Convergys hiring at Las Cruces center

By Todd G. Dickson

When Cathy Holloway heard on the news that Convergys in Las Cruces was hiring 300 new workers, she grabbed her résumé and collected her letters of references to apply Tuesday, March 26.

She moved here from Seattle a couple of weeks ago, but unlike many of the other applicants, she brings 20 years of experience as a call center representative.

After completing computer testing that afternoon, Holloway said she was optimistic - and confident - that she would be offered a job.

"This is the kind of work I've been doing for a long time now," she said during a break before her interview.

The expansion was welcome news for Holloway, who knows the job market is tight. Prior to the Convergys announcement, she was considering applying at call centers in El Paso.

Holloway was attending one of two open houses held at the Convergys call center on Del Rey Boulevard for jobseekers to apply and be tested for the openings. Training for new hires will begin in April until the 300 full-time positions for service and sales representatives are

Brooke Beiting with Convergys media relations said the call center's client the name of which is confidential - was pleased with the Las Cruces center's work and will give it more work, resulting in the need for hiring more representatives. The Las Cruces center opened in 2008, she said, and currently has 210 workers, but the building was designed for potential

Afghanistan war claims another WSMR soldier

Second deployment sees a fatal attack for 2E decorated father

By Todd G. Dickson

The war in Afghanistan has claimed another life from the 2nd Engineer Battalion (2E) stationed at White Sands Missile Range.

WSMR issued a release this week telling of the death of Sgt. Tristan Wade, who was killed when his unit in the 573rd Clearance Company was attacked by an improvised explosive device Friday, March 22, in the Qarah Bagh District, Ghazni Province, Afghanistan.

Wade of Indianapolis was a combat engineer soldier who came on active duty with the Army in June 2009. He served for the past four years at WSMR before being deployed to Afghanistan in July 2012 for his second deployment.

Wade is survived by his wife, daughter and parents. A local memorial ceremony is being planned, but had not been set by the Bulletin's press time.

Decorations earned by Wade from his previous deployment included the Army Commendation Medal, the Afghanistan Campaign Medal, the Iraqi Campaign Medal, the Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, the Army Good Conduct Medal and the Combat Action Badge.

'Sgt. Wade made a profound and positive difference," said WSMR Commander Brig. Gen. Gwen Bingham. "We thank him

Council weighs concerns for historic preservation

Officials try to balance private property rights with city history

By Todd G. Dickson

As the recent effort to save an old fire truck in a city park shows, Las Cruces residents aren't going to idly let any more of the city's history go to the dump or fall under the wrecking ball.

That's why the City Council spent most of its work session Monday, March 25, discussing issues surrounding proposals from an historic preservation ad hoc committee formed after a decades-old home near New Mexico State University was demolished.

Councillor Miguel Silva said in that case, the house was brought down to build a proposed boutique hotel within a year, but it remains an empty lot.

Silva said a survey needs to be done soon on old adobe structures, especially in the Mesquite Street district, and that city officials should seek sources of funding to help support renovation or remodeling efforts. Often old homes get demolished because the owners can't afford to keep

Rah! Rah! Siss boom bah for Las Cruces cheer teams

All high school teams finish in top 3 for divisions

Bulletin Staff Report

Athletic programs from all four Las Cruces Public high schools can add another jewel to their crowns - cheerleading squads from Las Cruces, Mayfield, Oñate and Centennial high schools finished in the top three in their divisions at the 2013 State Spirit Championships, held Saturday and Sunday, March 23-24, at the Santa Ana Star Center in Rio Rancho.

Las Cruces High School's cheer program continued its winning streak, taking home its second state cheerleading title in a row, coming out on top of the Co-Ed 4A-5A division.

"It feels awesome," said Katy Strascina, who coached the Bulldawgs to their second division title in two years. "It's a bit surreal, but very exciting."

Strascina said she credits the win to the student athletes' hard work.

"As a coach, I'm really proud of the kids," she said.

Contending with a squad of mostly newcomers - only six of the 27 members of the LCHS cheer squad were holdovers from last year – gave Strascina some anxiety at the start of the season.

We only had six returners (from last year's program), so we didn't expect to do great at the beginning of the season," she said. "The kids worked hard and focused, though, and they really earned this title."

The Bulldawg coach extended her thanks to community donors, as well.

"We're really thankful for all the support we've received from the community," she said.

"We couldn't fund the program without that support. The inhouse support we've received, from the football and basketball program and their booster clubs, too. It's been tremendous."

Oñate High School's cheer squad took third place in the Co-Ed 4A-5A division, bringing home the first Knight trophy since

The Mayfield Trojan cheerleading squad took second place in the 5A division, nabbing its first top-three finish since a state title win in 2006.

The Centennial Hawks, newcomers to the State Spirit Championships, also came away with a second-place trophy, in the 4A division – the school's first top-three placement in a state championship.

Beginning in the 2010-11 school year, the New Mexico Activities Association officially recognized cheerleading and dance programs as sports, rather than activities.

Model UN team wins big in NYC

NMSU competes nationally

March Madness: For many, it's about basketball, but for New Mexico State University's Model United Nations team, it's all about the annual National Model United Nations Conference.

This year's team, in NMSU's 15th year of participation, followed in the tradition of past teams by winning big at the conference, held March 17-21 in New York City.

They broke new ground this year by partnering with a group of Japanese students affiliated with Tokyo University.

The joint delegation, representing the country of Argentina in the simulated General Assembly session, was awarded Distinguished Delegation, a designation that puts them in the top 16 percent of the 250 participating delegations.

The delegation was organized into nine two-person teams, most of which had both an NMSU student and a Japanese student, such as NMSU's Isaac Morales with Ena Igeta of Japan. The duo of Meagan Baker and Emma Hamilton won both position paper and outstanding delegate awards with their focus on the United Nations Population Fund.

Additional position paper awards went to:

- Mihyun Hong and Akari Hyodo, General Assembly First
- Jacob Deaven and Keisuke Yamada, General Assembly Second Committee
- Thea Trejo and Haley Grant, General Assembly Fourth Committee
- Additional outstanding delegate awards were earned by:
- Zack Quintero and Risa Suenaga, Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice
- Julia Downs and Naoki Sato, Commission on the Status of

Spring has sprung

Winds can't dampen the fun at the old ballpark

When September tails off every year in southern New Mexico, we can count on the hottest temperatures being behind us.

When April arrives, most of us have already put away our winter jackets – "winter jackets" being a relative term for Las Crucens.

However, when the Doña Ana winds start arriving, giving us that earthy taste of Deming, there's no predictable cut-off date. The winds arrive early and often and the bad windy days don't confine themselves to seasons or days on a calendar.

As annoying and relentless as the winds can be, however, spring brings more positives than negatives.

Easter is the season of renewal and, for thousands of Las Cruces Christians, the City of Crosses will fit its name this holiday weekend during the celebration of the resurrection of Christ.

It's also a spiritual season for those of the Jewish faith, who follow the traditions of Passover this week.

The great American pastime, in the form of baseball and softball, is in full swing. For me, nothing says spring like watching players throw and hit the leather ball and catch it with their leather gloves.

Some people find baseball boring. Not me. Give me a spot in the stands, a couple of hot dogs with mustard and I'm set for the day.

Recently, I got to do just that at two New Mexico State University events.

The first was Saturday, March 23, as the Aggie softball team took on Louisiana Tech in a Western Athletic Conference showdown at the Aggie Softball Complex.

You've probably blocked that Saturday out of your memory because it was one of those aforementioned bad, nasty windy days – probably the worst one so far this spring. Before the game, I saw the flags in the outfield wind blowing violently in from right.

I was standing by NMSU Assistant Athletic Director Maria Roth and said, "It will be tough to hit one out today."

"You'd be surprised," Roth retorted.
Sure enough, in the bottom of the first inning, with the Aggies trailing 2-0 but with the bases loaded, NMSU hitter Kelsey Dodd parked one over the left field fence for a grand slam. The Aggies went on to win 11-3

After the homer, I reminded Roth of our conversation.

"Hey, that's right, I called it," she said.
Even more impressive than the grand slam was the crowd gathered that day.
With the wind, I expected no more than a half-dozen brave parents. On the contrary, it was a solid crowd, one that included new Aggie football coach Doug Martin.

"I want to be out here to support these girls," Martin said.

I'm not sure how many stayed for the second game, but the Aggies swept the doubleheader and at this writing have a 20-13 record.

There's a definite California flavor to coach Kathy Rodolph's softball squad. Dodd is a senior first baseman from Clovis, Calif.

Another Californian is my favorite Aggie softballer, Amber Olive, who's from Simi Valley. Olive is a senior outfielder and the team's leadoff hitter. Her speed on the base paths provides headaches for opponents and excitement for Aggie fans.

Two days later, I went to the Aggie base-ball team's game against Texas Tech.

The wind was much better that day, but there was definitely a chill in the stands at Presley Askew Field. Things warmed up at the end, though, when the Aggies pulled out a 7-6 victory in the bottom of the ninth.

The baseballers also have some California influence.

The Aggies' first and third hitters, outfielder Michael Medina and first baseman Tanner Rust are from Pico Rivera and Lakeside, Calif., respectively.

That's not why I like them.

Despite the aluminum bats in their hands, Medina and Rust still swing it old school. They wear no batting gloves. These guys are throwbacks in the best sense of the

Speaking of throwbacks, the Aggies also have a Randy Johnson look-alike, 6-5 senior Casey Collins, who wears his hair long like the former major league fireballer.

Watching Rocky Ward's squad reminded me of a favorite saying from legendary baseball announcer Harry Caray: "Ah, friends, you can't beat fun at the old ballpark."

Marriage equality

This has been an exciting week for marriage equality in New Mexico.

Allow me to put a face on this subject. This is not a complicated issue, it is about respecting all families in New Mexico, including mine.

My partner, Richard, and I have been together 13 years and, given the opportunity, would love to share our commitment surrounded by our friends, family and neighbors, and to have the security and protections that only marriage will give us.

We share the worries of other couples, such as making ends meet, the possibility of losing our income and making sure we can offer the safety and security that our loved ones deserve.

Yet, we and all lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) couples are disrespected, and that disrespect is sanctioned by some of our elected officials. What does this say to a LGBT youth?

This is not a religious issue. I and most in the LGBT community strongly support religious freedom. Marriage equality is a civil matter. Allowing Richard and I to marry won't change anything for churches or ministers.

No pastor or priest would be required to marry a same-sex couple. It would allow those ministers and churches who support marriage to marry same-sex couples. This means freedom for all religions to follow the teachings of their faith.

There has been a major shift in support of marriage equality nationwide. I hope Attorney General Gary King's opinion comes soon and makes New Mexico the next marriage equality state.

Mail delivery

I oppose the elimination of Saturday mail delivery. This means two days without mail for the average person or business and the inability for anyone to have outgoing mail processed on Saturday.

As a former postal employee, I know there will be a build up of mail on Mondays delaying delivery and requiring overtime. I am more concerned about Monday holidays, which will mean three days of no mail in or out. Carriers will definitely be overloaded on Tuesdays with very late delivery requiring overtime.

I fail to understand how there would be any savings. It would be more logical to eliminate Tuesday delivery when First Class volume is typically at its lowest.

New Mexico makes strong move to compete for jobs

Local communities allowed time to plan for tax changes

By Gov. Susana Martinez

At the beginning of the session, I called on the Legislature to pass reforms making New Mexico more competitive with neighboring states. The mandatory cuts in Washington, D.C., will disproportionately hurt our state, and while we will always fight to protect our labs and bases, we must simultaneously work to diversify our economy by building a stronger private sector.

the New Mexico Jobs Package, we reached a bipartisan compromise that will help our economy grow by leveling the playing field with surrounding states.

The New Mexico Jobs Package cuts the business tax rate from 7.6 percent to 5.9 percent. The 7.6 percent rate is the highest in the region and at 5.9 percent, New Mexico will be more in line with neighboring states. This will help attract new job-creating businesses to our state and help existing businesses grow.

The new reforms will also spur manufacturing by ending the practice of penalizing New Mexico manufacturers for exporting their goods to other states or countries. New Mexico leads the nation in export growth, and this tax reform will help build upon our success by encouraging existing manufacturers to expand while attracting new employers to our state.

We also enacted common sense reforms. For example, some corporations were exploiting current law to receive the "highwage tax credit" for existing, or relatively lowpaying jobs. Now, this credit will only apply to newly created positions paying at least $60,000 per year in urban areas and $40,000 in rural communities. This will align the credit with its original intent, while saving taxpayer dollars.

The bill closes a corporate loophole to ensure that large, outof-state retailers do not pay fewer taxes than New Mexico-based companies. It also encourages these national companies to relocate more of their non-retail operations to New Mexico. These retailers will now have an incentive to move their manufacturing, distribution, transportation, logistics and other operations to our state creating jobs and bolstering the manufacturing and distribution sectors we have worked so hard to revitalize.

It preserves the cap that the state pays each year in film incentives, while increasing the rate for television productions shot in New Mexico.

The new law slowly phases out the "hold harmless" subsidy the state has paid to local governments since 2004 when the state eliminated certain taxes. This subsidy has ballooned from $35 million when enacted to more than $150 million this year.

I have opposed these reductions in the past due to concerns about the impact that the sudden elimination of state funds could have on local governments. But in any compromise, particularly on the issue of tax reform, all sides have to give ground and make tough decisions on behalf of all New Mexicans. The final compromise package allows for a two-year planning period before phasing out the subsidy over 15 years.

I am committed to working with local lead-ers to make this a smooth transition, and that is why the 2-year planning period is so important. In 2011, it took us one year to eliminate a structural budget deficit that represented 8 percent of our state budget, and we did it without raising

I know local leaders have balanced similarly difficult budgets and I am confident that phasing out a subsidy that represents, on average, a similar deficit to what we faced can be done responsibly over 17 years. Ultimately, the economic development sparked by this overall tax reform package will benefit cities and towns throughout the state by creating more jobs and increasing revenues.

We face challenging times as we recover from the national recession, with federal budget cuts making recovery even more difficult. I am proud that we took these critical steps to make New Mexico more competitive, spurring new job creation right here at home.

It was not a victory for one political party or another, but rather a victory for all New Mexicans as we proved that we are willing to work together to overcome our shared challenges.

Positive change

Thanks to a Stocker Foundation Grant, 70 families recently completed Ready for Kindergarten Programs at Conlee, Valley View and Jornada elementary schools. Each family participated in activities and received information and materials that support learning during the critical development period from birth to 5 years.

The Children's Reading Foundation of Doña Ana County would like to recognize the generosity and support of the people who made this program a success. Silvia Madrid and the staff at Pro's Ranch Market helped us provide meals. George Mulholland and Eldon Steelman of Lions Crane did vision screenings and provided support to families needing a follow-up appointment with an optometrist.

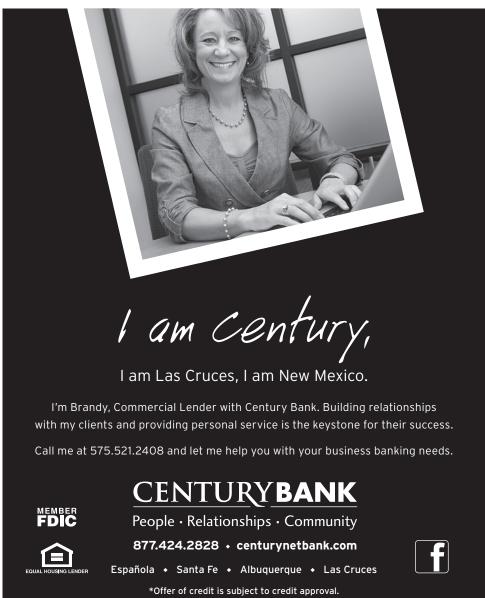

We are thankful to Las Cruces Public Schools principals Janet Candelaria, Sharon Robertson and Julio Martinez, and teachers Amanda Armijo, Courtney Degler, Clara Lopez, Elizabeth McDonald, Kim Ortiz, Martha Matthews-Benevidez, Sarah Johnson, Filo Rigales, Nicole Scott, Patti Armstrong, Barbara Rhodes and Jennifer Mora. Dr. Steven Sanchez, Roberto Lozano and Andria Romero-Ozment of LCPS continuously offered support and guidance. Veronica Carmona, Karina Carrillo and Martha Puentes supported our families from beginning to end and our 18 childcare providers did an amazing job with the 95 children in their care each week.

Working together we are creating positive change so that soon, all of our children can start school ready to learn to read.

In My Opinion

An Old West saying goes: Whiskey is for drinking and water is for fighting.

Well, New Mexico is in a fight for its very life and it is about water. There is not enough water for New Mexico's agriculture industry. Without agriculture, jobs, then the human capital of farm and ranch production, leave the state, perhaps forever.

New Mexico is not New Mexico without agriculture. Without water there is no green chile, or at least no New Mexico green chile. Water talks and everything else walks.

While there may be enough water for coffee making and toilet flushing, it will not be enough to keep New Mexico agriculture viable since agriculture runs on lots of water. We are in the fourth year of a severe drought. Even in good years New Mexico gets 10 or less inches of moisture.

Native plants are fine, but it is not enough for farmers who measure their water needs in acre-feet. During droughts, runoff is negligible, so the majority of the water is pumped. As water is increasingly pumped, there is a net loss of water from aquifers. Pumping must slow down or stop because those aquifers are dwindling, not to mention the lawsuits from Texas trying to take the last

Texas could own all of our agriculture water because of their lawsuits. Then what? At risk are all non-native trees, including the pecan orchards, which must be watered or die.

When the farmland goes fallow, there is a risk the farmers will just quit the business. Alfalfa is grown, harvested and transported in New Mexico by an army of highly skilled workers. Stop planting that crop and those people and machines move somewhere else.

Connected to those problems are the livestock producers who depend on alfalfa to supplementally feed their grazing animals. With fewer acres planted over the last decade, the price of alfalfa has risen dramatically. Ranchers have had to go to slaughter with their animals because they could not afford to feed them.

With good feed prices, the legacy livestock can economically stay on the ranches to create the next generation of New Mexico livestock. These animals form the basis of our livestock future. However, when cattle operations have to sell off their herds, the years of research developing the high feed costs endanger the milk and cheese producers who feel the increased cost of feeding milk cows

Further, when New Mexico agriculture stops shipping food, there are two problems: first, the money from these agricultural operations is lost to New Mexico, and, second,

Yes, we can buy food from other American producers, but increasingly we see our food coming from areas of the world that do not say, "God Bless America." Bells should ring warn-> running out of water for agriculture. It was hardly mentioned nor was there any movement toward a solution.

New Mexico must find new sources of water including desalinization. The water has to be financially viable so crops and animals can compete in the marketplace with other states and countries.

One plan is to obtain new generation nuclear power plants to pump from other areas of our country and/or desalinate our brackish water. In the Middle East, the water is almost entirely desalinated. The problem with nuclear energy for New

It may be easier to build a national champion football program at New Mexico State University than a new generation of nuclear power plants to power the next generation of water. The leaders of New Mexico must jump on the water wagon quickly or be remembered as the leaders who allowed our agriculture industry to end.

Hold detention center officials accountable

If Chris Barela is the Doña Ana County Detention Center director, what are his duties? Where are all the daily reports to Barela by detention supervisors, submitted by their subordinates?

How often does Barela leave his office and make routine checks of the premises? Never?

I feel the County Commission should make an investigation of procedure and the persons responsible for such.

What we, the taxpayers, need is a whistleblower to come forth and describe the situation. Let's start with the circulating detention officers on duty.

Whoever is found guilty should be immediately fired and prosecuted. This is a blatant negligence of duties.

The department of whimsy

April 1, 2025 headline: "Wine and cheese banned from

The presidentially appointed Director of Taste has declared the selling and/or dispensing of all fermented beverages derived from the fruit of the vine is to be prohibited in the United States. In addition, certain varieties of cheese whose aroma has been defined as "too stinky" by the Sniff Committee, are also banned from manufacture or importation in the U.S.

These new regulations are part of a continuing effort by "those who know best" operating through the Department of Whimsy. They base their regulations on the premise that you can always find someone who is offended by someone else's behavior or taste.

It started innocently enough, with the separating of cigarette smokers to the back of airplanes. The requirement of content labels on baked and canned goods followed. Then no smoking in airports, no sugar in soda pop. Then no soda pop in schools, then no soda pop in cities.

Then the banning of baked goods, desserts and Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream in schools, then cities, then the nation. Twinkies, rich pastries and CinnaBuns were banned because they were declared to be harmful to some. Fish caught in the wild were banned because of possible mercury content and farm-raised fish were banned due to possible salmon abuse.

The battle goes on. The animal rights loonies have been trying for years to ban the eating of horse meat. They also are seeking the Department of Sensitivity to prevent the use of horses for fun or profit. The ownership of house pets is next on their agenda.

The 9th District Court of Appeals intends to make California "Wine free in '33." They also are considering banning the consumption or use of sugar, domestically raised livestock, tobacco and firearms. Their reasoning has something to do with climate change. There is a proposition on the next state ballot to ban climate change.

To no one's surprise the use of marijuana has been excluded from "Ban Fever." Their concern is the negative effect on Mexico's economy. Many border state citizens are now supported by their relatives in Mexico sending them money made in the drug trade.

