City to up GRT rate Council gets to decide increase

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

Most likely, the Las Cruces City Council will vote Tuesday, Sept. 3, to increase the city's portion of the gross receipt tax (GRT) by three-eighths of a percent to make up for the loss a payments from the state.

That was the message Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima relayed to residents attending the last of three community meetings Tuesday, Aug. 13, about an option given to larger cities and counties that will be phased out of what are called hold harmless payments from the state.

When the economy was flush and Gov. Bill Richardson was running for president, New Mexico lawmakers agreed to stop charging GRT - which acts as a sales tax - on food and medicine. County and municipal governments balked because they depend heavily on GRT. Richardson and the Legislature agreed to pay them the equivalent of what they would have received if GRT was still being charged on food and medicine - to hold the local governments harmless.

Those state payments have grown to nearly $400 million, while the economy went into recession and state government made cuts to avoid a budgetary shortfall. This year, the City of Las Cruces budget has received more than $8 million in hold harmless money from the state, which is almost 10 percent of the total revenue the city receives from a variety of sources with GRT providing the most revenue.

In an 11th hour omnibus tax deal during the last Legislature, Gov. Susana Martinez won business tax breaks in exchange for agreeing to phase out the hold harmless payments to the larger

San Andres to pioneer school-to-work model Early college high school grant to aid transition plans

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

San Andres High School will be transitioning into a new kind of early college high school that Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) Superintendent Stan Rounds said is in line with its previous role as an alternative high school while improving its graduation rate.

The change also includes rebranding San Andres as the tentatively named - the school board needs to still officially sign off on it - Rio Grande Preparatory Institute. Working with Doña Ana Community College, instead of a two-year associate degree being awarded along with a high school diploma, it will be some kind of job certification in a career trade, Rounds said.

In addition to a diploma and the trade certification, Rounds said he wants to see the school's graduates also walking off the commencement stage with something else - a guaranteed job.

Downtown light show may become less flashy Costly proposal for stronger light pole structure nixed

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

While last year's first Downtown holiday light show was enjoyed by many patrons and residents, it also presented a concern that would have made the Grinch grin.

A string of 10,000 red, green and white LED lights illuminated Downtown Main Street, using the new light poles on the re-opened Main Street, thanks to a $25,000 gift from El Paso Electric Co., which plans to contribute that much every year for three years to make the light show an annual event.

But the lengthy string of lights - along with promotional banners - proved to be an engineering challenge of sorts, because the light poles - designed more to add an old-town ambiance - weren't designed for the stresses of the additional weight combined with wind. The light show went on, but with support guide wires attached to the light poles.

Deportation case intervention urged

Local immigration activists bring case to congressman

Bulletin Staff Report

Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé) called on Congressman Steve Pearce Monday, Aug. 12, to take on the deportation case of a local woman with two U.S.-born children.

The woman – who asked that only her last name of Solis be publicized to protect her job as a dishwasher in a local restaurant – followed her husband to the United States in 2005. In 2009, her husband was deported to Mexico, where he has kept her Mexico-born son from being returned to live with her in the United States.

Solis has given birth to two children while living here, including her new son. The pregnancy was discovered when she was arrested because of her citizenship status after a routine traffic stop.

The woman was released on a $2,500 bond that she paid for by selling her trailer home in Las Cruces. According to interviews with CAFé advocates, the federal judge in charge of her deportation case is not giving her enough time to work with Catholic Charities to get a visa to remain in the country.

Solis said she has no real ties in Mexico nor opportunities for her children. The United States is the only country her 6-year-old daughter knows, she said.

“We don’t come here to take away anything from anybody else,” she said. “I work to give my children a quality of life as good as anybody else. I want them to live in the United States so they won’t have to work as hard as I’ve had to.”

Solis’ next deportation hearing is Monday, Aug. 19, and if CAFé doesn’t get a response from Pearce’s office by Thursday, Aug. 15, the faith-based organization plans to take Solis’ case to the offices of New Mexico’s two U.S. senators.

After delivering a letter to the Las Cruces office of U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce on behalf of a local woman facing deportation, members of the faith-based Comunidades en Acción y de Fé (CAFé) hold signs encouraging the congressman to support immigration reform. Holding signs are Ismaela Navarro, Marisol Elizalde, Susan Fitzgerald, Mariaelena Johnson, Rita Decker, Cesar Paz and Yolanda Gamboa.

Rawson joins commission

Benjamin Rawson, with his 6-year-old daughter Heidi holding the Bible, is sworn as a new Doña Ana County commissioner by County Clerk Lynn Ellins Tuesday, Aug. 13, before the start of the regular commission meeting. Rawson, a Republican and son of former state Sen. Lee Rawson, was appointed by Gov. Susana Martinez to fill in the vacancy left by the resignation of Karen Perez. Rawson is the general manager of Rawson Inc. Builders Supply and treasurer of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association. Citing the recent voter rejection of a gross receipt tax increase, Rawson said residents want government to live within its means.

Fairacres' magical run Local squad does Las Cruces proud

The Las Cruces sports team most familiar with the national spotlight is the New Mexico State University Aggie men's basketball team. The Aggies lately have made the NCAA tournament more often than not, and the team has a great legacy, including a Final Four.

A new Las Cruces team, however, recently enjoyed a taste of the limelight, including a game broadcast on ESPN2. It was fun to see people at local restaurants cheering a game on TV that included our own native sons.

This team features players about half the age and, in some cases, half the size of the Aggie basketball players.

It is the Fairacres Little League team, which had a magical run that ended one game short of the prestigious Little League World Series.

Of course, we all would have loved to have seen our local kids make it to the World Series in Williamsport, Pa., but everyone is certainly proud of the Fairacres players, their coaches and parents who made their success possible.

You've probably heard the story by now, but this story is rooted in a scene reminiscent of the movie "Field of Dreams."

After learning there were no Little League regulation-size ball parks in Las Cruces, Scot Bannister built one of his own. He built it and they came, and a six-team league was formed. Just like Chicago's Wrigley Field was for nearly 80 years, the field is without lights, meaning all the games had to be started early enough to end before dark.

The Fairacres team that just missed the World Series is made up of all-stars from the six teams and managed by Bannister.

Those players include Noah Coyle, Ryan Rosales, Ivan Molina, Benito Garcia, Matt Giles, Dominic Tellez, Justin Almaguer, Fernando Loera, Josh Castillo, Kaden Palmer, Justin Lopez, Jeremiah Apodaca and Will Bannister.

Helping Scot Bannister coach were A.J. Melendrez, Jay Rosales and Deryl Palmer. Congratulations to all of these great kids.

Administration wrong on health care services

I understand behavioral health in New Mexico, having provided services in Doña Ana County since 1982. What is happening now to 15 agencies is beyond my comprehension.

It appears that Gov. Susana Martinez and her administration have decided to outsource services. Without any due process, these agencies are not able to defend themselves against "credible allegations of fraud." Currently, these agencies are being forced to stop services due to lack of funds, and only then do the Arizona agencies begin to recruit staff, rent the agencies' buildings and, reportedly, resume services.

Therapists and other employees face the dilemma of accepting positions promised for only 90 days with a reduction in benefits. Many will seek positions elsewhere, further decimating the fragile safety net of services.

If, as the state is alleging, there are problems with management and within some of the agencies, then the boards of directors of these agencies need disclosure of the specific allegations so they may take action. Releasing this information should not jeopardize any further criminal investigations. Auditors already have copies of agency records.

I was a therapist at Southwest Counseling Center and Southern New Mexico Human Development (SNMHD), later serving as clinical director and forensic evaluator at SNMHD. I was a prison psychologist and private practitioner prior to retirement. I am a Vietnam veteran, awarded the Navy Achievement Medal for developing the Psychological Testing and Evaluation Unit for the first naval drug rehabilitation center. I have also established and directed a child treatment center and a crisis intervention unit in Florida.

My professional association with our governor has been a positive and rewarding relationship since the 1980s, due to our shared advocacy for children and crime victims. However, in this situation, the administration's strategies are clearly misguided and not remedial. Our citizens deserve better.

All we get is the shaft

Environmentalists get rich while we pay taxes

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

Most people in New Mexico care about a lot of things. They have the requisite concern about endangered species, along with a clean and fertile Mother Earth. They signed on to Earth Day when global cooling was the concern, and then signed on to the global warming alarmists.

What we know for sure is that the solution to everything from global cooling to global warming is to put the government in charge and stop doing as much capitalism.

America hears loud and clear when the voices of environmentalism shout, "Whatever you do, stop making money to save the planet."

Most Americans are unaware that the millions upon millions of dollars wasted in environmental causes come in one form or another from their pockets. Each wolf, owl, lizard and New Mexico jumping mouse takes money from each American, regardless of if we agree to the theft.

Even worse, the concern for all things environmental is an industry in America, with environmentalists making lots of money for themselves while keeping ordinary Americans from making a simple living. The environmental elites fly high above us in their own jets while they plot to keep more and more Americans from being able to make a living.

This environmental political action damages the jobs and infrastructure of working class Americans. For example, look at the logging industry.

America runs on wood, but we are kept from harvesting our own forests. The environmental rules and regulations stab a dagger in the heart of middle-class America.

Our nation is a lesser nation because it cannot be energy independent and still comply with all the political agendas. We need not import another drop of oil or gas if we so desire.

They frame the argument that if they do not constrict oil and gas all the clean air and water in the entire Earth will be a thing of the past. There are no studies that show this to be true, only political action and financial harvesting by environmental lawyers.

We in New Mexico, and in America, are sitting on a gold mine. Unfortunately, when the environmentalists get done, all we citizens get is the shaft.

New Mexico is rich in potential for oil and gas. However, while some of the oil and gas is being harvested, much of that potential is not being used. This is thanks to lots of political action that seeks to shut down oil and gas rather than expand it.

What is not obvious to most New Mexicans is that if oil and gas were completely shut down, their taxes would be significantly higher to pay for the public schools, and they would have to pay those taxes with significantly fewer jobs.

More so, it is not obvious that if the oil and gas production along with other extractives was to increase significantly, New Mexico could match Alaska with a dividend paid to citizens instead of New Mexicans paying state income taxes. We could get a check rather than send a check.

In the year 2008, the Alaska dividend because of oil and gas was $3,269 per person. Every man woman and child got this dividend, which, for a family of five, came to $16,345. They had that money before they did any other work. While the yearly dividend is not that much every year in Alaska, it is always something, so the taxpayers of the state do not pay taxes. They get money instead of a tax bill.

What if the citizens of New Mexico could have a check each year; would that get their attention?

Of course, it would be great, but the leaders of New Mexico do not want citizens to get that money, rather, they want the citizens to pay more money to the state. Further, with increased drilling and pumping the price of the fuel for the citizens should go down since the supply increases, another bonus to the working class.

So it is simple: Keep taking American jobs for environmental reasons or swing the pendulum back to our working class first. We want the goldmine, not the shaft. We want that check each year instead of having to pay taxes.

Controversy affects us all

Health care providers denied due process

By Sen. Michael Sanchez
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

If you or a member of your family does not receive behavioral health services, you might think the recent controversy surrounding an audit that alleged widespread fraud, theft and misuse of public funds by mental health providers doesn't affect you, think again. It affects all of us and in ways you might never have considered.

First, it affects the principle of due process. Even if the closest you've ever experienced the legal system is by watching an episode of "Law and Order," you know that the accused is presumed innocent until proven guilty. You know that the accused should be told what he or she is accused of and allowed to defend against the charges. You know that the facts are presented to a jury to decide guilt or innocence and a judge decides the proper punishment.

The behavioral health providers have been accused of wrongdoing and have had their funding stopped. All this has been done without being provided with specific information about their alleged wrongdoing. Gov. Susana Martinez and her administration have come out strongly against the providers.

While I agree that the guilty should be punished, they must first be informed of the charges against them, and have had the opportunity to respond. This is simple fairness, the pillar of our legal system.

Whenever due process is denied to anyone, our legal system is undermined for the next person accused of wrongdoing. And the next person accused could be you or a family member.

Next, the behavioral health controversy affects our local and state economies. The accused organizations had many employees providing mental health services throughout New Mexico. But when the state Human Services Department cut off the providers' funding, many employees faced reduced hours, no jobs or having to work for unfamiliar Arizona companies.

Jobs are hard to come by in all areas of the state. When hours are cut, jobs are eliminated and millions of dollars are sent to Arizona companies, New Mexico's economy is negatively affected. And that affects all of us.

Finally, representatives of the Martinez administration have criticized state legislators for asking questions and raising concerns about the effects on our most vulnerable, as well as the way the entire situation has been handled. Legislators have been accused of "defending" the providers and called "shameless politicians." Unfortunately, name calling does nothing to solve the serious problems facing our mental health communities throughout the state. I encourage the administration to work with legislators to help solve the crisis.

Michael Sanchez represents New Mexico Senate District 20 in Bernalillo and Valencia counties and is the Senate Majority Leader.

“ This is simple fairness, the pillar of our legal system. ”

Another view needed in Park Ridge decision

On Thursday, Aug. 8, I was asked by Steve Fischmann to appear on his radio show "Let's Talk" on KSNM-AM 570, to provide comments as an economist on the proposed Park Ridge hospital on the former Las Cruces Country Club site.

Other guests invited were Robert Pofahl, a local real estate developer who has prepared conceptual plans for the site, and Connie Potter, a member of the Neighborhood Association that is adjacent to the Las Cruces Country Club. Pofahl chose not to attend, but provided written comments, which were read to the radio audience.

“ Let’s do proper due diligence, so we’re not sorry down the road. ”

Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance (MVEDA) provided the Las Cruces Planning and Zoning Committee an economic impact study of the proposed Park Ridge Medical Center. The study estimated local impacts on personal income, economic activity (both direct and indirect effects), households, real estate and local/state tax revenues.

In a June 20, letter to the Planning and Zoning Committee, the CEO of MVEDA, Davin Lopez, had the following disclaimer on the economic impact report:

“The economic impact analysis conducted by MVEDA for Park Ridge Medical Center campus assumes 100 percent new incremental businesses, jobs, capital investment and tax revenue across all its categories, both medical and retail.”

In other words, the study assumes there are no other medical facilities in Las Cruces. Currently, Memorial Medical Center and MountainView Regional Medical Center have occupancy rates of 50 and 67 percent respectively, which would be significantly impacted by any new medical facility. Therefore, the economic impact projections are grossly overblown.

Other issues not addressed in the impact analysis are the following:

- Effects on local traffic around the proposed medical complex
- Additional costs to city for city services – along with needed road construction
- Whether the proposed facility meets current local, state and federal laws
- Expected population changes in the Las Cruces area – since 2008, population growth has been much slower than in the early part of this century
- Since the 1970s, all impact analyses are expected to consider not only economic consequences of a proposal, but environmental and social impacts both positive and negative, e.g. buy-in by affected residents and ecological consequences
- And most important, the reputation of the developer, e.g. after they got the zoning change in the past – did they do what was promised, or was it just a scam to increase the value of the property so it could be sold to a third party?

If the city doesn't have adequately trained staff to provide another view of this proposal, we have very good social scientists at New Mexico State University who could.

In conclusion, I know the city wants a constructive use of the former country club property that is now an eyesore and not contributing to the well being of the community.

Let's do proper due diligence, so we're not sorry down the road.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Cowboy coffee

I am married to a Starbucks fiend (sounds better than user or addict).

Any trip to town includes a quad vente latte four shots no foam. It is more important than the mail, the heart medicine, the bank deposit or pickin' up the kids at day care.

On extended trips, we drive for miles at all hours of the day or night following her GPS in search of that green symbol, the one that looks like Medusa with radioactive tendrils flaming from her head.

To be kind, it has a flavor of its own. It's not for everybody, but I do think it has driven fanatic users to more serious addictions like five-hour energy drinks, Tabasco popsicles and cigars made of burning rubber.

I was in a strange town on a Starbucks mission last week trying to remember if it were a Grande Uno Caffè Misto Leonardo or a dolce capasso nu latte Divinchi.

The barista (the special name for Starbucks waiters that was derived from the character playing the one-eyed mushroom wearing scuba gear in the bar scene from Star Wars IV) took my order.

He said he didn't know cowboys drank Starbucks.

I said, "We invented it."

As I explained it to him, it became clear to me. I ask you all, you cowboys, hunters, soldiers, Indians, fishermen, prospectors, explorers – all of you who have roasted squirrel, carp, possum, haunch of wild burro, buzzard drum sticks or spotted owl over a campfire in the wilderness – what did you wash it down with?

That's right, cowboy coffee.

A handful of coffee grounds (any brand) in an old pot, put on the open fire and set on boil is the recipe supreme.

The pot itself is sacred and never washed. It is this accumulation of ingredients that gives cowboy coffee its unique flavor.

It is seasoned by the remnants of whatever falls into the pot and becomes part of the geological strata that comprise its lining. It is not unlike a good pipe whose bowl gets layered with carcinogenic ash, or the wax that builds in your ears, or the plaque that barnacles an ol' dog's teeth.

Starbucks proudly touts its flavor, but if you really crave a strong, rank, acidic, caffeine stimulant, one that can also peel the paint off a backhoe bucket, penetrate zirconium nuclear fuel rods and destroy the odor in your son's tennis shoes, have an old cowboy make you a cuppa in his blackened pot.

You will discover Starbucks' secret.

A word of caution: If you can't strain your cowboy coffee through 2-inch 10-gauge expanded metal, at least drop a magnet into the cup before you sip.

Country Club retells history

LCCC backs proposal

Editor's note: The Las Cruces Country Club Board of Directors released the following narrative to give its side of debate over the property.

Members of the Las Cruces Country Club have been affected by the turn of events that lead to placing the country club property on the real estate market.

It was the only viable option given to the club in order to continue its long history in Las Cruces. Since 1928, and throughout the history of the club, there have been times when change altered the direction of the nonprofit organization.

Forming the club was the vision of 10 people who invested in the purchase of more than 175 acres of land in the far northeast section of Las Cruces, which was out in the boonies (sand hills), in the 1920s.

North Main Street later became U.S. Highway 70 with land that was purchased from the club to expand the highway. Later, the City of Las Cruces purchased Apodaca Park, as well as land to construct Camino Del Rex and Madrid Avenue from the club. In order to stay solvent, the club sold land, incorporated as a nonprofit and provided recreational services to the community (public play on the course and provided rental of ballroom space). All of this was done to survive and retain our assets.

