CHS campus 'impressive'

Community gets an eyeful of new school

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

When 15-year-old Oscar Talamantes was asked what he thought of Centennial High School during a tour of the new $110 million campus Thursday, July 26, the future sophomore Hawk could only say, "It's amazing!"

His mother, Luz Talamantes, was more impressed with how the sprawling campus is contained with security fences and gates, she said.

"I came here today to see how safe the school was," she said. "It's so far out of town. You're out here in the desert and you know how kids are."

Seeing the security steps in the school's design, along with assurances from the staff about how they plan to keep on top of the students, put her more at ease.

"I'm feeling a bit a better about this," she said.

Centennial, located at 1950 S. Sonoma Ranch Blvd., just east of the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, is currently accessed from Dripping Springs Road. The first day of classes for high schools is Monday, Aug. 13, and Centennial is expecting 1,165 students to arrive.

To introduce parents, students and interested residents to the new high school, Centennial and district staff gave tours throughout Thursday.

Also taking the tour in a group led by architect Gary Yabumoto was 15-year-old Cynthia Carrete, who will be one of the school's more than 175 juniors. The rest are sophomores and freshmen, but no seniors the first year.

Carrete said she chose to transfer from Oñate High School because she heard that media will be a big part of the school's career focus.

The school's main academic areas are divided into four wings, with the first being a freshman academy for first-year students. The other three wings are centered around different career interests – not by grade levels, something that people were asking questions about on the tour.

Centennial is designed using a "schools within a school" concept with each of the wings will be like their own "campus,"

At the center of the Zia by stairs leading into the mall is a time capsule. Centennial will open for classes on Monday, Aug. 13, with 1,165 students expected to attend.

Interchange work kicks up concerns

NMDOT predicts revamped off-ramps to be ready by April

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

With some of the noisiest parts nearly done on the major overhaul of the interchange for interstates 10 and 25, the New Mexico Department of Transportation (NMDOT) is trying to keep traffic flowing.

Work on the $53.8 million project won't be completed until April 2013. The work will reconfigure the linking lanes between the interstate freeways with two new bridges on a raised lane for traffic from 1-10 to I-25, replacing a hard-angled westbound exchange that officials say caused large vehicles to easily overturn.

To create the more gradual-but-sweeping interchange lanes, the revamp includes setting back Las Alturas Drive and Stern Road south of Cholla Road.

Since the project began in late April, residents have raised some concerns along the way, and NMDOT officials say they have made

Judge rejects feds groundwater suit

Federal attempt at control worried local governments

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

A lawsuit that some lawmakers claimed would give the federal government unprecedented control over groundwater was thrown out by a district judge in Las Cruces Wednesday, Aug. 1.

Judge James Wechsler ruled the federal government's water rights along the lower Rio Grande were limited to the surface water.

The ruling came after a daylong hearing in which a slew of local government and water management entities gave positions on the possible effect of the federal claim.

The lawsuit became a topic of public interest after regional and state officials told a legislative committee meeting in Las Cruces Monday, July 30, that it could have sweeping consequences if the federal government won.

The lawsuit has its roots in a settlement between New Mexico and Chevron/Molycorp related to groundwater contamination at

Interchange

The first part of the project included demolition of the old concrete road, which was broken up at a temporary plant near the site so the rubble could be recycled as fill for the now raised ramps, said Leo Montoya, project manager.

Initially, there was crushing at night, but those nighttime operations were limited after residents complained about the noise. There is still work on the interchange being done at night with the contractor working roughly 20 hours a day, Montoya said.

The contractor, AS Horner, has the incentive of reaping a $46,000 a day bonus – limited to $2 million – if it finishes earlier than April 2013, said engineer Jerry Paz of Molzen Corbin at a recent public meeting with residents.

At that meeting, held Thursday, July 26, residents close to the expansion work on the two roads flanking where I-10 switches to I-25, also had concerns about how well traffic noise will be contained after the work is completed.

Montoya said the new interchange lanes will be coated with a material designed to help vehicles stay on the road better, as well as reduce traffic noise.

Some residents asked why only a section of sound wall was being planned for an area near a trailer court. NMDOT officials said there is limited budget for sound barriers, as well as aesthetics of the walls – though there will be images on the exposed walls of roadrunners, quail and yuccas with an earth-toned color scheme.

The project is being made possible by the second phase of American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funds, so the need for sound walls is determined by population density via federal standards, the NMDOT officials said.

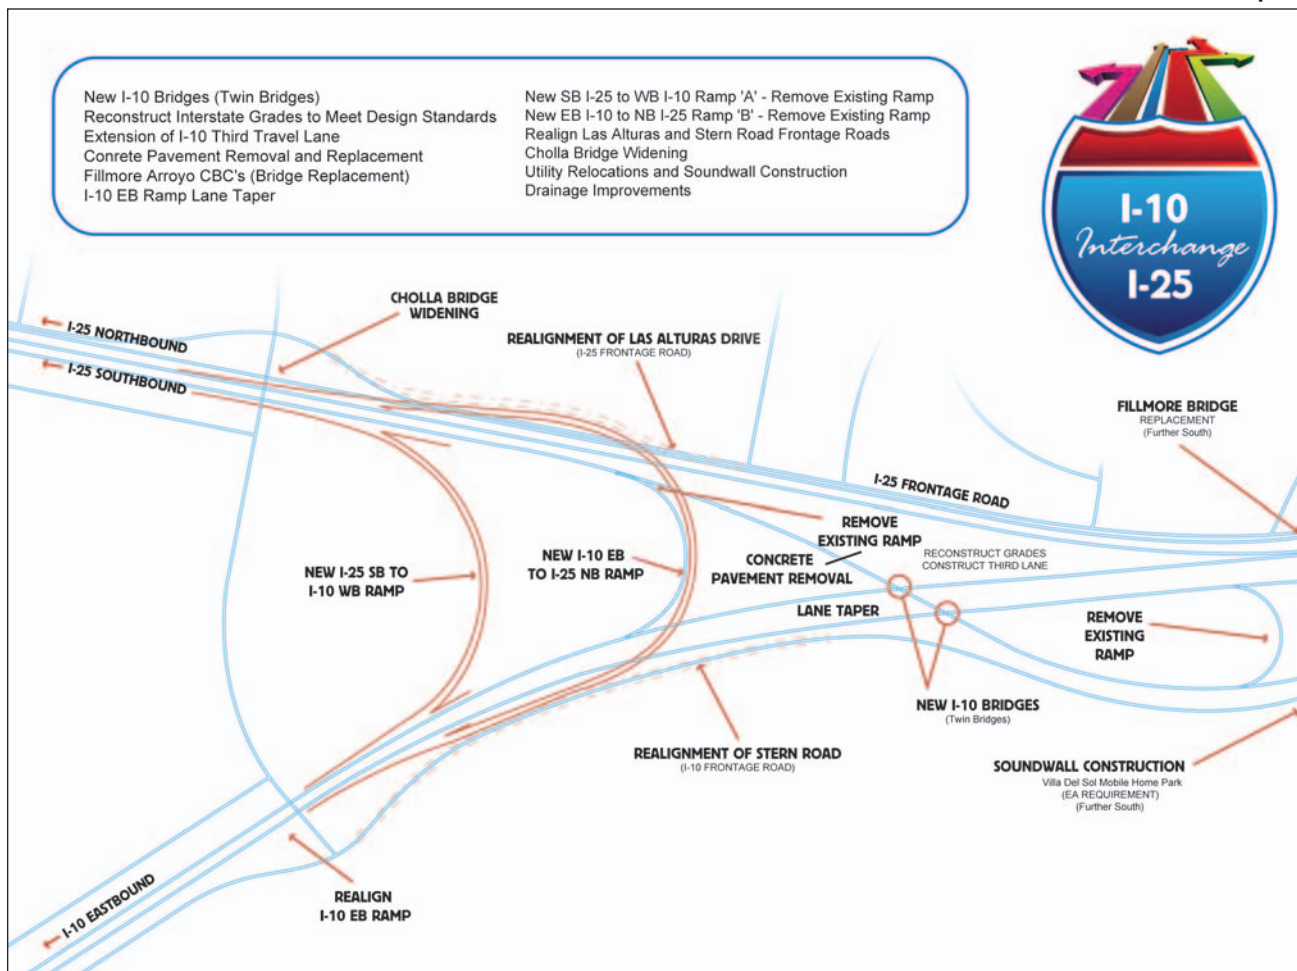

With schools opening in a few weeks, some residents are concerned about the increased traffic to the “frontage roads” from Mesilla Valley Christian Schools and the new Centennial High School.

Work update

As work progresses, motorists will encounter heavy equipment and field personal working near moving traffic. Montoya said one thing NMDOT has learned from previous projects is to keep the detours stable as long as possible, rather “switching back and forth all the time.”

Still, NMDOT encourages the public to proceed with extreme caution, and to follow traffic alerts as they are posted.

The two-way northbound and southbound traffic is using detour crossovers for construction of the I-25 northbound bridge over Cholla Road. The completed southbound bridge for the new south-to-west ramp is open to traffic. The northbound lanes have been reduced to one lane approaching Cholla for construction of new flyover bridge support.

Las Cruces Bulletin illustration by Rafael Torres

This graphic shows how the new interchange of interstate highways 10 and 25 will require setting back Las Alturas Drive and Stern Road to make room for new connecting ramps.

For traffic heading east and west, lanes in both directions have been reduced to one lane intermittently for work in the median and on the shoulders.

On Stern, the traffic is on the new detour closer to the houses for construction of retaining walls for the flyover bridge over I-10 and the new east-to-north ramp. This traffic pattern will be in place until end of August.

Las Alturas traffic will be switched to the new alignment for the construction of the new east-to-north flyover ramp.

This project will be progressing in stages where updates will be posted at www.dot.state.nm.us/InterchangeI10-I25.html or the NMDOT road advisory site at www.nmroads.com.

Take advantage of tax-free shopping

Back-to-school time is always a time for a fresh start

Richard Coltharp
That's the Way of the World

This weekend, Aug. 3-5, is tax-free weekend in New Mexico.

Las Cruces Public Schools begin the week of Aug. 13.

Add those two things together and you get big shopping this weekend in Las Cruces.

This will be the eighth year New Mexico has had a back-to-school tax holiday, to give a break to families feeling the crunch as school starts.

School supplies are a must and, as kids have this pesky habit of growing a few inches every year, there's always the need for new clothes and shoes.

Fortunately, clothes and shoes are among the items that are tax free.

Keep in mind not everything is tax-free this weekend.

Clothes and shoes under $100 are tax-free, but if you plan on purchasing a pair of Nike Air Jordan Lite men's basketball shoes at $170 a pop or some Manolo Blahnik pumps for $800, you'll be paying the tax on those.

If you plan to shop tax free, make a point to do it locally here in Las Cruces, particularly with our locally owned businesses. Several local business owners are stocking up on school supplies to accommodate Las Cruces.

Our state leaders had the wisdom to schedule the tax-free weekend two weeks before Texas' tax-free weekend. That means we might even draw some El Pasoans to our side of the border this weekend.

Our Las Cruces businesses could use a bump like that.

Here's a tip, though, if you're considering hopping the border when Texas' tax-free weekend rolls around: Any tax savings you might see will be eaten up by the gas expense driving over there.

Susan Palmer, marketing manager at Mesilla Valley Mall, says tax-free weekend is "probably bigger than Black Friday weekend."

Business Products Center Vice President Chris Drumm said his store is giving away free backpacks to the first 500 students to his store on El Paseo Road. The store will also sell discounted packages of school supplies, tailored to the Las Cruces Public Schools requirements. The idea is to compete with the big-box stores.

"One of the biggest things is keeping the money in the community," Drumm said.

Certain computer items are also tax free, which likely means increased traffic for Best Buy.

"It's bigger than Black Friday," said Harry Day, Best Buy's operations manager.

Even without the tax-free discounts, back-to-school is one of the best times of the year.

Every child approaches the return of school with different emotions, but all are glad to re-unite with old friends and meet new ones.

Every athletic team is undefeated and every student is passing. Those things change, of course, as the school year develops, but we can all relate to the opportunity for a fresh start.

This year brings an extra buzz to Las Cruces as Centennial High School gets its first start ever.

One of our cover stories spotlights this impressive facility.

It's beautiful and intriguing enough to make me want to go back to high school. Almost.

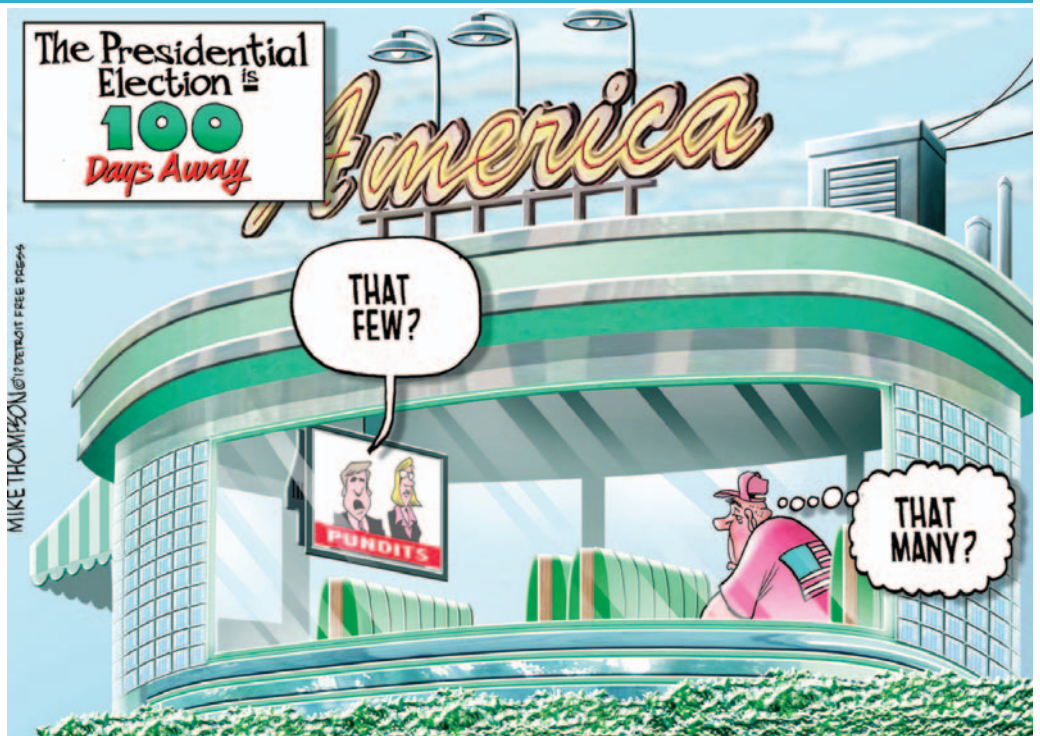

In addition to the primary and secondary schools, New Mexico State University is nearing its fall term as well. We know our local businesses can breathe a little easier as soon as all the students are back in place. We all look forward to that.

Let's offer all of our local kids encouragement for a great school year. Thanks to the efforts of a lot of people, dropout rates are decreasing. It's up to us as parents, families and communities to do whatever we can to keep that trend going.

Here's to a fruitful academic year, and the hope that, come springtime, we can be saying "Hats off" to as many graduates as we possibly can.

HARRY DAY,
Best Buy

Letters to the Editor

Tea party is real target

I don't believe the majority of people were "upset" when the Electric Light Parade judges awarded the grand prize to the tea party float, which displayed a Confederate flag as part of New Mexico territorial history.

I agree that judges and the parade committee should look at the floats ahead of time. If there is something that may be "offensive," they should simply ask the group to remove that part of the float.

Councillor Gill Sorg's comment was not very thoughtful. A "float full of nudists" is in no way comparable to a float with a Confederate flag on it. I did not appreciate Councillor Nathan Small saying that "the award did not reflect the values of the community."

Who determines the values of our community?

Freedom should be the same for all, including the tea party.

Probably the real reason a few people got upset is because the award went to the tea party. Some in our city have let this become a "tempest in a teapot" (no pun intended) instead of just accepting the decision of the judges and moving on.

Elaine Rafferty

Apology needed

Parade has become a national disgrace.

What does the tea party intend to do next, display the swastika and the Nazi flag on future national celebrations? Will they sneak their hateful symbols at the Las Cruces Veterans Memorial Park where American patriots of all colors, race, religion and ethnic backgrounds are memorialized including those who fought and died in the Civil War?

Just what gave the tea party the right to promote a history of racial hatred and bigotry in New Mexico, which fought and defeated a racist army which came to enslave an American territory which was free of slavery at the time?

What the tea party did in displaying their hateful symbol was to insult the memory of brave Union soldiers who fought and died to keep the great southwest a the nation free of slavery and racism.

For city officials to allow groups to display such hateful racist symbols, and even more insulting to give them a prize package, on events such as the Fourth of July says much about the kind of people and society America has become, doesn't it? In any civilized society, freedom of speech is one thing – promoting hatred is another.

The tea party not only needs to apologize to the citizens of Las Cruces and surrounding communities but also to re-educate themselves of what America and the Fourth of July means to many.

Some August occasions worthy of remembrance

Final month of the summer is lacking in holidays, but is full of significant history

Jay Miller
Inside the Capitol

Welcome to August. The month has no holidays. Maybe because so many people already are on vacation.

But August has many days to remember, especially for New Mexicans. Some of them could be holidays, but we just don't celebrate them for one reason or another.

Every elementary school child knows Christopher Columbus arrived in the New World on Oct. 12, 1492. But he set sail on Aug. 3 of that year.

They still are teaching elementary students that Columbus was the guy who figured out the world is round. But we have learned over the years that when he set sail, he had no doubt he wasn't going to fall off the edge of the Earth.

Many people already knew the world was round and some even knew others had already explored new lands to the west. The only question was how far west.

It was August 1598 when Juan de Oñate and his colonists settled in northern New Mexico near Española.

It was Aug. 10, 1680, when the pueblos, with the help of Apaches, decided they didn't like Spanish rule. Some 400 colonists and 21

Franciscan missionaries were killed. The rest fled down the Rio Grande to south of El Paso. It is said to be the first and only instance of Native Americans overthrowing their conquerors.

It was August 1846 when U.S. troops, under the command of Gen. Stephen Watts Kearny, invaded New Mexico. On Aug. 22, Kearny declared all residents to be American citizens.

“ Little Boy and Fat Man were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, assuring a quick end to World War II. ”

On Aug. 6 and 9, Little Boy and Fat Man were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, assuring a quick end to World War II. The dates are not celebrated in the United States. They are mourned by the Japanese and American peace activists.

At the time, it seemed to our leaders like the thing to do. High school graduates were being drafted and quickly sent to the Pacific to prepare for a land invasion expected to take a million lives.

Scientists and engineers from Los Alamos were sent to the island of Tinian in the Northern Marianas, near Guam and Saipan, to prepare the bombs and the modified B-29s that would carry them.

We knew that American prisoners held in Japan, including 900 members of the New Mexico National Guard, would be shot as soon as a land invasion commenced. But when the two big ones dropped, prison guards throughout Japan ran for their homes and never returned.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Smoke in the air

Every summer, we watch hundreds of thousands of acres of forest burn. We try and blame the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the pine-bark beetle, untended campfires, tossed cigarettes or arson.

As I listen to folks anguish and wring their hands, I have to remind myself it is all part of nature's cycle in the West.

Smokey Bear admonished us as kids, "Only you can prevent forest fires." But is that really true? On a centennial scale, certainly on a millennial scale, it seems fire is inevitable. You can only put it off for so long.

The stages of a forest's growth go from seedling, to pole (or sapling), to young, to mature and to old. Our Western pine forests can reach 140 years. But eventually they will succumb to fire, storm, disease, insects or time, but they do succumb. Lightning strikes a match in a mature forest and cleans house. Then the cycle starts over.

Enter man: Homo sapiens. It's only been in the last 200 years of our continent's existence that forest fires have become an inconvenience to humans. We became civilized and presumed we could encroach on the forest's natural cycle. We have found that unless they are completely destroyed there will always be a threat. So that's what we do, we pave it.

There are many examples of natural cycles and extreme changes that give man pause to question his own influence. Build a city below sea level, dam a river, put a freeway over an earthquake fault or live in the desert. Stay there long enough, and Earth will try and take it back.

We have given much attention to global climate change. Duh, in the grand scale our Earth has frozen over and heated up on a regular basis. We worry man is polluting the atmosphere. It's a bit pretentious to think that man, over the millennia, can have much effect.

If man disappeared like the dinosaurs, in a short 1,000 years the Earth would begin to putrefy, erode, digest and bury our human footprints. Oh, the Sierra Club's National headquarters in San Francisco might last longer than a cow path in a wildlife refuge, but sooner or later it will become dust.

And the floods and fires and earthquakes and volcanoes and ice ages will carry on. This is no consolation to those who have been victims of nature's power. We can only sympathize, but man is stubborn.

No doubt we will continue to try and tame acts of nature with our own unnatural acts. So, with a tip of the hat to the many thousands of firefighters risking their lives to protect man-made possessions, fire is simply Earth renewing itself, as it has since Genesis.

The mountain outside my living room window is on fire as I write this. It's part of a National Forest. We moved the cows out of danger. Let 'er burn.

Even before the two bombs dropped, Japan had been making efforts toward ending the war. But there were still holdouts in the Japanese high command that either wanted to fight to the end or to bargain for keeping the lands they had taken.

The bombs hastened the decision to surrender. Six days after the second bomb was dropped, Japan surrendered. It was high noon, Aug. 15, in Tokyo and 6 p.m. the day before in Washington, D.C.

There was great rejoicing nationwide. Next to the photo of the Iwo Jima flag raising, the picture of a sailor sweeping a nurse off her feet on Times Square is probably the most beloved in American history. I was a 7-year-old in Las Cruces watching the celebrating.

But the yearly celebrations didn't last. Although the bombs killed no more than our nightly saturation bombings of Japanese cities, the radiation deaths and illnesses that followed ensured that nuclear devices have not been used in warfare since.

August also is the anniversary of New Mexico native Smokey Bear being adopted as our national forest fire prevention symbol in 1944. Even Smokey had a war connection.

All our able-bodied men were fighting elsewhere. And Japan was tying small bombs to gas balloons and launching them into the winds headed for our West Coast forests. Some of them made it. So the American public was alerted to fight forest fires.

One life in the day of a hospital

Competition in Phoenix creates impressive medical system

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

There is no better time to talk about health care than when I am at a hospital intake area a couple of hours away from a heart operation.

This column started the morning of July 17, at the Arizona Heart Hospital in Phoenix. I will not keep you in suspense – I survived the procedure. My heart and I are much better.

The first thought I had that morning: I am so glad I was born in the 20th century and there are treatments when my heart decides to be a bit funky. There was the regular boring beat, ka-thump, ka-thump and then there was the heart deciding to run away at 200 beats a minutes or do the samba. The procedure which, has been available for several decades is an ablation where two wires are threaded up into the heart and the part of the heart that wants to samba is fixed so it does not.

While doing paperwork, I admired how easily John, the concierge at the front desk, got people to the correct place as they completed paperwork and made them feel at ease.

I had an odd thought: I am used to people being quite scared in my radio studio, knowing they are being heard all over New Mexico, when I have no anxiety whatsoever. I caught up with the anxiety index even though I had confidence in the doctor and hospital.

Both my local heart doctor and my sister, who used to work in a Lubbock, Texas, heart clinic, urged me to do this procedure in a place that only did heart procedures.

"Go some place where there is a conga line of patients, three before you, three after, all with the same need," she said.

I am glad I did.

In the couple of days I was at this heart hospital I did not find one thing they did that was not just excellent. I am quite picky and expected to record that they were 92 percent good, which would have been great. I kept watching and never found anything. From the first nurse, Cindi, to the anesthesiologist, Jacob, I kept waiting for that first moment when I would say to myself, that could have been better. It never came.

“What will we give up in quality of service when the government gets involved?”

The aftercare nurse when I woke up, Jella, seem to have done all of this before (obviously many times) and was ahead of me in everything I was thinking. The surgeon, Dr. Swarup, and the physician's assistant Carla were by before and after the procedure and seemed to look right at me, to listen carefully to what I said.

I was impressed.

Somewhere in the last few hours, I said I was quite impressed that this organization was really top notch.

"Michael, there are three other hospitals like us within 30 miles so we have to be excellent," one of the nurses said.

Bingo. Competition leads to better health care.

In the free market of Phoenix with four choices, this hospital had to be excellent or go out of business. Nothing against communities where there really is not any competition, but over the years I have been around non-competing hospitals and know the difference. I understood as I left the facility why my local heart doctor recommended doing the procedure there. Again, perhaps I could have done it closer to home, but the care was oh so excellent.

The question I have been asked most often is how I feel. Much better, thank you. This is something I had needed to do for quite a while and when the pharmacology could no longer tame my dancing heart, this was exactly what the doctor ordered.

I thought about the future when the government gets more involved in our health care. I wonder if an unfeeling bureaucrat in Washington, D. C., someone working for the Internal Revenue Service, would have let me go to Phoenix for this heart treatment. Perhaps not, since there were hospitals closer. What will we give up in quality of service when the government gets involved?

I guess only time will tell. The one thing I know for sure: any time you walk out of a hospital, it is a good day. Amen.

City starts Toastmasters Club

The City of Las Cruces is celebrating the chartering of a Toastmasters Club to help employees develop and improve their communication and leadership skills.

The city government's club, CLC Toastmasters, became an official club on June 18. City employees participate in this club on their own time at a weekly lunch meeting and pay their own dues. The club chartered with 29 members. To celebrate this occasion, the club held its charter ceremony and gala Friday, July 27, in City Hall Council Chambers. A reception followed in the City Hall Lobby.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima welcomed the club members and district officers. Toastmasters International District 23 Gov. Tracie "TK" O'Geary presided over the ceremony.

Founded in 1924, by Dr. Ralph Smedley, Toastmasters International has grown into a global organization with 270,000 members in more than 13,000 clubs, in 116 countries. The most important benefit of membership in Toastmasters is the mutually supportive club environment where members have fun while developing public speaking and leadership skills. As Toastmasters develop and polish their communication skills, they experience increased confidence, greater self-esteem and the ability to relate more effectively with others. Leadership skill sets include learning how to effectively organize and conduct a meeting, introduce speakers, give positive evaluations and think and respond on one's feet.

