Huerta sent to NMSU for assignments

Burke to serve as interim president

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

In a letter sent to faculty and staff by email Tuesday, June 4, New Mexico State University President Garrey Carruthers announced a change in leadership at Doña Ana Community College, with Margie Huerta transferred to the NMSU president's office and an interim DACC president named.

HUERTA

Andy Burke, DACC's vice president for business and finance, is now the college's interim president and chief executive officer. Huerta will become a special assistant to Carruthers, who said her main focus will be improving articulation issues – a long-standing problem at NMSU that causes students transferring in from a community college to lose a lot of credits.

BURKE

Huerta, who has been DACC's president since 2004, has been under intense criticism over the nursing program's loss of accreditation last year. The accreditation loss forced most of the students in the program to transfer to NMSU's bachelor's degree program, which takes two more years of study than the associate degree at DACC. NMSU is covering the costs of their classes.

Those angered by the accreditation loss called for Huerta's removal, saying no one has been held accountable for the accreditation blunder, with students in the program being the only ones to suffer. They questioned whether the DACC program could regain accreditation with

Record enchilada to return to TWEF

Estrada to bring back feat with help from Martinez

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

Last year was the first time since 1980 Roberto Estrada didn't make the Guinness Book of World Records largest flat enchilada, but mark Sept. 29 on your calendar for the return of the extreme cooking feat to The Whole Enchilada Fiesta (TWEF).

At a press conference Friday, May 31, at Roberto's Mexican Food restaurant, TWEF officials announced Estrada will once again make the three-layer mammoth enchilada at this year's fiesta. When Estrada had to scratch making the record enchilada last year because state officials raised concerns about the safety of his equipment, a fund was set up at Citizens Bank to begin collecting donations.

Originally, Estrada estimated it would cost about $40,000 to replace the equipment. Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima said Gov. Susana Martinez intervened and was able to get state officials to require less stringent equipment improvements, so that estimate is now between $7,000 and $8,000. According to TWEF organizers, the Roberto's Equipment Fund has

Council increases park impact fees

Split vote OKs most costly option

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

In a split 4-3 vote Monday, June 3, the Las Cruces City Council approved raising the park impact fee from $800 per new home to $2,600 per dwelling unit for developments of 3 or more acres.

Other options before the council were raising the park impact fee to $1,300 per dwelling unit without a "level of service" minimum requirement for development size, leaving it at $800, putting the increase on hold for more negotiations or eliminating the impact fee.

The problem with the city's park impact fee is that it really doesn't generate enough money to create parks close to the neighborhoods paying the fees – and never has, said Parks and Recreation Director Mark Johnston. When the park impact fee was first established in 1995, the council set it at $249 despite staff recommending a park impact fee of $2,300.

"The city has been behind the curve since the beginning," he said.

Councillor Nathan Small pushed for taking a couple more weeks to forge an agreement with developers and home builders, who said the increase would

Huerta still at the helm.

Huerta preempted the possibility of her firing after former NMSU President Barbara Couture resigned by announcing she would retire at the end of 2014. Huerta said she wanted to leave DACC with the national nursing accreditation restored.

Huerta's new task from Carruthers to improve class articulation between the community/branch colleges and main campus, however, is a situation she has tried to improve in the past, but found more receptiveness from other four-year institutions in the state. The articulation problem became a frequent topic for NMSU presidential finalists, with some of the candidates pointing to the university's system of four community colleges as an enrollment increasing strategy. The past couple of academic years, NMSU has seen a steady decline in enrollment.

In his letter, Carruthers said Huerta also will help with development opportunities. During the NMSU presidential search, improved donations and outreach to alumni also were frequent concerns raised.

In the interim ... again

DACC is currently holding a series of community meetings as it prepares to find a new president. Tuesday's announcement does not impact the current search process for the next DACC president, Carruthers said in his letter.

The new interim DACC president has served in various positions at the college for nearly 30 years, including interim CEO from 1997-99. Burke originally started as an accountant at DACC in 1984. He has a master's degree in accounting and a bachelor's in business administration from NMSU. He is also working toward a Ph.D. in educational administration from NMSU.

"I've known Andy Burke for most of his life. He's known for being an outstanding manager and fiscal agent for DACC," Carruthers said in his letter. "At this time, it's important for someone with his experience to focus on the enterprise."

In a press release issued by NMSU, Burke said he agreed to stepping back into the interim president role as a way to give back to the community he grew up in.

"Through the years, there has been tremendous growth at DACC," Burke said. "When I started, we had 500 students. We now have more than 9,000."

Carruthers gave credit to Huerta for the college's growth. DACC is the fourth largest higher-education institution in New Mexico. Since 2004, it has become one of the fastest growing community colleges in the nation, Carruthers said. During Huerta's time as president, DACC added satellite campuses in Gadsden, Chaparral, Hatch and built the East Mesa campus.

"I thank Dr. Huerta for her long service to DACC," Carruthers said. "She also has strong connections to the community, which will be helpful in her new role."

make homes more expensive in a still fragile market.

"We have to raise the level of service," Small said. "But as far as determining what that level of service should be, we're not there yet."

Steve Chavira, managing director of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association, agreed with Small that there should have been more discussion about what kind of parks the city wants.

Builder Kim Hakes, however, said he felt the fee could be eliminated through stronger subdivision requirements because the private sector can build parks more cheaply than the city government.

In response to criticism about the lack of parks in many of the newer subdivisions, Hakes said the housing market today is less frantic and developers are more balanced in seeing good parks as an amenities that helps sell homes.

Eddie Binns, a longtime local developer, agreed, adding that the city doesn't have a good reputation for putting the money collected back into the neighborhoods that paid the fees.

But a majority of city councillors said increasing the park impact fee had been debated for years. Mayor Pro Tem Sharon Thomas said a substantial park impact fee would encourage more developers to opt for offering parks and trails in return for the city waiving the fee.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he thought the larger fee was too much of an increase and that a consultant to the city had recommended the lower increase.

Councillor Gill Sorg said the problem with not raising the park impact fee was the lack of a "credible alternative." All sections of the city deserve equal service, but the reality is a lot of unevenness about the accessibility to parks in different neighborhoods, Sorg said.

more than $4,400 in the bank.

"It looks like the huge enchilada is back," Miyagishima said.

Making the world's largest enchilada is an event that many people identify with Las Cruces, he said.

"Wherever I go, people ask me about The Whole Enchilada Fiesta – specifically about the huge enchilada," Miyagishima said.

Last year, Estrada cooked up enchiladas for the second "Fire in the Whole" Enchilada Eating Competition. Doubling down, so to speak, Estrada will continue cooking enchiladas for the eating contest, along with making the record enchilada.

Erlinda Portillo, a member of the TWEF organizing committee, said it was important to get the word out about returning the world-record enchilada and about the fiesta in general, because there were rumors in the community that TWEF would be called off.

That's not the case, Portillo said, adding TWEF is coming back stronger with community fundraising for the weekend celebration that draws about 50,000 each year.

Last year, rain during the outdoor fiesta did dampen sales, but that doesn't mean the fiesta is washed up, she said.

"In fact, the board plans to make TWEF bigger and better this year," said John Vasquez of US Bank.

TWEF's theme this year will be "Community and Culture," with a Miss TWEF and Miss Teen TWEF pageant added to the festivities with the help of Curtis Rosemond, who has years of pageant experience.

Other regular TWEF features – a parade, contests such as huachas, a 5K run and vendors – will be held during the fiesta, which began as a "block party for the city" 34 years ago.

Students get the job done Young people provide impressive examples

News flash: Life isn't fair. We all would like it to be fair. Many people have devoted their lives, vocations and avocations to promoting fairness in one sense or another. Still, prejudice, cronyism and just plain bad luck and timing continue to foil many a great effort. The following quote has been attributed to about a thousand people, from inventor Thomas Edison to golfer Gary Player, but Thomas Jefferson may have the earliest claim: "The harder I work, the luckier I get." I had that thought recently when I was looking at the Las Cruces Bulletin's High School Class of 2013 publication. In the Mesilla Valley Christian Schools section, I found some jaw-dropping information about some hard-working and lucky young Las Cruces. MVCS grad Devon Tourtillott earned a New Mexico State University Honors Excel scholarship worth $25,000. He plans to use that to study science en route to medical school and a career as a pediatrician.

Rachelle Holdridge plans to turn down $58,000 in scholarships from Abilene Christian University and a $64,000 scholarship to Nazarene University to follow her dream of going to Pepperdine (where she has $9,000 in grants) and majoring in business or marketing.

Emily Biad will take a $48,000 scholarship to Creighton University to study nursing. James Adam Rivera earned an $88,000 scholarship to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and will major in aerospace engineering.

If, in the next Las Cruces wind gust, you see little bits of gray, fleshy matter drifting by, those are parts of my mind that was just blown away by these scholarship numbers. And that's just scratching the surface.

Similar scholarship stories are coming out of Las Cruces, Mayfield, Oñate, Santa Teresa, Hatch Valley and Gadsden high schools. The same will be true next year when Centennial High School has its first graduates.

These success stories go beyond high school. Such a case is John Kear, a 2009 Mayfield alum who just graduated with highest distinction from Duke University and has been accepted into the master's program at the University of Germany. There are many more like Kear who have gone from high school in Las Cruces to do great things in college. And many have found their success in the military.

These things don't happen just by luck. Even these young people, despite their great efforts and the success they've already achieved, will find at some point life is not fair.

Remember, Doña Ana County remains one of the poorest in the nation, and many of our young people face an uphill struggle with two strikes against them. Not fair, and many of them are not able to overcome. Our county's dropout rate, while improving significantly, still hovers near 40 percent.

Today, though, there are more opportunities than ever for students to find a path to success. We have alternative high schools such as San Andres, Las Montañas and Alma d' Arte. We have the amazing success of the Arrowhead Park Early College High School, which to date has still seen no dropouts.

Doña Ana Community College gears much of its efforts to training locals to join the work force. And, of course, we have NMSU, whose presence is felt from its looming campus down to dual-credit courses in the high schools.

There are hundreds of great local success stories, too, of young people who worked hard on their own or in a family business and now are successful business people and contributors.

No one ever said it would be easy and no one ever said it would be fair. Well, they may have, but they were wrong.

We adults and parents always hope to be good role models for young people, especially our children.

There's an impressive new generation of young people, however, and we could learn a thing or two from them.

Letters to the Editor

Sincere thanks

On behalf of the board of trustees of Casa de Peregrinos Emergency Food Program, I would like to like to express my sincere thanks to the Health Comm 480 class of Dr. Ann Hubbell at New Mexico State University for their hard work on our in-service learning project, and especially Danny Gamboa and his family at Casa de Autos for their generous donation of a 2004 Silverado pickup truck. It has already expanded our ability to transport food for the hungry here in Doña Ana County.

We also would like to thank postal carriers and support staff at the United States Postal Service here in Las Cruces for a very successful food drive. We received more than 3,000 pounds of food.

We are forever in your debt and hope you know how much we appreciate your generosity.

Tea party volunteers

Recent Bulletin photos of tea party volunteers remind me that they deserve all the charity they can get, IRS or otherwise.

Friends I know who volunteer to help the homeless, children in peril and animals in distress get benefits from other sources: a toothless but heartfelt thank you, a hug from a rescued child and a sloppy kiss from a stray mutt, finally fed.

Principal beneficiaries of tea party volunteer efforts, by contrast, occupy gated and guarded precincts of Fort Myers, Fla., Palm Springs and Palm Desert, Calif., and gilded penthouses on Park Avenue, N.Y.

After all, freedom from regulations and environmental controls, cheap and increasingly desperate labor and science for sale to the highest bidder always benefit those with the most capital to play with.

Sadly however, the above beneficiaries believe themselves entitled to their wealth anyway, so have no need to thank others for their generous volunteer efforts.

Torch run a success

Members of the Law Enforcement Torch Run, which consists of athletes, Special Olympics children and adults with intellectual difficulties, wish to thank the many individuals, organizations and businesses for their wonderful support.

Thanks also to Derry Gerbert of Moose Club No. 2081 for their bronze sponsorship of $1,500 and muchas gracias to the Elks Club No. 1119 which donated $1,000.

Republicans eye 2014 elections

Jay Miller
Inside the Capitol

Recently we talked about negative GOP campaigning directed against two Democrats, one not even an announced candidate yet.

We also mentioned that the announced Democratic candidate, Hector Balderas for attorney general, doesn't even have a Republican opponent yet. It is a woeful commentary on the American political system that negative campaigning now starts first.

Sometimes the GOP isn't able to fill out a slate for statewide offices. This year, I'm guessing it will. With all the money that is being made available by court decisions, it is enough to attract candidates into every race.

So, the movement to find some GOP candidates is beginning to take shape. Much of this information comes from a recent Joe Monahan blog.

The only definite Republican candidates for next year's elections appear to be the incumbents: Rep. Steve Pearce in the 2nd Congressional District, Gov. Susana Martinez, Lt. Gov. John Sanchez and Secretary of State Dianna Duran.

Very likely, the GOP will field a candidate in the 3rd Congressional District, but with little to no hope of winning. Likewise, Democrats will field a candidate against Pearce with slim hopes, although Democrats are on the increase in that district.

Excitement could break out in the lieutenant governor's race. Sanchez has never been in the Martinez camp of the Republican Party. Past governors and lieutenant governors seldom have fared well. Full-time lieutenant governors really just get in the way. The position never was meant to be full time.

But Sanchez is making the most of what he has to deal with, traveling the state as an unofficial ombudsman while forging political alliances everywhere.

There has been talk of the governor cutting him loose and backing another candidate in next year's primary. Back in 1994, Diane Denish talked of taking on Lt. Gov. Casey Luna, who had been giving Gov. Bruce King much grief. Luna turned the tables by running against King in the primary and perhaps ruining King's chances for another term.

Too many mine fields are in the path of switching lieutenant governors. Besides, as we've said, they just get in the way.

U.S. Sen. Tom Udall will draw opposition, maybe Allan Weh. He has been very active since his 2010 GOP primary loss to Martinez. Udall has been hard to beat, so there may not be many seeking to knock him off.

The GOP will put up a good battle for the 1st Congressional District slot won by Michelle Lujan Grisham last November. Republicans have held the seat much longer than Democrats. So far, Simon Kubiak, an Albuquerque businessman is the only name we have heard mentioned.

Republicans always make a strong bid for attorney general. Clovis District Attorney Matt Chandler made a good bid in 2010 and is expected to get back into the race this time. He is close to Martinez and may see significant backing from her.

The state treasurer's office seems to be an enticing position for Democrats this year. On the Republican side, state Taxation and Revenue Director Demesia Padilla is getting the most mention. She ran for the office before. She could be stronger this time because of support of Martinez.

If Padilla were to win, she would be the third statewide office holder who is female, Hispanic and a Republican. Duran also is in the group. U.S. Rep. Michelle Lujan Grisham is a Democrat, but she also adds to the female Hispanic power in the state.

The state Land Office is very important to ranchers and oil and gas interests. Democratic incumbent Ray Powell has won three non-consecutive terms and always is a strong vote gatherer, but Republicans have often won the seat and will have big financial backing in this election.

The GOP is looking at current Public Regulation Commissioner Patrick Lyons to return to the Land Office spot he held twice before. House Republican Whip Nate Gentry also is a possibility.

Jay Miller may be contacted at insidethecapitol@hotmail.com.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Missing my neighbors

I have neighbors I haven't visited for years. They were so good to me growing up. They raised walnuts.

They are part of the reason I moved back to Arizona. English was not their first language. I learned theirs and encouraged my children to do the same. Then, several years ago, an uncle moved in with them. He was a bully and intimidated them. He discouraged them from having visitors. They became afraid, but there was nothing they could do.

Every night the uncle would steal their walnuts, drive into the big city and sell them. He still does. My heart aches for my neighbors, but we no longer talk. Their windows are boarded up and "no trespassing" signs are in their front yard.

I have spoken with the police, the Border Patrol and the politicians but there is little they can do. A sadness has fallen over our whole neighborhood.

My neighbor is the country of Mexico.

I miss it. Living along the border today is like living on the Korean DMZ or the Berlin Wall; the drug cartels rule. They are as powerful as the cartels that ruled Columbia in the '90s. The number of murders attributed to them now approaches 50,000. Phoenix is second only to Mexico City as the kidnapping capital of the world.

The real victims are the trabajadores, the workers on both sides of the border, legal and illegal, who come looking for work. The risks they take to enter the U.S. are frightening, and yet they continue to come by the hundreds of thousands every year.

They are like a school of fish swimming through a channel full of sharks. Their continuous march north only demonstrates our stubborn denial of the obvious, "We want them and we can't stop them."

Not to mention the biggest elephant in the room, we desperately need their drugs. We are willing to turn a blind eye to the murderous carnage, the violation and inhumanity that defines our border, as long as we can feed our voracious addictions. The cartels are willing to sacrifice their own lives and those of the trabajadores to supply our endless craving.

They do their job so well - you can ask any user you know, he can direct you right to a dealer. These precious drugs have become the Mexican peon's version of conflict diamonds, ivory trade and bootleg whiskey. I see no end.

I think about my neighbors, their walnuts and the times we used to visit ... but, whataya gonna do?

How do you say walnut in Spanish?

Work hard to become and stay employed

Message to jobless: time to adopt a second plan

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

These are tough times for some American citizens.

Jobs are harder to get for many Americans than they were a few years ago. The economy has turned somewhat sour. Yet, there are other Americans who find this the best of times. They are making money and building a business. Go figure. They have gone against the tide of everyone else and done well despite the market.

In the midst of all the economic bad news, some Americans are starting businesses that are thriving. They are taking a chance and working very hard. Some are hitting the jackpot. Yes, others may be slipping down the porcelain convenience. It is capitalism where those who satisfy the customers best usually do the best in business.

That needs to be the American motto: You can still do well in America. And you can. There are important factors, which include being business smart, working hard and having some luck.

Does luck play a part? Yes, especially if you equate luck with smarts and hard work. There is a correlation, but, as my stats professor drummed into our minds, correlation does not infer causation.

Advice is like lice, better kept to oneself. But I must offer this advice to those who are unemployed and have been for an extended time. It seems to me I have spoken with a number of Americans in the past couple of years who seem to not know the game.

What is the game? To get and keep, a job there must be a fair trade between employer and employee. If either in this transaction are abused then something bad will happen to both.

What makes, and made, capitalism so powerful is that it runs on satisfied customers. If either party in the transaction is not satisfied, it is not capitalism; rather, it is something else.

In some forms of government the elite live wonderful lives and get to do what they want but the masses live lives of desperation. In theory, everyone in America can change jobs or move somewhere else. But many people are their own jailers.

I have worked jobs I did not like and was quite happy to leave. But I had those jobs rather than be unemployed. Yet I know several people who have been long-term unemployed, who are very talented, but would rather do without a job if it is not what they want. Relatives and friends enable this thinking.

My earliest lesson involved a paper route in Colorado Springs where I made the observation as a 12-year-old that putting the paper on the porch within easy reach of the front door made the customer much happier than if I threw it into a bush. Maybe someone said something to me or I could have thought of it. Regardless, I discovered that upon going to collect for the Gazette Telegraph I received several tips.

