Research at NMSU nears $200 million

Officials say CHE story missed picture

By Todd G. Dickson

Despite more competition for research grants, New Mexico State University officials said they are enjoying tremendous growth in awards, approaching almost $200 million.

This is a more than $40 million increase in research dollars to NMSU since last year, but a recent article in a news publication widely read in academic circles is painting a different picture.

A recent edition of the Chronicle of Higher Education (CHE) conducted an analysis of the 100 universities receiving the most federal research dollars in 1999. Of those, 27 of them at least doubled their own spending on research over the following decade while falling in the federal ranking.

"Among those taking a dive were the State University of New York at Stony Brook, the University of Utah, and the New Mexico State University system, which together jacked up their own research spending by a combined $156.8 million compared with inflation-adjusted 1999 levels," the article reported. "The closely watched ranking of federal dollars for scientific and engineering research, compiled annually by the National Science Foundation (NSF), is a marker of institutional research prowess and prestige and can help the highest-scoring universities attract the best professors and graduate students."

NMSU Vice President for Research Vimal Chaitanya described CHE's analysis as "comparing apples to oranges."

NMSU research does depend heavily on federal dollars – accounting for more than 80 percent of its total research grants – but the CHE article only looked at research evaluated in the fields of science and engineering, Chaitanya said.

Code Talkers share their amazing story on Memorial Day

By Jimmy Currier

In 1945, Keith Little returned from the Pacific and was being honorably discharged from the Marines. He had done his duty serving in the Marshall Islands, Saipan and Iwo Jima, and was ready to go back home to the Navajo Indian Reservation in Crystal, N.M.

Upon leaving his officer's headquarters, the officer told him, "Thank you, Mr. Little for what you did." Little, puzzled, asked, "What did I do?"

That question would riddle Little for 23 more years. He never fired his rifle at the enemy, but little did he know, he played an integral part in the United States defeating Japan in the Pacific and ultimately winning World War II.

On Memorial Day – Monday, May 30 – in Las Cruces, Little, Bill Toledo and Frank Chee Willetto – all Code Talkers and members of the Navajo Code Talkers Association – were the guests of honor at Veterans Memorial Park, off Roadrunner Parkway. Little relayed the story of the Code Talkers to the patriotic crowd, which included veterans of each of America's wars since World War II.

From 1945 to 1968, Little's and more than 400 Navajos' mission as Code Talkers was classified. They were instructed to tell others they were radiomen. However, the Japanese discovered these weren't your ordinary communication specialists.

"It was a top secret project, and no one told us why we were doing it," Little said.

The Code Talkers constructed an entirely new alphabet based on their native language, and because the language was never written, it couldn't be traced.

The Code Talkers were commended for their skill, speed and accuracy throughout the

"The first 29 really developed something that's cleverly devised," Little said about the original Code Talkers. "It was schemed in such a way that it would confuse the enemy, and that's never been broken."

Iwo Jima, a pivotal battle won by the Marines, couldn't have been won without the Code Talkers, Maj. Howard Connor said. These

Jemez casino picks up support

Both chambers of commerce endorse Anthony, N.M., project

By Todd G. Dickson

Las Cruces Bulletin

Just as the deadline for public comment approached Wednesday, June 1, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces voted in favor of the Jemez Pueblo's proposal for an off-reservation casino in Anthony, N.M.

In a formal position paper, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce stated its conclusions were based on the "long-term greater good of the Anthony community, Doña Ana County and the expanded impact of the business to our state."

The position paper cited not only the construction jobs resulting from the $55 million casino, but also the 950 permanent jobs it would bring. If approved by the Interior Department and Gov. Susana Martinez, the casino developers will provide health insurance, on-the-job training, opportunity for advancement and other benefits, The chamber's position adds that the projected average annual income for the casino workers is $29,200, with a total annual payroll of $28 million.

The casino also would spend $30 million each year on locally obtained maintenance supplies, food and beverages, computers, technical services, financial services, Mesilla Valley agricultural products, marketing and promotions.

NM soldier earns Medal of Honor

President to give medal to courageous Santa Fe native

President Barack Obama will award the Medal of Honor to an Army sergeant from New Mexico for courage on the battlefield in Afghanistan.

Sgt. 1st Class Leroy Arthur Petry will receive the nation's highest military decoration in a ceremony July 12, according to

The 31-year-old native of Santa Fe is being recognized for courageous actions during combat operations against an armed enemy in the eastern Afghan province of Paktia in May 2008.

Petry will be the second living, active-duty service member to receive a Medal of Honor for actions in the Iraq or Afghanistan wars. Last year, Obama awarded a Medal of Honor to Staff Sgt. Sal Giunta, also for actions in Afghanistan.

Petry has completed multiple combat tours to Afghanistan and Iraq totaling 28 months of deployment.

His military decorations include: two Bronze Stars, a Purple Heart, three Army Commendation Medals, two Army Achievement Medals, National Defense Service Medal, three Army Good Conduct Medals, Afghanistan Campaign Medal with Combat Star, Iraq Campaign Medal with Combat Star and Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, to name a few.

U.S. Sen. Tom Udall congratulated Petry.

"Petry and his Army Rangers were deployed to capture a high value target in Afghanistan," Udall said. "During their raid, they were engaged in a firefight with the enemy when several in their regiment were pinned down by grenades. Wounded by bullet fire and with no thought to his personal safety, SFC Petry grabbed one of the grenades and attempted to toss it away. He would lose his right hand and continue to fight. It was this immense act of bravery that saved the lives of his brothers-in-arms - and illustrated once again to a grateful nation the immense courage and sacrifices of our men and women in uniform.

EBID begins releasing water

Drought limits allocation

By Marvin Tessneer

Ditch riders opened up irrigation water to Mesilla Valley fields late Wednesday, June 1, as the Elephant Butte Irrigation District (EBID) opened its 2011 season with one of the shortest allocations of water on record – four acre-inches.

The USDA Bureau of Reclamation opened the gates at Caballo Reservoir, the lower reservoir, Tuesday, May 31, and farmers started irrigating in Arrey and Hatch, the upper part of the irrigation district. Water reached the Leasburg Diversion Dam early Wednesday.

The irrigation season outlook for EBID farmers is not good. EBID has a 2011 water allocation of 54,000 acre-feet, plus 20,000 acre-feet of carry-over, or "credit water," which it had preserved from previous seasons.

The board of directors is watching to see if the summer rains, or "monsoons," will develop and benefit farmers with runoff. In March, the EBID board also petitioned the Office of the State Engineer for a release of 100,000 acre-feet. The OSE has denied the request, and the board is working on alternatives.

The Elephant Butte Reservoir storage, as of late May, was 359,000 acre-feet, 18 percent of capacity, which is 1.97 million acre-feet. The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Services reported its forecast for the Rio Grande Basin snow pack runoff 155,000 acre-feet, 35 percent of the long-time average.

The El Paso Water Conservation District No. 1, which has a large water carry-over, was able to start out the season in March with 3.5 acre-feet. It's allocation this year is 27,652 acre-feet and benefits with a hefty carry-over of 224,000 acre-feet.

Visiting New York

One week's trip to the East Coast lets us remember why we love the people and lifestyle of New Mexico

Last week, Jaki and I traveled to New York with our 7-year-old Las Cruces granddaughter Audrie to visit our other granddaughters, Emilee, 13, and Ivy, 5.

The Northeast, especially New York, is a terrific place to visit. Our daughter and her husband live just west of the Hudson River near West Point. For those who have never had the opportunity to visit the Hudson River Valley, the river is framed on either side by towering, tree-covered cliffs, offering spectacular vistas in any direction.

During the Revolutionary War, the mighty Hudson was among the most important strategic military sites in the New World. George Washington spent the last year of the war at his headquarters in New Windsor, N.Y., located about 50 miles north of New York City. Various forts and fortresses are dotted along the river. There are some locations with massive concrete and granite foundations where the Americans controlled ship traffic up and down the Hudson by stretching giant iron chains across the river. The chains were so large, each link weighed as much as half a ton.

When a person wanders through one of the state parks, among the thick trees, granite boulders and gnarly undergrowth, including prolific stands of poison ivy, one cannot help but gain respect for the early Americans who had to live and do battle in such a difficult environment. And, of course, this time of year, with ideal weather conditions life is much easier than in the dead of winter, sub-freezing temperatures and two feet of snow. How these early soldiers not only survived, but managed to win a great war, is simply amazing.

... the sunshine and the friendly atmosphere in our city of smiles in Las Cruces, New Mexico.

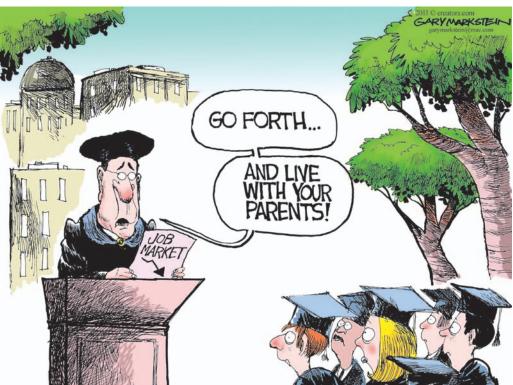

Today, the region is dotted with homes and contiguous cities, towns and boroughs. In fact, there are more than 50 communities within 10 miles of my daughter's home in Mountainville, which is situated in a relatively rural and heavily wooded area. Centuryold homesteads still stand today among sprawling retail stores and new homes. It is easy to wonder how many local residents take the time to reflect on the historical significance of the area in which they now reside.

Memorial Day was a big holiday with many communities hosting local parades and picnics. The holiday is a much-appreciated break for schools, almost like an extra spring break, because most schools do not end classes until the end of June.

Of course you cannot visit this area without a trip to the iconic Big Apple – New York City. Our trip this year included visits to the Statue of Liberty, Empire State Building, Times Square, Broadway and Central Park. That's about all a visitor can accomplish in a day. Next trip we will try to add a Broadway play, the Museum of Modern Art and a baseball game at the new Yankee Stadium.

Like other areas of the country, the economy is difficult. Real estate is in the drink and jobs are hard to find. Taxes and costs of government services are escalating. Unemployed folks are not happy about their situation. On the other hand, the people who do have jobs aren't particularly happy either. This is especially true in retail stores, where it is almost impossible to find assistance with any question, or even a sale. When you get someone's attention, they are likely to give you an attitude, probably hoping that you will just go away.

It's nice to spend time with the family, and to have the opportunity to visit some of our nation's most historic sites. However, it will be good to get back to our home, the sunshine and the friendly atmosphere in our city of smiles in Las Cruces, New Mexico.

Concerns about SWEC's La Mancha wetlands project are unfounded

Thank you for your coverage of the Southwest Environmental Center's La Mancha Project. The article (Pond project raises concerns, Friday, May 27) contained a few errors that I would like to address.

The La Mancha Project is a wetland restoration project. Wetlands - the places where water meets land – are among the most productive ecosystems on Earth. They provide essential habitat for a great variety of fish and Wetlands were once common along the Rio Grande in southern New Mexico, but have mostly disappeared over the past century. SWEC is committed to protecting our wildlife heritage by restoring these habitats wherever possible. Readers may be familiar with an earlier project - the Picacho Wetlands, the ponds that now form the core of the Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park.

The La Mancha Project is designed to replicate one particular type of wetland that is especially important for fish and other aquatic creatures, and is especially rare these days – a permanent, slow-velocity water feature that is connected to the river at least some of the

The project consists of a 2- to 3-acre pond and a channel to the river. At certain times of year, depending on flows in the river, water and fish will move between the pond and the river. At other times, they won't. The amount of water flowing into the pond can be controlled by a gate. The pond will be deep enough to support fish year-round and prevent anaerobic (stagnant) conditions from

Regarding the water rights situation, the article got the facts a bit confused. SWEC owns surface water rights administered by the Elephant Butte Irrigation District (EBID). We pay an annual assessment just like other EBID constituents and receive an annual allocation of water. Right now, we're not using our water because the project has not been built. Just as farmers divert water from the river for irrigation, our plan is to divert water for the project, but only after we obtain the necessary permits from the appropriate agencies and only up to the amount allowed by our water rights.

Contrary to what was stated in the article, SWEC does not own any groundwater rights, which the Office of State Engineer (OSE) says are needed to offset the loss of water from our

Senate races may be nasty

Jay Miller Inside the Capitol

The Democratic U.S. Senate primary is likely to be as hard fought and negative as the GOP primary. The two races have much in common.

Both contests feature a member or former member of the U.S. House representing Albuquerque, against an opponent who has won statewide election.

In the GOP primary, former U.S. Rep. Heather Wilson and Lt. Gov. John Sanchez do battle. In the Democratic primary, U.S. Rep. Martin Heinrich and state Auditor Hector Balderas face each other.

Wilson represented Albuquerque for more than 10 years, never losing an election. She left her seat and unsuccessfully ran statewide in the 2008 GOP Senate primary to replace Sen. Pete Domenici.

Sanchez won the GOP primary for governor in 2002 and then lost the general election by a big margin to Bill Richardson. He won the 2010 GOP primary election for lieutenant governor and went on to win the position in the general election running on a ticket with Susana Martinez.
On the Democratic side, Heinrich has been elected twice to the U.S. House from Albuquerque. In the U.S. Senate primary, he is squaring off with Balderas, who is serving his second term as state auditor.

The big question for the coming election is whether it is better to have represented Albuquerque in Congress or to have been elected to statewide office.

Both Sanchez and Balderas have traveled the state extensively. They already have political contacts in every county. Is that more important than having a big, loyal base in Albuquerque and not be known well among the other two-thirds of New Mexico's population?

The pundits disagree. In 2008, Wilson beat Pearce in Albuquerque by about a 2-1 margin. But Pearce won his southern constituency by a 3-1 margin.

Wilson should do well again in Albuquerque. Sanchez probably will be stronger in the north. Southern New Mexico could decide that race.

Among the Democrats, Heinrich should do well in Albuquerque and Balderas in the north. One advantage for Balderas is that he can boast of being from Wagon Mound when he is in the rest of the state, but talk about his days going to law school and being an assistant district attorney

Neither Balderas nor Sanchez has established much of a record for a congressional candidate. Both served one twoyear term in the state House of Representatives. Balderas is in his fifth year as state auditor. Sanchez is in his first year as lieutenant governor and hasn't been allowed to do anything except preside over the Senate.

Wilson is pounding on Sanchez's lack of a record. She says he claims to be a tea party conservative but his record to back that up is invented. He's not who he says he is, Wilson claims.

Recent developments since Sanchez announced indicate that Martinez may have unofficially come down on Wilson's side. The day after Sanchez's announcement, Martinez announced she will not be assigning him any duties since he might be distracted by running for the U.S.

For the life of me, I can't recall an elected official ever resigning an office in order to run for a higher office. That includes the governor herself who held onto her district attorney's job until days before she was sworn in as governor. It also includes Wilson when she ran for the Senate.

The day after the governor's disapproving remarks about Sanchez, she appeared at a meeting at which Wilson was speaking and seemed to make a point to talk with Wilson and have their picture taken.

Besides presiding over the state Senate, statutes also provide that the lieutenant governor serve on several boards and commissions. The governor can't legally remove Sanchez from them but past practice suggests she might try again.

Jay Miller may be contacted at insidethecapitol@hotmail.com.

pond through evaporation. Fortunately, the City of Las Cruces has become a partner in the project and has agreed to dedicate up to 15 acre-feet of its groundwater rights for the project. The city has filed an application with the OSE to do this. Whether the city's water rights are valid or sufficient will be a matter for the OSE to determine. There is no violation of New Mexico's anti-donation clause because nothing is being donated to

We understand the concern about mosquitoes, but would like to reassure your readers on this score. Our wetland will support mosquitofish, dragonflies, bats and other natural predators of mosquitoes. Compared to the hundreds of miles of irrigation ditches and drains, the thousands of acres of irrigated farmland and the countless backyard ponds in the Mesilla Valley, our small wetland should not be a significant contributor of mosquitoes.

The article may have given readers the impression that we are at odds with EBID and the Office of State Engineer over this project. To the contrary, SWEC has made an effort since planning for the project began to keep all stakeholders in the loop. We have met with EBID and OSE staff on numerous occasions to discuss technical and legal issues related to the project, and will continue to do so.

Change is never easy. The current system of water management in the lower Rio Grande has developed over the past century. It works well and we are committed to working within it to achieve a balance between thriving farms and a healthy river.

We understand that a project like ours might raise concerns, which makes it important that people know the facts before jumping to conclusions. I invite your readers to learn more about our project at www.wildmesquite.org.

Creating the American police state

Authorities now demand instant obedience from citizens

What bothers me most about illegal drugs and terrorists is they are causing the American police state.

With these perceived needs, the police authorities can abuse citizens with impunity. For example, leaving Boston's Logan International Airport several years ago, I went problem-free through the screening until I handed my itinerary to the last agent who said, "Your itinerary is incorrect, go back and correct it."

'What do I need to correct?" His eyes narrowed.

"Your itinerary is incorrect, go back and correct it."

At the airline's counter the agent looked carefully at my itinerary and ticket. "No, this is correct. Go back and tell that TSA guy he is full of crap."

I blurted, "Not in this lifetime or the next am I telling a TSA official he is full of crap."

So I wandered back to the security checkpoint. The official who screened me was busy with someone else so I presented my itinerary to another screener. "Go ahead," he said.

In the last few years, I have been inconvenienced, menaced and intimidated by the very American authorities who are fighting to protect us. This is the product of the war on illegal drugs and the war on checkpoints in southern New Mexico. There are three checkpoints near Las Cruces. For decades, each time I drive through one, I am asked my citizenship, even though I am inside my own country a hundred miles. Day after day what they are really looking for are illegal drugs. That is why a drug sniffing-dog circles my car pronouncing it uninteresting.

Recently, in a column I made a reference to the "Andy Griffith Show" with easy going Andy Taylor and excitable Barney Fife as law enforcement officers. Andy does not regularly carry a weapon. Barney does and has his one bullet in his shirt pocket. He puts his hand on his pistol to emphasize his authority while Andy looks for ways to defuse conflict.

On my radio talk show, "News New Mexico," we have been talking about the conflict of authorities and regular citizens. Then it happened to me.

Last week, I noticed a lifeguard helicopter taking off and stopped to take a picture. I love anything that flies, especially helicopters. I was behind the helicopter so could not see either the patient nor the

Two members of the authorities hustled over to me and told me that taking a picture of a Lifeguard Helicopter violates the Federal HIPAA Privacy Rule because there might be a patient onboard. They said I was violating a federal law. They commanded me to stop right then and obey their commands.

I reasoned that this did not seem correct because people take pictures of ambulances and helicopters often. So I asserted that it was my legal right to shoot a picture of a helicopter. I pointed out no one could see the patient from where I was, if they were worried about that.

Rather than them saying, "Oh," and walking away, this cranked them into overdrive. They stepped menacingly in front of me and ordered, "Put the camera

We then had a brisk conversation, where I successfully resisted calling the more aggressive one Barney, but stood my

Then it appeared to me that I was about to be arrested for not following a command if I did not back down. So, I apologized profusely and removed the offending picture from my camera phone. They let me go with the warning to follow

My offense was not doing instantly what a person of authority told me to do. That is the police-state mentality.

Incidentally, I had so much on my plate at that moment that I could not do the "good fight" right then. So I backed down, but it bothered me quite a bit.

The war on illegal drugs and terrorists has created a police state that requires Americans to be instantly obedient to the authorities or they will be crushed by the full force of our government. The illegal drugs and terrorists are not harming our country as much we Americans are harming ourselves by creating an American police state.

Price of education?

"Education doesn't make somebody better or even necessarily more qualified.'

Such was the disparaging verdict uttered in a March 18 column in the local daily press.

I can't recall throughout more than nine decades on this planet a more cynical indictment of the value of schooling. There's enough blame to go around to rest on several shoulders.

For openers, a generation that grew up in an atmosphere laced with "entitlements," education pundits with competing sure-fire curricula and a social climate with some overly indulgent parents turning a blind eye to "anything goes" behavior.

In today's setting, possibly no one ever explained a fundamental tenet to the above young writer – that what you get out of learning is directly in proportion to how much you put into that effort.

Perhaps the above columnist may never read about any of the following prime examples of the value of learning.

For starters, take one of this country's well-known icons. His insatiable appetite for knowledge started with self-learning that paid off in becoming one of this country's greatest presidents, as related in a fascinating book, "How Abraham Lincoln Learned To Read.

Then there's the example of one of America's most renowned composer-conductors, the late Leonard Bernstein of "Westside Story" fame. During a TV spectacular honoring him as long-time leader of the famed Philharmonic Orchestra, Bernstein paid tribute to those who early on helped shape his career.

In particular he cited Harvard professor D.W. Prall, whose course on the philosophy of aesthetics left an indelible mark on that young musician.

SNAP in need of support

The Spay and Neuter Action Program (SNAP) is not going to receive funding from the City of Las Cruces or Doña Ana County in 2011 and needs support from the citizens of Doña Ana County. SNAP is applying for grants to keep the program running; however, due to economic times, funding from these sources is very difficult to obtain.

SNAP is not only asking major donors to step forward and be willing to give us their support, but is also asking each and every pet lover and pet owner in Doña Ana County to contribute to keep this program running.

In an effort to help with

In an effort to help with the overpopulation of dogs and cats within Doña Ana County, SNAP has assisted in paying for more than 8,800 spays or neuters (fixes) since the organization was started in 1999. Please donate whatever you can afford. Even small donations of $5 or $10 add up and will help SNAP to continue providing services. Donations may be made Donations may be made at or mailed to SNAP, 2405 W. Picacho Ave., Suite 103, Las Cruces NM 88007.

SNAP wants to publicly thank each and every person who has donated funds and supported SNAP in the past. We also want to thank the 11 veterinarians who have provided their services to SNAP. Unless we receive financial support from the community, SNAP will be forced to either set up quotas on the number of applications and approvals issued each month or accept no applications each month depending on funding available.

Fewer spays and neuters done by SNAP will result in more puppies and kittens at the shelter and more deaths.

Pearce listens

I have heard Congressman Steve Pearce speak in person twice. He is not what I'd refer to as a book report candidate. In other words, he just doesn't tell us what we probably already know and isn't redundant about issues we've come to discover through the Internet.

He has responded to us with his agenda, what he is fighting for, what he has accomplished and what he believes we his fellow citizens and constituents want. He has been tirelessly visiting many cities and scheduling many town hall meetings to communicate these platforms to us.

I have sat in front of this congressman at dinner. As one of his constituent's, I was interested in observing how he would present himself out of the spotlight, and not in front of dozens of people. I perceived him as an interested listener, and he truly relayed his keen interest regarding what someone had to say.

As New Mexican's we're also U.S. citizens with a big government that is trying to take over our freedoms and rights. He believes that the government should be working with each individual state and not promise the solve all and end all for all our needs at our sacrifice.

Each of us can have our own perception of a political figure and usually to see if we are listening to rhetoric and will he fulfill what he says visa-vis "by proof in the pudding" ... is he acting on what he says? As far as the green chamber goes, what do they know what New Mexicans need ... they haven't sent a representative to my town to raise my consciousness.

Angie Long

Silver City Common sense

Driving while intoxicated will always be a problem until New Mexicans are taught to read the New Mexico Constitution and pay attention. There are two entities involved here: the schools and every citizen. Getting them together is the problem, but I keep trying.

The New Mexico Constitution has an unusual declaration of rights and the section needs to be stated and studied:

"All persons are born equally free and have certain natural, inherent and inalienable rights, among which are the rights of enjoying and defending life and liberty, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and of seeking and obtaining safety and happiness."