Besides opportunities in the club environment, there are leadership and speaking opportunities throughout the organization's structure. Like the City of Las Cruces' slogan of "People Helping People," Toastmasters International's Vision is similar:

"Toastmasters International empowers people to achieve their

Shop tax-free this weekend

Gov. Susana Martinez visited the Coronado Mall in Albuquerque Monday, July 30, to announce the state's eighth annual back-to-school tax holiday that will help New Mexico families and teachers save money on supplies as they prepare for the upcoming school year.

From Friday, Aug. 3 until midnight Sunday, Aug. 5, retailers will not collect gross receipts taxes (GRT) on numerous items, such as school supplies, clothing and shoes, computers and computer equipment.

"The beginning of the school year is an exciting time for parents, students and teachers, but buying new supplies can also be a financial challenge," Martinez said. "During these difficult times, the tax holiday will provide some relief to New Mexicans as they prepare for the school year. Getting our children the supplies they need is an important part of ensuring their success in the classroom."

Retail sales during the three-day tax holiday are estimated to increase by up to $25 million statewide with New Mexico families pocketing a savings of $4 million. Non-taxable items include: clothing and footwear $100 and under; school supplies such as pens, paper and other items typically used in a classroom setting $30 and under; computers $1,000 and under; and assorted computer equipment $500 and under. The price limits are for each item – not the total amount spent for all purchases.

During the tax holiday, the law provides a deduction from GRT on qualifying items, effectively allowing retailers to sell the items "tax free." Anyone can take advantage of this program to purchase qualifying items.

For more specific information on the legislation, definitions, types of sales, rain checks, exchanges, refunds, gift cards, layaways, online orders, mail orders and telephone sales, visit the Tax Holiday section on the Taxation and Revenue Department web site at www.tax.newmexico.gov.

Boosting Apollo

Dannenberg's technology used to send Neil Armstrong on flight to the Moon

By Michael Shinabery
New Mexico Museum of Space History

Konrad Dannenberg, born on Aug. 5, 1912, turned 18 the day Neil Armstrong entered the world on Aug. 5, 1930.

Born worlds and cultures apart, President John Kennedy's 1962 challenge to "go to the moon in this decade" merged their paths toward mankind's first venture to a never-before visited world. Among Dannenberg's successes was the Saturn V engine that boosted the Apollo 11 astronauts – Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Michael Collins – moonward on July 16, 1969.

Armstrong grew up on a farm outside of rural Wapakoneta, Ohio and Dannenberg in Saxony, Germany.

"At an early age" Dannenberg became "fascinated by space technology," the website timesonline.co.uk said. Carmaker Fritz von Opel, who "constructed the first rocket-powered car engine in 1928," inspired Dannenberg; as did Max Valier, "an Austrian amateur rocketeer who campaigned for the use of rockets for space flight."

Dannenbergs master's degree was in mechanical engineering. He'd studied "the injection of diesel fuel into engines," www.timesonline.com/uk said. Peenemunde, the German secret facility along the Baltic Coast that built the V-1 and V-2 weapons, made him director of rocket motor development – a far different responsibility from his first military experience. In 1939, the German army had conscripted Dannenberg and assigned him to a "horse-drawn company" in France. The next year, the Army discharged him "as unsuitable for riding horses."

Likewise, flight fascinated Armstrong.

"He built model airplanes and got his student pilot's license on his 16th birthday," Michael Cassutt documented in "Who's Who In Space: The First 25 Years." Without the scholarship the Navy awarded him, however, Armstrong would never have been able to "afford" college.

Armstrong entered Purdue University in 1947 to study aeronautical engineering. By then, Dannenberg had been in the United States for two years. He immigrated on Nov. 16, 1945, according to the World War II document "Ordnance Research and Development Division Suboffice (Rocket) Fort Bliss, Texas." The post-war Operation Paperclip brought Dannenberg and other Germans to El Paso, where they helped the Army develop increasingly advanced rockets at New Mexico's White Sands Proving Ground.

In 1949, the Army relocated the scientists to Huntsville, Ala. The rockets and satellites they built included Explorer 1, launched in January 1958, after the Soviet Union put the world's first artificial satellite, Sputnik, into Earth's orbit. Others included the Redstone rocket that boosted Mercury astronauts, and the Saturn V.

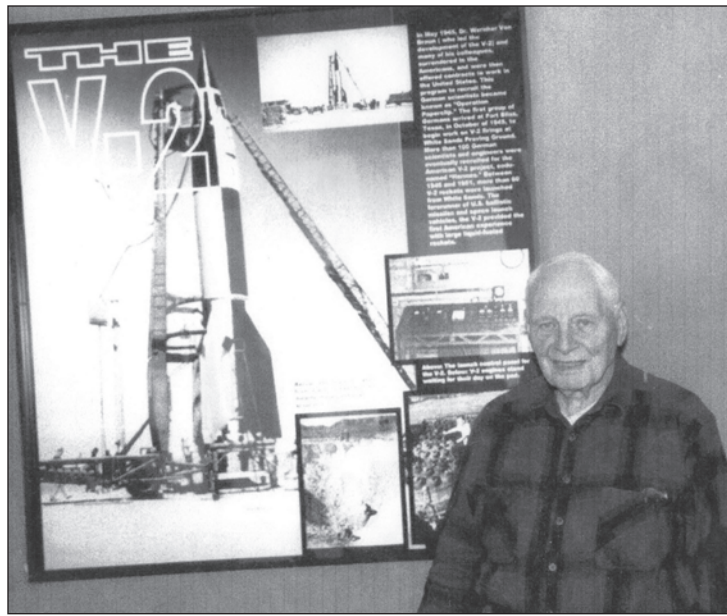

Dannenbergs joined NASA in 1960. Two years later, the agency chose Armstrong in the second group of astronauts.

By then he'd earned a master's degree in aerospace engineering, then his Navy wings, and he'd fought in Korea before becoming a test pilot at Edwards Air Force Base. Armstrong's first NASA mission was commanding Gemini VIII, with pilot Dave Scott, in March 1966. Cassutt said the pair "accomplished the first docking between two spacecraft."

"Neil eased their (capsule) up to the Agena on the third orbit," said "Countdown." The crew then fired "the Agena engine to change their orbit," said "Men From Earth." "The docked Gemini-Agena began rolling, slowly at first, and then with increasingly wild gyrations." Some eight minutes elapsed before Armstrong "managed to get things to slow down enough so they could undock," said "Deke!" (Doherty/1994). "The moment they backed away from the Agena, however, Gemini start(ed) rolling and tumbling" end over end, one revolution every second. Disorientation, dizziness and damage to the spacecraft that could leave them marooned in space, endangered them.

"Armstrong broke the spin by completely shutting down the spacecraft's orbital attitude and maneuver system," said "Men From Earth," "and activating the separate reentry control thrusters."

Around the same time, Dannenberg "found himself at the heart of an immense effort

Konrad Dannenberg posed next to a display on the V2 rocket when he visited the New Mexico Museum of Space History in his later years.

New Mexico Museum of Space History Archives of development" to build the Saturn, timesonline.uk said. Three years later, Armstrong's second mission – the third using the Saturn V booster – put him on the Moon.

"It was a massive undertaking," Dannenberg told Forbes magazine in 2007.

The military had "conceived" the 363-foot tall Saturn "as a long-range military ballistic rocket and a satellite launcher," timesonline.uk said. However, after the Soviet Union launched the first man in space, and Kennedy challenged America to put the first man on the moon, "the search for a rocket to accomplish this took on a new urgency."

The first manned Saturn V began the mission that sent Apollo VIII into lunar orbit on Christmas Eve 1968. Apollos IX and X, both Saturn-boosted, followed, and then the lunar landing mission of which Armstrong had to wrest control at literally the last minute. Boulders were strewn across the designated touchdown site, and a computer malfunction almost caused an abort.

"Neil was flying, looking for a boulder-free spot. It's fair to say people were holding their breath," astronaut Bruce McCandless said in the article "Landing on the Moon: Apollo 11, The Untold Story" (May 27, 2009), posted on www.popularmechanics.com.

"Every flying machine has its own unique characteristics, some good, some not so good. Pilots naturally fly the craft in such a manner as to take advantage of its good characteristics and avoid the areas where it is not so good," Armstrong said in the article. "In the case of the lunar module, surprisingly, it flew much more smoothly than I had expected based on all the simulator work we had done. It was a welcome surprise."

Dannenbergs spent his last NASA years "working on (the) space station design" before retiring in 1973, said his obituary posted at www.guardian.co.uk. Dannenberg died in 2009, at age 96.

Armstrong, in his introduction to "Moon Shot," characterized the U.S. and Soviet Union's Space Race posturing thusly: "Technological leadership was the key to demonstrating ideological superiority. Each invested enormous resources in ever more spectacular space achievements. ... It was a competition unmatched outside the state of war."

Spaceport board picks T or C welcome center

Best Hatch location still being sought

The New Mexico Spaceport Authority (NMSA) board selected a site Wednesday, Aug. 1, for the Sierra County Spaceport Welcome Center in Truth or Consequences, N.M.

A site owned by the City of T or C was chosen by the NMSA Welcome Center Site Source Selection Committee and approved by the NMSA Board.

Meanwhile, the committee opted against selecting the only proposed location for the Welcome Center in Hatch for not adequately meeting the criteria of the Welcome Center Site Selection Request for Proposals (RFP).

For the Sierra County center, the selection committee recommended the board select a 6.254 acre parcel about half a mile off Interstate 25 Exit 75.

The site was selected based on its close proximity to and visibility from I-25, low cost and strong value to the State of New Mexico. The purchase price of the land from the City of T or C was $151,195.

The location was selected out of six sites that were submitted to the Source Selection Committee through an RFP issued by the NMSA on May 17. Two of the proposals received were not evaluated due to their locations outside the perimeters of the city – a requirement of both the RFP and an Memorandum of Understanding between NMSA and Sierra County.

“This site, located just off of I-25 on the way into the T or C downtown area, is a win-win for the whole community,” said T or C Mayor John Mulcahy.

The NMSA Welcome Center Source Selection Committee only received and reviewed one proposal for a 6-acre site in Hatch and recommended no contract award at this time due to the low score the site received.

Shortcomings include a lack of access roads, utilities and other infrastructure to the site, the low visibility from I-25 going north, and the site’s location in a flood plain.

The NMSA board approved the recommendation to make no awards for a Hatch site.

“The NMSA will continue to work with the Village of Hatch to identify a suitable Spaceport America Welcome Center site,” said NMSA Executive Director Christine Anderson.

“ This site ... is a win-win for the whole community. ”

JOHN MULCAHY,

Lawsuit

a mine by Questa in northern New Mexico. In the lawsuit, the federal government was claiming it had "superior" groundwater rights, said state Rep. Joseph Cervantes, who chaired the Legislature's Water and Natural Resources Committee meeting in Las Cruces.

There has been federal government involvement in water issues when the water crosses state line, Cervantes said, but states have traditionally been given the primary control over ground water. The argument has now spilled over to water rights of surface water from the Rio Grande to farmers because of how irrigation recharges underground aquifers.

From the Office of the State Engineer and Elephant Butte Irrigation District to the City of Las Cruces and New Mexico State University, legal briefs were filed in opposition to the lawsuit.

Also at play is the prolonged drought, forcing officials to clarify who owns what water and how much, which is complicated by the farmers needing to pump more groundwater into their fields with less irrigation water available from the Rio Grande, which must also be shared with Texas and Mexico.

D.L. Sanders, chief counsel for the Office of State Engineer, told the Albuquerque Journal that the federal government's claim could give farmers first claim to water line. The arguments in court cover legal issues reaching back to before New Mexico's statehood and calls into question the Bureau of Reclamation's ability to supply water to farmers because it doesn't have the ability to control groundwater beneath the fields.

The Western Governors' Association, however, is citing existing case law in a 1935 federal decision in California based on language in the Desert Land Act of 1877 that "non-navigable waters" are public domain and thereby under the control of states.

New Mexico's argument with the federal government is not unique, Cervantes said, but is being fought in other courtrooms throughout the Western states.

In a letter to Interior Secretary Ken Salazar and Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack, the Western Governors' Association states that the "ramifications of such legal position extend to the very heart of the Western states' exclusive ownership and/or management and control of the groundwater resources within their respective boundaries."

Las Cruces Utilities Director Jorge Garcia told the committee that federal control of groundwater would make it difficult for the city to plan future water usage.

Some legislators vented their frustrations with federal government. State lawmakers – both Democrats and Republicans – are accusing the federal government of overreaching its authority.

Federal officials responded that the lawmakers are overstating the reach of what the federal government is trying to achieve in the lawsuit and there is plenty of case law limiting water rights for farming.

TANF clothing allowance released

Martinez touts support need in NM

Gov. Susana Martinez said distribution of the annual children's clothing allowance, which provides a $50 payment per qualifying New Mexico child, began Wednesday, Aug. 1.

Through the Human Services Department and the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program, the allowance to families helps them buy clothes for the upcoming school year.

"This is one way in which we can ensure that our neediest children have everything they need to be able to focus in the classroom," Martinez said. "Proper clothing makes it easier for students to concentrate and makes it more likely that they will have a successful school year."

The Human Services Department (HSD) has allocated $1 million for the children's clothing allowance this year.

Preliminary estimates indicate that more than 16,000 children will receive the $50 allowance.

The New Mexico Annual Clothing Allowance provides recipients already enrolled in one of the following cash assistance programs an additional cash allowance for school-aged children between the ages of 6 and 18: TANF Cash Assistance, Education Works, State Funded Qualified Aliens and General Assistance for unrelated children and Refugee Cash Assistance.

Men Who Cook set for Aug. 11

Food event raises money for hospice

The fifth annual Men Who Cook event is expected to raise more than $50,000, bringing the total to more than $200,000 in the past four years to support charity care needs for Mesilla Valley Hospice.

Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation and Helping Hands Event Planning is presenting the Men Who Cook event Saturday, Aug. 11, with more than 60 chefs and chef assistants, a silent auction, entertainment and awards for the best appetizer, entrée, side dish and dessert.

Each chef and his station will also be raising funds by asking for "tips," all of which will go to support the end result of raising funds for hospice care.

All food will be cooked in certified kitchens, and chefs are busily finalizing recipes and scheduling kitchen times.

The event will be from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave. Tickets are $60 and can be purchased by calling the Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation at 525-5720.

Mesilla Valley Hospice has provided more than twice the amount of charity care in the first six months of this year than it normally provides in the whole year. This charity care is above and beyond funding received through the Doña Ana County Health Services Fund and the City of Las Cruces Health Services Fund. As a result of the increased demand, charity care funding needs at Mesilla Valley Hospice are at an all-time high.

Since the demand for charity care is so high this year, in addition to Men Who Cook, Mesilla Valley Hospice will be kicking off a mini-campaign to raise additional funds for charity care Visit www.mvhospice.org or Mesilla Valley Hospice's Facebook page for more information.

What do you believe are the key issues in this race?

- Economic opportunity (jobs)

- Education

How will you approach solving these issues?

We need to continue to look for economic opportunities that are "out of the box." Access to health care has a huge impact on families. I've known many people who work full time, but it is still too expensive to get health insurance. Schools need to be adequately funded so classroom sizes are reasonable.

Why are you the best candidate?

I have a proven investment in the community and I've worked in the trenches for 20-plus years to make people's lives better. I have a proven track record.

Name: Arlington Brewbaker

Party: Republican

Political experience: First run for elected office

Professional background:

Local business owner 19 years, construction industry since 1974, field engineer, project manager, chief estimator. Worked in six states on large projects.

What do you believe are the key issues in this race?

- Getting people back to work
- Educating our children
- Restoring the spirit of the American dream

How will you approach solving these issues?

I will fight to stop job-killing actions at all levels of government that affect our district, fight to adjust state procurement codes to allow more economic growth within our district and fight to adjust federal contract language to allow and encourage more local participation.

Why are you the best candidate?

Proven leadership. I have worked in several states and towns with people from many backgrounds, cultures and education levels. All working together as a team to accomplish a common goal.

These are the new boundaries for District 52 in the New Mexico House of Representatives. The district has been represented by Joseph Cervantes, who is not seeking re-election to the House, but is running for the state Senate seat formerly held by Cynthia Nava.

each with individual administrators and food courts, so students will less likely feel lost in the crowd once Centennial reaches its 2,000 student capacity. In early discussions about the new high school, officials oversimplified it by saying students in the different grade levels would have their own wing.

Despite the academic wing concept, Carrete said she could tell the campus is much larger than Oñate. The total building area of Centennial is 344,000 square feet on 72 acres of a 105-acre parcel belonging to the Bureau of Land Management. The whole parcel is actually leased to New Mexico State University, but Las Cruces Public Schools is subleasing the Centennial portion at almost no cost. The campus includes a large gym, an area for band, a "black box" theater, a media center – which the community can access after school hours – and practice fields for sports, as well as an all-weather track and tennis courts.

A big attraction for many of the Centennial students is the new high school's use of technology throughout, such as each classroom having "SMART Boards" for more multi-media presentations. History teacher Marissa Montano said the technology also is more interactive with students, including the ability for the teacher to get nearly instant feedback for gauging how well students are grasping the topic being taught. Then, if something needs to be explained better, it can be done during the class lecture, she said.

"It's really impressive," said Michaela De La Rosa, 16, also from Oñate, who will be a junior at Centennial. "You can tell they put a lot of thought into everything."

The school will hold its official grand opening ceremony and ribbon cutting Saturday, Sept. 22, when a commemorative time capsule will be buried, said Principal Michael Montoya.

Tour participants line the balconies of the gym at Centennial High School Thursday, July 26.

Sports by royal decree

Jim Hilley
Deflections

There are lots of things in sports today that could use some adjustments. Major adjustments. However, many sports are administered by organizations that have little interest in fixing the problems.

What sports needs is not a sports czar. We've had drug czars, marketing czars, health czars and czar czars galore.

What we need is a sports king.

I nominate myself.

If I were sports king ...

All Olympic games would be played in the New World, eliminating the need for networks to tape-delay broadcasting events for Americans like me who are unable to refrain from checking the Internet for results before the outcome is seen on television.

Referees would actually call traveling in the National Basketball Association.

Excessive celebration would be considered a part of a scoring drive in football. Television viewers could use cell phones to rate the celebrations, with those that scored high enough earning an extra point. Those considered lame or inappropriate could cost a team points. Funds raised from the phone fees would be placed into an account for the sports king.

Soccer games would have two balls in play at all times, making it much easier for teams to score.

Basketball players fouled in the act of shooting would be able to decline a foul and take the basket if the foul causes the basket to be waved off.

College sports conferences would have to have some sort of rational basis for existence.

Sports entities that sell naming rights to their stadiums or sporting events would have to pay fees to sports broadcasters and writers for actually using the name on the air or in print. For instance, if I used the words "Bell Helicopter Armed Forces Bowl" in a column, I would be compensated for using the useless extra words when describing the event. The level of compensation would be based on Scrabble rules.

No sporting events would be allowed on Thursdays.

Rules protecting the quarterback from getting hit would be rescinded. Instead, each team would have two additional players whose only responsibility would be remaining behind the line of scrimmage to protect the quarterback.

Professional sports contracts would have a minimum time period of 10 years. I get tired of tuning in to watch my favorite teams and not knowing who any of the players are.

Billionaire team owners who threaten to move their teams unless municipalities build them new stadiums with tax dollars would be charged with extortion.

Sports editors would never write lame columns just to make deadline.

Aggies put focus on defense

Return of Manley, Savage raises hopes for winning season

By Jim Hilley
 Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University football coach DeWayne Walker said he is focusing on stiffening up the Aggie's defense during the 2012 season, which starts at 6 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 30, when the Aggies host Sacramento State University at Aggie Memorial Stadium.

"I think you are going to see great improvement on the defensive side of the ball," Walker said at the WAC Football Preview in Reno, Nev., Thursday, July 26. "That was a focus from a recruiting standpoint and we made a couple of changes on defense. I think we are constantly getting better even through the summer."

The Aggie defense will be bolstered by the return of senior defensive end Donte Savage, who missed the 2011 season because of academic issues.

Walker brushed off questions about the future of football in the conference, saying he is concentrating on the upcoming season.

"I had a chance to meet with the team and explained the situation and told them we have worked too hard to worry about things that are out of our control," he said.

"We are just really focusing on '12."

Walker said he believes this year's football team will have more confidence than last year's team.

"Last year, our motto was 'believe and compete,'" he said. "I think we are past that now. There are not a lot of games on our schedule we feel like we can't win."

SonBlazers will keep spread offense

Draper expects MVCS defense to be built around linebackers

By Craig Massey
 Las Cruces Bulletin

Mike Draper knows Las Cruces, knows football – and more specifically – knows something about an offense that passes the ball.

The veteran coach is a natural fit to replace the departed Charles Gleghorn at Mesilla Valley Christian Schools. Gleghorn, who accepted the head coaching position at Hobbs High School last winter, led the SonBlazers to a Class 2A state championship in 2011, using a wide-open passing attack that emphasized short passes and yardage after the catch.

Draper, who was the head coach at Mayfield High School from 1983-94, has coached at Moriarty and taught at Estancia since leaving Las Cruces, and most recently was an assistant at La Cueva. In 1987, Draper's Mayfield Trojans unveiled their version of the run-and-shoot offense and made it all the way to the state championship game that season.

Draper said there will be some changes with the MVCS offense, but they will be minor.

"We'll still run the spread offense and throw the football," he said. "It's the same offense, but we'll run a little more because of the experience on the offensive line coming back."

Draper said there are three candidates for the starting quarterback job and Joseph Zielinski is leading the way. John Jung will be the running back and the slot receivers are Rene Medina and Jacob Kruijs.

Alex Marrujo will be one of the receivers and the experienced offensive line includes standouts such as Garrett Coppedge, Zane Wagner and Chaz Glines.

"We need more receivers," Draper said. "We have some good ones, but we just need more depth there."

On defense, Draper said the team is anchored by the starting inside linebackers – Zielinski and Isaiah Avalos.

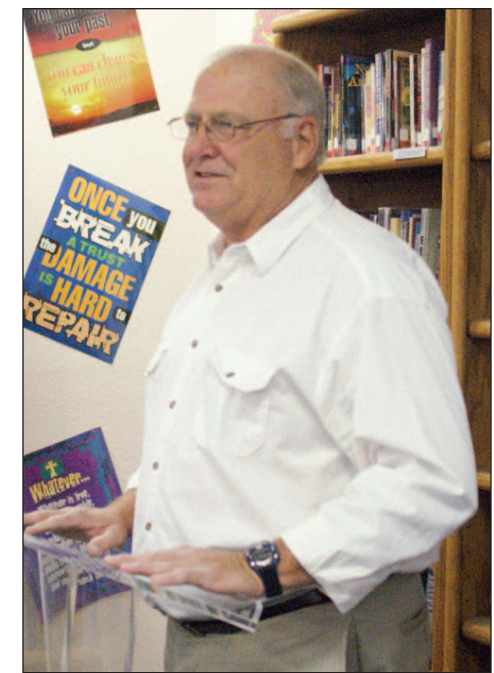

"Defensively, I'm real pleased with our secondary and linebackers right now," he said. "We just need more players on the defensive line. We're doing stuff differently on defense."

"We'll emphasize defense more than they're used to and build around those inside linebackers."

The SonBlazers begin the season Friday, Aug. 31, against Anthony, Texas.

Draper said he can't wait.

"We've been gone (from Las Cruces) for 18 years," he said. "We're excited. It's nice to be back."

The riddle of swing thoughts

Is it possible they have a 'half-life'?

Golf Doctor

In 1993, golf writer Don Wade published a book titled "Swing Thoughts." I immediately bought it because I was an emerging low-handicapper and I figured the way to better golf was by thinking properly, as my father had advised me many, many times.

My view was confirmed over and over from my many audio tapes by (the late) Earl Nightingale who often referred to the little book "As a Man Thinketh" by James Allen.

In 1902, Allen wrote: "A particular train of thought persisted in, be it good or bad, cannot fail to produce its results on the character and circumstances. A man cannot directly choose his circumstances, but he can choose his thoughts, and so indirectly, yet surely, shape his circumstances."

The idea being that our thoughts control our actions; to some extent that is a truism, especially in life itself.

In golf, it's more complicated than that. The complications arose at first when I discovered, after reading Wade's book, that each tour pro had a different swing thought, or "swing key," as he sometimes called it.

Some examples: Davis Love III: "Be comfortable with the shot;" Paul Azinger: "Turn, don't tilt;" Larry Nelson: "Keep your arms together;" Calvin Peete: "Get your left thumb under the shaft;" Corey Pavin: "Focus on (putt) line not speed;" Judy Rankin: "Take it back in one piece;" and so on. Each pro had a different key to getting the most out of his or her golf swing and golf round, especially under pressure.

Even my grandfather, who was an excellent golfer, had swing keys which I still have to this day, in the form of hundreds of small handwritten notes stored neatly in a cardboard box. Grandpa Hauser used to come to the house with practice balls in a canvas bag and chip in our back yard, while explaining the latest "secret" for the golf swing.

This was in the late 1940s and '50s, when most recreational golfers really did believe there was a secret to the golf swing. (In those days, Mr. Hogan did little to dispel the rumors and belief in "the secret.") It was a mindset not unlike today, when glib professional speakers and promoters of self-advancement CDs want us to believe that there is a secret to "success." There are principles, grant you, but no secrets.

Despite my appreciation of swing keys and swing thoughts, I have always found that they are fleeting. A key, like "right leg firm," or "turn your shoulders," or "stay down on the ball," works for a little while, but not indefinitely. I wondered why.

Then I found a tome by Dr. Tom Dorsel, an expert in golf performance from South Carolina, who wrote "Golf: The Mental Game; Thinking Your Way Around the Course."

I see a lot of golf books and a lot of stuff on the mental game, much of which I dismiss. But a funny thing happened in Dorsel's case. I randomly leafed through the 350 pages and remarkably stopped at a section he called, "The Half Life of Swing Keys," under which was written, "It is the dream of every golfer to find that one key that will put his or her swing on automatic and never have to be changed again."

Forget it! Swing keys do not last forever. It was an "ah-ha" moment, confirming what I knew all along – that my favorite swing thought fades soon after it works so well – but I hadn't articulated it exactly like that. Like a drug, it has a half-life, remaining in the body and mind for a steadily diminishing length of time, until finally becoming useless and ineffective. Rather quickly I'm afraid.

As a cognitive-behavioral theorist in psychology, I appreciate the interplay between body and mind; between emotion and thought; between cognition and visualization. I believe it's exactly that dynamic of complementary inner forces and energy that prohibits any single sensory or brain element from taking control.