As these strict, new regulations continue to get more and more bizarre, there is a blatant backlash sweeping the country. In California, the Union of Farm Workers is protesting the Sacramento abolitionists who have declared manual labor a crime.

All this bodes well for the state of Nebraska, which has fenced out animal rights extremists, anyone appointed by the federal government and welcomes anyone willing to

Science for preschoolers

Children ages 3 to 5 can learn about the solar system, galaxies and the universe at the Planeteers series at 9 a.m. each Thursday at the Museum of Nature and Science, 411 N. Main St. The program is free and no registration is required.

On Thursday, April 4, the subject will be the comets that are made from dust and ice like dirty snowballs. Comets dance in every direction through the outer regions of the solar system. When comets get too close to the sun, however, their dazzling tails melt and are left behind for us to see in the night's sky.

Participants will learn about the comets and make their own comet. Kids will be fascinated by these glorious and rare objects that soar for our enjoyment.

For more information, call 522-3120 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org.

Show supports animals

Local artists Captain Jookie, CS Truckin' and Matt Morgan are coming together at 9 p.m. Friday, April 5, at Hurricane Alley, 1490 E. Missouri Ave., to help raise funds to save companion animals' lives via the ACTion Programs for Animals (APA)/Doña Ana Pets Alive! (DAPA!) campaign. The cover at the door will be donated to the organization.

the older neighborhoods could add up. She said officials estimate a thorough survey could cost $15,000 to $25,000.

David Chavez, president of Mesquite Historic Preservation Society, said preservation efforts assisted by volunteers on Phillips Chapel took four years, but have not been too costly.

"Adobe is very easy to be restored," he said, "much easier

Chavez urged councillors to look at Albuquerque's approach and said that city has a lot of experience with the legalities and process. Those are two concerns that took up much of the discussion by councillors.

Councillor Olga Pedroza said historic preservation is laudable, but she urged caution in crafting an ordinance. She said the city needed to have a good legal determination about what constitutes an "emergency demolition," for example.
"All I'm saying is let's go carefully," she said.

McCall agreed that the most important concern with the public is the process for demolition.

Chavez suggested moving to a 90-day waiting period for issuing demolition permits to give owners more time to seek finances, such as home rehabilitation loans.

Councillor Nathan Small said officials would be wise to look at other municipalities that already have these protections in

Symposium returns to NMSU campus

Social justice is the focus of annual issues conference

The 2013 J. Paul Taylor Social Justice Symposium will be from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Friday, April 5, and from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 6, at the Corbett Center Student Union Auditorium on the New Mexico State University campus. The symposium will follow up on last year's event addressing quality of life as a social justice issue.

Each spring the College of Arts and Sciences at NMSU sponsors the symposium, which focuses on issues of social justice and challenges for the region. This year, the symposium is being co-hosted by the Quality of Life Initiative, a project of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico. The objectives of the 2013 Symposium are: To establish a broadly shared understanding of what "engagement" means and why it is important to quality of life improvement; to showcase how NMSU and others are doing it successfully, and to lay a foundation for future engagement; to build on the concepts introduced at the 2012 Symposium and the work that has been done since, which includes developing a local "Empowerment Congress," a powerful model that utilizes public engagement to achieve community goals; and to demonstrate the potential of engagement by using it to advance work on public transportation, a critical need in Doña Ana County.

The conference will include residents from throughout Doña Ana County; members of the university community; representatives of service, business, professional and faith-based organizations; and members of our local government, public health and educational systems.

The conference has been supported by the Taylor Endowment, the Kellogg Foundation, the College of Arts and Sciences, Doña Ana County and the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM).

Participation is free, with breakfast and lunch provided. All are welcome.

Maybe the Aggies should stay in a better motel

Return trip to NCAA looks likely in 2014

David McCollum Life is Good in Las Cruces

Have just returned from San Jose where Jaki and I attended the second and third rounds of the men's NCAA basketball tournament. With apologies to my non-basketball friends, this column once again focuses on NCAA basketball.

The New Mexico State Aggies were confident that they would advance to the third round of this year's NCAA tournament. This was the third trip to the Big Dance for seniors Bandja Sy and Tyrone Watson. However, the Aggies ran into a stampeding herd of overachieving Saint Louis University Billikens in the second round game. Despite the Aggies' aggressive defense, Saint Louis shot an incredible 73 percent from 3-point range and 46 percent from the field.

NMSU's shots just were not falling as they shot only 13 percent from the 3-point line and 29 percent overall.

The statistics were reversed for Saint Louis in their second game in their 17-point loss to Oregon as the Billikens hit on only 14 percent of their 3-pointers and just 29 percent from the field. Saint Louis obviously spent all their bullets against the Aggies.

Perhaps a factor in the formula to win at the NCAA tournament is the team hotel. NMSU stayed in a very nice Hyatt Place hotel, but it was not quite as nice as the was the super-posh Fairmont. From this small sampling, it appears that the more upscale the hotel, the better the chance of winning.

As I watched the tournament, I reflected on how much the game of basketball has changed from my college days at Oklahoma State University in the late '60s.

Let's see, back then there was no such thing as a 3-point shot, nor was there a shot clock. (The four-corner offense was not designed to score, but was intended to simply keep the ball away from the other team.) Players were not allowed to bump or put their hands on their opponents, and dunking was against the rules. In fact, if you dunked the ball, you were charged with a technical foul. Also, notable is upscale the hotel, the better

the fact that today's players' shorts are now much longer and the cheerleader's skirts are much shorter.

All these changes have made the game of basketball more exciting and obviously worthy of the cost of tickets with a minimum cost of $100. In three sessions of games in San Jose, I calculate that the NCAA pulled in around $7 million in total revenues for the single, two-round venue - and that does not include the television rights.

One point of trivia about the 2013 NCAAs, and good news for Texans, is that Texas teams will not lose a game in the 2013 NCAA tournament. Bad news for Texans is that not a single team from Texas qualified for the tournament.

Aggies have high hopes for next season as only two players are graduating (Sy and Watson). However the Western Athletic Conference will be quite different in 2013-14. Gone will be Utah State and San Jose State (to the Mountain West Conference), Texas State and Texas-Arlington (to the Sun Belt Conference), Texas-San Antonio and Louisiana Tech (to Conference USA), and Denver (to the Summit WAC for the Big Sky Conference.

Newcomers to the WAC in July 2013 will be Chicago State, Missouri-Kansas City, Texas-Pan American, Utah Valley, Grand Canyon and California-Bakersfield.

The WAC, fortunately, will still have an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. This is important because the newcomers to the WAC are not considered to be basketball powerhouses. In fact, out of 347 Division-1 universities, five of the newcomers have an average rating (Sagarin) of 298. The sixth, Grand Canyon, is currently a Division-II school and has no rating. By comparison, NMSU's national rating was 79.

The Aggies should be a heavy favorite to earn the NCAA bid in 2014. However, they are likely to be burdened with another low seed because of the low overall rating of the WAC conference.

The key to a higher seed will be NMSU's ability to schedule and defeat a handful of top 30 teams.

On the other hand, who knows? The Aggies could be the Florida Gulf Coast Cinderella team of the 2014 tournament.

Doña Ana County pact on state land planning signed

A Joint Planning Agreement (JPA) was signed by State Land Commissioner Ray Powell Wednesday, March 27, in a ceremony in Las Cruces with Doña Ana County Commission Chairman Karen Perez and County Manager Sue Padilla attending, as well as other County Commissioners.

The JPA will establish a cooperative working relationship between the State Land Office and Doña Ana County for marketing state trust lands for economic development purposes. It also pledges collaboration before any long-term lease, sale or exchange of state trust land occurs.

"This is an historic agreement that creates a partnership between Doña Ana County and the New Mexico State Land Office," Powell said. "It will help create good jobs while protecting the quality of life and health of our State Trust Lands in this very important community.

"By working with the outstanding leaders of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County, we will also create additional revenues for our public schools, universities and hospitals and thus keep our taxpayer's bills lower."

"This Joint Planning Agreement helps Doña Ana County become an active participant in planning for the future of state land within the county," Padilla said. "This helps assure responsible community development within the county. Doña Ana County looks forward to working with the State Land Office on future projects."

Utility assistance for deployed soldiers signed

Gov. Susana Martinez signed into law Tuesday, March 26, legislation that will allow members of the military who have just been deployed or given a temporary assignment to discontinue and re-establish utility services without paying a penalty or reconnection fee.

House Bill 175, sponsored by Rep. Jeff Steinborn, D-Las Cruces, would include utilities such as water, gas, electricity, trash service and non-cellular telephone service. It would also allow service members to selectively shut off services when a municipality or county bundles them together.

The inspiration for this legislation came from Tech Sgt. Fabian Silva who is currently stationed at Holloman Air Force Base and is currently deployed in Afghanistan. Silva's parents live in Las Cruces in Steinborn's legislative district. Silva owns a home in nearby Alamogordo. He has been unable to shut off selective utilities during his deployment. There are many soldiers in Silva's situation across New Mexico, Steinborn said.

"Our men and women in the military do a heroic job for us, and it's key that we do all we can to help remove unneeded obstacles affecting them, including eliminating excessive fees related to utility services during their deployment," Steinborn said.

Rep. Nate Cote, a veteran who was deployed three times during his military service and a co-sponsor of HB175, said, "This is a good day for our deployed men and women in the military. I thank all of them for the tremendous job they do for our country. I am proud to do anything I can to help them."

Martinez has signed into law a number of other bills since the Legislature ended Saturday, March 16. Signed bills include: • House Bill 371, which increases disclosure requirements and

- House Bill 371, which increases disclosure requirements and implements greater protections for potential property owners in New Mexico's public improvement districts (PIDs). Martinez worked with Rep. Jason Harper, R-Rio Rancho, to craft the legislation after meeting with residents of Rio Rancho's Mariposa East PID, who found themselves on the hook for a 1,000 percent tax increase after a developer defaulted on its financial obligations and left property owners in the district to shoulder the massive remaining tax burden.
- Senate Bill 274, sponsored by Sen. George Muñoz, D-Gallup, creating a Horse Shelter Rescue Fund administered by the - New Mexico livestock board. The fund will aid horse rescues and help shelter homeless horses throughout the state.

- Senate Bill 448, which was the result of a recommendation made by the Governor's Task Force on Procurement Reform, which Martinez established in 2011, expands reasons that allow the state to suspend or debar a corrupt state contractor and allows for a longer suspension period if the contractor is involved in a criminal offense. It also closes a loophole that allows contractors who have violated the state procurement code to bid on state contracts as a new company or entity.
- Senate Bill 182, tightening procedures for sole source and emergency procurements, two types of state contracts that are vulnerable to abuse. SB182 also requires the state to post a 30-day notice of intent to award a sole source contract online and creates a 15-day period during which a contractor not selected for a sole source contract can file a protest.

The governor also plans to sign Senate Bill 443, which makes numerous amendments to the procurement code aimed at simplifying procedures and increasing transparency.

American Indians get their week at NMSU

Granger to perform at finale expo

Bulletin Staff Report

The general public is invited to a free daylong celebration of Native American culture that is the finale to New Mexico State University's American Indian Week.

The finale will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 13, outside the Kent Hall University Museum on the main campus, near the intersection of University Avenue and Solano Drive.

Throughout the day there will be displays and sales of jewelry, pottery and other items by Native Americans, as well as an Indian Taco sale. Providing atmopheric music during the Native American Arts and Crafts Expo will be Randy Granger.

Leading up to the finale will be a week of events for the NMSU community. It begins Monday, April 8, with a blessing and Parade of Nations, as well as a reception for Miss Native NMSU LaToya Johnson, a Navajo from Crownpoint, N.M., who is majoring in both kinesiology and athletic training.

There will be an evening of dance performance Tuesday, April 9, featuring dance groups from the Laguna and Zuni pueblos.

There will be Indian taco demonstrations on Wednesday, April 10, showing how the different tribes and pueblos make the dish, with the best known being the Navajo taco.

The students will get to do western dancing Thursday, April 11, with DJ music by Kyle Tom and Cat Clifford.

The new Miss Native NMSU will be selected at a pageant Friday, April 12.

Native American hip-hop artist Tobias Brown will round off the events for the university community Saturday, April 13.

at the public finale of American Indian Week at New Mexico State University

Most of the events for the university community will be held at or near Corbett Center Student Union.

GLBTQ Week events set

Son of anti-gay preacher to give speech

Bulletin Staff Report

Nate Phelps, the son of Pastor Fred Phelps of the Westboro Baptist Church that protests at soldiers' funerals, will be the keynote speaker for Celebrate GLBTQ Awareness Week at New Mexico State University April 15-19.

The week begins Monday, April 15, with the Festival of Colors for the NMSU community at the Corbett Center Student Union outdoor stage during which students can show their support for the GLBTQ community, along with information tables from GLBTQ groups and other NMSU organizations about issues that affect the GLBTQ community.

In the Milton Hall Digital Media Theater that evening will be the showing of the 2000 film "If These Walls Could Talk II," starring Chloë Sevigny, Michelle Williams, Ellen Degeneres and Sharon Stone. The movie, which shows at 5:30 p.m., features three separate storylines about lesbian couples in different time periods and about issues related to struggles when a partner dies, the feminist movement and pregnancy.

On Tuesday, April 16, transgender comedian Ian Harvie will perform his comedy on sexuality and gender identification.

The following evening of Wednesday, April 17, Phelps will tell how he went from being the son of the reviled Westboro Baptist church leader to become a GLBTQ rights activist and public speaker on the topics of religion and child abuse. Phelps will share his life experiences and how important acceptance is.

Safe Zone Training for students will be held Thursday, April 18, by the Sexual and Gender Diversity Resource Center.

Safe Zone Training provides more GLBTQ awareness within the NMSU community and helps to ensure all students are safe on campus.

Teaching our campus community about the unique experiences of GLBTQ people allows more visibility and understanding of the diversity of our peers," said Sharna Horn, coordinator of the Sexual and Gender Diversity Resource Center.

It was a hit last year, so the drag show returns - this year to a larger venue at Corbett Center Thursday, April 18. Professional performers from New Mexico will rock the stage in full drag.

The week winds up Friday, April 19, with the Lavender Graduation and Recognition Dinner for graduating students at the NMSU Golf Course Banquet Room. Also, the students get to dance the night away at the '90s High School Dance in the Corbett Center Aggie Underground until midnight.

The events are made possible by support from ASNMSU, Stonewall QSA, and WAVE.

Sapphire Energy finds first customer

Algae-based crude oil now being produced continuously

Sapphire Energy, a leader in algae-based "green crude oil" production, recently announced it has entered into a commercial agreement with Tesoro Refining and Marketing Company, LLC, a subsidiary of Tesoro Corp.

Under the agreement, Tesoro will purchase crude oil from Sapphire Energy's Green Crude Farm in Columbus, N.M., which recently reached a new milestone - continuous cultivation and crude oil production. This begins the first step of a commercial relationship to process "green crude oil" from Sapphire's future commercial facilities.

"In less than one year, Sapphire Energy has started up its commercial demonstration to grow algae, has produced crude oil from our farm and now, with Tesoro as our first commercial customer, we're providing barrels of our oil to be refined for market use," said Cynthia Warner, CEO and chairman of Sapphire Energy. "This moment is enormously important for the industry, as it validates the benefits and advantages of green crude and confirms its place as a market-viable, refiner-ready, renewable crude oil solution."

Sapphire Energy is now producing crude oil daily from algae biomass cultivated and harvested at the company's "green crude" farm in Columbus

Oil extraction is conducted through a patented method for converting wet algae to crude oil, which enables algae to be processed without the need for a time-consuming and costly drying step. Wet extraction technology for algae-based crude oil has been considered one of the biggest challenges to commercialization. With this process - the result of more than four years of research, development and field trials – the entire algae cell is now used in oil production, greatly improving yield.

The process is scalable, and has proven to be effective with a wide range of algae strains.

In initial testing by Sapphire Energy, "green crude oil" was refined into on-spec ASTM 975 diesel fuel, proving its compatibility with the existing network of pipelines, refineries and transport systems.

Moving forward, the company plans to grow production significantly to further expand its commercial demonstration and begin the transition towards commercial-scale production.

"Tesoro is continuously looking at new technologies for producing renewable fuels," said Joel Larkins, vice president of Renewable Development at Tesoro.

CrimeStoppers

Hydrant damage and copper theft

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information that helps identify the driver of a tractor-trailer that failed to stop after striking a city fire hydrant.

Las Cruces Police learned that a semitrailer struck a fire hydrant near the southeast corner of Valley Drive and Tashiro Drive. The incident is believed to have occurred at around 4:30 p.m. on Monday, March 18.

Evidence from the scene indicates that the semitrailer was leaving a dirt area and entering southbound Valley Drive when it struck the fire hydrant. The collision broke off the hydrant, which appeared to have been dragged by the semitrailer onto Valley Drive.

The driver of the tractor-trailer failed to stop or report the incident.

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers also is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of the person or persons responsible for breaking into and stealing copper wiring from five homes that are under construction.

On the morning of Wednesday, March 20, Las Cruces Police learned that four homes under construction on the 3600 block of Santa Marcella, and one home being built on the 3600 block of San Clemente, were broken into and copper wiring was ripped from the walls.

The burglaries are believed to have been committed sometime the previous evening or during the early-morning hours.

Anyone with information that can help identify who is responsible for committing these burglaries or the hit-and-run accident is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

A warrior mentality

Champion

As our camp concluded in Las Cruces Sunday, March 24, I raced home to pack up for the next month in Ruidoso.

As I drove down the street toward my house, I kept thinking about the fight. I kept thinking about the game plan that I must execute April 20 at the Alamodome in San Antonio, Texas.

As my thoughts rushed past what another victory would mean to my family, my city and myself, I kept pulling myself back to reality. Every day in training becomes the same reality of not looking ahead but being focused on what is in front of you.

The hardest part of camp is being away from my fiancé and my children. I miss the way they make me laugh. I love making them laugh and miss playing with them. When I really begin to think about it, I miss the way they say, "Daddy."

As a boxer, you become known as a warrior. A warrior is defined as "a person engaged in, experienced in or devoted to war." My parents served in the military at Fort Bliss in El Paso. They served their country and they taught me what it means to be an American.

They taught me the discipline needed day in and day out to be successful. They ingrained in me the stories of the "Wounded Warriors" who have sacrificed so much for my family.

Boxing doesn't compare to what our military accomplishes every day for our country. It upsets me that our veterans do not receive the respect they deserve. Many men and women have given their lives so I can have the opportunity to raise my family in a free country. I pray that I will always represent them well.

When I step into the ring, I do not step into the ring lightly. I will never give up in the ring. I will always dig deep inside to push past any pain or thoughts of quitting.

At this point of training camp, I am on edge. I am literally a mad man whose only focus is Saul "Canelo" Alvarez. I am obsessed with not just winning, but out-boxing, out-smarting and destroying him. I have to train to calm down.

Coming to Ruidoso is a really smart move. Just when I felt I was in the best shape my body could possibly be, we switched gears and have come to train in higher elevation. The higher altitude shocks your body to push harder than before. You come to the point when your lungs are burning against the mountain wind and you know that you are not ready for the battle in front of you.

I will be a creature of habit over the next few weeks. I will take no days off, mentally or physically. I must prepare for battle like a soldier. That is why I have "Soldier of God" tattooed on my arm. So I never forget the preparation.

I know that I will be prepared because my family taught me how to be a warrior. Now this warrior must prepare for war.

NMSU football joins Sun Belt

Other sports remain in Western Athletic Conference

By Jim Hilley

Las Cruces Bulletin

The New Mexico State University football program has finally found a conference to call home.

At a press conference Wednesday, March 27, NMSU officially accepted an invitation to join the Sun Belt Conference as a football-only member beginning July 1, 2014. The Aggies' other sports programs will remain members of the Western Athletic Conference.

Calling it a "very productive day," Sun Belt Commissioner Karl Benson announced the addition of former WAC members NMSU and Idaho as football members, and Appalachian State and Georgia Southern as full members to the conference, bringing the number of football-playing members of the conference to 12.

Benson said teams would play either eight or nine conference games each season, with a decision on the format to be made at a late May meeting of conference and school officials.

NMSU interim President Manuel Pacheco announced the university's acceptance of the Sun Belt's invitation at a press conference in the Barbara Hubbard Room of the Pan American Center

"We are delighted to accept the official invitation," Pacheco said. "It is important to this university and will add to the student experience at NMSU.

"It supports our commitment to diversity and brings a level of prestige to NMSU nationally."

Athletic Directory McKinley Boston opened his remarks by declaring, "I slept well last night."

"We are coming in as a football-only member but it provides us with net financial growth. Our commitment to football remains strong."

Board of regents Chairman Michael Chaney called the affiliation with the Sun Belt "an outstanding decision."

The Aggies are without a conference affiliation for the 2013 season, a situation that was considered by most observers to be unsustainable.

NMSÚ was previously a full member of the Sun Belt for a five-year span beginning in 2000. The Aggie football team was 15-11 in Sun Belt Conference games under coach Tony Samuel.

Billikens boot Aggies from tournament

Cold shooting NMSU finishes season with 24-11 record

The five-game winning streak and 2012-13 men's basketball season came to an end for New Mexico State University in an NCAA Tournament second-round game Thursday, March 21.