It would take a six-hour course to study this section properly, but for DWI a few short observations are proper. The key is to understand that each of us has a right to happiness.

But what is happiness? Unfortunately, dictionaries are of little help. The solution is philosophical because the happiness we have a right to is simply a good life. A good life is one marked by good habits where a person's potential is realized.

So how is this accomplished? The good habits fall into four groups: prudence, temperance, justice and fortitude.

Use your common sense, think before you act, clearly identify where you are headed in any undertaking. You keep yourself always in charge of you, human desires of every kind are recognized and kept under control.

Whatever you do, you look out for others who may be affected because they all have the same rights as you. Then you prove to yourself that you are in charge, you make meaningful decisions and stand firm.

Apply all this to drinking alcohol or taking drugs. If you have any sense at all you will stop and ponder.

If all this hits you as something new, you're in for a surprise. This was all worked out by the philosophical Greeks 300 years before the Christian era.

If you never learned this in school, you have been short changed. If your parents never taught you, tell them.

Whatever, you will have only yourself to blame if you ignore all this and get drunk, go driving and kill someone or yourself.

on the Mississippi River.
Alabama and Tennessee have been ripped with tornados, there's snow on the ground in Wyoming, it's too wet to plow some places, Texas is burning up and, at my place in Arizona, we haven't seen rain since October.

I guess it's just another run-of-the-mill springtime in the land outside the city limits. Farmers have a right to be confused. Is it good times? Or bad?

Looks like the price of

Looks like the price of dairy products is stabilizing, but alfalfa hay costs more than a salad at Ruth's Chris Steak House. The price of gas is $4 a gallon, but it's 30 percent ethanol made from $7.50 corn.

Am I making money, or losing it?

Your pasture is droughted out. Should you sell off a hundred cow-calf pairs for enough to clear your debt, remodel the house and buy a new pickup? Or, ship them 150 miles away to lease pasture for $16 per month per pair for six months, then ship them back just in time to start feeding them hay this fall?

Even horse traders are in a quandary. Unwanted horses are now up to $80 a head, from $40 last year, which is great, but down from $500 five years ago. Should they be happy or sad? It seems like we in a bubble. There is good demand for what we sell but all around us we see things that make us squirm.

There has never been any confusion about the status of farmers, in the eyes of the ruling class ... we are peasants.

The economy in general continues to lag. The federal government, as well as many state governments, seem to resemble Nero fiddling while Rome burns. They manipulate figures like magicians doing card tricks. "The Wizard of Oz" rolls and thunders and people yawn.

Government, through the Farm Bill, the EPA and the media, has always been able to maintain a "cheap food policy." Politicians can get Politicians can get vicious when their constituents complain about the high price of food. They take retribution by threatening cuts to the Ag Extension Service, county fairs, Vo-Ag in rural schools and food animal medicine studies in vet schools.

We are at the top of their lists when belt tightening begins.

At this moment they are looking greedily at that rare opportunity, a resilient productive agriculture, to pillage. All it would take will be an expression of indignant outrage from Nero, the magicians, the wizard, or their entitlement cronies, accusing farmers of making – heaven forbid – a profit.

But there has never been any confusion of our status as farmers, in the eyes of the ruling class – the politiks, barons, dictators and pundits – we are peasants. And as such must never be allowed to have the power over a commodity as essential as food.

So enjoy your success while you can, my friends. They are already sharpening their legislative knives.

The spacecraft that revealed the surface of Venus

Landing a probe on the mysterious planet proved to be difficult

By Michael Shinabery

The most recent of 27 missions to Venus, the European Space Agency's Venus Express, entered planetary orbit on April 11, 2006. The ESA launched Venus Express on a Soyuz-Fregat rocket, from Russia's Baikonur Cosmodrome, in November 2005.

Today, according to the website http://sci.esa.int, studies of the atmosphere, cloud layer and surface geology continue. A Jan. 7, 2011, ESA report said data gathered in conjunction with ESA Cluster satellites orbiting Earth have improved models of the interaction of Earth and Venus with the solar wind. The result is a better understanding of the effects of charged particles on orbiting spacecraft.

The Soviet Union launched the first Venus mission, Venera 1, on Feb. 12, 1961. While communications failed en route, the craft did achieve the first-ever flyby.

Next, the United States' Mariner 2 lifted off in August 1962. Solarviews.com said the world's first successful interplanetary spacecraft weighed 450 pounds and carried six scientific instruments including a two-way radio. On Dec. 14, Mariner 2 arrived and began scanning the surface with infrared and microwave radiometers, capturing data that showed Venus' surface to be about 800 degrees Fahrenheit. Three weeks later, Mariner 2 went off the air.

If man ever did step onto Venus, he would find ... no liquid water, probably no oxygen, and of course not even plant life, said The View From Planet Earth. He would suffer agonies as sulphuric acid droplets burned his flesh, and he would be

The Venera 9 lander shot this photograph on Venus on Oct. 22, 1975. The Babylonians believed "Astarte, which we call Venus, was the goddess of love," said "The View From Planet Earth." St. Isidore, the Bishop of Seville, equated the cosmos to Biblical scripture and called Venus both "an emblem of Christ" and "an emblem of Satan." Galileo, in the early 1600s, "discovered the Venus had phases."

crushed by atmospheric pressure.

"The Venusian atmosphere is about one hundred times as massive as that of the Earth," said "New Worlds: Discoveries from Our Solar System" (Anchor Press/Doubleday/1979). "While Earth's atmosphere contains only about 0.03 percent carbon dioxide, that of Venus is almost all carbon dioxide.

The second Soviet probe, Zond 1, left April 2, 1964, but lost contact, solarviews.com reported. The next year, on Nov. 12, Venera 2 lifted off carrying television broadcast equipment, but communications failed just before arrival. Four days later, the Soviets launched Venera 3, hoping for a controlled surface landing. Yet again contact failed, and on March 1, 1966, the craft crashed, becoming the first to impact on the surface of another planet.

Venera 4 arrived Oct. 18, 1967. Solarviews.com reports the payload included thermometers, a barometer, radio transmitters, and cosmic ray detectors. This was the first probe to be placed directly into the atmosphere and to return atmospheric data. Parachuting to the surface, atmospheric pressure crushed the spacecraft. Such pressure also destroyed the Venera 5 and 6

One day after Venera 4 arrived, Mariner 5 entered orbit. Nssdc.gsfc.nasa.gov reports Mariner 5 was "a refurbished backup spacecraft for the Mariner 4 (Mars) mission." Its instrumentation measured both interplanetary and Venusian magnetic fields, charged particles, and plasmas, as well as the radio refractivity and UV emissions of the Venusian

The Soviets launched 16 Venera probes; of them, Venera 7, in December 1970, was "the first successful landing of a spacecraft on another planet," solarviews.com reports. The craft used an external cooling device which allowed it to send back 23 minutes of data. Venera 8, after landing in July 1972, returned data for 50 minutes. Subsequent craft managed to survive even longer.

The Venera 9 and 10 landers, in October 1975, transmitted the first photographs, which were black-and-white, revealing a rocky, eroded terrain.

Dmitryi Gregoryev, chairman of an international space mineralogy commission, commented: "It looks ... (like) some unknown force has scattered the rocks over the planet's surface, reported New Worlds: Discoveries from Our Solar System.

It could also be that these are outbursts from giant meteorite craters," Gregoryev said.

Prior to the Venera 9 and 10 landings, New Worlds: Discoveries from Our Solar System reports astronomers believed only about 1 percent of sunlight could penetrate through the thick cloud cover and reach the ground. The surface of Venus would be extremely gloomy, hardly the place to take photographs. For this reason, both were equipped with powerful floodlights.

Venera 12 recorded electrical discharges, probably from lightning, in December 1978, solarviews.com reports. Following the final Venera mission in 1983, the Soviets launched Vegas 1 and 2 in 1984. Upon delivering landers, both aimed for a Halley's Comet flyby.

The U.S. sent Pioneer Venus 1, aka the Pioneer 12 orbiter, in May 1978. Arriving on Dec. 4, solarviews.com reports it transmitted for 14 years, becoming the first spacecraft to use radar in mapping the planet's surface.

"Radar tells us that Venus is cratered, that it possesses a mountain higher than Everest, and the largest canyon known," said The View From Planet Earth.

In 1992, fuel ran out and atmospheric entry destroyed the spacecraft, reported nssdc.gsfc.nasa.gov.

Pioneer Venus 2 or Pioneer 13, launched in August 1978, was also known as the Pioneer Venus Multiprobe. After parachuting four probes that distinctly defined atmospheric layers, the craft burned up.

Galileo, launched in May 1989, was a U.S.-European effort to study Jupiter's atmosphere, but used gravity assist techniques to pick up speed by flying past Venus. The Space Shuttle Atlantis launched the final U.S. mission, Magellan, in May 1989. Magellan radar-mapped 99 percent of the planet's surface through thick clouds of carbon dioxide that makes the surface invisible to optical instruments. In 1994, controllers directed the orbiter into the atmosphere, where it burned up.

"What went wrong that Venus is so unlike Earth?" New Worlds: Discoveries from Our Solar System, asked. "Perhaps, being closer to the sun, any water vapor released by volcanism failed to condense into droplets of water, so there was nothing to stop the atmosphere of carbon dioxide growing and growing. ... Decidedly the name-givers erred. Mars the "fiery" turns out to be freezing, and the planet associated with a nude goddess rising from the Mediterranean is hidden in cloud, dry and blazingly hot."

Fireworks safety urged

The Las Cruces Fire Department reminds citizens to safely and legally use fireworks this season. With the Fourth of July holiday a month away, special precaution should be taken this year during this extreme drought situation.

Due to the drought, the City of Las Cruces has banned the use of all fireworks within areas that are covered wholly or in part by timber, brush or native grass. The city has authorized limited use of permissible fireworks, as listed below, to areas within city boundaries that are paved, barren or have a readily accessible water source.

Permissible fireworks allowed to be purchased and discharged are ground and hand-held sparkling, and smoking devices, such as cone fountains, crackling devices, cylindrical fountains, illuminating torches, toy smoke devices and wheels.

Fireworks prohibited for possession, sale or use in the city limits are aerial and ground audible devices such as: aerial spinners, helicopters, mines, missile-type rockets, Roman candles, shells, stick-type rockets, chasers and firecrackers.

Fireworks purchased outside of Las Cruces may be prohibited within the city, and if possessed or discharged within the city limits, may result in citations or fines. The Las Cruces Fire Department wants the citizens to have a safe and happy Fourth of July holiday by following a few firework safety guidelines. They include:

- Keep a water supply a garden hose and a bucket handy in case of fire.
- Fireworks may not be sold to anyone under 16 years old.
- Fireworks may not be sold to anyone who is intoxicated.
- Be aware that extreme drought conditions have left grasses and weeds susceptible to fire.
- Keep in mind the hour of usage and be considerate of your neighbors.
- Never let children light fireworks.
- Use fireworks outdoors only and keep them away from combustibles and busy areas.
- · Light only one item at a time and move away from it.
- · Purchase fireworks only from a licensed vendor.
- Follow all label directions carefully and use common sense.
 Help keep Las Cruces beautiful by cleaning up debris from fireworks.

For more information on fireworks, and fireworks safety, call the Las Cruces Fire Department at 528-4150. The TTY number is 28-4211.

WSMR to host network testing

Beginning Monday, June 26, the U.S. Army will begin large-scale testing of 30 different systems and networks at White Sands Missile Range and Fort Bliss. The Network Integration Evaluation (NIE), as it is known, will bring together 3,800 soldiers from Fort Bliss' 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Armored Division with 2,000 soldiers, government employees and contract personnel from WSMR, Fort Bliss, Fort Hood and other installations.

Army agencies will test and evaluate the 30 different systems while the soldiers of the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Armored Division use the systems in various tactical scenarios throughout WSMR and Fort Bliss. The testing operations will take place 24 hours per day Monday through Friday each week. During the weekend, Fort Bliss soldiers will return home, however, the majority of the 2,000 testers and evaluators will remain in area hotels.

Because of the influx of military and contract personnel, the communities of Las Cruces, El Paso and Alamogordo can expect increased business in area hotels, rental car companies, restaurants, grocery stores and convenience stores as well as an increase in business to businesses, such as FedEx Office and copy centers, around the WSMR area. The testing and evaluation will also cause an increase in military vehicle traffic on the roads between WSMR and Fort Bliss and an increase in regular vehicle traffic around the WSMR entrance points and Las Cruces.

The NIE will run through July 15. The Department of Defense plans to host the NIE on a semi-annual basis in the future. For more information about the NIE, call the WSMR Public Affairs Office at 678-1134.

Groundwater cleanup to begin

Construction is set to begin on a facility to extract the chemical perchloroethylene, commonly referred to as PCE, from groundwater in the area of Griggs Avenue and Walnut Street in central Las Cruces known as the Griggs and Walnut Ground Water Plume Superfund Site.

In separate actions, both the Las Cruces City Council and the Doña Ana Board of County Commissioners gave approval for construction of a tray aerator. The system exposes the impacted water from two off-line municipal wells to oxygen, which dissipates the PCE. The cleansed water is then suitable for drinking. The project, jointly funded by the city and county, is expected to cost $3.5 to $4 million. The funding will come in the form of a New Mexico Finance Authority Drinking Water Loan. Construction is scheduled to be completed in May 2012.

"This is proven technology," said City of Las Cruces Utilities Director Jorge Garcia. "We are not designing or constructing a new form of remediation. This technology has been around a long time and has proven its effectiveness time and time again. It's the ideal solution for this situation."

Besides beginning construction, the action by both bodies will allow time to develop a consent decree between the city, county, the Environmental Protection Agency and the state and federal National Guards for additional funding to finance project operation and maintenance costs for the project's duration, which could be up to 15 years and $20 million.

"We're anxious to get going on cleaning up the groundwater from the impacted area. It's been a long process to get us to this point and we're eager to proceed," said City Manager Robert

A joint city-county investigation determined that the National Guard was the source of the contamination for using PCE as a metal degreaser between the 1950s and 1970s at a former armory site near the intersection of Solano Drive and Hadley Avenue. The chemical was disposed of directly on to the ground and found its way into the groundwater. The contamination was first detected through routine water sampling in 1996. The PCE was discovered in wells 18 and 27. Both wells were immediately taken off line and have remained off line ever since.

State warns of scam by fake health inspectors

The New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) has received multiple reports from food establishments across the state of individuals impersonating health inspectors.

The individuals often call the food establishment and utilize multiple techniques to convince owners of the validity of the call including providing names and inspector ID numbers.

The callers often state a new inspector has been assigned to the establishment and then attempt to set up an inspection time that may require food establishment owners to call a number and enter a pin to confirm the inspection time.

Food establishment owners should never give business or personal information to callers or visitors claiming to be health inspectors. NMED would like to make food establishments aware of the following criteria, which will help identify legitimate inspectors:

- Inspectors must present a state-issued photo identification before conducting an inspection.
- Inspectors never accept cash payment for inspections.
 Permit fees must be paid by a check or money order made payable to the "New Mexico Environment Department."
- Înspectors do not charge for grade emblems, permits, or food safety signs. When in doubt, NMED encourages food establishments to verify the identity of health inspectors by calling the nearest environment department field office.

Food establishment owners are also encouraged to call their local law enforcement agency if the validity of a call or visit is in doubt.

Our girl Myla is a beautiful, two-year old tabby. She is quite a healthy girl and is a wonderful lap cat. Myla would love nothing more than to spend hours laying in your lap or snuggled on the couch with you. Since she is out of the kitten phase, she isn't as hyper as younger cats and will easily integrate into a new, loving home.

men worked around the clock during the first two days of battle, sending and receiving more than 800 messages perfectly.

Little said he and his fellow Marines were just doing their duty.

"When you sign up, they make you swear an oath that they will be the boss, telling you what to do, and there will be obedience and duty," he said. "That's all we did. We just did our duty."

As one of an estimated 50 Code Talkers still living, Little wants the valor of his people's sacrifice and work during the war to be remembered forever.

"This is a special day to express our remembrance for our loved ones that have passed on," Little said.

Las Crucen Danny Montoya recognizes the significance the Code Talkers played in winning the war and bought 29 bricks on The Walk of Honor at Veterans Memorial Park to memorialize the original 29 Code Talkers.

"Since we don't have any monuments in the southern part of the state honoring them, this is a good way to remember the great contributions they made during WWII and the lives they saved with their unique communication skills as Code Talkers," Montoya said.

Chester Nez is the only living original code talker, but he was unable to attend the ceremony because of his ailing health.

U.S. Congressman Steve Pearce, a decorated Air Force veteran, was on hand to show his respect for the service members that gave their lives defending this country as well as to honor the Code Talkers.

"New Mexico has played two huge roles, single-handedly," he said. "One was Bataan and the other was the Code Talkers that affected the outcome of the war. They (Japan) just never could break the code. This is a really good start, and Las Cruces is leading the way saying, 'Let's remember this unique New Mexico achievement.' I think it's very special."

Pearce said he will talk to leaders in not only his hometown of Hobbs, but also all communities in his congressional district in southern New Mexico to have the Code Talkers honored.

The Code Talkers want their legacy to live on and wish to educate the public on their important mission. To accomplish this, they have planned to build a museum and veterans center, which will be located 17 miles northwest of Gallup and two miles east of Window Rock, Ariz. – the capital of the Navajo nation.

It's not just the mission they want carried forward, but also the language, which for a long time was not allowed to be spoken in boarding schools for Navajos.

"It's sacred and we don't want to lose it."

Little said. "We do this because we don't want Navajo code to fade away. We want to preserve it and want this to be educational to our younger generation. Patriotism. To keep America free. It's what we fought for. Our land, freedom. They say freedom does not come free."

Little, Toledo and Willetto were honored for their service by Mayor Ken Miyagishima with medallions from the City of Las Cruces. Little said they were glad to be in Las Cruces and thanked the city leaders for their wonderful hospitality.

While they were honored on Memorial Day and have been commended and recognized throughout the country, that hasn't always been the case.

The brave men didn't receive honors from the U.S. government until 2000, when the survivors of the original 29 Code Talkers were honored with the Congressional Gold Medal and the remainder decorated with silver medals.

Opinions of American Indians weren't very high with a lot of people back East, who questioned whether they were civilized, sanitary or wild, according to Little. He said most Navajos had a difficult time being hired, but the recruiters wanted them because of their physical fitness and, of course, knowledge and capacity to learn the language.

"We did what we could to survive," Little said. "It wasn't uncommon to live without electricity, phone or vehicles. There were no magazines or reading material. Nearly all of our activities were physical."

"The chamber feels that many of the casino's jobs and outside needs will be filled by Las Cruces residents and businesses," according to the position paper.

The casino would attract more tourists to southern New Mexico, which the chamber's position states will offset any business the casino may draw from Las Cruces.

"Due to the positive impact of the City of Anthony, (N.M.,) and Doña Ana County combined with permanent job creation in an area that has a 50 percent unemployment rate, the chamber voted to support this initiative," the position paper states.

Recently, local government entities, such as the Town of Mesilla trustees and the Doña Ana County Commission, have endorsed the proposal. Not surprisingly, both Anthony cities – the newly formed municipal government on the New Mexico side of the state line and the Texas municipality – have endorsed the proposal.

The public comments are related to the casino's draft environmental impact statement. A final environmental impact statement will be issued by the Interior once responses are given to concerns and mitigation strategies are detailed.

Opposition to the proposal has been primarily from those connected to the horseracing industry with nearby Sunland Park Racetrack & Casino enjoying profitability.

The CHE article also looked at 10-year period of time, he said. Between 1999 and 2009, NMSU went from receiving about $106 million in research awards to $154 million in 2009, which was a drop of about $9 million from the year before.

Throughout the 10year period, Chaitanya said there were similar increases.

For an 2010's leap to institution $198 million in research contracts is our size, we're partially the result of federal stimulus bringing in a spending, but even with that money significantly taken out of the picture, he said, it large amount of is still significant growth, in excess of research. $180 million.

"To say we are not successful is not Chaitanya true," said. "You have to look at total research dollars.'

More than a quarter of NMSU's research funding comes from the Department of Defense, with grants out of the Department of Health and Human Services gaining in its share of the NMSU research pie. (See related story on NMSU's Physical Science Laboratory on page A25.)

NASA also contributes a large share of research awards to NMSU, a little more than 17 percent in the most recent breakdown. Other federal agencies include the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Department of Education, the Interior Department and the National Science Foundation.

The CHE article cite scholars who say many institutions have gambled on expanding research to boost rankings at the expense of other campus priorities, such as instruction.

NMSU President Barbara Couture said the university's students have benefited greatly from the research, because the "cutting-edge" research being conducted at NMSU attracts quality professors, who also teach.

Not only do students get to learn from those conducting the actual research, Couture said, but they often get firsthand exposure to the research by being made lab and research assistants.

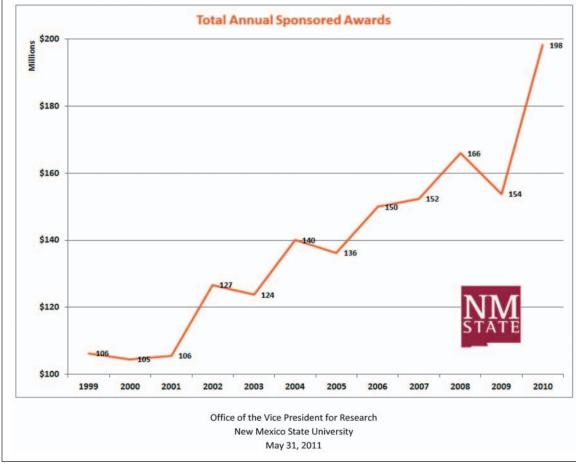

Most of the research grants are selffunded in that support costs are part of awards, Couture said. The university does have to carry the cost of some indirect support services, she said, but the expense is worth the investment.

BARBARA COUTURE,

NMSU president

"For an institution our size, we're bringing in a significantly large amount of research," Couture said. That helps make us a great university because we do have faculty doing this kind of basic research."

Las Cruces Bulletin News | A15

The CHE's analysis is a bit narrow in light of the growing complexity of research grant funding, said Judy Bosland, assistant vice president for institutional analysis. The trend in grant funding is the requirement for more inter-departmental and interinstitutional collaboration in the research, she said.

High-profile research at NMSU exemplifying collaboration includes work on bio-fuels - with research conducted at the agriculture, business and engineering colleges - and cancer research that has NMSU biology faculty working with medical researchers at the University of New Mexico Cancer Center.

Couture said she foresees only continued growth in research because NMSU is working on areas seeking answers to pressing issues, such as energy and water supply. Also, the total growth in research awards will be noticed in the increase need for institutions to seek funding outside of government support, she said.

"Everybody wants to go with a winner, it's like any other business," Couture said.

Jim Hilley Bulletin in

In talking to the new Aggie soccer coach Blair Quinn, he touched on something that I think all fans of college sports should be concerned about.

Quinn noted that some of the bigtime girls soccer programs are beginning to verbally commit high-school sophomores.

We are talking 14-, 15- and 16-year old girls being contacted and recruited by college coaches.

"Typically, we are evaluating sophomores and committing juniors, and to be honest, it's starting to go even faster than that," Quinn said. "The very top programs – the ACC and PAC 10 types – and even some others now are verbally committing sophomores."

The new Aggie coach said he found that kind of disheartening.

"The general consensus among us coaches is that it is entirely too fast, too early, for women's soccer recruiting," Quinn said.

I'll bet the consensus among some of the parents out there is the same.

"There are a lot of things that can happen in two and a half years before a kid gets to your school," Quinn said.