You can say to yourself, "Don't hit it in the water," and then go ahead and produce the very swing that slices the ball right into the water. Saying the words to yourself doesn't do it. You can picture the ball on a flight to the hole, but if you haven't felt the very swing motion needed to produce the result, you don't get it.

According to Dorsel, there are two main reasons why our swing thoughts have such a short-lived potency. The first is satiation.

"Any time you experience or do something repeatedly, it tends to lose its effectiveness ... (and) after a period of time you may find yourself not paying any attention to that swing key any more," Dorsel said.

I call it habituation; like the feeling of a new putter that starts to fade after a couple of bad rounds.

The second reason is overconfidence.

"You may become comfortable with your swing key ... taking it for granted. You may even assume you are implementing the swing key when, in fact, you are ignoring it. It's like flossing; if we get lazy, after a while we might forget altogether – and get cavities."

Among the dangers of over using swing thoughts is that many folks try to pack way too much into a pre-shot review of "must do's." It's as though they feel they're in the cockpit of a Boeing 767 and trying to go through a pre-flight checklist. Confusion takes over, and nobody's body and muscles would be able to follow those instructions.

You just have a golf ball on the ground and golf club in your hands; don't make it complicated. Keep it simple. One, and only one swing thought.

Be sure your swing keys are not conflicting and constricting. "Don't hit it left" is not a good swing key. That type of negative self-directive may subconsciously program you to produce a swing that has already been seen in your mind's eye, way below your threshold of awareness.

The bottom line for you and me is that swing keys and swing thoughts – simple ones – serve as cues to start the golf motion. During your swing – I mean the actual one-second process of moving back and through with golf club – you should be basically be brain-dead. No thoughts.

If you happen to be actually thinking or hyper-conscious during your backswing and downswing, look out for trouble. Tiger Woods' former swing teacher Hank Haney admits that he once had a very bad case of the "full swing yips," where he would twitch hands and arms and legs in the middle of a fast swing, with the result that the ball would go all over the place. He eventually removed his brain from the swing itself, finding that auto-pilot worked better. Do your thinking before initiating the takeaway.

For a great read on the "think zone" versus the "play zone" consult "Every Shot Must Have a Purpose" by Pia Nilsson and Lynn Marriott.

If you want a real lesson in how world-class athletes conduct their pre-event rehearsal, follow the platform and springboard divers performing at the Olympic Games in London. These athletes perform the most difficult dives as close to perfection as you can get. They start by fixing in their mental vision on what they're about to do with the dive while often rehearsing the movements on the deck before getting up on the board. Once they start the dive, it's all automatic. A dive takes about a second or two; the same time as a golf swing. You should be on automatic when you swing.

So your best bet is to couple your swing thought or "key" with a mental picture of what it actually means. If you are trying to make a hip turn without swaying, and your cue is "good turn," engage your imagination with your cue, so you picture yourself turning in a barrel, with your weight over to your left side (if you're a righty).

If you want to empower your swing key even more, take your rehearsal waggle while positioning your body-weight over your left foot. To ingrain a swing thought, practice it over and over on the range so nothing is new on the golf course.

Lastly, no pre-shot thought should be about outcome; only execution.

Worrying about what's going to happen if you don't do it right – thereby creating tension – probably will mean you will fail to execute properly.

Ags eighth in soccer poll

Quinn: NMSU will have 'something to say'

Despite winning a program-record 10 matches in 2011, the New Mexico State soccer team was picked eighth in the WAC Pre-season poll, which is voted on by the league's nine head coaches.

"The preseason poll is tough to gauge because you are trying to figure out who lost what players, who is getting in what players and who still has good players from last year," head coach Blair Quinn said. "We have four new teams in the conference, which really screws things up a little bit in terms of voting. I don't get too wound up about it."

"I think we were picked last in 2011, and we showed better than that. I anticipate the same thing will happen. No one wants to be eighth or ninth, but the bottom line is you have to finish the regular season in the top six to get into the tournament. That's the goal, and the ultimate goal is to win it."

Denver was selected as the favorite to win the WAC title. The 2012 Preseason All-WAC team and preseason players of the year were also announced. Denver received six first-place votes and 62 total points. The Pioneers return nine of their 11 starters from a team that went 16-5-0 in 2011. Last year's WAC Tournament Champion Utah State was voted to finish second, receiving three first-place votes with a tally of 59 total points. Seattle was picked third with 47 points. San Jose State was picked fourth with 38 points, and Idaho was picked to finish in fifth place with 32 points. Texas State and UTSA finished in a tie for the sixth spot with 27 points each. The Aggies (19 points) and Louisiana Tech (13 points) were voted in the eighth and ninth spots, respectively. Idaho senior forward Chelsea Small garnered preseason offensive player of the year honors for a second-straight season, while Utah State senior defender Natalie Norris was selected as the preseason defensive player of the year. Denver and Idaho led WAC teams with three preseason all-conference selections each. Utah State had two honorees, while San Jose State, Seattle and UTSA each had one representative.

"It's a little disappointing not to have any of our kids be put on there, but it's probably going to be a little bit of a motivating factor," Quinn said. "We have a large senior class that has literally built this program from the ground up. At the end of the day, I think the seniors and several others will have something to say about the order of finish by the end of the season."

The 2012 WAC season is set to kick off Friday, Aug. 17, with seven of the WAC's nine teams in action.

The 2012 WAC Soccer Tournament will be Nov. 1-2, at Utah State's Chuck and Gloria Bell Soccer Field in Logan, Utah. Six teams will advance to the tournament.

Louisiana Tech is voted favorite for WAC crown

NMSU picked fourth in coaches poll

The New Mexico State Aggie football team was selected to finish fourth in the 2012 Western Athletic Conference football coaches poll and fifth in the media polls, released Thursday, July 26, at the WAC Football Media Days in Reno, Nev. The Aggies received 22 points in the coaches' poll and 95 points in the media poll.

In 2011, the Aggies were picked to finish eighth by the coaches and in the media poll, New Mexico State finished the 2011 campaign with a 4-9 overall record and 2-5 conference record. This is the highest preseason ranking in both polls for NMSU since joining the WAC in 2005.

In the media poll, Louisiana Tech received 193 points and 25 first-place votes from media members around the WAC and the nation. Utah State was picked second after garnering 164 points and the remaining three first-place votes. San Jose State finished third with 130 points while Idaho was selected fourth with 102 points followed by New Mexico State (95), Texas State (57) and University of Texas-San Antonio (43).

The media also voted on preseason players of the year. Louisiana Tech wide receiver Quinton Patton was voted the Offensive Player of the Year, while San Jose State defensive lineman Travis Johnson was picked as the Defensive Player of the Year.

In the coaches' poll, Louisiana Tech received 36 points from the seven WAC coaches. Utah State was in second with 31 points followed by San Jose State with 24. New Mexico State was selected fourth with 22 points followed by

Vaqueros earn home series

Steve Rinaudo named Pecos League MVP

By Jim Hilley
Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Vaqueros defeated the White Sands Pupfish 14-12 Tuesday, July 31, to secure second place in the final Pecos League standings and a playoff series against the Roswell Invaders at Apodaca Park.

The first-ever post-season series in Las Cruces was scheduled to begin Thursday, Aug. 2, and will continue at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 3. A third game, if necessary, will be at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at the Vaqueros' home field.

Las Cruces Vaqueros' field manager Casey Dill said he expects the Pecos League series to be high scoring.

"We are actually very similar teams offensively," Dill said. "We are the best hitting team in the league, by a lot, but Roswell is second."

"They are a team much like we are that could go out there and is capable of putting up 10 runs in every ball game with the offense they have. I think the series is going to be a lot of offense, its going to be which lineups are hitting the ball best that ends up coming out on top."

"I think we might have a little bit of an edge as far as depth in our pitching rotation and in our bullpen."

The Vaqueros field manager said he will shorten his pitching rotation from five to four starters for he playoffs, which will continue with a championship series beginning Sunday, Aug. 5, at the home field of the highest surviving seed.

"You get your four best guys out there, and you are able to use your fifth starter out of the bullpen so it makes the bullpen depth a little bit better," he said.

The Vaqueros offense is led by Steve Rinaudo, who was named the Pecos League Most Valuable Player Tuesday, July 31. Rinaudo led the Las Cruces offense with a .400 batting average, 108 hits, 17 home runs and 22 stolen bases.

"Rinaudo is just the complete baseball player, he can do it all," Dill said. "I've never seen someone able to come out to the baseball field on a daily basis with the intensity that he brings to the game."

"As soon as our season ends, he's a guy you are going to see move on up to a higher level, and I think a guy that has a major shot at potentially making it all the way."

Though the Aggies have lost offensive stalwarts Kenny Turner and Taveon Rogers, Walker said he expects the Aggie offense to continue its success.

"I think we have it figured out now on both sides of the ball, as well as improving with our special teams," he said.

"One thing that is different for this football team, from our coaching staff and in our locker room, is just chemistry. I just think the chemistry is so much better and we all think we can win football games this year."

Could defense and depth lead Aggies to bowl game?

DeWayne Walker puts focus on season ahead

Jack Nixon
Jack's Corner

The WAC preseason football polls have been released.

His function is to stir interest, discussion, and, I suppose, controversy if you take them too seriously. The late, great columnist for the Los Angeles Times, Jim Murray, said these things were "the voice of the turtle." Meaning they have no actual cachet in the real world.

My vote had New Mexico State third, breathing down Utah State's neck for second place. I also think Louisiana Tech has the strongest hand to play as we move toward kickoff, but things can get off track once the competition starts and every coach sees what is truly inside his team.

We got a good look at what was inside the Aggies last year as they had enough mettle to battle to the last down versus Utah State in the season finale. Give me visceral strength and desire in this game. The way head coach DeWayne Walker is approaching the season, I think that is something he has been brewing up at "Walker Hall" just north of the stadium.

Team workouts have had all hands on board this summer, quarterback Andrew Manley strengthened his recovery by throwing himself into the therapy process as soon as athletic trainer Mike O'Larey let him, and depth has not been this good since the Aggies joined the WAC.

The 2012 season is the only thing on the head coach's mind, and he made that clear at WAC media day. Distractions about what could, might, should or had better happen down the road don't exist in "Walker Hall." But it would be that way regardless.

He also told reporters he would be a little more involved with new defensive coordinator Dave Elson than he had been in the past couple of years. Walker yielded the major defensive duties after his first year, seeing that a head coach has to see the bigger picture of both sides of the ball.

It isn't that Elson needs any advice, his track record as an assistant and head coach tells me that. I get the impression that the Aggies are looking at having a defense that can shut people down, and Walker's input will provide the fine tuning that can move a team from OK to dominators in the coming year.

Brains on the coaching staff, talent on both sides of the ball and depth are the recipe for a lot of postgame victory celebrations. The Aggies have this. They also have a schedule that puts them on an even level with all but a couple of teams.

"It's time" is the slogan for this year, and it couldn't be more to the point. It's time for a bowl game, it's time to feel the thrill of victory, and it is time to show up in person and support a team that is bowl bound.

Aggies

The 2011 version of the Aggies was much improved from the year before. Winning four times, including a win at Minnesota, a BCS school in a power conference. Leading the way in that victory was quarterback Andrew Manley, who will return to the team after suffering a season-ending knee injury against UTEP the following week.

Aggie soccer begins practice

NMSU enters fourth season

The New Mexico State soccer program entered its fourth year when the team began practice for the 2012 season Wednesday, Aug. 1.

The Aggies have 22 returning players on the roster including nine starters, and they welcome five newcomers to a squad that won a school-record 10 matches in 2011. NMSU returns to the field after making its second WAC Tournament appearance in three years and winning its first postseason contest last year.

Head coach Blair Quinn said he is eager to begin his second season with the Aggies after a successful inaugural campaign.

"I'm excited for it," Quinn said. "We lost only a couple of players from last year's team, and we are bringing in five new players. I think preseason will go a little bit quicker in terms of the teaching aspect. We are only teaching five new players, and we have the entire team to help us teach that as opposed to us teaching all of the players."

Following a successful 2011 season, Quinn said he believes the team is taking expectations for the season to a new level.

"This is a unique senior class for most of the country, in that they started a program as freshmen," he said. "This is a chance for them to have all that hard work and effort and growth come to fruition and have a fantastic senior year. We broke records last year, but there are a lot of records to break or things we haven't done as a program that they want to do. I think that first and foremost they want to win the WAC and go to the NCAA Tournament."

The Aggies have two experienced goalkeepers returning to anchor the defense. Junior Jessica Schutter started seven games last year and recorded a pair of shutouts, while redshirt sophomore Mikaela Bitner is back after missing the 2011 season due to an injury. Bitner started in 11 contests in 2010.

The Aggie defenders are a veteran core with seniors Courtney Irwin, Vanessa Thomas, Megan Hender and junior Mickey Giles. Sophomores Alexys Brownell and Katelyn Smith and freshmen Mikaela Haley and Tatiana Raygoza could also contribute.

"The back line is pretty solid," Quinn said. "I don't anticipate many changes from last year. I think there are a couple more people in the mix to play more, which is exciting for me."

"We made a swap at the center back position with Elise Nordin and Amber Harrington. We think their qualities were better served to switch them, individually speaking, (based on) what they bring. But Amber started with an injury in the spring and wasn't able to get on the field with us, and so she's going to have to pick that up very quickly to make that work."

Quinn said he believes the Aggies' depth at midfielder is significant this season with Nordin, senior Lauren Cope, juniors Daisy Hernandez, Mary Kate Koziol and Olivia Sierra along with freshmen Miranda Valdez and Cat Acosta.

"I think our midfield spot is really our deepest and most talented spot overall," he said. "Daisy can play the holding mid spot that Elise plays, plus she is a great attacking mid. Katie Smith is a very, very technical and talent attacking center mid. Mary Kate Koziol is a great attacking threat. I think Miranda Valdez is a freshman that is competing for minutes. She is a very technical and talented player. Lauren Cope is a senior that probably is pound for pound the most hard-nosed on the team."

Senior Yolanda McMillion leads the returning NMSU forwards after a second team All-WAC selection in 2011.

"We bring back, I think, one of the most dangerous players in the conference in Yolanda McMillion," Quinn said. "She has great pace."

The forwards also have returning goal-scorers in senior Cassie De Leon and sophomores Bree Luhrsen, Jennae Cambra, Layla Todd, Katelynn Tupponce and Meghan Gerry along with freshman Samantha Sandoval.

Nielsen wins city golf championship

Armstrong takes home title in women's competition

Russell Nielsen was the winner of the Las Cruces City Golf Championship after coming from behind to overtake Patrick Hanlon at Red Hawk Golf Course in the final round Sunday, July 29.

Hanlon faltered at Red Hawk with an 81 after shooting a sizzling 65 the day before at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course to take a six-stroke lead. Nielsen shot 71-72-73 to finish at 216, while Hanlon went 72-65-81 for 218.

Day one of the tournament at Picacho Hills Country Club saw Nielsen shoot 71 to come away with a one-stroke lead over Hanlon's 72.

Oñate High School's Isaac Merry finished the tournament in third, four strokes back of Nielsen. Merry had a steady tournament, ending up at 73-73-74 for 220. A great performance by the Oñate senior on the back nine at Sonoma Ranch on Saturday, July 28, was not enough to overcome a poor start on the first nine holes.

Chris Drumm finished in fourth place at 227, and Phil Giles was fifth with a 232.

In the women's tournament, Mary Armstrong came away the winner, topping Rosemary McKeown and Suzie Ruacho who finished second and third, respectively.

The senior division winner was Michael Anderson, followed by Dennis Nourse and Phil Harrington.

Bingaman visits with 'Staters'

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman recently welcomed New Mexico Girls State and Boys State representatives to his Washington, D.C., office during the young government experience national conference. They were Fermin Prieto of Las Cruces, Selena Campos of Deming, Damani Hoffman of Alamogordo and Jesse Martinez of Farmington. While visiting with Bingaman, the group discussed their experiences in Girls State and Boys State, important legislation in the Senate and the overall state of Congress. The American Legion Boys State and American Legion Auxiliary Girls State are summer leadership programs for high school students between their junior and senior years. The program emphasizes leadership and teaches how government works.

Hillrise girl to represent NM

Mrs. Obama to give White House dinner to students

As a part of the Healthy Lunchtime Challenge, Hillrise Elementary School fifth-grade student Emma Kenney, 9, the daughter of Tammie and Matt Kenney of Las Cruces, was recently chosen to represent New Mexico in Washington, D.C.

The contest invited students ages 8 to 12 from across the United States to submit an original recipe for a healthy meal. More than 1,200 children submitted recipes and a winner was selected from each state. Emma's chicken wraps with mango salsa was chosen as the top recipe from New Mexico.

KENNEY

Emma and her mother will travel to the nation's capital Monday, Aug. 20, where they will join first lady Michelle Obama and 54 other students at the White House for a "Kid's State Dinner."

"What an honor to be chosen to represent New Mexico at the first-ever 'Kid's State Dinner,'" Hillrise Elementary Principal Cindy Baker said. "We know Emma will be the perfect ambassador for our great state and the City of Las Cruces. We wish her well in her travels to the nation's capital and look forward to her return where she will be starting her last year at Hillrise Elementary. As a fifth-grader and student leader, Emma will be given the opportunity to share her life-changing experience, and, I hope, be a positive influence for others."

The contest was a partnership with www.epicurious.com and the U.S. Departments of Education and Agriculture.

Checkpoints planned for August

DWI prevention effort also includes saturation patrols

The Las Cruces Police Department has scheduled at least three sobriety checkpoint and four saturation patrols within city limits for the month of August.

LCPD sobriety checkpoints and saturation patrols are intended to reduce and eliminate the number of motorists who drive while intoxicated.

Additional enforcement activities may include underage and party patrols.

The Las Cruces Police Department encourages those who plan on consuming alcoholic beverages to use a designated driver - someone who will not be drinking alcoholic beverages - for their transportation needs.

Anyone who needs a safe ride home from 5:30 p.m. to 3 a.m. on Fridays, Saturdays or holidays can take advantage of Project Home, a program sponsored by Dona Ana County and Las Cruces Shuttle and Taxi. One or two people can receive a $5 taxi ride home from anywhere within Dona Ana County. For up to four people, the fee is $10. Grant funding pays the balance of transportation charges.

For Project Home taxi service, call 524-TAXI.

Korean War veterans invited to new group

The new Korean War Veterans Association (KWVA) is starting a local chapter to meet at 9 a.m. the fourth Saturday of each month at Andeles Restaurant in Mesilla.

Members can arrive as early as 8 a.m. to enjoy a breakfast buffet for $5.

This week in the history of the Mesilla Valley

Reflections

1912

• The board of directors of Las Cruces city schools approved a contract for Professor J.H. Wagner to be superintendent for $1,900. Wagner was offered the same position in Santa Fe, but reportedly decided to remain in Las Cruces.

• About 20 Boy Scouts took a hike to Doña Ana, where they took a swim in a large pond and enjoyed apples given to them by a farmer. After dinner, they all sat around and learned the Scout laws before returning to Las Cruces.

• Dr. and Mrs. O.H. Brown announced the engagement of their daughter Doris to Mr. Lee Malone of Mesilla Park. The young couple had purchased a home near the state college in preparation for their marriage.

• Vincent May received his commission as postmaster of Las Cruces and took over the office upon the retirement of Capt. Thomas Branigan, who, after several years of faithful service retired to look after his ranch and other matters.

1937

• An alarm at 10 a.m. called the fire department to the corner of May and Water streets. The fire was extinguished before the truck arrived. Police officers on the scene gave a ticket to every car driver who followed the fire truck in an effort to break the habit Las Cruces drivers had of taking their cars to every fire and parking them to observe the spectacle.

• Funeral services were held for little Merritt Mechem, the young son of Judge and Mrs. E.L. Mechem. The boy drowned after falling into an irrigation ditch and being swept away.

• The Doña Ana Hospital Association was optimistic about having a hospital facility built in Las Cruces, and was preparing to request plans for a 20-bed facility from available architects.

The Organ Mountains have long been a place to escape the Las Cruces heat during the summer. Fae (Hilley) Bumgarner, Karl Bradd and Belva Bumgarner enjoy a moment beside a small stream, probably in the early 1940s. The trio may have been on a visit to the Beasley Ranch in Texas Canyon to see Belva's sister May and brother-in-law Chester "Buck" Beasley.

1962

• A $9 million testing and development program to be constructed on the White Sands Missile Range for the Apollo Project was hailed as a "definite boost to the overall economy of the area." Facilities required for the program included a 23,500-square-foot preparation building, a 4,700-square-foot control center, two test stands, two ground control stations, liquid fuel storage tanks and fuel transfer areas. The facility was to be located 20 miles northeast of Las Cruces with an access road located between Organ and Las Cruces.

• The new golf course and club house at New Mexico State University was nearing completion, and was expected to be ready for use by the end of the year.

1987

• Bob Richardson, a parent of a junior high student, challenged the Las Cruces school board's ban on student's use of a motorcycle, automobile or other motor-driven vehicle to get to or from school. Richardson said the policy was in direct conflict with state law, which allowed 13-year-olds to obtain Class III licenses for use of motorcycle of 100 cc or less "for lawful day-to-day business" on any road other than an interstate highway.

• The Bureau of Land Management announced access to Aguirre Spring campground would be cut off at 10 p.m. each evening. A gate at the beginning of the one-way road to the popular destination would be locked, allowing people to leave but not to get in. "The 10 p.m. closure will take some of the pressure off of the host and make the overall atmosphere of the campground more peaceful," BLM area manager Tim Salt said.

Downtown awaits word on tower sale

Richard Coltharp
That's the Way of the World

I had lunch at Abraham's, on the fourth floor of the Wells Fargo tower Tuesday, July 31, introducing Las Cruces newcomer Mike Boswell to the day's special: the incredible meatloaf.

The same day, I learned the tower will likely be sold by the end of August.

The building, originally the First National Bank tower, was erected in 1968 and remains, by double, the tallest building in Las Cruces.

Frank Papen, then the head of First National Bank, and one of the most forward-thinking businessmen in Las Cruces, would be disappointed. The tower was Papen's baby, and he envisioned it as one of many skyscrapers to come. He thought Las Cruces could, and should, rival other Southwestern cities such as El Paso, Albuquerque, Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz.

While Las Cruces has flourished, it has grown out, not up.

At this point, it's unclear what the new owners may or may not do with the building. I hope they don't do anything to interfere with Abraham's, which, in addition to its great food, is the last restaurant in town where you can get, on occasion, an RC Cola. I also hope Dawn Starostka and her staff at Helping Hands Event Planning get to stay; their seventh-floor view has the best uninterrupted look at the Organ Mountains of any office in town.

Many people may look at the 44-year-old structure and its 10 stories as a white elephant. The new owners, however, must have at least a degree of Papen-esque prescience or they would not have taken the chance on the building.

Papen's original goal for the building was to house a burgeoning crew of NASA employees coming to Las Cruces and White Sands Missile Range. As it turned out, the bulk of NASA's team wound up in Houston.

History could be repeating itself in an interesting way. Today, all these years later, the vocation with the biggest potential growth in our region is once again space.

Should Spaceport America reach its potential in a few years, the Wells Fargo tower could very well house scientists, engineers and marketers working on

Las Cruces in AARP's top 10

Sunny city cited for living well on less

By Alta LeCompte
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

After hearing AARP named Las Cruces one of the 10 best cities for "a rich retirement at a fraction of the cost," local Realtors and retirees breathed a collective: "Dah."

The expression, derived from the Russian word for "yes," translates roughly into: "Yes, what else?"

Among the less-than-surprised Las Cruces Realtors was Kaye Miller, associate broker with Steinborn & Associates Real Estate.

"Many times we get retirees coming in aware of all the things for which Las Cruces has been listed as 'Best City,'" she said. "They know all this information. We have collected so many of them (Top 10 listings).

"I'm sure they wonder, 'What is this?'"

She and other Realtors commented that 90 percent of home buyers, including retirees, do Internet research before checking out target cities.

Peggy Shinn, business development director for Keller Williams, said she hears quite often that people put Las Cruces on their retirement lists, which they compiled from various "Best Cities" lists.

"Some are checking out the Southwest.

Strong onion sales bring tears of joy

State supplies bounty for U.S.

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico's favorite question when it comes to chile is, "Red or green?"

But enlightened consumers in the rest of the country are seeking the famous New Mexico fresh onions and requesting "Red, white and yellow."

Markets estimate more than 50 percent of the fresh onions sold in national markets during June and July are grown in and shipped from New Mexico.

Southern New Mexico onion growers are wrapping up their harvest and reporting good yields and quality.

Hatch Valley onion growers have been harvesting onions that had been left undamaged in the May 8 hailstorm and are reporting good yields and excellent quality.

Shiloh Produce started shipping in mid-May and expects to end grading the first couple weeks of this month, Jay Hill, who is involved in Shiloh shipping, said.

Shiloh operates four sheds in the Hatch area and has shipped more than a million sacks of yellow, white and red onion bulbs, especially those New Mexico yellow jumbos, which aren't a variety but are popular for their size.

Shiloh grades onions for Kit Carson, Chile River, Adams Produce and Covarrubias Farms.

Most of the varieties include the mild cinnamon, ovation, 11-12 and 11-18. The sweet varieties that have been most popular in the market are New Mexico sweet and Luna, Hill said.

The hailstorm hit the valley in strips, and farmers have not been able to come up with a final monetary damage figure.

"Everyone got a little bit of hail damage, but we harvested everything that was left," said Hill, who operates a 150-acre farm south of Las Cruces.

He reported a harvest of 185,000 50-pound bags on his own farm this season of high-quality onions.

Farmers also reported a few early onion losses due to wind and to insects like thrips and cutworms.

Shiloh ships fresh New Mexico onions eastward from Maine to the Port of Miami and even some to Canada.

Heat helps crop

Onion producers are expected to continue harvesting into the end of this month, reported Stephanie Walker, vegetable specialist at New

They stop here, in Tucson, all along the (Interstate) 10 corridor," Shinn said. "Other times, people land in town already having winnowed down their list."

Size manageable for seniors

Miller, who has lived in Las Cruces since 1961, said, "This is a very, very, very endearing city."

One selling point not mentioned in most "Best Cities" list is size.

Miller said size is a very important factor when seniors choose a city.

"People want to drive and live independently as long as possible. It's tremendously important," she said. "When an older person goes to Phoenix, or even Tucson, it's busy, busy, busy."

Las Cruces traffic, on the other hand, is manageable.

"One of the things I try to impress on people is we have all the conveniences of big cities without the down side," Miller said.