It started a lifetime of me thinking of making customers satisfied. At times, I have been better at it than at other times, but I have always been aware that if my customer and I both profit from a transaction then good things will happen for me. Likewise, any attempt to not satisfy the customer usually leads to disaster.

This is why government is problematic in a free society. In government, say the IRS, the mantra is do what we say or bad things will happen to you. There is not equal satisfaction. In the marketplace if I do not like the last transaction I may take my business somewhere else. But with government we are captive. In fact, some government leaders refer to us citizens as "giving units."

We need to whisper quietly to the millions of people who are long-term unemployed that it is time for a second plan. Maybe you will get back to that field someday, but sitting out of the job market, even if the government makes it relatively easy to do, is disastrous.

Everyone repeats that it is easier to get a job if you have a job. It is. If there is a four year gap, it is hard for me to take a chance on a potential worker.

Letter to the Editor

Group seeks accountability County leaders must be held responsible

Doña Ana County Electors Demanding Justice (DAC-EDJ), an ad-hoc committee that has slowly surfaced due to angry and hurt taxpayers, is actively seeking county wide organizational leadership roles and voter participation for the purpose of demanding accountability from our elected and appointed officials.

The countless taxpayers' sentiments, both in private and public discussions and much publicized in the Associated Press news media, reference the Stephen Slevin case, which is costing Doña Ana County taxpayers $15.5 million, and we continue to nationally and worldwide be perceived as ignorant, irresponsible and uncaring simple taxpayers.

The appearance may be justified, but what we do not know, may not be true, because we rely on the veracity of well compensated management to be truthful. Management let us down by allowing the torture of Stephen Slevin to occur and then engaging in a massive coverup, for almost two years. He almost died.

It is not sufficient that, due to the lack of proper supervision, management hindsight and "business as usual" attitude by our county commission and many others on the public trough, our dignity has been blemished as owners of the Doña Ana County Detention Center.

Now, the Doña Ana County Commission has demonstrated the appalling nerve to vote to tax us to try to make up for their ignorance.

Gross mismanagement, dereliction of duty and fraud all amounting to corruption, are being over abundantly costly to us, the taxpayers, sufficiently to motivate us to take this action. As registered voters, we must be at least willing to participate. It will not hurt and will not cost.

Federal Judge Martha Vasquez in her decision, factually addresses that Chris Barela, Doña Ana County administrator, is liable for $3 million. And not only is he still there, he recently received a salary increase to $95,000.

Sue Padilla, former assistant county manager and Chris Barela's immediate supervisor, is still there, and Karen Perez, who was the Doña Ana County Commission chairman from 2007-08, is also still there, conducting the cover up.

The other one was Brian Haines, former county manager, and he retired leaving them all holding the bag.

DAC-EDJ will very soon hold a "get united" forum for the purpose of county-wide notice to Doña Ana County taxpayers, that we need to demand accountability from our elected and appointed officials, to regain and redeem our respect and dignity for our own justice, as electors and proud proprietors of Doña Ana County.

An election for the taxes will come upon us in July. We must prepare.

For information on joining DAC-EDJ, call Joseph at 621-2673.

Rio Grande flowing, flat-raters get one day

Water began flowing again in the Rio Grande south of the Caballo Reservoir for downstream deliveries, including irrigation in the Mesilla Valley.

"The 2013 3.5 (acre-inch) allotment will not go far," the Elephant Butte Irrigation District informed its customers, "however, with communication, scheduling and delivery, it is EBID's goal to make water last as long and go as far as possible."

Farms began getting water Saturday, June 1. The last day for farmers to place their orders is Friday, June 21.

Saturday, June 8, is the one day all "flat-raters" will get their water allocation.

A flat-rate user owns less than 2 acres, typically a home that used to be a farm and still pays the water tax for rights to irrigation water.

- For the flat-raters, EBID recommends:
- Make sure your ditch is clean or don't expect to get your water.
 - If you are on a community ditch, coordinate and schedule with your neighbors so that you will be ready when the water becomes available, and can irrigate continuously to water all interested small tract users – and any farm rate irrigators on the ditch with orders in – then shut off.
 - Be ready to take water on short notice. If you are not ready, don't expect a second chance to receive water.
 - Be ready to irrigate at night. Flat rate schedule begins at midnight Friday, June 7, and ends at midnight Saturday.
 - Don't expect to water on Saturday, shut down for the night, and start up again on Sunday, either for individuals or community ditches.
 - Communicate closely with your ditchrider, neighbors on your ditch and your neighboring community ditches.

The Main Street Bistro & Alehouse, 139 N. Main St., has closed.

Signs at the restaurant and an email sent by owners Gary Ebert and Anne Marie Boardman said health problems have led to the decision to close the eatery.

"This decision is based in large part on the health issues I have experienced, which resulted in heart stent surgery earlier this year," Ebert reports in the note on the door and in the email. "I have not been able to devote the time and energy necessary for the successful operation of the Bistro; it is time to step aside."

Before the bistro opened late last year, the location was another restaurant that closed, La Iguana. Ebert is the owner of Zeffiro's Pizzeria Napoletana and Popular Bakery, which has been a successful restaurant Downtown, and Zeffiro's New York Pizzeria restaurant by New Mexico State University, both of which remain open.

Land use meetings set

Public meetings are under way in conjunction with the ongoing Joint Land Use Study (JLUS) for Fort Bliss, Holloman Air Force Base and White Sands Missile Range and surrounding communities.

The purpose of these meetings is to provide background to the public about the study and to gather public input as well as to share findings to date and gather input from residents on local issues, opportunities and priorities.

Meetings were conducted in Ruidoso, El Paso and Doña Ana County this week. The remainder of the scheduled meetings will be held in Socorro, Otero and Sierra counties.

The southern New Mexico/El Paso region is unique because of the natural, cultural, and recreational resources, as well as its training and testing environment.

The JLUS seeks to create a long-term planning partnership that balances and builds on these strengths by protecting the quality of life in local communities and enhancing the military missions associated with the three military installations.

Library lands grant

The New Mexico State University Library has been awarded a $3,125 grant from the United States Agricultural Information Network's Preservation and Digital Library Committee for Project Ceres, which will support the digitization of NMSU's Extension and Experiment Station publications.

"These publications, written from 1890 to the present, were created to help improve lives by sharing practical and research-based information in the areas of agriculture, home economics, mechanical arts and affiliated fields," said Elizabeth Titus, library dean.

CYFD starts summer food program

The Children, Youth and Families Department's (CYFD) Family Nutrition Bureau announced Monday, June 3, the start of the Summer Food Service Program throughout New Mexico, which will help address the gap in children's summertime nutritional needs. The Summer Food Service Program runs through Aug. 8.

The Summer Food Service Program is a federally funded program operated nationally by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The Summer Food Service Program provides nutritious meals to New Mexico's children during the summer months and is designed to provide children ages 18 years old and younger with the same high-quality meals they receive during the school year.

"Many children in our state have a difficult time accessing nutritious meals during the summer, especially if there is no Summer School provided in their community," said Family Nutrition Bureau Chief Cesar Uriarte. "CYFD's Summer Food Service Program provides children with over 600 meal sites where they can go and get a nutritious meal free of charge."

During last year's summer food service program, 1.8 million meals were served to children throughout the state of New Mexico. This year, CYFD's Family Nutrition Bureau expects that close to 2 million meals will be served to New Mexico children.

"It is very important that our children continue to have the opportunity to eat nutritious meals, even when school is not in session," said

CYFD Cabinet Secretary Yolanda Deines. "We encourage all New Mexico children to take part in this wonderful program and to take advantage of these free meals."

CYFD reimburses statewide sponsoring organizations (administering agencies) for the administration and service of meals at approved meal sites, when school is not in session. The meals are free and no registration is required.

For more information on the Summer Food Service Program or to get information on summer food service program locations in your area, call 800-EAT-COOL (800-328-2665) or visit www.cyfd.org.

Madrid Ave. Blue Star Mothers are those mothers who have children serving in the military, guard or reserve, or children who are honorably discharged veterans. The organization is a nonprofit, non-partisan group created to support each other and their children while promoting patriotism. Associate members include Blue Star Dads and other family members of active duty military personnel, and honorably discharged veterans. For more information, call Cynthia Clark at 649-9715.

American Legion Bingo

The American Legion Post 10, 1185 E Madrid Ave., holds bingo games at 6:30 p.m. each Wednesday and Saturday, with doors to the legion hall opening at 3 p.m. Food and sodas are available. Coverall blackout jackpot is $1,000 to a single winner.

For more information, call bingo management at 526-9139.

Survivor camp registration

Registration is currently being taken for the Lions Survivor Camp for deaf and hard of hearing children between the ages of 5 and 12.

The camp provides youth the opportunity to meet others like themselves and to interact with positive adult role models in a fun and safe environment.

Activities include swimming, indoor and outdoor games, rock wall climbing and various other sports. Campers will receive a complimentary T-shirt. The camp will be held June 17-21.

For registration information, call 646-4059.

Veterans appreciation dinner

El Caldito Soup Kitchen, 999 W. Amador Ave., will host a Veterans Appreciation Dinner Saturday, June 15. Veterans of all service branches and their spouses are invited.

A meet-and-greet social hour will begin at 1:30 p.m., and the Junior Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps from Oñate High School will present the colors at 2 p.m. A brisket dinner with all the trimmings will follow.

For more information, call Donna Wood at 525-8704 or the kitchen at 525-3831.

Golf tournament set for WNMU alumni

The Mesilla Valley Chapter of the Western New Mexico University Alumni Association will hold its first annual golf tournament Saturday, June 29, at the Sonoma Ranch Golf Course, with a four-man scramble/shotgun start at 8:30 a.m.

The cost is $125 per person or $500 for a team. The fees cover green fees, cart, lunch, beverage, a goodie bag and shirt. Deadline to register is June 15.

The association of WNMU alumni living in the Mesilla Valley also is seeking sponsorships from businesses or individuals, ranging from $50 for a hole sign sponsorship to $1,000 to be a tournament sponsor.

For more information, or to register, call Art Padilla at 644-6900, Max Padilla at 915-244-6315 or Abe Armendariz at 520-1000.

Volunteers sought for food bank deliveries to schools

Three Las Cruces schools are asking for volunteers to help unload large deliveries of food on several dates in June, July and August.

Thanks to a grant received by Roadrunner Food Bank of Las Cruces, up to 4,000 pounds of food will be delivered during the summer to Booker T. Washington and MacArthur elementary schools and Lynn Middle School.

Up to 10 volunteers are needed to help unload the food at each school. About 75 economically disadvantaged families will receive food at each site. Each family will receive 50 pounds of food per delivery, including fresh fruits and vegetables.

The times and dates are:

- 8 to 11 a.m. Wednesdays, June 19 and July 3, 17 and 31, at Booker T. Washington Elementary School, 755 E. Chestnut St.; and MacArthur Elementary School, 655 N. Fourth St.
- 8 to 11 a.m. Fridays, June 21, July 5 and 19, and Aug. 2, at Lynn Middle School, 950 S. Walnut St.

"The families who will benefit from these food deliveries include many children who are fed at our schools during the school year. Getting this extra food during the summer means many children will not go hungry," said Las Cruces Public Schools Nutrition Services Director Nancy Cathey. "We will be very grateful to anyone who can donate an hour or two to help us unload the food in June," she said.

For more information, call the Nutrition Services Department at 527-5993.

Football clinic set

The New Mexico State University football team will host a free kid's clinic for children ages 8 to 13, from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Friday, June 14, at the football practice field west of Aggie Memorial Stadium.

Check in will begin at 8:15 a.m. at the practice field south entrance. Parking is available in the gravel lot at the south side of the practice field along Wells Street. Parents or guardians can register their kids online by visiting www.nmstateports.com and clicking on the clinic banner. Registration ends Wednesday, June 12. Participants should dress in regular exercise apparel. Cleats and or football pads are not required. Water will be provided.

GOP women to meet

The Doña Ana County Federated Republican Women will meet at 11:30 a.m. Friday, June 28. The guest speaker will be New Mexico Federated Republican Women President Elaine Miller. Lunch is $10 and reservations are required by noon Monday, June 24.

For information and the meeting's location, call local President Caren Lulich at 373-0828.

Mounted Patrol seeks members

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department Mounted Patrol is seeking new members to participate in search and rescue operations throughout the county. The organization is an all-volunteer auxiliary extension of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department.

Each member must be 18 years old and pass an initial background check.

Capt. Bud Lulich, who leads the group, said horse teams and individuals who are interested in ATV operations are needed. The Mounted Patrol also is recruiting people interested in foot patrols during search and rescue missions.

"As a group, we participate in monthly training, often with local, state and federal law enforcement agencies," Lulich said. "It's a great opportunity for anyone interested in actively assisting first responders and law enforcement."

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department Mounted Patrol meets the first Monday of each month.

For more information, call Lulich at 636-5566.

Architecture camp in July

The pre-architecture program at Doña Ana Community College will offer its annual Architecture Discovery Camp July 8-19 at the East Mesa campus.

This two-week program is designed for middle and high school students interested in architecture and related fields. Student eligibility includes having completed sixth grade, and not yet graduated from high school.

Instruction is a joint effort provided by DACC professors, Texas Tech University professors, local architects and local government and business leaders.

Through lectures and hands-on exercises, students will learn about architecture past and present and gain skills in architectural drawing, computer and manual drafting, model crafting, 3-D modeling, design principles, structural principles, sustainable design and presentation techniques.

Highlights of the program include field trips to local sites of architectural interest, the school of architecture at the University of New Mexico and the studios of architect Antoine Predock, as well as a design competition with formal presentations, judging and prizes. Cost of the event is $75.

For more information, contact Luis Rios at lurios@nmsu.edu, 527-7747 or 528-7310.

Roundtable discussions set

The Roundtable Discussion Group meets from 9 to 10 a.m. Sundays in the sanctuary of the Unitarian Church, 2000 S. Solano Drive. Upcoming discussions include:

- June 9: Bill Soules: Reflections of a first-time state legislator. Soules will speak about the whirlwind of activity and the steep learning curve when New Mexicans arrive in Santa Fe as first time legislators
- June 16: Bill Moyers: "The American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC)." The group will watch and discuss a video from the Bill Moyers program on PBS about The American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC), a 501(c)3 organization that has received public attention during the recent past.
- June 23: Jack Soules: "The Wanderer Project," is the concept of sending out machines that land on distant planets and moons, then use the materials available to clone themselves, their spaceship and supplies to create duplicates that can be launched to explore other places in the universe. Each would also send scientific data back to Earth.
- June 30: Mike Hughes: Hughes will discuss variations in medical costs that are difficult to understand. Learn more about the system and the possibility of saving money.

Fort Selden hosts campfire cooking class June 8

Fort Selden State Monument in Radium Springs is sponsoring a series of Campfire Cooking Classes beginning Saturday, June 8. This comprehensive four-hour program covers all aspects of outdoor campfire cooking from making coffee to baking cornbread, roasted quail and apple cobbler. The $35 fee covers all food and equipment costs, and each participant receives a complimentary cook's apron, a campfire cooking handbook and a share of sourdough starter dating to 1847. Class size is limited.

CVB Explorers Club accepting members

The Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau is kicking off a new program for kids and families this summer, and giving kids a chance to win an iPad.

Las Cruces Explorers Kids Club members will receive a free 12-megapixel digital camera as part of their Explorers Club kit, along with a hat and other goodies. The idea is to incorporate Las Cruces' new brand: Explore. Experience. Discover. Participating kids are encouraged to get out and photograph their families exploring, experiencing and discovering all the great things to do in and around Las Cruces. Each time one of these pictures is emailed to the CVB, the explorer's name will be entered in a drawing to win an iPad.

To become a Las Cruces Explorers Kids Club member, book a package at one of the following participating Las Cruces hotels: Hilton Garden Inn, Holiday Inn Express-North, Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, Ramada Palms Hotel and Conference Center, SpringHill Suites by Marriott or Staybridge Suites.

Explorers Club members will also receive discounts at restaurants and attractions around Las Cruces. They can also visit the website for weekend and multi-day itineraries for families looking to try new things and to explore as much as possible.

For a complete list of participating attractions, restaurants, hotels and businesses, visit www.exploreascruces.com. The offer is good until Aug. 31.

For more information about the Las Cruces Kids Explorers Club, visit www.exploreascruces.com or call 541-2361.

Amador Hotel topic of meeting

The Doña Ana County Genealogical Society will meet at 2 p.m. Wednesday, June 12, at Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave. Deborah Dennis, vice president of the Amador Hotel Foundation, will present "Forgotten Treasure of the Amador Hotel." All meetings are open to the public.

For more information, email dacgslc@gmail.com or visit http://dagenealogy.blogspot.com.

History lecture scheduled

The Las Cruces Railroad Museum, 351 N. Mesilla St., will host a Brown Bag Lecture at noon Tuesday, June 11. Jeff Wooten, New Mexico State Monument ranger at Fort Selden, will demonstrate the uniform and equipage of a 19th century soldier living in the desert Southwest, and explain duties in the field and garrison. Wooten has interpreted New Mexico and Southwest history for 29 years at Fort Sumner, Jemez and Fort Selden.

Fort Selden was established in 1865 along the banks of the Rio Grande. It housed units of U.S. Infantry and Cavalry. Some of the troops stationed here were black troopers, referred to as Buffalo Soldiers. Douglas MacArthur lived there for a short time as a child, while his father was the post commander.

Fort Selden was abandoned in 1891. Today visitors can walk through the remains of the thick adobe walls, and the visitor center offers exhibits on frontier and military life.

Light refreshments will be served.

For more information, call 647-4480.

Plant Society meetings set

The Native Plant Society has announced its schedule of events in June.

- 7 p.m. Wednesday, June 12: Carolyn Gressitt will present "Wax Palms: True 'Princes' of Colombian Flora."
- Noon Saturday, June 15: Jack Carter will discuss his book "Trees and Shrubs of New Mexico," and how to use it. Bring a copy of his book, pick up copies at the meeting, or bring any plant identification book and Carter will assist with its use.

Both events will be held at the Good Samaritan Society-Las Cruces Village, 3011 Buena Vida Circle in the conference room.

Health care meetings offered

The Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department has partnered with the New Mexico Center on Law and Poverty and Young Invincibles to offer three informational sessions on understanding national health care reform and how it will affect Doña Ana County families.

"Health Care Reform and how it Impacts Families" will be presented from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 10, at the Dolores Wright Community Resource Center in Chaparral and from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday, June 11, at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd., in Room 111/113.

"Health Care Reform and its Impact on the Young" will be presented from 9 to 11 a.m. Thursday, June 11, at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd., in Room 111/113.

Each informational session is free and open to the public. Interpretation services will be provided.

For more information, call Jackie Pacheco at 525-5869.

Pet adoptions available

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley will conduct off-site pet adoption events Saturday, June 8. Available for adoption will be dogs, puppies, cats and kittens.

Adoptions will take place from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market in Downtown Las Cruces. Dogs available for adoption will be located at the north end of the mall. Cats can be adopted from the offices of the Center for Spiritual Living at the north end of the Downtown Main Street, across from the site where the dog adoptions take place.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, adoptions also will be facilitated at PetCo, 3050 E. Lohman Ave. Adoption fees are $75 for dogs or puppies and $50 for kittens. Adult cats (older than 1 year old) are free during the entire month of June. All adoptions include the first set of vaccinations, spay or neuter and microchip.

