Spaceliner first flight successful

Rocket engine hits Mach 1.2

By Todd G. Dickson

Virgin Galactic's new, larger spaceliner successfully took its first rocket-power flight Monday, April 29, which was hailed as a milestone for the company's plans to take paying customers into suborbital space from New Mexico's spaceport.

For 10 minutes, SpaceShipTwo (SS2) was powered by the largest hybrid rocket engine of its kind to reach a top speed of Mach 1.2 over the Mojave Desert in California, where Virgin Galactic is creating the system to carry two pilots and six passengers.

The test, conducted by teams from Scaled Composites and Virgin Galactic, officially marks Virgin Galactic's entrance into the final phase of vehicle testing prior to commercial service from Spaceport America, according to a press release issued by Virgin after the flight.

"The first powered flight of Virgin Spaceship Enterprise was, without any doubt, our single most important flight test to date," said Virgin Galactic Founder Richard Branson, who was on the ground in Mojave to witness the occasion. "For the first time, we were able to prove the key components of the system, fully integrated and in flight. Today's supersonic success opens the way for a rapid expansion of the spaceship's powered flight envelope, with a very realistic goal of full space flight by the year's end. We saw history in the making today and I couldn't be more proud of everyone involved."

WhiteKnightTwo (WK2), Virgin Galactic's jet-powered carrier aircraft, took SS2 to 47,000 feet, where it was released and pilots Mark Stucky and Mike Alsbury triggered ignition of the rocket engine for a 16-second burn that propelled SS2 to a height of 55,000 feet at supersonic speed.

"The rocket motor ignition went as planned, with the expected burn duration, good engine performance and solid

Duo continues quest for local VA center

Mayor awaiting VA response

By Todd G. Dickson

In summer 2011, it seemed like a slam dunk for two men trying to get the city to back a proposal to set up a Veterans Administration center in Las

Leo Miranda, a Navy veteran of the Korean War, with assistance from Stephen Conn, presented a petition signed by 724 local veterans and their families calling for the establishment of a one-stop center for veteran services that would include providing enhanced medical care

Mayor Ken Miyagishima assured the men they would find support from the council to offer help in getting a VA center.

At the time, supporters of Miranda's petition were pushing for the city to offer the old abandoned hospital, used to house some city functions before the City Hall was built. Miranda said that building didn't have to be the only option

Having the city make available property for the one-stop center would make the idea more attractive to the VA, Miranda said. Miyagishima said it would cost $750,000 to remove asbestos from the old hospital building, but Miranda and Conn said they were told the city had other properties that could be considered. With some additional information, a resolution could be passed

Udall seeks cooperation in response to drought

Senator releases report offering proposals on water shortages

By Todd G. Dickson

Las Cruces Bulletin

Standing next to a nearly bone-dry Rio Grande at La Llorona Park Tuesday, April 30, U.S. Sen. Tom Udall released a report of recommendations from last year's "Hard Choices" water conference held at New Mexico State University.

Three years into a severe drought, Udall said the conflicts between agricultural and residential use, as well as potential federal litigation with Texas and New Mexico disagreeing on how much of the river water each state deserves, has driven home the value of water in the Southwest.

"We always need to be very careful with our water," Udall

Another slight snow pack means little new water flowing to the Elephant Butte Reservoir, so water won't be released for irrigation until June, the latest release since the dam began supplying water for agriculture in 1916, said Phil King, a consulting engineer for Elephant Butte Irrigation District.

Sam Fernald, interim director of the New Mexico Water Resources Research Institute that co-hosted the water conference with Udall, said the drought's severity is beginning to hit home as

Additions to East Mesa campus expand DACC

Buildings, courtyard provide facility more traditional college atmosphere Wandering across the Doña Ana Community College East Mesa campus recently gave me a vision of what it might look like in 15 years, when the trees are much bigger.

Tuesday, April 23, the college dedicated its phases six and seven on the East Mesa Campus. The 66,500-square-foot Student Resources Building, which includes services and academic programs, completes the enclosure on the campus courtyard.

The courtyard was a little toasty Tuesday as the spring sun shone down on the concrete. Dozens of young trees, however, will before long start providing significant shade to the area, creating a beautiful setting in which to learn.

The majestic buildings around the courtyard are a far cry from a trailer, which was the first DACC building. At the Tuesday event, DACC President Margie Huerta recounted those early days, which included a persistent water leak. It created a sort of "Aggie Pond, only a lot stinkier," she said.

The academic programs the new building provides include culinary arts, emergency medical services, law enforcement, education, public health and hospitality and tourism.

The culinary arts program has a multi-station kitchen and two cooking demonstration classrooms. Attendees at Tuesday's event were able to sample some of the students' wares, such as burritos, breads and desserts.

I've always believed that, on any given day, there are enough burritos made in Doña Ana County to provide one for every man, woman and child who lives here.

DACC now can add to that total.

One of the coolest things that happened Tuesday was the presentation of a check for $14,000. That money – with local contributors such as Ramada Hotel and Conference Center, the Dickerson Group, De La Vega's Pecan Grill & Brewery, DACC's Kim Seifert and others coming on board – will go into a scholarship fund for culinary arts students.

Two-thirds of the funds for the $18 million building came locally, through general obligation bonds passed in 2008. In other words, you paid for this building.

Education has ostensibly changed a great deal the past 20 years or so.

The advent of online education and technology has opened up some doors for people, but also raises questions of the quality of education.

For old guys like me, online teaching will always seem substandard to the teacher at the front of the classroom and interaction with fellow students. Today's younger students, however, have never known a world without cell phones, the Internet and iPods. For them, online education is second nature.

The DACC East Mesa campus - which is now 10 years old, if you can believe that - is starting to look and feel like a more traditional college.

Make no mistake, DACC remains on the front of the technology edge. A fair chunk of that $18 million price tag ensures that. Still, the beautiful architecture from the Williams Design Group and the wonderful landscaping will cause even the most buried-in-his-cellphone-and-earbuds student to look up on occasion and appreciate the surroundings.

During my long-ago college days at Oklahoma State University, I found the architecture and park-like setting of campus to be a great antidote to the stress of reading, studying, research, reports, labs and test-taking. Just walking across a campus like that can be a form of meditation and preparation for learning.

Every day, it seems, we're hit with another report of the importance of higher education for our citizens to find and keep better paying jobs.

All over Las Cruces, you'll find successful people who got their start at DACC.
DACC is also an important part of our local economy, providing hundreds of jobs in the community

Take the time to go visit this wonderful asset to Doña Ana County.

Letter to the Editor

Carruthers opposed

Garrey Carruthers, dean of the New Mexico State University Business College, former governor, successful businessman and a graduate of NMSU, spoke to a small group of students Tuesday, April 23. His opening statements reviewed his financial and political success as a business owner and seller, his leadership and fundraising abilities, and included a shorter proclamation of his love for the academy.

After 15 minutes of uninterrupted pitching, the students began asking questions. Someone raised a concern about $4.1 million annually allocated to athletics from academic funding while departments and their students suffer. Carruthers immediately (mis)corrected the student and abdicated administrative responsibility for the $4.1 million allocation by informing us that the Legislature line-items

Later, via email, he recognized his mistake; the amount is in fact transferred from the academic budget.

When the student followed with a question about the university funding athletics over academia, Carruthers interrupted, and patronizingly asked if he could "teach" the student something, going on to reprimand him for pitting "meritorious" programs against one another.

Asking if the student would cut Medicaid to fund academics, the presidential candidate equated not only athletics and academia, but also health care. His denial of the need to prioritize certain sectors of education over others – if education even includes athletics directly contradicts the previous legislative session, which slashed the Lottery Scholarship only, with the Board of Regents to follow with a 3 percent tuition hike.

Perhaps the administration can play the diplomatic hand of equal support, and perhaps Carruthers can conjure a plan to make the Lottery Scholarship "solvent" and lower tuition over the next 10 years, but students make tuition payments this year; students need scholarships now. The ideology of athletic/academic neutrality only displays the candidate's benign misunderstanding, if not apathy, of the student body's needs.

As NMSU's leadership makes a symbolically important, although arguably irrelevant, decision about whom the next president will be, we will voice our opposition.

In an act loyal to the current ideology of admiration of hierarchical status, the forum thanked Carruthers for his time on Tuesday morning. We want to thank the students who attended for their engagement and courage. Carruthers collected part of his six-digit salary for attending the forum; the students truly gave their time, and for that we are grateful.

Mexican victory over French invaders celebrated

Cinco de Mayo gains popularity in U.S.

On Sunday, May 5, America will celebrate an increasingly popular day of the year. It is ironic that just four days earlier, on May 1, we almost completely ignore celebration of a day with many reasons to observe.

May 1 has been celebrated as a pagan festival to welcome spring and encourage fertility since long before the beginnings of Christianity. Then it was International Workers Day; then the day the Soviet Union paraded its military hardware. Then it was Law Day and Loyalty Day.

International Workers Day still is celebrated in most industrialized countries, but in the United States and Canada, we recognize labor in September. So, May 1 passes without notice.

But, on May 5, we let it all hang out. It is Cinco de Mayo and we celebrate a Mexican victory in a small battle to stop the French invasion, which soon succeeded in taking over the country.

The big celebration in Mexico is Sept. 16, commemorating victory in the long struggle for independence from Spain. So, if the United States wants to help its neighbor to the south celebrate a glorious occasion, why don't we celebrate their biggest day on Sept. 16?

Some suggest the timing is off. Even though Sept. 16 technically is still summer, our Labor Day is considered the last bash of the summer. Everyone is home from vacation and the kids are into their school activities.

So why is May 5 better? Could it be because the May 1 events don't involve partying? Neither do Easter and Memorial Day events. Wikipedia says it is because the French loss at Puebla kept them from helping the South in our Civil War so their cotton ports could stay open.

That doesn't make much sense, because France just brought over more troops and crushed everything in its path on the way to Mexico City. England and Spain, which Napoleon III expected to join him, had found other sources of cotton in India and Egypt, which France began using, too.

I'm more convinced by the argument that the timing is good for beer companies to kick off their summer season. Practically the entire nation gets involved in Mexican-themed celebrations.

Why? Maybe it is to acknowledge the significant numbers of Hispanics found in many communities throughout the nation. Perhaps it is because the culture is known for having fun.

Do you suppose there will be evidence that the Republican Party at the local, state and national levels will be more involved in Cinco de Mayo activities this year? Sounds like a good idea to me.

Meanwhile, the people of Mexico must be scratching their heads about the fun we are having with their little celebration. I have read that only the people of Puebla and surrounding area make it a big celebration.

They have good justification for making it a big celebration. Mexico wasn't winning a lot of battles in those days. They had recently lost half

The French were completely surprised by the fierce fight the locals and Indians put up under the leadership of Gen. Ignacio Zaragoza. The French retreated and sent for reinforcements.

Ever since our fifth president's Monroe Doctrine, The United States had taken a firm position that Europe should keep its hands off the Western hemisphere. But we were too busy fighting each other here in the United States to enforce our doctrine.

The French took advantage of that by taking control of Mexico for several years until we got our problems resolved.

When our Civil War ended, the U.S. government took note of France's action and managed to apply diplomatic pressure to get them out of Mexico without us firing a shot. By 1867, France began withdrawing its troops.

Emperor Maximilian, who had been installed by Napoleon, was captured by troops of the Mexican Republic and executed by firing

Sadly, not much can be done to deter terrorist acts

Carruthers can set NMSU's course back on track

David McCollum

Life is Good in Las Cruces

A recent Internet posting stated "Twenty years ago, we had Johnny Cash, Steve Jobs and Bob Hope. Now we have no cash, no jobs and no hope."

Let's "hope" we can pull together as Americans, and can change this attitude of despair.

The tragic and senseless terrorist bombings last week in Boston have dominated the news headlines, television talking heads and social media. The question that remains is "why?"

Meanwhile, confusion reigns as conspiracy theorists, news speculators, anti-gun advocates, law enforcers and civil rights activists collide over what happened and what can be done to prevent similar heinous acts from happening in the future.

The sad truth is not much can be done to prevent angry, misguided people from doing things to make statements by harming others. What was done in Boston, planting an explosive device in a place where the bombers knew that innocent people would be killed and severely injured, is an ultimate act of cowardice.

It will be my hope and prayer that all American extremists will give pause to consider the possible effects of their angry words, and will tone down their rhetoric, so that we might be able to have reasonable and peaceful discussions about the future of the United States of America. If we want to serve as the example to the rest of the world of the benefits of freedom and democracy, then we must work on unifying our nation's goals.

We have much work to do to regain the spiritual center that has guided our great nation over its first 237 years.

This week is important to our community, as the New Mexico State University regents narrow their choice as to who will serve as NMSU's next president. Each candidate is being presented to Las Cruces via individual public forums. The finalists offer a wide range of skills and experience.

As stated previously, my favorite is former governor Garrey Carruthers. My opinion is based on his leadership in both education and government, the fact that he is from this area and knows Las Cruces well and that he is a well-spoken visionary. I believe he can set a course of success for NMSU.

Great disappointment as Las Cruces' own Austin Trout lost a closely fought championship boxing match on national television. Trout was humble in defeat and was perhaps the most eloquent and classiest boxer I have ever seen.

He represented Las Cruces well.

I recall former Bulletin sports editor John Keith saying a few years back, after he had watched Trout work out, that he was the 'real thing." Anyone who knew Keith knows that he was not one to give out accolades if they were not deserved.

Too bad the scoring in professional boxing is so subjective. Austin would have won easily if Olympic-style scoring had been used, where a connecting jab counts the same as a hard uppercut. Of course, I think that we all knew, as the announcers reminded us several times, that Austin would have to win by a knockout because of Texas' reputation of unfair decisions.

Unfortunately, knowing how boxing operates, it's doubtful that there will be a rematch. Saul "Canelo" Alvarez, from a wellknown boxing family in Mexico, has nothing to gain and a lot to lose with a rematch. Trout will need skillful, nationwide public relations support to become a media darling which will allow him to earn a well-deserved big paycheck.

DACC recognizes Archuleta with honorary degree Former city councillor remains active in the community

By Jaylene McIntosh

A multitude of colors emerge from the desert each May in the form of academic regalia as students walk across the stages of their respective educational institutions to accept an academic degree.

Whether it's a high school diploma, college certificate or specific degree, education is the basic springboard from which a myriad of pursuits can be launched.

This month, Doña Ana Community College will introduce nearly 1,300 graduates to the local work force.

"DACC graduates are equipped with the knowledge and skills required to open doors to new opportunities," said Margie Huerta, DACC president.

The role of DACC in the local community has always been to make higher education accessible and affordable, thereby building a knowledgeable and skilled work force.

One individual who understands this role is lifelong Las Cruces resident Dolores Archuleta, who will receive an honorary associate degree of business management during a special pre-graduation recognition ceremony Tuesday, May 9. Archuleta was among four nominees, and was selected for the honor because of her personal success and unwavering commitment to the local community.

Archuleta began working at McBride Clinic as a nurse's aide upon her eighth-grade graduation. During Archuleta's high school career, McBride Clinic closed, and she continued to work as an aide at the new Memorial General Hospital.

During her time as an aide, Archuleta, along with 14 fellow nurse's aides, was recommended for a new, two-vear Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) program through the University of New Mexico. She continued to work her shift while attending the program. Archuleta graduated Oct. 19, 1953, at Memorial General Hospital as part of the first LPN graduating class in Las Cruces.

Archuleta said nursing was her first love, but she was introduced to new opportunities at White Sands Missile Range (WSMR)

While working at WSMR, she saved money to take classes at New Mexico State University in the evenings and Saturdays, with the goal to earn a degree in business. She took classes for two years.

"I was one of those non-traditional students, married with children," she said. "I feel that my initiative to continue my education contributed to my selection as a management analyst intern for the Department of the Army. Up to then, the Army only hired male analysts

She said four individuals – all women - were selected for the three-year appointments, which included training two and three weeks at a time at the U.S. Army Engineering Activity Center in Rock Island, Ill. She said the appointment was very interesting and rewarding.

Archuleta offers the following advice for non-traditional students looking to return to school: "(Don't) worry about age. Some instructors feel non-traditional students do better because of the sacrifices they are making to get an education."

Archuleta has always valued education and recalls her connection to DACC began in 2001, upon her election to the Las Cruces City Council.

"We were told over and over again that (the city) could not bring jobs to the community because we didn't have a trained work force for the positions," she said. "Many of our high school graduates were not continuing their education because they were either not encouraged at home or didn't have the money, or simply didn't think a college education was necessary.

Archuleta has witnessed firsthand the growth of DACC and expansion of program offerings to meet the needs of the local economy. Today, DACC offers 38 academic and career programs, with new offerings on the horizon.

To future college students, Archuleta said, "If you haven't already, start planning your education beyond high school. We live in a wonderful and diverse community that needs you to make it better. Keep in mind, you can be anything you want to be."

Through her community involvement, Archuleta has witnessed the effects of DACC students who have entered the local work force.

They appear confident and very professional," she said. "DACC has a great future in Doña Ana County because of what it has to offer, and the expansion of DACC throughout the county makes it easier for students to attend classes without having to drive a great distance to do it, which is extremely helpful to single moms with small children."

