State agency clears LCPS 'Gaming of the system' not found by extensive audit

By Todd G. Dickson

A year ago, a large leap in special education reimbursement to Las Cruces Public Schools undercut increased state funding for schools, prompting Gov. Susana Martinez to accuse LCPS of "gaming the system." The Public Education Department

(PED) conducted two audits - the second very detailed.

At a school board meeting Tuesday, May 22, LCPS Superintendent Stan Rounds reported the administration had recently received a letter from the head of PED's federal programs closing the books on the audit and clearing the district's name in the dispute.

Rounds said not only did the audit find that the district was providing adequate services for special education students, what wasn't in the report was just as important - no findings, which is an audit term for not doing something properly or by current standards.

"There were no findings, meaning the allegations made about 'gaming the system' were not supported by the audit," Rounds said.

Coming off the 2011 Legislature, LCPS saw the most significant increase in need for special education funding with a $9 million surge that Rounds said was the result of fixing a computer program that was underreporting special education spending by the district. In the fiscal year prior to 2011, the problem resulted in the district not getting reimbursed by the state by about $5 million, Rounds said.

New Mexico Secretary of Education Hanna Skandera called for the audit to explain an apparent $9 million increase in special education funding in one year. Compared to the increase in the number of students needing special education services, Martinez said it came out to about $30,000 per student.

Rounds said what happened is not that simple. State funding over the seven previous years showed the district grew from a base

The City of Las Cruces annual Electric Light Parade will take a new route this year – one similar to the successful Centennial Parade held in January.

Instead of staging at Apodaca Park and heading up So-lano Drive to Hadley Avenue, the parade floats and entries will be staging at the City Hall parking lot and will travel the circular route around Downtown the evening of Tuesday, July 3.

With the success of the Centennial Parade, the Fourth of July Committee agreed to make the change, considering it had a similar theme of reflecting the city's history, and to provide support for Downtown revitalization, said Rob Caldwell, community relations coordinator with the city. This year's theme is "Celebrating the New Mexico Centennial."

The Electric Light Parade will stage at the new City Hall, 700 N. Main St., starting at 6 p.m. and the parade will begin at 9 p.m. The parade route goes from City Hall on Main Street to Water Street, around the south end of the last portion of Main Street being re-opened to Church Street, before returning to City Hall. The parade should end at about 10:30 p.m., Caldwell said.

Events, ceremony fill Memorial Day Summer's unofficial start also a time to remember

Memorial Day weekend is a busy one for southern New Mexico, with a wine festival and a variety of outdoor recreation, but the actual holiday is one of remembrance for service and sacrifice to the country.

Running from Saturday, May 26, through Memorial Day Monday, May 28, is the annual Southern New Mexico Wine Festival, an event so popular it's not uncommon to find many El Pasoans visiting the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds west of the city off Interstate 10.

For $15 daily admission, adults get to taste a variety of wines produced in the Land of Enchantment and spend a little at crafts and food booths, all while enjoythere is no admission fee, but they must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian. There will be activities for children available at the festival, which is open from noon to 6 p.m. each day. On Memorial Day, members of the military will receive a $3 discount.

Sports Skills Institute opening this weekend First in area for indoor baseball, softball

Bulletin Staff Report

The indoor baseball and softball season opens this weekend at the new Sports Skills Institute in the former Dickerson's Event Center at 3920 W. Picacho Ave.

Athletes of all ages are invited to celebrate the grand opening of the institute from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, May 26, through Monday, May 28.

It is the first indoor baseball/softball training facility in southern New Mexico - the perfect place for local ballplayers to evaluate and hone their hitting, pitching and fielding skills.

In 18,000 square feet, the institute houses 9,000 square feet of artificial turf, regulationsize bullpens and four batting cages - two of which are equipped with stationary pitching machines.

Technology also is featured in Right View Pro, a computer program that provides instant feedback on the aspiring athlete's hitting, pitching and fielding. Participants can even compare their results with a major league player's.

Local entrepreneur Marci Dickerson, who created the institute with high school baseball coach Miguel Gomez, said the facility will enable participants to enjoy their sport in a controlled physical environment, safe from weather extremes.

Indoor lighting means families can schedule lessons at night.

Gomez said the institute will provide coaches and instructors from the Las Cruces Vaqueros, New Mexico State University and Las Cruces Public Schools.

The institute will focus on programming for youth, including private instruction, player camps, coaches clinics, team and parent workshops, a traveling club team and high school and college-age guidance. An after-school tutoring program also is planned.

Dickerson said there is no charge for the facilities May 26-28.

In addition, the institute will host an indoor T-ball tournament throughout the weekend.

To register a team for the tournament or for more information, call 644-6624 or visit www. sportsskillsinstitute.com.

Day of remembrance

Memorial Day weekend is a time for family and friends; it is also a time to honor those who made our country free Memorial Day weekend is one of my favorite times of the year in Las Cruces.

The last week of May typically has some of the best weather of the year. We enjoy cool, crisp mornings, bright sunshine and relatively mild temperatures.

The annual three-day holiday has become a favored time to gather for barbecues, softball tournaments, family gatherings and possibly a trip to Elephant Butte Lake or an escape up into the coolness of the mountains near Ruidoso, Cloudcroft or Silver City.

Local golf courses are likely to be packed throughout the weekend as golfers take advantage of the moderate weather. Parks will be filled with picnickers. Softball and baseball tournaments will be played. Grocery stores will be filled with last-minute shoppers stocking up on cookout items for the holiday weekend.

The long weekend can be a perfect time to hike the trails in the Organ Mountains, go out to the movies or visit the popular Southern New Mexico Wine Festival at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds.

For some of us, Monday will be a regular workday. Many businesses will be open. In fact, Memorial Day has become an important marketing period for retailers. Consumers are inundated with a variety of media advertising that promotes special Memorial Day sales events. It seems that everything is on sale this weekend, from automobiles to grocery items and furniture.

Actually, this holiday merchandising is a relatively recent phenomenon. It wasn't all that long ago that Memorial Day was a much simpler holiday with a more solemn purpose.

The origin of Memorial Day dates back to 1868 when Gen. John A. Logan, the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, proclaimed May 30 to be a day to honor fallen Americans by "strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village and hamlet churchyard in the land." Because of the act of decorating the graves of military veterans annually on May 30, the day became known as Decoration Day.

With the passage of the National Holiday Act of 1971, Decoration Day became an officially recognized holiday. The act also moved the day from its traditional May 30 date to the last Monday in May, thus creating the annual three-day weekend.

Unfortunately, today it seems the original purpose for Memorial Day has been lost among our frenzied lifestyles. While families use the long weekend to gather and have a good time, it appears that fewer and fewer are taking the time to seriously reflect on the contributions and sacrifices of those fellow Americans who fought and died over the past 250 years to protect the freedoms we enjoy today.

This weekend, we encourage Las Crucens to look past the holiday sales and promotions. This weekend would be a perfect time to visit our wonderful Veterans Memorial Park on Roadrunner Parkway. The park has several monuments, including a wall inscribed with more than 6,000 names of local veterans, dating back to the Civil War.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if each of us would take the time this weekend to reflect on the original purpose of Decoration Day so that everyone in our community could continue to share the reverence and respect for those who have given their lives in order that we can enjoy the many privileges and freedoms we enjoy in this great country?

Whatever activities you have planned, we encourage you and your family to take the time to remember our veterans. God bless America.

Wolf shooters deserve real punishment

On March 27, a Mexican grey wolf pup was found illegally shot. It was a member of the Hawk's Nest

Pack, whose pack members live and breed in an area with livestock production and other human activities, yet have had little to no interaction with the people in that area

This is another tragedy for the Mexican Wolf Recovery Program, which had a goal of reaching 100 wolves in the wild by 2006. Here we are in 2012, with only 58.

Half of all wolf fatalities, since the beginning of the recovery program in 1998, have been caused by illegal shootings. The Fish and Wildlife Service seldom finds these shooters.

An effort needs to be made to carry out more thorough investigations and bring these shooters to justice. In addition to rarely finding the shooters, the punishment given to those convicted of shooting a wolf has been lax.

The maximum penalty for shooting a wolf is up to one year in jail and a $50,000 fine. Last year, two men were convicted of ilthese wolves, one of the most endangered mammals in North America, will result in merely a slap on the wrist. If the punishment for these crimes was greater, more of these shooters may be deterred. Julie Patterson

Government imposed art is not needed

We have lovely galleries, museums and studios. We have philanthropists with money and art collections from which they can donate to beautify public spaces. We have creative business owners whose architecture and décor beautify the town.

We vote with our wallets when we patronize charming commercial spaces. We have an attractive populace whose creative personal style warmly welcomes the community.

We pay governments to prevent despoiling of our public spaces, levy penalties for offenses from breaking glass on pavement to gang graffiti on walls. That sets the standards for community pride.

When it comes to art in public places, we do not need public money to be spent imposing a government committee's idea of art on our sensibilities.

6 New Mexico's

considered one of

Jay Miller Inside the Capitol

The 2012 election will produce many new faces for New Mexicans.

Half our senatorial delegation will change, along with at least a third of our House members.

Obviously that's not a lot of faces and some of them we have seen elsewhere. But New Mexicans are not accustomed to changing their congressional delegation very often. It is one reason our state receives much more than its share of federal money.

New Mexico currently is going through a transition caused by the retirements of two senators with a combined 66 years in Congress. Starting over won't be fun, but we enjoyed a long ride on the gravy train of federal projects.

It appears we will have a U.S. Senate race in November between Republican Heather Wilson and Democrat Martin Heinrich. Both have experience in the U.S. House, which will give them a slight leg up in the Senate.

Neither of them have had to break a sweat

in gear. Sowards loaned himself a big wad of money, but hasn't used much of it. This has given Wilson time to work on softening what many considered a severe image. The action isn't much livelier on the Democratic side. Both Heinrich and state auditor Hector Balderas are in basic agreement on the issues.

Balderas is a strong candidate and has received some important endorsements.

He also has a very compelling life story. But if political observers are correct, he will have to go negative to have a chance of winning. He doesn't appear prepared to do that.

New Mexico's U.S. Senate race is considered one of the most important in the nation, so expect the action to pick up soon after the primary elections. Our state no longer is considered a battleground for the presidency, but it is for the U.S. Senate.

The major primary election action is the Democratic race for the U.S. House seat being vacated by Heinrich.

State Sen. Eric Griego is considered the favorite, but Bernalillo County Commissioner Michelle Lujan Grisham appears to be closing fast. Former Mayor Marty Chavez is thought to be trailing.

Lujan Grisham and Chavez both accuse Griego of being too rigid in his positions and unwilling to compromise. They contend it will make Griego an ineffective member of Congress. It appears Democrats may have a liberal tea party.

This year's redistricting is producing some interesting legislative races. Sen. John Arthur Smith of Deming may have some trouble in the Democratic primary. He served as the conservative counterpart to former Gov. Bill Richardson, but some Democrats suggest his brand of conservatism isn't needed when we The House's longest serving member, Rep. Nick Salazar, has two Democratic opponents in the primary election. One is former Rep. Bengie Regensburg of Taos County.

Retiring House Speaker Ben Lujan is still waging some political battles. He is enthusiastically supporting Santa Fe Mayor David Coss to take over his seat. Coss is opposed by Carl Trujillo, who narrowly lost to Lujan two years ago.

Lujan also has given the Democratic opponent Rep. Sandra Jeff a $1,500 campaign contribution. Jeff has been a thorn under Lujan's saddle the past two years in which the Democratic majority in the House has fallen to a near tie.

Perhaps the biggest news so far in this election year has been the participation of Gov. Susana Martinez in some Republican primaries. She began by scolding Lt. Gov. John Sanchez for entering the U.S. Senate race. The following day she attended a function for Wilson.

Then came her endorsement of Angie Spears of Clovis and Rob Doughty of Albuquerque, in state Senate races.

Nearly all governors get involved in their party's primaries, but usually far behind the scenes.

One branch dominating government Legislative branch needs to get back in governing business

Michael Swickard In My Opinion

It is possible I worry too much. But I think not.

The more I watch Congress, the less power Congress seems to have. They get face time on the networks talking, but not acting as a Congress.

Remember, there are three equal branches of government, which, in theory, hold each other in balance. But in the last three years, this Congress has stopped functioning.

Their primary role is the federal budget. But no federal budget has been passed in three years. Our country languishes in a Neverland of uncertainty while Congress does not do its duty.

The lack of a federal budget has caused many subtle changes in the way our country operates. There are many governmental contracts still valid but not funded. Companies are trying to guess when Congress will return to work, but no one knows. Congress postures about the debt ceilings but does nothing until the last moment and then continues the charade of leadership.

Again, maybe I worry too much. In the last three years, Congress has been neutered in their role to advise and consent in the president's choices for governmental rule makers. This president just makes Czars out of people, which in effect circumvents congressional power. The Czars act like cabinet members but are not vetted.

Finally, rule making in the government is now done through presidential findings and agency rule changes made outside of Congress. Americans deal with entities such as the Environmental Protection Agency who command obedience. No longer are citizens able to debate the possible rules in Congressional hearings.

It seems we have a one-branch government or the makings of one. The only branch taking charge of things is the executive branch. It is hard to say with the judicial branch because we do not see their actions as easily, but for sure Congress has lost all of its power and does not realize this fact.

The Supreme Court is set to rule on the health care legislation which passed without anyone in Congress reading the entire 2,700 page bill. The members of Congress all admit there was not time to read it from when it was placed for a vote. We are still being surprised at what is in those 2,700 pages.

As I just said The Supreme Court is set to rule, but the buzz is that if they rule against the executive branch, the executive branch will institute the intent of the legislation via executive findings and agency rules. That would make the judicial and legislative branches of government irrelevant. No one seems concerned about the concentration of power in one branch.

Congress losing power has come in ways most people do not realize. The day-by-day working members of Congress spend three days in Washington and four days back in the district, which makes for great local press opportunities. But four days a week someone else has their hands on the control of our country. The rank and file continuously campaign at home, away from the halls of power.

Most constituents and many of the members of Congress think having the Congress spend four days every week in the home district is a good thing. They talk of being better in touch with the electorate.

That argument does not resonate for me because it leaves the power to govern in the hands of a few members of the Congressional leadership, the bureaucracy and the never sleeping, never blinking executive branch.

The way I see government as really serving the people is for Congress to work day by day among themselves in Washington as to what is the legitimate role of government in a free society. They need the time with each other to work out legislative issues. This does not happen when they dash into Washington for three frantic days and then dash home.

It would be better for them to work three straight weeks in Congress among each other and then spend one week back in the district.

Of course first, if they want to be relevant, they must pass a budget. If not, they can just spend seven days a week back in the district.

Maybe I worry too much, or not enough.

Pearce proposal a charade

Doña Ana County residents should know that Congressman Steve Pearce had a private and secret dinner meeting with developers associated with the Builders Trust of New Mexico and the New Mexico Home Builders Association, both of Albuquerque.

It was to develop a strategy to undermine the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument proposal and to gain support for his pro-developer position. After a hearty meal, this cabal then told the New Mexico Home Builders Association and the Las Cruces Home Builders Association to email members to support Pearce's miniature National Monument by attending his so-called public forum.

This meeting was a façade. Obviously the Pearce proposal will allow developers to build in the Desert Peaks area and the Organ Mountains foothills. This is a travesty.

Frontiersman Davy Crockett best described these political antics by Pearce: "There ain't no ticks like polyticks. Bloodsuckers all."

It is clear that Pearce is tied up with the special interests rather then concerned about our community. By the way, Pearce, who paid for dinner?

It is time for Doña Ana County residents to stand up to special interests and support a National Monument for the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks area.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Suspicious of the cow market

I was visiting with Bill in Alabama. He's a cattleman, a bit of a philosopher and a constant worrier. I mentioned that one of my friends had sold a set of 520 pound feeder cattle for $1.99 a pound. That's more than a thousand dollars a head. "I know," Bill said. "I've sold some myself but ..." then he paused and added, "I'm wondering if the price is getting too high?"

I cast a skeptical eye, but he was serious. "Whattaya mean?" I asked. "Is it possible that the price will drive people away from beef and ruin our business?" he said.

I immediately thought of that Yogi Berra observation, "The place is so crowded, nobody goes there anymore."

Due to the government's cheap-food policy re-established with each new Farm Bill, and the tremendous advances in production brought on by modern agricultural technology, food prices have stayed cheap in relation to other essential commodities.

I compared the number of 500-pound feeder cattle it took to buy a new three-quar-ter ton pickup in the last four decades.

In the '70s it took 22 head, in the '80s it took 36 head, in the '90s it took 72, and in the '00s it took 79 head. With each passing decade the farmer's product declined in value relative to his costs.

Suddenly in 2012, the number of feeders it took to buy a pickup dropped to 64 head. That's back to the mid-'80s average.

We in agriculture have grown used to being treated like Cinderella's stepchild or the kindly old hick uncle who still has cows, plants a garden and drives a real tractor. The consumer believes we live a simple life, Ma and Pa Kettle, like the sod-busters on the plains that need to be protected by the hero (a congressman or senator) who shoots the bad guy and runs off with the farmer's daughter.

It would be an eye opener for a good ortion of consumers to spend a day with a Washington feedlot operator, Illinois corn grower, Georgia seed stock producer, Utah rancher or an Arkansas cotton farmer. They could see computer projections of aver-age daily gain, soil testing, laser leveling, vineyard irrigation systems, dairy genetic selections, swine and poultry's meticulous ration calculations and the voluminous scientific research being used in all phases of agriculture.

The corn seed or semen sample that is put to work on our farms and ranches every day has as much technology behind it as a satellite on its way to Mars. But the trusting consumer doesn't see all that.

They only see us driving a grain truck out to the mill or taking a trailer load of feeders to the sale. We, in our greasy overalls or well-worn cowboy hat, are the tip of the technological, tried and trusted, diligent, essential iceberg that puts food on their table.

So if the price of beef, grain, milk and strawberries are now a little closer to what they are really worth, I'm gonna be thankful. Of course, if corn hits ten bucks, I just might start to worry.

Back from Fantasy Island Common sense regulations crucial to prevent banks from risking national economic disaster By State Sen. Steve Fischmann Let's visit a businessman's "Fantasy Island." The government loans you money interest free, whenever you need it. You can loan some of this money back to the government at a profit, and use the rest for your own operations.

The government insures your customers against any losses no matter how risky or imprudent your business practices. If things happen to sour, the government changes the accounting rules so you still look profitable.

If you still manage to become insolvent, they bail you out. If you get caught criminally misrepresenting the value of assets, illegally seizing customer property, or violating fiduciary responsibilities to customers, you don't go to prison; you negotiate a favorable financial settlement.

Most would call this fantasy world business nirvana. There's almost no way to mess up and lose money.

Amazingly, Fantasy Island has become the reality for big banks. And, against all odds, they did find a way to mess it up, not only for themselves, but for our entire economy.

So how have they reacted to their failure? By blaming the very people who've bent over backwards to insure their success. They conveniently overlook all the perks they receive and blame their woes on misguided government interference. They scream the words "over regulation" as loud and as long as they can – even as the latest JP Morgan debacle - $2 billion and growing – shows the fallacy of their argument.

I'm no fan of complicated rules and bureaucracy in either the public or the private sector. But if ever an industry demonstrated that it needs better regulation to protect both the public and itself, banking is the one.

Anyone who has gotten the bank runaround on a mortgage problem might be tempted to view the imposition of punitive, and confusing regulations as poetic justice. But that would be self-defeating.

The truth is that regulation could be greatly simplified, our economy strengthened, consumers and investors protected, and the banking industry stabilized with the reintroduction of a few historically proven principles.

1. Return to the practice of providing fair resolutions on troubled mortgages. In the old days, banks maintained ownership of the mortgages they originated and had strong incentive to help homeowners through periods of trouble. Foreclosure was a very expensive last resort.

In today's world, banks routinely sell their mortgages to third party investors and take a contract to continue servicing the loans. Since banks earn higher servicing fees for a foreclosure than a mortgage renegotiation, foreclosure has become the first option for resolving troubled loans.

This practice devastates families, hurts real-estate values and imposes needless losses on investors who bought the mortgages. Regulation that requires good faith mortgage renegotiation by loan servicers prior to foreclosure will protect both borrowers and investors.

2. Restore the separation between commercial banking (lenders) and investment banking. Commercial banks should not be allowed to engage in high-risk investment strategies or share any affiliation with investment banks that would put insured deposits at risk. Risky investment banks should not qualify for deposit insurance coverage.

Limiting Federal Deposit Insurance coverage to commercial lending banks will help push capital out of speculative financial instruments that do not support job creation and into productive, job-creating investments that bolster the economy

Forcing commercial lending operations to split from investment banking would also be a constructive first step in alleviating the "too big to fail" syndrome.

3. Create the same transparency in derivatives markets as traditional stock, bond and commodities markets. That means providing instant data on trading volumes and price spreads. We can't and don't want to stop folks from making risky investments, but they should at least know what they are facing. The lack of information in these markets is simply a license for financial institutions to steal, and to cover up improprieties.

Some in the banking industry claim these steps would push our financial institutions offshore where they can compete in lax regulatory environments.

This argument rings hollow for two reasons. First, there is no evidence that operating investment and commercial lending banks under one company umbrella creates operating efficiencies. Efforts to do so have not panned out well so far. Second, lax regulation in Europe and Japan has resulted in banks that are even weaker than our own.

Strengthening U.S. financial institutions with common-sense regulation and improved transparency could create a competitive advantage that attracts more capital and financial service business to our shores.

Over the last 30 years, bankers successfully lobbied for a government supported, loosely regulated Fantasy Island. It turns out Fantasy Island isn't all that fun for them or for our economy. The last thing we should do is listen to pleas to stay.

Over the long haul, common-sense regulation that protects investors and borrowers will also strengthen our economy and the banks.

Don't let hucksters chasing next quarter's profit numbers and this year's outrageous bonuses convince you otherwise. It's time to return to the mainland.

State Sen. Steve Fischmann, District 37, represents Doña Ana and Sierra counties.

Haines stays at helm of Doña Ana County

The Doña Ana County commissioners have completed their annual performance review of Doña Ana County Manager Brian Haines, who remains on contract through July 2015.

The commissioners credited Haines with successfully shepherding the county through the nation's fiscal crisis while other governmental entities were implementing abbreviated workweeks and layoffs. He also was commended for the overall quality of county services and for taking a leadership role in development of a strategic plan for the county.

Haines and the commissioners also agreed to a new format for future performance evaluations. Going forward, Haines' performance will be evaluated based on five major categories: Leading change; leading people; business acumen; public service and community engagement; and accomplishment of high-priority projects relative to the county's strategic plan.

During the course of the monthlong evaluation process, work sessions were held to identify a number of critical activities within each of the performance categories. The resulting work plan will be used as a guide by Haines and his management team for the next 12 months.

"Implementation of a results-based performance management system is seen by the commissioners as a natural and essential complement to the county's strategic plan, which is scheduled for a full rollout by July of 2013," said Doña Ana County Commission Chair Karen Perez. "This new approach to the manager's annual assessment acknowledges that the county's senior executive must be both flexible and purposeful."

Haines said he is grateful for the continued confidence placed in him by the county's top elected officials.

"While I appreciate the board's kind words and continued confidence, I have to give the lion's share of the credit to my management team and the remarkable staff of this organization," Haines said. "With them by my side, I look forward to finishing initiatives that are in process and to beginning new processes and systems that lead the county forward throughout my tenure."

