes over, and proceeds to reveal to Bailey how things might have been in Bedford Falls if he had never been born.

As he returns home, Bailey is met by a reception of townspeople who have all chipped in and made up the $5,000 bank shortfall. It's a wonderful life.

Every year my emotional viewing of "It's a Wonderful Life" evokes feelings of joy and appreciation for all the blessings we enjoy as Americans.

True, there continue to be underprivileged people, sick people, homeless folks, the poor and the hungry, all underscoring the fact that our abundance is not shared by every American. We have to work on that, but America is the safest, most bountiful place on earth, and from day to day, we often lose consciousness of that.

No one was born to be a failure; there is opportunity everywhere. No one is poor who has friends, and this is the time of year when we can look around and be thankful for all the people who make life a joy.

As a clinical psychologist – yup, that's my day job – I see plenty of depressed people week in and week out, and it still surprises me. As for myself, I wonder how can you be depressed in America and in the Land of Enchantment, when the sun shines 350 days a year? It's a wonderful place.

I guess that's why so many immigrant folks want to come and live inside our borders.

If you're a golfer, how can you be sour and bitter and cynical? It's a wonderful game, meant to be played and enjoyed, not obsessed over.

"Miracle on 34th Street" represents one of those seasonal classics that continues to be relevant because of its timeless message of the power of believing. The film is vintage 1947 and is set in Manhattan, as Macy's has hired the perfect Santa for its Christmas battle with department store rival Gimbels. His name is Kris Kringle.

Despite Kringle's popularity and kindness, his boss (Maureen O'Hara) is skeptical, and her daughter Susan (an 8-yearold Natalie Wood) believes that Santa is a myth. When Kris is declared insane and put on trial, Susan and her mother begin to question their lack of faith, as it becomes clear that there is something very special about this "Santa."

My inspiration in "Miracle on 34th Street" comes from the idea that when you believe in something worthwhile and energize your belief with personal imagination, there is such magic, power and genius. Your dreams can come true.

We often seem bound and limited by thinking small, failing to let our true potential shine above all else.

As a person and as a golfer, do you really know what stupendous things you're capable of if you apply yourself?

Kringle is eventually validated and found to be sane by a clever lawyer – only in Hollywood – but in "Miracle," Susan found having faith in something was fulfilling even when it seemed illogical.

The lesson? Sometimes we have to simply trust in our own ability and strength, in the face of seemingly enormous odds. You have to believe.

The other message I get from "Miracle" comes from the pathos connected with Christmas, including my longing for eightstory downtown department stores, with their elevator operators and departments, some of which were called "better dresses" and "notions." Those were the days when your mother would dress up, high heels and all, to go "downtown" with the kids for shopping. Nowadays, when I glance around Walmart, I long for the old days.

As a child, I accompanied my mother to Public Square in Cleveland to do our Christmas shopping at the big department stores: Higbe's, Halle's and Mays, which I thought were cavernous and wondrous.

I find today there is something empty about the "mall" and the sterile strip centers by comparison. It's the same longing I get for my old persimmon driver, leather golf bag and metal spikes. I'm not sure I could break 90 with that stuff today.

Still, every time I play an old Donald Ross golf course, I'm transported back in time to an era when gentlemen never wore blue jeans on the golf course and took their hats off at the dining table.

My all-time holiday favorite is Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." Over the years, there have been several movie versions of "Scrooge," as well as hundreds of important stage productions, and even a wonderful animated film that made its debut in 2009. The very best, I think, is the 1995 film starring George C. Scott.

Everyone, of course, knows the classic tale: A mean and miserly Ebenezer Scrooge, embittered and lonely by his singular pursuit of money, is visited by three spirits on Christmas eve, summoned by his long-deceased former business partner, Jacob Marley.

Marley seems intent on sparing old Scrooge an eternity of wandering through the nether-world burdened by the heavy chains he forged in life through failing to care enough about the business of all mankind. Scrooge awakens on Christmas morning a new man.

"They've done it all in one night," he muses, amazed in his own personal, miraculous metamorphosis.

The message left to us by Dickens is all about transformation. Nearly all Dickens' novels are permeated with themes dealing with the plight of the poorer classes, a plea for mercy for the downtrodden and the quest of common folk to rise above. Indeed, "A Christmas Carol" is no different in that regard.

What is curious is the starkly unmitigated fantasy of sudden personal transformation. Personality changes don't really happen like that, although it's fun to imagine a mean, surly, unlikable individual suddenly seeing the light and taking on behavior that transforms him into a likeable, generous, mindful person.

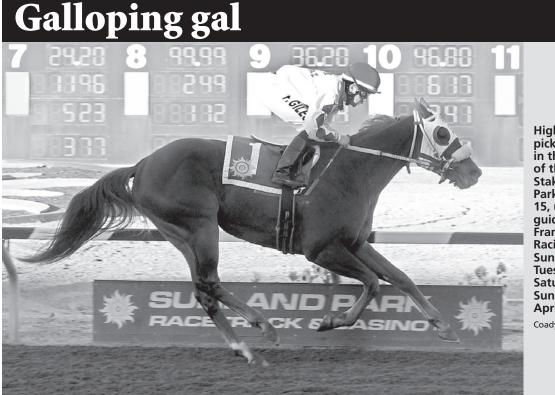

In life and in golf, we are sometimes challenged by the possibility of, or, mostly, the urgent need for, major personal change. For most of us, there is usually something important that happens – a precipitating event – which startles us into the realization of how useful it would be to change ourselves.

For me, that moment came 26 years ago, at age 45, when I decided to re-invent myself and become a medical professional.

In my years of teaching golf with partner Herb Wimberly, I have seen plenty of amazing playing skill transformations and personal makeovers among golfers. Please understand that, unlike Mr. Scrooge, personal reformation won't happen overnight. Still, the good news is that change for the better will open up a whole new wonderful world for you.

As a final note, it is with a heavy heart that I must report the passing of Herb Wimberly's wife, Carlene, late last week. Mrs. Wimberly was a very special person to the Blanchards and all who knew her. Our sympathies are with Herb and his family.

The New Mexico State women's basketball team (3-6) heads to California to meet UC Irvine at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 18. The game comes after a week off for the Aggies. The teams last met during the 2012 Hotel Encanto Thanksgiving Classic, when NMSU picked up a 50-44 win over the Anteaters.

NMSU is led by a trio of players scoring in double figures. Freshman guard Vanessa Garner is leading with 12.7 point per game, followed by sophomore guard Sasha Weber at 11.1 ppg and Las Cruces native Elena Holguin at 11.0 ppg. Freshman forward September Offutt is the leading rebounder for the Aggies, pulling down 7.3 rebounds per game.

Fans can listen to the game live on KSNM-AM 570 with Jay Sanderson making the call. The pregame show is set for 15 minutes before tip-off. Live stats for the game are available at www. nmstatesports.com.

The Aggies last played Dec. 7 against the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, a game they lost 65-55.

The team makes the short trip north to face Cal State Fullerton at 8 p.m. Monday, Dec. 23. NMSU will then travel to San Antonio for the UT-San Antonio Holiday Classic Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 28-29.

A caring Christmas

Aggie fans can warm children's hearts

With Christmas Day getting closer and closer, the Aggies have come up with a special night just four days before the holiday that will warm your heart and fill your need for basketball fun.

This Saturday, Dec. 21, the men's hoops team hosts Northern New Mexico in the annual "Toys for Tots" night.

That's right, a chance to see your favorite men's team in action paired with the opportunity to help out those in our community.

The game tips off at 7:05 p.m. against the Eagles, and if you contribute two new, unwrapped toys to the Toys for Tots giving campaign, your ticket is only $5. Young buckaroos 12 and under can all come in for free. It's like a little extra stocking stuffer. That's an offer any saddlehand sees as a good deal. Every year, the toys ol' Pete and the Aggies collect fill the donation boxes to the top. You know why? 'Cause this town has Pete is mighty thankful for all the caring Aggie fans.

The Aggie men will do their part to give you the high-flying, slam-dunkin' fun to send you off for the holidays with a good feeling inside.

Pete is mighty thankful for all the caring Aggie fans that share every year, and hopes all of you have a great holiday.

See you at the game Saturday night! Tickets for the game are, as always, available at the Pan Am box office, online or by calling Santa's Helpers at 646-1420.

What a great victory by the men's basketball team on Tuesday night in Albuquerque. With the win, the Aggies secured a 3-1 record against rivals the University of Texas at El Paso and the University of New Mexico this season.

The game was won in front of a sell-out crowd, and all cheering in the end were wearing crimson and white. Rivalry victories taste so much better. The Aggies are about to embark on the "rest of the season." Likely, the Aggies will be favored in every remaining game until the NCAA Tournament. That is a testament to the state of the program, and also puts a huge target on the team's back. Based on what we saw on Tuesday night, I think the target do it is the state of the state of the program, and also puts a huge target on the team's back. Based on what team will handle it in stride.