Archuleta was born of Pueblo Indian decent. She and her husband, Archie, have three grown daughters.

Her community involvement includes eight years of service on the Las Cruces City Council, including four years as mayor pro-tem. As a councilor, and because of her nursing background, she was appointed to the negotiating team, which included two county commissioners and the mayor, to negotiate a hospital lease with Province Healthcare to take over the failing Memorial General Hospital. Because of her insistence, a diabetic community coordinator position was included as part of the lease.

She is active with several nonprofit organizations in the community, including the Honor Flight Board, Veterans Wall Committee and Amador Hotel Foundation, and is an active member of the Cathedral of Immaculate Heart of Mary as a lector, Eucharistic Minister and Parish Council member.

Archuleta continues to be recognized for her efforts to help local veterans. She organized welcome home celebrations for all the New Mexico National Guard members from the community deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom. In 2005, she was the recipient of the American Legion Post 10 Bronze Medal of Merit. In 2008, the New Mexico Army National Guard presented her with their highest civilian award - the New Mexico Medal of Merit. In 2008, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States recognized her for "furthering the aims and ideas of the veterans," and in 2009, the Marine Corps League, Dolores Archuleta will receive an honorary associate degree from Doña Ana Community College Tuesday, May 9.

Perro Diablo Detachment No. 478, honored her with a life membership to the league. She was recognized in April 2010 by the State of New Mexico Veteran Services for her research on "Call for Photos" of the Vietnam Veterans in southern New Mexico, and in 2013, the Special Forces Association, Chapter LXXX, honored her with an Honorary Life Membership. She continues to serve as the chairperson of the Veterans Memorial Wall at Veterans Park, and although the war in Afghanistan continues, she reviews documents for eligibility of veterans of Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom to be included

Since 2006, DACC has awarded an honorary degree to seven recipients who have experienced significant success in their personal lives, generously contributed to the progress and development of DACC, demonstrated a strong commitment to the local community and continue to inspire others to emulate such standards of excellence, integrity and commitment to enhance the public good.

Jaylene McIntosh, M.A. is the director of development at Doña Ana Community College. DACC Corner appears every other week in the Las Cruces Bulletin. For more information about DACC and its many student offerings, log on to www.dacc.nmsu. edu or call 527-7500

Being an American

Founding values are forgotten by nation's young

Michael Swickard In My Opinion

"We have not passed on what it means to be an American to the next generation." Dennis Prager

When people ask my fears for the future I quote Dennis Prager. My future and the future of my country are the same. But the America to which I was born is not the same country today. My grandparents would not recognize this country. Over the past 50 years, our unique American values have been intentionally destroyed.

These next generations have not been taught what it means to be an American. They are not conversant with the American value systems of their grandparents. Therefore, lacking a grounding in American values, they feel free to adopt values from Europe or Asia.

Some young people say they love this country, but do they love the founding values? They cannot, if they are not taught those values.

Instead, Americans have become a people obsessed with their own needs and wants with no purpose other than to vote themselves into prosperity by taking from others. There is no longer the voice of John Kennedy: "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

Make no mistake, the founding values of our country changed the world for the better. Without these unique American values, there is no reason to see this country as exceptional.

This country can still change other countries of our world for the better. It is the unique set of our values that only the United

For that reason, I cannot see how this nation can survive much longer, given it no first day of our country, it was clear to the other countries that our country had a set of guiding principles and purposes unlike

Our country has not always been a shining example of the values set at the founding. We are a country of humans with human foibles. However, this country has been and is a shining guide to billions of people who were and are under bondage by dictators. As we were the first country with liberty, we showed the way for others.

When I was a child, the purpose of our country was understood. There were obligations each American had to our country. I grew up understanding the sacrifices made so I could have liberty, along with the obligations of a free country. I understood that America became America by the ideals of personal liberty, responsibility and that our country is guided by a higher power.

Years ago, I had a clear picture of our country as to purpose: Protect the world and ourselves from evil. Live a God-fearing life and make sure this country gives equal opportunity to every citizen.

During my lifetime, the words, "under God" were added to the Pledge of Allegiance.

Starting in the 1960s, however, came the attack from within on American values. Over these last five decades, God is no longer welcome in our schools and workplaces. God is no longer centric to our country. We did not seem to notice this loss of a core value in our society. It changed without a vote and without the consent of the governed. Next went our liberty. A coincidence?

In the last decade, liberal American politicians and the liberal media have urged our leaders to let the United Nations absorb the United States of America into their international organization and to change our values to theirs.

That, as they say, will be the end of the

Veterinary profession: thoughts for discussion

I've been pondering the state of veterinary medicine in the new millennium. These subjects deserve deeper thought or at least a master's degree thesis:

- Why a barber and a surgeon should never say, "oops!"
- The plethora of chicken/the dearth of poultry practitioners.
- The value of veterinarians in the war against bioterrorism.
- Is there a place for grooming in an exclusive reptile veterinary practice?
- Recipes for traditionally inedible species
- What do you think of the "placebo effect" in veterinary medicine?
- What are the tricks you use to help remember where you left your glasses or car kevs?
- What do you think of men in veterinary medicine? A thing of the past?
- How do deal with barn sour children?
- Cell phones; how to add pressure and convenience to your practice.
- The future of leather shoes, purses and seat covers made of doghide.
- The new prestige of meat inspection veterinarians.
- Do you have difficulty resolving Genesis and evolution?
- The value of Chinese herbal medicine in non-Oriental species. What do you think of homeopathic

- cures for baldness, dandruff and dog's ticks?
- Do dogs have a heaven?
- Body piercing in veterinary medicine; fashion statement or cruelty?
- Humane euthanasia techniques in an insect veterinary practice; squash or
- The use of wood chippers in poultry euthanasia.
- If humans are evolving, what major physical changes will occur in the next 100,000 years?
- How veterinary school affected your eating habits.
- Acupuncture in marine mammals does blubber affect the meridians?
- Why is free advice (from Whole Foods checkout girl or uncle who works at sale barn) always worth more than advice you have to pay for?
- Have veterinary specialties like first premolar dentistry, polydactal primates, and/or alternative uses for vestigial organs become passé?
- What do you tell the parents of a child who wants to go to vet school?
- Who else goes to sleep memorizing the Krebs cycle?

by the council.

Since then, the proposal has shifted a bit in that the effort now seeks to create a one-stop center that would also help veterans get their paperwork processed, as well as easier access to basic medical services, Conn said.

The two have compiled statistics about the number of veterans in Doña Ana County – 13,882 according to the 2010 census – as well as other counties with nearly that many veterans in the three immediately surrounding

The council resolution has yet to be proposed, and Miranda said VA officials have been waiting for the city to send them a list of available properties for the center, which was the main concern raised by Miranda to Miyagishima in a letter sent mid-February.

Miyagishima said he has tried to get in touch with a VA official mentioned in the letter multiple times without a response. In an email to the VA official, Miyagishima said there is an interest in expanding the local office and asked if the VA would be interested in a partnership with the city of Las Cruces, such as a land donation.

Miyagishima said he wants to get feedback from the VA before getting the "ball rolling" on a stronger statement of support from the city.

Despite some expansion of the VA clinic in Las Cruces

- mainly in its pharmacy - the burden of veterans having to travel to El Paso for basic medical services remains, Miranda said. For example, Miranda said he went to the VA hospital in El Paso for an ultrasound examination of his kidney and bladder. He said he won't have the results explained to him by a VA doctor, however, until early July.

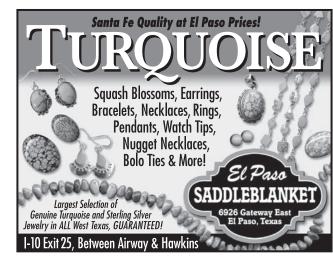

"We shouldn't have to wait for weeks to get the results," Miranda said. "This is basic stuff."

Miranda and Conn said they don't want to see the idea lose momentum, especially during a time in which many veterans are returning from the wars in Iraq and Afghani-

"We're going to have all these new veterans, so the prob-lem is only going to get worse if we don't do something." Conn said. "The time to get working on this is now." Even in the federal sequester situation, lawmakers and

Obama administration officials have promised to protect veteran service funding, Conn said.

"There's been a lot of talk, but no action," Conn said of generating local government support. "We've bent over backwards. ... I don't know what the hold-up is."

vehicle handling qualities throughout," said Virgin Galactic President and CEO George Whitesides. "The successful outcome of this test marks a pivotal point for our program. We will now embark on a handful of similar powered flight tests, and then make our first test flight to space.

The Virgin Galactic and Scaled test team will expand the spaceship's powered flight envelope culminating in full space flight, which the companies anticipate will take place before the end of 2013.

"This milestone has been a long time coming," said Kevin Mickey, president of Scaled Composites.

Getting to this point in testing has taken longer than originally anticipated because of complication in making a significantly larger hybrid engine than the one that took the smaller SpaceShipOne into suborbital space in 2004 to win the Ansari X PRIZE.

Mark Sirangelo, corporate vice president for Sierra Nevada that is developing the rocket engines, told Space.com there were no problems with the engine's performance and that another engine will be ready for a test flight in a few weeks.

With the larger rocket engine performing more predictably, Virgin Galactic announced it should begin flights with paying customers by some time in 2014.

"It was the biggest milestone in this program, and it's taken us eight and a half years to get there," Branson told Fox News. "Now we know it can break the sound barrier safely. Now we can start testing at 2,000 miles an hour, 3,000 miles an hour, 4,000 miles an hour – and then by the end of the year, be ready to do flights into space."

According to Virgin Galactic, 575 people have put down deposits for flights into suborbital space for $200,000 a ticket. After Monday's test Branson told Space.com he will raise the ticket price for future passengers to $250,000.

"We felt that, for the sake of those (first) 600 people who signed up ... we ought to be charging inflation," Branson was quoted as saying by Space.com.

Once Virgin has taken 1,000 people into space, the ticket price may then start dropping, Branson told Space.com.

Christine Anderson, executive director of the New Mexico Spaceport Authority, also called the test a milestone for the company to eventually get Federal Aviation Administration approval for commercial flights.

Today's successful powered flight means we are getting closer to the day when the first Virgin Galactic passenger flight will be taking place from Spaceport America in New Mexico,"

Anderson said Virgin Galactic has now moved into the design and fit-out stage of their "Virgin Galactic Gateway to Space" terminal hangar building at Spaceport America, which will be the company's operational headquarters once testing is completed in Mojave.

Udall announces horse racing bill

On the eve of the Kentucky Derby, U.S. Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.M., and U.S. Reps. Ed Whitfield, R-Ken., and Joe Pitts, R-Penn., revealed draft legislation they intend to introduce to end doping in horse racing and kick cheaters out of the sport.

The Horse racing Integrity and Safety Act would provide the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency (USADA) with authority to clean up the sport and enforce anti-doping standards in races with simulcast wagering.

USADA is a non-governmental organization that is designated as the official anti-doping agency for the U.S. Olympics, and works with sports leagues to strengthen clean competition policies.

"The chronic abuse of race horses with painkillers and other drugs is dangerous and just plain wrong," Udall said. "Racing groups have promised drug reform for decades, but this bill would bring in real standards and enforcement from an organization with a proven record for cleaning up sports."

"This weekend, the very best of horse racing will be on display at the Kentucky Derby. Yet, for too long, the safety of jockeys and equine athletes has been neglected for the pursuit of racing profits," Whitfield said. "The doping of injured horses and forcing them to compete is deplorable and must be stopped. Despite repeated promises from the racing industry to end this practice, meaningful action and oversight has yet to come forth. This legislation would bring much-needed reforms to an industry that supports thousands of jobs and is enjoyed by spectators nationwide.

"Last year, I chaired a hearing that took a deep look into the problems of both legal and illegal drugs in horse racing," Pitts said. "We heard testimony about how abuse of drugs is killing horses and imperiling riders. Before more people and animals are hurt, we need to put a responsible national authority in charge of cleaning up racing. This is a sensible, bipartisan measure to restore trust in racing and protect lives."

Horse racing showcases the beauty of an iconic American animal. The industry also has a $10 billion annual economic impact, and sustains about 380,000 jobs nationwide. Last year, more than $10.8 billion was wagered on American horse racing, including $133 million for the Kentucky Derby. However, as the New York Times reported in 2012, doping undermines the safety and viability of the sport, and 24 horses die each week from racing injuries.

Under the new legislation, USADA would develop rules for permitted and prohibited substances and create anti-doping education, research, testing and adjudication programs for horse racing. It would also end race day medications, standardize medication policies, threaten stiff penalties for cheating – including "one and done" and "three strikes, you're out" lifetime bans for the worst cases – and ensure racehorse drug administrations comply with veterinary ethics.

The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office is investigating the burglary that is believed to have occurred sometime in either late December 2012 or within the first two weeks of January. The burglary, possibly committed over the course of several hours or days, was at a home on the 800 block of Pajaro Road in Mesilla Park.

Items taken during the burglaries included an orange Kubota tractor with tiller, various farm tractor implements, six rolls of 6-foot-tall chain link fencing and four rolls of 4-foot-tall chain link fencing, two centrifugal pumps, a red air compressor, a portable air tank, a red 20-ton jack, a new microwave oven and various other tools and items.

Firearms reported as stolen include a .38 caliber snubnose handgun, a .38 caliber handgun with a 6-inch barrel, a .357 caliber handgun, five .22 caliber rifles, a 30-30 Winchester lever-action rifle, a 30-30 single shot rifle, two 30-06 rifles with scopes, a .243 caliber rifle with scope, a .270 Parker Hale rifle with scope, a 16-gauge double-barrel shotgun and a 30-40 Krag rifle.

Anyone with information that can help identify the suspect or suspects in this case is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to CRIMES (274637), keyword LCTIPS.

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

NMSU president finalists finish interviews

Regents expected to act quickly on selection

By Todd G. Dickson

After two weeks of visits, New Mexico State University regents are meeting to select the next permanent president.

Just as the first week began with a familiar face in Business College Dean Garrey Carruthers, the last of the five finalists was Daniel Howard, a former professor who spent 20 years on the NMSU campus before becoming dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at the University of Colorado at Denver.

Howard said his past experience at NMSU gave him insight into NMSU's challenges and strengths while his experience at Denver honed skills that would come into use as a university president. In UC-Denver, Howard said the colleges are somewhat autonomous, which made his role as dean detailed in areas of personnel and budget while also playing an external role in fundraising and student recruitment.

One of the main tasks of the next president would be to better tell the outside world about the value of NMSU, Howard said. This will be important for fundraising, lobbying the Legislature and student recruiting, he said.

Strong outreach and promotion of the university will also help NMSU researchers keep their work alive in a time of decreased funding for research, Howard said.

As for the desire of the NMSU community to have greater stability, Howard said he missed living on a pecan farm in Mesilla, so he would not be looking to move on in the near future if he were selected.

Going to Denver also gave the biology professor a greater appreciation for the value of athletics because UC-Denver doesn't have an athletics program. That lack of connection to the institution is being felt as it tries to reach out to its alumni, he said

Unfortunately, if the football program is struggling, it doesn't matter how good NMSU's other teams are doing, he said.

"We have to make the football program work somehow," he said.

In terms of combating declining enrollment, Howard said he would promote NMSU to students from outside of New Mexico.

"I think we could make the argument for New Mexico State as a good destination institution," he said. "Our out-of-state tuition is very comparable to other in-state tuitions.

Also calling for aggressive enroll-ment increases is David Ashley, former president of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. If selected as

NMSU's president, Ashley said he would set goals of increasing enrollment by 50 percent over the next 10 years while simultaneously embarking on a $400 million capital campaign.

Such ambitious efforts would take leadership, Ashley said, but are needed for the university to keep pace with reduced state support.

NMSU is in a good posi-HOWARD tion to take advantage of its strengths as a Hispanic-serving institution with a statewide system of community colleges, he said, to attract students and research. Many of NMSU's students are first in their family to go to college, so outreach to families is important, as well as support for students with financial aid and scholarships, he > Ashley touted his fundraising successes at UNLV and Ohio State that generated more than $200 million and $190 million, respectively. NMSU has a strong foundation of research funding in areas where Ashley said the demand should remain strong, such as new energy development and agriculture.

> Having bold efforts to bring in external fund-ing should help the NMSU president leverage state support for basic education, Ashley said.

> Like Howard, Ashley said the president's role is to tell NMSU's story in a more compelling way to the rest of the world.

> The quality of what's here is not as visible as it should be," he said.

Ashley acknowledged that NMSU's athletic programs are facing a great challenge.

nalist. Besides being the only woman and Hispanic among the five, she joked that she's also the shortest, but – on a more serious level – she said she understands the challenges of many NMSU students, as she came from a family that immigrated to the United States from Cuba and was the first in her family to go to college.

"Being a first-generation college student myself, these issues are very near and dear to my heart," she said.

Murano described Texas A&M as a "sister university" to NMSU and also said she saw its system of community colleges as a resource that the university could better tap into to bring along more of those new students.