Atlantic-10 champion and No. 4 seeded St. Louis proved too much for the WAC Tournament champion and No. 13 seed Aggies, who were saddled with a 64-44 defeat in the Midwest Region contest held in San Jose, Calif.

"I told the guys, as the days go by, the pain subsides," NMSU coach Marvin Menzies said. "They'll be able to handle it and hold their heads up high. They're WAC champions.

heads up high. They're WAC champions.
"We just got beat. We got beat by a better team, a team with more experience. That's just the way it went."

Despite a sluggish offensive first half and facing a 13-point halftime deficit, NMSU (24-11) showed some life early in the second half. St. Louis swingman Dwayne Evans dropped in a layup four minutes into the second half that gave SLU a 37-23 lead, but the Aggies had plenty of fight left.

An 8-0 Aggies' outburst was capped by a Remi Barry 3-pointer with 13:53 left in the game. That trimmed the Billikens' lead to 37-31. The tournament foes traded the next two buckets for a 39-33 score.

That's when the tide turned against NMSU. St. Louis (28-6) scored 12 of the next 15 points, forging ahead 49-34 with more than nine minutes remaining in the tournament tilt.

NMSU stopped the bleeding briefly and held the margin to 14, trailing 53-39 with seven minutes to go.

Unfortunately for the Aggies, they could get no closer the rest of the way. St. Louis scored the next seven points to push its lead to 60-39. That was the largest lead the Billikens held.

NMSU then outscored St. Louis 5-4 through the final four minutes of the game, for the final 20-point difference.

The 44 points was a season-low for NMSU, as was its 27.9 shooting percentage (17-of-61). Additionally, the Aggies made just two of 16 three-point tries.

"We missed a lot of shots," Menzies said. "And those were shots we usually make. It just wasn't meant to be."

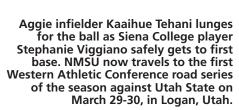

Senior Bandja Sy was an offensive bright spot for the Aggies, finishing with a team-high 17 points. No other NMSU player scored more than six points.

Pegram became the first owner to win two Sunland Derbies. He won the 2006 edition (formerly the Win-Star Derby) with Wanna Runner. The victory was worth $400,000 and a virtual ticket to the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. The winner's check was a cool $400,000, not a bad payday for the sophomore's second career win.

The popular runner was coming off a Santa Anita maiden win on Feb. 17.

"It's a pretty good day," Pregram said. "He has been training real good. He broke out, battled and had something left at the end. We didn't figure the extra eighth of a mile would be an issue.

"He is getting better with each race. Martin told him to go, and he went."

Postseason awards

Jack Nixon Jack's Corner

With the basketball season now in the books, it is time for my personal awards for the highest spots in a season that was like no other in my recollection of Aggie hoops. There is no science here, just my reflections on what I saw and how it played into the season as a whole.

Most versatile player: Who else but Tyrone Watson? At various times, he led the team in scoring, rebounding, assists and steals. He was the ultimate "glue guy" whose inspired effort was the main reason for New Mexico state's triple overtime win at Seattle.

Most exciting play: Daniel Mullings' 360-spinning dunk at Texas State. Mullings broke from the pack after a mid-court steal and spun his way on to YouTube. Choosing one single moment was a difficult decision.

Grace under pressure: Bandja Sy's ability to hit a three at the last possible second of regulation play was a happy ending that played out several times. At the end of regulation at Seattle, at home versus UTEP and the back breaker on senior night versus UT-Arlington saw Sy as the hero just prior to the buzzer.

Most improved aggie: Remi Barry is the clear choice here. As a freshman, Barry appeared to be a man trying to run in waist high water, as a sophomore he became a reliable sixth man. When Watson was not available, there was no choice but to put Barry on the court. He responded at both ends and proved to be a major reason for the team's success at the end of the season.

Franchise player: Sim Bhullar became the WAC Tournament MVP as he stepped up with a pair of double-doubles and aggressive dominating play that had been building throughout the season. The three more years Bhullar has in Crimson & White is a real reason to smile.

Clutch player: Las Cruces' Terrel deRouen had the confidence to take the critical shot with just more than a minute to play in the WAC title game. It broke a 10-minute plus team field-goal drought and provided a point cushion at a critical time. He also made a steal with 10 seconds to go in the home game versus Idaho that led to Mullings' winning free throws.

All the kings men: Paul Weir and Keith Brown's advisory and preparation skills added immeasurably to the program's success over the past two years. Brown's experience as a head coach provided a steady baseline for Marvin Menzies to lead his team. Weir's passion for teaching defense and his continued maturation in the major college arena continues to be a joy to watch. Marvin Menzies' program continues to make strides to being a regular visitor in the NCAA postseason tournament that means more awards down

Book is a fresh look at big-time college sports

Aggies to join Sun Belt Conference in football

I read a book last week during down time at the NCAA Tournament titled "Big Time Sports in American Universities."

One of the points of interest, and I quote: "For also a century, big time college sports has been a widely popular but consistently problematic part of American higher education. The challenges it poses to traditional values have been recognized from the start, but they have grown more ominous in recent decades, as cable television has become ubiquitous, commercial opportunities have proliferated and athletic budgets have ballooned.

"Drawing on new research funding, this book takes a fresh look at the role of commercial sports in American universities. It shows that rather than being the inconsequential student activity that universities often imply that it is, big time sport has become a core function of the universities that engage in it. For this reason, the book takes this function seriously and presents evidence necessary for a constructive perspective on its value.

"Although big time sports surely create worrying conflicts in values, it also brings with it some surprising positive consequences."

After more than 30 years in the industry and a quality of life that has been defined by experiences as a student athlete, professional athlete, college coach, faculty member, senior student affairs administration and athletic director, I understand first hand the challenges and benefits of a first-class athletic program.

I do believe big time sports and academia can co-exist and the "tension" around the existence is necessary for appropriate checks and balances. I would encourage you to read the book and be enlightened regarding the challenges associated with the values of sports in higher education.

On another note, I'm pleased to announce that New Mexico State will join the Sun Belt Conference in football for the 2014 fall season. Sun Belt football was second last year in rankings among the five non-BCS conferences including the Mountain West, Ohio Valley, Conference USA and WAC.

Our independent football schedule for fall 2013 is arguably one of the strongest and exciting opportunities for the Aggies in some time. It is a schedule that has seven home games including teams from the Big Ten Conference, Big East and traditional rivalries to include UTEP at home and New Mexico on the road.

Certainly, some will argue about the strength of the schedule, but head coach Doug Martin and I agree that there are many opportunities for our student athletes to win against quality competition.

We both know fan support is the wild card with this type of schedule. Martin and I are asking you to support our athletes in this challenging endeavor. As fans, make a difference and help create a home field advantage. Be the 12th person on the field in spirit and help make a difference in Aggie football's new journey to excellence in 2013.

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

Jake is twenty something and started playing golf a couple of years ago. He's a 20-handicapper and works part-time selling used cars. An avowed know-it-all, his "spare" time is consumed by betting on fantasy football, fantasy golf, fantasy poker (as well as other fantasies), despite not having a pot to urinate in.

Girls are not particularly attracted to Jake,

Girls are not particularly attracted to Jake, not because he is ugly, but because he is impossible to engage in a normal conversation, since he is, of course, a know-it-all.

On the golf course, he insists on "overs," kicks his ball out of stymie lies and secretly drops another ball (out of his pocket) when convenient. Last week Jake had a fit when a betting opponent took a legitimate relief from a concrete cart path. He thinks he knows the rules of the game, yet remains grossly uninformed.

Don't be like clueless Jake. Join the USGA for only $25. Get an official golf rule book, read it and keep the book in your bag at all times.

It's not that Robert doesn't value his time on the golf course, as he likes to have long golf chats at cocktail parties. On the golf course, he seems to repeat the same mistakes and faulty swing moves over and over again, and those two problems overlap.

A typical score-ruining situation for Robert would be on a fairly long hole with out-of-bounds on the right. He then tries to swing extra-hard, forcing him to come "over-the-top," looks up before completing the downswing, and the ball slices severely OB with an awful banana shape.

Robert has never taken a golf lesson, priding himself on being "self-taught," whatever that means. He wrongly thinks it is a self-compliment. He says he can afford his country club membership and sports the latest cell phone and tablet gadgets.

Don't be like horribly stubborn Robert. Talk to your club pro and ask for golf lessons. They're affordable. You need a minimum of four sessions because your pro needs to get to know you and your swing. (Golf lessons are unlike (classic) psychoanalysis, which may take hundreds or even thousands of sessions to get you to comprehend your failures and the deep reasons they're there.)

Jerry has a license as a certified public accountant (CPA). He appreciates accuracy with numbers, while working diligently to satisfy his clients with the preciseness of his auditing and written reports. Jerry plays twice a week at a variety of courses available in a major metropolitan area and boasts a 12 handicap.

His scores would be lower except that he doesn't have a GPS device or a laser rangefinder. He doesn't even buy an inexpensive yardage book in the proshop. It's not that he is reluctant to spend any money, but just fails to accept the idea of knowing distances.

Off the tee he hits it adequately, but he is often short or long on his approach shots, sometimes missing the distance by as much as two clubs. Unlike his meticulous manipulation of numbers in the office, he says he makes "just an estimate" of the distance to the center of the green that he jokingly calls a "wag." That would be a wild-a-guess. He then turns a 77 into an 82 by his "wag" errors.

Don⁵t be like nearsighted Jerry. Go buy a GPS Skycaddie or Golfbuddy; or a Leupold, Callaway or Bushnell laser rangefinder. Don't let technology leave you behind.

It didn't take long for Victor to discover golf once his dream of playing major league baseball ended with a dislocated shoulder in his throwing arm. He's still big and strong, but middle-aged and stubborn. He mistakenly thinks he can drive a golf ball with the same awesome power as he hit a baseball. Sometimes his golf swing resembles Charles Barkley's.

So Victor tees it up all the way back at the "tips." On golf courses in our region, it means playing from 7,000 to 7,700 yards for 18 holes.

Victor rarely breaks 90. "I want to see the whole golf course," he says, and he usually does – mostly looking for his ball. It's self-styled macho men like Victor that slow down play.

Don't be like our moron Victor. Tee it forward to the tees that are most suitable for your game. If you don't know, ask.

Rosilyn plays with the "girls" every Tuesday for nine holes. She is secretive about her age but admits it is somewhere "between 55 and 69."

Rosilyn, like many baby-boomers, never learned golf as a young lady but took it up after she became a widow several years ago. She is what I refer to as a pre-Title IX lady, having matriculated through college before women's sports were given a proper place in college and university sports.

Here are her words: "We played basketball and field hockey in bloomers, which were loose outfits not designed for movement sports. We were not encouraged to exert ourselves or focus intensely on winning."

Rosilyn plays golf these days with a set of Patty Berg clubs that were popular with women in the 1960s. I have seen a number of middleaged women, or older, show up at our golf schools with similar clubs and I wonder how they missed the idea that everything is about advanced technology.

Roz, as she is called by her friends, shoots 60 to 70 for nine holes. She is reasonably fit, enjoys being on the golf course and has a functional golf swing, but she could do much better if she had the right equipment.

Don't be like slow-to-adopt Roz. Get in touch with modern equipment. Go to your local pro shop or go online and buy a set of clubs that are easy to hit. That means, in the case of Roz, an all-hybrid set, which means clubs with wide soles so you can scoop the ball off the turf without having to struggle with a "blade" from thin grass.

You can go on eBay and find many club sets that will fit that description at affordable prices, or have Phil Woods build an affordable set at Fairway Golf here in town (526-1799).

As for Roz, you go girl!
Jose plays golf on the weekends at a local muni course with his buddies. He wears a sweatshirt, jeans and sneakers.
His buddies wear sweatshirts, jeans and sneakers. (Fear not, this isn't a rant about jeans — that's next.)

Jose and his buddies love their golf. They're not terribly skilled golfers, but they're not slow and follow normal golf procedures including raking bunkers and repairing divots. They drink some, but not to excess – maybe a few beers each for a round.

Recently, Jose complained to the golf pro that they had seen the cart girl once in 12 holes and not again.

It turns out that the cart girl was avoiding the whole group. Not because they were primitive, vulgar and fresh, but because they offered a measly dollar "tip" for $15 worth of beer. I would call that ignorant and obnoxious.

Don't be like miserly Jose and his buddies. Tip your cart girl generously. Give your bartender a proper tip. Tip your waiter or waitress a suitable amount. Tip the boy who cleans your clubs, shines your shoes and handles your clubs at the airport a fitting amount. Don't be a Scrooge.

Here is a golfer that spends money on clubs but short-changes himself with his attire.

Art is a frequent golfer, who has the best equipment and has no complaints about the cost of golf rounds. It seems he has no idea how to dress to play golf, however. He wears denim jeans and a sport shirt with sneakers.

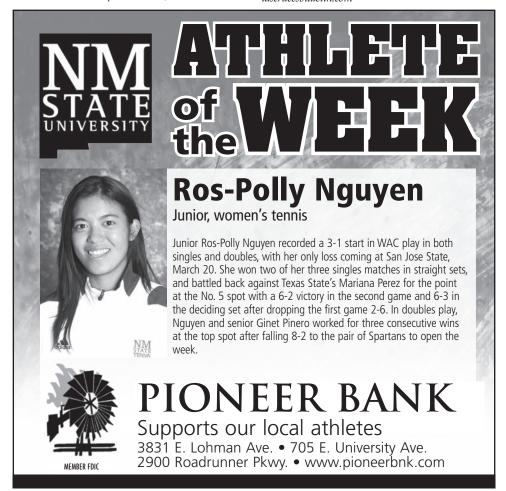

Most golf clubs around the country outlaw jeans and cargo shorts, along with no-collar shirts. Golf is a gentleman's game that was invented by the Scots (or the Dutch on ice, whichever you prefer to believe) who promoted sportsmanship and good manners.

Recently, I heard one chap at my club spout off that he liked the "casual" attire at his old club that had a "come as you are" appeal. This longtime local fellow quickly rebuked other newer club members who favored appropriate golf attire, rather than work clothes, with the admonishment, "If you don't like jeans go back to Chicago or New York or wherever and leave us alone in the desert."

The shot was offensive, but it did remind me how much we are in the middle of a clash of cultures.

Don't be like wardrobe-challenged Art. Go out and buy some nice golf pants and shorts and golf shirts and honor the game. Get a pair of golf shoes online for $30. And don't look like a Scandinavian exchange student wearing a ski cap on a sunny 80 degree day.

- The Elephant Butte Dam was reported to be 34.5 percent complete and the Leasburg and Franklin canals were completed. During the month, 38,400 cubic yards of excavation was completed, making the total to date 170,700 cubic yards.
- Deputy Sheriff Eugene Moreno met with a painful accident while driving his buggy on the George Frenger ranch. His horse became frightened, ran away and did not stop until it collided with a post, throwing Moreno and his companion to the ground. "The wily deputy had a deep gash right between the windows to the soul," the Las Cruces Citizen reported. His companion landed on a sand dune and escaped injury.
- The Moreno Act, passed by the state Legislature, prohibited minors under the age of 18 from "frequenting or loitering about pool halls." Proprietors could be fined $20 plus the cost of prosecution for the first conviction, and $20, plus costs and up to 30 days in jail for a second conviction.

NOMINATE A SENIOR VOLUNTEER

The search is on for outstanding senior volunteers in New Mexico. The Salute to Senior Service program, sponsored by Home Instead Inc., the franchisor of the Home Instead Senior Care network, honors the contributions of adults 65 and older who give at least 15 hours a month of volunteer service to their favorite causes.

Nominations for outstanding senior volunteers will be accepted through Sunday, March 31. State winners then will be selected by popular vote at salutetoseniorservice.com. Online voting will take place April 15-30. From those state winners, a panel of senior care experts will pick the national Salute to Senior Service honoree.

Home Instead Inc. will donate $500 to each of the state winners' favorite nonprofit organizations, and their stories will be posted on the Salute to Senior Service Wall of Fame. In addition, $5,000 will be donated to the national winner's nonprofit charity of choice.

Senior care professionals and those who work at hospitals, senior care facilities and other places where seniors volunteer are encouraged to nominate older adults. So, too, are family caregivers and the adult children of aging parents. Older adults also may self-nominate.

For more information, visit www.salutetoseniorservice. com. Completed nomination forms also can be mailed to Salute to Senior Service, P.O. Box 285, Bellevue, NE 68005.

A play of light before Easter

Las Cruces Bulletin reader Irma Lakey shared this photo she took at midday in which drainage spouts on the south wall of Northrise Business Center on Telshor Boulevard formed the shape of crosses. Lakey said this phenomena caught her attention about this time last year as she was driving to Sam's Club. "I noticed how the shadows created the crosses so appropriate for Las Cruces and also for Easter," she said.

Good Friday closings vary

County to take day off, while city stays open

Bulletin Staff Report

Most Doña Ana County offices will be closed Friday, March 29, to allow employees to observe a spring holiday sanctioned by the County Commission.

Emergency services and law enforcement in the field will not be affected, but the administrative offices of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department will be closed.

Saturation patrols and DWI checkpoints will be implemented during the weekend. County offices will re-open for business as usual on Monday, April 1.

The City of Las Cruces offices and services are not taking Good Friday off. Good Friday is not a Postal Service holiday, nor a federal government holiday. State government, however, does give its workers Good Friday off.

All New Mexico Department of Workforce Solutions' offices, including the Unemployment Insurance Operations Center, will close at noon on Friday. The department urges claimants to plan accordingly.

The Unemployment Insurance Tax and Claims System (www.jobs.state.nm.us) is available online from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday through Friday, and the Unemployment Insurance weekly certification phone option, 877-664-6984, will be available 24-hours a day for normal self-service functions.

Customer Service Agents in the Unemployment Insurance Operations Center will be available until noon on Friday and then normal business hours resume at 8 a.m. Monday, April 1. The normal business hours of the Unemployment Insurance Operations Center are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Some banks will close on Good Friday, but banks regulated by the federal government will stay open. The financial market and stock market is closed on Good Friday. Most retail stores remain open, while some of them may close early, Las Cruces Public Schools, Doña Ana Community College and New Mexico State University are not holding classes this week as they are taking spring break. Classes resume Monday, April 1.

Some businesses may also take Monday off for what's called the Easter Monday holiday. Some schools and higher education institutions in Texas do not conduct classes on Easter Monday, although it is not an official State of Texas holiday.

Neighbors We've Lost Obituaries

OMA RAE WALLACE June 16, 1914 to March 12, 2013

Our cherished mother, grandmother, greatgrandmother, and friend, Oma Rae Wallace passed away on March 12, 2013 at her Good Samaritan residence that had been home to her for many years. Oma Rae was born to Calvin Ellis and Nellie Skelton on June 16, 1914 in Joy, Texas. She was married to Earl Burton Wallace, her beloved husband of sixty-seven years. They met in their senior year of high school in Truth or Consequences, New Mexico. Oma Rae and Burton were just friends in high school and didn't begin a courtship for several years. They both recalled that they both "just knew" they were to be with each other almost from their first date, a marriage, so to speak, "made in heaven." Oma Rae and Burton married on April 13, 1936 at the First Baptist Church in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Oma Rae and Burton were also long time members of Mesilla Park Community Church and shared a deep faith in Jesus Christ, a faith that strengthened their commitment to each other and saw them through many challenges they would face in their years together.

Oma Rae attended New Mexico State University before working for the Department of Welfare as a social worker while Burton attended pharmacy school in Denver, Colorado. After Burton's graduation, they moved to Las Cruces, where Burton started his career as a pharmacist and Oma Rae started her new career as homemaker. Burton worked at Standard Drug Store before starting his own drugstore, which he ran in partnership with Otto Griggs. The store, located in the middle of the downtown area next to the Rio Grande Theater, was called Griggs and Wallace Pharmacy until Griggs' retirement, when the name was changed to Wallace Pharmacy. After their last child went to college, Oma Rae assisted Burton in the drugstore.

Oma Rae is preceded in death by her husband, Earl Burton Wallace, and her daughter, Carole Beth Castle. Oma Rae is survived by her daughter, Judy Hildebrand and Judy's husband, Barry Hildebrand, and Oma Rae's daughter, Jeanne Garland. She is blessed with many grandchildren, including Christy K. Nieto and her husband, Hector; Carrie Castle and her significant other Edward Berroteran; Kelly Klepper; Kyle Hildebrand and Kyle's wife Tiffany; Melyssa Garland Luther and her husband Jesse; Matthew Garland and his wife Challee; and Stephen and Jacob Garland. Great-grandchildren include Alexis, Emily, Joshua, and Ivanna Klepper; Hunter and Mason Hildebrand; Jeffrey, Steven, and Gabriel Nieto; Brianna Berroteran; Lucy Luther; and Ryan and Avery Garland. Greatgreat grandchildren include Leilany Sophia Nieto. Oma Rae is also survived by her niece Charlotte Boaz and Charlotte's husband John, who will attend Oma Rae's Memorial Service. She is also survived by Oma Rae's niece Nelda and Nelda's husband Jim Brockman.

A Celebration and Memorial Service will be held on Friday, March 29, 2013 at 2:00 p.m. at Getz Funeral Home Chapel. Contributions may be made to Good Samaritan Society, Las Cruces Village, 3025 Terrace Drive, Attn: Cherry Jamison, Director of Resource Development (575.556.2119).