I like this team. They are fun to watch. They play with passion and heart. There are guys all over the floor after loose balls and the offense seems to be playing in rhythm. The defense has the ability to lock teams down for long stretches at a time.

I believe that the pieces are in place for a great run to the NCAA Tourney.

Looking at the WAC schedule and the two remaining home games on the non-conference schedule, I expect the Aggies to win every single one of our remaining home games. It would mark the secondstraight year the Aggies won all but one game at home.

You are almost guaranteed to go home after the game with another Aggie victory in your pocket. If the Aggies can run the table from here – and they certainly can – it would be a 30-win season heading into the NCAA Tournament.

How many times have the Aggies won 30 games in one season? Never. Is it time for you to join the bandwagon? That is a question only you can answer. But, when the season is done and the dust has settled, are you going to be one of the people who stayed on the sideline and missed a lot of fun? I hope your answer is no, because this very well could be the first-ever 30-win

NM State team! Single-game tickets start at just $8, and there is a great mini plan available where you get 12 singlegame tickets good for any game for the price of 10. Or, you can partner with our friends from www. grabitsite.com and get $64 in value for your $8 ticket purchase.

Give this team a chance. Let us entertain you at the game. Have some fun. I hope to see you in the Pan Am. Aggie Up!

- Eric R. Shelton of Santa Fe, who has 29 years of law enforcement experience and is the former chief of the New Mexico Department of Public Safety Motor Transportation Police and former assistant chief of police for the City of El Paso

Las Cruces Police Chief Richard Williams is retiring Friday, Dec. 27, and Garza said he hopes to make a selection by Friday, Dec. 20.

At the City Council meeting Monday, Dec. 16, councillors and city officials praised Williams for reorganizing the department and improving police relations with the public.

"In a short period of time, he has done a tremendous amount of good for our police department," Garza said.

Williams said the changes and upgrades of vehicles have all been part of his focus to have the department serve the public better. The culmination of those efforts has resulted in the department being accredited by the state, he said, which is the largest police organization in the state to achieve that status.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima thanked him for being accessible and professional.

"You really took the department up to another level," said Councillor Miguel Silva.

Fort Sill Apaches sue Martinez

The Fort Sill Apache Tribe (FSA) filed a lawsuit Tuesday, Dec. 18, with the state Supreme Court against Gov. Susana Martinez and her administration for not recognizing the tribe.

The lawsuit alleges the state is discriminating against it by excluding it from consultations with other tribes, barring it from the state's annual state-tribal summit and refusing to include it on a list of recognized New Mexico tribes, which prevents FSA from obtaining access to state capital projects funding and other programs and benefits.

"It is a shame that it has come to this," said Tribal Chairman Jeff Haozous in a press release announcing the lawsuit. "The Fort Sill Apaches have made every effort to work with the governor and the State of New Mexico. Despite these efforts the administration is refusing to follow the law and to recognize our equal rights under New Mexico law."

The lawsuit seeks an order from the Supreme Court requiring Martinez to recognize the tribe under state law and requiring Martinez and her administration to include it in the annual state-tribal summit.

"Being recognized as a state tribe is much bigger than being invited to the tribal summit and being included in the state-held contact list," Haozous said. "It is about recognition and it opens the doorway to many other benefits that all recognized state tribes receive, including collaboration with state agencies and economic development opportunities through infrastructure."

FSA is the successor to the Chiricahua and Warm Springs Apache Tribes. The tribe has property at Akela Flats near Deming that it bought in 1998, which was made tribal trust land in 2002 and designated a reservation in November 2011. The tribe intends to open a gaming casino on the property, which currently has a tobacco store and restaurant.

Six turtles are available for adoption for $15 each at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley, 3551 Bataan Memorial West.

Turtles await adoption Abandoned pets taken to ASCMV

Six pet turtles are among the many animals currently awaiting adoption at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley.

All six are red-eared slider turtles, according to shelter Director Dr. Beth Vesco-Mock. Three were surrendered to the shelter after someone found them abandoned in their backyard and three were reportedly seen crawling along a street on the East Mesa before they were picked up.

Red-eared slider turtles, named for the red dash on the side of their heads, are the most popular pet turtles in the United States and are known to live in water and on land.

The shelter is not equipped to properly provide a natural habitat for the turtles, Vesco-Mock said.

"Like any other pet at the shelter, they need to go to a good home," she said.

Each turtle is available for a $15 adoption fee, which covers the costs of caring for the turtles since they were brought in last month.

For more information, contact the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley at 382-0018, or stop by the shelter offices at 3551 Bataan Memorial West.

OBITUARY

CARLEENE WIMBERLY March 18, 1933 to December 12, 2013

Carleene Wimberly, 80, of Las Cruces, New Mexico, passed away, December 12, 2013 with family and friends by her side.

Carleene was born to the late Floye and Carl Boney, March 18, 1933, in Oklahoma City. She was married to Herbert Wimberly, for nearly 40 of the greatest years of his life.

Carleene received a BA in Education from New Mexico State University in 1975. She was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and P.E.O. Throughout her life, she was the recipient of multiple awards including the Diana Award, Who's Who of American Women, and Family Circle Mother of the Year. Out of her own home, Carleene owned and operated Johnson Children's Day Nursery School for 15 years, operating alongside her eldest daughter Teri, during which she also earned her Masters degree in Counseling from NMSU.

In addition to being a guidance counselor, Carleene was also the Christian Education Director at St. Paul's United Methodist for 10 years, then continued her career teaching Kindergarten and First Grade in the Las Cruces Public School System. Following her retirement from teaching she continued her private practice in Counseling.

Among these achievements, she was also an accomplished country western songwriter and co-wrote with Mark Medoff, an award winning Children's play and production, "Odyssey of Jeremy Jack."

It is easy to see that Carleene, known as Mom to her children and Mammaw to her grandchildren, had a love and passion for kids. Carleene and Herbie, as she called her husband, were constantly traveling to be with family, making sure to be a part of their children and grandchildren's lives, especially for the big events. On these visits, Mammaw always brought her arts and craft projects with her. Rather it be tye-dying all sorts of clothes, baking turkey cookies, growing Chia pets, or the grandkids were never bored and these times together, never forgotten. Carleene was preceded in death by her parents; her sister and brother in-law: Jeri and Kenneth Abrams; former husbands: James Fioretti and (widowed) Charles Johnson. Carleene is survived by her husband, Herbert Wimberly, and building Christmas ornaments, her brothers and sisters in-law: Don and Wendy Wimberly, Guy and Alice Wimberly.

Carleene is survived by nine children: Teri (Paul) Kuester, Nik Fioretti, Vicky (Mike) Johnson, Susie Fioretti (John Spagnola), Bert (Becky) Wimberly, Debbie Medearis, Jess (Marcy) Johnson, Tim (Dhana) Wimberly, Eric (Rochelle) Wimberly. She is survived by twenty grandchildren: Jason (Audrey) Kuester, Kirby Johnson, Kara (Brant) Bradley, Katie Johnson, Nikki & Sarah Spagnola, Amanda, Laura, Rebecca & Olivia Wimberly, Cade Medearis, Olivia Provencio Johnson, Jace Johnson, Justin (Kelsey) Wimberly, Noah (Aftynn) Wimberly, Matthew, Zachary & Wesley Wimberly, and Kathleen & Victori Wimberly. She is also survived by three great grandchildren: Hannah Rose & Henry Kuester and Paytonjoy Wimberly, as well as two nieces: Marsha (John) Watson and Lezlie (Bob) Ravner.

In lieu of flowers, the family is requesting that donations be made out to NMSU Department of Education (Guidance in Counseling) or St. Paul's United Methodist Church.

Celebration of the life of Carleene Wimberly will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, December, 21, 2013, at St. Paul's United Methodist Church. Arrangements were entrusted to La Paz-Grahams Funeral Home.

A taste of Las Cruces True

Tourism department honors restaurants

Bulletin Staff Report

Monique Jacobson may have the best gig in New Mexico: Touring the state to bestow accolades on locally owned restaurants as part of the New Mexico True tourist promotion campaign.

Jacobson, the state's cabinet secretary for tourism, called on four Mesilla Valley honorees Wednesday, Dec. 11, and Thursday, Dec. 12, to deliver congratulations and T-shirts.

She thanked the business owners for their years of dedication in providing an authentic New Mexican dining experience to locals and tourists alike.

To qualify as a True Culinary Treasure, an establishment must have been in operation for a minimum of 40 years, be family owned and operated, and have no more than two locations.

"Family owned restaurants are the lifeblood of their communities and of tourism in their areas," Jacobson said during her visit to La Posta de Mesilla. "One of the things that makes New Mexico so incredible is our restaurants and their ability to bring culture to life."

While in the valley, Jacobson visited a sampling of winners:

Go Burger Drive In, 1008 E. Lohman Ave., was founded in 1969 and is now owned by Lydia Rivas-Guaderrama and Norma Lopez.

recognized wine list. The building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was built in the late 1840s. The present owner, C. W. "Buddy" Ritter, a fifth generation Mesilla descendent, bought and restored the property at 2410 Calle de Albino in 1984. Filled with ,antiques, the elegant venue is the choice of many local residents for white tablecloth dinners, weddings and other special events.