The leadership style Murano said she would bring to NMSU would rally the university community around concerns and create teams to find solutions. But teamwork alone won't address the financial squeeze facing an institution such as NMSU that has the land-grant missions of extension and educating the working class while engaging in high-tech research, she said.

The Hispanic-serving nature of NMSU, however, offers opportunities, she said, to bring "a whole new class of people" into research and fields of study that can only benefit NMSU's mission.

Being located in the Southwest, Murano said, also provides NMSU with opportunities to conduct meaningful research to help people respond to climate and to practice effective use of water.

"Issues can become opportunities," she said. Murano, who resigned as president of Texas A&M because she disagreed with the policy direction of its leadership, said she values the teaching mission of higher education.

"Universities are places not only where people come to learn, but they are also places of discovery," she said.

NMSU regents began closed-door discussions Thursday, May 2, and could make the selection official as early as Monday, May 6.

year begins in August, Booker T. Washington and MacArthur elementary schools will return to a regular school-year calendar, Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds announced.

The two schools have been on a balanced (or year-round) calendar since the 2002-03 school year to increase student academic performance.

"With the programs we have in place now for our youngest students who are low performing, it makes sense to bring Booker T. Washington and MacArthur back onto the regular school calendar," Rounds said.

Rounds said students at the elementaries will continue to

- participate in:
 LCPS' Joint Ungraded Multi-age Primary (JUMP) program for struggling readers in kindergarten and firstand second grades.
- The state Kindergarten Thru Three-Plus program, which LCPS will expand from nine to 11 schools. Fourth- and fifth-graders will be added to the program at Booker T. Washington and MacArthur elementaries.
- The national Goméz and Goméz Dual Language Enrichment model, which is in place at 20 LCPS schools.

A lack of victories hasn't kept Taylor Bryan from being a winner for the Colorado Christian University men's tennis

The Mesilla Valley Christian Schools graduate has been a mainstay in the program, the lone Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference school to finish winless during the past three years. He was 1-13 in singles play last year after going winless in singles matches the previous two seasons.

"I have loved it," the senior said about his career. "It has been discouraging. At the same time, it's been a good experience. I'm going out there to be a good witness for my school and for my savior. It's more a mission, to be a good, humble person on the court."

His selfless, supportive personality has been an inspiration to those on the squad.

"He is looked to as an emotional leader," coach Ben Jones said.

Indeed, Bryan is one of two cocaptains this season, playing at second and third singles. He said he had other schools interested in him out of high school, where he played baseball, because there wasn't a tennis team.

He chose Colorado Christian because he wanted to attend school in Colorado and "it was very Christ-centered," he said. "It wasn't so much about getting the win.

"I came in with a pretty strong base.
It was more of a transition from high school, where it was just serve and return. Everyone hits a lot softer in high school. You have to learn (in college) to be able to come into the net after you set up.

Though wins have been rare, Bryan has the skills.

"The record is deceiving for the amount of hard work he puts in," Jones said. "We have a very strong conference. His level of competition is much harder."

This season, Bryan lost 6-0, 6-0 at No. 2 singles and 8-1 at No. 1 doubles. He missed two matches because of a severe ankle sprain suffered during practice.

"He has an overall good game," the coach said. "He can do well at any spot. He has a great serve. He can hit the spots, and he has good velocity on it."

Bryan will graduate in May. An emergency medical technician since he was 18, he plans to study for the Medical College Admission Test because he wants to become a doctor of osteopathy. He will continue playing tennis for fun.

New defense, up-tempo offense unveiled at Aggie Memorial

By Jim Hilley

New Mexico State University fans will get a glimpse of the year-of-playing-independently Aggie football team at 6 p.m. Saturday, May 4, during the annual spring game at Aggie Memorial Stadium. Admission is free.

Under new coach Doug Martin, the Aggies will feature several players who are familiar to Las Cruces high school football fans.

"Fans will get to see a lot of hometown guys do well," Martin said. "Matt Ramondo (DL, Mayfield High School, Michigan State) is back and Brandon Betancourt (RB, Mayfield HS), Zach Daugherty (LB, Oñate HS) and Xavier Hall (RB, Las Cruces HS), so there is that fla-

After acting as offensive coordinator for NMSU two years ago under coach DeWayne Walker, Martin now will be able to institute his own schemes on the football field.

'You will get to see an exciting offense," Martin said. "We are up tempo, no huddle and the defensive scheme has changed. We are now a 3-4 defense (three down linemen with four linebackers) with a lot of pressure, so it should be an entertaining night."

Martin said the game will incorporate a scoring system in which the defense scores four points for forcing a three and out, one point for forcing a punt and six points for a

"We are going to play 12-minute quarters," he said. "It should be a good one."

The first-year coach said he has been impressed by the Aggies' offensive line.

Aggies win WAC golf championship

Victory qualifies NMSU for regionals

The New Mexico State men's golf team won its sixth WAC Golf Championship in eight years Wednesday, May 1, at the par-72, 7,313yard Rio Secco Golf Club in Henderson, Nev.

The Aggies won the 2013 championship with a three-round score of 23-over-par 887 (286-298-303). NMSU carded a final round score of 15-over-par 303.

This is the sixth WAC title for the Aggies, as two NMSU players finished in the top 10. As a team, the Aggies carded four birdies on the final two holes of play.

"It was a great day for our team," coach Mike Dirks said. "We didn't start the round off very well, but we held it together and in the end we won the tournament. I think we were a little tight, especially playing with a big lead like we had. The back nine we struggled a little but had a few closing birdies at the end, which was huge. At the start of the year, our goal as a team was to win the conference championship and we did. We are excited to be able to continue to play at the NCAA Regional Tournament."

Senior Justin Shin was named a first-team all-WAC selection, while freshman Kenneth Fadke earned second-team honors. Dirks was named coach of the year, marking his sixth conference coach of the year honor in his Fadke finished second overall with a threeround score of 4-over-par 220 (71-74-75). Fadke recorded four birdies in the final round, carding a 4-over par, 75.

Shin recorded a final-round score of 1-under-par 71, marking down five birdies in the round including two on the final two holes. He was also one of four golfers under par in the final round. For the tournament, Shin was 5-over par-221 (78-72-71).

Junior Willy Hogan fired a 9-over-par 81 in the final round, placing tied for 14th overall with a three-round score of 10-over-par 226. Hogan tallied two birdies in his final round of

Following NMSU in the team scoring was UT Arlington (+29), San Jose State (+36), UTSA (+39) and Idaho (+46). UT Arlington's Paul McConnell was the tournament's individual medalist with a three-round score of NMSU now moves on to the NCAA Regional Tournament Thursday through Saturday, May 16-18. The Aggies will find out where they will be competing Monday, May 6.

Aggie softball vies for regular season championship in San Jose

The Aggie Softball team travels to San Jose, Calif., to meet the San Jose State Spartans in a series Friday and Saturday, May 3-4, that will decide the regular season WAC championship. Unless the Aggies are swept by SJSU, they will earn the regular season crown and be the top seed in the WAC Conference Championships May 8-11 in Ruston, La. The Aggies are 16-2 in WAC play, and 35-15 overall, while the Spartans sit at 14-4 in conference play and 36-15 overall, and coming off a threegame sweep of the Seattle University Redhawks April 26-27.

Friday's game will start at 4 p.m., while Saturday's double-header will be at 1 and 3 p.m.

New Mexico State's Staci Rodriguez has been named the Western Athletic Conference Hitter of the Week, for April 22-28. This is the third honor of the season and of her career.

Rodriguez, a sophomore outfielder from Paramount, Calif., led New Mexico State to a 3-0 record against Seattle U last week to remain atop the WAC standings. She posted a .750 batting average, a .800 on-base percentage and an astounding 2.000 slugging percentage with a double, three home runs and eight RBI over the three games. In the Friday, April 26 series opener, she was 2-for-3 with a home run and two RBI. In the come-from-behind win over the Redhawks in the series finale, Rodriguez hit two three-run home runs. With 20 bombs this season, Rodriguez ranks second at New Mexico State and seventh in the WAC in single-season home runs. With the eight RBI last week, she is now tied for second place at NMSU and tied for 10th in the WAC in single-season RBI with 62.

Aggie baseball hosts SJSU in final home series for 2013

The New Mexico State baseball team takes San Jose State in the final home series of the year Friday through Sunday, May 3-5. The Western Athletic Conference series starts at 6:05 p.m. Friday, May 3, at Presley Askew Field, with game two starting at 6:05 p.m. Saturday, May 4. The finale is set for 12:05 p.m. Sunday, May 5.

Fans can listen Saturday and Sunday, May 4-5, on KSNM-AM 570, while Friday's game is televised as part of AggieVision productions. For a complete listing of airtimes in your area for games televised by AggieVision, visit www.aggievision.tv.

Friday night is "Fifty-cent Ice Cream Night" and Sunday will be "Senior Day" and "Fifty-cent Hot Dog Day." Aggie seniors will be honored by the athletics department before the game for their time here. Kids will also be able to run the bases after Saturday night's game.

The WAC Championship tournament will be May 22-26 in Grand Prairie, Texas.

Women's tennis circuit to make June appearance in Las Cruces

The U.S. Tennis Association Women's Pro Circuit will visit the New Mexico State University Tennis Center in early June. It will be the first women's USTA Pro Circuit event ever held in Las Cruces.

The newly created $25,000 tournament for fledging World Tennis Association female pros trying to make their way to the upper echelons of the professional ranks will be part of nearly 40 women's pro circuit events held throughout the U.S. in 2013.

"Members of the USTA Southern New Mexico District have been trying for several years to bring men's and women's pro circuit tennis to town, so we are very pleased and excited about holding a USTA Pro Circuit Women's tournament at NMSU this summer," said Don Hemingway, president of the USTA-Southern New Mexico District. "The tournament will provide a tremendous opportunity for residents of Las Cruces and surrounding cities to view some excellent tennis in an upclose setting."

Entrants for the event will be announced closer to the tournament date. Typically, players outside the top-100 world rankings will make up a large part of the field. Several well-known professional players have launched their careers on the USTA Pro Circuit, including recent 2013 Australian Open semifinalist Sloane Stephens.

Plans are being made to add other events, including a proam event prior to the beginning of the official tournament on June 3, along with a possible tennis carnival for local youth.

Tournament organizers are currently working to identify volunteers and sponsors to support these first-time events.

Potential volunteers and sponsors can contact Don Hemingway at 382-7755 or don.hemingway@comcast.net, or Robert Czerniak, chairman of the tournament committee, at 649-4043 or rczernia@nmsu.edu.

Aldredge is Athlete of the Week

LaSasha Aldredge of the New Mexico State University track and field team was named the Western Athletic Conference Women's Indoor Track Athlete of the Week for the week of April 22-28.

Aldredge, a senior from Fresno, Calif. (Central East H.S.), finished fourth overall in the 400 meter with a time of 52.61, setting both a new record for the conference and a new all-time school record for NM State. Her time ranks 10th in the nation in the 400m.

In the 200m, Aldredge finished 11th overall with a time of 24.30. In the 4x100m relay, Aldredge helped the Aggies finish third overall with a time of 45.53, which now ranks third all-time for NMSU.

In the 4 by 400m relay, Aldredge and her teammates finished fourth overall with a time of 3:43.03, which places the squad second all-time for NMSU.

This is the third time during the track and field season an Aggie has been named WAC Athlete of the Week, and the first time it has happened during the 2013 outdoor season. Last year, Aldredge was named WAC Athlete of the Week on three separate occasions.

Locals, current and former Aggies try to make event

The local qualifier for the 113th U.S. Open Championship will be held Monday, May 6, at Red Hawk Golf Club, 7502 Red Hawk Golf Road. The first tee time will be at 7:30 a.m.

This local qualifier is one of 111 held throughout the United States. Thirty six players are registered to play in the Red Hawk qualifier, including 18 professionals and 18 amateurs.

Among players with local ties are Isaac Merry, Zach Adams, Davis Chung, Nick Gillihan, James Davidson and Thomas McMullan, all of Las Cruces; New Mexico State University freshman Kenneth Fadke of Clovis; and former Aggies Travis Reid of Clovis and Zach Fullerton of Albuquerque.

There will be two players selected to play in a 36-hole sectional qualifier later in May. Sectional qualifiers are held at two international locations and 11 locations throughout the U.S. The U.S. Open will be played June 13-16 at Merion Golf Club near Philadelphia.

This year, a record number of 9,860 players are registered to play in the U.S. Open qualifiers. For more information, call Bill Lutz, official in charge, at 521-1523, 526-2449 or 649-3012.

Busy week for Ags

Spring football game Saturday

Jack Nixon

Iack's Corner

Aggie softball looks to wrap up another regular season title, baseball plays its final home stand and Doug Martin unveils the progress made by his first football team at the spring game Friday and Saturday. May 3-4.

Friday and Saturday, May 3-4.

Kathy Rodolph's squad has a "magic number" of one. The WAC schedule makers must have had a crystal ball as they have matched the No. 1 and No. 2 teams for the final week of the season. There likely will be one postseason bid for WAC softball, so the top seed is a valuable possession heading to the conference tournament in two weeks.

Rocky Ward's team has a winning record and is in the middle of the conference pack. Seniors Parker Hipp and Kyle Phillips have contributed in the field, Hipp is hitting .303, Philips .295 and hurlers Ryan Beck and Casey Collins have been mainstays in the starting rotation. This is your final chance to see all of the seniors, when the Aggies host San Jose State Friday through Sunday.

If football is what whets your appetite, there will be a main course served for free Saturday night. A kid's clinic starts the football day at 10 a.m., with the game starting at 6 p.m.

Coach Doug Martin and his offensive coordinator, Greg Brandon, are putting the offense in a higher gear in terms of quicker tempo a la Oregon and others who don't waste time getting to the line to run another play.

The quarterback position is up for grabs with a cast that has variety. Veteran Andrew Manley is back for his junior year, competing with Andrew McDonald, Travaughn Colwell and newcomer King Davis III.

Mayfield High School grad Brandon Betancourt has been taking lots of snaps and is a good fit for the new offense Martin and Brandon are creating. Betancourt's pass catching ability has come in handy and his work this spring has caught the coaches' eye. The switch to a 3-4 defensive alignment looks like a good scheme for what is on hand. Having Matt Ramondo in the middle was a good start: The massive nose tackle spent his first season of college at Michigan State.

Using four linebackers should add speed closer to the line, and it is generally easier to find good linebackers than good down linemen.

Nearer to our goals

Tennis team improved in 2012-13

Carlos Vargas

Men's Tennis Head Coach

As we wrap up the 2012-13 New Mexico State men's tennis season, it is time to reflect on the goals we achieved and the ones still to be reached.

Among the many achievements, one that I feel most proud of is the WAC awards we received. Freshman Daniel Fernandez received freshman of the year after compiling a winning record of 22-8 for the year, and he was undefeated in conference play. He was also named first team All-WAC.

Senior and team captain Luis Ramirez had an excellent career as an Aggie; he began his journey at New Mexico State at the No. 6 singles position and ended playing No. 1 singles and doubles in his senior year. Ramirez was also named second team All-WAC and player of the week several times. He was named All-WAC in doubles with his partner Marc Westgate.

As a team, we compiled a winning dual-match record of 14-9 and improved our WAC finish from last year's sixth place to third place this year after a close loss to eventual winner Denver. We are losing Ramirez as a player, but will continue to benefit from his energy and enthusiasm as an assistant coach next year.

As a group, we didn't only meet or exceed our goals on the tennis court, we also exceeded them in the classroom. Our team GPA is 3.2, and we have several individuals with a 4.0. This is an achievement that we are always proud of.

One goal that we are still striving for is a conference title. We reached the finals before, but have yet to win a conference title for NM State. I feel that we keep getting closer every year and will continue to have that as one of our main goals.

Returning for the Aggies next year are Westgate, Germain Degardin, Paul Denele, Patrick Pfister, Fernandez, Naveen Manivannan, Strahinja Trecakov, Gui Carvalho and Eduardo Cabrita. This very talented group will continue to take us closer to that coveted conference title.

Next year, we are very fortunate to host the WAC championships at NM State. Overall, this season had some ups and downs, but at the end we were able to get back on track improving both our season record and our WAC finish.

Last, I would like to once again thank my senior captain Luis Ramirez for his loyalty and commitment to NM State. It was a pleasure to see him evolve not only as a player but also as a person and leader to the team. He was always relentless on his efforts toward improving himself and the team. For all I know, he earned the respect of his teammates and many of his opponents.

Go Aggies!

Tips for member-guest events

Find a good partner; be a good partner

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

Over the past few years, I have played in some wonderful golf tournaments, under spectacular New Mexico skies.

I especially enjoy events where I'm paired with a partner. Some memorable ones are the New Mexico North-South Senior Challenge, The Showdown at Sonoma Ranch and Fall Classic (member-guest) at Picacho Hills and the member-guest at Redhawk Golf Club.

All these two-man events involved playing with a partner, and I was blessed to have had really good, compatible partners on every occasion. As I look back, I realize that playing with a partner, especially in match play, is rather new to some golfers, and some folks are not accustomed to playing in a member-guest type setting.

