NMSU raises tuition, fees

State again reduces university funding

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University regents approved increasing student tuition and fees by 7.9 percent, which would mean an average full-time student will be paying $213.60 more next fall semester.

NMSU President Barbara Couture said the level of state funding support has eroded over the past several years, while the university and Doña Ana Community College continued to enjoy steady enrollment growth.

The action approved by regents Friday, April 8, also includes an 8.8-percent increase for tuition and fees at DACC.

Regent Javier Gonzales was the lone vote against the increase – not because the increase wasn't warranted, he said, but because the details of the increases weren't broadly released to the public prior to the regents' approval.

NMSU officials said they needed to get approval now to proceed with early registration for the fall semester.

"We do not make these decisions lightly," said Regents Chair Laura Conniff. "We have done everything we can for the best interest of the university and will continue to do so."

Couture acknowledged that all universities and colleges will see state support reduced by an average 4 percent, but she added that NMSU was cut more than any other four-year institution in the state.

In total, the NMSU system has endured a $35 million reduction in state appropriations since fiscal year 2009, according to university officials.

The state's funding included a 3.1-percent resident student "tuition credit" that essentially required NMSU to raise tuition. Couture said a variety of NMSU programs also were hit with cuts.

The main cuts to NMSU came from a midyear reduction of $3.7 million made permanent and $3.8 million in waiver eliminations.

NMSU criminal justice professor Joan Crowley told regents that faculty is becoming demoralized, and the process

Redistricting begins for Las Cruces

Lawmakers to redistrict statewide late this summer

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council is currently reviewing five plans for redrawing municipal district lines.

Michael Sharp, vice president of Research & Polling Inc., the company that also is consulting with Doña Ana County and state government for redistricting, said the city has grown significantly the past 10 years – by 31 percent.

Previously, each of the city's six districts represented 12,378 residents and must now account for 16,270 residents with a 5-percent difference, Sharp said. As the current district boundaries are drawn, he said, the population amounts are very out of balance, especially the East Mesa District 6 that holds enough residents for two districts. But Las Cruces is still going to have three districts on the East Mesa, he said.

Sharp said the options being considered

Springtime and baseball

There was a time when every young boy's goal was to grab his bat and glove for a game of baseball

At the age of 10, I was certain that at some point in the future, I would play major league baseball. Of course, at that time, there were no video games to play. Pinball machines were illegal for minors because they were considered to be "gambling." Rural telephone connections were on "party lines," which meant that six to eight families were connected to the same phone line. Cell phones were a futuristic concept found only in science fiction and Dick Tracy comics. Few of us had televisions in our homes, and for those who did, the images were often "snowy" as our dads regularly had to climb upon our roofs to manually adjust the antenna. As youngsters, it was up to us to use our imaginations to keep ourselves creatively occupied.

There were about a dozen boys from ages eight to 12 who lived nearby in oilfield camps close to our crude baseball field that had been carved out of a somewhat level piece of cattle-grazing pastureland. As youngsters, we all had one thing in common – we loved baseball.

Our heroes were Mickey Mantle, Stan Musial, Willie Mays, Duke Snider, Hank Aaron, Warren Spahn, Pee Wee Reese, Yogi Berra, Rocky Colavito, Al Kaline, Richie Ashburn and Roy Campanella. We fervently collected and traded Topps baseball cards. For one cent, you could buy a single baseball card enclosed with a cardboard-like piece of pink gum in a wax paper wrapper.

Because you could not easily see through the wax wrapper, your penny investment was like a lottery. Occasionally, you picked a star player. However, more often you ended up with a "common" card, such as Tex Clevenger, Jack Harshman or hundreds of other major leaguers whose names have been lost to obscurity through the years. The most valuable card at the time was a Mickey Mantle. If you were lucky enough to have selected a package that included a "Mickey Mantle," you were king of the mountain among your card-collecting friends. To trade for a "Mickey Mantle" you likely had to give up at least five other All-Stars, a bunch of other select cards and probably some cash money as well.

Card collecting and trading was entertaining. However, our real thrill was getting out onto the dirt field and actually playing baseball, something we did almost every single day. Two of my proudest possessions as a youngster were my three-fingered Stan "The-Man" Musial fielder's glove and my 32-inch Mickey Mantle Louisville Slugger bat. I can still recall the smell of the freshly-oiled glove and the unique wood odor of the perfectly balanced ash bat.

Because we did not have enough players for two full teams, we invented a game we called "Work-Up." Among eight to 10 players we would draw straws to determine who would be the first three or four batters. The rest of us would then race to our favorite position on the field. The youngest and slowest were relegated to the outfield positions.

The rules were simple. The fielders played together against the batters. When an out was made, the batter who made the out was sent to right field, and all the fielders moved up one position, rotating from right field to center field, to left field, to third base, to short-stop, to second base, to first base to pitcher. Usually the batters had to furnish the catcher. If a fly ball was caught, the fielder who made the catch traded places with the batter, and no other fielders moved up. The goal was to work your way up to be a batter, a position you maintained until you made an out.

This was a great game. We could play for hours. The game was fair, because each participant, regardless of skill, had a chance to play every position. There were no coaches. There were no umpires. Disputes were typically resolved by the oldest, strongest kid or the one who had brought the baseball. If the owner of the baseball departed the game with his ball, the game was over. As it turns out, "Work-Up" was a terrific game in which we not only were able to exercise, but we also learned about rules, mutual respect, communication, competition and getting along with one another.

The baseball field was a great training ground for thousands of youngsters from my generation. It was a time of dreams and great expectations. And while, my childhood goal of playing major league baseball was not realized, I will never forget the lessons learned and the friendships made in those games of "Work-Up."

I would not trade those days for anything.

Arts Fair a success

The Las Cruces Arts Fair was a huge success March 25-27 – just ask anyone who wanted to get a room in Las Cruces. There were many events going on that weekend with the Straight-Reba concert, Bataan Death March and, of course, the Arts Fair, and it soon became apparent that it was impossible to get a room for the weekend here.

Some 2,600 people attended the three-day Arts Fair at the Las Cruces Convention Center. Eighty artists exhibited a great variety of fine artwork and crafts. Many individuals came from El Paso and surrounding communities to the event, and these persons were impressed by the quantity and quality of artists that participated in the fair. The artists were very pleased by the friendliness of Las Cruces as well as the fine hospitality shown by our motels, hotels, restaurants and retail shops in Las Cruces and Mesilla. Twenty-nine artists stayed at least two nights in our motels and others stayed for three or four nights. Several artists also stayed in our RV parks.

Events such as the Las Cruces Arts Fair, a benefit for the Rio Grande Theatre and the Doña Ana Arts Council, give a positive picture to visitors of our city. Las Cruces has much to offer, not only as an arts destination, but as a community that has many venues in the way of good restaurants, comfortable hotels and motels, interesting museums, special sites and great retail shopping.

There are places to see and go for all who visit Las Cruces.

Leadership needed

I am embarrassed to live in a country that spends $3.3 billion each and every week on endless "wars" in Iraq and Afghanistan, but then claims to be so broke that we need to lay off teachers, defer essential maintenance on bridges and other infrastructure, roll back environmental protections, ignore urgent conservation needs, cut back on social programs, etc. Any fool can see we are mortgaging our future.

Climate scientists say we have about eight years remaining to reverse carbon emissions or risk crossing a point of no return, with devastating consequences for civilization. Human activities are driving plant and animal species to extinction at a rate 1,000 times faster than normal. The world is facing a perfect storm of food shortages due to climate change, dwindling aquifers and diversion of crops to fuels.

What is Congress doing to address these critical issues? Squabbling, dithering, blustering and nothing.

We need leadership from the president, Congress and elected representatives at all levels of government to stop wasting precious time and limited tax dollars and get to work solving the world's real problems before it is too late.

Susana wields the veto pen

New governor approaches Johnson's record

Jay Miller
Inside the Capitol

We now know more about our new governor, Susana Martinez. Prior to the deadline for acting on legislation, she was sending mixed signals as far as expectations were concerned.

Martinez signed some bills she was expected to veto and vetoed some she was expected to sign. She even vetoed some bills favored by her big financial supporters. But on the April 8 deadline for action on the 284 bills sent to her, she gave us a picture of what we may be able to expect from her over the next four years.

Of the 284 bills, Martinez signed 186 and vetoed 98. That approaches former Gov. Gary Johnson's record when he vetoed more than 100 bills his first year in office. Seven stormy years followed. Little was accomplished, but since Johnson's priority was shrinking government, he can be termed a success.

Martinez said she wanted to cut the budget and promised bold action. Her budget cutting proposal was modest – less than a third of the $450 million deficit she inherited and blamed on former Gov. Bill Richardson. Not much other bold action was evident other than her 98 vetoes.

Two-thirds of those vetoes were inaction on bills, commonly referred to as pocket vetoes. No explanation for inaction is required, so we don't know why she ignored them. It could have been for reasons along the lines used by former Govs. Bruce King and Ed Mechem – a you-guys-send-me-too-much-stuff attitude, but Martinez never expressed that opinion previously.

House Appropriations leader Luciano Varela and Senate majority leader Michael Sanchez see Martinez's vetoes as signaling four years of trouble, especially since she almost never communicates with them. Martinez also vetoed appropriations to fund a legislative redistricting committee and to fund pre-session expenses for next year.

Martinez accused lawmakers of not cutting their own expenses while cutting the executive and judicial branches of government. She claims a 10-percent cut in her own staff expenses. Lawmakers are sure to punish her for the vetoes. Delaying the confirmations of gubernatorial appointees will be one way.