Pre-retirement transplants Gabriele and Dennis Boykin, both of whom are still working full time, relocated from Kansas after Dennis left the military.

"We took a month's vacation to go to some places we thought we might like to live – Texas, New Mexico, Arizona," Gabriele Boykin said.

"We spent a day or two in each town to get the feel of it. For some reason, we came back here again and decided we really liked it. We still like it.

"If it ever gets the size of El Paso, we'd consider moving."

Shinn said in the past it was fairly common for people like the Boykins to look at purchasing a retirement property in advance.

"When the market was strong, they looked at making a strategic move to purchase a property two to five years out," she said.

"I'm not hearing anecdotal evidence that a lot of people are doing that to retire several years downstream. They are not as confident as they were."

Mexico State University.

"The warm temperatures helped the onions to come on early this season and caused the onions to mature quickly," she said. "Overall, the onion bulb quality has been good. And the pink root disease has been minimal."

More than 4 million 50-pound sack equivalents had been shipped out from New Mexico onion growers as of late July, Christopher Cramer, NMSU onion specialist said.

Prices started out low but improved at the end of the harvest.

"The prices for a 50-pound sack of yellow jumbo onions ranged from $12 to $14 a sack," Cramer said. "But prices had been lower in June with prices from $8 to $10."

Onion production puts a great deal of money in the New Mexico economy. The 2011 state onion revenue was $13,154,000, according to the USDA National Agriculture Statistics Service. Most of the state onions are grown in Doña Ana County.

The 2011 state harvested acreage for

How the list developed

To identify its top 10 affordable retirement cities, AARP first crunched some numbers.

"We began with a theoretical income of $36,500, or $100 a day. After taxes (at 25 percent), that is $27,375 or $2,281 a month. We looked for a median housing cost of $192,000, which means a mortgage of about $719 a month, leaving $1,562 a month for everything else," AARP explained in its article.

With a list of 200 cities making the affordability cut, AARP pared down to 10 "by homing in on things that make life worth living: the arts and culture, colleges, restaurants and community."

AARP The Magazine's August/September issue (in homes July 24) features five of the top 10 cities that made the cut for 2012. The other five honorees, including Las Cruces, are featured online at www.aarp.org/magazine, where the complete list of the Top Ten Places to Live on $100

A Day appears.

Neither the website nor the magazine specifies whether the cities are listed in random order.

“We have all the conveniences of big cities without the downside.”

AARP's Top 10 Affordable Retirement Destinations

San Antonio, Texas; Omaha, Neb.; Grand Junction, Colo.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Gainesville, Fla.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Las Cruces, N.M.; Morgantown, W.Va.; Roanoke, Va. and Spokane, Wash.

Sunny skies lure transplants

In January, Las Cruces was named to AARP's top 10 sunny places to retire.

Weather is a huge factor in the choice of retirement location, Realtors agreed.

Miller said Las Cruces is a popular choice for Midwestern retirees, because the weather is more pleasant and driving is easier in winter months.

Although not retired, Doris Nurenberg, executive officer of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors, admits to being old enough to think like a retiree.

"I grew up in Michigan. There were jobs available for someone doing what I do in northern climes. (But staying up north) was not even a consideration," she said. "Folks retiring to southern climes all tell you same thing."

Where do they come from?

Questions of exactly where prospective retirees come from and how many of them are migrating to Las Cruces are more difficult to answer.

Nurenberg said LCAR can't track the demographics because Realtors are not allowed to ask the age of their clients.

Morgan Switzer, director of marketing at Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, said when agents report on activity "somebody mentions a different state each week."

Substantial numbers of retirees who check out Las Cruces are from California and the Midwest, Realtors said.

"For a lot of years our market received a substantial boost from California. The affordability factor was significant," Shinn said.

"People who sold properties in California when the market was strong there created a pretty strong nest egg. They could afford to purchase a pretty nice place here for $300,000 to $400,000."

Miller said when the market was booming on the West Coast, many people sold homes there at a profit and traded up by moving to Las Cruces.

In the difficult market of recent years both West Coast and Midwestern residents were waiting until their homes sold in order to relocate, she said.

She sees an uptick in retirees from the Midwest.

"We seem to be getting more of them who have finally sold their homes," she said.

University, military families remember and return

"Many of the clients I work with are New Mexico State University graduates and are now returning, coming back here to retire," Miller said. "What a compliment to the town!"

Tom and Karen Warren met while he was a student at NMSU and she was attending high school in Las Cruces. They married in 1965.

His career as an Air Force fighter pilot took them to assignments around the world, so they had an ongoing discussion about where to eventually put down roots. They fell in love with Madrid, Spain and Seoul, Korea, and put those cities on their list.

"For a variety of reasons, mostly the weather, I wangled to get my last assignment at Holloman Air Force Base," Tom Warren said.

After working several years in the Albuquerque school system, the Warrens moved to Las Cruces to be near her parents.

Las Cruces appeals to arts lovers

"We had been somewhat aware of Las Cruces' love for the arts, even when we were in college," Warren said. "When we moved back here, we began attending performances at the Las Cruces Community Theatre and the Black Box Theatre and were very happy with that."

"Serendipitously we got involved in playing there and have been playing ever since."

The Warrens currently are members of the orchestra for "Man of La Mancha" at the Las Cruces Community Theatre.

To the Warrens, Las Cruces delivers what the AARP promises: a place to retire where life is worth living.

The city offers not just convenience, but affordable amenities, Miller said.

"Out-of-towners tell me our symphony is a bargain," she said, rapidly adding accolades for local theater, fine arts and free or inexpensive learning opportunities available through NMSU.

Workers cut onions and bag them in burlap sacks for distribution to markets far and near.

onions was 5,900, producing 2.7 million hundred-weight of onions, the majority in 50-pound sacks, down from 3.3 million sacks the previous year, the NASS reported.

space projects, finally fulfilling Papen's dream.

If the new owners are able to bring some more activity to the building, it will add to the synergy and momentum going on Downtown Las Cruces. I don't know if they could make it work financially, but I'd love to see some living space in the tower. All successful downtown revitalizations have hinged on getting people actually living downtown. How cool would it be to wake up in your bedroom, throw open the curtains and catch a 10th-floor vista of the Mesilla Valley?

The Downtown Las Cruces Partnership is currently using the phrase "Downtown ... It's really happening." And it is.

In the past week, without really trying, I had some great Downtown experiences.

Friday, July 27, I went early to Las Cruces Community Theatre to buy tickets for "Man of La Mancha," and was able to park right on Main Street. Having secured tickets, I still had almost an hour before showtime.

Conveniently, 100 yards from the theater,

Ono Grindz Hawaiian restaurant was having one of its luaus, when they open the La Esquina courtyard, offer some live music and food and drink specials. My daughter and I relaxed with some guava juice and listened to the band until it was time to mosey back across Main Street to our front row seats.

The show was incredible. Local Renaissance Man Bob Diven played the lead role of Miguel de Cervantes/Don Quixote, perfectly cast in the perfect musical to launch LCCT's 50th season. However, the show was almost stolen by Tina Hartell, whose singing and acting brought powerful life to the Aldonza/Dulcinea character. A great show all around.

The next day, I got my hair cut at City Barber Shop, a Las Cruces tradition since 1958. On the northern edge of Downtown, City Barber offers great cuts, friendly conversation, free donuts and Tootsie Roll pops and, for Cubs baseball fans, a little joy or torture depending if Chicago is winning or losing on the big screen that day.

That day, the Cubs won. The "W" flag went up outside the barber shop and all was right in Downtown Las Cruces.

Building Las Cruces

Las Cruces Orthopaedic Associates

Construction continues at Las Cruces Orthopaedic Associates, 675 Avenida de Mesilla. Modifications to the entry façade are among the last touches of the project, which should be completed by summer's end. The expansion added a second story to the north end of the building and the number of patient rooms has grown from nine to 20. Overall square footage has increased from 9,000 to 15,000.

In Good Company: Zia Natural Gas

Zia seeks energy efficiency

Distributor serves Doña Ana County

By Alta LeCompte
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

From behind the counter in their spacious stone-tiled lobby, Zia Natural Gas Co. customer service representatives can look out through oversized windows to meticulously groomed desert gardens.

Zia moved into the 3700 W. Picacho Ave. location in spring 2011 when it began distributing natural gas in Doña Ana County.

"Isn't it beautiful," Stephanie Bullington said. "We love the gardens."

While Bullington pointed out the features she and her colleagues enjoy every day, a shower popped up outside. Two men made a dash for the office to pay their bills, but other customers elected to use the drive-thru.

The drive-thru was an after-thought, incorporated into the design by David Hamilton, owner and president of the privately held company.

General manager Leslie Graham said Hamilton saw the El Paso Electric Co. drive-thru Downtown and told her he "wanted one of those."

"He is very particular in how all our facilities work," she said. "We take a lot of pride in everything we do, even out to the facilities in the field. Everything has to be painted and kept up, or we get in a lot of trouble."

Distribution company evolves

Hamilton founded the parent company in 1974.

Zia Natural Gas Co. is the culmination of several acquisitions throughout the state of New Mexico.

Zia's parent company purchased Ruidoso Gas in 1988 and created Zia Natural Gas Co.

Additional purchases included Jal Gas in 1992, Hobbs Gas in 1996, the Maxwell natural gas system in 1998 and both the Springer natural gas system and Capitan Carrizozo Natural Gas in 2006, according to www.zngc.com.

Following an 18-month approval process, Zia took over the Rio Grande Natural Gas Association utility system and the gas distribution system of the Village of Hatch in

Zia occupied the Picacho Avenue building when the purchase of Rio Grande Natural Gas received final approval.

At that time, Zia began serving customers in rural Doña Ana County and the Village of Hatch.

The company's customer base swelled from 24,500 to 35,000, Graham said.

"We operate primarily in small, rural locations," she said.

Zia currently owns 1,400 miles of distribution main line and 123 miles of gas transmission line to provide natural gas to customers in Lea, Eddy, Lincoln, Doña Ana and Colfax counties.

In addition to the Doña Ana County office, Zia has offices in Hobbs and Ruidoso.

Customer service representatives and operations and maintenance staff are based at each office.

The company employs a staff of 55. District manager Ron Reynolds and office manager Rocia Gamboa are in charge of activity in the local office.

Graham, joined the company in 1998 as an engineer. She was promoted to district manager then division manager. Her title subsequently changed to general manager.

As general manager, she oversees regulatory compliance, budgeting, goal setting, operations, safety, education and advertising and marketing across the state.

Doña Ana a hub of activity

"The first few months of 2011 were very fast and furious," Graham said.

Renovating, recruiting and training all moved forward at the same time.

"They maintained their sense of humor," she said of the local staff.

All of Zia's bills for New Mexico customers as well as those in Wyoming are processed at the local office

"We found that Las Cruces is an interesting area," Graham said. "Our location is central to the post office, and mail moves in and out very quickly. In addition, we had the personnel available here to do the billing."

Graham said the local customer service staff had previous experience in banking and other fields and was well qualified to do the billing.

"They were very open minded and caught on very quickly," she said.

Conservation benefits everyone

The company's current emphasis is on energy conservation and community involvement, Graham said.

"One of the best things that happened in the past couple of years is the state has pushed for energy conservation," she said.

Building owners are being encouraged to weatherize in order to receive tax benefits.

Zia, meanwhile, is encouraging property owners to convert electric and propane heating systems to natural gas.

"I view that as conservation," she said. "When you burn gas directly at your home instead of at the power plant, you get 90 percent versus 27 percent of the energy that's being produced."

Since 1998, Zia has offered a Gas Bucks incentive of $1,000 off the customer's bill when they switch from an electric to a natural gas furnace.

Zia also installs a service line to the home, free of charge.

Graham said response has been "phenomenal."

She said customers who convert from propane to natural gas save 50 percent on their bill.

"We did 300 this year and there are 400 waiting in Doña Ana County. We've been scrambling to keep up," she said, noting that conversion from propane is much easier and less expensive than conversion from an electric system.

While the capital outlay is higher for homeowners heating with electricity, the savings also are greater. Some heat their homes with natural gas for one-fourth the cost of electricity, Graham said.

Technology aids efficiency

Other recent developments include the installation of small electronic transmitters in gas meters so that operations staff can read meters without leaving their vehicles.

Although the technology has been around since the 1980s, Zia converted its customers in 2007-08 and is now making the switch in Doña Ana County.

"It's a big capital expense, but it's worth it," Graham said.

She said the new technology saves time and eliminates human error.

"One of the best things the industry is doing is moving toward using plastic pipe, which eliminates problems with corrosion and makes for a much safer system," she said.

As always, it's important that customers call the company before digging to prevent pipeline accidents, she said.

Although Zia has grown exponentially since the 1970s, the company is not planning to expand in the near future, Graham said.

"The goal now is to provide more within the service area," she said. "It is equally important to focus on rehabilitating and replacing older pipe. We always have upgrade programs going on."

Graham said Zia provides most of its community support at the regional level, sponsoring organizations such as Little League, and supporting county fairs.

Mary Iadicicco: Faith and family support career journey

Allstate's dancing dynamo networks her way to success

By Alta LeCompte
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Members of the Las Cruces Business Women's Roundtable will learn a new skill this month – Greek dancing.

The usually serious group will take on a seemingly impossible challenge – keeping up with a 5-foot-2-inch bundle of energy leading the experience.

She is Allstate agent Mary Iadicicco.

Iadicicco brought to the City of the Crosses the intensity she absorbed growing up in the shadow of Manhattan, as well as the faith and traditions of her family's Greek heritage.

"My grandfather was a priest," she said. "Six generations back, my family all were priests. We have a huge passion for religion."

She also feels passionate about dance, which she first enjoyed at the age of 5 when her mother taught her Greek dancing.

Honoring tradition

Iadicicco's calendar for August includes getting in shape to perform at Look Who's Dancing.

She also will serve coffee and her home-made homemade loukoumades, pastries dipped in hot oil and coated with honey syrup, Aug. 24-26 during the St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church festival in El Paso.

In the meantime, no doubt, she will show up at every ribbon cutting in the city, welcoming and bolstering the courage of new business owners with the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces.

Iadicicco has raised networking to a whole new level since she moved to Las Cruces six and a half years ago.

Leaving traffic behind

"Seven or eight years ago, we came to Las Cruces for a four-day Labor Day weekend," Iadicicco said.

Mary and Jerry Iadicicco were visiting friends who told them, "Bring your check-book – you'll love it."

Their friends were right.

"They had land available and we decided to purchase," she said.

The Iadiciccos planned to retire here in the distant future.

"After sitting in traffic in New Jersey for three hours, we decided to do it a lot sooner," Mary Iadicicco said.

Following a suggestion from her husband, she pursued a life long dream. She opened her own insurance agency.

Jerry Iadicicco stayed in New Jersey to sell their home, while she moved to Las Cruces to build her business.

She soon learned the culture was different, and set out to meet people.

"Here you get to know people. They bring their families in," she said. "When you're in business in Las Cruces, you need to be more interactive than you do back east."

Pitching in

Iadicicco first joined the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces and the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. She serves as a Conquistadore, "welcoming into the community people who are new like myself."

She also participates in the women's networking group WESST.

"Networking grew my business," she said.

Iadicicco said business owners who contend they lack the time or money to participate in networking groups are missing the point.

"When you spend money to start a business, it makes sense to invest in building it," she said.

Making the break

A 30-year veteran of the insurance industry, Iadicicco had been doing mostly commercial work for an $80 million agency in Holmdel, N.J.

She entered the insurance industry as a typist and worked her way up.

"My main expertise was in multi-million dollar commercial properties, mainly condominiums and homeowners' associations," she said.

When she told her New Jersey colleagues she was moving to Las Cruces "everybody just dropped their jaws," she said.

Tradition of service

Throughout her career, Iadicicco found time for community involvement, even while dealing with personal challenges.

Her arranged marriage to a man from Greece ended when he left. She took on the task of raising two boys as a single mom.

She met her husband, Jerry Iadicicco, when both were doing community projects through Parents Without Partners. They married in 1992. As a couple, they continued to volunteer in the East Brunswick area.

"Even there, I was heavily into community work," she said.

Iadicicco said she was one of the first women to join the Elks. Her role included raising money for Elks children's charities. Her fundraising activities included donating the proceeds of aerobics classes she taught.

In 1999 she received the East Brunswick, N.J., Mayor's Citation for Community Contributions to Youth.

Taking flight

Iadicicco said she currently is working with a Las Cruces community group to organize the Kids Kare Health Fair in November, a fundraiser for children's charities.

"People helped me in my time of need," she said.

Pointing to a panoramic picture of a soaring eagle that hangs above her desk, she said she is inspired every day by its inscription, "Until you spread your wings, you have no idea how far you can fly."

"I want to see how far I can go," she said.

The Iadiciccos share their journey.

In New Jersey, he challenged her to get on a motorcycle.

"I took a three-day course and next thing you know I was riding," she said.

Together they joined a club.

In Las Cruces, she convinced him to sell health insurance when his own health issues interfered with his career as an electrical contractor. They share an office building and refer clients to one another.

Mary Iadicicco cooks Greek specialties and Jerry Iadicicco specializes in Italian fare. They attend both Holy Cross Catholic Church and St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church in El Paso.

"No. 1 in my life is religion," she said. "It's God first, family second and everything else follows. If religion is guiding your life, anything is possible."

"If I put mind to it, I can do anything."

“When you spend money to start a business, it makes sense to invest in building it.”

Jason's Deli set for November opening

Eatery to feature build-your-own salads, sandwiches

By Alta LeCompte
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

We have good news and bad news for Frank S. of Las Cruces.

Let's focus on the good: Jason's Deli is coming to the City of the Crosses.

On his last trip to Albuquerque – where residents have a choice of three Jason's – Frank gave the one he visited a hearty “thumbs up” on Yelp.com.

“All I can say is yummy! My wife got a turkey wrapini, I got a portobello wrap – both were awesome!” he wrote.

He did complain a bit about difficulties winding his way into the Albuquerque neighborhood to find the deli.

There will be no such problem in Las Cruces – Jason's will be located in the heart of retail land at 3845 E. Lohman Ave.

Pat O'Boyle, co-owner of the Coastal Deli Inc. franchise group, said construction is nearing completion. The restaurant is on schedule to open by late November, he said.

He said the franchise group is leasing its 5,000-square-foot store space from Dr. Azhir Zahir.

O'Boyle said Fast Lane Construction of Dallas is the general contractor. All subcontractors on the project are local, he said.

The California Club is one of many offerings served by Jason's Deli, which is set to open in Las Cruces in late November. The location will be on East Lohman Avenue, across the street from Dion's.

He said the group had been studying the Las Cruces market “for a long time.”

They decided on the Lohman Avenue location because it is “vibrant, in the heart of a great retail and residential area.”

“We like having the hospital (MountainView Regional Medical Center) behind us, and you can get to and from the university and Downtown in minutes,” he said.

“We are blessed and have found tremendous success in all the university towns we're in minutes.”

NMSU feeds the chain

Jason's has a special relationship with New Mexico State University, O'Boyle said.

“Jason's nationwide probably has 40 or 50 NMSU (School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism) graduates,” he said. “We are highly impressed with NMSU graduates.”

They work in locations from Dallas to Chicago and up and down the East Coast.

“We were able to recruit them without them ever setting foot in a Jason's,” he said. “We know the dean is a big Jason's fan and by participating in career days we have been able to attract some great students.”

Having a local store should be a boon to recruiting here, and hiring will begin about 30 days prior to the opening, he said.

The store will hire as many as 75 employees, with 70 to 80 percent expected to be full time. Although most staff are full time, Jason's will offer part-time opportunities to local high school and college students.

O'Boyle said two NMSU hospitality graduates will be on the management team and currently are in training in Albuquerque. They are catering manager Racquel Enriquez and manager in training Joseph Franco.

Jason's specializes in healthy and hearty

“We like to say we have something for everybody, whether they like to eat hearty or light,” O'Boyle said.

The menu features a full salad bar with 100 percent organic selections, traditional deli sandwiches and nine soups made every day from scratch, he said.

Jason's was the first major restaurant concept to ban artificial trans fats and high fructose corn syrup, according to www.jasonsdeli.com

In the near future, Las Cruces' eatery options are expected to expand again. A Dunkin' Donuts is scheduled to open in the city.

Business Week July 7 edition reported Sizzling Platter, a

Utah-based restaurant management company, has opened a rebuilt store in El Paso. The company plans to open a total of eight stores in the Borderland, including one in Las Cruces in spring of 2013.

Sizzling Platter owns and manages more than 180 restaurants in seven states under the Little Caesars, Sizzler, Red Robin, Ruby River Steakhouse, Hoppers Grill & Brewery and now Dunkin' Donuts brands, according to Business Week.

The company reportedly owns 26 Little Caesars stores in the El Paso and Las Cruces area.

Bad news at last

And now the bad news for Frank S.: Trader Joe's has not announced intentions to open a store here.

Frank lobbies via Yelp to catch the eye of someone at Trader Joe's, a specialty grocery chain, to locate in Las Cruces. Frank proves his devotion by making regular Trader Joe's runs to Albuquerque, which is how he happened to discover Jason's Deli.

He might also want to check out specialty stores closer to home, such as Toucan Market on East University Avenue and Mountain View Market on El Paseo Road.

Livestock board decides on virus

Ruling coincides with fair season

The New Mexico Livestock Board (NMLB) has passed an emergency rule that reinforces the state's efforts to contain vesicular stomatitis (VS), a virus spreading among New Mexico livestock and hampering their interstate movement and trade.

The rule (NMAC 21.30.4.12 Vesicular Stomatitis Emergency: Restrictions and Safeguards Deemed Proper to Protect Livestock in New Mexico) was passed just as fair season begins in New Mexico, when thousands of livestock animals will be transported from the farm/ranch to the fairgrounds. Often these animals will be exhibited at more than one fair.

“You've got literally hundreds of animals coming into close proximity with one another at fairs across the state,” said State Veterinarian for New Mexico Dr. Dave Fly, DVM. “It's an ideal setting for a virus like VS to spread.”

The rule states that all livestock events in the state (fairs, rodeos, equine events, etc.) should designate a veterinarian to inspect all inbound horses, cattle, pigs, sheep, goats, llamas and alpacas for VS.

- For New Mexico-only events (such as fairs): animals will be allowed to enter with a clean physical inspection or a clean health certificate (Certificate of Veterinary Inspection, or CVI) issued within the previous five days
- For multi-state events held in New Mexico: animals originating from New Mexico will be allowed to enter with a clean physical inspection and a CVI issued within the previous five days

“NMLB will have a livestock inspector at the check-in for each fair across the state to support the local effort against VS,” said NMLB Executive Director Myles Culbertson.

He added that the purpose of the rule is to not only minimize the spread of VS in New Mexico, but to avoid the severe restrictions on interstate livestock trade.

The livestock industry is a multi-billion-dollar-a-year contributor to New Mexico's economy.

Other states and even other countries impose restrictions on livestock from affected states; so far this year, New Mexico is the only state with confirmed cases. There are nearly 30 confirmed or suspected cases of VS in New Mexico at present; most of them are in counties along the middle Rio Grande.

While not fatal, VS causes blister-like lesions that can be so painful as to limit an animal's ability to eat and even its mobility. VS can affect horses, cattle and pigs; occasionally, it can affect sheep, goats, llamas and alpacas.

Livestock owners across New Mexico are encouraged to protect their animals from VS by isolating them from those of other people, using insect repellent, eliminating insect breeding grounds and monitoring for symptoms.

Bulletin Advertising Works!

“The Las Cruces Bulletin's advertising and coverage of the Las Cruces Arts Fair, through the Doña Ana Arts Council, contributed to the show's success. Some 3,000 people visited the event on March 16-18. About 150 children took part in activities designed especially for youngsters. It gives us great confidence to know that the Bulletin is behind community events like this one, which gives us the momentum to plan the Las Cruces Arts Fair again next spring. We always know we can count on the Las Cruces Bulletin to promote the arts in the Las Cruces community.”

Southern NM to host luxury travel agents

Virgin Galactic bringing group in October

Virgin Galactic, the world's first commercial spaceline, announced it will hold its annual Global Accredited Space Agents Forum in Doña Ana and Sierra counties this October.

Accredited Space Agents (ASAs) are high-end travel agents from around the world, handpicked by Virgin Galactic to take reservations for the company's sub-orbital tourist spaceflights.

There are 200 agents in 47 countries, known to be some of the best luxury travel agents in the world. Each year, the ASAs are invited to attend a forum held by Virgin Galactic.

This is the second time the forum will be held in New Mexico.

"In 2010 we brought around 70 of our ASAs to experience tourism in the region, with a specific focus on Las Cruces, Hatch, Truth or Consequences and Otero County," said Carolyn Wincer, head of travel and tourism development for Virgin Galactic.

"The object was to introduce them to all of the wonderful tourism experiences in the area and the 2012 Forum will further enhance their 2010 experience by including more Sierra County destinations such as Elephant Butte and the fascinating ghost towns of Hillsboro and Kingston."

Virgin Galactic "Future Astronauts" will undergo around three days of flight preparation at Spaceport America near Upham, N.M. A recent survey showed, on average, each future astronaut expects to bring six guests, who will likely spend time experiencing the area around Spaceport America.

It is these guests Virgin Galactic is preparing to entertain and the ASAs will play a large part in promoting the area and planning these itineraries.

"I have been living in Las Cruces for over two years now and have spent a lot of time exploring the counties surrounding Spaceport America," Wincer said. "The landscape is stunning, the people warm and welcoming, and there are many wonderful experiences to be had."

"We know the region has all the elements to keep discerning international travelers very happy indeed and we believe there will be a huge economic impact on the region. The beauty of luxury tourism is that spending is high, whilst the social impact is low in terms of numbers. This market is also increasingly interested in authentic experiences rather than mass-market tourism, so that creates many opportunities locally for small businesses."

"We are extremely honored to welcome this group of highly professional and influential travel professionals to Las Cruces," said Philip San Filippo, executive director of the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau. "Virgin Galactic, along with the efforts of its partner Spaceport America, has the potential to become the single most important contribution to the tourism industry for Las Cruces and all of southern New Mexico.

"It is incredibly exciting to have this group come at Virgin Galactic's invitation not once, but twice," San Filippo said. "They will be spreading the word about southern New Mexico around the country and around the world to potential travelers; you can't put a dollar amount on how valuable that is to our tourism industry."

The three-night ASA Forum commences at the end of October with a welcome reception at the Virgin Galactic offices in Las Cruces before the group will continue on for two nights at Elephant Butte Inn.