Now to survive, we must sell our assets, water rights and land. We have sold a majority of the water rights, and those proceeds aided in eliminating our debt and assisting in continuing our day-to-day operations. The sale of the property will aid in acquiring a new home for Las Cruces Country Club. All proceeds from and sale of assets are to be used to acquire like assets. Like assets would mean the purchase of another golf course.

This real estate sale will assist Las Cruces Country Club in operating a golf course again, and continue to provide the services offered throughout our history.

Golf courses all over the country have closed down, abandoned and sold their assets to minimize their losses. LCCC in 2004 planned a move to a new facility that did not work out. LCCC carried debt that, if not paid, could have meant foreclosure and the end of a long tradition.

LCCC weighted its options and voted to liquidate assets in order to survive. How do you keep the club intact? The answer is, utilize your assets to pay off debt then purchase an affordable facility and continue to provide the service to our members as all proceeds from sale of assets must be used to purchase assets, no one person will benefit financially.

LCCC members pay dues to be a part of a tradition, a social activity, a recreational facility and to be a part of a nonprofit organization that gives back to its local community assisting educational, religious and public entities in fundraising activities.

Unfortunately, at this location there will no longer be a golf course. This saddens the LCCC membership for many reasons: we do not have a home to play golf; the nonprofit activities and events supported by the club had to find other avenues to fundraise; practice/tournament facilities for our youth were reduced; public use facilities such as a voting/polling place was moved after many years; and the community lost a place to celebrate weddings, graduations and anniversaries.

With this sale, and because of Bob and Karen Pofahl's commitment to quality and managed development, the property will benefit the community with traffic control and connectivity to major roads, increased park space, a health care facility, a rehabilitation facility, multi-family housing and retail space.

The Las Cruces Country Club supports this massive undertaking to develop our community and provide quality growth.

“Unfortunately, at this location, there will no longer be a golf course.”

Letter to the Editor

Country club concerns

The Country Club Neighborhood Association passed a motion – unanimously – in favor of smart, sensible development. This “wall-to-wall” in-fill development of the old Las Cruces Country Club goes from 1-A residential to C-3 commercial zoning, with a small buffer. Our proposal of a large green buffer was rejected by the developer.

The many discrepancies in the zoning codes, not addressed by planning and zoning, were pointed out by our Secretary and Treasurer Eva Booker.

There is only one access-exit road on Main Street, with a projected traffic increase of 7,000 cars a day. There are serious questions as to who would own and operate the proposed hospital and concerning the land acquisition from Apodaca Park.

Codes has said that weeds and dead trees must be removed by the owner of the property, no matter the size of the property.

Please research tax revenues. The larger the city, the higher the taxes. A large park, which four city councillors promised to support, would result in a lot of tourist dollars.

I've never heard anyone say: “I bought my property because there's a nice commercial development out the back door.”

IRS offers education tips

Going back to school equals tax credits

Going to college can be a stressful time for students and parents. The IRS offers tips about education tax benefits that can help:

- American Opportunity Tax Credit (AOTC) can be up to $2,500 per eligible student. The AOTC is available for the first four years of post secondary education. Forty percent of the credit is refundable. That means that you may be able to receive up to $1,000 of the credit as a refund, even if you don't owe any taxes. Qualified expenses include tuition and fees, course-related books, supplies and equipment. A recent law extended the AOTC through the end of Dec. 2017.
- Lifetime Learning Credit (LLC). With the LLC, you may be able to claim up to $2,000 for qualified education expenses on your federal tax return. There is no limit on the number of years you can claim this credit for an eligible student.

- Student loan interest deduction. Other than home mortgage interest, you generally can't deduct the interest you pay. However, you may be able to deduct interest you pay on a qualified student loan. The deduction can reduce your taxable income by up to $2,500. You don't need to itemize deductions to claim it.

These education benefits are subject to income limitations. For more information, visit the Tax Benefits for Education Information Center at www.irs.gov.

Lights

As a result, the city contracted the Williams Design Group to come up with a better system of support and light poles to handle the show. The proposed solution made for one of the best attended Downtown Tax Increment Development District (TIDD) meetings in recent memory Monday, Aug. 12.

The proposal called for tall, square poles at the north and south entrances of Downtown Main Street, with the option of triangular poles along the interior. The cost estimates of the new poles was $40,000 for the entrance poles, $120,000 if poles were added at cross streets and $550,000 for a full build-out.

The cost alone was of concern to city councillors – who also act as members of the TIDD board – because funds from the extra tax on Downtown property are meant for mainly infrastructure improvements.

Councillor Greg Smith, who has been active in Downtown revitalization efforts, said the TIDD money should really be used for larger projects.

In addition to the cost of the project that would have limited uses, Downtown merchants also objected to the look of the proposed pole system. An official statement from the Main Street Merchants Association described the proposal as “unappealing,” and would leave Downtown resembling more “an oil field” than an inviting place for people.

Mike White of White’s Music Box, who has been a leader in the Downtown revitalization effort, said he was absolutely opposed to the proposal that he said would detract from the progress made.

“We’re off to a really great start for bringing Downtown back,” he said. “Let’s not mess it up.”

Councillor Miguel Silva, who conceived of developing the Downtown light show after seeing an impressive home display, said he had hoped a new pole system would become something to also better promote other Downtown events. An improved electrical system along the street, he said, could also be of benefit to events such as SalsaFest!

“When we started this project, we wanted to help make this Downtown a destination,” Silva said. “Yes, not that much thought was put into it, but Monday morning quarterbacking is easy.”

As the TIDD board, the council didn’t green light the new poles, but encouraged the Holiday Light Show event organizers to look for other ways to light up Main Street, such as putting light decorations on the numerous trees planted along Main Street.

Silva said the city government has already put a lot of resources into helping the Downtown revitalization effort and encouraged private businesses to “step up to the base.”

Joe Novak, owner of Interstate Batteries of Las Cruces, whose home light displays inspired the event, suggested having different businesses sponsor individual tree decorations.

Access to adequate power remains a concern. Mayor Pro Tem Sharon Thomas said the decorative bollards long Main Street could be upgraded to provide more electrical outlets for the trees.

What this year’s light show will look like wasn’t fully decided, but the event’s future role could become better defined by the design charettes planned for October, said Russ Smith of the Happy Dog food stand Downtown.

“We’re off to a really great start for bringing Downtown back. Let’s not mess it up.”

San Andres

kind of school is a $120,000 grant recently awarded to the district by Gov. Susana Martinez, as part of her effort to expand early college high schools in the state.

The grant, made possible by the Daniels Fund, will help the district reach out to the business community to make the concept work – literally. Rounds said part of getting those students their trade certifications would be three phases of “job shadowing.” First, there would be job exploration, followed by more frequent visits to a particular job site and, by the senior year, even part-time employment at the job site.

Fortunately, The Bridge of Southern New Mexico – an organization of educators and business people that brought the early college high school concept to LCPS – is in place to begin those conversations with the business community, Rounds said.

The Bridge will be an active participant in the new school’s planning committee as it looks at what work fields need to be pursued, such as manufacturing, construction and health care.

Rounds said the kinds of health-care jobs being considered would not conflict with the health-care focus of the second early college high school also being planned to be housed on the New Mexico State University campus. The new San Andres school’s health-care fields will be the kinds of medical technologists and assistants that don’t require a full associate degree, whereas the new early college high school at NMSU would be more focused on pre-med preparations to be a nurse, doctor or dentist.

“The two schools will be addressing different aspects of the growing health care market,” Rounds said.

In line with the new San Andres school-to-work focus will be an emphasis on the needed “soft skills” for employment, such as showing up to work on time, proper dress and work behavior, etc.

Rounds said he expects to begin rolling out components of the new San Andres focus this spring, with the Rio Grande Preparatory Institute in full play by next fall semester. Currently, San Andres – located in Mesilla – has around 120 students, and that enrollment will at least double as the Rio Grande Preparatory Institute, he said.

More significantly, Rounds said, having an end goal of a job at graduation should turn around the school’s lackluster graduation rate of 85 percent.

In announcing the Daniels Fund grants across the state, Martinez said the linking of the business world to academics is better preparing students for life after graduation.

“This partnership shows the opportunities we can create when leaders who put students first work together,” Martinez said.

Martinez and Public Education Department Secretary Hanna Skandera praised the Arrowhead Early College High School at NMSU for paving the way to creating a new school model that is delivering results, such as extremely high graduation rates.

“When we find an opportunity to replicate best practices that are delivering results for students, we should seize it,” Skandera said. “Through this partnership, not only will students have a chance to earn their degree, but they will also get a head start in understanding what it takes to be successful in college or their chosen career. We have seen amazing results in Las Cruces and we expect to see them all over New Mexico.”

“This partnership shows the opportunities we can create when leaders who put students first work together.”

SUSANA MARTINEZ,
Governor of New Mexico

Valley Pic Quik armed robbery suspect sought

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps identify the suspect who held up a convenience store.

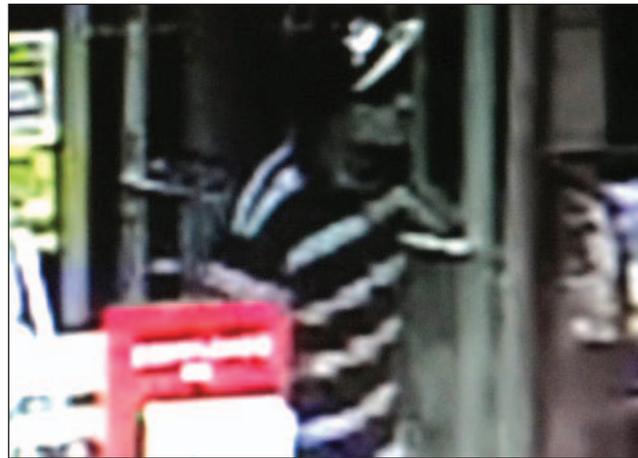

At around 9:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 12, a young man walked into the Pic Quik store at 1250 N. Valley Drive and threatened an employee with a black handgun, demanding money from the store's register, Las Cruces police said.

The suspect left the store with an undisclosed amount of cash. No physical injuries were reported.

The suspect was described as being in his early 20s, approximately 5-feet-9-inches tall and weighing around 140 pounds. A store surveillance camera shows that the suspect was wearing black shorts, a blue and white horizontal-striped shirt, and a two-tone cap with what appears to be "New York" lettering. The suspect also had a small mustache.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspect is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

counties and cities over a 15-year period beginning the 2015 fiscal year. By the 2030 fiscal year, when the hold harmless payments are expected to go away for good, the city's budget will have seen a reduction of state money amounting to an estimated $124.7 million.

Because some of the state's revenue projections may have been overly optimistic, it's possible for the next Legislature to accelerate the reduction of hold harmless payments, or even remove them altogether, Miyagishima said.

The legislation phasing out the hold harmless payments also gave affected counties and cities a way to regain most of that loss. They can raise the GRT up to three-eighths of a percent, and Miyagishima said the law was written in way that doesn't allow for it to be put up for a vote.

At a work session the day before, the City Council reviewed options for either lesser amounts or to phase in the full increase as the state money decreases. The problem with the other options, Miyagishima said, is the behavior of the state is unpredictable.

Enacting the full three-eighths by the next fiscal year, Miyagishima said, would bring a budget surplus of about $13 million for the first few years if the current schedule for phasing out state money doesn't change. Surplus money would be put aside for when the trend reverses and the city begins to see a slight loss by the 2028 fiscal year.

Miyagishima said the full three-eighths increase would amount to an additional 4 cents on $10 or 37.5 cents on $100 spent on goods and services other than food or medicine, which remain GRT-free.

Angelo Chieffo asks questions of Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima about the proposed gross receipt tax increase to make up for lost state payments at a public meeting Tuesday, Aug. 13, in the Doña Ana Community College auditorium on its East Mesa Campus.

"In a nutshell, this will be putting us back to where we were before hold harmless," Miyagishima said.

Angelo Chieffo, a resident, told the mayor that increasing GRT a year before the city sees a loss of funding is a hard thing for taxpayers to accept. Miyagishima said he felt the city needs to act now in case the next Legislature eliminates the option.

"So, you're saying don't trust the state, but trust the city," said Ric Brightman, another resident at the meeting. "Isn't that disingenuous?"

Miyagishima said the city has a much better record of being transparent, such as the way it has preserved – and grown – the fund with money from the Memorial Medical Center sale. Also, the city has not significantly grown its budget since the housing collapse in 2008. Then, the city was spending $930 per person, but now city spending is at $830 per person, the mayor said.

"We're at the point where we start cutting services if we start losing funding," Miyagishima said.

City employees have only seen one raise in pay over the past five years, but are bringing home less today because of rising health insurance costs.

Brightman said he also was bothered by the law prohibiting a referendum vote, giving the implication that if the question was put before the people it would be voted down, much like the recently defeated GRT increase proposed by the county.

"If the people would probably vote it down,

State Sen. Bill Soules tells why he voted against stopping the state payments.

then why would you want to pass it?" he said. Councillor Gill Sorg responded that the state government wrote the script and the city is just following it.

"We really don't have a choice," Sorg said. Miyagishima said he felt the increase was the only responsible response to the situation.

"I don't want to be living here in Las Cruces 15 years down the line ... and reading in the newspaper that the city is going broke and saying I wish I had passed that gross receipt tax," Miyagishima said. "Gosh, I look at Detroit, and they kept kicking that can down the road.

"These are hard situations that our counties, our states, our cities are dealing with."

End of summer awards

Jim Hilley
Deflections

The end of summer, right before the fall sports season gets under way, is as good a time as any to take some random potshots at, and pass out congratulations to, anyone remotely connected to the world of sports.

Of course, such a column usually has some kind of clever name like "High Fives," or "Thumbs Down," but I can't think of anything that witty so I'll just make these up as I go along. Readers can try to guess if they are a compliment or a criticism.

The Just a Little Bit Off Target Award goes to the new Aggie football helmet. Really? A row of crossed six guns down the center stripe?

While the design did garner the Aggies a little bit of national publicity, I think it makes us look a little tone deaf to the mood of the country since the massacre in Newtown, Conn., last December. Aggie football gear is probably not the proper medium to express our appreciation of the Second Amendment.

The "Take Me Out to the Ballgame" Award goes to Michael and Judy Johnson for their extremely generous gift to the New Mexico State University baseball program. I am really looking forward to the upgrades to Presley Askew Field and the swagger the Aggies should have as they play ball in such a fine facility.

I'll have to admit, however, I breathed a sigh of relief that such generosity wasn't predicated on renaming the ball park. Presley Askew was a tremendous influence on the whole Aggie sports program and his name belongs there. A big thank you to the Johnsons for their generosity and their humility.

The I'll Believe It When I See It Award goes to the American West Baseball League and the Las Cruces Sun Rays. We really are hoping to see you in Las Cruces someday, but we are not holding our breath.

The Banana Split with a Cherry on Top Award goes to the Fairacres Little League team. Winning the local and state tournament and then taking on some of the more established Little League clubs in Waco, Texas, was an inspiration to the whole city. Thank you, we can't wait till next year.

The Shut Up We Know This Column is Just Because You Couldn't Think of a Real Topic Award goes to me. Be sure to look for my acceptance speech in a future issue of the Las Cruces Bulletin.

Ag soccer adds scoring punch

NMSU hosts soccer clinic and scrimmage Saturday, Aug. 17

By Jim Hilley
Las Cruces Bulletin

The fall sports season at New Mexico State University is fast approaching, with the soccer program leading the way.

NMSU soccer coach Blair Quinn and his team are hosting a free, 45-minute clinic for children in first through eighth grade at 5 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 17, at the NMSU Soccer Complex. The annual Crimson & White Scrimmage will follow at 6 p.m.

The Aggies are coming off a disappointing 2-14-3 season that included five 0-1 losses, a sign of a strong defense and a lackluster offense.

Quinn said his offense will have more firepower this year.

"The kids that we brought in are a little more proficient around the goal, and the kids that returned came off a very good spring where they got better in front of the goal as well," he said.

Quinn said scoring punch should come from junior forward Layla Todd and midfielders Mary Kate Koziol, Katelyn Smith and Daisy Hernandez.

"They will be our really attacking-minded players," he said, "as well as a couple of the other forwards, Jennae Cambra and Devin Hart, who is a freshman."

The Aggies have 16 players returning from the 2012 squad including six starters. Nine newcomers are also on the roster this season.

"We are coming along pretty good," Quinn said. "We are still not at the game-level fitness and speed that we want to be at, but we haven't played either. Overall, we are further along than we were at this time last year."

Quinn said he feels the program has improved "tremendously" since he arrived on campus two years ago.

"No disrespect to the players who were here before, but personnel-wise and the talent level has increased," he said. "The returnees have gotten significantly better and we keep bringing in better kids."

The Aggies open the 2013 regular season at home for only the second time in school history, when they host Nebraska-Omaha at 4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 23, and in-state rival New Mexico at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 25.

To participate in the children's clinic, visit www.nmstatesports.com and look for the tab on the women's soccer page. For more information, contact D.J. Downs at ddowns@nmsu.edu. Participants are encouraged to bring a soccer ball and water bottle.

Johnson's gift boosts Aggie baseball

Numerous upgrades are on deck for NMSU's Presley Askew Field

Growing up, baseball was Michael Johnson's favorite sport, as he and his older brother played the game with their mother sitting in the stands cheering them on. Baseball was a true love for Michael's mother, Mineola, and it is in her honor that Michael and his wife, Judy, will give $1.4 million to the New Mexico State baseball program for facility upgrades.

"Baseball has been one of my passions during my entire life," Johnson said. "My older brother and I grew up playing the game in Roswell, N.M.

"The love for the game was instilled in us by my mother, who was a huge baseball fan. It was the sport she really followed and enjoyed watching. She attended as many of our games as her work schedule would allow, cheering for my brother and me from the stands.

"We dedicate this gift as a memorial to my mother and hopefully it will bring good fortune to the New Mexico State baseball program for years to come," he said.

Johnson said he and his wife

Williams joins football broadcasts

Former wide receiver at NMSU partners with Jack Nixon

The New Mexico State athletics department announced Wednesday, Aug. 7, that former New Mexico State University wide receiver Preston Williams will join the "Voice of the Aggies" Jack Nixon in the radio booth as the color analyst for the football broadcasts beginning in 2013.

"My memories at New Mexico State are some of the best memories of my life," Williams said. "Las Cruces is a wonderful community and NMSU is a great place to have experienced my youth. I am very grateful for the opportunity I have to give back to the place that gave me so much."