SpaceX rocket launches to space after delay

The successful launch Tuesday, May 22, of SpaceX's unmanned Dragon capsule toward the International Space Station is a milestone for private spaceflight effort and NASA's transition to using more private companies.

Dragon blasted off before dawn Tuesday from Florida's Cape Canaveral Air Force Station, riding to orbit atop SpaceX's Falcon 9 rocket. The robotic capsule is now chasing down the station. If all goes well, docking will occur on Friday, May 25, and it will become the first private vehicle to dock with the huge $100 billion structure.

Elon Musk, a billionaire entrepreneur who founded SpaceX in 2002, watched the launch with most of his team at the company's Hawthorne, Calif., headquarters, which erupted into cheers as Dragon streaked into space, Space.com reported.

"There's so much hope riding on that rocket," Musk told reporters after the launch. "So when it worked – and Dragon worked, the solar arrays deployed and people saw their handiwork in space operating as it should – it was tremendous elation."

The liftoff came three days after a faulty rocket engine valve scrubbed a previous launch attempt. SpaceX has spent more than $1 billion on the project, The Christian Science Monitor reported.

Since the shuttle's retirement last summer, American astronauts have been hitching rides to the space station aboard Russian rockets, and Russian, Japanese and European ships have been delivering supplies.

90-day burn ban in place

Citing severe drought conditions across southern New Mexico, Doña Ana County Fire Marshal Robert Monsivaiz asked the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners Tuesday, May 22, to enact an emergency ordinance to ban all open burning and restrict other uses of fire and ignition sources – including smoking – for the next 90 days.

The action was unanimously approved.

The emergency ordinance is effective through Aug. 21, and it carries the following prohibitions in all unincorporated areas of

Equal Housing Lender Member National Credit Union Doña Ana County.

The use of campfires, except in containers consisting of a single piece of non-flammable material wherein the container has a solid bottom portion, the container has a continuous side portion of at least six inches in height, the container is adapted to contain combustible materials during the combustion, and the container is adapted to contain the resulting residual ashes and embers. The container must be used in areas clear of vegetation.

Open burning of vegetation or rubbish.

 Smoking within a Doña Ana County park or campground, or within any wildland area, except within an enclosed vehicle or building.

Littering on public roadways/areas with ignited smoking materials.

Welding, or operating an acetylene or other torch with an open flame, except within an area that is barren or cleared of all flammable materials at least 10 feet on all sides of the equipment.

Both the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department and the Doña Ana County Fire and Emergency Service Department will enforce the provisions of the ordinance.

Buck's service honored

An 86-year-old Las Cruces man has been honored as the New Mexico winner of the Home Instead Senior Care network's Salute to Senior Service award.

Don Buck is being recognized for his dedicated community service, including his work at Mesilla Valley Hospice, Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and the Rio Grande Rotary Club.

"It would be pretty easy to lie around all day, but volunteering gives me a good reason to get up in the morning," Buck said. "Breakfast gets me started and then I just go from there. I have macular degeneration, but I can still drive during daylight hours, so I keep busy."

The Salute to Senior Service program was launched this year by the Home Instead Senior Care network to honor seniors' commitments to their causes and communities. As one of 50 state winners, Buck earned a spot in the Salute to Senior Service Wall of Fame on the Saluteto-SeniorService.com website where his nomination story also has been posted.

Through Rotary, Buck gives hundreds of hours a year to the annual yard sale that benefits Mesilla Valley Hospice and even more to the annual Dress A Child event that provides clothing to area school children. Of volunteering, Buck is fond of saying, "Hey friend, it's like paying rent on the space you occupy."

"Don is an inspiration to other volunteers," said Charissa Paskowski about Buck's nomination. "Even when those of us half his age are already exhausted, we will see Don working diligently at the task at hand. He motivates me to expend all my energy to contribute to the cause."

As a state winner, Buck was considered for the national Salute to Senior Service award.

"Don is a valued member of the community and a senior hero to many," said President and Chief Operating Officer Jeff Huber of Home Instead Inc. "He has shown that volunteer opportunities for older adults should not diminish because of age. Seniors such as Don are making important contributions to their communities through charities, nonprofit organizations and faith communities."

Home Instead Senior Care is independently owned and provides personal and dependable non-medical care in the home, ranging from meal preparation and light cleaning to companionship, grooming, medication reminders and more. The Las Cruces Home Instead Senior Care opened in 1996 as the 38th franchised office. Visit salutetoseniorservice.com to learn more about the Home Instead Senior Care's program.

Dripping Springs Natural Area is seeking volunteers to help in the visitors center on Mondays and Thursdays. For more information, contact Cheryl Howard at 525-4487

Memorial Day event slated

Members of the Veterans Wall Committee are planning a Memorial Day candlelight ceremony at 8 p.m. Monday, May 28, at Veterans Memorial Park, 2651 Roadrunner Parkway, to honor 192 Doña Ana County veterans who died serving the country and who are listed on the memorial wall.

The community is encouraged to identify a family member or friend on the list they would like to honor with a candle provided by the committee.

Each of the 192 veterans will be called by name as the candles are lit and placed on top of the Veterans Wall. This will be done to not only honor veterans from Doña Ana County, but all members of the armed forces who sacrificed their lives in the service of their country.

For more information, contact Dolores Archuleta no later than Monday, May 21, at 524-7873 or darchuleta611412@aol. com.

Camp Invention set June 4-8

The national Camp Invention program is coming to Desert Hills Elementary School, 280 N. Roadrunner Parkway, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday, June 4, through Friday, June 8.

The cost is $215 per child. Children of Las Cruces Public Schools staff members receive a $30 discount. Some partial scholarships are also available.

First started in 1990, Camp Invention is a weeklong summer day program for children entering grades one through six that helps them discover their own innate creativity and inventiveness through hands-on science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) content.

In this summer's Envision program, children will experience different activities, including Inventeureka, Action and Adventure Games, Magnetropolis and I Can Invent: Balloon Burst. Children will spend their week visiting a faux island to study magnetism, taking a fantasy adventure on the Ci6000 Space Modulator Time Machine and inventing a balloon-bursting machine.

To register a child, visit www.campinvention.org or call 800-968-4332.

The group's intention is to re-create the town square each weekend and give voice to those who feel powerless and disenfranchised. Those who plan to camp out should bring a sleeping bag. Tents are available.

Members of the group will distribute flyers around the Apodaca Park neighborhood at 9:30 a.m. Friday, May 25. The flyers are designed to inform the neighborhood about who the group is, what it does, why it matters and where to find them. For more information, call Jason Burke at 915-2766.

May 25 is deadline for transfers

High school students who want to apply for a transfer to a school other than the school in their home attendance zone must submit a transfer application by 5 p.m. Friday, May 25, to the Las Cruces Public Schools Department of Instruction, located in the LCPS administration building, 505 S. Main St. After Friday, the next opportunity to apply for a high school transfer will be during the traditional transfer period – Feb. 1 2013, through April 15, 2013.

The only exceptions to Friday's deadline are for high school students who are new to the Las Cruces district or students who have circumstances that indicate a new school would be necessary. Parents of students who fall within these two situations can submit applications after Friday.

The latest projected enrollment figures for the four large high schools for next school year are as follows: Centennial High 1,165; Las Cruces High 1,924; Mayfield High 1,963; and Oñate High 2,019. Officials expect slight adjustments to the figures based on final transfers that are submitted, the exit of some families that move during the summer, or new families moving into Las Cruces.

Parents who have questions about transfer applications may contact Ricky Williams, the director of secondary instruction, at 527-5889 or rwilliams@lcps.k12.nm.us.

Debt forum scheduled

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) is hosting a free community forum "A Nation in Debt: How Can We Pay the Bills?" from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 6, at Picacho Hills Country Club, 6861 Via Campestre. The event is part of a nationwide discussion intended to promote thoughtful, deliberative discussion by ordinary citizens about the national debt, how it should be resolved and where the issue stands among problems confronting the nation.

The program will be conducted by the Public Deliberation Center of New Mexico, which is supported by the Kettering Foundation of Ohio. The Kettering Foundation has three decades of experience supporting non-partisan public deliberation on difficult public policy issues according to materials handed out about the event.

Moderators will present neutral explanations of three approaches to the debt, will lay ground rules and will listen to people's personal experiences and ideas.

A final segment will attempt to tie the discussion together and present common ground, if any is to be found. Participants and moderators will be asked to complete questionnaires summarizing their perceptions of the discussion.

Results of the forum will be presented to federal policy makers in 2013.

Hors d'oeuvres and ice tea will be served and a cash bar will be available.

A10 | News Las Cruces Bulletin Beeding endures 83 Gs Sleds test human endurance at Holloman

By Michael Shinabery

For just a tenth of a second as he rode the 120-foot long Daisy Decelerator, Capt. Eli Lackland Beeding, Jr. weighed 11,620 pounds. He was stopping so abruptly, he was subjected to a deceleration of minus 83 Gs, "the highest man has ever taken and survived," the Alamogordo Daily News reported on May 25, 1958.

Beeding, 29, and assistant chief of the Biodynamics Branch of the Air Force Missile Development Center at Holloman Air Force Base, had undergone the test nine days earlier. "We Develop Missiles, Not Air!" documented how Beeding, sitting backward, was fired along the air-powered track named for the Daisy air rifle, and quickly hit minus 40 Gs. (For acceleration and deceleration, one G is equal to the Earth's gravity). Previous subjects, who in addition to men included animals and anthropomorphic dummies, had endured an average stopping force of 43 Gs. Beeding, who held a master's degree in physiology, came to Holloman in 1956. George Meeter, in "The Holloman Story," characterized him as "lean and handsome as a Hollywood candidate," but "definitely no play-boy in the science field." Beeding joined the Air Force in May 1951 and served in Korea. While the military men who rode the track were paid extra for hazardous duty, Meeter said "hardly any project involving human hazards or volunteers was ever carried out without its leaders actively taking part."

On May 16, 1958, technicians strapped Beeding into the "2,000-pound chromiummolybdenum steel structure." The 335th run would be "the last in a progressive number with increased G's (sic)," Meeter wrote. Beeding had already experienced "forty or more runs" in various seating configurations to determine where the body best absorbed the shock of an abrupt stop. Between that and the 20-foot long Bopper, a slingshot-like device, Beeding held "the record for a greater combined total" tests.

As an example, if the sled had been programmed "for 15 G's, (sic)" Meeter said the chest might absorb 22; at 20 Gs, the chest absorbed 30; and at 30, the chest absorbed 45. The body's weight increased exponentially. To survive a crash, the ADN reported researchers had learned that "the backward facing position is the best one for absorbing crash forces Beeding was scheduled to experience 40 Gs, "but," Meeter said, "it didn't quite work out that way.

Countdown began, and "with a muffled bang and a perfection of smooth action the sled rocketed from its starting place, gathering momentum," Meeter wrote. The sled soon slammed to a stop, hitting a water-braking system that the paper said "force(d) water up through the 135 holes in the top of the container." Meeter described how Beeding's "head plunged into the backrest, the body strained upward and backward ... then slowly slumped down again." His face showed "pain. He later told Meeter that he felt " 'as if a baseball bat had been applied to the bottom of (his) back.'

Personnel rushed to Beeding's aid. He reported that his spine was "going numb' and that he was "blacking out." He also had no pulse and was rushed to the Holloman hospital. When technicians read Beeding's chest accelerometer they realized his chest had absorbed 83 Gs. He had worn "no special protective clothing," the ADN said. If he had been facing forward, he very likely would have been killed. Beeding was hospitalized for three days "for treatment of some vertebrae and observations.

Ironically, hitching a ride aboard the sled as additional subjects were rats. Numerous sources cited the animals experienced no shock whatsoever.

Dr. John Paul Stapp conceived the Daisy Decelerator in 1953. A pneumatic piston that compressed air to 650 psi propelled the sled, according to Mike Smith, New Mexico Museum of Space History retired registrar. After the track was extended to 240 feet in the early 1960s, the sled had the capability of reaching 100 mph in 40 feet or less. The ADN said "the combination of the sled and the 'Daisy' track is capable of producing up to 200 'G's' (sic).'

A Sept. 27, 1963 Air Force press release commemorated the 1,500th run. In one of several articles he published on the track, Air Force Lt. Col. Wayne Mattson cited a 1970 report that documented there were no failures over 5,000 runs using a water brake, and 4,500 runs using an air brake.

'Like all good things, the Daisy Decelerator finally came to an end in the early 1980's (sic)," said "We Develop Missiles, Not Air!" The New Mexico Museum of Space History now displays the sled.

Veteran announces run for legislative opening Carver will face McCamley in November programs for local youth. She has directed Concerned About Teen

Angie Carver, a lifelong resident of Doña Ana County, has announced her run for state representative in District 33 on the Republican ticket.

A Navy veteran, Carver is currently a nurse practitioner with her own practice in Las Cruces. Carver said she was one of the first women in southern New Mexico to establish an independent private practice as a nurse practitioner in 1995. Carver said this is one of the reasons she is running for state office.

"As a small business owner and a health care provider, I know firsthand the burden of unfair government regulations and tax structures that hurt our communities," Carver said.

The daughter of George and Angela Paz, Carver is one of 12 children, who have all become professionals.

Carver said with a good education, all her parents' children were able to choose where

"As a health care professional, it is heartbreaking to see our children en-gage in sexual behavior that damages them both emotionally and physically," she said. "We need to help at-risk youth feel they have worth. What is more valuable than our children?"

Carver has spearheaded the Full Potential Program, designed to help at-risk teens succeed. She has written and executed grants for risk avoidance and character education provided for both teens and their parents that include health fairs for at risk populations and mentoring programs.

'I've been active in our community, trying to help, for more than 25 years," Carver said. 'I'm running for office because I believe I'm uniquely qualified to tell members of state government what we actually need in our communities.

A graduate of Las Cruces High School, Carver has a bachelor's degree in nursing from the University of Texas at Arlington, a master's degree in nursing education (with a maternal-child focus) from University of Texas-El Paso, and a post-master's certification from the University of Virginia's family nurse practitioner program.

Carver will face Democrat Bill McCamley in the general election. The seat is currently held by Joni Gutierrez.

DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT SOUTHERN ACCESS ROAD to the SPACEPORT AMERICA Facility PUBLIC SCOPING MEETING

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) invites you to attend an open house public meeting to gather input regarding the preparation of a proposed Environmental Assessment (EA) for a right-ofway application for a southern access road to the Spaceport America facility. The EA will analyze the potential effects from construction and operation of the improved road. The BLM has determined that preparation of an EA is necessary under the National Environmental Policy Act and Council on Environmental Quality implementing regulations. This project is also an undertaking subject to review under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act. BLM will serve as the lead agency for the purposes of Section 106 review.

Several years ago, the district converted to a program used to collect data by the state's Public Education Department for funding. The district acquired a "patch program" for giving data to PED, Rounds said, but in the process lost some data for special education ancillary services, which include things such as speech and physical therapy. The funding for services to special education students kept declining even as student enrollment grew, he said. The district kept providing the special education services even though LCPS wasn't getting fully reimbursed by state, Rounds said.

Then, in the 2011 fiscal year, the formula's total count for ancillary services experienced "a precipitous drop" of about 1,300 funding forum units from the previous year, Rounds said. The district then wrote a new "patch program" that more correctly counted the data for funding the services, he said.

Rounds said if the funding in question is compared to enrollment growth, the new patch program succeeded in correcting the problem, but also caused a significant increase in the district's reimbursement for special education programs.

Responding to requests for the special audit cost the district more than 1,500 working hours, which Rounds said was done without more staff.

LCPS now hiring

With the opening of Centennial High School and the resulting large displacement of staff, there was concern about where everyone would land, Rounds said. But the staff shuffling hasn't been too drastic, he said, so now the district can open up 60 certified positions.

"We're hiring at Las Cruces Public Schools," Rounds said.

The superintendent said he is working on the last group of student transfer requests and numbers are shaping up to have the four comprehensive high schools be balanced in enrollment and by economic and ethnicity indicators.

Charter school budgets

In other business, the school board approved budgets for La Academia de Dolores Huerta and Las Montañas charter high schools. La Academia's budget passed easily, but Las Montañas' educational performance and finances continue to be a concern, primarily because of the high rent it pays at a former shopping center Downtown.

Richard Robinson, Las Montañas' dean of students, admitted the school was in dire straits a year ago, but there have been significant changes, including the addition of reading and math intervention programs and changes in staff in response to drops in student scores on standardized tests.

Despite the challenges, the school has brought its nearly $2 million budget into a better place with a $183,752 cash balance, Robinson said.

Board member Chuck Davis, who was the lone vote against Las Montañas' budget, said he couldn't approve it because the cost savings resulted in less instruction time for students. Davis said he needed a stronger commitment from Las Montañas to look for a new location if renegotiation of the lease proved unsuccessful.

Rounds said Las Montañas is paying about $12.50 a square foot, but the state average for charter school rent is $11 a square foot, "so Las Montañas is a buck and a half off."

Rounds said he was satisfied with controls in the Las Montañas budget, to not bring it so close to overspending its budget.

"You can see the change of the course," Rounds said. "It's there."

La Academia and Las Montañas are chartered under the local school board, whereas other charter schools in the district are chartered under PED and get funding directly from the state.

Graduations to be re-broadcast

News briefs

LCPS-TV and CLC-TV are partnering to re-broadcast 2012 Las Cruces Public Schools high school graduations Saturday, May 26, on Comcast Cable Channel 20, said LCPS-TV Operations Manager Janice Garcia.

The schedule is 10 a.m. for Mayfield High School, noon for Las Cruces High School and 2 p.m. for Oñate High School.

DVD copies of the graduation ceremonies are $10. They are available in Room 400 of the LCPS Administration Building, 505 S. Main St., Loretto Towne Centre, Suite 249.

Additional rebroadcasts of the graduation ceremonies will be scheduled, Garcia said. Check the LCPS website (www.lcps.k12. nm.us) for more information as it becomes available. Broadcasts of the graduations will also be available in a few weeks' time online in the LCPS archives at www.lcps.tv, Garcia said.

Court Junior High alumni invited

As part of a history grant, Court Youth Center is inviting former students from when the building at 402 W. Court Ave. was Court Junior High School to share their memories.

Saturday, May 26, is the last of a series of Memory Gathering Days. People can come from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and their memories will be preserved as part of "The 402 West Court Living History Project," made possible by a $4,182 New Mexico Humanities Council grant.

The project focuses on the 129-year history of the property located at 402 W. Court Ave. with interviews with individuals who remember the original Doña Ana County Court House, students and faculty of Court Junior High, artists, participants and past board members of CYC and the first graduating class of Alma d'arte Charter High School.

State Sen. John Arthur Smith congratulates Las Cruces Catholic Schools

Holy Cross Elementary School, Holy Cross Middle School and Saint Mary's High School of Las Cruces all won first place awards at the RoboRAVE International Competition in Albuquerque May 5, 2012.

RoboRAVE is the largest robotics competition in New Mexico for students in grades 3-12. At this year's competition, there were 348 teams and 1,100 participants.

The competition features both a line-following challenge in which a student-created robot must follow a line, and a firefighting challenge, in which a student-created robot must locate and extinguish four lit candles.

Holy Cross Elementary won the line following challenge over all other competing New Mexico teams.

Holy Cross Middle School won the firefighting challenge among teams competing from both New Mexico and Mexico.

St. Mary's High School won the firefighting challenge among teams competing from New Mexico and one team from Colombia.

"Outstanding academic achievement is not always recognized," State Sen. John Arthur Smith said. "I wanted to take this opportunity to congratulate the outstanding students of Las Cruces Catholic Schools, their parents, teachers and administrators on this fantastic achievement."

More for the military

As part of the Blue Star Museums Program, New Mexico's 14 state-run museums and historic monuments will once again offer free admission to active duty military personnel and their families during the summer months.

"For the second year, New Mexico will be joining museums across the country to honor the women and men who serve in the military, and their families, by offering free admission at our museums and monuments all summer long," Gov. Susana Martinez said.

The National Endowment for the Arts created the Blue Star Museums program in 2010 to honor active duty military members and their families. More than 1,000 museums across America have signed on to the program for summer 2012 and will be offering free admission from Wednesday, May 30 through Wednesday, Sept. 5.

"Many of our state museums and monuments already offer special free admission days for veterans," said Cultural Affairs Secretary Veronica Gonzales.

Those under the Cultural Affairs Depart-

Memorial Day events

Prior to Memorial Day, the American Legion Post 10 will sponsor a wreath laying ceremony at 9 a.m. Sunday, May 27, at St. Joseph's Cemetery, 100 S. Espina St. Later that day, members of the Boy and Girl Scouts will place flags on the graves at Hillcrest Memorial Gardens Cemetery, 5140 E. Picacho Ave.

On Monday, May 28, the Memorial Day events begin at 8 a.m. with the Garrison Flag raising at Veterans Memorial Park, 2651 Roadrunner Parkway. At the same time, a riverside wreath ceremony will begin on the west bank of the Rio Grande off Picacho Avenue. In the ceremony, put on by the Veterans of Foreign War Post 10124 District III Ladies Auxiliary, floating wreaths are tossed into the river in memory of departed loved ones and family members.

At 9 a.m., the VFW Post 3242 is the sponsor for a wreath ceremony at the Hillcrest cemetery. At 5 p.m., the Garrison Flag at Veterans Memorial Park will be lowered. At 8 p.m., a candlelight ceremony will be held at the park for Doña Ana County veterans killed in the line of duty.

Also on Monday, Mayfield High School Air Force Junior ROTC Color Guard will be in front of the main building at Casa Del Sol Retirement Community, 2905 Missouri Ave. The Oñate High School Navy JROTC Color Guard will be at the riverside wreath ceremony.

In the past, Memorial Day was called Decoration Day. It is a day of remembrance for those who have died in our nation's service. Memorial Day was first proclaimed May 5, 1868, by Gen. John Logan and first observed May 30, 1868, when flowers were placed on the graves of Union and Confederate soldiers at Arlington National Cemetery.

Roadrunner Food Bank sees first year progress Las Cruces-based operations now helping out six counties in southern New Mexico By Todd G. Dickson difference," she said.

Roadrunner Food Bank has distributed 3 million pounds of food throughout southern New Mexico in its first full year of operations.

In January 2011, Roadrunner Food Bank took over food distribution operations from the Las Cruces Community Action Agency.

Besides far exceeding its original first-year goals for food distribution, Roadrunner has expanded its warehouse capacity at 2001 Copper Loop by 25,000 square feet, said Nancy Barnes-Smith, community relations manager.

Roadrunner worked with partner agencies in Doña Ana, Luna, Hidalgo and Grant counties and had a delivery truck loaned from the main Roadrunner Food Bank operations in Albuquerque.

Roadrunner has been in northern New Mexico for more than 30 years and distributes more than 26 million pounds of food each year to soup kitchens, food pantries, low-income day care centers, shelters, senior's programs and other food-assistance organizations.

Besides expanding warehouse space, the southern New Mexico branch now has two delivery trucks and is adding distribution to Sierra and Otero counties, Barnes-Smith said.

Another success was the community doubling the goal for a $5,000 matching grant from the Stocker Foundation by donating a total of $10,000 last winter, Barnes-Smith said.

We received tons of $10, $15, $20 donations, but added together they make a big

That cash is going to help as operations enter the summer months, which are always challenging for food banks, Barnes-Smith said. With less food donated during the summer months, the food bank has to buy more food than it usually has to, she said.

Meanwhile, Roadrunner is expanding its mobile food pantries, the once monthly food distributions usually using a local community center with volunteers. There are currently six mobile food pantries in Doña Ana County and one in Grant County, Barnes-Smith said. By the end of June, the organization aims to more than triple that number by reaching out to colonias, she said.