Of course, it's not just a problem in soccer. If anything it has to be much worse in the "money" sports of football and basketball.

And where is the NCAA on this? Last year, a ban was proposed on verbal scholarship offers before July 1 in the summer before a student's senior year in high school.

Sounds reasonable, doesn't it? The NCAA voted it down.

The NCAA voted it down.

Opponents called the ban another

"inane" NCAA rule. They said by signing early, youngsters could avoid years of being contacted by recruiters over the phone, by mail and at camps. They said signing early encourages kids to focus on going to college. They said it was interference in a decision that should be made by the student and their family.

I have a feeling most of those op-ponents aren't entirely disinterested

If being contacted by recruiters is a distraction for kids, isn't limiting that contact the thing to do instead of letting it begin earlier? If telling kids that their ticket to college is punched, does that make them study harder in high school?

Do most parents really like the idea of their 15-year-old children making decisions that will affect the rest of their

I'm sure there are parents out there who don't mind at all. I just doubt if the best interests of their children is behind it.

Speaking of early, last week I listed Aggie basketball players Erica Sanchez, Tabytha Wampler and Kaitlyn Soto as having used up their eligibility. I was mistaken. My apologies to the young ladies.

Ditchrunners take advantage of local irrigation canals

By Jimmy Currier

Running is a great way to stay in shape, but with unfriendly drivers and an equally unfriendly pavement, getting your kicks on the road can be harsh.

John LeRoy and his friends have a solution. Run the ditches. Every Sunday morning, Le-Roy and the Ditchrunners can be seen jogging along the soft dirt surfaces that are much more accommodating than cruel blacktop.

"It's firm enough so it's not as difficult as the loose stuff, but it's softer," said LeRoy, 74. "It's easier on your limbs and as you get older, you can tell the difference."

The Ditchrunners meet at Jason Jiron Park, 355 Three Crosses Ave., and usually run north for three miles and then trek back. There are looped trails, but LeRoy said running one way and coming back allows them to pick up the slower runners for the return trip.

Usually, six to 10 runners take advantage of the ditches, but sometimes there are as many as 15 runners hitting the trails.

"The group is big enough that when you show up, you'll find somebody there that is running your pace or close to your pace,"

A group of dedicated runners known as the Ditchrunners hit the trails at 7:30 a.m. every Sunday near Jason Jiron Park, 355 Three Crosses Ave.

LeRoy said.

Talking and running in groups makes the miles fly by, LeRoy said. The trail goes as far north as Elephant Butte, and while LeRoy is an accomplished runner, he hasn't made that 60plus mile trek. The group, however, has gone as far out as 10 miles and back.

Don't be intimidated by the distance, LeRoy said. The runner said he's seen some people go out just a mile and gradually build up each week to where they keep up with the group.

LeRoy has been an avid runner for the past 30 years and has competed in triathlons for 11 years.

"I like the competition," he said. "You go

Niehoff: In her father's tire marks

Oñate point guard living in the fast lanes

By Craig Massey
Las Cruces Bulletin

The basketball goal stands tall on the south side of the Niehoffs' shop, near their home on the East Mesa. It represents a well-known part of Kelsie Niehoff's sporting life. The point guard has been a member of the Oñate High School varsity basketball team since her freshman year, and she is expected to be one of the top players in the city next season.

But behind the basketball goal, inside the shop, is Kelsie Niehoffs' other world. With rows of tools, auto parts and work tables on each side, a purple 1970 Plymouth Barracuda sits in the middle. Decals and artwork decorate the car, and there, painted on the side windows, is her name.

With a race-car-driving father and a basketball-playing mother, Kelsie was destined to do both, it seems.

"I grew up around it," Kelsie said of racing. "Since I was little, it was what I wanted to do and now I have my chance. I like how it brings my family together."

Kelsie's mother Tanya also did some racing. It was 17 years ago, to be exact.

"I didn't know I was pregnant with her when I was in an enduro race," Tanya said. (Racing) was born in her."

"Maybe that's why I like to go around in circles," added Kelsie, who has to be one of the few people on the planet who was along for the ride in a race before she was born.

While Kelsie has competed in enduro races at Southern New Mexico Speedway's oval dirt track, she spends most of her time racing in a straight line.

The Barracuda is used for drag racing, first by her father Jerry (Lurch) years ago, and now by her. Two weeks ago at the Arroyo Seco Raceway near Deming, Kelsie finished fifth in races featuring about 17 cars from throughout the area.

Sitting in the raceway stands that day was Kelsie's basketball coach Ben Trujillo, whom she invited.

"It was exciting to watch, but at the same time, it was kind of scary," Trujillo said.

The coach sent Kelsie a text minutes after the race, congratulating her, but adding that it was scary witnessing his point guard flying down the track.

This is Kelsie's second year of drag racing and she said she loves the "adrenaline rush" it delivers. She said the first time she felt the immense power of the 440 engine in the Barracuda, "my heart just dropped."

"Now, I'm used to it," she said. "Dad said he can tell I'm way more calm now."

Kelsie's best time in a quarter-mile drag race is 11.66 seconds. There are four divisions of drag racing at the raceway – pro, modified, street, and motorcycle. Kelsie competes in the modified division – when she has time.

Basketball comes first, Kelsie admits. As many hours as she spends under the hood of the Barracuda with her father and with family friend and sponsor, David Rodriguez, she's more likely to be seen shooting baskets on the goal outside the shop or running up and down the floor at Oñate's gym.

The same hands that grip the steering wheel tightly during a burst of outrageous speed on the drag strip, gently swish jump shots and deliver passes to teammates on the court.

Kelsie, who will be a senior next season at Oñate, said the biggest parallel she sees between the two sports is "a drive to win and do your best."

"I'm a big competitor," she said.

That competitiveness was critical as Kelsie battled back last season after breaking her ankle playing basketball during the summer. The setback may have cost her a starting job, but she came on strong as the season progressed and was the first player off the bench as Oñate had its best season in many years.

"She'll be one of the key components for the upcoming season," Trujillo said of the 5-6 guard. "She has great leadership, she's a hard, hard worker and she's a very good basketball player. She has aspirations to play basketball after high school. If it doesn't happen, it won't be for a lack of effort."

Kelsie doesn't plan on parking her drag racer anytime soon, either.

"I would love to do it big time, but right now it's just a hobby," she said.

Athletes do double duty

Some talented Aggies have ability to multi task

I would title this column "Who knew?" as it recalls notable two-sport athletes at New Mexico State that had success in a sport other than the one that brought them to the Mesilla Valley.

The most recent example is volleyball coach Mike Jordan's recruit Kelsey Brennan. The All-WAC middle hitter became a conference champ in the javelin in May. Brennan had competed in only one event before the conference finals. Her throw of 46.15 meters was the best in the WAC and second best in school history. She is studying athletic training with a year of eligibility left in both sports.

A name you might not know or remember is Lamar Hill. Lamar was 6-8 and transferred from South Alabama to men's basketball coach Lou Henson's program in 2001.

He was a part-time role player for two seasons and was given a chance to finish his degree by playing football for Tony Samuel in the fall of 2002.

On the basketball court, he scored a few points and blocked two shots. Hill's role on the football team was on special teams. He would enter on the field goal defense team with the intent of blocking the opponents' kick.

As irony would have it, he blocked two field goal attempts on the football field as well, that made two in each sport.

Mark Acre signed a letter of intent for Neil McCarthy in 1990, joining Randy Brown and Reggie Jordan as incoming juniors. Acre's hoop skills were suited for a different style than the up-tempo pressing style the team adopted. He didn't get much court time, but Acre's 6-8 frame was suited to throwing fastballs as well.

Elliott Avent was in charge of the baseball program then and figured it wouldn't hurt anything to give Acre a try out. He passed, and it led to a four-year career in the Major Leagues with Oakland.

The best example, of course, is dual sport Hall of Fame member Gary Ward. Before he became legendary at Oklahoma State, Ward played two sports, earning Hall of Fame status in the process. Ward played basketball and baseball for Presley Askew.

His contributions were significant in both sports at a time when New Mexico State was emerging in the Golden Era of the early 1960s. The existence of athletes competitive in two sports is not rare, but Ward's achievements are uncommon at any university.

All of these athletes were versatile in their athletic abilities. Having not just skills, but also the drive to work at two sports with equal commitment.

Nohara signs with Akron

NMSU's all-time leading home-run hitter will play professional softball

The New Mexico State softball team's career home-run leader, Hoku Nohara, recently signed a contract to play professional softball with the Akron Racers of the National Fastpitch Professional (NPF) League.

Nohara led the nation in home runs in 2011, hitting 24 pitches out of the ballpark. She becomes the first Aggie to play professional softball in the NPF.

Nohara is the most recent Western Athletic Conference (WAC) player to join the league, most recently following in the footsteps of Amberly Waits (LA Tech, 2010) and Kate Robinson (Hawai'i, 2008).

"We are extremely excited for Hoku," said Aggie head coach Kathy Rodolph. "We look forward to watching her achieve success on the professional level after a great Aggie career."

gie career."

As an Aggie first baseman and designated player in 2011, Nohara recorded a prolific senior season at the plate. She led the nation with 24 home runs en route to setting new NMSU single-season and career marks as well as breaking the WAC career record with 64 home runs in four seasons. She also led the nation with a 1.007 slugging percentage that smashed the Aggies' single-season and career marks.

Nohara now claims multiple career records at NMSU, including slugging percentage, home runs (64), RBI (209), walks (128) and total bases (450). She also notched single-season records in each of those categories this season in addition to setting a new mark in on-base percentage.

We look forward to watching her achieve success ...

Contrary to the myth of runners being able to eat whatever they want, whenever they want, LeRoy is cognizant of his caloric intake.

"There's always that five pounds you can

After discovering the trail by accident five years ago, LeRoy and his friends have made it a weekly tradition.

"A few people joined and we evolved into a coup," he said.

Friendships have been made and some of the runners even go to races and triathlons together.

Golf wisdom to get past those gales and gusts

Charlie Blanchard

Golf Doctor

Wind. Will it ever end? It all started in February, when I was in the rehab hospital. I'd look out my window, and every other day the wind was blowing dust so I couldn't see the Organ Mountains.

Of course, at the time, I figured it would be 2012 before I could swing a golf club, so the fierce winds were only an image out my window. Now, I'm back practicing and playing a few holes - not with my old form, but able to make a some full swings without pain. Wind is a con-

Most of the tour pros will tell you that the courses played in the British Open rank as the most demanding in terms of wind play. Links golf, like St. Andrews, requires low-running shots. The next trickiest hole on tour is the par-3 12th at Augusta in the Masters – a short hole with Rae's Creek below the green, and a confusing breeze coming from several directions, causing plenty of misery for players in contention.

But my favorite wind hole is the 137-yard 17th hole at TPC Sawgrass, the island green, at the Players' Championship.

At the 2007 Championship, with thousands of spectators ringing the hole, more than 100 of the best players in the world, battling 35-mph winds coming in from the Atlantic, put 50 into the wind.

balls in the water in one day. Two years earlier ,veteran Bob Tway was sitting in 10th place when he came to the windy is-still the highest score recorded by a pro at No. 17.

The green is plenty big," Tway recalls, "but when the wind starts blowing, well, the green becomes a lot smaller.

Tway put four balls in the water that day and carded a 12 –

Last weekend I was in Dallas, where they played the HP Byron Nelson, won by rookie Keegan Bradley, who beat Ryan Palmer in a playoff. Wind played a factor in that playoff hole, as Palmer had to hit a hook from under a tree, where his wind-blown driver landed, and hooked it into the water. On a windy Saturday, four players shot an 80 or more, and on a windier Sunday four more shot at least 80. Sergio Garcia was one shot out of the lead as he teed off on Sunday, and ballooned to a 77. These are PGA Tour players, and the breeze moved their balls around like kites.

As we head into our rainy season, it may not rain like it's supposed to, but dry and windy days will persist. Your awareness and adjustment to these conditions will make all the difference in the world in your ability to score. Here's how to do it.

The very first thing to realize is that you need to keep the ball low when hit-ting into the wind. If you're a high-ball hitter, you'll need to develop the skill to keep the ball down and out of the wind.

Hitting a driver into a stiff breeze, your best bet is to have the ball run hard on the ground in the short grass. To do that you need to de-loft the club by keeping the angle of attack close to the ground (not steep) and somewhat to the inside, and the old saying, "When it's breezy swing easy" is basically true. All too often high-handicappers are lured into the tendency to take a vicious cut at the shot into a stiff wind, thinking they need to flail all-out, only to watch the ball a left-to-right spinning ball and send it off line as much as 100 yards. A launch monitor will tell you whether your ball is going

It's also really important to pick the right ball for your game. These days golf ball fitting has come into its own as a must. See your pro about the next demo day, complete with launch monitor and ball fitting.

Modifying your swing to lower the trajectory and reduce the spin means plenty of practice. Go to a practice range that is set up for you to hit into the prevailing wind. Hit enough balls, aiming at a very specific target, so that you're confident in making a solid shot into a strong wind.

Essentially the same technique goes for iron shots as it does with the driver and fairway woods. In order to keep the ball down with irons you can't take a full follow-through; rather, it is somewhat a "punch" shot with a limited release of the wrists. Hit your irons to exact targets so that you gauge how much more club you need to take into a heavy breeze. It could be two or three clubs more than a regular shot. Again, the tendency for players who aren't prepared for windy conditions is to come up short. Don't get caught under-clubbing yourself.

Wind will often affect putts. The faster the greens are the more the ball will move as influenced by the wind. Most of all you should beware of putts that run downhill, down-grain and down-wind; they're the scariest. The key here is practice on a sloping putting surface so that you're prepared to factor in the wind speed and direction as needed on every putt.

I think the biggest challenge of all when it's really windy is decision making. And the first decision is whether to play at all. I don't play in brown-out conditions or even 35 to 40 mph and blowing dust. It's just not fun.

With holes that go down wind, you have to decide if you want to bomb it with a driver, or play it safe with a shorter shot. Super long drives with the wind can wind up rolling and landing in some terrible places. Consider your 3-wood to be your friend when it's blustery for almost every hole, regardless of the wind direction. Your chances of controlling a straight shot with a 3-wood should be better than any other club in your bag. Still, you have to go to the range and practice.

For par-3 holes, your decision where to aim your tee shot is critical. I say aim for the middle of the green – that way a miss slightly right or left won't get you in trouble. If you aim at a sucker pin you risk a buried lie in a bunker if you hit a sky ball and it falls straight down. Or, you risk splashing in the water from an errant ball off line, like some unfortunate souls on the 17th at Sawgrass.

Sometimes you're faced with the choice about going for the green in two on a par-5, or playing for a lay up shot. It's a risk versus reward decision. If you're faced with a long carry over water to the green, consider playing the shot only if you're truly capable of making the shot 7-out-of-10 times. Take your ego out of the equation and be honest with yourself.

As the late Bob Goalby once said, "Reckless gambles add

Sometimes a great shot will get knocked down by a strong wind that you figured would help get the shot going. For most of us, the best play is to lay up to a yardage – such as 100 yards - that will put our favorite club in or hands, like a pitching

There is no doubt wind will separate the skilled and smart golfers from all the other pretenders.

Kandis Jones nets first-team academic all-American honors

New Mexico State softball senior center fielder Kandis Jones was just one of 11 Division I athletes to be named to the 2011 Capital One Academic All-America Softball

First Team, as selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA), the organization announced recently.

A community health major with a 3.88 grade point average, Jones is a two-time All-Western Athletic Conference (WAC) outfielder who earned first team conference honors in 2011. She helped lead New Mexico State to a program-best 44-17 record, its first WAC regular season and tournament championships as well as the Aggies' first NCAA tournament selection.

A native of La Mirada, Calif., Jones set new NMSU single-season records in 2011 with 82 hits and 61 runs scored. Primarily hitting in the second position of the batting order, Jones posted a .387 average at the plate while driving in 34 runs this season.

Jones was one of two Aggie players to earn CoSIDA All-District honors, as sophomore Teresa Conrad was a 2011 Second Team All-District honoree.

Jones is just the ninth NMSU State softball player to earn Academic All-America honors and only the fourth to claim first-team accolades. The last Aggie softball player to attain the honor was former home-run leader Christine Stephens who acquired first team recognition in 2003.

Jones is the first Aggie female to claim Academic All-America status since former NMSU swimmer Carolyn Bohm earned third team honors in 2008. The last NMSU female athlete to claim first-team recognition was former volleyball player Jackie Choi in 2006.

After four years, Jones played in 222 career games and made 209 starts. This season, Jones set a pair of Aggie career records with 260 hits and 175 runs scored to go with new single-season records in both statistical categories.

Blair Quinn is a travellin' man

By Jim HilleyLas Cruces Bulletin

New Aggie soccer coach Blair Quinn has had to hit the ground running.

All over the country that is.

'I spent three and a half days in New Jersey; I'll be in Houston for three or four days. I'm gone pretty much every weekend for the next five or six weeks," Quinn said.

What he is doing, of course, is recruiting, trying to beef up the roster of New Mexico State University's two-going-on-three year-old soccer program.

One thing he can tell potential Aggies is they will probably have a chance to play right away.
"The opportunity to play right away is a big one (selling point). When you have a program this young, I think you are trying to build the depth that we need to have," he said. "I think for anybody coming in the opportunity to play right away is there. When you have a more established program, typically your freshmen are walking into a situation where they aren't needed to play as much.'

OUINN

Quinn said he is going for the players who have soccer skills, instead of girls who are athletic.

"I'd much rather have speed of play and ball handling," he said. "Everybody needs the big, strong fast athletes, but when it comes down to it, if I have two kids to choose from, I'll take the kid that's maybe 5-5 or 5-6 that's really good on the ball as opposed to a kid that's 5-10 and is just really, really fast and "If they are not much of a player it is a lot harder – especially at this age – to teach them to be more technically proficient.'

Quinn admitted that recruiting for skill probably means he is recruiting for offense, but said it would be a mistake not to consider him a defensive-minded coach.

"I played goalkeeper all through college and professionally," he said. "I know where I came from at Arizona State with Kevin Boyd, defense was one of the things we were really, really good at."

Ouinn said the attention to detail on the defensive side of the ball is important.

"Attacking is creative and flair and fun," he said. If you pay attention to detail and work hard at defense, you will in effect play defense less, and that's the whole idea."

Quinn doesn't have a lot of time to work with, as fall practice begins Aug. 3.

He is looking forward to getting more work in with his returning players.

"I know a little bit about the players from what I saw in April, they are the core of the program obviously, the junior class came in at the start of the program as freshmen and have been leading the way regardless of their age," he said.

I think for anybody coming in the opportunity to play right away is there.

NMSU soccer schedule announced

Aggies host the University of New Mexico Lobos for first time

New Mexico State soccer head coach Blair Quinn has an-following Idaho's 4-1 win in Moscow, Idaho, in 2010. nounced the schedule for the 2011 season that features nine home matches. The fall campaign is highlighted with a pair of rivalry games and two NCAA Tournament teams.

For the third consecutive year, the Aggies have scheduled their season-opener against Interstate-10 rival UTEP, this year in El Paso. The Miners hold a 1-0 series lead after the 2010 match was cancelled due to weather.

New Mexico State meets six teams for the first time in school history when the Aggies face Texas Tech Aug. 21 in Lubbock, Texas; Houston Baptist Aug. 28 in Las Cruces; Tennessee Tech Sept. 4 in Jacksonville, Ala.; Arkansas-Little Rock Sept. 11 in Las Cruces; Weber State Sept. 18 in Ogden, Utah; and Embry-Riddle Aeronautical Sept. 23 in Las Cruces.

The opening weekend is really good," Quinn said. "It's something we're looking forward to. Obviously, everyone always wants to get started and play that first game. UTEP is a rivalry game, and Texas Tech is a very good team out of the Big 12. It will be a very challenging opening weekend on the road for us to get started, and we'll find out right away where we are at, how good we are and how much we need to improve.'

The Aggies host Prairie View A&M in the Aug. 26 home opener. NMSU has a 1-0 advantage over the Panthers, following an 8-0 victory in 2010. The Crimson and White travels to Jacksonville State on Sept 2 in Jacksonville, Ala., for a rematch after the Aggies won the first meeting, 2-1, last season.

NMSU hosts Northern Colorado Sept. 9 and look to even the series after a tough 1-0 overtime loss in 2010. The Aggies travel to Idaho State Sept. 16 in Pocatello, Idaho, for a return trip after falling to the Tigers in double overtime, 2-1, in the inaugural season home opener.

In the final non-conference match, the Aggies host in-state rival New Mexico for the first time Sept. 25. UNM was a NCAA Tournament participant in 2010. NMSU fell to the Lobos in Albuquerque, 1-0, last year.

We have some good home games in September with Northern Colorado and New Mexico, which is another big rivalry game," Quinn said. "That should be an entertaining game.

'That leads us into conference play, which is always challenging. Every conference game is a one- or two-goal game. It's a good schedule. It's certainly a schedule we can be successful in, but we'll have to play well to do it. We're looking forward to it."

NMSU opens its third season in the WAC with a pair of road matches at Louisiana Tech Oct. 2 in Ruston, La., and Utah State Oct. 7 in Logan, Utah. The Aggies are looking for their first win against the Lady Techsters and Aggies.

The Aggie squad hosts Nevada Oct. 9 and Idaho Oct. 14. Last season, NMSU fell to the Wolf Pack, 2-1, in double overtime in the conference opener. The series with the Vandals is tied at 1, NMSU travels to California for its final road trip of the regular season with matches at San Jose State Oct. 21 in San Jose, Calif., and Fresno State Oct. 23 in Fresno, Calif. The Aggies have a 0-1-1 record against the Spartans after a tough 2-1 loss last year, and a 2-0 record versus the Bulldogs following a 2-0 win in 2010. Fresno State played in the NCAA Tournament last season after winning the WAC Tournament.

The Aggies host Hawai'i Oct. 28 for the 2011 season finale. NMSU owns a 1-0-1 record against the Rainbow Wahine after a 2-2 overtime draw last year.

The WAC Tournament will be Nov. 3-6 in Fresno, Calif. Only the top six teams in the conference qualify.

Mayfield graduate to hold recital

As a compilation of his studies and showcase of his repertoire, 2011 Mayfield High School (MHS) graduate James Jones will perform in a senior recital, 7:30 p.m., Sunday, June 5, in Atkinson Recital Hall, located on the horseshoe on the New Mexico State University campus.

Jones is the featured solo performer and will sing one duet. The program includes 13 songs. The recital is free.

Throughout his high school career, Jones was very active in the MHS choral program, directed by Beth Borchert-Thomas and Paul Hallsted.

He was a member of the Youth All-State Choir in 2008; the New Mexico Music Educators Association Mixed Choir 2009-11; and the 2010 MHS Madrigal Singers, chosen as the 2010 New Mexico All-State Honor Choir.

Jones consistently received superior ratings in solo and ensembles since his freshman year at MHS. In addition to choral activities and achievements, he has studied privately with Amanda DeRycke in both voice and piano.

"James is a very talented young singer who has the ability to go far with his music," Borchert-Thomas said. "He received the top vocal scholarship from Eastern New Mexico University."

UHES plans 'legacy rock'

The University Hills Elementary School Student Council was able to conclude the year by sponsoring a "legacy rock" to display in front of the school, said University Hills Elementary School Student Council parent representative and UHES Parent Teacher Organization member Luisa Lopez.

"Handcrafted by Bruce Lee's Curb Painting and Design of Las Cruces, this beautiful addition, made of flagstone, leaves something to be proud of," Lopez said.

The rock is inscribed, "University Hills. Soaring to New Heights (the school motto). Student Council. 2010-2011."