"Working next to Jack is an honor and privilege. To have the opportunity to work next to a man that is a lasting part of Aggie Football is a wonderful thing. I am looking forward to this season because I believe this program is trending in the right direction because of our new head coach, and the coaching staff he has assembled."

Williams played wide receiver and was a four-year letter winner for the Aggies from 2000-04. In 2005, Williams earned a bachelor's degree in communication studies. Currently, Williams is an owner of a State Farm Insurance Agency in Las Cruces. A native of New Mexico, Williams and his wife, Susan, have one son, Darion, and are expecting their second child in mid-October.

Aggie football games are broadcast each week on KGRT-FM 103.9. The pre-game show starts an hour before each kickoff.

have always been supporters of baseball, including establishing a scholarship at Rice University for its baseball program and also as long-time season ticket holders for the Houston Astros and the Rice Owls.

"Michael and Judy Johnson are great supporters of this university," NMSU President Garrey Carruthers said. "With their commitment of time, leadership and financial contributions, they are helping to ensure NMSU remains one of the best universities in our region."

The Johnsons' gift will assist in making much needed upgrades to the baseball facilities including additional stands, chair-back seating, a stadium sun cover, a dugout expansion and renovation, clubhouse lighting, sprinkler repair, exterior fences, outfield repair, an upgraded press box and a scoreboard with a video and MPH display.

NMSU baseball coach Rocky Ward said the gift would give the university a better chance of hosting post season games.

"This will give us a much better chance to compete more consistently on the conference and regional levels, as well as help us significantly in our recruiting efforts, while giving our fans a great atmosphere to watch a baseball game," Ward said.

Michael and Judy Johnson, who both attended NMSU, have made major donations to the university in the past, according to an NMSU press release. In 2006, the Johnsons gave NMSU a $1 million gift to help the College of Arts and Sciences establish its first endowed chair in the department of geological sciences. In honor of Judy's grandmother, an Aggie alumna, they established the Daisy Gray Scholarship for students majoring in special education with a $150,000 gift in 2008. In 2009, the pair, who live just outside of Santa Fe, pledged $125,000 to the NMSU Center for the Arts to establish the new center's costume shop, Jaki's Closet, named after their daughter, Jaclynn, a 2011 NMSU graduate. In 2010, they donated $250,000 for The Lionel Haight Professorship and have since issued two $100,000 match challenges to work toward growing the professorship into a chair.

Michael Johnson retired from ConocoPhillips Co. in 2002. He graduated from NMSU in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in geological sciences. He also has earned master's degrees from Rice University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as well as an honorary doctorate from NMSU. He serves on the NMSU Foundation Board of Directors as past chairman.

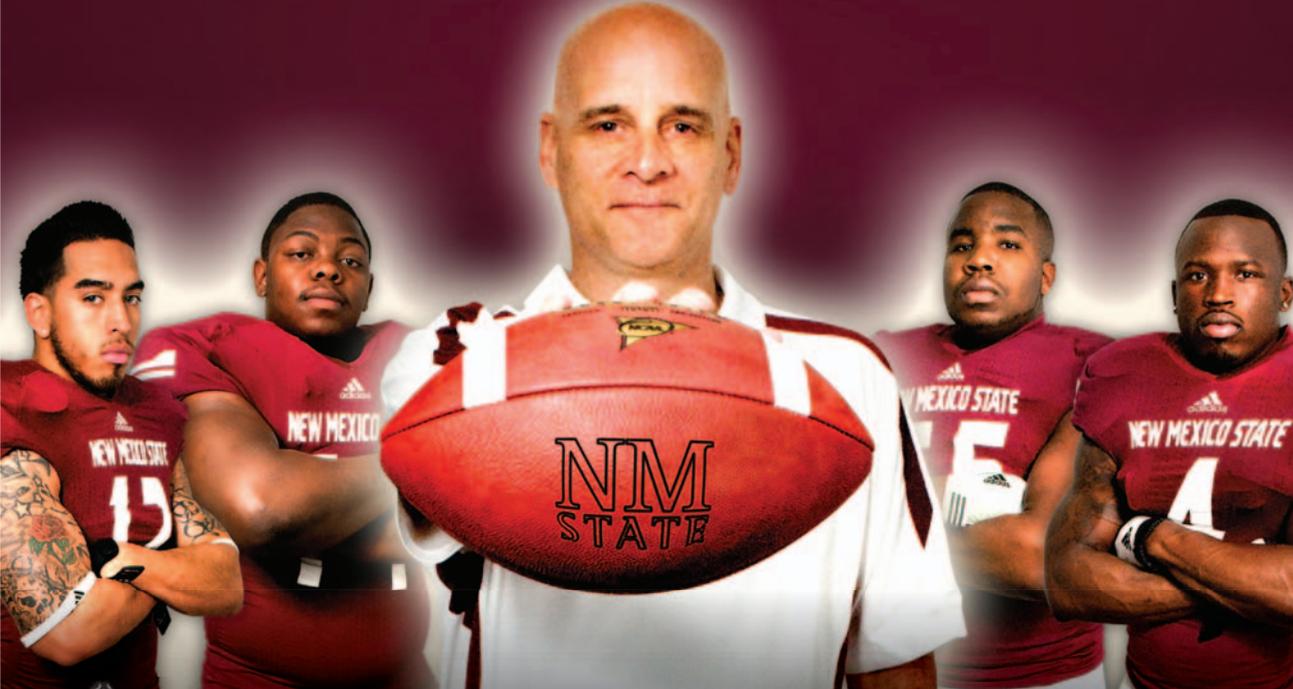

Judy Johnson attended NMSU for three years before transferring to the University of Houston, where she finished her degree in accounting. She is a certified public accountant and retired from the City of Houston, Texas, where she held many positions before becoming city controller and director of finance and administration. She serves on the NMSU College of Education's Board of Advocates and the NMSU College of Business' Advisory Council. Judy Johnson also received an honorary doctorate from NMSU.

Ag soccer fifth in WAC poll NMSU's Todd named to all conference team

New Mexico State University's Layla Todd was selected to the all-WAC Volleyball team as determined by a vote of the league's seven head coaches, while Seattle University was selected as the favorite to win the 2013 Western Athletic Conference women's soccer title.

The 2013 WAC preseason all-conference women's soccer team and preseason players of the year were also announced as voted on by the league's coaches.

Seattle U was selected first in the poll, as the team received six first-place votes for 36 total points. Idaho and Utah Valley tied to finish second in the poll, each receiving 23 points. Utah Valley did earn one first-place vote. Idaho finished sixth in the WAC last season with a 3-4-1 record, while Utah Valley won the Great West Conference title with a perfect 5-0-0 league mark. Bakersfield placed fourth in the poll with 22 points. NMSU was selected fifth with 21 points. Kansas City was picked sixth with 13 points. Grand Canyon was seventh with nine points.

Seattle U junior forward Stephanie Verdoia garnered Preseason Offensive Player of the Year honors, while teammate Julia Besagno was selected as the Preseason Defensive Player of the Year.

Seattle U and Idaho led WAC teams with three all-conference selections each. Bakersfield and Utah Valley each had two honorees, while NMSU had one representative.

Ag volleyball set to begin quest for championship

Jordan's team a favorite to win WAC title

Jack Nixon
Jack's Corner

The most successful program of the last decade at New Mexico State University looks primed and ready to do it all again.

Mike Jordan is not taking anything for granted, but I think he feels good about what he has for the 2013 season. A rugged preseason schedule, which is the norm for the "Jordanaires," starts Friday, Aug. 30.

"We like to do that every year," Jordan said. "We like to face the type of teams that get our RPI up and get us ready for the conference race."

Trips to Cal from the Pac-12 and Big West powerhouse Hawai'i are up first. At the end of last season, Jordan moved Stephanie Ziegler to libero and will start the season that way as well.

"Hannah Walker is rehabbing an injury, and we are happy to keep Stephanie there initially," he said.

The front line looks solid again, which is a Jordan staple. It has led to five NCAA berths and a string of winning seasons. Big hitter Desiree Scott is a senior and she said the Aggies' winning tradition is what attracted her to NM State from her Tucson, Ariz., home.

"I saw what had been happening here, and I wanted to be a part of the success," Scott said.

Jordan is a coaching gardener, who has seeded the landscape with outstanding players and coaches. One former assistant, Debbie Baker, is bringing her Southern Utah squad back for the Aggies' tournament Sept. 13-14.

Another Jordan alum has rejoined the NM State staff. Ben Wallis returns to the staff as an assistant coach after coaching at the University of New Mexico for the past two years. His primary responsibilities with the Aggies include scouting and defensive game plans, while also assisting with recruiting, camps and on-court coaching. This move is making Jordan smile.

"We're excited that Ben is an Aggie again," Jordan said. "He'll help a great deal on the court, do a lot of the video work and help a great deal with recruiting as well."

The fruit of those seeds planted through the years will bloom again at 5 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 24, with the annual alumni match at the student activity center that is free to all fans. Each year dozens of past players made a point to come back to remember and to celebrate what NM State volleyball is. The home schedule has UNM in the Pan Am on Sept. 23, UTEP on Nov. 12, two nonconference tournaments and all of the conference opponents.

As far as the conference race, I think the Aggies are a shoo-in, but Idaho should be a challenger according to the head man.

"They have some really good foreign players, and they have some good returnees, so they will be tough," he said. "We have to be ready all the time."

Season tickets are on sale now; I think they are your gateway to watching another WAC Championship year.

Playing the game of 'what if?' Considering the possibilities

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Possibilities. As golfers, that's pretty much how we think. Each time we tee it up for a new round of golf, our hearts dwell on the anticipation this one will be special – maybe under par; maybe breaking 100; perhaps a personal best.

It's definitely possible, we say.

If we're disappointed at the end of the day, we still manage to get excited about getting back out tomorrow, ever more hopeful. It seems golfers and fishermen have that in common. Hope is the true lifeblood, yes the very soul, of golf. Without hope, we might as well stay depressed and not play at all.

When we explore the possibilities of our own golf game, what we're really doing is playing the game of "what if." I think it's a healthy game and I invite you to try it, so, I'm going to coach you a little bit.

For starters, open your mind. Don't be bound by your existing habits, beliefs and limitations. In literature it's called "suspension of disbelief." Sometimes we need that for enhancing our performance.

Some examples: What if you always felt relaxed and didn't have to think so hard about every shot? What if the six things you think about on every shot became automatic? Could you teach yourself and practice to make it so?

What if you saw the line clearly on every putt and were convinced every putt was going to go in? What if you played your game as if the consequences didn't really matter?

How much better do you think you could perform? Let's go a bit deeper as possibility thinkers.

When I work with high-handicappers, helping them to realize their potential, I'm often struck by how tightly they handcuff themselves mentally with doubt, fear and worry. When I ask them to identify what has them so perplexed, they don't know. It boils down to some feeling of inadequacy.

So, what if you knew you couldn't fail at what you were doing?

You misplay a shot; is that a failure? No. It's a lesson. Forget the poor shot and keep the lesson. You can't fail.

Let's look at another possibility. What if there were no such thing as "par?" You might be able to conceptualize a golf course as merely a series of 18 stretches of mostly lawn-mowed land, each with peculiar landmarks such as sand areas and smooth grassy "greens," suggesting different types of strokes, and which happened to be linked together in a consecutive layout.

Would you worry so much about your score? Would you dwell on making a "triple bogey," or start throwing clubs in despair after missing a putt?

What if, instead, we kept a running number of strokes, trying continually to keep the grand total as low as possible?

I think we would focus more on each shot and not so much on the end result. Each stroke is a distinct task, and only a singular number, leading to the arithmetic total. Over or under par is mostly a made-for-television contrivance, let's face it.

Consider this possibility: What if you were actually much, much better a golfer than you presently think you are? Ponder the implications of that notion. You are really good, but you won't let yourself take your own game to its highest level. The master golfer is locked inside you and you won't even look for the key.

You would be like a child prodigy violinist – the next Joshua Bell – who refused to practice and then couldn't realize any of his potential.

When you are on the golf course, do you let your true talent come out? What if you suddenly realized you had always underestimated your potential – not your recent results, mind you – and now understood that you can really play. If you comprehended that you could be an extremely skilled and gifted golfer, do you think you would apply yourself more than you do now?

Perhaps you are one of those golfers who struggles with maintaining concentration on the golf course, feeling that you're never actually fully absorbed in the game you're playing.

We all have this challenge at some point. On the golf course recently, I had just let a really pure shot go toward the green when someone in our group called over, "Didn't you hear that ball? As you swung it landed right next to you."

Apparently I was so absorbed in what I was doing, and in my golf duel with a good friend, I was oblivious to someone nearly beaming me with a ball from behind.

What if we could focus 100 percent of our mental energy on each shot? How much better would our results be? What if you were able to start every round thoroughly warmed up, loose and ready to go? When was the last time that happened? Usually it's no stretching, no warm-up shots, no practice putts.

One day soon, see what happens when you finally allow enough time to prepare yourself and step onto the first tee, ready to play, knowing you're giving yourself a chance.

Are you one of those tough-guy competitors who often lets needling others cross the line to obnoxious behavior? Your friends won't give you the feedback you desperately need, you know. Wise-guy antics usually red-flag some major inner insecurity, with bravado being the only defense.

What if we adopted an attitude of sportsmanship that dictated all our actions, on and off the golf course? Would we feel more connected and genuine, perhaps feeling better about ourselves? Consider the possibility of never, ever acting as less than a true gentleman or lady. I think that's both the legacy and invitation left to us by the legendary Bobby Jones.

How about if we didn't concern ourselves so much with how other golfers in our group are playing, but concerned ourselves more with how much joy we are experiencing having the opportunity to be on the golf course? I have at times speculated as to how I would really feel if this were the very last round of golf I would ever play. I don't think winning or losing five bucks would matter much. Soaking in the day would be better, probably with a mix of sadness and joy.

Ask yourself how much emotional currency you waste by overly attending to your opponent's brilliant shots and misplays. What if you had only yourself to satisfy with your golf game, and it didn't matter if you actually bested someone else on this particular day? Consider this possibility: You can raise the bar for your own game simply by being the best you can be.

Here are a few more thoughts. What if you attempt to replicate the manner in which the winner of a major championship played golf the previous day? This year (2013) it was Adam Scott, Justin Rose, Phil Mickelson and Jason Duffner among the men, Imbee Park and Stacy Lewis among the women. What if you learn from the way all these players stuck to their process (i.e. pattern, routine, procedure), rather than the immediate results?

Champions pay the most attention to their tempo, focus, emotions and commitment – the way they play the game. I have done that after every major and it has changed my game significantly for the better.

What if your thought before you putt the ball is "I have a good feeling about this putt?" Do you think it would make a difference? I have done that, and it has made a major difference in my putting. I make more putts than ever before.

What if you pay attention to the shot you're about to hit and not your score, or winning or losing or how many high fives you will get after the shot. The latter is what NFL receivers apparently do when they drop a catch for a score; they take their eyes off the ball and think about the end zone dance. Don't do that.

If you know your score at any given moment, you're not in the zone. What if you were in the zone? How good would you be?

Reflections

100yearsago

• Rev. Hunter Lewis held his last service at St. John's Church Sunday, Aug. 10, as he prepared to relocate to Auburn, Ala. "The largest congregation ever present at any service was there to show their appreciation to 'Preacher' Lewis, for he has won the love and esteem of every one in the valley regardless of creeds and while we know our loss it will be another's gain. We wish him success in his new field," the Rio Grande Republican said.

• All indications pointed toward a record enrollment at the state college. Among the changes were a new president, George Ladd; a new registrar, Thomas Guilfoil; and the new $30,000 Engineering Building would be put to use for the first time.

• Editor Willis Babb of the Las Cruces Daily News lamented the lack of progress toward establishing a museum in Mesilla. A plan had been discussed to secure the old jail and court house on the east side of the plaza, then

• The biggest news in southern New Mexico was the surfacing of the last unpaved portion of U.S. Highway 85 in the state. Work had begun on a 30-mile stretch near Nogal Canyon. The paving was reportedly being completed at the rate of two to three miles per day.

• State Rep. Ruben Smith asked the Las Cruces Board of Education "to entertain the thought" of donating or leasing the old Court Junior High building as "a focal point for art and physical education activities for children," instead of letting it deteriorate further.

• Gary Esslinger, manager and treasurer for the Elephant Butte Irrigation District warned, "We have been blessed for the last seven years with three-, four-, even five-acre foot allotments. But it can also be as low as six inches or two inches - and it's very difficult to run water then."

Electricity vs. Natural Gas

Natural Gas is being used by the electric company to generate power all across the country. The only problem is they lose almost 2/3 of that energy before getting it to your home. However when you decide to use natural gas appliances then almost 90% of the possible energy created is being used. Less waste is better for you, your wallet, and the environment. Naturally a better deal for you and your family, Zia Natural Gas Company.

Back-to-school news

School zones are more than just slowing down

LCPD has 35 crossing guards ready to help students cross safely

Every driver knows to slow down to 15 mph in a school zone when the lights are flashing, but did you know it is illegal to change lanes in a school zone, or to pass another vehicle traveling in the same direction in a school zone?

According to State of New Mexico and City of Las Cruces (CLC) laws regarding drivers and school zones: "No person shall drive a vehicle on a street or detour at a speed greater than 15 mph on all streets when passing a school while children are going to or leaving school and when the school zone is properly posted."

Establishment of speed zones is what allows CLC to designate where to place school zones. Speed zones may be marked by a sign containing a flashing yellow light, and when the light is in operation, the speed limit, instructions or regulations on the sign are in effect.

A school zone – and speed zone – extends from the road sign announcing the start of the school zone to the road sign announcing the end of the school zone.

A crosswalk is defined as "that part of a street at an intersection included within the connections of the lateral lines of the sidewalks on opposite sides of the street measured from the curbs or, in the absence of curbs, from the edges of the traversable roadway," and/or as "any portion of a street at an intersection or elsewhere distinctly indicated for pedestrian crossing by lines or other markings on the surface."

Also, according to law, "Whenever a vehicle is stopped at a marked crosswalk or an unmarked crosswalk at an intersection to permit a pedestrian to cross the street, the driver of the vehicle approaching from the rear shall not overtake and pass the stopped vehicle."

In other words, it is illegal for one vehicle to pass another vehicle in a school zone.

It is also illegal for a driver to change lanes in a school zone.