David Salcido
thought ...

OK, I admit it. I've gone native. It happens when you immerse yourself in a culture you find both fascinating and accessible. I imagine it's a bit like what Dian Fossey went through up in the mountains of Rwanda. Or maybe that's a bad example. Filmmakers aren't usually gorillas (though sometimes they use guerilla tactics), and I don't think anybody is going to murder me because I'm fighting for filmmakers rights. Sorry, that was an early digression, even for me.

I guess my point is, I like filmmakers. More to the point, I like New Mexico filmmakers. They're a much different breed than the Hollywood variety I cavorted with in the '90s. They're friendlier, more cooperative and, as I said before, accessible. They don't hold their profession over their heads like a trophy to be admired by "outsiders," squirreled away like Masonic nuts and only grudgingly put to use when the money is right.

They like to work, and, in doing so, to share the experience with peers and the uninitiated alike. As a result, I find them to be more creative, more experimental and far more prolific. I like that.

Maybe that's why I found myself tagging along on a location scout with a large group of Las Cruces' best and brightest on Saturday, March 23 – one of the nastiest, most blustery days on recent record. Recent being about a week, hereabouts, but again, I digress.

The event was the first in a series of seminars given by film industry professionals right here in Las Cruces and sponsored by the Las Cruces Film Office (LCFO), a subsidiary of the Las Cruces Convention & Visitor's Bureau (LCCVB), in cooperation with the Doña Ana Community College's Creative Media Technology (DACC's CMT) department. Which is a whole bunch of acronyms working together to create one significant acronym called the Film Workforce Initiative (FWI).

The seminar convened first in a DACC East Mesa campus classroom, where a large group of amateur and professional filmmakers gathered to learn everything they could about location scouting from the local expert in the field, New Mexico location manager Rebecca "Puck" Stair, before taking it out into the field. The seminar itself was very informative, very educational and liberally peppered with personal anecdotes about real-life situations encountered on movie sets and/or locations.

Bank card changes arriving

Merchants adopt mobile technology

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

We live in interesting times: Our world is getting flat and it's hip to be square – at least when it comes to bank card technology.

Two trends in bank card technology – unembossed, flat, cards and a tiny square device merchants use to read cards are making their way into Las Cruces.

Like many a phenomenon, the new cards and card readers caught on first in Europe, traveled across the Atlantic and then worked their way across the continental U.S.

Although some local retailers were dubious about flat cards from out of town banks and called their bank with questions, local adoption is likely to go forward without much commotion.

"We hadn't planned any hard rollout," said Sharron Sumner, vice president of marketing for White Sands Federal Credit Union, which will introduce the flat cards in several months. "It's just replacing an old process with a new one, and we do that frequently."

In fact, current members won't see the new cards until they need to replace one that's missing or has expired.

Economic developers to hold update session

By Alta LeCompte

Las Cruces Bulletin

With more economic development providers than Caliche's has sundae toppings, the Mesilla Valley is positioned to do great things.

Christine Logan, City of Las Cruces economic development and business assistance director, counts about 38 local agencies doing "good economic development work."

But these providers can do even more if they know each other's strengths, she said.

Logan, who considers herself a generalist, has called a "get-acquainted" meeting for all 38 agencies. As of Friday, March 22, 15 had accepted the invitation.

They will assemble from 10:30 a.m. to noon, Friday, April 5, at City Hall.

Right time, right place

"The chamber, MVEDA, ACI, we're all saying we need to get together, we need to collaborate," Logan said.

Why now?

"Because the economy has changed so much in the past few years, and we've found ourselves having to do more with less – we have all evolved. In the process, redundancies in what we do may have developed, and gaps in the services we provide also may have" she said

It's time for the players to clarify for one another what they do now, so they can efficiently direct potential clients to the people best suited to meeting their needs and complement each other's efforts, Logan said.

"We need to go around the circle and tell each other what we do, who we do it for and what geographical restrictions apply to where we offer services," she said. "We need to see where there are redundancies and where there are gaps."

What are we missing?

Logan said an entrepreneur seeking assistance writing a business plan may be told five or six different places where they can be helped. In fact, only one of those five or six is going to be the best fit for their specific needs.

For example, while the Las Cruces Small Business Development Center offers the most comprehensive business planning assistance, WESST is geared to work with clients who are brand new to the business world and will want a small amount of start-up capital. And president of operations, said the new cards will function just like the old ones. Both have a magnetic strip that is read to confirm the identity of a member making a purchase.

Unembossed cards, however, should have a longer lifespan, because embossed numbers wear down and in time become difficult to read.

Fifield said the embossed cards originally were designed to create a paper trail by generating a receipt when they were swiped. They no longer need to do so, since processing is completely electronic.

No-wait debit cards

For users, the new cards will be pretty and convenient.

"There will be quite a few nice pictures, scenes from the old Southwest," he said.

New members will receive a card as soon as they join, rather than waiting a week for one to arrive in the mail, he said.

That's because local branches will print the cards on site.

The printing technology will be located in a secure area and staff will be trained to use it, Fifield said.

'I'm sure we'll get questions from members. We always do when there's a change, he said. "But this is a really great product and I'm sure they're going to enjoy it.'

He said he believes White Sands Federal Credit Union is the first or second financial institution in the Las Cruces area to adopt unembossed cards.

A bigger change in cards that's on the horizon is an embedded micro chip, which is intended to make the cards more secure, Fifield said.

By 2015, ATM machines in the U.S. will have to read the chips. A requirement has not yet been mandated for financial institutions, but the time is coming, local bankers said.

Get hip – be square

Tiny card readers, on the other hand, are a tremendous leap forward for small businesses and businesses that are mobile, including vendors at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market.

By ditching clunky readers in favor of devices that transmit data by smartphone, Squares and their competitors are making point of sale processing simpler for merchants and consumers.

Squares also are lowering the cost of doing business.

Heidi Knepper, who sells Para-Band survival bracelets at the farmers market, said her sales increased 30 percent when she started using the Square. Profits are up as well.

She said she had been losing money by not collecting sales tax from customers. Since Square makes the calculation, she can now pass a portion of the tax on to consumers, which has made her business profitable.

"I haven't had any problems," she said. "You've got a record you can e-mail or text. Cash and checks are always a little iffy. This is more convenient.

Squares are available for about $10 in stores or free online with an app download. There is a 2.75 percent service charge for each swipe or a flat rate charge of $275 per month for processing services, according to squareup.com.

In addition, because the transaction is completely digital, retailers get their money the next day, deposited to their account with a confirmation sent via email.

Free apps and analytics add to the functionality of the system, giving merchants tools to manage inventory, create loyalty programs and Wayne Steppings of Tee-Kay Creations, who sells jewelry with his wife, Sue Steppings, at the Farmers Market, said they've been using their Square at the market for about two and a half years.

Steppings is a fan.

There are no fees, we get paid the next day and we pay just 2.75 percent per swipe," he said. "A lot of the business we do is impulse, and most people are not going to be carrying around $200 for a necklace."

For a person launching a small business at the Farmers Market, pennies saved add up.

Options multiply

In addition, competitors are coming onto the scene offering even cheaper devices and lower service rates. PayPal, for example, is offering a free reader, a rate of 2.7 percent and same deposit access, while other companies are promoting rates lower than 2 percent.

Mike Groves of Mike Groves Photography swears by the Intuit reader he got in September 2012, and takes it to art shows as well as the farmers market.

He connects it to an iPad rather than a smartphone to process customers' purchases.

"The iPad, because it's bigger than a smart phone, is easier for customers to sign," he said.

"I find out right away whether the sale is authorized. At an art show, when you're selling something large, it used to be a kind of a leap of faith," he said.

Groves chose the Intuit device because it is compatible with QuickBooks, his business accounting software.

He found the provider to be both flexible and accessible, upping his credit limit in advance of the Renaissance ArtsFaire. He was able to talk with a helpful, live person to make that change happen for him.

The price, too, is right.

Groves said he pays $12.95 a month for his service plus 1.7 percent of each transaction.

All the mobile merchants advise others to be square - or oblong like the Intuit device. Providers' rates and terms vary, and a little online research should lead to the best option.

Now bricks-and-mortar businesses can ditch both their card reader and their cash register, replacing the equipment with "Business in Box" from Square.

The box includes a square reader with which to accept cards on a smartphone or iPad, an iPad stand for the checkout counter, a cash drawer that opens with the touch of a button on the Square and a printer for cash receipts and daily sales reports sent wirelessly from the iPad - all for a total price starting

Throughout the majority of the four hours in the classroom, Stair reiterated certain points, including honesty, transparency and, above all else, professionalism. She believes, as so many in the New Mexico film industry do, that in order to lure more opportunities to our fair state, each and every filmmaker, no matter what his function, serves as an ambassador. As location scouts are very often the first contact a business or landowner makes with a film production, she takes this responsibility very seriously.

I may not grow up to be a location scout, but I certainly have a much better appreciation for what they do. In that respect, the seminar was clearly a success. By the time Puck was finished with a complete rundown of what her profession entails, every person in the room was ready to go out and show her what they could do.

Unfortunately, Mother Nature wasn't nearly so accommodating. Our destination: Corralitos Ranch, Las Cruces' answer to the Ponderosa and a popular spot for capturing southern New Mexico's charms on film - when there's not more dirt in the air than on the ground, that is. Here such productions as the award-winning "Red Mesa" and blockbuster "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" were filmed, though my guess is those productions didn't have to deal with red dust working its way into every nook, cranny and pore because of "John Carter of Mars" meets "Lawrence of Arabia" staging.

On the way back from our grit and spit adventure, I chatted with Puck, and it was here that I learned my most valuable lesson about southern New Mexico filmmaking to date. For years I have been laboring, as so many filmmakers do, under the impression that northern New Mexico simply ignores their southern brethren, taking all the filmmaking opportunities for themselves and only occasionally scattering a few crumbs down in our direction. Though that may be true in some instances, it isn't the entire

In addition to giving me insight into what it takes to become a location scout and her personal journey to that place (what can I say, I'm nosy. I ask a lot of questions...), Puck also revealed what she referred to as her "secret motives for being here." As it turns out, her motives work well with our own: building up the infrastructure so that southern New Mexico can become not just more competitive, but more viable in the filmmaking industry.

"I get called frequently to scout the southern part of the state," she said. "We've got a stable of location scouts in the northern half of the state, but we are so thin down here. My choice, then, is to hire somebody I know from the north and send them down here to scout, or hire somebody who lives here and might know the terrain, but who is untested and untrained. One of the main reasons I'm here is to find people who can do the jobs when I need them done, and also to help the people down here to get the skills needed to get the job done."

That, my friends, just about sums it all up for me. Here is a working professional – literally, since she took valuable time off of her current job scouting for the Hollywood blockbuster "The Homesman," starring Tommy Lee Jones, Meryl Streep and Hilary Swank - who is willing to give of her time and energy for a cause she believes in. The lightbulb went off and it all became clear to me: One of the key reasons more film productions don't come to southern New Mexico is because there isn't anybody here to show them where to

"I want to do my part in contributing to the build up of talent to recruit from," Puck said. "The raw talent is here, absolutely. The willingness is here. The desire is here. You just need the skills and contacts. If you build it, they will come. It's got to start

And it has, through the Las Cruces CVB and DACC's Film Workforce Initiative. Invasive red dust aside, Saturday's foray into location scouting was an illuminating journey; one that gave me yet one more reason to love filmmaking in southern New Mexico.

SCORE has special strengths working with particular industries, including restaurants, Logan said.

"If we can all get together, we'll be better at making the right referrals, " she said. "The client will get to the right person faster and it will be better for the agencies because they will be using their time more effectively."

How should we connect?

Logan said she can see any number of ways collaboration among local economic developers could evolve.

A follow-up meeting is likely, she said.

There could be an annual summit, where service providers share updates on economic development trends changes in available tax credits and other topics. Or the agencies may opt to have brown bags occasionally like the area's social workers do, Logan said.

Sub-groups with specialties in common, such as workforce development, might emerge.

"We may need to expand to include statewide agencies," she added.

Logan said all the local economic development agencies and organizations are working toward to same underlying goal: improvement of the quality of life in the area.

"Some of us do it by addressing personal wealth creation through business recruitment and retention and job creation, while others focus on community wealth creation by growing the tax base and expanding educational opportunities," she said.

Specializing and collaborating Specialization is a good thing, Logan said. Attendees have expertise in everything from tourism to commercial space, from micro lending to federal procurement and from veterans training to business networking. There are experts in the business of art, and those who know how to attract call centers, she said.

'Motivating junior high students to stay in school and go to college doesn't require the same skill set as motivating a Mexican company to locate their business here," she said.

Whatever their focus, however, each agency is evolving and always trying to do more with scarce resources. Some, such as the High Tech Consortium are pursuing their goals as an allvolunteer organization, Logan said.

She cited her own challenges as her role with the city has evolved. She said the city used to be very involved with the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership, the airport and the film industry. While she still works closely with the city-owned airport, she has lost touch with some of the others.

"Before I know it, it's been six months and I realize I don't know what the film community is doing," she said. "There quite likely are some good programs for agriculture, but I don't know about that because my focus is on the city.

None of us have the time to get the quality of life to where we want it to be. I think there's more of a desire now to see how other people are doing and feel like collectively we're getting somewhere."

New Realtor joins Steinborn & Associates Real Estate

Steinborn & Associates Real Estate is pleased to announce that Reese Carson has joined the growing company of Steinborn Inc., Realtors.

Carson has been an active citizen and banker in the Las Cruces community since 1996.

"I chose Steinborn & Associates Real Estate because they have many resources including a dominant market share, broad network of referrals, and a significant Internet presence," Carson said. "The brokerage provides the finest national affiliations available to assist me in networking for my clients."

Carson will be responsible for the leasing, purchasing and selling real estate in both their residential and commercial divisions. He is based in the 141 Roadrunner Parkway, Suite 141, office and can be reached at 644-2467.

County seeks applicants to serve on airport advisory board

Applications are available for residents of Doña Ana County willing to serve on the Airport Advisory Board for the Doña Ana County Airport at Santa Teresa.

The Airport Advisory Board comprises seven members serving staggered three-year terms. The Airport Advisory Board meets monthly or as needed to identify issues of airport importance related to safety, growth, development and administration. Board members work closely with the airport manager, county engineer and planning director, as well as a representative of the Doña Ana County Attorney's Office.

The Airport Advisory Board is charged with periodically reporting to the Board of County Commissioners about issues of concern and then making recommendations for future operations.

All meetings of the Airport Advisory Board comply with the New Mexico Open Meetings Act.

The application form seeks information related to interest in serving, knowledge of aviation and/or airport issues and other general information about the applicant's qualifications to serve. Licensed pilots are encouraged to apply. Deadline for applications is 5 p.m. Friday, April 12.

To request an application, call Doña Ana County Airport Manager Vernon Wilson at 644-2358 or email him at vernonw@donaanacounty.org.

US Department of Labor offers grants to improve workforce data quality

The U.S. Department of Labor announced on March 11 the availability of approximately $6 million in grants for the third round of the Workforce Data Quality Initiative. These funds will enable up to six additional states to build or expand longitudinal databases that link workforce and education data, enabling them to improve the performance of workforce programs.

Grantees will be expected to use these longitudinal databases to conduct research and analysis aimed at determining the effectiveness of workforce and education programs, and to develop tools to inform customers of the publicly funded workforce system. This grant opportunity stems from the Obama administration's focus on access to high-quality data and is related to the U.S. Department of Education's Statewide Longitudinal Data Systems grants to build longitudinal education databases.

To find out more about the Workforce Data Quality Initiative, visit www.doleta.gov/performance/workforcedatagrant09.cfm.

McKee Foundation gives $11,500 to NMSU Library

The New Mexico State University Library has been awarded an $11,500 gift from the Robert E. and Evelyn McKee Foundation of El Paso. The gift will be used for the purchase of current engineering reference materials, which will build the collection to better serve the needs of not only NMSU's engineering students, but also faculty and researchers within our region and the state.

Engineering librarian Paula Johnson said the gift will enable the library to offer electronic engineering resources that are critically needed in this field. With the rapid advancements in engineering, the acquisition of current resources is critical to students and researchers alike. The Morgan & Claypool Synthesis Collection 3 & 4 will add 125 titles and provide a valuable source of information and an ideal introduction to new fields. With these acquisitions being electronic in nature, more students, faculty and researchers will have increased access to these resources and be able to download PDF versions of the titles.

For more information, contact Johnson at paulacj@lib. nmsu.edu or 646-7251.

Study shows outdoor recreation drives New Mexico economy

The Outdoor Industry Association (OIA) has released figures quantifying the economic impact of outdoor recreation in all 50 states, with a separate report for each state that tallies direct spending, jobs, salaries and tax revenue. This data demonstrates that outdoor recreation is an important driver of state economies, supporting jobs, businesses and communities.

In New Mexico, according to the study, Americans spend $6.1 billion on outdoor recreation, supporting 68,400 New Mexico jobs, generating $1.7 billion in wages and producing $458 million in state and local tax revenue. New Mexico offers spectacular outdoor recreation opportunities at treasured destinations, including Santa Fe National Forest, Elephant Butte Lake State Park and many others, providing the types of outdoor experiences that produce these economic benefits.

The state-by-state figures expand upon a national report OIA published in June 2012, which found that nationally Americans spend $646 billion each year on outdoor recreation, directly supporting 6.1 million jobs and generating nearly $80 billion in tax revenue.

The study concludes that outdoor recreation creates diverse jobs in product development, manufacturing, marketing, logistics, sales, retail, public land management, guiding services and more – and also supports service sector and other jobs when people spend money on trips and travel-related expenses associated with outdoor pursuits.

FEMA awards more than $1 million to New Mexico for flooding cleanup

More than $1 million was recently awarded to the state of New Mexico by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) for debris removal in Lincoln County in the aftermath of last summer's flooding.

The FEMA funding covers the hauling away of debris and the clearing of roads in order to allow for public access, the safety of the population and the protection of property, as well as direct administrative costs.

"The removal of debris is a critical step in the recovery process after a disaster," said FEMA Region 6 Administrator Tony Robinson. "We are proud to support our state and local partners in New Mexico, reimbursing them for the work they have done to rebuild and repair communities after last year's flooding."

FEMA's contribution, made possible by a Public Assistance grant, represents a 75 percent federal cost share. FEMA awards funding for projects directly to the state of New Mexico; the state then forwards the grant to the eligible applicant.

Las Cruces Convention Center books conference

The Las Cruces Convention Center has announced that the latest convention to book the center will be the New Mexico School Nutrition Association 2014 Conference, expected to bring more than 300 attendees to Las Cruces from around the state, June 3-6, 2014.

The New Mexico School Nutrition Association (NMSNA) is a professional organization for all levels of school food service employees. The NMSNA was established to provide resources that enhance and promote nonprofit child nutrition programs for the benefit of our New Mexico children. The NMSNA is committed to providing leadership assistance, nutritional information and program guidance to all school food authorities in developing effective and comprehensive nutrition services.

"It's always great to see groups from around New Mexico come to Las Cruces," said Global Spectrum's David Hicks, general manager of the Las Cruces Convention Center. "The 300-plus attendees will generate over 230 room nights with local hotels. Their impact on the community is estimated to be nearly $40,000 of direct spending within the community over their three day stay."

Hal Henthorne: Partnering for Downtown

Leader aims for measurable results, community visibility

Editor's note: Hal Henthorne is president of the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership board of directors.

Tell us about your "day job."

I am employed as a commercial broker with NAI 1st Valley, Las Cruces, working with commercial property owners and buyers to lease, sell or buy commercial properties in the southern New

What qualities/skills have you cultivated to enhance your performance in the workplace?

I became a commercial broker in Nashville, Tenn., in 1983, formed a commercial brokerage firm with two others – Fulton, Henthorne & Angle, in Nashville in 1985. I was vice president for leasing/sales of commercial/industrial properties.

I helped form a development group - Jetplex Associates to build business park properties in Huntsville, Ala., in 1987. Currently we have 335,000 square feet of office park space near Huntsville International Airport.

Most memorable mentors, and the role they played in your pursuit of education and career goals?

- Father gave me the options of work, college or Army out of high school. I went to college, joined the Army, afterwards.
- Mike Frank D. Michael Frank & Associates, Columbus, Ohio, taught me organization, persistence and highest-quality service levels.
- Mike Tomlin The Tomlin Company, Nashville taught me everything I know about commercial real estate and how to put transactions together.

When did you be come affiliated with the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership? What made you decide to do so?

I became informally involved in 2010 by volunteering to work on the design committee. Steve Newby, a great friend and supporter, encouraged me to get involved in the community through this worthwhile work.

In what capacities have you been active in the Partnership?

I became board member in October 2010, president July 2011.

What is the mission of the Partnership?

The revitalization of Downtown as an historic, cultural and economic center for the community and region. As we are learning across the country – as Downtown goes – so goes the

What are your accomplishments as Partnership

- 1. Provided stability/sustainability and direction when most needed, in league with some other very talented people.
- Worked to build a diverse board representing the face of Las
- 3. Communicated the vision and work of the Partnership at public events and before City Council to engage the community.

Goals for remainder of your term and for the Partnership going forward?