Lopez said student council raised funds to pay for the stone mostly through recycling fundraisers.

"We earned money by collecting and shipping off mostly inkjet and laser printer cartridges and cell phones," she said. "We also sell Valentine Grams on Valentine's Day."

Shade structure dedicated at MES

Thanks to an $8,000 grant from the American Academy of Dermatology Shade Structure (AADSS) program and assistance from Las Cruces dermatologist Dr. Andrew L. Ondo and the Las Cruces Public Schools Physical Plant Department, MacArthur Elementary School has a new shade structure on its playground.

The structure was dedicated during a May 31 ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by MacArthur Elementary staff; Ondo; Superintendent Stan Rounds; Associate Superintendent for Operations Herb Torres; Health Services Director Beverly Hine; Nutrition Services Director Nancy Cathey; Transportation Director Larry Altamirano; Title I Coordinator Maria Artiaga; and Energy Education Specialist Jim Mulhauser.

"I'm just so proud of you," said Ondo, who helped the school write the AADSS grant request. "You guys have no idea what you've accomplished here."

Ondo said the AADSS approves only 20 to 30 such grants nationwide each year, and the shade structures they pay for are so important to students and staff.

"The rates of skin cancer are higher here (in New Mexico) than probably anywhere else in the country," Ondo said.

He said providing the shade structure for students and educating them about the dangers of skin cancer and how to prevent it are "so important."

"I would like to add is a big thank you to our physical education teacher Ashley Britt and school nurse Joyce Anglin, who wrote the grant and worked so hard making sure we met all the requirements and deadlines of the grant," said MacArthur Elementary Principal Carla Rodriguez.

The LCPS Physical Plant Department moved two existing shade structures to other parts of the MacArthur Elementary playground to make room for the new, larger one.

Munchies make for good luck

Friday, May 13, turned out to be a lucky day for mothers of students during an event called "Munchies for Mom."

Coffee and goodies were served to students' mothers, who then went to the library, cafeteria, outside and to classrooms throughout the school to read to their children, said Title I teacher Kathy Adams.

"Reading to a child is such an important time, Adams said. "Our students always look forward to this special treat as moms, aunts, grandmas and even a few dads took time from their busy day to read to us after enjoying their special 'munchies.' We want to thank the more than 120 volunteers who came forward to read to their kids. We also enjoyed volunteers from the Doña Ana County Literacy Foundation joining us to read to our children."

Adult education program helps drop-outs earn diplomas

The Las Cruces school board honored three recent graduates of the Graduate New Mexico program at its May 17, meeting. Cambria Marshall, Tammy Perez and Ronald "Rusty" Row received their diplomas earlier this month.

Former Gov. Bill Richardson kicked off the Graduate New Mexico program July 30, 2010, in Las Cruces and Santa Fe, announcing a goal of recruiting 10,000 New Mexico dropouts back to adult-education programs across the state to earn their high school diplomas.

In partnership with the New Mexico Children, Youth and Families Department and the Doña Ana County Juvenile Probation Office, Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS) got a jump on every other school district in the state in its implementation of the program in Las Cruces, opening its Drop-Back-In adult education center in September 2010. Pedro Gonzalez of Las Cruces was the first Graduate New Mexico graduate in the state. He was honored by the board last December.

Through Graduate New Mexico, students earn credits through online coursework and/or work-based experiences. Online courses can be taken from any location where there is Internet access.

Marshall plans to attend New Mexico State University this fall and study pharmaceuticals. She currently works at the Las Cruces Convention Center as the banquet captain.

Perez plans to attend Doña Ana Community College this fall and then will transition to NMSU to study biology. She currently works for Sitel of Las Cruces.

Poe plans to attend NMSU this fall and study business administration. He currently works for the Storage Group and coaches youth soccer.

Immerse in Camp Invention

Annual program will be at Desert Hills Elementary

The nationally acclaimed Camp Invention program returns to Las Cruces Public Schools this summer. It will be held Monday through Friday, June 6-10, at Desert Hills Elementary School, 280 N. Roadrunner Parkway, said camp coordinator Lucy Rathgeber.

Created for children entering grades one through six, the exciting Camp Invention program is a weeklong adventure in creativity that immerses its participants in engaging, hands-on activities in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM), as well as history and the arts.

Each day, children rotate through five integrated modules that employ creative thinking to solve real-world challenges. Children learn vital 21st century life skills, such as problem solving and teamwork, through imaginative play.

New to the 2011 Camp Invention lineup is the SPARK program, in which children will construct life-sized clubhouses made of PVC piping to crack puzzling codes and solve a mystery in

The Curious Cypher Club module, investigate polymer science and create their own bouncy balls to take home in the Bounce! An Atomic Journey module, and explore innovative survival traits of the planet's W!LDest animals in the W!LD: Wondrous and Living Designs module.

All Camp Invention programs include a module, in which children participate in high-energy games that challenge their minds and bodies as well as a renowned invention module, in which children upcycle pieces and parts of discarded household appliances and other donated materials to create new machines.

Since its inception in 1990, non-profit Invent Now programming has grown to include nearly 1,500 school partnerships in 49 states. In 2010, more than 70,000 children participated nationwide. The Camp Invention program was created in partnership with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, which continues to support Invent Now's noble mission to inspire creativity and inventive thinking in children of all ages.

The Camp Invention program has been featured in Child, Principal and Better Homes and Gardens magazines as well as dozens of other educational journals and general publications. The program has also been the focus of National Public Radio's Science Friday and studied by Harvard's Graduate School of Education. In a recent survey, 90 percent of parents said the Camp Invention program helped their children to enjoy science.

Every program participant receives a coveted Camp Invention T-shirt that features clever, new artwork each year. Early registration and alumni discounts are available.

Summer program reaches out

High schoolers get to visit NMSU campus

For 16 years, New Mexico State University's Reaching the Pinnacle program and its predecessors have been trail blazers in reaching out to students with disabilities.

The program's Regional Alliance Summer Science Institute (RASSI) has played a major role in this outreach.

Since 2006, Reaching the Pinnacle has sponsored RASSI in New Mexico and west Texas, with the mission to provide opportunities to high school students that will help encourage them to consider careers in Science, Technology, Engineering or Mathematics (STEM) fields.

This year's institute is June 13-17 on NMSU's Las Cruces campus, and attendees will get firsthand experience with the "Mean Green Science Machine" – RASSI's 2011 theme.

Students attending RASSI 2011 will focus on going green. This year, activities such as recycling and chemistry in the community will be featured as well as activities pertaining to the interests of young men and women.

Also planned is a trip to the City of Las Cruces' Waste Water Treatment Plant and the NMSU Recycling Center.

Students will learn how to purify water, make fashion accessories out of duct tape and recyclable materials, design an herb garden using compost and worms from personal worm farms and construct a solar-powered oven.

RASSI activities align with National Science Foundation goals and the Reaching the Pinnacle mission to recruit individuals with disabilities and increase awareness in STEM fields.

The schedule is developed to help students focus on recycling, reusing and renewing in order to do their part to maintain a healthy environment for today and tomorrow.

A total of 30 slots are reserved for students for this year's southern New Mexico institute. The institute takes place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

RASSI institutes are conducted each summer and offer high school students an opportunity to explore STEM fields through hands-on, engaging activities.

Themes vary annually and reflect current areas of interest in STEM education and research, including science field work, mathematics applied to biology, hot-air balloon physics, satellite design, robot building, programming and design and prototyping of canoes, bridges and rockets.

Reaching the Pinnacle is primarily funded through a five-year grant from the National Science Foundation, but RASSI largely relies on the generosity of volunteers to lead the programs and donate needed supplies and materials.

Employees from Waste Management Industries will come to campus to speak to the RASSI participants at no charge, and volunteer NMSU faculty and local high-school teachers will lead the sessions.

For those interested in supporting RASSI, call Randy Larry at 646-6051.

For applications and additional information on RASSI 2011, visit http://rtp.nmsu.edu/rassisummer-projects.html or call the RTP office at 646-6051.

The flight crew testing AAI Corp.'s Shadow 200 tactical unmanned aerial system performs final checks on the vehicle before it goes airborne in the skies over Hatch in early May

Unmanned air systems hold promise

Beside military uses, PSL explores civilian capacities

By Todd G. Dickson

Early last month, people in Hatch could see modern unmanned air systems (UAS) flying overhead.

UAS – formerly known as unmanned air vehicles, or UAVs - are a more familiar sight in foreign battlefields, such as Iraq, Afghanistan and Libya.

But the tests in Hatch, supported by New Mexico State University's Unmanned Aircraft Systems Flight Test Center, were conducted by AAI Corp.'s Shadow 200 Tactical UAS for the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) Tech Center to further UAS flights in the National Airspace System (NAS).

Although the military will continue to use UAS more to protect troops, the FAA is seeking to open the technology to private sector uses, said Physical Science Laboratory (PSL) Director Jay Jordan.

In many ways, PSL's long history of testing UAS over southern New Mexico is helping to establish the kind of safety record the FAA requires to allow the technology to become more commonplace, NMSU's UAS Flight Test Center (FTC), housed in a large hangar at the Las Cruces International Airport, is the only FAA-approved FTC in the nation. The FAA and NMSU developed the center to provide a place for manufacturers, government agencies and developers or operators to safely test fly, demonstrate and train their UAS.

During the Hatch flight tests, the FAA's Unmanned Aircraft Program Office had several representatives on-site to observe and review NMSU procedures and view the chase plane operations to assist them with moving forward on developing safe procedures that will enable UAS more access to the NAS in the future. A chase plane accompanied the UAS flights to ensure their proper actions.

Dennis "Zak" Zaklan, the center's coordinator, said NMSU has been working with UAS since 1998 and began its partnership with the FAA in 2004.

Those in the industry, such as AAI Corp., have come to NMSU to develop the flight systems and technology, while the FAA gives guidance for establishing necessary safety procedures, Zaklan said.

Some of the potential UAS civilian uses include paramilitary functions, such as border security and police protection, Jordan said. But even shipping companies such as United Parcel Service and Federal Express, also are eyeing UAS as a cost-effective option for shipping by air, he said.

"UAS is the next generation of jet aircraft," Jordan said.

The most typical UAS has a wingspan of about 24 feet - the best known vehicle is the Aerostar B, which is used primarily for reconnance, Zaklan said.

That capability can come in handy for ranching and farming, he said, because these operations are so spread out in the Southwest. Sending a UAS out to check out to them in person, he said.

Other potential agriculture uses including aerial imaging to check the hydration and nitrogen levels in crops, Jordan said.

UAS can also save lives in observing

The work being done by PSL aims to make UAS flight safe and efficient for these kinds of uses, he said.

At the Hatch flights, the systems and procedures testing were successful, according to reports.

The tests being performed by the AAI the demonstraton.

Discussions are ongoing to further the relationship and perform additional UAS flights in the UAS center's 15,000 square

Schools honor volunteer

Retired teacher can't stop helping kids

The Las Cruces school board honored retired teacher, assistant librarian and current classroom volunteer Sue Fletcher with the 2011 New Mexico School Boards Association Excellence in Student Achievement Award.

The award, which recognizes the contributions individuals make in improving the lives of students, was presented at the board's May 17, regular meeting.

Fletcher began her career with Las Cruces Public Schools in 1995 at Desert Hills Elementary School, where she spent many years working in the classroom and the library.

"While working as an assistant librarian, Mrs. Fletcher began pairing volunteers with struggling readers," Superintendent Stan Rounds said. "Often, when she wasn't working in her role as assistant librarian, she herself was volunteering to help students. It didn't matter the age or grade level of the student. If help was needed, she was always there to lend a hand."

After Fletcher retired from LCPS, she began volunteering several times a week, working with struggling first-grade readers.

"Her goal has always been to instill within each student a lasting love of reading," Rounds said. "To accomplish this, her students often received a book from her so that they could continue to practice their reading skills at home."

Care for more vino?

Samantha Roberts Business Editor

You have a bucket of red wine and a bucket of white wine. You take a cup of red wine and pour it into the bucket of white wine. After thoroughly mixing, you then take a cup of this mixture and pour it back into the red wine bucket.

Is there more red wine in the white wine, or is there more white wine in the red wine?

If you didn't get enough wine at the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival, join the Young Philanthropists for the nonprofit's first-ever wine tasting fundraiser from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, June 5, at De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery, 500 S. Telshor Blvd.

Young Philanthropists, an organization designed to foster philanthropy by bringing together young people in the community, will hold the event to raise money for the charity of their choice, which is voted on by members throughout the year.

At the wine tasting, attendees will get to taste wines selected by De La Vega's and enjoy light, after-lunch snacks as well as great door prizes.

This event is open to the public, and the cost is $15 per person; however, if an active member brings a guest, the duo receives a two-for-one deal. Two people for $15 is not a bad trade for some vino, snacks, door prizes and networking.

To get on my soapbox, Young Philanthropists has been dear to my heart because I am new to the area and being involved in this group has been a great way to meet young people (members range from 21 to 44 years old) that share similar business and philanthropy goals.

For young people in Las Cruces, the business world of rotary, chambers and networking can be intimidating, but Young Philanthropists provides a casual networking atmosphere, hosting three to four social events a year plus special activities such as the wine tasting.

Young Philanthropists make a $125 donation – 75 percent of the donation goes into a permanent endowment with the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico and 25 percent of the donation goes into a grant-making fund.

Dairies deal with drought

Lack of rain sends ripples through farming economy

By Jimmy Currier

For almost four months, the Mesilla Valley went without a drop of rain, and while that's great news if you're planning a picnic, farmers aren't breaking out the blanket and basket.

aren't breaking out the blanket and basket.

Alfalfa farmers are having a lower yield, reducing their revenue and ultimately their income. Dairy farmers aren't having a picnic either, paying higher prices for the alfalfa while not receiving an increase in the prices paid for their milk.

Over the past 12 months, Las Cruces has received about .5 inches of precipitation, which is 2.87 inches below average. Las Cruces hasn't received rain since early February with the exception of Wednesday, June 1.

Alfalfa is a water-intensive crop and when it doesn't rain, farmers have to rely more on irrigation. With reservoir levels low, that option isn't much better. Elephant Butte, which can hold 2.5 million acre-feet of water, is only 16 percent full, forcing farmers to use wells and aquifers.

"If you don't have a well, you don't have water," said Jerry Hawkes, an agricultural economist at New Mexico State University. "EBID (Elephant Butte Irrigation District) doesn't have the ability to distribute water like they would like to, and the hay crop is drying if you because their quantity sold is decreasing.

With a lower supply of alfalfa and demand not dropping, it's only natural that the price increases, but alfalfa farmers aren't getting rich because their quantity sold is decreasing.

In dry times such as these, Hawkes said farmers are looking at alternative crops, such as cotton, vegetables and grains. He stressed the importance of having alternative irrigation.

"The drought does have an impact," Hawkes said. "It affects the ability to plan. If you're strictly a dryland farm you don't have any flexibility. If you're an irrigated farm, you can take one crop out and plant another crop."

Dairy farmers are also feeling the pinch. Joe See Drought on page B2

Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces rotary clubs of southern New Mexico – Las Cruces Rotary, Mesilla Valley Rotary and Rio Grande Rotary – are sponsoring Taste of Las Cruces from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday, June 9, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 E. University Ave.

Come taste a wide bevy of flavors and cuisines from restaurants in the Mesilla Valley.

The event will include a cash bar, live music, gift certificate drawings, cash, prizes and more. The cost is $35 and proceeds from the event will benefit Jardín de Los Niños and Casa de Perigrinos.

"This is our second year to put on Taste of Las Cruces, and it is really a great event because all of the proceeds are going to local food banks," said Barbara Rose Farber, a Taste of Las Cruces committee member.

"It's sad, but there is great need this year in regards to hunger; therefore, all the donations are staying locally."

With a new venue – the Las Cruces Convention Center – the event has been able to expand from 19 restaurants to 24.

"I am really excited about the new additions, and I think they are, too," Farber said. "I am particularly looking forward to Caliche's, they will be serving their frozen custards."

Gonzalez, proprietor of Gonzalez Dairy in Mesquite, is one such farmer.

He uses alfalfa to feed his Holstein cows, which eat 14 pounds a day per cow. With 2,000 milking cows, eating 14 pounds a day, Gonzalez needs 14 tons of alfalfa a day. The price has increased from $155 a ton to $255 a ton, thus adding $42,583 of expenses per month to Gonzalez' bill.

Overall, Gonzalez said he makes $8 million a year in revenue. The increased price of hay alone is taking 6.4 cents of every dollar produced.

Gonzalez is assured that his raw milk, which is picked up every 12 hours, will be sold, but the guaranteed government minimum of $9 a hundredweight doesn't cover

"It doesn't do any good when you need $18 to $20 a hundredweight to break even," he said. "You just hope the co-op does that Because milk producers are price takers, Gonzalez can't just pass the extra costs on to the consumer. He has a fixed contract and sells to the Dairy Farmers of America, a coop that markets his and other dairy farmers' milk. That contract is currently $16.50 to $17 a hundredweight – 100 pounds.

To make ends meet, he said he borrows money using collateral and equity.

"I still have to pay utilities, repairs, labor, the bank and interest," he said. "The money runs out pretty quick."

While times are still lean for dairy farmers, Gonzalez said it's better than things were in 2009 when they only received $9 a hundredweight for milk and the state's minimum wage increased to $7.50 an hour.
Gonzalez' cows are in dry lots, meaning they aren't dependent upon grazing and pastures. In addition to alfalfa, he also feeds the cows raw corn, canola meal, soy whole pellets, corn germ meal, corn silage, sorghum silage, beet pulp, vitamin and mineral packs and molasses mixed with the feed.

He pointed out that the cost of corn has increased from $3.25 a bushel to $7.60 a bushel, causing further cost headaches and profit reduction for not only him but also dairy farmers across the country.

Gonzalez said that using corn for ethanol, limiting imports and the lack of rain have also caused the increase in prices.

Though all of the restaurants will only be offering bite-size serving, Farber said there will be more than enough to appease hungry appetites.

"We can't have everyone offering twocourse meals, people wouldn't be able to try everything," she said. "But I can promise people will be more than satisfied."

In addition to all of the food, the event will also have a silent auction, including jewelry, gift baskets, original art and more.

"Andele is another restaurant joining us for the first time and they told me they are going to set up a great salsa bar, with salsas from mild to give me a fire extinguisher."

Taste of Las Cruces offers a unique dining experience, and participating restaurants have been encouraged to offer their signature dishes, ensuring guest satisfaction.

"My favorite part is that although I have lived in Las Cruces for some time, I have yet to go to every restaurant in town," Farber said. "This event allows people to try many, many places and sample their best dishes. Restaurants enjoy participating because many of the people who come to the event give them try and then go back to their restaurant for more.

"The community response so far has been great, and I encourage everyone to attend this event, afterall, it is for a great cause."

Tickets are $35 and can be purchased early at American Classifieds, 580 S. Valley Drive, Suite 100, or at the door the day of the event.

Sponsor tables are still available and include eight tickets. Farber said she is taking silent auction items through Tuesday, June 7. For more information, call 526-1702.

Home prices to decline

Things could get worse before they start to get better

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics and one-of-three presenters at the recent National Association of Home Builder's (NAHB's) spring 2011 Construction Forecast conference, predicted that home prices will decline another 5 percent over the next 12 to 18 months. If he's correct, the average value of a U.S. home will have declined by 35 percent since 2006. Moody's helps credit markets and credit risk managers measure and manage

What factors are keeping downward pressure on home values?

"The most pervasive is the swamp of distressed properties that builders are forced to compete with in virtually every area of the country," said NAHB chief economist David Crowe.

The estimated 3.7 million homes in which homeowners are at least 90-days delinquent on their loans are pushing prices down, creating negative equity among homeowners. The vast majority of these "upside down" properties will, in turn, be added to the estimated 2.25 million homes currently in foreclosure.

Other factors affecting home prices are "low consumer sentiment and employment rates that are barely off the bottom," according to Crowe. The silver lining in this dark economic cloud is the fact that households are continuing to form at an annual rate of about 750,000 per year. A healthy economy creates about 1.2 million households annually, which indicates that there's a large shadow inventory of households waiting on the sideline to purchase homes as more jobs become available.

How long will it take until a balance is reached between supply and demand? About three or four years, according to Moody's Zandi. In an interview with Builder Magazine, Zandi noted that he "expects the household formation rate to be even higher than the normal 1.2 million, as pent-up demand emerges."

So what does this all mean to Las Cruces area homeowners?

"They" say that New Mexico in general and Las Cruces in particular are doing better than the U.S. as a whole. In a nutshell, "they" are right, albeit to a point. While nationwide home prices have declined about 30 percent since 2006, Las Cruces area prices declined by about 22 percent. Nationwide, approximately 30 percent of sales are of distressed properties. The same is true for Las Cruces. Las Cruces' unemployment rate in April was 7.9 percent. Nationally, April's rate was 9 percent.

While we are indeed a bit better off than the nation as a whole, local indicators continue to point to a slow and lengthy recovery that will mirror the pace of our national housing recovery – meaning it could easily take another year to 18 months before local prices stabilize.

See you at closing.

Las Cruces may be in a double-dip recession

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

Las Cruces has hit a slow patch since the beginning of the year. Employment was down in both March and April compared to the previous year. The decline is mild – about a thousand jobs – but troubling as usually at this point in a recovery, rapid growth is expected.

A common definition of a recession when dealing with local data is a 12-month decline in employment. By this definition, Las Cruces is in a double dip. While, I'm hesitant to declare a new recession, the local economy is in a rough spot.

So what is the cause of the current slowdown?

Without hesitation, a major problem is real estate. Having resisted the initial downturn in housing prices back in 2007, our local market is now feeling the full effects of the housing bust. Home prices are down 5.7 percent in the last year, according to Real Estate website Zillow.com. Distressed real estate sales are up, by some measures, running 30 percent of closings. In April, 1-in-every-646 properties was in foreclosure – about twice the statewide rate – but slightly less than the national rate.

The housing bust is also putting downward pressure on retail sales as homeowners seek to make up and rebuild assets by saving more and spending less. Consumers are also finding it hard to borrow against real estate as more and more find themselves upside-down on their mortgage or nearly so.

The state doesn't break out construction employment for Las Cruces, so we can't say by how much this sector is pulling down employment, but building permits issued by the city are down 18 percent year-to-date.

Military has been a source of local growth, but that has now pretty much played out. In 2005, the Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) commission designated Fort Bliss as a major recipient of military units. White Sands Missile Range did well in the BRAC process also. Between 2006 and 2010, the consequence of BRAC has been an increase in local economic growth by about 1 percent per year over what it would have been. The BRAC is now completed. Indeed, the recently announced deployment of 3200 Bliss troops to Afghanistan is a negative.

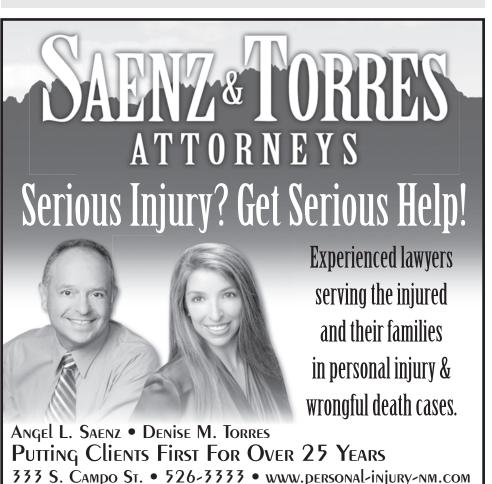

State funding for both New Mexico State University and Las Cruces Public Schools is down this year and is expected to fall farther next year. NMSU faculty face salary cuts as the state increases the employee contribution for retirement. LCPS indicates that it will cover the increased retirement contribution but has canceled scheduled salary steps and is cutting positions.