As you might expect, there are do's and don'ts as well as preferred strategies when playing with a partner in competition, either as the member or the guest. Here are some helpful hints and suggestions for becoming more comfortable and performing to your capability in partner events.

The very first priority is picking a partner you like and get along with. Sometimes there's an art to finding a partner whose handicap gives you an advantage. I joke that some of the member-guest tournaments amount to "sandbagger opens," but there really isn't anything you can do about that. My emphasis is on having fun, not winning prize money. But, make no mistake, I have even more fun when

One important criterion for picking a partner is to get one who can play to his or her handicap. Nearly all these events are handicapped, so strokes are really important. Most have "flights" (divisions based on apparent ability), so you can do well with a player who can perform better than his handicap at any given time.

Try to avoid "blind date" partners. One friend of mine had a member-guest partner, arranged by a third party, who not only sponged off the hospitality in a rather blatant manner, but couldn't play golf either – a double penalty.

Be sure to agree with your partner or guest on any sharing of costs for the event. Some guest partners insist on paying for a few things, but otherwise, the member should pay everything, which is customary. If you're a guest and the member is paying, consider a nice gift as a token of your appreciation. A case of wine perhaps.

Most of all, try to find a partner who is sociable and who is flexible. There is usually a lot of small talk and quite a bit of that is needling and kidding around. It's not a good situation for someone who is overly stuffy and Another thing concerning money: Talk to folks ahead of time about wagering formats and policies. It's rather customary for private clubs to conduct a "Calcutta" betting round that sometimes can run into substantial money. This is essentially horse-race style betting where you bet on which team will win.

I'm not a fan of the Calcutta, but other, more worldly golfers wouldn't have it any other way.

Most club events also have a players' pool of some sort, where there are payouts for low rounds or day-winners. Other money opportunities, or "games," may take the form of skins, greenies, raffles and individual bets.

Bring your wallet and have plenty of cash handy – if for no other reason than being able to pick up a few beverage tabs and tip generously.

If you haven't played in too many matchplay partner events, be very sure you have a good grasp of the format and the rules. It's best to play some practice rounds with your partner even before the week of the tournament. That tends to minimize the surprises.

Talk to people and read the rules sheet, since the format could influence some decision-making on the golf course. There's always a balance between two players, as we saw in last year's Ryder Cup; don't rely too heavily on your partner, and don't put all the pressure on yourself. Look at who gets shots ("pops"), including your opponents, and where the shots fall.

Nerves can be frayed in these formats where you're playing not selfishly for your own skin, but you feel obligated for your "team." A lot of good golfers have meltdowns in partner and match play. Just relax and do your best.

Planning for strategy is good, but don't get carried away. For example, getting one tee shot in play and in good position often provides a measure of confidence for the other partner to be more aggressive. Likewise on the green, if you are away, consider letting your partner roll in a four footer for par, as it may free you up to be more determined and less protective on your birdie putt.

On the other hand, you may actually play your best when you avoid any tricks and just play your normal game in the normal order. Discuss these things during practice rounds.

My overwhelming experience is that, regardless of tournament format, it always comes down to putting. The team making the putts usually wins, and that's exactly what happened at last September's Ryder Cup. The Euros made the putts when they counted.

There are a few aspects of social etiquette that come into play in most of these partner and member-guest events. First of all, find out what the preferred and recommended attire is and by all means dress nice. That should go without saying, but I've seen everything on the golf course

For dinner, ask what your host and your host's spouse are wearing, and go conservative. Bring a sport coat even if you don't wear it. Second, shut your cell phone off, at least until you're away from the club. If you must use it, go somewhere out of earshot of the other folks. No one wants to listen to your self-important business conversations, or even family business.

Allow for the fact that everything at a partner or member-guest event takes more time than you expect. Be prepared for five-hour rounds; if you're the guest, don't complain. If you're the member, don't complain. Just get over it.

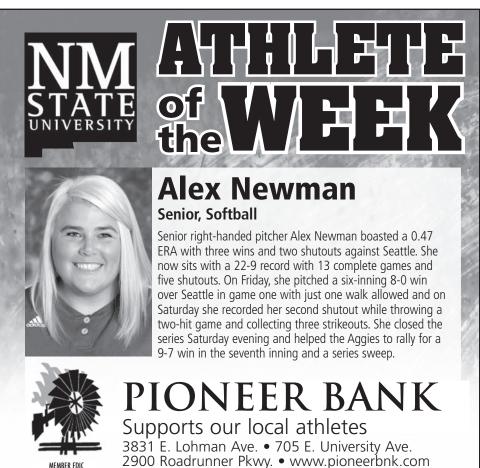

Perhaps most important, don't drink too much. All of these tournaments involve an abundance of adult beverages. Sometimes there is an open bar and it would be tempting to lose track of how much you have had. Don't be afraid to let a friend know if you think it's Member-guest outings and partner (and team) tournaments, like scrambles, are an exceptional way to form and cement business relationships. If you invite a business associate or are invited by a business interest you should be on your best behavior, but it should not seem like you are trying too hard to conform to the occasion. Acting natural in an important business situation should come easily if you have any common sense and have been there before.

Examples of things that can easily rub business contacts the wrong way are: temper tantrums, drunkenness, club throwing, foul language and whining at everything. The rule-ofthumb here is to always behave as a gentleman.

One of the best reads ever for relationship golf is the book "Business Golf: The Art of Building Relationships Through Golf," by the late Pat Summerall. Here's an excerpt: "Golf is the only sport where personalities, and all our idiosyncrasies, show their ugly little heads, so to speak. The key is to assess you guest's personality to determine the best communication strategy, in order to develop that all-important rapport."

Pioneering educator donates estate to NMSU

More than $2 mil is largest gift to teaching school

The New Mexico State University College of Education announced at its annual Scholarship Reception Tuesday, April 30, the teaching school is the beneficiary of the Elizabeth Anne Shirk estate, valued at more than $2 million.

This is the single largest gift ever received by the college and will make it possible for many students to get assistance to pay for their education, said Dean Michael Morehead.

"We're pleased that this support will enable us to help our students pursue their educations and grateful to Elizabeth for thinking of the college," Morehead said.

The Elizabeth Anne Shirk Memorial Scholarship was established with an initial gift of $250,000 from the estate. Remaining gifts will continue to flow into the scholarship fund following the sale of other estate assets. The scholarship will include special initiatives to benefit Native American students. Students from all college departments will be eligible to apply.

The announcement was made to more than 300 donors and student scholarship recipients at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

Each year, the college brings its scholarship donors and the students who benefit from the scholarships together to meet and celebrate.

This year, 100 education students were awarded more than $82,000 in scholarships. Shirk earned a master's degree in teaching from New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, now NMSU, in 1956. Following the completion of her degree, she taught second and third grade at a Navajo elementary school in Arizona.

She returned to Albuquerque in the late 1980s to care for her mother and continued to live on the family dairy farm until moving into a nursing home toward the end of her life. She often shared fond memories of Las Cruces and NMSU with her friends.

A glass of warm milk

The questions that keep economists awake at night are not the questions that disturb the rest of us.

You, for example, may be worried about the impact of unexpected expenses on your bottom line, while the folks next door may be grappling with how to deal with a job furlough.

They differ, however, in how they see it.

A classic example of economists of two different stripes is the New Mexico State University duo of Chris Erickson and Jim Peach, who frequently are paired on the issues forum circuit, perhaps because they're not at all shy. But they may have let the audience down Thursday, April 25, when they agreed early and often during the recording of the economic outlook forum that aired that evening on KRWG TV.

While they offered nuances, they

- basically agreed:

 The Affordable Health Care Act should not devastate the economy. The real problem is the high cost and modest performance of U.S. health
- Investing in education, infrastructure and research rather than sequestering is the way forward.
- There's plenty of slack in the economy, so inflation at the end of quantitative easing – which they believe is at least 14 months away – should not be a problem in the short run.

Erickson said we're in an unprecedented situation with massive excess reserves being held by the banking system, so the future isn't clear.

Given the number of unknowns for economists to ponder, I was amazed when a member of the audience apparently took Erickson and Peach by surprise asking a two-part question on whether the growth of the economy in the 20th century was an historic anomaly, and whether growth is the best way to measure the success of the economy.

It's the kind of question I imagined they ponder on nights when warm milk or a glass of wine fails to soothe them to

They concluded growth is still the best way to measure an economy.

"I think we can not only grow, but grow in much cleaner, environmentally sound ways," Peach said.

Affordable services for startups locate under one roof

By Alta LeCompte

When WESST Enterprise Center moved into the Main Street Business Center Tuesday, April 30, it became the first tenant to occupy what developers envision as a "one-stop shopping" site offering services for startup and small businesses.

"The idea is for us is not only to meet the demand for affordable startup office space, but also we want to deliver one-stop shopping with services for small businesses," said Douglas Campion, director of the Main Street Business Center. "That way, as people move into the area, it will be easier for them to start their own

'WESST really is the anchor there. They have such experience and expertise."

Although WESST had just a month to find a new location, the emergency became a blessing in disguise.

"One of the things we're going to try to do is develop a community work force team. I think this is going to be perfect," said Jennifer Craig, WESST regional director for Las Cruces.

"We will try to come up with a way we as a team can decide what small businesses need and provide it."

Meeting an unmet need

Campion said the Community Enterprise Center at 125 N. Main St., which he established as office space for nonprofits, is full and there is still a demand for office space Downtown.

He explained while that facility provides office space for "nonprofits going out to serve the world," the new Main Street Business Center is really a service center for small businesses. Their missions are complementary but not

'The big thing for me, since we started in 2011, is we want to be very committed to Downtown development and take any opportunity to bring other businesses Downtown, as well as support all existing businesses," he said. "I think for the future of Downtown, the best thing we can do is encourage small, local

Among those moving into the new space later this month are an accounting firm offering services to low-income clients and a graphics company that can put together packages for small businesses with services such as logo and web page design. GreenWorks also will occupy a portion of the new 2,500-square-foot center.

New home finds WESST

When WESST put out the word it was looking for space, Dolores Rosell of GreenWorks called Craig to alert her to the planned opening of an office facility just the other side of the Rio Grande Theatre.

Remodeling of the building is nearing completion while WESST settles in.

A number of volunteers, including Roxanne Bernal of Ladies & Gents Day Spa at 232 N. Campo St., volunteered to help Craig and Jo Ann Garay, regional program coordinator and trainer, prepare for the move,

The move to Downtown is a kind of homecoming for Craig, who attended Central Elementary School and ate her first green chile cheeseburger at the original Day's Hamburgers.

There was a big cottonwood tree out front and chairs where we could sit and eat our lunch," she reminisced. "We could get a hamburger, Coke and chips for 25 cents."

Day's was then located at the corner of North Water Street and Las Cruces Avenue, current home of the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau.

She is looking forward to stopping in at the new Day's at 295 N. Main St.

Following the relocation, WESST staff won't skip a beat in offering services to area residents, especially women, who are venturing into business ownership.

WESST will give financial trainings for new businesses in late May and workshops on creating a business plan in June.

Panel discussions also are planned.

Craig hopes to bring in more speakers from the community who can share their expertise in areas such as insurance, retirement planning and incentives available for small businesses.

'We personally want to get best practices people who have started from the ground up,"

Craig said she expects the Main Street Business Center team will get involved in lobbying on behalf of small southern New Mexico

"It's so close to El Paso and there's a lot of competition," she said. "They don't have to pay gross receipts tax or workers comp.'

She said she anticipates WESST and its fellow tenants will collaborate with the city and chambers of commerce, among others.

Business plan community education course offered

Whether writing a business plan to secure capital or to lessen the risk of business ownership, the planning process enables owners to evaluate potential hurdles that could affect their businesses.

Discover the basics of the entrepreneurial planning process, culminating in the development of an early stage business plan. By preparing a business concept, building a plan, and evaluating a business for feasibility, the owner gains knowledge critical for business start-up and development. This practical, hands-on approach encourages immersion in the vision, research, and planning aspects of a new venture.

To sign up or for more information about this Doña Ana Community College Community Education course, email commed@dacc.nmsu. edu or call 527-7527.

Funds available for agricultural marketing projects

New Mexico agribusinesses are invited to apply to New Mexico Department of Agriculture (NMDA) for matching grant funds to help them market, transport and distribute their products domestically and internationally. The funding comes from USDA's Federal-State Marketing Improvement Program (FSMIP). NMDA serves as the fiscal agent for the federal funds.

Proposals must be submitted to NMDA on or before 5 p.m. Monday, May 20. For more information on FSMIP, visit www.ams.usda. gov/FSMIP or www.nmda.nmsu.edu. Potential applicants may also contact NMDA marketing specialists Craig Mapel at 505-852-3088 or Felicia Frost at 646-4929.

NMSU's Arrowhead Center now accepting applications

New Mexico State University's Arrowhead Center is now accepting applications for consulting services to help those seeking to start or expand their businesses. Applicants accepted into the program are chosen based on a variety of factors, including the development of innovative technologies and contribution to economic development in New Mexico. While applications are accepted on an ongoing basis, applications completed by Tuesday, May 21, will be considered first. Consideration for the program is based on resources available to provide assistance. Those interested can find the business assistance form at www.arrowhead-center.org. Forms should be submitted at jkoenig@ad.nmsu.edu. For questions, call 646-5398.

Wells Fargo reports record investments in nonprofits

Wells Fargo & Co. announced Friday, April 26, that it invested a record $1,073,290 million in 167 nonprofits via 119 grants in New Mexico in 2012, up 6 percent over 2011. In addition, Wells Fargo team members contributed more than $200,000 and 18,132 volunteer hours to help their neighborhoods and communities succeed.

Education/Financial Literacy received the largest amount of contribution dollars more than $341,000 or 32 percent and continues to be the key area of focus. Wells Fargo also invests in arts and culture, health and human services, economic development and housing and environmental grants.

The annual competitive grants process begins in January and is focused on the categories above. For more information on the process, please visit www.wellsfargo.com/donations.

Sisbarro Buick/GMC recognized with GM 'Mark of Excellence'

Sisbarro Buick/GMC in Las Cruces was recently recognized as one of the top-performing GMC dealers in the country through General Motor's Mark of Excellence program.

"GMC trucks, SUVs and crossovers are designed to exceed the expectations of customers, but they are sold by dealerships with the highest standards like Sisbarro," said Lou Sisbarro. "For my sales and service teams, Mark of Excellence designation is no small feat. We earned the distinction by meeting or exceeding GMC Divisional sales and customer service objectives."

New Mexico Magazine named Best State/ Regional Magazine

The Western Publishing Association has named New Mexico Magazine the Best State/Regional Magazine for 2012 in the association's annual Maggie Awards competition. The announcement was made Friday, April 26, at the Maggie Awards dinner in Los Angeles.

With a circulation of 90,000 (third-largest among state-owned magazines) and more than 240,000 readers, the magazine has one of the highest renewal rates in the industry (75 to 80 percent). Newsstand sales increased an average of 24 percent per issue in 2012, in the face of a national magazine industry decline of 10 percent.

Sullivan to serve third term on interstate education commission

New Mexico State University College of Engineering Assistant Dean Patricia Sullivan has been reappointed by New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez to serve a third term on the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, a regional organization created by the Western Regional Education Compact, adopted in the 1950s by the Western states. WICHE is governed by three gubernatorally appointed commissioners from each of 15 member states, working to improve access to higher education and ensure student success. Sullivan's term will expire on Dec. 31, 2014.

The elements include:

- The most highly educated and healthy work force in the world
- Investment in infrastructure and R & D, which have been reduced dramatically Erickson agreed basic research is the key to long-term growth and can't be undertaken by the private sector because it's not profitable.

He said there's a wealth distribution problem, however, and he fears the benefits of technological growth will not trickle down to blue-collar workers and white-collar workers.

Commenting on the near-term outlook, he said about 25 percent of New Mexico jobs are directly or indirectly dependent on government spending, Erickson said the state economy could lose 28,000 jobs as a result of the "total fiscal cliff."

Zan Steinberg: Restaurateur takes new position at Meson

Manager aims to put boutique hotel and restaurant on the map

By Alta LeCompte
Las Cruces Bulletin

When a man takes the same career path for more than 30 years - and all his kids follow him - something must be going

That, in short, is Zan Steinberg's story.

But the current chapter, his return to the valley to run Meson de Mesilla, may be the most exciting one yet.

Just two weeks into the job, Steinberg and owner Cali Szczawinski are getting a team together and learning from each other's expertise.

She has owned and run Meson seven years and is creating the new general manager position to grow the business. He knows nothing about hotels, but a lot about restaurants.

Bringing both experience and intensity to the tranquil little hotel and restaurant, Steinberg vows to "open up Meson to the

Meson unveiled

"This is not an elegant private residence," he said of the adobe style building hiding in plain site on state Highway 28 in Mesilla. Behind a wall, announced only by a discreet sign, are Meson's 12 guest rooms, two casitas, pool, bocce courts, bar and lounge, meeting rooms and a restaurant where a varied menu is offered in understated surroundings.