1. Increase DLCP visibility and communicate measurable results to our partners - the City of Las Cruces, Downtown merchants, the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market, area business, New Mexico State University, the Doña Ana Arts Council, the chambers and the public to build excitement and momentum.

- Continue to be the public-private voice for the revitalization of Downtown.
- 4. Ensure that our succession plan creates and sustains momentum going forward.
- 5. Work with our development team to increase community support, both physical and financial, to guarantee the success of the Downtown revitalization effort.

Tell us what other organizations the Partnership works with and how that process works.

As noted, we have a large, encompassing constituency. Beginning Downtown, the arts council is a partner joined at the hip. The viability of the arts directly impacts our efforts. The health of our Downtown businesses, current and future, depends upon our promotion and other business services. The city is a major partner in sustaining the work we do. And just as important, our public influences and enhances what we can do Downtown. They are altogether important to the return of Main Street.

HENTHORNE

What needs to happen to take Downtown to the next level in its revitalitzation?

Public awareness and participation – encouraging the public to participate in the Downtown charrettes that will be conducted in September to gain public input for the elements people would like to see Downtown - pocket parks, art, water features, walkability, mix of uses, plaza.

What is the Partnership's relationship with the Las Cruces Community Partners, a team of developers and consultants looking to identify revitalization opportunities?

As with the City of Las Cruces, we are the public/private voice Downtown – we are the liaison between public and private enterprise. The charrettes, for example, will be driven by the Partners, in league with the City. We will be the Elephant Butte Irrigation District manager Gary Esslinger gave a presentation concerning ongoing water issues at a March 19 meeting of the Primetimers.

EBID manager gives dire water forecast at annual meeting

By Marvin Tessneer

Gary Esslinger, featured speaker at the Farm Bureau Primetimers meeting Tuesday, March 19, was not able to deliver an encouraging message for the assembled group of retired and active Mesilla Valley farmers.

Esslinger, manager of the Elephant Butte Irrigation District, has been keeping on top of the surface water supply, a subject of concern that attracted several farmers, both retired and active, to the Primetimers meeting held at the New Mexico Farmers & Ranch Heritage Museum.

The outlook for an ample irrigation supply of surface water this summer is not promising, Esslinger told the Primetimers.

The current water storage is 216,445 acre-feet at Elephant Butte and 10,555 at Caballo, for a total of about 300,000 acre-feet, 10 percent of average for this time of the season.

The daily inflow at the San Marcial station that flows into Elephant Butte Reservoir is 300 acre-feet; only 39 percent of normal for this time of year, according to Bureau of Reclamation recordings.

Another bad indicator is that the mountain snow pack for the Rio Grande Basin is 69 percent of the long-time average. The spring snow melt runs off into the basin and river and supplies the irrigation surface water.

The board is anticipating an irrigation supply of 120,000 acre feet and an allotment of 4 to 6 inches by early June. The normal allotment with a good snow pack runoff is 3 feet.

"But if we get less than 120,000 acre-feet of water, the allotment will be less than 4 inches," Esslinger said. "We can't release water until it's in storage."

The EBID owns 90,640 acres of water rights. It delivers water via about 600 miles of ditches and maintains 300 miles of drainage ditches, where water is returned to the river.

The EBID board members, starting from the northern positions, are: Jerry Franzoy, Scott Adams, Robert Faubion, Tom Simpson, James Salopek, board chairman; Willy Koenig, Robert Sloan, Ramon Alvarez and Robert Kuykendall. Ricardo Bejarano is the water master. J. Phil King, a New Mexico State University professor, serves as the hydrology consultant.

The Lower Rio Grande system includes El Paso Water Conservation District No. 1, 69.010 water rights acres, and Mexico, 60,000 water-rights acres.

Esslinger also presented a historical background with slides. The district acquired water rights in 1906. Construction of Elephant Butte Dam was completed in 1917. The district paid off its loan to construct the dam in 1978.

Discrimination addressed

Deadline extended for Hispanic and women farmers, ranchers claims Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced Monday, March 25, the extension of the voluntary claims process for Hispanic and women farmers and ranchers who allege discrimination by the USDA in past decades. All claims must now be filed by May 1.

The process offers a voluntary alternative to litigation for each Hispanic or female farmer and rancher who can prove that USDA denied his or her application for loan or loan servicing assistance for discriminatory reasons for certain time periods between 1981 and 2000.

As announced in February 2011, the voluntary claims process will make available at least $1.33 billion for cash awards and tax relief payments, plus up to $160 million in farm debt relief, to eligible Hispanic and women farmers and ranchers. There are no filing fees to participate in the program.

Call center representatives can be reached at 888-508-4429. Claimants may register for a claims package (by calling the number or visiting the website) or may download the forms from the website. All those interested in learning more or receiving information about the claims process and claims packages are encouraged to visit the website at any time or to contact the call center telephone number 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mountain Time, Monday through Friday.

Claim packages and other documentation may be mailed to Hispanic and Women Farmers and Ranchers Claims Administrator, PO Box 4540, Portland, OR 97208-4540. Claim packages and other documentation may also be emailed to claims@hwfr.org. Claimants may also fax claims packages and other documentation to 855-626-8343. Completed forms and documentation must be received no later than 11:59 p.m. PDT on May 1, 2013.

Once a claim is submitted to the claims administrator, the claims administrator will determine if it is timely and complete. If it is, the claim will move to the claims adjudicator for a determination on the merits of the claim. USDA may submit evidence to the claims adjudicator regarding the claim. If a claim is deemed incomplete, a claimant will be notified by the claims administrator and given the opportunity to provide additional information within a certain timeframe.

Independent companies will administer the claims process and adjudicate the claims. Although there are no filing fees to participate and a lawyer is not required to participate in the claims process, persons seeking legal advice may contact a lawyer or other legal services provider.

Claimants may check the status of their claims on the claims website at www. farmerclaims.gov, or by calling 888-508-4429.

Certification underway

Livestock exhibitors encouraged to make arrangements for fairs

By Marvin Tessneer

Las Cruces Bulletin

4-H Club and FFA livestock exhibitors who plan to enter their livestock in fair exhibitions are advised to start making arrangements to have them certified, the Extension Office advised.

Two upcoming fairs the youths may enter livestock into are the Southern New Mexico State Fair, Oct. 2-6 at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds west of Las Cruces and the New Mexico State Fair, Sept. 13-20 in Albuquerque.

The certification deadline is July 15, the Roving Clover, the official 4-H reporter, noted.

Certification to show and transport animals is required by the New Mexico Livestock Board, said Teresa Dean, Doña County 4-H livestock agent.

"If any animal is purchased from outof-state, it must be accompanied by a health certificate," she said.

An F1 inspection form is issued when the NMLB show tag is placed on the animal. The board also will issue its Form 1 that is filled out by a 4-H agent or FFA adviser.

FFA advisers are visiting FFA students' homes to help certify the animals. But the extension office has scheduled a "tag day" for 4-H students on June 10 at the Landmark Mercantile in Mesquite, when the NMLB will inspect animals and issue ear tags.

State money to grow on

Grant funding available for agriculture projects

New Mexicans involved in agricultural development and promotional projects are invited to apply for grant funding through New Mexico Department of Agriculture (NMDA). The deadline to apply for Agricultural Development and Promotion Funds (ADPF) is May 1.

Funds may be applied toward projects involving livestock, vegetables, fruits, nuts and nursery crops, among others.

The pool of funds in the ADPF program is typically more than $100,000. Generally, amounts awarded range from $500 to $10,000 for individual applicants and up to $30,000 for groups working on a joint initiative.

Grant funds cannot be used to purchase land, buildings, equipment or any other type of capital improvement. Grantees are paid on a reimbursement basis; funds are released only after the grantee has submitted an invoice and corresponding receipts.

Proposals meeting the basic eligibility requirements will be reviewed and evaluated by the NMDA Marketing and Development Division. Letters announcing funding decisions will be mailed on or before August 1,

Too-small-to-bail-out creates problems for Cyprus

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

Like Greece before it, Cyprus finds itself in trouble as international investors lose confidence in its banking system. And like Greece, Cyprus lacks the resources to back the deposits held in its banks. Indeed, total deposits in Cypriot banks are seven times the GDP of Cyprus. So the Cypriot banks are on the brink of failure, pulling down the Cypriot economy with them.

The Cypriots are looking to their EU brothers for help, just as the Greeks did before them

One thing the Cyprus financial crisis makes clear: For too-big-to-fail to work as a business model, you have to be backed by a government with enough borrowing capacity to be able to, well, bail you out. That means Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom or the United States, maybe France – not a little country such as Cyprus.

A new deal was announced Monday, March 25, that lines up $13 billion in financing for the government and shuts Cyprus's second-largest bank, Cyprus Popular Bank PCL, imposing steep losses on deposits with more than 100,000 euros. Cyprus's largest bank, Bank of Cypress, will be sharply downsized, again inflicting losses on large depositors. Small depositors were mainly held harmless.

The EU, or more specifically, the Germans, were not excited about financing a bailout. The Cypriot business model is to serve as a tax haven for foreign depositors, most of whom are rich Russian businesspersons. And here is the rub. The Greek bailout wasn't very popular, but at least there the depositors were mainly other residents of the EU. Bailing out a bunch of Russians oligarchs really isn't popular. Let the Russians bail out the Russians.

There is precedent for such an approach. The last island nation to find itself in crisis was Iceland, an island with a very similar banking model to Cyprus, except that the customers primarily came from the UK and the Netherlands rather than Russia. And who bailed out Icelandic depositors? It was the UK and the Netherlands, with a little help from Germany and the International Monetary Fund.

Russia is refusing to even consider financing a bailout. Cypress is an EU country, thus, an EU problem, the Russians argue.

The EU lead by Germany is loath to provide a no-strings-attached bailout, as doing so could encourage excessive risk taking by future investors. No bailout without a substantial haircut for investors. In Greece, this meant clipping bondholders, but in Cyprus there are no bondholders, only depositors.

That's the problem. Proposing to "tax" deposits to partially fund a bailout has triggered a bank run which, in turn, prompted a suspension of deposit withdrawals. Cypriots have only limited access to their funds – Russian oligarchs have almost none.

All this illustrates the advantage of doing business in the United States, where there is a government standing behind deposits with nearly unlimited resources. Deposit insurance in the United States is backed by the U.S. Treasury, and, in a pinch, by the money creation power of the Federal Reserve. Hence the U.S. has begun recovery from the financial turmoil of the last decade while Europe continues to stagnate.

Weaving a different future

COMMUNITY

FOUNDATION

Of Southern New Mexico

NATIONAL STANDARDS

Tres Manos Weaving of New Mexico Inc. is bringing something new to southern New Mexico: the first-ever Southern New Mexico Fiber Arts Festival showcasing a variety of talented fiber artists and vendors with hand-dyed threads that are not readily available in this area.

"Since we moved to the Old Tortilla Factory last summer, we have met many accomplished fiber artists all over New Mexico and welcome this opportunity to showcase their work," said Teresa Guerra, executive director of Tres Manos Weaving. "This festival is a great opportunity for fiber artisans."

The festival will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, April 6 -7, at the Old Tortilla Factory, 1910 Calle de Parian in Mesilla Admission is free.

Tres Manos Weaving, a 501(c)3 organization, was created to train women in the small colonias, including in Vado, Mesquite, Chaparral and San Miguel, in a trade that would build esteem and help with finances at home. Because of the success of the organization, Tres Manos Weaving moved into the retail section.

In 2012, the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) became the fiscal sponsor for Tres Manos Weaving, an organization previously with the Community Action Agency (CAA) since its inception 10 years ago.

"The mission behind Tres Manos is the same, but now these ladies want to sell high quality products to better supplement their income at home," said Guerra of the weavers who have sold their merchandise throughout New Mexico. "Having this opportunity makes them more whole to express their work and add to their income."

While the weaving impacts the women and their families, it also keeps a piece of the past alive.

"Weaving is a dying art," Guerra said. In an effort to keep weaving alive and well, Tres Manos plans to begin classes at their new location.

"We want to get kids involved because they are the next generation to continue what we have forgotten," Guerra said.

Tres Manos Weaving will begin offering weaving classes in April, and will continue bringing in professional spinners and embroiderers to educate and expand on what the Tres Manos weavers are currently doing.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations. provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New Mexico for generations to come. The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. An answer to rising energy costs

Borrowers turn up the heat on energy-efficient mortgages

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

Were you shocked after seeing the amount of your latest utility bill? Did you wonder how the monthly charges escalated so quickly? If so, you're not alone.

Consumers from coast to coast are quickly coming to grips with the fact that rising energy prices are here to stay.

Whether we choose to spend time at home or opt to travel somewhere by train, plane or automobile, it's painfully obvious that we're all destined to pay more for the privilege of doing either. Since we can't control the cost of the energy required to enjoy these basic privileges, our only money-saving option is to employ as many personal conservation techniques as possible. Enter hybrid vehicles, compact fluorescent (CFL) light bulbs and energy-efficient mortgages (EEMs).

What's an EEM? In a nutshell, it is a mortgage that benefits homebuyers, sellers and owners who'd like to upgrade the energy efficiency of their homes.

Mandated by Congress in 1992, EEM pilot programs were rolled out in five states throughout the U.S. Housing and Urban Development's FHA loan program. In 1995, it was expanded as a national program

The underlying theory is that energy-efficient homes cost homeowners less to operate on a monthly basis than standard homes because they use less energy. Therefore, homebuyers who choose energy-efficient homes can afford to spend more on their housing expenses because they will likely spend less on energy costs.

Whether utilizing conventional, FHA or VA financing, EEMs provide mortgage insurance or a mortgage guarantee for a person to purchase or refinance a principal residence and incorporate the cost of energyefficient improvements into the mortgage. The borrower does not have to qualify for the additional money and does not make a down payment on it.

In fact, all buyers who qualify for a home loan qualify for EEM. The EEM is intended to give the buyer additional benefits on top of their usual mortgage deal. The lender will use the energy efficiency of the house, as determined by a Home Energy Rating System (HERS) rating, to determine what these benefits will be.

The U.S. Dept. of Energy's HERS report is similar to a miles per gallon rating on a car. HERS reports are evaluations of individual homes' energy efficiency. The report is prepared by a trained energy rater who considers factors such as insulation, appliance efficiencies, window types, local climate and utility rates to calculate energy costs.

HERS contain a numerical score from 1 to 100, a one to five star-plus rating and the estimated energy costs. Higher scores indicate greater efficiency. Cost-effective upgrades are those that will save more money through energy savings than they cost to install. A HERS rating usually costs between $100 and $300.

EEMs come in three basic flavors, plus a few variations:

The FHA EEM covers upgrades for new and existing homes and is available in all 50 states. The key feature of this program is that $4,000, or 5 percent of the property's value (up to $8,000), may be used to finance energy improvements. FHA also offers a 203k that enables a homebuyer or investor to obtain a single loan to finance both property acquisition and complete major improvements after the time of loan

Friday, March 29, 2013 Next on the flavor list is the VA EEM. This product is available to qualified military personnel, reservists and veterans in all 50 states for energy improvements when purchasing an existing home. Key features include $3,000 of upgrades, which may be financed based solely on documented costs. Up to $6,000 may be financed if upgrades are deemed cost effective.

The third and equally delicious flavor is a marbled combination of benefits from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. Fannie Mae's secondary market guidelines permit approved lenders to increase ratios 2 percent on the debt-to-income requirements for EEMs. This expanded qualifying ratio helps purchasers who are "maxed out" on their income ratios. Freddie Mac allows a lender to use the projected utility savings as a "compensating factor," allowing more of the borrower's income to be used toward qualifying.

EEMs can be done on most homes. Availability is not limited by location, home price or utility company. EEMs can be done on government (FHA and VA), conventional, portfolio and jumbo loans. All you have to do is find a lender in your area that can help you choose which loan type is best for you.

EEMs can also be used to purchase or build a new home. If a new home carries the Energy Star symbol, it already meets the requirements for an EEM. New homes without the symbol may qualify, but are subject to first obtaining a HERS report. Energy Star is a government-backed program helping businesses and individuals protect the environment through superior energy efficiency.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, "In 2006 alone, Americans, with the help of Energy Star, prevented 37 million metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions, equivalent to the annual emissions from 25 million vehicles and saved more than $14 billion on their utility bills."

I'm confident the current numbers are even more impressive.

If the above reasons aren't enough to excite you, there's one more benefit to consider. An EEM may also provide you with a larger tax deduction because the interest on mortgage payments is tax deductible. This can save you more money than paying for energy upgrades with a credit card, bank loan or cash – none of which are usually tax deductible.

For more information on EEMs, visit www.pueblo.gsa.gov, www.energystar.gov or www.hud.gov.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF COMBINED NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT ON THE ENVIRONMENT AND INTENT TO REQUEST RELEASE OF FINDS

3/29/2013 City of Las Cruces PO Box 20000 Las Cruces, NM 88004 575-528-3094 Raymond Burchfield

This Notice shall satisfy the above-cited two separate but related procedural notification requirements.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

FUNDS

On or about 4/15/2013 the City of Las Cruces will submit a request to the U.S. Dept of Housing and Urban Development for the release of funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, Grant # B-11-MC-35-0002 (CDBG) and the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act of 1990, 24 CFR part 92, HOME Investment Partnerships Program as amended, Grant # M-11/12-MC-35-0222 (HOME) to undertake an affordable housing project known as Whitney Place.

ACTIVITY NEEDING FULL

In Action Plan 2011 and 2012 funds were granted to Habitat for Humanity for land acquisition and construction in the Del Rey Subdivision on Whitney Place. This project will help construct 4 single family homes. $37,465.33 in 2011 CDBG funding was granted for Land Acquisition. HOME funding in the amount of $98,733.00 (program year 2011) and $71,007.00 (program year 2012) was granted for Land Acquisition and Construction.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

The City of Las Cruces has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR) on file at 700 N. Main St., Room 1137A, and may be examined or copied weekdays (8) A.M. to (5) P.M.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Any individual, group, or agency disagreeing with this determination or wishing to comment on the project may submit written comments to the City of Las Cruces Community Development Dept, P.O. Box 20000 Las Cruces, NM 88004, or in person at 700 N. Main St., Las Cruces, NM 88001. All comments received by 4/12/2013 will be considered by the City of Las Cruces prior to authorizing submission of a request for release of funds. Commenters should specify which part of this Notice they are addressing.

RELEASE OF FUNDS

The City of Las Cruces certifies to HUD that Brian Denmark, in his capacity as Assistant City Manager/COO consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows the City of Las Cruces to use Program funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will consider objections to its release of funds and the City of Las Cruces' certification received by 4/30/2013 or a period of fifteen days from its receipt of the request (whichever is later) only if they are on one of the following bases: (a) the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer or other officert of the City of Las Cruces approved by HUD; (b) the City of Las Cruces has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; (c) the great recipient or other (c) the grant recipient or other participants in the project have committed funds or incurred costs not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD; or (d) another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environ-mental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted in be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR Part 58) nd shall be addressed to Frank and snall be addressed to Frank Padilla, Director, CPD Division, U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, 500 Gold Avenue SW., 7th Floor, Suite 7301, Albuquerque, NM 87103-0906. Potential objectors should contact HUD to verify the actual last day of the objection period.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will, on the 25th day of April, 2013, at 10:00 a.m., at the east entrance of the Doña Ana County District Court, located at 201 W. Picacho Avenue, Las Cruces, New Mexico, sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following real property located in said County and State:

Being a tract of land in Section 17, Township 27 South, Range 3 East, N.M.P.M., being a part of U.S.R.S. Serial 28-36 and County Plat 2082 in Dona Ana County, New Mexico, and being more particularly described as follows, to-wit:

BEGINNING at the Southeast corner of U.S.R.S. Serial 28-36, identical with the southeast corner of the parcel herein described, whence Meander Corner No. 4 of the Refugio Colony Grant bears N.60°42°W. 7358.76 feet; THENCE with said U.S.R.S. Serial 28-36 lines the following two courses: N.11°20'30°W. 406.55 feet; S.82° 48'30°W. 784.74 feet; THENCE S.0°37'30°W. 291.03 feet to the Southwest corner, a point on the South line of U.S.R.S. 28-36; THENCE with said South line S.89°22.30°E. 861.72 feet to the Place of Beginning and containing 6.53 acres of land, more or less, SAVING AND EXCEPTING THEREFROM a tract conveyed to Enrique Noel Leal as set out in Warranty Deed filed of record on June 18, 1975, recorded in Book 232, Page 91, Deed Records, Dona Ana County, New Mexico.

Said sale will be made pursuant to the Default Judgment, in Rem, and Decree of Foreclosure, entered on March 20, 2013, in the above-entitled and numbered cause, which, among other things, was a suit to foreclose a note and mortgage against all secured real property by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $230,030.33 through March 13, 2013, on which post-judgment interest shall run at 15.00% per annum until satisfied in full, which the Special Master calculates to be a per diem of $94.53301 for 43 days to the date of the Special Master's sale (the "Sale"), for total post-judgment interest of $4,064.92, together with attorney fees incurred and costs of sale to the date of sale, and a reasonable Special Master's fee. The Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit their bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash at the sale.