Using her line-item veto power on bills other than appropriation measures can be called a bold move. In fact, it is illegal. The actions would have to be taken to court in order to reverse her action.

Another bold action may be her I'll-do-it-my-way approach to some of her vetoes. Richardson would veto a bill and then issue an executive order to accomplish the same purpose, but doing it his way, with him in control.

This appears to be a Richardson practice Martinez will continue. During her campaign for office, Martinez appeared to feel anything Richardson did was poison, but she must have decided that he had at least a few good tricks of his own.

Another interesting development is Martinez's vetoing of two bills she criticized Richardson for vetoing last year. They involved government transparency. Martinez now can see reasons individual rights and privacy might be compromised.

A year ago, Martinez wanted Richardson off the state Investment Council because of his alleged improprieties. Now that she is chairman of the council, she vetoed a bill to take the governor off.

The law-and-order bills Martinez championed generally did well. It is an area in which she is well versed and felt comfortable dealing publicly with those issues. She even testified before a legislative committee on one of the bills, something few governors do.

Martinez didn't accomplish much in the education reform arena as she would have liked. Her education department will get to implement the A-F grading of schools. But the governor didn't get approval for grading administrators and teachers. Regardless, Martinez plans to have a group work on an evaluation system for awarding performance-based pay.

All in all, Martinez did as well as should probably be expected for someone almost completely new to state government. Most governors have previously held high public or political office. Martinez had a steep learning curve to master, and she's getting there.

“ Martinez did as well as could be expected for someone almost completely new to state government. ”

Time to vote them out

For years we've complained. At long last – and God willing – it's not too late.

Oh, we will still complain, but when it gets to the point where we are told we can only buy one type of light bulb, that the majority of us do not want, it gets some attention.

Do you have any idea how many regulations, most of them just so foolish, and that just like sheep, we have done nothing but complain?

Now at long last patriots in the tea parties have helped us see we are not sheep. We do have power and rights. The Constitution is important. When the elected officials just ignore what the majority want, we can vote out people that do not listen to us. When we have asked and asked that illegals do not get driver licenses, when we tell our senators we do not want our county turned into wilderness – by the way, the government of the United States now owns 635 million acres – they charge ahead with their plans.

When we say read the bills before you pass them, they ignore us. So along comes real true folks that work and pay their taxes and say “no more.”

We have much more to do, but they know we are here. You no longer have no one to share your love of this country and the Constitution.

Get off the couch, stop complaining and join us at the tea party, and together we will stop the madness, vote out those voting for illegals to vote, to stop logging, to stop drilling for oil and closing our forest to the public. In other words they are voting our rights away as American citizens.

Time to vote them out.

Gen Mitchell

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

The horse sculptor

I wonder if he starts at the head?

I mean to sculpt a horse that will one day stand in front of the stockyard gate. Or does he picture in his mind the kind of horse it will be?

Would he start at the hooves instead, one leg at a time, stroking, flexing, molding, making the limb yield to him until it feels just right? Right front or left, then gliding back, the skilled hand following the shoulder to the flank, to the stifle, hock, cannon, fetlock, pastern, finally pressing until the hind foot gives itself up and lets the sculptor have his way.

Then does he go to the head?

Surely he must. Like the masthead on a ship, a lookout in the crow's nest, the face's expression will be a clue as to what to expect from those powerful limbs that drive the beast through the picture in his mind.

Does he envision tension, fear, suspicion, acceptance, trust, fury, devotion or resignation in those eyes, in his stance, in his nostrils?

Will he break and run?

Will the sculptor have to start again from the broken pieces? Using firm but gentle caresses until the nose, the neck and the mane become smoothly connected.

Across the back, over the rump, down the leg, his practiced touch puts the sculpture back together.

Back to the head.

The halter, a piece of artwork in its own right, the rawhide plaiting climbing over the nose, tied on the left side, strong and commanding yet fragile as a reata. It establishes a palpable connection between sculptor and subject. Or, taking artistic license, does he go right to a bosal?

He's the sculptor, he can do what he wants! He is allowed to proceed to the blanket if he wishes, the soaking, the cinching and saddle. Maybe beef him up more, put him in a snaffle, shoot, why not set a rider on his back! After all, it is the sculptor that is responsible for the final result.

All these Charlie Russell thoughts went through my mind as I watched the horse trainer putting on a demonstration in the middle of the ring.

We, the audience, studied and listened as he went through the motions explaining, in the language of the horse, how he was sculpting a new one from the disorganized four-legged collection of muscle and bone that stood before him in the arena now.

Hide and hair, or clay and wire? Ray Hunt or Frederick Remington? The casting and creation of a horse requires an eye for deception, a hand for communication and a deep knowledge of what it takes to mold imagination into flesh and blood.

Borrowing with no intention to pay back

We are writing ourselves a check and saying we have money

Michael Swickard
In My Opinion

So here is a deal: I borrow money from you and do not pay you back ever. Do you want to hear the details of this amazing offer? I take the money you give me without ever paying it back to you. Do we have a deal? Why not?

That is the negotiation of our "me" government. They will not even talk about paying off the national debt. On the personal level, many borrow all they can and then attempt to not repay their debt. This is the official American attitude on borrowing and paying back. It has been this way for 50 years.

Citizens run up debts and then use the government to keep from having to pay back the money. We have many people in financial default by choice. Importantly, many people want our country to default the national debt rather than pay it back.

This "me" generation runs the government, a government that has been borrowing money from its citizens and from other foreign nations for 50 years. From the first loan of money to our country it has been obvious our country has had no intention of paying any of the money back.

If during one year, or even a couple of years, we said we had too much need to repay the debt, no problem. After 50 years of not even talking about paying back the national debt it is obvious that there is no political will to ever pay back the national debt. At least not from the elected officials we now have in Congress.

As incredible as it seems, given how much money our country has borrowed in the last 20 years, can you find any politician talking about paying the borrowed money back? Me neither.

No president after Eisenhower has seriously thought about paying back the money borrowed by our country. Our leaders cannot even balance our books. So why indeed should they talk about repaying the borrowed money?

The problem is that nations are getting wise to us not intending to pay their loan money back. Our country raises money for our treasury by offering T-bills. In the last couple of years there have been fewer buyers, if any. So we, ourselves, are buying our own T-bills as if another country bought them and saying we have more money. We are in effect writing ourselves a check and proclaiming that we now have more money.

We Americans find ourselves in a situation that would have been beyond belief to my grandparents. As a nation we Americans have spent 50 years spending more money than we have. Every year we have done so. With each passing year, it seems to get easier to forget that borrowed money should be paid back. Little by little, we have pushed the national debt further and further. In the last three years the national debt has jumped upwards to unsustainable amounts. Do we think our debtors will just forget and forgive that money? Doubtful.

You might be tempted to scoff that no one would expect to borrow forever with zero money being paid back to those who loaned us – the U.S. – the money.

But it is true. In fact, no payback is a staple of American life these days. Individually, for most of 50 years there has been a great push for citizens to just bankrupt out of debts rather than pay them back with no one thinking that action is wrong, except those persons owed money.

In the housing market, there is a big push by our government to let people who cannot or will not pay their mortgage to just keep the house and not pay the money owed on it. This attitude gets lots of cheers from everyone except the person who holds the note on the aforementioned house.

Ultimately, borrowing without paying back does not work. Everyone knows it, yet no one can stop borrowing since they do not know any other way to operate. There is one thing to do. In the mirror each day practice looking surprised, "Oh, my goodness, what happened?"

It will not change what happens financially to our nation, but at least you can look surprised.

Tourism taste testing

Las Cruces hosts governor's conference

Richard Coltharp
That's the Way of the World

Have you ever been to the Owl Bar & Café? Have you ever been to the Buckhorn Tavern?

If you answered yes to either one (or both) of those questions, you are an example of a culinary tourist in New Mexico.

Because, frankly, why else would you have gone to San Antonio, N.M.? San Antonio may be the home of hotel baron Conrad Hilton, but it has long since been more famous for the legendary green chile cheeseburgers at the Buckhorn and Owl.

Tuesday, April 12, in Las Cruces, Santa Fe-based food writer Cheryl Jamison led a discussion of historic diners, chile joints and burger bars in "Still Cooking," a breakout session at the Governor's Conference on Tourism.

"Culinary tourism is really hot," Jamison said. "One of three people consider dining as part of making travel choices. And they're motivated by unique experiences."

Unique is a common way to describe New Mexico cuisine, as is "authentic."

And authentic is the way New Mexico's newest state tourism secretary, Monique Jacobson, wants all tourists to be able to describe their travel experiences in the Land of Enchantment.

The three-day conference included a southern New Mexico wine country tour, a presentation on Spaceport America, a discussion of tourism opportunities during the state's 2012 centennial, breakout sessions and a trade show with about 30 vendors.

The event also gave another chance to showcase the new Las Cruces Convention Center and showed how the center is helping to bring people to the Mesilla Valley.

Authentic was the buzz word of the conference, and it certainly doesn't get more authentically New Mexican than the green chile cheeseburger, which is why Jamison's slide show featured the Owl, Buckhorn and dozens of other classic dining establishments.

The show was a sampler from the New Mexico Culinary Treasures Trail (www.newmexico.org/culinarytreasures), which features family-owned and operated restaurants more than 40 years old.

Some of these places may be considered "holes in the wall," but Jamison knows they attract well-heeled travelers.

Culinary tourists are "more affluent, better educated and they still read newspapers, magazines and the printed word," she said.