"When traffic-control signals are not in place or not in operation the driver of a vehicle shall yield the right of way, slowing down or stopping if need be to yield to a pedestrian crossing within a crosswalk when the pedestrian is upon the half of the street upon which the vehicle is traveling, or when the pedestrian is approaching so closely from the opposite half of the street as to be in danger," law states.

It should go without saying, but you need to be looking for grown-ups, as well as children, as you drive through school zones. Many parents escort their children to school.

"Every driver of a vehicle shall exercise due care to avoid colliding with any pedestrian upon any street and shall give warning by sounding the horn when necessary and shall exercise proper precaution upon observing any child or any confused or incapacitated person upon a street."

The law regarding overtaking and passing a school bus is clear:

"The driver of a vehicle upon approaching or overtaking from either direction any school bus which has stopped on the roadway, with special school bus signals in operation, for the purpose of receiving or discharging any school children, shall stop the vehicle at least ten feet before reaching the school bus and shall not proceed until the special school bus signals are turned off, the school bus has resumed motion or until signaled by the (school bus) driver to proceed."

Helping Las Cruces Public Schools is the Las Cruces Police Department (LCPD), which employs 35 crossing guards at 21 school crossings in the district during the regular school, said LCPD School Crossing Guard Supervisor Kendra Brunson.

School crossings operate 7:10 to 8:10 a.m. each school day morning and 2:15 to 3 p.m. in the afternoon. Crossing guards also man school crossings near the intersections of Lohman Avenue and Del Monte Street and Missouri Avenue and Thomas Drive.

Military civilian furloughs end

For civilian employees at local military bases, the first series of furloughs will be ending soon, with the recent announcement by Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel that the furloughs for most civilian employees would be reduced from 11 to six days thanks to a combination of Congressional approvals and Department of Defense budget management efforts.

For most of the 2,500 civilian employees at White Sands Missile Range, the last furlough days were this week, said WSMR spokeswoman Monte Marlin. While employees endured a 20-percent loss in pay for a month and a half, the future remains uncertain if the next phase of sequestration is allowed to continue, she said.

"There are many unknowns," she said. "We're still under sequestration."

Marlin praised the support from the local communities given to the workers who have been challenged to make ends meet and keep up with bills.

"We are very grateful," she said. "There have been businesses who have really stepped up for our people."

For the more than 800 civilian employees at Holloman Air Force Base, they will resume a normal work schedule beginning Monday, Aug. 19.

The furlough began July 8 and required Holloman's 826 civilian employees paid with appropriated funds to take one unpaid furlough day per week, as well.

"This is great news, not only for our civilian airmen, but also for the airmen in uniform who have diligently put forth the extra effort to keep Holloman running smoothly throughout this challenging time," said Col. Andrew Croft, 49th Wing commander.

Public comment sought on Rio Grande bird hunting

The United States Section of the International Boundary and Water Commission (USIBWC) is accepting public comment on a proposal that would allow bird hunting on some USIBWC lands along the Rio Grande in parts of New Mexico.

The USIBWC is considering allowing hunting along 55 miles of the Rio Grande in Sierra and Doña Ana counties. Previously, the USIBWC prohibited hunting on all of its property in New Mexico while allowing hunting on some USIBWC lands in Texas.

The USIBWC developed its proposed hunting areas in New Mexico after being approached by stakeholders interested in hunting game birds near the Rio Grande.

The Draft Environmental Assessment (EA): "Allowing Avian Hunting in Designated Areas along the Rio Grande Canalization Project, Sierra and Doña Ana Counties, New Mexico," which describes the proposed hunting areas and the environ-

Car donated to rescue mission

Members of the Las Cruces Gospel Rescue Mission gathered with representatives of Alon Brands, the Dallas-based supplier and marketer of ALON fuels, as they are presented with a 2013 Ford F150 truck as a part of its Clean 13 "Cars-4-Cause" program. Gil Bishop, president of the Rescue Mission's board of directors, said the truck is an answered prayer for the organization. "We pick up and deliver contributions of clothing and furniture seven days a week, so this new truck is a true blessing that will help reduce our travel expenses and improve our ability to serve the homeless, poor and needy in our community," he said. This is the second of four cars that will be donated to community organizations on behalf of Alon Brands and its distributors this year. Customers can also enter to win cars and vote for deserving nonprofits by picking up a "Load-the-Code" card at any Alon location and at Pic Quiks. For more information about the Clean 13 car giveaway program, visit www.myalon.com/clean-13. Pic Quik has donated $200 a month in fuel for the next year to the Las Cruces Gospel Rescue Mission.

mental impacts of allowing hunting, is available at: http://www.ibwc.gov/Files/DEA_Hunting_07232013.pdf.

Public comments on the document are being accepted through Friday, Aug. 23. Comments should be addressed to:

Elizabeth Verdecchia, Natural Resources Specialist
USIBWC

4171 N. Mesa, C-100

El Paso, TX 79902

elizabeth.verdecchia@ibwc.gov

The USIBWC will consider public comments and expects to make a decision this fall so that hunting could begin during the month of November.

Under the proposal, bird hunting would be allowed on USIBWC lands in three areas along the Rio Grande – a 30-mile segment downstream from Percha Dam State Park, a 10-mile segment downstream from Leasburg Dam, and a 15-mile segment downstream from Mesilla Dam.

Hunting would be prohibited in developed areas along the Rio Grande. The draft EA does not address hunting on private lands along the Rio Grande, such as those in Selden Canyon, or on public lands owned by other agencies.

As discussed in the draft EA, any hunting would be subject to all federal, state and local laws so that even in areas that may be designated for bird hunting, hunters would be required to follow laws regarding licenses, bag limits, restrictions preventing hunting within a certain distance from residences, no trespassing on private property, etc.

Hunters would also be subject to USIBWC regulations prohibiting driving on levee slopes and requiring all spent shells and trash to be removed.

Heart Gallery on display at the Memorial Medical Center Annex

Memorial Medical Center photos

Gov. Susana Martinez visited the Memorial Medical Center (MMC) Annex Saturday, Aug. 10, to unveil the state's newest Heart Gallery exhibit. The gallery features portraits of children in foster care needing adoption.

Martinez reviews the exhibit in the MMC Annex, one of three locations to feature the exhibit. The photos include scan codes within the photos that provide links to more information about the children. As of July, there were more than 1,800 New Mexican children in foster care. Currently, 71 are available for adoption, but three-quarters of them still don't have any prospects for permanent homes.

Paul Herzog, MMC CEO, talks about the pride the hospital takes in being one of 10 permanent Heart Gallery exhibits in New Mexico.

New Mexico 4-H officers for 2013-14 are, front row, Sierra Baca from Santa Fe County, reporter; Kylie Butterfield of De Baca County, secretary; Lily Woodall of Doña Ana County, parliamentarian; and Shelby Herrera of Valencia County, vice president; back row, Joshua Adams of Doña Ana County, song and recreation leader; Koby Cone of Roosevelt County, treasurer; and Lane Wallace of Roosevelt County, president.

State 4-H officers picked

Two from Doña Ana County start term

The 2013-14 New Mexico 4-H state officers took office during the 4-H State Conference in July. They have begun planning many activities for their fellow 4-H members.

This year's officers are Lane Wallace of Roosevelt County, president; Shelby Herrera of Valencia County, vice president; Kylie Butterfield of De Baca County, secretary; Koby Cone of Roosevelt County, treasurer; Sierra Baca of Santa Fe County, reporter; Lily Woodall of Doña Ana County, parliamentarian; and Joshua Adams of Doña Ana County, song and recreation leader.

They will plan and conduct the Youth Get-Away, state conference and provide county and multi-county leadership workshops. They will also contact public officials on 4-H-related matters and help at the New Mexico State Fair.

Wallace, who served as a 4-H Diplomat last year, is a senior at Floyd High School. During his 4-H career, he has held many leadership offices including Roosevelt County Council president this year and Floyd 4-H Club president for four years. He has also participated at Boys State and is a member of the National Honor Society.

Woodall, who was a 4-H Ambassador last year, is a home-schooled senior. She has served on the Doña Ana County Council leadership team for four years; and is a junior leader for the horse project in her county. During her 4-H career, Woodall has received many high point awards for public speaking and demonstrations.

"I have had a great experience in 4-H," she said. "It has taught me many life skills to prepare me to be a responsible adult, who will contribute to the community. I want to help pass this on to others."

Adams is a junior at Las Cruces High School. He is an active member in 4-H and has received the Danforth I Dare You Award. His participation in 4-H projects ranges from shooting sports to dairy heifer, and from knitting to baking.

"I enjoy leading by example," he said. "I wanted to be a 4-H state officer because I think it will be a fun and rewarding experience. Being able to teach younger members and members my age will be an awesome experience."

SNMSF&R court selected

The Southern New Mexico State Fair & Rodeo court was determined Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 10-11. They are Rodeo Queen Lily Woodall, Rodeo Princess Taylor Harty-Moffatt, Rodeo Jr. Princess Devyn Varbel, SNMSF Queen Raelyn Gardner, SNMSF Princess Kaylee Banegas, SNMSF Jr. Princess Jordan Armstrong and SNMSF PeeWee Princess Jocelynn Ciriza. The girls will be promoting the fair and rodeo at the Hatch Chile Festival, The Whole Enchilada Fiesta Parade and, of course, the Southern New Mexico State Fair & Rodeo Oct. 2-6.

School volunteers needed

There are many ways to help kids learn

Parents and interested community members may volunteer with Las Cruces Public Schools in numerous ways, including serving on school advisory councils (SAC), acting as chaperones during school events, assisting with fundraising, reading to students and other school and classroom activities.

Las Cruces Public Schools Policy IJOC: School Volunteers and Regulation IJOC-R: School Volunteers, can be found on the LCPS website: www.lcps.k12.nm.us. To find them on the website, click on "Policies and Regulations" in the second yellow box in the upper left-hand corner of the home page. Then, click on the "I" (for Instruction) section of policies and scroll down to IJOC (the policies are in alphabetical order).

The policies and regulations will help prospective volunteers understand the process that must be followed by the school district with regard to the use of volunteers in classrooms and schools throughout LCPS. It lists the school district policies and regulations that volunteers must read, the forms they must fill out, the background check they are subject to and other important information.

Every public school in Las Cruces has a SAC, which assists the school's administration with school-based decision making and involves parents in their children's education. Each school holds a SAC election in May, with SAC members elected by a vote of their school's parents and staff. Members serve two-year terms that begin June 1 and end May 31. Each SAC must have at least seven members, including school staff and community members. Visit <http://lcp.k12.nm.us/Committees/DAC/index.shtml> for more on SACs. You also can refer to LCPS Policy KCB: School Advisory Councils and Regulation KCB: School Advisory Councils. Visit http://lcp.k12.nm.us/Committees/Policies/policies_k.shtml and scroll down to KCB.

Volunteers also are needed in the schools to act as chaperones on field trips and during certain school activities. Volunteers help organize and conduct school fundraising events such as pancake breakfasts, enchilada dinners and jog-a-thons.

Often, volunteers are needed to read to and/or tutor students in the classroom or help out in the school library. And, schools always need volunteers who are bilingual and can assist teachers in dual-language classrooms.

Anyone who volunteers for LCPS more than five times in a school year or who chaperones at one or more school events is required to obtain a security clearance from the LCPS Central Office, including fingerprinting and a background check. (See Policy and Regulation IJOC: School Volunteers.)

If a volunteer changes the school at which he or she serves, his or her security clearance information can be transferred from the old school to the new one by contacting Maria Holguin in the LCPS Human Resources Office at 527-5973 or marholguin@lcp.k12.nm.us. The contact can be made by either the volunteer or the principal at the volunteer's new school.

All volunteers' security clearance information is on file at the LCPS Administration Building, 505 S. Main St., Loretto Towne Centre, Suite 249. Each volunteer's security clearance remains valid unless he or she has not volunteered for a period of one calendar year or more. In that case, a new security clearance must be conducted.

"Background checks on any adults having contact with LCPS students are very important," said LCPS Director of Communications Jo Galván. "However, the services that volunteers provide in every school in our district are invaluable. They do everything from making copies to reading to students to working in school libraries to accompanying students on field trips. We couldn't succeed without them. We want, therefore, to continue to make it as easy as possible for these volunteers to transfer their security clearance information from one school to another."

As I was backing out of the garage on my way to a workshop about electronics recycling, I almost (well, maybe actually) sideswiped a computer monitor sitting on the floor.

A treasure in its day, with its 1999 screen that stretches a full 15 diagonal inches, it had gone to the garage to die.

I was off to the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce First Friday program to learn how to respectfully dispose of its remains.

Suzanne Michaels, a former news anchor who now consults for the South Central Solid Waste Authority, was tasked with informing attendees about when and how to recycle electronics.

As it turns out, that part of the talk was short, because there are two fairly straightforward options in Las Cruces.

The first, available at all times, is to take the stuff to the city's West Amador Avenue transfer station, where just about anything goes. The center accepts all plastics No. 1 through No. 7, as well as cardboard, paper, metal, corrugated cardboard and Styrofoam that hasn't held food and isn't "peanuts."

In addition, the city's annual E-Scrap event will be held again in mid-November.

Michaels said that while that option still remains popular, more people have discovered the transfer station, which takes all kinds of electronics seven days a week.

Rest assured, whether you drop your devices off at the recycling center or the event, their hard drives are scrubbed seven times to protect any information on them, Michaels said. She said you also can request to have the hard drive shredded.

Perhaps the most valuable piece of information I picked up, concerning recycling monitors, is that you don't want to break the screen, because it will emit all kinds of things you really don't want to know about. Thank goodness I only grazed the stand and the glass was unharmed.

Bi-national community gets real

Martinez and Duarte set stage for rapid development

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

The flags of two countries and two states formed the backdrop Friday, Aug. 9, when Gov. Susana Martinez of New Mexico and Gov. Cesar Duarte of Chihuahua, Mexico, announced they are moving ahead to develop and market a planned community spanning the two states' border.

The community, anchored by Foxconn Corp's manufacturing facility on the San Jeronimo, Mexico, side and Union Pacific's inland intermodal port in Santa Teresa, would spring up on 70,000 acres of undeveloped desert.

Economic development champions from both the business and government communities gathered Friday morning in a hot hangar at Francis Aviation in Santa Teresa to witness the announcement. A similar joint announcement took place in Chihuahua.

Waiting for the governors to arrive, the Santa Teresa audience circulated, shaking hands and reconnecting. In addition to exchanging small talk, they explored opportunities to do business together in light of the announcement they anticipated hearing.

New study projects $7 million tourism impact

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

A study projecting an annual $7 million bump in area tourism revenue if the Organ Mountains Desert Peaks National Monument (OMDP) is created will be presented at an all-day, free forum on Friday, Aug. 23, in Mesilla.

The forum, "Land and Culture: Economic Opportunities from Conservation," is intended for all types of businesses that want to learn more about the economic impact of OMDP, as well as how they can tailor their marketing to benefit from outdoor adventure tourism.

Sponsored by the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce, the forum will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 4:15 p.m. at the Mesilla Community Center, 2251 Calle de Santiago. Andele Restaurant is providing breakfast burritos, snacks and lunch. A reception at the Ramada Hotel and Conference Center will follow.

Speakers include Laura Sanchez, CEO of the New Mexico Green Chamber, who will present the results of the economic impact study; Philip San Filippo, executive director of the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau, who will discuss "The Past, Present and Future of Tourism in Doña Ana County"; and business owners from northern New Mexico who already are seeing increased activity as a result of the Rio Grande del Norte National Monument designation in March.

"This is an opportunity to piggyback on the excitement generated by the designation of the Rio Grande del Norte National Monument in March," said Carrie Hamblen, executive director of the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce.

Research highlights business opportunities

Hamblen said the Taos area did a lot of homework before pushing for its monument designation. Research showed that a designation automatically creates change for area businesses.

She said although the Rio Grande del Norte designation is very recent, there already is evidence of its impact in the Taos area, where rafting, fishing and hunting are significant industries.

bi-national community “a legacy project.”

“This is a great opportunity to create the most competitive land port in the Americas and encourage economic development for both Chihuahua and New Mexico,” Duarte said.

“Make no mistake, this will be a game changer for New Mexico,” Martinez said.

She said legislation adopted earlier in her administration, including the elimination of GRT on locomotive fuel, creation of a six-mile overweight cargo zone at the border and “this year’s sweeping tax reform we initiated to help companies that manufacture in New Mexico but ship their products outside their state” paved the way for growth.

Also making development possible is the multi-million-dollar state investment in upgrades to Santa Teresa’s water and waste-water systems, Martinez said.

“Gov. Duarte has made similar efforts in Chihuahua,” she said.

“We truly see this as a partnership in which we are seeking to build a unique, bi-national community.”

Martinez said in addition to providing advantages for manufacturing and logistics companies locating in the Santa Teresa area, the governors want to ensure a great quality of life for residents of the planned community, with joint health care, education and recreation amenities.

“We will work together on a master plan for this bi-national community ... with a world class industrial zone in a globally competitive community,” she said.

The two state administrations will collaborate to align infrastructure – utilities and roads – and coordinate the success of a railroad bypass and efforts to ensure a skilled work force, Martinez said.

“The story already is unfolding,” she said.

Filling in the details

“Work begins immediately,” Barela said in an interview. “We will aggressively market this area to manufacturing, logistics and transportation companies large and small. We’re going to market this globally.”

He said $100,000 has been allocated in New Mexico for initial marketing, which will likely be executed through public-private partnership. Equivalent sums for the joint marketing blitz will come from Chihuahua, he said.

Barela stressed the geographical advantages of the inland port located equidistant from the seaports of Long Beach and Houston and integrated into the Northern Economic Corridor in Mexico.

He said existing border communities were not planned and have become choke points where it is difficult to move goods and services.

Economic development staff in both states have been planning for two and a half years, Barela said. Working groups have been formed to address each topic.

“We are now at a point where we can announce our intentions and next steps and the crystallization of ideas we have,” he said.

Next steps have been identified and prioritized and point people selected. Monthly meetings will monitor progress.

Steps include:

- Marketing the community. A joint promotional-recruitment strategy and development of a zone-specific incentives package are in progress.
- Opening a dual customs clearance facility, the first of its kind. In this pilot project there will be a separate gate where Foxconn products flow into the U.S. with pre-clearance on the Mexican side of the border. U.S. Customs and Border Patrol personnel would be co-located on the Mexican side of the border for expedited crossing.
- Construction of a railroad bypass that would begin at Samalayuca south of Ciudad Juárez and sweep around the city to the west, then cut north into San Jeronimo and Santa Teresa. It would continue to the north and then veer east, terminating at Interstate 10 south of Las Cruces. Presidential permits and funding for construction will be secured.
- Highway construction to improve connectivity.
- Expanding the Doña Ana County Airport runway in Santa Teresa to serve cargo.