Bidders, to the extent that they do not have a judgment permitted to be bid in lieu of cash, must bid cash at the sale. The successful bidder will be given until the close of the second business day following the determination of the winning bidder to supply to the Special Master cash, certified check, or cashier's check in the amount of the bid. Failure to do so will void that bid, and the Special Master shall either accept the next highest bid, or the Special Master may, in her sole discretion, telephone each bidder who attended the sale, using the telephone number each bidder submits at the sale, and communicate a new date and time for a subsequent sale, without republication of any further notice. Responsibility for reception of notice of any subsequent sale is on the bidder submitting the telephone

Notice is further given that the above-described real estate and improvements located on such real estate will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein and all recorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. All prospective bidders are notified that they are responsible for making their own determination as to the extent and nature of the title being conveyed by purchase at the Special Master's sale.

ONGOING DROUGHT AFFECTING MANY WELLS IN THE RIO GRANDE VALLEY

The public should be aware that the lack of surface water re-charge and increased ground water pumping may be adversely affecting wells in the Lower Rio Grande Basin. Folks who have domestic or irrigation wells may encounter surging, intermittent delivery, aerated or no water due to the dropping water table. These conditions may call for the lowering and/or replacing the pump, or the drilling of a new well. The following are some approximate costs for typical well drilling in this area, although there are many options available for casing, screening and pumps:

160' 4 1/4" PVC well 30' screen. 3 HP Berkeley Submersible pump 2" discharge, 100 GPM most areas in the valley $7889.00 + tax

160' 8 1/4" PVC well 60' screen, 7 1/4 HP Berkeley Submersible pump 4" discharge,

300 GPM, water meter included $16,108.00 + tax

$61,501.00 + tax (price does not include engine)

Border Book Festival

The 19th annual Border Book Festival returns Friday, April 19, through Sunday, April 21.

Spring has sprung!

The 'greatest Easter egg hunt in the great Southwest' returns to Young Park

By Zak Hansen Las Cruces Bulletin

Just five days after the official first day of spring, Wednesday, March 20, reports of a mythical, man-sized rabbit hiding candy and eggs in the Central Las Cruces area have been confirmed, sources said Monday, March 25.

This large leporidae, believed to be Peter

Cottontail, is thought to have arrived in Las Cruces via hopping down the Bunny Trail. His hippity-hoppin, officials said, likely indicates Easter's on its way.

To residents, Cottontail's arrival in the Mesilla Valley heralds something else, as well: the return of Springfest.

"The Greatest Easter Egg Hunt in the Great Southwest" returns to the City of the Crosses from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, March 30, at Young Park, 1305 E. Nevada Ave.

The annual spring celebration, hosted by the City of Las Cruces along with Jack Key Nissan and Bravo Mic Communications, brings crowds of more than 13,000 each year, eager to enjoy the warming weather, play games, participate in fun family activities, hear local music, find some eggs stashed around the park and – just maybe – catch of glimpse of Peter Cottontail himself.

This year's Springfest will feature a beading area, sack races, an obstacle course, water guns, kite flying, a chalk mural, building blocks, sand tables, Easter sculpting, a dress-up area, jumping balloons and a whole lot more — in addition to the egg hunt, the largest in southern New Mexico.

"We've finished about 8,000 eggs so far," said Lynz Green, music director at KXPZ Rocket 99.5. "With more every day."

The egg hunt – always the centerpiece of the celebration – is broken down into age groups to even the playing field and give each and every kid a chance to find some eggs of their own.

The festivities kick off at 10 a.m. with the first egg hunt of the day, for 0- to 2-year-olds. Parents are invited to accompany their children in this age group. Egg hunts for this group are held separately from the other age groups, and will continue throughout the day "until we've used up every last egg," Green said.

From there, each age group will hold their Matt M hunts on an hourly basis; 3- to 4-year-olds go at 11 a.m., followed by children with special needs; 5- to 8-year-olds at noon; 9- to 12-year-olds at 1 p.m.; and, at 2 p.m., an egg toss will be held for young-at-heart adults.

"The egg hunt is kind of a madhouse – in the absolute best kind of way," Green said. "There's thousands of people everywhere, and it can be kind of overwhelming, but it's great."

It's more than just eggs this year, though. PRC Productions, an independent film and television production company native to Las Cruces, is sponsoring a music stage that will provide entertainment throughout the day.

Local singer-songwriters Chris Baker and Matt Morgan will perform at 10 a.m., cello quartet La Cella Bella will perform at noon and Las Cruces ska band The Casual Fridays will close the day with a performance at 2 p.m.

Between musical acts, Jamie O'Hara the Magic Guy – known throughout Las Cruces for his stage shows at the Southern New Mexico State Fair, among others – will bring his hilarious brand of magic and mystery with two performances, at 11:15 a.m. and 1:15 p.m.

The egg hunts, music and magic acts and most other activities are free, but for those willing to spend a little to pack some more fling into their spring, amusement rides and food vendors will be set up in the parking lot of Young Park. Photos with the Easter Bunny will also be available for purchase.

Cañada Alamosa reveals 4,000 years of agricultural history

New exhibit opens with reception on April 4

A 13-year research project that unveils a fascinating look at ancient agriculture is the subject of a new exhibition at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum in Las Cruces.

'The Cañada Alamosa Project: 4,000 Years of Agricultural History" opens in the Legacy Gallery with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 4. A lecture, featuring project archaeologist Karl Laumbach, is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 11, in the museum's

In this extraordinary exhibition, visitors may explore artifacts, photographs, oral history and interpretation of life and survival in the Cañada Alamosa, an isolated and beautiful New Mexico canvon that features pithouse and pueblo ruins, Apache camps and Euro-American homesteads.

What is not universally understood is that archaeological data is also environmental data and that archaeology provides us with the longest available record of human interaction with a changing environment," Laumbach said. "This is because the archaeology provides a temporal context for environmental conditions reflected in the charred plants, animal bones, soils, carbon isotopes and pollen that can be bracketed in time by the presence of artifacts and living surfaces altered by human occupation."

The research project took place in the Cañada Alamosa, an isolated canyon where the high desert dominates the landscape and the canyon bottom has been blessed with the year-round waters of a deep, warm water spring. Known locally as the Ojo Caliente or Warm Spring, it is a sacred and special place for Native Americans and Europeans alike.

It was not until the early 1990s that comprehensive documentation of the area began when the National Park Service sponsored a study by Human Systems Research, Inc. (HSR). Most of the sites are on private land and have survived looting and destruction because of difficult access and protective owners.

In 1998, Dr. Dennis and Trudy O'Toole purchased a small ranch containing a cluster of major sites in the canvon, Founding the Cañada Alamosa Institute, the O'Tooles joined forces with Human Systems Research, with Laumbach as principal investigator, to create the Cañada Alamosa Project and explore the past 2,000 years of human adaptation to the ever-changing environment of the region. The Cañada Alamosa Project conducted field research and analysis for more than 13 years, ultimately discovering a 4,000-year record of agricultural activity. Partnerships include the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, University of Colorado at Boulder, Eastern New Mexico University, Earthwatch Institute and a cast of "Archaeological sites contribute to our understanding of the environment and its history," Laumbach said. "It's not just about pottery and arrowheads.

"The Cañada Alamosa Project is multidisciplinary and has incorporated individuals trained in botany, palynology, zoology, and soil science," he added. "Their studies have resulted in significant insights regarding the environmental history of the area."

The exhibit will feature archaeological objects such as ceramic vessels, stone tools, bones, shell and turquoise, along with photographs, videos, an oral history kiosk and interpretive text panels.

Admission to the reception on April 4 is free. The exhibit will be in the Legacy Gallery through March 16, 2014.

The museum is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children 5 to 17. Museum Friends members, military veterans and children 4 and under are admit-

Becoming our best selves

'Before I Die' gives community a voice

By Zak Hansen

What do you want to do before you die? Paint a masterpiece? See Italy? Say goodbye? Learn to dance? Get her back?

Artist/designer Candy Chang first posed this question in February 2011, following the death of a loved one, on the side of a dilapidated and abandoned building in New Orleans. On a chalkboard-painted exterior wall, she stenciled a simple statement – "Before I die "-repeated hundreds of times, I want to and set up containers of chalk.

By the next day, said Chang, "the wall was bursting with handwritten responses and it

'People's responses," Chang said in press materials, "made me laugh out loud and they made me tear up. They consoled me during my toughest times. I understood my neighbors in new and enlightening ways, and the wall reminded me that I'm not alone as I try to make sense of my life."

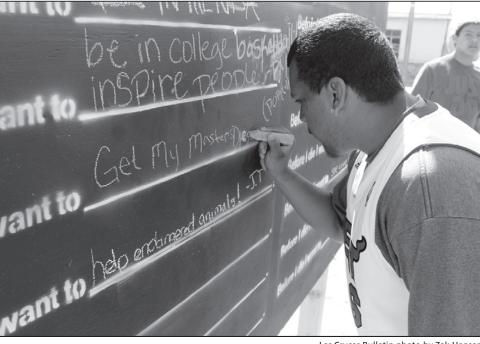

In the two years since, Chang's board has inspired tens of thousands of answers in more than 10 languages from people in more than 30 countries around the world, including Kazakhstan, Portugal, Japan, Denmark, Australia, Argentina and South Africa.

Now, Las Crucens have a chance to make their voices heard among them.

On the afternoon of Monday, March 25, through a partnership between the Mesquite Historic Preservation Society, Las Esperanzas and the Las Cruces Police Department's Weed & Seed Program, two "Before I Die" boards were erected on a vacant lot on the corner of Tornillo Street and Hadley Avenue.

By the end of the day, the boards were painted black and on the next morning, Tuesday, March 26, the signs bore the familiar white stenciled words "Before I die I want to Citizens are encouraged to take a look at the board, see the hopes and dreams of the community - and contribute their own aspirations.

"We're trying capture the 'hearts and minds' of kids with this project," said Joshua neighborhood Nichols, revitalization specialist with Operation Weed & Seed. "Community revitalization isn't about just fixing a house or planting

Nichols, who works just down the street from the "Before I Die" board on Tornillo Street at the A. Fielder Memorial Safe Haven - which provides free after school tutoring, homework help, snacks and activities for community youth – said he hopes this project in particular will speak to the younger generation of at-risk Las Crucens.

This really impacts the 25 and younger crowd," he said. "That group in particular face a lot of issues - with drugs, with gangs, with violence – and we hope this gives them a voice."

Nichols credits the tireless work of the Las Cruces Police Department in maintaining the current boundaries of the Weed & Seed zone -Colorado Avenue to the south, Madrid Street to the north, Main Street to the west and Solano Drive to the east.

The (LCPD) is always working hard around this area," he said, "and they're doing a heck of a job."

Nichols also praised the efforts of the MHPS and Las Esperanzas for their commitment to the regeneration of the Mesquite District.

For Nichols, the boards are about more than just speaking out.

"If a kid has a goal they put up there – I want to be an architect, say – then we want to help them do that," he said. "If anyone wants to set a goal like this and do it, they can call us, and we'll help them accomplish it in any way we can.

We don't want people just thinking. We want people acting. If we can do that, we can change the mindset of a whole community, and make this area better than ever - make Las Cruces all it could be."

According to Chang, community projects like this one help us see that we are not alone on our journey through life.

"With more ways to share in public space," she said, "the people around us can not only help us make better places, they can help us become our best selves."

Sharing our hopes at the 'Before I Die' installation

Freda Flores and Estela Sanchez of Las Esperanzas and Joshua Nichols, neighborhood revitalization specialist with Operation Weed & Seed, joined teens from the Weed & Seed house in putting up the "Before I Die" boards Tuesday, March 26, at the corner of Hadley Avenue and Tornillo Street, in the heart of the Mesquite District.

Estela Sanchez, elder with Las Esperanzas, writes her hope to "see more historic buildings preserved" on the board facing Tornillo Street.

Roman Garcia, a teen involved with the project, wrote that, before he dies, he wants to play in the NBA.

Steven Jasso shared his aspiration to play college

Before Priscilla Montelongo dies, she wants two things: to play college basketball and to inspire people.

Sharks, Jets and the Ranchway offers authentic mesquite barbecue, Mexican

By Zak Hansen

Anyone who's spent much time in the Mesilla Valley surely knows about the Las Cruces and Mayfield High School rivalry, but for the uninitiated, I'll run it down as best Cruces and Mayfield, as locals know them, have had it out for one another – especially on the football field – since as early as 1967. Since then, and especially within the last two decades, both teams have achieved a great deal of success with their sports programs – one reason the rivalry remains so heated.

The annual football face-off draws crowds of approximately 25,000, and in the weeks leading up to the game, Las Cruces pulls into what seems to be two distinct

Before I lived here – and long before I championed LCHS as my alma mater - this idea seemed silly to me. As I grew up, though, I found it to be more and more true.

We're not talking a few pep rallies in the days leading up to the game, oh no. This is some real 'West Side Story"-style rivalry - Sharks and Jets, Trojans and

As the citizenry takes up sides the physical landscape is divided in two – at least in the eyes of local teenagers - and shops, restaurants, even entire neighborhoods are lost in the fray, falling on "our turf" or "their turf," regardless, in most cases, of any school affiliation.

A loyal Bulldawg, I stuck to the restaurants on my side of town, only venturing (en masse, mind you) to "their side of town" for good-natured (and occasionally not-so-good-natured) rivalry week showdowns – but never for food.

Corner Deli, Escondido Restaurant, Ranchway – these were ideas, rather than brick and mortar build ngs. They were culinary phantoms These were restaurants that existed, to me, much as urban legends did: My friend's cousin's sister-in-law said she went to Ranchway once and swears it was the best barbecue she'd ever had.

In the years since those salad days, my life has kept me on the southern end of town, so, naturally my eating habits remained steady, unchanged since my formative

Many years have passed between now and my graduation. My 10year reunion has come and gone with little fanfare, my diploma sits dusty on a shelf and I bleed more red than blue and red.

While my school spirit may have faded somewhat in the decade since, my love for barbecue has increased at an exponential rate.

So, then: Do I turn my back on my Bulldawg pride and eat at - gulp - a "Mayfield place"? Indeed I do.

In line with the "West Side Story" metaphor, I'm Tony, breakng with my fellow Jets to head to the Sharks' side of town ... which I suppose, makes Maria really delicious barbecue and Mexican food.

The death of diplomacy 'Olympus' out-and-out offends Review by Zak Hansen title cards, of course – it's Christmas eve at Around midway through Antoine Fuqua's "Olympus Has Fallen", Secret Service Agent Mike Banning (Gerard Butler) bludgeons a Korean terrorist to death on the carpet of the besieged Oval Office with a bronze bust of our nation's 16th president, Abraham Lincoln, and I could probably stop this review there.

'Olympus Has Fallen" has bunches of bullets, buckets of blood, overly "ethnic' adversaries and enough American flags to gag a patriot – within the first frames of the film. there are no less than nine.

This introductory show of patriotism so inspired one of my fellow moviegoers who, overcome with American pride, actually hooted. That's right – he was unable to stifle an audible "Hoo!" from escaping his lips as Old Glory billowed

Camp David, snow is gently falling on even more American flags and President Benjamin Asher (Aaron Eckhart) is en route to a political function with his wife Margaret (Ashley Judd) and son Connor (Finley Jacobsen), with their crack team of Secret Servicemen at their side. Among them is Banning, who has developed a close relationship with the first kid.

While crossing an icy bridge, the front car of the motorcade hits something – maybe a deer? – causing a pileup that sends the president's car careening into a frozen river, with the first lady still belted to her seat.

Eighteen months later, agent Mike Banning is unshaven, sleeping on a couch and having difficulties with his wife, as the fallen hero in this movie has to be. After the accident, Banning, now disgraced (despite, as best I can tell, having had no hand in the accident other than rescuing the commander in chief – his job, as I understand it), has taken a boring desk job at the Treasury Department.

minister of South Korea for a discussion on what to do about their increasingly antagonistic neighbor to the north. Disguised as good Koreans, the P.M.'s security team as well as a bus full of stereotypically camerahappy tourists - turns out to really be the bad kind of Koreans.

The Korean terrorists attack the White House (with a plane they somehow got nearenough to the Capitol without detection?), crash into the Washington Monument and generally make a violent mess of things. Civilians are massacred in the streets, soldiers and Secret Servicemen and gunned down and in the hundreds and – Boo! Hiss! – a charred, tattered and torn American flag is thrown from the roof and drifts onto the White House lawn in super slow motion.

Soon enough, the President and several key cabinet members are taken hostage in the White House bunker 1,200 feet underground, and the forces of evil are extracting nuclear launch codes from them one by one.

Lucky for them, agent Banning walks through the front door of the smoldering White House to rescue the president by any means necessary.

Sure, it's violent, loud and action-packed. It's also shockingly offensive.

The out-and-out racism and nationalism championed by "Olympus Has Fallen" lies somewhere on the axis of D.W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," Mickey Rooney's character I.Y. Yunioshi in "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and the much-maligned "Grand Theft Auto" video game series' directive to "KILL ALL HAITĬANS."

Recent weeks have seen a flurry of media attention paid to the latest poorly animated North Korean anti-American propaganda film, the admittedly terrifying - but fantastically titled - "Firestorms Will Rain on the Headquarters of War."

In the weekend following our national media's vocal outrage at these viral videos - which utilize the very best computer design work 1995 has to offer – the $70 million budgeted "Olympus Has Fallen" debuted at No. 2 at the box office, raking in more than $30 million in three days. Maybe this movie isn't doing us any favors in the international popularity department.

As shocking as this may sound, though, 'Olympus Has Fallen" may not be the No. 1 "Movie most likely to offend more than 60 percent of the world released in the last 12 months" – that honor likely goes to 2012's "Red Dawn," which followed a group of middle-American teenagers who fend off an invasion of their town by North Korean soldiers.

This plot decision was only made in postproduction, however; the movie was conceived, written and filmed with China as the enemy. Using Chinese flags. And Chinese actors. Speaking Chinese.

With some clever digital manipulation, an overdub, a tacked-on prologue and a complete disregard for cultural sensitivity, everything Chinese was turned North Korean - the flags and dialogue, but not, mind you, the Chinese actors – a halfhearted effort not at all reinforcing the sad stereotype that, to Americans, Asian peoples are interchangeable.

Think of "Olympus Has Fallen," then, as a companion piece to "Red Dawn," joining forces at the box office bludgeon to death the hope of eventual international harmony with a statue of the Great Emancipator ... while an eagle clutching a Budweiser in its gleaming talons screeches across a burning sky and Eddie Van Halen nails a guitar solo from the cab of a passing monster truck - metaphorically speaking, of course. 'merica. Film Review "Olympus Has Fallen" is violent, bloody, zealously Grade patriotic and culturally insensitive to an amazing degree.

Review by Jeff Berg

Michael Haneke, the often-lauded Austrian born director of "Amour," has been a favorite of cinephiles and critics for some time now. With the exception of a remake of his own film, "Funny Games," his recent films, "The Piano Teacher," "Time of the Wolf," "Cache," "The White Ribbon" and, of course, both versions of "Funny Games" has brought his name to the forefront of those who don't mind "reading" their movies, i.e., can appreciate

This, his newest work, continues a theme that I have noticed in all of the above mentioned pictures, that of entrapment. (Note: I found all of them except "Funny Games," especially "White Ribbon" – to be better than this picture), that of entrapment.

Piano Teacher" was the story of as student who was in love with his masochistic piano teacher. "Time of the Wolf" is a slightly futuristic piece about a family who finds their home taken over by strangers during an unspoken global crisis. "White Ribbon" was about a young man trapped in a cruel family. You get my point.

"Amour," filmed mostly in the apartment of the elderly couple who are the focus of the film, gives an extra dose of claustrophobia to something that few of us care to face - death.

We more or less know that will be the subject of the film from the first scene, which shows rescue personnel breaking into a tidy, but older Paris apartment, after being informed of the suspicion

And that is what they find, surrounded by drooping flowers. It is the body of Anne, the octogenarian wife of Georges, her longtime loving husband and fellow music

Haneke uses flashback, but not too far back, to show what has happened. We are privileged to see the slightly privileged Anne and Georges as they enjoy their day-to-day routine and their retirement and their continued love of music. It is a privilege to watch this loving couple as they tend to the things at hand rather than having to be concerned about the future.

Again, in true Haneke form, something very small happens, so small that not even Georges notices it at first when it happens one day at the breakfast table. Anne has a minor stroke. She is frozen in time, but so briefly, that she barely notices it herself upon her "return."

However, it is the beginning of the end of an honest, strong, and unromantic love. Often part of an audience himself, Georges watches Anne's health and well being slowly diminishes. In spite of his loving help and patience, there is nothing he can really do but watch as she becomes less and less able to fend for herself, dissolving into a sad muttering morass after 80 some years of intelligence, honesty, and beauty. She is trapped in a body that won't function. Georges is trapped in his world of

"Amour" is aptly titled, but is not for those who like or expect that they will be witnessing a "movie of the week" sort of presentation. This film is anything but, with the performances by Emmanuelle Riva and Jean-Louis Trintignant, both of whom are well known in France, but rarely seen in the United States as riveting as they could be. Long-time Haneke collaborator, the always smart and droll Isabelle Huppert adds a strong supporting performance as the couple's daughter.

"Amour" has pulled off a number of amazing awards fetes, including winning for Best Foreign Language Film at this year's Oscars, with Haneke receiving a nomination for best director and screenplay and, Riva nominated for best actress as well. It won the Palme d' Or at Cannes last year as well, along with a Golden Globe nomination. Impressive.