The Culinary Trail features several local favorites, like Chope's in La Mesa, La Posta in Mesilla and several Las Cruces classics: Day's Hamburgers, Dick's Café, El Sombrero, Go-Burger, Hiebert's Fine Food, My Brother's Place, Nellie's, Nopalito and Roberto's. To those, I would add these others that should meet the 40-year test: La Nueva Casita Café, Ranchway, Abraham's and Los Compas.

I knew Jamison's presentation itself was authentic when she flashed the slide of the home of my favorite green chile cheeseburger, the Outpost in Carrizozo.

Jamison also presented many intriguing outposts I'd never heard of.

How about Lucky Boy in Albuquerque, which serves burgers and Chinese food? You can get a green chile cheeseburger with an egg foo yung patty. There's unique for you.

Jamison's parting words: "Do everything you can to help keep these local family joints going."

New Democratic leaders

Christy French was elected chair and Bill Gomez vice chair of the Doña Ana County Democratic Party at its convention Saturday, April 9, in Las Cruces. French, who works for a Las Cruces law firm, has previously served as state secretary of the New Mexico Democratic Party and district director for the county party. Gomez is a farmer and lifelong member of the Democratic Party. French and Gomez will serve two-year terms through spring 2013.

NMSU helps military kids

4-H youth reaches out to service families

Local children in military families who have a deployed parent are receiving help from Operation: Military Kids (OMK) and New Mexico State University.

OMK is a partnership between Army Child and Youth Services and 4-H National Headquarters. It builds partnerships with organizations throughout the state and is administered by the 4-H Youth Development Department at NMSU.

More than 1.7 million American children under the age of 18 have at least one parent serving in the military. New Mexico OMK program coordinator Amanda Good said she hopes to continue raising awareness about issues facing these children, such as the lack of after-school programs and youth activities, separation anxiety and changes in communication with the child's deployed parent.

OMK accomplishes its mission by implementing several core program elements. One of those elements are "hero packs," backpacks filled with mementos and items such as disposable cameras, photo albums, scrapbooks, journals, pens and stationary to help children connect with their deployed parent.

Another element used by OMK is "mobile technology labs." These computer labs contain software and program materials for children and youth to send personal messages to their deployed loved ones.

For more information about OMK, contact Good at agood@ad.nmsu.edu or 646-2555.

Paragliders tested for re-entry

Gemini program ditched concept for water landings

By Michael Shinabery
New Mexico Museum of Space History

Gemini astronauts might have winged their way home if NASA's Paraglider Development Program had succeeded. On April 29, 1963, NASA set a Gemini flight schedule that included "water landing by a parachute ... for the first six flights and land landing by paraglider from flight 7 on," said the 1969 NASA document "Project Gemini."

The program, nicknamed "wings and wheels," would utilize a wing "packed away like a parachute" that deployed at 60,000 feet in altitude, said astronaut Michael Collins in "Liftoff: The Story of America's Adventure in Space."

For the next 40,000 feet, "an elaborate unstowing and unfurling process began. (At) 20,000 feet, if all went well, the Gemini would become the world's heaviest hang glider, suspended under a dart-shaped, inflated fabric wing."

There was little room for error. "The reason for the paraglider," Collins said, "was to allow the spacecraft to glide to a landing on a conventional runway, but from 20,000 feet it couldn't glide far, so the runway had to be close by. That, in turn, implied that retrofire had taken place precisely, and that the spacecraft had flown a predictable path during entry."

In May 1961, the Space Task Group first established "the design parameters" for the paraglider, "Project Gemini" said. Seven months later, in December, NASA then established the "guidelines for the development of the two-man spacecraft." Included was a requirement for "a system for controlled land landing," which NASA awarded to North American Aviation on Oct. 2, 1963, to "design, build and test."

The first drop test took place on Nov. 14, 1963 "over Galveston Bay using a helicopter-towed paraglider half-scale tow test vehicle" that "successfully tested the U-shaped deployment configuration," said "Project Gemini." "The second test (Nov. 19) was abortive, but damage was slight. The third test (Nov. 26) was also abortive, and the wing was damaged beyond repair on impact. The Manned Spacecraft Center (MSC) procured another wing from North American and conducted a fourth test, partially successful, on Dec. 19."

"More than once test vehicles were destroyed as they slammed into the ground," Collins said.

Additional testing took place at Edwards Air Force Base. Information on a NASA photograph dated Jan. 10, 1964, stated a wheeled Gemini capsule, with deployed parasail, was towed along the ground at Edwards "to determine wing stability."

"The idea of landing on land is a good one," said Milton Windler, who worked on the Mercury, Gemini, Apollo, Skylab and Orbiter programs. During a Feb. 24, 2011 interview on KRSY radio in Alamogordo, he said the issues were the paraglider's deployment, and the pilot "dealing with winds, and visibility, and systems so you (could) actually see to fly. ... We concluded if (the wing) ever got out, with the system we had, we could control it and make it land where we wanted to. The problem was getting the system to deploy safely."

Collins wrote that the paraglider program was "more technological frosting than cake" and was "hopelessly snarled in a financial, technical, and managerial morass." NASA Program Manager Chuck Mathews felt the "paraglider was not absolutely necessary" and "killed the paraglider in mid-1964."

"Project Gemini" stated that on Feb. 20, 1964, the NASA associate administrator for Manned Space Flight "informed the Gemini Project Office that all 12 Gemini flights would end in water landings."

"We had a big Navy and the sea is all the same all over," said Windler, "and it's a lot easier to land in, so it turned out that the complications of making the paraglider - to deploy it and control it - were such that it was too cumbersome."

On June 12, said "Project Gemini," Mathews announced the paraglider requirement had been "deleted" from Gemini. "The public announcement ... came on August 10, 1964."

However, NASA photographs dated Oct. 22, 1965, showed that on that date North American Aviation pilot Jack Swigert, a future Apollo astronaut, flew a Gemini paraglider "to a safe landing" after being "towed aloft by helicopter and released."

The project was potentially applicable to other programs. Subsequent testing included a parasail trial over Galveston Bay on Feb. 23, 1965; a paraglider assessment at Edwards Air Force Base on Sept. 2, 1965; and, on Oct. 28, 1965, a paraglider recovery test. More recent spacecraft, such as the X-38, have used similar systems.

Gemini's other goals included the first "rendezvous and dock(ing) with orbiting vehicles," and perfecting reentry methods, according to science.ksc.nasa.gov. Except for the land

“ The paraglider program was ... hopelessly snarled in a financial, technical and managerial morass. ”

MICHAEL COLLINS, Astronaut

NASA

On Jan. 10, 1964, North American Aviation test pilot E.P. Hetzel "flew" this Gemini paraglider at Edwards Air Force Base. He was "towed by (an) Air Force helicopter along (the) ground to determine wing stability," according to the photograph.

landing, all goals were achieved.

Gemini's first two missions were "unmanned test flights," said "Space Travel: A History." Gus Grissom and John Young then flew Gemini III on March 23, 1965, using "onboard rockets to change the size and shape of their orbit."

In June 1965, Ed White, aboard Gemini IV, became the first American to walk in space. For 21 minutes he "somersaulted, floated lazily on his back, pirouetted, (and) stood grinning like a kid on Gemini's titanium hull," said "Moon Shot." Finally, Grissom, in Mission Control, had to order White to reenter the capsule.

Of the 12 Gemini missions, VI-A and VII, in mid December 1965, flew in tandem just a foot apart, said "Space Travel: A History." Aboard VI-A, Wally Schirra and Thomas Stafford, Annapolis graduates, held up a sign that read "BEAT ARMY." Frank Borman, a West Point graduate, and James Lovell Jr. replied with, "BEAT NAVY," said "The Complete Idiot's Guide to NASA." "None of them got their wish as the game ended in a 7-7 tie."

Leaders of the Jemez Pueblo of northern New Mexico said they are getting closer to establishing a casino in Anthony, N.M.

The federal government Friday, April 8, announced the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) for the proposed Pueblo of Jemez 70-acre trust transfer and casino project in Doña Ana County on the federal register. The DEIS "provides legal notice of administrative rules and notices and presidential documents in a comprehensive, uniform manner."

Benny Shendo of the Jemez Pueblo said this has taken more than seven years to complete and is a big step in the right direction.

"There are three more major steps," Shendo said. "First, is the Environmental Impact Statement, and we realize there is a lot of local opposition, but (the federal register) brings one process to a close."

Following the DEIS, there will be a final public hearing April 30. After comments have been made, the Bureau of Indian Affairs will be responsible for collecting the comments and deciding if they want to make recommendation to turn the land over. The recommendation will then be given to Gov. Susana Martinez to accept or deny.

While negative effects of the casino have been discussed, such as a potential for increased crime and gambling, the Jemez Pueblo casino developers said they are planning to make the casino a safe place with economic benefits for Anthony, and the Jemez Pueblo.

"A lot of people don't understand the project unless you have been to Anthony or the reservation," said Ruben Smith, former mayor of Las Cruces and supporter of the casino project.

"This project is all about lowering crime, dropouts and unemployment and giving Anthony the ability to sustain itself."

Currently, Anthony's retail economy is made up of a few small stores and restaurants. Even the town's only grocery store is in Texas.

"There are very few projects that can dramatically change the lives of two communities," said David Wilson, owner of Wilson Binkley Advertising & Marketing, whose firm has been hired to market the Jemez Pueblo casino project.

With a more than 50 percent unemployment rate, Shendo said Anthony and the Jemez Pueblo have similar economic hardships.