Pulling the plan together

Davin Lopez, executive director of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development

Alliance, said the vision of bi-national development along the Chihuahua-New Mexico border has been around for many years, but Martinez and Barela were able “to recognize its potential and bring it to the forefront of their agenda.”

“The bi-national campus is visionary in what they are trying to accomplish,” Lopez said. “We want to be able to capture manufacturing jobs coming back to the Americas. We want to make this area the place they come.”

He said Union Pacific will make Santa Teresa “the strongest, most unique inland port in the country.”

He said as recently as two years ago when the economic development community discussed the evolution of the bi-national community, they discussed the construction of a railroad bypass of the congested Juárez area into Doña Ana County as something 10 years in the offing.

“Now it’s happening within a five-year timeframe,” he said.

“Already, Verde (Realty), the Border Industrial Association and MVEDA have been meeting once a month as a group.

“Because of everything that’s happening, we now have to put the railroad project at the forefront, because it is going to be an important linkage.”

Cooperating to grow

Lopez acknowledged that a flurry of planning is moving ahead in the area – including the county’s comprehensive plan, corridor plan and border economic development plan – as well as a land use plan undertaken jointly by White Sands Missile Range, Fort Bliss and neighboring local governments.

He said MVEDA has input into the county’s border economic development plan because “we see what’s going on and know the trend in the border region.”

Lopez said since the two governors have come to the table in the international community, the dynamic for planning growth has changed.

“I hope the (county’s) consultants realize that’s the leader,” he said.

“The two governors coming to the table in the development of the bi-national community is going to truly be the driver of growth at our borders. We need to realize that as a community and nurture it, not impede it any way.”

He said Las Cruces must be aware it is not a border town, and the source of most of its future growth lies elsewhere.

“When we look at our changing community, we have to understand the niche opportunities we bring to the table,” Lopez said. “At MVEDA, we feel those opportunities are closely tied to commercial space and unmanned vehicles. We also have lots of opportunities in bio-mass, and we’re very strong financial and backoffice.”

Lobbying for the mountains

Hamblen said U.S. Sens. Martin Heinrich and Tom Udall both are very supportive of the request for national monument status, which would be granted by the president, but told her they needed economic impact data to back the proposal.

“The forum will demonstrate the OMDP is at the crossroads of New Mexico’s diverse history and culture. By protecting these spaces, we protect local treasures,” Hamblen said.

She said that while Las Cruces all are very proud and protective of the Organ Mountains, many may not be as familiar with another portion of the proposed national monument, Sierra de Las Uvas Mountains north-west of the city.

Hamblen said she hadn’t known much about Las Uvas until a recent visit during which she saw amazing American petroglyphs and pictographs, learned there is a surviving Butterfield stage stop and viewed a World War II bombing practice target site from a mountain trail.

In conjunction with the forum, an excursion to Las Uvas is scheduled for 8 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 24. Excursion space is extremely limited, first come first served.

The registration deadline for the forum is 5 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 21. For more information, visit www.nmgreenchamber.com. To register, email carrie@nmgreenchamber.com.

Another interesting tidbit was the city actually loses money recycling monitors.

Michaels asked that we bring the “brain” with the monitor, because it’s the brain that makes the money.

For me, the most hopeful part of her talk was about options for glass recycling. The topic has come up more than once at Green Chamber discussions, in part because many Las Cruces feel pangs of guilt when they drop a bottle into the trash, knowing how suitable the material is for recycling.

In communities all over the U.S., environmentally conscious residents and business people are wrestling with the same dilemma: The market for used glass has gone away. Municipalities can’t make money collecting it. In fact, carting the glass from Las Cruces to a location where it could possibly be purchased and reused would cost, big time.

After losing its market, Bristol, Va., invested in machinery to crush glass into a material for use paving city streets. In Las Cruces, for at least the past two years, and probably long before, people have been trading such stories and brainstorming about alternatives.

The answer many a wine connoisseur had heard about was to bring empty bottles to Olive Garden, which transports them to Arizona for cleanup and reuse. But Olive Garden has gotten more than it can handle, and is no longer accepting donations.

The Grapevine, grappling with options at Green Chamber events, concluded transporting was the real problem, which could be solved by coming up with a cost-effective way to reuse glass locally.

It was great to hear the grapevining stage is transitioning into the action phase. A committee is tawling for ideas for dealing with used glass.

One idea the committee is exploring is processing empties to transform into decorative mulch. The mulch could be used in city parks or sold to the public. If the price were competitive, I would certainly buy it. I probably would even pay a premium for the privilege of not feeling guilty about trashing bottles.

In previous conversations, Green Chamber Executive Director Carrie Hamblen, who is doing her personal best by constructing a patio out of used wine bottles, suggested that creating a local business that would process the glass and turn out a marketable product would be a great way to go – for lots of reasons. The rewards would be local jobs and local profits.

That leaves Las Cruces with two preliminary but plausible possibilities: The city goes into the business of processing and using recycled glass or a private business turns the material into something buyers want and sells it for a profit. Either way sounds doable, and I’m open to learning about other options as well.

Screen savers across the valley will be watching for recommendations from the committee, and many of us would be glad to do whatever legwork is needed to move forward on recycling glass.

BBC Research & Consulting, which did the economic impact study for Rio Grande del Norte, was contracted to conduct the OMDP study as well.

“They are familiar with the dynamics of New Mexico,” Hamblen said.

Rio Grande del Norte business owners who will share their insights include Dan Irons of Taos Mesa Brewing Co. and Stuart Wilde of Wild Earth Llama Adventures.

Also on the agenda are presentations by representatives of local tourism-related businesses and tourism marketing talks Andrea Lawrence of the CVB and Chris Lang of LNG in Las Cruces.

More paradoxical concerns

Controversy about money, happiness continues in spite of new research results

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

People like to say, "Money can't buy you happiness." A version of this truism is something called the Easterlin Paradox, named after UCLA economist Richard Easterlin.

Beginning in the 1970s, empirical studies by Easterlin and others found that while people within a country with higher incomes were happier, higher-income countries were not happier than lower income countries.

This is often interpreted as a "keeping up with the Joneses" effect. What seems to matter is not absolute wealth, but wealth relative to neighbors. It makes you unhappy if the guy down the street has a new car and you don't, yet Americans don't care about the standard of living in, say, Jamaica. Out of sight, out of mind.

If the Easterlin Paradox is right, the happiness that wealth appears to buy is illusory. Rather, we live in a rat race where the faster our neighbors run, the faster we must go to keep up.

Easterlin's findings are the liberal's best friend as they undermine capitalism as a model for economic development. Continued striving after wealth doesn't promote happiness, as what counts is only how well we are doing relative to our neighbor. Rather, government should pursue policies that promote happiness, such as longer vacations, better health care, and an improved social safety net. Higher taxes, if they affect all the same, come at no cost to happiness but do allow government to pay for liberal programs.

Environmentalists particularly like Easterlin's findings, as they provide a justification for focusing on the environment without regard for the impact on average income. Increased environmental quality comes at no cost, as lower income does not affect happiness, but slower growth improves the environment.

Unfortunately for environmentalists and liberals, the Easterlin paradox turns out to be false. Think about it. The paradox, if taken seriously, would imply that subsistence farmers living at near starvation levels in a Third World country are just as happy as rich, overfed, urban Americans as long as they have the same relative income as their neighbors.

Then there is the empirical evidence. It turns out, contrary to Easterlin's original results, that income and happiness are highly correlated. Indeed, one of the highest international correlations is between happiness and income, flipping the Easterlin paradox onto its head.

Yet the Easterlin paradox persists among left wing policy makers. It has become a sort of urban legend. Liberals and environmentalists want to pretend that happiness and economic performance aren't related. But this is just wrong.

While money can't buy you happiness, it helps – a lot.

USDA assists ranchers impacted by drought

As severe drought conditions persist in certain regions throughout the country, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Farm Service Agency (FSA) Administrator Juan Garcia announced temporary assistance to livestock producers through FSA's Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

Under limited conditions, farmers and ranchers affected by drought will be allowed to use certain additional CRP acres for haying or grazing under emergency conditions while maintaining safeguards to the conservation and wildlife benefits provided by CRP.

In addition, USDA announced that the reduction to CRP annual rental payments related to emergency haying or grazing will be reduced from 25 percent to 10 percent. Further, the sale of hay will be allowed under certain conditions.

FSA encourages all farmers and ranchers to contact their local USDA Farm Service Agency Service Center to report damage to crops or livestock loss. In addition, USDA reminds livestock producers to keep thorough records of losses, including additional expenses for such things as feed purchased due to lost supplies.

Water table still dropping

Despite monsoon rains drought conditions persist

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

Deeper wells are holding up as Elephant Butte Irrigation District farmers try to wrap up their 2013 season, but farmers are concerned about the declining water table.

EBID water master Ricardo Bejarano, who has been with the district for 34 years, commented on the persistent drought conditions: "I've never seen it as bad before. At least, we can count on the ground water for two or three more years."

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation El Paso office had released 3.5 inches into the Rio Grande from June 3 until July 11, and some farmers noted a slight boost in the water table in the irrigation system, which raised the aquifer for brief periods in some sections of the irrigation network. But the bureau shut the release when the supply ran out.

The ground water table is holding up in the Mesilla Valley, even with the heavy pumping, according to Erik Fuchs, EBID ground water specialist.

"Most ground water irrigation wells in the Mesilla Valley and deeper municipal wells are doing all right," he said. "But some of the shallow wells in the Anthony area are experiencing problems."

Fuchs is reviewing his field records to prepare a water table status at the end of the irrigation season. One complication is that the heavy pumping creates "cones of depression" around wells, and water from adjacent areas drain into the cones, influencing the readings, Fuchs said.

Although the seasonal "monsoon" rains have eased some crop fields irrigation needs, the water table still is declining, said Phillip King, EBID hydrology consultant.

"The deeper wells in the Mesilla Valley still are functioning," he said. "But the shallow wells up in the Rincon Valley are beginning to lose their capacity."

King is a civil engineer with New Mexico State University.

The continued well-pumping is also evident with the U.S. Geological Survey monitor wells on the NMSU campus. The water table has dropped 2 to 50 feet, depending on the location in relation to the river, said John Unruh of the survey office.

On Friday, Aug. 9, The Doña Ana Community College Workforce Center, located at 2345 E. Nevada Ave., underwent a major shift in direction, rebranding itself as the One Stop Training Shop.

"We're going to have a very customer driven focus," said Community Education Director Vickie Galindo. "Before, we were focused on our customers, but we also had a package that we presented which was pretty rigid. This time around, we really want people to know that we can tailor the program specifically for them."

The new direction comes in response to improvements in the national economy, which has allowed for more training dollars to be put back into company budgets. Established in 2001 to help local companies train their employees and keep them updated on industry standards, the DACC Workforce Center has been serving community needs at their current location since 2008. Galindo believes the economic forecast gave the center a valuable opportunity to step back and analyze the situation, coming up with an updated plan to accomplish its goals.

"We will customize training from one hour on up," she said. "We will use materials that are relevant to the company, so that employees can be trained on items that relate to their jobs. We can also train at our location, or at the business itself."

The center employs instructors with expertise in just about every area of interest and has provided services to such varied organizations as the City of Las Cruces, Las Cruces Public Schools, New Mexico State University, White Sands Missile Range and many others, including several nonprofits.

"There's not a lot you can ask of us that we couldn't quickly put into place," Galindo said. "If we don't have it, we'll find it. The whole key to this business is that we can turn it around quickly."

One area of interest that has become a focus of the center is soft skills, which can include anything from how to properly answer the phone to doing simple math computations. This is something that, according to Galindo, has been identified as a problem area for a number of years.

With a broad array of online classes, as well as accredited programs to train pharmacy technicians, veterinary assistants and truck drivers, the center is constantly looking for new ways to expand training opportunities for a growing work force, including the addition of what Galindo calls "hybrid" classes.

"We're all pretty busy these days," she said. "So for people who can only commit a few hours one week, but then want to work on their own time the next couple of weeks, we're developing classes that can be taken in class and online simultaneously. I expect we'll get that going by next summer."

"Our long-range goal right now is just to become recognizable in the community. We want to be the go-to place for training. We're not going to tell you what you need. You tell us what you need and we'll do everything we can to help."

Aquifer update

The aquifer continues to drop, bringing all the related problems associated with agricultural irrigation, Phillip King, Elephant Butte Irrigation District hydrology consultant, has reported.

Some of the wells in the Hatch Valley have lost 30 to 50 percent of their capacity.

"I've been looking at wells that normally flow at this time of the irrigation season with full pipes, now the pipes are only partially full," he said. "In many places in the Mesilla Valley, the well water is getting saltier; but up in the Hatch Valley, it's even worse in terms of intrusion of salty water."

Where bargains are found

Six Las Cruces neighborhoods responsible for more than half of all short sales and bank repos

Gary Sandler's
Real Estate Connection

Buyers looking for a good deal on a Las Cruces area home don't have to look very far to find one. That's because more than half the best deals in town can be found in just a handful of local neighborhoods.

It's common knowledge that short sales, where the lender accepts less for a property than is owed on it, and bank owned listings (REOs) are selling at significant discounts. In that respect, Las Cruces is no different than other markets around the country. Some buyers are getting "smokin' deals.

According to the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR), more than 25 percent of the 581 existing-homes sold during the first half of this year were short sales or bank REOs. More than half of those sales were generated in just six neighborhoods. Here are their rankings, from top to bottom.

1. The Four Hills area, located north of U.S. Highway 70 and east of Interstate 25, was responsible for more distress sales than any other area. Of the 46 closings reported in the first half of the year, 17, or 11.8 percent, fell into the discount category. The average price of the REO and short sale properties was $118,327. On the other side of the coin, the average price of the 30 remaining non-discounted sales was far higher at $137,653.

2. The Alameda area, located just north of Downtown and extending west to Valley Drive, produced the second highest number of distress sales. The 13 discounted closings represented 11.4 percent of the 36 homes sold during the period, averaging $105,254 per unit. The 23 non-distressed properties sold at an average price of $122,182.

3. The Sonoma Ranch area, located east of I-25 between Lohman Avenue and U.S. Highway 70, was responsible for 16 discounted closings. That number represents 11.1 percent of the 124 closings that took place during the first six months of 2013. The average price of the distressed closings settled in at $187,563, which is far lower than the $230,678 average price of the 109 sales of privately owned homes.

4. The Las Colinas/Jornada North area, located across U.S. Highway 70 from the Sonoma Ranch development, booked a total of 80 sales. The 12 that were in distress sold for an average of $124,704, while the remaining 68 sales brought an average of $161,480 per unit.

5 and 6. Two areas tied for this spot. The Elks area, located north of U.S. Highway 70 between I-25 and roughly Solano Drive, and the Loma Heights area, located west of I-25 between Lohman Avenue and U.S. Highway 70, were each responsible for 5.6 percent of the discounted closings. Average sales prices in Loma Heights were $72,932 for discounted sales and $96,023 for normal sales. Averages in the Elks area were $121,581 and $157,426 respectively.

Together, the top six areas accounted for 53.8 percent of the 144 distress sales booked during the first half of this year. The difference between the average sales prices of distressed and non-distressed properties ranged from a low of $19,236 in the Four Hills area to a high of $43,115 in the Sonoma Ranch area.

There's no doubt that bank-owned and short-sale properties are the best buys around. All one has to do to own one is compete with other buyers who are of the same mind. Yes, the competition is keen, but the rewards are grand.

See you at closing.

Heating up Downtown

SalsaFest! celebrates Southwest staple

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Fall is a special time in the City of the Crosses, the distinct smell of roasting chile wafting up in great waves from deep in the Mesilla Valley, the alluring aroma of the area's most-loved crop making mouths water and stomachs rumble in tandem all over town.

As the shortening days finally begin to cool after another punishing summer of triple-digit heat and sparse monsoon rains, Downtown Las Cruces continues to heat up on the last Sunday of August, as thousands of chile lovers descend on the city center, eager to celebrate a beloved Southwestern condiment – salsa.

The fifth annual SalsaFest! comes to Downtown Las Cruces from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 25, an entire afternoon centered on all things salsa, featuring a salsa-making contest, salsa dancing, live music and entertainment, arts, crafts and food vendors, a best-dressed Chihuahua contest and lots more.

Sponsored by the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership, SalsaFest! has become a signature annual event at the newly revitalized heart of the city, drawing attendance in the thousands each year.

"SalsaFest! is a great way to get feet on the street," said Carrie La Tour, executive director of the DLCP, echoing the group's primary focus of drawing traffic to the burgeoning historic district.

"Here in southern New Mexico, we put salsa on everything, so it's really become part of the culture, and SalsaFest! is a great way to celebrate it. It's the only event of its kind around."

At the heart of SalsaFest! is, of course, the salsa-making contest, which pits confident home-cooks' recipes against one another for lucrative cash prizes – and bragging rights.

This year, 24 competitors have signed up to make salsa, and lots of it; salsa-makers are required to prepare, on average, 7 gallons of the spectacularly spicy stuff, though last year's first-place winner, Russell Blundell, said he prepared upwards of 10.

Contestants must make their salsas on site from scratch, so many arrive as early as 7 a.m. to begin chopping, cutting and cooking their ingredients, trying to find the perfect balance, often aided by friends and family members devoted to their dish.

For $5, attendees can purchase boats of tortilla chips, provided by Andele Restaurant, and travel on a tasting tour of the entrants' salsas, taking notes, voting for their favorite salsa and, eventually, crowning one lucky cook this year's People's Choice Award-winner.

An expert panel of five judges will be on hand to choose the first-, second- and third-place winners, awarding cash prizes of $1,000, $750 and $500, respectively.

While the event is devoted to the dish, there's lots more to do than just eat. Live music will be provided by Lado Oscuro (11 a.m.), Animmo Band (1 p.m.) and Radio la Chusma (3 p.m.), providing the perfect backdrop to practice your salsa steps. Arts, crafts and food vendors, many of them familiar faces at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market, will also be on hand to peddle their finest wares.