"It's a hidden gem that's about to be extremely overexposed,"

The first splash is set for 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, May 4, when Meson staff will be out front grilling food and serving it

Running start

In his first two weeks, Steinberg has given 40 tours of the upstairs deck, pool and guest rooms, every one to a brand new guest. About half found the place on the internet or Facebook, he said.

In addition to showing guests around, he encourages them to "dine in."

Guests who plan to spend several days in Mesilla have a number of options for casual fine dining, but there's no reason to leave Meson off the list, Steinberg said.

The menu developed by Chef Isaac, who has been with Meson for about two and a half years, has "a little something for everybody," he said.

"I've worked my way through three-fourths of the menu," he said. "It's nicely balanced - and it's good food."

Steinberg said he and Szczawinski will bring on board two more chefs who are known in the community, as well as hiring more up front staff.

He also will be bringing in New Mexico wines and cultivating the use of locally raised products.

The lure of hospitality

Hosting an open house and giving tours are reflections of Steinberg's management style, and also reveal his disdain for being cooped up in an office.

After studying political science and criminology in anticipation of becoming a lawyer, he worked in a public defender's office. Steinberg decided the law was not for him. He returned to hospitality, a field in which he had held jobs during his student years.

"I always loved the food industry," he said.

Steinberg said he spent the 1980s in New Orleans, a foodies paradise where Emeril was still working as a chef.

But Outback was just getting started and offered "a new concept and a great opportunity," Steinberg said.

"For 14 years I was an Outback guy."

Steinberg started with the restaurant chain in Denver, where he was managing partner for nine years, before transferring to

Fond Phoenix memories

In Phoenix, Steinberg experienced the "most heartwarming" moment in his career, raising $23,000 for police officer Jason Schecterle.

Schecterle had been burned over 100 percent of his body and needed extensive reconstructive surgery. Steinberg put together a fundraiser attended by a large crowd, including all the members of the police and fire departments.

"It was amazing," Steinberg said. "I started crying. The crew decided to give all their tips - $1,100 - to the charity. I was just bawling. That's a life's experience."

Steinberg said he also did a lot of fundraisers to help cure autism, his personal charity, since a dear friend's child has autism spectrum disorder.

Phoenix was rich with other experiences he will treasure, such as mentoring high school students during their first job in the industry.

Good-bye, corporate America

Steinberg came to Las Cruces for a change from corporate life and to open St. Clair Winery & Bistro, but later was promoted to supervise the company's other properties.

He said he traveled 1,000 miles a week during his last six

Tiring of the long trips, he talked with Szczawinski and they decided to work together to grow the business at Meson.

"This is my first entry into the hotel part of the business,"

"Outback spent a lot of time training us in goals and business development," he said.

In Outback style, he's on a 90-day plan. His first month he's learning the hotel business, the second month he'll devote to expanding restaurant sales and the final 30 days of his initiation will be marked by events he's not ready to

Working with him at Meson is his wife of 33 years, Mitzi, a graduate of Le Cordon Bleu in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The couple lives "three miles out in the country," where Zan Steinberg is enjoying landscaping and "getting his hands dirty."

He at first said, "Restaurant people just work." But after reconsidering, he shared that both he and Mitzi suffer from "a terrifying addiction to the Food Network."

CFSNM celebrates philanthropy during Run for the Roses event

COMMUN

FOUNDATION

Of Southern New Mexico

NATIONAL

STANDARDS

By Charlotte Tallman

There was a little bit of friendly competition and a whole lot of fun at the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) Run for the Roses Gala held Saturday, April 27 at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage

The Kentucky Derby-themed gala brought together philanthropy, derby attire, dancing and casino games to benefit 37 nonprofit endowments and CFSNM operating expenses.

The sold-out event attracted 350 community members, many playing traditional casino games such as poker, blackjack and Texas hold 'em after receiving a bag of chips at the front door.

For those wanting to have a more hands-on approach to playing and competing, Jeremy Settles enticed the crowd with a hand-cranked horse racing game hosted by Keith Burn.

With each chip representing one point, participants were able to drop their winning chips off in containers representing their favorite nonprofit. The amount of chips will later be used to award grants to the nonprofits, including Mesilla Valley Hospice, Casa de Peregrinos, Asombro Institute for Science Education, La Piñon, Jardin de los Niños and the Doña Ana

County Humane Society.
The celebrity dealers who cheered the players - and sometimes took their chips – were from nonprofit partners including Mesilla Valley Hospice; Asombro; Casa de Peregrinos; Doña Ana Arts Council; Southwest Environmental Center and the Flickinger Performing Arts Center in Alamogordo.

"This was an ideal opportunity for us to show the community the purpose of the Community Foundation and the relationship we have with our nonprofits," said Ammu Devasthali, chair of the gala

Other members of the gala committee included current CFSNM Board of Directors members Karen Bailey, Mandy Leatherwood and Diana Seward and former board members Amy Buesing and

'We wanted this gala to highlight our nonprofits and encourage philanthropy, all while having a great time, Devasthali said.

Attendees arrived in their favorite derby attire and walked down a path of antique horses containing ads from businesses supporting the gala. During the event, John and Amy Pollard, Cynthia Garrett and Lonnie Klein judged the best hats.

Winners of the men's hat competition included Glenn Cutter for most traditional, Keith Burn for most creative and Judge Jim T. Martin for best of show.

Winners of the women's hat competition included Angela Hampton for most traditional, Sue Taylor for most creative and Janelle Woodward for best of show. Teresa Ham received an honorable mention.

Gala sponsors included Ranchway Restaurant and Dr. and Mrs. Demosthenis Klonis. Champions of Philanthropy Sponsors included U.S. Bank; Las Cruces Bulletin; Las Cruces Sun-News; Comcast Spotlight; Ammu and Rama Devasthali; Elle Write Communications; Gibson, Ruddock, Patterson and Wilson Binkley Advertising & Marketing.

HORSE Sponsors, whose money will be used for the nonprofit granting, included Bank 34; Élaine Szalay, RE/MAX Classic Realty; Decorating Den; Kemp Smith; Savoy de Mesilla; Beasley Mitchell; Dr. Greg and Beth Fant; Direct Therapies; Jeremy Lay, Steinborn Realty; Home Instead Senior Care; Sisbarro Auto World and the Unified Prevention (UP!) Coalition.

Silent auction donors included Insta-Copy and Sisbarro

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the Foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New Mexico for generations to come. Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

I field scores of property inquiries from prospective homebuyers each month. The first question most of them ask is "how much?" The second and third most often asked questions are "how much is that per square foot?" and "what is the assessed value?"

When buyers ask those questions, I immediately know that they are trying to figure out whether the property is a good or "bad" buy compared to other offerings. Unfortunately, buyers who base their purchasing decisions on those numbers can be easily misled. How so?

Let's say that two homes built during the same year are on the market in the same subdivision. Both sit on identicallysized lots and have the same interior and exterior finishes, but one contains 2,000 square feet of heated and cooled living space and the other contains only 1,500 square feet of usable space.

The smaller of the two homes is priced at $150,000, or $100, per square foot. The 2,000 square foot model is priced at $165,000, or $82.50, per square foot. Which one is the better buy? One person I posed that question to said that the larger one is the best buy because the price per square foot is lower. That's not necessarily true, however, because the buyer didn't compare apples to apples.

The only way to determine which property offers the best value is to compare the asking prices of the homes with sales of other like-size homes in the neighborhood. In other words, the 2,000 square foot home should be compared with sales of other 2,000 square foot homes, and the smaller home should be compared with sales of other 1,500 square

Using the typical $30 per square foot size adjustment employed in the appraisal industry, the larger home's additional 500 square feet would be worth an extra $15,000, essentially equalizing the values even though the prices per square foot are different. Whether or not those values represent a "good buy" can only be determined by researching the sales of similar-sized homes, or apples to apples.

Other factors, such as lot size, swimming pools, interior and exterior finishes, errors in square foot calculations, outbuildings, energy upgrades, type of construction, location and age can all have an effect on the price per square foot. Take for example a 1,500 square foot home situated on a 2 or 3-acre lot. Using our example, the price per square foot could easily approach $200 when the value of the additional land is taken into consideration.

Generally speaking, smaller homes command higher per square foot prices, while larger square foot homes command lower per square foot prices.

Using the assessed value to determine whether a property is a good buy is another matter altogether. Let's say that a buyer purchased a home for $150,000 in a particular year. The following year, the property doubled in value. According to state law, increases in assessed values are limited to 3 percent per year. In our case, the $150,000 assessed value of the buyer's home would rise by only $4,500, to $159,500, even though the market value rose to $300,000. Trying to find a correlation between assessed value and market value is a futile exercise under most circumstances.

The bottom line is that using assessed values as viable indicators of market value is nothing more than a crap shoot. When it comes to price per square foot, the only way to achieve accuracy is to use the apples-to-apples comparison method. Regrettably, most buyers do not have access to the type of information necessary to make an accurate determination, but Realtors do. Giving one a call can go a long way toward finding the right property at the right price. See you at closing.

¡Ole! Cinco de Mayo returns

Historic Mesilla Plaza hosts annual celebration May 4-5

By Zak HansenLas Cruces Bulletin

On May 5, 1862, a legion of 6,000 French troops, under Gen. Charles Latrille de Lorencez, set out to lay siege on the small town of Puebla de Los Angeles, in east-central Mexico.

Undaunted, Mexican President Benito Juárez rounded up a small force of about 2,000 men – many of them indigenous Mexicans - and sent them to defend Puebla. Led by Gen. Ignacio Zaragoza, the poorly armed and vastly outnumbered Mexican force fortified the town and prepared for assault.

After a battle that lasted from dawn until nightfall, the French retreated, having lost nearly 500 men. Less than 100 Mexican soldiers had lost their lives in the siege. Six years later, the French withdrew their forces from Mexico.

While not a major victory in the Franco-Mexican war, the success of this rag-tag group of Mexican soldiers represented a great symbolic victory for Mexico, bolstering the resistance

Mayo, is a relatively minor holiday in Mexico, with businesses remaining open and citizens hard at work as any other day. In the United States, however, Cinco de Mayo has evolved into a large celebration of Mexican heritage and culture, especially in areas with large Mexican-American populations. Today, the occasion is marked with dances, parties, parades and performances – all of which Las Crucens can take part in. The annual Cinco de Mayo Fiesta on the Mesilla Plaza begins at noon Saturday, May 4, and continues through the weekend. The festivities will include ballet folklorico dancers, mariachis and other musicians, amusement rides, vendors and food - lots of food - in the heart of the historic town of Mesilla.

"For Mesilla, any holiday in Mexico will be huge, as we used to be a part of Mexico," said Ashely Echavarria, special events coordinator for the Town of Mesilla. "It's culturally significant here in this part of the country, and hugely important in our own history.

"Locals and tourists alike look forward to Cinco de Mayo on the (Mesilla) plaza all year. We get so many calls about it from out of town."

This year's fiesta will be no different - crowds from around the city and country are expected to pour into the plaza for the two-day festival, one of Mesilla's largest.

At noon Saturday, Cinco de Mayo celebrations begin with the singing of the national anthem by Alycia Carillo. Following Carillo's rendition, the plaza will be alight with the bright colors and flowing dresses of Ballet Folklorico Tierra del Encanto and the festive sounds and exuberant cries of Mariachi Corazon del Desierto and Mariachi Rosas del Desierto, of La Academia Delores Huerta.

From 2 to 3 p.m., Las Cruces Catholic Schools' Ballet Folklorico de Cristo will perform, as will Ballet Folklorico Amanecer from Sunrise Elementary School.

Las Cruces' Mariachi Real de Chihuahua, founded in 2005, takes center stage at the plaza next, performing from 3 to 4

At 4 p.m., the Las Cruces senior ballet folklorico group, Las Perlitas del Pueblo, will perform a routine of traditional dances, backed by the music of Mariachi Aguilas.

Two Cinco de Mayo celebration favorites – piñatas and a greased pole climb, in which contestants attempt to scurry their way to the top of a slippery pole to reach prize money - start at 5:30 p.m. As in past years, the greased pole climb is sponsored by Andele Restaurante.

Saturday's festivities close with a performance by Animmo, Las Cruces' premiere salsa band – the perfect end to what promises to be a day of fun and entertainment on the plaza.

On Sunday, May 5, Linda Goff will open the day with a performance of the national anthem at noon, followed by a performance by Folklorico Cuauhtli. Mariachi Alma de Jalisco performs from 1 to 2 p.m.

Next up, at 2 p.m., Ballet Folklorico Tierra del Encanto will dance, while Mariachi Azteca provides the music. At 3 p.m., adventurous fiestagoers will have another chance at the greased pole climb, and to have a whack at the piñatas.

Closing Sunday's fiesta – and the year's Cinco de Mayo celebrations - will be Fierro Band, which takes the stage from

The Cinco de Mayo Fiesta on the plaza is one of the most important cultural events of the year, as well as one of the most diverse and exciting.

"It's a great way to showcase our local entertainment," Echavarria said. "It's great for adults, for kids and for school groups - there's something for everyone at the fiesta. It really speaks to the community and their involvement.

"Overall, though, it's a family event – something that the whole family can go out together and do for free."

Las Cruces Art Museum honors young, local artists

By Barbara Chamberlin

The Las Cruces Museum of Art exhibited more than 100 art pieces from 67 students in its recent show, in partnership with Las Cruces area high schools, including Oñate, Mayfield, San Andreas, Alma d'Arte and Las Cruces. The contributions included pottery, prints, drawings, ceramics, mixed-media, fiber arts, photography, sculpture, jewelry and metals. This year included new awards for fiber arts and year included new awards for fiber arts and video/alternative media.

Alma d'Arte student Jordyn Palma received the Best of Show Award in Visual Art, sponsored by the Foundation for Las Cruces Museums. Her collage and mixed-media work "Moby Dick" earned her the $300 award, and she was honored with three other Awards of Excellence for her work.

The generosity of several local galleries and organizations, along with the support of the participating high schools, funded the awards, which were granted to 25 local students in recognition of their work. The complete list of award winners is available on the foundation's website, www.foundationlcm.com.

This type of exhibit is unique in the way it recognizes local students. It reflects the commitment the museum has to our local community and development of new artists. Joy Miller, Las Cruces Museum of Art exhibitions curator, said this is one of her favorite annual exhibits, and she felt the creativity and artistry displayed this year was exceptional.

"Young artists aren't defined by preconceived notions of what art is supposed to be, and I love seeing what they can do," she said.

The museum will continue highlighting local artists with its upcoming exhibit of works from students graduating from New Mexico State University with Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA) degrees. The BFA exhibit opens Friday, May 10, and features paintings, drawings, sculptures, graphic designs, photography, metals and jewelry, as well as an installation piece incorporating stunning dress designs.

The Museum of Art, Branigan Cultural Center and the Museum of Nature & Science are open 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and are all located on the north end of Main Street Downtown. The Railroad Museum is open 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and is located at 351 N. Mesilla St., at the intersection with Las Cruces Avenue. Admission at all city museums is always free. For more information on the museums, visit www.

Hands-on fun begins in June

NMFRHM summer day camps open soon

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum's popular summer day camps for kids are right around the corner.

The museum's education department has added some new camps this year and has brought back some of the more popular ones. Children may discover nature, archaeology, sewing, gardening, roping, drawing, learning about animals and more.

The camps are taught by museum staff members and museum volunteers, and pre-registration and a non-refundable class deposit of $5 is required for each class. For more information, call 522-4100.

Nature Camp: June 4-6, 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Ages 8-11, $25 for non-members, $20 for members

Come discover the great outdoors. Learn about birds, fossils, plants, critters and all things nature! Participants will take morning nature hikes and discover the wildlife around the museum. Please bring lunch every day.

Archeology Camp: June 11-13, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Ages 8-13, $35 for non-members, $30 for members

Do you enjoy digging in the dirt and unearthing mysteries? Enjoy three days of hands-on fun as we explore the fascinating world of archaeology. Learn about the Cañada Alamosa Project and discover how ancient people of the Southwest once lived and survived. Piece together puzzles from the past and participate in a mock dig where you'll learn to use the tools of an archaeologist. Please bring lunch, a hat and clothes that can get dirty each day.

Sewing Camp: June 18-19, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Ages 9-14, $25 for non-members,

$20 for members

For years, before store-bought clothing became affordable, families made their own garments, blankets, pillow cases, etc. Here is a chance to learn their secrets. Discover how to sew, quilt and read patterns, and learn about the styles and techniques of our ancestors for creating everyday items. The skills learned in this camp could provide the basic training to pursue sewing and quilting as a hobby in the future. Please bring a lunch both days.

From Sprout to Spoon: June 25-26, 10 a.m. to noon. Ages 6-10, $25 for non-members, $20 for members

Dirty hands are the sign of a great gardener! Agriculture has always been an important part of life in New Mexico, and this class will teach students how farming and food both define our past and shape our future. Hands-on gardening activities will culminate with students using vegetables from our greenhouse to make pizza in the museum's adobe-brick oven.