La Posta de Mesilla at 2410 Calle de Albino, once a stop on the Butterfield Stage, originated as a restaurant in 1939 by Katy Griggs Camuñez. The business grew and now occupies more than 10,000 square feet of the La Posta Compound. After Camuñez died, the business was acquired by a great niece, Jerean Camuñez Hutchinson and her husband, Tom, who continue to serve traditional New Mexico/ Mexican dishes in a colorful setting filled with decorative treasures from Mexico.

Chope's Bar and Café at 16145 state Highway 28 in La Mesa, serving homestyle Mexican food since 1915, is known for its chile rellenos and green chile stew. Chope's has been handed down through multiple generations. The name came from Jose "Chope" Benevides, whose mother started the business in the family home. The neighborhood gives a glimpse of small town New Mexican life.

Also named as New Mexico True Culinary Treasures were:

Dick's Café at 2305 S. Valley Drive, which offers American and Mexican meals. Founded in 1959 by Dick and Sue Perez, Dick's currently is owned Adrian Perez. Dick's salsa now is bottled and sold widely.

El Sombrero Patio Café at 363 S. Espina St. is owned by Pat Crowley.

Hiebert's Fine Foods at 525 E. Madrid Ave., founded in 1947 by J.W. Hiebert, is famous for batter-dipped and fried steak fingers with gravy, red chile sauce, jalapeños, or chile con queso. Danny Medina, father of current owner Anna Medina, originated the dish. My Brother's Place Restaurant and Billiard Parlor, 334 S. Main St. is owned by the Gutierrez family. Founded in 1967, it has been handed down through three generations. The broad Mexican menu is composed of heirloom family recipes from the kitchens of the Gutierrez, Barela and Romero families from the Mesilla Valley.

Simple treasures reflect local heritage, lifestyle

By Alta LeCompte

Imagine last-minute holiday shopping in a whole new way: keeping it simple and enjoying the experience.

The key is choosing a local destination in which to shop.

The Southwest Environmental Center, New Mexico Farm & Ranch Museum and La Posta de Mesilla - to name just a few off-beat, unhurried and fun-to visit-venues - stock gifts with local stories to tell.

Merry greetings to all Shopping was never this much fun.

After choosing a destination, decide on a theme that reflects the recipient's interests local foods, culture, sports, history, wine or outdoor adventure, for example.

The experience that follows will feel more like a vacation than an obligation.

Destination: Mesilla

A relaxing Sunday brunch at La Posta pairs well with picking up a gift for a friend: some Besito Caliente blackberry chile sauce from The Truck Farm or salsa from the New Mexico State University Chile Institute. Beyond food, there are T-shirts, chile-bedecked tea towels and talavera wares.

Chocolate Lady at 2379 Calle De Guadalupe and Heart of the Desert Pistachios at 2355 Calle de Guadalupe offer nearby places to extend the foodie shopping excursion. Just across the calle from La Posta is the Billy the Kid store, crammed with souvenirs for history buffs with a taste for the Wild West and a sense of humor.

2605 Missouri Ave., has served Mexican food since 1964. Established in a small house on Campo Street by J.R. and Ernestina Gallegos, Nopalito's is known for its green chile. In 2010, the Gallegos family opened Nopalito's Galería next door to the Mesquite Street restaurant, which is in a historic adobe.

Roberto's, 908 E. Amador Ave., is owned by Robert Estrada, the creator of The World's Largest Flat Enchilada at the annual Whole Enchilada Fiesta. The restaurant features fast Mexican and New Mexican dishes.

The New Mexico True Culinary Treasures program is spearheaded by the Tourism Department with the help of the New Mexico Restaurant Association.

Dozens of restaurants throughout the state have earned a spot on the True Culinary Treasures list, which began three years ago.

Jacobson said the state Department of Tourism continues to look for more restaurants that meet the criteria for being named a culinary treasure.

Before entering, look up. On the roof above the doorway is a traditional crèche.

Strolling the streets of Mesilla, where colorful decorations are everywhere, leads to shops that offer an array of New Mexico-flavored foods, attire and art.

Destination: Downtown

Unexpected places to find gifts Downtown include the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau and the Southwest Environmental Center.

Playing tourist at the CVB, now open Saturday morning during the must-shop Farmers & Crafts Market of Las Cruces on Main Street Downtown, one can pick up souvenirs for those who won't be home for Christmas. A Las Cruces thermal mug or red-chile shaped stress ball would easily pack into a stocking.

A gift the history buff will treasure and revisit throughout the year, Gordon Owen's "Las Cruces New Mexico 1849-1999: Multicultural Crossroads," is on sale at CVB as well.

A block east on Main Street, the Southwest Environmental Center sells a book it developed for those who want to get out and explore: "Day Hikes and Nature Walks in the Las Cruces – El Paso Area."

For a wide array of books, COAS Books is the place. Known for its used books, the store carries a selection of recently published new books by local authors, many with themes that reflect the history of the region.

Pocketful of history

This year's hot book is "Pocketful of Rockets," COAS owner Mike

Beckett said.

Friday, December 20, 2013

Jim Eckles, "Pocketful of Rockets" is a 500-page history of WSMR that chronicles two periods – prehistory through 1941 and 1942 to the present.

"We're selling a ton," Beckett said. Books on the plant life of the Chihuahuan desert are perennial best sellers as holiday gifts, as are birding books, Beckett said.

He suggested "Sagrado: A photopoetics across the Chicano Homeland," published by University of New Mexico Press and featuring a narrative by NMSU professor Spencer Herrera and photos by local resident Robert Kaiser.

"We keep a lot up front," he said of the large format paperback that abounds with local images such as Mesilla Plaza, weathered doors and folklorico dancers.

Mini-road trips yield Southwest gifts

If the Christmas tree is trimmed and the cookies are out of the oven, why not take the afternoon off and drive out to the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Museum to enjoy "Stitches in Time," "The Alamosa: 4,000 Years of Agricultural History," or The Color of Pie Town," limited-engagement exhibits.

Strategically located off the main lobby is the Eagle Ranch Mercantile, featuring Heart of the Desert pistachios and wines, New Mexican jewelry, gourmet foods, books and souvenirs.

Or take state Highway 28 south, tasting and picking up gifts at various wineries, which also offer accessories for enjoying a taste of the Mesilla Valley.

Thinking of buying or refinancing a home next year?

New 'Qualified Mortgage' rules already in place

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

It's no secret that in the run-up to the 2007 financial crisis, lending rules allowed lenders to make mortgage loans to consumers who didn't have the ability to repay them.

In an effort to make sure those practices are never repeated, or at the very least held to a bare minimum, Congress enacted the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. Overseeing the implementation of the act is the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB). The bureau's role is to make sure that, before lenders ask a borrower to sign on the dotted line, they've made sure he or she can afford to repay the loan. How will they do that?

In a nutshell, it's all about the ability to repay. Typically, lenders must consider eight types of information when qualifying a buyer. The first four consist of current income or assets, current employment status, credit history and the monthly mortgage payment.

The remaining four include the monthly payments on other mortgage loans taken out at the same time, such as second mortgages; mortgage related expenses, such as property taxes and insurance; other debts, such as vehicle payments, store charges, credit cards, student loans, alimony and child support; and debt-toincome ratios. The bottom line is that lenders must determine the borrower can repay the loan.

Mortgages that meet the eight-point test are placed into the newly created category of loans known as "Qualified Mortgages" (QM).

Lenders that make QMs are presumed to have met the Ability-to-Repay requirement. A key component of QM is the borrower's debt-to-income ratio. That's how much of a borrower's gross income is eaten away by monthly payments versus what's left over to pay for things such as food and heat. Fortythree percent is the target ratio, meaning that borrowers should not be spending more than 43 percent of their gross incomes on house payments and all other payments combined.

With few exceptions, QMs cannot contain "toxic" loan features, such as interest-only periods, negative amortization (where mortgage payments fail to cover the actual principal and interest payments) and balloon payments. In addition, loan terms are limited to 30 years.

OMs also have limits on the amount of upfront points and fees the borrower can be charged. A point is equal to 1 percent of the loan amount. Fees include, but are not limited to, other lender-related fees that are charged as part of the loan process and increase the cost of the loan. Points and fees on a qualified mortgage generally cannot exceed 3 percent of the loan amount.

Lenders who make QMs get certain "safe harbor" legal protections, even if the loans default. This means lenders who comply with the Ability-to-Repay rule cannot be sued by a borrower for making a loan the borrower couldn't afford. On the other hand, borrowers who falsify documentation are subject to foreclosure and civil action by the lender and could also be charged by the federal government with the crime of mortgage fraud.

Lenders currently are following the new rules, so loans that close when the act goes into effect on Jan. 10, 2014, meet the new requirements.