Introduced at last year's event, SalsaFest! will also feature the return of the best-dressed Chihuahua contest, so devotees of the diminutive dog can dress them in their finest trappings and let them strut their stuff on Main Street.

To attendees and competitors alike, though, SalsaFest! has turned out to be about a lot more than just salsa.

According to Blundell, who is returning this year for his third competition, SalsaFest! is a great way to meet some fellow chile-lovers – and size up the competition.

"We get to talk to a lot of different people, and they'll tell you how good – or bad – your salsa is," he said with a laugh. "It's interesting to see what other people come up with, and near the end of the contest, I make sure to try and sample everybody's stuff."

Meeting new people and trying new salsas is great, but SalsaFest! also provides visitors and contestants alike a chance to spend a late-summer Sunday surrounded by their loved ones, with many contestants bringing in family and friends to help prepare their entry.

To Thomas Perez, last year's People's Choice Award-winner, "the best part of it was the family time." "We got a chance to spend the day together, making salsa and meeting new people," he said. "It's a nice way to spend a day with the family and meet the competitors, try their salsa and see all the differences."

Blundell, who enlisted the help of his family for last year's first-place win, echoed this sentiment.

"I got most of my family involved in it – we had a few helpers who spent the whole day cutting up vegetables for our pico de gallo – so it becomes a family affair," he said. "I liked that part the most."

A life in song

Singer-songwriter turns life experiences into musical gold

By David Salcido
Las Cruces Bulletin

The road to becoming a singing cowboy is seldom glamorous, if the songs depicting the struggle are any indication.

That's part of what makes those hard-living songs so universal. Now that Las Cruces' own singing cowboy Tom Foster Morris has his own songs to share, denizens of southern New Mexico have even more to relate to.

In January, Morris released his first CD, "All Those Years Ago." On it are 11 original songs, reflecting a life lived to its fullest, much of it right here in the Mesilla Valley. Conceived, recorded and produced locally, the album's title track spent several weeks during the summer in the top 10 of the Independent Music Network Charts.

By all accounts, Morris is finally living the dream. Originally from Pennsylvania, he spent "a lot of years" traveling, including a stint in the Army and several years bartending in Pittsburgh, before packing up his guitar and harmonica and making the move to Las Cruces in 1983. Years spent working as a house painter, then doing kitchen and bath design and finally working for a local builders' supply company, rounded out his blue-collar experience.

"It took me a long time and a lot of living to realize that my life has been a country song," he said. "I've been through a lot of ups and downs, romances and marriages, drinking and drugs and travel, and after 69 years of living, I decided there's got to be a country song in there somewhere. After I wrote the first one, it turned out pretty well, so I started reevaluating some of the situations I'd been through in my life and tried to make a little poetry about it. It's been very cathartic."

A veteran of the open-mic circuit in both Las Cruces and Silver City for close to three decades, Morris only began writing songs seriously three years ago. He attributes his success in that area to the many friendships he has fostered among fellow musicians in Las Cruces.

"I've probably written 30, 35 songs in the past three years," he said. "It's through encouragement from the musicians who back me on stage during the open mics that I got into the studio to do something with them. It's their fault."

Spoken with his trademark deadpan humor, followed by a chuckle, the comment speaks volumes for the camaraderie

Blue-collar troubadour Tom Foster Morris writes and sings songs with universal appeal on his debut CD "All Those Years Ago."

Morris feels for his musical counterparts. He said he attributes his growth as a musician and a songwriter to the men and women he has shared various stages throughout the valley with over the years. To that end, it helped shape the direction of his debut CD.

"The whole concept of the album was to use entirely local musicians and have it produced locally," he said. "I used musicians I became friends with through the open mics at Cattleman's Steakhouse and the Rio Grande Theatre."

Produced by Travis Manning at Nasty Cactus Recording Studio, the CD credits read like a who's who of local veteran musicians. Included are Manning (C.S. Truckin' and Mad Moe Zell) on acoustic guitar and vocals; Rob Allen (C.S. Truckin' and The Phuzz) on drums; Phillip Holmes (FastLane, Cadillac Kings and Tuco John) on bass and vocals; Sue Caldwell (Remember Then ... A Class Act) on backing vocals; James T. Kirk on 6- and 12-string guitar; and Jim Kirkland on mandolin.

Talent lined up, Morris went into the studio with a clear idea of what he wanted the CD to sound like.

"I'm a songwriter, so the song is what is important to me. I wanted to have a bare-bones approach to each track for a couple of reasons," he said. "One, I wanted the instrumentation to enhance the song. Two, I wanted to be able to perform solo, without the instrumentation. In other words, I wanted the song to be able to stand on its own. Each musician that contributed bought in to that concept and understood what my endgame was."

The result is a tour-de-force of hard-living lyrics and back-to-basics instrumentation that harkens back to the days when cowboys were king and the troubadours among them ruled the music charts. Songs about rekindled love ("All Those Years Ago"), easy Southwestern living ("Along the Rio Grande" and "Angel In The Morning") and unfor-gotten friendships ("Comanche Moon") are offset by heart-breakers ("Let Me Down Easy" and "Shame On You"), introspective ruminations ("Baby Blue Eyes" and "Bad Luck And Trouble") and life lessons ("For What It's Worth" and "Just Another Heartache"). There's even a train song, "Waiting on a Train," for purists.

Copies of "All Those Years Ago" may be purchased online via Reverb Nation, iTunes and Amazon.com, among others, but he welcomes interested parties to find him on Facebook, if a more personal touch is wanted.

For those interested in catching Morris live, he spends three evenings a week playing at Cattleman's Steakhouse, where he first got his start in the valley. On Sunday nights, he's part of the regular Blues Jam, on Tuesday nights he has a regular solo gig from 5 to 7 p.m. and on Wednesday nights he is almost always part of the regular open mic. Beyond that, he can be found doing gigs at Uno Chicago Grill, De La Vegas Pecan Grill & Brewery, Amaro Winery and Q's Steak, Pasta and Brewhouse, among others.

It's all part of the life he chooses to live and connecting with other like-minded souls through his music.

"I retired so I could concentrate on my music and take my songwriting seriously," he said. "I'm just a blue collar working man. I think my own personal experiences and the way I write about them is something that just about anybody can identify with. I'm not out to change the world or become a role model, but if somebody can relate to what I've been through, at least they know they're not alone in the world. There's somebody out there who understands what they're going through."

A world of dining options offered at NMSU

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Each fall, nearly 20,000 students descend on the New Mexico State University campus, along with faculty and staff in the thousands, and it's no small task to keep that crowd sated.

Luckily, NMSU offers an abundance of dining options for students and civilians alike, from popular chains to local favorites, vegetarian and vegan to the beefiest burgers, all located within minutes of your class, dorm room or office. Some eateries are grouped in close proximity, offering diners the greatest number of options in the smallest geographic space, with satellite locations throughout campus, for those caught with the munchies in the outer reaches of the school.

The public face of NMSU, with the recent addition of both a Barnes & Noble at NMSU Bookstore & Café and Panda Express along University Avenue, gives only a glimpse of the near-endless options available for dining on campus.

Corbett Center Student Union, the center of NMSU student life, boasts a wide variety of cuisines ready to please even the most starving student or famished faculty member. On the first floor of CCSU sits the CCSU Food Court, a true mecca of campus dining. Inside, popular chains including Taco Bell, Chik-fil-A, Simply to Go, Einstein Bros. Bagels, Gila Grill and AFC Sushi have set up shop, serving up their franchise favorites hot – except for the sushi – and fast.

Just down the hall of CCSU lies Taos Restaurant, offering breakfast, lunch and dinner at 10 different stations, including vegetarian options, pizza, pasta, stir fry, bakery, a deli station, a dessert station and even a station dedicated to local New Mexico favorites, taking advantage of fresh ingredients grown right here in the Land of Enchantment. Following a complete renovation concluded in 2012, Taos Restaurant, operated by Sodexo – which also operates the restaurants found in the CCSU Food Court, as well as numerous satellite locations across the campus – is now a far cry from the school cafeterias of yore.

Other options delivered to NMSU students by the food service giant include a Subway restaurant in O'Donnell Hall, a Blake's Lotaburger and Simply to Go in Gerald Thomas Hall, an Einstein Bros. Bagels, Grill 155 and Simply to Go at the College Canteen in the Health & Social Services Building, a Simply to Go at the AC Power Station in the Activity Center and the 3rd Floor Bistro at the Danny Villanueva Victory Club in the Stan Fulton Athletics Center, with its panoramic view of the Organ Mountains, Aggie Memorial Stadium and the Las Cruces cityscape.

According to Katrina Miner, marketing director for Sodexo at NMSU, the company's primary goal on campus is to offer something for everyone.

"Our focus is offering a wide variety of items and choices for students, so it feels a bit more like home," said Miner, who can often be found working from her laptop – and dining – in Taos Restaurant.

"There's everything available to NMSU students on campus, from comfort foods to some things that are a little different you never thought you'd try."

Sodexo isn't the only game in town at NMSU, though. Frenger Food Court, located at the heart of campus along the Frenger Mall, offers several local favorites, breaking away from the world-wide chains for something a bit more homestyle.

Mix Pacific Rim Cuisine and Mix Express operate a small satellite location out of Frenger Food Court, also named Mix Express, offering a few favorites from the primary restaurant, along with several items unique to the NMSU location.

Another Las Cruces staple, Dick's Café and its offshoot, Smokey Dick's BBQ, also has a presence at Frenger Food Court, as does local Chinese restaurant the Dynasty. These locals are joined by Chihuahua's, offering home-style Mexican food, and a TCBY/Coffee Haus, serving everything from frozen yogurt and coffee to sandwiches, salads and baked goods.

It doesn't stop there, though. There's also the Player's Grill, overlooking the NMSU Golf Course, offering breakfast, lunch and late afternoon snacks, as well as a full-service bar, as well suited for a great meal as a break after a day on the links.

Another unique option for NMSU dining lies inside Gerald Thomas Hall, on the western end of campus. Known as 100 West Café, it offers first-come, first-served seated lunches and dinners, much like a higher-end restaurant, but with a twist; the café is in fact a hands-on food laboratory for students enrolled in certain Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management courses. Students are responsible entirely for its operation; they seat diners, take orders, prepare food, bus tables – every facet of the restaurant business. All lunches are $8 – a steal, considering the meals include several courses and consist of higher-end fare (salmon, pork ribs, green chile alfredo are just a miniscule few of the variety of dishes offered throughout the year) than your run-of-the-mill campus cafeteria.

If you're really in a hurry, NMSU also operates three convenience stores across campus: Corbett Corner, adjacent to CCSU, Aggie Express at Vista Del Monte and The Marketplace, inside Barnes & Noble. At these locations, you'll find those much-needed pick-me-ups perfect for the scant time between one class and the next.

For more information on campus dining – including a much-needed map – visit the NMSU Dining website at www.dining.nmsu.edu.

*Includes Soft Drinks and Coffee only. Offer requires purchase of Breakfast Burrito at regular price; excludes Jr. Breakfast Burritos. Add-Ins and Ad-Ons cost extra. Limit one with coupon. OFFER GOOD THROUGH OCTOBER 15, 2013. No cash value. Copies, sale, or Internet distribution or auction prohibited. TM & ©2013 America's Drive-In Brand Properties LLC

Las Cruces Bulletin

Science-fiction has long been used as allegory, a way to vent our anxieties and fears with monsters, aliens, zombies and robots standing in for the mass concerns and issues facing a culture at a specific time.

"Godzilla" (1954) tapped into Japanese post-war anxieties, most obviously concerns over radioactivity; "Invasion of the Body Snatchers" (1956) was a clear and searing indictment of McCarthyism and the Red Scare that gripped the U.S. in the 1950s; "Dawn of the Dead" (1978), with its hordes of splatter-prone zombies mindlessly wandering a shopping mall, has been viewed as a condemnation of our culture's deep-seated materialism and the rise of the so-called "mall culture" – the shopping center, after all, "was like a temple for them;" even everyone's favorite extraterrestrial, E.T., has been viewed by some as a Christ figure, swaddled in his robe, preaching love, dying on others' behalf and resurrecting before his ascension back into the heavens.

South African-Canadian director Neill Blomkamp is no stranger to the allegorical power of sci-fi. His 2009 film "District 9" was a sleeper hit, raking in more than $210 million on a budget of $30 million and earning itself heaps of critical praise.

In "District 9," a large alien vessel appears, stops and remains still over an alternate-Johannesburg in 1982. A team of scientists enter the ship to find an alien species, sick and dying. The creatures are confined to a government camp outside the city limits, known as District 9. Occasional clashes between the human residents and the "prawns," as they're derogatorily referred to, are frequent, and a private military company is hired to relocate the aliens to another camp, further away.

The film was based in large part around the apartheid era in South Africa (Blomkamp was born and raised in Johannesburg), specifically District Six, the former slum in Cape Town from which more than 60,000 residents were forcibly removed and relocated in the 1970s under the apartheid regime.

"District 9" had big things to say about humanity, xenophobia, race, class and social segregation, and did so subtly; the allegory was clear but never heavy-handed, and much of the movie's success came from this.

Not so with Blomkamp's latest feature, the big-budget, marquee-star boasting "Elysium," which, again, has big things to say, but loudly, overtly and so often they get lost in the melee of blood, bombs and screeching metal.

The year is 2154, and – guess what? – we've ruined Earth. The planet is a violent, overpopulated, disease-riddled, impoverished slum, reminiscent of a much-worse Mexico City (where much of the movie was filmed). Claptrap and cardboard buildings house the beaten-down residents of our once-great planet, policed by humorless and violence prone robo-cops. The 99 percent never had it so bad.

The one-percenters, however, have found a way out. Jettisoning their earthly ties, the über-wealthy inhabit Elysium, a space station free from disease, poverty, war and death, resembling the costlier California coastline suburbs from up close and a Mercedes-Benz logo from Earth – where the poor can see it all hours of the day, just out of reach.

An ex-con, Max (Matt Damon), lives in a hellish Los Angeles, toiling away his days at a factory building the very robots that oppress him. After receiving a lethal dose of radiation on the job, Max finds himself in a plot to break into Elysium – with the help of a robotic exoskeleton and a group of intergalactic human-traffickers – to gain access to their "med-pods," beds that rearrange atoms and cure all manner of disease and dismemberment.

This sets the stage for a fairly ham-handed tale of environmental destruction, corporate greed, financial disparity, immigration and health-care inequity, balanced out with plenty of loud, bloody and bludgeoning action. The poor, confined to Earth, seem to want little more than access to the health care available to the upper crust, and are willing to traverse whatever borders, atmospheric included, between them.

The corporation, headed by an icy and inexplicably accented Jodie Foster, is more than willing to shoot them down in the sky – anything to keep their way of life untouched by lower-class fingers.

Blomkamp's film devolves rather quickly into too-obvious egalitarianism sledgehammer philosophizing. In the wake of "District 9," it's hard not to notice how heavy-handed his message is this time around.

Still, he's a master of visual imagery, and on its own terms, "Elysium" is a more-than-competent sci-fi action flick; the hellish future never looked so good, and Blomkamp's washed-out tones and tight framing keep the action intense and brutal. Sharlto Copley, a longtime collaborator and star of "District 9," is a masterful maniac as Kruger, a corporate henchman with an advanced exoskeleton and a fondness for blades.

In a summer packed full of ruined-Earth pictures (see also: "Oblivion," "After Earth," "This is the End," "Man of Steel"), "Elysium" aims high, at least, even though the reality may be a bit more grounded.

"Elysium" is heavy-handed with its political message, but on its own terms, it's a wholly competent, visually arresting sci-fi flick.

A unique look at a unique culture 'Fill the Void' tackles tradition in Tel Aviv

Review by Jeff Berg
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Somewhat poetic in its presentation, albeit with an often sad tone, "Fill the Void" takes great pains in showing the insights of life in a world that few have seen before, that of the ultra-orthodox Haredi Jewish community. The film is set in Tel Aviv, but could be most anywhere; anyplace that has a strict religious mindset.

Marriage is important to everyone in the film, and that remains the whole of the story. It opens with a shot of a mother and daughter checking out, from a distance, a young man at a supermarket who has been suggested as a husband for the young woman by a Haredi matchmaker. For a moment, this almost seems like the film might turn into "My Big Fat Jewish Wedding," but it doesn't take long for things to get serious.

The woman who is being promoted for nuptials is 18-year-old Shira. Smart and fair to the eye, Shira is true to her religious culture, one completely immersed in the rules of its faith. It is not as severe as some other groups' beliefs are – women do have a bit of a say so in what is going on, wine and celebrations are fine, but when it comes to marital and procreation rules and mores, that's when things change.

Shira's sister, Elizabeth, is very pregnant, and joyful about the pending birth of her first child. But it is not to be, as Elizabeth, who appears to be having complications with her pregnancy, does not share this information and dies. Her child, a boy, is saved, but this situation opens a whole new set of circumstances and issues.

Yochay was Elizabeth's devoted husband. He is strong, intelligent and handsome. It is required that those who lose a spouse remarry as soon as they can. It doesn't take long for a matchmaker to find a potential bride for Yochay.

to the rabbis for cash gifts to help their family situations.

The film is slowly paced, which I found distracting at times, along with the telenovela-type hand-wringing that frequently took place among the members of this Hasidic community. The story, an age-old one of love and family, carries well, but sometimes the lack of understanding of the mores and rules of the faith caused me to lose focus.

However, the performances are superb, especially that of Hadas Yoron, who plays Shira. The film swept the Awards of the Israeli Film Academy (Israel's Oscars), and is believable and moving.

Shira's (and all of the others') submission to tradition and culture is remarkable and unshakable as well. But in the end, I had to wonder why so few people question these man-made ideologies, why some things are so inescapable, and there are no distinct answers in this interesting film.

Beauty in the details Home designed to be a piece of art

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Throughout the Mesilla Valley are houses that are much more than a box with windows – they're functional pieces of art with rich style, unique character and enough detail to make each square foot interesting.

The home at 1240 Regency Court in the gated Coronado Ridge neighborhood is such a residence.

"It was perfect, and that's what we loved about it. We just had to buy the furniture," said Marek Panasewicz, who purchased the home in 2005, the year it was built, with his wife, Patti.

Built by Desert Sage, the spacious, 4,612-square-foot abode was featured in the Spring Showcase of Homes that year. The couple discovered it shortly after, during a trip to the City of the Crosses.

"We were looking for a vacation or retirement home," said Panasewicz, adding that they came out for a weekend after his wife learned about Las Cruces and what the city had to offer.

