In the Pink with gusto

Cinco de Pink expects to continue successes

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University Aggies are Tough Enough to Wear Pink organizers are saying they expect this year's fundraising campaign to continue to exceed last year, which raised more than $530,000.

Although the annual fundraising and cancer-awareness campaign doesn't set a goal, the organizers are constantly looking for ways to expand the reach of the events, said Rick Nezzar, who coordinates the media outreach.

"We are doing more than we did last year, and it is our expectation that the community will step up like it has always done in the past," he said.

Spearheaded by NMSU to incorporate college athletics, the local campaign has become the most successful Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign in the world.

To keep the effort supportive of cancer-related research at NMSU, the funds raised through the campaign now goes to an endowed fund at the NMSU Foundation. The fund received the first $275,000 of its $1.5 million commitment.

Meanwhile, Pink Week is now in full force as it leads up to the Aggies football game hosting University of Idaho Vandals at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15.

Throughout the week, NMSU and Las Cruces Public Schools have been holding activities.

At LCPS, students, staff and school visitors have been filling buckets with quarters. Donations will continue to be collected until noon Friday, Oct. 14, when the buckets will be picked up to be donated to Cowboys for Cancer Research, said LCPS School-Community Partnerships Coordinator Leslie Cervantes. The schools are winding up a week of pink-related events by "pinking out" with everyone wearing as much pink as possible.

Also on Friday, at 7 p.m. at the LCPS Field of Dreams, is the Las Cruces High School versus Oñate High School football game, the district's pink game. Quarters for Cancer Research will be collected

Space Week set for launching space biz

UP Aerospace, Virgin Galactic make spaceport announcements

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

On the eve of a week of activities related to new space entrepreneurs, Spaceport America's two primary customers – Virgin Galactic and UP Aerospace – have made major announcements.

UP Aerospace, the company that has conducted a number of traditional sounding rocket launches from the spaceport 45 miles north of Las Cruces, announced this week that it will conduct up to nine new missions from Spaceport America in 2012 and 2013.

The launches will be for NASA and the Department of Defense. If all the planning launches from contracts are conducted, they will be twice the number of missions UP Aerospace has flown from Spaceport America since 2006.

"Spaceport America has an established history with UP Aerospace, and we congratulate this forward-thinking company on its new launch contracts with NASA and the Department of Defense,"

MRSA jail cases not serious, officials say

Reported cases common in jails, prisons

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

Following news reports about eight cases of county detainees coming down with a drug-resistant bacterial infection, county officials are assuring the situation is being handled.

The staph infection is Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus, more commonly referred to as MRSA. What makes MRSA scary to some is its resistance to traditional medications, such as penicillin and amoxicillin.

Though MRSA is very contagious, it is done primarily through contact and not airborne, said Chris Barela, detention center administrator.

Many MRSA cases are "inactive" and it's treated liked handling contaminated material, Barela said. Those who are "active" are quarantined, he said, in which the air flow is even controlled.

"People who come into the detention center, come in with it," he said. "That's when we help them get it under control."

"We help them bring it under control very quickly."

Barela said the center works

Letters to the Editor

Freedom or anarchy

I think Bud Russo (Las Cruces Bulletin, Friday, Sept. 9) was referencing an opinion letter that I wrote. Apparently, he felt a direct quote by naming me would be inappropriate?

The founding fathers were abundantly clear in their writings, without even mentioning the Constitution, that freedom is not granted or given by government. It is a natural right. Also very clear, they meant God-given.

The republic of the United States of America is to be guided by the Constitution they established. They clearly understood that it was an experiment that would probably fail. Never in the history of the world has a country been governed by people through their elected representatives. Greece, Rome and other great civilizations did not come close to what our founders envisioned.

Russo thinks my objection to government telling me what to eat, how to light my home and what vehicle to drive is selfish and unjust within a society that should benefit the majority of the community. Therefore, I am an anarchist.

Government today is too intrusive at every level. We have become lazy and that was one of the fears of the founders. Freedom takes hard work.

Anarchy is mob rule, and not freedom of any kind.

The type of freedom Russo speaks of is European-style socialism. American exceptionalism could only happen in the free country our founders envisioned.

Why you would mention Jean-Jacques Rousseau in an opinion attempting to justify social justice is mind-boggling. He is linked to decades of barbarism called the French Revolution. You talk about anarchy, but have you read of the atrocities French mobs meted out in the name of social justice?

When I give to a soup kitchen or volunteer time to a charity it is by my free choice. It is called being charitable. When the government takes my money and gives it to someone else it should be called theft.

"As a Christian who reads his Bible cover to cover" you should know that is your God-given free choice.

Picking our leaders

Jay Miller
Inside the Capitol

How is the best way to pick our leaders? It is a problem every democracy wrestles with. In our country, we try it two different ways.

At the federal level, we elect a president and he chooses everyone else. If one of them messes up, the president is responsible, so the appointee usually is gone quickly. The result is a team effort.

At the state level, voters choose a governor, secretary of state, attorney general, auditor, treasurer, land commissioner and five public regulation commissioners. If one of them messes up, that person is responsible. The governor usually is not well acquainted with the individual. Few voters are acquainted with the individual either. They likely voted based on party line.

So the offending public official hires a lawyer and begins the lengthy process of defending himself or herself. Depending on the situation, taxpayers may pick up the tab.

Over the years, New Mexico voters have decided they prefer the second method. In that way, the governor doesn't get too powerful and maybe some of those elected officials might be people they have heard of and they might even like their ideas.

The New Mexico constitutional convention in 1969 tried to switch to the appointive method but voters turned down the new constitution. So now the state spends big money trying to get errant politicians removed from office.

By my count, we have had commissioners from four of the five Public Regulation Commission districts mess up badly enough to either have to resign or come close to it. I haven't been able to find a commissioner from Albuquerque who has stepped in it very badly. Otherwise, we haven't been able to elect very good PRC commissioners often enough.

This isn't to say that allowing the governor to choose his or her top administrators is foolproof either. Several readers have worried that allowing Gov. Susana Martinez to pick new PRC members would negate the entire reason for a Public Regulation Commission by making it a deregulation commission. It would hand everything over to industries that require regulating, they say.

So how do we solve the problem? Make some commissioners elected and some appointed, has been suggested. I'm not sure what good that would do, but it is worth studying.

And what about qualifications? Some states require a degree in engineering, law, economics or accounting. Or an alternative would be five years of work experience in a field regulated to the PRC. Would that run the danger of people who would be disposed toward favoring that industry?

And then we have commissioners without any specialized education or experience asking who is to decide they aren't smart enough to learn what they need to know. Besides, experts can be hired to do the technical analysis. We don't need a commission of elites.

True. What we do need is a commission composed of members who know how to do their job and perform their duties legally and ethically. Evidence during the entire life of the PRC and of the elected State Corporation Commission before it tells us it isn't happening. The job, because of its high salary and great power, tends to attract career politicians who too often don't meet the standards required.

The Think New Mexico organization has produced a booklet on rethinking the PRC. Its primary suggestions are to strengthen qualifications of commissioners and to transfer most of the enormous load of responsibilities to state agencies under the governor. Both suggestions seem to be part of the solution. But I'm not sure it is the total package.

For years, lawmakers and other New Mexicans have sought an answer. Many pieces of legislation have been introduced. It is time to try again.

Who are the rich?

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

Much of our public policy is tied to the notion of citizens falling neatly into three categories: rich, middle class and poor. Those designations are usually based on income, which can be deceiving and is a poor way to look at the rich. We have a wealth of opinions about what wealth is, but no consensus.

Are we wealthy if we have a roof over our heads and three meals a day? Are we poor when we eat ramen in a modest house in a less than upscale neighborhood? Except in the extreme, when Americans talk about rich and poor it depends upon comparisons.

Rich people who do not look rich is the message of, "The Millionaire Next Door: The Surprising Secrets of America's Wealthy" by Thomas Stanley and William Danko. Rich people look middle class and a number of middle class people look rich. But they are not rich, they are heavily in debt.

Should our government treat differently those who make more income than others? There is the notion that when someone makes more money than others, something wrong happened.

Someone with a paid-for house, car and college degree is considered less fortunate than someone making a lot more money but who must pay for a house, car and college education. In real disposable income the first person has more wealth but our society normally only looks at income.

Poverty statistics are based upon the lowest 25 percent in terms of income of a society being in a category called poverty regardless of how many possessions those people have. Are they poor when they have a roof over their heads and a number of amenities that my parents could only dream of owning?

Other people have a criterion of wealth that is a number. If I have $1 million, then I am wealthy regardless of expenses. Right now that dividing line seems to be $200,000 a year of income. Public policy is aimed at those whose income is over that magical number.

This allows for political class warfare. People who are not designated rich can work politically to take the riches away from the rich as a sense of fairness. The usual dialog is that if the rich have more money than they need, then it should go to someone else who might need it.

This is not said quite that plainly but it is the message for those who have more wealth. It started as soon as people learned they could vote the money in someone else's pocket into their own pocket and the politicians found they could get more votes if they ran on the theft platform: "Vote for me and I will take from your neighbor and give it to you." In an unscientific survey voters are more likely to vote for those politicians who proclaim a need to take from the rich and give to the poor. Which poor? Us poor, of course.

How poor are the American poor? Some are quite devastated and I am not speaking of the extremes in poverty. But there are quite a few people who are getting along nicely despite being considered poor. Some people said to be in poverty have more real wealth than those outside of poverty because they have many compensating programs including Medicaid, food stamps, aid to dependent children, etc.

The dialog today is that we must "tax the rich" out of a notion of fairness. In reality there is an undercurrent of feeling that rich people should be held in revulsion. It is an odd thought because most people who have higher incomes are already taxed quite a bit. But it makes for a great photo opportunity for politicians to talk about taxing those rich people who have it so easy.

Every time you hear the "tax the rich" dialog you can label that person a huckster who takes from one American to give to another American for their vote. In America we are left in the debate about the rich with the questions: "What do we do when we have taken all of the wealth from the rich? Who is next?"

pander to the developers by eliminating or reducing impact fees in a bogus stimulus package to put more money in the pockets of the developers.

Impact fees are absolutely essential for our roads, drainage and other infrastructure. Connor's Ponzi scheme would eventually shift the cost of roads for new developments onto the backs of the overburdened, taxpaying Las Cruces residents and on the city that can ill-afford paying for infrastructure for new developments.

According to a number of authoritative studies like that of the Brookings Institution, there is no evidence that cutting the impact fees results in any increase in residential or non-residential construction or in construction jobs.

If you want higher taxes, a city in financial straits, irresponsible development and urban sprawl, Connor is your candidate. It is sad that she calls this pro-business when it is against the public interest and the common good.

Register and vote

It seem that the Republican Party, supported by the tea party and their wealthy friends like the Koch brothers, are trying to destroy our democratic values, principles and democracy.

Perhaps the question should be, "are those politicians who place party ideology before people, convinced that the tax-paying citizens are too stupid to think for themselves?" With a 13 percent approval rating in Congress, isn't it time to replace all those corporate-bought politicians?

The fact is, the hard-working tax paying citizen just about pays for everything from Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, shelter for poor families and their children, expensive wars of attrition, public schools and the teaching profession and a public health care system for children, the poor and aged. All social programs that are basic necessities of an advanced civilized society.

Meanwhile, the New Mexico secretary of state and Gov. Susana Martinez are on a witch hunt trying to make everyone get a photo ID, while at the same time restricting working individuals from obtaining driver's licenses. It smacks of a conspiracy to deny them the vote at the next election time. It also has all the makings of civil rights violations.

The truth is registering to vote is a simple matter of going to the Doña Ana County Clerk's office at 645 N. Motel Blvd. If for reasons an individual is unable to drive, ask a family member or a friend to take you. Doing so is a positive contribution to our electoral process.

For Hispanics, voting is critical, if only to keep our democratic values intact. It's really a matter of "El voto o la bota" (The vote or the boot). Your vote does and will count. Let no one tell you different.

Fermin-Fermin Torres

Remember 9/11

Am I the only one? When we remember 9/11, are we not supposed to remember the awful people that committed this act of unbelievable terror? Do we act as if it was an act of God? It was not, rather it was acts done by hate-filled devilish people. Men that came here and, using the goodness of the American people, committed acts so heinous that "No, we will not forget."

In not forgetting, are we just remembering the loss and not the fact that if we are again drifting back into actions that give our enemies the opportunity to strike again.

I well remember Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941. Many are alive today that remember that day.

But by 9/11, 2001 we had let down our guard. We thought that we were invincible. Well, only 10 years have passed and we are reaching the point again.

We have a president that avoids calling terrorists what they are, that wants to allow illegals to remain here, that even give our known enemies rights that Americans no longer have.

We have legislators here in New Mexico that want illegals to have drivers licences, that do not seem to have a problem with the fact that illegal means just that. I have read that 80 percent of us do not want them driving here with a New Mexico license. That does not seem to matter to the Democrats, or at least, to most.

So what is the answer? Mine is to get rid of the ones that are stopping the passage of the bill that would stop this practice.

More than meets the eye

Redistricting a tremendous responsibility

By State Sen. Mary Jane Garcia
For Las Cruces Bulletin

Many constituents that I represent have raised their concern that nothing was done during the recent redistricting session, and I believe they deserve a response.

This year's redistricting legislative session was expensive, contentious and has caused much disappointment to many New Mexicans — there is no denying that. I and my Senate colleagues understand the frustration that the public has with the outcome of the session, especially when our constituents wonder why it took 19 days to develop redistricting legislation that was ultimately vetoed by Gov. Susana Martinez.

The true story of the redistricting session is anything but 19 wasted days of "golfing" and time spent not doing anything. The story of the redistricting session was one of preserving the sacred rights of equal representation and voting rights granted to us through the New Mexico and United States constitutions.

Along with the tremendous responsibility of the session went enormous effort. Preparations for the session actually began in 2010 as the federal government conducted the decennial census. As the 2010 census was being completed the Legislative Council Interim Committee met in January to determine guidelines for the redistricting session.

Subsequently, Sen. Linda Lopez and Rep. Mary Helen Garcia were chosen to serve as co-chairs of the Redistricting Interim Committee, which was made up of 40 members of the legislature. In order to gain community input, the co-chairs convened five meetings throughout the state from June to August.

The interim committee's work developed into eight concepts for the House, nine concepts for the Senate, seven concepts for Congress, five concepts for the PRC and one concept for the Public Education Commission.

We were able to take the interim concepts into the session and that's when much more technical and time-consuming work began.

In the context of an individual senate redistricting concept, we were tasked with assigning 2,059,179 people in New Mexico to 1,483 precincts that make up 42 Senate districts.

Enormous challenges were found at the precinct level. As I worked on my Senate district, I found that simply adding one precinct could require a neighboring senator to pull one or more precincts from their neighbor and a similar occurrence happening thereafter. One precinct change in southern New Mexico would often result in a "domino effect," eventually requiring changes to districts in northern New Mexico. Imagine all the different combinations possible when 42 senators were simultaneously making changes to 1,483 individual precincts.

The previous complexities do not even point out the central rules that were to be followed, such as the Voting Rights Act of 1965, preservation of minority voting rights, one-man-one-vote and sustaining communities of interest.

Measuring the success of the redistricting session requires looking beyond clever slogans and glitzy sound bites. An accurate view shows that the work done during the special session was significant, heartfelt and meaningful.

Mary Jane Garcia is a New Mexico state senator representing District 36 in Doña Ana County.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Deer hunting cow lick

I've got a mule deer hangin' on my wall from northern New Mexico so I could relate to Rafael's story.

He had joined two of his cousins for a deer hunting trip near Cuba, N.M., where his uncle had a cabin. They arrived late and missed the first day because cousin Dee Dee was going through changes in her life. To be fair, Dee Dee was a good hunter so her ditsy behavior was unexpected.

Rafael had agreed to guide, cook and pack. He was up at 5 a.m. getting the cook stove ready, the firewood gathered and making a racket. By 5:30 a.m. he could hear Dee Dee getting ready. A waft of something floral floated from her room. A sugary sweet lilac scent filled the cabin and made his coffee taste funny.

"What the heck are you doing?" he asked.

"Putting on lotion," she answered.

"Women of a certain age need to protect their skin."

He knew she was recently divorced and maybe she was trying to be more desirable. That could explain her mood swings.

They left the cabin at 6:30 a.m. Rafael knew the better hunting areas, so he led. In his backpack he stuck in a bottle of water, a skinning knife, twine and trail mix for himself. The rest of his backpack carried her essentials; Sugarless Gatorade, cookies, sardines, crackers, smoked oysters, aspirin, Alka-Seltzer, toothpaste, toothbrush, energy bars, peanut butter, hair brush, half a cantaloupe, matches, Steno, a clean T-shirt and socks, binoculars, extra ammo, GPS, 2-way radio and TP. All this in spite of the fact that he had casually reminded her that they planned to be back to the cabin by beer-30.

By 10 a.m. they had picked a blind along a well-traveled trail. In a short time, they heard a small herd of cows coming their way. They had been handled and were not spooked by the humans. Bringin' up drag was a big red-brown Beef Master bull. He sniffed the air and cautiously walked toward our hunters. Dee Dee got itchy.

"Just don't move," whispered Rafael. "Don't be aggressive and he won't hurt you."

They stood like Easter Island statues as Big Red walked up to Rafael and took a mighty whiff. Then he stepped to Dee Dee.

"Hold still," she heard Rafael say.

She froze in fear, her eyeballs about to pop out. Big Red stretched out his huge neck, ran out his big ol' slobbery tongue and licked Dee Dee across the mouth.

Epilogue: The bull ran over Rafael trying to escape Dee Dee's screaming. Rafael went down, smashing the cantaloupe in his backpack trying to escape. And Dee Dee hung her pant leg upside down on a barbed wire fence trying to get away. Finally, they managed to evade a swarm of bees by dousing Dee Dee with toothpaste and the sugarless Gatorade mix. It came off like stucco.

Oñate JROTC wins Military Skills Meet

The Oñate High School Navy JROTC placed first overall at the second annual Aztec Invitational Military Skills Meet, which was held Oct. 8 at El Dorado High School in El Paso.

The OHS Navy Knights Unit "took the sweepstakes trophy and brought back many awards to the castle," OHS Naval Sciences Instructor Senior Chief Boatswains Mate Robert Rodriguez said.

"In addition to the overall championship, the Navy Knights dominated in most of the categories entered," he said. "The meet featured units from New Mexico and Texas."

- Here are the OHS awards at the meet:
- Led by Cadet Lt. Commander Alysha Boone, the OHS cadets were overall unarmed drill champions, as well as taking first in unarmed regulation drill, second in unarmed exhibition drill and third in unarmed inspection. Cadet Boone was also awarded "best unarmed commander."
 - Commanded by Cadet Senior Chief Petty Officer Richard Garcia, OHS won best overall male color guard, as well as first in regulation drill and second in color guard inspection.
 - Commanded by cadet Petty Officer First Class Savanna Turpen, OHS won overall all top honors in rifle marksmanship. Cadet Lt. Junior grade Alyssa Bybee was awarded the second overall finish medal, the second-place kneeling medal and second-place standing medal. Cadet Lt. Commander Alysha Boone was awarded first place for the standing position and third in the kneeling category.
 - Commanded by Cadet Master Chief Teri Tafoya, OHS placed first in armed regulation drill, second in armed inspection and second in armed exhibition. Cadet Tafoya

- was also awarded "best armed commander."
- Commanded by Cadet Chief Petty Officer Cynthia Trevizo, OHS placed first in female color guard inspection.
 - Cadet Alan Ruiz placed third in a field of approximately 200 competitors in drill knock out.

"Overall, it was a good start to our season. We are looking forward to our next competition, which will be the Golden Anchor Military Skills Meet at West Mesa High School in Albuquerque on Oct. 29," Rodriguez said.

Character counts at Tombaugh Elementary

"As a school, we are focusing on Character Counts!" said Tombaugh Elementary School Principal Christa Vaudrey.

During the month of September 2011, Vaudrey said the school focused on the Character Counts! Pillar of Respect:

"Each morning, as part of our Pledge of Allegiance and Salute to New Mexico, we also said respect pledge: 'I will respect myself. I will respect others. I will respect property,'"

"In many different ways, we all talk to students about respect. We also showed respect to our local American heroes by honoring them during an assembly in September. Second- and third-graders (Eileen Gilbert's class) and fourth-grader (Bernadine Cotton's class) created a video about respecting our environment that was distributed to each grade level to watch as an example of respect. Teachers also gave tickets to students showing respect. Students can cash in their tickets for school-related items (pencils, erasers, etc.) at the Comet Store.

"At the end of the month, each teacher nominated a student who consistently showed respect throughout the month and those students got to eat lunch with the principals at a special table in the cafeteria."

NMSU adopts dining plan

Fall enrollment drops by almost 3 percent

At a regular meeting Monday, Oct. 10, in Alamogordo, the New Mexico State University Board of Regents adopted a master plan for dining services at the university.

The dining services plan, which is an addendum to the university's overall master plan, was based on recommendations from Envision Strategies, an operations consulting and strategic planning firm for the restaurant, food service, hospitality and retail services industries.

The firm's June report to the university includes an evaluation of current facilities, programs and services; identifies the demand for dining services across the Las Cruces campus through 2019; and gives recommendations for aligning the dining program with other strategic planning initiatives and optimizing operating efficiencies and financial performance.

A few of the recommendations in the plan include looking at the possibility of "late night options" for students, as well as improving day-to-day menu options.

In retail dining, the plan suggests redeveloping the Corbett Center Student Union Food Court, creating extended-hours cafe types of environments and adding options on the south side of campus, possibly through mobile food solutions.

There are many more recommendations encompassed in the plan, including strategies for catering and conference dining as well as concessions and recreation dining.

Regents also heard reports from NMSU Alamogordo President Cheri Jimeno and Bernadette Montoya, vice president for student affairs and enrollment management.

Jimeno discussed updates from the Alamogordo campus including an HSI STEM Grant for Strengthening Science, Engineering and Energy Career Options, their Completion Programs with the Las Cruces campus and enrollment. She also presented the Regents with the LEED Gold Certification for NMSU Alamogordo's Advanced Technology Center, the second building project on the NMSU Alamogordo campus to be certified LEED Gold by the U.S. Green Building Council.

Montoya gave an update on enrollment at the Las Cruces campus. She said after four years of increasing growth, the fall 2011 enrollment at NMSU Las Cruces is 2.8 percent less than last fall. She discussed the need to focus on retention and graduation rates. She said one of the reasons for a decline in entering freshmen is likely attributed to the decrease in the number of New Mexico high school graduates.

The board also presented the Above & Beyond Award to Julie Weber, director of Housing and Residential Life.

The Above & Beyond Award recognizes full-time employees who go the extra distance in service to any and all aspects of the NMSU system. Individuals are recognized for performance that goes "above and beyond" their regular responsibilities and for demonstrating a positive attitude that inspires others.

Weber is responsible for all aspects of the Housing and Residential Life division including housing facilities, budget/administration and dealing with about 3,000 residents and their families each day at NMSU Las Cruces.

"Many work side by side with Julie to bring our students the highest standard of housing service. But, it is her overall leadership that binds these individuals together so successfully," said Tammy Anthony, associate vice president for Auxiliary Services. "Julie never hesitates to do what is needed to support our Housing and Residential Life students and staff. She does it effectively and with complete commitment to successful resolution of each challenge."

said New Mexico Spaceport Authority (NMSA) Executive Director Christine Anderson. "UP Aerospace has been launching here since 2006, and we are looking forward to hosting UP Aerospace and other commercial space launch providers as they continue to meet the needs of our nation."

NASA's Office of Chief Technologist Launch Opportunities Program awarded UP Aerospace a contract to integrate technology payloads and launch them into space on up to eight flights using its SpaceLoft rocket. This contract reserves two launches with options on purchasing up to six additional flights in 2012 and 2013.

The first launch for NASA is still in the planning phase, but is expected in the first quarter of 2012, according to a news release from NMSA. The second contract was issued by the Defense Department's Operationally Responsive Space Office, and will be a suborbital flight also planned for the first quarter of 2012.