Keep in mind that lenders are like shoe stores – they're retailers. Not all shoe stores carry the same shoes and not all lenders carry the same loans. Even if two shoe stores or lenders carry the same product, they may not be priced the same. The bottom line is that it pays to shop around.

See you at closing.

Bulletin Staff Report

Collaboration among SBA-affiliated agencies in southern New Mexico will take on a new look Monday, Jan. 6, when Jo Ann Garay begins her tenure as manager of the Small Business Development Center (SBDC).

"The SBA is a partner with SCORE and SBDC, as is WESST," said Jennifer Craig, regional coordinator for WESST. "Although (the agencies) have always worked together, joining forces in this way is going to be great."

She said the Las Cruces offices of both WESST Enterprise Centers and the SBDC, which is located at the Doña Ana Community College Workforce Center at 2345 E. Nevada Ave., serve Doña Ana and Sierra Counties. Craig said Garay, who has been with

WESST for 13 years, made a "huge contribution" with training, business curriculum development and grant writing.

She assisted clients with their budgeting, asset building, business plans and financial management issues and developed and conducted specialized training for clients and other small business owners.

As a result of her training activities in the Mesilla Valley, she was invited by the nonprofit organization Alianza to provide training for trainers nationwide who assist women dealing with domestic violence, Craig said.

The curriculum she developed was translated into Spanish by Alianza.

Garay was named to Forty under Forty in New Mexico for 2007, a prestigious recognition for young professionals for their business community achievements.

She is a member of the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) and Masterminds LLC, a business professionals organization, as well as an ambassador for the Las Cruces Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Prior to joining WESST, Garay was a medical biller with Ann S. Mercer, MD, PA and Medical Billing Practice Management and a licensed representative and office manager for Allstate Insurance Co. in Las Cruces.

Garay earned a bachelor's degree in human resources management in 2011 from Ashford University, Clinton, Iowa. She graduated with highest honors.

In 1999, she received an associate's degree in computer technology from Doña Ana Community College.

Living wage should be goal

Minimum wage doesn't reduce employment

Business name:

State of the Economy

From Walmart greeters to fast food workers to President Obama to the Las Cruces City Council, there is increasing pressure for an increase in the minimum wage.

They argue that minimum wage isn't sufficient to support a family, which is true. Given the current minimum wage in New Mexico of $7.50, a head of household working full time earns less than a poverty level income.

But is the minimum wage the best way to help low-income workers?

Traditional economic analysis says no. The minimum wage destroys jobs by pricing workers, especially those with low skills, out of the market - or so the argument goes. While those who keep their job are better off, those who lose their jobs are worse off.

Most economists, including me, bought into this analysis. The problem is that it is contradicted by the empirical data. A raft of new studies have found that a higher minimum wage has little or no effect on employment. Obama was referring to this new data when he recently asserted there is no good evidence that a higher minimum wage destroys jobs. This new evidence has forced many economists, including me, to reconsider our stand on minimum wage

The best evidence comes from the UK, where a national minimum wage was imposed for the first time in 1999. Economists were able to take advantage of this change in the UK law to study the effect of minimum wage on employment. Answer: No net effect.

There was a small decrease in employment of young, presumably less skilled, minimum wage workers. But offsetting this was a small increase in the employment of older, presumably more skilled, minimum wage workers.

Of course, if the evidence was just from the UK, it wouldn't be that convincing. We live in U.S., after all. But U.S. studies support the same conclusion. Important among these is a study that compared fast food employment in New Jersey and Pennsylvania after a minimum wage increase in New Jersey. No difference in employment between the two states was found despite the higher New Jersey wage.

What does this all mean for supporters of a higher minimum wage?

If your goal is to help the working poor, a goal I share, increasing the minimum wage is a good vehicle for doing this, as the fear of lost jobs is overblown. If your goal is to reduce government spending to support the poor, which is my goal, a minimum wage increase is also a good mechanism for doing this. Minimum wage workers are often eligible for government programs to help the poor, including food stamps and earned income tax credit.

These programs are effectively subsidizing minimum wage employers. Rather than pay a living wage, employers allow taxpayers to pick up the slack. Low wage employers are, in effect, free riding on the taxpayers' dime. A higher minimum wage would reduce these subsidies.

A note of caution: We don't know what would happen if the minimum wage were, say, doubled. Extrapolating from existing studies, which deal with relatively small changes in wages, is dangerous. We don't know what could happen. Prudence is in order.

Las Cruces lights up Festive homes ring in holiday cheer

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

Perhaps it's the rose tint of youth, but thinking back to childhood Christmases long past, I seem to recall the entire town swathed in LEDs, millions of twinkling colored lights draping each and every home I passed.

In Mesilla Park, my old stomping grounds, it seemed for many years as if every house on the block went all out, trying to keep up with and then trump - the Joneses.

In recent years, though, Christmas in Las Cruces has seemed to grow dimmer, with fewer and fewer houses lighting up for the holidays.

Never fear, fellow gawkers: there are a number of areas and homes around Las Cruces that have gone all-out this year, and with a little searching, their festive holiday homes are sure to give you, your families and your friends the oohs and ahhs you so desperately need.

Downtown and the Alameda District are good to start the search, with the city Christmas tree and Main Street Downtown providing plenty of brightly lit holiday spectacles, and, just a few blocks away, the Las Cruces Railroad Museum, 351 N. Mesilla St., is decked out, as it is each year.

Speaking of Mesilla Street, traveling north from the Railroad Museum, across Picacho Avenue and Parker Road, will take lightlookers to a hidden gem of sorts, with several homes along the northern loop of the street lit up to high heaven.

Just around the block, on the corner of Parker Avenue and Second Street, the home of Bridgette and Richard Moorehead is bathed in more than 50,000 white lights, more soothing and restrained than some of the more elaborate displays, but no less stunning.

Some of Las Cruces' more golf savvy residents may already be familiar with the beautiful light displays just south of the University Hills area, with a number of houses on Jack Nicklaus and Tiger Woods drives all decked out.

North from there, the University Hills and Hillrise areas are dotted with homes with beautiful, more subdued light displays, which make the everyman - like me - a bit less ashamed of his lighting prowess. Then, of course, is the big one: the home of Dan Wasser, on the corner of Roadrunner Parkway and City View Drive. For several years, Wasser has gone all out, with a number of inflatables filling the front yard, 50,000 or more lights strewn about, music and, most recently, a dancing Santa who struts his stuff in front of the garage. Wasser's home is a popular one this time of year, with plenty of idling onlookers, so drive safely and slowly.

These are, of course, only a few of the many houses around the City of the Crosses whose owners have taken the time, money and energy to brighten our holiday season, both literally

This is just one of several brightly decorated homes along North Mesilla Street.

This home, at 2825 Huntington Drive, features thousands of lights, reindeer and a sleigh along with several inflatables.

The Moorehead home, at the corner of Second Street and Parker Avenue, features more than 50,000 white lights.

This home on Mesilla Street joins its neighbors in the holiday lighting, with a large lighted star and snowflake adorning the roof.

What? No rubber chicken?

Meals are a point of pride for LCCC

By Richard Coltharp Las Cruces Bulletin

No, it's not a restaurant, but the Las Cruces Convention Center serves hundreds of meals every week to Las Crucens and out-oftowners.

To many of those diners, the fare is decidedly un-convention-al.

Las Cruces Bulletin photo by Richard Coltha Jesse Lopez gathers grilled asparagus for the Dress the Child dinner, held at the Las Cruces Convention Center on Oct. 6.

"I've been surprised from Day One," said LCCC executive chef Tom Agius. "People will come up to me and say, 'I've been to conventions all over the country, and this is the best convention food I've ever had.""

Rebecca Bolton, who arrived as the convention center's new general manager in November, has had similar feedback.

"When I first got here and was meeting so many new people, one of the first things people would ask is, "The food's not changing, right?" Bolton said. A key procedure helps ensure quality.

"I always buy our meat products fresh," Agius said.

"You spend a little more for a fresh chicken breast than a frozen one, but when it hits the plate, you can tell the difference."

"No rubber chicken," Bolton said.

Agius has been the center's chef since it opened in December 2010. He has worked in restaurants, hotels, country clubs, schools and catering businesses all over the country, but has found a home in southern New Mexico. He previously worked at the former Mesilla Valley Inn in Las Cruces and at Sierra del Rio at the Turtleback resort in Sierra County.

Originally from Detroit, Agius began learning his craft at Chadsey High School in his hometown. The founders of the Culinary Institute of America wanted to expose the trade to younger people and started a program in a few high schools, such as Chadsey.

Some of the most popular dishes at the LCCC, however, taste much more like New Mexico than Michigan.

"A big item is the Mesilla Valley Stuffed Chicken Breast," Agius said. "We take a relleno and stuff it into the chicken breast, a la a chicken cordon bleu. We make those from scratch." Another local favorite is the Red

AGIUS

Chile Seared Salmon with Cilantro Butter.

"The salmon is fresh, never frozen," said Agius, who added he uses only fresh vegetables as well.