After a full day at Spaceport America, the group will spend the day exploring Hillsboro and Kingston before a closing event for the ASAs at Hotel Encanto in Las Cruces.

"We worked very closely with Virgin Galactic in 2010 to showcase Truth or Consequences to their agents and are delighted they are coming back to experience more of Sierra County this year," said Kim Skinner, Sierra County Tourism Board chairman.

"I think it is fair to say that we are extremely excited about the potential for tourism dollars that can be generated by Virgin Galactic customers along with their friends and family."

Mother and daughter work together to help change lives

Returning to college difficult, but worth it

Returning to college was no easy task for Charlotte Tallman – she was a 21-year-old single mother and college dropout.

Fortunately she did, and now as a college graduate she is working with the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) to help other single moms return to school.

"There should always be a second chance when it comes to education," said Tallman, whose daughter, Alexis, is now 17. "I know that my life, and my daughter's life, would be very different if I had not returned to school and obtained a degree."

Returning required a little work. On top of owing money to the university she had previously attended, she worked a minimum-wage job, and was barely able to pay the bills. Eventually she was able to pay her debt and enroll in college, only to find her GPA was too low to receive financial aid.

"It seemed almost impossible to get a college education because of finances," Tallman said. "I needed the education to make a living, but I didn't have the money to get that education."

Attending a semester here and there, Tallman scraped up enough money to pay for several years of college before she received financial aid, graduating two years later.

"I know the struggles were well worth it," she said. "From the moment I considered college, I wondered how much easier it would be for other young single mothers in my shoes if they had the financial resources they needed in order to attend school without the repercussions from making a mistake earlier in their lives."

"I knew then I wanted to do what I could to help single mothers interested in continuing their education to experience the feeling of accomplishment that graduating from college produces, particularly when you are the sole source of income in the family. When I heard about the Community Foundation, and the endowments created within the organization, I knew I had found a way to help."

The Alexis Elle Endowment was created in her daughter's name to honor the strength and support she gave simply by being her daughter. Tallman donated a small amount of money and an agreement to place $5,000 in the professionally managed endowment within five years.

Once the $5,000 is established, the principal from the funds will last forever and will continue to produce earnings. A portion of the earnings will be designated for scholarships awarded to single mothers wanting to return to school, matching the wishes designated when the endowment was created.

"For many, this endowment will serve as a ray of hope for those unsure of their future but incapable of quitting," Tallman said. "Any donation could literally change the life of a mother and her child."

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. # Waiting for the Great Pumpkin

Energy policies hinder growth rates

Jim Spence
Business Matters

Low rates of economic growth are continuing to depress U.S. living standards. Last week the Commerce Department reported domestic second quarter GDP growth at just 1.5 percent.

The reasons why the U.S. economy has been crawling along for several years instead of experiencing a vibrant cyclical rebound are mostly structural.

Gradually, America's policy makers have replaced market-based incentive structures with naive wishful thinking that punishes productivity and rewards inefficiency.

When it comes to punishing productivity and rewarding inefficiency, the U.S. is not alone. Many Western European nations dismantled a wide range of basic economic growth incentives decades ago.

Accordingly, minus Germany and a handful of energy producers in the Nordic countries, the European Union has become a collection of the developed world's economic basket cases.

Another huge problem for the U.S. growth rate is Federal Reserve policy of near zero percent interest rates. The Fed's interest rate policies represent both causes and effects of our economic dysfunction.

While low interest rates make it much cheaper for the federal government to borrow, these low rates also encourage our government to borrow recklessly. Near-zero interest rates come with very serious tradeoffs for millions of U.S. citizens. Artificially low interest rates cheat American savers out of a fair rate of return on their deposits. Saving for the future instead of blindly consuming involves sacrifices.

Saving for a rainy day is the latest in a long line of sacrifices in America that goes unrewarded.

Slow economic growth rates act like economic cancer. In slow growth environments, hyper-aggressive cost cutting is like taking chemotherapy. Unfortunately, hiring delays are mandatory for survival-oriented organizations in the private sector.

In our slow growth economic environment, we hear a continuous stream of class warfare messages.

They are delivered by self-serving opportunists who are willing to tolerate slow growth in exchange for bigger and bigger government. Suggestions that the cure for our economic cancer is tax rate increases instead of structural reforms plays mostly to the emotions of the ignorant instead of addressing the economic realities of pro-growth policies.

It was first John F. Kennedy and then Ronald Reagan who accurately asserted that cutting tax rates would actually increase the tax-generating behaviors that are directly associated with higher economic growth rates.

Bad energy policies have also slowed growth rates. But why would America deliberately engage in bad energy policies?

More than 30 years ago, our culture began to change. More and more traditional domestic energy producers were treated like global villains. Based on remarkably dire predictions, avoiding catastrophic global warming and climate change was urgent.

The passage of time has proved most of the predictions regarding environmental catastrophe to be nothing short of absurd. In the meantime, back in the real world, we forgot that rising living standards are based on ready access to plentiful supplies of food and energy.

Spain is a case study in bad policies.

Unfortunately for Spanish workers, more than a decade ago Spain's leaders made it a point to ignore the growing body of empirical evidence that environmental doomsday predictions were nothing but nonsensical hyperbole. Instead, Spanish leaders embarked on a plan based on “green energy jobs initiatives.”

Like the “Peanuts” cartoon character Linus, the Spanish faithful keep waiting for the Great Pumpkin of green jobs to arrive and spread joy.

Sadly, Spain's unemployment rate has more than doubled to 25 percent in 10 years. Still, stubborn Spanish leaders have yet to admit that throwing millions of Euros in taxpayer money at green jobs has been an utter failure.

America is not Spain.

But record numbers of U.S. citizens are now plagued by structural unemployment. Sadly, economic growth producing projects like the Keystone XL pipeline, which might anger the Great Pumpkin, are kept on hold.

A recent survey suggests 81 percent of Americans are dissatisfied with the way the nation is being governed.

However, far too many voters fail to understand the source of their dissatisfaction is directly linked to the slow economic growth we endure while we wait for the arrival of the Great Pumpkin.

Austrian School denies role for government in economy

Laissez-faire approach ignores need for regulation

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

Austrian economics, in its modern form, is a hyper-free-market school of thought that argues against any type of government intervention into the economy.

Not surprisingly, many Libertarians, including that most famous of all Libertarians, Ron Paul, embarrass Austrian economics. The problem is that many of the ideas professed by Austrians, while theoretically appealing, are highly impractical in practice.

A little history: The Austrian School originally referred to a group of diverse free-market thinkers coming out of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire, most prominent among them was Friedrich Hayek, who won the Nobel Prize in 1974.

Many of the ideas of this older version of the Austrian School have been incorporated into mainstream economic theory, especially Hayek's theory about the role of market prices in coordinating economic production. Hayek argued that a centrally planned economy is inherently less efficient than a market economy because no one group or individual can ever know all the information that is embodied in market prices.

Modern “Austrians” take Hayek's ideas a step beyond Hayek. These practitioners, including Ludwig von Mises, Murray Rothbard and Ron Paul associate Lew Rockwell, advocate an extreme form of laissez-faire capitalism bordering on anarchism.

They argue that all voluntary market transactions must be mutually beneficial to the parties directly involved. Any government regulation, by definition, involves coercion, so is not mutually beneficial and is counterproductive. The government can't improve on the private sector.

But what about third-party effects, such as pollution? The Austrians' response is to say government simply doesn't have, nor can ever have, enough information about conditions on the ground to efficiently regulate.

Moreover, these third-party effects can be dealt with through private transactions as long as property rights are sufficiently well specified. Third parties could either bribe polluters to stop polluting, or polluters could compensate third parties for the right to pollute, depending on how property rights are assigned. Either way, private transactions are sufficient.

In effect, the Austrians assert that the private sector equivalent of the EPA will spontaneously arise from private transactions. Put this way, the ridiculousness of the Austrian view is made manifest.

Ignoring the scientific knowledge necessary for pollution regulation, the cost of monitoring and the cost of coordinating among large numbers of people affected by pollution, there still remains the free rider problem.

Why would someone pay the local polluter to reduce emissions when they can “free ride” on their neighbor's payment?

Subject to particular vitriol is the Federal Reserve, not only because it represents government regulation but also because manipulation of the interest rate is thought particularly destructive by Austrians. Artificially low interest rates spur “malinvestment” in unworkable projects that fail once monetary stimulus is withdrawn, introducing booms and busts.

Far better would be to have interest rates set by the market that correctly reflects the true cost of funds.

Many of the positions argued by modern Austrians are valid to a point, but the Austrians take them too far. Where Austrian theory falls down is in its failure to recognize that private markets require regulation to operate efficiently.

Pollution can't be solved via private markets; we need government run courts to enforce private contracts. Police and fire protection is best financed by taxes so as to avoid the free rider problem.

Still, the ideas espoused by Austrians in less extreme form have merit. Government regulation is often second best and market-based solutions are often superior to direct regulation.

Having trouble selling your home?

Gary Sandler's
Real Estate
Connection

According to a July report from the National Association of Realtors (NAR), difficulty obtaining financing is the No. 2 obstacle preventing today's buyers from reaching the closing table (economic instability is the No. 1 barrier).

Obstructions notwithstanding, sellers simply cannot have a closing if they don't have qualified buyers to take them there.

So what does a seller do if he can't sell his home and doesn't want to rent it? Perhaps a rent-to-own transaction is the answer.

While the term "rent-to-own" is most often associated with the rental and subsequent purchase of personal property such as TVs, furniture, appliances and the like, the concept can also be applied to the purchase of real property. When it is applied to real estate, the concept is formally known as a "lease-option" or "lease-purchase."

The lease-option and purchase concepts are sound: Buyers who have less-than-stellar credit histories or insufficient cash for a down payment can rent a house with the option to purchase the property.

The tenant/purchaser often pays a fee to the landlord for the right to purchase the property at a set price during the lease term, and can even negotiate to have portions of the monthly rent to count toward a down payment.

Lease Option. Lease-options are usually a win-win situation for both the buyer and the seller. During the option period, the buyer/tenant has time to clean up credit, put aside money toward a down payment, and make arrangements with a lender to obtain a mortgage at the end of the option period. The owner/seller also benefits by having a steady income stream during the option period and a qualified buyer to purchase the property at the end of the term.

Lease Purchase. A lease-purchase is similar to the lease-option, but with a twist. The purchase scenario is essentially a sale with a delayed closing, typically up to a year away. During the lease period, the buyer works on removing whatever obstacles (i.e., credit, time on the job, etc.) stand in the way of buying now. Like the option customer, this buyer is expected to close the transaction at the end of the lease or escrow period.

There's a dark side to these deals for unsuspecting buyers, however. In Florida, the state attorney general investigated one major lease-option promoter for allegedly defrauding dozens of clients by pocketing their option fees and failing to transfer houses when tenants were ready to buy.

In Texas, widespread consumer complaints about lease-option programs prompted the legislature to pass new standards. Under the law, lease-option promoters will be prohibited from terminating contracts because of minor lease disputes or late rental payments, and will need to have clear legal title to the properties they offer for sale using lease options.

Other abuses include contract language that pretty much allows the owner/landlord to seize the option fee money the tenant paid, and to terminate the deal for almost any reason the landlord chooses, including being one day late on the rent or because of minor property maintenance issues.

So how can buyers and sellers protect themselves from entering into a contract with unscrupulous or unknowledgeable persons?

First, buyers should make sure the owner has title to the property. Owners, on the other hand, should make sure prospective tenants are thoroughly screened.

Prospective tenants can check the title and ownership through public records in person or online at the county recorder's office, or can insist that the owner produce evidence of property ownership or sign a statement that they have clear title and the right to transfer the property.

Owners can check the tenant's references, pull credit, check sex offender and court websites and peruse the county records.

Of equal importance is the lease-option contract itself. It should be drawn up with the help of a knowledgeable professional and should accurately reflect the outcome each party is expecting to realize at the time of purchase.

Ask a Realtor or lawyer to review the contract with you and explain in detail the obligations and responsibilities both you and the landlord have during the rental period.

Understanding what obstacles lie in the path of the buyer's ability to obtain a loan is the key to a successful lease-purchase or lease-option contract. What do owners and tenants gain if the buyer is unable to remove whatever impediments are in the way of closing within the lease period?

Finally, make sure the contract doesn't give the owner/seller the right to cancel the deal, evict you and take your option money over trivial issues.

If buyers and sellers do their due diligence and pay close attention to the details of their transaction, they'll have an excellent chance of completing a successful and hassle-free lease-option or lease-purchase transaction.

See you at closing.

Briefs

GRT payments up 12.7 percent

The City of Las Cruces's July gross receipts tax remittance from the state is "an encouraging start to the new (fiscal) year," according to city budget manger Dick Gebhart.

The GRT charted a 12.7 percent gain from July 2011, Gebhart said in a report to the Las Cruces mayor and council. Positive sectors for July numbered 21 while only four lost ground.

"An examination of individual sectors still yields a mixed picture," Gebhart said.

Retail trade fell 4.3 percent below the level recorded last year.

"As a sector that is not only the city's largest but which also reflects consumer attitudes, this is the one significant disappointment for July," Gebhart said.

The standout area was professional/scientific/technical services, which doubled from year-ago figures.

The gross receipts tax (GRT) remittance from the state for the month of July totaled $6,425,074.

July receipts represent May economic activity. Given that July is the first month of the new fiscal year, the year to date growth rate is an identical 12.7 percent, Gebhart wrote.

Construction and health care, two sectors that have been negative in past months, recorded gains.

Construction GRT was up more than 14 percent.

"While a volatile sector, it is a welcome development to see this sector start the new year on a positive note," Gebhart said. "While any dramatic recovery is not anticipated for construction, the outlook anticipates a much more stable pattern as the year unfolds."

Restaurants/lodging posted healthy gains. "However, given the volatility of monthly figures and the level of national and international economic uncertainty, the need for caution and close monitoring as the remainder of the year unfolds is underscored," Gebhart said.

First American Bank honored

First American Bank has been named one of the 2011 top performing ICBA member Subchapter S corporation community banks with more than $500 million in assets.

The bank was recognized for the eighth straight year in Independent Banker, the national magazine of the Independent Community Bankers of America (ICBA).

"Teamwork and dedication lead us to achieve this success," Everett Crawford, chairman and CEO of First American Bank, said.

Mayor seeks Top Teen donations

The Mayor's Top Teens program to recognize and commend youth for their contributions to our community is seeking donations.

Mayor's Top Teens is entirely funded by donations from our business community, according to a press release.

"We would also accept your time and ideas in serving on the Top Teens Committee, and/or in-kind services as well," Mayor Ken Miyagishima said.

A portion of the proceeds received from donations is earmarked for scholarships. The Mayor's Top Teens Program has awarded more than $22,000 in scholarships since 2008.

Sponsors are thanked with their logos and advertisements printed in Top Teens Commemorative Annual.

Each of the Mayor's Top Teens nominees has overcome a major obstacle and excelled in various areas of their lives. This program offers the opportunity to recognize teens who are positive role models to others, according to a statement.

"The goal of this program is to keep our youth active in their community and focused in school and positive activities. It is important that we encourage our teenagers to continue to do good works and to inspire others to follow their lead," Miyagishima said.

For more information about the program, contact Michael Stubbs at mstubbs@stubbseng.com or 993-5228.

To donate, make checks payable to "Mayor's Top Teens CFSNM" and mail to Community Foundation of Southern NM, 301 S. Church St., Suite H, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Accounting firm halfway to goal in charitable donations

Beasley, Mitchell & Company (BMC), one of the largest certified public accounting firms in the area, has announced it is halfway toward meeting its goal of donating $25,000 in charitable contributions to 25 local organizations in one year.

So far, BMC has provided more than $13,000 to 16 different organizations.

BMC started this unique contribution program to strengthen the firm's presence in the community through effective service, customer relationships and corporate citizenship.

Benefactors include the United Way of Southern New Mexico, American Red Cross, Mission of Mercy and La Casa Inc.

"Our community can thrive in spite of national economic pressures," said Christine Wright, a partner in the firm. "It just takes team work, and the support from one organization to another."

Wright described her dedication to giving back to Las Cruces, where she and her family have resided for many years.

BMC's donations will continue over the coming months, with the culmination of gifts in November. The final donation will be the largest of all 25, and will also commemorate the company's 25th anniversary.

Clements named branch manager

Claudia Clements has joined U.S. Bank as branch manager of its 277 E. Amador Ave. office.

As branch manager, Clements oversees the day-to-day operations within the branch, as well as business development in Las Cruces where she has lived for many years.

Clements has worked in the banking industry for more than 19 years, most recently as branch manager with Bank of the West in Las Cruces.

"Claudia is a great addition to our East Amador Avenue team," said Travis Tarry, district manager with U.S. Bank in southern and eastern New Mexico. "Her drive and passion for excellence in customer service and her years of experience in banking in the Las Cruces market, is a win-win for U.S. Bank and the customers she serves."

Clements supports her community and is eager to be involved with local nonprofit agencies. She has an associate degree in accounting from Doña Ana Community College.

Fowler receives Mercy Award

Scott Fowler, oncology services coordinator at Memorial Medical Center Cancer Program, recently was named MMC's 2012 Mercy Award winner.

Fowler was nominated by his peers for his outstanding work and care with cancer patients, helping them with all obstacles they face, and for starting a Men's Cancer Support Group for patients in the community.

"Scott has truly been an inspiration to his team members and he has made a significant difference for many of his patients," said Paul Herzog, CEO of MMC.

The Mercy Award was established in 2002 to honor the life of Scott Mercy, LifePoint's founding chairman and CEO. The award recognizes employees within the company who best demonstrate enthusiasm and passion for health care.

Fowler has been with MMC for 10 years. He began his career in the Behavioral Health Gero-Psych program as a counselor where he had a large impact on the lives of his patients. In 2011, he moved to his current position as Oncology Services Coordinator, where he continues with the same dedication to helping others.

Chamber to host city/county update

Leaders from the City of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County will discuss current and upcoming developments in the region at the annual Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce annual City/County Update Luncheon.

The luncheon will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 16, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

Featured speakers will be Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima, Assistant City Manager Brian Denmark, County Commission Chair Karen Perez and County Manager Brian Haines. They will comment on current and upcoming legislation, as well as the operations of the area government.

Registration for the City/County Update Luncheon is $20 for Chamber members or $40 for nonmembers. For reservations, contact the Chamber office at 524-1968 or relo@lascruces.org.

Sustainability initiative to kick off Aug. 18

Elected officials, business leaders, community activists, educators, clergy and the general public will converge on the Court Youth Center Saturday, Aug. 18, for an all-day summit to launch a sustainability initiative that envisions connected communities and coordinated growth for the entire region.

The summit, co-hosted by District 1 Doña Ana County Commissioner Billy G. Garrett and Las Cruces Mayor Pro Tem Sharon Thomas, will feature a keynote speech by Dr. Frank Zamora, as well as a working lunch in Pioneer Park and an afternoon plenary session.

The summit is the first official event tied to a $2 million sustainability grant awarded to Doña Ana County by the federal Partnership for Sustainable Communities, which includes participation and support from the U.S. Housing and Urban Development Department (HUD), the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT). That funding will be invested over the course of three years in a coordinated effort to bring agencies and political entities together for shared planning initiatives and growth strategies.

Hispano chamber seeks youth volunteers

The Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces is seeking youth volunteers for the Junior Amigos ambassador program.

High school age students who participate will interact with youth and local business owners, earn a scholarship and have an opportunity to make a difference in the community.

DIRECTORY PLUS

Locations:
1595 W. Amador Ave., Suite E

Co-founder and Vice President:
Hugh Riddle

Contact info:
647-5755
www.directoryplus.com

Mission Statement:
"Designed with the consumer in mind"

"We distribute to everyone, whether they have a landline phone or not," said Hugh Riddle, co-founder and vice president of the company. "Everyone in Doña Ana County gets one — the more we can put on the streets, the more we help our community."
Riddle said one of the biggest differences is Directory Plus lists all businesses, including those who use cell phones as their primary phone.
"Because of this, we have over twice as many business listings as other phone books in the area," Riddle said. "Also one of the best features I'm proud of is our reverse look-up section in the green pages."
This allows for someone to easily locate the name of consumers and business when all that is known is the telephone number or the address.
"With all the wonderful businesses here in Las Cruces, it is quite an honor for us to be chosen by the Las Cruces Chamber as the Business of the Month," Riddle said.

MEN

WHO COOK

LOCAL CHEFS PREPARE FOR FUNDRAISER TO BENEFIT MESILLA VALLEY HOSPICE FOUNDATION

Food and fun for a worthy cause

Local chefs prep for Men Who Cook event

By Isabel A. Rodriguez

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Gumbo, sushi, chili and brisket are just a few of the menu items featured at this year's Men Who Cook, an annual event that raises money for Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation.

In 2011, the event raised more than $50,000, and this year is expected to generate roughly the same amount.

"There will be lots and lots of great food from local community chefs," said organizer Dawn Starostka of Helping Hands Event Planning. "We're having a competition this year for 'best of' in appetizers, entrées, side dishes and desserts."

In addition to the more than 60 local chefs who will cook up a storm, Men Who Cook will include a silent auction and live music.

Despite all the fun that goes into the event, Starostka emphasized that the purpose of Men Who Cook is to raise money for an important and worthwhile cause.

"Fun and food aside, Mesilla Valley Hospice Foundation needs support to keep doing what it's doing," she said. "Even if you cannot attend the event, we encourage you to donate to the foundation."

According to the hospice foundation, Mesilla Valley Hospice has provided twice the amount of charity care in the first six months of this year than it normally provides in a whole year. As a result of the increased demand, charity care funding needs are at an all-time high.

Each chef will raise funds by asking for tips, all of which will be donated to the foundation.

"The guys ham it up for tips and the traveling trophy," Starostka said. "There's lots of fun competition to push people to be really generous."

Last year's winner, Mickey Clute, was unable to participate in this year's Men Who Cook, so the field is "open for someone new," Starostka said, adding that part of the fun of the event is seeing men from the community step outside of their own environments and whip up delicious menu items.

"You get to see different sides of people," Starostka said. "Seeing these men in a different context, outside of their norm is what makes this event fun."

One of the men who will be stepping outside his own environment for the event is Todd Dickson, news editor at the Las Cruces Bulletin.

"I'd covered (the event) in the past, and my reason for entering was an ego thing," he said, adding that he'd probably be a chef if he didn't work in the newspaper business.

Dickson, who said he tried to bring more elaborate recipes to the table, is in his fourth year participating in the event. He observed that chefs have stepped up their game in recent years.

"Some people get real involved," he said. "One year, there was a fellow sitting at the table next to me making California sushi rolls."

"I try to bring a unique recipe to the cookbook that is sold at the fundraiser."

His past recipes have included Checkerboard Manicotti, Sunset Rellenos and Angels on the Wing – chicken and artichoke hearts with butter and lemon.

This year, he'll prepare his version of Mexican Lasagna, which he described as a "relatively simple dish."

Dickson said he anticipates spending Friday afternoon cooking, with the help of his assistant, James Nance.

The Environmental Health Division of the New Mexico Environmental Division has imposed more stringent regulations on this year's Men Who Cook, including the requirement that all dishes be prepared in a certified kitchen.

"(Men Who Cook) is the place to go for a great sampling of the best food in one location," Dickson said. "It's the greatest variety of food you'll ever run into. A lot of people bring their A-game."

Donna Brown, executive director of MVH, also encouraged people to attend the event.

"We at MVH are committed to providing the highest quality care in the community," she said. "We're now in our 30th year, and we're grateful to the community for helping us raise money for our charity. Hopefully everyone comes out and has a good time. Come with a very empty stomach, and bring your checkbook with you."

Temple Beth-El Rabbi Emeritus Jerry Kane feeds state Sen. Steve Fischmann his triple chocolate pecan bites while Kane's wife, Cyril is stuck in the middle, at the Third Annual Men Who Cook.

Featured artist: Roxana Quinnell

Horses, tigers, elephants, oh my Artist paints what is near and dear to her heart

By Isabel A. Rodriguez
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

It's hard not to notice Roxana Quinnell's artworks at the Mesilla Fine Arts Gallery.

While many of the other artists at the gallery boast paintings depicting striking mountains, desert lands and typical New Mexico scenery, Quinnell's wildlife art is certainly an outstanding fixture.

The artist uses mixed media – pencil ink and transparent acrylic bases – to create original paintings not usually seen in the Doña Ana County community.

Quinnell said she's not trying to be different, but just paints what comes naturally to her.

"I got my degree in fine arts and elementary education at Western Montana College," she said. "I've been interested in art from the time I was little. Dad did a lot of carving.

"I had to quit (my artwork) for a while, raising two kids. I had been commissioned to paint pictures of animals, so when I returned to art, that's what I decided to do. I really like it."

A portion of Quinnell's earnings are donated to animal causes, she said.

When asked if her love for animals was instilled by her family, Quinnell said she probably instilled it in them.

"We're outdoor people, and animals were a big deal to us," she said.

Although you'd probably be hard-pressed to find giraffes or tigers in the Las Cruces community, Quinnell pointed out that New Mexico is abundant with other types of animals, including mountain lions and bobcats.

She admitted that it can be a challenge when asked to paint African wildlife, such as rhinos and elephants.

"I probably spend more time doing research than I do actually painting," she said. "I wish I had more time to paint. I always seem to get interrupted. It's detailed, so it takes me a while."

"Research" includes observing animals and photographing them, and sometimes reading wildlife magazines for inspiration.

Quinnell said she stays busy working on several projects at once, whether it be painting new canvases for display at the Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery, or detailed animal depictions for her line of cards.

"Burrowing Owls" by Roxana Quinnell

"Maned Wolves" Roxana Quinnell

"I try to be a full-time artist, and there's always a crunch," she said. "The card line is huge – almost half my business."

When she began the line, she painted each card by hand, until her son, a computer science major, suggested using prints instead.

Her line includes sets including dogs, cats, horses and many more.

Through her website,

www.zianet.com/qpix, Quinnell has been able to sell her cards all over the world, she said.

Some of the organizations closest to her heart include the Humane Society, National Wildlife Federation and The Nature Conservancy.

Quinnell said these organizations are important to her because she sees the damage that is done to wildlife habitats, and wants to change that.

"There is almost no place left untouched," she said. "The danger is totally out of control. I feel like I'm helping. You have to do what little you can do."