"There will be additional measures taken to combat any crime in the area," said Smith, adding that the casino would provide its own security. "Every problem someone had tried to bring up, we have studied and answered. When Speaking Rock Casino was in the planning phases, people said the same thing about crime, but the effects were the opposite – business increased, dropouts decreased and unemployment decreased."

In addition to the extra safety measures, Shendo said the creation of the casino will also bring charitable donations and numerous benefits.

"We plan to create a community foundation endowment up to $40 million that will benefit Doña Ana County and non-profits," Shendo said. "The casino will also create around 950 jobs with health care."

Other benefits of the casino are a $1 million job-training fund, $28 million in annual payroll that can be put back into the southern New Mexico economy, continuing education, problem-gaming programs and $30 million in purchases.

"All we have done is follow the law," said Shendo, adding that specific benefits to the Jemez Pueblo include jobs, better infrastructure, roads, schools and scholarships as well as taking people off government assistance.

In 1988, the federal Indian Gaming Act began allowing off-reservation casinos under certain conditions through the acquisition of trust lands. About six years ago, the pueblo applied for the special permission because the pueblo lacks other available natural resources for economic development. Opposition to the proposal comes from those in the horse-racing industry, who see the Jemez casino as competition.

to develop the increases lacked transparency.

"Tuition increases impact everyone," she said, adding rising costs make it especially difficult for minority students.

Couture said the tuition and fee increases had to be developed quickly as the details of cuts weren't available until about three weeks ago.

Couture said NMSU has already cut 110 positions – 68 administration and 42 academic – since she arrived about a year and a half ago. NMSU saved $1.3 million through 81 employees accepting early retirement, she said. Also, NMSU is spending less on upkeep of its grounds, on custodial maintenance, on travel and the university has reduced its vehicle fleet by more than 400 vehicles.

These and other efficiency efforts have generated more than $8 million in savings, Couture said. "In short, we are doing a whole lot more with a whole lot less," she said.

Teacher-to-student ratios have increased to the point where required classes are almost filled to capacity, resulting in fewer scheduling options for students.

"Again, we must, and will, turn this around," Couture said.

Angela Thornberry, interim senior vice president for administration and finance, said the tuition and fee increases are expected to generate $6.9 million.

Regent Isaac Pino said NMSU is beginning to run out of places to make cuts without the words layoff, reduction in force or furloughs. Pino said he is worried the Legislature may pull back even more funding in the future because it is easier for lawmakers to cut higher education than the public schools.

Gonzales said the university community has been too compliant about allowing lawmakers to "pass on the buck" of state finances onto the backs of students.

With lawmakers also continuing to cut NMSU more severely than other universities, Gonzales said he feared NMSU could eventually become one of the most expensive institutions in the state, instead of being one the most affordable.

Couture more students graduate and to keep its best faculty, noting that this is the third year of no salary increase for faculty.

Travis Dulany, student body president, said if the current rate continued, new NMSU freshmen can expect to see a 35-percent increase in the cost of going to school by the time they graduate. The language of tuition increase needs to change from asking how much they will be to how little, he said.

Regents also passed a 2.5-percent increase in housing rates, but there will be no increase in meal plan rates.

Parking fees for the 2011-12 academic year were increased by 17 cents per month for students and 33 cents per month for the majority of employees. Funds generated through the increase will be used to support parking lot maintenance.

endeavor to restore that population balance while maintaining compactness and communities of interests. Another factor also being taken into consideration is ethnicity.

Each of the plans have different characteristics. Plan A simply tried to keep districts compact, Sharp said. But it would result in the elimination of one sitting councillor, said Councillor Miguel Silva. Plan B – drawn without regard to sitting councillors – resulted in districts 3 and 5 not losing their existing councillors, Sharp said.

All the plans retain Interstate 25 as a general east-west dividing line for the city. Silva asked Sharp if he ever consider moving some of the boundaries across I-25. Sharp said he felt it diluted minority voting strengths too much. Even though more than half the city's population is Hispanic, Hispanics are still considered a minority voting group, according to federal standards.

The significant characteristic of Plan D was to create one district for the entire western edge of the city.

Plan E is the only plan that has the current councillors in their districts, and Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he believed that appears to be the best option at this point. "It's the closest to what already exists," he said.

The council is shooting for May to make a final decision on the new district boundaries.

Las Cruces and Doña Ana County are both taking input from ad hoc committees in response to a proposal by Common Cause to encourage more citizen input and discourage political influences on the redistricting process. If the effort works well here, the group would like to use it as a test case for the Legislature to change its method of redistricting.

The Legislature is expected to be called into special session in August or September to begin the process of redrawing district boundaries for state representatives and senators. Those changes will influence boundaries for voting precincts, Sharp noted.

Gillenwater to test the NBA waters

Jim Hilley
Bulletin in the Zone

It is a common ritual in the world of NCAA basketball. Junior players who think they have the skills to play professional basketball declare themselves eligible for the NBA draft.

Jonathan Gibson did it two years ago, and now it is Troy Gillenwater's turn.

New Mexico State University announced Wednesday, April 13, that the All-WAC forward would be testing the NBA waters.

"Troy and I have obviously been contemplating the situation all season long and having the opportunity to play professionally has been a lifelong dream of Troy's," coach Marvin Menzies said at a press conference Wednesday afternoon.

"We've come to the decision it is Troy's best interest to apply for the NBA draft. He has not hired an agent. The door is not closed to Troy coming back to NMSU."

Underclassmen who travel the route Gillenwater is taking can keep their options open as long as they don't hire an agent.

Menzies said the feedback from NBA teams has been positive from some teams and not from others.

"You only need one that loves you and wants you," Menzies said.

"The grass is pretty green for Troy going forward. Definitely he would have some opportunity to play professionally, be it overseas or in the NBA."

Gillenwater said it would be a tough process, but he has been working hard to be ready.

"It's exciting and I am really looking forward to the experience," Gillenwater said. "We decided it would be good to test it out and see what happened."

"I haven't made a decision yet."

Should Gillenwater decide to go pro, he'll be giving up a chance to play for a very good Aggie team next season.

"With Wendell (McKines) coming back and Ham (Hamidu Rahman) and Hernst (Laroche), we can definitely be a really good team," Gillenwater said.

Gillenwater said he felt he needed to improve his defense and rebounding to play at the next level.

"I'll have to play a little bit more on the perimeter, so I'll have to be able to guard guys out there," he said.

The Aggie forward said the injuries that hobbled him during the past season have healed. Menzies credited Gillenwater's work in rehab for that.

"I feel like he will impress some people," Menzies said.

But the coach doesn't expect Gillenwater to leave unless the situation is right.

"He's not going to leave his senior year on the table and go make $50,000, I'll choke him before that happens," the coach said.

Martin seeks a faster pace

Ags' new offensive coordinator wants to keep defense guessing

By Jimmy Currier
 For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The West Coast is moving inland to Las Cruces. No, California hasn't fallen into the ocean and fresh seafood is still non-existent here, but New Mexico State football fans will notice a West Coast flair when watching the Aggies in 2011.

Offensive coordinator Doug Martin is in the midst of implementing his West Coast-style offense, which will include rhythmic, timing passes and shallow crosses, along with a healthy dose of play-action passing.

Martin's been pleased with how fast the players have caught on to the new offense.

"The biggest thing is they are very coachable," he said. "In four practices, we've been able to install the entire package, and the players are working hard."

Last season under Mike Dunbar's scheme, the Aggies were more of a finesse team that spread the ball out. In 2011, Martin wants the Ags to be more physical. That physicality will be established by a strong downhill, pounding running game.

"We're going to come after people," he said. "We're going to play more physical up front and in the backfield."

Improving the offense is easier said than done. The last two offensive coordinators – Timm Rosenbach and Dunbar – can attest to that fact. The Aggies finished last in the Western Athletic Conference in scoring offense, passing offense and total offense last season.

Martin, however, has been in this situation before, having turned Kent State University's offense around.

Over the past four years, Martin's offense at Kent State recorded a remarkable 16,907 yards of total offense, averaging 422.6 yards and 26.3 points per game.

Saturday, April 9, was the first day the Aggies practiced in pads and in full contact, and head coach DeWayne Walker said he was impressed with how quickly the team has caught on to Martin's offense.

"The players have bought in to what he is doing and bought into him as their new leader on offense," Walker said. "It's up tempo, get to the line of scrimmage quickly and force the defense to line up. If they don't get lined up, it's going to cause some alignment issues on the defensive side that gives our offense the opportunity to take advantage and make some plays."

NMSU has eight more practices before the spring game and Martin said his primary goal is to find the players that best fit his system.

"Our No. 1 is getting our playmakers in the right position and to find out what receivers can make the plays for us and what running backs can go out and make plays for us and get those guys on the field together as much as possible," he said. "With the quarterbacks, it's learning how to handle the blitz and learning how to throw hot and knowing when you're protected and when you're not."

Coaching and developing quarterbacks is Martin's niche, having mentored current NFL players

Medina and Bulldawgs aim for title

LCHS pitcher may be best in New Mexico

By Craig Massey
 Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces High School's Alberta Medina has been a dominating force on the mound for the Bulldawgs this season.

Alberta Medina became a pitcher because, well, someone had to do it.

She was about 11 years old when her father, Rick Medina, decided to coach a girls fast-pitch team.

"Every position was already filled, and he needed a pitcher," Alberta said.

Simple as that. Perhaps the top high school pitcher in the state landed in the circle because it was the only spot available.

Seven years later, it's almost impossible to keep Medina out of that circle. She has been the starting pitcher in every game this season for Las Cruces High School and started nearly every game last year, winning 22 of them.