The newcomer Bolton has already become a big fan of Agius'

Fiesta Salad, which she described as a cole slaw that's not mayonnaisebased.

"It's got a bunch of other goodies," she said. "It's light, fresh, healthy, flavorful – I call it lowguilt."

Tuesdays, and always clean my plate. I like the fact there is a great variety from week to week and even within the week. Typically you have a choice between two entrées, both of which are always tasty, which is why I never make a choice and instead take some of both.

When I first met Bolton, the thing I begged her not to change is the coffee.

I only started drinking coffee about five years ago, and still am not a huge java consumer. Call me a coffee snob, but most of it just doesn't taste that great to me; as you may know, I prefer Royal Crown Cola.

My attitude toward the roasted bean changed in 2008, when I had my first cup of Kenya coffee from Milagro Coffee y Espresso. That stuff is so good, your basic office cup of Folger's can't compare.

However, LCCC coffee compares very favorably.

"We had a coffee cutting with several distributors," Agius said. "I don't know if I really want to give away the secret on that." It's no secret the coffee consistently strikes a deliciously harmonious middle tone.

Cultural Center displays items from one of Las Cruces' founding families

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

At the Branigan Cultural Center, located at the heart of Las Cruces on Main Street Downtown, a new exhibit offers a unique glimpse into history of the city through the eyes of a child.

Now through Saturday, Jan. 25, 2014, the Branigan Cultural Center is displaying "Toys and Dolls," an exhibit of items recently donated to the museum's permanent collection by Nancy Ann and Gerald Warner, featuring more than 80 dolls and toys from the 1940s and '50s.

These items represent only a small fraction of the nearly 1,800 items donated to the cultural center by Nancy Ann Warner and cousin Victoria Seligman Holmes, including Nancy Ann and Madame Alexander dolls, popular in the middle of the century, as well as many others. Many of the items are accompanied by commentary by Nancy Ann Warner, recalling the items themselves and the significance they held for her throughout her childhood in Las Cruces.

Nancy Ann Warner is the great-granddaughter of Elizabeth Rohmer May, who was born in Bavaria in 1839 and traveled to the Southwest with a group of settlers in the mid-1800s.

Rohmer has been said to have been the first Anglo woman to set foot in Franklin, now El Paso and Paso del Norte, modern-day Juárez. After meeting and marrying German immigrant John May in 1856, the couple had 12 children, only six of whom survived to adulthood. The house built by John and Elizabeth May, on the corner of Main Street and May Avenue, would become known as the Rio Grande Hotel in the late 1800s.

One of the couple's daughters, Mary Lillie, married Dirk Seligman, a German immigrant, in 1899, who went on to own and operate the May-Seligman Dry Goods Stores, one of Las Cruces' first and largest mercantile stores. The couple had three children: Elizabeth May, Gustav Leonard and Dirk Ernst.

Daughter Elizabeth May would marry Frank Prichard, and they had one daughter, Nancy Ann, whose childhood dolls and toys are now on display, selected from thousands of items donated by the family.

"Toys and Dolls" is a prelude to an exhibit planned for 2015, which will feature five generations of artifacts from the May family. However, the exhibit stands on its own, as an intimate, personal history of one of Las Cruces' oldest families, and a look into a bygone era of playthings.

Many of the dolls were created by companies led by women. For example, the founder of Nancy Ann Storybook Dolls, Rowena Haskin, worked as an actress and dress designer in Hollywood after changing her name to Nancy Ann Abbott. In her downtime on set, she would fashion tiny replicas of the sumptuous costumes worn by her colleagues onscreen.

The Nancy Ann Doll Co. was founded by Abbott in 1936 with just $125, with Abbott working alone from her apartment. The first Nancy Anns, as they would come to be known, were made of porcelain bisque in Japan, but later, as the company grew, Abbott opened a factory in California, ensuring the dolls were entirely American-made from start to finish. During World War II, the dolls skyrocketed in popularity and, by 1942, the company was taking in more than $1 million a year. By the 1950s, the factory in California was churning out 12,000 dolls a day.

So, too, did Beatrice Alexander, founder of the Madame Alexander Doll Co., rise from humble beginnings to the top of a successful company just a few short years after women gained the right to vote. After selling cloth dolls made by her and her sisters from their father's Brooklyn storefront, Alexander founded the company in 1932, at age 28, with a $1,600 loan. Eventualy, Alexander would employ more than 1,500 people, and her company's heyday would come in the '50s and '60s, when they began creating fashion dolls honoring icons including Queen Elizabeth and Jacqueline Kennedy.

The exhibit was co-curated by former BCC intern and volunteer Jill Franzen, collection volunteer Sareta Gregory, who handled inventory and conservation, and Curator of Collections Jennifer Robles.

In addition, the Branigan Cultural Center is also exhibiting "Lincoln: The Constitution and the Civil War," a traveling exhibit examining how President Abraham Lincoln used the Constitution to confront three intertwined causes of the Civil War – the secession of Southern states, slavery and wartime civil liberties – as well as "Adoring the World: The Intersection of Jewelry and Culture," an interpretive presentation of tribal jewelry by Las Cruces artist Karen Feder. All three exhibits will remain on display through Jan. 25, 2014.

Bilbo's back, and better than before

'Desolation' gets the Hobbit back on track

Las Cruces Bulletin

In hindsight, I was too forgiving in my review of "The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey," the first installment of Peter Jackson's trilogy of films based on J.R.R. Tolkien's short novel "The Hobbit, or There and Back Again."

It was easy, on first viewing, to get wrapped up in the movie's sumptuous visuals. One of the major complaints levied against "An Unexpected Journey" – that nothing really happened – was, in retrospect, valid, but all that nothing sure looked good.

No one would claim Jackson's films aren't gratuitous: The 2001-03 "Lord of the Rings" trilogy ran two minutes shy of 10 hours theatrically, with an 11.5 hour extended edition and a special edition Blu-Ray that broke the 12-hour mark. All those hours of footage, though, made sense: Editions of Tolkien's six-book, three-volume epic run anywhere between 1,000 and 1,400 pages, loaded with extraneous materials and histories for die-hards only.

What to say of Jackson's adaptation of "The Hobbit," then, which will constitute hours 11 to 19 – or, after all is said and done, likely 13 to 24 – of his on-screen Tolkien, eking out nine-plus hours of screen time from a 300-page novel – as much print as, say, the shortest volume of LOTR – and completely lacking natural, organic "breaks"?

Breaking Tolkien's novel into three parts may have been a misstep. The first film was uneven, with the first 45 minutes taking place almost exclusively in Bilbo Baggins' house before the journey even starts, and the film's "climax" – Bilbo's and Gollum's riddle game – ran entirely too long. It was heavy on backstory and shading in the details, light on actual incident and narrative progression.

There, too, were criticisms shot Jackson's way for the decision to shoot – and show – his film in the "high frame rate" of 48 frames per second, rather than the traditional 24 fps. The higher frame rate gave the picture quality an unprecedented level of realism, showing viewers just how unreal everything really was. While most theaters screened the film in the normal, lower frame rate, those who saw it look "better," ironically, saw it look worse.

Thankfully, with the second installment, Jackson has gotten all that explaining out of his system, allowing things to actually happen – action, plot advancement, character development – beyond more walking.

All that setup from the first film pays dividends here, diving into the narrative almost immediately, with a giant bear and a pack of orcs in hot pursuit of Bilbo & Co. This journey takes them through the forests of Mirkwood, the elven homeworld, to the lake town of Esgaroth and in direct confrontation with the dragon Smaug inside the Lonely Mountain.

With nearly three hours to kill, Jackson has populated his film with a fair amount of filler, from Gandalf's quest – in the novel, he just sort of leaves without explanation – to an unnecessary love triangle involving one of the dwarves and the elves Legolas (Orlando Bloom), who doesn't appear in Tolkien's "Hobbit," and Tauriel (Evangeline Lilly), who doesn't appear in any of Tolkien's work – she's an invention for this movie alone.

With all these characters vying for screen time, our titular hero Bilbo Baggins seems at times marginalized in his own movie, which is a shame. As Bilbo, Martin

Freeman is perfect, displaying in equal measure a lifetime of ease and comfort disrupted by an unexpected adventure and a newfound courage, as well as the One Ring's growing corruption. Fluff aside, what the first film

Fluff aside, what the first film lacked – namely, action – is delivered here in droves. Our heroes' battle with the monstrous spiders of Mirkwood is thrilling, and the dwarves' bobbling barrel river escape from the elven kingdom – with a horde of shore-bound orcs in tow, of course – is a blast, owing as much to its LOTR forebears as it does to the recent "Pirates of the Caribbean" franchise. The action is beautifully rendered and perfectly choreographed, with enough laugh-out-loud moments to appeal to younger crowds and enough grisly beheadings and dismemberments to keep the more jaded older crowd engaged.

When our heroes do finally reach the Lonely Mountain and face off against the dragon Smaug, the film hits it's (albeit manufactured) climax, and I can say with certainty there's never been a better looking beast on screen.