Ropin' and Wranglin': June 26-27, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Ages 9-14, $20 for non-members, $15 for members

Put on your cowboy hats and grab your bandanas! Come learn about both Old West and modern ranching in New Mexico. Take roping lessons, create a unique brand and learn about the horses and cattle here at the Farm & Ranch Museum. Come and earn your spurs in ropin' and wranglin'. Please bring a lunch both days.

Animal Friends: July 9-10, 10 a.m. to noon. Ages 4-7, $35 for non-members, $30 for members

This is a class for any child who has ever wanted to meet the animals from the pages of a book. Children will encounter animals through stories and crafts, then have the opportunity to meet the real thing. The class will include a presentation on being a responsible pet owner.

Life in 1957: A Time Travel Experience: July 16-18, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Ages 9-14, $30 for non-members, $25 for members

Join us on a journey to the year 1957. The U.S. was in the midst of a cold war with Russia and suspicions about Communism. Yet amidst duck-and-cover drills and concerns over Sputnik, American families were more prosperous than they had been in decades and Elvis rang out across the radio waves. In this camp, students will examine the history of this era and develop characters for a living history time travel presentation on July 18. Come step back in time. Please bring a lunch every day. Parents are encouraged to attend the time travel from 1 to 2 p.m. July 18.

Lambs and Looms: July 23-24, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Ages 8-14, $35 for non-members, $30 for members

Yarn, felt, socks and sweaters. In this camp, students will clean and card wool, learn the basics of spinning and weaving, visit the museum's animals and learn how to dye wool. Join this fun-filled exploration of wool crafting. Please bring a lunch both days.

Paints, Pots, and Portraits: July 29-Aug. 2, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Ages 10-16, $40 for non-members, $35 for members

Crayons are grand, but are you ready for the next step? Students will learn the basics of charcoal drawing, photography and pottery through hands-on projects, while gaining an understanding of composition, and aesthetics. Please bring a lunch every day.

'An oasis in the desert'

Happy Dog keeps customers begging for more

By Zak Hansen

Get along, little doggies – an oasis in the desert awaits you Downtown, a bastion of hot, delicious and quick eats.

Happy Dog, at the corner of Griggs Avenue and Water Street Downtown, has been serving up American classics hot and quick for four years, celebrating their fourth anniversary in Las Cruces this past February.

Happy Dog has progressed a great deal since first opening to the public, moving from "just" great hot dogs, to a menu that is constantly in flux, depending on market demand and customer request.

The menu has expanded to include cheeseburgers, Swiss burgers, deli burgers loaded with pastrami, the Burger Monster (piled high with chili and beans), the chicken sandwich (a customer favorite that, on most days, sells out before closing time) and even a veggie burger – which came about when owners Russ and Mercy Smith set up their stand at an Earth Day celebration.

"Ever since then, we've kept it on the menu," Smith said.

Russ and Mercy Smith arrived in Las Cruces 10 years ago from Seattle, where Russ worked in the printing industry, which suffered a major downturn following the Sept. 11 attacks.

"Part of our move was facilitated by my mother's retirement," Smith said. "After the printing industry took a hit, in 2001, I was faced with the question: What now?"

A phone call to his mother, who described Las Cruces to her erstwhile son, brought the Smiths to the Mesilla Valley. Once they arrived, Smith said, they fell in love with the Mesilla Valley.

"Moving from a big city, like Seattle, to a much smaller one, like Las Cruces, allowed me to create a new home, and to understand the feeling of home. Las Cruces is my home, now."

After arriving in New Mexico, Smith went to work in the real estate industry, a career that required a several-hour commute to his offices in Hobbs. When the housing market turned sour, Smith was faced with a choice.

"I was at a crossroads: Do I move myself and my family (to Hobbs), or do I stay here and do something else. I remember thinking, 'What now? How do I control my life and still have fun?"

The answer, as it turned out, would eventually lead Smith to open Happy Dog, which has grown significantly from its humble beginnings serving only hot

"Coming here and doing this turned out to be the best call of my life," said

Russ Smith, owner of Happy Dog, cooks cheeseburgers for hungry patrons Thursday, April 25.

Smith, who seems genuinely thrilled to be where he is – Downtown, serving great food to hungry Las Crucens with his wife, Mercy ("the backbone of this whole effort"), and son, Mac, by his side.

"They're both behind the scenes, bringing everything forward. They've got a much harder, more demanding and more constant job that I do. It's really a team effort."

Since opening Happy Dog, the Smiths have steadily and surely become a component in the resurgence of Downtown Las Cruces, becoming regular vendors at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market and familiar faces at citywide events, a role that Smith said he takes pride in.

"Being down here (Downtown), there's a rhythm to it. There's a lot of camaraderie here, a lot of conversation," he said.

"The ups-and-downs are less dramatic here. Things seem to progress organically, without a lot of surprise punches. They're stable."

"I enjoy seeing that, day-in and dayout, month-in and out, year-in and out - it has served me very well."

While he talks, a Happy Dog regular interjects, unsolicited, "It's like an oasis in the desert."

Smith doesn't see his location Downtown as only business savvy, though.

"Being down here involved a lot of sharing and giving back to the community," he said. "There's so much going on, especially with the farmer's market, that there's a level of involvement beyond just entrepreneurship."

While they've done well with their modest setup, becoming a hot spot for the multitude of city, federal and private employees that make their living Downtown, Smith said they aren't ready to jump into a brick-and-mortar restaurant – though he does, at times, consider it.

"Every once and awhile I toy with the idea, especially when it's hot and windy," he said, laughing.

he said, laughing.

"It's really about understanding what you have. Where we are now, what we are now, is effective. Do I want more? I guess so, but if I do (move to a building), it will be at the right time. It's a whole different role, and I certainly don't want to diminish how good I feel about this now."

What Happy Dog is now – where Happy Dog is now – is more than effective. If you're looking for something hot, fast and delicious without sacrificing quality or personality, Happy Dog is always right around the corner.

Chalking the block at Avenue Art New Mexico 2013

Photos by Zak Hanser

Avenue Art Artistic Director and showcase artist Bob Diven works on "Harvey" at the second annual Avenue Art New Mexico, held on Main Street Downtown Saturday, April 27.

Returning from last year's event, Cody Jimenez takes a moment to survey his work.

Showcase artists Cherish Flieder and Benjamin Hummel of Denver continue work on their Norman Rockwellinspired piece.

Artists Cassie Dixon and Jamila Hull show off their awards following Avenue Art New Mexico 2013. Dixon and Hull were awarded second place in the adult/professional category, as well as the coveted audience favorite prize.

Team Hernandez – Saul and Susie – take a break after finishing their entry, devoted to Las Cruces.

Sudoku

Complete the grids below so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains every digit from 1 to 9 inclusively. It is a game of logic, not math, and there is only one solution per puzzle. Have fun and exercise the gray matter.

All pain and no gain

Bodybuilder kidnapping saga suffers identity crisis

Review by Lorena Sanchez

An attempt to inject humor into an unbelievably true, brutal crime story (no surprise) falls hard.

"Pain & Gain" is a film based on an extortion, kidnapping and murder case in Florida in the 1990s.

The audience is told at the beginning of the film the events in the movie are based on a true story. In case the audience forgets any time during the more than two-hour-long film, it's reiterated throughout the movie when things

Adrian Doorbal (Anthony Mackie), Paul Doyle (Dwayne Johnson) and Daniel Lugo (Mark Wahlberg) are a group of kidnapping bodybuilders who torture their victim into signing over all his assets in "Pain & Gain." seem too crazy to be true.

"Pain & Gain" follows personal trainer Daniel Lugo (Mark Wahlberg) as he attempts to straighten out his life after a bout in prison. Lugo is out to prove he is a "doer" and can have it all. He concocts a plan to extort one of his millionaire clients, Victor Kershaw (Tony Shalhoub), simply because, to Lugo, he deserves what's coming to him. He recruits his client Adrian Doorbal (Anthony Mackie) and, extra muscle, Paul Doyle (Dwayne Johnson), a former coke addict who found Jesus.

The ill-assembled

crew kidnaps Kershaw brilliantly played by Shalhoub – and tortures him until he signs over all his money and belongings. After several attempts to kill Kershaw, it is obvious that he has nine lives. When the police find his story of kidnap and torture too ridiculous to be true, Kershaw seeks out the assistance of a private investigator.

Aside from blowing through their money, Lugo's insecurity and temper, Doorbal's double life and Doyle's addiction all factor into their downfall.

Nothing goes smoothly; the movie makes it glaringly obvious how stupid and sloppy these criminals were in going about their crimes.

Wahlberg's role is no stretch. We've seen it before in his other comedies. No

The movie is too comical to take the true story seriously, thus trivializing the crimes, and doesn't take itself seriously enough to evoke any kind of sympathy from the audience.

Redford directs and stars in taut thriller

Film Review

Review by Jeff BergFor the Las Cruces Bulletin

Thoroughly enhanced by a strong cast, believable story, tight direction and a relentless-but-subtle tension, "The Company You Keep" is now my second favorite movie of 2013, surpassed only by "Angels' Share," which opens at the Fountain in early June.

Robert Redford directs and stars in this thriller, and we first meet him while he tends to his young daughter, trying to get her out the door to school. As James Grant, an attorney by trade, he lives a clean and tidy life, although his law practice has taken on some pro bono work for different worthy causes. Although a bit too old for a part like this, he still makes it believable.

The day is interrupted however, as we witness the arrest of Sharon (Susan Sarandon) by the FBI at a local gas station. From here, the

As a wonderful throwback to when reporters really worked and dug into news stories, the young actor, Shia La Beouf, plays one such, who becomes interested in the story and doggedly pursues what really happened.

What really happened was this. Grant (actually Nick Sloan) and Sharon, among a cast of others that you meet, including Sam Elliott, Julie Christie, Nick Nolte and Richard Jenkins, were part of the radical political group Weather Underground, back during the Vietnam War. A violence-prone offshoot of Students for a Democratic Society, WU was (in reality) responsible for a number of bombings and robberies until three of their own were killed in an accidental explosion and the Vietnam War finally ended.

In the film, some of the above noted actors' characters were involved in a bank robbery where a guard was killed. They were never apprehended, and now with the arrest of Sharon, lead agent Cornelius (Terrence Howard) is hot on the trail of some of the others, including Grant/Sloan.

Grant/Sloan arranges to leave his young daughter with his brother (Chris Cooper), along with papers making him her guardian, and hightails it west.

We are introduced to the others who may or may not have taken part in the robbery, some of whom help Grant/Sloan, others who are still willing to do what they did 30 years ago. LaBeouf, as Ben, is also figuring out the story and is one step ahead of the FBI and one step behind Sloan. An outstanding scene where he is allowed to interview Sharon opens the door, but only slightly, on what really happened and who was really involved.

Grant/Sloan is easily able to renew his old skills of evasion, very believably, certainly knowing that "that day" was going to come. He evades the law, but not Ben, who knows that there is more to the story than people think.

The missing links come with the introduction of Christie, an unreformed radical who is working out of Big Sur, dealing bales of pot, a former police chief (Brendan Gleeson) and a brief glimpse of a photo of a small child.

The story progresses naturally and tautly, and has a natural flow that once again proves that good movies don't need a lot of special effects or 3D to make them good.

Even as he approaches 80, Redford, now a part-time resident of New Mexico who is getting more and more involved with young filmmakers, remains a strong presence both behind and in front of the camera.

We all have our secrets, and "The Company You Keep" has plenty.

I don't keep any company ... jeffberg@ lascrucesbulletin.com

Annual tour focuses on growing vegetables

By Beth SitzlerLas Cruces Bulletin

While the Mesilla Valley begins to blossom, residents and area visitors will get a chance to peek into some of their neighbor's yards during the 18th annual Las Cruces Tour of Gardens, held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 4.

As with previous tours, serendipity has played a role in this year's festivities. After the first garden was selected, the committee reached out to others in the area – to reduce drive time for visitors. With five selected for this year's tour, it was discovered they all had one important element in common: vegetable gardens.

"Vegetables gardens have grown rapidly in popularity, especially with the younger generation," said Jackye Meinecke, an organizer of the tour. "There are several causes for this. People want to know their food is safe. They're also driven by cost. Also, people are growing their own vegetables because of the flavor."

Focusing on the area south of Mesilla, the tour will take visitors to five residences, each with its own unique feel and atmosphere.

One stop will be the garden of Jerry and Helen Moser, Las Cruces transplants from the Santa Fe area who have brought with them their avid interest in gardening – as well as several plants.

"We have 16 raised beds of different sizes," said Mesilla Valley Garden Club President Helen Moser, adding that their 1-acre property features a bevy of plant material, most of which is native and drought tolerant. "Everything but the roses is water wise."

In addition to the raised beds that contain just about everything from beans and squash to herbs, the Moser residence also features an interior courtyard with a garden and pond, a cactus area, bolder features, fruit trees, drip irrigation and a hoop house so the couple can grow and enjoy their bounty year-round.

"We love to cook, and we love to freeze and can our own food from our garden," Moser said.

"A lot of the plants in our yard are for butterflies and humming birds. And there is still more going in."

A constant work in progress, the Moser garden is frequently tended to by the couple.

"Every year we improve the soil. We have our own compost bins," said Moser, adding that they brought worms down from their home in Santa Fe for their compost.

Near the Moser residence is the Rance garden, another tour location. The entrance of the property features life-sized Remington bronze sculptures, which continue along the back of the home in the form of a bison, elk, moose and playing children. The xeriscaped patio showcases raised beds as well as budding fruit trees growing in the property's new orchard.

Other stops on the tour include the Schaeffer garden, which features an acre of lawn and xeriscaping designed by David Grant. The home's large patio is filled with planters and raised beds containing vegetables. Refreshments will be served at this location from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Around the corner is the Grant garden, a professionally landscaped acre featuring a pool, fountain and enclosed vegetable garden. Shade is provided to the area by trees, and grass and rose bushes add color to the yard.

The fifth stop along the Las Cruces Tour of Gardens is the Biad garden. Hidden in a pecan grove, the garden was designed for the whole family and features a children's play area with a "pirate ship." The vegetable garden, which includes herbs as well as flowers, is joined by animals, which create a farm-like atmosphere.

At each of the tour locations, Doña Ana County Master Gardeners will be on hand to answer any plant and gardening questions, as well as provide more information about the Master Gardeners program.

A bronze sculpture of children playing can be found in the Rance garden.

With about 400 people attending the Las Cruces Tour of Gardens – and as many as 700 – each year, Meinecke said there is plenty for people to be inspired by, including those who may not have tried to grow their own vegetable garden.

"Research has come out that shows that having a vegetable garden is healthy for you not only physically, because of the work that you do, but also mentally – it de-stresses you," she said. "And you get quick results. You can plant squash seeds and pick them for the rest of the summer in about two to three weeks."

Moser also hopes to spread her green thumb to visitors and help them understand how easy it is to grow their own produce.

"You can grow anything with the proper soil and water," Moser said. "You don't have to have flower gardens cover your whole yard. You can have something growing that's beautiful and tasty for three seasons – four if it's covered."

Presented by the Desert Daubers and Mesilla Valley Garden Clubs of Las Cruces, the garden tour isn't just about looking at beautiful gardens and getting ideas – it's also about giving back.

Meinecke said the proceeds raised during the garden tour help fund beautification and education projects throughout the community. Previous organizations to have benefitted from the tour of gardens included the Bosque State Park, Mesilla Valley Hospice and the Blue Star Memorial. Grants have also been provided to school and community gardens throughout the city.

"Organizations have until (Saturday,) June 1, to apply for grants," said Meinecke, adding that applications are available online at http://lctog.org.

Meinecke said people interested in having their own gardens and yards featured in future garden tours may visit the website. Garden selections for the 2014 tour will be conducted in the fall.

"(The Las Cruces Tour of Gardens) is just a wonderful project," Meinecke said. "We love doing it."

Gardeners: have patience

Cold spring can lead to slow plant growth

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

The slow spring weather has us all scratching our heads. This one of the coolest springs I have seen in a very long time. And I don't mean cool as in "keen," either. Normally, we would have our pep-

Normally, we would have our peppers, egg plant and squash embedded in the freshly turned soil without worry. We may still have to watch those cold nights that wreak havoc on the soft tissued warm season veggies. Of course, we know where we have planted them and, at least for now, those newly planted seedlings can be covered in case of severe weather.

On the other hand, many have expressed concern over their lantana, red bird of paradise, tecoma stans (yellow bells), hardy hibiscus, plumbago and the like. They are left wondering if these plants had survived the last winter or not. My best guess is they have. Most of these plants are in fact survivors if they were properly watered into the fall and winter months.

They should be showing some signs of "green" life by the first or second week of May. These plants require not only higher ambient temperatures, but also warm soil temps to help wake them from their winter slumber.

If you have not already done so, you will need to cut all the above plants down to the nub. If there is mulch around them, it is best to remove it so that the suns rays can help heat up the soil directly around the root base. A small amount of fertilizer containing mycorrhizae should help stimulate

All you need is a small hint of green to let you know the plant should emerge into its full glory this spring. Once these plants are cut down, an easy test to see if they may still be alive it to try to pull these out of the ground. If they are firmly rooted in the soil, they should have a better chance of regrowing. With an established root system, these plants should grow even larger than the year before. Of course, if the plant lifts right out of the ground, then you have your answer.