At the PetCo event, microchipping for pets that already have homes will be available to the public for $20, and city pet licenses will be available to neutered pets for $5 each. Licenses for unneutered pets are $25 each. Proof of spay or neuter is required before a $5 license will be issued. Pet owners also must bring current proof of rabies vaccination for each animal to be licensed.

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley also offers low-cost spay and neuter operations at the rate of $35 for dogs and $25 for cats. Appointments can be scheduled by calling the shelter offices.

The facility is in need of donations of dog crates, towels, blankets and long-strand shredded paper. Volunteers also are needed to assist with animal care and socializing.

For more information, call the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley, at 382-0018, or visit www.ascmv.org. People who are hearing-impaired may call 541-2182. Shelter hours are noon to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Free family fishing at the NMSU Alumni Pond

Photos by Todd Dickson

A fish dangles at the end of the line of Urijah Nordorf, 3, with his father Robert, Saturday, June 1, at the New Mexico State University Alumni Pond. The pond had been stocked by the New Mexico Game and Fish Department in honor of Free Fishing Day, the one day a year residents are allowed to fish without a license. To encourage a new generation of anglers, Game and Fish officers and volunteers held demonstrations and practices on different fishing preparations, such as casting, baiting a hook and tying a hook, as shown below with Ky Massey, 11, and Colbey Poff, 10, learning from Jim Hulse of the Mesilla Valley Flyfishing group.

Kami Gieser, 8, tries casting out as far as she can into the pond.

T.J. Bulger, 6, releases a turtle back into the pond that had been hooked when it bit the worm bait. Helping him is his father, Thomas.

Interim provost selected NMSU faculty familiar with Fant

Greg Fant, New Mexico State University's associate vice president and deputy provost, has been named the university's new interim executive vice president and provost.

FANT

"I admire Greg's leadership, his thoroughness when approaching his job and the pride he shows in being a part of the NMSU faculty," NMSU President Garrey Carruthers said. "I have worked with him for a while now, and look forward to continuing that relationship in his new role."

The executive vice president and provost is the chief academic officer at NMSU and serves as the university's chief executive in the president's absence.

"I'm honored to serve the campus in this capacity, on an interim basis, while President Carruthers works to hire the permanent executive vice president and provost," Fant said. "The opportunity to work with each of the college deans and the community colleges this summer will be exciting."

Fant has served as NMSU's associate vice president and deputy provost since 2011. He was interim dean of the College of Arts and Sciences twice, from 2007-08 and 2009-10. He has also been an associate dean, an assistant dean and head of NMSU's music department.

He originally came to NMSU as the associate director of bands in 1990 and is a conductor, saxophonist and tenured professor in music.

Fant will work to support the university's education, research and public service programs. Two areas he is currently focusing on include classroom space issues and strengthening the pathways for community college students into NMSU's Las Cruces campus.

NSF awards water grant Student to study salt cedar and salt grass

New Mexico State University graduate civil engineering student Juan Solis has obtained a $40,000 annual Graduate Research Fellowship from the National Science Foundation to support his research in the measurement of evapotranspiration depletion of inland salt grass and salt cedar. The organization will fund his research for three years.

Mexico salt grass to manage riparian habitat dominated by salt cedar. An indigenous plant in Eurasia and Africa, salt cedar limits biodiversity and consumes large quantities of water where it grows.

A combination of evaporation of soil and transpiration of plants, evapotranspiration measures the amount of water that is consumed by vegetation.

Through his research, Solis said he hopes to stop the growth of salt cedar with the use of salt grass, which suppresses salt cedar seed germination, filters contaminants, is arid-climate-tolerant and has low water consumption. Because New Mexico sees little rain, he said, it's important to conserve water in the ground system.

Flight Opportunities launch June 21

NASA program partners with schools, federal agencies

The New Mexico Spaceport Authority is will host a NASA Flight Opportunities Program launch conducted by UP Aerospace Inc., at the Spaceport America Vertical Launch Complex Friday, June 21. This will be the first sub-orbital NASA Flight Opportunities Program launch, and the 19th overall launch from Spaceport America.

The sub-orbital sounding rocket launch is part of the NASA Flight Opportunities Program, which is designed to provide suborbital payload launch opportunities for NASA and other government agencies, as well as for educational institutions and the private sector. Some of the Flight Opportunities payload customers for this launch aboard the SpaceLoft (SL-7) rocket include the Federal Aviation Administration, the Department of Defense, NASA, Celestis Inc. and various schools.

"We are very excited to have student payloads on this NASA Flight Opportunities Program launch," said New Mexico Spaceport Authority Executive Director Christine Anderson. "Studying science and math in a classroom setting is very important but having the opportunity to see science and math-based experiments take flight is really inspiring."

Some of the student payload experiments are part of the NASA/New Mexico Space Grant Consortium (NMSGC) Summer of Innovation Launch and Learn Program. La Academia de

Delores Huerta Charter Middle School, Cobre High School, Camino Real Middle School and Hot Springs High School are the participating schools. Other payloads on board were developed by New Mexico State University and New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology of Socorro.

NMSGC is staging a private event for the students in conjunction with the UP Aerospace Launch.

JAG grant sought

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department is seeking public comment in advance of an application for grant funding through the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (JAG) Program.

The JAG Program is the primary provider of federal criminal justice funding to state and local jurisdictions. It offers critical funding necessary to support a range of program areas, including law enforcement. The total funding available through the JAG Program is $27,071.

The department will submit an application for funding through the JAG Program in July and is required to provide an opportunity for the public to comment or ask questions about the application process prior to submission. The deadline to comment is July 3.

For more information or to submit a comment, call Grants Administrator Vincent Pokluda at 525-8838.

Bringing a professional women's tennis tournament to Las Cruces might have seemed like a long shot to local promoters several months ago, but all indications are that the Las Cruces Professional Women's Tennis Challenger at the New Mexico State University Tennis Center is being pulled off without a fault.

Don Hemingway of the USTA Southwestern New Mexico said it couldn't have been done without the help of the community.

"Community involvement has been very heavy," he said, "and it is very much appreciated."

"Comment from the national people and officials is that the number of volunteers and support for the community has been excellent."

Hemingway said the remark he hears most often from players and officials is: "We don't know how you did it without a title sponsor."

He pointed at the signs of the tournament's local sponsors. "That's how we did it," he said.

The Las Cruces tennis community had only about four months to prepare for the tournament, whereas most tournaments begin planning and lining up sponsorships a year ahead of time.

Handling the press for the tournament has been Dave McCollum, publisher emeritus for the Las Cruces Bulletin. McCollum said attendance has been good, with about 200 to 300 people attending each day.

"For the semifinals and finals on the weekend, we expect more," he said.

A big pat on the back needs to go out to people such as Hemingway and McCollum, as well as Judy Harlas, president of the Las Cruces Tennis Players Association, and many other volunteers, promoters and local tennis fans, not to mention NMSU.

"We are really indebted to NMSU," Hemingway said.

If Hemingway has any complaints, it might be that he hasn't been able to watch many of the matches.

"I used to watch these things on TV and couldn't understand why (seats reserved for tournament officials) were so vacant, but now I know that that's when you are busiest behind the scenes," he said. I got to watch my first match last night (Tuesday)."

The tournament is only one sign that interest in tennis is on the rise in the City of the Crosses, Hemingway said.

"Local membership has gone up by a factor of three over the last three years," he said. "Our growth is focused on new league members at all levels."

Hemingway has a message for Las Cruces: "The pro circuit is here and here to stay."

Tournament finals Sunday

Top seed advances through Wednesday's first round

By Jim Hilley
Las Cruces Bulletin

Kady Pooler faced a difficult task Wednesday, June 5, at the New Mexico State University Tennis Center.

After being one of only eight players to advance from the qualifier, she drew the No. 1 seed and No. 176-ranked Erika Sema of Japan in her first round match in the main draw of the Las Cruces $25K Challenger women's tennis tournament.

"You have to play the best either way," Pooler said. "I like playing them in the first round. Maybe she'll struggle with the altitude."

Unfortunately for Pooler, a first-round upset was not in the works, and after Pooler held her serve twice to begin the match, Sema swept the northern Californian aside 6-2, 6-0.

Pooler, who just returned from playing in Thailand and Malaysia a week ago, said she has already played in "nine or 10" tournaments this season. Pooler had dropped out of playing professional tennis for several years, but upon the death of her father, decided to take another swing at playing tennis full time as her father had wished.

A player at Arizona State University in her college career, Pooler said this was her first time in Las Cruces and she felt the tournament was being "wonderfully run."

In her run through the qualifier, Pooler said she had to resort to an unusual move because of the wind in one of her matches.

"I couldn't make a serve to save my life, so I switched to underhand," she said. "I knew if I could get the ball in play, I could win the point. If you want to have a chance, you have to gut it out."

The doubles team of Anamika Bhargava and Mayo Hibi had a little more luck on Wednesday, as their scheduled opponents withdrew due to an injury.

"We were in the main draw and we're playing today but our opponents withdrew because of injury," Bhargava said "We are waiting to see if a lucky loser signs in, then we'll play and if not, then we have a bye, and won't play till tomorrow."

A lucky loser is someone who played in the qualifier and lost.

"Most of the girls already flew out, because this rarely happens, a lucky loser in doubles,"

Bhargava said. "They have until noon to sign in, but I think we are going to have a bye."

Bhargava said a day off might be good, because she sprained her ankle a week ago.

"I had to pull out of singles in this tournament and just play doubles," she said.

The pair said they have been playing in tournaments for about a year and a half, but only played together for the first time last week.

Bhargava attended Pepperdine University, while Hibi, only 17, has not yet decided whether to attend school or play tennis full time.

"I am still deciding. I think I want to stay in California if I go to school," Hibi said.

The tournament continues through Sunday, June 9, with quarterfinals scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Friday, June 7, and semifinals set for Saturday, June 8. The singles and doubles finals will be at 10 a.m. Sunday, June 9.

Tickets are still available, with single day passes for $5 Friday and Saturday, and passes to the finals are $10. Tickets may be purchased online at <http://holdmyticket.com/event/138866>.

North-south all-star teams square off

High school baseball players meet in annual Bob Ogas Classic

The 38th annual Bob Ogas North South All Star Baseball Classic will be Friday and Saturday, June 7-8, in Apodaca Park, 801 E. Madrid Ave. The first game of the best-of-three series is at 6 p.m. Friday, June 7, with a double header scheduled to begin at noon Saturday, June 8.

The series features top high school baseball players from around the state. The series provides New Mexico athletes with one final venue to showcase their talents before junior college, university and professional scouts.

The North-South All-Star Series was born after three years of discussions between Bob Ogas, then a coach at Mayfield High School, and Al Sutton, a coach at Highland

High School in Albuquerque. During this time, they obtained needed endorsement for the idea from the New Mexico High School Coaches Association (NMHSCA) and the New Mexico Activities Association (NMAA).

The coaches association voted to rename the series in tribute to the founder, Bob Ogas, before the 2012 classic.

The New Mexico Baseball Coaches Association selects the all stars through a series of committees. The final selection is made on Thursday night of the state baseball tournament.

Tickets are available before each game, and are $5 for adults; $3 for students, and free for children younger than 7. Only one ticket is needed to see both games of the doubleheader. Hot dogs, peanuts, sodas and bottled water will be sold at the concession stand.

Players selected for the South All-Stars from Las Cruces area schools include pitchers Julian Heredia and Alonzo Parra from Oñate High School; pitcher Jonathan Joy, second baseman Donovan Silva and outfielder Andy Souceda from Las Cruces High School; and pitcher Justin Phillips from Mayfield High School.

For more information, call Len Hampton at 527-9046.

Camille and Courtney Schultz are talented long-distance runners whose singing talent has landed them national exposure.

Schultz twins sing on 'Today Show'

Track stars display talent other than cross country

Two members of the New Mexico State University track and field team, Camille and Courtney Schultz, were selected to travel to New York City to perform on NBC's "Today Show" as part of the "Quest for the Best" contest. The nationally televised segment was set to air at 7:30 a.m. Thursday, June 6.

The Schultz sisters were chosen as finalists in the competition for their singing talent, after submitting a video of a recent performance.

"Our gospel choir instructor, Dr. (Bobbie) Green, saw the contest on www.nbc.com requesting twins to showcase their talents," Camille Schultz said.

Green is the conductor of the New Mexico State University Gospel Choir and is also an associate professor in the College of Business. She recommended the twins enter the contest.

"These girls are the total package," she said. "They are sweet, funny and also very talented. I approached them about entering the competition and they thought it was a great idea."

Green has coached the twins for two years and has been working with them as a duet for three semesters

Camille Schultz usually works with her sister while singing but said, "We're talented individually, but we blossom and shine when we're together."

The twins have been singing most of their lives, but had not thought about singing as a long-term career until they were encouraged to enter this competition.

"Right now, we are focusing on our nursing careers, but now this opportunity has been presented to us we will definitely go for it," Courtney Schultz said.

The Schultz sisters competed in cross country and track and field for NMSU since arriving in 2009. As freshmen, Courtney and Camille finished first and second respectively in the 2009 WAC Championships in cross country. Their finish helped the Aggies win its first WAC cross country championship in school history.

They have also qualified for NCAA preliminary competition in their careers, including Courtney Schultz running in the NCAA National Championships in cross country in 2012. The Schultz twins have also had success in track and field and own the top two times in the Aggies' all-time record list in four different races.

NMSU track signs Moorpark runner

McNally is second Aggie athlete from Calif. school

New Mexico State University track and field coach Orin Richburg announced Wednesday, June 4, that Moorpark College standout, Megan McNally, has signed a National Letter of Intent and will join the NMSU cross country and track and field team beginning in the fall of 2013.

In the 2013 outdoor track and field season, McNally finished second in the 1,500-meter, 5,000-meter and 10,000-meter run, earning 24 of her team's 59 total points and helping them to a fourth-place finish at the CCCAA Southern California Championship.

She went on to compete in the California Community College State Track and Field Championships and took second place in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 17:55.86. McNally also finished third in the 10,000-meter run and earned a total of 14 points. She was named an All-American for both races this season.

McNally ran her best time in the 5,000-meter run early in the 2013 outdoor season with a time of 17:27.34, which also broke the school record set in 2010 with a time of 17:41 by Madelyn Stoltze, who also continued her career with NMSU.

In the 2012 cross country season, McNally finished first at the 65th annual Mt. Sac Invitational. She also earned a third-place finish in the Southern California Cross Country Championships and led the team to a third-place finish, which was the best finish in school history.

"We're all pretty excited to have her," assistant coach Christopher Huff said. "She's the second Moorpark College athlete we've had. Madelyn Stoltze also came to NMSU through Moorpark and did well for us and Megan actually broke her record, so to sign her on to the team is huge for us."

Wisdom from a land far away Interview with the 'Famous Japanese Pro'

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

I have been writing this column in the Bulletin for a little more than seven years. The column started in early April, 2006 when (then publisher) Dave McCollum invited me to "stimulate our readers with something golf-like." Since then, I haven't missed a week.

About five years ago, I started offering insights from "The Famous Japanese Pro" about every eight months or so, whenever F.J. Pro was available to talk. For our newer readers, I feel compelled to explain just how my relationship with F.J. Pro got started, so I thought I would provide a little background.

As I get older (yes, it happens), I have been struck more than ever by the fact that golf is full of puzzles and paradoxes. Sometimes I feel like Garrison Keillor's private eye, Guy Noir, who is always searching for the "answers to life's persistent questions."

Back in the early 1980s, humorist Douglas Adams came out with a cheesy parody called "Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy," where he sought "the answer to the ultimate question of life, the universe and everything." Turns out the answer was "42."

But the answers to golf's persistent questions – such as why does a putt break uphill; or why does a dog bark right in your backswing – aren't that simple.

A breakthrough happened recently and I became infused with philosophical hope when I attended a golf teachers and coaches summit. During a coffee break, a fellow head-doctor introduced me to an Asian gentleman, who he simply referred to as the "Famous Japanese Pro," as if I had already heard of him. I hadn't.

My golf-shrink friend quickly explained to me that F.J. Pro was not really a former tour professional, but he is a philosopher of the game of golf. He rarely visits the U.S.; he doesn't spend time on the practice range with video cams like other teachers; and the man had never heard of Hank Haney, Butch Harmon, Dr. Bob Rotella or even Tim Finchem.

Anyway, I was able to garner some time alone with this recognized guru of golf.

He struck me as an unassuming, middle-aged man who looked very fit, spoke broken English and was clearly a man of very few words. What a marvelous opportunity, I thought, to acquire some Tao-like wisdom. Seizing the moment, I queried the F.J. Pro on some things that had been truly concerning me.

Golf Doc: All the professional tours are now facing the difficult and unsavory struggle with policing performance-enhancing drugs. There have been some well-documented sanctions amid players' objections. A few years back, legend Gary Player leveled the accusation that he knew some pros were cheating. Since then, it's gotten worse.

F.J. Pro: Fire often there with smoke.

Golf Doc: Most recently, there has been a flap about a substance called "deer antler spray," which some folks feel is a magic bullet to solve injury problems.

F.J. Pro: Only snake oil.

Golf Doc: Veteran tour pro Vijay Singh has since admitted to using deer antler spray about six months ago and then was suspended by the PGA Tour for 90 days. Now Singh is suing the tour saying that the ban was unfair.

F.J. Pro: Bite not hand that feeds.

Golf Doc: In early May at the Players Championship,

Tiger Woods was paired with Sergio Garcia in the third round when a disagreement erupted. Although Garcia was a good 50 yards away from Woods, he heard the gallery around Woods cheer just as Garcia played his shot. He glared over at Woods and later said he felt Woods should have had the courtesy to delay while he hit. The two then traded barbs over the ensuing few weeks, including when Garcia made the statement, "We don't like each other's company." Why do you think that is?

F.J. Pro: Envy (jealousy) one of seven deadly sins.

Golf Doc: The most damning situation was when Garcia was jokingly asked (at a European Tour banquet) if he planned to have Woods over for dinner at the U.S. Open, whereby Garcia replied that he might serve fried chicken. The humor was totally lost amid cries of racism, mostly from the media, with Woods remarking that it was inappropriate. You know about the flap?

F.J. Pro: Sushi most preferred to chicken.

Golf Doc: Turning to less controversial topics, there is considerable attention these days to what we call the "mental game." It's common knowledge that among extremely talented players, the non-physical dimensions of golf separate the winners from the others. It seems that the biggest problem for golfers is anxiety, or put another way, nerves. What say you?

F.J. Pro: Let pond in head settle.

Golf Doc: Golfers seem to get nervous when they find themselves in a new situation, whether it's at the top of the leaderboard or playing in their first tournament. I've been searching for the secret to help players get comfortable when they are in new and alien circumstances.

F.J. Pro: Experience probably best teacher.

Golf Doc: As a fan of many sports, I feel that luck is often a major difference maker, especially in tight contests between evenly matched opponents – a favorable bounce here, a chip-in there. Luck can be huge. How much of a factor do you think luck plays in golf?

F.J. Pro: Fate favors most prepared mind.