"The Desolation of Smaug" is an all-around improvement on its predecessor, though not without its faults. Let's hope Jackson and company can carry that inertia over into the third and final film.

'Portrait of Wally' an exciting documentary

Review by Jeff Berg

Former Santa Fe resident Andrew Shea, who directed the very tongue-in-cheek comedy "Santa Fe," which co-starred Las Cruces' own Mark Medoff, directed the exciting and perplexing new documentary film "Portrait of Wally." It is the story of a painting of great value by Egon Schiele, which was stolen by the Nazis in World War II from a Jewish family of means. Since its recovery, it has spent a lot of time in limbo, as the battle continued over who was the rightful owner.

Although he died of the flu at a young age, Schiele's work was sometimes considered obscene and at times bizarre, and was often of a sexual nature, although not the work in question in this film.

In 1938, 20 years after Schiele's death,

"Wally" was taken from the residence of a Jewish art dealer by a Viennese Nazi who had bought the dealer's gallery. The piece was a prized possession of Lea Bondi Jaray, the dealer, but the Fascist slime who took it threatened her with incarceration in a concentration camp if she resisted.

From there, the film is a finely detailed and eye-popping account of the incredible saga that follows Bondi Jaray's attempt to recover the painting from a number of sources – including the New York Museum of Art and even the Austrian government. Her lack of success soon has her family continuing to regain the art piece.

It is interesting to watch the territorial and legal battles that take place between individual and institutions, especially when it seems abundantly clear that the painting was stolen and should just be returned to Bondi Jaray's family.

Alas, as anyone who has had any business with the art world knows, no matter what part of it – paintings, film, literature – egos are predominant and skullduggery and dishonesty are often present in equal portion.

At the end of the war, "Wally" somehow ended up in a group of Schiele's works that had belonged to a Czech collector, who had died during the war. However, "Wally" was misidentified as a sketch rather than oil on canvas.

One wonders how so many people connected with art could overlook such an error, but it is said that Austria's courts were not very helpful to Holocaust survivors who were trying to regain their lives and belongings. Although Bondi Jaray did get her gallery back, it was at a price, both emotional and financial.

The painting made its way to New York many years later and ended up in an exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art, where it was apparently on loan from a private foundation in Austria.

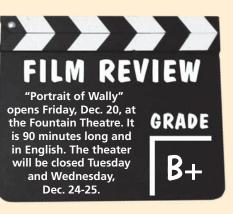

Next came several attempts to keep the work in the U.S. and, at one time, an attempt by the District Attorney of New York to seize it and another by U.S. Customs.

The story ends up playing out like a bad movie, inspired by greed, incompetence and dishonesty, including a bit on the part of the filmmaker, since a freelance reporter who had reported the story on several occasions for NPR filed a large lawsuit against both MOMA and NPR, which became a conflict of interest.

"Portrait of Wally" is an interesting film, especially for art historians and collectors, but it also feeds another audience, those who can never fathom the way that such situations are handled by those involved.

And isn't value placed on such things as art by those who "want" such things?

If the film sounds familiar, it is because it screened at the Fountain a couple of years ago ... jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com. Joyeux Noel!

A libation for celebration

An abbreviated history of the traditional pastime known as wassailing

By David Salcido Las Cruces Bulletin

Traditions are funny things. We like to honor them, but tend to pick and choose the parts we like best, ignoring those we don't.

Holiday traditions tend to take the brunt of the conversion process, many times thanks to Wall Street and Madison Avenue whose main goal is to make it slick, make it sexy and make it sell. But for every sodaguzzling Santa Claus with rosy cheeks and twinkling eyes, there's an older, less sanitized version waiting in the wings to snatch naughty children from their beds and spirit them away to a life devoid of iPhones, Facebook or Miley Cyrus. The horror.

In an attempt to keep at least one of those fading traditions alive, I've taken it upon myself to revive the celebratory art of wassailing. What's wassailing, you ask?

Gather 'round, lords and ladies, as I attempt to sum up a thousand years of legend, folklore and ritual in 800 words or less. For the stalwart, I've even included my favorite wassail recipe.

To begin, the word "wassail" comes from the Anglo-Saxon phrase "waes hael," or "good health.

The story of its inception is best presented by Geoffrey of Monmouth in his riveting, but by no means complete, 1135 potboiler "History of the Kings of Britain." In it, he tells of a king named Vortigern who, while being entertained at a royal banquet, was presented with a large bowl of wine by a pretty little serving wench named Rowena, who bleated, "Lavert King, was hail!'

Vortigern's interpreter explained to him that the wench wasn't calling him out, but rather offering a greeting, the proper response for which was "drinc hail," roughly translated to mean, "Commence guzzling!" The exchange became an instant tradition in the lands of Britain, where the person who drinks first at a banquet or gathering (usually the head of the household) says "wassail," followed by the response from the crowd, "drink hail!" signaling the beginning of the revels and debaucherv.

The word wassail also came to denote the drink itself, which was used in the toast. The original recipe, as passed down from that time, was said to be a heady combination of mulled ale, curdled cream, roasted apples, eggs, cloves, ginger, nutmeg and sugar. In time, the cream and egg were separated out (the genesis of the gastric terror known as egg nog?) and, though variations abound, the main ingredients of wassail always involved baked apples and spices. Over time the tradition of wassailing, much like the recipe, began to acquire variations. Although classically observed during the Christmas holiday, wassailing was also practiced at weddings, christenings, witch burnings and other joyful events where community and family come together to celebrate. The first mention of a wassail bowl was in the 13th century, referring to a large wooden or pewter vessel in which were dipped cakes and breads. The practice of floating bread in the wassail bowl was the progenitor of the word "toast" as a salutation.

One ceremonial version, which came to prominence during the Renaissance, was the filling of a common Loving Cup, which was then passed around the room so it, and cooties, could be shared by all. Another variation, which came to prominence in the 17th century, was for a bowl of wassail to be taken house to house and shared with neighbors, until a little ailment called the Black Death put an end to communal quaffing.

The most popular tradition, however, continued to be the custom of toasting one's guests before the commencement of merry making, as kept alive by popular scribes Washington Irving and Charles Dickens, during the 19th century. In the 20th century, alas, there were none to carry the torch and the tradition declined, eventually falling victim to the same corporate white washing of the holiday season that created Santa Claus, artificial Christmas trees and increasingly vapid interpretations of "A Christmas Carol?

Still, remnants of the tradition continue. There are many who claim the custom of going from house to house singing Christmas carols had its origins in wassailing. In fact, the song "Here We Come A-Wassailing" was eventually changed to "Here We Come A-Caroling," mainly because the concept of wassailing became lost over time. That, and the rigid expungement of all references to inebriated conviviality by enterprising Puritans, who hit upon the concept that singing hymns to unsuspecting neighbors, rather than bringing them booze, often resulted in a payoff to make them stop.

Eventually frowned upon in polite society, despite the original intent of offering blessings and good will to friends and family, the custom of wassailing went underground, where it has assiduously been kept alive by artists, miscreants and rogues to this day. No matter what the ritual exercises or traditional observances, one fact remains: Wassail continues to be a great way to warm the cockles on a cold winter's eve.

Wassail!

Rustic and refined, wassail means warmth on a cold winter's day or niaht. Las Cruces Bulletin photo by David Salcido

There have been so many different versions of the recipe handed down over the centuries, but common elements tend to be booze, baked apples and spices. Beer is the preferred base, but other versions involve everything from wine to apple juice. Here's my tried and true version, always a favorite at holiday gatherings:

Traditional Wassail

6 to 10 small apples, cored 1 cup brown sugar 1 cup water 8 to 12 12-ounce bottles hard apple ale 1 teaspoon cloves 1 teaspoon allspice 1 teaspoon ground ginger 1 teaspoon ground nutmeg 1 cinnamon stick Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Put apples into a glass baking dish. Sprinkle brown sugar onto each apple evenly. Pour water into bottom of the dish and bake approximately 45 minutes, or until tender. In sachet or tea infuser combine cloves, allspice, ginger, nutmeg and cinnamon (you may have to cut the cinnamon stick to make it fit). Pour ale and place spice sachet into a large pot and set over low heat, slowly raising temperature until steam is rising. Do not boil!

Remove sachet. Add apples and liquid from baking dish to hot cider and let mingle over heat for 15 minutes or so.

Ladle into cups and serve. Don't forget the toast to the good fortunes of those around you.

Wassailer's note: Hard apple ale (Redds Apple Ale, Woodchuck Hard Cider or Unibroue Ephemere from Canada, if available) is the preferred choice at my castle, but traditionalists tend to like using real English ale. Other choices are porter, brown ale or Belgian dubbel. The secret is to favor malt over hops, as hoppy beers, such as IPAs, tend to be bitter when cooked.

To reupholster or not to reupholster, that is the question

Maureen Villmer Practical Design

How do you make the decision to reupholster or to buy new? Here are some things you need to consider before you make that major decision.