She has helped guide the Bulldawgs to a 15-2 record this season, and the team has its sights set on a state championship. The players wear practice T-shirts that have the location and date of this year's state championship game printed on them – UNM Field, 5-14-11.

"Coming into this year, we knew we didn't want to settle for anything less," Medina said.

"The past two years, we should have advanced farther. This year, there's no holding back."

The team is playing up to its impressive talent level and Medina is leading the way. Head coach Will Garcia said Medina is one of the two best pitchers he's seen in Las Cruces in the past 10 years, the other being Kayleigh Montano of Mayfield, who graduated in 2006.

"They're similar as far as their dominance goes," Garcia said. "(Alberta is) one of the hardest throwers in New Mexico. It's her combination of speed and the breaking pitches that make her effective."

Garcia said Medina uses six different pitches – curveball, rise ball, screwball, drop ball, change-up and a fastball that reaches 63 miles per hour. Medina says the curve is her favorite, but that the rise ball probably has become her most effective pitch.

Medina said Garcia usually calls the pitches, but sometimes leaves it up to her and catcher Shontel Lopez. The three, along with the other coaches, often confer between innings.

Medina's numbers this year reflect the dominance on the field. On Tuesday night, she

Trakh to coach womens basketball

Former USC, Pepperdine coach takes over Aggie program

Mark Trakh, a former head coach of women's basketball at Pepperdine and the University of Southern California, has been hired as the new women's basketball coach at New Mexico State University.

Athletic Director McKinley Boston said Trakh is a solid recruiter and has a solid reputation of graduating his players

"He is a team player and has shown the ability to build community support for a program. Mark also has a reputation for running a program according to rules compliance and with a commitment to student-athlete welfare," Boston said.

Trakh said he was excited to "be an Aggie," and was eager to take the court. He said he intended to have a competitive program.

"I want to compete for conference championships – sooner rather than later," he said. "I think we can do that with kids that work hard and play together. I like to think of my teams like a family. We play together, play hard and have the support of each other and have each others back.

"I want when people come to watch us play they will be energized by how hard we play on the basketball court."

"I want to look up and see our named called on selection Monday, I've experienced that and it's a great feeling just to see that."

Trakh is filling the position after the contract of Darin Spence was not renewed after the 2010-11 season.

Quinn to lead NMSU soccer

'Program in great position'

New Mexico State University hired Blair Quinn to be the women's soccer coach. Quinn has spent the past four seasons as an assistant coach at Arizona State University and prior to that work as an assistant for Loyola Marymount. He also had experience as a professional soccer player from 1997-2003. His alma mater is Rockhurst University in Kansas City, Mo.

QUINN

Maria Roth, assistant athletic director and senior women administrator, said the NMSU soccer program is still in its infancy, but Quinn was the right person to build on the programs early successes, including qualifying for the WAC tournament its first year, being nationally ranked in home attendance. She said the university hopes to keep the program growing.

"We wholeheartedly believe that under the leadership of our new coach Blair Quinn we will be successful in achieving our goals," she said. "It is a very exciting time for women's soccer right now as we are in the process of building a new soccer complex just to the west of Aggie Memorial Stadium."

Quinn said he is excited to start at New Mexico State and was ready to go. He also said he expects NMSU's current players and signees to stay with the program.

"The program is in a great position to continue to compete," he said.

Roth said the university had applications from both head and assistant coaches but were "incredibly impressed" with Blair's résumé and recommendations.

threw a no-hitter against rival Mayfield in a 4-0 win. Entering this week, she led all Class 5A pitchers with 114 strikeouts and 15 wins. Her earned-run average is .88 and her opponents' batting average is .125. As a hitter, Medina has a .442 average with two home runs and 11 runs batted in.

Garcia said Medina's best games this year came against Class 4A power Piedra Vista, which entered the season ranked 16th in the nation. Las Cruces went 1-1 against the Farmington school, losing 1-0 and winning 1-0.

"She was phenomenal in those two games," Garcia said. Garcia admits that "once in a while" Medina will have an off game like any other pitcher, but she'll work hard during the game to make corrections. The coach said it usually occurs when the team plays in a tournament, which could be four or five games in a weekend. Fatigue is something that Medina has dealt with before.

"That's how it's been throughout my career," she said. "You've just got to work through it."

Garcia said Medina has received seven scholarship offers so far this spring, and that New Mexico State University has recently started showing some interest. Medina's academic work adds to her value as a recruit. She has a 3.9 GPA and has been in the LCHS Advanced Education Services program for high-IQ students throughout high school.

"I like NMSU," she said. "It's a good school and it's exciting to think about that."

Seeking swagger

Jack Nixon
Jack's Corner

Spring football practices at New Mexico State are more than just calisthenics and repetition.

While established programs have the luxury of polishing the existing product and tinkering with the gadget plays in the spring, NM State is taking the month-long workouts as a true extension of the season linking toward the coming fall. Developing good work habits, learning assignments and refining the offense under new coordinator Doug Martin are at the top of the things head coach DeWayne Walker wants to see accomplished.

Let me share what I am looking to see as our month of workouts unfolds.

Even though NM State is going to rely on the pass, I think it is important that the team has a consistent run game. The Aggies don't have to rewrite the record book for rushing yards, but they do have to have a ground game that opponents respect.

The move of Kenny Turner to halfback puts the team's most explosive player from last year in the open field with a chance to break plays and give defensive coordinators heartburn. Think Johnny Rodgers, Warwick Dunn and other smaller backs whose quickness and speed made their teams offense explosive.

Robert Clay, who was a valuable utility player last year, proved he can deliver consistent rushing performances, and add Germi Morrison, a running back who has the billing as someone that can make big plays.

Another aspect of the team's development I would like to see improve this spring is the pass rush. Walker has added two down linemen from the junior college ranks, Walton Taumoepeau and Sean Brown.

Taumoepeau can be a dominant and will pair with last year's freshman find Augafa Vaalu in the middle as the run stoppers.

Brown joins the returning duo of Pierre Fils and Donte Savage who were one of the most consistent parts of the defense Walker's first year.

The league is still heavy on passing and if the Aggies can find a consistent way to keep rival quarterbacks off balance it will be easier to get the defense off the field.

One final thing, I think would go a long way is developing some swagger. Swagger is something that comes with confidence and confidence leads to success. Not false bravado, but a solid blend of knowledge of the game plan, ability and the "expect victory" mentality. The swagger that comes from the inner strength that carries you through the storms of a season to the rewards of a season of achievement.

Spring practice will run through the rest of April with the final spring scrimmage April 30. That is enough time to continue to grow the seeds that Walker planted

Tale of two seasons

A closer look into college golf: How teams are selected for the post season

Scott Lieberwirth
Men's Golf Head Coach

This past weekend marked the unofficial beginning to the golf season. For most, the Masters gets golfers excited about the upcoming season. This year was no exception.

Golf is mainly a summertime sport, but college golf is played during the fall, winter and spring. Unlike most college sports, we have two distinct in-seasons - fall and spring. Our conference and NCAA Championships are played in the spring, but it's also important to play well in the fall for improving your national ranking.

The NCAA National Championship is the primary goal for the 301 NCAA Division I men's golf programs. Thirty teams compete for three rounds of stroke play, and the best eight teams after stroke play have a match play tournament to determine the national champion. The Aggies' last appearance in the NCAA Championship was in 1995.

To get to the national championship, you must finish in the top five at one of the six NCAA regional sites. We have been very close to advancing to the national championship in recent years. We have narrowly missed out of the Big Dance in 2006, 2008 and 2010.

There are two ways to punch a ticket to the NCAA Regionals: being an automatic qualifier (AQ) by winning your conference championship or by earning an at-large selection based on your national ranking. Just think of the NCAA Basketball Tournament, it's very similar. In golf, 81 teams and 45 individuals (from non-advancing teams) compete in the NCAA Regional. Three regional sites have 13 teams and 10 individuals and the other three sites have 14 teams and five individuals, totaling 75 players at each regional site.

There are 28 teams that will earn a spot into the NCAA Regional by winning their conference championship. This leaves the remaining 53 highest-ranked teams according to Golfstat (not already in as an AQ) to round out the 81-team field. In recent years, the bubble lies around the 70th-ranked team. Currently, your Aggies are ranked No. 58 in Golfstat. We're not a lock just yet, but a good showing this weekend at San Jose State will put us in great shape for an at-large selection with only the WAC Championship remaining on our schedule.

Are you still with me?

How teams get ranked is the confusing part. Basically, we need to beat as many teams as possible at each tournament we play. Like other sports, golf has an actual win-loss record for each team over the season. For example, in a 15-team tournament, if we finish in third place, we would have wins on 12 teams and losses to two teams. Our win-loss record would be 12-2. Currently, our win-loss record for this season is 101-38-2.

The key to moving up the rankings is by beating higher ranked teams. We have done a decent job of that this season. However, golfers by nature are never satisfied, and neither are we.

A Masters tournament like no other

Schwartzel wins as the young McIlroy unravels

Golf Doctor

Golf is really a cruel game. It can lift you to the top of the world one moment and leave you in the depths of despair the next. Seeing Rory McIlroy's meltdown in the Sunday, April 10, Masters final round was difficult to watch. Big-time sports are often like that.

For those of you who didn't follow the Masters, Irishman McIlroy led the tournament for three days in a row, starting out on fire by shooting a 65 on Thursday. He followed with a 69 and 70 Friday and Saturday to go 12-under par. He was picked as a favorite to win by a number of leading golf media people, even though he missed the cut last year. After truly brilliant play for three days on a difficult Augusta golf course, he led the field by four shots as he teed off Sunday afternoon.