Golf Doc: Several years ago in the U.S. Open, Phil Mickelson, the leader and favorite, had a meltdown on the 72nd hole, while Colin Montgomery, who could have easily won, made a double from the middle of the fairway on the same hole. In 1999, Jean Van de Velde had a similar meltdown at Carnoustie. Talk about bad luck. And Greg Norman at Augusta in 1996. Wow. What goes on with these people?

F.J. Pro: Reliable swing most desirable under pressure.

Golf Doc: Going through the list of LPGA players, I notice that so many are foreign. Glancing at the group of players who made the cut at a recent LPGA tournament, I found that 20 of the top 40 were Korean golfers. I was stunned. Any ideas on what is happening here?

F.J. Pro: Go ask Korean pro.

Golf Doc: Many of us are lamenting the fact that there are so few American girls in the top echelons of golf these days. Girls' programs in junior golf and in high school golf don't seem to be producing as many talented players as we would like.

F.J. Pro: Perhaps texting more fun than practice.

Golf Doc: Many celebrities and experts have written books about how golf teaches us the lessons of life: Dr. Bob Rotella, David Cook, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and M. Scott Peck, to mention just a few. It seems to me at times that often life reflects golf; that our best efforts don't always pay off and that it takes considerable work to be masterful. Please share your ideas about how golf might mirror life or vice versa.

F.J. Pro: Both life and golf hard.

Golf Doc: I can remember a time when sports heroes were true winners and showed little of today's "attitude." There was no trash-talking or fist-pumping or end-zone dancing or chest-thumping. They did their jobs and let their performance do the talking. Have you noticed?

F.J. Pro: Victory most hollow with no humility.

Golf Doc: It seems there is a lot of complaining that goes on in golf. The tour players complain about course setups and conditions. Golf writers complain about top players losing the desire to win and not having any personality. Even I have been known to complain sometimes about the suspect greenskeeping on some of the local courses we play. What's with all the complaining?

F.J. Pro: Inept farmer whine over bad crop.

Golf Doc: Swimming phenom Michael Phelps, winner of 18 Olympic gold medals, has taken up golf, with instruction by Hank Haney, popular with viewers on the Golf Channel. When asked if he would give up a gold medal to become a professional golfer, Phelps replied, "not a gold, but maybe a silver."

F.J. Pro: Vanity (vainglory) another deadly sin.

Golf Doc: One of the mysteries of golf that has had me wondering for years has to do with attempting a shot or a putt over again. Haven't you noticed that if we miss a putt, and then try the exact same putt over again, it always goes in? Or if we hit a wild, ugly tee shot, and then try it over again, we do it perfectly? Any advice, sir?

(Long pause)

F.J. Pro: Hit second ball first.

Working in odd places

You never know where you will end up

Jack Nixon
Jack's Corner

Your office may have desks and a break room or it may be a dusty field that is open from sun up to sun down. My office is different.

Arenas and stadiums are my office, and from time to time I take a moment to think about the historic, kooky and memorable "offices" I have worked in.

Here is a slice of those memories. Let's start with the kooky.

Twice I sat in the end zone of a basketball arena elevated above the basket.

Grand Island High in central Nebraska and Eckerd College in Tampa, Fla., put the radioman in an elevated perch behind the south goal. It made for an unusual depth of field in watching the game and in both cases, it meant climbing up a ladder ferrying the equipment in the hand that wasn't gripping the ladder.

That isn't the only time I climbed a ladder to a cubbyhole, my broadcast position. Duke University's Cameron Indoor Stadium has similar accommodations, but the broadcaster is on a sideline, not the end zone.

Duke fits into the historic category along with Madison Square Garden and the Los Angeles Sports Arena. The Aggies were in the finals of the preseason National Invitation Tournament in 1994, in "the Garden." As we moved from the underside of the arena to the floor, I realized that I was walking where Frank Sinatra, Hulk Hogan and all the performers walked en route to the main stage.

President John Kennedy once spoke in the L.A. Sports Arena in the early 1960s. The arena housed several major prize fights and was the first home of the Lakers. I called the game between NMSU and USC in the building, when Rodney Walker, Clyde Jordan and Skip McCoy were mainstays on that squad.

As far as memorable road venues, both are in Arizona. Let's put Sun Devil Stadium at the top of this list. The 1999 victory over Arizona State was an incredible night for NMSU athletics. Tony Samuel and staff put together the game plan and the team executed it to perfection.

The ASU Activities Center alongside Sun Devil Stadium holds a special spot in my memory palace as well. In 1992, it was the springboard for the Aggies' last entry into the Sweet 16. The upset win over DePaul leading to the decisive win over Southwest Louisiana makes that structure a memorable location.

My offices are big and small but they are seldom dull. My home offices are my favorites, not only is my desk just the right size, but there are always thousands of friends there "at work" with me.

“ The 1999 victory over Arizona State was an incredible night ... ”

Striking gold

Boxing greats recognized

New Mexico Boxing Hall of Fame inducts five

Several of New Mexico's legendary boxers, including Las Cruces' own Austin Trout, will be honored and inducted into the New Mexico Boxing Hall of Fame Friday, June 28, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave. A VIP pre-party will begin at 6 p.m. with dinner and the induction ceremony at 7 p.m.

"A Night of Champions," presented by Las Cruces Police Athletic League and the New Mexico Boxing Hall of Fame, will honor former world champions Bob Foster, Danny Romero, Johnny Tapia, Holly Holm and Trout.

"Las Cruces PAL Boxing Club is excited to bring this thrilling boxing event to Las Cruces," said Lorenzo Alba, Las Cruces PAL Boxing executive director. "This event has been several years in the making and we are glad everything finally came together. Factor in the hall of fame induction of New Mexico's five World Champions and you have a world class event right here in Las Cruces."

In addition to the hall of fame event, the Austin Trout Youth Boxing Classic will be at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 29, at the convention center and will feature youth boxers from the Southwest.

Tickets for "A Night of Champions" are on sale at www.anightofchampions.com and at the Las Cruces Convention Center. Ticket prices start at $50.

Tickets for the Austin Trout Youth Boxing Classic are $10 for regular admission or $15 for admission plus access to the beer tent. Children 4 and younger are $1. All proceeds from both events will benefit the Las Cruces PAL Boxing Program.

'Daughter' from Mexico makes first visit to 'dad'

Las Cruces man opens heart, resources to foreign student

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

Although Bill Bradley had described Las Cruces to his "daughter" in Mexico, the 22-year-old woman found her visit this week to the city surprising in both its modern ways and its challenges.

Karen Zuñiga was a waitress in the coastal Mexico city of Zihuatanejo when she met Bradley, a tourist. Bradley was no ordinary tourist, however. During his stays at Zihuatanejo, he was drawn to helping its children in poor schools to improve conditions.

As Bradley got to know Zuñiga, he learned she was working two jobs – putting in 60 hours a week to support herself and her family while studying international business at the University of Guadalajara. Impressed with the young lady, Bradley made her a deal: She had to write him a long email each week in English – a skill she would need in her desired profession – and he would pay for her tuition and class supplies.

For the past several years, she has done that – only missing a couple assignments, but learning Bradley was serious about not sending her support if she failed to keep up her part of the agreement. She has faithfully sent the emails ever since, even though she admits English is a very difficult language.

With summer break, Bradley brought Zuñiga to the United States for a visit. Some of it will be for her enjoyment, but he also is connecting her with experts for her thesis on human resources, which was Bradley's profession before he retired to Las Cruces.

The week in Las Cruces began on a serious note with a visit to the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope, where she met with people of Camp Hope, the tent city for homeless people. In Mexico, the United States is seen as a place with so much affluence Zuñiga said it was eye-opening for her to also see Americans living in tents on the other side of the border.

She also met with professors at New Mexico State University, where the campus is larger and more modern than the one she attends in Mexico. Other visits have ranged from perusing the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market to joining Bradley at the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley, where he volunteers.

Zuñiga described Bradley's assistance to her life as "very nice and unbelievable." But Bradley said he just felt compelled to help, even though he lives on a limited income himself.

Bradley published a book about the experience titled "Journey to Zihuatanejo" in the hopes of inspiring people to do what they can to help others. Just as Zuñiga has become his "daughter," she has taken on a "brother" in Mexico, a boy with school and girlfriend problems. Like Bradley, Zuñiga said she tries not to be judgmental when the boy falls short.

"He never judges," she said of Bradley, whom she calls her "dad" because her real father died when she was a young girl.

If she is successful in business, Zuñiga said she will continue helping others.

"I really want to help other women," she said.

That's the real lesson Bradley said he wants Zuñiga and others to learn – don't worry about changing the world, just make things better where you can, and inspire others to do what they can.

Zuñiga visits with Mesilla Valley Community of Hope's Camp Hope tent city with volunteer Faith St. Marie and Outreach Coordinator Matt Mercer.

Zuñiga and Bradley visit with traditional Mexican music street musicians Johnny Florez and Isabella Aguirre as they play for visitors Downtown.

Bradley and Zuñiga meet Jill Rockhill from the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau at the market.

ROBERT 'BOB' BULLARD

March 3, 1933 to May 20, 2013

It is with deep sorrow and heavy hearts that we announce the passing of Robert Bullard, better known as "Bob", of Capitan, New Mexico, on May 20, 2013. He was born March 3, 1933 in Clayton, New Mexico, graduated from Clayton High School, and went on to Graduate from New Mexico State University. He served in the Army in Germany and went to work for the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Mexican Springs, New Mexico. He rode race horses and started a rodeo club for the Navajo Indians. He worked for the Botany Entomology Department for 20 years and retired in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Bob was a rodeo announcer and an auctioneer. Later he went back to work for New Mexico State University as Weights and Measures Inspector, working all over the state. After that his thrill was to drive the tour bus for his entertaining sons, Terry & Scooter, and the Bullet Band, all over the southwestern United States. He worked on ranches in Lincoln County and lived in White Oaks for several years and moved to T or C, New Mexico and was currently living in Capitan. Bob had a pleasing personality and loved to tell stories and had lots of friends. We will miss him.

Survivors include his wife, Roberta Bullard, children, Terry Bullard, Robert (Scooter) Bullard (Marcia), ShyLyn Dickson (Mark), all of Capitan; grandchildren, James Bullard and Ashley Bullard of Austin, Texas, Chason Levi Rainer and Micaela Rainer of Alpine, Texas. He is also survived by 3 great grandchildren.

Friends and family will join together for a "Celebration of Life" at White Oaks, New Mexico on June 8 at 2 p.m. for at pot luck.

FIDELA LAMAR BENCOMO (DELA)

April 14, 1945 to May 17, 2013

Before the sun was in the morning sky on May 17, 2013, Fidela Lamar Bencomo (Dela) stepped from this life into the arms of Jesus. She was born April 14, 1945. She was proud of her Navajo and Latina heritage, and grew up in Albuquerque, Mountainair and Las Cruces. She was 68 years of age. Her family name was Lamar. Nearly 15 years ago, she came into the office of Agape Christian Church to borrow the phone, stayed to visit, and came to church, accepted Jesus Christ as her savior and was baptized. From that date forward the church was her family. Her minister was Pastor Herb Pinney, her shepherding elder was Luke Champion and her friend and soul mate at church was her woman's group leader, Melba Pinney. She was preceded in death by daughter Sadie Caldwell.

All her family lives in Doña Ana County. She dearly loved her two grandsons, Carlos Ramirez-Caldwell and David Watson. And her great grandson, Andrew Hughes.

Also surviving Dela is her sister Merlinda N. Peña, and her nephews: Sammy Weber, Veron Weber, Lorenzo Nevarez, Jesus Peña Jr., Robert Peña, Benny Peña, Frank Peña. Cousins: Harvey Van Winkle, Paul Van Winkle, Jesse Van Winkle. Also a great host of Christian friends from around the Las Cruces, El Paso area.

The earthly tabernacle that Dela inhabited was entrusted to La Paz-Graham Funeral Home for care.

A memorial/praise service for Dela will be held this Thursday Night, 6th of June at Agape Christian Church at 7 p.m.

Dear Family and Friends,
 The Covarrubias family would like to express their appreciation for your love, kindness, and prayers at a time when it was deeply needed. While our hearts are saddened by the loss of our Dad, we thank you for making this difficult time a little easier. We greatly appreciate your sincere thoughtfulness in sending the beautiful flowers, plants, food, personal expressions of sympathy and donations in our Dad's name. It was a comforting feeling as we celebrated our Dad's life to hear the many wonderful stories about him. We are honored you were able to share how he touched your life.

In loving memory of a loving husband, father, grandpa, and great grandpa. We love you and you will be deeply missed!

Hidden history revealed WWII bomb targets

Seven sites exist in a proposed monument

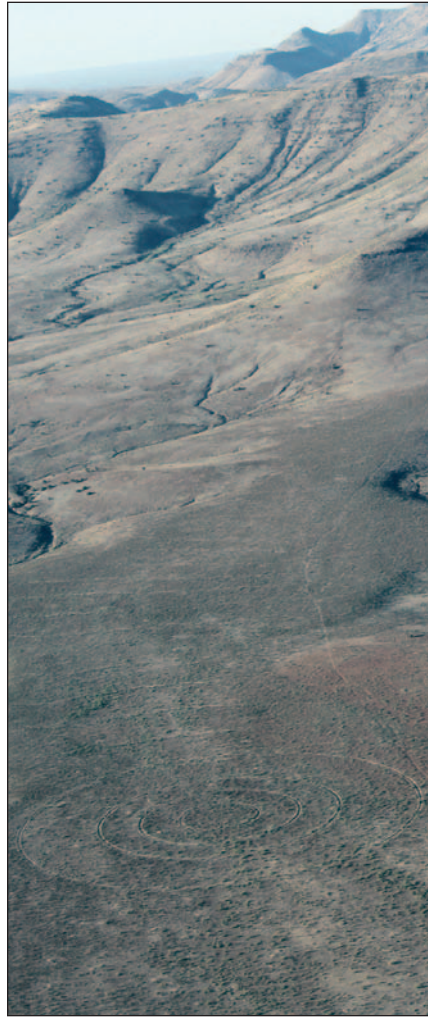

Organizers of the effort to establish the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument took media and others on plane rides Wednesday, June 5, to one of the harder-to-recognize historical landmarks – targets used for bombing practice during the early days of World War II.

Nathan Small, of the New Mexico Wilderness Alliance, said the seven targets for bomb practice were hurriedly dug into the desert in early 1942 for flight missions out of Deming.

The flights were conducted by LightHawk of Albuquerque, which provided use of a Beechcraft Bonanza piloted by Richard Hoover. LightHawk assists groups such as the Wilderness Alliance with plane tours of areas being considered for preservation.

A rare view of the Organ, Doña Ana, Robledo and Las Uvas mountains is seen from on high during a morning plane tour of World War II bombing practice target sites northwest of the Las Cruces International Airport Wednesday, June 5.

Morris Drexler, who brought the bombing target sites to the attention of organizers for the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument proposal, said local pilots first started noticing them in the 1960s. Drexler said his research found that they were WWII bomb practice targets that once had a pyramid structure in the center for a bull's eye.

Glass wars

David Salcido

On second thought ...

For months now, the interweb has been abuzz with news of a technologically advanced social media product called Google Glass, a wearable device that brings hands-free usage to new levels.

Made to straddle the face much like a pair of Borg-devised eyeglasses, the gizmo is designed to do many of the same things a smartphone does, including provide directions, let the viewer engage in video chat and take pictures and first-person video. During the last week in May, the device was unveiled to mixed reviews at the D11: All Things Digital developer's conference, held in San Francisco.

Present at the conference, Tim Cook, CEO of Apple Inc., went on record as stating that high-tech eyeglasses would be "difficult" to pull off as a mainstream product. Of course, he was at the conference to unveil his own gadget, a Nike+ FuelBand bracelet that tracks the wearer's physical activity. Perhaps because of the conspicuous nature of the telltale frames, another executive who asked not to be named dubbed the wearers of the device, "Google Asses." It's clear that the marketing department at Google has its work cut out for them. Still, many are heralding Google Glass as the wave of things to come.

Internet analyst Mary Meeker, who is considered to be the go-to person when it comes to all things web, has predicted that Google Glass and other wearable devices will be the next big thing in the coming years. In fact, in a report she released on Wednesday, May 29, that is chock full of "interesting" factoids (the average person checks his or her smartphone 150 times per day - no real surprise there), she called wearable computing the harbinger of "the third cycle" of the Internet. Sounds ominous, doesn't it? Either that or the plot of a Philip K. Dick novel.

She also reports that only 15 percent of the United States population overshares on social media sites like Facebook and MySpace, as opposed to 60 percent of the Saudi Arabian population or 5 percent of the Japanese population. Which is interesting because, either my Facebook friends are that 15 percent, or she was misquoted and actually meant there are only 15 percent of the American population who don't overshare. Even that number is questionable. But I digress.

Bankruptcy baffles local fans

Pro's Ranch Market gets vote of confidence

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Although most shoppers filing into Pro's Ranch Market on Wyatt Drive Tuesday, June 4, were unaware the city's newest supermarket was part of a bankruptcy filing, all voiced strong support for Pro's.

Only one shopper who spoke with the Las Cruces Bulletin, Daniel Thornton, said he read the news Friday, May 31, the company has filed for voluntary reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

"It's sad to see that after just a year," Thornton, himself a business owner, said. "They've got my thumbs up."

He described the Las Cruces market as "a wonderful little store."

"They try to have a good business, with fresh meats, nice atmosphere," he said. "It's clean and the food is fresh. They go above and beyond."

Pro's, an 11-store Hispanic-oriented food chain, opened its Las Cruces location in late 2011. The family-owned company founded in 1982 is headquartered in California but owns most of its stores in the Phoenix area. Pro's expanded into New Mexico in 2008, opening a store in Albuquerque. It has two locations in El Paso.

Discussing the bankruptcy with Supermarket News, COO Rick Provenzano said, "We made this move to improve the overall health of the company and save the jobs of more than 2,200 team members. This opportunity to restructure our business will result in a stronger and more stable company for years to come."

Pro's said it does not plan to sell or close any of its stores. The company said it has hired HG Capital Partners of Phoenix as its restructuring adviser, SuperMarket News reported.

Change a constant at strip mall

Sally Quillin, a Las Cruces resident since 1979, said she's seen the store at 320 Wyatt Drive go through a number of evolutions in the intervening years. She recalled it formerly was Skaggs Alpha Beta, also a chain food store.

The space later was a Jewel Osco and then operated as a Raley's. Before going dark, it served as a community center. The space, Cindy Quillin of Las Cruces and rising seventh grader Caitlin Quillin enjoy Pro's Ranch Market service and ambiance and hope the store will continue to be a part of the Las Cruces scene.

Daniel Thornton, who owns the local business GH Designs, gives Pro's Ranch Market a thumbs-up.

Las Cruces Bulletin photos by Alta LeCompte

Pro's Ranch Market of Las Cruces and the chain's other stores in New Mexico, Texas and Arizona remain open while the company reorganizes under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

which anchors a strip mall, was vacant prior to Pro's undertaking extensive alterations. Adjacent stores came and went in recent years, and were often vacant.

Quillin said she is a big-time fan of Pro's. Asked what she likes about the store, Quillin said: "The people. The way they create ambiance with mariachis. Everyone is so helpful - they ask you if there's something you're looking for."