"Amour" is an outstanding picture in its own right, one that should bring home a ring of reality to most of us.

Home renovated to feature a modern look

Las Cruces Bulletin

When Anita Kae walked into the home at 2600 Desert Drive in 2012, the wood paneling and 1970s décor didn't frighten her away.

In fact, Kae didn't see the dated interior, but rather the potential the home had to be a modern getaway. Luckily, having already remodeled and sold three homes previously, she knew what it would take to make that vision a reality.

"My mom and dad bought and sold houses when I was growing up," she said. "Mother loved doing it. She loved opening a can of paint."

Having found enjoyment in remodeling houses, Kae said what attracted her to the home was its size at 2,208 square feet as well as its location in the former Las Cruces Country Club area.

"It was an interesting home," she said.

Also, the fact that it had a pink-and-blue bathroom didn't hurt.

"All of the homes (I've remodeled) have had pink-and-blue bathrooms," Kae said, laughing at the coincidence.

The project took several months, and Kae's mother lent a hand along the way, but when the project was completed, she was left with a home she described as modern and comfortable.

"It's been, probably, my most favorite purchased and fixed up home," she said. "It just feels good.

"On the outside, it might be plain, but you walk inside and you go 'wow.' It's really cool inside. It's light and bright and makes you feel good."

The good feeling begins in the living room. It originally was a deck and the previous owner had enclosed the space to use as his office. Kae transformed it by finishing the room, which included adding drywall, paint and carpet. A new furnace and air conditioner were added to the home and vented into the

A wall covered in sandstone featured flowerbeds that Kae turned into bench seating. The other walls were painted a mauve color – variations of which were used throughout the house. Clerestory windows, another feature found throughout the home, fill the space with natural light.

"What's great is you get the light, but it's still very private," Kae said.

The original front door was taken out and a 6-foot entry now links the new living room to the dining room and the rest of the home.

With the addition of the new living room, the home's old living room-dining room combination was devoted solely to the dining room, providing Kae with plenty of leg room.

A fireplace is located against a wall in the space. The same sandstone found along the living room benches surrounds it. The exposed dark beams line the slanted ceiling and provide contrast to the light walls.

"I picked (the paint color) because it went so well with the tile that was already in the home," Kae said.

A sign of the times in which it was built, Kae said, the dining room includes an 8-foot sliding glass door to the backyard. This feature adds natural light to not only the dining room, but also the adjacent kitchen.

One element from the 1970s she kept was the ceiling, which was one large light.

"It turned out to be really neat," she said. "It's modern and classic."

Down a hall is an open area formerly used as a family room, which has been converted into Kae's home office. In this area are the home's bedrooms, including the master suite, and a guest bathroom.

While the bedrooms required little more than a fresh coat of paint, the bathrooms needed more work.

In the guest bathroom, Kae used a neutral color palette of hues in white, cream and tan. This can be seen in the new sink, countertop, cabinets, toilet, tile work and carpeting, which extends from the hall into the bathroom.

The master bathroom, which was once decorated in pictures of lipstick and finger nail polish, has a grayer color palette. This was inspired by the white and charcoal gray swirled tile in the shower, Kae said.

The renovations continued to the back of home. A door in the dining room, beside the fireplace, leads to a once-enclosed sun porch. While Kae removed the mesh surrounding the area, she left the stone trim, which adds a contrast to the red brick façade.

A major overhaul was conducted to the yard.

"There were rocks and it was overgrown and there was debris," Kae said. "The yard was completely redone."

Kae said she cleaned the entire yard, clearing out the overgrown plant material and debris and replacing the old rocks. Kae created a low-maintenance backyard with new rock, flagstone steps and xeriscape plants. She did leave a pine tree that had sprouted in the center of the yard.

Low-maintenance plants are featured in the backyard.

Sunny Conley Chile Knights

A favorite apple of mine is Granny Smith. I enjoy its tart flavor. They make a healthy, tasty

Sometimes I slice them, smearing each piece with almond butter. The slices also taste good dipped into vanilla-flavored yogurt. I turn ho-hum peanut butter sandwiches into "gourmet" by adding thinly sliced Granny apples and ripe, sweet banana sprinkled with cayenne pepper. (Yes, Granny Smith pairs well with peppers.)

Fortunately, Granny Smith apples are available year-round in most grocery stores. And did you know they're famous? The Granny Smith apple served as the logo for the Beatles' record label, but recently became the property of the Apple computer company. So 'old" Granny has a lot going for her!

Knowing this, I think you'll appreciate this week's recipes, loaded and made savory with all the goodness of tart heat.

Springtime Green Smoothie

1 cup packed fresh spinach leaves 1 1/4 cups white grape juice 1/2 avocado, peeled and pitted 1/2 poblano pepper, stemmed, seeded and cut into small pieces 1 Granny Smith apple, peeled and cut into small pieces 1 cup ice

Garnish: Mint or cilantro sprigs

Granny Smith apples, paired with peppers, can be used to create stuffed apple "bowls" for your favorite salad mix.

Blend spinach leaves, juice, avocado, poblano pepper, apple and ice. Serve garnished with a sprig of mint or cilantro. Makes 4

Smoked Gouda and Granny Smith Apple Sandwich

1 slice smoked Gouda 1/2 Granny Smith apple, sliced 2 slices sourdough bread Pinch sea salt 2 tablespoons apricot preserves mixed with 1/8 teaspoon of habanero powder

Layer cheese and apple on one side of sliced bread. Add sea salt. Spoon apricot preserves onto second slice. Press together. Makes

Granny Smith Bowls Stuffed with Broccoli Serrano Pepper Salad

Granny Smith apples are sturdy and make ideal "bowls." Purchase apples that stand straight up so they don't topple when stuffed. After rinsing and drying each apple, use a sharp medium-sized knife to remove its "lid."

Using a small knife, cut around the inside of the apple's innards, about 1/4 inch from skin. I used a grapefruit spoon to scoop out pulp. Set aside pulp to add to the stuffing mix.

Brush a small amount of orange or lemon juice inside cored apple to prevent browning. Granny Smith apples can be stuffed with your favorite salad fixings, including tuna, chicken and egg. Eat directly from the bowl or slice the "works" and dig in.

Broccoli serrano salad: 2 cups of broccoli flowerettes, minced 1 green onion, both white and green, diced ½ cup red onion, chopped 1/4 cup golden raisins 1/4 cup sunflower seeds 1/4 cup walnuts 1 small serrano pepper, stemmed, seeded and minced Granny Smith apple, minced (from "bowls")

Mix ingredients together in a large bowl.

1 cup of light or low-fat mayonnaise 1/4 cup honey (consider chile honey) 4 tablespoons of cider vinegar

Mix together the dressing ingredients. Add desired amount to salad mix, reserving the rest in a tightly covered container. Can be refrigerated for several days. Toss over the salad ingredients and refrigerate for about one hour or until chilled. Scoop mixture into Granny Smith bowls and serve. Makes 4 servings.

1 teaspoon olive oil

1 teaspoon spicy Chinese mustard

1/2 jalapeño pepper, stemmed, seeded and finely minced

1 teaspoon balsamic vinegar Kosher salt and fresh black pepper

In a bowl, toss together the arugula, olive oil, salt and pepper. Toss until everything is coated well. In a small separate bowl, whisk together the spicy mustard, jalapeño pepper and balsamic vinegar until well blended.

Place a small amount of arugula on a plate. Add an apple slice. Top with arugula mix. Top with another apple slice and arugula mix. Continue layering ending with an apple slice. Drizzle (don't pour) the spicy mustard dressing over the top. Cut using a fork and knife. Enjoy. Tastes good with grilled fish or chicken breast. Makes 1 serving. (Recipe adapted from http://natalieparamore.com.)

Granny Smith Salad with Chile Spiced Pecans

2 cups spring greens 1/4 cup Gorgonzola 1/4 cup chile spiced pecans 1 granny smith apple, peeled, cored, and julienned 1/2 cup red grapes

Mix greens, cheese, pecans, apples and grapes together. Toss. Pour dressing (recipe below) over salad and toss.

Dressing:

5 tablespoons red wine vinegar 1 shallot, minced (about 2 tablespoons)

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

1/4 teaspoon sea salt

1/4 teaspoon fresh ground pepper 2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil

Combine vinegar and next four ingredients in a medium bowl. Slowly whisk in oil until well blended. Use immediately, or store in an airtight container in the refrigerator until ready to use. Bring to room temperature, and stir or shake to mix. Makes 2 servings.

Red Hot Granny Smith Chicken Salad

2 large cooked chicken breasts, diced 1/4 teaspoon celery seed 1/4 teaspoon yellow mustard 1/2 cup Thompson seedless grapes, sliced Freshly ground pepper to taste Low-fat or light mayonnaise to taste 1/4 cup red onion thinly sliced 2 hard-boiled eggs, chopped 1 medium red jalapeño pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped

In a large mixing bowl add the diced chicken breast, the celery seeds, the yellow mustard, and the grapes. Add the black pepper and the mayonnaise to taste. Add red onion, chopped eggs and chopped red jalapeño pepper. Mix gently but well. This tastes good stuffed into Granny Smith apples. Makes 4 servings.

Getting to know: Quality Firewood & Materials Inc.

Opportunity, vision leads to success

Local business provides everything from firewood to pottery

By Beth Sitzler

According to Michael Lucero, owner of Quality Firewood & Material Inc., a Las Cruces staple since the 1990s, anyone can own a successful business.

"But they have to deal honestly," he said. "If you say you're going to do something, you have to do it. You have to be honest."

Since beginning Quality Firewood & Material Inc. in 1994, Lucero has worked hard to provide the best products at the best price to his clients. His mother first taught him about the importance of hard work when he was a child.

"My mother (Rachel Lucero) had a hard time in life," he said, adding that she was an orphan. "She was hard on me ... but she said she was proud of me when I made it."

Lucero's first entrepreneurial venture was selling Christmas trees. While studying engineering at New Mexico State University in 1988, Lucero had two friends in the Christmas tree business and thought it was a good opportunity.

"I was always trying to figure out how to make money," he said. "The good thing about selling Christmas trees is they sell real fast like green chile."

Lucero said they would cut down the trees over Thanksgiving break, set up shop in a dirt lot, and about three weeks later, they would be sold out.

After he was married and started a family, people would ask him about firewood. He said this brought him into the firewood industry.

"Stahmann Farms would prune the trees and would trash them," he said. "There was a vast amount of wood.

"I realized I could make money from it."

Gaining exclusive rights to the orchard, Lucero began selling firewood. In the beginning, however, people were unfamiliar with using pecan wood, so he had to create a market for it.

"Now, it's more valuable than any other wood," he said.

Lucero created a mix of three different wood varieties – pecan, cedar and piñon. Each wood provided a different benefit to the user, including quick ignite, long burning and pleasant smelling. He soon became well-known for this mix.

Unfortunately, when summer came, business slowed down. To keep things moving, Quality Firewood & Materials branched out into railroad ties, then flagstone, pottery and art décor such as fountains and statuary.

Quality Firewood & Materials Inc. has 38 colors of flagstone.

"We have 38 different colors of flagstone from Arizona, Colorado, Mexico, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and New Mexico," said Lucero, adding that they provide other building materials as well, including vigas and lumber for porches.

Having sold pottery until 1996, Quality Firewood & Materials began providing the popular product again in 2004 after Lucero began working directly with a distributor in Vietnam and Malaysia.

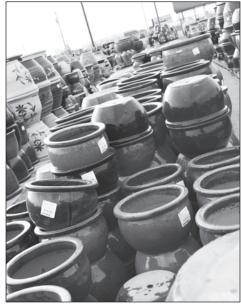

"People want a better deal," he said of why he cut out the middleman in the pottery buying process. "My philosophy is I fight for my customers."

Fighting for his customers has paid off and Lucero has been able to grow Quality Firewood & Materials from a two-person operation to one that employs six.

Trying to stay in tune with his customers, Lucero said he is going to do something new this year: lower the price of his firewood.

"I see a lot of people can't afford a higher price," he said. "I'm trying to go back to how I did business when I first started. I want to give my customers a better value and be there for them."

Other changes are coming to Quality Firewood & Materials as well. Lucero is working to expand its pottery selection and is working on bringing in items from Spain and China.

"Pottery has really taken off," he said.

He is also going to grow the inventory from Vietnam by bringing in teak furniture and marble statuary.

"I try to get stuff that is unique and no one else has. I want to lure people back," he said, adding that an example of this is the company's coffee tables created from root balls.

Also down the line, Lucero has plans to get into renewable energy. He has teamed up with Stahmann Farms to harvest its pecan shells, which will then be used to create compressed logs.

"A compressed log is like a big brick that is burned," Lucero said. "It's made from material that would normally be thrown away."

Having already purchased the equipment to make the compressed logs, Lucero said he plans to introduce the new product to the community in about two years, adding that he will work to make a market for it as he did the bagged firewood in the 1990s.

^{-a}I figured if I introduce it to someone at a low cost, and if it is a good product, they'll buy it," he said.

Lucero said he believes, with the right inspiration and motivation, anyone can find success.

"It's hard, but if you really want it, you have to go for it," he said. "When you get to that goal, it's really enjoyable. But a lot of people give up too soon."

One of his biggest inspirations, he said, was from those who said he couldn't run a successful enterprise.

"The challenge has been doing something that others said wasn't possible," he said. "There is always an opportunity. Anyone could have gone to the orchard and sold the wood, but I saw the opportunity. I'm the type of person, when I have a vision, you can't tell me I can't do it."

How to protect home from wildfire

Drought conditions expected to intensify rising threat

According to the U.S. Seasonal Drought Outlook, drought conditions are expected to linger or intensify in New Mexico, presenting a heightened threat of wildfire.

In an effort to help New Mexico residents reduce their wildfire risk, the Institute for Business and Home Safety (IBHS) offers wildfire preparedness resources.

The IBHS has outlined five ways home and business owners can reduce their wildfire risks.

1. Clean roof: Not only does a clean roof look nice, but it can also reduce your wildfire risks. Embers can travel more than a mile from an actual fire, which can ignite combustible debris on your roof. Be sure to pay attention to areas where the roof meets a vertical surface, such as at a dormer. Also, be safe and never work on your roof if you are uncomfortable.

2. Clean gutters: Have you cleaned your gutters lately? If not, they could be increasing your risk of wildfire damage. Gutters with combustible debris can be easily ignited by wildfire embers.

3. Clean deck: Much like the roof and gutters, a deck full of combustible materials increases the risk of wildfire damage. Remember that patio furniture and lawn ornaments can also be combustible, so store them inside when not using the deck. In addition, removing combustible materials from under the deck is critical. If you do store combustible materials under your deck, enclosing the underside of the deck can be an option.

4. Carefully position yard structures: Not only should combustible yard structures be placed away from your home, the area around them should also be maintained using noncombustible materials.

5. Relocate propane and LP tanks: Relocate propane tanks at least 30 feet from the home. If this is not possible, create a 10-foot noncombustible zone around the tank.

IBHS is a leading national expert with respect to preparing for – and repairing and rebuilding structures after – a catastrophe to make them more disaster-resistant. IBHS is an independent, nonprofit, scientific research and communications organization supported by the property insurance industry. The organization works to reduce the social and economic effects of natural disasters and other risks on residential and commercial property by conducting building science research and advocating improved construction, maintenance and preparedness practices.

Visit www.disastersafety.org for more information about how to make your buildings more resistant to a variety of disasters, big and small.

Ways to show off those unsightly necessities

We all have them, now use them in interesting ways

By Beth Sitzler

We all have them – those necessary household items you keep hidden away, out of sight when company comes over.

They're hidden under sinks and shoved into closets, but are incredibly helpful. While they might not proudly be on display, your life would be harder without them.

And most of the time, those unsightly household necessities can do more than just the job they were designed for. So pull out these necessities and use them around the home in some creative and convenient ways.

Toilet plunger

Look in just about any bathroom and beside the toilet, as hidden from plain view as possible, will be a plunger. Designed to get rid of those horrid toilet clogs, the toilet plunger, patented in 1777 by Samuel Prosser in England, can do much more.

- 1. Pop out a car dent: Has a wayward shopping cart gotten too close for comfort and left an unattractive dent in your vehicle? Before you take it to an auto body shop, try to remedy the situation on your own using a toilet plunger. Wet the plunger and push it into the dent. Pull it out sharply. The suction-cup effect will pull out the dent, and no one will ever know it was there.
- 2. Catch falling debris: Say you're installing a fan or light fixture into your ceiling or even doing something as simple as screwing in a hook for your hanging plant chances are your floor and face will become covered in falling debris. Prevent these bits of ceiling paint chips, dust and drywall from making a mess and getting into your eyes with a plunger. Remove the rubber bowl of the plunger from the stick and place it over the shank of the drill. The plunger will catch the debris, leaving your face and floor dust free.
- 3. Unclog a sink or bathtub: Yes, you already know that a plunger is designed to unclog a toilet, but did you know that it can be used to also unclog your sink or bathtub? First, remove the drain stopper and, if the sink or bathtub has an overflow outlet, cover it with duct tape. Next, fill the fixture halfway with water. Place the plunger over the drain hole, creating a good seal against the surface. Push down on the handle until it feels as if the clog has been removed. When you're done, drain the sink, remove the duct tape and replace the drain stopper.

Fly swatter

The fly swatter: The fast-moving enemy of intrusive insects everywhere. Dr. Samuel Crumbine, a member of the Kansas State Board of Health, invented the fly swatter in 1905. A lean-mean-killing machine, the fly swatter can be used in other ways – just make sure it's a clean, unused one.

1. Clean cobwebs: Clearing your tall windows or the corners of your rooms of cobwebs doesn't have to be a struggle. Rather than standing on your tiptoes, or jumping at the dangling spider homes, get help from the fly swatter. Wet a paper towel and wrap it around the swatting end of the contraption. The fly swatter will extend your reach and the damp cloth will catch the wayward webs.

- 2. Retrieve lost items from under the refrigerator: The other day, I was washing cherry tomatoes when one tried to escape my clutches by seeking refuge under my refrigerator. The sly fruit was clever rolling somewhere that, no matter how flat I made my hand, I couldn't reach. Unfortunately for the wandering tomato, there was a way to retrieve it. A fly swatter is flat enough to fit under a refrigerator or oven. The unreachable items will now be within reach.
- 3. Make bubbles: As the weather warms up, now is the time to get outside and enjoy the scenic landscape before our hot, 100-degree summers set in. If you're looking for an outdoor activity to entertain the wee-ones, try making your own bubbles. In a shallow pan, pour in either store-bought or homemade bubble solution. Dip a clean fly swatter into the liquid and then wave around. The tiny holes will create numerous bubbles at once quite the sight to see.
- 4. Open jars: Has your cap snaffler that rubber disk used to open stubborn jar lids gone missing? Don't worry, you can replace it with the rubber mat of a clean fly swatter. Remove it from the handle and place it over the lid. It will improve your grip.
- 5. Cover a drain opening: Are you worried about your valuables, such as your wedding ring, floating down your drain while you're doing the dishes? You can prevent this from happening by removing the rubber pad of a fly swatter from the handle and laying it over the drain opening. This will let water pass through, but stop larger items from falling down the pipe.

Cat litter

Created from bits of clay, cat litter is designed to absorb odors. Nowadays, cat litter comes in a variety of forms, scents and with special additives. While it's a product you probably keep hidden away in a closet, cat litter is useful to have around.

- 1. Add traction on ice: Sure winter in the Mesilla Valley is over, but when Jack Frost comes blowing in again, be prepared. One item to keep on hand to get through the cold weather is cat litter. Stash it in your trunk in case you come across some ice. The cat litter will add traction for your tires when you get stuck in ice or snow.
- 2. Deodorize a musty closet: If you're looking for a way to keep your hall closets fresh smelling, try cat litter. Designed to absorb odors, the cat litter can be placed in a shallow box on a shelf to deodorize the room.
- 3. Preserve flowers: Flowers are often given on special occasions, such as birthdays, anniversaries or promotions. While beautiful for the moment, the flowers will eventually need to be thrown out. Preserve the flowers and their memories with the help of cat litter. Pour about half an inch of cat litter into an airtight container. Place the flowers on top and attach the lid. Keep them closed up in the container for seven to 10 days. After, remove the flowers and use them as decoration or keep them in a memory box.

4. Remove grease spots: Oil and grease spills have made a mess of your garage and driveway. Clean them with cat litter. Pour a heaping helping of cat litter over the spots and let it sit for about 12 hours before sweeping away. If the stain is old, apply a coat of paint thinner to the spot before placing the cat litter on top.

Air freshener

Spray cans of air freshener are commonplace in the bathroom or kitchen area. While there isn't much else you can do with the chemically filled pleasant smelling stuff, there are ways you can replace it with a more natural product.

1. Essential oils: Are you tired of filling your home with aerosol and chemicals? Use essential oils to improve the smell of your abode. In a spray bottle, add several drops of your favorite scent to water. Shake up the mixture and spray.

2. Cinnamon and other fragrant spices: Another way to improve the overall smell of your home is by boiling spices, such as cinnamon, cloves and ginger, in a pot of water. This trick is especially handy after you've cooked pungent foods including fish and onions.