Looking at this year's Chamber Music Festival

A mosaic of beauty and entertainment

Review by Gerald Kane

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

My second reviewing pilgrimage up Interstate 25 took place last week, and was far more cerebral than my first reviewing adventure earlier this month.

The two operas we attended dealt with far more weighty issues and were less expositional and more substantive than "The Pearl Fishers," "Tosca" and "Maometto II." (See the July 20 issue of the Las Cruces Bulletin for a review of the earlier operas.)

Surprisingly, the best bon-bon in this metaphoric box of cultural chocolates was a concert we were lucky to attend. It was part of the 40th anniversary season of the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival.

We began by attending a much heralded and highly anticipated production of Karol Szymanowski's rarely performed 90-minute Polish masterpiece "King Roger." It was mythic, mystical and profound. Images and themes treated in "King Roger" provide an allusional twist to "The Bacchae" by Euripides.

"New York Times" critic Anthony Tommasini sat alongside us and reviewed the same opera in last week's edition – as favorably as I will do now.

"King Roger" mixes choral chant, extended lyric monologues and modern lush melodies and orchestrations. It treats the age-old struggle between organized faith and deep seeded spiritual passion. Which element wins out at the end? You'll have to see for yourself.

With a running time of only 90 minutes with no intermission, "King Roger" cannot help but present us with a riveting and thought provoking evening. One would expect additional productions of "King Roger" around the world in coming years.

This production features a stellar cast,

Erin Wall's top-notch vocal performance in "Arabella" is not to be missed. The story takes place between 1929 and 1932, in the shadow of Hitler's rise to power.

Photos by Ken Howard

with extraordinary voices and exceptional acting and stage effects. It stars "bari-hunk" Mariusz Kwiecien in the title role. Known for his powerful voice and chiseled, seething good looks, Kwiecien has been a one-person publicity machine in promoting himself, along with productions of "King Roger" – for which he has developed quite a reputation – around the world.

The homo-erotic production of "King Roger" at the Paris Opera in 2009 stirred up tremendous controversy in the world music community. By contrast, the Santa Fe version is tamer. It keeps the passion under the surface, yet percolating strongly, vibrantly and consistently throughout, thanks especially to the keen musical direction of acclaimed conductor Evan Rogister.

I would be remiss not to mention the awesome vocal gymnastics of the amazing Erin Morley as Roger's conflicted, frustrated wife, Roxana, and the power of William Burden's mysterious portrayal as the "faith-alternative, hedonist Shepherd."

For those interested in seeing an unconventional, disturbing and thought-provoking work, "King Roger" is highly recommended. The reviews by other critics from near and far have been uniformly positive, praising the musical aspects of the opera, along with the innovative direction by Stephen Wadsworth and awesome scenic design by Thomas Lynch, which ranges the gamut from ornate iconography to amazingly abstract.

The second opera we attended is far less controversial and very popular. Richard Strauss composed "Arabella" between 1929 and 1932, in the shadow of Adolf Hitler's rise to power. In light of the world economic situation, elements of this story of economic pretense and deception are uniquely relevant.

This disturbing tale faded gentility and deception revisits the milieu of late 19th-century Vienna, which Strauss and his longtime librettist Hugo von Hofmannsthal explored two decades earlier in their most popular work, "Der Rosenkavalier" (1909-10).

"Arabella" shares lush orchestration and some gorgeous vocal lines with "Rosenkavalier." In addition, this popular work contains a couple of vocally demanding roles that are wonderful vehicles for lyric sopranos, two tenors and two baritones.

Alas, von Hofmannsthal died suddenly after completing Act One of "Arabella." Strauss labored singularly for a few years, making sure he completed the story with just the right touches of romance, repression and latent, up tight passion to bring the opera to a satisfying, if not drawn out conclusion.

In addition to top-notch voices, led by Erin Wall, Heidi Stolper and Mark Delavan, the flowing scenery of the Santa Fe Opera production by Tobias Hoheisel takes on a character of its own. Ornate Victorian set pieces float in mysteriously and effortlessly when needed. They add so much to the romance of the far-fetched tale of mistaken identity and pretense. The scenic design would fade to nothingness were it not for the appropriate eerie lighting by David Finn.

One cannot minimize the role of conductor Sir Andrew Davis, who kept this lengthy opera moving along at a good pace.

In summary, both "King Roger" and "Arabella" provides much for audience members to ponder. Each, in their own way, confronts issues which are subtexts in today's complex world. Both operas merit your attention.

Attending a single concert each year at the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival reminds me of the most famous line about a box of chocolates from the classic film "Forrest Gump" – "You never know what you're going to get."

Each year, during our second four-day trip up to Santa Fe, we include a single concert on a Thursday evening. We have been uniquely blessed, but this year, fate presented us with the best bonbon in the box.

Whether or not you are familiar with chamber music, a trip to Saint Francis Auditorium is worthy of your consideration for any number of reasons.

You will not hear better musical sound anywhere else. Once a church, the auditorium's viga roof soars above and resonates in an extraordinary way. Music played or sung within these walls is celestial. You are able to differentiate the sounds of each instrument and voice in a mystical way.

The other artists who are a part of the Festival roster may not be household names, but their skills are amazing. As Anthony Tommasini, chief music critic for the New York Times wrote in a recent review of one of last week's Chamber Festival concerts, "The festival can seem like an outpost of the New York music scene" ... and it is four hours from our community. Aficionados from all over the country travel to attend these concerts. Do not deprive yourself.

We attended a varied evening featuring a string quartet by Samuel Barber performed by the Miro quartet, the string quartet in residence at the University of Texas in Austin. The music was quirky, clever and in a word, delightful.

This was followed by a violin concerto by Beethoven featuring the amazing violinist and violist Ida Kafavian, Founder of Music from Angel Fire and a long-standing member of the renowned Beaux Arts Trio in New York. Together with her sister Ani, she has made music for years.

Kafavian was paired with Kirill Gerstein, a young, accomplished, award winning pianist, whose bright, assertive technique was dazzling. Gerstein, whose music was contained on an iPad, (a first for me!) also amazed us with his rendition of a contemporary piece, Oliver Knussen's lyrical "Ophelia's Last Dance."

The evening concluded with Bartok's "Contrasts," a work for violin, viola, piano and clarinet. The world renowned Chen Halevi joined Kafavian and Gerstein for this whimsical, delightful final "bite" of remarkable music.

I recommend attendance at any of the concerts in the 40th anniversary season, which runs through Saturday, Aug. 25. You won't be disappointed.

It should be noted that if this is your first trip to see the Santa Fe Opera, you are entitled to a special discount. Mention this to the ticket agent when ordering your tickets by phone. Other specials may also be available for both events.

Gerald Kane has reviewed theatre and opera for NPR stations and newspapers in New Orleans, Phoenix and Kansas City as well as for the "Las Cruces Bulletin." A former member of the American Theatre Critics Association, he is the Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El in Las Cruces and has taught "Jews on Screen" at New Mexico State University. He has reviewed the Santa Fe Opera productions for The Bulletin for the past 10 years.

Who says you can't go home?

Three generations of women actors bond in flick

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

A pleasant diversion, sometimes stifled by its obvious clichés, "Peace Love and Misunderstanding" takes an often seen story and fluffs it up a bit.

As directed by Bruce Beresford, the film offers Jane Fonda as Grace, an aging peacenik (living where else but Woodstock) and reunites her with her anally retentive daughter, Diane, who has taken her two teenage kids, Zoe and Jake, for a respite after her husband asks for a divorce.

Grace, a pot smoking, growing and selling throwback to the '60s (of course), lives in a tidy but art-filled and eccentric old farmhouse. Zoe and Jake have never met their grandmother, as Diane disappeared years earlier in objection to Mom's lifestyle, which included free love and various mind altering substances.

But now the chickens have come home to roost, as you'll certainly see, and Diane tries to fan the old flames of discontent while Zoe and Jake learn to appreciate the unique community of friends and ad hoc family that Grace has accumulated over the years.

And, not surprisingly, love is in the air ... not just at the various gatherings and be-in's that Grace hosts or attends, but also for all three of her guests.

Jake, a shy, smart, young man, who unfortunately is hampered as one of those kids who has to film everything, meets a smart, young woman who works at a local coffee shop.

Zoe has a push-pull type experience with a young man who works for an "organic butcher," something she is not fond of as a vegetarian.

The stiff and weary Diane is approached by a local musician/furniture maker, who also happened to have "dated" Grace years before.

Beresford certainly knew that this work wasn't going to win accolades and re-energize his career, but be that as it may, he takes a great cast and puts them hard at work.

Fonda breezes through her role as Grace, who can only see good in everybody and everything.

Catherine Keener as Diane does a pretty respectable job of being her mother's nemesis while learning to lighten up. Elizabeth Olson does a fine job playing Zoe, and sometimes seems

Humorous depiction of the Gilbert & Sullivan characters

George Jarden hopes to entertain variety of audiences

By Isabel Rodriguez
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Growing up in Philadelphia watching many Gilbert and Sullivan performances, George Jarden had his own take on the plays. So much so, that many years later, he organized a one-man multi-media show, "Gee 'n Ess & I," allowing him to share his observances with the public, while also taking on several of the characters.

Sound a bit confusing?

It can be, until you witness for yourself what the show is all about.

Jarden not only appears in numerous costumes and performs numerous dances, he and his team have also pre-recorded audio and video to complement the live performance.

"I'm not making fun of Gilbert and Sullivan's plays," Jarden explained. "They're already funny. Trying to make fun of something that is already funny just comes across as flat. (This) is my commentary on these characters. I also break the fourth wall (speak directly to the audience while in character)."

Jarden estimated that he dons a total of about 20 costumes during the performance.

He said even audiences who are not familiar with Gilbert and Sullivan productions will find humor in the performance.

"It's all explained," he said. "We assume people know nothing (about the plays). I've performed it before, at the Rio Grande Theatre, for middle school-age kids, and they just loved it and laughed at the hilarious characters."

Jarden, who is in his '70s, said there is no generation gap between himself and his young team.

That team includes Brandi Lozada Johnston, choreographer and stage manager; Flo Hosa Dougherty, painter; Dave Wheeler, sound and video director; and Terri Hubert, costume director.

Jarden first performed "Gee 'n Ess & I" in 2010. He said it took him about four years to organize it, and he's been working to improve upon it ever since then.

From the time he developed the idea to when it was first performed, he and his original team came up with different elements to improve the show, including about 100 paintings by Dougherty, singing and dancing, computer generated sound and video.

"It's pretty wild," Jarden said, adding that the most rewarding part for him is the excitement the team has generated after being exposed to the performance. "None of them knew any Gilbert and Sullivan before this. They were clueless."

Jarden will again perform the routine at his Philadelphia high school reunion in October. He said he would eventually like to go on tour with the act.

Showtimes are Friday, Aug. 3 at 7 p.m. and Saturday, Aug. 4 at 8:30 p.m. at Boba Café and Cabaret, 1900 S. Espina St. Friday's show costs $27.50 and includes an appetizer, entrée and beverage. Saturday's show is $10. For more information, call 647-5900.

Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Catherine Keener and Jane Fonda revisit the '60s in "Peace Love and Misunderstanding."

wise beyond her years. Nat Wolff is Jake, and he does OK as the shy and curious younger brother.

The film moves along at pretty rapid speed, as we go from protest to party to full moon ceremony celebrating the feminine, all intertwined with scenes from the three budding relationships and Grace's continued relationship with other "budding" things. She dispenses wisdom, joints and new age platitudes in equal amounts, and not a bad word can be said by her about any of the activities that take place.

The film's weaknesses lie in the editing, which seems rather ramshackle at times and with some of the typical '60s stereotypes, which have long overstayed their welcome. Certainly one of the weaker parts of the picture is when Fonda describes her experiences at the real Woodstock, citing stories about Jimi Hendrix and the most over-appreciated band in the universe, The Grateful Dead. Sorry, Deadheads...

Nonetheless, the film is able to make up for those sidelights by offering a good time to be had by all. It also felt to me like the cast had a nice experience making this crisp 90-minute film, knowing that it was more for fun rather than career advancement.

"Peace, Love and Misunderstanding" probably won't be on too many "best of" lists at the end of the year, but that's OK, since it didn't want to be anyway.

'Music' not to be missed

Prisoners create beautiful music in documentary

The CineMatinee for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, is "Music from the Big House" (2011, 90 minutes, not rated).

Excuse me for gushing, but documentary filmmaking does not get any better than "Music from the Big House." Prolific director Bruce McDonald provides a cornucopia of heart-breaking and inspiring stories together with a great concert. The most powerful story is simply the triumph of the human spirit over the inhuman condition.

Canadian singer/songwriter Rita Chiarelli wanted to visit the "birth of the blues" which was, as she understood, an Angola prison in Louisiana. There she found prisoners serving life sentences. These characters play and sing music as well as seasoned professionals. Chiarelli resolved to put on a show of their music. It took her 10 years, but she did it, and that show has gone way beyond Angola's walls.

In Louisiana, "life means life." There is no parole. The board can reduce a sentence, but rarely does so.

One of the more desirable rooms at Angola holds 50 bunk beds. The prisoners keep their life belongings in a trunk by their beds. Louisiana provides a dark window on an American justice system that is more about punishment and politics than justice.

McDonald's camera follows Chiarelli around the prison. A shiny Christian cross embracing her heart, she speaks with the musicians. Their faces, their facial expressions, their eyes and their voices all reveal lifetimes of tragedy, despair, hope and transcendence. They could not have a better friend than Rita Chiarelli.

"Music from the Big House" is shot in black and white and the music is well produced and recorded. This is one of those documentaries that deserves to be seen by everyone.

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – the new West, Old West or anything in between – and "movies that missed us," notable films that never had a lot of publicity.

The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment. At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico "connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state – nearly 500 – or perhaps featuring a star/story from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $5 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $2.

The Fountain Theatre is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe, one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287.

Lectures, live music and a new location on the horizon

Aaron Henry Diaz
Foundation for Las Cruces Museums

One of the great pleasures of living in the desert is our great summer experience when dry earth finally breathes and thirst is quenched by the annual monsoon rains.

Everyone is entitled to their favorite season. A summer's day in the Mesilla Valley happens to be my mine.

On most Saturday mornings I enjoy a brief walk Downtown to observe the characters, support local vendors and decompress from the week's regimen where I finally find myself at one of our Downtown museums. There are numerous upcoming exhibits and events to appease your creative curiosity and support your local Downtown businesses and museums.

Join us Friday, Aug. 3, at the Downtown Arts Ramble, where we will glimpse three new exhibits opening at the Las Cruces Museum of Art. Meet us at 5 p.m. for the artists' reception, and hear great live music from the Dan Lambert Trio. New exhibits to view include charcoal works by Carol Meine, a mixed-media installation by Marianne McGrath and an installation of small-scale works by six painters of The Praxis Collective.

Don't miss the Brown Bag Lecture at the Railroad Museum this month, when Zoe Richmond, director of public affairs for Union Pacific Railroad, will present "The Next 100 Years of the Railroad," speaking on the obstacles and opportunities that await the railroading industry.

Two exhibitions continue this month at the Branigan Cultural Center: "The Bison: American Icon," an excellent and unique exhibit from the National Endowment for the Humanities, and "beautiful," an exceptional collection of works by Las Cruces-born Michael Ponce. Ponce will also give an art lecture on his current exhibit "beautiful," at 1 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4.

As August begins, the foundation awaits with anticipation the grand opening of the Museum of Nature and Science, which is only two months away. The museum will close its current location on Sunday, Aug. 5, reopening with a new name and a brand-new building Downtown on Nov. 2. The foundation has a special gala opening planned for our Friends of the Museums, providing a first glimpse of the brand new museum.

Our monsoon summer brings rain-drenched creosotes, thunder echoing from the West Mesa, the sight of the Organ Mountains crowned by irritated stratocumulus clouds. The much needed rains bestow life upon the high desert while indulging your next work of creativity. The Foundation of the Las Cruces Museums consistently seeks to showcase our community's creativity by promoting and financially supporting our municipal museums. Please consider joining us at our next event or inquire with Mike Weiss at membership@foundationlcm.com. See you at the museums.

Featured DJ: Lynz Green

Major changes to come at The Rocket

And, Lynz Green has a confession to make

By Suzanna Lester
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The beloved Lynz Green, an afternoon DJ at The Rocket – a local rock station – may have led her avid listeners astray a few weeks ago.

“It makes me sad to say, but I will be leaving afternoons on KXPZ,” Green posted July 16 on her Facebook wall. “Life makes its turns and twists and sometimes we just have to go with the flow. I’ve been doing the afternoons for over three years here, and it’s where my heart will always be.”

A widespread panic ensued.

“This is horrible news. This is the worst news I’ve heard... I’m actually kind of welling-up,” Jack Lutz, Green’s fellow Rocket DJ, said on-air, once he finally caught wind of her impending absence from the afternoon schedule.

“We hope whoever replaces her has no shame either,” said the liner, now being played during commercial breaks on The Rocket.

Perhaps the best way to announce Green’s future is to reflect on her past.

As an Air Force brat, Green has lived in beautiful, exotic places, one of her favorites being Misawa Air Force Base, Japan, she said.

Finally landing in Holloman Air Force Base, Green’s dad retired, and she officially set her roots in southern New Mexico.

“What’s that joke about the ‘Land of Entrapment?’” Green asked. “Ha. But really, I wouldn’t have it any other way ... we have the most amazing sunsets (and) a unique culture that I’ll miss when I do leave.”

Green, a self-proclaimed drama nerd, never planned her life around being a radio DJ. She just happened to be in theater with a guy in charge of Alamogordo’s 94.3 KYEE at the time. After reading a commercial for him one day, one thing led to another.

“I fell hopelessly in love with the business before I even knew what I was getting myself into,” Green said.

Green would soon find a new home at Bravo Mic Communications in Las Cruces.

“The Rocket crew at KXPZ is my family,” she said. “Jack, Shannon (Ellis) and I have all been working with this station for more than five years now and we are about as dysfunctional as the typical American family these days.”

While the long hours can sometimes make her feel like she lives 24-7 at the radio station, Green said Bravo Mic’s very comfortable environment is put to use by the close-knit jockeys.

“Jack’s gym equipment and coffee cups strewn about, my secret stashes of snacks being raided by ants...” Green said, describing her laid-back office environment.

So, could she really be leaving all of this fame and glorious living behind? Is Lynz Green, rock star, bad girl DJ of Las Cruces, truly going to rip a gaping hole into the hearts of so many devoted listeners?

Well, she wanted to make amends, so, here’s the truth officially revealed behind Green’s recent shenanigans:

“I’ve been somewhat sneaky in announcing that I was leaving afternoons, I’ll admit,” Green said, “but I never said I’d leave the station entirely.”

So, you can breathe a sigh of relief,

Las Cruces.

Starting Monday, Aug. 6, Green will begin co-hosting mornings on The Rocket alongside Lutz, making “Mornings Harder” from 6 to 10 a.m., while also performing as assistant program director, which means she’ll be programming in music as well.

“I know what I like, what moves me and what hits me in the heart bone,” Green said. “Music of all kinds does that for me ... rock music just does it a bit harder.”

Recently, she named bands such as In This Moment, In Flames and Hurt as being at the top of her personal charts. However, fans may be surprised that this rocker chick was raised a little more country.

“My family originally hails from South Carolina and Georgia. There wasn’t one day where Alan Jackson and George Strait weren’t on in my dad’s truck,” Green said. “But, I was also known for snagging Pantera, Metallica, and Joe Walsh discs and sneaking them into the playlist occasionally.”

So, as the hardened persona of a local celebrity begins to soften, one might find an even more humanized Green behind all the rock shows, microphones and song requests.

In fact, Green can often be found involving herself in charitable events, especially those involving children, such as the Team Babysavers Marchapalooza event for the Southern New Mexico March of Dimes in April, and St. Baldrick’s held for children’s cancer fundraising.

Perhaps this desire to use her powers for good comes from her continual drive to better herself, thanks to having her own little one.

“Kids are like farts – you only like your own,” is Green’s favorite quote, according to The Rocket’s website.

“Another place I hold nearest to my heart is Quetzaltenango in Guatemala,” she said. “I originally went for Spanish study, and wound up staying longer than planned. Its Mayan name is Xela. Pronounced Sheylah ... which is what I named my daughter two years later.”

Sheylah will be turning 4 this August.

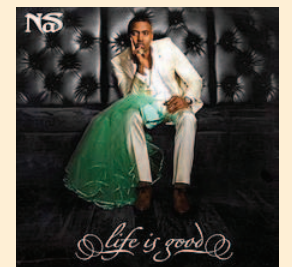

“From the Mercado, to the amazing volcanoes surrounding the area

... let’s just say I cannot wait to take my daughter (to Xela) one day,” Green said.

From addressing child abuse in our area to national issues, such as the recent Aurora, Colo., shootings, Green said it can sometimes be a challenge to separate personal feelings and opinions from her professional obligation to be informative.

“We work for a fun format, nothing too serious. But sometimes in the world we live in, we have to be serious,” Green said.

Bringing back Garduño's

New restaurant in Hotel Encanto

By Richard Coltharp
Las Cruces Bulletin

Garduño's in Las Cruces. The folks at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces are banking it works out better the second time around.

Early indications say it will. Brief background for those not familiar with the Garduño's story: Big, loud, flashy, fun Mexican restaurant in Albuquerque with good food and popular traditions. Expands into several locations, eventually into Las Cruces. The Las Cruces location, saddled with a big overhead, appears to cut corners. Locals blessed with a lot of great local Mexican food options try Garduño's once and go back to their favorites. Restaurant shuts down; now houses De La Vega's Pecan Grill & Brewery. Albuquerque locations also struggle, file for bankruptcy.

Fast forward a few years, and the Albuquerque locations start anew, going back to their original success formula and original recipes.

The folks at Hotel Encanto had the opportunity to bring Garduño's back to Las Cruces on a small scale, and they made it happen.

Locals are giving it another chance, and the feedback, so far, is positive.

One of the great Garduño's traditions was the tableside guacamole, prepared right in front of your eyes and, as the name suggests, right by your table. This does a few things. It provides entertainment, as you watch the server cut the avocados and mix and mash the ingredients. It provides education, teaching how to make your own guacamole, should you choose to at home. Perhaps most importantly, it verifies your guacamole wasn't dumped onto your plate from a plastic tub.

"We have four people who have graduated from culinary school," said director of outlets Patrick Hendricks, who manages Garduño's. When James Wilson of Hotel Encanto told me a few months ago they were bringing back Garduño's, I was cautiously optimistic, knowing the history. Wilson said they were bringing the original recipes, which includes their unique sauces and, yes, the tableside guacamole.

On a recent visit, I ordered the guacamole and nothing else. It's an appetizer you typically share with your fellow diners. I thought, "Why not as a meal?" Thankfully, my daughter doesn't like guacamole, so I had it to myself, and I couldn't finish it.

I'm sure it had nothing to do with the two bowls of chips and salsa I had before the guacamole. Here's the key thing: The guacamole was delicious. The chips and salsa were great.

My daughter commented on the quality of the beans, something you

'Watch' a winning combo of humor, sci-fi action Hill's comedic timing is perfection

Review by Isabel A. Rodriguez
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

I'll admit that going in to see "The Watch," I was less than enthusiastic.

Ben Stiller is a hilarious actor, and I'm a fan of his work, but when I learned that Seth Rogen co-wrote the film, I questioned the kind of humor I'd find in "The Watch."

I'm pleased to report, though, that this film is one of the funniest I've seen this year.

Stiller plays Evan, a do-gooder Costco store manager who is popular in his Ohio neighborhood and is known for organizing various groups.

When his security guard Antonio (a heavy-set Latino who oddly resembles Guillermo of "Jimmy Kimmel Live") is found brutally murdered, Evan takes it upon himself to organize a neighborhood watch.

He expects a high turnout at his first meeting, but instead is greeted by Bob (Vince Vaughn), Franklin (Jonah Hill) and Jamarcus (Richard Ayoade), three men you probably wouldn't want protecting your neighborhood against crime and vigilantes.

Instead of petty crime and neighborhood hooligans, the group finds itself up against aliens that plan to invade the city, and are on a killing-spree. The men soon discover they can trust no one.

The film relies on one-liners and lots of physical comedy for laughs.

Vaughn is his typical self – fast talking, overbearing and slightly neurotic. His portrayal of Bob isn't bad, but it's nothing new. You could even say it's the same character he played in movies such as "Couple's Retreat" and "Four Christmases."

His tough appeal is softened by his desire to protect his young daughter against ill-intentioned teenaged boys.

Stiller's Evan is also much like the hotel manager he played in "Tower Heist" last year. Again, not bad, but mostly trite.

The best performance in "The Watch" came from Hill. He takes advantage of every on-screen moment he gets, even when he has no lines. As others delivered hilarious lines, I enjoyed watching him keep a straight face and make equally hilarious eye movements and head nods.

Franklin's backstory is that he wanted to be a police officer, but was turned down when he failed nearly all the exams.

Rounding up the

group is Jamarcus, a newly divorced man eager to meet new women and fulfill his fantasies.

Jamarcus could have easily been an obnoxious pervert, but Ayoade portrays him as polite and demure – qualities that prevent him from appearing insufferable and utterly desperate.

Although some of the raunchy jokes weren't really suited to my taste, there were plenty of moments that made the lesser ones tolerable.

Some of the downsides of "The Watch"? First was the over-the-top product placement.

I remember when advertisers tried to be subtle when they placed cola products or the likes in the hands of the actors. Apparently, all of that has gone out the window.

In addition to the major chain store at which Evan works, other products are dominant characters in "The Watch."

Another downside is the incessantly raunchy humor, which is really a backdrop for the funnier moments in the movie. I could overlook most of it, but the fact that I had to do so made me question whether it actually belonged in the script.

One scene in particular, involving a party at Evan's neighbor's house, was so predictable I had to roll my eyes at it.

"The Watch" is a great film, and a welcomed comic relief after intense movies such as "The Dark Knight Rises." If you do see it, though, be prepared to hire a sitter for the little ones; it's not as innocent as it appears in trailers.

Also, keep an eye on Hill's facial expressions. It's really neat to discover how funny he can be at every moment.

Film Review
Ben Stiller and Vince Vaughn reunite for this comedy, but it's really Jonah Hill who brings the humor and steals the show.

Life warrior discipline

Michael R. Hurst, MS, LADAC, CEAP
Life and Work Solutions

The topic of discussion this month is life warrior discipline.

Living a life with a discipline component is critical and necessary if a person is going to maximize their opportunity for life fulfillment and success. The first thing a person must understand is that just about every individual or social problem has a lack of discipline component to it.