Insects can be big problem for this new lush green growth, which is like a fresh nutritious salad bar to aphids, spider mites, mealy bug and cut worms, to name a few. In most cases, you may be able to hose them off with a strong stream of water – at least the smaller aphids and spider mites.

If you find this is too much of a problem, try using beneficial insects such as lady bugs or praying mantis. If this does not work, try using organic insecticides containing neem oil, pyrethrins or insecticidal soap. As a last resort, you can always use a regular insecticide for those stubborn pests. Try to use one with the word "caution" on label as opposed to a "warning" or even "danger," which lets one know the toxicity of the product purchased. These are on all insecticide labels, including the organic ones.

So, don't give up just yet on those sleepy plants, they just might surprise you this spring.

Waste not, want not

FreshPaper makes produce last longer

By Beth Sitzler

With events such as the annual Mesilla Valley Iris Show, PlantShare and the upcoming Las Cruces Tour of Gardens taking place in this fair city, you may be inspired to get your hands dirty and do some planting and cultivating of your own.

Now is the time to not only work on your flowerbeds, but also get your vegetables in the ground. According to the Las Cruces Seed-Share, cucumbers, melons, okra, squash, tomatoes and watermelon are just some of the veggies that should be planted during this time of year.

Getting these plants in the ground now, and caring for them as they mature, will result in a bounty of produce later.

When you vegetable garden is ready for the picking, you'll want to make sure your fresh yield lasts as long as possible. One way you can extend the life of your produce – homegrown or store bought – is with FreshPaper.

What is it?

FreshPaper, described as "a dryer sheet for produce," is a 5-by-5-inch sheet of paper designed to keep fruits and vegetables fresher organically two to four times longer.

The creation of Fenugreen, a company that began in Cambridge, Mass., in 2010, FreshPaper got its start at farmers markets and street fairs in the area. Now, the product is sold internationally with the intention of addressing food spoilage around the world.

Used in a refrigerator drawer, fruit bowl or other container, FreshPaper is infused with organic spices that can prolong the life of just about every fruit and vegetable, from strawberries and peaches to asparagus and lettuce, as well as mushrooms.

Another benefit: FreshPaper is biodegradable, compostable and recyclable.

It's important to note that while FreshPaper will help stall the wilting process, it doesn't help those fruits and vegetables that have already begun to decay.

How does it work?

The secret to FreshPaper's longevity is its combination of organic spices, which the manufacturers are keeping under wraps. The ingredients in the paper work similarly to refrigeration to prevent spoiling by hampering the growth of bacteria and fungi. It also deters enzymes that cause produce to overripen.

To use, place a single sheet of FreshPaper in the refrigerator door, fruit bowl or other container, directly under the fruit. One sheet is all it will take to keep bushels of produce fresh.

You know the paper is doing its job when it emits a distinct maple-like smell. This scent is created when the spices are active. This is handy, because when the scent begins to fade, you'll know it's time to replace the sheet.

Where can it be found?

FreshPaper can be purchased online at the Fenugreen website, www.fenugreen.com.

How much does it cost?

A sample pack of FreshPaper, which ships for free, is $5.95. Larger packs cost about $45.

Pools benefit from solar

Sun-generated ways to heat your pool

Mellow Honek
Living Better
Solar Powered

You've invested in a pool. Are you maximizing your enjoyment? Would you like to extend your swimming season with little to no ongoing cost?

As the solar expert, of course I'm going to talk to you about heating your pool with energy from the sun. If you think you know all about solar water heating for pools, think again. Yes, you can heat the water directly with a solar collector, but have you thought about heating the water with electricity made from solar photovoltaic (PV) panels?

Whether you are currently using propane or electricity to heat your pool, here are some options to deliver a welcome financial relief to your current fuel costs.

You can use solar to directly heat the water or, for greater flexibility, use solar to generate the electricity necessary to heat the water using a heat pump.

The easiest and most direct way to heat your pool from sunlight is to circulate the pool water through solar collectors. The collectors can be mounted on the ground or your roof. A pool filter pump is sufficient to circulate the water and maintain comfortable swimming temperatures from late spring through early fall. If sometimes your pool water seems too hot in mid-summer, you can cool the water by running the system at night. (See my Las Cruces Bulletin article from July 2011 to read more about direct solar heating.)

As an alternative to using the sun to directly heat the water, a heat pump can maintain comfortable swimming temperatures almost year-round. The heat pump gives you the flexibility to heat your pool as much or as little as you'd like. The best part is no fuel is required if you power the heat pump with a sufficiently sized solar PV array.

Water to air heat pumps simply extract heat from the air using the same principle found in refrigerated air conditioners. Just how efficiently the heat pump maintains water temperature depends on the ambient air temperature from which the heat is drawn. The hotter the air, the better the efficiency. Unlike the direct solar approach this technology can deliver pleasant water temperatures through most of the year.

If you'd like to take it a step further, it's possible to prolong your swimming season year-round. Of course, the water temperature may be enjoyable year-round, but the air temperature, not so much. Depending on your sensitivity to air temperatures year-round swimming may be best experienced indoors.

Whether your pool is inside or outside, you can further improve the efficiency of a heat pump by using the ground instead of the air as the source of heat. Unlike the air, a constant temperature can be extracted from the ground. This approach, while initially more expensive, offers the benefits of lower operating costs and the ability to heat your pool year round. The higher initial cost of a ground source heat pump may be offset by its lower electricity consumption and the corresponding smaller size of the PV system required to power it.

The cost of using solar PV and heat pumps depends on the size of your pool, your preferred water temperature, the length of the swimming season and how much of the required electricity you'd like to offset with solar. Keeping your pool covered is also important, for heating and controlling evaporation.

Remember, the solar PV system also delivers a 30 percent federal and 10 percent state tax credit. Plus you benefit from the 6 cents El Paso Electric Co. incentive that pays you for making electricity using solar.

I'll be at the Sunspot Solar display Friday through Sunday, May 3-5, at the Pool, Spa & Outdoor Living Expo at the Convention Center. Stop by and we can take a closer look at how the combination of solar PV, tax credits and a heat pump can give you more enjoyment from your swimming pool.

Can't get enough carrots

Root vegetable isn't just for mid-day snacking

By Beth Sitzler

Oh blame it on springtime, oh shame on the pleasant Mesilla Valley weather ... gardening has become a popular pastime, with many Las Crucens grabbing their hoe and fertilizer to grow their own abundance of produce.

Squash, tomatoes and melons are commonly grown in our area, but our warm weather and shining sun can support much more. One vegetable you might overlook – which would be a bad idea, since it thrives in sandy soil – is the carrot.

Packed full of beta-carotene, this parsnip cousin has been grown for centuries and can be found in a rainbow of colors – not just orange, but white and purple, too.

A good source of fiber, carrots should be-

A good source of fiber, carrots should become a part of your daily diet. And you can never have too many carrots on hand. Even if you think you can't eat them all, there are other ways you can use this mighty root vegetable.

1. Thicken that soup: Not only can carrots add color to your soups, they can also be used to thicken the liquid. Add cooked carrots to your food processor and purée them. Pour the mixture into your boiling soup and stir to incorporate.

2. Dress up your meals: Other dishes can also be adorned with bits of carrots. Run a vegetable peeler along your carrot lengthwise to create curls. If your pieces don't want to curl, wrap them around your finger to mold them. Place them into a bowl of ice water for an hour so they last longer, then add them to your meals when plat-

3. Beef up your beef: Are you trying to get the most out of your hamburger meat?

An easy and tasty way to do so is by adding chopped cooked carrot to your ground beef. You'll be able to make more patties, meat loaves and meatballs, and they'll have added nutrition

4. Lower the acidity of your tomato sauce: Tomatoes feature a bevy of healthy acids – from ascorbic acid, which is vitamin C and aids in the production of collagen to help skin health, to citric acid, which is a natural preservative. The tomato's malic acid gives it that tart flavor, which can be overpowering at times. Help reduce this acidity by adding finely grated carrots to your store-bought tomato sauce before heating. You'll notice a fresher taste.

5. Make a quick appetizer: The next time you throw a dinner party and are looking for an easy, healthy appetizer to serve your guests, reach for your carrots. Grate a handful of carrots and toss them with lemon juice and black pepper. Add fresh beets for a light, springtime dish. You can also roll cooked carrots in butter and a few tablespoons of chopped herbs, such as dill, chives and rosemary.

6. Save them for later: If you're unsure of what you want to use your carrots for, just save them for later by either drying or freezing them. To dry your carrots, wash them thoroughly then cut them into slices about one-eighth to one-fourth of an inch thick. Toss them in lemon juice and arrange them on a drying rack. Let them sit until they are crisp. If you're freezing your carrots, slice the clean vegetables into one-fourth to half-inch pieces. Steam them until they are soft, but still slightly firm. Drop them into cold water before storing them in a zip-lock bag that has either been vacuum sealed or has had as much of the air pushed out as possible.

Recipes for a relaxing Mother's Day

Sunny Conley Chile Knights

Chances are, most moms on Mother's Day would rather be pampered with a homecooked meal rather than an "eat out."

The restaurant crowds and din of diners isn't high on the relaxation meter. Plus, staying home means Mom doesn't have to fuss with hair, makeup or what to wear. Just let her be. It's her day. Let her sleep in, curl up on the couch with a book or watch an old movie while you stir up a savory, unforgettable meal.

It can be as effortless as tossing together a chilaquiles combo or as "complicated" as a brunch casserole. Set a table centered with fresh cut flowers. Add a pot of fresh-brewed coffee and maybe a gift (e.g. favorite perfume

The guarantee? Appreciation. Enjoy your mom on this very special day!

Chilaquiles

Chilaquiles (pronounced chee-luh-KEEless) are stale corn tortillas cut into strips and traditionally fried (although they can also be baked). Cook strips with just about anything, including chile, salsa, cheese and eggs. Tortilla strips can also be purchased packaged and ready-to-go in most grocery stores. In a pinch, substitute broken or crumbled tortilla chips.

4 day-old corn tortillas cut into strips (I used packaged hot picante flavored) Chile pepper seasoning mix to taste Fistful of cilantro, chopped 1 scallion, thinly sliced

1 to 2 jalapeños, stemmed, seeded and chopped or substitute serrano peppers Red or green salsa

2 large eggs beaten

A little crumbled queso fresco or other favorite cheese, including shredded Mexican three cheese

To make tortilla strips heat a cast-iron skillet over medium to medium-high heat. Add enough vegetable oil to generously coat the bottom of the skillet, and then add the tortilla strips and an ample pinch of chile pepper seasoning mix and stir to coat. Using bacon tongs, toss tortilla strips until crisp.

Add cilantro, scallions and chopped jalapeños. Stir. Add salsa. Stir again. Add a spoonful of red or green salsa if you like. Add beaten eggs, seasoned with salt and pepper. Mix and stir the eggs with the tortillas until the eggs are set. Top chilaquiles with a little crumbled queso fresco or shredded cheese. Makes 1 serving.

Southwestern Corn and Pepper Muffins

1 cup all-purpose flour 1 cup yellow cornmeal

3 tablespoons sugar

1 tablespoon baking powder

1/2 teaspoon baking soda

1 teaspoon salt

1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder

1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper 1 stick (8 tablespoons) unsalted

butter, melted and cooled 1 cup buttermilk, at room temperature

1/4 cup corn kernels, fresh or frozen 1 small jalapeño pepper, stemmed, seeded and finely diced (or substitute serrano pepper for more bite) 1/4 red bell pepper, seeded and finely diced

Center a rack in the oven and preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Butter or spray the 12 molds in a regular-size muffin pan or fit the molds with paper muffin cups.

In a large mixing bowl, whisk together the flour, cornmeal, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt, chili powder and black pepper. In a large measuring cup or another bowl, whisk the buttermilk, melted butter and egg yolk together until well blended. Pour the liquid ingredients over the dry ingredients and, with the whisk or a rubber spatula, gently but quickly stir to blend. The batter should be lumpy. Stir in the corn kernels, jalapeño and red pepper. Divide the batter evenly among the muffin cups.

Bake for about 20 minutes, or until the tops are golden and a thin knife inserted into the center of the muffins comes out clean. Transfer the pan to a rack and cool for 5 minutes before removing each muffin to finish cooling. Makes 12 muffins. (Recipe adapted from "Baking: From My Home to Yours," by

Spicy Tortilla Quiche

This recipe is for one 9-inch quiche.

8 corn tortillas

3 tablespoons oil 1/2 medium onion, chopped

1 (7-ounce) can corn with red and green peppers, drained

3 tablespoons canned diced medium hot green chiles or substitute roasted, stemmed and seeded green chiles

3 tablespoons black olives, chopped 1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and diced 1 cup half-and-half

3 eggs

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper or to taste 2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese Garnish suggestions: avocado slices, parsley or cilantro, salsa, sour cream

Dip each tortilla in hot oil in skillet for about 5 seconds, to soften. Drain on paper towels.

Place one tortilla in center of 9-inch quiche or pie pan. Arrange remaining tortillas around pan, overlapping slightly and allowing edge to extend 1 to 2 inches above rim of pan. Set aside.

In oil remaining in skillet, cook onion until tender but not browned. Stir in corn, green chiles, black olives and tomato. Cook, stirring frequently, for about 5 minutes.

In bowl, combine half-and-half, eggs, salt and cayenne pepper.

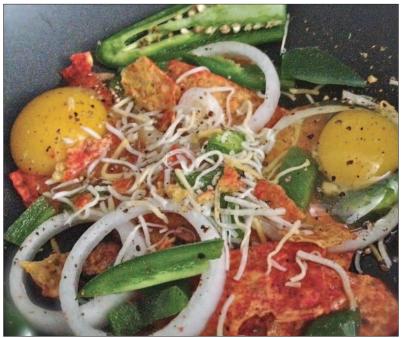

Sprinkle cheese evenly over tortilla shell. Sprinkle vegetables evenly over cheese. Pour egg mixture over all.

Bake at 375 degrees for 35 minutes. Cool 5 minutes. Garnish top with avocado slices and cilantro. Makes 8 servings.

cut diagonally, each 1/3-inch thick 1/3 pound pepper jack (or favorite chile pepper) cheese, shredded 1 (4 ounce) can diced medium-hot green chiles or substitute roasted, stemmed and seeded green chiles 1/4 cup fresh cilantro, minced 2 cups salsa

In a large bowl, beat eggs and milk until well blended. Dip half the slices of bread into egg mixture; and then turn to saturate.

Arrange slices on lightly greased 12-by-15-inch baking sheet. Top bread evenly with cheese, and then add green chiles and cilantro. Dip remaining slices in egg mixture, coating both sides. Top cheese-covered bread with plain slices to form sandwiches.

Bake at 400 degrees until they begin to brown, about 12 minutes. With spatula, turn over and continue baking until they are puffed and evenly browned, about 10 minutes longer.

Cut in half crosswise. Transfer 2 halves to each individual plate; overlap one half over the other. Serve with salsa. Makes 4 servings.

NMSU comes in seventh in RecycleMania

Annual competition brings attention to campus resources

New Mexico State University finished in seventh place in the grand champion division of RecycleMania 2013, a national competition in which college campuses compete during eight weeks to see who can reduce, reuse and recycle the most oncampus waste.

NMSU has been a leader in RecycleMania in recent years, placing fifth in both 2011 and 2012, and second in 2010 in the competition division of the tournament. More than 525 schools from 47 states, the District of Columbia and Canada participated this year. Schools competed in 11 categories to see which recycled the most on a per capita basis, which produced the least amount of waste and which recycled the largest percentage of their overall waste stream.

"We are educating everyone on campus about the importance of not filling the landfill with things that could otherwise be recycled or reused," said joni newcomer, manager of environmental policy and sustainability at NMSU. "Recycling centers can be found in almost every building, typically under stairwells. To request a small single stream recycling bin for under your desk or in your office, call Omar Moreno, the recycling manager, at 575-993-2130."

"RecycleMania's power comes from the way it taps school spirit to motivate students who may not react to a traditional environmental message," said Bill Rudy, recycling manager at Brigham Young University and president of RecycleMania Inc.

Between the Feb. 3 kickoff and the tournament's final day March 30, participating schools collectively recovered 90.3 million pounds of recyclables and organic materials, preventing the release of nearly 121,436 metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalent into the atmosphere.

NMSU's Aggie Recycling collects plastic No. 1 (PET and PETE), aluminum cans, paper, cardboard, steel, tires, asphalt, concrete and yard waste.

For the RecycleMania competition only, plastic water and soda bottles, aluminum cans, cardboard and paper, all types, were collected and weighed. The weighted amounts were reported weekly to the RecycleMania tournament council.

NMSU also is focusing this year on the reuse of office supplies, furniture and other on-campus items as part of waste reduction efforts on campus. To learn more about how to repurpose out-of-date materials, contact the Office of Sustainability at 646-7563 or visit http://sustainability.nmsu.edu.