"I've never had a bad experience. They have such great deals. I hope something happens and they're able to stay open."

"It's so convenient," said Mario Castillo of Las Cruces. "If the store goes it would be a bad thing."

Irma Rey of Hatch, also surprised the company is experiencing difficulties, said she likes Pro's fresh fruit and attractive prices.

"I'm hoping they would be healthy," she said.

Company expects success

Michael Provenzano Jr., chief financial officer told Supermarket News that Pro's revenues have been hurt "by the lingering recession."

"This reorganization will put us back on a more firm financial footing," he said.

Provenzano said the company has obtained a $3 million loan commitment to continue operations during the reorganization.

"The short-term plan is to emerge from Chapter 11 as soon as possible," he said. "Over the next few months we will be laying out our long-term strategy to ensure success."

Pro's Ranch founder Mike Provenzano Sr. in a keynote speech at the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce annual awards dinner in February outlined the company's business philosophy and its reason for moving into the Las Cruces market.

He said he and his son Mike Jr. in 1992 launched a small business model based on reaching out to the Hispanic base and competing with big-box stores for that market share.

Provenzano commented that Hispanic growth in the border regions exceeds 60 percent and Hispanic buying power is growing rapidly.

"Las Cruces is about to explode," he said. "We've been setting up for years to come here."

Mesilla Valley Mall seeks merchants of the future

In an effort to promote retail entrepreneurship among today's youth, Mesilla Valley Mall is inviting kids 6 to 15 years old to participate in the "Kids, Inc." program. The program is being hosted at select Jones Lang LaSalle-managed shopping centers throughout the U.S.

To qualify for the in-center event, kids will submit their business plans via Mesilla Valley Mall's Facebook page before Tuesday, June 11. Children 12 and younger will need a parent or guardian to submit their entry. The shopping center's Facebook fans will vote for their favorite business ideas June 12 - 26. Based on the highest number of votes, 10 winners will be invited to a one-day "business showcase," during which they can sell their products or services to customers and keep their earnings. Winners will be announced June 27.

For more information on Kids, Inc, call 522-1001 or visit www.mesillavalleymall.com.

Cost is $20 per person and will include live music on the patio, a Herradura Margarita "luge," and appetizers and more.

Interactive and conducted by YouGov, 1,000 smartphone users were asked what they thought of Google Glass. Forty-five percent called them "socially awkward." Another 44 percent claimed that they weren't at all interested in the Glass' known features. Only 10 percent of those surveyed said they would wear the headset, regardless of cost. That's right, only 1-in-10 Americans say they don't mind looking like a dork in order to do the exact same things their smartphones will already allow them to do.

So, what are the good points of this newfangled technology? The price tag, which to date is only available to a select group of "explorers" willing to write a check, is $1,500. Speculators at Google are claiming that a consumer version of the device will be hitting markets as early as 2014 with a much more agreeable price tag; like, say, $200. Currently, Glass lets wearers who have their eyewear wirelessly tethered to their mobile phones take pictures, record video and send messages with a simple voice command. As new apps are developed, new uses will be explored. In fact, several companies are already doing so.

Whether or not the CEO of Apple or 90 percent of Americans surveyed believe Google Glass will catch on, it hasn't stopped service providers such as Facebook and Twitter from launching Google Glass apps. Erick Tseng, head of mobile products at Facebook, became the first to use his app when he posted an image taken at the developer's conference. Meanwhile, engineering manager at Twitter, Shiv Ramamurthi, tweeted an image from one of the conference sessions with the hashtag #throughglass.

And this is just the beginning. The New York Daily News reported March 12, two months before the conference that made all of this information public, that a company called InSight had created an app that allows the wearer of the device to find friends in a crowd based on their "fashion fingerprint." So, if you're a fan of certain patterns, textures and/or colors, once the Glass has peeped you, the information goes into its databank and the next time it sees somebody with your fashion tastes, it can recognize the fashionista as you, with "reasonable consistency." The developers claim that this app is 93 percent accurate. Creepy, no?

With recent news that a company in China is also developing a wearable gadget, called the Baidu Eye, that is geared to give Google Glass a run for its money, it's increasingly obvious that this is not an idea that will be going away any time soon. Considering I never thought I would see the day 70-year-old cowboys would be wearing Bluetooth devices, something which has become pretty common in these parts, I believe anything is possible. We may not have the rocket packs or hoverboards we were promised in the 21st century, but wearable technology has definitely arrived. Being the fashion plate that I am, I just hope it matches my color palette.

A tale of two countries

Brazil enjoys a dynamic economy compared to Cuba, but lacks educational opportunity

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

One of the perks of my research is that it often gives me an excuse to travel to Latin America.

Last year I traveled to Cuba and I've just returned from a trip to Rio de Janeiro. The contrasts between Cuba and Brazil are many.

Cuba is, along with Korea, the last of the old-line totalitarian states. The Cuban government seeks to create the new man who puts the state before themselves. Uniformed officials are prevalent, ensuring that citizens comply with numerous arbitrary rules and regulations.

Brazil, by contrast, is developing into a modern Western capitalist country. By U.S. standards, the country remains poor, but rapid economic growth in recent years and a shortage of labor means that jobs are plentiful and there is an air of prosperity. Rio is set to host the 2014 World Cup and the 2016 Summer Olympics. This has imbued the city with an attitude of confidence.

Of course, Brazil is not a paradise and Cuba is not without advantages. Access to health care remains a problem in Brazil, while Cuba famously produces a surplus of doctors, which it exports to other Latin American countries, including Brazil.

Cuba provides universal high-quality education through college. Indeed, a problem for Cuba is an overeducated population that doesn't want to do the menial jobs – too many doctors, not enough plumbers. Meanwhile, public education in Brazil is a national scandal. Only recently, for example, have elementary school teachers been required to be high school graduates. Any Brazilians with the means to do so send their children to private schools.

This means that Brazil is a land of privilege, and not a meritocracy. Gaining a high-paying job depends on a good education, and a good education comes from having parents who can afford to pay for it. Wealth begets wealth. Equality of opportunity is a non-existent. This contrasts sharply with Cuba where, at least so far, with the obvious exception of the Castro brothers, family connections are not a requirement for high office.

The two countries' relations with the United States also differ. Cuba, of course, has been on the receiving end of a half century long embargo, while Brazil was a Cold War ally and remains a major trading partner. Cuban propaganda aimed at the United States is daily fare in newspapers and on TV. Meanwhile, a visit by a smiling Vice President Joe Biden warmly greeted by Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff was the main news item during my visit.

An item that illustrates feelings of the two countries toward the United States is found on university campuses. On the campus of the University of Havana is a tank that allegedly was involved in repulsing CIA-backed invaders at the Bay of Pigs in 1961. On the campus of the Pontifical Catholic University-Rio is a bronze bust of John F. Kennedy, the president who ordered the Bay of Pigs.

Christopher A. Erickson, Ph.D., is a professor of economics at NMSU. He teaches Latin American economic development. The views expressed may not be shared by the regents or administration of NMSU. Erickson can be reached at cherrick@nmsu.edu.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will on June 11, 2013 at 11:00 AM, Front entrance to the Doña Ana County District Court, 201 W. Picacho, Las Cruces, NM, sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title, and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following described real estate located in said County and State:

Lot 6, Block 5, Country Club Estates No. 6, in the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on Plat No. 969 thereof, filed for record in the Office of the County Clerk of said county on March 20, 1979, and recorded in Book 12, pages 244-245, Plat Records, Doña Ana County, New Mexico.

The address of the real property is 645 Frank Maes Ave, Las Cruces, NM 88005. Plaintiff does not represent or warrant that the stated street address is the street address of the described property; if the street address does not match the legal description, then the property being sold herein is the property more particularly described above, not the property located at the street address; any prospective purchaser at the sale is given notice that it should verify the location and address of the property being sold. Said sale will be made pursuant to the judgment entered on March 20, 2013 in the above entitled and numbered cause, which was a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $139,788.21 plus interest from December 12, 2012 to the date of sale at the rate of 5.250% per annum, the costs of sale, including the Special Master's fee, publication costs, and Plaintiff's costs expended for taxes, insurance, and keeping the property in good repair. Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash.

At the date and time stated above, the Special Master may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned with herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. Plaintiff and its attorneys disclaim all responsibility for, and the purchaser at the sale takes the property subject to, the valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property, affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land, deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property, if any, environmental contamination on the property, if any, and zoning violations concerning the property, if any.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above-described real property subject to rights of redemption.

Profile

Kathy Brook: Taking on a new leadership role

Associate dean to serve as interim business dean

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Kathy Brook sat at her desk in the New Mexico State University College of Business surrounded by stacks of papers and books. She's been busy for 16 years as associate dean for academics at the college.

"Once upon a time, I used to attend city council meetings," she said, recalling less hectic days gone by.

As interim dean, Brook is about to get even busier.

She confidently looks forward to continuing to be a leader in curricular and administrative matters.

Fundraising, however, is an aspect of her job that's new for her.

Her predecessor, Garrey Carruthers, embraced the role of fundraising during his tenure as dean of the college and director of development prior to taking over the NMSU presidency Saturday, June 1.

"The big area where I have not had much experience is in fundraising. I've been involved in how scholarships are awarded, but not in raising the money for them," Brook said.

"In the future I will probably be more involved with alumni than I have been."

Continuous improvement the goal

"We have a good group of department heads," Brook said. "I've worked with them closely – more closely during Dean Carruthers' tenure. We meet regularly. I think we're in good shape in that respect."

She described her leadership style as consensus building, an approach used in the League of Women Voters where she previously served as local president and state vice president.

One topic the business college leadership team will look at is how to improve the quality of undergraduate education.

"We have made a lot of progress in the past few years," Brook said. "We are taking advantage of electronic tools to gain compliance (with academic standards)."

Future discussions will likely focus on whether to raise admissions standards as well as performance standards.

A closer relationship with distance learners and curricular changes to reflect an increasing emphasis on entrepreneurship also may be in the offing.

BROOK

Changes must be approved by faculty. They are driven by feedback from students, employers and accrediting bodies, Brook said.

"Continuous improvement has always been an emphasis at the college," she said, adding that the focus is on the employability of new graduates and their ability to function as members of civil society.

"I want to remain closely linked to the community. I think we have a lot to contribute to how the community grows and develops."

Into the desert

Brook came to NMSU in 1980 as visiting faculty.

At the time, she was teaching at Smith College in Massachusetts, a prestigious liberal arts college for women.

Brook offered an anecdote to shed light on her experience at Smith. She related that soon after her arrival at the college, she had to cancel a class to attend a conference with departmental colleagues.

"The students were rather taken aback," she said, noting the high level of self-motivation they brought to their academic experiences.

"What I liked about Smith was the intimacy. I was able to go into the library and on my own word take out books. What I didn't like was it was also a small town, so I never really got away from my job."

She said she enjoyed the fall foliage and the opportunity to explore Boston and other nearby cities.

Then Brook heard from a grad school friend about an opening at NMSU and took the opportunity to return to the West.

She found her teaching role different at NMSU than at Smith, the culture more similar to the University of Texas at Austin, where she earned her Ph.D.

"NMSU was a big change for me," she said, adding that one of the things that appealed to her most was that the role of faculty was more important than at an elite private college.

Brook's first impression of Las Cruces was "a very friendly community."

"When I had dinner for a second night at a little restaurant on El Paseo that's no longer there, the waiter apologized for not knowing whether I took cream in my coffee," she said.

On the other hand, she had to get used to not having some of the cultural amenities she experienced during her time in the East.

"I couldn't walk into the PicQwik and get a New York Times," she said. "There used to be a little place – John's Newstand – downtown – that would get the Sunday times off the bus on Thursday."

Vagabond finds a home

Brook's father was an engineer, originally in oil and gas-related industries and later in semi-conductors and then the defense industry, she said. The family moved as his career evolved.

"We moved to Maine with the expectation my parents would retire there. We were there only a year before going to California," she said. "It was kind of addictive to start every year in a new location."

In spite of her earlier wanderlust, Brook turned her visiting professorship at NMSU into a long-term career path.

She accepted a permanent appointment in the economics department, where she taught introduction to money and banking, the New Mexico economy, business cycles and macro economics at the upper division and graduate levels.

The border economy became more of a focus of her research once she took root in the City of the Crosses. She later became research director and associate dean of the college.

Although most of her time as associate dean was devoted to administrative matters, she managed to teach one class year in conjunction with the Federal Reserve Bank of El Paso, dealing with monetary policy and the local economy.

She had administrative responsibility along with the college's department heads for the MBA program.

Her other duties included:

- Directing the distance learning program
- Meeting with students who were seeking rule exceptions

Borderplex business owner named Exporter of the Year

Ed Camden, president of Southwest Steel Coil (SSC), located in Santa Teresa, has been named 2013 New Mexico Small Business Exporter of the Year by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

The award was presented on Tuesday, June 4, at the Hotel Albuquerque in Old Town.

SSC is a processor and distributor of flat rolled steel and aluminum. SSC purchases large coils of steel and aluminum from producing mills across the U.S., Mexico and Asia. These coils are delivered via rail to the southwest facility in Santa Teresa, where they are processed into narrower slit coils, sheets or blanks for use by manufacturing companies.

Keller Williams welcomes three new associate brokers

Keller Williams announced the addition of real estate professionals David Barnhart, Christi Koch and Avery Causey to the team.

Barnhart actively began his real estate career in 1992 and through his deep-seated involvement in the Las Cruces Association of Realtors and Realtors Association of New Mexico legislative committees, has helped the public protect their property rights.

Koch obtained a general contractor's license in 2003 and crafted custom built homes for five years before obtaining her real estate license. She now actively serves her clients with an in-depth knowledge of real estate from foundation to finish.

Causey is a 20-year Navy submarine veteran and knows the value of finding top-performing people to leverage the best possible results for his clients.

Keller Williams Realty is located at 3780 Foothills Road, Suite C.

NMSU to host hops symposium

NMSU, with funding from the New Mexico Department of Agriculture, will host a symposium on hops production and marketing in the Four Corners Region Friday, July 12, and Saturday, July 13.

Friday's meeting will be from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Three Rivers Brewery banquet hall, 107 E. Main St. in Farmington. Saturday morning a tour of the experimental hops trial will be conducted at NMSU's Agricultural Science Center at Farmington.

The program will include discussions of market and brewer equipment demands, hops production in Colorado, economic forecast of hops in New Mexico, native New Mexico hops and other related topics by leading brewers in both states.

Pre-registration is encouraged; call 505-960-7757. Cost for the two-day event is $40, which includes lunch on Friday.

Local Realtors searching for more listings

Gary Sandler's
Real Estate Connection

It's a trend that's currently plaguing many real estate markets around the country: not enough inventory.

After many years of having more listings for sale than buyers who were ready, willing and able to purchase them, the Las Cruces real estate market now finds itself experiencing the same trend.

Our local listing inventory, which hit 1,745 units in 2007, now consists of around 1,100 new and existing homes, townhomes and condominiums. Until the end of 2012, even that reduced number was too high to absorb the meager number of buyers in our local marketplace. As a result, values continued to decline.

Not until this year did the balance of supply and demand finally catch up with other areas of the country and make an about face. Through Friday, May 31, Las Cruces area sales production and values have both been on the rise. Sales are up 7.3 percent over the same period last year, with total sales volume up by 9.9 percent.

The issue of a shortage of inventory becomes obvious in the $140,000 and lower price range. Through the first five months of 2012, a total of 221 properties sold at or below $140,000. This year, a shortage of good listings in that range has reduced the number of sales by more than 50 percent, to just 109 closings. The trend continues into the $160,000 price range.

Adding to the lack of inventory is the declining number of distress sales, which have fallen by 15 percent during the past year. As with any supply and demand model, the shortage of inventory is causing prices to move higher.

The average and median prices of the new homes sold through the first five months of this year ($202,540 and $190,000, respectively) represent a significant improvement over last year's respective average and median prices of $172,095 and $155,695.

The same is true for local existing-home sales, where this year's average and median prices of $174,880 and $147,800 are an improvement over last year's $172,095 and $140,000 values.

Well, there you have it. The behavior of the Las Cruces real estate market is beginning to catch up with the behavior of other U.S. markets, giving rise to the notion that 2013 will mark the year our local market began its recovery in earnest.

See you at closing.

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF DOÑA ANA COUNTY

ELECTION PROCLAMATION AND SPECIAL ELECTION RESOLUTION

RESOLUTION NO. 2013 - 44

NOTICE OF DOÑA ANA COUNTY SPECIAL ELECTION TO BE HELD ON JULY 30, 2013

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at a special election (the "Election") to be held in Doña Ana County, New Mexico (the "County") on Tuesday, the 30th day of July, 2013, there will be presented for vote to the qualified registered electors of the County the following question: "Shall Doña Ana County impose a countywide emergency communications and emergency medical and behavioral health services tax at the rate of one-quarter (1/4) of one percent (1%) of the gross receipts of a person engaged in business in Doña Ana County, including the incorporated areas of the County, for the purpose of funding operation of an emergency communications center that has been determined by the Local Government Division of the Department of Finance and Administration to be a consolidated public safety answering point; or operation of emergency medical services provided by the County; or behavioral health services within the County?"

The County shall dedicate the revenue from the countywide emergency communications and emergency medical and behavioral health services tax only for operation of an emergency communications center that has been determined by the Local Government Division of the Department of Finance and Administration to be a consolidated public safety answering point; or operation of emergency medical services provided by the County; or behavioral health services within the County.

A person is a qualified elector of the County if on the day of the special election he or she is a citizen of the United States, at least 18 years of age, and a resident of the County. In order to vote, qualified electors of the County must have previously registered with the Doña Ana County Clerk or any other voter registration agent in accordance with the law. As required by law, the date and time of closing registration shall be at 5:00 p.m. on July 2, 2013, that being the twenty-eighth day immediately preceding the day of the special election. Any qualified elector of the County who is not registered and who wishes to vote at the special election may register at the Doña Ana County Clerk's office, Las Cruces, New Mexico or at a designated agency as provided in NMSA 1978 § 1-4-1 et seq. during regular office hours prior to 5:00 p.m. on July 2, 2013.

QUE SE LLEVARÁ A CABO

POR MEDIO DE LA
PRESENTE, SE NOTIFICA que en la elección extraordinaria (la "Elección") que tendrá lugar en el Condado de Doña Ana, Nuevo México (el "Condado") el día martes del 30 de julio, 2013, se les someterá la siguiente cuestión a electores calificados inscritos del Condado para su votación:

"¿Deberá imponer el Condado de Doña Ana un impuesto por todo el condado para comunicaciones de emergencia y servicios de emergencia médica
y de terapia comportamental a una tasación de un cuarto (1/4) de uno por ciento (1%) de los ingresos brutos de las personas que operan negocios
en el Condado de Doña Ana, incluyendo las áreas incorporadas del Condado, con el fin de financiar las operaciones de un centro de comunicaciones de emergencia que sea determina-do por la División del Gobierno
Local del Departamento de
Administración y Finanzas
como un centro de recepción de llamadas de emergencia consoli-
dado; u operación de servicios

médicos de emergencia pro-porcionados por el Condado; o servicios de terapia de comportamental dentro del Condado?"