"We have a great relationship with Spaceport America," said UP Aerospace President Jerry Larson. "We are excited to see business ramping up for our SpaceLoft launch vehicles, and look forward to meeting the needs of our customers."

UP Aerospace has provided launch services for the Defense Department previously, although this will be the company's first fully dedicated launch for the military. UP Aerospace has teamed with Schafer Corporation of Albuquerque to provide comprehensive launch and payload integration services for the NASA launches.

At Spaceport America, UP Aerospace has conducted launches test rocket vehicle or booster concepts for companies that do business with the Defense Department.

Virgin Galactic gets the keys

On Monday, Oct. 17, which is the start of Space Week in New Mexico, Virgin Galactic will host a hangar dedication ceremony at Spaceport America, where work on its Terminal Hangar Facility is nearly completed where Virgin will be housing its fleet of spaceliners.

MOSES

Virgin Galactic is calling the hangar dedication ceremony "Keys to a New Dawn."

Meanwhile, Virgin Galactic has a new Vice President of Operations Michael Moses, a former NASA executive. Moses will oversee the planning and execution of all operations of the company's commercial sub-orbital spaceflight program.

"Following a distinguished career in NASA's recently retired Space Shuttle Program, Moses brings to Virgin Galactic a proven record of safe, successful and secure human spaceflight missions, spaceport operations, and human spaceflight program leadership," Virgin Galactic stated in its announcement. "He served at the NASA Kennedy Space Center in Florida as the Launch Integration Manager from 2008 until the landing of the final Shuttle mission in July 2011. He was responsible for supervising all Space Shuttle processing activities from landing through launch, and for reviewing major milestones including final readiness for flight."

Moses also served as chair of the Mission Management Team, providing ultimate launch decision authority for the final 12 missions of the Space Shuttle Program, directly overseeing the safe and successful flights of 75 astronauts.

According to Virgin Galactic, Moses will develop and lead the team responsible for its spaceship operations and logistics, flight crew operations, customer training and spaceport ground operations, with overall operational safety and risk management as the primary focus.

"Bringing Mike in to lead the team represents a significant investment in our commitment to operational safety and success as we prepare to launch commercial operations," said Virgin Galactic President and CEO George Whitesides. "His experience and track record in all facets of spaceflight operations are truly unique. His forward-thinking perspective to bring the hard-won lessons of human spaceflight into our operations will benefit us tremendously."

Prior to his most recent NASA role, Moses served as a flight director at the NASA Johnson Space Center, where he led teams of flight controllers in the planning, training and execution of all aspects of space shuttle missions. Moses also has more than 10 years experience as a flight controller in the Shuttle Propulsion and Electrical Systems Groups.

"I am extremely excited to be joining Virgin Galactic at this time, helping to forge the foundations that will enable routine commercial suborbital spaceflights," Moses said. "Virgin Galactic will expand the legacy of human spaceflight beyond traditional government programs into the world's first privately funded commercial spaceline."

Moses holds a bachelor's degree in physics from Purdue University, a master's degree in space sciences from Florida Institute of Technology and a master's degree in aerospace engineering from Purdue University. He is a two-time recipient of the NASA Outstanding Leadership Medal as well as other NASA commendations and awards.

Carolyn Wincer, who is Virgin Galactic's head of travel and tourism, recently said the company will soon be opening an office in Las Cruces.

Wincer said more than 70 flight tests have made of Virgin's system that launches a six-passenger rocket from mid-air to reach 70 miles above the Earth's surface.

Some 500 experienced test pilots have applied to fly for Virgin Galactic, according to Wincer. Meanwhile, more than 500 potential passengers have made downpayments for the $200,000 tickets, totaling close to $60 million in deposits.

Virgin Galactic also will host the first-ever "Industry Day" for potential suppliers and partners at Spaceport America on Tuesday, Oct. 18. The invitation-only event is designed to educate potential companies on the type of goods and services that will be needed as commercial space travel becomes a reality at Spaceport America.

"Virgin Galactic and (its sister) The Spaceship Company are looking to create relationships with local, regional and global suppliers to support their operations at Spaceport America," Anderson said. "The organizers of this event have stated their intention to hire locally as much as possible, which is good news for New Mexico companies."

The daylong event will include presentations by Whitesides, Anderson and New Mexico Department of Economic Development Secretary Jon Barela.

Attendees will have an opportunity to see the WhiteKnightTwo and SpaceShipTwo vehicles in their new home at the spaceport.

After the Virgin Galactic event, the International Symposium for Personal and Commercial Spaceflight (ISPCS) begins at New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Spring Road.

A Growing Community Partnership Luncheon will be held Tuesday, Oct. 18, at the Commercial Space Exhibit Hall inside the museum. The $50 luncheon includes a talk by Allan Lockheed, son of the aviation pioneer who created what is now Lockheed Martin Lockheed will talk about how the space industry will coalesce around Spaceport America – an industry that is currently supported by $60 billion just in government spending.

More than 500 people – mostly key movers in the private space industry – are expected to attend ISPCS Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 19-20. Panel discussion will cover a host of topics, including creating the supply chain support.

Anders' 'Earthrise'

By Michael Shinabery
New Mexico Museum of Space History

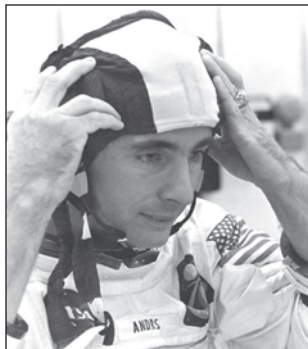

He was 35 and making his first space flight. Born on Oct. 17, 1933, William Anders "was a member of the first crew of space travelers to leave the Earth and orbit the Moon," said "Who's Who In Space: The First 25 Years."

Aboard Apollo 8, Anders, Frank Borman, and James Lovell were also "the first to set eyes on the whole Earth, and the first to see the dark side of the Moon," Robert Poole wrote in "Earthrise: How Man First Saw the Earth." Then, during their fourth lunar orbit, Poole described how the astronauts personally witnessed an Earthrise, previously unseen by human eyes. He said Anders hurriedly loaded color film into a camera and snapped the shot.

Poole quoted Anders later recalling: "We'd spent all our time on Earth training about how to study the Moon, how to go to the Moon; it was very lunar oriented. And yet when I looked up and saw the Earth coming up on this very stark, beat up lunar horizon, an Earth that was the only color that we could see, a very fragile looking Earth, a very delicate looking Earth, I was immediately almost overcome by the thought that here we came all this way to the Moon, and yet the most significant thing we're seeing is our own home planet, the Earth."

Anders, whose father was a naval aviator, was born in Hong Kong, his biography at jsc.nasa.gov said. "When the Japanese attacked Nanking, China in 1937," the family "had to flee for their lives," Robert Zimmerman wrote in "Genesis" (Four Walls Eight Windows/1998).

Anders, then four, "was pulled from his bed to stand on a rickety wooden porch and watch bombs crash down several hundred yards from their hotel in Canton."

Anders grew up in San Diego, "attracted to science and engineering," Zimmerman said. He didn't decide early on a career; he only knew "he didn't want to do anything boring." His parents hoped he'd emulate his father so, in 1951, Anders entered the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

"It wasn't long, however, before Anders had second thoughts about spending the rest of his life on a ship," Zimmerman said. "Each summer the academy sent the midshipmen off on what they called 'cruises.'" On his first one, Anders was on deck in "Navy whites," an hour and a half early to "make the right impression." Suddenly, "the ship's smokestack belch(ed) out a big black cloud of thick soot." Anders' uniform was soon "speckled," which he only worsened trying to brush off the soot.

"When a few minutes later he found himself being harshly chewed out for wearing a dirty uniform, the midshipman began to wonder at the justice of the Navy." He joined the Air Force after graduation in 1955.

In 1962, Anders earned a master of science degree in nuclear engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. NASA chose him two years later and assigned him to study the effects of radiation and develop environmental controls, jsc.nasa.gov said.

Apollo 8 lifted off on Dec. 21, 1968, the first manned launch from NASA's new Moonport. The Saturn V rocket booster had been "tested only twice before, and never before used to put human beings in space," Zimmerman said.

It was on Christmas Eve, flying 70 miles above the Moon, that Anders shot the definitive Earthrise image. Shortly before, Borman had snapped a black-and-white picture of what Zimmerman described as the "first Earthrise ever witnessed by humans," making the picture one of the first shots humans took from deep space. Lower-quality black-and-white Earthrisers had been taken, but by satellites, according to Poole: NASA's Lunar Orbiter 1 in August 1966, and the Soviet Union's Zond 6 in November 1968.

Borman's photo showed Earth just clearing the horizon. Anders' showed Earth several degrees over the lunar surface. Often printed horizontally, Anders is emphatic the Moon was vertical.

That evening, the astronauts also read from the biblical Genesis. An estimated one billion TV viewers watched the first ever broadcast of the lunar surface. Anders began, reciting: "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the Earth." After finishing with, "And God saw the light, that it was good. And God divided the light from the darkness," he passed off to Lovell. Borman concluded, then signed off with, "And from the crew of Apollo 8, we close with good night, good luck, a Merry Christmas, and God bless all of you - all of you on the good Earth."

Poole said religious leaders praised the event. Among them, the Archbishop of Canterbury stated that space travel "should in fact strengthen our sense of dependence upon God as the creator of the universe."

However, atheist Madalyn

Murray O'Hair "collected 28,000 signatures on a petition, and went to court demanding a ban on any Bible reading by any U.S. astronaut or any government employee while on duty," Zimmerman said. But "NASA received more than (2.5 million) letters and petitions ... supporting the right of American astronauts to exercise their religious beliefs publicly." The court dismissed the suit.

On Dec. 27, Apollo 8 splashed down "an hour before dawn," Zimmerman said, making the first such "landing in the dark."

Anders is a retired Air Force reserve major general. In 1975, President Gerald Ford appointed him "the first Chairman of the newly established Nuclear Regulatory Commission," jsc.nasa.gov said. The Rhode Island Aviation Hall of Fame inducted him in 2010, pointing out in a press release: "Anders is perhaps best remembered for his inspirational quote, 'We came all this way to explore the Moon, and the most important thing is that we discovered Earth.'"

NMSU working on getting more women in STEM jobs

High schoolers to visit campus for math

A recent U.S. Commerce Department report revealed that women are an untapped resource when it comes to careers in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM).

The report shows women make up almost half the U.S. work force yet hold less than a quarter of STEM jobs. New Mexico State University is making an effort to influence those statistics by sponsoring a math day for young women at local high schools.

“There is an endemic underrepresentation of minority students at the highest levels of professions that are mathematics-intensive. Females, and minorities in general, seem to quickly stray away from mathematics starting in middle school,” said Tiziana Giorgi, an associate professor at NMSU’s mathematical sciences department.

More than 50 students from two area high schools will attend the Sonia Kovalevsky High School Mathematics Day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28, in the Science Hall building. The day is named for a woman born in 1850 who was not only a mathematician, but a writer and women’s rights advocate whose groundbreaking work in mathematics forced her male counterparts to reconsider notions of women’s inferiority to men in science and mathematics. Her struggle to obtain an education helped to open doors at universities to women.

“We believe that by providing an informal setting where these students can interact with female mathematicians, activities where the fun and beauty of mathematics can be seen, and follow up contacts with female professors in our department, we might influence their future choices of classes and career paths,” Giorgi said.

The day will begin with an array of hands-on games and workshops with titles such as “Spirals, Knots and Tessellations,” “Energy Minimizers and the Beauty of Soap Bubbles” and “Engaging Geometry & Art Projects.”

“Events like Sonia Kovalevsky Day are not just geared toward the more advanced students, they are also geared toward the more interested ones,” Giorgi said. “It helps in keeping them motivated and focused.”

“It helps in keeping them motivated and focused.”

TIZIANA GIORGI, professor

The high school girls, from grades nine through 12, will have lunch with their math mentors and end the day interacting with a career panel.

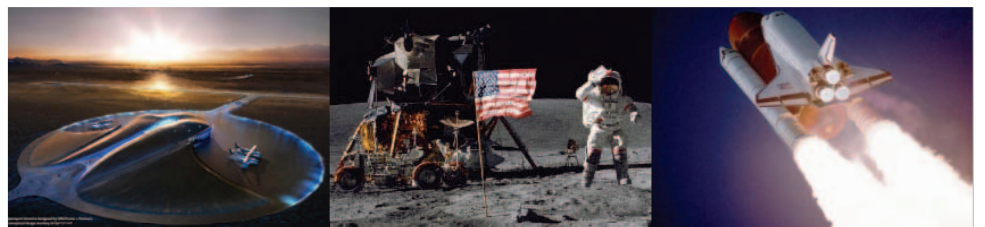

According to the Commerce Department report, women in STEM fields earn 33 percent more than their non-STEM counterparts, and employment in these fields has grown much faster than employment in other occupations – the trend is expected to continue. The career panel will provide guidance to these students in pursuing educational options and career opportunities in the various mathematics fields.

The day is sponsored by the Association for Women in Mathematics, the NMSU College of Arts and Sciences, the NMSU ADVANCE Foundation and the NMSU Department of Mathematics.

Patricia Baggett, Susana Salamanca-Riba, Louiza Fouli, Tiziana Giorgi, Maribeth Olberding and Mary Ballyk attended the Sonia Kovalevsky High School Mathematics Day last year.

Office seekers promise to resist raising taxes

The three candidates running for Las Cruces mayor and the seven aspiring to win seats on the City Council gave their stances on a variety of issues Monday, Oct. 10, at the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Candidates Forum.

Most candidates agreed to the chamber's opening question asking if they'd be willing to have proposed ordinances go through an evaluation of their effects to the city government processes, taxpayers and business owners.

Though the idea of having such a review is similar to the kind of costs versus benefits analysis businesses conduct before making decisions, Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he's not sure that all proposed ordinances need such a review.

District 2 candidate Charles Scholz said this kind analysis could potentially add more cost and delays to the process.

Miyagishima said there us a financial review of every proposed ordinance, but that he "had a problem with it being mandatory."

District 1 incumbent City Councillor Nathan Small said the proposal had merit, so it should be explored.

The candidates gave their ideas for topics ranging from impact fees to the city's traffic light camera enforcement. Council and mayoral challengers Michael Huerta, Dolores Connor, Aaron Diaz, Natalie Chadborn and Aaron Diaz called for the repeal of recently approved impact fees on new construction.

City Council District 1 incumbent Miguel Silva and challenger Natalie Chadborn prepare to be the first fielding questions Monday, Oct. 10, at the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce's Candidates Forum at the KRWG TV studios at New Mexico State University.

Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima sits with challengers Michael Huerta and Dolores Connor who are sharing a laugh with KRWG's Glen Cerny.

City Council District 2 candidates Fred Espinosa, Charles Scholz and Greg Smith visit with chamber CEO Bill Allen before their segment is shot.

Quilting for comfort and for cancer

Guild offering quilts to those touched by cancer

By Amanda Green
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

With the entire Las Cruces community finding ways to promote cancer awareness for Tough Enough to Wear Pink, add the Las Colcheras Quilt Guild.

The group has started creating quilts for the pink campaign. Their colorful quilts, each with a hint of pink, have been created to provide comfort and care for survivors, families, and the individuals who continue to fight their diagnosis each day.

"It's about letting them know that someone cares, that someone knows the struggles they face," says Libby Pruett, the current president of Las Colcheras.

The Quilt Guild was formed in January 1988, with about 25 women who met at the County Extension Office and shared their love of quilting. The guild is now home to more than 200 quilters who have come together, donating their time and materials to the cause.

"I challenged the guild to make a hundred quilts," said Pruett, "currently, we have 150. They are an incredible group of women."

Each quilt, which is to be donated to an individual or family affected by cancer, will be sponsored directly by a member of the community. Las Colcheras is asking for a $25 donation to sponsor each quilt and all of the proceeds will be given to Cowboys For Cancer Research.

"They're just beautiful," says quilter Linnea Egbert, "and all of the guild members have done so much work. We've even had sew-ins together."

The quilts are on display for the public at Ashley Furniture HomeStore, located at 3299 Del Rey Blvd. They will remain in the store until they are given to their intended families.

Besides the full quilts, guild members have made individual quilt blocks, which will be incorporated into a king-sized quilt to be given away later this month during the Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign.

"Anything we can do to help survivors or their families," says Pruett, whose son has been a cancer survivor for 10 years. "Only love and support make living with cancer day to day possible."

Anyone interested in adopting a quilt for the pink campaign should make their check out to Cowboys for Cancer Research and send it to the guild, or drop by Members of the guild, who have been a part of many fundraisers and causes in Las Cruces, have donated all of the materials and time on sewing machines. Their quilts have been an integral part of raffles, auctions, and other incentives for support. They have raised $3,000 for their part in the pink campaign and they thank each donor for their generosity.

For more information on Las Colcheras or sponsoring a quilt contact Pruett or Cheryl Price at lcnmquilters@aol.com.

closely with the state Department of Health.

After a detailed discussion about MRSA at the County Commission meeting Wednesday, Oct. 12, officials are now urging calm with reasonable precautions.

The detention center, which houses about 850 detainees, has inmates with a variety of medical conditions and there have been detainees with MRSA before, said county spokesman Jess Williams. Nor is MRSA as acutely contagious as some make it out to be, he said.

According to medical literature, MRSA belongs to a common family of staph bacteria found in one of every four people. Most people don't suffer severe symptoms as serious staph infections are more common in people with a weak immune system.

About two out of every 100 people carry a strain of MRSA that is resistant to antibiotics. MRSA infections can cause infections with a red, swollen and painful area on the skin. There may be drainage of pus or other fluids from the site of contact. (For more about MRSA, see the Health & Well Being section.)

Not everyone who comes in contact MRSA becomes infected, Williams said.

"Really, the situation is no different that last week, or last month for that matter," he said. "It's under control and we're handling it at the detention center as we've always handled it."

We are all Pink

Jeff Barnet
The Reason Why

Jonte Green, senior defensive back for the New Mexico State University Aggies, says he loves wearing pink.

When the idea of Tough Enough To Wear Pink Week began to sweep the nation a few years ago, football players wearing pink might have seemed somewhat unusual to some people, but not anymore.

"Pink Week is big now," Green said. "People have lost family members to breast cancer. I'm all for it, I'm all for having it. I love wearing pink when it's Pink Week."

Green said the Aggies plan on wearing pink socks, gloves and wristbands. They will also have pink ribbons on their helmets.

When he takes the field against Idaho at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15, at Aggie Memorial Stadium, Green said he will have "extra motivation" because he will be playing for his aunt as well.

Sheila Green, his father's sister, died of breast cancer while only in her 40s, he said. She battled the cancer while Green was in Lakewood High School in St. Petersburg, Fla.

"She went from bad to good then bad again, then she passed away," he said. "It was my senior year."

Green said he still remembers his aunt's up-and-down, day-by-day battle with the illness.

"It will be an emotional and competitive game for me," he said.

Aggie wide receiver Jerrel Brown also lost a family member to breast cancer, his great-grandmother. He said he was too young to remember much about it, but he knows how cancer affects so many people and that "it's tough to get past it."

Brown said on Saturday night he will "be playing for my great-grandmother and for all those who have been affected by it (breast cancer)."

At the Oct. 11 football press conference, NMSU Regent Laura Conniff, along with TETWP co-chairs Mary Henson, Magellia Boston and Pat Sisbarro, stated that since Pink Week was launched in Las Cruces in 2007, local fundraising efforts have raised almost $2 million for breast cancer research for NMSU and the University of New Mexico Cancer Center.

Last year, Conniff said, Las Cruces raised more money than any other Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign in the world.

"More importantly," she said, "Tough Enough To Wear Pink has raised the level of breast cancer awareness in Las Cruces and southern New Mexico. We've not just touched one or two lives. We've touched many, many lives."

So, even though the Aggies' slogan is "We are all Crimson," at Saturday night's Idaho game, we will all be Pink.

Or mostly crimson with some pink flourishes.

You know what I mean. Go Aggies.

Keeping a step ahead

Aggies expect a lot of blitzing from tough Idaho defense

By Jeff Barnet
Las Cruces Bulletin

They are big guys, and they like to blitz.

That's the bottom line on the University of Idaho Vandals, who will take on New Mexico State University at Aggie Memorial Stadium at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15.

Idaho (1-5, 0-2 in the Western Athletic Conference) has a reputation as a good defensive team.

"The statistics don't do justice for how they do defensively," said NMSU football coach DeWayne Walker. "They are very aggressive."

Last week, the Vandals defense shut down Louisiana Tech on 13 of 16 third-down conversion attempts. They sacked the quarterback twice and had him on the run often with seven quarterback hurries. The week before, they held the University of Virginia of the Atlantic Coast Conference to 21 points in an overtime loss.

The defense is led by Gary Walker, Tre'Shawn Robinson and Korey Toomer. The trio combined for 35 tackles in the 24-11 loss to Louisiana Tech.

Walker said as far as the Aggies are concerned, they will treat Idaho as if it were a 5-1 team, not a 1-5 team.

"It's going to be a fight for us," he said.

The Idaho game, which is also the annual New Mexico State University Aggies Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink game, will give the Aggies (2-3, 0-1 WAC) a chance to even both their overall and conference records.

The Aggies saw a lot of blitzing in the 16-10 loss to UTEP Sept. 17, but they will be ready for Idaho, according to Walker.

"We will be a step ahead of the posse," he said.

In films, he noticed that the Idaho defense tends to give away when it's about to blitz. That will give the Aggies an opportunity to pass and run into the spaces they leave behind, he said.

Starting quarterback Matt Christian said he hopes the tempo of the Aggie offense can keep the Idaho defense off-balance, and he also said their tendency to blitz might leave the Vandals vulnerable to the big play.

Like several other Aggie players, Christian noted both the size and aggressiveness of the Vandals.

"They bring the wood," he said. "They like to hit."

Offensively, Idaho has been struggling, Walker said, especially at quarterback. The Vandals' starting QB, Brian Reader, completed only 19-of-47 pass attempts in last week's loss to Louisiana

Hall chewing up yards for 'Dawgs

Xavier Hall is averaging 7.5 yards per carry for the Las Cruces Bulldawgs.

By Craig Massey
Las Cruces Bulletin

Xavier Hall receives the pitch from the quarterback and takes off. He reads the block of his fullback, breaks inside, accelerates and bounces off a couple of would-be tacklers before finally going down 12 yards later.

It's a scene that has been played over and over the last three seasons for the Las Cruces High Bulldawgs. The running back has been devouring real estate at an impressive rate since he earned a starting job as a sophomore two years ago.

This year, Hall has rushed for 1,176 yards on 157 carries in only seven games for an average of 7.5 yards per carry. Many of those yards have come on Hall's favorite play, the power toss.

"That's our bread-and-butter play," Hall said. "The fullback kicks out the (defensive) end and I usually go off his block."

A 10th blocker on the play is the quarterback who joins in the fun after tossing the ball to Hall.

"We put a hat on a hat and have a lot of people in the hole," LCHS coach Jim Miller said. "It makes it difficult for the defense. 'X' probably averages 7 to 10 yards a pop on that play."

"X" has picked up right where his brother left off three years ago. James Hall Jr. was the Bulldawgs' top rusher from 2006-08 before signing with New Mexico State University. James has since transferred to Tiffin University in Ohio.

Just when opposing coaches were celebrating James Hall's high school graduation, another Hall stepped into the Bulldawg backfield. Xavier made a big splash right away, having what he thinks may have been his best game ever during his sophomore year — a 260-yard rushing performance against Manzano.

James and Xavier piled up yards in somewhat different ways. The comparisons are inevitable.

"It was a pleasure to have both of them in my program," Miller said. "James was a little quicker and X is more powerful. They both got a lot of yards in a little different ways. They both have good vision, but X is more of a downhill runner."

"My brother was a more elusive running back and I'm a little more powerful," agreed

Battle to the finish

Aggies fall short in 3-2 loss to the Wahine

By Jeff Barnett
Las Cruces Bulletin

For four sets, the New Mexico State University Aggie volleyball team was as good as the No. 8 team in the nation.