Old cell phones can be recycled through the 911 Cell Phone Bank recycling program. To participate, old cell phones, chargers and batteries may be dropped off at the NMSU Police Department main lobby, at the office of Senior Vice President Ben Woods in the north wing of Hadley Hall or in the Associated Students of NMSU office in Corbett Center Student Union. Used phones will be reconditioned and made available to those in the community with a need. While the phones cannot be used for making regular calls, they provide a lifeline to emergency services without any monthly charges.

For more information about RecycleMania 2013, visit www. recyclemaniacs.org or contact newcomer@nmsu.edu.

Learning to meditate by riding a bike

How to focus while still being present

Gabriel Rochelle

Tales from the

Cassock

We were talking the other day while riding, and among things I said was that, over the age of 65, the mantra we all practice is, "Never fall." The behavior is even more important than the mantra.

It's true. Lose attention for a nanosecond and you can lose your balance and hit the ground hard. Some activities require attention.

There's a lesson in this. It's about the correlation between cycling and meditation. Meditation is also all about paying attention, just like riding your bike. Lose concentration for a split second and there you have it: you hit the ground hard – metaphorically speaking. Anyone who has ever tried to enter into deep prayer and meditation knows that the very minute you start, all manner of uninvited thoughts begin to intrude upon your mind. This is the meditative counterpart of losing attention while riding attention while riding.

To stay focused on one thing: That's the idea. But how hard it is to pull it off. Distractions occur. The minute you think you are riveted in the moment, there's dinner to consider or what were those people talking about on the street corner, or when am I going to finish that book I'm halfway through? The thoughts are like a logjam in the river that is your mind, often so thick and numerous that you can't see the water any more.

In an earlier age, we would have said that these are demons assailing you, trying to drive you away from the purpose you have set forth to achieve. Maybe so. You have to have some way of naming what's going on here. Most of us would not choose to blame demons any more, but the distractions are surely, well, demonic, aren't they?

Approach this as if you were cycling. It works. Listen. You ride out five or six miles; during those miles you have distractions aplenty. Then, suddenly, you simply begin to ride. You're not sure if you are working; it seems effortless. Time falls away; you are in the moment. Obstacles appear – you notice them, but you don't concentrate on them. You pay attention to them all, but the moment you pass them they are gone.

Meditation is like that. Here's the Zen story: Two monks are walking a mountain path and come upon a quick-running stream where a woman stands on the bank, trying to cross. One monk, without thinking, hikes up his robe, picks her up, crosses the stream and deposits her on the other side.

Two miles down the road, the other monk says, "I thought we were supposed to have nothing to do with women," to which the first monk replies, "I put her down two miles back.

Why are you still carrying her?"

When you cycle, as when you meditate, let things go as quickly as you pass them by, or they pass you by. If you concentrate on stuff you see or in your head – thoughts, ideas, opinions, even concepts of God – you lose focus on the moment and you are bound to fall. It only takes a split second to fail. In a split second, one thought can control you and take you out of the present. You have to allow meditation to happen just as when you are out a number of miles suddenly cycling happens. And there you are, fully present.

Many prayer masters advise that this is the time that bears eternity, the moment that encompasses the universe. You can, and perhaps should, let all else pass by, but be present in this moment and you will know the presence.

Fr. Gabriel Rochelle is pastor of St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission and professor of Biblical studies at St Sophia Orthodox Seminary, South Bound Brook, N.J. For more information, visit www. stanthonylc.org.

SPRING RUMMAGE SALE

Morningstar United Methodist Church will hold its annual spring rummage sale from 7 to 11 a.m. Saturday, May 4, at the church, on the corner of Roadrunner Parkway and Morning Star Drive. For more information, call 521-3770.

SOUTHWEST REED TRIO AT WELLSPRING

The newly formed Southwest Reed Trio will appear at the 11 a.m. celebration Sunday, May 5, at Wellspring Church, 140 Taylor Road. New Mexico State University faculty members Page Bartz, bassoon; John De La Paz, clarinet; and Carl Fels, oboe, will perform music by Jacques Ibert and W. A. Mozart. For more information, call 647-2560.

17TH ANNUAL GOOD NEWS BANQUET

David Beam, chaplain with the Good News Jail and Prison Ministry at the Doña Ana County Detention Center, invites the public to the 17th annual Good News Banquet to be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 7, at America's Value Inn, Mesilla Valley Conference Center, Columbus Room, 901 Avenida de Mesilla. Come dine and hear testimony of the power of God to change lives. Tickets are complimentary. RSVP by calling 647-7636. A love offering will be received to benefit the chaplaincy.

HEALING SERVICE

Sonoma Springs Covenant Church healing ministry team will hold a special service at 4 p.m. Saturday, May 11, at the church, 3940 Sonoma Springs Ave. The service will include a short homily, music praising God and prayer for anyone who comes asking for it. For more information, call 526-4907.

STABAT MATER AT ST. PAUL

St. Paul United Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave., is preparing a performance of Anton Dvorak's "Stabat Mater" at 6 p.m. Sunday, May 12. Douglas Weeks will be conducting the performance by choir, soloists, and orchestra of this beautiful late 19th century choral work. Singers from across the community regardless of affiliation are invited to sing this monumental work. Rehearsals will be at 8 p.m. Wednesdays in the choir room at St. Paul's with occasional Saturday afternoon rehearsal times. Scores will be provided. The work, which moves from grief to assurance, was intended for concert presentation rather than liturgical use. For more information, call 644-6999.

ISRAEL FORUM

A forum on "Israel's Great Social (Religious/ Secular) Divide" will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, May 19, at Temple Beth-El 3980 Sonoma Springs Ave. After viewing a video of Yair Lapid, a progressive party leader and member of the new coalition government in Israel, speaking to an ultra-orthodox audience, there will be a moderated discussion of how secularism and freedom of religious beliefs are in the spotlight after the recent Israeli election and why. For more information, email wanderingjeb@gmail.com.

GRIEF RECOVERY SUPPORT GROUP

If you've lost someone close to you or know someone who has, Grief Share is a special weekly support group held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays at the Morning Star United Methodist Church, 2941 Morning Star Drive, Room 105. At Grief Share you will learn valuable information that will help you through this difficult time in your life. Each session stands alone. For more information or to register, call the church office at 521-3770. Jackie Sledge at 915-525-2575 or Jim Maxon at 532-9699.

Team building helps leadership

Team building is the third component of life warrior leadership skills.

Any time an individual or organization attempts to accomplish a goal, it is imperative that a synchronized effort maximizes the opportunity for success. As a leader, this is critical to develop an effective and efficient family, organization

Some of the best historical examples are the accomplishments of military, business and sports teams. These organizations follow a set of principles that can vary based on the type of organization or goal desired. This article will address a common set of principles that are universal in the creation of a winning team.

The members of the team must be trained. All members of the team must be recruited, assessed and selected. This ensures the individual has the necessary capabilities to accomplish the desired goals. This is critical as the more complicated and serious the problem, the more imperative the commitment of the individual becomes.

Team members must be independent. The team member must be able to make sound decisions. The decisions that the team member makes need to be in the best interest of the team. Serious situations could possibly mean life or death. This is true of military organizations, police and fire departments.

Enthusiasm is key to team building. The team member needs to be excited, motivated and committed to team accomplishment. Team members must believe in the goals of the team. If the team member is not 100 percent engaged, then the desired goals will most likely not be accomplished.

The team must be respectful, mature, and treat one another with respect and dignity. Team members must be focused on the mission and not "Peyton Place" drama. All one has to do is observe a few sporting events and the immature antics of a few players to understand what a dysfunctional organization looks like.

The team must enjoy what they do. A person who enjoys what they do is more focused and committed to the goal. This goes beyond being enthusiastic; some of a team member's fondest memories are past accomplishments. This can lead to future successes in life and work.

If you follow these simple suggestions you will be surprised about the positive results in your personal and professional life.

Mental Health Awareness month kicks off with Youth Empowerment Day

By Zak Hansen

While the stigma has waned in recent years, issues of mental health - including, depression, anxiety disorders, autism spectrum disorders, ADD/ADHD, eating disorders, schizophrenia and bipolar disorder - are still suffered in relative silence by millions of people across

One in five U.S. children either "currently or at some point in their life have suffered from a seriously debilitating mental disorder," according to statistics released by the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH). Furthermore, the NIMH figures also indicate that one in four suffer from mental illness in

The most commonly reported mental illness, depression, is also one that has long lived in silence, hidden away from the public eye, despite its prevalence. According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), one in 10 American adults have reported suffering from depression and depression-related symptoms - meaning that, at some point, more than 31 million American men, women and children will report coping with depression.

This figure, however, does not tell the whole story. Many of those suffering from depression, schizophrenia and other disorders and saddled

Tresco client publishes poetry

Thomas McCord, author of "Riding on Hurled Bones: Selected Poems of Thomas J. McCord," traveled with his editor, Kathryn Albrecht, to Tresco Inc. Wednesday, April 24. to promote the book. McCord is a former Tresco client who is now retired from his work at the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology library. McCord worked for Tresco for more than 20 years after injuries he sustained in 1973 from an accident while living in California. The accident put McCord in a coma for three months. He had sustained motor skill impairment and short-term memory loss. While working at the library McCord began writing poetry and was discovered by his supervisor, now editor, Albrecht.

Lupus is a chronic inflammatory disease that occurs when the body's immune system attacks its own tissues and organs. Inflammation caused by lupus can affect many different body systems including joints, skin, kidneys, blood cells, brain, heart and lungs. Lupus can be difficult to diagnose because its signs and symptoms often mimic those of other ailments. The most distinctive sign of lupus – a facial rash that resembles the wings of a butterfly unfolding across both cheeks – occurs in many but not all cases of lupus. Some people are born with a tendency toward developing lupus, which may be triggered by infections, certain drugs or even sunlight. While there's no cure for lupus, treatments can help control symptoms.

autism and securing capital outlay for the New Mexico State University SPED department and Speech and Hearing Center to get better testing equipment.

"I think any time you have a family member with autism or, on the other side of the coin, child who is passionate about (an activity or cause), you become involved, and want to help," she said.

Ultimately, that is what makes her so passionate about the cause.

"Our family walked in those shoes," she said.

"Our community is very lucky to have such a passionate and knowledgeable person, like Sen. Papen, representing southern New Mexico," Covarrubias said.

Looking to the future, Papen said she would like to see that more children are tested early, whether it's for autism or other types of health issues.

"We need to look at our children early and often," she said. "And once we discover something I'd like us to have the ability to deal with it and (the money) to help our children."

This is especially true for those with autism.

"Catching it early betters the chances you have at minimizing the effects of the problem," Papen said.

Covarrubias also acknowledges the need to continue to bring awareness to the issue of autism.

"It's an opportunity to better support children with autism," he said. "It brings the community together through education."

with other burdens, are far more likely to be unable to report their issues. Millions of voices are never heard.

Children, the indigent and – least heard perhaps of all – the homeless are often forced to contend with mental illness without the benefit of services, treatment or, sadly, even a support network to help them through. They often fall by the wayside.

In 1949, through an act of Congress, May was dubbed Mental Health Awareness month – 31 days of each year devoted to providing services, treatment and education to those who cope with issues of mental health, as well as raising communitywide awareness to the plight of those often too stigmatized to speak up and speak out.

From 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, May 4, mental health organizations from around Las Cruces and southern New Mexico will join together to hold the first-ever cooperative mental health awareness fair at the El Crucero Transitional Living Program building, 1089 W. Amador Ave., near Mesilla Valley Community of Hone.

Dubbed Youth Empowerment Day, the event will feature booths from mental health service providers, especially for youth and homeless residents, offering much-needed services to those coping with mental illness, their families and loved ones, and providing crucial information to those fortunate enough to either live a life free from mental health illness or have available to them a support network through which to cope.

Organized by Families & Youth Inc. (FYI), Youth Empowerment Day is a day "to make the community aware of all the agencies offering mental health services available to them around town" said Maria Piñon, house lead supervisor with FYI Adolescent Shelters/Stepping Stones Group Homes.

"A lot of people don't know about Families & Youth (Inc.), or about any of the programs we and other agencies in Las Cruces offer," she said. "Youth Empowerment Day will give people a chance to filter through programs easier, creating a network and working to reach out to the community."

Agencies and services that fall under the FYI umbrella – including the Family Focus Program, the Juvenile Drug Court, Community Corrections and Assessment and Report Center Programs, Residential Services/Stepping Stones and Family-Based Shelter Care – will be on hand to provide much-needed information to the community. Those groups will be joined by several others providing mental health services to the Mesilla Valley, including Teambuilders Counseling Services Inc., the Roadrunner Food Bank of New Mexico and the Bair Foundation Child & Family Ministries.

Youth Empowerment Day will show-case a number of informational booths, including youth employment, health and services providers and teen pregnancy information, as well as a tour of El Crucero. Sponsored by Optum Health, Doña Ana County Behavioral Health Collaborative and Pic Quik Stores in addition to FYI, Youth Empowerment Day will also feature entertainment, including a high school art show and contest, dancer, basketball, food by Antonio's Restaurant and Pizzeria, music from DJ Barry, prizes, giveaways and more.

Getting out of the rut of routine

Small changes help maintain safety, independence

Julie MaagerCaring Decisions

Routines are hard to break, especially when they have been engrained for decades, but if modifying your routine could help you (or a loved one) stay safe and independent, wouldn't it be worth the effort?

Denise Orozco is an occupational therapist with Good Samaritan Home Care. Orozco explained that while a primary job of occupational therapy is working on fine motor skills after an illness or injury, another vital aspect is evaluating how a person is functioning in their daily lives and then recommending modifications – either to the environment or the person's routine – to improve safety and functioning.

"Occupational therapy looks at your daily activities – what you need to do from the moment you wake up to the moment you go to bed." Orozco said.

Many of the modifications Orozco recommends can be implemented by any older person or person with physical challenges to improve well-being.

improve well-being.
Adding grab bars around the shower or tub is one simple way to add considerable safety to the bathroom, Orozco said. Many people resist, she said, saying they use a towel bar or shower door to provide stability, but these are simply not strong enough to support a person when he or she slips or loses their balance.

"It's not about being careful," she said.
"You can be as careful as can be, but life still happens."

In the same vein, Orozco also recommends many of her clients switch to shower seats and handheld shower wands, instead of standing in the shower. Adding a towel to the shower seat can make showering safer and more comfortable than sitting on a hard plastic seat.

In the kitchen, Orozco often recommends rearranging items, bringing items that are frequently used to mid-level cabinets, reducing the need for step stools or excessive bending.

Throughout the house, removing throw rugs and clutter will reduce tripping hazards. In the bedroom, bed rails and night lights can help people get to the bathroom easier in the night, when they are likely to be a less steady on their feet.

"The hospitalization rate for falls in the home is so preventable if people allow for small openings of change," Orozco said.

With other simple day-to-day tasks, occupational therapists often have a bag of tricks for making life easier. Orozco said things such as "sock aids" and long-handled shoe horns can help people put on socks or shoes without bending to the ground and potentially losing their balance.

Another area where occupational therapists can work with patients is in modifying their routines to conserve energy. This is especially helpful for patients with congestive heart failure, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and other conditions that really take a toll on stamina. For instance, if a person loves to garden, Orozco said they can rearrange patio furniture to create safe rest areas around the yard.

the yard.

"We want them to have more energy to do the things they love," she said.

Soroptimist club helps the Child Protection Training Center

The Soroptimist International Club of Las Cruces made a $500 contribution to The National Child Protection Training Center – Southwest Region, located at New Mexico State University. Joan Dormody, Soroptimist first vice president, Esther Devall, department head of Family and Consumer Sciences, Rosa Silva and Susan Samuel, program planner, were at the check presentation. The Soroptimist Club raised the funds through a Turkey Trot event sponsored November 2012, which involved the support of many local donors. The center works to end child maltreatment and serves as a training and technical assistance resource for prosecutors, police, child advocates and others who are working to improve the lives of abused and neglected children.

Mesilla Valley Hospital welcomes new medical director

Mesilla Valley Hospital has welcomed Dr. Ernest A. Flores as its new medical director. Flores brings with him more than 35 years of experience working with those suffering from mental health and chemical dependency concerns in both inpatient and outpatient settings.

"We are thrilled to have Dr. Flores onboard to lead our medical staff," said Mesilla Valley Hospital CEO Bob Mansfield. "His expertise in psychiatry will be a significant benefit to our patients, our staff and the community."

Flores is a board-certified psychiatrist who has been established in the Las Cruces area for more than 25 years, having worked previously as medical director at Mesilla Valley Hospital. He will oversee the psychiatric care on all the units at the hospital, including adult, adolescent, adolescent residential, chemical dependency and senior services.

Flores will be moving his private practice, Las Cruces Mental Health Center, to the campus at Mesilla Valley Hospital. He will also continue to oversee Milagro Community Care. Flores is dedicated to treating his current and new clients in the community.

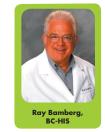

"I have devoted my life to helping those in need of mental health treatment," Flores said. "And I look forward to caring for patients at Mesilla Valley, as well as continuing to care for clients through my private practice."