El Condado otorgará los ingresos del impuesto del con-dado para comunicaciones de emergencia y servicios de emergencia médica y de terapia comportamental sólo para la operación de un centro de comunicaciones de emergencia que haya sido determinado por la División del Gobierno
Local del Departamento de
Administración y Finanzas
como un centro de recepción de llamadas de emergencia consoli-
dado; u operación de servicios médicos proporcionados por el condado; o servicios de terapia comportamental dentro del Condado.

Una persona es un elector calificado del condado si en el día de la elección extraordinaria él o ella es ciudadano/a de los Estados Unidos, tiene por lo menos 18 años de edad, y es re-sidente del Condado. Para poder votar, los electores calificados

STATE OF NEW MEXICO COUNTY OF DOÑA ANA THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT COURT

Cause No. CV 2011 - 2421
Judge Manuel I. Arrieta

FIRSTLIGHT FEDERAL CREDIT UNION, Plaintiff,

v.

JOHN D. GALBREATH, JR., a/k/a JOHN DANIEL GALBREATH and MARCIE A. GALBREATH, a/k/a MARCIE A. THOMPSON, formerly husband and wife, and MIDLAND CREDIT MANAGEMENT, INC., a Kansas for-profit corporation, Defendants.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will, on the 27th day of June, 2013, at 10:00 a.m., at the east entrance of the Doña Ana County District Court, located at 201 W. Picacho Avenue, Las Cruces, New Mexico, sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following real property located in said County and State:

Lot 3, Block 14, LAS COLINAS PLANNED UNIT DEVELOPMENT PHASE IV-A, IN THE CITY OF LAS CRUCES, DOÑA ANA COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, AS SHOWN AND DESIGNATED ON THE PLAT THEREOF, FILED IN THE OFFICE OF THE COUNTY CLERK OF SAID COUNTY ON JULY 09, 1990, IN BOOK 16 PAGES 315-318 PLAT RECORDS.

Parcel ID Number: 02-22463 which currently has the address of 5178 Emerald, Las Cruces, New Mexico, 88001.

Said sale will be made pursuant to the Stipulated Judgment as to Defendant John D. Galbreath, entered on May 22, 2013, in the above-entitled and numbered cause, which, among other things, was a suit to foreclose a note and mortgage against all secured real property by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $132,974.57 through May 7, 2013, on which post-judgment interest shall run at 5.625% per annum until satisfied in full, which the Special Master calculates to be a per diem of $20.492656 for 51 days to the date of the Special Master's sale (the "Sale"), for total post-judgment interest of $1,045.13, together with attorney fees incurred and costs of sale to the date of sale, and a reasonable Special Master's fee. The Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit their bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash at the sale.

Bidders, to the extent that they do not have a judgment permitted to be bid in lieu of cash, must bid cash at the sale. The successful bidder will be given until the close of the second business day following the determination of the winning bidder to supply to the Special Master cash, certified check, or cashier's check in the amount of the bid. Failure to do so will void that bid, and the Special Master shall either accept the next highest bid, or the Special Master may, in her sole discretion, telephone each bidder who attended the sale, using the telephone number each bidder submits at the sale, and communicate a new date and time for a subsequent sale, without republication of any further notice. Responsibility for reception of notice of any subsequent sale is on the bidder submitting the telephone number.

Notice is further given that the above-described real estate and improvements located on such real estate will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein and all recorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. All prospective bidders are notified that they are responsible for making their own determination as to the extent and nature of the title being conveyed by purchase at the Special Master's sale.

NOTICE is hereby given that on February 7, 2013, Kevin S. and Jessica M. Wysong, 1705 Meadow Lane, Las Cruces, NM 88007 filed application numbered LRG-13138 POD2, OSE File No. LRG-13138-1, with the State Engineer for Permit to Change an Existing Water Right within the Lower Rio Grande Underground Water Basin in Doña Ana County by discontinuing the use of existing well, LRN07-0003 also known as LRG-13138 POD1, located at or near where Latitude and Longitude intersect at 32°21'51.049"N, 106°49'45.507"W, WGS84, on land owned by applicant and drilling a new well, LRG-13138 POD2, to a depth of 100 feet with 4 inch casing to be located within SW1/4 of projected Section 27, Township 22 South, Range 01 East NMPM, and more specifically at or near where Latitude and Longitude intersect at 32°21'51.295"N, 106°49'45.683"W, WGS84, on land owned by applicant, for the continued diversion of up to 3.0 acre-feet per annum for domestic one household use as described by Subfile Order No.: LRN-28-007-0037-A of the Third Judicial District Court, Doña Ana County, State of New Mexico. The site for proposed well, LRG-13138 POD2, is located northwest of Las Cruces, approximately 0.21 miles northeast of the intersection of Northwind Road and Meadow Lane. Old well LRN07-0003, also known as LRG-13138 POD1, will be properly plugged.

Any person, firm or corporation or other entity having standing to file objections or protests shall do so in writing (objection must be legible, signed, and include the writer's complete name, phone number and mailing address). The objection to the approval of the application must be based on: (1) Impairment; if impairment, you must specifically identify your water rights; and/or (2) Public Welfare/Conservation of Water; if public welfare or conservation of water within the state of New Mexico, you must show how you will be substantially and specifically affected. The written protest must be filed, in triplicate, with the State Engineer, 1680 Hickory Loop, Suite J, Las Cruces, NM 88005 within ten (10) days after the date of the last publication of this Notice. Facsimiles (faxes) will be accepted as a valid protest as long as the hard copy is hand-delivered or mailed and post-marked within 24-hours of the facsimile. Mailing postmark will be used to validate the 24-hour period. Protests can be faxed to the Office of the State Engineer, 575-524-6160. If no valid protest or objection is filed, the State Engineer will evaluate the application in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 72 NMSA 1978.

Conquering the mighty Rio Grande

16th annual Raft the Rio set – as long as there's water

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Despite tensions felt by a record drought in southern New Mexico, state land officials have assured the public that the occasionally mighty Rio Grande will see water released from the Caballo Reservoir in early June, setting the stage for one of the Mesilla Valley's most beloved events.

That's right – as dry as it is, on Saturday, June 15, the Rio Grande will be filled not only with precious water, but the with the shouts of amateur crews captaining dozens of makeshift seafaring vessels – some of which may actually float – in an attempt to conquer the fickle “big river” during the Southwest Environmental Center's (SWEC) 16th annual Raft the Rio.

In 1997, SWEC held its first ever Raft the Rio in an attempt to draw attention to the issues facing the Rio Grande, one of the country's most endangered rivers.

Since its inception, Raft the Rio has grown into one of Las Cruces' premier summertime attractions, with last year's annual event drawing nearly 1,000 people and as many as 200 rafts, created, captained and crewed by enthusiastic pseudo-sailors of all ages.

For nearly two decades, SWEC has sponsored the annual, family-friendly event that not only provides a great day of fun in the sun – and even some surf – but serves as a way for the community to connect with the natural world around them.

According to SWEC's Ashley Martinez, “Raft the Rio is really important for Las Cruces, and New Mexico as a whole, in bringing the community out to connect with the river.”

“Many people don't use it at all, and Raft the Rio is a great way to bring awareness to the Southwest Environmental Center and the projects we do,” Martinez said. “It's also a way for the community to get outdoors and connect with nature, and it's a lot of fun.”

The three-mile downstream journey begins at La Llorona Park, located on West Picacho Avenue, and ends at the bridge that crosses Calle del Norte in Mesilla, just north of the Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park.

Participants in the 14th annual Raft the Rio Raft Race and River Festival launch their rafts into the Rio Grande at the Mesilla Bridge starting line.

In keeping with the environmental and conservatory nature of the event and the mission of SWEC, rafters are strongly encouraged to build their own homemade rafts.

“The recycled rafts are a good way for people to put to use a lot of things they'd normally throw away,” Martinez said.

Prizes will be awarded to boats in a number of categories, including first to finish, best use of recycled materials, most spirited crew, best theme, best mascot – a new addition to the competition – and the perennial favorite, least likely to finish. A prize will also be awarded for this year's “Champion of the River,” the team that best promotes appreciation for the natural wonder that is the Rio Grande.

Teams may register at the starting line – La Llorona Park – beginning at 8 a.m. Saturday, or in advance by contacting the Southwest Environmental Center at 522-5552 or by visiting www.wildmesquite.org/events/Raft-the-Rio and downloading the available registration materials. The entry fee is $20 per raft in advance, with an additional $5 fee assessed on day-of registration, plus $5 for each crew member 13 years or older after the first two.

Two divisions – kids and open – begin at staggered times, with the Kids Division race starting at 10 a.m. and the Open Division race at 10:15 a.m. To qualify for the Kids Division, at least half of the raft's crew must be 13 years of age or younger.

In accordance with state law, all participants must wear approved personal flotation devices, and no motorized craft are allowed on the river.

Established in 1991, SWEC is a grassroots conservation organization based in Las Cruces. From its offices Downtown, SWEC and its members have dedicated themselves to protecting the native wildlife and habitats along the border through education, advocacy and community projects.

Breaking new ground

'Terra Nova' is a cutting-edge drama

Review by Gerald M. Kane

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The No Strings Theatre Company at the Black Box Theatre is to be applauded enthusiastically for its courage, vision, skill and insight.

Producer Ceil Herman is never afraid to take risks in selecting unusual, rarely produced plays.

I so admire, applaud and appreciate the many artistic risks Herman and her husband, Peter, have taken at No Strings since its inception more than a decade ago with Edward Albee's risky "Seascape."

Ceil Herman selects plays to produce that are "cutting edge" and otherwise would never find a venue in our community. Over the years, she and a coterie of especially skilled directors have mounted plays that examine issues that scream out for examination.

The current production, the 1984 best play writing Obie (best off Broadway play) award-winner, "Terra Nova" by Ted Tally, is no exception.

This masterful, powerful drama tells the tale of the final, ill fated expedition of Capt. Robert Falcon Scott and his crew of four to discover and explore the Antarctic region.

During the second of his two exploration ventures on his ship, the Terra Nova, from 1910-12, during which he reached the South Pole, Scott was devastated and emotionally bereft to discover that he and his crew had been preceded to the South Pole by a Norwegian expedition led by Roald Amundsen.

On their attempt to return to their ship, Scott and his crew all died from a combination of exhaustion, starvation and exposure to freezing blizzard conditions. Scientists believe Scott was the last of his team to die. He died in March 1912, but it took seven months for his frozen corpse to be discovered. It was covered with notes and his parka contained a journal he had written. These documents have become his legacy and are the source of much of the material for Tally's play.

Only after a restless night's sleep did the "Terra Nova's" message and Tally's artistic genius gel in my mind. I realized, and had my thought confirmed after reading the director's note in the program that Tally tells the story from Scott's "Dark Place Inside," from the perspective of Scott's deteriorating physical and mental condition. This is a stream of consciousness script, mirroring a confused mind, jumping from past to present to imagined past to the future as one would wish it to be.

An audience member must "work" to participate and benefit from gaining a full intellectual and artistic experience from "Terra Nova." Trust me, it is worth the effort. As the rabbis of old said in the Talmud, "According to the effort, so is the reward."

The cast is passionate and top notch. Director Algernon D'Amassa has done a superb job of melding them together as one. Each character has an English/Australian accent and there is no "slippage."

Each character's flaws come out as the play progresses. Scott, as portrayed expertly and sensitively by David Reyes, was known in England at the time of his death as "the bungler" because of the quality of some of his judgments. Ultimately he is redeemed as a great and venerated hero, whose snow tomb is topped by a cross on which is carved Tennyson's words from his poem "Ulysses" - "To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield" - and which is re-carved on his permanent memorial on Observation Hill overlooking Hut Point.

The mood of the production is in no small part due as well to an innovative set designed by Tiffini Raimann and magically enhanced by Peter Herman's outstanding lighting design. Ironically, I saw the Aurora Borealis photographed via time-lapse photography on television earlier in the day. Peter skillfully recreated the same effect electronically on the stage of the Black Box. It was miraculous! How the colors played against the set made me catch my breath.

The element that makes the production remarkably theatrical is the overbearing presence of Scott's nemesis, Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen, portrayed elegantly and deliberately obsequiously by master performer Bob Diven. Amundsen mystically appears in almost every scene, in subtle bullying ways, to remind Scott who really arrived at the South Pole first. Even in Tally's re-enactment of the famous expedition photograph, Amundsen appears in Scott's mind as being a part of the picture.

As Scott's mind meanders through the play, he reviews his courtship, marriage and ambivalence toward his wife, sculptress Kathleen Bruce, a student of Auguste Rodin, and whose social circle included Pablo Picasso and Isadora Duncan. Claire Koleske's portrayal of Bruce is both elegant and complex. Their

The work of the other crew members is also noteworthy. Each has a distinct personality, yet they work as one to meet their goal. Eric Young, Joe T. Meier, Charles LeCocq and Mark Steffen each play off of each other and have a knowledge of the many technical instruments and supplies, which are on loan from New Mexico State University's Department of Surveying Engineering.

Steffen, in particular, has the most challenging role, and he does an amazing job of making us feel his physical and mental pain.

In all, "Terra Nova" deserves your attention. It's an example of the best theater our community has to offer. Bravo to all!

Next season at the Black Box promises to be even more exciting, including a rarely performed production of Ingmar Bergman's "Nora," a take on Ibsen's "Doll House." Season tickets are on sale now. Invest in our community's cultural growth. You'll get a great return on your No Strings investment.

"Terra Nova" runs through Sunday, June 16. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m. June 9 and 16 and a Thursday evening performance at 7 p.m. June 13. Tickets are $10 regular admission, $9 students and seniors older than 65 and all seats on Thursday are $7. For reservations, call 523-1223.

Gerald Kane has reviewed theater, music, opera, film and books for NPR stations and newspapers in New Orleans, Phoenix and Kansas City as well as for the Las Cruces Bulletin. A former member of the American Theatre Critics Association, he is the Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El in Las Cruces and teaches "Jews on Screen" at NMSU.

Lorenzo's Mesilla Pizza & Pasta Express serves fast favorites

By Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Lorenzo's de Mesilla closed its doors last June, many, including myself, were distraught, left in a town bereft of owner and operator Lorenzo Liberto's pleasing pastas, gourmet pizzas and, of course, hot, fresh homemade bread. Oh, the bread!

A few months after the closure of the beloved Mesilla eatery, Liberto returned to the Las Cruces restaurant scene, bringing back his beloved food in a very different venue.

Opened in September 2012, Lorenzo's Mesilla Pizza & Pasta Express, 3000 Harrelson St., offers many of Lorenzo's best-loved dishes and customer favorites - but faster than ever before. Foregoing the traditional dining of his previous restaurants, the new Lorenzo's serves things hot, fast and to go from a modest kitchen just south of University Avenue.

Liberto has said that, after 17 years of devoting countless hours to his namesake restaurant, he had started to burn out. After the initial shock and panic following the business' closure last year, Liberto said he woke up one day and felt "as though a weight had been lifted."

Free from the burden of a full-service, 40-employee restaurant open seven days a week, Liberto said he has been able to focus on the two things most important to him: first and foremost, his family, and then his food.

Liberto, who welcomed a son, Santiago, to the family three years ago, said his newfound free time has allowed him more time with those most important to him - his son, wife, Ali, and daughter, Alma, who both help out in the Lorenzo's catering division.

"At the end of the day, it's over and I get to go home to my family and spend time with them, without constantly thinking about the restaurant," he said.

While Liberto may be taking a little bit of well-deserved time off, his devotion to the craft of fine food still speaks to the passion and talent that has made Lorenzo's a Mesilla Valley favorite.

With less time and energy expended on managing a large staff, Liberto has been able to get more involved with each and every dish that leaves his kitchen for your family's table.

"I feel like I've always had a good product, but that it's even improved since we closed the restaurant," Liberto said.

"I'm here every day, I've got my hands on the dough, and I've been really paying attention to the detail and the quality.

"I am making the dough, I am cooking - I'm back to being hands-on and making sure that everything that comes out of this kitchen is the quality my customers expect. The fact that so many people are enjoying this new concept is great," he said.

While Lorenzo's de Mesilla was one of the most pleasant restaurants in which to take a meal, now the impetus is on the customers to provide the atmosphere at home.

"Although I may not have the ambiance I did with the restaurant, the food is the same quality, and people are enjoying the fact that they can come by, pick it up and take it home," he said.

"I've always said, 'the best restaurant in town is still at home.'"

With Liberto in the kitchen preparing Sicilian classics the whole family will savor, it's easy to see how your own dining room table could pass for a five-star dining experience.

Favorite items from Lorenzo's de Mesilla are still available for carry out, including homemade soups, salads and pastas, and Liberto is hard at work, constantly creating new and exciting additions to the expanding menu.

A new addition - and one creation Liberto is especially proud of - is the red and green chile alfredo, rich, creamy sauce coating al dente pasta and loaded with the best chile the region has to offer, served with a salad and - what else? - an order of bread. Try it with grilled chicken on top for a fantastic, filling meal - for under $10.

This past month, Liberto made a change to the menu sure to get people talking - and eating.

Lorenzo's famous, gourmet pizzas, once available in the restaurant for nearly $20, are available all day, every day, for just $10.

Large classics such as the Bella Roma (fresh tomato, basil and garlic), the Mesilla Valley Special (pepperoni, mushrooms, green chile, jalapeños, black olives and green onions) and the Mediterranean (artichoke hearts, mushrooms, bell peppers, red onions, Greek olives and Feta cheese), as well as newcomers such as the salsa verde (green chile and tomatillo sauce, homemade Italian sausage, mushrooms, black olives, green onions, tomatoes - Lorenzo's own creation) are available from Lorenzo's each day, making for one of the best buys in town.

Sure, there's no shortage of cheap, fast pizzas in Las Cruces, but you won't find a pizza of this quality anywhere else in town - much less for this price.

"We're really excited to be offering these pizzas for just $10," Liberto said as he sliced into a Mesilla Valley Special straight from the oven - a Mesilla Valley Special that I, incidentally, ate all to myself. (Don't tell my coworkers.)

With a strong reputation built on 18 years of superb service to the Mesilla Valley, a devotion to quality ingredients and a passion for food coupled with quick, carry-out service and better-than modest prices, Lorenzo's Mesilla Pizza & Pasta Express is a welcome (re)addition to Las Cruces.

Now that's amore.

Honoring Arts Council patrons at the 27th Community Arts Awards

Photos by Zak Hansen

Chris Bardey and Shauna Foster accept the Debi True Rounds Newcomer Award for the West End Art Depot (WEAD) during the 27th annual Doña Ana Arts Council Community Arts Awards Thursday, May 30, at the Rio Grande Theatre.

Sally and Glenn Cutter, recipients of the John Glowacki Lifetime Achievement Award, take the stage to say a few words of appreciation.

City Councillor Greg Smith presents the Papen Family Award, sponsored by The Cutter Gallery, to Kathleen Squires. The Papen Family Award honors an individual who has demonstrated a commitment to the arts through leadership, service or financial support.

Ruben Smith, as "Christine McGuire," joins bandmates Barb Edmonds and Sue Caldwell for a rendition of the McGuire Sisters' classic tunes.