In the coming year, Roadrunner will work to expand its Food for Kids program, in which students at local low-income schools get food in a donated backpack they can take home, Barnes-Smith said.

Roadrunner also reaches out to the elderly through Seniors Helping Program, which has received $28,550 from the City of Las Cruces.

Another goal for the coming year is to improve efficiency of operations by getting one more truck and adding drivers. This way the warehouse can be managed by someone who does not also have to drive a truck, which is the case now, she said.

Roadrunner will expand its pool of volunteers and will reach out to more growers and food markets, she said.

For more information, call Barnes-Smith at 680-1900.

Las Cruces Bulletin photos by Todd Dickson Above, Roadrunner Food Bank now has a second delivery truck, made possible through a grant from the American Idol Gives Back Foundation The food bank will be needing a third delivery truck as it takes on two more counties in southern New Mexico, which makes for a total of six counties where it distributes food. # One more snub from the WAC?

Jim Hilley Deflections

Talking to New Mexico State baseball coach Rocky Ward about the Western Athletic Conference all-conference awards reminded me of something.

Buried deep in my soul is a hater. A WAC hater.

The NMSU baseball team, of course, had a terrific non-conference season. The Aggies began the season by taking threeof-four from Wake Forest from the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Aggies split with Minnesota out of the Big Ten and Texas Tech out of the Big 12, and took three-of-four from rival New Mexico of the big bad Mountain West. To top it off, they beat Arizona twice – on the road.

For much of the season, the Aggies were nationally ranked.

Unfortunately, none of these accomplishments mean anything when the WAC hands out its postseason awards. They are calculated on a WAC-seasononly basis. Always have been.

Forgive me if I don't understand the rationale for that.

Whatever the reason, it's pretty obvious to me that Ward would have been WAC Coach of the Year if the entire season was taken into account. The Aggies might have had a Player of the Year as well.

Now, let me make it clear, Ward was pleased with the all-conference awards handed out to his outstanding team, he just said he didn't think it should be calculated on a conference-only basis.

The WAC has never been an Aggiefriendly outfit, however.

I haven't forgotten all of those seasons when the Aggies would go up against the Lobos and the Miners when they were in the WAC that once was.

Did many Aggie fans come away from those games feeling like the WAC referees called the games fairly? Not the way I remember it.

Don't forget that the WAC was created by dismembering the Border Conference. The Aggies were doing quite well in the Border Conference, but when bigger schools got dollar signs in their eyes, the Aggies were discarded like an old dishrag.

For decades, NMSU longed to get into the WAC, and time and time again were rebuffed. It was only when the WAC was a shell of its former self that they opened the door and let us in.

Maybe it's just me, but it seems like even as WAC members the Aggies have been treated like barefoot cousins. Deonte Burton as WAC Player of the Year over Wendell McKines? Please.

I know it's probably in the best inter-ests of NMSU if the WAC survives, but if the conference finally implodes, don't expect me to shed any tears.

NMSU earns No. 1 seed in conference tournament

Zac Fisher was one of seven Aggies named to the Western Athletic Conference all-conference teams for the 2012 season.

By Jim Hilley Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University baseball coach

Friday, May 25, 2012

Rocky Ward isn't high on sharing right now. "We won the No. 1 seed and by rule we are the WAC champion," Ward said Wednes-day, May 23, after his team swept the San Jose State University Spartans in San Jose, Calif., May 11-13.

Though New Mexico State, Sacramento State and Nevada all ended up with 11-7 records in conference play, Ward's Aggies owned the tiebreakers and thus the No. 1 seed.

"We are very happy and proud that we did what we had to do this weekend," Ward said. 'We went on the road knowing it was going to be a 12-day road trip and there was going to be a lot that needed to be accomplished."

Indeed there was.

The Aggies not only needed to sweep SJSU, they also needed Hawai'i to win two of three from Nevada – but not sweep the Wolfpack - because Hawai'i owned the tiebreaker over NMSU.

Somehow, it all fell into place. "Everybody else played Thursday, Friday and Saturday and we were playing on Friday, Saturday and Sunday," Ward said. "When we played the last game against San Jose all records were already in except for us.

"It was kind of like playing a championship game, it was very much an all-or-nothing game. If we won, which we did, we are the No. 1 seed and the WAC champion. If we lost that game, with the other tiebreakers, we would have ended up the No. 4 seed.

There was an awful lot of pressure on that game. We played very, very well and that bodes well for the tournament where every game is of the utmost importance.

As the No. 1 seed, the Aggies had a bye on See Aggies on page A24

Harding to attend University of Minnesota

By Craig Massey

It was a bicycle accident that eventually put Samantha Harding in a swimming pool. It will take something a lot more than that to get her out.

The record-breaking, nine-time state champion swimmer from Las Cruces High School and the Wild West Aquatic Club began swimming when she was 8 years old. After breaking her leg in a bicycle accident, swimming was recommended as part of her therapy to recover.

She said she continued to enjoy swimming, but didn't really take it seriously until she was a freshman at Las Cruces High. Harding just completed her senior year at LCHS and leaves a quite a collection of accomplishments in her wake.

She won the state championship in the 500 meter freestyle all four years of high school, earning the state record this year. She also has state titles in the 200 medley and 200 freestyle as a junior, the 200 freestyle as a sophomore and was part of two championship relays, including anchoring the Bulldawgs' 400 freestyle team this year.

The distance freestyle events are her best," said LCHS coach Terry Moore. "But she showed her versatility when she finished second in the 200 Individual Medley. She's an awesome allaround swimmer, and she's really focused in school, too. She had an awesome GPA.'

Harding balanced school with competing for two teams during her career. She estimates spending about 20 hours a week working out in the pool.

Harding said the two things she likes most about competitive swimming are being part of a team and seeing the fruits of her labor.

"I like my team a lot and I love my teammates," she said earlier this week before practice at Frenger Pool. "And I like the success that comes with it. It's based almost entirely on the effort you put into it. As long as you put the effort in, you're going to get somewhere. It's also a good way to vent frustrations."

Onthegreen _____ Want to fail at golf?

Here are 10 ways you're guaranteed to do it

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

One of the recent business books on the must-read list for executives on the shelves of the airport bookstores is "The Ten Commandments for Business Failure." It's written by the former president of Coca Cola, Donald R. Keough, and offers some insights that corner office and boardroom dwellers would be wise to understand.

Rumor is that Keough was asked to write the "Ten Commandments of Success," but said to his publisher, "Can't do it; but I can tell you how to surely fail."

Keough's first failure-inducing "commandment," for example, is "Quit taking risks." He notes that complacency and smug allegiance to what has always "worked" will spell doom for organizations that are now operating in a time of tumultuous global change.

Immediately, I thought that type of complacency would practically guarantee failing in golf, or it seems, would make golf quite insurmountable.

As I glanced through the contents of Keough's book, it struck me that the whole concept – beliefs and behaviors that would predict failure – applies to golf. And voilà, here we are, "The Golf Doctor's Ten Commandments" for how to fail at golf.

Right off let me concede that "success" and "failure," as they are applied to golf, are probably quite relative, and you may have your own private logic about how they apply to you. I'll save that discussion for another article. For now, let's just say that failing equates to an overwhelming combination of consistently poor performance, unsatisfying results, gross inadequacy and scarcity of any true mastery of the game of golf.

If that's what you want out of golf, here is what you definitely must continue doing.

Commandment for Failure One. Stay in the dark. To fail, you must mindlessly remain completely unaware of your gross swing flaws, not noticing how better golfers swing the club and manage to strike the ball solidly and consistently. There have been thousands of books on the golf swing, millions of pages of magazine articles, and now countless videos, DVDs, Internet downloads and other emerging forms of information, and still golfers refuse to analyze their own swings. Commandment for Failure Two. Never Commandment for Failure Two. Never practice. Certainly never bother to practice your short game – chipping and putting – which is where most of your strokes are accounted for. Failure will be virtually guaranteed if you neglect the short game.

If you want to succeed, you should devote half your practice and learning to chipping and putting, because that's where half – that's right half – your golf shots occur. Most golfers get within shouting distance of the green in two, but then reality, and mostly lack of practice, take over. Watch the pros; they chip and putt lights-out. They practice.

Commandment for Failure Three. Keep flailing away. Go to the practice range and proceed to hit bad shot after bad shot while persisting to stay clueless about what you're doing. But don't let the fact that you can't hit one solid, respectable shot get in the way. Just keep flailing away, and eventually, like the proverbial monkey at the typewriter, the ball may get airborne at some point. Is that being "successful"

to you? Commandment for Failure Four. Covet knockoffs. Delude yourself that you are a cagey and clever dude by using second-rate knockoff golf equipment, wrongly thinking that they are just as good as the real thing, but a lot cheaper. Would you like someone stealing your car? How about stealing your identity? That's what it amounts to when golfers buy phony knockoffs; stealing other peoples' inventions and brands. Ninetynine percent of those fakes are made in China, where most of the real things are made. It's a lucrative trade, but our wimpy government won't intervene. When real golfers glance at your bag and see junk it reflects on you.

Commandment for Failure Five. Embrace paranoia. Maintain a golfing attitude that is characterized by persistent negativity, pessimism, defeatism and the feeling that nothing will go your way. That will surely spell defeat and failure. Winners are positive inside and out.

Commandment for Failure Six. Cheat at golf. Do this by believing that the rules of golf were meant to be broken, or at the very least, bent. One of the chapters in Keough's book is "Play the game close to the foul line" if you want to assure failure. He notes that even in the midst of the Enron scandal and the sub-prime mortgage crisis there were more than 71,000 pages of pertinent government regulations, and still the executives criminally misbehaved. And they still do.

Í know a lot of golfers who follow the football and hockey mindset, where it doesn't become a foul unless you're caught at it. "If ya ain't cheatin' ya ain't tryin'" one of my fellow golfers was heard to claim.

Golf is different, guys. Very different. It's a gentleman's game, which means, take your medicine and play by the rules. I like the kid on the First Tee TV ads who says, "If you do things that you shouldn't do you get a stroke added to your score; you shouldn't do those things." Follow that advice.

Commandment for Failure Seven. Avoid golf lessons. Stupidly thinking that you don't need or can't afford golf lessons will certainly assure failure. The two chapters in Keough's book that apply here are "Assume infallibility," and "Isolate yourself," which Keough says will keep you and your business stuck in malignant culture of ignorance and stagnation that will leave you vulnerable to forces of change you don't see coming. Golf lessons and personal executive coaching have this one thing in common: to be a high-level performer you absolutely need feedback coupled with advice.

Commandment for Failure Eight. Misguided stagnation will surely do it. If you have played golf for 30 years (or whatever number represents your level of experience), and have not gotten any better, maybe you have failed. I'm not talking about scoring or handicaps; I'm talking about hitting quality shots during a round of golf. Why have you failed to improve after three decades? Is it mainly because you have to keep your handicap artificially inflated so you don't lose any face playing with your equally inept cronies who also masquerade as "golfers?" Or is it because you

What would you say to your doctor who failed to keep up with the latest in medical technology or drugs? That's how to fail in my book.

Commandment for Failure Nine. Accept mediocrity - and you accept failure; or at least dereliction in your duty of life. But that's just me; I'm a type A. Continuing to be satisfied with underachieving mediocrity, while being capable, but unwilling, to make any significant change with either your golf swing or your game, is like giving up on life. For human beings, who are capable of self-generating thoughts and insights, being able to change is part of what helps us adapt to life itself. Habit may be comfortable, but it ain't successful. You don't have to be a type A or at he head of the class for achievement motivation genes; why don't you just be the best you can be. Our military, our schools, our companies want you to be the best you can be. Let me challenge you to be the best you can be in golf. A recommended must-read is "Who Moved My Cheese" by Dr. Spencer Johnson.

Commandment Number 10 to assure Failure. Choke under pressure. I'll practically guarantee you'll fail on a potentially winning four-footer by following this simple prescription. Get nervous, stewing over nothing but the implications and disappointment of missing the putt, along with possibly having to face the savage needling of your "buddies," not to mention your own self-flagellation as "loser." And one more thing to assure defeat. While clenching the putter with a death grip, jerk your head up quickly, before even finishing the stroke, to look anxiously, only to see your ball slide past the hole and miss, again. Ah, failure. Some accept it, some don't.

Aggies rise from the dead

Conference baseball title snatched from jaws of late season slump

Aggielnsider

His driver's license says Rocky Ward, but his birth certificate has got to read Lazarus.

The Aggies have a share of the WAC baseball regular season championship thanks to a sweep of San Jose State last weekend.

Coach Ward said it was a loss that proved to be the elixir that brought the diamond dazzlers back to life last weekend. The heartbreaking loss at New Mexico, May 15, woke Ward's team up.

The year has been an emotional rollercoaster that included a national ranking and winning three of four from the Lobos and a tough stretch where close games just wouldn't go their way and then ending up with a league title.

Lazarus, uh, Ward, said the two-run loss to the Lobos got his team focused on the prize.

"It got us back to concentrating on playing winning baseball," he said. It led to four straight wins and the best momentum of any conference team heading into this week's tournament in Mesa, Ariz.

It has been a complete reversal of fortune, since prior to that loss; NM State was 1-9, which was the wrong kind of "mo."

In addition to the regular season crown, one Aggie has been nominated for another kind of postseason glory. Junior catcher Zac Fisher has been named one of 12 semifinalists for the 2012 Johnny Bench Award presented by www.baseballsavings.com as announced by the Greater Wichita Area Sports Commission.

The initial watch list started with 43 catchers from across the nation and is now down to 12. Fisher leads the Aggies with a .360 batting average, 17 doubles, five home runs and 54 RBIs on the season and is hitting .346 in WAC play.

Honors have followed Fisher around since he came to Las Cruces. He was named to the 2012 National Baseball Writers Association and the College Sports Madness Baseball Preseason All-American Teams after his standout sophomore season.

He was a 2011 second team All-WAC selection as a designated hitter and an American Baseball Coaches Association All-Midwest Region selection after leading the team with a .398 batting average and 68 hits. His batting average ranked 20th in the nation and his 71 RBIs ranked 76th nationally.

It will take more than one man to push the Aggies into the NCAA Tournament, but Ward has seen good play come from all corners this year.

Aggie basketball took some late season momentum into the NCAA Tournament, and NM State baseball is looking to duplicate that to the letter.

A double elimination tournament can be a funky thing but a team coming in with confidence has got to have a leg up. It's time for Ward to keep the momentum going in Mesa.

Rejuvenation

Aggies focused on taking the next step

Greetings from New Mexico State University women's track and field/cross country; what a semester is has been.

As a first-year assistant coach under head coach Orin Richburg, the winter and spring have really flown by.

Our indoor track and field season opened at Texas Tech University and closed at the WAC Indoor Championships in Boise, Idaho. The NM State Women's Track and Field finished third overall. We had eight first team All-WAC honors, and seven second team All-WAC honors.

NM State entered the outdoor track and field season without two familiar talents ... the Schultz Twins. Courtney and Camille Schultz were redshirted for the 2012 outdoor season as they transitioned into the NM State nursing program.

The season opened at the sunny University of Arizona and closed at a chilly University of Idaho. However, we left with three WAC titles, 15 first team All-WAC honors, five second team All-WAC honors and three new school records.

We have five women – senior Kelsey Brennan (javelin), senior Jndia Cleveland (long jump), sophomore Alishia Perkins (200 meter), junior LaSasha Aldredge (400 meter) and freshman Mareka Clark (triple jump) – who are representing NM State at the NCAA Outdoor Regional Track Meet in Austin, Texas, May 24-26.

The enthusiasm and excitement of the outdoor season leads us right in to our summer training for fall cross country. The men and women are building their precious base over the next few months, while they anticipate the start of the fall campaign.

Our veteran cross-country squads will be rejuvenated with new blood, both coaching and running. With the second-place team titles last year still fresh in our minds, we hope to improve with the new additions to our roster and win the WAC. Our teams are excited to race against new schools and faces this upcoming season. As we train over the summer and condition for the WAC Cross Country Championship at Louisiana Tech this fall, our minds, body and spirit will be focused on taking the next step toward success.

the opening day of the tournament, Wednesday and were scheduled to meet No. 5 seed Fresno State at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 24. Fresno defeated No. 4 Hawai'i Wednesday, May 23, 8-2, while No. 3 Nevada defeated No. 6 Louisiana Tech 6-3. Hawai'i and La Tech were to play at 11 a.m. Thursday, May 24 and No. 2 Sacramento State and No. 3 Nevada were to play at 3 p.m.

On Saturday, May 26, games are scheduled at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m., and if a final game is necessary in the double-elimination tournament, it will be at noon Sunday, May 27.

The tournament winner receives an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

Ward said he believed his team had done enough to receive an at-large bid if the Aggies fail to win the WAC tournament.

Ward also commented on the fact that seven of his players were selected to the WAC's all-conference team.

Senior outfielder Tanner Waite, senior short stop Tanner Voight, junior catcher Zak Fisher, junior starting pitcher Adam Mott and senior relief pitcher Scott Coffman all made the first team, while sophomore first baseman Tanner Rust and junior second baseman Parker Hipp made the All WAC second team.

"It's kind of a hard luck thing for Parker Hipp," Ward said. "For two years in a row, the player of the year has been a second base player, so he's been on the second team twice."

Ward was critical of the way the WAC chooses all-conference players in baseball.

"The WAC uses only conference statistics, not overall statistics," he said. "We only played 18 conference games and we played 55 games overall. It's a little bit of a short view of what a guy actually did over the course of the season."

Trakh signs Australian guard

New Mexico State University women's basketball head coach Mark Trakh announced that Samantha Donald, a point guard from Box Hill Senior Secondary College in Melbourne, Victoria, Australia, signed a National Letter of Intent this week to play basketball at NMSU beginning in the fall of 2012.

Donald is a 5-6 guard hailing from Melbourne, where she most recently earned 2011 Most Valuable Player honors at Box Hill Secondary College while averaging 11.8 points per game. Donald also averaged five rebounds, four assists and two steals per contest.

She led Box Hill to state and national championships as well as an under-20 state title as a senior at the direction of coach Natasha Main. In addition to team MVP honors last year, Donald also was recognized as the Most Valuable Player in the state championship final. Donald is the fourth recruit inked by the Aggie coaching staff for the 2012-13 signing class joining fall signees Abby Scott, a 6-1 guard from Madras Ore., Sasha Weber, a 6-0 guard from Lacey, Wash., and Shay Young, a 6-0 guard from San Diego.

She is the daughter of Greg and Lisa Donald of Melbourne.

Aggies competing in Austin

Four Aggies are representing the New Mexico State University track and field team at the NCAA Preliminary Round Championships taking place through Saturday, May 26.

NMSU competes in the west division in Austin, Texas.

Sophomore Alishia Perkins was selected to compete in the 200 meter, junior LaSasha Aldredge will compete in the 400m, senior Jndia Cleveland will compete in the long jump and senior Kelsey Brennan will compete in the javelin throw.

"We are excited for these girls to make it," said track and field coach Orin Richburg. "We would always like to have more so that is something we would like to work on."

Finalists are chosen based off their top marks during the season. Perkins ran her best time in the 200m at the Western Athletic Conference Championships on May 8, when she posted at time of 24.01. Aldredge ran her best time in the 400m at the WAC Championships as well with a time of 53.41. Cleveland marked her best distance in the long jump at the UTEP Invitational on April 14, with a mark of 5.99m. Brennan recorded her best javelin throw at the WAC Championships with a mark of 45.76m.

"As we are moving forward in the program, we are trying to move as many athletes to the next level," Richburg said. "Our goal is to start competing at the national level."

Tanner Rust is Hitter of the Week

New Mexico State first baseman Tanner Rust was named the Verizon Western Athletic Conference Baseball Hitter of the Week, for his play during the week of May 14-20.

Rust, a sophomore from Lakeside, Calif. (El Capitan High School), hit .500 (10-for-20) with five runs scored, two doubles, a triple, a home run, five RBI and one walk as the Aggies went 4-1 on the week with a win over CSU Bakersfield and a threegame series sweep at San Jose State. Rust had 43 putouts, three assists and only one error on defense through his five games last week.

In a 12-10 loss at rival New Mexico, Rust went 3-for-5 at the plate with his first home run of the season. He also picked up two RBI at New Mexico.

"Starting with UNM, we felt like we were getting our momentum back and even though we lost we felt like it was a turning point for us," Rust said.

Rust recorded a sacrifice fly in game two at San Jose State to secure a 4-2 win over the Spartans. Rust then finished the week leading the Aggie offense going 4-for-4 at the plate with a triple, three runs scored and two RBI as the Aggies won their regularseason finale 15-2 at SJSU.

News | A25 Jovovich, Pullman expected for film screening

White Sands festival slated for Aug. 22-26

Bulletin Staff Report

A screening of the feature film "Bringing Up Bobby," written and directed by Famke Janssen, will open the 2012 White Sands International Film Festival in Las Cruces Wednesday, Aug. 22.

The screening, which is expected to include stars Milla Jo-vovich and Bill Pullman, marks the beginning of the annual film festival, which runs through Sunday, Aug. 26.

"Bringing Up Bobby" is the story of a European con artist and her young son Bobby, who find themselves in Oklahoma to escape her past and build a better future. The duo charms their way from one adventure to another until her past catches up with her.

The film stars Jovovich ("The Fifth Element," "Ultraviolet," "Resident Evil") and Pullman ("Independence Day," "Wyatt Earp," "Sleepless in Seattle").

Bringing Up Bobby" is the writing and directorial debut of Janssen, who played Jean Gray in the X-Men movies and made many appearances on the TV series "Nip & Tuck."

A private VIP reception will follow the opening night screening of "Bringing Up Bobby," which will allow attendees the opportunity to meet Jovovich, Pullman, Janssen and the film's producers.

The White Sands International Film Festival, in its seventh year, brings together films from around the world to showcase the skills and talents of amateur and professional filmmakers alike. The festival is a five-day event running Aug. 22-26 with film screenings, workshops and VIP parties in Las Cruces.

For more information about the WSIFF, visit www.wsiff. com or contact Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232 or dawn@helpinghandsevents.com.

Bill Pullman plays the local and wealthy businessman Kent, whose unfortunate run-in with Bobby causes Olive's criminal past to finally catch up with her. Events take a turn for the worst and force Olive to make the toughest decision of all. Actors Milla Jovovich and Bill Pullman are expected to be in Las Cruces for the screening of the film in August.

LookingBack

This week in the history of the Mesilla Valley

1912

• Estanislao Varela, the 13-year-old son of the Las Cruces Citizen's job printer, S.V. Varela, suffered the loss of a toe on his left foot when it became jammed in the Citizen's large printing press. Before the power could be shut off, the boy's shoe was torn to pieces and the toe smashed. Dr. Cornell was immediately called, aid was given and the injured member was amputated.

• Burglars broke into the agricultural building at the state college and made away with several pair of military shoes and a small amount of change left in a cash register.

1937

• A hail storm struck Berino and the surrounding area, doing damage to fruit and vegetable crops estimated at $50,000. The hailstones were reported as ranging from pea to marble size. The affected area was 5 miles wide north and south and crossed the entire valley. Heavy showers also fell in Las Cruces, accompanied by some hail. For some unfortunate farmers, the storm meant that fields of cotton needed to be replanted for the third time in the season.

• Nearly 40 members of the New Mexico press had accepted invitations to the dedication of Carrie Tingley Children's Hospital in Hot Springs, including the Hot Springs Herald, the Hatch Reporter, The Las Cruces Daily News, The Las Cruces Citizen and the Round Up.