Look at the chair or sofa and try to look past the ugly, outdated, worn or "it just doesn't go with my stuff anymore" fabric. Is the chair comfortable? Does it have a classic shape and how does the size fit where you are trying to use it? In other words, does it have good bones?

Take a look underneath. Is it stable? Does it rack or move side to side? If so, you may have to put too much money into it to consider reupholstering.

You might check to see if it has an 8-way hand tied construction or a good frame. Is it a recognizable brand such as Century, Henredon, Vanguard, Ethan Allen, or Lexington, that produces sofas and chairs worthy of being reupholstered?

Then there's the cost. Don't think that reupholstery is a cheap way to get a new sofa or chair. By the time you add up the fabric, new cushions and labor costs, you'll be close to the cost of a new piece of excellent quality furniture. If it has exposed wooden legs or arms, it could need to be refinished first.

Each upholsterer will determine price by how much time it would take to strip the piece of furniture down, take it all apart and then put it all back together with new fabric. All that cost goes to the bottom line to determine total price, so be sure your piece meets all those expectations before you decide to reupholster.

The weight and pattern of the fabric being considered is very important to the final look of the overall product.

- Here are some price ranges for reupholstering only:
- Standard wing chair: $265 to $325
- Sofa (full size): $695 to $795
- Club chair: $265 to $325
- Recliner: $395 to $450
- Ottoman: $160 to $180

Before you make your final decision, think about the fabric that will apply to the frame. You don't put stripes on a tufted back sofa or chair. The scale of the fabric as well as the pattern repeat should be considered. How will the fabric look once it is applied to the piece? Where are you using the piece? If it is in a bedroom and doesn't get much use, you don't need a heavy woven fabric that costs more.

In fact, the weight of the fabric should depend on where and how the piece will be used. A light weight silk would not be appropriate for a heavily used family room.

If you would like to change anything about the piece to update it, now would be the time. Add a welt or a contrasting welt, add a longer skirt, or expose and/or add legs. You can also change the back or arm detail, make the inside back one fabric and the outside back another fabric, or take the channeling or tufting out of the back of a chair for a more contemporary look.

C Don't think that reupholstery is a cheap way to get a new sofa or chair.

The decision to upholster is an easier one when the piece has sentimental value. Family antiques or heirlooms are an easy choice to upholster. For example, I am going to pick up a lovely boudoir bench with a carved back soon. It belonged to my husband's great aunt. I will have it reupholstered and will need to select a fabric to make it fit in my master bath or bedroom.

I look forward to this addition to my other antiques and believe a fabric that might look good on it would be a tapestry. Whatever my final decision, I know I will have fun selecting just the right fabric.

Phillips Chapel one step closer to completion

Part-time resident lends carpentry expertise for door construction

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletir

After nearly four years of hard work, the volunteers of the Phillips Chapel CME restoration project are one step closer to being finished, thanks to a Las Cruces snowbird and a long sought after photo.

Work began on the 100-plus-year-old church in 2010. Over the years, volunteers and experts teamed up to repair the adobe walls, apply fresh coats of lime plaster, secure the floor, restore the pews and conduct other work that would bring the city's first African-American church into the 21st century while maintaining its historic elements.

'We didn't know what we were going to do about the doors," said John Hyndman, a volunteer with the church restoration project, adding that they didn't have any information on what the original doors looked like. "Luckily, in ("Las Cruces: A Photographic Journey") there was a photo (of the church) with the doors closed."

Around the same time the photo was discovered, Watson MacKinnon began attending the group's volunteer work days to learn about adobe construction and lime plaster.

"I came to Las Cruces by accident, really," said MacKinnon, who resides in the Yukon Territory, Canada, most of the year and works as a professional carpenter. "I would spend my winters in Santa Fe. ... I decided to visit Las Cruces, and when I saw the green fields and the tractors, I thought it was so different from northern New Mexico."

Watson said he read an article about the Phillips Chapel restoration project and in 2011 he began visiting the church. It was then he volunteered to help construct the French doors

"Clarence Fielder (grandson of the church founders) said Watson was sent to us," said Hyndman, who is helping MacKinnon build the doors. "From the picture we found, he was able to come up with a design for the doors."

MacKinnon, who completed a four-year joiner apprenticeship in New Zealand, said he milled old growth fir timber that was once part of a bridge for the door.

"They looked very dirty and heavy. They were full of bolts," he said, adding that after they were milled and cut to an appropriate size, he could see they were of good quality with the tight grain needed to be stable.

"The unique thing about the wood is it's roughly 100 years old, like the church," Hyndman said.

"It was either brought up with the gold rush, or the U.S. Army brought it up for the Alaskan highway," MacKinnon said. "It's getting a new lease on life."

Following the picture, MacKinnon and Hyndman are creating the five-panel doors using a wedge-and-dowel system.

This is old school," MacKinnon said. "The old Mexican doors were built in the same fashion. Doors have been made this way for hundreds of years."

"It's within the spirit of the church," Hyndman said. "This is probably how the original doors were made."

The duo used modern machinery as well as hand tools to cut the 30 pieces of wood required for each door, which, when completed, will weigh approximately 100 pounds each.

"The idea was to use Old World craftsman-ship to match when the church was built," Hyndman said of why a lot of the work and assembling is being done by hand. "I would guess, when we're done, we'll have put in a couple hundred hours of labor."

That Old World flair also extends to the stain of the door, which is the original formula used in 1916.

'The stain will highlight the natural grain of the fir and where the pre-existing nail holes are," MacKinnon said. "It will really show the character of the wood and that it's reclaimed," Hyndman said.

When the doors are completed in the coming weeks, the next task will be to install them into the existing door frame.

"(The existing door frame) is in good shape," Hyndman said. "We wanted to reuse as much of the original church as possible."

While the frame is in good shape, it is slightly tilted, making installing the doors no easy task.

'There's going to be some detailed work to get them into the frame," said Hyndman, adding that when installed, they expect the doors to last 100 years.

Hyndman said the doors will be one of the last things done to the church before the restoration project is completed.

The lime plaster is about 99 percent done, and the interior wood detailing is about 99 percent done," he said, adding the very last task of

Winter planning for animals

As we prepare for colder weather, there are many things we can do now to make life easier and healthier for our animals and ourselves through the winter.

Horses are kept warm by the slow digestion of fiber, so feeding extra hay in cold weather will keep the equine healthy and comfortable. When you add more roughage in the winter, when horses are naturally drinking and sweating less, it is wise to soak the hay with water to avoid impaction.

Provide water free choice and try to keep it slightly warmed to encourage drinking. I feed big, sloppy, warm bran mashes in winter to add moisture and often cook flaxseed jelly for the horses' mash. Ground, cooked or oil flaxseed is a healer of the respiratory system and digestive tract for horses, people and dogs.

Keep dogs slightly on the fat side if they live outside to add a layer for warmth. Do this with healthy foods and nourishing oils such as flax. Be sure they have proper water to drink at all times.

We humans need extra water in the winter, too. We tend to drink less and therefore retain toxins in cold weather. For people, horses and dogs, eating a lot of raw roots such as carrots, yams, parsley root and burdock will keep vitamin intake up, add enzymes to our diet and support the organs.

Preparation for the cold weather before it arrives helps prevent stress and keeps everyone healthier. If you use horse blankets, wash and repair them now.

Flaxseed jelly

1 handful of flaxseed

2 quarts water

Soak the seeds for eight hours. Bring them to a boil, watching constantly. If this mixture boils over, and it tends to, it will make a gooey mess. Use a non-metal or enameled pot and wooden spoon. Stir often. Keep at a low boil for a full hour. You will have reduced the water considerably and have a thick, slimy jelly to add directly to a bran mash or hard feed of grain or pellets. Do not strain it. Dogs love to lick the pot/spoon and it's good for them. It can also help keep hairballs from forming in felines. Feed the jelly two to three times a week. It will help a horse shed and reduce dry, shedding

New leader praises strong team effort By Rachel Christiansen Las Cruces Bulletin

August marked the sixth time the Men Who Cook fundraiser demonstrated how much the community supports one of the most important health care organizations in the city.

Hundreds of participants gathered at the Las Cruces Convention Center for dinner, raising money that goes directly back into the community through the services of Mesilla Valley Hospice. The event was probably bittersweet for former CEO Donna Brown, however, who retired the same day.

Brown left the leadership position in the hands of Jean Briley, the organization's former chief operating officer.

"We had talked about a succession plan to get things going with the operational side of things and help with the transition," Briley said.

Briley is no stranger to Mesilla Valley Hospice. She was first introduced to the organization about 15 years ago, when she received training to set the standard for a similar facility she was working for in Deming. She came back full time to Mesilla Valley Hospice in September 2011. With a career that has centered on health care, Briley has worked for hospitals, in-home health care, quality management and other administration positions.

She said two of her biggest mentors throughout her career were Memorial Medical Center's Paul Herzog and Ann DeBooy.

"They just taught me that you have to keep your organization compliant, and the rest falls into place," Briley said.

JEAN BRILEY,

executive director, community.