A vast number of people have bought into the "lie" that you are and always will be a victim. Various support systems and individuals want you to believe that somebody else is responsible for your lack of achievement.

This article focuses on how to use the discipline component of the life warrior concept to take control of your life. This will assist with life and work skills necessary to achieving your life and work goals.

The first step is to understand the definition of discipline.

According to Dictionary.com the definition of discipline is:

1. Training to act in accordance with rules; drill
2. Activity, exercise, or regimen that develops or improves a skill; training
3. Punishment inflicted by way of correction and training.
4. The rigor or training effect of experience, adversity, etc.
5. Behavior in accord with the rules of conduct; behavior and order maintained by training and control

A vital lesson about using discipline in order to overcome adversity comes from the early history of the United States.

In September 1608, the English colony of Jamestown, Va., was in danger of starving to death. Captain John Smith instituted the common sense policy of "he that will not work shall not eat." This

Fighting HIV/AIDS in SNM

Red Ribbon Bash helps fund patient meds, care

By Lorena Sanchez
Las Cruces Bulletin

It's been 14 years since the Red Ribbon Bash was introduced into the community to spread awareness about HIV and AIDS to southern New Mexico.

A lot may have changed in those 14 years, but the message and purpose is still the same.

"It is the only fundraiser in New Mexico that raises funds for individuals with HIV and AIDS," said Donny Grooms, co-partner for the event. "All funds raised cover Las Cruces Region 5, representing 10 counties in southern New Mexico."

Grooms, who has been involved with Red Ribbon Bash since its inception, remembers the first event welcoming 100 guests. Since then the event has grown to serve 325 guests.

The theme of this year's event is Fire & Ice will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 18, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road. The bash will include a fire and ice-themed food and décor. There will be a sit down dinner, a live and silent auction, Rein Garcia will provide the

New injury prevention chair chosen

NMSU professor strives for change

By Lorena Sanchez
Las Cruces Bulletin

Originally from India, New Mexico State University associate professor Satya Rao came to the United States "decades ago" to earn her college degree and to "continue on."

In the pursuit of a successful life and career, Rao has established herself as an important figure in southern New Mexico, and was named the 2012-13 chair-elect and 2013-14 chair of the New Mexico Injury Prevention Coalition (NMIPC).

After earning her Ph.D. in community health education from Texas Women's University, Rao found herself at NMSU furthering her career and advancing her research.

"The area I do a lot of my research in is mental health, violence and substance abuse and use," Rao said. "I connect them because I look at these issues in minority populations."

As an associate professor in the department of public health sciences at the university, Rao's primary topic of interest is the issue of suicide, which drew her to NMIPC.

"For the coalition, one of the big issues is preventing suicide," Rao said. "There also was no representation for southern New Mexico. There were a lot of needs in (the region) that were not being heard. Now the coalition represents the whole state, not part of it."

This year, Rao said she chose to run for chairperson of the coalition because she said she wanted to take part "in setting the agenda for the state."

"I wanted to take on a leadership role in this area, my own experience with my husband's suicide and (to ensure) issues in southern New Mexico are heard," Rao said.

See Dr. Rao on page D2

Satya Rao is the new chair-elect from 2012-13 and chair 2013-14 of the New Mexico Injury Prevention Coalition. Rao is determined to lower the rates of injury in the state, which ranks No.1 in the nation in deaths caused by injury.

entertainment during dinner and The Liars will providing after-dinner entertainment and dancing.

“Last year was the first year I attended,” said Travis Leyva, disease prevention program manager at the health department. “It was a great event and I look forward to this year.”

Leyva, who oversees HIV services in southern New Mexico as part of the department of health’s Community Collaborative Care Program, has worked with the Red Ribbon Bash for two years ensuring that proceeds go to those suffering with HIV and AIDS in the community.

“The money allocated by the nation and state is adequate, but the medications and cost of specialists are so expensive it can be difficult for patients to receive medical care,” Leyva said.

Of the money raised at last year’s event, $28,000 of the approximately $30,000 was used to provide funding and care to southern New Mexico HIV and AIDS patients. The rest covered expenses of the event. The care included vision care, non-formulary medications and medical co-payments.

“HIV and AIDS are not going away,” Grooms said. “They are still a very expensive diseases. This event is our way of paying it forward.”

Grooms said the goal for this year’s event is $40,000, and that cannot be reached without the support of the community.

policy included that the sick who could not work should be fed. The result was the colony survived and eventually thrived.

We can use the above lessons learned in order to survive and thrive. You have the free will to change the course of your life by changing certain activities. You can adopt or receive training in the necessary aspects of your life in order affect positive change.

The first aspect is to modify your behavior. This means modifying your daily routine and activities in order to become successful.

Focus your energy in life toward overcoming adversity. You need to assertively and positively pursue the life goals you desire.

The national statistics show that a large number of college students that fail to finish their degrees are side tracked by socializing and other less productive pursuits. This concept is true in the American workplace and in other aspects of life.

Dr. Rao

NMIPC takes on a number of issues in the state, including injury prevention, suicide, homicide, poison control, motor vehicle accidents, accidental deaths and drug overdose (including prescription medication).

For example, injuries sustained from not wearing a seatbelt, not wearing a helmet, partner violence, drugs, etc. The coalition also addresses how certain issues or circumstances might be related to mental health.

“One area I’ll focus my attention is creating a user-friendly site for the coalition, and expanding membership of the coalition so there is representation from across the state and making their issues a priority,” Rao said, Rao’s interest in becoming a member, and now chair, was to work toward spreading awareness and finding a solution to these issues.

“NMIPC looks at the issues of injury prevention, and what some parts of the states are doing that are successful and implementing them elsewhere,” Rao said.

The coalition also takes on a political role in creating policy and advocating for individuals impacted by injury. These issues are of high importance, especially in New Mexico, because of where New Mexico stands in terms of injury.

A 2012 report completed by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and Trust for America’s Health titled “The Facts Hurt: A State-by-State Injury Prevention Policy Report” named New Mexico as the having the highest rate of injury related deaths in the nation with the state coming in at 97.8 per 100,000 people dying from their injuries compared to the national average of 57.9 per 100,000 people.

“Not only does this take a toll emotionally on those affected by the deaths, but the financial toll for those injuries is high in New Mexico,” Rao said.

“My goal is to be active and showcase what we can do and make a difference in New Mexico.”

Rao attributes the high number to several contributing factors, including lack of awareness and education regarding injury related deaths. There is a lack of resources both fiscal and in terms of personnel to respond to these issues. Immigration is another factor, with a high number of people coming into the state, which can overload resources, and placing more importance on income and career over family.

Another step Rao is interested in taking with committee member Margaret Short, who is also the chaplain for Memorial Medical Center, is to integrate the religious and spiritual community in working to reduce and eliminate these issues.

“People in this state put a lot of emphasis on (spirituality and religion) and we’re working to get religious leaders to be a part of (spreading) awareness in their community.”

Proper vision screenings and examinations are essential for early detection and intervention of vision problems in children. Newborns should have their eyes checked before leaving the hospital. During well baby exams from birth to 2 years of age, your child’s pediatrician will use history and a vision evaluation to determine if vision problems exist. Vision can change frequently during the school years, hence the importance of the annual eye exam.

Healthy Woman guest speaker overcame tragedy

Laura Smart
Health Smart

Abby Rike, "The Biggest Loser" season eight contestant, spoke at the Healthy Woman event Thursday, July 19, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

As she began her story about the death of her husband and two children in a horrendous car accident in 2006, you could've heard a pin drop. The audience was silent and my eyes welled up with tears. Rike was quick to tell us she wasn't sharing this part of her life to gain sympathy, but simply to set the stage for what God had in store for her.

What would you do if you lost three members of your family in an instant? You may think you know how you'd react, but unless you personally experience a tragedy or a setback in life, you can only imagine what your reaction would be. Grief, of course, would be all consuming as well as being in the state of shock. Rike's point was that you need to "continue to live" and always have hope knowing that God's plan is bigger than any of us realize.

The intricate web God wove in Abby's life demonstrated that we truly never know what amazing miracles God can perform for each of us. That car accident caused a chain reaction of life-changing events, which affected numerous people and continues to spread the message that we should never give up.

Rike said it's "how we choose to react to the circumstances in life" that determine how we'll complete our journey on earth.

I'm assuming Rike's weight gain to 247 pounds before she was on "The Biggest Loser" was due to satisfying her grief by over eating and choosing unhealthy food. When I see how many obese people there are in America, I ask myself, "Why?" Perhaps they are grieving or have just given up hope that it's possible to restore their weight to a healthy state.

Rike's point wasn't that the number she saw on the scale was indicative of what kind of a person she was but how she dealt with the fact that she was obese and she achieved her weight loss goal in order to become healthy – emotionally and physically.

How does one reach a weight of 247 pounds? The answer is one day at a time. It's not overnight. Her goal of losing 100 pounds was achieved with "baby steps, one day at a time and hope."

I hope she inspired at least one person in the room to lose weight, get healthy, never give up and know "there is always hope."

Rike did say, "If you're going to buy my book and think it's about losing weight, don't buy it."

She had a scripture displayed on the screen prior to speaking. It was from the book of Romans. "Faith triumphs in trouble. Tribulation produces perseverance and perseverance produces character; and character, hope." God is using Rike to send a message of hope to us all.

Rolling golf course hills are the backdrop for Sonoma Ranch home

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletin

The 18-hole Sonoma Ranch Golf Course provides residents of the area with a sprawling view of rolling green hills set against the backdrop of the Organ Mountains.

When Kim and Bart Yerxa selected the .23-acre lot at 1920 Palm Canyon Road, not only did they get an unobstructed view of the majestic granite peaks, but also hole No. 1.

"You don't see any houses," said Kim Yerxa, standing on the covered back patio of the 2,365-square-foot residence. "You just see green."

Wanting to have a home built in 2003, the couple originally selected a piece of property two streets over. Hesitant to commit to the lot, they were driving around the neighborhood, scoping out other options, when they came across just what they were looking for.

"We found this lot and just fell in love with it," Yerxa said. "We probably have the best view of the golf course. It's unobstructed."

The lot belonged to Larry Jeter of Jeter Construction. Familiar with the builder's good reputation in the community, the Yexas purchased the lot and hired him to build their custom home. There was a catch, however.

"We wanted to be in the (Spring Showcase of Homes)," said Yerxa, adding that the annual tour was a short time way.

Working together to create a residence that complemented the couple's lifestyle, Jeter was able to construct their dream home, which combined Southwest architecture with touches of Tuscan flair, just in time for the showcase.

"The showcase was great," Yerxa said. "Everyone who looked at the home said they loved it."

Palms and other green vegetation sprout from the tan rocks that cover the exterior landscaping leading up to the front of the home. Stacked rock detailing line the garage and front windows and faux vigas protrude from the roof.

An iron gate, featuring the Zia symbol, encloses a small courtyard area welcoming guests to the front door. Inside, a nicho covers a wall in the entrance as ceramic tile winds to the living room.

"We have a lot of up lighting and lighted nichos," Yerxa said.

When it came to the layout of the home, the couple selected a split floor plan.

"We looked at a home (Jeter had) already built and chose that floor plan," Yerxa said. "We liked that it was very open. And the split floor plan is nice. It gives you more privacy."

At the center of the home is the living room. Described by Yerxa as her favorite area of the three-bedroom home, the living room features 16-foot-high ceilings, covered in large wood vigas and tongue-and-groove planks, as well as a rounded gas fireplace, accented in a faux finish, in the corner.

"I love being able to sit in here and look out at the Organ Mountains," she said.

The living room, as with the rest of the home, features an earthy color palette of terracotta and cream thanks to Jeter's wife and interior designer Rosetta Jeter of RJ Interior Design.

"(She) came in last summer and did all of the colors," Yerxa said.

Located near the living room is the guest bedroom wing, comprised of two bedrooms, which feature their own walk-in closets, and a bathroom.

"The cabinets are all custom," said Yerxa, adding that outlets were included in the bathroom cabinetry. "That way your countertops stay clean."

Opening up to the living room is the dining area, which is connected to the kitchen.

"The kitchen is a great place to cook," Yerxa said.

Stacked pecan cabinets with a marble inlay and crown molding fill the kitchen. Granite tiles showcasing a speckled pattern line the countertops. An island is set next to the Subzero refrigerator and features a cook top. A unique feature, an exhaust fan emerges from the island at the push of a button.

Next to the kitchen is an office as well as the laundry room and a half bathroom with a faux finish and pedestal sink.

Also in this area is the master suite. The bedroom of the suite features a tray ceiling and large windows that frame the view the couple fell in love with. The bathroom, which features surround sound, includes two sinks on either side of a 6-foot jetted bathtub. The same tumbled marble border found in detailing various rooms of the home surround the bathtub.

A shower, enclosed by a curved wall created from glass blocks, is found outside of the walk-in closet. The finished

Not just for cooking

Turn your kitchen into a modern-day gathering space

Maureen Villmer
Practical Design

Kitchens used to be just a place to cook and eat; now they are far from that.

Fast forward to today, the kitchen has become the social gathering place in any home. Just think about your next party; you're guaranteed to find most people congregating in your kitchen (even if you don't want them).

It's really important that you take time to make your kitchen into an attractive social space. No, that doesn't mean you bring your favorite chair to the kitchen in lieu of an oven. It does mean thinking beyond the realm of just cooking and eating to make the most of your kitchen remodel.

If your kitchen has room, add a bar, island or peninsula to keep friends on one side while you're on the other side cooking. If you have the space, add a couple of bar stools. Seating is the starting point when it comes to adding social space to your kitchen.

If you add an elevated bar at 42 inches high, then you would add a 30-inch stool. If your bar is the same height as your counter (36 inches) then you would add a 24-inch-high stool. If you drop it down to table height (30 inches) then you would use a regular chair at 18 inches high.

These are standards in the industry. If you don't use the standards, then your seating will not fit your bar. I have walked in many a home and observed a very high wall of separation and there are no barstools that will fit it. Take this into consideration as you are remodeling your kitchen.

Once you have this new space, don't forget to add lighting. Hanging pendant lights are always a good idea. Pendants should hang about 36 inches off the counter top. If you already have too many hanging lights in the area, consider recessed cans above the same space. Don't forget the dimmer switch. Dimmers can be used to alter the brightness of the room to match the tone of your event.

One of the newest trends in kitchen remodel is the in-house "coffee shop." Why should Starbucks get all of America's coffee money? Today, coffeemakers can be added to offer gourmet coffee, espresso, cappuccino or hot teas. The stations don't just sit on the counter, but rather you build them in to either existing cabinetry or one made especially for this. This includes the water supply and all.

I recently finished a kitchen remodel where we used an induction cook top. This was a great investment. These cook tops can cook food in a very short period of time. As an example, you could boil water in about 30 seconds. They use electromagnetic energy and heat the food instead of heating the pan. These cook tops are practical for people with busy lives; or, if you just want to speed up your cooking process. My clients love it.

Remember that kitchen spills will occur. It's vital that you select flooring that is easy to keep clean. Tile is extremely durable and can be used on the floor, countertops or backsplash. Other selections can be linoleum, wood, or laminate that looks like wood or stone. If you opt for a neutral color in tile, you will have a classic look forever.

Another kitchen remodeling trend is a

“ Seating is the starting point when it comes to adding social space to your kitchen. ”

Pendant lighting and bar seating are a few elements you can add to update your kitchen.

French door refrigerator. Instead of the refrigerator being on one side and the freezer being on the other side, the French door refrigerator has all refrigeration behind French doors and below is a freezer on the bottom. It's very convenient.

Look for a two-in-one faucet. Today's faucets for the kitchen combine the traditional standard faucet with the side sprayer in one simple unit. It is easier to clean around one unit than three. Many faucets today can be turned on by simple touch instead of turning a traditional knob. Look for these, they are great. It will also provide lower maintenance over time. They are expensive but very practical.

Another great kitchen remodeling trend that is popular today includes pullouts, either retro-fitted in your existing cabinets or in new cabinets. It is possible to organize the items you have and make it much more convenient. No more kneeling on the floor of your kitchen to find what is in the back of your cabinet – just pull out a slide and everything in the back comes out to you.

Because the kitchen has become a social gathering place in the home, it is one of the best places to invest your money in remodeling; you'll get the biggest return for your investment in resale. Meanwhile, you will get to enjoy it every day.

Need certification?

Lead training to be held on Monday, Aug. 13

Bulletin Staff Report

The Las Cruces Home Builders Association will hold a lead-based paint certified renovator training from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Aug. 13, at its office, 2825 N. Main St.

Under new Environmental Protection Agency rules that went into effect April 2010, contractors performing renovation, repair and painting projects that disturb lead-based paint in homes, child care facilities and schools built before 1978 must be certified and follow specific work practices to minimize occupants' exposure to lead hazards.

All individuals performing activities that disturb painted surfaces must be certified renovators or have been trained by a certified renovator. A certified renovator must also be assigned to each renovation and perform all of the EPA-mandated responsibilities of a certified renovator.

Fines for non-compliance are anticipated to be from $5,000 to $25,000.

The class, which can have a maximum of 30 participants, costs $300 for LCHBA members and $400 for nonmembers.

Gotta keep 'em separated

Gadget for when yolks and whites need their space

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Offspring penned their 1994 hit "Come Out and Play," they might not have had eggs in mind when they advised "You gotta keep 'em separated," but any baking aficionado will testify to the importance of mastering the art of separating eggs.

In your baking endeavors, you have probably come across a cake recipe or two that requires your eggs to be separated. This is because the yolk and white of an egg have different characteristics that can affect the outcome of your recipe.

When beaten, egg whites will have a greater volume on their own than if you were to beat the entire egg or just the yoke. For a cake that rises well, you'll be required to beat the whites separately.

Also, the whites help to dry or crisp foods, according to www.everythingeggs.ca. This is why in recipes for dishes, such as meringue or cream puffs, only the whites will be used.

Don't count the yolk out, however. The yolk is often used to add moisture, and will help ingredients blend together and thicken, creating a smooth, rich texture.

Separating your eggs might take some practice if you're an egg novice. After all, it's too easy to drop the yolk or break it, causing it to mix with your whites. Even after you've got the task down, a recipe calling for six separated eggs might seem daunting.

Get the job done quicker and with less egg-breaking frustration with an egg separator.

What is it?

The egg separator is the answer to your egg separating prayers. This gadget is designed to take the mastery out of dividing the yolks and whites of your eggs.

There are several varieties of egg separators. Possibly the most common egg separating tool features a rounded cup or bowl on the end of a handle. Two slits are placed on the side, allowing the runny whites to escape to a container below. This variety is available in either metal or plastic.

Another is a type of egg separator is a mesh contraption. A metal disc that is placed over your bowl or measuring glass features a mesh basket at its center. This will capture the yolk.

If those don't interest you, there are ceramic mugs designed to separate eggs. Simply break the egg into the pot-shaped container and pour out the whites through a hole or spout located near the bottom. These are usually novelty gifts – imagine a face with the spout being the nose so the egg whites stream out like snot. (Talk about appetizing.)

How does it work?

No matter the type of egg separator you select, each is designed to gently cradle the yolk, preventing it from breaking, while allowing the whites to fall away. Preventing the yolk from breaking is of the utmost importance when separating your eggs – whether you're using a gadget or doing it freehand.

Where can it be found?

A common kitchen utensil, the egg separator can be found at just about any kitchen store or cookware section. Check out stores such as Target and Bed, Bath & Beyond.

How much does it cost?

Depending on the type of egg separator and its material, the egg separator can cost anywhere from $5 to $20.

Helpful hints

It has been shown that cold eggs are easier to separate than warm eggs, so leave them in the refrigerator until you're ready for them.

Many people try to cut down on their caloric intake by using only egg whites and tossing the yolk. While the yolk contains 59 calories – the whites have 17 calories – as well as 4.51 grams of fat – whites have .06 grams – they do have other important nutrients. The yolk has 21.9 milligrams of calcium – the white has 2.3; 18 international units vitamin D – whites have 0; and 24.8 micrograms of folate – whites have 1.3.

Lemon Cake Pie

Deep dish pie shell
3 tablespoons all purpose flour
1 cup sugar
4 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
Zest of 1 lemon
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 large eggs, yolks and whites separated
1 cup milk

Heat oven to 450 degrees with rack in the lower third. Stir together 3 tablespoons flour, sugar, butter, zest, lemon juice, egg yolks and milk. In a separate bowl beat egg whites to stiff peaks and fold into lemon mixture.

Pour into crust and bake 10 minutes. Reduce oven to 350 degrees and bake until a knife inserted into center comes out clean, about 30 minutes. If top of pie gets too dark, tent with foil. Makes 8 servings. (Recipe adapted from Ladies Home Journal.)

Featured Kitchen Gadget: Egg separator

Details

How to separate an egg by hand

1. Crack the egg over your mixing bowl.
2. Separate the two ends, making sure to keep the yolk in one half.
3. Transfer the yolk to the other half, allowing the whites to fall into the bowl.
4. Repeat.
5. Repeat again.
6. When you're done, the yolk should be in the shell while the yoke sits in the bowl.

When separating several eggs for a recipe, one cracked yolk in your whites will ruin the whole batch. Stop this from happening by separating an egg over a smaller bowl and transferring it to a larger container before separating the next one. That way, if something does happen, you've only lost one egg.

Giving back with ReStore

MVHFH board member learns size, scope of organization

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

When Pete Lucero of Chaparral Materials Inc. joined the Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity Board of Directors three years ago, he wasn't quite sure what he was getting himself into.

"(When I was invited to join the board of directors) at that time, I really had no idea what it all involved," he said.

Now the president of the board, Lucero quickly learned how the non-profit organization involves the entire community – locally and internationally – in getting families into much needed permanent housing through volunteerism, construction and the ReStore.

An urge to help

Originally from northern New Mexico, Lucero said his family had deep roots in their community.

"My great-grandparents founded Española," he said. "A lot of my relatives have mercantile stores in the area."

Lucero said growing up, his dad, who was a judge before he went to work for the State of New Mexico, instilled in him the importance of giving back to those in need.

"He brought us up with the understanding that you've got to help each other," Lucero said. "My whole family is like that. My dad, still today, will help people in the community."

Living a block from their church, the family was very involved in its activities, Lucero said. While there, he saw firsthand how important it was to help others.

In adulthood, Lucero said he remembered those lessons he learned in his youth and looked for ways to give back.

"I was taught to always be respectful of your elders and always try to help people, so when Ed (Johnson, executive director of MVHFH) asked me about Habitat for Humanity, I thought I could contribute," he said.

Seeing the big picture

Lucero said he met Johnson several years ago when the two worked for Foxworth-Galbraith Lumber Co.

"We became friends," Lucero said. "We always got along really well. We would bounce ideas off each other."

"When he asked me to join the board of directors, I was very unfamiliar with Habitat for Humanity. I sold them materials when I was at Foxworth and I had an idea of what it was about, but after two or three months on the board, I got immersed and saw the big picture."

Much more than simply building houses here and there, MVHFH is part of the Habitat for Humanity International network that aims at improving the overall lives of those in need in a community, Lucero said.

"It's a worldwide organization," he said. "It's amazing."

A father of five children, Lucero said he understands the role having the security of a permanent home plays in raising a family.

"I think (Habitat for Humanity) is great," Lucero said. "It helps people who have had a bad shake in life. They not only move into a new house, but they also (get to) help (someone else)."

Lucero said he learned the work MVHFH performs isn't as simple as "just building a house."

"There is so much involved," he said.

From finding lots and getting the permits required through the city to making sure to stay within their budget, Lucero said his time on the board of directors has been "a learning experience."

An important element Lucero also learned was the various fundraising endeavors the nonprofit conducts throughout the year to be able to build the homes. A critical element to MVHFH's fundraising equation is the ReStore, located at 2301 S. Main St.

ReStore a key to success

The ReStore is a thrift store that helps generate funds for MVHFH.

"When people buy stuff (at the ReStore) it goes to the community, 100 percent," Lucero said. "The revenue from the ReStore funds our houses. When the ReStore makes good money, it provides us with the opportunity to build someone a house."

Lucero said he became involved with the ReStore, which opened its doors about five years ago, immediately after he joined the board of directors.

"I knew about the ReStore, but I didn't realize it was a big part of our income," he said.

As assistant manager of Chaparral Materials, Lucero said he realized that he had access to unwanted building supplies that could be donated and sold at the ReStore.

"I was able to get paint donated to the ReStore, and it sold like that," he said, snapping his fingers. "I realized that I could really contribute. Now, any time we change our product or we have products brought back that we can't sell, I ask my boss if we can donate (them to the ReStore)."

Lucero said he has even contacted area builders he knows to donate their excess supply to the ReStore, increasing the store's inventory and attracting more customers.

"You can find some really good stuff here," he said, adding that in addition to building material, the thrift store has furniture, electronics, books and even original artwork.

"Sometimes I'll walk through and look for little knick-knacks. I always encourage my coworkers to come in or give to the ReStore."

Lucero said there is always something going on at the ReStore.

"James (Allison, ReStore manager) has renovated the back to make it more shopper friendly," Lucero said. "James has created a great energy here. He has a really good team with him."

Pete Lucero, board president of Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity, has supported the ReStore, located on Main Street, through donations and being a customer.

ident two years ago, he said former board president Ed Kosciolk "left big shoes to fill."

"When I was approached about becoming president, I thought I had something to offer," said Lucero, adding that he has used his previous work experiences to help with everything from changing locks to helping with walk-throughs of completed homes.

With the 2012-13 build season beginning in October, MVHFH has big plans in place, including finishing a home that was in the framing stage last build season.

"We intend to finish two houses before Christmas," he said, adding that the nonprofit plans to complete four to six homes this build season.

He said they should have a lot of help with the construction of these homes, explaining that the Mesilla Valley is a popular place with Care-a-Vanners – Habitat volunteers who help different affiliate organizations around the country.

"Word is getting around that we have a really great team here and we have a really great atmosphere here," Lucero said. "Everything is just starting to really click."

Lucero said with "good things coming up" for MVHFH, it is just as important now as ever for the community to show its support.

"I hope more people get involved," he said. "We always need volunteers, especially at the ReStore."

Getting to know: Sun City Plumbing & Heating

'The best group of tradesmen'

Sun City finds success in diversity, skilled employees

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

For more than 20 years, Sun City Plumbing & Heating has been a go-to resource for those with plumbing, heating and cooling needs. Now, the company will add a new service to its repertoire.

David Olguin established the company in 1984. Since then, just about his entire family has gotten involved in one way or another with his son, Jason Olguin, now working as the company's vice president.