1962

• The Las Cruces Bulldogs, under Bill Parkman and Jim Bradley, won their second-straight state baseball championship. The Las Cruces team easily handled the Albuquerque Bulldogs in the first game, but had to come from behind to defeat the Carlsbad Cavemen 8-7 in extra innings. In the championship game, the Bulldogs broke a scoreless tie in the seventh inning to down the Valley Vikings 1-0. Art Paz was the complete game winner for Las Cruces.

• Maj. Gen. John Shinkle, commanding general at White Sands Missile Range, was assigned a new post in Europe. Shinkle had been commander at the range since 1960.

1987

• Two officials of Whitfield Bus Lines Inc., which had the contract to bus children in the Las Cruces Public Schools, were indicted by a grand jury after an 18-month investigation by the New Mexico Attorney General's office. Brothers Robert and Scott Crews were indicted on 12 counts of fraud in excess of $20,000 and six counts of fraud in excess of $2,500. Company officials allegedly used state money designated for the salaries of school bus drivers and special education aides for other expenses.

Two homes in San Marcial show the devastation caused by flooding 75 years ago this month. What had once been a town of 1,400 people basically ceased to exist after spring runoff north of Elephant Butte Dam inundated the river's flood plain. Most of the town was destroyed by flooding eight years earlier in 1929.

Las Cruces Bulletin Balloons linked to outages Metallic balloons no fun for power lines

Metallic balloons are popular decorations and gifts especially this time of year with graduations and end-of-school-year celebrations, but El Paso Electric Co. is warning people that the Mylar balloons can play havoc with power lines.

Mylar balloons are made of metallic material that can cause a short circuit and can eventually lead to equipment failure when they come into contact with power lines. Just one balloon can cause a short circuit that can trigger an explosion or melt an electrical wire, potentially resulting in power outages, fires and possible injuries.

So far this year, Mylar balloons have caused outages that have affected more than 5,000 El Paso Electric customers.

- To reduce the risk of outages caused by Mylar balloons, El Paso Electric recommends:
- Keep metallic and all other types of balloons indoors and away from overhead power lines. Even non-metallic balloons can become entangled in lines and cause an outage
- Always attach a weight to metallic balloons. Keep them tethered at all times.
- Never use balloons, kites, model airplanes and other toys near overhead power lines.
  - Always deflate metallic balloons and throw them away when no longer in use.

Putting the hard sell on soft skills

It's an increasingly popular buzzword - two words, actually - in the business community: soft skills.

No, it has nothing to do with a massage or computer software.

Soft skills are those interpersonal and logic skills that don't really have anything logic skills that don't really have anything to do with an employee's ability to do a specific task or duty. I'm not sure I had even heard this term three months ago, at least with that name. I've been aware of the importance of soft skills since my first Social Securityrecognized job, at a restaurant named Chicken, Steak and Chocolate Cake in Tulsa, Okla.

Bulletin publisher David McCollum, when assessing potential employees, asks, "Can this person represent him or herself, and the Bulletin, well? Can this person play well with others?"

Those are soft skills.

"I've certainly heard it used far more frequently than in the past," said Bill Al-len, president and CEO of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. "Showing up on time, being courteous to fellow employees, dressing appropriately. "I think they're huge." Even bigger in tough economic times, he added.

'Everybody's so lean, you don't have the luxury of having extra people who can't relate to others or can only do one thing," he said. "You'd better be able to do little bit of everything." Will people be willing, even if it's not in their job duties, to answer the office phone when everyone else is already on the line? And, if so, will they be friendly and helpful? Can they take a decent mer and helpful? Can they take a decent message?

That may sound trivial, but on the other end of that phone could be an important client, or potential client. Picking up that call and handling it well could make the difference in whether or not the company is in the black that month.

Are you willing to stop what you're doing for a minute or two and help a coworker unload bulky materials from her car? If you're going to the office supply store, do you check first to see if anyone else needs anything? These are soft skills.

Can Las Cruces be a high-tech center?

By Richard Coltharp

Can Las Cruces be the hub of an economically booming high-technology center? The Mesilla Valley Economic Develop-ment Alliance attempted to find answers to that question at its Regional Economic Development Forum Thursday, May 17, at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

"If you want to go after high-tech companies, you've got to look the part," said Steve Vierck, president and CEO of the New Mexico Partnership.

Based on the comments of Vierck and other economic and technology experts who spoke at the forum, in many ways Las Cruces does look the part. In other ways, however, Las Cruces, as well as New Mexico as a whole, may be lacking.

"We need to think a lot bigger," said Perry Bendicksen, board chair of New Mexico's Association of Commerce and Industry, which serves as the state's chamber of commerce. "We, as a state, have a massive inferiority complex and we need to get over that. We have a lot to offer."

With more than a half century of high-tech industry in our backyard – at White Sands Missile Range, NASA and Holloman Air Force Base - and two universities long recognized for their expertise in science and engineering (New Mexico State University and the University of Texas at El Paso), this region quickly il-lustrates Bendickson's point.

One of the popular buzzwords of the day was "collaboration." "We hear 'Beat the Miners,' 'Beat the Lobos' and that sports metaphor has its place," said Steve Stochaj, an NMSU professor and the chair of the Research and Economic Committee. "But if we work with the (UTEP) Miners, work with the (University of New Mexico) Lobos, work with New Mexico Tech, everybody gets better."

Another phrase of the day was "quality of life."

"You can leverage quality of life and cost of living versus sitting on the Beltway for four hours," said Peter Kane, a vice president of Invertix, which has an engineering center in the Physical Science Laboratory at NMSU, but also See MVEDA on page B2

Jamai Blivin, CEO of Innovate+Educate, flanked by Doña Ana Community College President Margie Huerta and Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce President/ CEO Bill Allen, talks about the $50,000 grant her organization presented to the Greater Chamber to develop the New Options program in Las Cruces. New Options provides a systematic approach to testing and training job skills that benefit potential employers and prospective employees.

Bulletin Staff Report

You're going to start hearing more and more about WorkKeys, a testing system demore about WorkKeys, a testing system de-signed by the same people who brought you the ACT (American College Testing). The WorkKeys tests show how a prospective employee's skills line up for particular jobs. The term came up Friday, May 18, at the campus of Doña Ana Community College.

That's when Innovate+Educate presented a $50,000 grant to the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce to support the program's de-velopment in Las Cruces.

"This is public-private partnership in its finest form," said Jamai Blivin, CEO of Innovate+Educate.

DACC President Margie Huerta said the grant is an example of the community's focused collaboration.

"We are working together to have one vi-sion, one goal," Huerta said. "So we have the best - not just better - but the best workforce possible."

dealing with a tough emotional or personal situation and acting appropriately. That's a soft skill.

created to better match industry and education. Innovate+Educate powers New Options New Mexico, a project backed by funding from the W.W. Kellogg Foundation.

New Options New Mexico uses WorkKeys as part of a portfolio of tools to support employers with skills-based hiring because it is nationally recognized and EEOC compliant.

As a real-world example of how WorkKeys can function, Innovate+Educate director of workforce Lois Johnson talked about the public library in Farmington.

'They were having high turnover with library shelvers," Johnson said. "Their interview process required that they interview all the applicants, which was as many as 150. And they were interviewed by three people at once."

Seeking a way to streamline the process, and avoid having three staff members tying up their time interviewing 150 applicants, the city of Farmington turned to WorkKeys.

"WorkKeys allowed them to match the skills to the job, which whittled it down to 18 applicants," Johnson said. "It saved them thousands of dollars with the interview process, but also, it's greatly reduced turnover, because they matched the skills with the job."

Richard Wagner, director of the Workforce Career Center in Las Cruces, said WorkKeys had to deal with lots of interesting things. Staff members who can't seem to stop cursing. Or, which is sometimes more of a problem, don't want to talk at all.

What do you do when an employee's clothes reek of vomit? Well, you have a private conversation with them.

If you learn, as I did, the person's washing machine broke the week before, you have gained understanding. Still, you should politely ask them to go home and change into something a little more pleasant.

"help employers make better decisions."

Matthew Byrnes, DACC's department chair for digital imaging and design technology, said WorkKeys also helps students, because it lets them know their areas of weakness and they can then work to conquer those.

"WorkKeys, WorkKeys, WorkKeys," Huerta said. "You're going to be hearing those words constantly from me.'

"We're honored and proud to have received that money," said Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce President/CEO Bill Allen. "We're hoping to engage the business community in this process. If they can both reduce hiring costs and improve retention, then that money should just drop straight to their bottom line.

"This money is going to help us get busi-nesses on board. We talked to eight or 10 business in the grant response period and all said, 'Yes, I'm interested.'

Prospective employees can take the Work-Keys exams at Workforce Solutions in Las Cruces or at DACC. There are as many as 17,000 generic job descriptions in the Work-Keys portfolio that people can test for and create a certificate.

"WorkKeys has been out there for a few years, but without having businesses asking for people with that certificate, it never really took off," Allen said. "With this grant, we hope to close that loop by getting businesses involved.

"It should improve the chances of success for both employees and employers."

I've had similar conversations regarding someone's body odor. Or excessive perfume.

How about writing (or reading) an email? It seems a straightforward task, but we've all seen instances where a confusing or misinterpreted email creates a furor that may take half a day or more to straighten out.

Rather than further fuel the flames, pick up the phone and give the person a call. Voice to voice or, better, face to face, we greatly reduce the possibility for misunderstanding.

Like hard skills, soft skills can be relative.

For example, almost every office has those one or two people who always seem to be able to solve others' computer issues. Knowing how vital computers are in today's work world, we're probably a little more tolerant if that person is a few minutes late, or if they're a little grumpier than others.

If you're the person who makes that killer casserole on office potluck days, you might get some slack in other areas.

Like it or not, we've all got to sharpen our soft skills

Keynote speaker Jim Gollub of E-Cubed adventures talked to MVEDA forum attendees about how communities can build their economies with technology and other clusters. "We need to get people to stop talking about high and low taxes and get them talking about 'return on taxation," he said.

has offices near Washington, D.C. The company does defense work, and finds benefits to working in New Mexico.

"It's a great place to be for the work we're in," Kane said. "With the things we do, the remoteness of the desert is a good thing. Having that kind of work in the region breeds other success, according to Bryn Davis, operations manager of Sapphire Energy.

'So much technology comes from the (department of defense) industry," Davis said.

With increasing manufacturing happening in Mexico, in close proximity to the New Mexico border, in particular the Santa Teresa Port of Entry, there is opportunity for companies working in various levels of technology.

Brooks Danley, a native Las Crucen, is chief engineer of the Smart Remote Actuator at the Delphi Mexico Technical Center in Juárez.

Danley's company is one of the largest in the world, with revenues of $5.1 billion in North America alone. Its chief work in Mexico is manufacturing automobiles. The Juárez plant will spend more than $500 million on materials in the next year, including more than $13 million on rubber grommets.

"Delphi would like to buy regionally, but it's not always easy to find," Danley said.

Considering Delphi is just one of nearly two dozen auto manufacturers in Mexico, potential opportunity awaits a company that could, from the southern New Mexico region, make its materials available.

In his presentation on site selection, Vierck showed slides highlighting the strengths of three huge American technology centers: Austin, Texas; Colorado Springs; and Tucson, Ariz.

The University of Arizona Tech Park has 43 companies with 7,000 employees, Vierck said.

Austin is consistently rated among the country's best places to live and work, with a fiercely entrepreneurial spirit, Vierck said.

Colorado Springs has creatively targeted tech clusters, Vierck said, including homeland security and defense.

The Las Cruces region doesn't necessarily have to land huge companies, however.

"We have a good opportunity for small- to mid-sized companies," Vierck said. "That's our sweet spot as a state."

Of those things he mentioned with Austin, Colorado Springs and Tucson, the Las Cruces region already has many.

NMSU's Arrowhead Park is nothing but a UofA Tech Park in the making. With Holloman, Fort Bliss and WSMR in the region, defense is already a natural. Quality of life in this region can be positively measured in many ways (one way: average high temperature in January is 58.1 degrees), and has been ranked high by many publications.

Summing up the day, MVEDA board vice chair Kiel Hoffman ran down a list, based on things heard at the forum, of things he believed the Las Cruces region already has going for it.

His list included quality of life, clusters We already have an aerospace cluster, a space cluster, an ag cluster," Hoffman said), regional thinking, innovation and partnerships.

"In 10 years, instead of these screens of Austin and Tucson and Colorado Springs, they'll be looking at screens of Las Cruces," Hoff-man said. "Today, we've got a room full of 175 people of Las Cruces who want to continue to grow and get better."

Legislators should have fewer hassles

Tax revenues are up this year

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

The past few years have been tough for legislators trying to fund needed government programs as the recession has wreaked havoc on tax revenues. But it appears now that the worst of the recession is over and New Mexico's economy is doing better. State revenues are up 7.8 percent as of February, well ahead of expectations. For the first time since 2009, the issue will not be what to cut, but what programs to re-fund.

Particularly strong is the gross receipt tax, up 8.5 percent, indicating a broad-based recovery.

Looking deeper into the data, strong industries included agriculture; mining, oil and natural gas; and manufacturing. Given the importance of these industries to the New Mexico economy, the strength of these three industries is particularly heartening.

Weak sectors include wholesale trade and private educa-tional services. Retailing shows little gain after correcting for inflation.

Given the strong revenue performance so far this year, no doubt the forecast for next fiscal year, which starts July 1, 2013, will be substantially revised upward, giving lawmakers much more latitude in making budgeting decisions. Beginning with the solvency budget passed in October 2009, the past few years have been a time of triage and make-do, with important programs being cut to the bone.

Of course, things are not all wine and roses. The overall state budget is down 10.9 percent from pre-crisis levels. Inflation has been 6.1 percent, so to restore the budget to pre-crisis levels, would require an increase of 17 percent. This year's revenue growth is a down payment on this, but we are still a long way from normal times.

Hard hit has been higher education, down 17 percent from its pre-solvency high. K-12 education has fared better than average, but still has taken a substantial hit, down 8.6 percent. These budget cuts have been reflected in declines in education employment, down 4.6 percent over two years. A top priority for legislators should be restoring education budgets.

Some legislators – perhaps even the governor – will want to use enhanced revenues as an excuse to enact tax cuts. Given previous spending cuts, it seems difficult to justify tax cuts at this time. We would need two more years of revenue gains of the same magnitude of the current gains for revenues to catch up with previous budgets, after adjusting inflation. Such gains are unlikely; it will be a long time for the state budget to completely recover.

Turning to the local economy, Las Cruces appears to be doing even better than the state economy, at least in regard to gross receipt tax revenue. Year-over-year revenue growth in the second quarter was 8.9 percent.

Strong industries were manufacturing and other services. Weak industries include construction, which is especially disappointing given the weak performance of this industry since 2009.

Monday May 14, 2011 may not be recorded in the annals of history as a particularly important day; yet it is a day I will not soon forget.

On this date, Groupon announced its first quarterly profit.

When Groupon went public, there were headlines proclaiming it as the second coming of the Internet stock bubble of the late 1990s. However, Groupon does not have the same business model of the so-called "Web 1.0" companies of nearly 15 years ago. Whereas the Web 1.0 companies operated under similar business models as print media, Groupon generates revenue by taking a share of the proceeds generated by its promotions.

By incenting the sharing of Groupon deals, Groupon creates value for its clients, consumers and the company. Despite the early problems some of its clients had with overwhelming promotion responses and past questions about the company's accounting practices, Groupon has continued to mature and grow. The company's future plans include leveraging the technology of smartphones to enable consumers to receive deals based on their proximity to a retailer or restaurant.

Redbox is another company that has made waves over the past few years. Redbox got its start in 2002 in the McDonald's corporation and became a wholly owned subsidiary of Coinstar Inc. in 2005.

There are now more than 30,000 Redbox machines across the country, and consumers can search for titles online to see if their nearest Redbox has the title they want before leaving home.

The popularity of Redbox has confounded some analysts. In the age of streaming video over the web and video on demand cable service, it seems odd people are still willing to drive somewhere to rent and return movies and video games.

In actuality, people are more than willing to rent physical media so long as it costs less than $2 per rental, there is no membership fee and there are no late return fees. The genius of the Redbox business model lies in its ability to operate efficiently so it can provide rentals under these terms.

However, the company is not resting on its laurels. Redbox recently signed a deal with Verizon to offer streaming video on demand in the future.

Friday, May 25, 2012

What Redbox and Groupon have in common is both companies combine technology with pre-existing busi-ness models and concepts. Groupon took the ages-old concept of being compensated based on the revenue generated by a promotion and applied it in the environment of viral online interactions. There is nothing revolutionary about the concepts of vending machines or renting movies. However, Redbox found a way to combine the two concepts through the use of several technologies to form a winning strategy.

A business does not necessarily have to invent the next technological breakthrough to stay ahead of the curve. The concepts of online social connectivity, and perpetual and mobile Internet access can be integrated into nearly any business model.

Rincon Valley watering starts Districts adopt conservation schedules

By Marvin Tessneer Cruces Bulleti

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District is responding to the current river water shortage by modifying its schedule of deliveries to farmers.

Watering started the week of May 14 in the Rincon Valley, which is divided into two operation units. On Wednesday, May 16, the district diverted 150 cubic-feet-per second of surface water into the first unit. To the south in the EBID Mesilla Valley, the ditch riders also are adjusting their water management for an efficient delivery.

"With the surface water shortage we have to do everything we can to conserve our water and improve our efficiency," EBID Manager Gary Esslinger said.

The EBID's surface water allocation for this vear is 6 inches. The normal allocation is 3 acre-feet.

The reservoirs received little runoff water from the recent rainstorms.

As part of the water conservation program, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, El Paso field office, has closed the gates at Elephant Butte and Caballo reservoirs to regulate the Rio Grande flow and does not plan to reopen them until June 1.

The EBID and El Paso Water Conservation District plan to coordinate releases to push the water down to El Paso. The schedule will cause the river flow to drop at times.

Farmers welcome plan

Commenting on the new approach to watering in the Rincon Valley, EBID consultant Phil King said: "The idea is to concentrate the water and the ditch riders in one unit at a time to deliver water more efficiently. It's going to be a tough year, and we've got to get through it by doing something different."

When the first unit is emptied, "then we'll move to unit 1B and when that's watered out, we'll go back to 1A," he said.

The reaction among Rincon Valley farmers appears to be favorable.

"We're really pleased that they're concerned about us farmers conserving water," local producer Jerry Franzoy said. "The farmers are happy with the way the district is keeping on top of the job."

Franzoy raises chile, onions and alfalfa on about 1,000 acres in the Salem and Garfield area. He also represents the district on the EBID Board of Directors.

'Sammy Gonzalez is doing a great job," Scott Adams said of the EBID units 1A and 1B head ditch rider. "Everything is working good right now. The EBID can concentrate the work force on each area and be more aggressive to move the water along, help us be more efficient with our irrigation.

Adams' farm operation includes 1,000 acres of chile, onions, alfalfa and oats.

Water levels below 2011

The storage at Elephant Butte Reservoir is 636,700 acre-feet, 18 percent of capacity and close to last year's figure of 638,700. The storage in Caballo Reservoir is 35,500 acre-feet, 16 percent, according to the Bureau of Reclamation.

The Natural Resources Conservation Service projected a March through July snow pack runoff into the reservoir system of 141,000 acre-feet. Early this month, the runoff measurement was 93,000 acre-feet.

"Extremely low water levels in both Elephant Butte and Caballo reservoirs have prompted water uses to schedule releases from the reservoirs in a manner that will minimize transportation losses and maximize deliveries to the farmers and municipal users," EBID Direc-tor Filiberto Cortez said. "The irrigation districts are currently looking at an allocation that is about 20 percent of a full supply,"

El Paso adopts block schedule

El Paso Water Conservation District also has been conducting "block irrigations," Manager Jesus "Chuy" Reyes said.

"We irrigate by different canals," he said. "We give everyone on the canal plenty of notice so that they can get their fields ready, and when we're done with that canal, we move on to the next canal. We can conserve water better that way."

The El Paso district has 18 inches of water for this year's irrigation, a combination of conserved water, 15,000 acrefeet of treated city sewage water and well water.

"The district has 62 wells, and it mixes the well water and treated sewage water with the river water to get the 18 inches," Reves said.

State jobless rate trends lower

New Mexico's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 6.9 percent in April, down from 7.2 percent in March and 7.5 percent a year earlier.

The rate of over-the-year job growth, comparing April 2012 with April 2011, was 0.1 percent, representing an increase of 900 jobs. The state has now added jobs for nine straight months after posting losses for 32 of the preceding 33 months, according to a press release from the governor's office.

Employment increased in six industries, decreased in six others and remained unchanged in one.

Educational and health services again led the growing industries, up 5,000 jobs from its April 2011 total. Mining, up 2,100, and leisure and hospitality, up 1,400, also posted large increases.

Professional and business services, down 3,400 jobs, registered the largest over-the-year decline, followed by government, down 2,200, and construction, down 1,300. The net loss in government comprised decreases at the federal and local levels and a very small increase at the state level.

City soliciting applications for events funding

The Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau currently is accepting proposals for special events funding that align with its marketing strategies and regulations. The next series of applications is due by July 1.

Funds may be available for programs and events that promote tourism to the Las Cruces area. Those interested in soliciting sponsorship funds must present a strong case to the CVB that their event provides a substantial economic impact to the city of Las Cruces, by attracting overnight visitors.

One of the requirements is that 75 percent of funding provided from this opportunity be spent on advertising outside of a 100-mile radius from Las Cruces. The remaining 25 percent may be spent on advertising within the 100-mile radius from Las Cruces. The proposal should contain a detailed media budget.

Every time I talk to a native Las Crucen, or just someone who has lived here long enough to remember what Downtown used to be like, they have a story.

They usually have memories of coming Downtown to go shopping, to the movies with family or maybe they just cruised Main Street. Whatever their story, they always reflect on how much they enjoyed the experience.

Seldom if ever have I heard someone reminisce about visiting the mall. That is because Downtowns are unique, as are the memories they create.

If you have a special memory of coming Downtown either back in the day or maybe it was just vesterday, we want to hear it. Send your Downtown story to director@

A thought-provoking inquiry Looking at interest rates in the long term

Last week a regular reader of this column sent a very thought-provoking inquiry in for consideration. It is worth sharing. Here is an excerpt:

"I would like to see your perspective/ prediction of long-term-bond interest rates. The Fed said that rates won't increase before 2014; and rates have recently reached record lows. I have recently invested in TMV (a 20-plus year Treasury Bear 3X Shares/ETF), the goal of which is for the shares to react by a factor of three to the change in the long-term interest rates and inversely to the change in long-term bond prices.

Unfortunately, I got in too soon and have since liquidated with a loss. If one were to invest in TMV itself or in TMV Call options at the right time when long-terminterest rates begin a sustained rise, the investment should provide 3-to-1 percent age gain (TMV versus a Long-Term Bond ETF). A three-year plot of TMV versus BLV (Vanguard LT -Bond ETF) shows that, indeed, there is approximately a 3-to-1 reaction (BLV 30 percent up and TMV 85 percent down).

When interest rates go down, bond prices go up, and TMV goes down; and vice versa. I'm waiting to jump on the bandwagon of TMV when interest rates show a sustained upward trend, for better or worse, for richer or poorer."

Predicting the direction of interest rates has been a dicey proposition throughout recorded history. Given the unprecedented Federal Reserve Board interference in the interest bearing instrument markets, for an unprecedented length of time, it is anybody's guess when interest rates will demonstrate a "sustained upward trend."