This movie is real (bad)

Review by Zak Hansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

"After Earth," the latest offering from the king of the twist – no, not Chubby Checker, but M. Night Shyamalan, the once-promising director of "The Sixth Sense" whose films have epitomized the phrase "diminishing returns" – has one more startling than perhaps any of the director's films: It's quite possibly his worst, a feat that looms as a bigger shock than any he's placed in his films, dead psychologists and killer plants included.

Based around an original story idea by its star, Will Smith, "After Earth" pairs Smith – the 11th highest grossing star in history – with his 13-year-old son, Jaden, playing ... well, a father and son.

As the film opens – "in the near future" – we learn that, due to some sort of environmental catastrophe, mankind was forced to lead a mass exodus from the uninhabitable Earth to the greener pastures outside the solar system, eventually settling on the utopian Nova Prime.

The elder Smith is Cypher Raige – a name even more ludicrous pronounced than spelled – a general with the Ranger Corps (a sort of space U.N. as far as I can tell), who comes into contact with the evil S'krell, aliens hell-bent on taking over man's newest home.

Using large, poorly rendered creatures that can smell fear (or something) called Ursas, the S'krell attack Nova Prime, but are repelled when Raige teaches his troops a technique called "ghosting," or eliminating fear.

His son, Kitai Raige, is intent on following in his father's footsteps and becoming a ranger, in large part due to the blame he feels over his sister's death, an event the audience is treated to – in fragmentary, second-long bursts – throughout the film.

Kitai is skilled but reckless in his training, and is rejected from the rangers, a disappointment in his decorated dad's eyes.

It's only a matter of time before someone – Kitai's mother – tells Cypher that his son "needs a father, not a ..." (in this case, commanding officer) and the hackneyed, poorly executed tale of paternal bonding takes shape.

Cypher is convinced to take his son on a mission – always a responsible, "take your child to work day" activity, especially for a military man – and the duo begin to bond until, wouldn't you know it, something blows up the ship.

Crash-landed on the "Class I Quarantined Zone," the elder Raige breaks both of his legs, and his son is forced to travel across the planet to locate the tail section of the ship to retrieve the backup beacon to activate the rescue signal to, well, you get the idea.

This paper-thin, rote premise isn't helped by terrible pacing and protracted, painfully forced platitudes stretched so thin for emotional weight the screenwriters must have blown out a period button, or three, on the ellipses alone.

Get ready to bask in banalities even worse than the movie's tag line – "Danger is real. Fear is a choice" – for 100 minutes of your life.

Hack-work dialogue like "every single choice you make will be life or death" is bad, but made so much worse – and much longer – when it's so full of dramatic pause it comes off as "every ... single ... decision ... you ... make ... will ... be ... life ... or ... death."

Smith and son stumble their way through this muddled mess of "Hang in There," kitten on a clothesline-caliber inspirational quotes about overcoming adversity and believing in yourself for about an hour and a half, punctuated at intervals with things resembling – but not quite – "action" and "narrative."

Oh, right – the narrative.

I didn't expect "After Earth" to break any new ground here. From the inciting incident to the final frames, the narrative arc is obvious – but it's so full of plot holes and continuity errors that serve to highlight just how rote this story is.

How – and this is only the most glaring example ... in the preview – does an entire planet of animals "evolve to kill humans" when humans have been off the planet for 1,000 years or more? Anybody have a ninth-grade biology book handy?

With a script that reads like a video game and dialogue that's so much worse – it only gets more contrived from the "he needs a father ..." line, somehow – "After Earth" could, theoretically, rest on its $130 million budget and top-end special effects ... right?

Here's another twist – no. They're terrible, too.

Perhaps the biggest letdown of all – and that's saying something – is that a real life father and son can't create any believable relationship of the sort onscreen. Will Smith spends the bulk of the movie lying down – seriously – and Jaden, bless his heart, couldn't act his way out of the pool house behind great Uncle Phil's Bel Air mansion.

'Angels' Share' proves everyone has a talent

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

So far, in this young year, "Angels' Share" takes the prize for my second favorite film of 2013, just ahead of "Blancanieves."

At once a believable drama blended superbly with a dry wit and flecked with out-right comedy, director Ken Loach has done well in switching gears in "Angels' Share."

In the past, most of Loach's work has focused on heavy drama, leaning heavily on socialism, soccer and Irish politics. With "The Angels' Share," he shows a knack for blending the absurd with the believable, which brought him the Jury Prize at the 2012 Cannes Film Festival for this work.

The film, which opens with a most funny scene in a courtroom where various ne'er do wells show that they have little common sense and even less reasoning power (and this is after a short sequence wherein a drinker hovers much too close to the rail tracks). In court we meet Robbie, a young man with a past, an attitude and no future. His outlook and aptitude are both off the charts and somehow he avoids jail one more time and is sentenced to 300 hours of community service for his latest transgression.

About to lose his girlfriend and their new baby, Robbie is getting desperate. A failed job interview, which is sadly funny in itself, pushes all involved to the edge.

With no discernible skills and with the bullies of a family who hold a grudge against him, and who want him to not have anything to do with his new son or their sister, Robbie reports, late of course, to his first day of community service. Told to leave by the gruff but ultimately kindly supervisor, Harry, Robbie is once again able to con his way into being allowed to stay.

During the community service, Robbie meets his future partners in crime. Helped along by the kindly Harry, who takes a liking to the lad, Robbie soon finds that he does have a skill after all – a knack for being able to tell good Scotch whiskey from bad. A skill that Harry also has, Harry is suitably impressed by Robbie's ability and takes him along (with his goofy new "friends") to a slightly high-brow tasting conference, which leads to a trip to an auction where one of the most valuable barrels of distilled beverage is due to be auctioned off.

It is here that Robbie's true nature comes about, as he and his friends plan a grand heist after witnessing the auction, where the John Barleycorn is sold for a princely sum.

Robbie and his "gang" plan is an advanced form of just that.

Loach has chosen a fine cast, especially newcomer Paul Brannigan as Robbie, and all members of the supporting cast help carry this film along briskly and with a touch of whimsy.

Prost!

I'm no angel ... jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com

FILM REVIEW

"Angels' Share" opens Friday, June 7, for one week at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla. Plenty of salty language, but also plenty of fun.

Built in 2013, the NetSolar Construction home at 3655 Santa Cecilia was featured on the Spring Showcase of Homes.

Contemporary-pueblo home so efficient, meter runs backwards

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

NetSolar Construction has once again shown that green and energy efficiency doesn't have to be boring with its 2013 Spring Showcase of Homes entry 3655 Santa Cecilia, in the Metro Verde subdivision.

Completed this year, the three-bedroom home features a pueblo style with contemporary touches, said Javier Cabrera, NetSolar co-owner, adding that this was achieved using structural insulated panels (SIPs) for the exterior walls and stick framing for the interior, which allowed for more design flexibility.

A red door leads into the 1,607-square-foot home, which can also be accessed from the two-car garage. The garage features an insulated door as well as an electric car charger.

Inside the home, next to the door leading to the garage, is a "drop area."

"When you come in from the garage, there is this transition area where you can store your shoes, bag and coat. And there is a charging station," said Cabrera, adding that the area includes an outlet with a USB port.

The Umbrella Mesh security system and Nest thermostat are located in the entrance area.

"It's a learning thermostat," said Emmanuel Dominguez, co-owner of NetSolar Construction. "It detects when they're in the house and when they're not."

"It also works with the Internet, so you can access the network from any smart phone, computer or tablet and have the temperature set to what you want," Cabrera said.

A hall leads to two of the bedrooms as well as a bathroom.

"The bathrooms have different style cabinets and countertops than the kitchen," Cabrera said. "They're Formica countertops. Also, the Formica cabinets are Green Guard certified."

An 11-foot-tall rotunda works as a transitional space between the bedrooms and the great room. A faux finish covers the ceiling, adding a pop of color to the gray color palette, as a modern-style chandelier lights the space.

The great room consists of the kitchen, dining room and living room, which allows occupants to interact while conducting different tasks.

Upgraded cabinets with glass doors and shelves and

Quartz countertops fill the kitchen. The gray backsplash features ceramic tile with mosaic glass tiles, an element found throughout the home in the bedrooms' thresholds and showers. Because the sink is located in the island, residents can still interact with guests sitting around the bar without turning their backs to them while working in the kitchen.

Exposed beams are placed along the 11-foot-tall ceiling in the living room. The built-in entertainment center with additional shelving also features the vibrant accent color found in the rotunda.

Near the living room is a hall that leads to the master suite. Located outside the master suite for convenience is the laundry room.

"It makes the laundry room more accessible and easier to use," Cabrera said.

The master bedroom features a tray ceiling measuring 9 feet tall. Windows are placed on either side of the bed and bring in natural light as well as the view of the Organ Mountains and budding Metro Verde subdivision.

The bedroom features a seamless, doorless entry into the master bathroom. Designed as a long rectangle, the tiled shower and double sinks are located to the right of the entrance, while the finished walk-in closet is to the left.

With this home, the builders decided to try something they hadn't done before: an outdoor living area, complete with built-in barbecue grill, wood burning fireplace and TV area. The tiled area features views of the Organ Mountains and other area landmarks.

The backyard features several newly planted pine trees and bushes. Surrounding them are pecan shells, gravel and bark mulch ground coverings.

"It has a rain sensor for the irrigation system," Cabrera said. "So if it rains, the irrigation system won't start."

Cabrera and Dominguez said they built the home to qualify as LEED platinum certification. In addition to SIPs, the home features CFL lighting; Energy Star appliances and windows; a high-efficiency heating, ventilation and air conditioning system; low-VOC (volatile organic compounds); solar panels; WaterSense-certified faucets; tankless hot water heater; and other eco-friendly, green products.

The home features a great room layout.

NetSolar used a contemporary style inside the residence.

Curved walls and clean lines fill the structure.

A gray color palette was used throughout the contemporary-Southwest home.

Solar installer chooses Las Cruces

Former Realtor opening local CST office

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

Consolidated Solar Technologies, an Albuquerque-based installation company with a national client base, is moving its southern New Mexico headquarters from Sunland Park to Las Cruces in summer 2013.

Opening the office for CST is Las Crucean Bruce Ball. "We decided to move from Sunland Park to Las Cruces because the Las Cruces market is stronger than the El Paso market," said Ball, who is representing CST in Las Cruces while waiting for the new headquarters space to become available.

Since the overall cost of solar is more appealing in New Mexico, demand in the state is stronger than in El Paso.

Ball said it costs almost twice as much to build a system there as it does in the City of the Crosses.

New Mexico property owners can take advantage of a 30 percent federal tax credit, 10 percent state tax credit and a 6 cent per kilowatt hour renewable energy credit from El Paso Electric Co., which will drop to 4 cents July 1.

Since El Paso property owners have to foot an 8 percent sales tax in addition, their costs for a solar system are much higher.

"Solar in Doña Ana is the most cost-effective in the state of New Mexico," Ball said. "Systems have come down in cost 40 percent in the last three years. With no down payment, you end up with a solar payment of less than your average electric bill."

Ball said that's been true in the case of every customer CST has served in Doña Ana County.

A company discount currently being offered in conjunction with the move to Las Cruces is an added incentive, he said.

CST spans residential and commercial

In addition to residential work, the company has installed systems for the Border Patrol checkpoints across southern New Mexico as well as at White Sands Missile Range and the University of Texas at El Paso.

The CST staff includes 70 commercial grade electricians. "It just goes hand in hand," Ball said. "The panels are only as good as the install."

CST installs an average of one system per day, working in all 50 states, Ball said.

When CST does a job out of state, it ships the components and flies two technicians to the site.

The company's volume buying makes even long-distance projects, such as one currently underway in Tennessee, cost effective.

Ball said CST installs most brands of panels and does warranty work on all. The company, however, is an elite dealer with preferred pricing from Sun Power Energy.

"We lead with Sun Power Energy panels because they're the most powerful in the world," he said. "They are used by the Department of Energy, Target, Walmart and FedEx."

Those companies do their homework, he said. Sun Power panels are 30 percent more efficient than any other brand, Ball said. They have a mirror plate inside that increases energy production.

"They have more than 200 patents and technology no other panel has," he said. "The circuitry is on the back of the panel so it is protected from breakage."

There is a 25-year warranty on both the product and the CST installation.

CST has its roots in Mosher Enterprises, founded in 1979. The largest electrical company in the state, it did solar installations throughout the 1990s. Consolidated, a spinoff, "became official eight years ago," Ball said.

NMSU and beyond

Ball came to Las Cruces in 1985, where he earned a bachelor's degree in computer science at New Mexico State University.

He chose to follow another career path, however.

"While I was at NMSU, I was working for Westinghouse for the Department of Defense at White Sands Missile Range," he said. "They went out of business just as I was finishing my last semester. A professor talked me into getting into real estate."

"Bruce, you're a little outgoing. Why don't you go into real estate?" he asked me.

The professor persuaded him by offering to pay for his real estate classes, and he decided to take the offer.

He became a Realtor, worked with several local RE/MAX offices and became an associate broker.

"Once you get into sales, it's hard to get out," he said. "I have 21 years of sales experience and I enjoy it very much."

His career also included 10 years in commercial sales with Xerox.

Throughout his years in business, he has been a member of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. He recently has returned to a role he enjoyed with the chamber, that of a Conquistadore.

"I believe in this town and I like to see its businesses prevail," Ball said.

He is looking forward to hosting a ribbon cutting in the near future when CST opens its new headquarters in Las Cruces. Meanwhile, the company is continuing to accept projects throughout Doña Ana County.

Bites can be dished up as appetizers, entrées

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

Meatballs aren't just for pasta. Petite-sized can be toothpick-speared and served as an appetizer or folded into a tortilla as a wrap; the grandes pair well with rice, mashed potatoes, quinoa, kasha or polenta.

Nearly every country in the world has a recipe version of the tasty bite, but Chile Head snobs such as us know that the best bites are those chockfull with pepper heat.

On a recent cyber-surfing jaunt, I came across a recipe for "loaded nacho meatballs," a clever concoction that I tweaked for Enchanters' fiery quests. Also on the meatball menu are bacon-chipotle pork and sriracha "sauced" turkey. Consider serving Dad one of these recipes on Father's Day, which this year falls (a kindly reminder) on Sunday, June 16. After all, he deserves a bite of the best.

Nacho Macho Meatballs

- 1 pound ground beef, preferably 80/20
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup white flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/2 cup sharp Cheddar cheese, shredded
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 3 tablespoon prepared salsa
- 2 tablespoons serrano peppers, stemmed and chopped

Toppers:

- 1/4 prepared favorite medium-hot salsa or other degrees of preference
- 4 slices horseradish white Cheddar cheese,

(I purchased mine already sliced, cutting each slice into triangles.)
16 jalapeño or serrano pepper slices
2 tablespoons sour cream

Combine meatball ingredients in a medium bowl and mix thoroughly. Form into 16 meatballs. Sauté in a large nonstick pan until golden brown and cooked to doneness, about 3 to 4 minutes per side. Arrange the meatballs on a microwavable casserole dish. Top each meatball with about 1 teaspoon salsa, and 1 cheese triangle. Microwave briefly until cheese melts. Remove from microwave and top each meatball with a dab of sour cream and a jalapeno slice. Makes 16 meatballs. (Recipe adapted from <http://ibreatheimhungry.com>)

Smokin' Bacon-Chipotle Pork Meatballs

- For meatballs:
- 2 slices bacon, minced
 - 2 garlic cloves, minced
 - 2 large eggs
 - 1/2 cup bread crumbs
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - 1 1/2 pounds ground pork
 - 2 teaspoons dried oregano or fresh mint, finely chopped
 - 1 to 2 teaspoons chipotle powder (or 2 teaspoons of adobo sauce)

- For chipotle sauce:
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
 - 1 medium onion, chopped, about 1 cup
 - 3 garlic cloves, minced
 - 1 to 3 canned chipotles in adobo sauce, minced fine (reserve sauce)
 - 1 (28-ounce) can crushed tomatoes, preferably with jalapeños

- 1 teaspoon Mexican dried oregano
- 1/2 cup beef broth
- Salt to taste
- Garnish: Cilantro, if desired

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Mix meatball ingredients thoroughly in a large bowl with clean hands.

With wet hands, form meat mixture into about 16 plum-size balls. Space them out in rows in a 13-by-9-inch baking dish. Bake until lightly browned, about 15 minutes.

While meatballs bake, heat the olive oil in a sauté pan over medium-high heat and sauté the onions until they just start to brown. Add the garlic and cook for 1 minute, then add the minced chipotles, the can of tomatoes, oregano or mint and beef broth. Mix well and add salt to taste. For more chipotle flavor, add the reserved chipotle sauce spoonful by spoonful, mixing and tasting between spoonfuls. Boil the sauce uncovered.

When meatballs are ready, put them into the sauce and toss to coat. For a thicker sauce, boil down to desired consistency. Serve with rice, tortillas, quinoa or polenta. Garnish with cilantro to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings. (Adapted from simplyrecipes.com.)

Sriracha "Sauced" Turkey Meatballs

- 1 pound ground turkey
- 1 egg beaten
- 1/3 cup dry plain bread crumbs
- 1/2 yellow onion, minced
- 2 green onions, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 2 teaspoons sesame seeds
- 2 tablespoons sriracha
- 3/4 teaspoon kosher salt
- 2 tablespoons peanut oil

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine all ingredients except peanut oil in a bowl. Mix well to combine. Roll into 20 meatballs. Heat peanut oil in a skillet over medium high heat. Cook meatballs until browned. Transfer to a baking dish. Bake in preheated oven for an additional 20 minutes or until cooked to doneness. Transfer to a serving platter sprinkle with more sesame seeds and chopped green onions if desired. Makes 20 meatballs.

Correction: My May 10 column wasn't too hot. The featured sriracha sauce recipes caught the attention of two Chile Knights readers. Harry M. emailed, "Everyone on the Food Network and other media in the U.S. pronounce it as you indicate in your column, i.e. Sir-rotch-ah, or Si-ratch-ah. That is the U.S. mispronunciation of an Asian (Thai) word. Remember, SE Asians don't pronounce the 'R' as an 'R.' Again, remember, 'fied lice' (fried rice). The correct pronunciation is "Si-La-Cha". If you go to Thailand, or eat in a Thai restaurant here in the states, ask for it as "Si-La-Cha" sauce. Keep up the great work." (Thank you Harry for the clarification.)

Ruth D. emailed: "I need a clarification for the Sriracha burger. It calls for 2 1/2 tablespoons of sriracha, 'divided,' but the recipe instructions say combine 2 1/2 tablespoons in the mixture. My question is why does it say, 'divided'? Also is there a recipe for the Sriracha Roasted Pepper Sauce called for in the salmon and cauliflower recipe?" (Oops. Rather than "divided," I should have written, "or to taste." The missing recipe follows. Thanks for the catch, Ruth!)

Roasted Red Pepper Sauce

- 1 large red bell pepper, roasted, and peeled
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 teaspoons sriracha
- 1/4 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Combine all of the ingredients in a bowl of a food processor. Purée to form a smooth consistency. Makes about 3/4 cups.

Las Cruces Day Trips

Wonders can be found within a simple day's drive from Las Cruces

By David Salcido
Las Cruces Bulletin

Summer is here and that means vacation time. If you're not able to fly somewhere exotic or take the family on an extended road trip to cooler climes, you can always take in the sights locally, via a simple day trip.