What to expect when expecting a new kitchen

Planning ahead will result in less stress along the way Food

Maureen Villmer Practical Design

Does the title sound like you're having a baby? Well, it is similar to having a baby.

First you (hopefully) plan and then you wait, and then your whole world is turned upside down, as the fruits of your labors are brought into the world.

If you have never remodeled a kitchen, perhaps I can give you an idea of what it is really like, so you can get some satisfaction from your remodel job. (Yes, you really can get satisfaction, but only if you prepare for it.)

I hope to give you the "big picture" so your next remodeling job can give you satisfaction. If you know what to expect, that will help you through it. So here it goes, you can expect the following:

Before you start, prepare for the dust and lots of it. Cover adjoining rooms with sheets or plastic. Close off as many areas of the home as possible to eliminate migrating dust. Change your furnace filters before and after the remodel. When the dust-making projects are going on, do not turn on the air or heat. It will carry dust throughout the house.

Where are you going to eat? Have a cup of coffee? Prepare to "move" into an area where you have put a refrigerator, microwave and water. You don't want to go out to eat for every meal (although it is a great excuse to go out, it gets old and expensive). If you prepare meals ahead of time and put them in the freezer, it will be easier to function in your space and have food for your family. You and your Crock Pot could become friends again. Plan ahead for this inconvenience.

Planning

Planning will save you time, money and stress. Since HGTV, some people think it can all be done in an hour. It cannot! What you don't see in the background of those remodel shows is months and months of planning, materials ordered, a timeline established, demolition done, a line of communications for all parties (workers and homeowners), inspections over and over again so nothing is missed, storage areas for staging materials, etc.

A good remodel job (or a new home for that matter) takes time to plan. If you have never done this before, don't believe what you see on TV in an hour show. You should expect for an average size kitchen, nine months of planning and three months to execute.

Have I seen projects take less time? Absolutely! Have I seen projects take more time? Definitely! The difference is planning.

Good planning means knowing your limit; you can't afford to make mistakes. The impact will be on both your budget and your mental health. When in doubt ... hire an expert. The potential stress lifted from your shoulders is "priceless."

Now is the time. Get rid of whatever you have not used in the last two years or more. Check your expiration labels on food and spices, too. Ease up your space so you have room for everything important in your kitchen.

Include in it who will perform the various jobs and what materials will be needed to complete it. Make sure you are ahead of the project in your planning stages. Decisions, decisions and more decisions will need to be made. It is better to have them made before you start rather than waiting to make them as you go. It will slow you down and cost you more.

Knowing what to expect and preparing for it can make the entire remodeling experience less overwhelming and even turn it into a fun and exciting experience.

Frances rocks!

Laura Smart
Health Smart

Each month, as I prepare to write this column, I gather all of the health articles I've read during the previous month.

I'm very aware of weight loss scams, which are ubiquitous. Please beware of statements such as, "I lost nine pounds in a week by taking this pill." Also, you may be watching TV when a movie star appears advertising how she got "ripped" simply by drinking this "magic potion."

In just one click, or by sending a check or credit card number in the mail, you, too, can be the next victim of the latest weight loss scam. Don't be gullible.

Ask who owns the company and how long they have owned it. Ask where the product is produced and processed. For example, vitamins: Are they hot compressed or cold? What is the ORAC value?

News flash, there is no secret ingredient to help you lose weight without participating in aerobic exercise at a minimum of three times a week.

This brings me to the topic of this column: Frances, our beloved aerobics instructor at Meerscheidt Recreation Center. Yes, Frances has quite a dedicated following of health conscious locals. Frances teaches an aerobic class from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Fridays. What makes her class so unique is she has geared it to all ages and both genders.

The participants can range in age from 20 to 81 – I know there is at least one man who is 81.

The majority of participants are females; however, there are some ever faithful husbands and singles who attend regularly. The music is very diverse, including Zumba rhythms, country, hip-hop, rock 'n' roll, island music and soothing cool down sounds for the floor mat and weight work during the last 20 minutes of the class.

Frances obviously listens to her followers because when we ask for something, we get it. She demonstrates a "high and low impact" move so each individual can choose their own level of intensity. I, as do others, wear weighted gloves during the aerobic portion and then strap on ankle weights during the floor mat workout. I personally have to sweat in order to feel I've achieved my maximum aerobic heart rate. According to Dr. Oz, "The best way to improve heart function is to sweat."

Frances has us count our heart rate at least three times during each class and determine if we are in range for our age based on a chart.

Another wonderful benefit is the charge for the class is $2 for those under 55 years old, and only $1 for those older than 55 who have obtained a pass card from the Munson Senior Center.

We're encouraged to hydrate often and to "keep moving." I think a lot of people don't realize that they need to keep their heart rate up for 30 minutes and the moment they stop moving, their heart rate diminishes.

Battling eating disorders

Understanding the illness, seeking treatment

By Lorena Sanchez

Las Cruces Bulletin

Unhealthy body expectations can have a serious effect on a person's mental and physical state.

Triggers

"Two factors drive eating disorders," said Marlin Hoover, behavioral science faculty member in the Southern New Mexico Family Medicine Residency program. "The first is what is expected in the way of thinness in our culture. The second is body image."

Because societal expectations are unhealthy, Hoover said, there is an unusually large number of people with eating disorders.

"Body image is much more unrealistic for women than men," Hoover said. Another factor, said Judy Kolish, reg-

Another factor, said Judy Kolish, registered and licensed dietician for Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Mexico, that contributes to eating disorders is family. Family can have a big impact on a child's relationship with food and body image.

"If family members criticize a child's weight, have an eating disorder themselves, put a lot of emphasis on looks or are critical of their own body (they)can trigger it," Kolish said.
"It's important that we teach our children to have a healthy relationship with food, and that starts at home."

Hoover also said perfectionism is a trait that can fuel an eating disorder, typically anorexia. "Unfortunately, because of those perfectionist tendencies, those who develop an eating disorder have a very difficult time admitting they have a problem," Hoover said.

"In general, bulimia is easier to treat," Harper said. "The perfectionist qualities aren't as intense. With bulimia, weight loss isn't always as dramatic."

One distinction Hoover makes is those with anorexia tend to be more unrealistic about their size.

"With bulimia, people are a little more realistic but reject it," he said.

One example Hoover gives of this behavior is when people with anorexia or bulimia are asked to draw their silhouette. When presented with the outline of their actual body and asked to draw their silhouette again those with bulimia will adjust the size, those with anorexia do not – still viewing themselves as larger than they are.

There are two widely recognized eating disorders: anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa.

To achieve their version of an ideal body people with eating disorders typically employ two strategies: starving or eating and throwing up, which characterize each disorder, Hoover

> People with anorexia typically starve themselves and those with bulimia binge and purge, although some behaviors can overlap, said Dr. Eugene Sun, vice president and chief medical officer for Blue Cross Blue Shield of New Mexico.

"People with these disorders have a different image of themselves," Sun said. "People with anorexia don't eat enough. They don't get enough nutrition. Those with bulimia overeat, they binge, and romit."

Clinic offers diabetes class

Management is key to living with illness

By Lorena Sanchez

Las Cruces Bulletin

When Las Palmas LifeCare Center satellite clinic opened about a month ago at 1165 Commerce Drive, it was designed as a resource for Las Crucens traveling to El Paso to receive diabetes education offered at its primary wellness center.

Although the clinic is smaller than the wellness center in El Paso, Clinical Director Lettie Van Osten and manager Chris Estrada recognized a need for their services in Las Cruces.

"My program began in El Paso 20 years ago," Van Osten said. "Over the course of the years we've seen a lot of patients from Las Cruces."

The clinic is introducing itself to Las Cruces in a small way by offering seminars and classes on diabetes management and working its way up to include MAKOplasty treatment and bariatric surgery information.

Seminars are free to attend and are offered once a month from now until December. The next seminar, "Living Well with Diabetes," will

Affordable Care Act panel set for May

New Mexico State University College of Health and Social Services in conjunction with major sponsors Con Alma Health Foundation and SoAHEC is hosting its first Healthcare Symposium: Understanding the Affordable Care

The symposium is free and will be held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday, May 1, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

The symposium will break down the 2,000-page document and offer insight into how the ACA will affect the local community.

A continental breakfast and complimentary lunch will be served. Early registration is required to ensure meals are provided to those in attendance. Continuing education credits will be given to medical professionals who attend.

For more information or to register, call 646-3526 or Joy Mynatt at 646-5061.

Workshop for those caring for Alzheimer's patients

The New Mexico State University Southern Area Health Education Center will host "Caring with Respect," a program designed for Spanish-speaking families and caregivers tending to a family member with Alzheimer's disease. The workshop will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. Thurday and Friday April 11-12, at the Southern Area Health Education Center, 4003 Geothermal Drive.

The classes will provide a basic understanding of the necessary skills and attitudes to manage the needs and challenges of a person with Alzheimer's disease. Learn about this disease and its stages, practical information to help your loved ones, and how to understand difficult behavior that may be exhibited by the person with Alzheimer's. Learn how to take care of yourself as well as your loved ones and how to share experiences while affirming those experiences through a variety of support and resources. The program is sponsored by the Association of Alzheimer's in Albuquerque.

To register, contact Claudia Leyva, program facilitator, at 646-3061 or at cleyva@nmsu.edu. Registration for the workshop will close at 5 p.m. Wednesday, April 9.

Eating

Malnutrition, typical in those with anorexia, can cause serious health problems, including thinning bones, depletion of muscle, anemia, heart failure, osteoporosis, damage to the heart, brain and other organs.

Those with bulimia can experience similar complications as well as scarring of the throat from vomiting, erosion of the tooth enamel, stained teeth, mineral or electrolyte imbalance and low levels of sodium and potassium, which can cause heart issues, Sun said.

Another symptom of the disorder is brown finger tips, which is easy to look for if a parent or loved one is concerned, Harper said.

Although it isn't always easy to see the signs of an eating disorder other than dramatic weight loss, which is more typical with anorexia than bulimia, there are also behaviors to watch for.

"How preoccupied someone is with eating," Kolish said.

"Pushing food around the plate, obsessively counting calories or weighing food and excessive exercise are some behaviors. If a female has missed her period, at least three times in a row, is seen in people who are severely restricting their food intake."

Eating disorder behaviors in men

Although eating disorders usually began in pre-teen and teen years, rates are growing among other age groups.

"It's not just young girls affected by eating disorders, but older women and men," Kolish said.

Primarily seen in females, eating disorders can also affect

Details

Eating Disorder Statistics

- Almost 50 percent of people with eating disorders meet the criteria for depression.
- Only 1-in-10 men and women with eating disorders receive treatment. Only 35 percent of people who receive treatment for eating disorders get treatment at a specialized facility for eating disorders.
- Up to 24 million people of all ages and genders suffer from an eating disorder (anorexia, bulimia and binge eating disorder) in the U.S.
- Eating disorders have the - highest mortality rate of any mental illness.

- Anorexia is the third most common chronic illness among adolescents.
- Ninety-five percent of those who have eating disorders are between the ages of 12 and 25.
- The mortality rate associated with anorexia is 12 times higher than the death rate associated with all causes of death for females 15 to 24 years old.
- More than one-half of teenage girls and nearly one-third of teenage boys use unhealthy weight control behaviors such as skipping meals, fasting, smoking cigarettes, vomiting and taking laxatives.

- Men are less likely to seek treatment for eating disorders because of the perception that they are "woman's diseases."
- Among gay men, nearly 14 percent appeared to suffer from bulimia and more than 20 percent appeared to be anorexic.
- Women are more likely than men to develop an eating disorder. Only an estimated 5 to 15 percent of people with anorexia or bulimia are male.

men. The behaviors in both genders are typically similar with a few exceptions.

Daubney Harper, a post doctoral resident psychologist said eating disorders do occur among men and are most common in gay men.

"Males exhibit the same behaviors, but they have typically have the opposite body image," Sun said. "Muscle dysmorphia is thinking you do not have enough body weight and muscle mass, eat a lot and try to build muscle through supplements or metabolizers."

Treatment

"Most people I see don't come in seeking treatment for an eating disorder – it's typically anxiety or depression and the behaviors come out during conversation," Harper said.

Those with bulimia are prone to depression and those with anorexia are prone to anxiety, she added.

If a clinic specializing in eating disorders is not available nearby, Sun said a good place to start is with a primary care physician.

"PCPs know a lot and know who to go to help for with a specific issue," he said. Kolish recommends seeking out a psychotherapist that specializes in eating disorders.

"Treatment really does involve a team approach," she said. "It starts with finding the right therapist, because they can evaluate what a person needs. Sometimes it's more intense, in patient treatment and other times it's outpatient treatment."

"People can overcome their eating disorder and achieve a healthy lifestyle, it happens all the time," Harper said.

be held from 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 17, and provide information on the class on diabetes management.

"The classes aren't free, but Medicaid and Medicare covers it and any other type of insurance should cover the classes as well," Van Osten said.

Because the classes aren't free, it is important to attend the seminar to ensure each participant gets what they need so their insurance can cover the expense.

The seminars and courses are offered in English and Spanish to better serve the community.

"We've done our research and there are certain services we provide that people in Las Cruces don't get," Estrada said

The classes are ADA recognized and guidelines are followed to ensure consistency, said Van Osten.

Van Osten, who teaches the classes, said it is important to offer this resource because diabetes is a huge problem throughout the country and is hoping to provide men and women with a comprehensive program.

The class is eight hours and broken up into two sections.

The first four hours of the class will cover meal planning. Attendees will meet with a registered dietician and learn the importance of eating well to manage diabetes and why portion sizes and carbohydrates are an important part of a healthy diet.

The second half of the class will address the questions: What is diabetes? What in the body has changed? It will touch on what happens when the illness is managed correctly and what happens when it is not. Blood sugar levels, how medications work, knowing if a doctor is performing the appropriate tests, stress and proper foot care all tie in with diabetes management.

"We set goals," Van Osten said. "One reason people come in is not only for the education, but for motivation and to inspire change."

Although the class is only for one day, Van Osten said a three-month follow up with those who attend is conducted to ensure each attendee is on the right path or determine if they are feeling overwhelmed and in need of further support.

Ultimately, the focus of the clinic and its resources is the patient.

"It is important to attend to achieve a higher quality of life," Van Osten said.

BBBS readies for bowling event

Fundraiser helps kids in the community

Bulletin Staff Report

As Big Brothers Big Sisters of Southwestern New Mexico (BBBS) gears up for its annual Bowl for Kids' Sake fundraiser, the donor-funded volunteer-supported agency reminds the community that it needs funding as well as volunteers.

Each year, for more than two decades, Bowl For Kids' Sake has supported BBBS mentoring programs. The premiere fundraiser, held this year on Sunday, April 7, at Ten Pin Alley, 1201 E. Amador Ave., provides a way for mentors and their friends and families, as well as caring people who might not have time to mentor, to support BBBS. There is still space available for teams who are interested in participating. Registration is $500 for a team of five people.

"This is a fun event," said Stacie Allen, CEO of BBBS of Southwestern New Mexico. "Our matches help host the event. Those who attend will see and meet the Bigs and Littles they are supporting."

BBBS is part of the largest network of volunteer mentors of youth, relies on funding to carefully match volunteers with children and provide ongoing support to sustain long-term, one-to-one mentoring friendships.

The event includes bowling, prizes for the teams who raise the most money. There will also be music and a silent auction. The event is open to the community. Registration is required for those interested in bowling at the event.

"It's one of our largest annual fundraisers," Allen said. "The money raised stays in the community to support our local children. We currently have 158 active matches and so many more children that need to be served."

Independent studies find Littles are more likely to be successful in school, avoid violent, harmful and illegal behaviors and activities, and have strong relationships with their families and others

"Our agency is dedicated to working with children and providing positive role models," Allen said.

Children served through BBBS are primarily those of single, low-income or incarcerated parents. The event is also meant to educate the community on the importance of BBBS and provide information on ways to volunteer or utilize individual talents to help the organization.

"Bowl for Kids' Sake is a very significant event that generates a lot of excitement about Big Brothers Big Sisters," Allen said. "We are challenging the community, individuals and companies around the area to begin impacting children's lives by becoming a sponsor or creating a team. With help from the community we can achieve our goal of $30,000 enabling us to serve more children in Doña Ana County."

For more information on how your business can become a sponsor and to create a team please contact BBBS 523-9530 or email stacie.christiano@bbbsofswnm.org

To ask: Whence came the teaching on resurrection?

Morality thought about during the Easter season

Gabriel Rochelle Tales from the Cassock

Christians annually celebrate the resurrection of Christ during the festival known as Easter. For some Christians, the resurrection of Christ is a surety; for others, a hope; and for some, a puzzle.

There may be people who remain in church despite their disbelief in the whole idea. For many, the festival has become a celebration of spring with its renewal of greenery and flowers. But let us explore the idea of resurrection itself, embraced as it is not only by Christians, but also by many Jews and Muslims.

Where does the idea come from? Unlike animals and stones – or so we think – human beings are able to reflect on their experience. Everyone experiences the deaths of those close to them, which indicates to us that we also are mortal though most of us do not take the fact into consideration until later in life.

Look at how many people put off making a last will and testament until they have gray hair and a halting step. Death is a puzzle, and one of the ways philosopher and peasant alike have come to grips with it is by projecting the idea of immortality as a continuation of life.

Greeks and Romans believed, more or less, in a simple continuity of life beyond death with or without the folderol of the Egyptians with their elaborate culture of the dead. The ancient Hebrews, however, who are our ancestors in the faith, did not believe in immortality. At best there was sheol, a shadow land similar to a root cellar for the dead, but not immortality as most people would think of it.

Over the centuries, before the time of Jesus, those ancient Hebrews began to reason that, as the author of all life, God could sustain life even beyond the grave. Gradually, the idea of resurrection grew - not exactly the same thing as the immortality of the soul, but including life beyond this life in some way.

Resurrection is pure miracle: Only God can make this happen, so any continuity of life beyond the grave – call it soul, or what you will – is wholly dependent on God's love. No inherent immortality comes with being born; that's not part of the deal. But God could make it happen.

Part of this understanding is that resurrection is corporate; as we are interrelated to one another in this life, so God will raise us up as a community. We are all in this together; we are bound together in life and in death. The famous chapter from Ezekiel that is the basis for the well-known African-American spiritual, "Dry Bones," is the earliest picture of this corporate new

In the last centuries before Jesus, belief in resurrection was ultimately linked to God's justice for an unjust world, God's way to right the wrongs suffered in this life.

Jesus of Nazareth suffers the cruelest death imaginable. He does not escape injustice in this life, nor does he escape suffering or indignities; all are horrifically present in his life.

The resurrection serves as vindication for his cause, his ministry, his words and his person. The resurrection renews our hope toward justice in an unjust world. Only so can the cross be transformed from an implement of destruction to a source

Jesus is among the just people whom God vindicates with life eternal; he is, in fact, "the first born from the dead," as the Apostle Paul wrote in his resurrection manifesto. This hope fueled movements for freedom and liberation over centuries.

Those who follow in Jesus' way of love and service have confidence that God will raise us up with him at the last day.

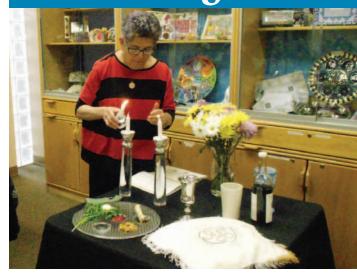

Father Gabriel Rochelle is pastor of St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission and professor of Biblical studies at St. Sophia Orthodox Seminary, South Bound Brook, N.J. For more information, visit www.stanthonvlc.org.

Adults should supervise hand washing for young children.

- Don't snuggle or kiss baby birds.
- Don't touch your mouth, or eat or drink around live baby poultry.
- Don't let baby birds inside the house or in areas where food or drink is prepared, served or stored, such as kitchens, dining rooms, pantries and outdoor patios
- Don't clean any equipment or materials associated with raising or caring for live poultry (such as cages, feed and water containers) in the house.
- Do not let children younger than 5 years old touch chicks, ducklings or other live poultry.

Visit your physician if you experience abdominal pain, fever and/or diarrhea.

'Handle with care,' says DOH, Livestock Board

The New Mexico Department of Health and the New Mexico Livestock Board are warning families that plan to give baby chicks or other baby birds to their children this Easter to use extreme caution in order to avoid salmonella infection.

In the last seven years, New Mexico has had 19 human cases of salmonella related to baby chicks/ducklings. Many of the cases were in young children.

'Salmonella is often present in the droppings of chicks and other baby birds, even though the animals themselves usually won't show signs of illness," said Department of Health Secretary Retta Ward. "That makes it easy for people to let their guard down, and that's when they run the risk of getting salmonella.'

Early symptoms of salmonella in people include fever, diarrhea and abdominal pain. These symptoms develop one to three days after exposure to baby chicks and their droppings. Other symptoms might include nausea, chills or headaches.

"Salmonella infection can occur when parents keep the baby birds inside the house and allow their small children to handle and snuggle with them," said Paul Ettestad, state public health veterinarian at the Department of Health. "Other cases were brought on when parents didn't wash their hands properly after handling the birds, indirectly giving the infection to their children."

The department recommends that young and old people take the following preventive measures:

Wash your hands thoroughly with soap and water immediately after touching live baby birds or anything in the area where they live and roam. Use hand sanitizer if soap and water are not readily available.