In an intense, well-played match, the Aggies split the first four sets with the University of Hawai'i Rainbow Wahine 25-17, 21-25, 20-25 and 27-25. Unfortunately, the Aggies had a team letdown in the fifth set, losing the set and the match 15-5 at the Pan American Center Wednesday, Oct. 12.

"There's no doubt we can play with the best volleyball teams in the game, but we aren't consistent enough to beat them yet," NMSU coach Mike Jordan said. "We have work to do."

The Aggies fell to 16-5 overall and 5-1 in the Western Athletic Conference. Hawai'i moved to 16-1, 6-0 WAC. With the win, Hawai'i took over sole possession of first place in the WAC.

The Aggies came out on fire in the first set, jumping out to a 10-3 lead behind the wild cheering of 3,066 fans. Michelle Kuester deflected several Hawai'i shots and Meredith Hays had two kills to spark the opening run.

Hays finished with seven kills and senior Jenna DeVries had 12 assists as the Aggies won the set, 25-17.

However, the Wahine showed why they are the best hitting team in the WAC by hitting .343 and .424 in back-to-back set wins to take a 2-1 lead. Hawai'i's Kanani Danielson broke out of her slump with six kills in the second set, and she was joined in the attack by Hawai'i freshman outside hitter Jane Croson, who added three kills on the way to a 17-kill night. The second set saw 12 ties and six lead changes.

Danielson and Croson combined for 12 kills in the third set, leading the Rainbow Wahine to a 25-20 victory. At one point, NMSU held a 15-14 lead, but then Hawai'i went on a 9-1 run, sparked by three straight Danielson kill shots.

The Aggies battled back in the fourth set with a dramatic 27-25 win behind five team blocks and five kills by Hays. A couple of key kills by NMSU senior Kelsey Brennan for points 24 and 25 were critical for the Aggies.

But when it came to the decisive fifth set, the Aggies appeared to be out of energy. Hawai'i jumped out to a 13-3 lead before the Aggies scored two points in a row.

The Aggies next match will be at the Pan American Center at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15, against San Jose State University.

NMSU soccer looks for win at home

Aggies in tie for fourth going into Idaho game

By Jeff Barnett
Las Cruces Bulletin

After a dramatic 2-1 overtime win over Nevada, the New Mexico State University soccer team will be under the Friday night lights at Aggie Memorial Stadium 7 p.m. Oct. 14 to face Western Athletic Conference rival Idaho and junior forward Chelsea Small, the 2011 WAC Offensive Player of the Year.

"Chelsea Small is one of the best goal scorers in the conference," said Aggie coach Blair Quinn. "She can turn and shoot in one or two feet of space. She's that dangerous."

Small has scored seven goals this year for the Vandals, who enter the game 5-8-2, 1-2-0 in the WAC. Currently, there is a four-team tie for fourth place in the conference, with the Aggies (8-6-1, 1-2-0 WAC) being one of those teams.

"This will be separation weekend," Quinn said.

The Aggies will keep up the pressure on Small, he said. She has had 38 shots on goal this year out of 70 attempts for an impressive .543 average and enters the game with 28 career goals.

NMSU sophomore Erin Wosick will start as goalkeeper. Her four shutouts this year have set a team record. Her 1.02 goals against average is third in the WAC.

"The goal is to always get a shutout," she said.

Against Nevada at home Oct. 9, Wosick had a 1-0 shutout going with less than four minutes to play when Nevada's Kori Disarufino scored on a breakaway shot to tie the game. But Wosick said she does not let that kind of thing get to her mentally.

"You always expect the worst to happen, that applies to many things," she said. "If you give up a goal, you have to regain your composure. Stuff happens, things go wrong, but it's never the end of the game. You can come back."

The Aggies did come back against Nevada, winning four minutes into overtime when Yolanda McMillion kicked in a ball that had eluded Nevada goalkeeper Dana Moreno.

"The ball was just bouncing around," McMillion said. "So I said, 'I'll shoot it.'"

It was the fourth goal of the year and second game-winner for the junior forward. Senior forward Cassandra Branch scored NMSU's other goal on a first-half breakaway.

Quinn said one of the keys to the victory was the Aggies' ability to win the second ball. The first ball is the one that is up in the air, he said. Winning the second ball means not only directing it where you want it to go, but also having the whole team anticipate where it is going and running there well in advance.

"The team that wins the second ball is usually the winner," he said. "We won the second ball in both halves against Nevada."

Another key to the victory, he said, was the pressure the Aggies put on Nevada throughout the game.

"Their [Nevada's] defenders had trouble getting the ball out of their backfield all day," he said.

Quinn said NMSU has two very good goalkeepers in Wosick and redshirt sophomore Jessica Schutter, who has posted one shutout this year. He gave credit to Wosick for making several key saves in the Nevada game.

Going into Friday's game, Fresno State is first in the WAC at 2-0, followed by Hawaii and Utah State both at 2-1. San Jose State is 1-1, and NMSU is tied with three teams at 1-2. The top six teams will advance to the WAC Tournament after the regular season. NMSU has four regular season games left, only two at home: Friday's Oct. 14 game against Idaho and the season finale Oct. 28 against Hawai'i.

Tech and threw three interceptions. The Vandals only managed two-of-16 third down conversions. Compared to a year ago, Idaho is scoring less points (20.2 average in 2011) and rolling up less total yards (293.5).

In addition, Idaho averages only 74.4 yards rushing per game. Running back Princeton McCarty leads the team with 243 yards on the season.

NMSU defensive back Jonte Green said he expected Idaho to try to expose the secondary with a lot of deep passes. He also noted that Idaho's offensive players were "big guys, big weight-room guys."

Last year, the Aggies lost to Idaho on the road, 37-14, a game that Christian said he remembers well.

"If we hit 'em for the big play, we'll have success," he said.

The Aggies are coming off a bye week. NMSU steam rolled UNM 42-28 in Albuquerque Oct. 1 with a balanced rushing and passing attack.

However, UNM is currently ranked the worst team in the nation, according to ESPN.com's "Bottom 10" ranking. The Aggies were once in that bottom 10 but after the victory over UNM are not only out of the rankings, but also off of the waiting list.

The Idaho Vandals, however, are currently fifth on the waiting list.

Xavier, who hopes to play college football. "But I can make some cuts and make people miss."

Both have been leaders for the Bulldawgs, but their personalities have made their styles different.

"As a senior, X has taken that role over, but he is more quiet than James," Miller said. "He's more of a leader by example."

Xavier and his 2011 teammates have yet to do what James and his teammates did in 2008, and that's win a state championship. It's a goal for the current Bulldawgs and something they're not afraid to talk about.

"We have a very good team," Xavier said of this year's team that goes into the Friday, Oct. 14, Oñate game with a 6-1 record. "We can be explosive at times and we have a big offensive line and a big defensive line. In this program, it's not just about winning the district championship, and it's not just about beating Mayfield. It's about winning a state championship, and that's something that we can definitely achieve."

Golf school returns to Sonoma Ranch

School offered only once during 2011

Charlie Blanchard
Golf Doctor

Back in February, when I was in the hospital after my accident, I wasn't sure I would be playing golf again – ever. My close friend and mentor Herb Wimberly came to visit me several times a week, and we came to the conclusion that we wouldn't be doing golf schools this year.

Well, things have changed.

My recovery has progressed so beautifully that I've been back playing golf since early July, and I feel normal again, except for the shattered wrist. Yesterday, I shot 71 (1-under par) from the white tees at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course, which seemed to me a blessing from above.

Wimberly and I talked it over, and Wimberly is confident that I can teach golf again. So, we went ahead and scheduled a Performance Golf School on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 19-20, at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course, 1274 Golf Club Road.

Performance Golf Schools actually has its origins in Gunnison, Colo., where Wimberly, one of the most respected golf teachers in the entire Southwest, offered weeklong golf camps throughout the summer at the Rocky Mountain Golf School. In 1995, I spent some summer weeks giving mental game clinics there, and later briefly took over directing the school.

Many Las Cruces golfers are graduates of the school, including former Gov. Garrey Carruthers. In 1998, Wimberly and I started Performance Golf Schools, envisioning making our brand of golf performance enhancement available and affordable in key locations in New Mexico and in far west Texas. It's always been a traveling show, where we come to you.

Unlike some of the "big name" golf schools featured in the magazines, our approach is based on the recognition that solid fundamentals are needed by all golfers at all levels, and that each golfer is a unique individual with certain strengths and body type. There is no "cookie-cutter" or "best" way to teach everyone.

"Our goal is to provide folks with personal attention and highly useful information that will have an immediate impact on how they swing and play," Wimberly explains. "The idea is that each person is different, and each person needs our hands-on individual attention for more than just a few minutes.

"It's the extended learning periods with lots of practice time and tutoring that gets results."

Over the course of two days, students learn proper technique for woods, irons, chipping, putting, bunker play and trouble shots. The emphasis is on adapting and adjusting one basic golf swing to nearly all circumstances while reducing mistakes.

The format of each Performance Golf School is two days of intensive lessons and on-course enjoyable play. Instruction starts early on Saturday morning with a 30-minute clinic we call Wimberly's "Get Set" clinic. Since most golfers make basic mistakes with stance, posture, grip, ball position, alignment and aim, Wimberly addresses these fundamentals by demonstrating proper or conventional technique.

"Bad shots are usually caused by problems that occur before you ever take the club away," advises Wimberly.

To get your alignment square, Wimberly suggests that you place two parallel clubs on the ground pointing in the direction of the target.

"If the best golfers in the world practice this way, why shouldn't you?" Wimberly asks.

The morning is filled with personal lessons combined with "mini-clinics" on things such as finding a good pre-shot routine, focusing on each practice shot, aiming at a specific target and controlling your emotions.

Both afternoons are spent on the golf course with playing lessons in a fun-filled, no-pressure scramble format complete with prizes.

What about the bottom line: After golf school, do people really get better?

This is what Jeff Wilson, who is a financial advisor at Morgan Stanley in Las Cruces, has to say about his experience at golf school:

"It's a lot of practice and a lot of balls to hit in two days, but I know that my swing is better because Herb and Charlie point out what's good about your swing, what to get rid of, and specifically what you need to work on.

"For me, I look at it over the long term and it's the mental preparation before each shot, and my decision-making that has really improved."

Reflecting on Wimberly's vast fund of golf knowledge and experience, Wilson adds, "It's comparable to what's in Harvey Penick's famous Little Red Books."

One former Performance Golf School student recently told me, "Heck, getting to spend two days with Herb Wimberly – just to listen to him talk golf – is worth it just for that alone. He's a golf legend."

After playing college golf at the University of New Mexico, Wimberly came to New Mexico State in 1962, and was largely responsible for the wonderful golf course the university has today. Wimberly coached the Aggie men's golf team for 31 years, and was elected to the Golf Coaches Hall of Fame in 1994. Among his All-American golfers were Rich Beem, Larry Beem, Bart Bryant and Tom Byrum, all PGA professionals.

Wimberly's résumé is so full of accomplishments that it would take a much larger column than I enjoy here to cover them, but I'm sure his lasting legacy at New Mexico State is the vision to bring the PGA Professional Golf Management program to the University in 1988.

Part of the NMSU College of Business, the PGM program is now an international one that attracts prospective PGA professionals from all over the U.S. and several foreign countries. It is regarded among other PGM colleges as the model program.

On Sept. 23, Wimberly was honored by the university by being presented with the Traders Award for his exceptional services to the College of Business.

Back to golf school. The schedule involves two full days of personal instruction with mini-clinics and on-course play. We are planning on a fairly small and intimate group, so the student-teacher ratio is low. We pair up folks for play in the afternoon so that each group has a mix of ability in it. We usually have men, women and a junior or two, and play a scramble format. The cost is $250 (which is reduced this year, because this is our only school), and that includes virtually everything: You get lessons, a tee prize gift, PGS golf cap, scramble prizes, greens fees with cart, unlimited range balls and loads of fun.

If you're interested, call 521-1725.

Aggies get ready for Idaho Vandals

Jack Nixon
Jack's Corner

The bye week came at a good time this year for the Aggie football team. I don't think this will dampen the momentum the Aggies gained in rolling over New Mexico in the win that was the largest margin of victory for DeWayne Walker as a head coach.

It is based in stronger stuff than "rah-rah" emotion. The week off lets the team refocus to make an emotional let down less likely versus Idaho. On the more practical side, the two-week break let Taveon Rogers, Robert Clay and B.J. Adolpho heal up. The fact that NM State beat UNM so decisively without their starting quarterback, running back, wide receiver and a linebacker is reassuring when it comes to team depth.

This game is the annual Aggies are Tough Enough to Wear Pink game that Walker has never lost. The Vandals have not shown a strong running game, but they did battle Virginia to the very end after the long trip to Charlottesville, Va. They haven't displayed the consistency the Aggies have so the table is set for another chance to drink pink champagne in a postgame victory toast.

Quarterback Matt Christian's mobility is a better fit for the Aggies offensive line situation. Opposing defensive coordinators can not line up and bull rush the NM State quarterback with Christian able to gain ground on his own.

The option aspect of the offensive scheme is something teams don't see very often anymore. Changing the defensive preparation to something completely different from NM State is disruptive to the even flow coaches prefer in the week's preparation.

The Aggies' defense returned to form in Albuquerque. The UNM running game was stifled early, and Donyae Coleman came up with another interception to keep the Aggies on the plus side for turnovers. It still has to be proven on the field and that is where the experience in coaching factors in. Walker and his staff have the experience to keep the ship of state sailing in a straight course to victory.

Grain of salt: My record of forecasting conference changes is admittedly "spotty," but here is something to chew on as you pick out your pink ensemble. If, Air Force leaves for the Big East and Boise State goes there or the Big 12 as has been bandied about, that would leave the Mountain West with only eight members. Twelve is the magic number for conference size and there are four schools west of the Mississippi in the current WAC lineup.

Sometimes minimums become maximums and self-preservation frequently leads to alliances that previously seemed unappealing. I make no predictions but as the late Ernie Mills used to say, "Don't say, we didn't tell you."

Building for success

Ivan Fernandez
Women's Tennis
Head Coach

Last year, the Aggie women's tennis team finished third in the WAC, which was our best finish since joining the conference.

We had a 12-7 record, and junior Manon Sylvain became the first Aggie to be named to the WAC All-Tournament Team.

Shortly after the end of the season, my thoughts quickly shifted to the future of this program, especially knowing I had six returners coming back this year. All six returners had 10 or more wins each last year, with 18 wins from Annemieke Witte and 12 wins from Natalia Salum and Jodie Williams.

The six returners and two freshmen have quickly bonded and have become one of the strongest teams that I have coached in the last several years. Seniors Sylvain from France and Salum from Mexico are the co-captains this year, and the experience and leadership they bring to the team will be a great asset this year.

It has been my goal to strengthen the competitiveness of the women's tennis team and continue to improve our national ranking. In order to achieve this goal, we have had to add more ranked teams to our spring schedule and play in tougher fall tournaments. Fortunately, this year's Aggie women's tennis team has shown they are ready for this challenging schedule and can be competitive against any team.

So far this fall, the Aggies have competed in three tournaments and have exceeded my expectations.

The first tournament was at home, the Aggie Invitational, and the women did so well in the first couple rounds of singles and doubles that we had to adjust the tournament format to avoid them having to play each other in the quarterfinals, semifinals and finals.

The other two tournaments, UNLV Invitational and San Diego State University Fall Classic, featured at least five ranked teams at each event. I knew how competitive these events were going to be, and I knew we were strong enough to compete with these teams. What I really wanted was for the Aggie players to come out of these tournaments recognizing how strong they are for themselves.

After these three fall events, six of the eight Aggies have winning singles and doubles records. The players have shown themselves, and other teams, that the women's Aggie tennis team will be a force to reckon with in the spring season when we are scheduled to play six nationally ranked teams.

Our fall season wraps up with the Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) Regional Tournament in Las Vegas Oct. 14-16, where we are competing with the top players representing more than 16 teams in our region. Our spring season begins in late January 2012, and we are scheduled to play our first home matches the weekend of Feb. 3-5, 2012. We are also hosting the WAC Championships in April at the NMSU Tennis Center.

For a complete match schedule, visit www.nmstatesports.com.

Hope to see all of you out on the courts this spring. Go Aggies.

Season tickets on sale for 2011-12 Aggie basketball

'More intimate' seating offered at Pan Am

Season tickets for the 2011-12 New Mexico State University men's basketball season are now on sale through the Pan American Center ticket office. The 2011-12 home schedule includes 17 home games and features games against rivals UTEP and UNM, Pac-12 foe Arizona, an ESPNU BracketBuster game, and all seven WAC opponents.

The Aggies are led by seniors Hamidu Rahman, Hernst Laroche and Wendell McKines. All three were part of the 2010 WAC Tournament Championship team and look to repeat this year.

This year, fans will see some changes at the Pan American Center.

New seating configuration: In order to create a "more intimate and raucous environment," NMSU has permanently closed the four upper corners of the arena, which will allow the fan base to sit closer together and give a true home court advantage, according to an NMSU press release.

The new configuration reduces the number of available seats from 12,482 to 8,994. Last year, attendance at only two games came close to the new number. Home games against rivals UTEP and the University of New Mexico drew 8,488 and 8,205 fans, respectively.

For fans with season tickets in the high-corner seating sections, seats will now be moved to a reserved seat, closer to the action. Those upper level seats had been priced at $120, but now will be just $69.

New floor: A new floor has been ordered and will be installed for an unveiling at the UTEP home game and regular-season opener on Saturday, Nov. 19.

Fixed pricing: Finally, this year's prices are the same as last year (with the exception of lowering the prices on the upper reserved seats) and, according to an NMSU press release, pricing will be also stay fixed for next year (2012-13 season).

Season tickets for the men's basketball season are available now by visiting the Pan American center ticket office, or by calling 646-1420.

Aggie softball team earns academic honor

One year after achieving a top 40 national ranking for team grade point average, the New Mexico State University softball squad improved its standing to No. 21 in the country when the National Fastpitch Coaches Association (NFCA) announced its 2011 All-Academic Teams and Scholar Athletes.

NMSU rated No. 21 among Division I squads in the country with a team GPA of 3.37. Only 133 of the 289 schools that sponsor softball made the cut, meaning the Aggies' ranking was well within the top 10 percent of Division I programs.

For the second straight season, the Aggies were the top-rated program in the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) and were one of only 24 programs with a GPA of 3.35 or higher. Tennessee Tech led Division I with a team GPA of 3.619.

Additionally, eight Aggies on the 2011 team earned NFCA Scholar Athlete honors by achieving a GPA of 3.50 or above. Three of those honorees return for the 2012 season: Teresa Conrad, Kristi Covarrubia and Amber Oliver.

Ticket package offered

New Mexico State football fans can secure a ticket good for the remaining four home football games for $42.28. This ticket offer is for reserved seating.

The Aggies have four remaining home games in 2011, starting with Idaho, at 6 p.m. Oct. 15, for the Tough Enough to Wear Pink Game. Nevada on Oct. 29, Fresno State on Nov. 12 and Utah State on Dec. 3 round out the home schedule.

To take advantage of the $42.28 partial season ticket offer, fans are encouraged to visit the Pan American Center ticket office or call 646-1420.

Young NMSU equestrian team hopes to repeat top-10 ranking

Aggies will host Texas A&M at Equestrian Center

By Jeff Barnet
Las Cruces Bulletin

In a coaches' poll held at the end of last season, the New Mexico State University equestrian team was ranked 10th in the nation. The 2011-12 team is a younger group, according to head coach Audrey Buck, with nine freshmen and several transfers as part of the 25-rider squad, but she said the team hopes to do even better this year.

"Generally, we would like to be even higher than (10th)," said Buck, who is in her second year as head coach.

Erica Daniels rides for New Mexico State University.

She said the first 2011-12 coaches' poll will be out later this month. There are 22 universities that compete in the emerging sport of NCAA varsity equestrian horse riding.

Texas A&M University, which was ranked first at the end of last season, will ride into Las Cruces for a head-to-head competition at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 15, at the NMSU Equestrian Center, off Stewart Street towards Union Avenue.

"We have the home-field advantage," she said. "We know the horses, the arena, the conditions. We can pull out a win if we ride with confidence. I want them to be confident in every competition we go to."

The Aggies are 1-1 on the season, taking the home opener against West Texas A&M 15-2 on Sept. 18. NMSU lost to Fresno State 15-5 in Fresno Oct. 8.

"In the first game we had the home advantage - we knew our horses, we were nice and fresh and ready to go," Buck said. "Then we went to Fresno, and a lot of the inexperience of the younger riders just got to them. It had been raining there, something we usually don't see. It was a sloppy, wet arena. That kind of threw us for a loop."

In any equestrian competition, the team uses 20 riders - five each for four events. The two events in the Hunter Seat competition are derived from English fox hunting horsemanship, Buck said. In equitation on the flat, riders are judged for performing skilled maneuvers on flat ground, whereas in equitation over fences the horses jump over a series of obstacles.

In these events, Buck said, "Everything you do is very difficult, and you have to maintain position and make it look very easy."

The two Western events are geared more toward working horses, she said. One competition involves horsemanship, the other is Reining: a fast, dynamic, intense event involving gallops, turns and stops.

Against Fresno State, NMSU's Chelsea Campbell was named MVP in the Reining competition, even though she lost her head-to-head match 78-75.

"The judge saw her skill, even though it wasn't her best match," Buck said.

Campbell is one of four NMSU riders Buck said were good ones to watch in their events. She also mentioned Megan Gould in Western Horsemanship, Emily McConnell in equitation over fences and Stephanie Gershon in equitation on the flat.

As in any sport, the mental game is an important part of equestrian, she said. It's important to stay positive as mistakes do happen.

"I'm as tough as the next person when it comes to practice and wanting perfection," she said. "But there's a lot of pressure on the riders. We don't dwell on the past."

Although the home team supplies horses for any event, they are distributed by random draw, Buck said.

"It can backfire on you," she said, but noted that it still gives the home team an advantage.

Palmer honored

Aggie runner is named as WAC Athlete of the Week

New Mexico State University's Kevin Palmer was named the Western Athletic Conference Athlete of the Week for cross country for his performance at the Grand Canyon Invitational in Goodyear, Ariz., Saturday, Oct. 8.

Palmer, a sophomore from Albuquerque (Eldorado High School), posted his best overall finish of the season at the Grand Canyon Invitational by placing eighth overall and first for the Aggies with an 8K time of 25:47.9. Palmer beat out some of the region's best athletes, including many runners from No. 23 Arizona State and Arizona.

Smaller banks woo customers

Samantha Roberts
Business Editor

To pay or not to pay – soon that may not be the question.

Starting in 2012, Bank of America, like many other banks, will start charging a $5 monthly fee to customers who use debit cards.

The company said the fees will be rolled out in stages, but has yet to say which states will be affected first.

There once was a time when consumers were paid to use their debit cards. Now, economists say signs are pointing in the opposite direction and what we are calling “outrageous” could be “the norm.”

Several banks are testing a debit-card fee. Chase and Wells Fargo are testing $3 monthly debit card fees in select markets, but neither have released a final decision on implementing the charge. Citibank will also double the monthly service charge on EZ checking accounts from $7.50 to $15 in November. SunTrust, an Atlanta-based bank, started charging customers a $5 debit card fee. Regions Financial in Birmingham, Ala., also plans to start charging customers $4 a month.

These charges have been brought on because starting Saturday, Oct. 1, banks were capped on the amount they can collect from merchants whenever customers swipe their debit cards. For an average debit card transaction before Oct. 1, Bank of America charged merchants 44 cents, but the cap has limited that amount to 24 cents, 20 cents more in a business’ pocket and 20 cents less for the bank.

These fees generated $19 billion in revenue for banks in 2009.

A study by Bankrate.com reported that 45 percent of checking accounts are free with no strings attached, many of them being community banks, credit unions and online checking. This number was down from 65 percent last year and 76 percent in 2009.