Savers are experiencing overt financial repression thanks to the actions of the federal government. Why are the Fed's policies a form of repression? While the U.S. government is the largest borrower of money in the world, U.S. Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner and U.S. Federal Reserve Board Chairman Ben Bernanke engage in nothing short of collusion to artificially depress the government's borrowing costs.

As a result of concerted government actions, savers have been on the short end of the stick when it comes to a fair rate of return on their deposits. For several years conservative savers have been forced by the sheer power of protracted U.S. government-engineered market interventions to lend their hard-earned savings to their government at absurdly low interest rates. In short, collusion by the Fed and Treasury Department is rigging the markets in the government's favor.

What this letter writer suggests, and correctly so, is that when the government finally ends its unprecedented interventions in the marketplace, interest rates are likely to rise significantly. Of course, the big question is: When will the federal government back off?

And in the meantime, what sorts of effects will a continuation of unprecedented collusion have on the long-term inflation rate?

The answers to these two questions are unknowable.

If public policies change and progrowth incentives replace collusion and intervention, an end to massive manipulation of the interest rate markets could come relatively soon.

However, if insidious monetary and fiscal policies persist down the same path, we might see American savers, forced by their own government, to settle for next to nothing on their savings for years.

If this happens, many experts believe the inflation rate could go through the roof.

Every business day, many speculators make bets both ways on interest rates. Some win, some lose - and in every instance brokerage commissions are paid by those desiring to have access to the "action."

Specifically addressing the question posed by the letter writer above, taking positions in levered Exchange Traded Funds that are designed to magnify the effects of rising interest rates is pretty much like playing roulette or blackjack in Las Vegas.

Experience has taught us to refrain from making bold interest rate forecasts and/or bets. However, its is important to recognize that the U.S. Government/Federal Reserve Board's ongoing efforts to relentlessly suppress rates of return conservative savers can earn on their deposits is terribly unfair.

Additionally, these actions are very likely to create structural imbalances in our financial system that will surely lead to unintended consequences.

With all of this being said, conservative savers have no business making leveraged interest rate bets if they are, well, conservative. Gambling on interest rate changes is just that, gambling.

If we thought we were in a position to provide advice on the near term direction of interest rates we wouldn't refer to the process as "gambling."

B8 | Business National, local existing home sales rise Cruces trails in prices

Gary Sandler's

Real Estate Connection

April sales of existing Las Cruces area homes eclipsed year-ago sales by almost 25 percent, according to statistics from the Las Cruces Association of Realtors.

The 98 closed sales of previously owned homes, town homes and condominiums booked last month represented a 24.6 percent increase over the 79 homes sold in April 2011.

April's Las Cruces area sales tally also represented a 5.4 percent increase in sales above March. April home sales rose 10 percent nationally in the year-over-year survey, and rose 3.4 percent above March.

Prices are another story. While the nation's April median existing-home price of $177,400 exceeded April 2011's median price by 10 percent and was 3.4 percent higher than in March, prices in Las Cruces fell 13.4 percent, from $150,000 to $129,500. The median is where half sold for more and half sold for less. April's median price was 1.4 percent lower than it was in March.

What's holding up our local recovery? Jobs notwithstanding, it's the number of distress sales. A distress sale is one in which the owner sells urgently, often at a loss, due to a crisis, financial or otherwise.

In April, distressed properties accounted for 28 percent of sales nationally, down from 37 percent 12 months earlier. In Las Cruces, the number of distress sales is actually up over a year ago, rising to 31 percent of existinghome closings from the 30.4 percent reported in April 2011.

What does the future hold? According to local pending sales statistics, which are the best predictor of future closings, closed sales over the next 30 to 60 days are on track to exceed last year's tally by about 4 percent. A sale is considered pending after the purchase agreement has been signed and before the transaction has closed.

Today's $160,500 median asking price of the 182 existing-home sales currently pending in our area is roughly the same as the $159,900 median asking price of the homes that were awaiting closing in April 2011.

Currently, Las Cruces area existing homes are selling for an average of 95.6 percent of their asking price.

The disparity between what's happening nationally and what transpires here in Las Cruces is not new.

New Mexico entered the recession a year or so after most Americans began to feel its effects, so it stands to reason that our area's recovery will follow in a like amount of time. As it appears now, that time is still a ways off. See you at closing!

Rincon cotton destroyed

Rincon Valley farmers are watching their fields for signs of recovery from the

May 8 rain and hail storm. The latest estimates are that the hail damaged about 1,000 acres of onions and 300 to 500 acres of chile. That's the acreage of crops that were affected by the hail storm, not necessarily destroyed," said Stephanie Walker, a New Mexico State University Extension vegetable specialist.

Walker stressed the need for farmers to take preventive measures against plant diseases. "Many of the surviving plants have cuts and lesions that can open the way to diseases," Walker said.

Chile plants were damaged, but many are recovering and growers are watching their progress to learn the damage, grower John Brawley said.

"Basically, we've been set back a couple of weeks in plant growth," he said.

"But we really won't know how much damage the storm caused until the end of the season.

Dickie Ogaz said although the storm kept him out of is fields for a week, the rain helped relieve the water shortage.

My chile was in the two-leaf stage and I lost some, but it's coming along pretty good," he said.

Brawley also is watching the progress of his seedling onions that were battered but are showing signs of recovering.

Ogaz said some of his alfalfa was caught by the storm in field windrows. But he was able to bale it later.

Cotton plants, which were 2 to 3 inches high when the storm struck, were battered into the ground.

Due to the growing and maturing cycle, it's too late to replant.

Volvo Rents purchases area Action Rental stores Muench will remain on board as consultant

Volvo Rents has acquired Action Equipment Rental, a company with stores in Las Cruces, Alamogordo and Silver CiIty.

Action Equipment Rental was founded in 2005. Its founder, Joseph Muench, will remain with Volvo Rents as a consultant.

"Volvo Rents' well-established reputation as a service-oriented company dedicated to servicing the homeowner and contractor alike run parallel with our existing business model and made becoming part of the company an attractive and easy decision," Muench said. "I am confident that both our employees and customers are in great hands.

The Las Cruces store will continue to be open 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, with 24-hour service available every day of the week.

With the acquisition of Action Equipment Rental, Volvo Rents has expanded its New Mexico presence to include four outlets.

The company is a worldwide provider of small- to medium-sized construction equipment.

"We are excited about continuing to introduce our products and services to New Mexicans, providing them with a range of alternatives to meet their construction equipment needs," said Mike Crouch, vice president of Business Development at Volvo Rents. "New Mexico provides a great opportunity for Volvo Rents as we continue to grow our business and increase the distribution of our comprehensive line of essential equipment."

The acquisition follows a recent forecast released by the American Rental Association (ARA) expecting overall North American equipment rental industry revenue to increase at least 6.9 percent in 2012 to total $33.5 billion at year end. The ARA's five-year forecast calls for continued annual growth.

Volvo Rents, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Volvo Group, operates 120 rental stores in North America. The company operates a network of company-owned rental stores and franchised rental stores in North America.

By Alta LeCompte

In the field of alternative energy, it's not who you know – it's what you know.

Cary Lane, owner of Energy Concepts Corporation in Las Cruces and Satello, N.M., started learning the science and engineering of solar and wind energy as a New Mexico State University student studying electrical engineering. He was drawn to research, and founded the company in 1991, first to test products and determine which would live up to expectations.

'Quality control was an issue," Lane said of the 1990s, when solar technology took off in the marketplace.

Consumers, too, are part of the information revolution that shapes the development of the industry.

"Customer education changes every year," Lane said. "Ten years ago, when we said PV (photovoltaic), nobody knew what we meant. Five years ago, half the people knew what it was, but didn't know what it did. Now, when customers come to us, they know."

As a result, Energy Concepts does less consumer education than in the past.

"Now we do more sales," Lane said. "But now there's more competition."

Lane and his sister Elisa Cundiff, who opened the new Las Cruces office of Energy Concepts in the GreenWorks building at 125 N. Main St., agreed referrals are still the way they get most of their new business.

Investing to save

Alternative energy companies and consumers share another trait - they are eager to try something new if it makes good business sense.

Lane said switching to solar while remaining connected to the grid can earn a homeowner 10 to 15 percent return on capital investment in energy savings.

The biggest residential customers probably have $20,000 in the bank, so it's a very good deal to put that money into solar," he said.

The return is less for smaller systems costing about $10,000, "but it's still a pretty good deal," Lane said.

Cundiff, a marketing and systems design specialist, said less affluent consumers can make solar profitable the way she did, wrapping it into a mortgage.

Her system added $40 to her mortgage payment, but reduced her summer electric bill by $100 for a tidy net savings.

"I got a $54 check from El Paso Electric last month," she said.

Cundiff, who owns an older home in Las Cruces, said the homebuyer can "be cash positive right away if the system is financed at a low interest rate.'

Lower costs and multiple incentives make the purchase more attractive.

Cundiff said solar module prices dropped about 25 percent in the past three years, because the market expanded so quickly, responding to federal and state energy credits and utility company rebates.

Homeowners currently are scurrying to go solar before the El Paso Electric Co. Renewable Energy Credits drop. To qualify for maximum energy credits, an owner must be under contract to have the work done by June 30. The credits will drop 1 to 2 percent every six months for the next year and a half, Lane said. State and federal credits will continue, he said.

Cool technology generates cool savings

In a solar energy system, cells capture the sun's energy in the form of direct current (DC). An inverter then shapes the waves, converting them to alternating current (AC) for household use.

Cundiff said the inverter, one of the most expensive parts of the system, can track how much energy is being made. A web box connects it with home portals and with Energy Concepts, so both the homeowners and the company can track energy use.

"You can even see the panels producing energy in real time," she said.

Another type of technology for cutting energy costs is demand charge management, which has controls to protect the building owner from paying the highest rates for power. Demand charges are rates the utility charges, based on the highest half hour of use each month.

"Most demand charge in Las Cruces is based on AC use," Lane said. "We knock down midday charges by watching the load a consumer uses and turning off or cycling off.

Solar goes to church

Lane said the commercial end of the alternative energy systems design and installation business is growing.

"Churches are a good target market because a lot of them want to do it environment-wise," he said. "Economically, it makes pretty good sense for them.'

He explained that solar can bring financial stability to church budgets by getting rid of their erratic electric bills and evening out their utility costs.

Cundiff said their commercial customers include a new bank under construction in northern New Mexico that is making "a really big commitment to their community" and a radio station with a similar commitment.

She said the Corona school district is install-and follow a long-range plan.

"It's such a dynamic industry we have to re-evaluate where we are every year. Incentives change every year," he said. "Consumers change every year.'

One thing he can say with certainty is Energy Concepts is a broad-based company that designs custom systems.

"We help each customer decide what is their best option," Lane said. "Maybe they should insulate their home or install new windows or consider LED lighting to make their homes more energy efficient rather than installing a solar system?

As a general contractor and electrical contractor, Energy Concepts can design and install what will work best for each customer. Lane oversees each project.

Coming home to Cruces

Lane worked for six years at the Southwest Renewable Research Facility, known as one of the two leading solar research facilities in the world, before founding Energy Concepts in Las Cruces.

The company's initial projects focused on developing software and research tools. The primary client was National Renewable Energy Labs (NREL). In the early years, Energy Concepts built multi-curve tracers for NREL for testing solar panels.

Lane started installing solar systems because very few were doing it at the time," he said.

In the late 1990s, he moved to Satello in northern Mexico, following the demand for off-grid systems. In addition to designing systems for those who owned cabins in the woods and wanted total energy independence, he did special projects, such as solar powered wireless phone towers that enable firefighters in wilderness areas to communicate with one another.

The company is renewing its presence in Las Cruces through the new office in the Green-Works building.

Cundiff, who manages the office, formerly was with the Green Chamber of Commerce, also located in the GreenWorks building.

She said Lane is her oldest brother.

"I was in elementary school the first time he showed me some solar stuff," she said. "Now, I'm back at the source."

e Las Cruces Bu

Chatting under the portico at Hotel Encanto de Las Čruces, George Jepson fidgeted and stole a quick look over his shoulder.

Guests were arriving at the elegant hotel on a hill overlooking Las Cruces.

He continued talking, but kept looking back at the hotel entrance where a middleaged woman stood surrounded by suitcases. Jepson could stand still no longer.

Hustling toward the growing group of ar-rivals, he called back, "Excuse me, I have to help these people."

Jepson, the head bellman at Hotel E, has a knack for showing up when people need help – any kind of help.

A self-taught expert on the beauty, history, and attractions of both the hotel and the city, Jepson serves as Hotel E's cultural ambassador.

If he's not escorting guests to their rooms or driving them around town, narrating as they go, he's at the front desk serving as the concierge and answering questions for out-oftowners.

Jepson has been on the move all his life.

Because his dad was in the Air Force, he grew up mostly on bases in Italy, Arizona, New Mexico (Alamogordo) and California.

"I have an older brother who attended more schools than I did," he said. "My sister was born in Germany, my brother was born in England. I was born in Plattsburg, New York."

He lived in Italy his first 6-and-a-half years and spoke Italian before he learned English.

His last stop before Las Cruces was California, where he completed his schooling and later worked in construction.

Jepson relocated to the City of the Crosses in 1991 to help care for his aging parents.

He started working part time as a bellman at Hotel Encanto in 1997 and was soon promoted to bell captain.

"I wear many hats," he said. "I do a little maintenance, help out in the restaurant when I'm needed."

He currently is putting together a reference book so other employees can share with guests the "bits and pieces" of information about the hotel and the history of the Mesilla Valley. "Not only am I a cultural ambassador," he said, "we all are cultural ambassadors."

He studies the history of the artwork in the hotel and shares what he learns.

His favorite piece is a Mexican granite angel statue in the lobby of the six-story hotel.

Hotel Encanto is a pet-friendly, full -service hotel with a restaurant, bar, pool, spa and shuttle service to the airport and around town, Jepson said.

"We get a lot of very good comments on TripAdvisor," he said. "People choose us because of that."

The hotel is a home away from home for people with business at White Sands Missile Range and film industry professionals.

"A lot of people come here regularly," he said. "Some own businesses in town but don't live in Las Cruces full time. We get a lot of business from the Hatch Chile Festival. They stay with us because they know we'll keep it cold for them until they're ready to leave. They buy it by the case, by the gunny sack. Some come back every year because they know they can't find chile like that anywhere else.

Maria Reyes: Hotel E's ambassador Focusing on the guests

Infectious smile belies fierce determination

By Alta LeCompte For the Las Cruces Bull

Maria Reyes, Ramada Palms de Las Cruces director of sales, has worked her way up the grand staircase to the executive suite. Her smile is an outward reflection of the passion she brings to her job, wherever it takes her.

"You're doing it for yourself and for your guests," she said. "If you're smiling, more than likely they're going to enjoy the reset ample, greeting each teach each other how we affect each other," she said. "The focus is always on hospitality and how departments can help each other."

Reves oversees the front desk and makes sure everything in the guest rooms is functioning as it should.

Behind her own infectious smile is a fierce determination to give each customer the best possible experience.

identify what can be done better is a regular feature of staff meetings. At quarterly employee lunches, staff members are recognized for exceeding customer satisfaction standards.

"You want to exceed," she said. Ramada Palms surveys guests at every event and follows up on all suggestions. "In the last four years, we've had to deal with only two situations where we had to turn things around," she said. Reyes was born in Juanato, Mexico, and moved to Grants with her family when she was

"I graduated from high school, worked, got married, raised children and worked my way up the ladder," she said.

Reyes' first job was at the Best Western in Grants

Her history with the Ramada Palms, formerly a Holiday Inn, dates back to the 1980s, when she arrived in the city and took a job as a banquet server at the hotel.

After two years, she left for another Las Cruces hotel, where she started as a banquet server. As her career progressed, she became banquet manager and then director of events. She stayed for 22 years.

Then, about five years ago, she decided she had been in the industry long enough and would like to try something else.

She left her job with the expectation she could enjoy the rare pleasure of being off for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's.

But she made one move too many.

She called Denton to casually inquire about any future opportunities. Denton, however, offered her "exactly the job I wanted." Effective immediately. Though still in the hospitality business, she has left behind the punishing schedule typical of the food and beverage end of the business.

"Late nights and weekends now only go until 7," she said.

She has more time now for family and travel, and brings the same passion to her leisure life as to her work life.

Reyes said she and her husband, David Reyes, who also works in the hospitality industry, have been fortunate to travel.

They have taken five cruises, touring the Mediterranean, Caribbean, Panama Čanal, Alaska and the Mexican Riviera and are looking forward to a September cruise to the Holy Land.

Reyes enjoys being on the receiving end of the pampering that the ships' crews lavish on their guests.

Where will YOU vote? A donde vas a votar?

Voting Information

In 2011, the State of New Mexico and Doña Ana County were required by law to redistrict. This process resulted in numerous changes, including the renumbering of precincts, creation of new precincts, adjustments to precinct boundaries and changes in state house, senate, county commission, municipal and local school district boundaries, as well.

Beginning with the June 5, 2012 Primary Election Doña Ana County will change from precinct based voting on Election Day to Voting Convenience Centers. As a registered voter in Doña Ana County you will be able to cast your ballot on Election Day at any one of the locations listed to the right.

Informacíon de Votación

En 2011, el Estado de Nuevo México y el Condado de Doña Ana fueron obligados por ley hacer nuevos distritos. Este proceso dio lugar a numerosos cambios, incluyendo la nueva numeración de los precintos, la creación de nuevos recintos, los ajustes a los límites del recinto y cambios en la Cámera del Estado, El Senado, la comisión del condado, municipales y locales y en los límites del distrito escolar, también. Comenzando con las elecciones primarias el 5 de Junio 2012 el Condado de Doña Ana cambiara el sistema de votación. En ves de tener zonas de votación el Condado de Doña Ana usara centros de votación de conveniencia. Como votante registrado en el Condado, usted podrá emitir su voto el día de elecciones en cualquiera de los lugares indicados a la derecha.

In celebration of the 26th annual Community Arts Awards, a street party will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday, May 31, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

Panama hats and tropical prints are the suggested attire for this year's theme, "Havana Nights," a street party with a Cuban flare that includes food, music, a cigar bar, door prizes and plenty of dancing in the streets.

"The Arts Awards are held each year in appreciation of all the members and patrons who have helped support Las Cruces art community," said Ceci Vasconcellos, executive director of the Doña Ana Arts Council. "It's an opportunity to recognize outstanding individuals who have gone above and beyond."

Awards are given in several categories, each sponsored by an individual or a local business in appreciation for the bright stars of the community. The recipient of the Papen Family Award,

The recipient of the Papen Family Award, sponsored by the Cutter Gallery, which honors an individual who has demonstrated his or her commitment to the arts through extraordinary leadership, service and/or financial support, is Nancy Ritchey, director of the Mesilla Valley Chorale.

The recipient of the Newcomer's Award, sponsored by Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds, which recognizes leadership and support of the arts by an individual who has lived in Doña Ana County for less than five years, is Cynthia Garrett, president of the Friends of the Taylor Family Monument.

The recipients of the Arts in Education Award, sponsored by Rubén and Liz Smith, which recognizes individuals whose leadership and pioneering spirit promotes and shapes visual and performing arts education initiatives that benefit youth, are Geri Brink and Paul Hallsted, co-directors of the Doña Ana Youth Choir.

The recipient of the individual Community Arts Award, sponsored by Southwest Disposal, which distinguishes an individual possessing the highest standard of motivation, service and by example, has made a marked impact on the cultural fabric of the community, is Olin Calk, artist, educator and creator of the giant Roadrunner sculpture.

The recipients of the organization Community Arts Award, sponsored by New Mexico Cardiac Care, recognizes an organization possessing the highest standard of motivation, service and by example, has made a marked impact on the cultural fabric of the community, are the American Southwest Theatre Company and GFWC Progress Club of Las Cruces.

The recipient of the Art in Public Places Award, sponsored by Southwest Senior magazine, recognizes an individual or organization that has created or placed art on permanent public view within Doña Ana County that exemplifies the highest standards and commitment to art in public places, is Kelley S. # Musician receives state's highest artistic honor 2012 Governor's Arts Awards announced

Bulletin Staff Report

Gov. Susana Martinez and the New Mexico Arts Commission have announced the seven artists and arts supporters who will be recipients of the Centennial 2012 Governor's Awards for Excellence in the Arts.

"Arts and culture have played such an important role in New Mexico's history, it is only fitting that we honor these amazing artists and supporters for their contributions during our state centennial year," Martinez said. "We applaud these talented artists and arts contributors who do so much to enrich our lives, educate our children and improve the quality of life in our great state."

The Governor's Arts Awards were established in 1974 by Gov. Bruce King and First Lady Alice King to celebrate the extensive roles – both economic and cultural – that artists, craftspeople and arts supporters play in the life of New Mexico.

A diverse and prestigious list of painters, weavers, sculptors, dancers, musicians, storytellers, poets, actors, playwrights and potters have been honored by the governor's arts awards, now in its 39th year.

Director and conductor of the Las Cruces Symphony Orchestra Lonnie Klein was selected as the recipient of the Governor's award for music.

Klein's unyielding passion for the arts has led the orchestra to new levels of artistic excellence, with rave reviews, and 10 consecutive sold out seasons. With a career as a conductor that has spanned over three decades, Klein holds a doctorate in performance from the University of Illinois.

Klein has led the orchestra for 13 years, and in his work as a guest artist both nationally and internationally, he serves as an artistic ambassador for the Las Cruces Symphony. Each season the 70-member orchestra presents six programs of classical music, a Pops concert, and chamber orchestra concert. Klein has intro-

Klein has introduced his community to new composers through the presentation of world-renowned guest artist soloists and commissions of world premieres by acclaimed composers and innovative repertory.

Klein is committed to arts education and community outreach. More than 15,000 area children benefit from school tours and other opportunities to experience the orchestra in concert, and audiences benefit from pre-concert lectures.

Since Klein took the helm, the orchestra's budget has grown by four times its original size and the orchestra now reaches more than 23,000 people.

The Centennial 2012 Governor's Arts Awards ceremonies will be held on Friday, Sept. 14, at the St. Francis Auditorium, New Mexico Museum of Art in Santa Fe. Both the awards ceremony and gallery reception are free and open to the public.

Featured artist: Mayanna Howard Mesilla Plaza is frozen in time

Artist uses watercolors to capture the plaza

By Christine Peterson For the Las Cruces Bullet

Mayanna Howard, the Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery artist of the month, has covered every great landmark of Mesilla and Las Cruces with her watercolors.

Painting predominantly architecture, Howard was inspired by a trip to Williamsburg, Va., in 1976. She began making wooden colonial style furniture.

The admiration for architecture stuck.

"I went back to school and took art classes," Howard said. "The teacher was a retired architect so a lot of his teaching and artistic style involved buildings."

Howard, who went to school in St. Louis, liked the concept of architecture being painted with watercolor.

"I grew up in New Mexico and knew that I could paint the beautiful adobe buildings and landscapes that we have here," she said.

Howard paints in her studio using a photograph as inspiration for her piece. She described the process as being able to paint one layer after another to get the perfect hues and tones for her pieces.

"This is my gallery," Howard said of keeping her work displayed at Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery.

Her space in the gallery is covered with paintings of scenes from just outside the gallery's door.

"Local art is always better on your wall," Howard said. "It will give you memories and draw you in."

Miniature paintings of the buildings surrounding Mesilla Plaza such as La Posta are available for purchase.

"I love using blues and greens. Fortunately, these are colors that show up a lot in Las Cruces," she said.