The legislature failed to pass the $240 million capital outlay budget, so state funded construction is down. Several projects at NMSU, for example, were delayed by the failure of the Legislature to act.

Overall government, which accounts for about a third of the Las Cruces economy, has been flat or down since September of last year. This slowdown has been a major drag on the private sector, and the private sector is now in negative territory.

The slowdown in the local economy is likely to be short lived as the construction at the $400 million Union Pacific diesel refueling station ramps up.

Christopher A. Erickson, Ph.D., is an associate professor of economics at New Mexico State University. He has studied the state New Mexico economy for nearly a quarter century. The opinions expressed here may not be shared by the Regents or Administration of NMSU.

'Farm-to-Table' Dinner and a Movie

Chambers join De La Vega's to host local foods and outdoor fun

Bulletin Staff Report

The Las Cruces Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces and Las Cruces Green Chambers of Commerce will join with De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery to produce a dinner of entirely local foods at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 21, at the restaurant, 500 S. Telshor Blvd. Interested parties are asked to RSVP with the green or Hispano chambers.

Farm-fresh ingredients provided by Maynard Cattle Co. and Los Poblanos Organics will be prepared by De La Vega's Executive Chef Bob Brainard. Entrées will be paired with wines from Rio Grande Winery. The dinner service includes a showing of "Wild Waters," an extreme sports film presented by New Mexico State Úniversity's Outdoor Recreation department.

"Diners will have the opportunity to fully experience a meal of fresh, local, seasonal food, knowing that every dollar they spend is staying in our local community." said Renee Frank, president of the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce.

The event fulfills the green chamber's dedication to its "Think Local First" campaign and the Hispano chamber's commitment to strengthening rural agricultural communities. Both chambers have been advocates for outdoor tourism activities and sponsors of the NMSU Outdoor Recreation program, and this event is a celebration of the unique elements that make Las Cruces a wonderful place to work, live and eat.

"Guests will get to eat along with the Maynard family, who raised and produced the beef as well as two organic farmers from Mesilla, Charlie Ryland and Emily Detrick, as well as the vineyard owners," said Gabe Vasquez, executive director of the Hispano Chamber. "This is a unique event designed to showcase local food producers and the Hispano chamber is proud to support local business at every level. Local restaurants and producers keep more money in our local economy, support the families that make up our community and ensure healthier produce on our tables."

Studies show that vegetables can lose up to 45 percent of their nutritional value by the time they land on the grocery store shelf. This loss is simply the length of time it takes for the vegetables to arrive. Embracing and supporting the agricultural community, not only strengthens the local economy, but it decreases the amount of time that it takes to get fresh produce onto tables.

"De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery believes in the Think Local First slogan and keeping business within our town as much as possible," said Ashley Springer, marketing director for the Pecan Grill and Brewery. "Chef Bob Brainard will be carefully preparing this special menu to showcase each company's locally grown products. We are incredibly excited to work with such wonderful and unique organizations and the opportunity to host something fun, tasty and original in Las Cruces."

The "Farm-to-Table" Dinner and a Movie event will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 21, at De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery. The dinner is $35 for non-members and $30 for members of either chamber. National labs encourage small business collaboration

Members of Española Valley's Santa Cruz Irrigation District (SCID) believed they needed to invest in an expensive sediment trap to maintain the capacity of their reservoir.

Sedimentation had filled more than a third of the reservoir, resulting in water rationing and a shorter growing season for the more than 3,000 farms that depend on its water. With help from a leveraged project through the New Mexico Small Business Assistance Program, the district learned that sediment was coming from multiple sources rather than just one. It is now pursuing plans to build several smaller, less expensive traps.

"NMSBA prevented us from making a costly investment that would not be effective and offered better alternatives to benefit the farmers," said Kenny Salazar, orchard owner and board chairman of SCID.

The New Mexico Small Business Assistance Program – a joint project of Los Alamos and Sandia national laboratories and the State of New Mexico – provides free technical assistance and expertise from scientists and engineers to New Mexico small businesses facing challenges with testing, design and access to equipment or facilities. While individual businesses can request assistance anytime, the program annually considers leveraged projects involving multiple businesses with a shared problem that is too large or complex to solve in an individual project.

Small businesses can submit a pre-proposal for leveraged projects through Friday, July 8. The proposal should explain the problem, identify what expertise NMSBA offers that can't be found in the private sector at reasonable cost and the expected economic benefit to the businesses.

Building a better airplane

In 2010, under the leadership of Vibrant Corporation, four Albuquerque aviation companies used a NMSBA leveraged project to adapt a testing process used in the automotive industry. The team suspected that Process Compensated Resonance Testing (PCRT), traditionally used to test the strength of metal car components, would provide better stress detection for airplanes at lower cost.

Sandia National Laboratories compared known good and bad engine turbine blades using the aviation standard and PCRT. David Piotrowski from Delta Airlines and Sandia's Kirk Rackow, Mike Bode and Justin Newcomer reported the results to the Federal Aviation Administration and applied for an "Alternative Means of Compliance" to allow all airlines to use PCRT.

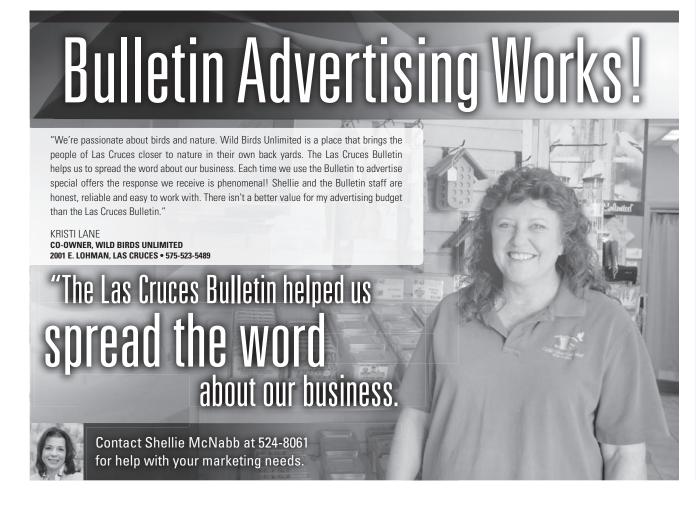

Vibrant now inspects turbine blades with PCRT, and Delta Airlines' TechOps – the nation's largest commercial aircraft maintenance company – is implementing the process for stress detection. The FAA recognized TechOps and Vibrant with an award for helping to develop a sensitive, reliable and cost-effective model for inspection and testing.

As a result of the NMSBA project, Vibrant has expanded its market, and partner companies Mechtronic Solutions Inc., Firore Industries and ZTEC Instruments are realizing commercial benefits.

"The ability to work directly with Sandia's aerospace experts has helped us to better understand our market and the opportunities it holds," said Len Hunter of Vibrant.

Businesses interested in applying for a leveraged project should visit the NMSBA website at www.nms-baprogram.com and follow application instructions. For more information, contact Lisa Henne at 505-667-1710 or henne@lanl.gov, or Jenni Degreeff at 505-844-9623 or jldegre@sandia.gov.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) recognized those who are making a difference in the community at their annual meeting, appropriately titled Building Community by Building Philanthropy.

The Community Foundation Rio Grande Awards honored individuals and nonprofits making a difference in the lives of others in southern New Mexico. Seven nonprofits, individuals and businesses were honored at the June 2 event.

Of the 34 nonprofits the CFSNM works with and supports, Mesilla Valley Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) received the Rio Grande Award for Excellence in Youth

'This award recognizes excellence among all nonprofit agencies that speak out and up for children when children need a special advocate to protect their interests," said Karen Bailey, vice president of the CFSNM Board of Directors. "The recipient of this award has demonstrated leadership in growing an organization to provide resources, ensuring every child in foster care has a safe, supportive and permanent home."

The Spay and Neuter Action Program (SNAP) received the Rio Grande Award for Excellence in Sustainability. The organization has been successful in planning for the future while providing quality services that are accessible and affordable to people who need it

"This award recognizes those nonprofits that have endured and grown during economically hard times. They have a message that resonates with the public in a way that supports their growth," Bailey said.

The Rio Grande Professional Advisor of the Year award recognized a professional advisor who has made a significant impact on the CF SNM. Alan Gluth of Gluth Law was honored for the guidance he provided the Healthcare Foundation of Southern New Mexico (HFSNM) as they went through January's merger with the CFSNM. In addition, Gluth helped the CESNM set up the new Family Foundation Fund and provided in-kind expertise to the CFSNM.

The Rio Grande Award for Excellence in Human Services award was presented to Good Samaritan Society-Las Cruces Village for excellence in human services by supporting peace, comfort and compassion. The organization is a leader in the commitment to make all stages of life as meaningful as possible.

The Rio Grande Award for Volunteer of the Year went to Donna Tate for her lifetime achievements that have made a significant impact on the CFSNM. Tate, as well as her husband Tom, has been instrumental in raising funds for the CFSNM and SpringBoard!, a fund for women by women in the CFSNM. She has also worked as chair of the CFSNM Development Committee.

"Anything Donna is involved in she takes on as a serious task and puts her full attention to it. We are fortunate in Las Cruces to have an individual like Donna to help make our community a better place," Bailey said.

In addition to the Rio Grande Award, the CFSNM presented the Salud Award and Mountain Fund Award for volunteer of

The Salud Award was created to honor an individual who has demonstrated significant and outstanding concern for health care in the community. Abel Covarrubias, who was unable to attend the meeting because he was on a humanitarian mission in Nicaragua, was honored with the award. In November 2005, Covarrubias founded a local organization that provides comprehensive speech-language therapy, occupational therapy and physical therapy services. His efforts have led to increased awareness of autism and services available to parents that help their children attain their highest potential. John Hilton Lyman created an endowment to recognize an outstanding volunteer at the annual meeting of the CFSNM, and this year's Mountains Fund Award was presented to Diana Seward for her generous gifts of time. Seward was the HFSNM's president and spearheaded the merger with the CFSNM. She now

Unemployment report card

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the Las Cruces MSA was 7.9 percent in April – little changed from April 2010 level of 7.8 percent, but down 0.4 points from last month's 8.3 percent. Over the month, the Las Cruces economy lost 600 jobs, of which 500 were in the private sector and 100 were in the government sector.

Preliminary April data showed construction, up 100, as the only private-sector industry to add jobs, while five others lost a combined 600 jobs and five reported no change. The largest loss came in professional and business services, which was down 200 from its March level. Retail trade, financial activities, educational and health services and miscellaneous other services each lost 100 jobs. Manufacturing; wholesale trade; transportation, warehousing and utilities; information; and leisure and hospitality each remained unchanged over the month. Among public-sector components, state government posted a 100-job decline, while federal and local government employment remained at their March levels. Over the year, the Las Cruces MSA recorded a loss of 1,100 jobs, much of which was due to a large and atypical March to April decline of 600 jobs. The private sector registered a loss of 900 jobs, while government totaled a decline of 200. State government was flat over the year, but the local and federal levels were each down 100 jobs. The decline in federal government was likely due, at least in part, to the completion of census activities last year. Similarly, local government employment was likely impacted by the expiration of stimulus funding.

Las Crucen speaks up for solar and Positive Energy customers

By Samantha Roberts

Las Cruces Bulletin

Solar in New Mexico is booming. Tax incentives, rebates from electric providers and other aspects are motivating businesses and residents to install solar panels, reducing their carbon footprint and putting a few extra bucks in the bank, but why are El Paso Electric Co. customers rewarded to a greater extent in New Mexico than Texas?

Some would say it's because southern New Mexico has 350 days of sunshine a year, but one of the reasons is because someone has worked for these incentives and his name is Mark Westbrock.

Westbrock is a partial owner of Positive Energy Solar, a New Mexico-based solar company that allows employees to buy into the company after one year of employment. The company, founded in 1997, currently has three principal owners and twelve employee owners.

"I have a bachelor's degree in zoology from the University of California Santa Barbara and master's degree in biology from Wake Forest University, but in graduate school I really started to get interested in climate change and the effects it has on the world," Westbrock said.

While in college, Westbrock said he worked with his wife Theresa to make a diesel truck run on vegetable oil and has been hooked on sustainability ever since.

"I decided I wanted to work on the solutions instead of just documenting the effects," he said.

To pursue this new career path, Westbrock started taking night classes to learn more about electricity and residential wiring, while working in a lab studying the carbon cycle at the University of Michigan. Wanting to continue his education, Westbrock researched schools that provide solar-related degrees and said he discovered the best school was in Farmington, N.M., providing an associate's degree in renewable energy.

In 2006, Westbrock moved to Las Cruces with the goal of working for a solar company.

"There were zero solar companies in Las Cruces at the time," he said, "so I decided to talk with Randy Sadewic (a co-owner of Positive Energy Solar) and see if he was interested in bringing the company to Las Cruces. As it turns out, they had been talking about opening something up here so it worked out well."

The original Las Cruces office was out of Westbrock's house, and he said he was still working in Santa Fe one week out of the month to get all the proper training.

"Selling solar was more difficult at the time," he said. "There were only 12 grid-tied systems in El Paso Electric's territory and no (Renewable Energy Certificate) incentives, which meant payback on a new system was about 23 years."

With this lengthy payback time, Westbrock said the only people buying solar were the ones who were very enthusiastic about environmental benefits. Despite the limited incentives, Westbrock said the company installed 12 new systems in its first year, doubling the amount of solar systems in EPE's territory.

"We still found people and managed to be successful," he said. "We moved into our new office (2050 W. Hadley Ave.) in July 2009, and now have eight full-time employees in the Las Cruces office. Positive Energy has also grown with us; they went from six to 42 employees."

Today, there are more than 300 solar systems in the area and several solar companies provide service to the region.

"Now, people are not just motivated by the environment, but also other incentives," said Westbrock, adding that he has worked to make those enticements a reality. "The incentives got better, but things really changed in 2008."

In July 2008, PNM, the largest electric provider in New Mexico, was giving solar customers 13 cents per kilowatt-hour (kWh). Also in July 2008, EPE proposed a 3 cents per kWh "incentive" to solar clients.

"When I heard about the proposal, I thought, 'What can I do to change this?' I knew I wanted to intervene," Westbrock said. "I studied (Public Regulations Commission) protocols, and because I didn't have the funds to intervene as a business because you legally have to have an attorney, I represented myself as a citizen."

Westbrock said he presented a payback analysis to the courts that requested 15 cents per kWh. After cross-examinations and arguments from lawyers, Westbrock said the judge ruled in his favor on the basis "Westbrock was the only person to use logical quantitative methods in his argument."

Later, a committee set the rate at 13 cents per kWh, which Westbrock said he saw as a huge victory.

"That alone cut payback time on solar in half," he said. "It made solar an even more viable resource, and things started to shift."

Westbrock went back to Santa Fe on behalf of solar consumers in New Mexico in 2009 and 2010 to lobby for a higher rate.

"This is going to go on for a while," he said. "El Paso Electric is going to propose a lower rate, and if no one intervenes, then they get what they want. In 2009 and 2010, I was the only one to intervene."

Ín 2009, EPE asked to lower the rate from 13 cents per kWh to 10 cents per kWh. Westbrock was again successful in his attempts and a compromise was made at 12 cents per kWh. In 2010, EPE proposed lowering the rate again to .098 cents. They were unsuccessful, and the rate remained 12 cents per kWh.

Westbrock said the next solar boost New Mexico received was additional tax credits in 2010, lifting a previous cap the government had set on solar incentives.

"Some people still get that warm fuzzy feeling from using solar, but I have had some clients that also see it as purely a good financial investment," he said. "The payback is less than 10 years, and the panels are under warranty for 25 years."

Following the same philosophy in both life and business, Westbrock said one of his favorite aspects of working with solar is working for Positive Energy.

"They are what I believe in," he said. "One of the most important things we need to be concerned about is climate change. It is nice to work for a company where I can provide a tangible solution to that problem.

"Positive Energy Solar focuses on the triple bottom line – people, planet and profit. It feels really good to have those values as your business foundation. I gravitated to Positive Energy because of those standards among other things."

In Good Company: Pioneer Bank

Leading banking with a smile

Pioneer Bank works toward customer service

By Samantha Roberts

Las Cruces Bulletin

How many companies can say they have celebrated a 110th birthday? Pioneer Bank is in this exclusive group, and Market President Kiehl Hoffman said the company has devoted its 110 years to southern New Mexico, expanding to parts of Colorado and Texas.

"Customers for Life" is the bank's philosophy, and Hoffman said he encourages all of his employees to implement this attitude by greeting every single customer who walks through the door with "hello" and a friendly smile.

"All of our employees are so personable, and someone will always say 'hello,'" Hoffman said. "We also encourage people to remember people's names, but we really push the greeting."

Though Pioneer Bank has kept the small-town feel, the company continues to expand and has 17 retail branches as well as three mortgage loan offices. The bank employs 212 people companywide, and 29 people work at the location on East Lohman Avenue.

In addition to the pleasant greetings, Hoffman also said his employees are involved in the community and believes that is a vital asset to a business.

"Almost everyone that works here is involved or sits on some board in Las Cruces," he said. "Pioneer Bank also sponsors several events, with March of Dimes being our biggest."

Hoffman said the Pioneer Bank team holds traditional fundraisers, such as bake sales, car washes and setting personal goals for the organization.

"This year, every employee set a goal of $100, and I think it's safe to say we had a 92 percent success rate within our group and raised almost $9,000," he said.

Hoffman has been with Pioneer Bank since July 2004 and said last year, despite the hard economic times, was one of the bank's most successful years.

"I don't think it's because how we reacted to the recession, I think it's because what we did before the recession," Hoffman said. "We are a local bank, and we know our community. We made smart decisions about lending, so we were able to avoid the giant problems by not creating giant problems."

While smaller banks have their benefits, they also have their drawbacks, but Hoffman said technology has helped even the playing field.

"To break that stereotype, I think we need to embrace the stereotype. No, we can't do everything a big bank can, but we offer 90 percent of what they can offer and more," Hoffman said. In the future, Hoffman said he sees prosperity for Pioneer Bank because the company vows to keep things free that should be free.

"New laws and fees are being implemented that have caused big banks to increase prices," Hoffman said. "For example, I have a friend that has online checking with a big bank and she was charged $9 just to cash a check at the teller even though she banks with them. We believe those kinds of things should be free, and we make a profit in enough ways to not charge. That's our competitive advantage."

Ag secretary announces goals

Jeff Witte is ready to start working for agricultural

WITTE

Bulletin Staff Report

Jeff M. Witte, who took over his duties as the director of the New Mexico Department of Agriculture May 16, started out by announcing his goals.

"One of my goals is to enhance our connections with our agriculture industry and consumers around the state to let them know what NMDA is doing, what we have to do," Witte said. "Currently, we are dealing with a water challenge from an agricultural stand point. I can't make it rain, but, hopefully, by working with our agencies we can make sure we have sound water policies in place to get adequate water to farmers so they can produce their crops."

Witte was raised on a ranch in northern New Mexico and has been active with agriculture producers throughout the state.

"I have also worked in the regulatory environment here at NMDA, so I am hitting the ground running," he said.

Witte also serves as an agricultural cabinet secretary with Gov. Susana Martinez.

"I will be the voice for New Mexico agriculture, so working with the governor and our congressional delegation is going to be important for the success of our agriculture sector," he said. "Agriculture in New Mexico is big business. The agricultural economic revenue in the state is an estimated $6 billion annually.

"We have a staff dedicated to serving the citizens of New Mexico, whether it's through consumer protection consumer protection or programs, we offer to support our state's growers, producers and processors. Many of our marketing programs have already helped introduce New Mexico food products into hundreds of markets throughout the United States and internationally."

Witte is a graduate of New Mexico State University with a bachelor's degree in agricultural business management and a master's degree in agricultural economics and economics.

Conquering the 'Big River'

Rafters to craft some crafty raft crafts

LAUREN MCDOWELL,

Raft the Rio coordinator

mission ...

By David Edwards

There is something romantic – childhood fantasy fulfilling – about rafts and water.

Maybe it was Huck and Jim floating down the mighty Mississippi that caught our fancy.

the mighty Mississippi that caught our fancy. Or perhaps it was the Swiss Family Robinson – lashing barrels together in order to make it to the island where they would survive for years – whose story we read over and over as children. It could have been a castaway FedEx executive, who along with his trusty volleyball companion, finally builds a raft and makes for the open ocean.

What chance do we have in Las Cruces to satisfy that primitive urge to build and float on a watercraft created from discarded materials?

For the 14th year, the Southwest Environmental Center (SWEC) will be providing all you down-the-lazy-river dreamers with a chance to do just that at the annual Raft the Rio Saturday, June 11.

While the crews of the expected 160-plus rafts will be having a great time, the real purpose of the SWEC program is to promote the river itself.

"We want to get people out on the river itself," said Lauren McDowell, Raft the Rio coordinator. "We want to bring about an awareness that not only is the river a valuable source of fun, but there are so many ecosystems there. We want people to appreciate the Rio Grande as a valuable resource for the community other than agricultural water."

Rafters are encouraged to use discarded or recycled materials in constructing their rafts, minimizing the purchase of new materials for construction. At its core, Raft the Rio has an environmental spirit.

A fairly high percentage – around 60 percent – are repeat rafters and approximately 500 individuals will be on the river. While everyone gets excited about the event, McDowell said she is surprised that many don't know SWEC sponsors the event and aren't very attuned to the group's mission.

"One of our biggest struggles is spreading the word about our mission — who SWEC is and what we do — while people are out there having a blast," she said.

SWEC is taking care to emphasize there should be plenty of water. The river is expected to be full as irrigation water is being released from Caballo Reservoir between June 1 and June 5.

The family-friendly event is open to individuals and teams of all ages. There are two divisions – kids and open. Prizes will be awarded in both divisions. To be eligible for the kids division, at least half the sailors on a boat must be under 13 years of age.

In previous years, children 12 and under were required to wear personal flotation devices as per New Mexico law. But since there are no motorized craft – they are not permitted in the contest – all participants are being required to wear life jackets. Jackets will be available to rent for a reasonable fee on site in case rafters don't have access to one.

The safety of rafters is a prime concern. So a number of entities coordinated by Fire and Emergency Management services, which has brought together 15 groups from the Mounted Patrol to the Doña Ana Sheriff's Office will be on hand to assist the SWEC safety volunteers if needed

"It really is a communitywide event," Mc-Dowell said. "It starts in the city, goes into Fairacres, then the county and ends up in the town of Mesilla. It is a great opportunity to those organizations to work together."

The course is three miles in length and finishes just upstream from the Calle del Norte "Mesilla" Bridge. There will be refreshments, food vendors and live music provided by the Robyn Rivas Band at the finish line.

Prizes will be awarded around 2 p.m. to homemade boats in the following categories:

- First to finish
- Least likely to finish (must be floating at

- start of race)
- Best use of recycled materials
- Most spirited (most enthusiastic crew)
- Best theme (most thorough application of a theme to vessel and crew)
- Champion of the river (best promotes appreciation for the Rio Grande)

"While we do give a prize to the raft that finishes first, it's not really about winning the race," McDowell said. "It's more about creativity and the spirit of the event. Most people's favorite category is 'least likely to finish.'

"The program isn't to make money – we just want to break even. We still couldn't do this without the help of our sponsors."

As a final reminder, McDowell re-emphasized that Raft the Rio is a program of the Southwest Environmental Center whose mission it is to protect wildlife and wild places in the Southwest borderlands.