“We are pushing free checking and intend to maintain totally free or minimal banking fees are long as we are able,” said Gary Lenzo, president of Century Bank in Las Cruces. “(With the new government ruling), any increase fees for

Chamber collaborates with Armijo family, community to save home

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

“Grand Phantom Balls” once graced the rooms of the historic Nestor Armijo House that has been slated to be the new home to the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce.

On Tuesday, Oct. 4, chamber board members, along with members of the community and nearby neighbors, gathered to listen to members of the Heritage Foundation talk about plans to “save the Armijo House.” The foundation is a 501(c)3 started by the chamber to allow donors to benefit from tax credits associated with donating to a nonprofit.

History

The Nestor Armijo House was named after its owner, a prosperous businessman and rancher during the heyday of the Santa Fe Trail. Armijo bought the original four-bedroom adobe home from Maricita Daily in 1877. He enlarged and furnished in elaborate Victorian décor.

“By the turn of the century, Las Cruces had all the requirements of a civilized town,” according to the Rio Grande Republican, a Las Cruces publication from 1881 to 1914. “Meeting the evening train had become a popular past-time, while formal activities included a ‘Grand Phantom Ball’ held at the home of Nestor Armijo. Beatrice Armijo masqueraded as a Chinese lady of rank.”

“Nestor expanded the house to the north and built the second floor,” said Bud Colligan, great-great-great grandson of Armijo.

According to Eric Liefeld, president of Mesilla Valley Preservation, Nestor Armijo was a dynamic person who did things “larger than life.”

“Nestor was a freighter and also owned the building across the street,” he said, adding that what is now known as Lohman Avenue was once called Covenant Street. “He was educated in St. Louis and raised in Albuquerque. He became famous by running freight with large mule trains from Chihuahua City, Mexico, to Santa Fe on the Santa Fe Trail.

“Las Cruces is considered an historic crossroads, and it is a key piece to tell that story – Nestor’s involvement.”

The Armijo House was the first of its kind in Las Cruces with electrical wiring and a two-story addition, constructed with 3-foot-thick adobe walls.

“It is an early example of the two-story adobe house,” Liefeld said. “The adobe is notable because for a second story, you didn’t see much of that when dealing with all that weight and mass. It was a very grand home and to be able to afford electric lighting showed Nestor was clearly an influential person.”

Liefeld said what makes the home so unique is its actual survival and integrity.

“The word ‘integrity’ is used a lot in preservation,” he said. “The Armijo House is unique in terms of surviving houses in Las Cruces, especially for that time frame. Very few houses survived with a lot of historical integrity, and how it kept its original features shows Nestor knew what he was doing. A lot of time has passed and little has changed outside. The home has kept its ornaments and porches; they need help, but the details are remarkable.”

NRG Energy opens new solar facility in Santa Teresa

Bulletin Staff Report

El Paso Electric Co. is supplying power to customers that is generated by solar panels that were dedicated Friday, Oct. 7, by NRG Energy at its Roadrunner Solar Generating Facility in Santa Teresa.

The facility is the second largest photovoltaic plant in the state. The photovoltaic plant puts out direct electrical power, but a converter at the plant switches the power into alternating current for El Paso Electric customers.

“Today marks another step towards American energy independence with the completion of the Roadrunner Solar Generating Facility,” said Lt. Gov. John Sanchez in a NRG news release. “This 20-megawatt photovoltaic project is diversifying New Mexico’s economy and creating good jobs for our state. I want to thank

Over the next 100 years, six generations of the Armijo family have lived in the house, including Josephine Gallagher, one of Armijo's granddaughters and Colligan's grandmothers.

It is rare to know much about a building like the Armijo House, but Liefeld said the family has such incredible information and history to convey that preservation has been greater than usual.

"We always slept upstairs in one of the two big bedrooms of the house," Colligan said about his annual trips from California to Las Cruces via Route 66. "I still remember waking up in the bedroom and going into my mother's room, which was the other big bedroom upstairs. It had a blue ceiling like the sky and brass bed from England with a lace canopy. It is at the Branigan (Cultural Center) right now, in storage."

Colligan said his family, including six children, spent four to six weeks every summer at the historic home.

"There wasn't a lot to do in Las Cruces for a kid, so we would play in the area behind the house, which was a dirt field with tumble weeds," he said. "We would also hang out on the porch where it was cool. We had an Irish mail that was like a scooter with four wheels, a seat and crank like an old rail cart. We would ride it back and forth on the porch."

The house also had a big wooden swing that could fit three to four people and hung from the east side, Colligan said.

"I would like to see that put back on the porch (during the restoration)," he said.

The first renovation

In 1982, Pioneer Savings and Trust, with the help from land grant-in-aid funds from the New Mexico Historic Preservation Bureau, restored the Armijo House for its branch office. The house has changed hands several times from a law firm to a real estate company, but due to its vacancy, it fell to the wayside once again.

"It's always a good thing to find a good occupant, in an old building," said Tom Hutchinson, owner of another local historic building that houses La Posta de Mesilla. "The best way to make sure a historic building is well-kept is to have a living, breathing business in it."

"We can't preserve all the buildings in Las Cruces, but there are some that deserve being saved."

"The Armijo family wants to see the house used," said Terra Van Winter, chair of the capital campaign charged with raising funds for the chamber. "Making it a living, breathing building, seven days a week, has been really exciting for them."

And Colligan said he hopes the chamber will make it a permanent home.

The Nestor Armijo House has been placed on the national and state historical registries.

"Hopefully the chamber will be around as long as Las Cruces will be," Colligan said.

Chamber plans

"This project is so important because it is the preservation of my family's history and of the history of Las Cruces," Colligan said. "My great-great-grandfather was a prominent citizen in Las Cruces, and his father was an early governor of New Mexico. So, I think it's a prominent house in southern New Mexico and has deep memories for our family that are buried in Las Cruces' history. I feel a strong draw to preserve that heritage for our family, for the city and for the state."

Chamber plans wouldn't be possible without the help of strong financial backers, and Citizens Bank as well as its owner, Amador Bank Shares, has stepped up in a big way.

"Amador Bank Shares, which owns Citizens Bank and the Armijo House, has donated the house to the chamber," said Hutchinson, board chair of Citizens Bank. "Citizens Bank also contributed $50,000 to the project."

"Everyone recognizes the Armijo House as one of the more prominent buildings in the community, the trick was finding a business to use the space that was just as prominent. We were hoping the chamber or visitor's bureau would be interested because they have good uses for the building, and the location has an abundance of parking. We are delighted to pull the chamber back in town in a prominent location."

And the chamber is just as excited about their future home.

"This project is important because we are helping to save a piece of property with a significant and long history," said Kiel Hoffman, chair of the Heritage Foundation. "On the business side, we get to be in the middle of Las Cruces, and I think we belong in the Downtown corridor. The Armijo House will give us the facilities to grow to meet chamber needs in the future, as well."

The home will house only a portion of the chamber offices, and an additional building will be built to hold a large boardroom as well as additional offices and small conference rooms.

The Armijo House is about 3,000 square feet, and the new building will also be about 3,000 square feet.

"Five staff members and seven offices will be in the new building," Van Winter said. "We will also have a courtyard that will be able to hold events."

"The large hallway and additional space on the first floor will have original artwork and furniture – pieces of the home that were there 100 years ago – so when someone comes to pick up a relocation guide, they will be greeted with a historical museum right away."

Construction on the house will begin early next year and will take about 18 months. By the end of 2012, the chamber expects to have the rest of the $2.3 million raised.

"We are about half-way there," Van Winter said. "We are at 54 percent of our goal. We've been in the process for a year as a silent campaign, looking at different locations and come across the house. A feasibility study was performed with the focus group to see if the Armijo House was viable to save."

Van Winter said the results came back very well and many people saw it as the perfect home for the chamber.

“We are concerned about the adobe, and we are working with local preservation organizations. Collaboration is a big thing for us.”

TERRA VAN WINTER,
capital campaign chair

"Being in the Downtown revitalization area, we are able to share the story with the community," she said. "It's not just a chamber base, but actually a bigger part of the community."

Van Winter said she is encouraging 100 percent giving on the chamber board and has already received 100 percent giving from the chamber staff.

"Everyone has been excited to get behind it, now we are focusing on key stakeholders and financial institutions," Van Winter said.

The campaign allows for giving over a three-year period, to allow companies to spread out the donation.

Van Winter said the chamber is also seeking help from volunteers as well as work from local contractors.

"We are trying to reach out to local providers," she said. "Steve Newby is the architecture provider and donated a large portion of the work."

Perhaps the most important aspect of preservation, Van Winter said the chamber is very adamant about keeping the building on the historical record for the state and for the nation.

"It was one of the first buildings on the state history registry," she said. "We are concerned about the adobe, and we are working with local preservation organizations. Collaboration is a big thing for us."

Should funds fall short by the committee's goal, Van Winter said alternatives will be pursued.

"Our goal is to raise all of the money in hand or through pledges through 2012," she said. "We are also working on a low-interest construction loan with banks. If we don't reach the goal, we will look at other avenues, such as grants on the basis of it being a historical building."

The Heritage Foundation committee includes Margie Huerta, chamber chair; Leslie Cervantes; Bill Allen, chamber CEO/president; Van Winter; Richard Haas; Hutchinson; Colligan; and Hoffman, who said the organization will stay in tact for future endeavors after the Armijo project.

NRG Energy, El Paso Electric and First Solar for making this investment in New Mexico and look forward to their future ventures using the Land of Enchantment's most bountiful resource, the sun."

First Solar provided engineering and construction for the project and provided more than 200 jobs. The company installed advanced thin film photovoltaic solar modules and also will be the operations and maintenance contractor, according to the NRG news release.

The Roadrunner plant uses a single-axis tracking system that pivots solar panels to follow the sun, increasing electricity production compared with a fixed tilt array. The generated power is sold to El Paso Electric under a 20-year agreement, the news release said.

"I am excited to welcome this type of industry to Doña Ana County," County Commission Chairwoman Dolores Saldaña-Caviness said. "It's a whole new sunny world."

"We're pleased to add the energy produced by the Roadrunner Solar Generating facility to our renewable energy portfolio," said El Paso Electric CEO David Stevens. "Our 20-year contract to purchase to purchase the power from the facility marks our largest commitment to solar energy research, education and utilization in our area."

El Paso Electric is a regional utility company that provides electric generation and distribution to about 379,000 retail and wholesale customers in a 10,000-mile area in southern New Mexico and west Texas.

"The completion of the Roadrunner solar facility is a major milestone for the New Mexico border region," said state Secretary of Economic Development Jon Barela. "This builds on the momentum taking place in the region due to the coming together of many entities for the economical success of Santa Teresa, including NRG Energy, El Paso Electric and First Solar, and we are thrilled to have the Roadrunner solar project and this partnership here as a part of the community."

"This new project is a good example of an economic development that is characterized by high-technology and a renewable resource that is plentiful in southern New Mexico, sun," said Jerry Pacheco, vice president of Border and Industrial Association.

Bank fees services are going to fall on the consumer as (banks) argued through the debate – not only could there be additional costs to the consumer, but freebies would also go away.”

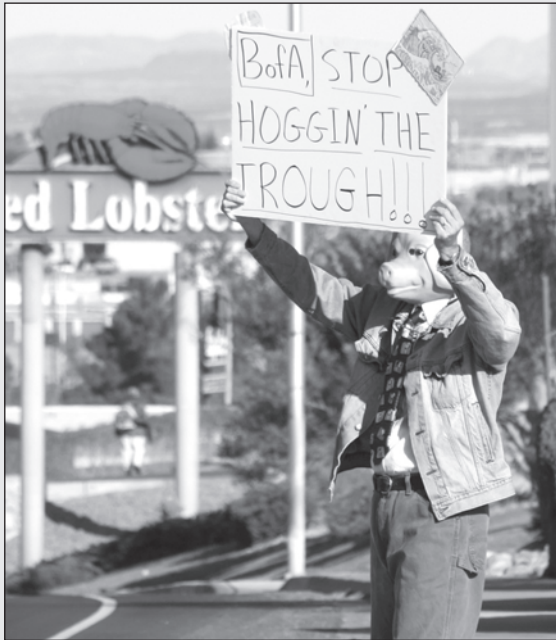

Lenzo said many of his customers are “buzzing” about the added fees, but it is too early to tell the direct effect of customer’s leaving banks that have added the fees.

Other bank fees are slowly creeping up, such as ATM fees, up 7 cents from last year – $3.74 to $3.81 – and overdraft fees, up 36 cents – $30.47 to $30.83.

An Associated Press poll found that two-thirds of customers use debit cards more frequently than credit cards. Out of the same group, 61 percent said they would find another way to pay – cash or check – if they were charged $3 a month, and 66 percent said they would change their payment method if a $5 per month charge was implemented.

When I moved to New Mexico, my bank was not located in the state, but I kept it anyway because I still had incentives. But even a $5 a month charge would send me packing. Don't banks know we still have choices ... for now? Email me at samantha@lascrucebulletin.com.

Time to think about retirement

National Save for Retirement Week is Oct. 16-22

You may not see it posted on your calendar, but Oct. 16-22 is National Save for Retirement Week. This annual event, endorsed by Congress, is designed to raise awareness about the importance of saving for retirement – so you may want to take some time this week to review your own strategy for achieving the retirement lifestyle you’ve envisioned.

If you’re not convinced of the need for an event such as National Save for Retirement Week, just consider these statistics, taken from the Employee Benefit Research Institute’s 2011 Retirement Confidence Survey:

- The percentage of workers not at all confident about having enough money for a comfortable retirement grew from 22 percent in 2010 to 27 percent – the highest level measured in the 21 years of the Retirement Confidence Survey.
- Fifty-six percent of respondents say that the total value of their household’s savings and investments, excluding the value of their primary home and any defined benefit plans (i.e., traditional pension plans) is less than $25,000.
- Less than half of the respondents say they and/or their spouse have tried to calculate how much money they will need for a comfortable retirement. These numbers are obviously troubling – and they indicate that most of us probably need to put more thought and effort into our retirement savings. What can you do? Here are a few suggestions:

- Determine how much you’ll need in retirement. Try to define the lifestyle you want during retirement. Will you travel the world or stay close to home? Will you work part-time or spend your hours volunteering or pursuing hobbies? Once you know what your retirement might look like, try to estimate how much it might cost.
- Identify your sources of retirement income. Take into account your IRA, 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan, Social Security and other savings and investments. How much income will they provide? How much can you withdraw from these vehicles each year without depleting them?
- Calculate any retirement shortfall. Try to determine if your savings and investments will be enough to provide you with an income stream that’s adequate to meet your retirement needs. If it isn’t, develop an estimate of the size of the shortfall.
- Take steps to close savings “gap.” If it doesn’t look like you’ll have enough to meet your retirement needs, you may consider adjusting your savings and investment strategy. This may mean contributing more to your IRA, 401(k) and other retirement accounts. Or, perhaps your investment mix may need to be reviewed to find a better balance growth potential with risk. Or you may need to take both of these steps.

- Monitor your progress. Once you’ve put your investment strategy into place, you’ll need to monitor your progress to make sure you’re on track toward achieving your retirement savings goals. Along the way, you may have to make adjustments, if there are changes in your objectives or your specific situation.
- Taking these types of action can be challenging, so you may want to work with a professional financial advisor who has the experiences and resources necessary to help you identify and work toward achieving your retirement goals. In any case, though, National Save for Retirement Week is a great time to consider your course of action.

Residential burglary hits close to home

Most likely could have been prevented

Gary Sandler's
Real Estate Connection

This is part one of a two-part column.

The story I'm about to share with you is true. It took place Sept. 17. It was on that dreadful day the home of my very dearest friend was burglarized – in broad daylight.

As a front-row observer of the aftermath, I witnessed the coming together of the circumstances leading up to the event. It was the deconstruction of those circumstances that led me to conclude that the burglary could most likely have been prevented. Here's how the story unfolded:

According to police interviews with my friend's neighbors, someone kicked in her front door at around 10:30 a.m. on that busy Saturday morning. That's when the next-door neighbor reported hearing a loud "sound" coming from the home. Shortly thereafter, a second neighbor observed two men walking down the street and away from the property. Neither thought anything they saw was out of the ordinary, so they went about their respective business. Lucky for my friend, she wasn't at home.

Around 11 a.m., another neighbor reported hearing the sound of my friend's car alarm blaring from the garage. As did the other two neighbors, she thought nothing of the noise and went about her business. Shortly after the alarm sounded, the first neighbor observed a family transferring one of their children from an unknown vehicle into my friend's car, which was now parked in front of her house. Both cars drove away. My friend arrived home about 20 minutes later.

Upon investigation, police determined that the two men kicked in the front door and entered the home at around 10:30 a.m. While inside, they ransacked the place and gathered together everything they intended to steal. The culprits then left the residence and walked down the street. After returning in their automobile a short while later, they gathered their contraband and made room for it in their car by transferring one of their children, and her car seat, into my friend's car. In a matter of minutes, my friend's belongings and her vehicle were long gone.

Could this situation have been prevented? I firmly believe so.

As with most catastrophic incidents, it's the convergence of a number of small events that combine to trigger the main event. That's exactly what happened in this case. For starters, three nearby residents missed an opportunity to thwart the assault. While most of my friend's neighbors know one another, they don't actively work together to protect each other's interests.

Would more attention have been paid to the noises if a Neighborhood Watch program had been in place? I think so. The whole purpose of the program is to raise awareness. I've started a movement in my neighborhood, and you might consider doing the same in yours. LCPD Community Liaison Officer Jose Rodriguez has the information you need to get started. He can be reached at 202-1573 or jorodriguez@las-cruces.org.

Then there's the issue of the home itself. My friend's home was ill protected. Most burglaries take place through open doors and windows, according to the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ). DOJ reports that in a third of completed burglaries, the burglar forced entry into the home. Burglars gained entry through an unlocked door or open window in about two-thirds of the cases. DOJ also notes that in 28 percent of burglaries, people were at home. Seven percent of burglaries turn violent; as in the case of fellow Realtor, Jack Hadley, who was tragically murdered last month when he confronted a burglar in his Las Cruces home.

So how many layers of security are required to protect a home from your average, everyday house-breaker? After accompanying my friend on her mission to answer that very question, I can suggest a few low cost and effective ideas that'll help get the job done. I'll do just that in next week's column.

“ Most burglaries take place through open doors and open windows ... in a third of completed burglaries, the burglar forced entry into the home. ”

Economic performance is not a laughing matter

Recovery slow but continues as expected

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

A joke economists make among themselves is they can tell when people are worrying because that's when we get invited to give speeches.

Apparently, there is a lot of fear about a double-dip recession because my speech calendar is getting full. The gloom is overdone.

Technically, we can't have a double-dip recession as the previous recession, which ended August 2009, is already too far in the past. But for Americans who have become used to one recession per decade, this is a difference without a distinction. The economy hasn't fully recovered from the previous downturn, yet a new recession is a reasonable fear.

A lot of the worry seems to be originating in the Eurozone. Greece is on the verge of bankruptcy with major negative implications for European banks. Spain's and Italy's debt has been downgraded by bond-rating agencies, while Belgium has been put on Moody's Analytics watch list.

Europe is weighing down business's expectations.

Add to this the uncertainty around health care reform, which will likely be ruled on in the next November elections. It is easy to see the cause of business reluctance to hire new workers. Last month's employment numbers were better, up nearly 100,000. That is good news, but still only about half of what is needed.

A new national recession, although not out of the question, is unlikely. In fact, the recovery is right on course. Recessions associated with a financial crisis, like the most recent, tend to be twice as severe and twice as long as regular recessions. And indeed, a normal recession lasts 10 months; the most recent recession lasted 20 months. Normal recoveries are characterized by rapid economic growth as the economy returns to trend. The current recovery is anemic, less than half the normal pace, again as expected.

The cause of the slow recovery is the continued aftereffects of the subprime mortgage meltdown and the subsequent real-estate bubble burst. The recession started in real estate and full recovery is unlikely until that sector recovers. Real estate values continue to fall, down 2.6 percent nationally in the last year according to real estate website Zillow.com. Values are down 6.7 percent for Las Cruces.

That the recovery is right on track is thin gruel for those who are unemployed or whose businesses continue to suffer slow sales growth. Economists' usual recommendations in such a situation are tax cuts and spending increases. Unfortunately, such proposals aren't very popular in the current environment of record high deficits. Even so, President Barack Obama has proposed the American Jobs Act, which is a package of tax cuts and spending increase designed to help get the economy going.

Unfortunately, the American Jobs Act isn't enough. The economy is currently suffering from a $900 billion output gap. A stimulus package needed to deal with such a shortfall would require an increase in the federal deficit of around $750 billion. The American Jobs Act falls $300 billion short of this. This means continued slow recovery but probably no double dip.

Christopher A. Erickson, Ph.D., is an associate professor of economics at New Mexico State University. He will be speaking to at the monthly MVEDA lunch Nov. 1. The views expressed here may not be shared by the regents or administration of NMSU.

College loans are a burden for 'Generation Y'

Recent graduates forced to make sacrifices, but there is an alternative

Tracey Bryan
Bridging the workforce

I heard a shocking statistic – 85 percent of the class of 2011's college graduates were expected to move back home to Mom and Dad, according to a study by Twentysomething Inc., a consulting and research company that studies "Generation Y" (today's 15- to 34-year-olds).

The reason they're not able to spread their wings, according to a story that ran in multiple publications, was because they are starting life with some of the highest student loan debt in history. Combine that with one of the worst job markets in decades, and it's easy to see why parents are paying for room and board while the now-former students attempt to find jobs to provide the incomes that enable them to pay off the debts.

As someone who graduated college in the middle of the oil bust of the late 1980s, I remember how frustrating it was to work so hard through college, have very few job openings and even then have to compete against someone who's been in the job market for five or 10 years. And when the student loan bill comes due six months after graduation, that's just adding insult to injury.

Today's poor job climate, mixed with the cost of higher education, is why it's critically important that we build a strong educational pipeline that's connected to the job needs of our county and state. Students need pathways that connect seamlessly and efficiently from high school to college to careers.

We need to identify the strategies that help young people complete their degrees within the shortest possible time frames, ensuring they graduate workforce ready and employable, while keeping the cost of their education (and their student loan debt) to a minimum.

A recent report by Complete College America, Time is the Enemy, highlights this need to help students complete their college education in a timely fashion. The study found that the longer students took to pursue a career certification – an associate degree or a bachelor's degree – the less likely they were to graduate. Whether they completed or not, they still racked up significant amounts of debt, but didn't have the job prospects to pay off their loans.

The report found the majority of students attending college are only attending part-time, and the likelihood they'd complete went down dramatically. Full-time students were twice as likely to graduate, but again, the longer it took, the lower the graduation rate.

New Mexico is one of 29 states identified in the report working to make the higher-education system more efficient. These states are committed to supporting efforts that help students graduate, increase the return on investment of educational dollars for taxpayers and strengthen the economy.

Interestingly, state-specific data in the report pointed to the fact that there will be a 32-percent gap between the number of jobs in 2020 that required career certificates or college degrees and those qualified to fill them. The good news is the jobs are there. We just need to identify the efficiencies that reduce the time, and increase the likelihood for students to graduate.

Fortunately, the leaders of Doña Ana County have been having this conversation for the past four years, and we're well on our way to solutions.

The state's first early college high school, and four other proposed early college high schools, go beyond even what the report's writers recommend. Students who graduate at 18 years old with a high school diploma and associates degree are only two years away – not four, six or eight – from earning a bachelors degree, if they choose to pursue more education. It's easy to expect their college-completion rates will far exceed the current numbers. If those graduates choose to go to work, they will enter the workforce two years earlier and be well trained to pursue careers in growing and relevant industries here.

It's also just one more reason to support dual-credit courses, which get students moving toward their college degrees while they are still in high school. Taking college courses in high school reduces the amount of time students will be in college. It also reduces the need for remedial classes – those courses add to the time it takes to graduate and greatly reduce the likelihood they will.