"We were incorporated in 1986," Jason Olguin said. "We were primarily a plumbing company for about 15 years."

Jason Olguin said his father first entered the plumbing industry when he was in high school, during which time he worked for a pool company in Albuquerque. His experience grew and he eventually became foreman before making the transition into the solar hot water heater field.

"He got his plumber's degree in Albuquerque," Olguin said of his father.

In 1980, David Olguin moved the family to Las Cruces. He worked for a local plumbing company for several years before venturing out on his own.

"He's always been the type of person who is really independent and calls his own shots," Olguin said.

Growing up in the north valley, Olguin said he remembers there was always work to be done, whether it was pulling weeds or taking care of the property's pecan trees. While in high school, he would split his summer breaks between football practice and assisting the crews of his dad's company digging ditches for water mains.

"I remember digging ditches from the street to the house," he said.

After graduation, he attended New Mexico State University where he studied engineering and business administration.

"I didn't think I'd join the business," said Olguin, adding that life had other plans. "I had to work full time while I was in school and the more I was in it, the more I liked the trade. I liked helping people."

He earned his journeyman status in 2003 and by 2005, he completed his bachelor's degree in business administration.

Expanding their services

While the company mainly worked in plumbing, it would conduct heating, ventilation and cooling (HVAC) jobs for new construction projects, Olguin said.

"We only did it with new construction at the time because there was a demand," Olguin said.

Olguin's interest in HVAC grew when he began to get involved with installing radiant heating.

"I would design and install the floor systems," he said. "I got to understand heat loads."

With heating came cooling, an even more popular service thanks to the area's warm climate, Olguin said. Soon, the company began selling solar hot water heaters and air conditioning units. It expanded its HVAC service to the public, including residential and commercial clients.

"There was a demand for efficient systems," he said. "Now, we provide pretty much everything related to heating and cooling."

From fully plumbing a home and installing HVAC ductwork and infrastructure to servicing and maintaining, the company does it all, Olguin said, adding that this includes plumbing repairs and stoppage and the installation of faucets, hot water heaters and tankless hot water heaters.

"We install about two hot water heaters a week," he said. "Our bread and butter is converting people's swamp coolers into refrigerated air. We get a big rush in May, and right now we saw another rush, because it's hot and humid. When it's humid, a swamp cooler won't work."

Olguin said the company is basically broken into three different departments: heating and cooling, plumbing and water treatment, the latest venture of Sun City Plumbing & Heating.

The company added water treatment to its services after installing numerous water softener systems.

"It developed out of our customers' needs,"

Since being established in 1984, the company has expanded beyond plumbing into the HVAC and water treatment fields.

Olguin said. "We have a lot of customers that live behind 'A' Mountain and in Picacho Hills that would call about stinky water or calcium deposits."

Finding a new product to solve customers' problems isn't unusual for Sun City Plumbing & Heating.

"It's almost out of our own curiosity that we do new things," Olguin said. "It's what has kept us in business – our diversity."

Maintaining their reputation

Olguin said Sun City Plumbing & Heating was like most companies when the economic downturn occurred.

"There was a time we were down to eight to 10 guys and it was my job to keep them busy," he said. "I would chase leads and come up with jobs to do. Then we started to expand each department. It took on a life of its own."

With 26 employees, Sun City Plumbing & Heating has construction and service crews under the direction of plumbing manager Carlos Gamboa and HVAC manager Jim Heath, Olguin said, adding that many of the employees are cross trained to take on various jobs.

"Every service we do, we emphasize training. That's what makes us different," he said.

Olguin said word of mouth is the best form of advertisement, which is why the company prides itself on building a good reputation in the community.

"That's the way we want to keep it," he said.

"My dad has always had one of the best reputations with contractors and one of my goals with our service department is to maintain that.

"Once in a while stuff goes wrong and we will take care of it."

Olguin said his dad still oversees aspects of the company and is mostly involved with their commercial projects.

Sun City truly is a family affair. Olguin's sister works part time at the company as a clerk and his aunt, a mechanical engineer, is helping him get the water treatment division up and running.

"Also, our bookkeeper is married to our plumbing foreman," Olguin said with a laugh.

With some employees being on board for more than 10 years, the success Sun City Plumbing & Heating has found is owed to their dedication, Olguin said.

"All of our key people are really the reason we continue to grow," he said. "The guys we have working here are dependable, honest and very skilled. They're the best group of tradesmen. I'm confident in the quality of their work and that they'll get the job done right."

A salt like none other

Epsom salt cures what ails you

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Nothing relieves aching muscles, sore feet and that daily stress like soaking in a nice hot bath of magnesium sulfate – also known as Epsom salt.

MgSO<sub>4</sub>-7H<sub>2</sub>O received its well-known nickname from the town in England in which it was discovered. In the 16th century, residents learned that the springs in the Epsom area contained this “salt” and had therapeutic properties.

Nowadays, Epsom salt – which actually isn’t a salt, but rather a crystal – serves numerous medical purposes.

Relieving just about anything from muscle cramps to constipation, one of the most common uses of Epsom salt is to soak sore feet. Soaking your feet in the crystals will reduce inflammation as well as soothe itching.

Look in your bathroom cabinets and you may find a container of Epsom salt for those long days. Whether you know all of the medical remedies the salt possesses or just add it to the occasional bath, Epsom salt is just as wondrous out of the bathroom.

1. Fertilize tomatoes and other plants: What’s the secret to big, juicy tomatoes? A dose of Epsom salt. Once a week, add the crystals to the soil surrounding your tomato plants. It’s suggested to use one tablespoon of Epsom Salt for every foot of height of your tomato plant. Not just for tomatoes, Epsom salt is also a good fertilizer for additional plants, such as houseplants, roses and other flowers and trees. Check with your local nursery for tips on how much and how often to apply the salt.

2. Get greener grass: Magnesium is a nifty mineral. Not only is it used to treat migraines, insomnia and depression, it can also improve the health of your lawn. Mix 2 tablespoons of Epsom salt to 1 gallon of water and sprinkle it onto your lawn. After, go over the area with plain ol’ H<sub>2</sub>O to ensure the mixture soaks into the grass.

3. Scrub your bathroom tiles: If you’re looking to brighten those dingy bathroom tiles, get some help from Epsom salt. Create a cleaning concoction by combining equal parts liquid dish detergent and Epsom salt. Use it to scrub your tiles and the grime-fighting mixture will dissolve the filth.

4. Clean your car battery: After some time, the terminals of your car battery can collect corrosion, which can negatively affect the operation of your vehicle. Keep your car running in tip-top shape by cleaning the terminals with an Epsom salt concoction. Dissolve an ounce of the crystals in warm water and pour over the battery cells. Let the mixture sit and then wipe the area with a rag or paper towel, removing the rust residue.

5. Banish blackheads: Clogged pores, known as blackheads, are the worst enemy to any complexion. Beat those annoying spots with Epsom salt. Combine 1 teaspoon Epsom salt and three drops of iodine in 1/2 cup of boiling water. After the mixture has cooled enough that you can put it on your skin, dip a cotton ball into it. Rub the cotton ball over the area. Repeat three of four times, reheating the solution each time, if necessary. When you’re done, dab the area with an alcohol-based astringent.

6. Frost your windows: Living in the Southwest, Jack Frost’s touch isn’t always felt. Create your own white Christmas by mixing Epsom salt with stale beer until the crystals are dissolved. Use a sponge to apply the liquid to your windows. For a realistic look, sweep the sponge in an arch at the bottom corners. When dried, the mixture will look just like frost.

7. Soften your towels: If your towels end up itchy and stiff after being washed, make them soft by soaking them overnight in a bucket of warm water with half a cup of Epsom salt. The next day, wring out the towels and toss them into the drier. When they come out, they’ll feel soft as new.

8. Decorate candles: Have a bundle of boring candles laying around? Turn them into a crystallized centerpiece with those tiny Epsom salt crystals. Cover the candle in Mod Podge, or some other liquid adhesive, and then roll it in Epsom salt.

9. Draw out a splinter: The next time you get a splinter, rather than digging into your skin with a needle and tweezers, get your Epsom salt. Soak the affected area in hot water and the crystals. The Epsom salt will help draw out the splinter, making it easier for you to pluck from your skin.

10. Paint a picture: A fun activity with the kids is creating pieces of art from paint made from Epsom salt. Mix a 1/2 cup of the crystals with 1/4 cup of water and bring it to a boil until the salt dissolves. Next, add food coloring to the liquid. When the paint dries, it turns a slight white shade, making the paint especially great for black paper.

11. Deter raccoons: Do you have unwanted guests rooting through your garbage? Keep them away by spreading a few tablespoons of Epsom salt around your trashcans. Raccoons don’t enjoy the stuff so they’ll stay away. Remember to periodically re-apply the salt, especially after it rains.

12. Prevent slugs: In addition to raccoons, Epsom salt will also help you deter slugs. Just sprinkle the crystals around your property, where the slimy slugs wander. The Epsom salt will be uncomfortable on their skin, preventing them from crossing over.

Epsom salt lantern

- Empty jars
- Epsom salts
- Blue and green food coloring
- Paper plates
- Three bowls
- Mod Podge
- Clear gloss sealer

Put about 1 cup of Epsom salts into each bowl. Add one drop of blue food coloring to one of the bowls and mix until evenly distributed. Add one drop of green food coloring to another bowl and mix.

Put the white Epsom salts onto a paper plate and gently shake back and forth to get an even layer. Place your hand inside the jar.

Use a paintbrush to coat the jar generously in Mod Podge. First paint around the bottom rim of the jar, then the body of the jar, then the top rim.

Starting at the bottom rim of the jar, roll in the Epsom salts. Next, roll the body of the jar and the top rim.

Stand the jar up onto a separate paper plate and add some Mod Podge to the top lip of the jar. Sprinkle some Epsom salts onto the lip.

Repeat this process for each color. Allow each jar to dry for a few hours. Use a clean paintbrush to loosen and remove any salt that fell inside the jars and to gently knock off any excess on the outside of the jars.

Spray with a clear gloss sealer. Let dry for about 20 minutes, repeat for a total of three coats.

Green appraiser course comes to area

Workshop examines the value and principles of green building

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

With green building practices and materials becoming more of a norm, area Realtors, appraisers, lenders and underwriters will get the chance to learn about their monetary value during a two-day Green Appraisal Workshop held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 27-28, at the Doña Ana Community College Workforce Center, 2345 E. Nevada Ave.

The workshop is the second course held in Las Cruces under a partnership between DACC and Santa Fe Community College, which received a portion of a statewide grant awarded to New Mexico through American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funds for green jobs training.

"The goal of the grant is to raise the educational level throughout the building industry to support green building in the state," said Sarah Hesse, assistant director of the SFCC Center of Excellence in Green Building and Energy Efficiency. "Realtors and appraisers are important to that because they set the value of green homes."

While many builders are using green materials, design and principles, often times those who determine the value of a home don't understand their significance and won't reflect these items in the price of the home.

"If a lender or underwriter doesn't understand the value of these elements, then there is no added value in green homes," Hesse said. "The need to recognize green elements in a home – which aren't just things like solar panels, but also design elements – and put that value on them."

The workshop is the combination of two courses held by the Appraisal Institute, an international association of professional real estate appraisers with approximately 23,000 members in nearly 60 countries throughout the world.

Hesse said the class, which has a cost of $700, was held in May at Central New Mexico Community College in Albuquerque, at no charge for members of the real estate industry.

"We had 30 Realtors and appraisers attend," she said, adding that one appraiser ventured to the course from Las Cruces.

Hesse said she heard several stories from participants about appraisers recognizing the value of green elements, but underwriters not, which can negatively affect the funding a potential homeowner receives.

"Our feedback was directly in line with our thought that people don't understand green elements and how they affect a home's value," she said.

"Based on how well it went at CNM and how many people came up to me to say how positive of an experience it was, we brought it back to the Las Cruces area and will do it in the Santa Fe area in September."

Sandy Adomatis of Adomatis Appraisal Service in Florida will instruct the workshop. Hesse said Adomatis has several years of green appraisal experience in addition to traditional real estate appraisal experience. She also develops curriculum in conjunction with the Appraisal Institute.

On the first day of the workshop, participants will receive an introduction to green building principles and concepts. This will include the evolution of green buildings, the concept of sustainability in buildings and the principles, practices and components that distinguish sustainable from traditional buildings.

The second day will involve looking at case studies in appraising green residential buildings so participants can understand how to put these concepts into practice.

"The first day is more of a lecture style and the second day will be a discussion amongst professionals," Hesse said. "The second day will be a lot more hands on. They will go through the process of how to identify green elements and discuss hurdles they might encounter."

Hesse said this is the first time the workshop is taking place in Las Cruces and will be provided for free to licensed Realtors, licensed appraisers, lenders, underwriters as well as veterans and those in the green building and building industries.

"Our goal is to spread information on green building to different professions around the state," Hesse said. "Green building won't have a different value until appraisers and underwriters understand their value."

Time to go raw

Make your food prep easier

The hot days of summer are the perfect time to relax with friends in the backyard and sample delicious fruits and salads while sipping chilled drinks.

Follow a few quick and easy tips to serve and enjoy the fruits and veggies grown in the garden. Serve these foods raw, because cooked vegetables can lose many nutrients throughout the cooking process.

- Simple dipping delights: A plate of crudites, also known as raw vegetables cut into bite-sized strips, served with a favorite dressing or delicious dip, makes for a great afternoon refreshment or pre-dinner appetizer. Simply clean and prep vegetables such as carrots, radishes, broccoli, cauliflower, asparagus and even kohlrabi, the night before and keep stored in the refrigerator until they are ready to be served. Add unexpected treats including shoestring-cut sweet potatoes, sugar snap peas or green beans served fresh from the garden.
- Pretty, delicious and raw: Turn garden delights into pieces of art. Thinly slice a sweet potato into long, narrow strips. Wrap the strips in a circle, pinning on one side with a toothpick, and flaring out on the other to create a flower appearance. For radishes, carefully slice into – but not all the way through – a square shape. Make a second, smaller square shape inside the first, and continue this process until you have reached the middle. Finally, use a vegetable peeler to peel long carrot curls to decorate the plate. There are plenty of other vegetable art ideas on the Internet to help decorate your vegetable platters.

- Sassy salsa: The reason many restaurants serve chips and salsa or guacamole prior to the meal is because they are delicious and easy to prepare ahead of time. Make pico de gallo using tomatoes, onions, jalapeños and cilantro. Or, change it up by smashing avocados and substituting them for the tomatoes. Salsa and guacamole make easy sides that guests love.
- Fruity drinks: For a "cool" way to relax with friends this summer, make fun, fast drinks that incorporate the bounty of the garden. Use that mint that has taken over the garden to add a fresh taste to iced tea, fresh squeezed lemonade or cocktails. Mojitos and mint juleps are both cool and refreshing on a hot summer afternoon. Freeze fresh fruits and berries to give any drink an added splash. Pop frozen strawberries into lemonade or mixed fruit into your favorite wine for a sangria to remember.
- Smoothies and desserts: Whether you are looking for a quick, tasty way to start the morning off right, or a delightful way to end an evening, fresh fruit is the answer. For a simple breakfast on the go, blend blueberries, peach slices, bananas, strawberries or kiwi in a food processor with some ice, a little yogurt and a splash of your favorite fruit juice for a yummy smoothie. For an extra kick, try adding a scoop of your favorite vanilla-flavored protein powder. For dessert, simply chop the fruits for colorful, healthy and tasty toppers – great over ice cream or cakes and even better when layered with a light pudding and angel food cake for a sophisticated trifle.

- Crispy salads: There is nothing better than a crisp lettuce salad full of fresh vegetables and decorated with nuts and fruits. If growing leaf lettuce, do not cut until you are ready for use. Head lettuce can be chilled in the refrigerator for a day or two. Cucumbers, tomatoes, peppers, herbs, radishes and asparagus add delightful flavors to the lettuce. Mix in cheese such as feta, blue cheese, Parmesan or goat cheese, and add nuts, croutons or even tortilla strips for some added crunch. Do not be afraid to add those fresh summer fruits as well. A handful of blueberries, sliced strawberries, diced apples or delicious grapes on top, and you have got a well-balanced meal mostly grown right in your own garden.

The dog days of summer are the perfect excuse to take it easy. Head out to the garden to find plenty of food items that are delicious raw. You can have a meal, snack and even dessert ready to go in no time.

Pat Chavez, energy systems manager in the NMSU Facilities and Services Operations and Utilities department, demonstrates use of Niagara, a software program that helps manage and monitor NMSU's energy use.

Saving on the power bill isn't just for homeowners

University uses software program to manage and monitor energy usage

By Emily C. Kelley

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

We have all felt the impact of increased energy costs in our bank accounts the last couple of years, but have you ever wondered what New Mexico State University pays to keep the lights on?

The bill is big, and with air conditioners and swamp coolers running this time of year, the bill is even higher. Lorraine Silva, a senior accountant with Facilities and Services Operations, said NMSU's peak months of demand are July, August and September. The June electric bill for the NMSU Las Cruces campus was $325,237. And that's just the electricity purchased from El Paso Electric. Ouch.

Now that you've been shocked with the cost to power the campus, here is some good news – NMSU has several complex systems in place to not only monitor energy consumption, but to help reduce it.

NMSU does create some of its own power, too, and takes advantage of off-peak billing rates for power-intensive operations like chilling the water in the chillers, which is then used to cool the campus.

Pat Chavez runs NMSU's energy management program and is able to handle this highly involved, technical job from a computer in his office, using a system called Tridium Niagara AX, or Niagara, for short.

"My role here at New Mexico State is to manage, monitor and assess the energy consumption and design and maintain automation control systems to help optimize and save energy," Chavez said. "Primarily, it's much like the way the automotive industry has come along from where you start with a basic carburetor type of setup, where you're trying to advance it to the great computer-controlled technology. That's why we're getting great mileage in cars today. We're trying to do that on the building side of the system. We add sophisticated electronics and communications, so all of that data can migrate to a central system, where we can control it remotely."

The Niagara system shows everything from the system meters on campus and monthly use totals, to which fans are currently operational in certain buildings. This complex and customized system allows Chavez to monitor and analyze energy use on campus – and to be quickly alerted when something is awry.

Niagara is also helpful for maintenance and troubleshooting, giving the technicians who are dispatched on work orders a better idea of what the problem might be before they even arrive at the work site.

"This is a very empowering tool because we technically have the muscle to force shutdown things if we see something on the end-user side that is not-so-desirable from an energy standpoint, and we can manually turn these things off," Chavez said.

A good example of undesirable use is heating or cooling an empty building on weekends or over the holidays, which is simply a waste of energy and money. Another example is when buildings are cooled below the NMSU campus temperature set point standard of 76 degrees when occupied or 85 degrees when unoccupied. While some facilities are granted exceptions because of unique requirements because of the mission of the facility, the rest of campus is asked each year to adhere to the policy.

Chavez does not have control over the temperatures in all buildings on campus, most notably, residence halls and housing units, as those are dwellings, not office, classroom or laboratory space, and the residents control their own temperature set points.

There are approximately 60 buildings on campus with some form of digital controls in place, but 28 of those still that have yet to be retrofitted with controls to the individual room level, allowing more detailed management of those systems through Niagara. Part of Chavez's job is to identify buildings for retrofits, then follow through with the projects as funding becomes available for the work.

"It's all about the energy. It's no secret that, even in the household, you start becoming very aware of the utility bills, the increasing cost and the environmental awareness," Chavez said. "It really is a huge driving factor now, the utilities, and needing the technology to really optimize (efficiency) and just not have a lot of waste."

Solar for your RV

Even your home on wheels can use sun power

Mellow Honek
Living Better
Solar Powered

I receive requests almost every week for adding photovoltaic (PV) solar to a recreational vehicle (RV), so I figured it was time to address the practice.

In many respects, an RV is a small, efficient version of a home. Since we are planning on purchasing a small RV, I've been researching the subject and have a few ideas to share.

Energy cost savings and ecology are good shared reasons for adding solar to a motor or regular home. A unique benefit to the RV is enhanced autonomy. Of course, there are no utility incentives for your RV. However, it may be possible to claim the 30 percent Federal Solar Investment Tax Credit.

At the time of this article, my research is not complete on the tax question. Even when complete, I will direct you to discuss the issue with your tax professional since I am not qualified to offer tax advice.

The key reason for adding solar to your mobile home is solar provides a great way to charge your batteries without running the generator. PV panels generate electricity when exposed to sunlight. The more direct and intense the light, the more power they generate. The electricity generated passes through a charge controller and is ultimately used to charge the storage batteries. So there you have it – charged batteries without noise and without depleting your precious fuel supply.

Solar can be added in two ways. PV solar panels can be permanently attached to your vehicle or you can setup a portable rig to use while parked. Permanently attached panels are always ready to generate electricity when your RV is parked or even while driving in route to your own slice of paradise. The solar panels won't be as effective if you prefer nesting in shady spots, but, if there is room on your RV, you can always add a few more PV panels to help compensate for shady conditions.

The portable rig might be the better solution to deliver electricity if you always use a shady location to keep your RV cool. Just erect your portable solar rig in a nearby sunny spot. Personally, I'll be selecting the permanent solution.

You can make your solar power go farther if you reduce the electrical load in your RV. One of the easiest ways is to replace energy sucking incandescent light bulbs in your RV with any of the many direct replacement LED bulbs. The LED bulbs use one-tenth the power. If you still have the old TVs or plasma TVs in your RV, replace them with a new LED TV. A new 26-inch LED TV uses less than 40 watts.

From a technical perspective, solar panels must never be connected directly to a battery. Always connect batteries and solar panels through a charge controller. The charge controller protects the batteries from overcharging and is a necessary component of a properly designed solar PV system. I recommend you have an authorized RV service provider install your PV solar system for safety and proper operation.

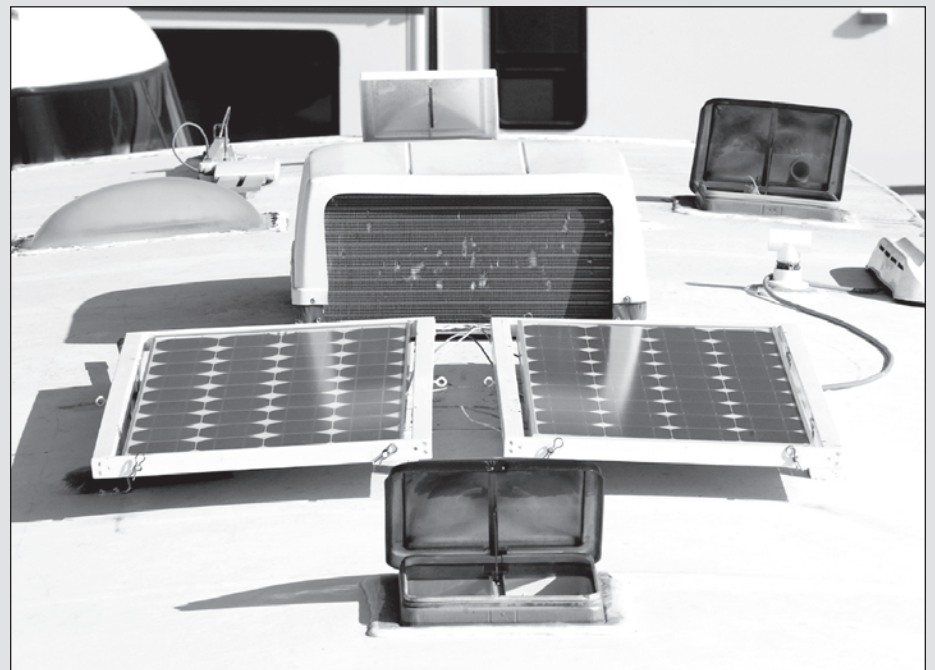

Adding solar to your RV may appear expensive at first glance, but as with any purchase, remember to weigh all the factors. On the savings side, you'll get reduced fuel consumption for your generator. In addition, it will significantly extend the life of your batteries by constantly and automatically maintaining a high charge level.

Then consider the more important but less tangible benefits. Enjoy the peace and quiet you traveled so far to experience. Batteries are always topped off and ready to go. Preserve the pristine environment by polluting less.

Numerous solutions are available for adding solar to your rig. Here in Las Cruces, I spoke to Sunland and United; both RV dealers offer systems and installation. To learn more about adding solar to your RV, you may want to contact one of these dealers or consider visiting the website for Samlex (<http://samlexsolar.com>) or Go Power (<http://bpelectric.com>).

ChileKnights

A summertime refresher

Even watermelon can have some spice

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

When it's blasted hot outside, I reach for thick wedges of juicy, ice-cold watermelon. Its watery texture delivers a satisfying, light and sweet memorable flavor.

Knowing my fondness for watermelon (and addition to chile pepper), a friend emailed a recipe for a spicy watermelon snack that calls for Sriracha sauce (pronounced SIR-rotch-ah), which is a staple in my pantry. Sriracha, packaged in a squirt bottle, is made from chile paste along with other ingredients that are similarly found in other hot sauces.

What sets Sriracha sauce apart from others, however, is its sugar content. A smidgeon is added for sweetness and to curb hot chile pepper heat. I add squirts of the sauce as a topper for chicken, pork and seafood and use it in recipes, but that's a topic for another column.

This week, Chile Knights is dedicated to chile-infused watermelon combos – memorable sweet heat fixes for these dog days of summer.

Spicy Watermelon Snack

2 cups large watermelon chunks
2 teaspoons Sriracha sauce
1 medium lime, zested and juiced

In a medium bowl, toss together the watermelon, Sriracha, lime zest and lime juice. Place the mix in a plastic bag, pressing out all of the air. Seal and chill in the refrigerator for at least 1 hour. Enjoy as a snack or serve as a side with a main entrée. Tastes great on ice cream. Makes 2 cups.

Fire and Ice Salsa

3 cups watermelon, seeded and chopped
1/2 cup poblano pepper, stemmed, seeded and minced
2 tablespoons jalapeño peppers, stemmed, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice

Finley shows new tree steward Jaquiline Rader which branches need to be pruned on the newly planted tree.

Las Cruces Lowe's manager Kevin Quinn congratulates the graduates. The Tree Steward Program was made possible by a $5,000 grant from Lowe's earlier this year.

The tree stewards learned about irrigation, nursery operations, pruning and the general care of trees from experts and agreed to donate 40 hours of their time as part of the program. Applications are available for the program's second training class on the Keep Las Cruces Beautiful link at www.CLCPD.com.