Drifting back into romantic imaginings, drifting along on a self-made raft – I'm wondering if I attached a sail to my blue recycling container, do you think I could get it to float?

Her art is pure 'fabric-ation'

Creativity is cut from usually recycled cloths

By David Edwards

Meredith Loring has been sewing since age 6, but stopped making her own clothes when she discovered thrift stores. Now she takes extra large blouses she buys at Goodwill, or the material or craft supplies she comes across while working as a volunteer at the Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity ReStore, and uses them to create her art.

In the collages and mixed-media pieces she does, one might find – in addition to cloth – wallpaper, a shoulder pad or a stick scavenged from a window blind.

"I try to use recycled or re-purposed materials whenever possible," she said. "There may have been two occasions when I have specifically gone out and bought a piece of material for

She came to Las Cruces in 1977 to attend graduate school at New Mexico State University - in biochemistry. She ended up with a career as a technical writer, from which she is now

According to Loring, "Being retired is a lot more work than working. You have to decide what to do at every moment."

There was a time when what she decided to do was sell craft items at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market - things she made using items such as dried flowers and yucca pods. She also created something she called a totem wand from sticks, feathers, leather and stones. At one point she also had an antiques business, with a spot at Small Mall Antiques on West Picacho

"That's one of the things I do over at the ReStore, is keep an eye out for antiques that might come in," she said.

One of Loring's first opportunities connect her sewing abilities with art came a little more than 10 years ago when she designed costumes for the No Strings Theatre Company's production of "Angel Street." The Victorian-era dress she created for the main character out of thrift store finds was a show-stopper.

"Ceil Herman (No Strings Theatre's artistic director) gave me my first opportunity to exhibit my art work in thetheatregallery at the Black Box Theatre," Loring said. "It actually sold, so I thought I must be doing something right."

Loring began focusing more on her art – which she refers to as "free range" - about five years ago and really does it just

"I had heard about using a sewing machine as a freehand 'painting' device. Then I saw a show at a gallery in Arizona that was devoted entirely to that," she said. "I told myself, 'I can do

She started doing appliqué, extremely detailed work for a first attempt, and while she still uses that form her techniques - everything from fabric "restructuring" to freehand machine embroidery – are in constant flux. She said, "nothing is ever the same. Every single piece is an experiment of some kind." Using fabrics and other materials in new and different ways, she "coaxes" them into the desired form.

One of her newest ventures involves using a crepe pan. She creates a design on the fabric using colored wax - essentially crayons – secures it using an embroidery hoop and applies the heated pan to fuse the design to the cloth. She can then embroider around the design or add other materials as desired.

Loring occasionally uses the real world for inspiration – trips she and her husband have taken to Russia or Alaska for example – but she prefers to create a still life from her imagination. Flowers and plants are some of her favorite subjects. Sometimes she bases her work on a piece of "fun" fabric that she comes across in her stockpile.

She enjoys developing pieces based upon themes that are requested for local shows. One recent show asked for work based on a weather theme. What popped into Loring's mind was a colorful weather "map" with a frontal system moving through it.

While she does sell her work, making money from her art is not the ultimate goal.

"I show stuff because it's a part of the process – a communication," she said. "There are artists who hide their stuff behind

Staying busy this summer

Cheryl Fallstead Foundation for Las Cruces Museums

While the calendar doesn't say so quite yet, school's out and Memorial Day has passed, so in my book, that means summer's here.

Summer is a great time to enjoy the many offerings of the four museums operated by the City of Las Cruces. Come out of the afternoon heat and enjoy exhibits, talks, workshops, camps and more.

June brings "Cuentos del Camino Real," the works of Roberto Salas, and "Recovered," an exhibit of photographs by Yanick D'Hooge, to the Branigan Cultural Center on the north end of the Downtown Mall. They will open during the Downtown Ramble from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, May 3.

Three exhibits will also open during the Downtown Ramble at the Museum of Art, right across the courtyard from the Branigan. Come see "Lost Connections" by Monique Janssen-Belitz; "lived:living" by Jordan Schranz and Isadora Stowe; and "Clay and Smoke" by Sandria Hu. All three exhibits run through Aug. 6.

Both museums offer visitors more than their exhibits. The Museum of Art has summer studio programs, a monthly Reading Art Book Club that meets at 2:30 p.m. the second Wednesday of the month, and free Family Art Adventures for kids ages 6 to 12 at 10 a.m. Saturday morning.

At the Branigan, enjoy a talk about famedartist Georgia O'Keeffe at 1 p.m. Thursday, June 9, presented by Stacy Schultz as part of the monthly History Notes Lecture Series. Kids can enjoy the free Magic Carpet Story Time at 11:30 a.m. Saturday mornings. Families will want to sign up for the June 15-16 piñata workshop, which is $8 per person with pre-registration required. These two museums are open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Kids will especially enjoy the city's other two museums: Natural History and Railroad. If you haven't seen "Disease Detectives" at the Museum of Natural History in Mesilla Valley Mall, 700 S. Telshor Blvd., hurry over this weekend, as it ends June 5 for installation of the new traveling exhibit, "A Forest Journey," a hands-on exploration of the forest biome, which open June 18. This museum offers a very wide range of additional activities for people of all ages. The Natural History Museum is open daily.

Back Downtown, explore the Railroad Museum with its Centennial Caboose at Las Cruces Avenue and Mesilla Street. It is open > from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and features many interesting exhibits on railroading history. It also offers a book club with a railroad theme at 11 a.m. the second Wednesday of the month, plus numerous family activities and a monthly

Brown Bag lecture series at noon the second Tuesday of the month.

All the city museums are supported by the nonprofit Foundation for Las Cruces Museums. For more information about being a member of the Friends of the Las Cruces Museums or to consider applying to become a member of our board, visit www.flcm. blogspot.com.

For more information on the four city museums, visit www.las-cruces.org/museums.

"Recovered," an exhibit of photographs by Yanick D'Hooge, will open at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., as part of the Downtown Arts Ramble. An artist reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. where guests can view her paintings, such as this one titled "Naked 13," and meet the artist.

Cattleman's Steakhouse provides undiscovered entertainment

By David Edwards

The "back room," otherwise known as the banquet room, at Cattleman's Steakhouse has a history.

It has at times been a disco, dinner theater and even a venue for touring artists. I saw Keith Carradine there back in the 1970s. For those who don't remember or are not familiar with Carradine's work, the actor a member of the Carradine acting clan – is also a singer and songwriter. His song "I'm Easy" was performed in the 1976 film "Nashville." He won a Golden Globe and Oscar for "Best Original Song" for the tune.

The room is a great performing space and has been dolled up in the past few years and is a part of Cowboy Jim's (owner Jim McMullan) Saloon and Grill. It is also the scene for a growing open mic night every Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. Acoustic musicians can sign up beginning at 6:30 p.m. and can perform up to child of Jerry Phillips of Mountain Music, which co-sponsors the weekly free event. Phillips, along with McMullan and his wife Mary and manager Sallie Clifford, decided to give it a try for six weeks. It has extended well beyond that and its popularity continues to grow.

Theevening begins with a highlighted player, selected Phillips, who does a half-hour set. Then those have signed up have their turn in the spotlight. Musicians range from those with professional experience to amateurs who may have never been in front of an audience before. But even if they miss a few notes or forget the words, the crowd is very supportive and encouraging.

The fact that the room is separate from the bar also helps create a space without the normally distracting noise that comes from a place busy serving drinks and food. While there is no cover charge to listen, the servers at Cattleman's take care of the open mic room as well as the audience.

Phillips runs professional set-up with its stage lighting and sound system, microphones and PA. He often conducts some small giveaways to participants. The Cattleman's experience is a bit different than some of the other open mics in town because it eliminates the white noise found in other venues – people are there to hear the music not talk

Cattleman's also has a live band in the banquet room every other

M. Phillip's Fine Art Gallery offers contemporary Russian and older European art. Patrons can peruse and purchase sculptures, antiques and paintings.

When Max and Gail Bleiweiss opened the gallery in 1996, they wanted to offer high-quality art at a competitive price and make it readily available to the public. The art offered at M. Phillips is usually only found in major art markets, such as London, New York or Santa Fe. Most of the artists exhibited are represented in European and Russian museums.

If you're curious about the name of the gallery, Phillip is Max's middle name.

In addition to offering some of the finest art in southern
New Mexico, Gail Bleweiss also teaches music in the same building at Studio A-440, where students learn violin, piano, cello, trumpet and voice.

Her son Mark Bleiweiss spends countless hours scouring the globe and making deals to buy the art at a discount. His day job is related with art, crafting gilded wood name plates and lettering by hand for art galleries all over the world. While the gallery does feature some Southwestern art, the Bleiweiss' wanted to offer something a little different. Mark Bleiweiss explained that most of the collection has a personal taste and unlike most galleries, they own the majority of the work - it's not on consignment.

New spin on 'loser returning home' story

'The First Beautiful Thing' director leads audiences through winding tale

Review by Jeff BergFor the Las Cruces Bulletin

The first beautiful thing you may notice about "The First Beautiful Thing," a superb comedy-drama, is that it is not your typical "loser-comes-home-to-see-dying-parent" movie.

No, it's not like that at all. Rather, it is a finite look at a man who is wondering if his somewhat tawdry lifestyle is really all that bad and if it is due to his unbringing and if it is due to his upbringing.

The film opens with a long flashback – much of the rest of the film is also done this way, but to great effect, which is unusual – to a bucolic summer fair, where young Bruno, his father and sister watch as his mother wins a low-budget beauty contest. His joy is hidden, since his father is jealous and furious – for reasons that we learn later – and his sister is somewhat indifferent.

Through other flashbacks and flash forwards, director Paolo Virzi leads the audience through this arty, sometimes funny, sometimes serious and warm film, allowing for the fact that it might be hard for Bruno to be a likable fellow.

In fact, he is not, at least not at first. Soon we are privy to the grown up Bruno, a wayward adult, a teacher at a local school and a man who is in denial about his drug problem. He's not down and out, but he is certainly close to the breaking point with his bad habits, which help create tense relationships.

Back to the past again, and we learn that Bruno's dad is an abusive lout, one who respects no one and nothing, and it is not long before Anna (the mom) is fleeing for a better life with Bruno and his sister Valeria in tow. And good riddance to the local smarmy villagers as well.

The film moves carefully and gently back to the present again, as Valeria has come to inform Bruno that their mother, now in an attended care home, is not going to live much longer. He needs to come see her – now.

From here, the story easily skips back and forth, following Anna and her fry on their new life and adventures, some good, some bad, occasionally blending in an often uncomfortable scene with their father. Anna herself grows stronger in her new life, sealing herself off from the past, but advancing to the future, and always keeping her fresh and independent spirit alive and available to her kids. But is she really there for them emotionally?

The memories for Bruno become more vivid and frequent as he arrives at the home.

Although ill, Anna is still up and about, and certainly not above giving orders to anyone who gets in her way. She is strong and determined, and men still pursue her, even though she has just had her 10th dose of chemotherapy. Nothing seems to keep her down another story. Sour and cynical, it is not until the last part of the film that he becomes a character that is somewhat likable. As with most of those who are in denial about substance abuse of any kind, they also "use" everyone around them in one way or another.

"The First Beautiful Thing" manages to skip past most of the normal clichés of a "reunion" movie. It is refreshingly honest in its presentation, not to mention well photographed and acted.

It is also a movie you should definitely see, and not just because it was Italy's entry for the 2010 Best Foreign Language film.

Jeff Berg, jeffberg@ lascrucesbulletin.com, is a movie reviewer, not a critic.

This two hour Italian film will open for a week run Friday, June 3, at Le Theatre ze Fountain. It has good subtitling, but is for adults only.

'Elvis Has Left the Building' returns to the movie theater

Live show by Elvis tribute artists to take place following flick

The CineMatinee for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, June 4, is "Elvis Has Left the Building" (2004, 90 minutes, rated PG-13 made in New Mexico). After the screening, Elvis tribute artist Bud Sanders will give a live performance. This is a special event and will have a different admission price

Harmony Jones (Kim Basinger) saw Elvis Presley in concert when she was a child, and the event had a profound impact on her, as she communicates with the youthful spirit of the "King of Rock 'n' Roll" on a regular basis. However, Harmony has notoriously bad luck with Elvis impersonators, who tend to drop dead when she's around. After accidentally running into a carload of Elvis tribute performers, Harmony abandons her career selling cosmetics door to door and hits the road, hoping to outrun the lawmen who are now on her trail. As Harmony roams the highways, she meets Miles Taylor (John Corbett), a lawyer from New York City trying to escape some troubles of his own. Directed by Joel Zwick, who made the surprise hit "My Big Fat Greek Wedding," "Elvis Has Left the Building" also stars Annie Potts, Sean Astin and Billy Ray Cyrus (www. allmovie.com).

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the Old West or anything in between – and "movies that missed us," films that are notable but never had a lot of publicity.

The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment. At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico "connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state or perhaps featuring a star or story from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

Flour gorditas, I presume

Put KCK Family Kitchen on your map

By David Edwards

Once in a while, one gets a chance, as a writer, to let folks know about something new - or at least something to which one has not previously been exposed.

The sign along Solano Drive by the Krystal Kar Wash – an unlikely place for a restaurant – had intrigued me from the first time I noticed it some months ago.

It read, "Flour Gorditas."

How could that be? A gordita is a little, fat, deep-fried corn patty stuffed with meats, cheese, lettuce and tomato. What's the deal with a "flour" gordita?

I found out when I ventured into KCK Family Kitchen - and I "discovered" a couple of other things as well.

KCK has been open just since January 2011, and it was a dream come true for owner and chief cook Patricia Estrada, who was laid off from her previous job and started selling food out of her home to help make ends meet.

She found out about the location's availability and relatively inexpensive rent, and decided to take a leap of faith. The name KCK comes from the initials of each of her three daughters' first names – Karla, Claudia and Karina – and it is a family-operated business to be sure.

Claudia - who really wants to be a speech therapist – recalled coming home from school and having her mom break the news that she was going to open a

"I asked her if she was serious. When? Where? How?" Claudia (The "Big C" of KCK) said. "But we got the loan and here

KCK is starting to get a reputation for freshly made homestyle Mexican food, and they try to have some items that no one else has – those flour gorditas for example.

They consist of a 4- or 5-inch-long, one-half-inch-thick, homemade (could it be anything else?) gordita stuffed with green or red chile meat, chicharron, brisket or beans and cheese. Absolutely terrific, and the chile of either denomination has a great flavor and kick.

The flour gordita plate comes with three of the delicious devils and rice and beans – you can mix it up with different stuffings. That's exactly what I did during that first outing. Girlfriend got the brisket flautas ahogadas – a tomato-ish sauce that is slightly sweet.

My mom's cousin and his wife from San Angelo, Texas, were here for a visit, so the next day included a trip to KCK. A party of seven descended on KCK around noontime, and since they don't use a microwave, there has to be some thought and organization to assure dishes come out at the same time. More gorditas, tacos, enchiladas were had and enjoyed by all. Uncle Bill even had a plain old hamburger.

I say "plain old" because there is a Mexican burger option on the menu, which I ordered the following Monday when lunch buddy and I invaded. Urged to serve them by one of the daughters, it is a third-pound of fresh ground beef, American cheese, avocado, mayo, mustard and - get this - ham and a weenie. Outstanding. It came with hand-cut French fries and a grilled jalapeño that set me free.

In addition to the burger, I got to sample lunch buddy's chile rellenos and it was the best I have had in a while. This leads up to my trying something from the breakfast menu – served until 10 a.m.

I have had huevos rancheros many times, but never like the ones at KCK. The two eggs go on top of the three fried corn tortillas but instead of salsa, they are smothered with an asadero cheese and green chile sauce. One more of those "Iain't-seen-nothing-like-that" items I was feeling good about "discovering."

Who knows? There may be some other surprises hidden among the other traditional Mexican dishes - menudo (Saturdays only), caldo, shrimp cocktail, Mexican hot dogs, tortas and homemade horchata.

Kung Fu Hangover 1.75
Neither new sequel measures up to the first

Review by David EdwardsLas Cruces Bulletin

The top three grossing films of this past record-setting box office weekend were all sequels – "The Hangover 2," "Kung Fu Panda 2" and "Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides" or "POTC 4," if you want to think of it that way. Having seen the latter and giving it a generous (perhaps) "B" last week, I was faced with the dilemma of which of these two other sequels to see.

One was the all-time box office champ among R-rated comedies and the other was one of my favorite animated films of the past few years. Was there any hope that

KUNG FU PANDA 2

Starring: Jack Black, Angelina Jolie Rated: PG

Running time: 90 minutes Director: Jennifer Yuh

"KFP 2" is about 75 percent as good as the first, which means it isn't half bad.

Film Review

Grade B either follow-up would measure up? No. In fact, I can't think of too many – if any – film sequels that equaled or bettered the original. It's one of those axioms, such as "the movie wasn't as good as the book." Sequels or prequels set up expectations that are nearly impossible to meet.

It's a little different when the source material already comes in multiple parts – take "The Lord of the Rings" or the "Harry Potter" series for example. You know there is going to be a part two or more from the get-go – unless it really stinks. Think "The Last Airbender" or "The Golden Compass." Sometimes even that doesn't stop studios from making a crappy sequel or even two. Are you listening Disney and 20th Century Fox? Please let the "Chronicles"

It doesn't take a genius to see what starts out as a good idea and makes a good, maybe even great film, just can't carry the weight of a sequel. I suppose studio executives who love the smell of money think because a film did much better than expected, they can catch lightning in a bottle a second or third time by recreating the same formula, even though the material can't be stretched that far.

of Narnia" die a peaceful but highly deserved

I am not the first to suggest they should leave well enough alone – but then opening weekend paydays of $280 million are hard to blow off. That speaks much louder than the voices of critics or fans. It's just too bad that we fall for their old trick: "if you loved the first one, you'll love the second one."

I went to "The Hangover 2" and "KFP 2" back-to-back and came away from the experience wondering why they weren't better. Now, don't get me wrong, they are both better than a number of the so-called summer blockbusters released so far, but neither approaches the satisfaction I had watching the originals.

"The Hangover" pushed the limits of
"that-is-so-wrong-on-so-many-levels" comedy and its beginning bachelor-party-gone-wrong plot complication – "We lost Doug." – was unique in allowing the audience to solve the mystery the "Wolf Pack." Throw in Mike Tyson, a missing tiger, an unknown baby, rohypnol-induced amnesia and a crazy, initially naked Asian gangster and everyone who loves insane, adult gross-out comedy comes out a winner.

Do I really need to re-hash the plot of "Hangover 2?"

This time it's Stu (Ed Helms) getting married in Thailand. There is more drug-induced amnesia, a face tattoo a la Mike Tyson, a missing brother of the bride, a drug mule monkey — and this monkey not only makes drug deals but he also has other talents that I can't even really begin to discuss — and the same Asian gangster (played by Ken Jeong, who apparently is happy to inspire laughter by exploiting his underwhelming nudity). Will they find the brother and get Stu to the wedding on time? You are welcome to take a guess but I really didn't care too much

This is more pushing the envelope, "wrongon-so-many-levels" comedy in almost exactly the same format and it just isn't as funny this time around. There are a few "laugh-out-loud" moments, but not nearly as many as in the original. We will, perhaps, get a sense of the lasting popularity when we see the drop off in box office from the first to second weekend.

I found myself laughing and smiling much more at "Kung Fu Panda 2" – just in 2-D, thank you very much. I was even touched at various points during this continuation of overweight panda Po who became the legendary Dragon Warrior in the first movie.

The Kung Fu team, The Furious Five – Tigress, Monkey, Mantis, Viper and Crane – led by the wise Shifu are back. Along with Po, they must face a new villain – the peacock Shen who threatens to take over China and destroy kung fu with his gunpowder-fueled weapons.

We learn along with Po about his past. His "father" is a goose (one of my favorite characters – voiced by James Hong) so the panda must have been adopted. It is foretold that Shen will be defeated by a "black-and-white" warrior, so years ago our villain tried to make sure no pandas remained. My one large criticism is the obvious plot point that opens the way for ... another sequel. I hope Shifu can teach me the inner peace necessary to endure.

Why laughter really is the best medicine

Bob Nosbisch Getting the Word Out

Several weeks ago, Health writer Natisha Hales asked me if I wanted to write another column for the Las Cruces Bulletin. Not knowing what I would write about, I consented. I'm not an amateurcrastinator; I'm a procrastinator. So as you may have surmised, I went a number of days without a topic for the article.

And then it hit me.

In last Friday's (May 27) edition of the Bulletin, David Edwards began his review of the new "Pirates of the Caribbean" movie by calling the latest installment of the Johnny Depp blockbuster "aarrgh-uably the best of the film series." His pun-ishing comment made two things happen: Coffee instantaneously spewed from my mouth, and I wondered if pirates sold roasted corn for a "buck an ear."

Then I started thinking seriously about laughter and its benefits. Why is laughter the best medicine? These examples may help show you why.

Cardiologists at the University of Maryland Medical Center in Baltimore measured the humor responses of 300 people. Half of them did not have heart disease. The other half had undergone coronary artery bypass surgery or suffered a heart attack. Dr. Michael Miller, director of the Center of Preventive Cardiology at the medical center and a professor in the university's School of Medicine, said researchers found that people with heart disease displayed more anger and hostility and generally laughed less, even in positive situations.

"We know that exercising, not smoking and eating foods low in saturated fat will reduce the risk of heart disease," Miller said. "Perhaps regular, hearty laughter should be added to the list."

In another study published in the British Medical Journal, researchers in the United Kingdom found that laughter could be used as a therapeutic option when treating patients with leg ulcers. Professor Andrea Nelson of the University of Leeds' School of Healthcare led the study, whose aim was to find a way to speed up the healing process of persistent

'Rising levels of obesity mean that the number of people who suffer from leg ulcers is likely to grow," Nelson said.

The scientists observed patients from the U.K. and parts of Ireland who suffered from ulcers that had not healed for six months or more. Previous studies recommended ultrasound as a solution. Nelson's team found the addition of ultrasound did not make a significant difference in the recovery process or the chances of the lesions reappearing. Ultrasound also increased the treatment cost per patient by nearly 200 pounds.

Furthermore, the researchers found that traditional nursing (compression therapy and dressings) and a good sense See Laughter on page D2 which it was designed, sponsors say. The program, titled the New Mexico Drug Card, is to help provide prescription assistance at the time of purchase at pharmacies throughout the state. The effort is sponsored by the Greater Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce. In November 2009, the chamber said the program was created to help uninsured and underinsured residents of New Mexico by providing free discount drug cards at no cost, which offer significant savings on many prescription drugs. At that time, the Albuquerque chamber said the program was already in use figures given by Mike McCabe of the Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce, indicate the use of the New Mexico Drug Card has not caught on yet with people purchasing prescriptions. McCabe said in the first year of existence, only about 3,000 prescriptions were filled with the card. This past year, from last November to the present day, there have been about 4,100 uses, so it is gradually gaining interest.

In talking with some Las Cruces pharmacies, the use of the card is apparently very low. Questions to two Walgreen pharmacies showed that they each only had one or two times the card was used in the past couple of months. Walgreen said the Familywize Card is popular with their clients. They also have their own program, and there are several cards available for those without insurance plans.

Rexall Drug did not use the card. Albertsons said it hasn't had any uses of the New Mexico card, but it has had traffic with the Doña Ana County card. Of the two Walmart pharmacies, one did get some use of the card.

McCabe said they have begun a program of publicity and education concerning the availability and use of the New Mexico card, and he will travel around the state to help spread the word about the card.