It's not certain if McIlroy became unnerved. He couldn't help but hear the stupendous roars of the crowds following Tiger Woods after he charged to a 31 on the front nine, putting him 10-under and one shot back. Or if he simply fell victim to brain-numbing nerves as he realized his game was a little loose this day, and he would need his best performance on the back nine.

He missed two short putts for pars on the front nine (making bogeys), but made a birdie on seven, mostly keeping it together. But then the unimaginable and unexplainable happened. On the long dogleg left 10th hole he snap hooked his driver into the pine trees on the left and wound up between two cabins, 350 yards from the green. He made 3-over-par 7. Instead of four shots ahead at the start of the day, he was now three behind, and the unraveling had already begun.

In the ensuing eight holes McIlroy would miss tap-in putts and give away another four strokes, finishing with an 80 – the worst final-round score by a leader in Masters history. The meltdown even eclipsed Greg Norman's 1996 disaster as he led by six strokes and shot a self-destructive 78 on Sunday, losing to Nick Faldo.

The 2011 Masters was won by little-known South African Charl Schwartzel – ranked 27th in the world – who finished his round by making birdies on 15, 16, 17, and 18, for 14-under par. You could tell right away that something special might happen as Schwartzel missed the green on the first hole by a good 13 yards, and then took his putter and ran it some 100 feet up a grassy slope and made a miraculous birdie.

Two holes later he lofted a wedge from 114 yards in the fairway, and it slam-dunked in the hole for eagle. At that point he shared the lead with McIlroy at 11-under. Through the spell-bound and electrifying afternoon, the leader board became so crowded that as many as eight players held the lead or shared the lead. But after Schwartzel's flurry of birdies starting on the 15th hole, he alone led by one as he stepped on the 18th tee.

In 1986, Greg Norman, having reeled off four birdies in a row, was tied with Jack Nicklaus as he stepped to the 18th tee, but he choked and made a bogey, and, of course, Nicklaus won in storybook fashion.

Schwartzel didn't choke; his 15-foot putt found the hole for a three and a two-shot victory. It was 50 years to the day since fellow South African Gary Player's win in 1961.

Tiger would finish four back of Schwartzel and tied for fourth. Showing signs of life on the greens in his four rounds, Tiger's putter failed him once again. In my view, he let another major, which he had a legitimate chance to win, slip away. Substitute a 68 for his 74 on Saturday, and he's right there.

Still, I don't care if you dislike Tiger or cheer for him, his run of birdies and an eagle on the front nine and seeing him take a share of the lead made tournament golf seem normal again.

But then watching him miss a gimme putt for par on the 12th let the wind out of the sails. He also missed a 3-footer on Saturday that left viewers stunned.

Back to Rory McIlroy. Print media on the Emerald Isle were harsh. The Irish Times ran the following headline on Monday: "McIlroy slips from master to bogey man on final day." "Masters meltdown as Rory fights off tears," read the Irish Independent. In London, The Guardian wrote, "McIlroy did not fade out of the contest. He crashed out of it." In the Irish News it was, "Rory shattered," and the Belfast-based News Letter called it a "horror show."

Reflecting back on a double bogey on the 12th and finding the creek with his drive on 13, in Rory's own words, "I realized then that I didn't have a chance; once I hit that tee shot left on 13 I was done."

As I watched the events unfold on McIlroy's disastrous 10th hole, I kept asking myself, "How can this be happening?" John Daly might do such a thing, but not Rory. Rory did the same thing in last year's British Open when he opened with a 63 and shot 80 the next day, which should have been an indelible lesson from a major.

Several days later I tried to come up with an explanation based on my knowledge of the golfing mind, mental toughness and performance coaching principles. The fact is that, despite his remarkable golf résumé, prodigious golf game, and previous tour wins, he is 21 years of age, and looks like he could be in high school – too immature to have acquired a killer instinct.

It's possible that his collapse was caused by a failure to respond to his significant lead over the field. He should have been looking to separate himself further from the other players on the golf course, making them thinking they were playing for second place – a bit like the way champion tennis players try to bludgeon their opponents into giving up.

In 1997, at age 21, Tiger shot 40 on his very first nine at Augusta and then proceeded to obliterate the field in the following 63 holes, perhaps out of anger or out of some take-no-prisoners combat training his father taught him.

Pressure affects people differently. The brain can play tricks when you are placed in a situation where the whole world expects you to perform in a manner that you are not accustomed to. A big lead at Augusta on Sunday is something Rory had not experienced before. He tried way too hard and didn't slow the game down. Sunday afternoon at the Masters can be overwhelming; it was out of Rory's comfort zone, a phenomenon that he may not have even been consciously aware of.

On Sunday, rather than storming off the course in disgust, McIlroy made himself available for the post round interview, as he stood tall and faced the questions like a gentleman. When asked what he learned on a rough day he said: "This is my first experience at it, and hopefully the next time I'm in this position (leading) I'll be able to handle it a little better ... it was a character-building day, put it that way. I'll come out stronger for it."

Terrel De Rouen, left, of Oñate High School, was named as the nmpreps.com 5A Most Underrated Player of the Year. Mando Marshall, right, of Las Cruces High School, was named the website's 5A Junior of the Year.

Basketball players earn NMPreps.com awards

Five Las Cruces have earned post-season accolades from the website nmpreps.com for their efforts during the recently completed 2010-11 high school basketball season.

The boys 5A state champion Oñate High School Knights earned four awards, led by senior guard Tim Jacobs, who won both 5A Player of the Year and 5A Guard of the Year.

Jacobs' backcourt-mate, Terrel De Rouen, won the 5A Most Underrated Player Award, and Knights coach Saul Perez won the 5A Coach of the Year Award.

Las Cruces High School's Mando Marshall won the award for 5A Junior of the Year.

David Garrard, Joshua Cribbs and Richard Alston, along with former Canadian footballer Marcus Crandell.

Quarterbacks Matt Christian and Andrew Manley have both caught Martin's eye in spring ball and said they both bring a unique set of attributes to the field that will help the Aggies.

Manley, who played in five games last season for the Aggies, likes Martin's up-tempo system.

"I watch the film from Kent State and it's amazing the things he brings with his offense over here," he said. "It's fast moving so we can make some big plays and get our playmakers the ball."

Manley completed 63 of 121 passes last season for 604 yards. Under the new system, he looks to improve those numbers.

"I'm learning the new system, picking up blitzes and working on hitting my receivers whenever I can," he said. "I like how upbeat it is and it's real fun running a high tempo offense."

To set up the passing game, the Aggies will have to establish the ground attack. Sophomore running back Kenny Turner, who rushed for 461 yards in 10 games last season before being sidelined with a knee injury late in the season, says he is up to the challenge. He puts in at least an hour a day outside of practice studying the nuances of the offense and is glad to be back on the field.

His goal for the spring is to know the offense inside and out.

"I just want to have everything in the back of my head," Turner said. "The main thing is to get real comfortable. It's not too difficult (learning the new offense) as long as you have a football IQ."

There are still plenty of opportunities for fans to watch Martin's offense develop as the Aggies host eight more practices before the annual Crimson-White game.

• The Las Cruces Transit System had four buses on display on Saturday in anticipation of buses taking to the roads on Monday. Transit Director Ray Peterson said buses would stop at every block until signs were erected.

• Doña Ana Elementary students planted a Mexican Elder tree in memory of Travis Ward, a teacher at the school who had succumbed to cancer. It was the second tree planted in memory of the teacher, as the first one – bought and paid for by the students – had been uprooted and stolen. Doña Ana Girl Scout Troops Nos. 668 and 94 pledged to erect a fence around the memorial to make sure the tree stayed put.

In the news

Police audit review released

Las Cruces Police Chief Richard Williams gave his report of findings by a company reviewing disputed police actions that found officers didn't act properly in two of three cases, but the department did take disciplinary actions against those officers.

Police Executive Research Forum of Washington, D.C., backs the department's Professional Standards Unit response to the complaints, according to the report given to the City Council Monday, April 11.

One complaint was of excessive use of force by a city police officer when a police car door was used to stop a suspect, which Williams said was against department policy. Another claim was that an officer improperly used a department vehicle for personal use, which was confirmed. A claim that an officer failed to enforce a child custody order was found to be unsupported by department policy, Williams said.

Pearce sets town hall meeting

Congressman Steve Pearce will hold a town hall meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 16, at the Cineport 10 Theater, 700 S. Telshor Bldv., to speak to residents about jobs, the national debt and his recent work in Washington.

Pearce will also take questions and comments from constituents. For more information, call 855-473-2723 or visit www.pearce.house.gov.

Park robbery suspects nabbed

Las Cruces Police have arrested four young men for their alleged involvement in an early-morning assault and robbery of a 75-year-old woman at Young Park.

The woman was on a walk through Young Park when she was approached by four young men at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday, April 13. The woman was grabbed from behind and placed in a choke hold. She lost consciousness and awoke to find her Mini Cooper missing. A short while later, a Las Cruces Police officer located the woman's vehicle traveling on Picacho Avenue with the suspects inside, who were arrested and charged.

Restaurant supports charities

Red Brick Pizza will donate 15 percent of proceeds Monday, April 18, to Catholic Charities of the Diocese of Las Cruces.

Customers just need to mention Catholic Charities. Red Brick Pizza is located at 2808 N. Telshor Blvd.