Strong collaboration between Doña Ana County's educational institutions will continue to help our students be more successful and more likely to finish their college careers. The partnership between the Las Cruces, Gadsden, and Hatch school districts; Doña Ana Community College; and New Mexico State University, along with a committed business community, gave birth to the state's first early college high school. There's no doubt it will be the birthplace of many more innovations that create a bright future for the "Generation Y" of Doña Ana County.

Tracey Bryan is president and CEO of The Bridge, a nonprofit organization that brings together business, economic development, government and education to create a stronger, well-qualified workforce in Doña Ana County.

The Bridge's top priority is to increase the high school graduation rate in the county and the nonprofit's work has led to the creation of the state's first Early College High School on the Arrowhead Center campus at New Mexico State University. To contact Bryan, email tbryan@dacc.com.

Respected volunteer leaves a legacy

Community Foundation says goodbye to a friend

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) is all about community, philanthropy and commitment. In September, staff, board members and friends of the CFSNM said goodbye to a volunteer who shared the same commitments.

Jon Wynne, born Aug. 21, 1931 in London, passed away on Sept. 26. He was an avid reader and fond of films and filmmakers. Wynne loved to engage in intellectual pursuits and political discussions. His insights into human nature were astute and helped him as he dialogued with friends and colleagues. His keen and dry sense of humor was embraced by many who knew and loved him and when he was not volunteering, discussing or joking he was logging 40 miles on his stationary bike each day.

Wynne spent the majority of his career as an auditor for the American Tobacco Co. based in New York City. When he retired to the warmer climate of Las Cruces he became a community volunteer dedicated to social change and philanthropy.

Wynne started volunteering with the CFSNM nearly two decades ago, first at the Memorial Medical Center Foundation. Every morning, Monday through Friday, Wynne would arrive at the CFSNM office at 5 a.m., working through 9 a.m. on book-keeping and various needs within the offices.

"He took great pride in his work and he wholeheartedly offered his ability to volunteer and his knowledge, expertise and time to the Community Foundation," said Luan Wagner Burn, executive director of the CFSNM.

Post-high school education was critically important to Wynne. Upon his passing, Wynne left a large planned gift through a bequest in his will/trust. Wynne left his estate to the CFSNM to create the Jon Wynne Scholarship Fund.

Anyone interested in donating to the Jon Wynne Scholarship Fund can contact Burn at 521-4794 or mail a check to CFSNM, 301 S. Church St., Suite H, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

The CFSNM manages several scholarships created to honor those who have passed, such as the Jon Wynne Scholarship, including the Harold Cousland Fund for Young Journalists Scholarship; Kevin T. Riedel Memorial Scholarship; Over the Rainbow Scholarship; R.W. Van Pelt Educational Fund Scholarship and Zachary Eiland Lansford Memorial Scholarship.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of southern New Mexico for generations to come. The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. For more information see our website at www.cfsnm.org or call Luan Wagner Burn at 521-4794. To donate, mail your check to CFSNM, 301 S. Church St., Suite H, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Bill promotes economic growth

Congressman Steve Pearce applauded the unanimous passage of H.R. 1461, the Mescalero Apache Tribal Leasing Authorization Act. Pearce introduced the bill, which will promote economic growth and honor the right for American Indian communities to exercise self-determination.

"The unanimous support for this legislation exemplifies the positive effect that it will have for the tribes of New Mexico," Pearce said. "This legislation is important to both the people of the Mescalero Apache Tribe as well as surrounding communities. The revenue gained from leasing this water will go to shore up vital services on the reservation, including elder care, scholarship programs and infrastructure improvements."

Martinez favors local businesses

Gov. Susana Martinez signed a measure into law Wednesday, Oct. 5, to ensure New Mexico businesses hold an advantage over out-of-state competitors when bidding on state government contracts.

Supporters say the contracting preference can help provide jobs in New Mexico.

"This important law will assist local companies and create a more competitive playing field for New Mexico businesses," Martinez said. "Making it easier for local businesses to succeed is a critical part of getting our economy back on track."

The new law tightens contracting requirements to prevent out-of-state businesses from qualifying for a preference that's supposed to go to in-state businesses when bidding on state-financed construction projects.

Under the contracting-preference system, a bid by a qualified New Mexico business is considered 5 percent lower than the submitted amount – potentially helping the company be selected as the low bidder on a project.

Inaugural golf tournament to benefit junior golf

The Barry McClure Memorial announced the first annual golf tournament to honor Barry McClure and to support his passion – creating opportunities for local youth to become involved in sports. McClure was a very active member in the Sun Country Golf Association and the Picacho Hills Country Club. The initial fundraiser is the Barry McClure Golf Tournament to be hosted by the Picacho Hills Country Club Saturday, Nov. 5. The cost is $125 per player, and entry fee includes lunch, green fees, cart fees, parking lot valet service and access to the practice range. Prizes worth more than $1,000 will be awarded to winning teams. For more information or to register, call 644-9524.

Martinez signs Capital Outlay Bill

The Economic Development Department's MainStreet Program has received a $1 million appropriation for MainStreet infrastructure projects statewide. The appropriation was included in the Capital Outlay bill passed during the 2011 Special Session and signed by Gov. Susana Martinez.

The funding will be awarded to eligible MainStreet and Arts and Cultural Districts through a competitive Request for Proposals (RFP), which is expected to be released in early 2012. Eligible projects range from master planning of downtowns and streetscape improvements to planning for financing tools such as Business Improvement Districts, Tax Increment Financing Districts and Tax Increment Development Districts. To apply for project funding, New Mexico MainStreet communities and State Authorized Arts and Cultural Districts must be in good standing with the Economic Development Department, have spent at least 90 percent of previous MainStreet capital outlay appropriations and attend training on project management, including historic preservation requirements. In Good Company: Indoor Garden Supply

'Grow your own' Gardening indoors is just as effective

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

Making fresh, homemade salsa just got easier with the help of Indoor Garden Supply, a one-stop-herb shop that specializes in unique soils, nutrients, lights, fans and anything needed to successfully grow an indoor garden.

Opening just a few weeks ago – Oct. 1 – Indoor Garden Supply co-owner Tony Miller said he and fellow co-owner Jerry Mitchell are excited to pack his store with exotic house plants and interactive exhibits.

The business is located at 1001 S. Solano Drive, and Miller said the location used to house a Pic Quik more than 30 years ago.

"My grandparents have owned the building for years," said Miller, adding that he grew up in adjacent apartments. "It was a Pic Quik and then a gift shop with ceramics and house décor."

Miller, who was born in Las Cruces, said the gift shop closed about 10 years ago and the building has remained vacant since then.

"I was in Colorado for 12 years and then I started traveling, building bridges and roads," he said. "But I got sick of chasing work and decided it was time to quit traveling and settle down."

"I was sitting on this building and thinking of what I could do with it."

Miller said he got his inspiration for the Indoor Garden Supply from his stint in Colorado.

"They are everywhere," he said about the category of business. "When I realized Las Cruces didn't have one, I knew it was an opportunity. I started talking to friends and opened the store Oct. 1."

Indoor Garden Supply carries a complete line of nutrients, soils, soilless media, light reflectors, ballasts, bulbs, rooting supplies, fans, carbon filters and much more, Miller said.

"I want this to be a one-stop shop for people's indoor gardening needs," he said. "I want people to be able to grow their own organic herbs and vegetables."

Miller said his shop also has what he calls the salsa garden.

"Everything but the tomatoes is over there," he said about his garden. "Restaurants can essentially grow everything they need for salsa, such as cilantro, garlic, onions, basil, etc. They could even grow all of their herbs needed for entrées."

Since tomatoes are typically used in mass quantities, especially in salsa, Miller said he does not recommend a large restaurant trying to sustain their tomato consumption on an individual garden.

"But an individual, yes, they can definitely grow enough tomatoes," said Miller, adding that he has seen the cost of organic tomatoes for as much as $3 per pound.

"Outdoor gardening in southern New Mexico is tough. We have a lot of sun, but a very harsh climate. You can garden indoor year-round."

According to Miller, an indoor garden ranges in size based on the amount of light and window space.

"Anyone could easily sustain his or her own herb garden by a large window," he said.

The store also has a full line of hydroponic and soil garden supplies, which enables plants to grow faster.

"It's the most efficient way to grow a plant," he said. "You are force feeding the plant nutrients and controlling exactly how much they get."

But the store is not just for buying gardening supplies; Miller said he wants to have plants at all stages.

"I want to have plants at all phases from a root to a sprout to buying the finished product," he said adding that everything he grows will also be organic. "I will have wheat grass as well as exotic house plants and supplies for taking care of them."

Miller said he is also growing tomato plants in the center of his store.

"They should reach the ceiling by January," he said,

“ I want people to know what is on the vegetables they are eating and be able to sustain their own fruits and vegetables. ” adding that they will be grown in hydroponic soil.

Another aspect of his business will be plant rental.

"Cut flowers are gone after an event, but these large plants I have can be rented for events, halls and weddings," he said.

In his spare time, Miller said he is working on a partnership with Las Cruces Public School Districts to help educate children on growing.

"I want to help kids grow their own plants," he said. "It's all about 'grow your own' and being organic. I want people to know what is on the vegetables they are eating and be able to sustain their own fruit and vegetable (needs)."

Miller said he also has big ideas for an interactive kids area with a large fish tank and clear bee hive for viewing.

Q&A

Talking business with owner Tony Miller

What inspired you to go into business?

I was inspired through conversations with friends. I decided that there was a need in Las Cruces for indoor gardening supplies. Visiting the farmers market made it very apparent there is demand for homegrown organic produce.

What is unique about your business?

We are the only store in the area dedicated to hydroponics and indoor gardening.

Who are your customers?

Gardening enthusiasts, as well as people trying to sustain and grow their own fruits and vegetables.

Where do you see the business in five years?

I see the store filled with customers and plants alike. The availability of houseplants and trees to rent for decorating special events should be a great addition to the products and supplies currently in stock.

What is your business philosophy?

Grow your own.

How are you marketing the store?

Right now, through word of mouth, print, radio and flyers.

What do you look for in an employee?

I look for someone who is courteous and knowledgeable about the products we carry so they can pass that knowledge on to our customers.

What is the best business decision you've made so far?

Location, location and location.

What obstacles do you face or have you overcome?

A low advertising budget has been difficult. You have to know where to put your dollars to get the most "bang for your buck."

What are your business goals?

I want to establish a consistent customer base and keep them coming back. I also want to grow the business to unexpected heights.

The store, at 1001 S. Solano Drive, which belonged to Miller's grandparents, was a Pic Quik more than 30 years ago before it was transformed into a ceramic and home décor gift shop and then Indoor Garden Supply.

Local crops fight harsh conditions

Ag survives despite dry weather, diseases

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

Though 2011 has been an unbelievably dry year, Mesilla Valley chile, cotton and cattle farmers have fought off diseases and overcome callous conditions.

Chile

Doña Ana County chile growers are switching from green to red harvest as the pods mature and change color.

The chile crop survived early wind stress that delayed emergence.

“But for the most part, the crop bounced back,” said Stephany Walker, New Mexico State University Extension vegetable specialist. “And we didn’t have any disease problems that we normally see in wet years.”

Growers found a little curly top virus that is spread by the leafhopper, an insect host. Lack of winter rain to produce weeds kept the insect numbers down, she said.

Most chile crops are contracted, and the projected production is from 8,000 to 9,000 acres, about the same as last year, Walker said.

Dickie Ogaz in the Hatch Valley is phasing his 110 acres of green chile harvest into red pods. Any left-over green pods will be picked as red. Most of his red pods to will be transferred to processors for dehydrating, he said.

“The only problem we had was a little tip burn,” Ogaz said. “We were short of water, and you can start having tip burn. About 95 percent of our irrigation this summer was by pumps.”

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District’s 2011 allocation was 4 inches of river water, far short of the normal amount of 3 acre-feet. This summer, chile farmers were limited to one surface water irrigation.

Cotton

Keith Deputy, who grows 2,700 acres of upland cotton in the southern end of the county and some in Texas, reported that for the past few weeks he has been spending much of his time pumping ground water to his fields.

“It’s been almost 24 hours a day,” he said. “We’ve been pumping somewhere, sometimes all the time. When you get a drought, it complicates things.”

He has been able to keep his cotton alive, but he also has to irrigate alfalfa, pecans and onions.

Deputy said his cotton bolls are starting to open, and he is planning to start picking his cotton in a couple of weeks.

He also said he has started defoliating with chemicals.

“Defoliating gives you a cleaner lint for ginning, and it makes it easier to pick,” he said.

Cotton seems to be free of disease this year. Wilt sometimes invades cotton fields, but that is spread by wet climate conditions, and the hot, dry summer seems to have headed off that disease, Deputy said.

The arid climate has also helped some cotton fields mature early, and Mesa Farmer Co-op Gin processed its first module this week that was shipped in from Luna County, said gin manager Alberto Pando.

He said the gin crew is busy getting the machinery ready for a good cotton crop.

“We’re expecting a really good cotton crop this year,” Pando said. “We had perfect weather and the heat we needed.

cut back on vegetables.”

Many farmers

Pando said he is expecting an increase in farmer cotton acreage. Last year, Mesa farmers ginned cotton from 36,600 acres. This year, he is expecting a harvest from 45,000 to 50,000 acres.

Cattle

Because of persistent drought conditions, cattlemen have reduced cow herds by 30 percent in New Mexico and 40 percent in Texas, according to a survey conducted by the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

“We’ve had some rain pass through the state the last couple of weeks, but it’s too late to grow any grass,” said Caren Cowan, executive director of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association.

The last good rainfall that the Mesilla Valley received was on Sept. 15 when 1 inch was recorded. After that, no rain was recorded until Oct. 3 – 0.05 inches. The normal October precipitation is .94 inches, state climatologist David DuBois said.

The climate forecast is for a high-pressure ridge to move over the area to bring in temperatures of normal to higher than normal, he said.

The storage for both reservoirs is down, Elephant Butte is at 203,280 acre-feet, or 10.8 percent of capacity, and Caballo is at 9,070 acre-feet.

Consumers could spend less

NMSU report predicts drop in holiday shopping this season

By Janet Perez

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Retailers in New Mexico and across the nation could be singing the blues this holiday season.

A report from New Mexico State University predicts holiday sales this year will drop 0.7 percent in the state and 1.8 percent in the U.S. compared to 2010.

“I hope I’m wrong, but my forecast for 2011 holiday retail sales is a lot worse than those of my fellow forecasters,” said Bruce Huhmann, an associate professor of marketing at the NMSU College of Business.

The International Council of Shopping Centers, Shoppertrak, Kantar Retail Group and Deloitte’s Retail Group are predicting a national increase in 2011 holiday sales ranging from 2.5 percent to 3.5 percent compared to 2010.

Huhmann said his predictions for a decline have less to do with the actual health of New Mexico’s and the nation’s economy and more to do with consumer fears.

A falling stock market, unstable home prices, continued high unemployment nationally and dysfunction on Capitol Hill likely portend that consumers will be spending carefully this holiday season, Huhmann said.

New Mexico will fare only slightly better than the rest of the nation in holiday retail sales this year for two main reasons, Huhmann said.

The first is that the unemployment rate in New Mexico has been falling at a much more steady pace than that of the rest of the country.

Unemployment here remains below the national average and has decreased from a seasonally adjusted 6.7 percent in July to 6.6 percent in August. The unemployment rate in New Mexico stood at 7.5 percent last August. Meanwhile, the U.S. unemployment rate remains mired at 9.1 percent.

New Mexico’s tendency to be more insulated from the rest of the nation’s up-and-down economic cycles is the second reason for the less-pronounced predicted drop in holiday sales this year, according to Huhmann. The state’s insularity comes from a large portion of the state’s residents working directly or indirectly for the state and federal governments. However, this insularity could be eroded if the so-called “super committee” in Congress tasked with getting the nation’s budget on track hits a stalemate.

“While (government employment) is normally a benefit to New Mexico’s economy, the large numbers of New Mexicans affected by government spending could become a drag on the state economy if the congressional super committee is deadlocked and automatic budget cuts come into effect,” Huhmann said.

New Mexico also faces its own challenges that will keep holiday sales down. The debt load many New Mexico residents are still carrying from the housing bubble bust is shared with the rest of the country.

“This will put a damper on retail sales, especially in urban areas of New Mexico and those that attracted many retirees during the housing boom, such as Silver City,” Huhmann said. “Many of these newcomers to New Mexico were wealthy retirees from other states who are still waiting for their retirement portfolios and housing values to fully recover from the

Also, fuel prices are falling. That’s good news for the average commuter in other parts of the country, but not in energy-producing states such as New Mexico, where the “economy is closely tied to commodity prices for wealth creation and job growth,” Huhmann said.

In a survey of likely holiday shoppers in New Mexico, Huhmann found that 70 percent of consumers plan to target their dollars at discount retailers, with 62 percent also spending some money in department stores. Forty-nine percent say they also will buy from online retailers, while 48 percent say they plan to shop at grocery and specialty stores as well. Twenty-one percent of shoppers say fabric and craft stores, along with drug stores, will get some of their dollars.

As for retailers hoping to get the most dollars from shoppers, Huhmann’s survey found that 37 percent of consumers want sales or price discounts, 24 percent look for a greater range of merchandise selection, 14 percent like everyday low prices, 12 percent prefer product quality, 7 percent opt for a convenient location and 4 percent keep an eye out for good customer service.

“Due to consumer worries over the economy and their personal financial futures, shopping is forecasted to be value-focused. Value is not solely about price, but a balance between price and benefits,” Huhmann said. “We also expect consumers to reduce their shopping trips with a greater proportion of trips driven by value to discounters, retailers holding promotional sales or offering quality merchandise for a reasonable price.”

Jon Barela: Continuing success in Santa Fe

Economic secretary uses experiences to support NM businesses

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

Politics, entrepreneurship and corporate affairs have helped pave a path of success for designate New Mexico Secretary of Economic Development Jon Barela.

BARELA

Barela was born and raised in Las Cruces and attended Las Cruces High School.

"I am proud to be from this area," Barela said about Las Cruces. "I was raised by parents, who instilled a work ethic in me. My dad was a blue-collar worker who went back to school – New Mexico State University – to get his degree, and my mom worked at (NMSU's Physical Science Laboratory) for many years. They taught me to be proud to work hard and value an education as well as treat people with respect."

Barela took these ethics with him to Washington, D.C., where he attended Georgetown University. He graduated from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service with a bachelor's degree in history and diplomacy in 1984.

"Since I was a sophomore in high school, I knew the career path I would take," Barela said. "I was always fascinated with history and foreign affairs, so I stayed focused in high school and was fortunate to accomplish what I have. I was blessed to attend such a great university."

Unemployed and looking for a job, Barela said he woke up one morning and put on his only suit.

"The day after Congressman Joe Skeen was sworn in, I went into his office," he said. "I planned on dropping off my résumé and leaving, but when I presented it to his chief of staff, he told me to sit down."

Barela said Skeen called him back to his still unpacked office and asked just a few questions.

"He said, 'Are you looking for a job?' and 'When can you start?'" Barela said.

So Barela started right then, unpacking boxes for the congressman.

"Joe became a political mentor," Barela said about the southern New Mexico native. "He taught me about public service and ethics in government. I had the best of both worlds because I was still in touch with New Mexico."

While he was getting his law degree at Georgetown University, Barela helped Skeen with daily operations of the office as well as provided legal assistance. As a senior aide to Skeen, Barela focused on House appropriations and legislative processes.

"You have to have confidence in life," Barela said about going to Skeen's office with little knowledge about the outcome. "If you want to accomplish your goals, you must believe in your abilities. Having courage means you are not afraid to fail, and you have faith in the circumstances."

After his stint in Washington, D.C, Barela returned to New Mexico, something he said he always had plans of doing.

"I love the desert," he said.

In the Land of Enchantment, Barela joined the Modrall Law Firm where he stayed for four years.

Barela was New Mexico's Assistant Attorney General in the early 1990s and joined Intel in 1993. In 2002, he co-founded Cerelink, a high-tech computing provider to the motion picture industry.

"I have always been internally curious," he said. "I enjoyed practicing law and have valued all of my experiences, including the ups and downs of running a small business."

Also in the 1990s, Barela was awarded the NAACP Martin Luther King Jr. Community Service Award for his commitment and outreach to underrepresented communities.

"This award showed that everyone has the same goals," Barela said, "and connected a conservative like myself with an organization that didn't think (the party) could help."

"Now, I am in this job (at the New Mexico's Economic Development Department) and believe my past experiences have prepared me well. I have the law perspective; I understand what small businesses go through from trying to find the funds for hiring to government and taxes."

Barela also has a focus on reaching out to New Mexicans, such as speaking to young people about pursuing a college career and giving advice.

"If I could give advice to anyone seeking my position, I would say the No. 1 thing to remember is know you are seeking to serve," said Barela, adding that having motivation comes in a close second. "You work tirelessly to fulfill obligations of service and do so with ethical standards. Another thing to keep in mind is this position, like any position, is temporary. Once a title becomes bigger than a person, mistakes are made. That has affected so many politicians."

Speaking to a lot of people, Barela said the message he gives on continued education is always the same.

"There is just no excuse to not go to college and achieve the goal of furthering your education," he said. "The only thing that can get in their way is themselves. We live in a country where anything is possible."

As for personal growth, Barela said he sees every day as educational.

"I go back to school every day," he said. "I am constantly learning from my friends, colleagues and even my children."

After his time in office, Barela said he hopes to pick back up his marathon running as well as return to the small-business sector.

"Right now, I am enjoying my time in the office, serving the state of New Mexico and trying to find ways to create jobs. It is an honor," he said.

Wrapping up his jobs tour in Las Cruces, Jon Barela asked for community comments on what needs to be done in Las Cruces to help create jobs Aug. 3 at the Doña Ana Community College Workforce Center.

We want your PHOTOS

The Las Cruces Bulletin is looking for your photographs from the first 100 years of New Mexico statehood.

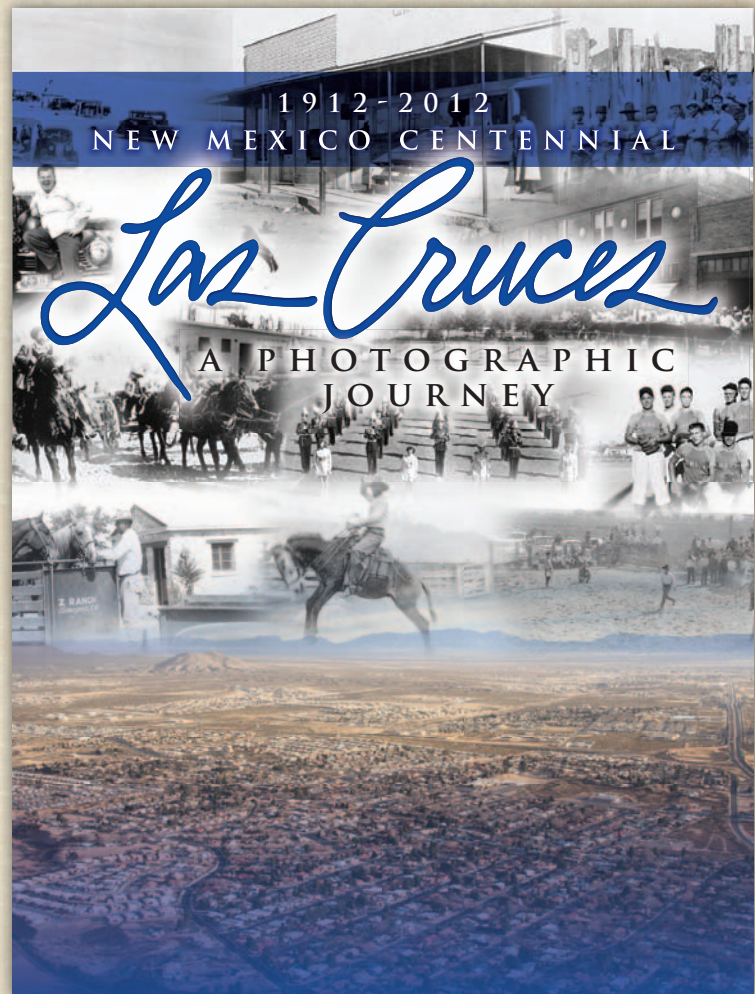

We are creating a book with hundreds of color and black-and-white photos from the last 100 years of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County and southern New Mexico.