The following are some of the highlights of the program. Be aware that it is not insurance, it is a "point of sale" discount plan.

Free for everyone: All residents are eligible to get pharmacy discounts through this program. The program can be used to for itself," Hardman-Hartley said. "The speaker is Dale Thomas Smith, and she has made many appearances around the country including popular talk shows.

Smith has been teaching audiences to "Choose Success" in all areas of their lives by challenging hundreds of thousands of audience members around the world to make choices in their lives that will create success.

"It is important to remind women they must take care of themselves," Smith said. "We are so busy taking care of our families and everyone else that many times we neglect to take care of ourselves. I will share ideas that will help them achieve

In addition to these ideas, Smith said she will also talk to the audience about how to make small daily changes that can drastically change one's life.

"Woman can expect to learn how simply changing their language can change their life, how to increase their self-esteem and how to find the courage to live their best life," she said.

As a featured guest on many radio and television shows around the country, Smith's message has been seen and heard by millions of people. She has been a special guest expert on "The Dr. Phil Show," "The Big Idea" on CNBC and featured on CMT, VH1 and MTV.

"Healthy Woman is all about women's health and putting positive messages in our heads, which creates positive mental health and in turn, positive physical health," Hardman-Hartley said. "Dale brings such a positive message and talks about these positive messages."

"I think everyone (men and women) need to be reminded daily that life is about choices. We have the choices daily to change our attitude and change our lives," Smith said. "If we

In addition to the guest speaker, participants can enjoy vendor booths and entertainment from 4 to 6 p.m.

"We will have demonstrations from MountainView and a health fair during this time," Hardman-Hartley said. "There will also be some fun shopping opportunities, what I'm calling 'shopportunities.'

Laughter

of humor were an effective remedy. The experts said a hearty laugh stimulated the diaphragm, which increased blood circulation and helped flush toxins out of the organs.

Need more evidence that laughter is the best medicine?

In another University of Maryland study, the blood vessels in a group of people who watched dramas tended to tense up and restrict blood flow, while the blood vessels in a group who watched comedy easily expanded and contracted.

Vanderbilt University researcher Maciej Buchowski found that 10 to 15 minutes of laughter burns 50 calories.

Norman Cousins, who was diagnosed with a painful spine condition and who wrote "Anatomy of an Illness," found that a steady diet of watching "Candid Camera" and Marx Brothers movies helped him feel better. He said 10 minutes of laughter gave him two hours of pain-free sleep. So watch "Airplane!" again. Listen to a Robin Williams CD. Hang out with people who love to laugh, especially those who elicit from you a hearty chuckle or window-shattering guffaw. You'll feel better and it may help you live longer.

supplement most health insurance plans, including Health Savings Accounts (HSA) and High Deductible Plans. It can also be used as a Medicare Part D supplement by providing discounts on non-covered drugs.

- No restrictions: There are no enrollment forms, age or income requirements, waiting periods, eligibility required, exclusions, claim forms to file and annual or lifetime limits. It also covers pre-existing conditions.
- Lowest price: This program has "lowest price logic" to guarantee that users get the best pricing on prescriptions. Cardholders pay the lower of either an average wholesale price (AWP), discount of MAC pricing or pharmacy promotional retail price. The chamber claims average savings are roughly 30 percent.
- All medications: The program includes discounts on brand and generic medications, open formulary so all medications are eligible for discounts.
- Immediate use: The New Mexico Drug Card is preactivated and can be used as soon as you get it.
- Confidential: No personal information is required to get a card or is collected on processed prescriptions.

In this age of electronics, there are still those without access to computers. These individuals may be able to talk to their pharmacist to get help obtaining a card.

For those with computer access, it is easy and fast – just visit www.newmexicodrugcard.com. A screen will appear and ask the user for their name and email address. After this information is entered, the user's drug card, name and ID number will be emailed to them. It is pre-activated and ready to use. If the pharmacist needs help processing a prescription, use the Pharmacy Help Line (toll free) at 877-321-6755.

There is a variety of other prescription help cards and most pharmacies will know about what's available.

Regarding the Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce's efforts, McCabe said, "If the Chamber can make health care more accessible and more affordable, we believe that is a good contribution to our state's well-being."

The chamber will receive a small fee from United Networks of America, which will be used to help market the card and reach more of the state's population.

Any pharmacy can enroll in the program with no setup fees. They simply must agree to give a discount to the patients that carry to New Mexico Drug Card.

... or at least the bird lovers of Las Cruces

By Amanda Green

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Wild Birds Unlimited is a small shop on Lohman Avenue serving the bird lovers of Las Cruces.

Since opening in August 2007, the store has been on a mission to make every Las Cruces yard bird-friendly for the enjoyment of the homeowners and, of course, all of the visiting birds.

Wild Birds carries a wide variety of food, bird feeders, a source of clean water, safe nesting areas and secure cover or shelter, to keep the birds coming back for years to come. Birds benefit from the outdoor elements homeowners provide, while the family gets satisfaction from watching all of the different species visit their little oasis.

Wild Birds Unlimited also provides the community with information about wildlife and avian events across the Mesilla Valley in its monthly news letter. The store is involved with the Mesilla Valley Audubon Society, which hosts field trips every few weeks for bird watchers, and gives presentations to local schools on wildlife in the community. It has sponsored film showings, donated feeders and poles to the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center, allowing patients receiving chemotherapy to enjoy watching the spectacle birds can create.

Each of the independently owned Wild Birds Unlimited stores stands behind its mission to bring people and nature together through its Pathways To Nature Conservation Fund, which supports national parks, wildlife refuges and sanctuaries across the nation. Wild Birds Unlimited is continually looking for ways to give back to the community that has supported its location and passion for backyard wildlife.

"We like to be a place where bird lovers can come to talk about their birds," said owner Kristi Lean. "They send us pictures, and let us know what birds they have seen in their yards."

Lean keeps a list of these on a whiteboard near the register so fellow bird watchers know

Los Artesanos Gallery to honor Ramon Escalante

By Jimmy Currier

Ramon Escalante was an artist at heart, who developed his own style. He was a longtime employee of the City of Las Cruces, enjoyed helping others and was a founding owner of Los Artesanos Galeria in his native Mesilla.

For the past two years, he actively participated in the gallery's art show that benefited Relay for Life, which is one of the largest fundraisers benefiting the American Cancer Society.

Sadly, Escalante lost his nine-year battle with prostate cancer in August 2010. While Escalante won't be at the show raising money to help fight cancer or walking the laps at the Relay for Life, his legacy lives on through his artwork.

His art, which is primarily Southwestern-themed etchings on leather and wood, will be for sale, with 20 percent of the proceeds going to the Relay for Life.

"Ray was very inspirational to the other artists here," said his widow, Jan Escalante. "They would ask him about things and he always shared the ideas he had. He was very much a visionary."

Los Artesanos Galeria's third annual Benefit Art Show – which will be June 11-12 at the gallery, 1910 Calle de Parain, in Mesilla and on the front lawn at San Andres High School, located across the street from the gallery – will be held in Escalante's honor.

When Greta Burger, a co-owner and artist at Los Artesanos, said she wanted to dedicate the benefit show to Ray Escalante, Jan Escalante said he would love that, but also be a little embarrassed.

Ray was very inspirational to the artists here.

JAN ESCALANTE, wife

"He was reserved and modest," she said. "He wasn't a braggart."

Ray Escalante traveled the country, with his wife as his manager, displaying his art.

"His biggest joy was having somebody buy his work and knowing that they're going to put it in their house," Jan Escalante said. "I always thought that was so interesting."

The benefit show will feature other prominent local southern New Mexican artists including Colleen Villanova, Kurt van Wagner, Margaret Cordova, Horacio Cordova and Escalante's nephew Gilbert Paez. In all, Burger hopes to have more than 20 artists at the show, selling various pieces such as gourds, glass, ceramics, pottery, jewelry, metal work, clay, watercolors and etchings for sale. The prices range from $15 to $500 with 20 percent of proceeds going to the Relay for Life. Burger said some items, such as her coasters with the cancer awareness ribbon, will have 100 percent of the revenue donated to the fundraiser.

Over the past two years, the art show has hauled in more than $2,400 to fight cancer.

Burger said she got involved with the Relay for Life because everyone's been affected by cancer.

"I've worked with a lot of people that have been affected – co-workers, family and friends," she said. "It's something very hard to deal with. For me, if I can do something to give back to that, that's what I want to do."

Jan Escalante and Greta Burger, two of the four owners of the Los Artesanos Galeria in Mesilla, are proud to honor the legacy of the late Ramon Escalante during the annual art show, which benefits the Relay for Life. The duo holds a T-shirt, designed by Ray Escalante's daughter Veronica Terain, which honors him.

These easy steps can help you enjoy the outdoors, watch your waistline

Summer is the season of relaxation for many, but it's easy to become lazy on your mission to better health. Plenty of temptations can negatively affect your well being, but with the right tools, you can treat yourself to good health and good times.

Mix it up

Seasonal drinks and dishes are a highlight of summer, but too many hamburgers, ice cream cones and cocktails can have a disastrous effect on your diet – and waistline.

Fortunately, keeping your body bathing-suit ready doesn't mean you have to sacrifice taste or variety. Whether it's a whole-fruit smoothie, frozen sorbet, fat-free salad dressing, or veggie dip, a high-powered blender or food processor can whip up endless healthy options.

Sun safety

After months of dreary, cold weather, you may be eager to soak up the sun's rays. As good as the warm sunshine feels, though, it can be damaging to your health.

Seasonal treats, including sorbet, are a highlight of summer. With healthy recipes, you don't have to sacrifice variety or taste.

More than 2 million people are diagnosed with skin cancer each year, with unprotected exposure to ultraviolet radiation as a leading cause. To lower your risk, make sure you have the right sun-safety tools: sunscreen, sunglasses and a hat.

Any time you head outside, generously apply sunscreen and lip balm SPF 15 or higher, taking care to cover all exposed areas, including the back of your neck and tips of your ears. Sunglasses should block 99 to 100 percent of UV rays to best protect your eyes and the delicate skin around them, and a comfortable, widebrimmed hat will give your head and face added protection.

Feet first

Summer is the perfect time to become more active, enjoying the fresh air and scenery while you improve your health. Whether you're planning to hike a trail, ride your bicycle, run a 5K or just stroll through the park, it's important to make sure you have the right support.

Walking in poorly fitted or thin-soled shoes can cause back and joint pain, blisters and stress fractures, so invest in quality cross-training or running shoes that provide sufficient cushion and comfort. Make sure that the shoes fit properly and don't hurt or rub any parts of your feet. Wear thick, sweat-wicking socks and get ready to enjoy better health in the great outdoors.

Stay hydrated

With the temperatures rising and the sun beating down, it doesn't take much to break a sweat on a hot day.

Even if you don't feel thirsty, replacing the water your body loses through sweat is important, as dehydration can lead to heat exhaustion and heat stroke. If you know you'll be outside for an extended period of time or if you're heading out to exercise, make sure to bring a refillable water bottle or canteen. Fill it with ice and cold water, and drink 8 to 10 ounces about every 15 minutes.

With the right knowledge and tools, you can make this summer healthier and more enjoyable than ever. Invest in and incorporate these essential items into your lifestyle every day, and you're sure to feel healthy and refreshed throughout the summer months.

Rock walled church welcomes

Worshippers invited to visit rural landmark, small church

By Todd G. Dickson

Although anyone who has traveled the back roads of Doña Ana County has seen it, many don't know that St. Mary's at Hill Anglican Church is active.

'It's surprising how many times I've heard that people don't think we're still holding services," said Rev. Jim Reeves.

Although the church, located at 7975 Doña Ana Road, is indeed holding services, its regular numbers remain a little more than a dozen, and what concerns Reeves the most is that a majority of those people are older.

With the help of the local gospel music group Connected; however, Reeves said he hopes people will come out to visit the distinctive and cozy church, especially young families, from 8 a.m. to 4 or 5 p.m. Saturday, June 18. Those curious to peek inside the landmark rural church also are welcome.

Even glimpsed in movies – see the car chase scene of 1979 film of Mark Medoff's "When You Comin' Back Red Ryder?" – the single-story rock-walled church is located on a bend in Doña Ana Road, across from Hill Baptist Church.

The church was built in 1920 - "at least that's what the cornerstone says," Reeves said by the pastor known as "Preacher Lewis."

Over the years, the church has been home to an assortment of small congregations, Reeves said.

"I don't believe it's ever been used for anything other than a church," Reeves said.

About five years ago, officials with the Anglican Church from the International Communion branch in El Paso was seeking some kind of mission possibility in southern New Mexico, he said, when they learned the church was available.

"The first time I saw this place, I fell in love with it," he said.

Reeves assumes the interior of the church walls is made with adobe - "when it's cool, it stays cool, and it holds heat in" - and said stones were gathered from the Rio Grande for the exterior walls. The wood floor with an inlayed marble center aisle are all originals, he said. The church did have to plaster over a few cracks, he said, and the pews now are uniform, whereas previously they have been an assemblage of different pews.

Also new since the Anglican church came to the rock church is a bell in the bell tower, which Reeves said is actually rung for services. Next to the church is the new parish building, with more room for group meetings and other activities, such as Bible study.

For those interested in becoming church members, Reeves said St. Mary's is a traditional Episcopal Church – under both the Anglican Church International Communion and the Anglican Convocation of the Good Shepherd – and uses the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

"We are very orthodox in our traditions," he said.

Not only is the church seeking new members, he said, but especially those wanting to take part in ministry.

Reeves said he will be glad to answer any questions visitors may have about the Anglican faith during the June 18 open house, which will include performances by Connected and light refreshments.

An inspiring residence

Las Alturas home offers peace and an artistic flair

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletin

As the sun sets, the Organ Mountains transition into various shades of pinks, oranges and reds. It was this color spectacle in which builder Eddie Chavez found inspiration when constructing his homes in the Las Alturas area.

Developing the area surrounding Angel Fire Court and constructing many of the homes on the street, Chavez selected the stucco for each residence based on the hues of the sunset. For the home at 5413 Angel Fire Court, he chose a deep terracotta that looks almost red when the evening light hits it.

"Eddie, he's an artist and an artisan," said Realtor Renee Frank of Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, who represents the listing. "He tries to make new designs that reflect the culture and landscape of the area. It looks as if the house just grew from the ground."

Built in 2003, the 2,768-square-foot home was later purchased by Dan and Diana Hein, who were relocating to the area from Maryland for work purposes.

Beginning his search for a new home online, Dan Hein said he was instantly attracted to the home when he saw it.

"I liked that it's artistic," he said. "It just grabbed me."

A gravel driveway connects to a flagstone path that takes guests past the naturally landscape front yard to swinging double doors that shut off the front courtyard for privacy.

The path continues to the simple-carved door. Surrounding the rock-covered courtyard are various colorful potted plants. A brick pad for a small table to look out to the front view and a fountain can also be found in the area.

"This is the selling point right here," Frank said.

Hein said the walls were originally a pale neutral tone. Wanting the home to reflect the Southwest culture, the couple had several of the rooms painted various bright colors.

"You don't see bold colors back on the East Coast," he said. The bright seafoam green walls of the living room are complemented by a light tan kiva-style fireplace and window seating as well as a viga-and-plank-covered ceiling.

"Personally, I like all of the wood," Hein said. "My dad was a wood carver, and that detail attracted me."

Also near the entrance is the dining room. Featuring a terracotta color, a signature of most Chavez homes, the room includes an iron chandelier hanging from the tall ceiling. A curved wall of windows showcases a view overlooking the courtyard.

Off the living room is the kitchen. Painted a creamy yellow, the room is decorated in tile. The countertops are covered in Saltillo tile, which also decorates the floors of the home. Talavera tiles in cream and blue encompass the backsplash. Wormy maple cabinets cover the walls. Hein said the rustic cabinets were used throughout and complement the knotty pine doors.

Featuring a split-bedroom floor plan, three of the home's four bedroom are located off of the kitchen. French doors seclude a family room area as well as two of the bedrooms, which share a Jack and Jill bathroom.

The master suite can be found on the other end of the home. Featuring a lighter terracotta color than that in the dining room, the peaceful room features a few windows as well as a door to a private, covered patio area.

The master bathroom was designed in a L-shape and features two separate sinks and a vanity. As with the other bathrooms, Talavera sink bowls and Saltillo tile fill the space. A large tiled shower, decorated in both tan and turquoise tile, is also found in the room.

Hein said the home features a Southwest flair, but also reflects homes found on the East Coast, which have more compartmentalized floor plans and less open spaces.

"I like the privacy the home offers," he said.

Sitting on 1 acre, the backyard features a covered patio area with fans. A lagoon-shaped swimming pool graces the area. Measuring about 9 feet deep in one area, the pool features a small jumping board and a soothing fountain.

Surrounding the pool are various plants the previous owners put in, Hein said. From rose and sage bushes to oleander, the backyard features numerous colorful native plants. Two turquoise doors located on the back and side walls finish the area and offer a bright contrast to the tan desert surroundings.

"A turquoise or dark blue garden door is a feature of the entire neighborhood," Frank said. "Almost every home has one."

Hein said he has found inspiration in the peacefulness of the home, so much so that he has written a fiction book.

"Being here in the house has been very inspiring," he said.

Cast-iron grill accessories extends the use of your outdoor cooker

By Beth Sitzler

Many consider Memorial Day weekend the start of summer and a kick off to grilling season.

It may come as a surprise to some, but the terms grill and barbecue aren't interchangeable. While similar, barbecue requires foods to be cooked slowly at a low temperature – usually 180 to 300 degrees. Grilling, however, uses a higher heat and requires less preparation and planning.

There are several health benefits to grilling. Unlike other cooking methods, foods prepared using a grill don't absorb as much fat. Plus, because grilling often enhances the flavors of a dish, fewer additives, such as salt and butter, are needed.

Meats are the most common grilled items, likely followed by vegetables, but there is so much more that can be prepared using this cooking method. A good way to cook all of your meals over this source of heat is to use the many different cast-iron grilling accessories available

What are they?

Invented in China approximately 3,000 years ago, cast iron has been melted and poured into a variety of cookware shapes and sizes. Relatively cheap when compared to other cookware materials – such as cooper and stainless steel – cast iron offers several benefits to the user.

In addition to its extreme heat retention and ability to withstand high temperatures without warping, cast iron offers one of the best non-stick surfaces available. Also, cast iron lasts a very long time with the proper care. Even items that have fallen victim to rust can be restored with a little elbow grease.

While most kitchens feature a cast-iron pan or two, the cooking material is also used to create a variety of grilling accessories. Most include a long handle, so they can be placed on the flame at a safe distance. From breakfast to lunch, get help creating tasty, grilled dishes this summer with a variety of cast-iron tools, including:

Brat and hot dog cooker: Designed to quickly and efficiently cook small groups of hot dogs or bratwurst at once, this castiron contraption prevents the meat from becoming charred. Another benefit is the cooker allows the dogs to be heated along with toppings, such as onions or peppers.

- Bread baker: Consisting of a long cylinder shape, this cast-iron gadget allows you to bake a variety of quick and leavened breads in only 10 minutes. It can also be used to heat up wraps, corn dogs, sausage and burritos.
- Hamburger griller: Whether you're looking to grill beef burgers, salmon patties or chicken, this gadget can do it all. The slotted cast iron simulates grill grate cooking, so the excess grease will drip out. The hamburger grill comes in both single and double-patty forms.
- Panini press: Crisp, freshly grilled sandwiches are a snap with this specially designed castiron tool. Measuring 8-by-4-inches, it can cook most artisan breads. Use like a normal panini press by layering your sandwich selections in the pan before securely locking.

• Pie iron: Available in both square and round forms, this cast-iron creation makes pies in a flash. The circular variety crimps the edges tightly for a pocket-type sandwich or pit. The square type makes a traditional toasted square sandwich-type dessert.

- Popcorn popper: The traditional way to pop popcorn is with this cast-iron utensil. The raw kernels are placed in the metal bowl and a heavy-duty lid covers the contents, keeping them from shooting out when over the hot flame.
- Waffle iron: Available in either a circle or rectangular form, this cast-iron item allows the fluffy breakfast staple to cook quickly and evenly over an open fire.

How do they work?

After lighting your grill and allowing it to reach the required temperature, fill your castiron accessory with your desired food items and slide it onto the hot surface.

Each tool will operate differently, so make sure to know when you need to flip and remove the cast-iron gadget so its contents won't burn.

When done, wipe down the cast-iron tool with a dry paper towel, removing any leftover grease, oil or food residue. Be sure to read the accompanying instructions so you can properly clean, season and store your grilling accessory.

Where can they be found?

These items can be purchased at www. bedbathandbeyond.com.

How much do they cost?

Depending on which accessory you select and the manufacturer, a cast-iron cooker for your grill can cost anywhere from $20 to $60.

6 ounces semisweet

chocolate 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

After popping your popcorn, preheat oven to 250 degrees. Spray a large, shallow roasting pan with vegetable spray. Mix popcorn and peanuts in roasting pan. In a heavy 2-quart saucepan, cook corn syrup, sugar and margarine over medium heat, until the mixture boils, stirring constantly. Stir in chocolate and continue to cook for 5 minutes or until the chocolate is completely melted and the mixture has thickened. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla. Pour over popcorn and peanuts; stir to coat well. Bake for 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Pour onto foil and let cool. Store in tightly covered containers. Selling Las Cruces to area newcomers

Realtor Ceil Levatino uses experience to get through the current recession

By Beth Sitzler

With 28 years of experience under her belt, Realtor Ceil Levatino knows a thing or two about building a profession and navigating through tough economic times. Originally from upstate New York, Levatino attended the Albany Medical School and earned a degree in nursing. After 10 years in the field - which included being the coordinator for kidney transplants, a job that required her to be on call 24 hours a day – she became a new mom and began looking for a different

"I was looking for a profession that gave me the flexibility to be a mom and still be out in the workforce," she said.

Recently purchasing a new home, Levatino's husband Tony encouraged her to get involved in the real estate industry.

"I told him he was crazy," she said. "I hadn't sold anything in my life. I still haven't. I think homes sell themselves, I'm just the facilitator."

Earning her license in 1983, she said the interest rate at the time was 19 percent.

"That was the first recession I went through," she said. "This is now my fourth. By now, it's like been there, done that.

While some may see a recession as a lessthan-desirable time to venture out into a new profession, Levatino said it was the perfect time to learn the business.

"I realized it was the best time to get in because people are more interested in selling their home," she said, "and buyers are usually more likely to price reasonably.

When she was new to the field, Levatino said she learned a great deal from her first qualifying broker, Rita Scharg, who owned a small company in New York.

"She taught me customer service," she said. "She taught me how to do relocations and that before you sell a house, you have to sell

"She was a wonderful teacher. I've carried her lessons with me these 28 years.'

Levatino said her experience as a nurse has also been beneficial to her real estate career.

"It's interesting," she said, "in the late 1990s, (the National Association of Realtors) did a national survey of the top real estate producers. They discovered that most were women and that most of them were former nurses and

Using the same skills she developed as a nurse, Levatino said real estate involves a lot of hand holding and listening.

"Dealing with serious medical issues can be very serious, and so can buying a home," she said. "You have to help people through that.

"You have to have a keen observation. You have to shut up and listen."

While in New York, Levatino said she not only sold and managed property, but also taught ethics to other Realtors.

"Ethics is very important to me," she said.

In 2002, her husband was recruited to MountainView Regional Medical Center, relocating the family to the City of the Crosses and bringing Levatino to Steinborn GMAC Real Estate, now Steinborn & Associates Real

"I like to tell people that God has a sense of humor because I've always wanted to live on the ocean and he brought me to the desert," she said. "But the moment I got here, I felt like I was home. This is where I wanted to be and where I was supposed to be."