Meeting Realtor Keith Brownfield of Mathers Realty Inc., who represents the listing, the couple began searching for their dream home, which took them to the gated community in the Picacho Hills area.

"The No. 1 thing we loved about the home was its lovely views," Panasewicz said, describing the scenic surroundings that include Picacho Peak, the Organ Mountains and the Las Cruces cityscape. "There is nothing to obstruct the views."

Located on a cul-de-sac, the property features its own private drive, another feature that drew the couple to the Tuscan-style residence.

"We liked that it was isolated and that it was in a gated community," he said, "and the private drive wasn't something we had seen with any other house."

The private drive leads past the entrance to the front courtyard to the three-car garage and carport.

"They can park 17 cars in their private drive if they were having a party or something,"

Brownfield said.

Manicured landscaping of native plants, including barrel cactus, prickly pear and agave, lines the area near the gate of the front courtyard, which offers a relaxed environment in which to sit and enjoy a Las Cruces evening.

Through the courtyard is the front door, possibly the only element Panasewicz changed. Originally, the door was decorated in faux painting. Panasewicz said he wasn't a fan of the look, so he added copper panels – patinas – to give the oversized entrance an even grander feel.

Inside, the builder's attention to detail shines through. From the mosaic medallion on the tiled floor to the exposed beams lining the pitched roof, not a single corner was overlooked.

Built in a hacienda fashion, the home surrounds an interior courtyard, which can be accessed from five different points throughout the house, including the entrance. Truly an extension of the interior living space, the courtyard, drenched in flagstone, features a stone-covered fireplace and sun shades overhead to block the desert sun.

Back inside, the tiled floor transitions into wood in the large formal living and dining room. A seating area surrounds a fireplace, placed in a wall among built-in shelves decorated in wood trim. More exposed beams are located above the dining room table, drawing the eyes upward.

A large butler's pantry – complete with granite countertops, wet bar and a large wine refrigerator – leads from this formal space into the kitchen. Draped in rich cabinetry and vibrant granite with shades of orange, cream and brown, the kitchen provides an elegant space in which to work.

Creating an open, great-room-type space, the kitchen is connected to a more casual living space. Large windows illuminate the tall space and fill the living room with the view of the oasis-like backyard and breathtaking Organ Mountains.

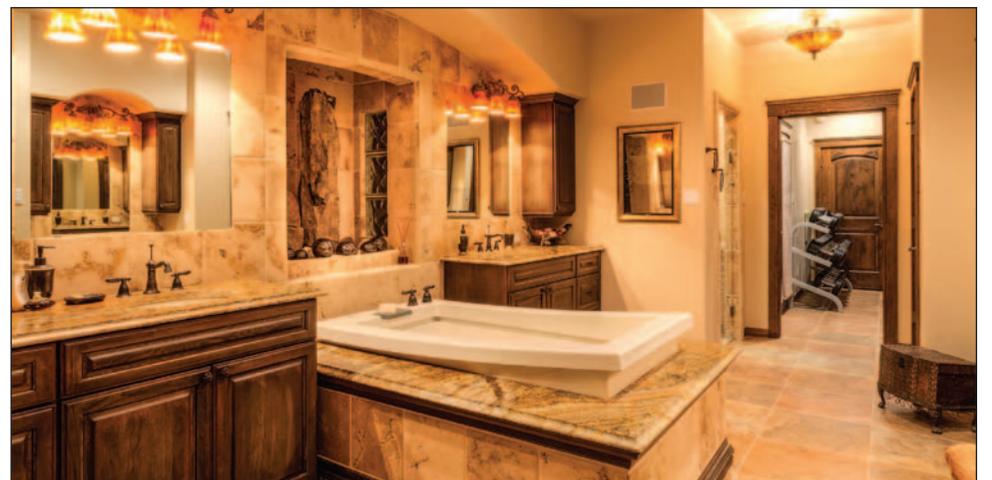

Beyond the living room, enclosed by an arched door, is the master suite. A relaxing retreat, the master bedroom features an ornate fireplace as well as access to the covered patio and a private patio.

The feeling of luxury continues in the bathroom. At the center of the soothing, cream-colored room is a square bathtub encased in tile. Sinks placed in rich wood cabinetry surround the bathtub, and a vanity is located across the room. A walk-in closet completes the room.

A door in the master bathroom leads to a room the couple used as an at-home gym. This flexible space could also be used as nursery, if needed. It connects to a bathroom shared by one of two bedrooms in the area. Both bedrooms feature walk-in closets.

Wanting to take full advantage of the unique surroundings, the builder put just as much thought into the backyard. A covered patio, which features an outdoor kitchen area with a built-in barbecue grill, and a zero-gravity swimming pool and hot tub fill the space.

"I loved the zero-gravity pool. I had never seen something like that before," Panasewicz said.

Off the patio, near the outdoor fireplace, is a casita, complete with a bedroom area and bathroom that can be accessed from the outside, great for those enjoying the pool.

Make the space

Be creative about what you have

I hear myself say, "I will make every minute count," and I feel the same way about space – let's make every inch count.

Many of you don't have large spaces and you need to make every inch count. Here are some tips on how to do that:

- Make every piece count. You want the maximum usability for the minimum space used. That means choosing your furnishings and accessories to offer the most functionality in minimal space. Because you don't have much space to begin with, you have to be selective.
- Perhaps two small bunching tables are better than one big cocktail table. The small tables are portable, and the knee-knocker that is a big cocktail table is not. You can move your bunching tables around so you maximize your space. They also become multi-purpose.
- Play tricks on the eye. You can make a room look wider, higher or larger by what you do with the space. Put up floor-to-ceiling drapery and make it look higher. Strategically place a mirror to reflect the outside and watch the room expand. Add a Plexiglas piece that you can see through and watch the space open up.
- Leave some breathing room. I frequently tell clients to let a room breathe. If a room has too much clutter, it doesn't have room to "breathe". You don't have to fill every inch. Group your collections together so there is more space for the room to breathe.

- Invest in flexibility. When you start investing in flexible and functional furniture pieces such as flip top tables that expand, nesting tables that stack in each other, window seats that become an extra sleeping place, chairs that become a twin bed or a Murphy bed that closes up into the wall, you invest in taking up less space and being flexible with your furnishings. This again gives it room to breathe.
- Get out of the box. Heighten the coziness by splurging on some wonderful material and/or wallpaper (yes, I said wallpaper), and don't forget the ceilings. This can help to create a feeling of grandeur in a small space.

Another way to make a space seem larger is to create a sight line by tearing down a wall, enlarging a window or swapping a glass door for a solid door that lets the eye enlarge the space. On the other hand, you can create visual stops so you have to slow down to view the space and that, too, can make it look larger. Screens, plants and shelving can do that, too.

Color continuity creates calm. Soothing tones and very even tones fool the eye into thinking rooms are more spacious than they really are. Select lighter colors such as creams, taupes and beiges for a more open, relaxed look.

Any and/or all of these ideas can make your small spaces work like larger spaces or, at the very least, appear to be larger.

What's that smell?

Late summer is time for roasting green chile

By Jim Hilley
Las Cruces Bulletin

If the fragrance of roasting chile has not yet alerted you, the green chile harvest is under way in southern New Mexico.

Veteran chileholics are busy checking the space available in their freezers for this year's crop. If there is not enough, drastic measures are taken to make more room.

Most New Mexicans are old hands at roasting and freezing green chile, but as in preparing most foods for storage, it's a good idea to follow some safety precautions. There are also a few tips that can make your chile stash stay fresher and crisper.

"One of the most important things is to start off by picking your chiles carefully," said Gayla Weaver, a home economist at the Doña Ana County Extension Office. "You want fresh, crisp green chiles, you don't want the ones that are curled up, wrinkled or that have soft spots or bruises with mold or decay.

"Then you want to loosen the skin by cooking the chile," she said.

"Processing Fresh Chile Peppers," New Mexico Extension Service Guide E-324, describes the blistering process as:

"Application of heat to the surface results in blistering of the skin, which then separates from the chile flesh, making the skin easier to remove. There are several ways to blister pepper skin for easy removal. Fire-roasting, steam injection, microwave heating or any other source of high heat, applied directly to the surface of the pepper, will cause the skin to blister"

"I have tried myself the oven, or broiler," Weaver said. "The key is you have to watch it constantly, you can't go away, and you have to have metal tongs to turn the peppers quickly as they start turning brown."

If roasting your own peppers on a grill or in the oven, wash them and poke a hole or slit in the chile to let steam escape as they are heated. The stem may be left on, especially for chiles intended for use as rellenos, but removing part of the stem makes the chiles easier to turn.

Weaver said she believes more people are having their chile roasted at the store, which she said presents its own problems.

"Those black plastic bags that you see at the grocery store stay hot too long," she said "They really need to be put in the refrigerator and cooled down as soon as they are roasted, and then put in the freezer so no harmful bacteria can start growing.

"The sooner you get them in the freezer the better. The sooner they are frozen the better the texture will be and the flavor."

Erica Sichler, a program coordinator at Chile Pepper Institute, said letting the chile cool in the container can help the skins come off more easily.

"If you are going to peel the chile, it is best to let it steam in an airtight bag," Sichler said. "If it steams for a while, the peels literally fall off, so it is best to wait for it to cool down."

Since chile contains capsicum, it is important for chile preparers to protect themselves by coating their hands with grease or wearing gloves when processing the chile, and to wash their hands thoroughly with warm water and soap after handling chile.

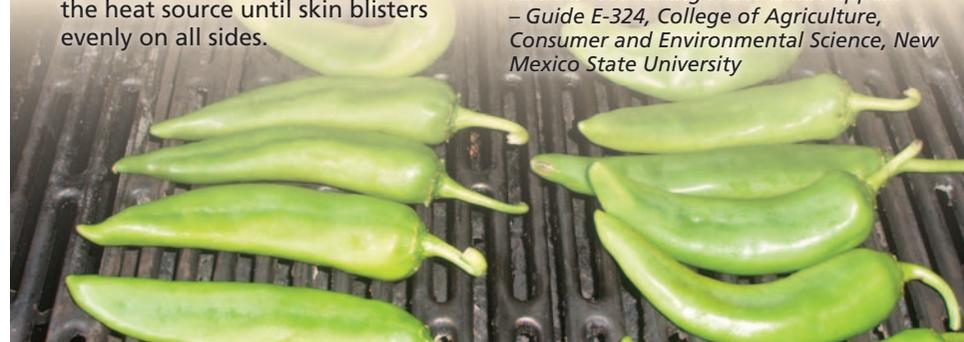

For more information, visit www.aces.nmsu.edu and click the Experiment/Extension Publications link on the left hand side of the page. A search for "processing green chile," will bring the links for publication "Processing Fresh Chile Peppers," E-324.

Methods for blistering green chile:

- Oven or broiler method: Place peppers in a hot oven or broiler set at 400 to 450 degrees for 6 to 8 minutes; using tongs, carefully turn pepper often until skin blisters evenly on all sides.
- Range top method: Place peppers on wire mesh over a hot electric or gas burner; using tongs, carefully turn peppers frequently, exposing all surfaces to the heat source until skin blisters evenly on all sides.
- Outdoor grill method: Place peppers on a charcoal grill about 5 to 6 inches above glowing coals; using tongs, carefully turn peppers frequently, exposing all surfaces to the heat source until skin blisters evenly on all sides.
- Microwave oven method: Place peppers in a microwave safe dish; cover with secure, air-tight lid to allow for steam build up. Place container on rotating plate in the center of the oven, then microwave for 7 to 8 minutes depending the oven wattage and power level (settings may vary depending on microwave oven used). Blistering is not apparent with this method. However, the skin will have a tougher, more brittle texture compared to the raw pepper. Allow steam to fully develop in the covered container for 1 to 2 minutes after microwave cooking. Caution: Steam will be released from container when the lid is opened.

Something to stew over

Get your big pot ready for chile season

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

A friend texted recently: "I have a pot of green chile stew on the stove and the aroma is to die for. Too bad you live an hour away." (Meany.)

Another friend promised to deliver hot Hatch green chile for stew and "anything you'd like from Roberto's. I'll be in your neck of the woods in a couple of weeks." Sadly, his plans changed and the delivery date was postponed.

Yet celebrating harvest demands green chile stew "now," whether it meets my Scoville scale preference or not. Nearby, a market sells Hatch chile – directly from a Hatch farm – but the extra hot variety isn't in the roasters. Nevertheless, the delicious fumes generated from the blistered pods are a quick fix. I purchased several pounds, saving one for Harvest Green Chile Stew.

Harvest Green Chile Stew

3 pounds beef, cubed
1 1/2 cups onion, diced
Bacon fat or substitute olive oil
3 cups tomatoes, diced
1 1/2 cups roasted, stemmed green chile strips
1/2 cup beef stock
1/2 cup chicken stock
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons pepper
2 teaspoons garlic salt
2 teaspoons cumin
2 pounds potatoes, peeled and cubed

Sauté beef and onions in bacon fat. Add tomatoes, chile strips, stocks and seasonings. Cook over low heat until meat is tender. Add cubed potatoes during the last 30 minutes. Stew may be frozen before potatoes are added. Serve with warm flour tortillas. Makes 1 gallon. (Recipe adapted from "Seasoned with the Sun, Recipes from the Corner of Texas and Old Mexico," The Junior League of El Paso

Inc., 1989.)

New Mexican Pork and Green Chile Stew

2 medium onions, chopped
8 garlic cloves
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
4 1/2 pounds boneless pork shoulder, trimmed of excess fat and cut into 1-inch pieces
5 pounds favorite New Mexican green chiles, peeled, seeded and chopped
7 cups water
2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 pounds boiling potatoes

In a large heavy kettle, cook the onions and 6 of the garlic cloves, minced, in the oil over moderate heat, stirring, until the onions are softened, add the pork, the chiles, the water and the salt, and simmer the mixture, uncovered, adding more water if necessary to keep the pork barely covered, for 1 1/2 hours. Stir in the potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch pieces, making sure they are covered by the cooking liquid, and simmer the mixture, stirring occasionally, for 30 minutes, or until the pork and the potatoes are tender. Stir in the remaining 2 garlic cloves, minced, and salt to taste and simmer the stew for 5 minutes. The stew may be frozen or made 3 days in advance, cooled, uncovered, and kept covered and chilled. Makes 6 to 8 servings. (Recipe adapted from Gourmet Magazine, 1992)

Crock Pot Green Chile Stew

2 1/2 pounds boneless pork loin, cut into 3/4-inch cubes
1 (14.5-ounce) can diced tomatoes, drained
1 pound roasted green chile, stemmed, seeded and chopped
2 yams, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
1/2 onion, coarsely chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon salt
Ground black pepper to taste

A pot of sizzling Hatch green chile stew is a delicious quick fix at harvest time.

1 tablespoon hot pepper sauce
1 cup frozen corn kernels
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Combine the pork, tomatoes, green chiles, yams, onion, garlic, cumin, oregano, salt, black pepper and hot pepper sauce in a slow cooker. Cover, and cook on low until the pork is very tender, 6 to 7 hours.

Stir in the frozen corn, and cook until the corn is hot, 10 to 15 minutes. Sprinkle with shredded cheddar cheese to serve. Makes 6 servings.

Pink Adobe Green Chile Stew

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 pounds boneless pork, cut into 1-inch cubes
1/2 cup onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 cup flour
2 cups fresh tomatoes, peeled and chopped

2 cups roasted, peeled and stemmed fresh green chiles, chopped
1 fresh jalapeño, stemmed, seeded and chopped
1 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 cup chicken or beef broth

Heat olive oil in 4-quart Dutch oven with cover. Add pork and cook until lightly browned. Add onion and garlic and stir with meat. Add flour and stir 1 to 2 minutes. Add tomatoes, green chiles, jalapeño, salt, pepper and sugar. Mix well. Add broth. Lower heat. Cover pot and simmer for 1 to 1 1/2 hours until meat is tender.

Serve with flour tortillas. Makes 6 servings. (Recipe adapted from "The Pink Adobe Cookbook," Rosalea Murphy; Dell Trade Paperback.)

So bright, your home needs shades

Solar screens can help prevent heat from coming inside

Exterior shading of a home's walls, windows and skylights in the summer is one the first and best ways to keep inside temps comfortable and to save on the cooling bill.

As I've discussed before, heat energy that never comes into the home does not have to be removed by expensive mechanical equipment. Interior blinds and shading work well for privacy and, to some extent, to prevent radiant heat loss in the winter.

In summer, interior shades are merely a road bump for the massive heat load penetrating window assemblies. The air in the space between the shade and the inside of the window quickly heats up, similar to a solar collector panel, and begins to rise and move, creating a convective current.

This heated air quickly moves up and away from the window area and into the living space of your home, where your air conditioner now has even more work to do. Exterior shading blocks this solar energy from ever contacting window glass or frames and greatly reduces the radiant and convective heat load entering the home.

Effective exterior shading of west- and east-facing areas can be accomplished in many ways. Strategically placed trees and vegetation work great – but it can take a few seasons for plantings to reach a size that will do the job. Arbors, patios and porches are often used to shade key exterior wall areas, but high installation costs can quickly come into play.

With our beautiful mountain views, many Las Cruces homes are oriented facing east and west. This reduces the shading effect from patios and overhangs due to the low angle of the morning and afternoon sun.

Exterior mounted solar screens are a great, low-cost method of solving exterior window shading problems. Solar screens make a great do-it-yourself, honey-do project, or you can use a local installer.

Adding solar screens to the east and west facing windows of your home reduces heat transfer.

Solar screens come in many styles, types and colors. Mechanical retractable shades are hand or motor driven, and can be raised or lowered quickly depending on daily or seasonal weather changes. Fixed solar screens look like and install similar to typical insect screens. The key difference being that the solar screen material blocks up to 90 percent of the sun's energy.

You can choose solar screen frames that match your existing window frames and house colors; the most commonly available are white, bronze and tan. The solar screen material itself is also available in a range of shades from white to tan and from charcoal to black. With these choices you can either match the siding color of the home or choose to have a contrasting look – just keep in mind that the darker screen material, such as charcoal or black, gives better visibility from inside to the exterior.

You will select from a range of shading coefficients – this is the percentage of solar heat gain that is transmitted to the interior through the glass and shading system to the interior. The lower the number, the less solar heat will enter your home and the lower your cooling bills will be.