We need your help

Do you have family photos from the 1970s? Photos from your child's birthday party in the 1960s? A group of flappers from the 1920s? A tintype of your great-great grandparents from 1912? A photo of your grandfather in World War II? A photo of Downtown Las Cruces from the 1950s?

The Bulletin is looking for these types of photos and more for a special centennial publication. In addition to photos, we'd love to see your Aggie pennants, school play programs, Pan Am concert ticket stubs, drawings and paintings – anything that represents Las Cruces and Doña Ana County history from 1912-2012.

You can bring your photographs and memorabilia to the Las Cruces Bulletin, 840 N. Telshor Suite E, where we will scan them into our computer system and return them to you.

So pull out those old shoeboxes, stroll through memory lane and call the Bulletin with your best finds. Contact Jim or Richard at 524-8061.

EMPTY BOWLS

POTTERS' GUILD AND LOCAL RESTAURANTS TEAM UP FOR OCT. 21 EL CALDITO FUNDRAISER

Making – and filling – empty bowls

Potters' guild supports the local soup kitchen

By Amanda Green
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

El Caldito Soup Kitchen has been dedicated to serving the struggling families of Las Cruces for more than 27 years.

The nonprofit organization started in January 1984 by a few individuals who understood the needs of the community and worked to collect food and provide meals for homeless and impoverished people of Las Cruces.

On average El Caldito serves more than 90,000 meals – free of charge – each year to needy individuals. With a small staff of volunteers who prepare food, serve meals and handle the entire cleanup after each service, the soup kitchen provides meals seven days a week for anyone who walks through the door.

Handling the cost of providing these meals is a huge undertaking, which is where the support of the community and fundraisers such as Empty Bowls come into play.

“Empty Bowls is so important to El Caldito, especially now with the economy being so poor,” said Rebecca McNair, special events coordinator for El Caldito. “Donations are down, but the need is stronger than ever.”

McNair, along with Cally Williams and Jan Archy, was instrumental in getting Empty Bowls started in the Las Cruces area. The program has chapters throughout the United States, all dedicated to bringing the community together in support of local soup kitchens.

Empty Bowls was originally started in Michigan by a grassroots movement of teachers and pottery lovers around 1990 and has continued to spread throughout the country, reaching places most in need.

“I found the program on a website and knew it was the perfect combination of art and a way of helping the less fortunate,” said McNair, who is hoping each of their bowls finds a home. “The turnout is just wonderful; it’s really amazing to see how many people care.”

This year, the 19th annual Las Cruces Empty

Bowls, El Caldito’s major fundraising event, is being held with help from the Potters’ Guild of Las Cruces. Each year, Empty Bowls is organized to help raise hunger awareness and provide El Caldito with the funds it needs to continue the nonprofit operation.

The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 21, at St. Paul’s United Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave.

Over the last six months, Potters’ Guild members have used studio workdays to create more than 1,000 bowls. The studio time was donated by the Las Cruces Museum of Art to allow the artists a space to work and ovens to fire their pieces.

The crafted bowls, each as unique as it is beautiful, are provided at the Empty Bowls event, where attendees enjoy soup, bread and drinks donated by 35 local restaurants. Ticketholders are able to take their handmade bowl with them after the event as a souvenir and reminder that hunger is an ongoing issue, and preventing it is an unending battle.

“It really takes a community to bring this all together,” said Letha Rushing, a member of the Potters’ Guild. “We couldn’t do it without the help and support of local people, vendors and organizations.”

“ I found the program on a website and knew it was the perfect combination ... ”

REBECCA MCNAIR,
El Caldito special events coordinator

The Potters’ Guild has also donated pottery and other art pieces for a silent auction, to be held throughout the meal. Every piece is handmade and fired by local artists throughout the Las Cruces community.

Tickets are $15 in advance and $18 at the door, and may be purchased at several businesses in Las Cruces, including Cutter Gallery, El Caldito Soup Kitchen, Horse N Hound Feed N Supply and Mountain View Market. Visit www.elcaldito.com for a full list of vendors or call 525-3831 for more information.

Teaching words with wit

Performer spins craft for reading foundation

By Amanda Green
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Monika Mojika, actor, writer, performer and full-time mother, has been bringing imagination to Las Cruces since she arrived at New Mexico State University as a freshman looking to major in theater.

Born in El Paso, the 30-something artist began helping others in Las Cruces realize their acting aspirations by accepting a teaching position at Doña Ana Community College, where she currently leads a course on introduction to theater and acting.

"I love every aspect of the theater business," Mojika said. "I've grown so much over the years from writing, to performing, and back again."

As a child, she said her writing skill was already so far ahead of her peers that she battled taunts of plagiarism.

"They accused my mom of writing my stories for me," Mojika said. "It hurt my feelings, but pushed me to be even better."

Driven by a creative charm and hilarious wit – even when faced with issues of self-worth, luck or loss – Mojika has worn many hats over the years and is now the mastermind behind the Children's Reading Foundation's Fractured Fairytales fundraiser Saturday, Oct. 15, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St. The event is a chance for children and their families to experience new and old tales in a new way.

Since her husband is Fred Bugbee, the head of the NMSU Percussion Studio, it came as no surprise when Mojika set her tales to music.

"The sound provides a heartbeat," said Mojika, who acts out the stories rather than just reads them. "It helps create a living, breathing tale."

Mojika's list of credentials have spanned from work featured near the Mexican border, up into Canada. But it's a different experience to write and perform locally, she said.

"I love Las Cruces, the culture, the people," she said. "They inspire me."

She performs her original story "Booger Hag" for elementary school students throughout southern New Mexico, hoping to provide entertainment and a lasting message about positive thinking. She has written plays that have been produced through the American Southwest Theatre Company at NMSU, and created and acted in comedy sketches on local television stations and in local venues.

Mojika is currently in the process of editing a book she's written, titled "Balance." The book tells the story of a woman battling the scale and finding her own self-worth.

"It's essentially about finding a balance," Mojika said.

Marie, the heroine, "confronts the enormity the battle with the scale represents – a colorful past, a perplexing present and – after much hilarity some heartbreak and gracious help – finds a truly balanced future," Mojika said.

Mojika's current works in progress include a screenplay about two professors, unsatisfied artistically and emotionally who lock themselves in a cabin all in the name of art. She is also working on a monologue piece in a production written by a close friend, titled, "What it's like to be gay in El Paso."

For Mojika, it's another chance to shed light on the battle for finding balance in life.

"It all comes down to self-acceptance," she said. "And that's a message that's important to me."

Russian pop artist makes a stop in Las Cruces

By Natisha Hales
Las Cruces Bulletin

During her first visit to Las Cruces, Russian-born pop artist Marina V loved it so much that she decided to return to the Mesilla Valley for an encore performance Friday, Oct. 14, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

Playing piano, Marina V will fill the theater with a voice that has been deemed “hauntingly beautiful” by the Los Angeles Times.

“My sound is melodic and passionate pop rock,” she said. “When I was growing up, I listened to a lot of Beatles and Russian folk music. The Beatles, their music is amazing, and Russian folk music is loaded with emotions and passion. Maybe the combination of both made its way into my sound.”

Born in Moscow, Russia, Marina Verenikina moved to the United States on a scholarship when she was 15 years old. While she had been singing she was a baby – “my mom said I was singing before I was talking,” she said – Marina V took the plunge in the professional music world when she was in college.

“It just felt right,” she said. “I sold my pickup truck as a freshman (in college) and bought my own keyboard.”

From there, she began writing and composing music and decided to move to Los Angeles and pursue the career full time. Since then, her career has blossomed, and she has performed at venues such as Hollywood, Calif., Kodak Theatre, the American Embassy in Moscow and countless clubs from Paris to Sydney.

She wrote the theme song for the film “Fallen Idol” and “Truth About Kerry” and has had her songs featured on television shows, including “Days of Our Lives” and “The Good Wife.”

Her focus now is her new album “My Star,” which was released in January.

“I wrote all of the songs except for a Guns N’ Roses cover and a Russian traditional song that I sing a cappella,” she said. “I recorded in the studio with the producer for the Gypsy Kings in Hollywood. I raised $30,000 from fans to make the album.”

When she comes to the Rio Grande Theatre, Marina said she promises to perform her original music and keep the audience entertained with funny snippets.

“Russian humor doesn’t always translate,” she said with a laugh, “but I promise to entertain and hopefully move the crowd. And they can expect a hug from me. I stay and hug everyone who wants

The oversized purple sculpture designed and built by Andrew Nagem in 1994 outside of Lion’s Park, 701 W. Picacho Ave., provides park goers a bit of shade and something to talk about. The project was part of the Advanced Education Program in the Las Cruces Public Schools that engaged students with an artist. More than 400 students from eight schools worked with the artist during school days over a 10-day period.

Kirstin Chavez, a 1991 graduate of NMSU, will be the artist-in-residence at NMSU for the 2011-12 academic year. Chavez is a noted mezzo-soprano and has traveled throughout the United States and internationally as the lead in the opera "Carmen."

Zombies, wenches and songbirds, oh my!

David Salcido
Art Happens

Variety is the name of the game this fall, and as the air grows crisp with winter's promise, your arts council comes through with a virtual cornucopia of events to start the season off right.

We begin by playing host to several valley organizations at the Rio Grande Theatre, with events sponsored by the Children's Reading Foundation of Doña Ana, the Mesilla Valley Jazz & Blues Society, KRWG and New Mexico State University Outdoor Rec's Adventure Arts Series. More information on these and all other events taking place at the Rio Grande Theatre – including free programming like the Literary Open Mic, the Howling Coyote Open Mic, Every Other

The Doña Ana Arts Council resurrects the Las Cruces Zombie Walk Saturday, Oct. 29, on Downtown Main Street.

Events sponsored by the arts council itself are also kicking into high gear, beginning with the return of Russian-born pop princess Marina V at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 14. With the release of her eighth album, "My Star" and her EP follow-up "Small Collection Of Interesting Songs," Marina V has had her songs appear in such diverse projects such as the daytime drama "Days Of Our Lives" and the feature film "Truth About Kerry." This is Marina's second time appearing at the Rio Grande Theatre, and if you missed her the first time around, you won't want to do it again. It's the best evening of entertainment $10 can buy.

Following fast on the heels of one songbird will be another when the Rio Grande Theatre welcomes back indie rocker Namoli Brennet for an amazingly low ticket price: free! Currently receiving rave reviews for her ninth independent release, "We Were Born To Rise" – called "sophisticated, witty, well-written and beautifully recorded" by the Tucson Weekly – Brennet will bring her raw, gritty and achingly poignant stylings to the Rio Grande Theatre for a very special Every Other Tuesday performance at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 18. Come catch Namoli and help fund her tour by picking up a copy of her latest release and maybe even catching up on the CDs you don't already have.

More than 150 vendors, along with medieval entertainment, will take over Young Park Nov. 5-6 for the Renaissance ArtsFaire.

Marina V will perform at the Rio Grande Theatre Friday, Oct. 14.

Toward the end of the month, the arts council will take it to the streets once again with the second annual Las Cruces Zombie Walk. Last year's event surprised many by digging up more than 100 zombies to lurch and weave along Main Street while hundreds of on-lookers snapped photos and cheered their favorite zombies on. This year's event promises to be even bigger and better than last year, with added draws including a zombie Zumba demonstration and a rockin' set by local party band, The Phuzz. There is no admission fee and prizes are awarded after the walk for "Most Original," "Most Disgusting" and "Best Couple or Group."

The fun starts at 5:45 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 29, when zombies will begin assembling to get their shamble on. It all ends at the Alameda House when the fourth annual Halloween Ball kicks off at 8 p.m. with a $15 admission and a chance to prove that the dead really can dance.

Ah, and what fall season would be complete without a visit to the arts council's largest and longest-running social event, The Renaissance ArtsFaire?

This year, the faire will be celebrating its 40th year of fun and frivolity Nov. 5-6 with the return of old favorites and a few new surprises to keep things interesting.

If you haven't been to the faire in a few years, you don't know what you're missing. Alongside such treasured favorites as the Ratcatcher, the Merry Court of Sherwood Oak and more than 150 booths featuring the works of artists and artisans from throughout the realm, are hunting demonstrations by the royal greyhounds, performances by La Cella Bella, the Gila Highlanders, C.W. Ayon and pleasant stops at the new Imperial Libation Garden for a little wench watching and tall tales. It's family fun that's thousands of years in the making, courtesy of your friendly neighborhood arts council.

Local play goes 'Online'

Social networking takes a sharp turn

By Natisha Hales
Las Cruces Bulletin

Local author, comedian – and now playwright – Alan Riehl's first-ever produced play "Online" premieres in Las Cruces Friday, Oct. 21, at Mikey's Place – A Workshop for the Arts, 3100 Harrelson St.

While the comedy is the first produced play for Riehl, the play also tells a story that has never been touched on before. Social networking is everywhere, but in "Online," the story takes a different turn than one would expect.

The opening scene starts out with Jason, the lead character, arguing with his soon-to-be ex-girlfriend Allison. Jason is ultimately a jerk who is sarcastic and hateful, and when the two break up, Allison becomes gay.

After hatefully telling his ex-girlfriend that he can be a better woman than she can, the story begins to unfold. Jason's friends convince him to, in fact, become a girl, but over the Internet.

"He learns that it's not easy to be a female online," Riehl said. "He goes through a lot of what other females go through online."

Despite adult themes that surround potentially serious issues and "no redeeming characters," the play is a comedy. A perfectly cast comedy at that.

A playwright has in mind exactly the type of person who would play each role, and Riehl said he was lucky enough to fill each position nearly to a T.

"Jason is the aggressive, kind of in-your-face guy who's not afraid to say anything. (Rafael Medina, who plays Jason) exerted the perfect energy for that part," Riehl said. "The director said that the pieces just fit together like a puzzle. It was really great casting. The director has done a really good job of putting everything together."

In addition to Medina, the cast includes Marissa Bond as Alison Anderson, the ex-girlfriend.

"Rafael and Marissa are boyfriend and girlfriend in real life, so their chemistry is priceless," Riehl said.

Along with being assistant director of "Online," Alex Wheeler plays the "perfect" Heather, Jason's psych major friend who plays along with Jason only for her benefit. Autumn Gieb is Amy, Jason's older sister who has total control of her 15-year marriage to Peter, played by Chris Wilkinson. Cody Dalton is Grant, Jason's "not-so-smart" friend who assists with the cruel joke.

The remaining cast members fill in the roles of other online characters. Jade Diaz is the voice of "Bunny Buns" and other online female roles; Mark Ross Edrys is the online character Johnny Rondo; and Frank Alvarado also lends his voice to male characters online.

They're all part of the fictional social networking site, Facespace. Since the play is mostly set in cyberspace, the set is minimal and all scenes take place in a bedroom or living room.

Georjina and Martha Nogal are stage managers and Don McCoy is production manager for the play.

For his first produced play, Riehl admitted there were some challenges, but for the most part, it has been an enjoyable experience to get him prepared for what lies ahead. It was help from the local theater community that helped prepared for the production of his play.

"I did six rewrites on my play," he said. "A group of theater actors read the play and they helped me with it, and they're all acknowledged in the play. Because of the fact I am new to the theater scene, I wanted the input of the pros, and they were extremely helpful."

Other organizations were helpful, he said, including sponsor Mikey's Place, MDC Computers, Dublin's Street Pub and Wild Horse Design Co.

Though he may take a break from playwrighting, the next step for Riehl, is writing the screenplay, which he said he'll get started on early next year.

"Online" runs through Sunday, Oct. 23. Tickets are $8 in advance or $10 at the door. For more information, visit www.mikeysplacem.com or call 640-3869.

Finding yourself amid chaos

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Based on a true event and starring a real non-actor, "Anita" is one of the most moving and vibrant films I have seen this year.

The film takes place in Buenos Aires in 1994. Anita is played by 37-year-old Alejandra Manzo who has Down syndrome, the genetic condition that was often referred to in our more ignorant and insensitive days as mental retardation. Thankfully, that term has been exiled by people who understand stigmas.

Anita is happy in her life, as long as her routine is strictly adhered to. She lives with a loving, supportive mother who runs a small shop in the city and she adores her older brother, who does not have Down syndrome and is completely unreliable. His well-meaning promises to Anita often are broken, something she takes to heart a little bit, but at the same time, she continues on with her life, which she appreciates in a subtle, understated way that most of us cannot relate to.

I hate to give away this part of the story, but I can't think of a way around it, so if you are not wanting what I consider to be a major "spoiler," just skip down a few paragraphs.

One day as Anita and her mother are walking to an appointment, a bomb explodes in the offices of the Argentine Israeli Mutual Association. This is the true portion of the story, as this attack killed nearly 100 people, in the country that has the largest Jewish population of any in South America.

Anita is knocked for a loop, but her mother is not as fortunate. Unable to find her mother and unable to understand what has happened, Anita is soon wandering the streets of the city, trying to find her way home.

She sort of knows her address, but not really. She knows what a telephone is, but is unsure as to how it works, and if she did, chances are, unless it was written down, she'd not know the number to call.

During her journey, Anita meets a number of people, some kind, some not so kind and some who are philosophical. These people all have one thing in common – they don't want Anita to be given to the "authorities," as they know she will be plopped into an institution.

Anita's main benefactors, helping her to clean up, feeding her and actually allowing for room and board in exchange for some simple tasks at the woman's business.

An alcoholic photographer, Ariel also plays a role in Anita's story, but it is Anita herself, using her wits, resources and common sense, who becomes her own benefactor as she wanders for days, relying on the kindness of strangers. She is patient, kind, loyal and obedient to a fault, especially in a slightly humorous scene when Anita is told to stay put, no matter what. The film is flecked with such breaches of quiet humor, and this allows it to have even more humanity, as it takes the edge off an often-precarious situation.

Manzo does a superior job in her role as Anita and director Marcos Carnevale matches that performance with a story that is believable and balanced, while leaving the opportunities to make it maudlin far behind.

This film is another of those small films that deserves a better chance and a bigger audience – you should be one of that number.

Jeff Berg celebrates his birthday this week. He'll gladly accept one-way first class airfare to Portland, Ore. jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com.

Playing with 'Green Fire'

Documentary follows work of Leopold

The CineMatinee for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15, is "Green Fire: Aldo Leopold and a Land Ethic for Our Time" (2011, 75 minutes, not rated, partially filmed in New Mexico).

The documentary film "Green Fire" explores conservationist Aldo Leopold's personal journey and reveals how his idea of a "land ethic" resonates today with people across the entire American landscape, from inner cities to the remotest wild lands.

The impact of his own gunshot from a rimrock in Arizona that killed a wolf changed Leopold's own thinking.

Join the Mesilla Valley Film Society as it trace Leopold's personal journey and follow the threads that connect to his legacy today.

The film provocatively examines Leopold's thinking, renewing his idea of a land ethic for a population facing 21st century ecological challenges. Leopold's biographer, conservation biologist Dr. Curt Meine, serves as the film's on-screen guide.

"Green Fire" describes the formation of Leopold's ideas, exploring how it later permeated through all arenas of conservation. The film challenges viewers to contemplate their own relationship with the land community.

The film uses photographs, correspondence, manuscripts and other archival documents from the voluminous Aldo Leopold Archives as well as historical film and contemporary full-color footage on location, including landscapes that influenced Leopold and that his ideas influenced.

"Green Fire" also features commentary and insight from some of today's most recognized and credible scholars and conservation leaders, including three of Aldo Leopold's children – Nina, Carl, and Estella Leopold – scholars, noted environmental writers, scientists, humanities experts, public policy leaders, business leaders and leaders of nonprofit groups inspired by Leopold.

This film is being shown with sponsorship from the Southwest Environmental Center and with support from the Silver City International Film Society and Keep Las Cruces Beautiful.

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the old West or anything in between – and "movies that missed us" – films that are notable but never had a lot of publicity.

The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment! At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico "connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state (nearly 500) or perhaps featuring a star/story from New Mexico talent – film festival-quality movies in an old adobe theater.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

Can a bagel increase your IQ?

Einstein bagels are pure genius

By Todd G. Dickson
Las Cruces Bulletin

This may come as a surprise to some, but there was a time when bagels weren't commonly found west of the Mississippi. Like a first crush, I'll never forget when a small sandwich shop opened its doors in the small town in Oregon when I was still in junior high – and when there were also still junior high schools.

The little sandwich shop was a revelation for me – not only for introducing me to pita sandwiches with sprouts instead of lettuce, that's where I had my first bagel, and I was hooked.

When I arrived to Las Cruces to attend New Mexico State University, however, the only bagels to be found were the frozen kind and they were dry and tough.

Over the years, all that changed. If you find yourself someplace that doesn't have a coffee shop with bagels, no worries – there's nary a supermarket anymore that doesn't have a bakery cranking out fresh bagels of several varieties.

During my years in Albuquerque, I stepped into an Einstein Bros. Bagels shop near the University of New Mexico. If that first sandwich shop bagel of my youth was a revelation, Einstein bagels were the epiphany.

Yes, Einstein wasn't the first to mix ingredients in the dough or heap on yummy toppings, but there is something different about the Einstein bagel. For starters, it has that chewy bread, but somehow it is also fluffier, more airy. When there is cheese atop, it's perfectly cooked, but not too crisp.

They even "kicked it up a notch" on the cream cheese schmear, adding sun-dried tomatoes to the usual flavor assortment of plain, onion and chive and smoked salmon. Although Einstein has a wide assortment of bagels – from the dessert-like chocolate chip or blueberry to the good-for-you whole wheat and good grains – there's only one Einstein bagel for this New Mexican. To me, the perfect Einstein bagel is the cheese and green chile with the sun-dried tomato schmear. If E=MC2 changed the world forever, this Einstein formula forever changed my idea of the perfect breakfast.

Needless to say, when I heard Einstein Bros. Bagel was coming to Las Cruces, I almost danced in the streets. It will even be located just a little further down Telshor Boulevard from the Bulletin offices, but has yet to materialize.

Fortune stepped in when Sodexo won the food contract at NMSU, and this fall there opened not one, but two mini-Einstein Bros. Bagel

Boston zoo takes local show

Endangered animal exhibit travels to New England

By Natisha Hales
Las Cruces Bulletin

Local artist Linda Miller, whose "Endangered Wildlife" exhibit premiered in Las Cruces, has donated her one-of-a-kind portraits to Zoo New England.

Miller, a snowbird who lives part-time in Las Cruces and the remainder of the year in New England, shared her exhibit – which includes 26 oil paintings of endangered animal species – with the Franklin Park Zoo as a major fundraiser. The magnitude of the show will expose her work to thousands of zoo supporters, and it will also spread awareness of the critical situation, which is the show's original purpose.

When the show opened at the Blue Gate Gallery in February 2010, the response was "heavy," said gallery owner Flo Hosa Dougherty. Against a black backdrop, the extreme close-ups of each animal were on display along with information about their critical condition from the International Union for Conservation of Nature Redlist of Threatened Species and other related organizations – 26 pairs of eyes staring right back at you.

Those eyes stared back at thousands more when it was on display in the zoo Oct. 1, 2, 8 and 9.

"I'm so delighted for her," Dougherty said. Not only will Miller donate her work, but Dougherty said Miller was invited to create work alongside a "talented ape" at the zoo.

The inspiration for the exhibit, according to Miller in an earlier interview, was found after a challenge to paint eyes. It was animal eyes that came to mind for Miller, and she discovered everything she had painted was on the endangered species list – the big horn sheep, grizzly bear, giant panda, Rothschild's giraffe, etc. They all had similar stories – habitats were destroyed, hunting, poaching, even in the United States.

"They're not all exotic jungle animals," Dougherty said. "Some of these are right here in the Southwest."