Sure, many of them are well known, but several aren't, and chances are pretty good that no matter how long you've lived in Las Cruces, you haven't seen them all. Here are a few you may have missed.

Heading north? You've probably already dipped a toe into Caballo or Elephant Butte lakes, soaked in the tubs of T or C, quenched your chile habit in Hatch and taken the bi-yearly excursion to the Trinity Site. What else is there to do up north within a day's drive?

For starters, you might consider walking the trails of history at Fort Selden State Park, located on the east bank of the Rio Grande River, one mile southeast of Radium Springs. Established in 1865 as protection for settlers in the Mesilla Valley from marauding desperados and Apaches, Fort Selden is a window to the past, offering exhibits on frontier and military life with occasional living history demonstrations on select weekends. Take exit 18 off Interstate 25 toward NM 185. For more information and visiting hours, call 526-8911.

Then there's the cosmic majesty of the Very Large Array (VLA), located 50 miles west of Socorro off U.S. Highway 60. In addition to being the backdrop for the 1997 Jodie Foster movie "Contact," the VLA is one of the great engineering feats of the 20th century, featuring 27 goliath dish antennas all trained on the heavens, in search of intelligent life in the great, vast unknown. The VLA hosts free 30-minute guided tours on the first Saturday of each month. To get to the VLA, take U.S. 60 to state Highway 52 then follow the signs. For more information, visit www.vla.nrao.edu/genpub.

Turning your compass east, there's a plethora of choices, including the many scenic trails of the Organ Mountains, White Sands Missile Range Museum, White Sands National Monument, New Mexico Museum of Space History in Alamogordo and the mountain towns of Ruidoso and Cloudcroft. All are great choices for the casual day tripper, as are the following.

Just north of Tularosa you'll find the turn-off to Three Rivers Petroglyph Park, one of the largest petroglyph sites in the Southwest. With several trails to choose from and hundreds of images and symbols dating back 700 to 1,100 years, Three Rivers is a cultural bonanza. Afterward, wander along the shady river banks of one of the most beautifully secluded wilderness areas in the state. To get there, drive 17 miles north of Tularosa on U.S. Highway 54, turn east onto County Road B30 and follow the signs. Day use is $5 per vehicle. For more information, call 525-4300.

If the Sacramento Mountains are your destination, why not try Sunspot National Solar Observatory, one of the premiere heliocentric laboratories in the world, located a mere 16 miles south of Cloudcroft. A visitor's center offers interesting facts and exhibits, while a free self-guided tour takes you along a walking path through the cool pines to various structures offering a time capsule of space age technology. For more information on Sunspot, visit www.nso.edu/pr or call 437-6822.

South is the direction where El Paso lies, offering metropolitan fare such as the El Paso International Museum of Art, the El Paso Museum of History and for the brave of heart, Ciudad Juárez. Already seen those? Never fear.

Located in El Paso's lower valley, the historic Mission Trail will take you hundreds of years into the past where three adobe churches – Ysleta Mission (est. 1862), Socorro Mission (est. 1843) and San Elizario Chapel (est. 1789) still stand as reminders of a bygone era. Along the nine mile route connecting the missions are galleries, restaurants, boutiques, bookstores, museums and even a petting zoo for the kids. Discover this gateway into the past by visiting www.visitelpasomissiontrail.com.

Just 32 miles northeast of El Paso lies Hueco Tanks State Park, located off U.S. Highway 62/180, then north on Ranch Road 2775. Named for the large natural basins that dot the huge volcanic outcropping of rock formations, Hueco Tanks is a virtual goldmine of activities including hiking, rock climbing and guided tours of more than 2,000 pictographs and petroglyphs. More information can be found by visiting www.tpwd.state.tx.us/state-parks/hueco-tanks or calling 800-792-1112.

To the west lies adventure in the form of the City of Rocks, Rockhound State Park, Faywood Hot Springs, the Gila Cliff Dwellings and the Mogollon Catwalk. A true Las Crucean will already have walked those trails at least once. But what about the hidden treasures?

Past Deming and south of Lordsburg, lies Shakespeare, considered the West's most authentic ghost town, where you can walk the streets trod by Billy the Kid, John Ringo, Curley Bill, The Clanton Gang and more. With 28 points of interest, including the Shakespeare Cemetery, and a guided tour that includes the interiors of seven buildings, the flavor of the Old West has never been so tantalizing. Shakespeare is 2.5 miles south and west of Lordsburg on state Highway 494 (Ghost Town Road). For more information, call 542-9034.

If the Gila is your choice, a little known stop is the Ben Lilly Monument and one of the most spectacular views you'll find in the area. Just three miles north of Pinos Altos – where a quick drink may be had at the historic Buckhorn bar and hours can be lost in the Pinos Altos Historical Museum – you'll find a small sign on the side of the road, at the high point of a hairpin curve. An easy 900-foot walk will bring you to a plaque, erected in 1947. Continue around the outcropping to the rocky shelf beyond and prepare to be amazed.

These are obviously just a sampling of the many uniquely southern New Mexican wonders to be found within a day's drive of Las Cruces. Just remember, this is wilderness country and preparation is key. A hat, solid shoes, sun screen, water and a camera should always be on your inventory list. Have fun and be safe!

Solar incentives are still worth the savings

Rate change for tax incentive to come in July

Mellow Honek
Living Better Solar Powered

Whenever I mention incentives are dropping, the reaction is often "Oh, the tax credits are going away?"

No, the tax credits will be here for a few more years. The declining incentive is one you probably never heard about.

It's the incentive that shaves years off the time required for the solar PV system to pay you back. It even makes it possible to start with a smaller system investment and still eliminate your electric bill. What is this magic incentive? It's known as the REC program – an acronym for Renewable Energy Certificates. It really means big savings and even cash in your pocket.

It has been much more difficult to get the word out on this incentive. It's a bonus program that pays you for every kilowatt hour generated by your system. That's right, every kilowatt hour. Even the ones you use to power your coffee maker or microwave. You get paid for all of them.

By acting in time, which is now, to take advantage of the current 6 cent program, you can achieve a zero electric bill with fewer solar panels. This feature shaves thousands of dollars off the initial system investment.

The REC is currently 6 cents per kilowatt hour. Beginning July 1, it drops to 4 cents until Dec. 31, when it drops further to 2 cents. Solar PV will still deliver a good investment, but you can really score by taking advantage of the historically low system prices offered by the industry and leverage that benefit with the higher 6 cent incentive. Quicker action not only gets you the higher incentive, you also get to enjoy it for a greater length of time. You see, the entire program, regardless of incentive level, ends Dec. 31, 2020. So if you grab the higher incentive, you also secure a longer term in the program.

The accompanying graph shows the greater benefit from the current 6 cent program versus what you get if you wait for the lower 4 or 2 cent programs. What you're seeing is how much you would receive in bonus payments (REC payments) for the electricity you will generate over the remaining life of each program: 6 cents, 4 cents or 2 cents. The values in the graph are based on a system sized to eliminate a $100 electric bill using the current 6 cent program. If your current bill is higher, the differences become even more dramatic.

To lock in the current program rate of 6 cents per kilowatt hour, contract a new system before the end of this month. It is not necessary to have your system installed until Dec. 31 to maintain the higher rate, but you must be contracted and the applications approved.

The time for thinking is over – set aside your thinking cap and put on your running shoes. Don't let financing be a hurdle. There are numerous ways you can finance your system. Many will simply replace your current never-ending electric bill with a lower, tax deductible, temporary loan payment. Now is the time to get solar and score the best return.

Life Warrior: problem solving skills

Michael R. Hurst,
MS, LADAC, CEAP
Life and Work Solutions

Problem solving is becoming a lost skill among American citizens. Too many people find themselves depending on other people to find the solution to their problems.

This lack of rugged individualism will result in many of our friends and neighbors settling for solutions that another person determines. In order to solve a problem, a person must make a decision. Following the steps of the decision-making process to solve problems will prevent the pitfalls of group thinking and the failure to make a personal decision.

The process follows these steps:

- Define the problem
- Gather the facts and information
- Develop courses of action/decisions
- Select a course of action/decision
- Utilize the course of action/decision
- Evaluate course of action/decision

An example of a problem many individuals and agencies have is spending more money than what is being earned.

First, gather facts and information on the spending problem. If you are spending money on wants rather than needs, then you're spending money on the wrong category.

You need to spend the money on needs first, and then wants. This will put you on a track to resolve your financial situation.

Second, you must gather all the available information on your spending priorities, and determine where you can reduce or stop the money leaving your bank account.

The third step is to develop at least three courses of action/decisions. This will ensure that you have conducted a complete analysis of your budgetary situation vs. spending situation. The reason you should develop three possible courses of action/decisions is that you can rank them. This ranking will give you an opportunity to determine the least painful monetary decision with the greatest benefit.

Select your course of action/decision to solve the problem. This should be the course of action/decision that resolves your problem. If you have done an objective analysis without pre-determination, the problem will stay solved. If spending is still a problem, then the last step will assist in re-evaluation.

You must be vigilant and evaluate your course of action/decision objectively. If you find that you are still spending more money than you are earning,

Little things matter most Active duty vet makes big local impact

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Editor's note: This is part four of a 10-story series describing the heroic efforts of local citizens and organizations recognized and honored as 2013 Red Cross Real Heroes.

It might be the end of summer before Sgt. Maj. William Apodaca-Fisk finally gets to hop on his Harley for a ride through the Mesilla Valley.

He's been waiting for the better part of the year to do so, after his last deployment to Afghanistan left him needing several spinal surgeries that have long recovery times.

Fisk hasn't let his injuries get the better of him – they actually seemed to have given him more time to devote to his family and numerous charity causes he's involved with.

After a 24-year career with the Army, Fisk is credited with seven combat tours, and is currently assigned as the executive officer of the Sergeants Major Academy at Fort Bliss.

He is also the commander of chapter 47-1 Combat Veterans Motorcycle Association, vice president of Mesilla Valley Community of Hope and co-chair of Willie's Heroes Community Foundation for Wounded Warriors.

"We all come back with some scars – physically and mentally," Fisk said. "Doing this definitely helps with the mental scars. You feel like you're doing some good for your brothers and sisters, for the soldiers that didn't come back, you honor their service by finding ways to continue to serve."

Together with the help of several organizations and their volunteers, Fisk raised more than $100,000 to give back to veterans in 2012.

"I've been very fortunate to be surrounded by heroes and a lot of great people," Fisk said.

What started out as a group of friends sending care packages while he was deployed, Willie's Heroes evolved into an organization of farmers, ranchers and business owners coming together to send comfort items to soldiers under Fisk's command in Afghanistan.

"I asked them to send socks and underwear," Fisk said. "I know it seems kind of small. But when (the injured) are being moved from one hospital to a helicopter to another hospital, to another helicopter, and they're sitting there with no dignity left ... I tried my best to provide some comfort."

Willie's Heroes now organizes an annual chile roast to benefit wounded warriors coming home who have immediate needs the military can't readily provide.

"We were able to do some significant donations to some wounded warriors ... computer donations for those starting college or helping homeless vets get into transitional housing," Fisk said.

The Combat Veterans Motorcycle Association can be seen at fundraising events as well, volunteering to take supplies and donations where they need to go to make a difference.

As the vice president of the Community of Hope, Fisk also tries to help veterans of all ages get back on their feet.

"That's where I've been able to help is not necessarily doing it myself, but pulling people's resources together and working together," Fisk said.

Fisk said being a member of groups that have similar interests and stories to share helps lift the mental burden of injuries or losses incurred while in the military.

"What I've discovered is that by continuing to serve, by seeking out veterans in my community and finding ways to help them, I honor those that fell," he said.

"I sleep a little better knowing that I'm doing what they would have wanted me to carry forward."

For his family – wife and four children – the chance to attend events and help the cause is not only a way to give back, but also a chance to spend precious time with their hero.

Fisk's daughter Carolyn, 16, said she even likes to ride with him when she can.

"It's nice to see someone that's so selfless and that puts other people before himself," Carolyn Fisk said. "I think that everyone can benefit from seeing someone like that every day."

Fisk has been recognized with numerous combat and service awards, including the Purple Heart and four awards of the Bronze Star for Valor.

Sgt. Maj. William Apodaca-Fisk was honored with the Military Hero Award by the American Red Cross during their annual Red Cross Real Heroes event Wednesday, May 8. Fisk has served in the Army 24 years, and has gone on seven deployments. He gives back to his community through a number of service organizations.

He was honored with the Military Hero award from the Red Cross Real Hero's event Wednesday, May 8.

The next event for the motorcycle club is the New Mexico State University Student Veterans Association third annual Ride to Remember 9/11 at 10 a.m. Sept. 7, beginning at Barnett's Las Cruces Harley Davidson.

Cancer patients have therapy options

Integrative center opens for comfort services

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

Cancer or other life-threatening illnesses may be the hardest thing a person has to attempt to overcome – physically and emotionally.

Treatments can be burdensome on the body, mind and especially on a financial situation.

According to the National Cancer Institute, palliative care addresses the emotional, physical, practical and spiritual issues of cancer, and research shows that palliative care improves the quality of life of patients and family members.

For years, the only medically directed palliative and integrative care clinic in New Mexico has been the Center for Life, a part of the University of New Mexico medical school – an impractical option for cancer patients living in the southern part of the state.

A closer option for Las Cruces residents and cancer patients opened on May 15 at 141 Roadrunner Parkway, Suite 226.

The Integrative and Palliative Care Center of Las Cruces is owned by Jim Clear, a member of the New Mexico Cancer Council and licensed oncology massage instructor and provider.

"I've been across the U.S., from the East Coast to the West, from the Canadian border down to the Mexican border, looking at how cancer patients receive treatment and what's available," Clear said. "There are towns much smaller and much larger, and they have been offering this kind of service and these kinds of therapies since the late '80s ... it's high time we had it."

Volunteer your talents

Others benefit from time given

Julie Maager
Caring Decisions

I have frequently written in the past about the six dimensions of well-being we try to embrace at Good Samaritan Society – the physical, intellectual, spiritual, emotional, social and occupational.

The idea is that you need to stimulate and nurture all these areas of your life to have a truly healthy and fulfilling existence.

One that I struggled with at first, within this setting, was the occupational. Everyone in this community is retired – their occupations are in the past.

That was a much too literal interpretation of the word. While I might find fulfillment in my job and developing the skills that serve me in my career, retirees get to embrace a broader (and potentially more interesting) definition of occupational.

When we speak about occupational in this context, it is about finding fulfillment in using your skills and talents – sometimes to help others and sometimes just for pure enjoyment.

Talent and skills are qualities in no short supply at Good Samaritan Society – Las Cruces Village. I am continually awed by the talented and accomplished people who live here. I am also impressed that they continue to use their talents in so many productive ways.

One of our community's pride and joys is our library. A committee of more than two dozen residents does all the hard work of sorting donations, cataloging books, DVDs and videos, re-shelving, periodically culling the collection, making purchases, organizing the annual book sale and more.

"This library is absolutely the result of all the residents," said Marnie Leverett, a volunteer. "We have a lot of book-oriented people here."

Leverett has been a life long volunteer in many capacities, including serving with the Junior League and League of Women Voters. When she lived in Ames, Iowa, she attended a training course to be a volunteer library worker. When she moved to Las Cruces, she served on the library advisory committee at Branigan Library. When she moved to Good Samaritan 12 years ago, volunteering with the library committee was a natural fit.

Another area at Good Samaritan for which we rely on volunteers is our Village Store. Stocked with reasonably priced jewelry, shawls, cards, gift items and sweet treats, the gift shop is a favorite of residents and visitors. Funds raised by the store operations benefit special purchases for the residents, such as a recently acquired bus with a wheelchair lift.

Resident Nadine Center is a faithful volunteer at the store. With many years of experience working in retail, "it was just natural for me to help in the store," she said. "I like to be out and about and be helpful."

Center might be one of Good Samaritan's poster children for the idea of embracing all different dimensions of well being. In addition to volunteering in the store and other capacities, she goes to our weekly Bible study, is a loyal attendee of water exercise classes and is active in her church.

"Life is monotonous if you just stay in your apartment all the time," she said.

At 93, (she said I could use her age – I promise, I asked), she is one of my inspirations for what old age can look like.

While using your skills for the benefit of others is certainly admirable, there is also nothing wrong with developing your talents for your own sheer pleasure. Retirement is an excellent time to do just that.

Bill, did not take up art until after retiring from a 30-year teaching career. After starting with oil painting, Porter worked with pastels, her current favorite.

However, she had gotten away from her art for awhile until moving to Las Cruces Village and joining the Saturday art group. The group meets every other Saturday in the creative arts room to socialize and create. The Saturday I visited, there were a half dozen people working on various projects in various media.

"Here was my chance to get into it again," Porter said. "I really like pastels; they're fun. If you have a question, you just ask, 'Should this be darker?' 'Should I use more orange?'"

Across campus, I see many more people continuing to use their talents, from tending roses to creating things in woodshop to volunteering in the community in various capacities. Our most vibrant and lively residents are the ones who know there is more to retirement than just putting up your feet.

Julie Maager is the marketing coordinator for the Good Samaritan Society-Las Cruces Village. Good Samaritan Society is a not-for-profit provider of senior care and housing services. Good Samaritan is located at 3025 Terrace Drive and offers senior apartments, assisted living apartments, long-term nursing care, memory care, post-surgery/illness rehabilitation care and home health services. For more information, call 522-1362.

re-evaluation is critical. Review your course of action/decision for possible adjustments. You must not be so rigid or stubborn that you can not adjust your problem-solving plan.

History is full of individuals and organizations that failed to be objective in their problem solving. Those of us who have experienced life and death environments and decisions know this failure of objectivity and flexibility could cost our life or the life of somebody we are responsible for.

In conclusion, learn and apply the life warrior problem solving skills and enjoy the life you were meant to live. Life will be less stressful, healthier and more rewarding.

Cancer center

The services Clear spoke of include certified oncology massage, medical and therapeutic massage, mind-body therapies and personalized support and wellness programs for those with cancer and cancer histories.

The center's goal is to reduce the burden of cancer and its impact on citizens of Las Cruces and New Mexico.

The center has a vision for the future of cancer care in the area, as well.

"We're talking with integrative clinicians, palliative care specialists, social workers, clinical pharmacists. ... We're talking about expertise being offered to patients on a level that just hasn't been available," Clear said.

Clear said Las Cruces currently operates at a volume-based, standard-care model, and needs to transition into a value-driven model, which includes shared decision making on the part of the patient to be able to decide themselves which doctors, nurses, physicians and therapists are best for them.

"It's the beginnings of a multi-disciplinary team – the framework is in place," Clear said. "That's the purpose of this center – to make it available to everyone in the area, reduce that burden by nurturing and supporting (patients) with the best medical care they can get and then offer it at a controlled cost."

Clear said many times patients go untreated because of the cost of drugs and treatment, which isn't going to get any better as the cost of health care is on the rise.

Offering therapies and services at a fixed cost, and then educating family members and care givers on how to properly administer the therapy at home, can save on the cost and time of travel and care.

"Our main focus is on the overall needs of the patient. They become our world," Clear said.

For more information, call Clear at 405-1484 or visit the Integrative & Palliative Care Center of Las Cruces at 141 Roadrunner Parkway, Suite 226.