It took Howard a while to get into the painting scene. She raised her family while operating a business, which designed and made purses, then worked for a high school managing the personnel for 20 years.

"It took me 60 years to learn painting but I can do it," Howard said against her backdrop of paintings that show for obvious making up for lost time.

She started first with oil paintings then took up watercolor.

"There's different techniques with each," she said.

One of her biggest watercolor painter influences is Betty Carr, with whom Howard took workshops under.

"She has recipes for greens and different combinations of colors that I still mix and use," she said.

Howard added that Carr also paints architecture as well as floral scenes. She offers advice for new artists trying to perfect their craft. "Paint," she said. "The more you paint, the better you get."

Fully immersed in the arts community as a charter member of the New Mexico Watercolor Society Southern Chapter, City of Artists Promotional Association, the Las Cruces Art Association and the Artamants, Howard has found her niche.

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery, located at 2470-A Calle de Guadalupe is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

The gallery regularly features a large variety of fine art media by local and regional artists.

For more information, call the gallery at 522-2933.

Many of Howard's paintings feature local sites around Las Cruces, Mesilla and the Southwest.

A house all their own Renovation makes space for LCAA By Christine Peterson Many of the original members are still ac-

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

A house that was once on the verge of being condemned now is a gallery space to 21 different artists' pieces.

The craftsman style house, built in 1910, was described as an eyesore in the years past its original heyday. With various articles strewn about the lawn, it wasn't a place that screamed "gallery."

The Las Cruces Art Association, celebrating its 50th year, needed a space to feature its artists' work.

The association had a space previously, but it's been decades since a space was all its own. Through hard work and elbow grease, Mountain Gallery and Studios is finally a place that the association can call its own.

In 1962 the association was formed as a way for artists to communicate with each other. The association expanded into members being featured in art galleries and regional exhibits in the Southwest.

But not the extent. After two years of extensive restoring, including putting in hardwood floors, fixing the plumbing and piping, putting on a tin roof and painting, the Mountain Gallery and Studios was opened in February.

"It was a lot more work than I anticipated, but once I started on it I couldn't stop," Zeissel said. "Actually, even though we opened in February, I was doing renovations until April."

Festival kicks off Memorial Day weekend

By Amanda Green Las Cruces Bulletin

Memorial Weekend will host 17 New Mexican wineries at the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival.

The festival, celebrating its 20th anniversary, will be held from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 26, through Monday, May 28. The fairgrounds are located 11 miles west of Las Cruces, on Interstate 10.

The festival will include live music and food vendors as well as a wide selection of tasting from wineries around New Mexico.

"The Southern New Mexico Wine Festival has become a kick-off event for the summer," said Dawn Starostka of Helping Hands Event Planning, who is helping to organize this year's festival. "It's a really great way for people to try regional wines and find out what they like."

A new winery, La Esperanza, will be in attendance for sampling and sale of their first bottled crop.

"I like to think we're a wine boutique," said David Gurule, who owns La Esperanza. "We've only bottled around 500 cases this year, but there's really something special about our product."

The University of Wine has returned this year to provide free classes and talks to help guests understand and appreciate the process of wine making.

New Mexican experts and winemakers will speak about producing specific types of wine, as well as the reasons behind pairing certain wines with different types of cuisine. The classes will be held throughout the weekend. To see a schedule of events, visit www.snmwinefestival.com.

Wineries will offer tastings, including samples of sweeter, lighter chilled wines to the fullbodied, robust dark reds. Wine is available to purchase by the bottle or case for guests to take home.

In addition to the wine, live music will help attendees celebrate the long weekend. Saturday will feature the Cadillac Kings and the band Fire & Ice, On Sunday, Ryan Beaver and John Arthur Martinez will take the stage.

The festival will wrap up Monday with performances by Kung Fu Treachery as well as the blues-guitar master Guitar Slim. A full entertainment schedule is available online.

Admission to the festival is $15 for adults over the age of 21, and includes a souvenir glass. Entrance is free for those under 21, but they must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

or legal guardian. On Monday, May 28, all military members will receive a discount of $3 on admission.

All adults must have a valid photo ID with them, regardless of age. Designated drivers are highly encouraged.

Purchase tickets online at www.snmwinefestival.com for a chance to win the "Stay Sunny" festival package sponsored by the Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau.

"Not only is the gallery great for us, but I have a lot of people that come in here and thank us for fixing up the house," Zeissel said. "I've had people that come in and want to tour the house just to see what we've done to the place. They end up loving it."

For other members of the association, it's a dream come true.

"We were looking for a new place for about three years," said Rosario Jeremias, director of Mountain Gallery and Studios. "We needed our own place to show the art. It's a real commitment between all the members to have this gallery."

The gallery spans throughout the five rooms in the house, both upstairs and downstairs. The three rooms in the downstairs are for co-op members of the association that rent out space. Of the 100 members in the association, there are a total of 21 co-op artists. The two rooms up the stairs are galleries of Ziessel's and Jeremias' work.

"Every three months we rotate the art so that everyone can be seen in a different space," Jeremias said.

The gallery is described as "unique" by LCAA member Consuelo Ortiz.

"If you want to come to a gallery and enjoy variety, this is the place. The house also sets us apart in being unique," she said.

Ortiz added that the artists are willing to negotiate prices and help customers being able to obtain a piece of art that they particularly admire. "We'll work with the customer," Ortiz said. With all media featured, watercolors, oil paintings, pottery, glass and clothing creations decorate the walls.

"We're not restricted, we cover all media," Ortiz said. "There are landscapes, Southwest (inspired) art. You'll see everything."

A painting of jellyfish on the wall in one room, geometrical shape-inspired paintings on a wall in the front room, convey to visitors that this place is diverse.

"We try to give everyone a chance to do what they love, art," Jeremias added.

Every third Saturday of the month the members have a meeting.

At these meetings, there are sometimes workshops where a visiting artist will lead the group through a series of demonstrations and techniques.

"We've had demonstrations in pastels and sculpture," Jeremias said. "An artist from Sedona came in and led a pastel workshop."

The association's future goal is to teach children about art. The association would like to bring in workshops for children within the studio.

A little garage that has been erected in recent years in the backyard is Zeissel's next project.

"I want to make the garage over into a studio for us all to paint," he said.

The Mountain Gallery and Studios is located at 138 W. Mountain Ave. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday through Saturday.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY is displaying several retablos from the university's permanent collection on loan to the library from the University Art Gallery. The artworks are on display in the library dean's office.

A unique artistic tradition of 19th century Mexico, retablos are popular expressions of faith painted on small sheets of tin-coated iron. Retablos were not originally created as art objects, but were functional everyday items used for home worship.

Pilgrims who traveled roadways such as El Camino Real between Mexico City and Santa Fe stopped at shrines along the way, leaving their devotional images behind. This caused the art to move northward into New Mexico.

The display in the library is but a sampling of the university's collection. New Mexico State University holds the largest public collection of retablos in the United States. From 1963 to 1973, more than 1,700 retablos were donated to the university.

The library is located at 1780 E. University Ave. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 646-2545.

Perfecting the fruits of the sea

The lasting legacy of a sushi master

Review by Jeff Berg

Will you still be working when you are 85?

Working to continue to produce the perfect version of a product that most of the world knows nothing of or has never had?

If not, then you are nothing like sushi chef Jiro Ono, who operates an immaculate 10 seat restaurant called Sukiyabashi in a Tokyo subway station.

Ono, a product of World War II, has been honing his craft forever and is now heralded as one of the best, if not the best, sushi chefs on our little planet.

A man of discipline, but also one of occasional quiet humor and great honor, Ono is recognized as "the" sushi chef.

He is also a man who can get away with charging several hundred dollars for a 30 minute meal that often requires reservations made months in advance at his Michelin three-star rated establishment.

However, his steadfastness is not held only to himself. He takes on apprentices, including his own sons who have inherited their father's unusual work ethic and strong will. Others have been chosen, but only a few make it, no pun intended. One son runs another restaurant in Tokyo; the other is second in command at Sukiyahbashi.

We follow Ono through various parts of his routine - teaching others how to do what he does, preparing the food in finite detail, taking shopping soirees to the various markets he will visit to obtain only the perfect ingredients, including rice and especially fish. He has worked in the industry since age 9, and shows only the smallest signs of letting up the pace.

Ono's family life was a disaster, which may be part of the reason he has become quietly obsessed with making the perfect sushi. Without a father for the most part and with poverty and war part of the scene, Ono turned to the one thing that may have offered some sort of security, that being work.

And work he does. Rarely taking a day off, we follow the preparation of the famous sushi (fellow vegetarians can sit this one out), and also the commentary of a food critic who I think has helped Ono become the legend that he is.

But in the end, what does it all mean? Not much really.

The film, along with the food, is superb in its presentation, but offers little behind what makes this man tick or why he is who he is.

We get the occasional hint, including one where Ono admits he wasn't a very good father (we hear little if anything about his wife or the mother of his sons), and in that way the film is a bit of a disappointment.

"Jiro Dreams of Sushi" follows the life of a sushi master, working in a Tokyo subway. His dedication to the art of crafting the perfect sushi is heartfelt and inspiring.

If we stick with the picture as strictly a view of a man who has honed his craft for nearly 80 years, Ono becomes much more satisfying.

Saturated with excellent cinematography and much detail, "Jiro Dreams of Sushi" might make your mouth water, but it will keep your eyes dry.

There will be drawings throughout the week for several gift certificates from local sushi operations including Aqua Reef and Empire Buffet.

You can buy me some vegetarian sushi if you'd like. jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com Jeff Berg is a board member of the Mesilla Valley Film Society and freelance writer for several publications. His reviews reflect his own opinion, not of the film society or the board.

The memories of a generation

Free admission for all veterans

The CineMatinee for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, May 26, is "The Thin Red Line" (1999, 170 minutes, rated R).

One of the cinema's great disappearing acts came to a close with the release of "The Thin Red Line" in late 1998.

Terrence Malick, the cryptic recluse who withdrew from Hollywood visibility after the release of his visually enthralling masterpiece "Days of Heaven" (1978), returned to the director's chair after a 20-year coffee break.

Malick's comeback vehicle is a fascinating choice: a wideranging adaptation of a World War II novel by James Jones.

The battle for Guadalcanal Island gives Malick an opportunity to explore nothing less than the nature of life, death, God and courage.

Let that be a warning to anyone expecting a conventional war flick; Malick proves himself quite capable of mounting an exciting action sequence, but he's just as likely to meander into pure philosophical moments or simply let the camera contemplate the first steps of a newly birthed tropical bird or the sinister skulk of a crocodile.

According to www.amazon. com, "This is not especially an actors' movie - some faces go by so quickly they barely register – but the standouts are bold: Nick Nolte as a career-minded colonel, Elias Koteas as a deeply spiritual captain who tries to protect his men, Ben Chaplin as a G.I. haunted by lyrical memories of his wife.

The backbone of the film is the ongoing discussion between a wry sergeant (Sean Penn) and an ethereal, almost holy private (Jim Caviezel).

The picture's sprawl may be a result of Malick's method of finding a film during shooting and editing, and in some ways 'The Thin Red Line' seems vaguely, intriguingly incomplete. Yet it casts a spell like almost nothing else of its time, and Malick's visionary images are a challenge and a signpost to the rest of his filmmaking generation"

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – the new West, Old West or anything in between and "movies that missed us," notable films that never had a lot of publicity. The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment. At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico "connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state – nearly 500 – or perhaps featuring a star/story from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $5 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $2. The Fountain Theatre is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe, one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287.

Featured musician: René Sosa-Provencio René and the Tritones light up the stage

Jazz singer frequents Lorenzo's de Mesilla

By Amanda Green

Twenty-two-year-old René Sosa-Provencio is wowing crowds and swooning souls with her unique blend of mellow jazz and big-time Broadway sounds.

Sosa-Provencio, who performs frequently during the dinner service at Lorenzo's de Mesilla, 1750 Calle de Mercado, describes her jazz sound as very different from the one she has while playing with the Tritones, which includes twin musicians Andrés and Adriel Hernandez.

"I'm the kind of singer who loves to belt it out, and really play with the melodies," she said. "Even when I sing jazz, my love for opera and Broadway tunes is still there."

Sosa-Provencio, a student at New Mexico State University said music has always been her passion.

She attended the University of New Mexico's music program and preformed with the Santa Fe Opera before returning to Las Cruces in 2011 to finish her degree and to be closer to family.

"Besides my daughter Sophia, I have no greater love than music," she said.

Juggling school, family and performing can be difficult at times, Sosa-Provencio said, but she has her family to thank for the support.

"I don't know what I'd do without them," she said. "If I have a gig, or need to finish some work, my family is always there asking what they can do to help. They are a true blessing.'

Sosa-Provencio describes her sound as "Ella Fitzgerald on Broadway." Her classmates describe her voice as a dramatic soprano when she performs operatic pieces.

She currently is pursuing her bachelor's degree in music education.

Sosa-Provencio recently has preformed at several local venues, including Amaro Winery, and the flexibility in her sound allows her to reach outside of traditional jazz scenes.

"I've preformed for some private parties, birthdays, a few cabaret and old-time events," Sosa-Provencio said. "It's really great to get the opportunity to perform in an up-scale venue, then the next night somewhere where I can let my hair hang down and really have some fun with it.'

Sosa-Provencio's next gig at Lorenzo's de Mesilla is from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, May 31.

For more information, call 525-3170.

High Desert Brewing Co.'s rock star kitchen

Loyal

By Amanda Green as Cruces Bulletir

Hidden in a patch of trees and flowering vines just east of Valley Drive, High Desert Breweing Co., 1201 W. Hadley Ave., is one of those places you'd never discover without knowing where it is first.

High Desert first opened its doors to the public July 5, 1997, as a microbrewery, selling unique, small-batch beer to its patrons. It began selling its brew to local pubs and was looking to expand. Only 10 months later, after renovating the existing space, High Desert's kitchen was up and ready to start cooking. "We always knew we wanted to offer great food and great Almarez, one of the owners of the brewery. "It's a running joke that, 'None of our beers suck.' But it's true, we craft everything carefully, and make sure it's the

Behind the open dining area and kitchen are huge, silver, 200-gallon tanks used to create the various flavors and aromas of the malt beverage. The process of taking grain and fermenting it, adding yeast, sugar and many other components, requires time and attention to detail. The same process is adhered to in everything that comes through the kitchen doors. The menu is composed of typical food you'd expect to be available at any pub. Burgers, nachos and an abundance of fried delights are the perfect addition to their hoppy ales. For those under the beer consuming age or working, High Desert makes its own root beer with the same love and care as any of its brews. This rich, sweet concoction, made with the root of the sassafras plant. sugar cane and a bucket list of spices, is available by the glass or in gallon owlers to take home and share. Since this was a quick lunch for one, I settled for a glass of the homebrewed soft drink, and went for something I believed a simple, no-mess lunch. Boy was I wrong.

The green chile cheese chicken is a trimmed down, poultry-version of a burger, served on a soft Kaiser roll. An entire green chile was fileted, roasted and set upon a moist, flavorful chicken breast smothered in cheese. Accented with traditional burger dressing - lettuce, tomato and onion – the sandwich was a mountain of delicious. Having the foresight to swap ranch-dipped sweet potato fries, my lunch was made complete.

While devouring one of the best lunches I've had to date, I recognized several people from the community dropping in for lunch or a mid-day beer. It dawned on me as to why High Desert has been so successful off the beaten path.

The brewery is simply one of those places the locals frequent. Loyal patrons return time and again because they can count on the great food, friendly service and a wide selection of finely crafted beer.

High Desert has an outdoor patio, shaded by the lush foliage surrounding the building, with enough tables and chairs for a small get together.

Inside, the labels and coasters from brews line the ceiling, toasting the variety waiting in the brewer's

There is live music from 8 to 11 .m. every Thursday and Saturday, showcasing some of the best talent the area has to offer.

Drink options rotate seasonally and are based on what has completed brewing. Even if patrons find their favorite has slipped off the menu one week, they'll be sure to find another and broaden their beer options.

Next time you're in the area, check out High Desert for a quick bite to eat, easy conversation or an ice-cold brew.

Making fun of everyone 'Dictator' addresses democracy's downfalls

Review by Amanda Green

Sacha Baron Cohen is not what most of us would consider subtle about his dozen personas.

Each character he creates is as blunt, rude and incorrigible as they come. The actor and comedian, however, takes a very serious approach to each personality, using very real issues to carve out his place in comedic history.

in comedic history. As a graduate of Cambridge University, Cohen is a very intelligent, politically aware individual who has made headlines for his outlandish take on international relationships and self-revealing ridicule.

One of his first publicly embraced personas was Ali G, a stereotype of a white suburban male from Staines who imitates rap culture as well as urban British and Jamaican culture, particularly through hip-hop, reggae, drum and bass and jungle music.

The popular – albeit controversial – personas that followed included Borat, a Kazakhstani journalist, and Bruno, a flamboyantly gay Austrian fashion reporter. Cohen's humor derives from mocking society through outrageous sociocultural viewpoints, his violation of social taboos and his use of vulgar language and behavior. After retiring Ali G, Borat and Bruno, from mocking society through outrageous ... viewpoints.

Cohen created Admiral General Aladeen, the main character for his newest film, "The Dictator."

Cohen's transformation from one personality to another is genuinely remarkable, and few can claim the actor does not immerse himself into each role completely.

Aladeen is a dictator from the fictional North African country of the Republic of Wadiya. His persona is a combination of Moammar Gaddafi and Saddam Hussein. Aladeen is exposed initially as a truly dangerous person, but as the film progresses, he is revealed as a conventional comedy figure, entirely scripted.

For 40 years, Wadiya has been ruled by Aladeen, a childish, lecherous, anti-Western and anti-Semitic despot who surrounds himself with female bodyguards and is working on developing nuclear weapons.

After the United Nations Security Council resolves to intervene militarily, Aladeen travels to the UN Headquarters in New York City to address the council. Shortly after arriving, he is kidnapped by Clayton (John C. Reilly), a hit-man hired by his traitorous uncle Tamir (Ben Kingsley).

General Admiral Aladeen (Sacha Baron Cohen), the dictator of Wadiya, a fictional North African country travels to New York to face accusations of tyranny in front of the UN Security Council in "The Dictator."

Tamir replaces Aladeen with a political decoy named Efawadh, whom he can manipulate into signing a document democratizing Wadiya and opening the country's oil fields for business.

Aladeen escapes, but his beard has been shaved off by Clayton, making him practically unrecognizable. He encounters activist Zoey (Anna Faris), who offers him a job at her alternative lifestyle co-op. Aladeen refuses the offer and travels to New York's "Little Wadiya," where he encounters Nadal (Jason Mantzoukas), the former chief of Wadiya's nuclear weapons program, whom Aladeen thought he had executed.

Wanting his old job back, Nadal promises to help reinstate Aladeen as dictator on condition that he makes him head of Wadiya's weapons program again.

The movie is full of jokes. The laughter often risks the edge of bad taste, but can be interpreted by members of any audience in a very different way. Cohen has sought to offend almost everyone with his new persona, and has the courage to speak what we all know to be true, even if we refuse to say it aloud.

I found the humor to be a blend of both, and fortunately for Cohen, it's the good scenes and lines that stick in the mind rather than the misfires. Few purchase tickets to a film such as this, expecting everything to be politically correct. He makes sure to hit on some sensitive points for every race, creed and political system, just for the sake of fairness and equality.

In perhaps one of the funniest and most obscure scenes, Aladeen makes a doubleedged speech to a gathering of politicians and diplomats urging America to abandon democracy, listing a succession of things they would thus avoid, all of them familiar American shortcomings and inequities. I was too busy laughing with the rest of the audience at the irony of "freedom" to have bothered being offended.

Cohen makes a point of speaking about the things we were already thinking. I commend him for that.

Selling the Destination

You've probably heard this statement "sell the destination, not the plane."

This could pertain to several areas in life but I'm going to specifically talk about the destination as a health goal that anyone can set.

The destination, similar to a "sym-phony," where all of the organs are working in harmony, should be your desired destination. How you reach it can be daunting if you don't have a plan and don't follow through or focus on your final destination.

The "plane" is the means you use in order to reach your destination. For example, preventing skin cancer. If you've been tested for vitamin D and you're deficient, just 1,000 international units may reduce your risk of cancer according to Boston's Harvard School of Public Health and the University of Oxford in Britain. D3 can be most readily absorbed at higher doses by your body than D2 can.

Living in New Mexico, you may ask yourself, "Since the sky is cloudless and sunny 350 days a year, how could anyone be deficient in vitamin D?"

It's possible, especially if you use sunscreen or do not venture outdoors between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. for at least 20 minutes a day.

Raise your HDL, or good cholesterol, by exercising 30 minutes, five times a week. Try to do something you enjoy so it's not a chore. Dreading your aerobic activity only adds stress to your attitude. If you like to smile or laugh, try Zumba. It's okay to laugh at yourself and no one cares whether you have rhythm, unless you're the instructor.

I've mentioned the Mediterranean diet in my columns. Diets rich in olives, avocados and nuts have increased people's HDL cholesterol by 12.5 percent in just one month.

These are foods rich in mono-unsaturated fatty acid (MUFA). Remember, too, that you are what you eat and you are what the animals eat.

Dr. David Katz, director of Yale University Prevention Research Center in Derby, Conn., said, "The best cancer weapon at your disposal is prevention. Just making some key diet and lifestyle changes can single-handedly cut your risk of this disease as much as 60 percent." My own personal advice is to define your purpose and meaning in life. Rec-ognize that God didn't just place you on this planet to take up space and breathe air. Giving in whatever capacity you are capable of is extremely rewarding, worthwhile and simply reinforces you are blessing to others.

So when you're mapping out your desired destination, be willing to take the "plane," which gets you there as safely and directly as possible. Research and educate yourself.

Cancer survivors invited to celebration By Lorena Sanchez

A person is considered a cancer survivor the moment they are diagnosed with the disease.

For cancer survivor Honey Devins, this means by being proactive and taking responsibility for your health, "you are on your way to living and surviving" the minute you are diagnosed.

Memorial Medical Center is recognizing the strength of all cancer survivors and the struggles they've been through with a celebration from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 2, at the Memorial Medical Center HealthPlex, 2735 Northrise Drive.

The second annual Cancer Survivors Day Celebration's Cancer Across Cultures theme is designed to recognize that cancer does not discriminate and affects people from all walks of life.

Cheryl Hertan, a certified tumor registrar with Memorial Medical Center, has been planning the event along with a committee of seven. The celebration has grown in size in just one year.

"It's an important thing for all survivors to celebrate," Hertan said.

The celebration is open to the public and is free for all those who attend. Survivors who attend the ceremony and their guests are asked to wear purple, which is a symbol of cancer awareness.

"Being a survivor means more than just surviving the disease, but everything else that comes along with it," Devins said.

Each cancer survivor will receive a gift. There will be dancers and performances representing different cultures, cake, prizes and refreshments.

"It doesn't matter where you were diagnosed or treated, all cancer survivors are welcome," Hertan said.

Devins, who is also part of the planning my world got smaller," Devins said.

Longest survivor, Josephine Wiskowski; Pistol Pete; youngest survivor, Sandy Caldwell; and oldest survivor, Peter Papartis pose together during the 2011 inaugural Cancer Survivors Day Celebration at Memorial Medical Center. This year's event is expected to be bigger and better with the celebration held from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 2, at the HealthPlex, 2735 Northrise Drive.

committee, was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2010 but was fortunate enough to catch the cancer at an early stage.