Miller helped bring attention to the issue and is satisfying her goal in donating the show to different wildlife organizations for them to use as fundraisers.

Las Cruces snowbird Linda Miller has donated work from her "Endangered Wildlife" exhibit to the Franklin Park Zoo in Boston.

New theater to be named after Medoffs

Honor recognizes 44-year contribution

By Julie Hughes

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

When New Mexico State University's Center for the Arts opens in fall 2012, its theater will have a familiar name to many in the Mesilla Valley.

The NMSU Board of Regents voted Monday, Oct. 10, to name the theater in honor of Mark and Stephanie Medoff.

"The Medoffs have made a lasting imprint on the arts in our region and it is fitting that we honor their dedication and talents," said NMSU President Barbara Couture. "NMSU's Department of Theatre Arts and the Creative Media Institute would not be what they are without Mark's perseverance and talent. He has made a difference to so many students whose lives he has touched."

The multi-phased Center for the Arts project is designed to consolidate NMSU's arts programs into one centralized location. Phase I, which is under construction now, is a three-story academic facility, about 59,000 square feet in size, at the southeast corner of University Avenue and Espina Street.

The building will house the 450-seat theater performance space to be named for the Medoffs, a 74-foot-high fly tower and full theater and dance support areas. The structure also will contain public space, shared classrooms and a home for the theater department. Phase I is scheduled for completion in November 2012.

Mark Medoff has played an important role in the growth of the theater arts program at NMSU since he arrived in 1966 to be an instructor in the Department of English. He co-founded the American Southwest Theatre Company with the late Bruce Streett in 1981 to facilitate bringing guest artists to campus to provide students and faculty with professional enrichment experiences.

"I was 26 when I arrived here," Medoff said. "I knew no one. I was going to stay a year. Forty-four years, three daughters and sons-in-law, and six grandchildren later, it's fair to say the vast majority of my friends and students passed through this city and university and helped to define me as a teacher and an artist. To be recognized as part of the NMSU legacy honors not only the Medoff family, but everyone who has touched our lives."

Mark and his wife, Stephanie, also have generously donated nearly half a million dollars to NMSU to establish endowments for student scholarships and support other programs across campus, most recently a generous gift of land to support the construction of the Center for the Arts.

Beyond his monetary generosity, it has been Medoff's active mentorship of students while they were enrolled at NMSU and continuing as they went forward to pursue professional careers that has made a lasting impact on the many students who studied here during his more than 20-year tenure, as well as his passion for the theater arts department as a whole and the newly formed Creative Media Institute, for which he serves as artistic director, that would be recognized with this naming honor, said Dennis Prescott, president of the NMSU Foundation, who presented the recommendation to the regents.

"Mark is above all a man of honor and commitment. He has been pressured many times over the past 40 years to leave here for the more visible show business venues of New York and Los Angeles or for the greener pastures of larger, richer universities. But he made a commitment in his heart to me, to our children, and to Las Cruces and New Mexico State University, and what is in his heart always wins out in the end," said Stephanie Medoff.

Stephanie and Mark Medoff will be recognized for their generosity to New Mexico State University and the community by naming the NMSU Center for the Arts in their honor.

College of Arts and Sciences Dean Christa Slaton nominated the Medoffs for the honor, saying, "As the Department of Theatre Arts prepares to relocate in the new Center for the Arts, it would be very appropriate for their performance space to carry the name of one of the visionaries who put the department on the path to excellence."

Medoff was instrumental in the current NMSU theater being re-named for one of his mentors, Hershel Zohn.

"Hershel encouraged me to write for the theater and then produced my first full-length play in 1968," Medoff said. "I got to introduce Hershel to a full house on the night his name went officially on that building. Were he here, Hershel would know the part he played in the current moment in NMSU history. We look forward to entering the Mark and Stephanie Medoff Theatre in the not too distant future. And, of course, I look forward to the opportunity to try the place out."

Medoff has written more than 28 plays and 12 screenplays. An early success was "When You Comin' Back, Red Rider?" and in 1980 he received a Tony Award for his Broadway hit "Children of a Lesser God." Medoff was named a Guggenheim Fellow (1974) and a Fellow of the College of Fellows of the American Theatre (1999). He is the recipient of numerous awards including the Drama Desk Award (1974 and 1980), the John Gassner Playwriting Award (1974), the Obie Award for Distinguished Playwriting (1974) and the Kennedy Center Medallion for Excellence in Artistic Education and Artistic Achievement (2006). He also has directed six movies and more than 24 plays and musicals, many of which were works by some of his protégés.

Medoff said two of his proudest accomplishments are his 1974 Westhafer Award for Excellence in Creative Activity, NMSU's highest faculty honor and his 1980 Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts, the State of New Mexico Lifetime Achievement. During his acceptance speech he said, "Though not born in New Mexico, I am a New Mexican."

'Real Steel' is every little boys' dream come true

Review by Amanda Green
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

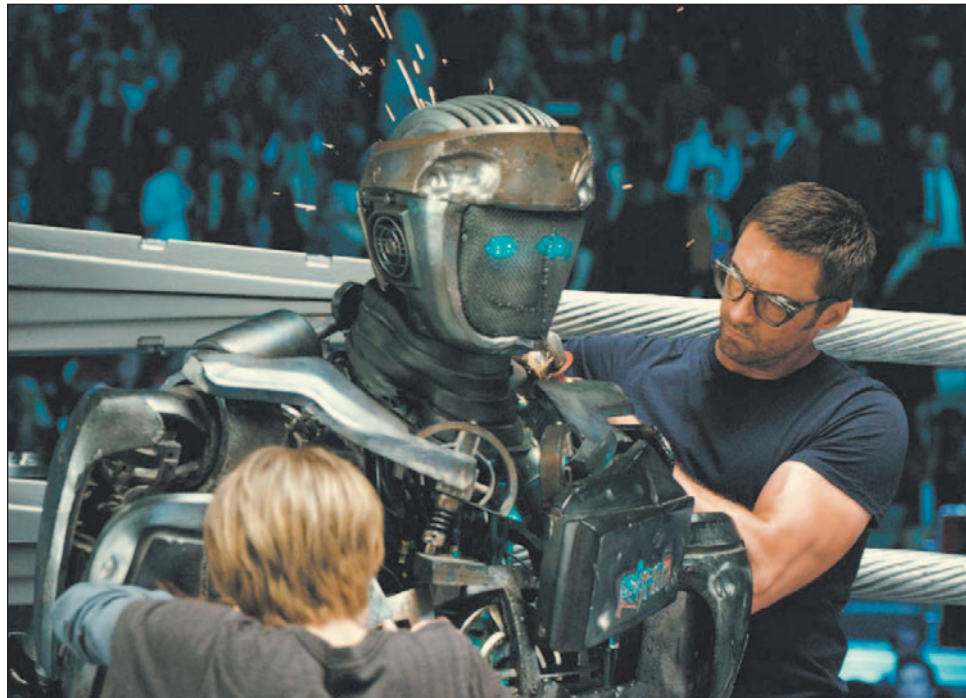

"Real Steel," an action thriller set in the near future, explores a world where the sport of boxing has been taken over by giant, battling robots.

Charlie Kenton (Hugh Jackman) is a washed-up fighter who lost his career when human boxing was no longer profitable. Instead, the show falls on remote-controlled giant, 2,000-pound, 7-foot-tall steel robots that fight each other.

A small-time fight promoter, Charlie struggles to make a buck off of the robots he pieces together with scrap metal, entering them in underground fight clubs. He hits rock bottom and reluctantly becomes partners with his estranged, 11-year-old son Max (Dakota Goyo). They team up to build and train their next robot champion.

With the old-fashioned case of, "Dad, can I keep him?," Max decides that a sparring robot named Atom, aged and without real fighting skill, is their best bet. Soon, as Atom begins tearing through the competition, Charlie begins to realize this is his last shot at a comeback – and a hefty paycheck.

The movie invites you to follow the father-son team through the trials and tribulations of fighting Atom against larger, more brutal bots. The plot is predictable – a typical underdog story that left me rooting mostly for Max instead of the robot. The film's saving grace was Goyo's dance moves, which, of course, he taught the robot.

The father-son relationship is a little dry, mostly due to Jackman's inability to convince us he cares for his son. Goyo shoulders the great surprise of this movie and most of the acting weight. He is delightfully stubborn and just cute enough that we still care. Had they made him 14 instead of 11? I doubt we'd have cared at all.

Charlie's strained relationship with Bailey Tallet (Evangeline Lilly), the daughter of his boxing mentor, is obvious and takes away from the action. Lilly pulls off the strong but vulnerable role, but we've seen this character before. "Lost," anyone?

Despite the David-and-Goliath premise and the obvious ending, the special effects and the buckets of money producers threw into this film salvaged it. It was cheap entertainment that has relied on the industry's ability to use computer graphics to convince us the robots are real.

In the spirit of "Rocky," Atom, with his name painted red white and blue, gets his shot at the biggest, baddest, foreign-owned robot around. What you end up with is "Transformers" without the explosives-lover Michael Bay or the train wreck that is Megan Fox's acting career.

Going green and getting healthy

By Naomi Fertman
College of Health and Social Services

As residents of Las Cruces, we are residents of the desert. At times, it can be easy to forget that the resources we do have, especially water, are limited.

It may seem daunting when trying to balance the many tasks of our daily lives, to take the time to be environmentally conscious.

As the fall weather sets in, this is the perfect time of year to think about the simple things we can do to make a positive impact on our surroundings.

Additionally, most of the things we do to benefit the environment have personal health benefits and usually save us money in the long run. Here are a few easy things that anyone can do to make a positive impact.

Consider adding them all, or just a few, to your daily life. Spending the extra time now will be worth the pay off for the environment and as an individual.

Travel by bike. As the change in weather makes for beautiful temperatures, consider leaving your car at home and commuting by bicycle. Most car trips the average family makes are within a two-mile radius of the family's home, a distance that is easily bike-able. Riding your bike eliminates car emissions, is great exercise and will quickly save you money as you spend less on gas each week.

Plant a fall garden or consider an early spring garden. This is the perfect time of year to put in seeds and starters for your fall garden. Plants such as greens, squash, herbs and beans grow well in the fall. Growing your own food is beneficial for the soil, allowing you to control the amount of pesticides you put into your system and eliminates trips to the grocery store for produce (subsequently eliminating unpleasant car emissions.) Growing your own food may motivate you to eat the food which may help you increase the number of vegetable servings you intake each day.

Hang your clothes out to dry instead of using a dryer. The average family spends about 85 dollars a year to pay for either the electricity or gas that runs their clothes dryer. Although this may not seem like much, clothes dryers have the second-highest energy usage of any household appliance. So consider

Hitting the streets for Komen

Salgado travels to Philadelphia for walk

By Rachel Christiansen
Las Cruces Bulletin

The City of Brotherly Love will soon receive a visit from one dedicated teacher from the City of the Crosses to participate in a 60-mile walk for the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure Foundation.

Las Cruces High School teacher Kristi Salgado started small and has trained her way up to be able to endure the three-day long event in Philadelphia Oct. 14-16, walking an average of 20 miles per day.

"I've just been walking and walking and walking. I started in May, very out of shape only making it about 10 miles a week. Now, I walk around 14 miles per day," Salgado said.

Hitting the neighborhood and the gym to train mostly takes up all of her free time on evenings and weekends, Salgado says, but she's still going strong.

Las Cruces Bulletin

Residents of southern New Mexico have been raising the bar on standards for their healthcare providers, and the staff of MountainView Regional Medical Center is determined to meet these demands.

After months of hard work and dedication from the cardio team of doctors, nurses and administration, MountainView has been granted full accreditation by the society of Chest Pain Centers (SCPC), a designation held by only 12 percent of hospitals in the United States.

"This is momentous not only for our hospitals and patients, but the community as well," said Mountain View CEO Denten Park.

Not an easy task by any means, gaining accreditation requires dedication to meet stringent criteria and onsite evaluations, but according to Park, well worth it.

"Heart disease is still the No. 1 cause of death in America, especially for women, and we want people who live in Las Cruces and surrounding areas to have a place to go," Park said.

Staph infections are preventable

Tips to keep you and your family healthy

A recent outbreak of the MRSA bacterium found in eight detainees of the Doña Ana County Detention Center has prompted renewed attention to the common staph infection.

MRSA is a strain of the staph.aureus bacteria, which is immune to antibiotics and can cause more serious symptoms.

The U.S. Department of Health estimates that one in four carry the staph bacteria on skin or in nasal passages that usually does not cause illness or infection.

Staph infections can occur if the bacteria enters a person's body through cuts or sores, and can cause minor skin irritations such as pimples.

MRSA, or methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus, is a strain of the staph bacteria that is resistant to most antibiotics and can cause more serious complications to the heart, lungs, blood or bone.

Staph infections occur most often in people who have shared equipment or personal items with others such as athletes and members of the military.

The more serious staph infections are more common in people with weak immune systems, usually in hospitals or long-term care facilities.

PubMed Health.com suggests the following tips to prevent the spread of the staph bacteria:

- Keep your hands clean by washing them thoroughly with soap and water or using an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.
- Keep cuts and scrapes clean and covered with a bandage until they heal.
- Avoid contact with other people's wounds or bandages.
- Avoid sharing personal items such as towels or razors.

Some simple steps for athletes include:

- Cover all wounds with a clean bandage, and avoid contact with soiled bandages from other people.
- Clean your hands before and after playing sports. Shower right after exercising and do not share soap or towels with other people.
- If you share sporting equipment, clean it first with antiseptic solution and then use clothing or a towel between your skin and the equipment.
- Avoid common whirlpools or saunas if another participant has an open sore. Always use clothing or a towel as a barrier.

Symptoms of the severe MRSA infections can include chest pain, chills, cough, fatigue, fever, headache, muscle aches, rash and shortness of breath.

If you think you may have a MRSA infection, do not try to treat the infection yourself. A qualified doctor will take appropriate tests and prescribe corresponding medications.

their battle against breast cancer.

"My struggle to get in shape and finish this thing is nothing compared to the fight they have dealt with," Salgado said.

The hardest part, Salgado added, is not being in the city to train with the rest of her team, but the Komen foundation has been helpful in providing training suggestions and schedules to be on track with what it takes to finish.

Together with a team composed of nine other women, each of whom are required to raise $2,300 in order to participate, Salgado's team "Simply the Breast" has already raised almost $25,000 to go toward the Komen Foundation.

Surrounded by a support network of family, friends, co-workers and students, Salgado has not had to do it alone.

With school groups such as the Key Club, La Mesa and the Rotary International pulling together resources from car washes and ribbon-sellings, Salgado's part of the donation has almost been met, and she has until one month after the race to finalize it.

Salgado said she was surprised at the amount of donations from co-workers, since they have seen pay reductions and cutbacks across the board.

"It really shows people will always want to help a good cause," Salgado said.

All of the funds raised benefit the foundation, and Salgado said it's been an "awesome feeling" to see such a positive reaction.

"I think the full weight of it hasn't really hit me yet, it probably won't until I'm actually there," Salgado said.

With Susan G. Komen walks in cities nationwide, Salgado said she chose Philadelphia at the urging of a childhood friend who now lives in the city.

The walk, which is woven through the city by way of college campuses, a zoo and rural neighborhoods, is shaped in the familiar ribbon design of the breast cancer awareness campaigns.

Hardly a "walk in the park," participants are required to camp each night of their stay in designated camping areas in nothing more than two person tents.

Unfazed, Salgado said, "I've never been to Philadelphia so this will be a good chance to get a walking tour of the city. I've heard it's beautiful."

The walk, even though a part of the "Race for the Cure" campaign, is not a race at all.

It is a non-competitive event in which participants are not allowed to run, in which

Her goal, Salgado said, in addition to simply "crossing the finish line," is to wear a different T-shirt each day of the walk honoring different women who have died in the face of breast cancer.

hanging a clothesline in your back yard. This will reduce your energy usage and save some money.

Turn off the TV, shut down the computer and go outside to enjoy some fall activities. The cool days of fall are perfect for being outside. Spend a morning strolling through the Farmers Market, hike Baylor Pass or go get lost in the Corn Maze. Each of these activities is beneficial to your physical health and uses minimal resources (which saves you money in the long run).

So the next time you go to turn on the TV, put your clothes in the dryer, or get in your car to drive that mile to the grocery store, consider your options. By taking care of the planet you also take care of yourself and your wallet, and isn't that worth an extra few minutes?

Naomi Fertman is a Master of Public Health student in the New Mexico State University College of Health and Social Services. This article is part of a series written by students in Dr. Cynthia Kratzke's "Techniques of Health Communication" class.

Accreditation

The leading cardiology program manager, Sam Bustillos, reported that MountainView's average response time for a heart attack is 43 minutes, less than half of the national average of 90 minutes.

In addition to continuing its reputation of being a leader in cardiac care, MountainView has officially embarked on work to gain a primary stroke care center accreditation from the Joint Commission.

Bustillos, also the stroke coordinator, said work began on the project a mere two days after accreditation was granted for the chest pain center, and it was "two days too long."

The news of advancing the hospital's stroke treatment program comes as welcome news for local stroke survivors, and their families, who have struggled firsthand with the lack of care previously available in this part of the state.

Following a stroke experience in 2008, Las Cruces residents Dave and Judy Bess were frightened as well as frustrated by the medical attention they received locally. They said it caused them to question their wisdom about moving to southern New Mexico for retirement.

Traveling to their home state of Michigan shortly after Dave's stroke, they were told by one of the top stroke researchers in the state the care they received in Las Cruces was consistent with practices that were "20 years old."

Dave Bess was fortunate.

An avid runner and bicyclist, he was essentially able to cure himself during his emergency room visit because of the built-up tPA, a clot busting protein, in his system.

Most stroke victims are not so lucky, and, if they survive, many suffer a wide range of long-term physical and mental disabilities that take years of physical therapy to overcome.

"It's not something we're taking lightly, to become the first accredited stroke program in southern New Mexico," Bustillos said.

According to the New Mexico Department of Health, Doña Ana County sees about one stroke patient per day, making it a very urgent health care need in the state.

Spurred by their experience, Judy and Dave Bess began working to help others avoid the scare they endured. They became active in the American Heart & Stroke Association, (AHA/ASA) and pursued avenues with government agencies at all levels to advance New Mexico's stroke treatment programs.

"We wanted to be part of fixing this big problem in New Mexico, and not leaving our friends and neighbors to learn the hard way from personal experience as we had," Judy Bess said.

On Sept. 29, the Besses were invited to kick off MountainView Regional Medical Center's announcement to begin work on becoming a primary stroke care center, which they "enthusiastically and proudly participated in."

"We are thrilled beyond belief that finally after three years of imploring people to do something for the community, (Mountain View) has a leadership team unlike anything the city has ever seen," Dave Bess said.

MountainView now has a neurosurgeon on call 24 hours a day, and instead of flying stroke victims to El Paso or Albuquerque during crucial minutes of their lives, appropriate care for most stroke victims can be given right here in Las Cruces.

Best-seller comes back to Calvary Baptist luncheon

Best-selling Christian author Allison Haggood Pittman visits Calvary Baptist Church during a women's luncheon Tuesday, Oct. 11, to discuss her latest book.

Pittman explains the inspiration for her character Nathan Fox in "For Time and Eternity," the first in her Sister Wife Series, which she described as "the hardest book I've ever written."

RoriLynn Campbell introduces her sister to the podium. Growing up, Campbell said Pittman had a wild imagination that included various stories and a few imaginary friends.

After the talk, guests greet Pittman and look over a few of the seven books she has written throughout her career.

Style, energy efficiency at an affordable price

Recently completed home a new venture for Veloz Homes

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Since 2000, Veloz Homes has provided the Las Cruces area with affordably priced homes. Now, the company is introducing a new twist to its product.

Located at 4248 Canterra Arc, the model home for the new "BellaSpazio" collection, completed two weeks ago, showcases the company's new dedication to style, detail and efficiency in the $189,999 to $270,000 price range.

"We have been very good at hitting the price point in the $130,000 to $200,000 range," said Billie Haynie, sales manager for Veloz Homes. "We hadn't attracted the luxury homebuyers because of the market. We're trying to get back into that market. We've had people come through our models who have wanted larger homes with more amenities."

Listening to that request, Haynie said Veloz Homes President has used inspiration from his travels around the country to create a line of homes that aren't common.

"We're doing so many things that are different than a typical Veloz home," Haynie said. "The homes have all of these pretty things. It's pretty without having to spend too much."

As guests drive through the Del Prado neighborhood, they'll come to the 2,239-square-foot home located on a corner lot.

"It's called the BellaSpazio Collection, which means 'pretty spaces,'" Haynie said. "We made sure it was a unique space inside and out. If you look, the side of the home is as pretty as the front. We didn't just focus on the front."

Designed in a Spanish colonial style, including a combination pitched and flat roof, the home is surrounded by rock landscaping of varying colors, which complements the rock detailing on its façade.

Through the front door, guests are greeted by tile flooring and a chandelier hanging from the groin ceiling.

To the left is a study area, which can also double as an at-home office. Lined with wood flooring, the room includes a checkered pattern on the ceiling. The matching dark features on the floor and ceiling pop against the light tan walls.

Beyond the entrance to the right is the formal dining room. Colored a bright turquoise, the tray ceiling is painted two tones of tan. The room has a recess with spot lighting for a hutch, or other furniture item.

"This room can be converted into a media room," Haynie said.

The hall, speckled in lighted nichos, leads to the open living room-kitchen area.

"It's an open space, but we've defined the space with varying ceiling heights," she said.

The living room, which includes an accent wall painted in the same vibrant turquoise, features a gas fireplace set in a wall of rock. Above this is an area for a flat screen TV. An interesting detail, Haynie said all of the wires and components for the entertainment center are located in a closet in a bedroom on the other side of the wall.

"Nothing is sitting out," she said. "There isn't any clutter."

A tech desk and informal dining area separate the living room from the kitchen. Juparana Bordeaux granite from Brazil, which is also found in the two bathrooms, lines the kitchen countertops and surrounds the granite-composite sink.

Beside the kitchen is the master suite. The relaxing atmosphere includes the same detailing as the rest of the home, such as the accent colors and unique ceiling treatment that includes rope lighting to give the space a soft glow, Haynie said.

The bathroom of the master suite continues that sense of comfort.

"It's a spa-like bathroom," Haynie said.

Consisting of his-and-her sinks as well as an island bathtub drenched in tile, the room also features a separate shower as well as a walk-in closet.

The other side of the home includes the two guest bedrooms as well as a full bath. An interesting design feature, Haynie said the bathroom includes a large walk-in shower rather than a bathtub.

"More people are asking for this," she said. "It's becoming really popular."

Back at the living room, 8-foot sliding glass doors lead to the covered patio. Beside the covered patio, which over looks the flagstone and rock-covered backyard, is the outdoor living area.

A new feature for the company, the enclosed space includes a fireplace and protects visitors from the elements so it can be enjoyed year-round, Haynie said.

The three-bedroom home includes several accent walls of turquoise and varying shades of tan to make it pop.

While the home's style makes it pop, its efficiency is also an important feature. Haynie said Veloz Homes can build homes that are to – or even beyond – Energy Star standards.

"This home was built with a staggered 2-by-4 construction," she said, adding that the building technique is more efficient because it allows for the blown-in Fiberglas to completely fill the cavities. "It makes the home very insulated."

Featuring a Home Energy Rating of 60, the residence uses 40 percent less energy than that built to current building codes and 25 percent less than that built to Energy Star standards.

Haynie said the collection comes in three styles and homeowners can choose a variety of layouts and design elements.

"We have very accommodating floor plans," she said. "I think this will spark people's imagination."

Advanced framing

You won't be spooked by this skeleton

Miles Dyson
Living Green

Wood lumber framing is the skeleton for most homes.

Wood is one of the least expensive and most renewable materials used in construction. For this reason, the majority of homes in southern New Mexico and the United States are built using traditional wood "stick frame" construction techniques.