— PUBLIC NOTICE — Members Sought for Ratepayer Advisory Committee

Qualified city residents are being sought to serve on the City of Las Cruces Ratepayer Advisory Committee (RAC), which is an ad hoc City board. The RAC will function as a ratepayer advisory board in City utility rate hearings before the Las Cruces Utilities Board on behalf of the City's residential and small commercial customer rate classes. The RAC will file testimony and evidence at rate hearings on behalf of the city's residential and small commercial customer ratepayers, and will represent their interests in the Utilities Board rate proceedings.

TO QUALIFY FOR APPOINTMENT AS A MEMBER OF THE RAC, A RESIDENT MUST BE:

A registered voter and a Las Cruces utilities customer for at least one year. Also, applicants cannot be an elected official, have been appointed to public office, be a current City employee, be a contractor or consultant or have a contractual relationship with the City for the benefit of the Las Cruces Utilities.

APPLICANTS SHOULD HAVE SIGNIFICANT TECHNICAL EXPERTISE IN ONE OR MORE OF THE FOLLOWING FIELDS: Banking and finance, business, economics, engineering, related utility management, or any other skills or experience that may be of value to the rate making process.

People interested in applying for the RAC should call the city clerk's office at (575) 541-2115. People who are hearing impaired can call (575) 541-2182.

Redistricting plans

The City of Las Cruces and City Council are seeking public comment from city residents on the redistricting plans submitted by consulting firm Research & Polling Inc.

Under city charter, new district lines are drawn every 10 years following the U.S. census so that each district represents the same number of people.

The consultant has submitted five distinct plans to be considered for adoption. City Council will select and adopt a new district plan from the five proposed plans.

The plans can be viewed inside the lobby of City Hall, 700 N. Main St., or on the city's webpage at www.las-cruces.org.

Comments can be submitted to the City Clerk's office by email at estherm@las-cruces.org or in writing to: City Clerk's office, P.O. Box 20000, Las Cruces, NM 88004.

The deadline for residents to submit comments is Wednesday, April 27.

A citizen's ad-hoc committee on redistricting will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, at the WIA Building, 340 N. Raymond St.

City Council will hold a follow-up work session to discuss the public's input and comments on May 9.

For more information, call the City Clerk's office at 541-2115. The TTY number is 541-2178.

Tax Day, it's not too late

Samantha Roberts
Business Editor

This year, Americans have been given an extra three-day grace period for filing their taxes, since the typical deadline – April 15 – fell on a federal holiday.

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) announced the extension Jan. 4 – the birthday of yours truly.

In the past, Tax Day is April 15 unless that day falls on a Saturday, Sunday or federal holiday, but April 15, 2011, meets none of the aforementioned criteria.

However, in 2011, our nation's capital will celebrate Emancipation Day – a holiday that marks the signing of the Compensated Emancipation Act – a day early, pushing the April 16 holiday to our beloved tax day.

While the extra time may help CPAs, hundreds of thousands of taxpayers who waited until the last minute to file their taxes will be just as behind, only the latency will occur three days later.

I have yet to figure out why some people wait to the last minute to file their taxes because several businesses, local CPAs and other governmental resources have simplified the daunting process. If you are one of the procrastinators, do not fear, I have composed a few resources to get you moving this weekend.

- If you are still unsure of what form to file, visit taxes.about.com. Although this is not a government site, it is a great place to get started and will point you in the right direction. This site also has a step-by-step guide on filing an extension and extensive information on the first-time homebuyers credit repayment.
- If you made $58,000 or less adjusted gross income, I would suggest using H&R Block's website, www.hrblock.com. The site allows participants to file a free 1040EZ form and walks you through several possible exemptions. This was my first year to file my own taxes (I'm only 24), and I thought this site was a breeze.
- I also found a lot of helpful information on www.chiff.com under the "Tax Guides" tab. This site breaks down filing by state and gives detailed information on where to mail federal taxes within New Mexico, what type of form to fill out and other useful web links to New Mexico taxpayers

Transforming Hotel E

Construction begins at local hotel to make room for spa merge

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

Although Las Cruces is not known as a spa destination, two local women are looking to change the notion.

Oasis BodyWorx & Co. will merge with Mercedes Salon & Day Spa, which is currently located inside Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, 700 S. Telshor Blvd. While the two spas mimic each other in some services, their merge will create a complete spa getaway.

Services will include: endermologie; lipomassage; cosmécanique; non-invasive face lifts; European body wraps; detox wraps; Reiki, a Japanese technique for stress reduction and relaxation that also promotes healing; reflexology; craniosacral therapy, an alternative medicine therapy used by osteopaths, massage therapists, naturopaths and chiropractors; all hair treatments, including cut, color styling and updos; manicures and pedicures; make-up application; and massages, such as sports therapy, hot stone, healing and more. The new location will also allow for mud wraps and full-body exfoliation because of the access to showers.

"We will be able to offer so much more," said Mercedes Hollister, owner of Mercedes Salon & Day Spa. "Our old location only allowed us to (pamper) one patient at a time, but the new extension will enable us to serve parties of multiple people."

Renovations on the bottom floor of the hotel will begin Friday, April 15, and should wrap

Cotton prices keep farmers hopeful

Despite the lack of water in the Mesilla Valley, farmers are hopeful that cotton will be a successful crop this year.

High contracts for May encourage producers to expand their acreage

By Marvin Tessneer
Las Cruces Bulletin

A stronger market demand has improved prices, and a poor water outlook has encouraged Mesilla Valley farmers to increase their cotton acreage this year, agricultural agencies have reported.

New Mexico cotton farmers are planning to grow 65,000 acres of Upland varieties, up from 47,000 acres last year, a 38 percent increase, said USDA National Agricultural Statistics Service Deputy Director Longino Bustillos. Planned acreage for Extra Long Staple Pima is 3,500 acres, an increase of 30 percent from last year's 2,700 acres, he added.

"With the world shortage of cotton, growers are expecting better prices," said Tracy Carrillo of New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station.

Cotton growers are pre-irrigating cotton fields with well water to prepare seed beds with ample moisture, said Doña Ana County

Cotton

Extension horticulturist Jeffrey Anderson.

Soil temperatures of 60 degrees or higher are recommended for cotton seed planting to promote seed germination and prevent diseases, Carrillo said.

The Mesa Farmers Co-operative Cotton Gin crew in Vado is making improvements to get the equipment ready for this year's harvest.

"We're getting ready to gin about 30 bales an hour," said Gin Manager Alberto "Beto" Pando. "We could go up to more than 4,000 bales a week."

Last year, Mesa Farmers, which have the only cotton gin operating in the Mesilla Valley, processed 36,618 bales that averaged 480 pounds per bale.

"We expect the number to go up this year," Pando said.

During 2008 and 2009, gin production was in the 25,000-bale range. The Mesa Farmer co-op also added two "trucks," the mobile equipment that forms cotton into mobile modules in the field. The advantage is that the modules can be packed in the field, hauled to the gin yard and held until they can be worked into the ginning schedule. Previously, cotton was hauled from the fields in trailers.

"Ninety percent of the cotton we handle comes in field modules," Pando said.

The Mesa Farmers' gin was built in 1991 when three older gins in New Mexico - Chamberino, Santo Tomas and Anthon - were consolidated.

Mesa Farmers board of directors chairman Ramon "Dosi" Alvarez said he has started planting Pima cotton, which needs a longer season to mature, at the lower end of the valley. He said he is holding his Pima acreage - all organic cultivation - at 600 acres.

Cotton balls are usually ready to harvest in November after a penetrating freeze, but some farmers harvest earlier by using a defoliant to remove the leaves.

Billy Holbrook said he will start planting his cotton near Mesquite within the week, "providing the warm temperature keeps up."

This year, he is increasing his acreage from about 100 to 130, including 100 acres of Pima.

"I'm increasing my acreage mainly because cotton takes less water, and surface water is going to be short this year," Holbrook said. "And the prices look all right - if they only stay up there."

The Mesilla Valley is one of the few places in the United States where Pima can be raised, and growers like the variety because it can bring a higher premium. It needs a longer growing season to mature, and Carrillo termed the growing conditions "marginal." A few cloudy days could throw it off schedule, he said.

Future contracts for May are expected to be $2.03 a pound, compared with the December contract of $1.38 a pound, the National Cotton Council in Memphis reported.

"These are the highest prices I've ever seen," Pando said.

The United States cotton production is forecasted at 127.5 million bales with a consumption of 120 million bales, according to Cotton Incorporated.

The current forecast is that China will export 15 million bales of cotton, but not all from the United States, to meet its textile needs. China's cotton production this year is estimated at $29.5 million in bales, but its textile mill consumption is expected to require $47 million in bales, the National Cotton Council reported.

The cotton acreage increase also is affecting the chile crop production. Chile varieties require more irrigation water, and in addition to the better prices, farmers are seeing an advantage in reduced irrigation.

New Mexico chile production last year was 66,600 tons harvested off 8,700 acres. The 2009 production figures were 72,700 tons off 12,300 acres, the USDA National Agricultural Statistics Service reported.

The 2010 value of New Mexico chile was $41.6 million, a decline from $57.4 million in 2009.

Endowment remembers mental health advocate

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

As a community advocate, John Myers spent most of his life doing what he could to be the change. Now, nearly one year after his death, those who worked closely with him are remembering his name.

"He had such a great impact on our community," said Silvia Sierra, director of Doña Ana County Health and Human Services. "He was a very committed and caring individual, and he was a great advocate."

In particular, Myers addressed the mentally ill and their needs.