"I was very shocked," Devins said. "It was almost one year to the date of my last mammogram that the spot was discovered. Because it was caught so early, and as long as I did what I needed to do, I knew I would be okay.

To treat her cancer, Devins has a lumpectomy, radiation, chemotherapy and a Port-a-Cath inserted to receive medication intravenously.

"What was most difficult for me was that

Before her diagnosis, Devins was very active in the community, but after her diagnosis, her world became a revolving door of medication, treatment and doctor's appointments.

Devins has completed her treatments, but said she'll never feel free of the cancer.

"Just because your treatment is over doesn't mean everything is back to normal," Hertan said. "It's a new normal."

Hertan is also a cancer survivor.

According to the American Cancer Society, there are nearly 12 million cancer survivors in the United States. In 2012, the organization es-See Survivor on page D2

Needle exchange offers solutions

Sterilization helps prevent spread of disease By Lorena Sanchez

Las Cruces Bulletin

Prevention through sterilization perfectly describes the needle exchange program promoted by Families & Youth Inc. as a way to prevent the spread of blood borne diseases, such as hepatitis and HIV.

"It's a program that is utilized for individuals who want to get clean syringes," said Stefano Di Amante, prevention specialist at FYI. "Diabetics or intravenous drug users dispose of their syringes and receive clean, sterile ones."

The official title of the program is the Harm and Reduction Program, a statewide effort introduced in 1997 after the state determined a high use of intravenous drugs in the northern part of the state.

'The state decided to adopt programs to reduce the number of illnesses caused by the use of unsterilized instruments," Di Amante said.

FYI adopted the program in 1999 to serve Southern New Mexico. Since its introduction in 1999, the program has seen positive results.

Individuals can come into the FYI building, located at 1320 S. Solano Drive, and let an employee at the front know they are interested in the exchange program, then they will be escorted to someone, such as Di Amante, who is authorized to make the exchange.

The program is free. However, the individual is required to register for the program's yellow card, which allows them to have access to sterile needles with or without an exchange and receive needles or kits from programs throughout the state.

The card is not required for

See Needle on page D2

Needle exchange kits are available at Families & Youth Inc., 1320 S. Solano Drive, to individuals registered for the New Mexico Harm and Reduction Program. The kit comes in a tube with condoms, needles, syringes, alcohol swabs and other items used when injecting medication or drugs into the system in a sterile manner.

Cyclists embrace local weather

Gabriel Rochelle

Cycling the Mesilla Valley

We moved to New Mexico in 2007 from eastern Pennsylvania.

We lived where many cyclists and track racers congregated. The Lehigh Valley Velodrome was a hub for many activities.

Our local club, the Lehigh Valley Wheelmen, had more than 200 members. It's a hilly region, as is much of Pennsylvania, and we used to joke about not being able to ride in any direction more than a few miles without hitting a steep grade.

The real problem for cyclists, however, was that you could only ride about eight months of the year before the snow, ice and the grayness of winter overcame you. Lots of people cycled in their basements or went to local health clubs to spin their way through winter. I have looked back on 10 years of my cycling records in Pennsylvania and it was rare to get as many as 3,000 miles a year.

Fast forward to New Mexico, the home of seemingly endless sun. Never mind the wind for the moment.

In the years since moving here, I have averaged 5,000 miles a year, a jump of 2,000 over my best years in Pennsylvania. Heck, I often rode in the rain in Pennsylvania because I had no other choice. But there are so few days of rain here you don't have to worry about making them up. As of this week I surpassed the 2,500-mile mark - more than my total for most years in Pennsylvania.

My long introduction helps to make the contrast. New Mexico is superb for cycling and the stats I quoted help prove that. We have more days of sun than most other places. We have many scenic routes to ride. Also, particularly in the East, you have to work to get outside of the city and suburban traffic, (Of course I consider urban cycling a peculiar art form.)

Month May is

Here it only takes a few miles and you're on country roads, some of them wonderfully desolate, most with commanding views of the great mountains that surround us. Some of them are not well paved but, hey, you've got to have some challenge when you live surrounded by such beauty.

Ride north on Valley to Lujan Hill Road, or farther to Fort Selden and then back on old Doña Ana Road. Or go up the Picacho/I-70 hill to the airport and beyond to Bowlin's and back. It is so quiet there, that most days you can hear yourself breathing with each pedal stroke, especially if you take the side road 4 miles to Corralitos Ranch and back.

The silence is spectacular. One of my favorite default rides is to work my way over to Las Alturas Road along I-10 and go south to the Mesquite bridge, cross the interstate, turn left half a mile to Highway 228, turn right past all those cows, through Mesquite on Highway 192, over to Highway 228 and back up to Mesilla.

A few rolling hills, some good straight stretches, the treelined 2 miles around Stahmann's makes for a good ride.

I've mentioned the local clubs before. Here they are again: Bike and Chowder, ROYALS and Zia Velo. You can find them all through a web search, no problem. Join in and around this community that offers so much for the solo or group cyclist.

Stop in at one of the local bike shops and pick up a sticker that reads "Bike New Mexico." Put it on your bike before your next ride, and then ride with pride. This is a great place for cyclists. You be careful, but get out there.

Father Gabriel Rochelle is priest of St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox Mission, Las Cruces, and an avid cyclist. Visit the church website at http://stanthonylc.org.

anyone interested in disposing of used needles, or individuals who use the program for the first time, but there is a limit to the amount of sterile needles they can receive.

"You have to live in New Mexico to receive one of our cards," Di Amante said. "The whole process takes less than 10 minutes.'

Di Amante stresses the process and environment in which the exchange takes place is confidential. The program also offers information and anonymous testing to those struggling with drug addiction, ensuring they have access to resources that can help them get clean.

"We give out information on treatment programs," Di Amante said. "We also give out male and female condoms.

Due to the stigma attached to intravenous drug users, it can be difficult for people to seek treatment or other resources that will keep them safe, Di Amante said. Hepatitis C is one of the most common viruses among intravenous drug users and is on the rise, while other blood borne illnesses are decreasing. "It's still low in New Mexico," Di Amante said. "But we're very lucky we're in the same category as California and Colorado offering this program."

For more information on the program, information and resources offered by the program, call Di Amante at 556-1549.

timates there will be 1.6 million new cancer cases diagnosed in the U.S. In New Mexico, an estimated 9,640 new cases will be diagnosed.

We figured that in Las Cruces we have 3,000 cancer survivors," Hertan said. "We are calling on them to join this celebration.

On Monday, May 21, Memorial Medical Center received a proclamation from the City of Las Cruces proclaiming June 2 cancer survivor day in Las Cruces - June 3 is the nationally recognized date.

'There are so many people – male, female, young and old and their families that are directly affected by this disease," Devins said. "It's important to attend the celebration to see that you are not alone. Together (survivor) find the laughter amongst all the pain in those shared experiences." # Advocating, educating and remembering at the AIDS Candlelight Memorial

Photos by Nicolas Bañales

The 29th annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial was held Sunday, May 20, at the Young Park Pavilion, 1905 E. Nevada Ave.

The memorial is committed to ending HIV by raising awareness and advocating for the advancement of effective policies at all levels, and was observed in more than 100 countries and 1,000 communities around the world.

Key issue areas for the Candlelight Advocacy Platform are ensuring access to treatment; prevention and care; reducing stigma and discrimination; and increasing resources for HIV, malaria, tuberculosis and other related issues

Participants included representatives from the offices of U.S. Sens. Jeff Bingaman and Tom Udall, Las Cruces City Council, Region 5 Department of Health and local HIV physicians. There were performances by Mark Courtney, Lauren Michaels, the New World Drummers, Kelly Williams and the GLBTQ Center youth.

For more information, call International AIDS Empowerment at 647-4060.

Las Cruces Bulletin

As an independent distributor for Shaklee products, Kari Hinojosa travels from place to place showing the Enfuselle skin care products.

Because the business is mobile, Hinojosa can be invited to someone's home to demonstrate the products.

"It's anti-aging skincare product line," Hinojosa said. "I go to people's homes to make it convenient for them."

Once at their home Hinojosa sets up a table with the products, serves champagne and sets out a bowl filled with chocolates.

"Everyone can try on the products in a fun, relaxed environment," Hinojosa said.

Friends are invited to join in the fun and try products that claim to cleanse, neutralize and repair the skin. Products are available to try for different skin types and to treat problems such as acne and dry skin. Lotions, shower gels, moisturizers, face masques, hair products, lip treatments, hair care products

Local heroes celebrated for their service Applications due July 25

By Lorena Sanchez

The Red Cross is accepting nominations for the 2012 Real Heroes Award recipients who will be recognized at the Mayor's Real Heroes Awards this fall.

"The awards are to honor ordinary people doing extraordinary things," said Rebecca Sellars, development coordinator for the Red Cross of Southwestern New Mexico.

People in the community are asked to nominate individuals in the categories of adult and youth good Samaritans, pet hero, emergency medical, firefighter, law enforcement, military and workplace safety personnel.

Individuals must live and work in the seven counties that make up the southwestern region the Red Cross covers, which includes Doña Ana, Grant, Luna, Catron, Otero, Hidalgo and Sierra.

Anyone interested in nominating a friend, family or community member must fill out a nomination form available at www.redcross.org or call Sellars at 639-2650.

The application deadline is Wednesday, July 25. "It's a way to give recognition to people who are everyday heroes that might go unnoticed," Sellars said. "It's a way to thank our sponsors and raise money for the local Red Cross chapter."

Once the nomination form is fill out, email it to Sellars at rebecca.sellars@redcross.org, fax it to 524-4271 or mail it in to the American Red Cross, Southwestern New Mexico, 1301 E. Griggs Ave. Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Drink Coffee, Do Good - this is the message St. Patrick's Anglican Church is trying to get out to Las Cruces.

Last summer, the church joined others throughout the United States in participating in the Drink Coffee, Do Good ministry established by Land of a Thousand Hills Coffee Co. in 2011.

"1994 saw the world's worst example of genocide in Rwanda," said Pastor Jake Worley of St. Patrick's Anglican Church. "In three months, around one million people were killed '

After the devastation was over, clergymen in the Anglican community wanted to help the country get on its feet, reconcile and find forgiveness. They did this through micro-industry, Worley said.

"Families started to work together to grow coffee and rebuild their community," he said.

Through the ministry, Land of a Thousand Hills sells the coffee through various churches with a majority of the proceeds going to the growers, Worley said.

"We don't make any money, we just sell it." he said. "I personally think it's better (coffee) than the leading brand."

Worley said buying one bag of coffee at $12 once a month throughout the year is enough to support a farmer, and as the country still works to rebuild, every bag counts.

'They're still reeling from this, but they're healing," he said. "We've seen reconciliation in the area. What were once known as 'killing fields' are now 'healing fields.'

After seeing such success in Rwanda, the ministry had ventured to other areas in need, including Haiti and Thailand.

"The reason we are do this is because of who we are in Christ," Worley said. Since joining the coffee-selling ministry almost a year ago, the church has seen a great response amongst its small congregation with word slowly spreading throughout the community, Worley said.

"(Sales have been) mostly in our own congregation," he said. "We have sold a large amount to a family in Alamogordo.'

Worley said the coffee ministry is just one of the ways St. Patrick's Anglican Church, established in 2007, is giving back.

'Our families step up when they see a need in the community," he said.

Worley said for the last two months one family has worked to create "Showers of Grace," which provides women in crisis pregnancies with baby showers.

"They don't have people to give them a baby shower, so we're going to do it," he said, adding that this is being spearheaded by a 17-year-old and 14-year-old congregation members. "Other churches already have said they want to help."

Still in the process of getting the ministry together, items are currently being collected for the Showers of Grace.

Worley said the congregation has also supported the Las Cruces Public Schools' Crossroads Program, most recently providing its graduates with congratulatory baskets.

"When a need arises, we meet it," he said, showing off the many completed items on the church's prayer board. "We feel God pulls people into our community - people we need to minister to and people we minister through."

Building in 'paradise' Budding area features exquisite home

By Beth Sitzler

With the addition of Red Hawk Golf Course, Sonoma Ranch Boulevard beyond U.S. Highway 70 has received much attention lately

Before Red Hawk plans were ever announced, however, Rudy and Dora Samaniego made the up-and-coming area their home.

'We had come out here and I said, 'Oh my God, this is a little paradise out here," Rudy Samaniego said.

The couple purchased the 1-acre lot at 3374 Calle Rancho Caballo in 2007. Located on a dirt road, only one home existed in the neighborhood at that time, Rudy Samaniego said.

"We could come out here and visit and talk about what we were going to do and what the home was going to look like," he said.

"(Rudy) had such vision, he could picture what it was going to look like," Dora Samaniego said.

Hiring Hacienda Builders, the couple saw their vision come to life, and in 2008, they were able to move into their almost 3,000square-foot, Mediterranean style abode.

'This was the second home we had built, so by the time the slab was poured, we had started looking at tile and paint," Rudy Samaniego said. "We knew what we wanted when the time came.

Through the front door, the foyer welcomes guests and features a 15-foot-tall ceiling with a unique tray design, tile floors and two-tone, hand-trowel walls. At the center of the foyer is a mosaic medallion, created from the various pieces of tile and granite used throughout the home.

"We wanted a tall entry way," Rudy Samaniego said. "We wanted that grand foyer when you come into the house.'

Beside the entrance is an office, which the family uses as a TV room. Because the interior walls were insulated for soundproofing, occupants don't have to worry about disturbing others in the house.

Wood laminate flooring was used in the office, which has a 14-foot ceiling with a 6-inch tray – a deeper tray than was used in the other rooms.

Outside of the office is a hallway that leads to the master suite. Along this hallway and in the suite are several ornately decorated nichos.

"Our tile guy was great. He started with one tile nicho and ended up tiling all three," said Rudy Samaniego, adding that each nicho has a slightly different pattern, but closely resembles the medallion in the foyer.

The master bedroom was designed to meet the Samaniegos' needs and includes features such as reading lights and a window overlooking the backyard with a view of the Organ Mountains. It also includes his-and-hers walkin closets.

The master bathroom is brightly illuminated by a large skylight. The light bounces around the room, highlighting the granite countertops that surround the two sinks and

Tweaking elements as they went along, Rudy Samaniego said they got rid of the glass door enclosing the shower, instead leaving it open. Because of the design, which includes two showerheads, it doesn't get drafty, he said.

The center of the home features the couple's family room. Dora Samaniego said she wanted a space that was comfortable to be in. "I didn't want a living room, I wanted a family room," she said.

In the corner of the area, which includes several built-in elements and windows, is a fireplace. Rudy Samaniego said cantera stone from Mexico was imported to adorn the feature.

Near the family room is the dining room. Rather than setting the area down a long hallway, the couple used columns to give it privacy and separation while allowing it to remain open to the rest of the house.

"We didn't want any wasted space," Dora Samaniego said. "Everything is out and the home feels very open."

The kitchen also is located in this area. "Dora wanted this big kitchen with a break-fast nook," Rudy Samaniego said.

The couple used two types of granite coun-tertops – black with large flecks and a speckled cream - to not overwhelm the space. The couple also focused on the little things, such as adding trim to the pantry door and including a pull-out spice rack next to the stove for easy access. "Little things like that we learned from building our last house," Rudy Samaniego said.

Two bedrooms, connected by a Jack and Jill bathroom, are located near a powder bathroom and the two-car garage. "I had to have my big garage," said Rudy Samaniego, adding that he included an oversized 18-foot door on the finished garage. "We put in a lot of built-in shelving. We also put in skylight so you don't need to turn the lights on.

While the home sits on 1 acre, the couple chose to transform only a portion of it into the backyard.

We wanted a nice yard that was easy to take care of," Rudy Samaniego said.

The backyard includes grass, trees and many flowering plants planted by Dora Samaniego.

All of this can be enjoyed from the covered patio, which extends 1,000 square feet and features a fireplace with bancos.

"This house is great for cookouts and entertaining," Rudy Samaniego said.

Continuing the personalized details, a door on the patio leads to Dora Samaniego's beauty salon. The one-room space includes a half bathroom as well as a door to the driveway, allowing visitors to enter the salon without having to go through the house.

This space can be transformed to meet any needs, the couple said, whether it be a hobby room, workshop or an apartment.

Is your house filling up? Safety is a top priority when a parent moves in

Maureen Villmer Practical Design

Last time, we talked about adult children moving back home and their needs. This week, we go to the other end of the spectrum and talk about what might be needed if your parents come to live with you.

I've already been there and done that. When we moved to Las Cruces 10 years ago, we brought my mother with us. Making the decision to bring her with us as we moved across the country was relatively easy. She was the only living relative left in our hometown. Making sure she was safe and comfortable, however, was a life-style change.

Here are some things we found that made living with an older parent successful.

First, there will be things that never occurred to you that can present serious danger to an older parent. Safety will probably be a new topic for you and your aging parent. You think nothing of baby proofing your home for children, now it's time to make sure your aging parent is safe in your home, too.

Open up all of your walkways. Make sure the walkways in your home remain clear of furniture, cords and rugs. If you have so much furniture that it is difficult to walk safely, remove some of it.

Take a critical look at the bedroom. We had a beautiful antique bed but, after a while, it was too tall for mom to get in and out of; so we lowered it. Ultimately, we put the mattress and box springs on the floor so she couldn't fall out when getting up at night. If you have area rugs, pick them up and take them away so tripping is not an issue. You may want to look into adding handrails to prevent falling or a mat on the floor near the bed to minimize injuries in case a fall happens.

Bathrooms are often accidents just waiting to happen, where older people are concerned. Consider installing handrails, a raised toilet, a plastic shower stool (if there is no bathtub), a hand-held showerhead and slip mats. It's also important to lock or empty a medicine cabinet and remove any other medications lying around.

No kitchen is the same, so it's important to look around your kitchen and be very critical to assess what may pose a risk to your loved ones. A throw rug at your sink may no longer be a decorative addition, but a falling risk. The water heater may need to be reset to prevent burns on older, more delicate skin.

Senior safety is a new conversation you will need to have with your parents. We all assume the responsibility to protect ourselves in adulthood. As our parents age, however, there are new frailties and risks. Talking about the new concerns is the first step to help prevent accidents and harm to your loved ones.

Increasing the lighting in the home may be the best investment you ever made. As our parents age, their sight dims and we need to increase not only the quantity but also the quality of lighting. Their depth perception may also change and increased lighting will help. When we first moved here, we had a split

When we first moved here, we had a split floor plan; our master was on one side of the house and the other bedrooms on the other side of the house. That made having an

Want a tasty garden? Add edible plants to your landscape

Window boxes overflowing with blooms, decorative pots lining the driveway with striking colors and even a flowering vine climbing up the mailbox – the growing season has arrived, and it is time to decorate the landscape.

The latest gardening trend is growing your own produce, so incorporate edible plants as a beautiful compliment to the typical annuals and perennials. This year, spice up the landscaping decor with some tasty options.

Edible plants – whether herbs, vegetables, fruits or flowers – add a creative variety of interest to your landscape and also produce a delicious bounty for your dinner table come harvest time.

Here are some ideas to help incorporate edible plants into your landscaping:

• Decorate an arbor in the garden, along a walkway or near the house with grape vines.

These vines can help shade an area and also can produce grapes good for eating, juicing, making into jams or jellies, or even wine. Different grapes thrive in different areas of the country, so research the region first before attempting to start some vines.

Switch to edible flowers such as nasturtium, violets, chamomile, dandelion, hollyhock, honeysuckle and pansies in your window boxes and decorative pots. Do not eat flowers grown for ornamental purposes, instead, start edible flowers as seeds and grow them yourself. These flowers work well in salads, teas, summery drinks such as sweetened tea, mocktails and lemonade, and also can be crystallized to decorate cakes.

To crystallize flowers, separate the flowers from the stem and wash and dry the bloom. Heat an equal parts water and sugar until the sugar dissolves and the liquid becomes an amber color. Let the syrup cool. Take flower blooms and quickly dip the pedals into the liquid mixture, turn over so the dry blossom face up. Stronger petals with form and shape work well.

- Mix an herb or two into container gardens. Lavender, rosemary, thyme, oregano and lemon grass are just a few that grow extremely well in containers and mix attractively with other blooming flowers. Not only are the herbs edible, they also emit delicious scents when picked or touched, making a great choice for window boxes or path plantings.
- Pot a tomato plant right in the front or backyard. Tomatoes grow well in full sunlight, and are decorative when the vines drape along a trellis or arbor. Tomatoes also work well as a natural screen along a porch or patio. Also good for use on an arbor or trellis are cucumbers, smaller melons and squash, beans and peas. Inter-plant vines with containers or landscaping, and your small vegetable garden will get a pop of interest to make it stand out – and provide a great harvest for your family.

Create a hedge with berries. Try blueberries, blackberries, raspberries and even gooseberries to make a unique hedge along the edge of your property. Just remember, your family will not be the only samplers of the fruits. Consider covering the hedge with netting to help keep birds from stealing all the berries.

As you are planning new edible gardens, stock up on all the materials needed to give these plants great growing power. Be sure to use a high-quality potting mix when planting container gardens.

Combining beautiful landscaping with delicious foods to serve at dinner is sure to create many compliments – both from visitors enjoying the front and backyard views, and from dinner guests enjoying the produce harvest. Follow these tips and this year your garden will look good enough to eat.

Earthbuilders' Guild reaches beyond New Mexico's border

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletir

With a rich architectural history. New Mexico not surprisingly is the only state to have earthen construction codes.

It also might not come as a sur-prise that New Mexico is home to The Earthbuilders' Guild, a group of individuals dedicated to the betterment and advancement of earthen construction, such as adobe, rammed earth and compressed earth block.

The Earthbuilders' Guild was originally formed in 1994 by a group that included Joe Tibbets of the Southwest Solaradobe School and Quenten Wilson of Northern New Mexico College. "Joe was influential in maintaining the industry over the years," said Sean Kaltenbach of New Mexico Earth Works in Santa Fe, the current chairperson of the guild.

The main purpose of the guild was to oversee building codes related to earthen construction, to ensure the industry had the support it needed to prosper.

"At the time, they did some great things," Kaltenbach said. "But as the market changed, they weren't able to keep the momentum going."

Over the last 30 to 40 years, the idea has been to get a home up fast in the least time as possible," said Pat Bellestri-Martinez of Soledad Canyon Earth Builders, a guild board member. "But we should be building structures to last. Most people say a home should last 50 years, but we want our homes to last hundreds of years.

While the guild was dormant for several years, many in the earthen construction industry saw the need for such an organization. Banding together, they were able to bring The Earthbuilders' Guild back to life in 2010.

"There has been a reinvigorated interest in earthen construction because it meets our sustainable needs," Kaltenbach said.

"An earthen structure is a whole different type of construction job," Bellestri-Martinez said. "It isn't conventional, that's why Joe focused on earthen codes."

Representing earthen construction builders as well as adobe brick makers - both traditional and compressed earth block - the guild has brought together members of the industry, educators and politicians to help preserve the building art.

Conventional construction is the lead practice and the tradition of adobe is diminishing," Kaltenbach said.

The Earthbuilders' Guild 10-person board of directors represents 54 members from not only New Mexico and the United States, but throughout the world, including Italy, Canada and Cypress.

"It's far reaching," said Bellestri-Martinez, adding that one member is an independent researcher of adobe buildings in Tehran, Iran.

New Mexico and the Southwest to preserve historic buildings, teach traditional building skills, support cultural traditions and develop leaders through youth training.

Adobe in Action is another organization The Earthbuilders' Guild is partnering with. Adobe in Action, also based in Santa Fe, conducts various community outreach endeavors and is promoting affordable adobe homes, including working with Habitat for Humanity.