Prompted by increased energy costs and lumber shortages in the 1970s, the National Association of Home Builder's Research Foundation conducted studies to identify what wood frame structural configuration was necessary to maintain superior strength and allow the maximum insulation in wall cavities to improve energy efficiency. The result was called "optimal value engineering" (OVE).

Optimum value engineering – or simply "advanced framing" – has two main benefits. No. 1, it eliminates framing components that serve no structural purpose, this reduces waste as well as unnecessary costs for the buyer. No. 2, it makes more room for insulation and limits hot or cold spots, making the house more comfortable and less expensive to heat and cool.

The insulating value of Fiberglas, cellulose, spray foam or cotton batting materials is much greater than the adjacent wood framing. A wall described as R-19 will only have the rated insulating value in the space between the wall studs. The R-value at the point in the wall where there is no space for insulation is only about R-6 or 7 (at the stud). Additional or unnecessary wood framing decreases the insulating performance of any wall system. A traditional framed (16-inch on center) 2-by-6 wall with R-19 insulation will have an overall thermal performance of only about R-13.

An OVE wall with studs spaced at 24-inch on center can improve cumulative wall system insulating performance to R-18. This means a builder can net almost a 30 percent improvement in wall system performance by adopting advanced framing techniques.

OVE, advanced framing practices can include:

- Walls framed with support studs on 24-inch centers rather than on 16-inch centers
- Corners made from two studs rather than four (allows for insulation at house corners - standard framing leaves gaps with no insulation)
- Headers sized according to the load they actually carry.
- Roofs built with engineered trusses rather than framed conventionally on site
- Floors framed with smaller/stronger laminated I-joists rather than dimensional sawn lumber
- Ladder blocking for partition wall intersections
- Stacked loads from trusses down to the foundation – alignment of truss loads over wall framing maintains structural strength with fewer wall studs
- Structural insulated sheathing can replace

OVE features in this Veloz Energy Star home in Del Prado include offset 2-by-4 framing and engineered and insulated headers.

conventional plywood or oriented strand board (OSB) used for exterior sheathing

- Variations include offset 2-by-4 framing on 2-by-6 plates – this allows space for insulation at each stud providing a thermal break between the interior and exterior.

These Advanced Framing or OVE practices are quietly being integrated as a new standard of home construction in our area. Most framing contractors have begun to use at least some of these recognized OVE features. Builders certifying homes with Energy Star, Build Green New Mexico or LEED for Homes work with framers to maximize the benefits of smart framing. The kicker is, you won't know if your new home has this feature unless you ask about it.

OVE framing can't be seen after insulation and drywall are installed. Homes with a Home Energy Rating Index completed during the construction process have the type of wall framing and the amount of insulation installed described and documented by an independent third-party inspector.

Don't be haunted by high-energy costs in your next new home. Learn about advanced and OVE framing and make sure this skeleton feature is working for you.

Chef Johnny Vee brings Italy to Mesilla Valley

Cooking classes held at Kitchen Kraft on local, foreign culinary delights

By Amanda Green
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Sometimes I wish I had an Italian aunt, who just showed up, made enough food for an army and promptly returned to her villa in Tuscany.

Chef John Vollertsen, better known as Johnny Vee, might not resemble such a relative, but you wouldn't know it from the sights and smells wafting through the Kitchen Kraft Home store Saturday, Oct 8.

Usually filled with lighting fixtures and cabinetry and the smell of wax candles or furniture varnish, the people at Kitchen Kraft have decided to incorporate cooking classes into their events, bringing food and people into the beautiful, multi-purpose kitchens they have created.

They turned to Southwestern chef Vee, who is responsible for Las Cosas Kitchen Shoppe. He has been an instructor at the Las Cosas Cooking School for 12 years in Santa Fe.

His cooking and restaurant management career has taken him from New York City to Australia, New Zealand and back again. Looking to bring flavor back to the Mesilla Valley, Vee has created a series of hands-on cooking classes unlike any other.

"I'm obsessed with pasta," said attendee Nicole Mitchell, who brought her amateur sous chef and husband, Michael, to the class. "When my 3-year-old told me he was bored of my cooking, I knew it was time to learn some new tricks."

Vee brings flavor and fire to the group, with sharp-edged humor, and an incredible deal of patience for newly blossoming chefs. A group of 12 gathered this past Saturday to master Italian cooking.

A diverse group of age and cooking skill, the group worked on a full menu of Italian delights. Everything was made from scratch, including delicious Focaccia bread, hand-rolled tortellini and a rich crème de menthe tiramisu that left attendees feeling full and accomplished.

"I love Italian food, and you can make so much of it," said cooking enthusiast Barbara Rose. "It's like, come on over for dinner, and bring the whole neighborhood."

Vee's simple, easy to follow instructions, combined with his great passion for the cuisine turned a mottled dozen into honorary Italians. Other cooking topics throughout the week included Chili Fest – Green vs. Red, America's Food Truck Cuisine and a Sauce Master Class. Vee custom tailors each lesson around a theme, or specific cuisine so attendees could choose which ones most appeal to them and their kitchens.

"I always tell people to shop locally," said Vee of the ingredients that go into any recipe. "The flavors, the textures of produce and spices grown together, in the same climate, just blend better."

Classes are $75 a person, and require pre-registration at Kitchen Kraft. They include a hands-on training and sampling. Everyone knows that the best part about cooking is the eating.

Vee will be putting on another series of classes, beginning early December, to include some holiday themes. Visit www.lascosascooking.com for more information and a schedule of events.

Keeping cool with Elastek

Company has roof coating in NM and west Texas covered

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

The pounding heat of the Southwestern sun can do a lot of damage – just ask your roof. Since 2009, Elastek has helped prolong the lifespan and energy efficiency of roofs throughout west Texas and New Mexico with its cool roof systems.

Founded 21 years ago in Tucson, Ariz., Elastek moved into the region to fill a void it saw in the area's home and construction market, said Vincent Martinez, area sales and technical representative for the company.

"New Mexico and west Texas were underserved," he said, adding that the region offers geographical challenges because the major cities are so spread out. "I saw potential in the territory and in the industry."

Having spent 28 years in the construction industry in one form or another, Martinez said he joined Elastek because he thought it was a progressive company, and he was eager to serve the Southwest, where he was originally from.

"They saw what the industry was doing and decided to branch out and expand," he said, adding that Elastek served Arizona and California.

Since branching out, Martinez said the company has seen much success and continued growth.

"Coatings are the fastest growing segment of the roofing industry," he said. "People are starting to realize that they don't have to replace their roofs."

Martinez explained that replacing a roof is a complicated process that can be very costly, while a cool-roof system is relatively simple.

"It's practical," he said.

Conducted on already-established roofs, Martinez said the coating is applied after the surface has been properly cleaned and prepped. The substance isn't a paint, but rather a liquid-applied membrane that forms a sheet of plastic, he said.

Elastek has taught contractors throughout New Mexico and west Texas how to apply its cool roof, an energy-efficient material, since 2009.

While there are various white-roof coating systems available, Martinez said what makes Elastek stand out is its choice of resins, which influence the longevity of the product by making it more resistant to UV degradation.

"It's all about the resins," he said. "A lot of manufacturers put in fillers."

"Ours is very resistant to UV rays. UV degradation is a roof's worst enemy."

Martinez explained that there are two key characteristics of a cool roof: its reflectivity – how much heat and light are bounced back into the atmosphere – and emissivity – the ability to release heat.

"It doesn't hold the heat in," he said, adding that the roofs will be about 20 degrees cooler than before.

Applicable on flat and low-slope roofs, Martinez said he has conducted mostly commercial projects in El Paso while installing the system on both residential and commercial buildings in Las Cruces.

"It's been fun because everywhere I go everyone is eager to learn about (cool roofs)," he said. "There has been an extreme amount of growth here. When the company first came to the market here, we didn't know how fast it would grow."

Traveling all over New Mexico and west Texas, Martinez said he has conducted projects with several entities, including New Mexico State University, University of Texas-El Paso, the Albuquerque Museum of Natural History, Los Alamos National Laboratories and the cities of Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Las Cruces.

Working not only with roofing and general contractors, Martinez said he also calls on property managers and maintenance, architects and engineers.

"Everyone wants to know about it," he said, adding that the product is economical, energy efficient and environmentally friendly.

While there are a few contractors Martinez said he works closely with in Las Cruces, he added that homeowners could do their own roof coating application, if desired.

"Tucson has more coated roofs per capita than anywhere else, and everyone does it themselves," Martinez said. "It can be a do-it-yourself project with the proper research and education."

Established as a family-owned operation, Martinez said the original owners recently sold Elastek to Illinois Tool Work (ITW), a worldwide manufacturing company with a diverse product line.

"It was time for the company to grow, and ITW realized its potential," Martinez said. "The Elastek brand will go around the country, not just regionally."

Through this, the company has merged with ER Systems out of Minnesota and Pacific Polymers in California.

"We're getting into waterproofing membranes and sealants," he said, adding that waterproofing is conducted to an entire building. "We're taking all three brands nationally. It will kick off in July. The future of Elastek is very exciting."

With new products currently being tested and the industry constantly evolving, Martinez said he looks forward to meeting even more people interested in the green roofing material.

"I get to meet people from all walks of life," he said. "I enjoy educating people and talking to people."

Setting goals and drawing floor plans can help create a beautiful, complete room

Maureen Villmer
Practical Design

Having a clear vision of what your goals are in your next decorating project will help you to accomplish exactly what you want.

You know the old saying "look before you leap"? The true meaning of that in decorating is to prepare yourself before you begin. Careful planning and a clear vision of what you're trying to achieve will ensure that your next decorating project will be a success.

It's so easy to jump into a project because you want immediate gratification. But I would encourage you to first write down what you're trying to achieve.

Make a list of goals to be achieved and the scope of the work that you're going to do. For example, you might write, "decorate the bathroom area by Nov. 1." You may be thinking that the goal is simply to make the room look as beautiful as possible, but you really need to dig a little deeper: Is your project tied to an all-over improvement plan; is it just a quick fix; will the project increase the value of your home; are you giving your room a partial or complete makeover? You get the idea.

Take your time and really make an effort to determine why you're doing this home decorating project and what you hope to achieve. It's really critical to complete this first step before you move on to another.

You need a budget before you can go much farther. How much will it cost to turn your decorating ideas into a reality? To create a budget you need to list the cost of materials and services in as much detail as possible. Contact craftsmen in your area for the cost of services such as painting, plumbing and electrical work. Once you have put together your totals, add 10 to 20 percent as a contingency to cover unexpected costs. Can you live with the final dollar amount? If not, you'll have to decide what to cut or to make changes in.

Find your decorating style. Knowing your decorating style will make it easier for you to identify furniture and accessories that will fit well together and work for you. Are you a traditional, casual or contemporary person? Or, are you a mix of more than one of them? That style is called eclectic. Eclectic people occasionally rebel against conventional decorating rules. I would define my own decorating as eclectic – mostly because I love every style and want to use them together.

Another thing that most people don't do is to create a floor plan. Using a pencil and graph paper, make a drawing that represents the length and width of your room. Be sure to locate windows and doors and any other architectural elements. Actually draw shapes to represent your sofa, chairs, tables, bed, etc., to make sure everything fits. Buying too much furniture that won't fit into your space is a costly mistake. Planning ahead to know it will fit is your best bet.

Most rooms have an architectural focal point built-in (fireplace, bookcases, or a window with a view). If, however, your room is focal-point-challenged, you'll need to create a focal point. This isn't difficult to do. It can be a large armoire, a painting or a decorative rug. The key is to remember that you need to identify that focal point and work with it. It will also make your decorating easier because you'll arrange your conversation area so it will naturally flow from it to the focal point.

Probably of no big surprise to you is that creativity and imagination are essential to bringing life to your decorating project. If you feel you are challenged in that area, seek out an interior designer to work with or look at online pictures, decorating magazines or books for your ideas. Many times my first assignment to new clients is to find pictures of things they like so we know how to define their style and taste.

Have fun in finding things you love and making your space your own. The best compliment I receive as a designer is that the room or house looks exactly like the owner and not me.

Colander uses outside the kitchen

Sieve has a range of applications that don't involve pasta

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Whether a miner enthusiastically panning for gold or a bartender straining a signature drink, a sieve is a handy tool to keep around.

Also known as a sifter, a sieve simply separates desirable elements from unwanted materials, such as a solid from a liquid. The tool consists of some sort of mesh or perforated material held together by a band.

While sieves are used for a variety of applications, the most common is cooking. In the kitchen, there are several types of sieves, such as the flour sifter used to aerate the fine powder, cocktail strainer used to chill mixed drinks while they're being prepared and the mesh strainer used to declump foods.

Probably the most well-known type of cooking sieve, however, is the colander. This bowl-shaped tool is used to strain food when cooking. Especially popular for pasta, the holes in the contraption allow water to fall away.

Available in plastic and metal varieties, the colander is a whiz in the kitchen – as well as in other rooms in the house.

1. Reduce grease splatter: The next time you're frying up your favorite dish, help keep the mess and pain of spitting grease with a colander. Simply place it upside down over the fry pan. This will allow the heat to be released while containing the majority of the grease.

2. Scoop out bathtub toys: After your toddler enjoys bath time, next comes the task of removing all of the toys that have fallen to the bottom of the tub before the water can be drained. Be sure to save those rubber duckies and G.I. Joes from becoming washed away or lodged in the drain by scooping them out with a colander. The water will pass through the holes and the toys will be safe.

3. Store berries: While keeping your berries in the plastic container they come in seems to be the most likely storage choice, it might not be the best. The fruit will stay fresh better when air can circulate around it, a task that might not be capable with the plastic vessels. Next time, try storing your berries in a colander. The holes in the bowl will let air circulate through.

4. Create a craft template: Drawing the perfect circle can be a daunting task, the results of which usually end up more oblong than round. The next time you're charged with such a feat, get help from a colander. Just place it upside down on your paper, trace and then cut out. It will be easier than trying repeatedly to do it freehand.

5. Stop bugs: An outdoor picnic can quickly turn into a bug-covered mess. Stop those unwelcome guests from feasting on your delights by keeping them covered with a colander. Just place it over your dish upside down. The flies will be kept out and picnic guests will have no problem getting to the food.

6. Make a holiday display: The holidays are quickly approaching and it will soon be time to fill your home with decorative cheer. While bowls of pinecones and wreaths of holly are typical ornaments during this season, get creative. For those who are looking to be creative while remaining on a tight budget, simply grab a colander and a string or two of Christmas lights. Ball, fold and bend the string of lights and place inside the colander. The holes will create an interesting display when plugged in.

The Las Cruces High School dance team performed during the Recycle Rally at Valley View Elementary Thursday, Oct. 6, to get students excited about the school's new recycling efforts.

Valley View looks to 'Recycle Right'

Rally held to get students ready for new green effort

Valley View Elementary is eager to move forward with recycling, and kicked-off the school-wide effort Thursday, Oct. 6, with an interactive Recycle Rally featuring:

- Keep Las Cruces Beautiful staff and Las Cruces City Codes Enforcement
- Las Cruces High School performance dance
- Valley View students in recycling costumes
- Recycling games involving students, teachers and members of the dance team
- Libby the Lab, the Las Cruces City Recycling Mascot

"The Recycle Rally gets the kids fired up about environmental impact and recycling and teaches what is and is not recyclable," said Craig Fenske, coordinator of Keep Las Cruces Beautiful. "This year, we are focusing on 'Recycle Right!' as we teach our expanded list of recyclables in Las Cruces. This is a high-energy event, and a great way to kick off recycling at the school ... and then the kids go home and teach their parents how to recycle right."

The school will be recycling aluminum and tin cans, cardboard, newspapers, office paper and mixed papers, junk mail, magazines, catalogues, phone books and plastics No. 1 through No. 7.

LCPS adopted its official recycling policy this year, and Keep Las Cruces Beautiful partners with the South Central Solid Waste Authority to promote recycling within the schools.

Recipes for the current season

Enjoy pumpkin dishes before heading into Christmas

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

As if I need to mention this: I do not have a problem with the colors red and green, especially of the pod varieties. But when red and green holiday decorations flood store shelves three months in advance of "the" day, I heave a big sigh (more of a groan).

This year, the décor arrived before the spooks and goblins even got a chance to scream, "Boo!" And was Thanksgiving missed? Whatever. Albeit Halloween is still more than two weeks away, I thought I'd squeeze in a couple of sweet and spicy pumpkin columns as a reminder that there's still time to dance to the Monster Mash and to ready your home for an eerie haunt.

Chilly Nights Pumpkin Dip

Consider serving this tasty dip in a hollowed out small, decorated pumpkin.

- 1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
- 2 cups powdered sugar
- 1 cup canned pumpkin
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 cup frozen whipped cream, thawed
- Mesilla Valley pecans, crushed as garnish

Mix together all ingredients until well blended. Sprinkled with crushed pecans. Serve chilled or at room temperature with gingersnap cookies, apples or cinnamon graham sticks. Makes about 3 cups (Recipe adapted from <http://quick-dish.tablespoon.com>.)

Halloween Scone Screams

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened slightly
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons corn syrup
- 1 cup canned pumpkin
- 2 2/3 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons cream of tartar
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- Pinch of salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- Pinch of ground ginger
- Pinch habanero powder
- 1/3 cup milk (or less)

Stir together the flour, cream of tartar, baking soda, salt, ground nutmeg, ground ginger and habanero powder. In a separate bowl, beat butter and sugar together with an electric mixer. Mix in the egg and corn syrup with a spoon. Stir in the pumpkin and half of the sifted dry ingredients. Add the rest of the dry ingredients with just enough of the milk to make a soft dough. If it is too sticky to work, add a sprinkle (or two) of flour. Knead gently until you can pat it out into a large rectangle about 3/4-inch thick. Cut into 12 pieces with a floured knife. Transfer to a lightly greased large pizza or similar pan. Bake at 450 degrees for 18 minutes.

Mummy's Green Chile Pumpkin Quiche

- 1 9-inch unbaked pie crust
- 4 slices Canadian bacon, chopped
- 1 to 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup poblano pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
- 1 small serrano chile pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
- 1 cup pumpkin purée
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 4 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup shredded Swiss cheese

- 1/2 cup shredded Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Sauté onion and garlic in olive oil until softened, but not browned. Remove from heat. Stir in chile peppers. Cool slightly.

Mix pumpkin and cream well in a food blender. Mix in eggs, cheeses, salt and pepper. Stir in bacon and chile pepper mixture. Pour into unbaked piecrust. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for an additional 30 minutes, or until set. Cover edges of crust with foil or piecrust shield if they brown too quickly. Cool 10 minutes before slicing.

Charlie Brown's Great and Sassy Pumpkin Crunch Casserole

- 4 cups pumpkin purée
- 4 tablespoons maple syrup
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/2 cup red chile seasoned pecans, chopped
- 1/4 cup flour
- 3 tablespoons butter, softened

Mix the pumpkin purée, maple syrup, milk, egg, vanilla and salt and mash. Mix the brown sugar, pecans, flour and butter. Pour the pumpkin mixture into a baking dish (or dishes) and top with the pecan mixture. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until golden brown on top, about 30 minutes.

Haunting Chili

- 1/2 cup onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup red bell pepper, diced
- 1/2 cup green bell pepper, diced
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 pound ground turkey
- 1 (28-ounce) can diced tomatoes, undrained

- 1 3/4 cup canned pumpkin
- 1 (15 1/4-ounce) can kidney beans, rinsed and drained
- 1 (15-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 1 (4-ounce) can diced medium-hot green chiles or 1/2 cup roasted, stemmed and seeded medium-hot green chiles, diced
- 1/2 cup frozen corn kernels
- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- Garnishes: Sharp shredded Cheddar cheese, diced green onions and sour cream

Sauté onion, garlic and peppers in oil in 6 quart saucepan for 5 to 7 minutes or until tender. Add ground meat, cook until browned; drain. Add remaining ingredients except garnishes. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer 30 minutes. Serve in bowls and garnish with your favorites. Makes 10 servings.

Pumpkin Pie Muffins

- 1 3/4 cups flour
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup mashed pumpkin, cooled
- 1 cup of raisins
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon cayenne powder
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1/2 cup whole milk
- 1/2 cup of butter, melted

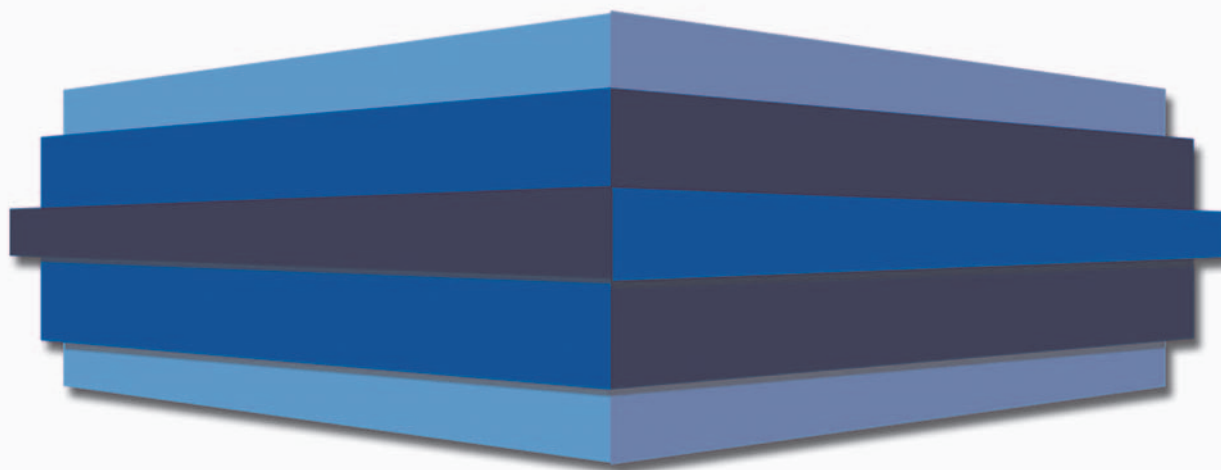

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 12-muffin tin with oil. Sift the flour, baking powder, cinnamon, cayenne powder, nutmeg and salt into a bowl and stir in the sugar and raisins.

Mix the eggs, vanilla, butter and milk in another bowl. Stir in the pumpkin.

Pour the egg mixture into the flour mix and fold (do not stir or over mix) in with a fork. Spoon the mixture into individual cups. Bake for approximately 15 to 20 minutes. Check for doneness. Insert a toothpick in the center of muffin. If it comes out clean, it's done. Cool on a wire rack before removing muffins.

Who's afraid of the big bad bat?

Scott Svenheim
ACE Pest Detective

Bats conjure up dark and scary images this time of year in contrast to their true nature. A big reason is that in popular culture vampire bats often get the most attention – as does the legend that they live on human blood.

In reality, there are more than 900 species of bats, and they help rid us of a more common blood-sucking creature, the mosquito.

Bats are grouped according to what they eat. One species, known as flying foxes (the world's largest), eats fruits and flowers. Some bats are even important pollinators in parts of the world. A few species eat frogs, birds and fish, but most bats feed on insects.

Often thought of as flying mice, they are more closely related to primates, including humans, than they are to mice. They're the only mammals that are capable of sustained flight and live in large colonies. Certain species can reach ages of up to 30 years. They range in size from tiny with forearms that measure under an inch to bats with wingspans of up to 5 feet, according to the Smithsonian Institution. Baby bats, born singly and known as pups, live on their mother's milk and learn to fly as early as three weeks.

Bats rely on their sense of hearing and a sonar-like system for communicating. They are not typically blind, which is a common misconception. Part of the bat's mystery comes from the fact that they live in caves and other dark places where they hang upside down. They're nocturnal and can also be found in attics, barns, trees and rock crevices, to name a few places. They can carry diseases such as rabies, but that's rare.

Bats are found throughout the world, and in the U.S. they are most common in the Southwest. Vampire bats live in Central and South America. They don't actually bite and suck blood, but make a small cut with their sharp incisors and lap the blood that flows from the incision. They will feed on any quietly resting warm-blooded animals such as cows, horses and deer. They rarely bite humans.