Because Levatino specializes in clients relocating to the area, she said she gets to show off southern New Mexico every day.

"I love meeting people from all over the country," she said. "I love selling the area. Las Cruces is an easy place to sell.

'I see this area continuing to grow and being a strong and stable real estate market. Its beauty, its culture, its diversity bring people in from all over the country."

Although some might be wary of the real estate market, Levatino said because interest rates are currently so low, potential homeowners can obtain larger loans and have more money to spend on a home.

"Right now is an incredible time to buy and sell," she said. "The biggest challenge is overcoming all of the negativity we see in the mainstream media. It's a matter of constantly impressing on people that, particularly here, we live in an incredibly stable environment."

She said thanks to steady employers, such as New Mexico State University, White Sands Missile Range and NASA, Las Cruces hasn't seen huge dips in the real estate market like other areas have.

"It bodes well for buyers and sellers," she Selling between one and two homes a month, Levatino said she believes the customer's needs come above her own.

"I go that extra step," she said, adding that this includes checking on vacant homes, opening windows and helping with staging, if needed.

This dedication has earned her several awards, she said. Last year, Levatino won the national Premier Customer Service Diamond award through the GMAC franchise. To earn such an award, she said she had to receive a 100 percent rating on surveys sent to her clients grading her service.

"The secret to succeeding and maintaining business during a recession is to work harder and smarter," she said. "You have to work longer and more hours, and you have to be more creative. You really have to be able to think outside of the box and not be afraid to do so.'

Passing on her experience and knowledge, Levatino has partnered with Realtor Veronica

"She's been a great mentor and person to work with," said Gallegos, who received her real estate license in June 2010.

"When someone contacts us, they're getting two very motivated and hard working Realtors who will put their needs first," Leva-

In addition to her time as a Realtor, Levatino also gives back to the community and the industry in which she works. Along with being active with the Las Cruces Association of Realtors and the Realtor Political Action Committee, she is also on the board of directors for Turning Point. She is also active in politics, she

New Mexico makes the solar top 10 Top 10 solar states

State can move up the list with forward-thinking investments

Mellow Honek Living Better Solar Powered

According to the New York Times, New Mexico has ascended to the No. 9 position among the top 10 solar states in the United States. For us in New Mexico, it is no surprise that our state should be among the top 10 states for installed grid-tied solar PV power. The amazing part is to see New Jersey in second place. What's going on in New Jersey?

Clearly the New Jersey lead is not due to greater sunlight or generating capacity per installed kilowatt. After all, an optimally installed 1 kilowatt PV solar system generates 1,831 annual kilowatt hours in Las Cruces, whereas the same system in Newark, N.J., can deliver only 1,310 kilowatt hours – a 29 percent reduction.

Several factors, none of them sunlight intensity, contribute to the New Jersey lead. New Jersey has higher electricity prices and production incentives to reduce costs and speed investment payback. The state and local utilities also offer easy access to funding through loans, grants and other programs.

New Mexico was much farther down the list just over a year ago, so what made the difference? Two things: First, El Paso Electric Co. increased electric rates up to 10 percent by implementing the two tier summer rates. Second, in 2009, production incentives were introduced and New Mexico implemented a 10 percent tax credit program. These changes led to our rapidly expanding New Mexico solar industry.

renewables, would further help New Mexico take its rightful role, leading the U.S. Yet, while work progresses on improving access to financing options, the utilities work against your ability to participate in the distributed solar programs by trying to reduce or eliminate solar production credits.

These forward-thinking incentive programs help to secure our energy future by driving down the cost of renewable-energy systems. While, at the same time, the increased cost for an average non-solar electric bill is only pennies per year.

Even with the utilities' efforts to reduce the incentive programs, the outlook for continued solar growth in New Mexico looks bright. Planned large-scale utility and distributed solar projects across the state should double the existing installed capacity. Southern New Mexico locations in Las Cruces, Santa Teresa,

Rank	State	Percent installed	Megawatts Installed
1	California	47%	971
2	New Jersey	14%	293
3	Colorado	5%	108
4	Arizona	5%	101
5	Nevada	5%	97
6	Florida	4%	73
7	New York	3%	54
8	Pennsylvania	3%	54
9	New Mexico	2%	45
10	North Carolina	2%	42

Alamogordo, Silver City and Deming are all sites for large or utility scale Power Purchase Agreement (PPA) projects. Hopefully, next year New Mexico will topple Arizona or Florida for a top five spot.

Our relatively low position at No. 9 in nationwide solar production should be temporary. We are the No. 3 state in solar potential due to our bounty of sunny days and cooler high-altitude temperatures compared to other sunny states.

Moving up to No. 1 is not limited to the big multimillion dollar projects. New Mexico needs homeowners and business owners like you to install solar systems. Don't wait for our electric rates to increase and incentives to disappear. Do not let the solar opportunity pass you by. There are many New Mexico programs that make solar work for you, too.

Thurston to install elastomeric roofs, save customers money

By Beth Sitzler

With the blistering summer sun pounding down on rooftops throughout Las Cruces, homeowners have the opportunity to go green and save money on their cooling bills by installing an elastomeric roof.

A synthetic latex rubber product used to coat a roof, Farrell Thurston Construction introduced the material in March at this year's Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico Home & Garden Show.

"It's a coating, instead of actually redoing the roof," said Farrell Thurston, owner of Farrell Thurston Construction.

Thurston said that while he began researching elastomeric roofs two years ago, the idea of a more efficient roofing material sprouted about seven years ago after he was constantly tasked with repairing leaks in the flat roofs he installed on his homes.

"I was talking to the framer I had at the time, and he told me about a TPO (thermoplastic polyolefin) product," Thurston said.

Switching to the membrane roofing material, Thurston said his homeowners were very happy with the product, thanks to its durability and energy efficiency.

"We were really pleased with how it was working, but it had seams, and seams could always fail," he said, explaining that the seams are the most vulnerable area of a roof.

Searching for a durable roofing material that was seamless, Thurston came upon KM Coatings Shieldcoat System out of Phoenix.

"I chose this company because they were out of Phoenix, which has extreme heat, more extreme than here," he said, adding that some of the homes that feature the roofing material have had it for 20 years.

"I really like the energy savings and how easy it is to fix, when you know how to fix it."

The company has also coated the roof of Chase Field, the home to the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Targeted for flat roofs, the formula of the material can be adjusted to adhere to a variety of surfaces, such as smooth surfaces, granulated build-up roofs, modified bitumen roofs and spray polyurethane, among many others.

Farrell Thurston has recently introduced elastomeric roofs by the KM Coating Shieldcoat System. The company, based in Phoenix, uses the material to restore Chase Field, home of the Arizona Diamondbacks.

After properly cleaning a roof and fixing any problem areas, such as leaks and dips, Thurston said a series of coatings are sprayed to the area.

"The cost is generally under $2 a square foot," he said.

When finished, the roof is covered with one big sheet of rubber. Generally using one to three coats, and no more than four, Thurston said the number of coats is determined by the warranty, which is offered by him and the manufacturer and can last from five to 20 years.

Thurston said there are several advantages to the roofing material. Because an elastomeric roof is a coating, when it comes time to replace the material, another layer is just simply sprayed on.

"You don't have to rip it off and expose the house or business," he said, adding that it is recommended that users apply a new coating every 10 years, which is about how long it will take the sun to eat through the substance.

This also helps the environment, since less waste is being hauled off to the dump – another expense that comes out of the homeowner's pocket.

Another advantage of the white material is its reflectivity, which will reduce cooling expenses.

"It sends over 90 percent of the sun's rays back up," he said. "The roof will not heat up.

A series of coats, the white roofing surface offers several benefits, such as reflecting 90 percent of the sun's rays, making it an energy-efficient material.

You can walk on it barefoot in the middle of the summer."

An important aspect of the coating material is its durability, which is determined by its tensile strength and flexibility. Thurston explains that the higher the tensile strength, the less dirt that will collect and damage the roof, and the more elasticity, the less it will split and crack.

"We have 40-degree shifts here," he said. "The roof is constantly moving."

Thurston said tears in the roof are usually manmade, most likely caused by someone dragging a sharp object over the surface. To help deal with these little accidents, Thurston said he will show homeowners how to make minor repairs themselves.

Generating interest from homeowners at the Home & Garden Show, Thurston said he has recently measured a few roofs.

"I hope to get things rolling and going," he said. "It's a new thing, people need to get used to it and get comfortable with it."

Thurston added that he plans to use the roofing material on all of the homes he constructs, which will help his future customers.

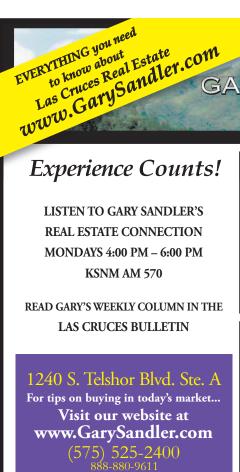

"It will make it really easy for the homeowner to take care of their roof," he said.

Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity dedicated three of its six homes of the 2010-11 build season Thursday, May 23, on Kenmore Road.

MVHFH volunteers Ted Jones and Jimmy Williams were honored for the work they do to pre-construct each home, which includes framing the doors and windows.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima shares a few words with guests during the dedication ceremony. Behind him are Pastor Grady McCollough, who performed the blessing of the homes, and MVHFH Executive Director Ed Johnson.

Home recipient Patricia Guzman stands with Ed Kosciolek, president of the MVHFH board, in front of her three-bedroom home that she will share with her three children. Guzman's home was sponsored by Wells Fargo, which donated $15,000.

Johnson hands Candace Leyba the keys to her new home as son Jonathon, 3, looks on.

Relaxing in the great outdoors

Get stylish space this summer

Cool drinks. Barbecues. Relaxing. They're all the makings of the perfect summer evening when enjoying time with family and friends. It's the season when everyone is looking for ways to spend time outside — and with a little ingenuity, a bit of a green thumb and a knack for do-it-yourself projects, the backyard can easily become an outdoor oasis. Here are some summer project tips:

- Deck prep: Many homes have a patio or deck. A fresh sweep, followed by a hose-down of the area will clear off any debris from the patio. A coat of fresh stain on a deck will liven up the whole space.
- Garden ready: Make sure garden beds are free of overgrowth and weeds. If they're looking a little sparse, consider enhancing the area with low-maintenance perennials. Add pops of color with annual flowers such as impatiens, geraniums and marigolds. For additional adornments, plant annual flowers in pots of different shapes and sizes that can be clustered on the corner of the patio or deck.
- Climb high: If you enjoy climbing flowers like clematis or climbing snapdragons, it's simple to build a free standing garden obelisk to create a colorful focal point. Finish the garden with fresh mulch to help control weeds and keep the ground moist.
- Outdoor living: Cooking with outdoor grills can help keep the heat out of the kitchen. An outdoor fire pit serves as an inviting centerpiece to the area, allowing everyone to enjoy cooler summer evenings.
- Relax and enjoy: Finally, create seating areas where family and friends can relax. The classic Adirondack chair is the perfect option for additional seating. Why not take it a step further and create a cozy seat for two, including a table and a place for an umbrella to shade the area? You'll have a new outdoor seating area that is custom made for your backyard oasis.

With a little work around the backyard, you'll have a comfortable and cozy living space that can be used during warm summer months.

Stop a home bug invasion

Las Cruces Bulletin

Simple steps keep bugs away

Scott Svenheim ACE Pest Detective

Summer bugs are buzzing, and it's time to seal up the house and sweep up every crumb – unless, of course, you'd like to welcome in ants, mosquitoes and flies.

No matter what the insect, a good start to banishing them is to keep the house sealed. Caulk and fill cracks and holes on the outside of your home. Check window and door screens and mend them if broken. Trim shrubs and trees back from the house. Make sure eaves are tight and any screen vents are intact, and keep the cellar and attic dry.

Inside it is also important to make sure areas such as under the sink are kept dry. Food needs to be properly sealed and stored so it doesn't attract insects.

When all else fails, call a professional to get rid of these pests rather than let them infest your home.

Ants

There are a variety of ants that might sneak in, including crazy ants. Crazy ants are found in all states, living both in and outdoors. They feed on animal matter, greases and sweets. These ants can be difficult to control. The best way to get rid of possible nesting places outdoors is to get rid of decaying vegetation and debris such as lumber. Always clean kitchen counters and store food in airtight containers to help keep them undetected.

Mosquitoes

Everyone knows these summer insects by the itchy, swollen blotches they cause. Female mosquitoes need a blood meal to lay their eggs, and through their bite, carry dangerous diseases, including West Nile virus and malaria. They will breed in the smallest amount of standing water, left for as little as seven days. Get rid of anything

One of the most common pests is the housefly, which is attracted to garbage and other decomposing organic matter.

Extend the life of your disposable paper plates

By Amanda Green

Disposable cutlery is essential for any backyard barbecue when you have too many guests for the glassware in your cupboards.

Cups, bowls, plates and silverware are in high demand, and for any conscientious consumer, these items are available in an ecofriendly compostable material. The plastics are made of corn, and take 90 percent less time to decompose than their petroleum cousins. Paper plates without the waxy coating are also available in many fiber and natural blends to make the compost pile in your backyard a little

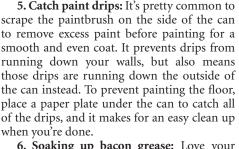

Once the guests have come and gone, there is often an abundance of these disposable items. Paper plates are one item that can have many lives, and here are some quirky ideas to help them live up to their full potential.

- 1. Use them for arts and crafts: Paper plates can be used to entertain your kids. Teach your children to make masks, mobiles and decorations out of the leftover stack of paper plates. Cut the paper plates in the shape of butterfly wings and attach the two together with some string to turn your kids into instant butterflies. You can also cut out holes for their eyes and mouth and have them decorate the plate into an animal mask of their choice. It'll be a zoo in no time.
- 2. Teach your kids the time: Turn the plate over and use the underside as the face of a clock. Paste on numbers and hands to teach your children to tell time the old-fashioned way. It's a good way to practice counting and even multiplication for school-age children.
- 3. Protect stored dishes: Prevent stored dishes from clattering and breaking, especially when you are moving, by inserting a paper plate between each dish when storing. This helps to cushion the glass without the addition of bulky newspaper.
- 4. Make note cards: Paper plates are tough enough to provide you or your child lastminute impromptu cards for school or work presentations. Use paper plates and a ruler to measure out an 8-by-5-inch card on the plate and cut out. Use the first card as a template to

- scrape the paintbrush on the side of the can to remove excess paint before painting for a smooth and even coat. It prevents drips from running down your walls, but also means those drips are running down the outside of the can instead. Need a break from heavy food?

Light recipes perfect for summertime dining

Sunny Conley Chile Knights

After the long Memorial Day weekend binge, I'm geared up for lighter fare, especially for offerings other than burgers, hot dogs and sausage links.

I'm ready for something fishy, and a recipe for Baja fish tacos dressed in a smoky lime sauce comes to mind. Deborah Szekely, founder of Rancho La Puerta resort spa in Baja, Calif., co-authored a full-color hardback cookbook by the same name.

Szekely and Deborah Schneider present a tasty collection of 120 recipes in "Cooking with the Seasons at Rancho La Puerta: Recipes from the World-Famous Spa," organized as a series of seasonal menus. The summer menu includes recipes for Baja fish tacos, salsas, salad tossed in a sassy yogurt dressing and rice pudding.

Corn, Cilantro and Arugula Salad with Yogurt Dressing

4 to 5 ears large sweet corn, shucked and silk removed 1 tablespoon olive oil 4 cups baby arugula, stemmed 12 large radishes, thinly sliced 1 teaspoon coriander seeds, crushed 2 tablespoons fresh

cilantro, chopped

With a sharp knife, cut all the kernels from the cobs. You should have about 4 cups.

In a 10-inch sauté pan, heat 1 tablespoon of olive oil over mediumhigh heat. Add the corn, cover and sauté 2 to 5 minutes, until tender. Set aside to cool.

In a large bowl, mix the corn, arugula, radishes, coriander and cilantro. Cover and chill for 1 hour. Makes 6 servings.

Yogurt dressing: 1/4 cup yogurt 1/4 cup white wine vinegar or cider vinegar 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard 1/4 teaspoon sea salt, or to taste 1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon chipotle powder serve. Makes 1/3 cup.

In a small bowl, whisk together the yogurt, vinegar, mustard and salt until well blended. Gradually whisk in the oil and chipotle powder until well blended. The dressing may be made ahead of time and refrigerated for up to 1 hour.

Just before serving, toss the salad with half the dressing. Add more dressing to taste.

Baja Fish Tacos

Serve tacos with homemade salsa (recipes below).

1 1/2 pounds boneless white fish, such as mahi mahi, red snapper or halibut

1 clove garlic, minced 1 shallot, minced

or lemon juice teaspoon dried Mexican oregano

1 teaspoon sea salt

1/2 teaspoon fresh ground black pepper

1 teaspoon olive oil

12 corn tortillas 1 cup green cabbage, finely shredded Chipotle lime sauce (recipe below)

Cut the fish in 12 pieces about 3 inches long and 3/4 inch wide.

Place the fish in a baking dish with the garlic, shallot, lime juice, oregano, salt and pepper. Toss gently to coat the fish. Cover and marinate fish for about an hour in the refrigerator.

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Brush a baking sheet lightly with the olive oil. Place fish pieces on a sheet pan and bake for about 15 minutes, Warm the tortillas on a flat grill (or warm in microwave briefly).

Place a portion of fish in each warmed tortilla. Top with 1 tablespoon shredded cabbage and 1 teaspoon of Chipotle Lime Sauce.

Chipotle Lime Sauce: 1/4 cups puréed roasted red pepper (recipe below) 3 tablespoons mayonnaise 1 tablespoon canned chipotles in adobo sauce, finely chopped 2 teaspoons fresh lime juice Combine all the ingredients, cover and refrigerate until ready to

Roasted Red Bell Pepper:

Broil or grill one whole red pepper turning often until the skin is blistered and blackened on all sides. Using tongs, place pepper in a paper bag and seal. Allow to steam for about 15 minutes. Remove the skin by rubbing it off, and then remove the stem and seeds. Place pepper in a blender and purée.

Aztec Guacamole

1 cup frozen peas, slightly thawed 1 medium ripe avocado, peeled and pitted

2 tablespoon fresh lime or lemon juice, or to taste

1 medium tomato, seeded and cut into 1/2-inch dices 1/2 red or sweet onion, cut into 1/8-inch dices 1 jalapeño or serrano chile,

cilantro, chopped 1 teaspoon fresh garlic, minced

1/2 teaspoon sea salt 1/4 teaspoon fresh ground black pepper

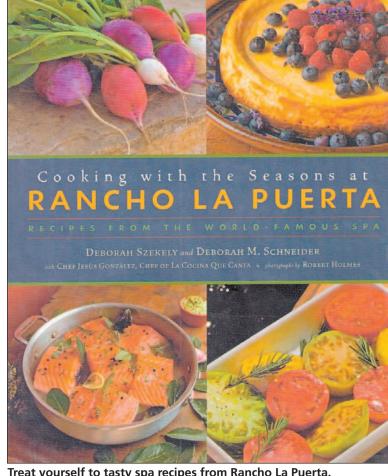

In a blender or in the bowl of a food processor, blend the peas until smooth. In a medium bowl, mash the avocado with a fork or potato masher. Add the juice, tomato, onion, chile pepper, cilantro, garlic, salt and black pepper. Add the peas and mix well. If the guacamole won't be served immediately, press a piece of plastic wrap directly onto the surface to prevent browning. Makes 2 cups.

Variation: Instead of peas, use 1 cup of well-cooked broccoli, edamame or cooked asparagus tips.

Picante Sauce

10 dried chiles de arbol, seeded 1/2 cup hot water 1 Roma tomato, cored and cut into several pieces 1 small clove garlic, peeled 1 teaspoon white vinegar 1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Break the chiles into small pieces and soak in the hot water for about 30 minutes, covered. Place the chiles and their soaking liquid in a blender and puree until smooth.

Treat yourself to tasty spa recipes from Rancho La Puerta.

Add the vinegar, garlic, tomato and salt, and pulse until smooth, adding more water as necessary, 1 tablespoon at a time, to make a thin sauce. Strain if desired. Taste for seasoning. Makes 3/4 cup.

Lemon Rice Pudding with Fresh Fruit and Pistachios

1 1/2 cups water

2 tablespoons lemon verbena leaves, or substitute using leaves from lemon verbena tea bag, chopped

1 cup long-grain brown rice 1 cinnamon stick

1/2 cup ricotta cheese

1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1/2 cup agave syrup or maple syrup, or to taste

1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper

2 cups fresh fruit

1/4 cup green pistachio nuts, crushed or chopped

6 to 8 fresh lemon verbena, lemon balm, or mint sprigs for garnish

Homes & Southwest Living | E11

In a small saucepan, combine 1 cup of the milk with the water. Bring to a simmer over medium heat and stir in the lemon verbena. Turn off the heat and let stand for 30 minutes, and then strain out the leaves, returning the milk to the saucepan. Add the rice and cinnamon stick, bring to a simmer and reduce the heat to low. Cover and cook slowly for 15 minutes, or until the rice is soft. Remove the cinnamon stick.

In a blender, combine the remaining 1 cup milk, ricotta cheese, vanilla and syrup. Purée completely, and then stir into the cooked rice along with the ground cinnamon and cavenne pepper. Half fill parfait glasses with rice pudding. Spoon some fresh fruit on top and garnish with a pinch of bright green pistachios and an herb sprig, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

If you are looking for something to add interest and shade to your landscape, try a flowering tree. There are several colorful trees to choose from that will thrive even in our harsh tall and is wide, depending on how it is pruned. There are several cultivars available such as "Burgundy," to a seedless variety called "Timeless Beauty." This tree can be pruned at any time of year and will grow with very little or no water once

The mimosa or silk tree offers a soft semi-tropical look to the desert landscape without any extra care. This tree usually gives more of a wide canopy before height. Its pink flowers, which stand out against its dark green foliage, give off a wonderful light sweet fragrance. The drawback on this lush looking tree is the amount of seed pods it produces, which may be a maintenance issue. Depending upon pruning, this tree generally grows 25 to 35 feet, or more, with an equal or

The golden rain tree has bright yellow flowers followed by unique seedpods that look like small Japanese lanterns. This slow to moderate growing ornamental offers dappled shade with its openly branched structure. Younger trees often have strong trunks to start off with, which may be ideal in small areas with "wind-tunnel" conditions. This tree usually reaches a mature height of no more than 25 feet.

Crape myrtle trees range from 8 to 25 feet tall depending upon variety. Colors ranging from white, red, purple, pink, lavender and shades in between, make this a popular choice for our hot summers. Regular feeding is recommended for best performance. Use high phosphorous fertilizer for maximum color, and iron chelate for deep green foliage. A drip system will work best especially when in bloom. Removal of old spent blossoms and/or seedpods will keep this colorful plant blooming well into the fall season.

bluish purple and sometimes white spike flowers in late spring through summer. This tree is usually multi-trunked, but can be single trunked as well. Older mature specimens can be gnarly with that "Bonsai" look to them. Height and width is 15 to 25 feet or more, again, depending upon pruning. Like most flowering plants, removal of spent flower spikes will result in new blooms. It is drought tolerant once established, but has a lush look if watered occasionally.

All the trees listed above are or should be in bloom now or within the next few weeks. So if you are in the market for something with an added bonus, consider one of these. I don't want to use the old expression, "Kill two birds with one stone," but rather, "Give two birds a home."