(Adobe in Action) is the vehicle in which a lot of the educational portion and community outreach is being done," Kaltenbach said.

We're starting to touch on The Earthbuilders' Guild becoming a resource for the public," Bellestri-Martinez said.

The guild, Adobe in Action and Cornerstone Community Partnership are working together to create a certification program for preservation, thanks to a grant Cornerstone received. The program will certify people who want to work in adobe preservation to ensure they have the proper knowledge, Kaltenbach said. These are ways we are protecting our industry," he said. "We're gaining momentum as we work diligently to connect to the different entities.

The board meets on a monthly basis at various locations around the state, with the most recent meeting held in Las Cruces Saturday, May 19. Along with discussing business, the board had a chance to tour an adobe home built by Kiki and Wayne Suggs with Classic New Mexico Homes as well as enjoy a social at La Posta de Mesilla.

A goal of the guild, Bellestri-Martinez said, is to team with Doña Ana Community College to develop an adobe and earthen construction preservation program.

As the group continues to move forward in its efforts, it's looking to team up with other entities, such as universities around the state.

"We've received some interest from department heads at (New Mexico State University), DACC and (the University of New Mexico)," Kaltenbach said.

Promoting sustainable building practices, creating new jobs and reaching out to the community, The Earthbuilders' Guild is dedicated to proving that "Brown is the new green," Bellestri-Martinez said.

"It's incredible, we're linking up to a lot of different entities of likeminded people."

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

Throughout Ralph Salas' 27-year career in Las Cruces, he has made a mark in commercial building, residential construction and development.

"The last 15 years, I've worn different hats," Ralph Salas said. "What excites

native could be found competing in a variety of sports, including football, basketball, baseball and track.

"I was one of those kids always playing sports," he said. "I had that determination."

That drive and determination would carry over to his adult life and help him find success as a Las Cruces homebuilder.

In high school, he worked with his father as a subcontractor part time. Through this, he was able to do everything from concrete and brick work to building rock walls.

He continued doing sub-contractor work part time while attending college. Soon, however, his draw to the field grew and he decided to pursue it full time.

"The more I got into construction, the wider my eyes got," he said. "I would work on a rock wall and say, 'I'm going to build a house someday.' I was always striving toward something bigger.'

Building his first home at the age of 19, Salas said during that time interest rates were an astonishing 18 percent.

"During that time, you had to wait to sell a home before you could do something else," he said. "Slowly, things started moving one after another. The second project I did was a four-plex, which I still own."

"We've always been steady," said Leah Salas, Ralph Salas' wife who helps manage the company's rental properties. "A lot of work has come from word of mouth and repeat customers.

Building custom and semicustom homes, Ralph Salas said he builds each home as if it is his own. He incorporates elements he would like to see, while mixing them with the client's vision, creating an "exciting" product. "I like the excitement of building," he said, adding that his homes include a bevy of architectural details to make them visually appealing, not just a square. "I love the challenge.

"Seeing a home go up is my favorite part. It's a big puzzle that's created in front of you."

"I worked seven days a week nonstop to finish so the students could move in on time." Many of the projects Ralph Salas has accomplished wouldn't have happened if he hadn't remained open minded, he said.

"You have to be more competitive in this market with your pricing and what you're willing to give," he said. "Every once in a while, you need to adjust your way of thinking to get more work. You have to be flexible."

"You can't afford not to put it away," he said, adding that before the housing market crashed, many were working off money to come. "You can't live on tomorrow's dollar. You have to live on the money you earned two years ago."

"You have to look at the long run," Leah Salas said.

This lesson, along with many others, was first instilled in Ralph Salas by his parents, Ralph and Elvira, when he was a child.

<sup>6</sup>We lived on a 3-acre farm and we had pigs," he said, explaining that every time they sold a pig, he and his siblings would receive $10. "My dad would take us to the bank to put it in savings."

Another fond memory he keeps of his parents is their drive to do well.

"When I was younger, my parents taught us to do things right from the very beginning," he said. "My dad was an Army guy, and he taught me the value of doing things right and the value of a dollar. Both of my parents taught me to be an honest, good person.

"A lot of my success is due to how I was brought up."

"His mom had a lot of faith in him and knew he could do whatever he wanted," Leah said.

The father of four is passing these lessons on to his own children, and while building keeps him busy, he devotes time to their interests. Along with supporting his eldest children's – Giancarlo and Lauren – swimming aspirations, he also coaches his youngest sons' – Austin and Cameron – basketball and football teams.

"They're two-time sixth-grade football champs," he said of the Zia Spartans football team, which competes in the spring league. "Some of these kids don't have a lot of support at home, but for one hour they do. It's a privilege to be able to coach."

Building two to three custom homes a year, Salas said he doesn't want to be a high-volume builder because he enjoys being on site, getting involved and seeing the pieces come together.

"Sometimes you take it for granted, but if you take a step back you realize that you're creating something that is going to be a part of the community," he said. "When I was younger, I would sit down at the end of the day and say, "Wow, this is cool."

Add luster, shine to your everyday life

Hair conditioner can be used outside of the shower

By Beth Sitzler

Ever since ancient Egypt, people have used a mixture of essential oils to give their hair luster, shine and protection.

Modern-day hair conditioner is very beneficial. Not only does it cleanse and add moisture to your locks, it also texturizes, adds shine and protects. It does all of this through its essential ingredients, which include acidifiers, detanglers, humectants, thermal protectors and oils.

There are several different types of hair conditioner. Pack conditioner is a thick, heavy product with a high content of surfactants, which bind to the hair structure. Leave-in conditioners are thinner and have different surfactants. Ordinary hair conditioner has elements of pack and leave-in varieties.

No matter the type you prefer, it probably is an important part of your daily routine. It doesn't have to be limited to your shower, however. Hair conditioner has several other uses around the house.

1. Replace your makeup remover: Every woman should know about the importance of removing makeup before going to bed – after all, leaving it on can clog your pores and damage your skin. Rather than having to buy yet another product for your beauty regime, turn to one you already have on hand. Hair conditioner can be used to wash off your makeup with ease. Simply slather it on a cotton ball, whip it across your face and rinse.

2. Remove that ring: As a little girl, I would often sneak into my mom's jewelry box and try on the bevy of treasures it held. I still do this from time to time, but unfortunately, my fingers aren't as slim as they once were. If you ever run into this problem, don't panic. That stuck ring can be removed smoothly with a bit of hair conditioner rubbed around your knuckles.

3. Get that zipper moving: Pesky zippers – if they're not getting caught on adjacent fabric, they're not moving at all. Don't let that stuck zipper frustrate you – get it working again with hair conditioner. A small dab is all you need to lubricate the zipper's teeth.

4. Soothe irritated legs: When a razor becomes dull, it can pull the hair, rather than slicing through it. This and other factors could result in a painful case of razor burn. If your skin feels rough or irritated after shaving, rub hair conditioner over it. It will act as lotion and relieve the discomfort.

5. Stop rust from forming: What does it matter to have a tool shed full of tools if they're all covered in rust? Keep you tools in tiptop shape with the help of hair conditioner. Polish them with the hair-care goop every so often. This will help prevent rust from forming on the metal.

6. Care for your silk items: Don't let the dreaded "dry clean only" label deter you from buying that silk shirt you've had your eye on. Instead of sending it off to the cleaner, save yourself some dough by washing it at home with hair conditioner. Fill your sink with water – warm for whites and cold for colors. Add a tablespoon of hair conditioner and submerge the shirt in the concoction. After letting it sit for a few minutes, rinse it out and hang it to dry. The hair conditioner will clean your garment and keep its smooth feeling intact.

7. Soften rough cuticles: Dry cuticles are an annoying problem that easily can be fixed with a little TLC (tender, loving care). Simply rub a bit of hair conditioner onto your cuticles from time to time. This will help soften them, thank to the nourishing ingredients found in the creamy substance.

8. Get painless Band-Aid removal: Ripping a Band-Aid off can be a traumatic experience, no matter your age. Make the process less painful by covering the area of skin surrounding the Band-Aid with hair conditioner. This will help loosen the adhesive clinging to your skin. 9. Save that shrunken sweater: Accidentally washing your brand new sweater in hot water

Avocado Deep Conditioner

Avocado is a great ingredient for a homemade deep conditioner and can be used for quick softening and moisturizing.

Combine ingredients and apply to hair, focusing on the ends. Leave it on for at least 10 minutes and then rinse. (Recipe adapted from www.wisebread.com.)

Ginger Dandruff Treatment

Ginger can increase scalp circulation, which stimulates the hair follicles and encourages growth. Also, it has antiseptic properties that can get rid of dandruff.

1 teaspoon organic sesame oil 1 teaspoon lemon juice solve a tablespoon or more of the conditioner in a sink of water. Let the sweater soak in the solution for a few minutes. When you're done, take it out and lay it flat to dry. The conditioner will soften the fabric enough that it can be gently stretched to its original size. 10. Soften paint and makeup brushes: If your paint brushes or makeup applicators have could yield disastrous results, such as shrinkage. Don't let this be the end of your sweater enjoyment, save it with hair conditioner. Dis-your paint brushes or makeup applicators have become too stiff to properly get the job done, give them some much needed softness through hair conditioner. Rinse the brushes clean and rub the conditioner into the bristles. Let them sit for 15 minutes and rinse them thoroughly. The bristles will be smooth and sleek, great for precision work.

Squeeze ginger root through a press for one tablespoon of juice. Mix all of the ingredients together and apply to scalp. Let it dry before shampooing. Repeat three times a week. (Recipe adapted from www.longlocks.com.)

Jojoba Hot Oil Hair Treatment

Jojoba oil contains antioxidant properties that help protect hair follicles from damage as well as add luster and fight dandruff.

2 teaspoon jojoba oil 1 teaspoon organic soybean oil or organic sunflower oil

Combine ingredients then warm gently on low heat. Test temperature on inside of forearm. Massage mixture into hair. Wrap hair in a hot towel or cover with shower cap or plastic wrap for 15 minutes. Shampoo and rinse out. Recipe may be doubled for very long hair. (Recipe adapted from www.longlocks.com.)

Spritz your citrus Stem sprays juice directly from the fruit

By Beth Sitzler

Summertime calls for lounging by the pool and enjoying refreshing beverages and meals full of refreshing citrus flavor.

Not only is citrus just the tart, light taste your palate craves in the heat, there are also several nutritional benefits.

Oranges, for example, are high in vitamin C, which provide antioxidant protection against cancer-causing free radicals and helps boost immune system function. Also, oranges help fight against inflammatory conditions, such as osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis and asthma.

Grapefruit, a subtropical citrus tree fruit, is also an excellent source of vitamin C. The fruit also is rich in lycopene, a carotenoid phytonutrient that has anti-tumor qualities and has been shown to help reduce the risk of prostate cancer.

Lemons are a natural diuretic and can help reduce swelling, inflammation and edema. When mixed with hot water, lemon juice can relieve an upset stomach or heartburn. The oils of the lemon are also beneficial for astringent, detoxifying, antiseptic, antifungal and calming properties.

Limes contain a dietary fiber that lowers the risk of digestive complications as well as total blood cholesterol levels. Limes contain vitamin K, which is essential to healthy blood clotting.

These are just a few of the many benefits of consuming citrus in your daily meals.

If you want to increase your citrus intake, there are countless dishes and drink options you can turn to. There are even a few gadgets out there to make it simpler, such as the Stem.

What is it?

Touting the motto "Tab for flavor," the Stem is the perfect way to get the taste of fresh lemon, or other citrus, without any sort of mess. Invented by Timothy Houle and manufactured by Quirky, the Stem allows users to spray the juice of any citrus directly from the fruit.

Eliminating the need to cut and squeeze the fruit you want to cook with, the Stem is a sprayer inserted into the top of the citrus. The easy-to-push pump creates a seal around the fruit, stopping any juice from squirting out and onto your fingers.

Not only is the Stem an easy and mess-free way to get a spritz of fresh citrus, it also eliminates seeds falling into your dish and uneven flavoring. Plus, it's a fun gadget to show off to friends and family.

How does it work?

The taste of orange, lemon, lime and tangerine has never been simpler to obtain.

Simply insert the plastic sprayer into one of the ends of fruit. Serrated teeth around the green end allow it to go in with little force.

When it's inserted, begin pressing down on the pump. The juice will be sprayed easily and distribute evenly.

When using the Stem, be sure to knead or pinch the fruit every 10 to 15 squirts or so. This will help keep the juices moving without making multiple puncture holes, which isn't recommended.

The Stem can be stored inside the piece of citrus for a short time. When the fruit has been drained, remove the gadget and wash it by hand in hot, soapy water.

Measuring less than 4 inches in length, the Stem can be stored in a drawer until it is needed again.

Where can it be found?

The Stem can be found around town at stores such as Target and Bed, Bath & Beyond, as well as online at www.quirky.com.

How much does it cost?

The Stem costs about $5.

Set the scene, and the table, for a summer party

Simply put, summer is entertaining season. Patio parties come together at the last minute and long-planned events fill up the calendar months in advance.

No matter whether you're having an impromptu gathering or an invitation-only celebration, focusing on the flavors and sensory delights of summer will make your party a success, without demanding too much of your time.

The heart of any party is the food and drinks you serve. Summer offers hosts an array of delicious options unlike any other season - when else can you find as much variety and such good quality, often right from the farm?

Let that spirit of simplicity guide your approach to putting together a meal, and you'll find that easy-to-prepare recipes can be real crowd-pleasers.

With a trip to the farmers market and a stop at the grocery store, you can get inspiration, as well as all the ingredients you'll need. As you shop, consider what's in season, and when buying things that are available all year, such as cheese and meats, look for sustainable options that focus on quality, sustainability and letting natural, unadorned flavors shine through.

Grass-fed beef steaks and handcrafted Salemville Amish blue cheeses are two simple ingredients that, when combined, make a showstopping centerpiece. Add grilled vegetables adorned with herbs and a seasonal salad with creamy dressing for a perfectly balanced plate that's easy to put together and focuses on what's in season.

For drinks and desserts, turn your attention to fruits that are ripening at the moment, which provide maximum flavor with minimum effort. Lemonade with mint and blueberries is a refreshing thirst-quencher for the height of summer, and grilled peaches make a great stand-alone dessert.

While it's hard to predict the weather for a pre-planned party, for spur-of-the-moment gatherings, make the most of the weather by choosing a scenic location. Your yard can be the perfect backdrop, but you can also pack up the ingredients and head to a local park and enjoy the natural setting as well as a glowing sunset.

To keep your home's outdoor spaces partyready, don't underestimate the power of container gardening. Pots overflowing with bright flowers and fun foliage soften the space and make it feel naturally festive without having to decorate.

Use pots of different heights for a staggered effect and a variety of plants, but keep in mind that establishing a theme, whether it's chartreuse and pink or emerald green and orange, can make the look more cohesive.

Enjoying summer is as easy as stepping outside and setting your table with the fresh foods of the season. Try these recipes for your salad and steak courses and you'll be preparing fussfree dishes that perfectly capture the essence of good entertaining.

Have a peachy Memorial Day Green Chile and Peach Cobbler For the topping: 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

Sweet fruit mixed with spice great for summer

Sunny Conley Chile Knights

There are plenty of things to do in our enchanting region for Memorial Day weekend: camping, boating, swimming, going to the movies, wine fests and more.

Memorial Day also characteristically ushers in summer vacation season that's chock full with opportunities to go on picnics and to host "grill outs." Burgers, hot dogs, steaks and ribs come to mind.

Favorite accompaniments of mine include recipes that call for sweet and juicy peaches everything from smoothies to chilled soup to salsas to cobblers, all of which are fired up and made sassy with smidgeons of chile pepper flavor. Peaches paired with peppers. Yummy!

Spicy Chilled Peach Soup

- 2 1/2 pounds (3 to 5 cups) peaches,
- peeled and coarsely chopped 1 (16-ounce) container regular
- vanilla low-fat yogurt
- 2 cups orange juice
- 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Blend or process the peaches until smooth. Blend in yogurt and remaining ingredients. Cover and refrigerate at least two hours. Suggested garnishes: fresh mint sprigs and/or fresh peach slices. Makes 4 servings.

Peachy Good Smoothie

4 ripe small bananas, skinned and frozen 1 cup peaches, frozen

2 to 3 ice cubes

1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla

Dash cinnamon, nutmeg and New Mexico red chile powder

Gently blend and pulverize frozen bananas and peaches and ice in a food processor for about 30 seconds. Blend in spices and serve. Makes 6 1-cup servings.

Sautéed Peaches

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 3 large, ripe yellow-flesh peaches, sliced
- 1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon 1/4 teaspoon habanero powder
- 1 tablespoon brandy or other
- favorite liqueur, optional

In a skillet, melt butter then add the sliced peaches. Sauté the peaches over medium heat until they're heated through but not overcooked. Natural juices will form in the cooking process. Add lemon juice, brown sugar, cinnamon, habanero powder and brandy, if desired, lightly tossing until flavorings are well blended. Serve over pork or chicken. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Peach Habanero Chile Sauce

2 tablespoons butter 2 tablespoons olive oil

1 cup onion, finely chopped 3 garlic cloves, finely chopped 1 shallot, finely chopped 1 habanero chile, finely chopped 2 peaches, peeled and chopped 1/2 cup white wine 1 (8-ounce) bottle clam juice 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper 1 tablespoon cornstarch

1/2 cup water Melt butter with oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Add onion and sauté 3 minutes or until onion is tender. Add garlic and shallot, and cook 1 minute. Add habanero chile; cook 1 minute. Stir in peaches, and cook 3 minutes. Add wine; cook 3 minutes. Stir in clam juice, and cook 2 more minutes.

Process peach mixture in a food processor or blender until chunky, stopping to scrape down sides; stir in salt and pepper.

Place peach mixture in a saucepan over medium-high heat. Stir together cornstarch and water, and stir cornstarch mixture into peach mixture. Bring to a boil; boil 1 minute or until thickened, stirring constantly. Serve over favorite baked or grilled fish. Makes 3 cups. (Recipe adapted from Coastal Living, October 2005)

Sweet Peach Smoothie Pie

1 (3-ounce) package peach Jell-O 2/3 cups boiling water 1 cup vanilla ice cream 1 cup diced peaches, drained, canned or fresh 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper 12 ounces Cool Whip

1 baked pie shell, 9-inch regular crust or graham cracker

Add ingredients in order. Mix together thoroughly. Reserve 2 tablespoons of Cool Whip for garnish. Garnish with peach slices and Cool Whip. Keep refrigerated until ready to serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Peach Perfect Serrano Salsa

2 mangos, peeled, seeded and chopped 2 small peaches, halved, pitted

- and cut into 1/2-inch dice
- 4 tomatoes, chopped 1 white onion, diced
- 1 red bell pepper, diced
- 1 yellow bell pepper, diced
- 1 or 2 serrano peppers, stemmed,
- seeded and chopped
- 1 cup fresh pineapple, diced

Peach Perfect Serrano Pepper Salsa spooned For the filling: 8 cups peaches, sliced and peeled 1 Anaheim chile pepper, stemmed, over pork or chicken is simply heavenly.

2 tablespoons white sugar, or to taste

red pepper, yellow pepper, serrano peppers,

in the garlic, lime juice, salt, sugar and water. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour before

1 teaspoon salt

3/4 cup water

2 tablespoons lime juice

2 tablespoons flour Zest of one lemon

seeded and chopped

1/2 teaspoon baking soda

1/2 cup buttermilk 1 tablespoon cinnamon sugar

3/4 cup sugar

1/2 cup sugar

6 tablespoon butter, room temperature

2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Combine flour, baking powder and baking soda. In another large bowl, combine butter and sugar. Mix with a hand blender (or in a standing mixer) for about 3 minutes. Beat in eggs until thoroughly mixed. Add the dry ingredients in 3 batches, alternating with two batches of buttermilk.

Combine all ingredients for the filling, then spread in a 9-by-13 inch baking dish.

Spoon the topping over the peaches in mounds, leaving space between each one. Liberally sprinkle the topping with the cinnamon sugar. Bake for 40 minutes. Allow to cool for at least 10 minutes before serving.

What to do on date night

A man's guide to high-impact, low-fuss romantic meals

It's time to banish that old stereotype that the only guys who Martini offers a few tips: can cook are professional chefs.

Men, even if your culinary expertise starts with boiling water and ends at the microwave, you can serve a dazzling one-pot meal for your significant other, your best buds or just yourself.

"Dining well doesn't have to involve a trip to a restaurant, or even a lot of work at home," said Mike Martini, winemaker at California's Louis M. Martini Winery. "I don't like fussing around in the kitchen after a day in the winery, but nothing beats a special, home-cooked meal to end the day.

According to Martini, it's not too difficult to elevate a simple meal to the level of a gourmet experience. Ambiance, a well-set table, a good one-pot recipe and the right wine are all it takes.

Set the mood

Hosting a football party is a far cry from an intimate dinner for two. If it's game day, dust off the sports paraphernalia, find some casual serving dishes in team colors, and you're off and running. For a romantic occasion, however, develop a sophisticated ambiance with music, lighting and decor.

Start with an attractive table top. A tablecloth adds a touch of refinement while protecting furniture and easing post-meal cleanup. Add a floral centerpiece to do double duty as a decoration and as a gift for her. Light some candles to enhance the mood.

Finally, follow the rules of proper place settings. Use your good dishes and set them on opposite sides of the table, or side-by-side for greater intimacy. Place knives and spoons to the right of the plate and forks to the left. Turn the sharp side of knives toward the plate, and only include utensils you'll actually be using for the meal.

Create the perfect pairing

Whatever meal you decide to serve, there's a sophisticated wine to complement the culinary experience. For ideas on what to pour, talk to the wine steward at your local grocer or wine shop. Many stores also suggest recipes to pair with their featured wines.

For a can't-miss meal, go with an easy yet impressive dish, like braised beef short ribs. Simple to prepare and delicious, one-pot short ribs require minimal fuss and cleanup and will leave your guests impressed.

Braised Beef Short Ribs

2 tablespoons coarse sea salt

3 fresh rosemary sprigs 2 tablespoons fresh sage leaves Freshly ground pepper 4 1/2 pounds beef short ribs, well trimmed 1/2 cup corn or grape seed oil 4 cups beef broth, divided 4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, plus additional for potatoes

- 2 cups onion, chopped 1 1/2 cups carrots, finely chopped 1 1/2 cups celery, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup tomato paste
- 1 (750-mililiter) bottle bold red wine, such as Cabernet Sauvignon 6 to 8 large, white-skinned potatoes

Grind together the bay leaf, sea salt, rosemary and sage. Sprinkle ribs with pepper and 3 1/2 teaspoons of the herb-salt mixture. Heat 1/2 cup oil in heavy large pot over high heat. Working in batches, add beef and brown well, turning occasion-ally, about eight minutes per batch. Using tongs, transfer beef to large bowl.

Pour off oil from pot. Add 1 cup broth to drippings in pot and bring to boil, scraping up any browned bits. Pour deglazed pan juices into small bowl. Heat 4 tablespoons oil in same pot over medium-high heat. Add onion, carrots, and celery; saute until beginning to brown, about 12 minutes. Add tomato paste and saute two minutes. Add deglazed pan juices and bring to simmer. Return beef and any accumulated juices to pot. Add wine and remaining 3 cups broth and bring to boil. Reduce heat to low.

Season with pepper. Cover and cook until beef is very tender, stirring occasionally, about two to three hours. About one hour prior to being done, place potatoes in the pot and mix well. When done, spoon off any extra fat from surface.