It seems like falling into place is exactly what the team at Mesilla Valley Hospice has done. They are all tasked with the difficult job of caring for individuals and families who are faced with life-limiting illnesses.

Briley said her key to success is to ensure everyone on her team recognizes the importance of the work they do.

"It's about making sure your team has the tools they need to do their job, because they are the faces that everyone sees," Briley said.

The team at Mesilla Valley Hospice has been doing just that and more for the past 31 years, and has made it a goal to educate and inform the community about what can be done when faced with these situations, discussing options and calming fears.

"The question, for us, is what more can we do and what else can we do for an individual to help them in their journey," Briley said. "That's one of the things we've seen nationally is that the time we have with individuals and families is getting shorter, and we want it to be longer.

"It's a better process if we can have them longer."

Changing that mindset from one that only relies on hospice care during the last few days of life to one that embraces the months leading up to one's final days is where Briley said her focus will continue to be.

Support for the organization is not just witnessed during the annual signature fundraiser, but every day at Mesilla Valley Hospice – with the number of volunteers almost matching the number of paid employees.

"They sit with patients, run errands, help us administratively ... they are the ones who help us think outside the box and come up with new ways to expand the business," Briley said.

In fact, the two methods of care offered through Mesilla Valley Hospice – in the facility at La Posada or at a person's home – will soon be expanded.

Briley said that by spring 2014, Mesilla Valley Hospice hopes to open the facility to an assisted living residence, and there's already a few on the waiting list.

"It goes back to trying to think of other ways to bring in funds in the changing industry," Briley said. "Our No. 1 goal is asking what more can be done for individuals in the community."

Briley has been a part of the Las Cruces community for more than 10 years, and a large family – five children and now five grandchildren – keeps her busy, but she still finds the time to attend a few Aggie basketball games with her husband every season. Jean Briley took over the executive director position at Mesilla Valley Hospice in August, after the retirement of former CEO Donna Brown.

DOH encourages holiday safety

The holiday season is upon us, and for many that means experiences such as decorating homes, having family gatherings and sharing gifts. But the New Mexico Department of Health is reminding New Mexicans that this is also the season that can create unique circumstances that can be hazardous for children.

According to Safe Kids Worldwide, 3,270 children were seen in emergency departments for injuries caused solely by nonelectric holiday ornaments in 2012. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), 192,000 infants, children and youth under age 15 went to a hospital emergency department for toy-related injuries last year as well.

Aside from unsafe behaviors by the children themselves, unsafe toys are also a factor; CPSC has prevented more than 10 million hazardous toys from reaching the American public during the past five years alone. It is also important to read labels closely and determine if a toy is age appropriate.

The Department of Health recommends the following to prevent injuries from gifts:

- Select gifts for small children that do not have small pieces that could be broken off, or small batteries and magnets that are readily accessible, as these items present a risk for both a choking and internal bleeding. If batteries and magnets are absolutely necessary, seal the access to the compartments with tape.
- Examine children's jewelry for durability; pieces that are broken off and swallowed are a hazard for both choking and trace metals.
- Avoid toys with sharp points, edges or the capacity to shoot water or projectiles, as these can damage eyes.
- Provide a soft landing surface area for playground equipment, including approximately 10 inches of sand, wood chips or sawdust. Trampolines should either be dug into the ground or have a safety net, as well as a pad to cover the springs.
- Include a helmet with the gift of a bicycle,

County blood drive nets 35 pints

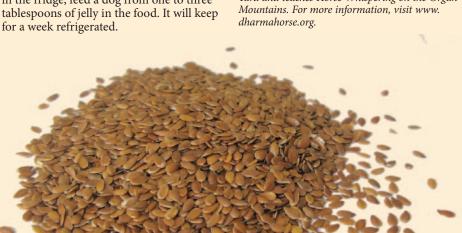

Doña Ana County employees and visitors to the Doña Ana County Government Center donated 35 pints of blood Friday, Dec. 13.

Each year, Doña Ana County holds a holiday blood drive in December, in addition to the Judy Price Memorial Blood Drive each August.

The Dec. 13 drive was conducted in the rotunda of the Doña Ana County Government Center at 845 N. Motel Blvd.

Each holiday season, United Blood Services sees its blood reserves fall to critical levels. Giving blood normally takes less than an hour, and the results save lives throughout our region.

'Tails' of the unexpected County ordinance OKs TNR City Council is the next step When love comes out of nowhere

By Elaine Stachera For the Las Cruces Bulleti

David Morgan did not want to be without a dog.

But when his beloved Elsie, an 11-year-old border collie/spaniel mix, started to slow down dramatically, he worried that would soon be the case. He had known Elsie "from hour one," and losing her was going to be traumatic.

As Elsie declined, Morgan started to look for another dog, not to replace Elsie, but to assuage the pain of what was going to be a big hole left in his heart and his life. In no hurry, and wanting to find just the right new companion, Morgan spent a year visiting dogs at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley and their adoption events.

He also went to see the dogs at the Farmers and Crafts Market of Las Cruces, and even the Española and Santa Fe animal shelters. One fateful day, he went to a Humane Society of Southern New Mexico adoption event, and there, to his surprise, he found Willie the pup.

"Goofy and happy 24-7," Morgan said, Willie was the right size and the right temperament for his household.

According to Morgan, Willie has a "bottomless capacity for love and the desire to be part of the family."

And what of Elsie? A routine trip to the vet revealed that Elsie's lethargy was actually due to a bladder stone that had taken over 90 percent of her bladder, and not to advancing age. Surgery was the answer, and now Elsie, Willie and Morgan have more time to spend together than anyone previously thought.

Willie, however, was not Morgan's first experience with unexpected animal attraction. While shopping for dog food one day, he peeked through the glass at one of the cats up for adoption and fell paws over whiskers in love.

He said he wasn't looking for a cat and told himself that if the cat was still there when he came back the next week, which he thought was highly unlikely, then he would adopt him.

This lucky feline, who was a New Mexico State University FCamp kitty, is now known as Devereaux, and happily pals around with Willie and Elsie – and Morgan.

Morgan opened his heart to the possibilities, and has made the promise for them all.

The Zero in 7/Coalition for Pets and People created the I Promise pledge card. The Promise pledge reads, "In exchange for companionship, loyalty and love, I promise that every animal I care for will be spayed or neutered, microchipped, vaccinated and treated humanely.

"I will never abandon my animals or allow them to run loose. I accept this responsibility for the full natural life of my animals.

The purpose of the Coalition for Pets and People (a group that includes representatives from most of the organizations in the animal welfare community and animal welfare departments) is to eliminate the killing of healthy or treatable animals at our public shelter by the end of 2018 and to promote humane and responsible pet ownership.

Will you make the promise?

The Coalition for Pets and People was formed for the purpose of transforming the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley to a no-kill shelter within seven years. Coalition member Elaine Stachera is a regional advancement officer for the New Mexico State University Foundation.

The long-sought freedom to save free roaming (feral) cats by trapping, neutering and returning them to their natural environment became a reality Tuesday, Dec. 10.

After months of review and debate, the Doña Ana County Commissioners, on a vote of 5-0, approved a new ordinance that decriminalized feeding and caring for what is commonly called community cats.

Led by the Coalition for Pets and People, the Community Cat Management Team sanctioned the campaign to assist the commission in collecting and evaluating data to ascertain whether the trap-neuterreturn (TNR) approach, or the catch and kill practices were more effective.

Based on data from a wide variety of communities, including Albuquerque, it was clear that TNR is effective in reducing the community cat population. Conversely, there were no examples in populated environments where catch and kill works.

The spotlight is now on the Las Cruces City Council, which has not yet acted on amending the city animal ordinances.

Until the council amends the city ordinance, the job is only half done. It is vitally important the city adopt the same language regarding community cats if we are to gain the full benefits of a managed TNR program.

TNR goes to the root cause of the excess population, while catch and kill typically attempts to deal with the symptoms - the existing cat population. When the breeding characteristics of cats are factored in, the distinction is sharp.

For example, based on a formula used by leading experts in feral cat population management, there are approximately 36,374 community cats in Doña Ana County.

National averages indicate each female will have almost one and a half litters - local data shows there could be at least three litters per year - with each litter averaging almost three kittens, there would be 76,142 kittens born in one year.

Assuming that 25 percent of the kittens survive beyond 6 months, there would be 19,035 surviving kittens at the end of the year.

Under the current system of catch and kill, it is projected that the intake of cats at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley will be about 4,505. Of these, 2,951 (66 percent) will be killed.

Comparing the number of surviving kittens, 19,035, minus the number of cats and kittens killed at the shelter, 2,951, shows a net gain of 16,084 cats.

Add this to the starting number of 36,374, and we now have a total population of 52,458 cats and kittens.

Is there any doubt that the solution is managing the reproduction stage and not the death stage?

The Cat Management Team is continuing work to assist the city to adopt the same language as that in the county ordinances.

The team is laying out the strategy to fund and implement a comprehensive trapneuter-return program in the county.