Many of our local and big-box hardware stores carry solar screen material and frame assembly components. Call ahead to see if they have the colors and types you need for your project.

There also are dozens of online sources that can supply DIY information and solar-screen kits. You can build your own, or you can take measurements and have them shipped to you pre-assembled.

Local window, shade and awning and remodeling contractors provide complete design, assembly and installation of solar screens – in case you don't have room on your honey-do list this summer.

El Paso Electric Co. also recognizes the energy saving potential for exterior shading, and offers a rebate for the installation of solar screens for its New Mexico service areas. The rebate is $1 per square foot of solar screen installed at east or west facing windows. For more information, visit www.epesaver.com.

For more information on exterior shading and solar screens, visit www.phifer.com, www.santafeawning.com or www.nmsea.org/passive_solar/passive_solar_design.htm.

To resist or to comply: That is the issue

The struggle continues and will until the end of the age

Gabriel Rochelle
Tales from the Cassock

As can happen when we visit family on vacation, a family member called me to an important theological discussion. He works in management for a city in southern California, and had recently taken on an intern who was up for full-time employment.

When the intern was given the option to apply for the full-time position, the response was, "I can't take a municipal job because I have to swear allegiance to the Constitution of the State of California and I'm opposed to certain parts of it as a Christian."

The intern, unfortunately, thought certain legal propositions the State of California passed were in its Constitution, which they are not. So the position taken was confused and confusing.

We discussed this because we thought the overarching issues of Christian support for the state and swearing oaths were worthy of attention anyway.

The majority Christian position has always been to support the state as a God-given structure – even in poor times. The state, along with the family and other institutions, is called "an order of creation." We support it because we believe that God intended order instead of chaos in our world. The position is based on specific New Testament passages from the Apostles Paul and Peter.

As for swearing oaths, the majority position has been that we may do so as long as it does not involve us in lying or dishonesty on one hand, or support for immoral positions on the other. Despite Jesus' saying in Matthew about never swearing and simply stating your "yes" or "no," there are instances of Jesus and Paul being placed under oath and accepting that as a natural part of society. So, the church, by and large, has accepted oath taking.

There are minority positions. The Society of Friends, known popularly as Quakers, have refused oath-taking on the grounds that, if you take an oath, you admit that there may be times when you will not be truthful, and Quaker passion for truth-telling is well known.

Mennonites follow the same logical and commendable reasoning, but most Christians have felt it unnecessary to think that you admit the possibility of falsehood in other circumstances simply by taking an oath.

Support for the state has always been hard to calculate. If the state pursues policies committed to justice and equity, the church goes along. But what if the state turns against its own people, as happened in Hitler's Germany or Lenin and Stalin's Soviet system?

The theory has always been that, for Christians, civil disobedience and nonviolent resistance are the principal forms of opposition. A bedrock commitment to peacemaking underlies this approach, even if it has proven almost impossible to exercise under authoritarian regimes.

These few words cannot begin to capture our discussion, but I cite them to show that there are flash points all Christians look for: "Be sober, be vigilant, for your enemy the devil walks around like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."

That line from Peter's epistle lies in tension with his concession of support for the emperor so long as justice is the state's agenda. Of course the issue is: Whose justice are we serving? That's why vigilance is always needed.

We are "strangers and aliens" in our own land, another quote from Peter. Our allegiance to the state is subservient to a higher calling; hence Christians have sometimes been at odds with their governments. The issue is when to resist and when to comply. That remains our contemporary concern, especially with abortion and other bioethical issues, immigration, defense budgets and human sexuality. We are not through with the struggle ... and we never will be until the end of the age.

Fr. Gabriel Rochelle is pastor of St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission and professor of Biblical studies at St. Sophia Orthodox Seminary, South Bound Brook, N.J. For more information, visit www.stanthonylc.org.

Horses heal us

Katharine Lark Chrisley
Stable Woman

A fairly recent development in the human/horse bond has been equine assisted psychotherapy and equine assisted learning programs.

These therapeutic aspects of horsemanship come on the tail of the very successful “hippotherapy,” which uses riding to help with physical therapies for people of all ages.

In all of these therapies, the sensitivity and bold honesty of horses is used to bring out the best in humans. From passive exercises of an injured spine to helping Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) patients find focus and peace – horses heal us.

From mounted exercises to build strength, balance and confidence to simply approaching a horse loose in a corral and learning to control one’s own energy – the possibilities are unlimited in relationships with horses. When the horses are partners in the healing, the process is appealing and outside the box from traditional talk therapies or body manipulation in a studio.

While horses are expensive to own and require a huge amount of dedication and responsibility, having a horse can be the defining factor that keeps a child out of harm’s way in this world.

Ownership is not required – horses can be leased, lessons can be taken; camps can be attended and courses taken at academies.

Since horses are successfully a part of healing many disorders acquired through life, a horse to care for and learn from at the beginning can even prevent many problems from forming in the first place. A parent should investigate camps, academies and the like to be certain a chosen place is safe and kind with very gentle horses. If buying or leasing a horse, a trusted professional horseman should be consulted to ensure a proper match of horse to child.

Once a child is paired with an appropriate horse, whether in a program or as a personal mount, the horse is immediately interacting and teaching things such as self mastery and compassion. If a person – child or adult – is incongruent, unclear and scattered, the horse will not wish to be close by.

As the person becomes calm and more centered, the horse will be drawn to that energy and feel comfortable near him or her. We do not master the beast, we master ourselves.

The responsibility of horse ownership

The trip of a lifetime

Father-daughter team bikes the west

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Kristina Gordon received notice in May of her high school reunion taking place in northern California in August, she decided to make it an adventure.

Having taken a cross-country bike trip from Washington, D.C., to Iowa several years prior, she knew what an incredible journey it could be, and had a mind to ride to the reunion.

Her dad, Wayne Gordon, wasn’t going to let her make the trip alone.

“I said, ‘You are going to California on your bike? Well, I’m not doing anything, I guess I’ll go with you,’” Wayne Gordon said.

The plan quickly escalated into mapping out a circular route that encompassed Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and Utah before finally returning home to New Mexico, a trip that totaled about 5,000 miles.

“It was kind of like, if we were doing this, we might as well do that,” Kristina Gordon said of planning destinations the two were interested in seeing.

After Kristina Gordon finished finals week at New Mexico State University, several weeks of planning and packing later, the two rolled out of their Las Cruces driveway on May 11.

Kristina Gordon and her dad, Wayne, embarked on a 5,000 mile journey from their driveway in Las Cruces across the western United States. They stopped in Santa Fe for one last green chile cheeseburger before proceeding to Colorado on their route.

Thus began a journey of trial and error as they learned the land, the road and their personal limits.

Starting with a load of about 145 pounds, Wayne Gordon said he quickly realized there were things that he could have left at home.

“My dad is the type of guy who has to be prepared for anything,” Kristina Gordon said.

Although the father-daughter team both had cycling experience – Wayne Gordon riding 50 to 100 mile recreational races – neither had done any training for what lay ahead of them.

“You start to get your legs under you as you go along,” Wayne Gordon said. “We basically rode ourselves into shape.”

“It was a rude awakening,” Kristina Gordon said. “I had not been on my bike in a long time.”

Kristina Gordon said the trip was a balancing act between how far they could make it physically and practical places to stay the night.

Esperanza expands in Anthony

Full-service clinic helps many children

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

About 800 children a month receive speech, occupational and physical therapy at Esperanza Children’s Therapy, and that number is only going to get bigger.

Almost a quarter of that number are members of families who live in outlying areas including Sunland Park, Chaparral and Anthony, N.M. In July, Esperanza remodeled the office in Anthony to include speech, occupational, physical and family therapy under one roof, saving families the time and effort of driving all the way into Las Cruces.

In collaboration with Aprendamos Intervention Team, Esperanza helps children transition as they age out of Aprendamos at 3 years old.

“Transportation was a big burden for these families, so this was a huge relief to those parents who can stay in Anthony to receive services for their children,” said Celina Waller, clinical director of Esperanza.

Esperanza Children’s Clinic has grown tremendously in the past year.

In April, the Las Cruces office was reopened in the new space at 1681 Hickory Loop, including rooms designed with the children in mind.

“A lot of the therapists had input on the design of the building to make it more inviting for the children,” Waller said. “We went with a cottage theme to have colors that are welcoming so it doesn’t feel like a typical clinic.”

The therapy rooms are built to help the parents learn techniques to take home to help their children. All of the rooms have two-way glass, for parents to observe their child’s therapy session.

“Ultimately, the parent is the child’s best teacher, so if we can provide the tools for them, the whole dynamic of the family prospers,” Waller said.

Progress for children can begin in as little as one session, where therapists, all of whom are master’s level trained, can learn the individual child’s needs in expressing themselves.

Another plus to both offices, Waller said, is the availability of bilingual staff to help communicate with the children and their families.

“We have to keep the flow of communication open with the parents so they can give us feedback,” Waller said.

Esperanza Children’s Therapy offers sensory-based activities in a setting that allows children to improve motor development, behavior and learning through organizing sensation.

Alexa and Avery Covarrubias support the Ride for Autism that took place Saturday, July 27. The ride was hosted by the Centauros de Juarez motorcycle club and benefitted the Hearts for Autism fund, a facet of Aprendamos and Esperanzas Children’s Therapy.

Important questions asked Saving lives a reachable goal in Las Cruces

Jake Sims
Pet Connection

Did you know, that from 1989 to 2012, more than 328,000 dogs and cats were brought into the animal shelter, and 234,409 of that number were killed?

Does it matter that the majority of these deaths were not necessary? Would you be in favor of immediately implementing practices that would make Doña Ana County and Las Cruces a safer place for dogs and cats? If you answer yes, then read on.

You can make a powerful difference by making sure your city and county representatives know and support the critical services and programs included in the No Kill Equation, five of which are outlined here:

- Trap-Neuter-Return (TNR): These programs are now recognized world-wide as the most effective and humane method for reducing the free-living cat population. It is a sustainable, cost-effective model that supports public health and safety, while saving taxpayer dollars.

- High-volume, low-cost spay/neuter: Availability of this resource is the core of any effort to save lives and reduce shelter intake.
- Rescue groups: Supporting local rescue groups helps them get pets out of the shelter quickly and into adoptive homes. This helps save other lives by making space available at the shelter, and reduces shelter costs for feeding, cleaning and killing.
- Foster care: Volunteer foster care saves many lives by increasing a shelter's capacity for holding animals until adopted, or caring for sick or injured animals so they can be treated.

- Comprehensive adoption programs: Expect the shelter to have programs that aggressively promote adoption of pets in significant numbers in a reasonable time. To see the final six programs in the No Kill Equation, learn what other resources are available or get involved, visit www.zeroin7.org or www.awaredac.com.

Jake Sims is the facilitator for Animal Welfare and Responsibility Education (AWARE). He is passionate about educating the public on animal welfare and lowering euthanization rates in Doña Ana County. Sims is a volunteer with the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley. Sims can be reached at info@awaredac.com.

Bow Wow Swim Luau is a social event for both people and dogs to enjoy a day of swimming together. It will be held from 2 to 7 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 18, at the Desert Hills Pool, 5800 La Reina Road.

There will be door prizes, raffle prizes and contests with prizes for the dogs. Water bowls and treats for the dogs will also be available, though owners are asked to bring their own towels and folding chairs.

Admission is $10 per person with proceeds going to support the programs and services of ACTION Programs for Animals and the Human Society of Southern New Mexico. For more information, contact Dee Dougl at deedee08@q.com or 382-9508, or Jean Gilbert at jean@hssnm.org or 522-2529.

Ending summer with free pet adoptions

ACTION Programs for Animals (APA) and the Doña Ana Pets Alive! (DAPA!) campaign is winding down, so the group is inviting the public to spend the last of their hot summer nights riding in style with a new companion as their co-pilot.

APA/DAPA! rescues animals from the municipal animal shelter and offers them for adoption via online listings and various adoption sites. The summer promotion ends the last day of August.

For the entire summer, people have been able to adopt a APA/DAPA! dog/puppy or cat/kitten for free during the group's Summer Lovin' for Life adoption promotion. DAPA!'s animals spend time in foster homes before being offered for adoption, and they come with age-appropriate vaccinations, microchips, spay/neuter and routine medical check-ups/tests. APA/DAPA! has a lot of dogs/cats to choose from in all colors, shapes and sizes.

Besides weekly adoptions from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays at PetCo, 3050 E. Lohman Ave., DAPA! kittens and cats are available for adoption regularly at Better Life Pet Foods, Enchanted Gardens and Calista's Animal Hospital.

Arrangements may also be made during the week to introduce interested adopters to animals they can see online at www.actionprogramsforanimals.org, www.petango.com, www.petfinder.com and www.adoptapet.com.

APA/DAPA! is also seeking group or corporate sponsorships for Summer Lovin' promotions aimed at turbo-charging adoptions to save more lives this summer in Doña Ana County.

ASPCA/Rachael Ray Challenge continues

Seven heartworm positive dogs at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley were given forever homes, thanks to the kindness of local adopters. That puts the ASCMV another step closer in its representation of southern New Mexico in the ASPCA/Rachael Ray Challenge, which ends on Saturday, Aug. 31. Once the challenge ends and total adoption numbers are tallied, the figures will be announced to the public.

As the challenge continues, every Facebook "like" connected with the hashtag #100challenge, along with every adoption, rescue and return to owner counts positively in assisting the organization with the challenge. Currently, the ASCMV is holding its ground at number 10 nationally, against such larger cities as Washington, D.C., and Spokane, Wash.

The ASCMV is selling raffle tickets in order to raise funds for an end of challenge community appreciation cake and ice cream social. Raffle tickets are $1 each or six for $5. Tickets can be purchased through Jan Wright, volunteer coordinator for ASCMV, though it is recommended that purchasers call in advance to ensure she is in the office. Donation raffle items are compliments of Las Cruces Visitors Center.

For more information, call 382-0018 ext. 29 or visit www.ascmv.org.

Pet of the week

The pet of the week at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley is Oksana, a 3-year-old Chihuahua/Dachshund mix.

Oksana is a happy, spunky dog who is adorable to watch. She enjoys hopping around on her hind legs when she's excited, which seems to be all the time.

The ASCMV is open from noon to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and is located at 3551 Bataan Memorial West.

The ASCMV will host off-site adoption events from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 17, at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at PetCo, 3050 E. Lohman Ave., and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Tractor Supply, 1440 W. Picacho Ave.

For more information about Oksana or off-site pet adoptions, call 382-0018.

With puppy love comes responsibility

Promise your pet to give care he or she deserves

By Elaine Stachera
 For the Las Cruces Bulletin

You can see the love in the eyes of Deb and Chuck Widger as they talk about their two Labradors, Tillie and Osha.

Seven-year-old Tillie and 10-year-old Osha are bird dogs and beloved members of the Widger family. Walked at 4:30 a.m. every morning, they enjoy the occasional poached egg to keep their coats healthy.

Sometimes, they get their nails painted by the vet techs at East Lohman Veterinary Clinic. Diabetic Osha also receives insulin shots twice daily.

The Widgers are clear that, along with the love and fun, an animal is a responsibility – a responsibility they gladly accept and take seriously.

“We get back way more from them than they do from us,” Chuck Widger said. “After a rough day at work, they greet you and just care that you are home.

They help you realize that everything is going to be OK.”

Chuck Widger added the importance of realizing the responsibility pets entail.

“If you take a pet, it is a responsibility. It doesn’t matter if it’s a goldfish, you have to do the right things for them,” he said.

The Widgers spayed, neutered and micro-chipped their animals as soon as possible to prevent unwanted litters. This is no detriment to Osha’s and Tillie’s hunting ability, but there are special considerations for hunting dogs.

Tillie and Osha both get snake shots and have been snake broken. Chuck Widger also carries supplies into the field to make sure he is ready in the event Osha has a diabetic emergency while on the hunt.

In fact, Chuck and Deb Widger both made the promise – indeed, they have always lived it.

The Coalition for Pets and People, in line with the 0 in 7 plan to reduce the euthanasia rate in seven years, created the I Promise

Chuck Widger, vice president at First New Mexico Bank, and his wife, Deb, associate vice president for development and donor relations at the New Mexico State University Foundation, with their dogs Tillie and Osha signed the I Promise Pledge card to be responsible pet owners.

The I Promise Pledge reads, “In exchange for companionship, loyalty and love, I promise that every animal I care for will be spayed or neutered, microchipped, vaccinated and treated humanely. I will never abandon my

The purpose of the Coalition for Pets and People – a group that includes representatives from most of the organizations in the animal welfare community and animal welfare departments – is to eliminate the killing of healthy or treatable animals at our public shelter by the end of 2018, and to promote humane and responsible pet ownership.

Will you make the promise?

The Coalition for Pets and People was formed for the purpose of transforming the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley to a no-kill shelter within seven years. Coalition member Elaine Stachera is a regional advancement officer for the New Mexico State University Foundation.

their first night, on to Caballo Reservoir and Elephant Butte Lake, then to Socorro, Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Ojo Caliente, the two got to see the best – and worst – of what their home state had to offer.

“The wind was much more difficult to deal with mentally,” Kristina Gordon said. “I would rather ride uphill than deal with the wind, because you can see the end of a hill.”

Crossing the state line into Colorado 15 days after the start of their journey, the fun continued as they had more mountainous terrain to deal with than before.

“It’s like doing deep-knee bends for four hours straight,” Wayne Gordon said of a particularly arduous incline.

Amidst occasional flat tires, run-ins with dogs with questionable intentions and ominous weather conditions, there was undeniable beauty surrounding them every day, either in nature or their own self awareness.

“At one point outside of Ojo Caliente, we looked over and there was a herd of antelope running alongside the road with us,” Kristina Gordon said. “When we would stop, they would stop.”

Traveling Colorado along a popular Adventure Cycling Association route, the two met people whose stories touched their hearts, and saw a kindness among strangers otherwise unrecognized.

Unfortunately, crossing into Wyoming, Kristina Gordon noticed her dad’s health was declining, and daily rides were becoming more difficult.

“He was taking a lot longer to recover from the rides than before,” Kristina Gordon said.

Wayne Gordon had suffered heart attacks before, and his daughter wasn’t keen on pushing the limits any farther.

After being on the road for 35 days, traveling almost 1,000 miles with the power of their legs, the two opted to finish out their trip with some vehicular help.

Upon arriving back to the City of the Crosses, Wayne Gordon underwent triple bypass heart surgery, and is on his way to recovery – and planning their next trip.