"He advocated for the humane treatment of those suffering from the illness," Sierra said. "He was so dedicated, he was on call 24/7, and his office was his vehicle."

Myers and his wife Barbara moved to Las Cruces in 1978 so he could teach social work at New Mexico State University. Myers, who died May 12, 2010, at the age of 73, was a critical component in establishing the Health and Human Services Alliance Advisory Committee and the Jail Diversion Program, for which he served as the director of field operations. He was also a member of the local collaborative to the State Mental Health Purchasing Collaborative, responsible for advising the state on mental health issues and on the Board of Directors for the New Mexico Child Advocacy Network. He served as chair of the New Mexico Citizen's Review Board and was a board member of the New Mexico Friends of Foster Children.

To honor his name and work, Sierra created the John Myers Endowment through the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM). With the help of those who worked closest to him, including Laura Henry and Jessica Hawkins, Sierra hopes to continue his work.

Once the endowment reaches $5,000, the principal from the professionally managed fund will last forever and continue producing earnings. Sierra's vision, and that of her colleagues, is that a portion of the earnings will be designated for scholarships to those suffering from mental illness and returning to school to focus on social work or community health.

"By people donating to this fund, they are honoring John and continuing his vision," said Henry, who now heads the Alliance Advisory Committee.

CFSNM is dedicated to helping the southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the community foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New Mexico for generations to come. CFSNM can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. For more information see our website at www.cfsnm.org or call Luan Wagner Burn at 521-4794.

Hollister's current salon offers hair treatments, massages and manicures and pedicures.

Spa merge

Al-Shamali, owner and spa technician at Oasis BodyWorx & Co., said this is a good thing.

"I have worked in spas such as the one we are opening, and one of the most annoying things about having all the services in one location was the hairdryers," Al-Shamali said, adding that separating the relaxing massages from the noise will be perfect.

Although Oasis will keep its old building (which is located at 525 E. Lohman Ave.) for at least another year, Al-Shamali said it is her goal to move the entire spa into Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces.

"I still have about another year on my current lease, so I will keep the current building," she said. "The spa is good for larger groups, such as wedding parties. I may continue to do those here."

While both women have a clear passion for their present work, neither of them started in the hair or spa industry.

Hollister began her career in criminal justice, but a sudden diagnosis of a brain tumor led her to choose a "more enjoyable path." Al-Shamali was an engineer for 30 years, and said she was tired of moving.

"I was living in Colorado Springs, Colo., when 9/11 happened," Al-Shamali said. "I am a linguist and speak two dialects of Arabic, so I was in high demand in Washington, D.C."

After spending a few years in the nation's capital, in 2005 Al-Shamali said she was ready for a new career.

"I realized while living in D.C. I had no roots," she said. "I knew I wanted to settle down and actively pursue owning my own business. I saw endermologie and thought, 'I can do that.'"

Still working for the government on the side, Al-Shamali was transferred to White Sands Missile Range for work.

Incorporating her background with her spa techniques, Al-Shamali said the treatments are highly engineered and specialized.

"Some of these techniques were created for burn victims for skin repair, so you can imagine what kind of positive effect they can have," Al-Shamali said.

Then in mid-2010, BodyWorx, & Co. merged with Oasis Body Treatment Centre under the direction of Al-Shamali to become Oasis BodyWorx & Co. Although its doors recently opened, "BodyWorx has a team of highly skilled therapists offering tailored massage and body treatments," said.

"We are really excited," Hollister said, adding that the excitement is also echoed from hotel staff members.

"We are very excited to have them in the hotel," said Susan Raitt, director of sales and marketing for Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces. "This is another amenity to offer our out-of-town guests and a luxury for local clients."

Hispano chamber announces job description for executive director

The Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces is now accepting résumés for individuals seeking to fill the position of executive director.

Résumés will be accepted in person from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hispano chamber office, 1990 E. Lohman Ave., Suite 207 (inside the Lohman Atrium Suites), until Friday, April 22.

The executive director of the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces is responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Hispano chamber as well as the ancillary services offered through the Hispano chamber. This position acts as a liaison between the chamber's membership, the community at large and the board of directors. The executive director reports to the board of directors.

Applicants must possess strong verbal and written communication skills and demonstrate proven executive and managerial skills. The individual must also be a self-starter with a high level of initiative, proven leadership abilities and is able to work independently and meet strict deadlines in a multi-tasking environment. In addition, the applicant should be proficient in computer skills, including, but not limited to, the use of Microsoft Office Suite, QuickBooks and desktop publishing software, such as Adobe InDesign or QuarkXpress. Some experience in economic development, business retention, marketing and tourism is also recommended as well as experience in grant writing, business development and working in a nonprofit business structure.

Other qualities include a strong understanding of the local business community, the Hispano chamber and its mission. Bilingual Spanish and English skills are a plus, and a college degree is preferred. Working knowledge of municipal, county and state governments and their association with business development and recruitment in Las Cruces and Doña Ana County is a bonus.

To ensure the best results, the executive director actively facilitates collaboration and partnerships by involving the community and personally promoting participation, volunteerism and philanthropy.

Internal relationships include working directly with the board of directors and board executives to develop organizational policies in support of the organization's mission. As the leader of the organization, the incumbent guides the development of strategic and operational plans for management.

The executive director works directly with community leaders, including major donors and other leading philanthropists and government.

This position exercises judgment in researching, organizing, analyzing and presenting information to assist the board of directors in setting organizational policies based upon which the president and board make organizational strategies and decisions.

Applicants seeking more information, including salary, can call the Hispano chamber office at 532-9255.

City attorney selection

The city attorney position has been filled by Harry "Pete" Connelly. He has served as interim city attorney since the departure of former City Attorney Fermin Rubio in February 2010. Since then, he has ensured the City Attorney's Office ran effectively and all legal matters were managed professionally and with positive outcomes.

Connelly has served the City of Las Cruces for 17 years in various capacities in the City Attorney's Office. During this time, he has grown to become one of the foremost municipal law experts in the state of New Mexico. His diverse knowledge in multiple areas of municipal government law makes him a great choice for the position.

Before coming to the City of Las Cruces, he was the City Attorney for the City of Santa Fe and a Special Assistant Attorney General for the New Mexico Attorney General.

His selection was the result of a statewide recruitment effort yielding 16 applicants. Seven of the applicants were selected to interview with a panel consisting of city Police Chief Richard Williams, Doña Ana County Attorney John Caldwell and New Mexico State University Attorney Bruce Kite. Connelly took the reins as the new city attorney Monday, April 11.

Rosas-Luna named MMC Shining Star

ROSAS-LUNA

Elaine Rosas-Luna was recognized as Memorial Medical Center's Shining Star for the Month of April.

For 22 years, Rosas-Luna has been an integral part of Memorial Medical Center's operations. While supporting various departments over two decades, Rosas-Luna has become an expert and the "go-to" person in the engineering department. She efficiently manages all maintenance requests, keeping MMC's facility in its best condition. She also makes time to coordinate MMC team member special events, such as the Backpack Buddies event and Story Time with Santa. Her loyalty and dedication to MMC has not gone unnoticed.

"Elaine is the cog that keeps the engineering department wheels on track, which keeps every facet of our facility working," said Executive Assistant Linda Kutinac. "To put it simply, Elaine is essential to MMC."

Director of Food and Nutrition Services Kathy Vinyard said, "Elaine is a shining example of what the Shining Star should be."

The Shining Star of the Month is nominated by peers and supervisors based on a team member's commitment to excellence and contribution to MMC's vision of being the hospital where patients choose to come for care, physicians want to practice and team members want to work.

Bud Russo honored by New Mexico Press Women

Bud Russo of Las Cruces was honored April 8 as New Mexico Press Women's 2011 Communicator of Achievement (COA) at the organization's state conference. The COA recognizes one member each year for lifelong dedication to their field and to NMPW, which is open to both men and women.

Russo has dedicated his life to writing and embraced technological advances that have changed the way we communicate.

After graduating from New Mexico State University, he worked for major firms such as Bendix, Black & Decker, American Air Filter Co. and Allis-Chalmers as a writer and publicist. Russo also owned and ran several small companies, one of which - Writer's Ink - opened the door to traveling the world writing for video productions for Allen-Bradley.

Back in New Mexico, where he has started a new career as co-owner of Explore! New Mexico, he produces multi-media podcasts, radio stories and newspaper articles, while using multiple forms of social networking media to help tell his stories.

Russo also contributes to the community as a board member of the Las Cruces Press Women and the Foundation for Las Cruces Museums.

Clark promoted at IWA

CLARK

The Institutional Wealth Alliance (IWA) is proud to announce the appointment of Melissa Clark to lead the Dodd-Frank Regulatory Reform Task Force. This task force will oversee and manage the implementation of this sweeping legislation for financial institutions nationwide and its subsequent impact and compliance requirements for the Investment Advisory and Insurance Divisions of IWA.

Clark has served as the corporate liaison to the American Bankers Association and the Independent Community Bankers of America for the past 22 months, including courses from the American Institute of Banking. She has been instrumental in the curriculum design, accreditation, marketing platform, introduction to market and launch as IWA founded the Community Bank Advisor Designation in conjunction with Bankers Academy.

Clark, as executive vice president and junior partner, will continue as research assistant to the CEO for the 43 committees and one task force for the American Bar Association and multiple advisory panels for Federal and State Regulatory Practice and Enforcement, including the Conference of State Bank Supervisors.

Clark is a lifelong resident of Las Cruces, having graduated from Mayfield High School and attending New Mexico State University prior to her employment with the IWA.

Allen receives GRI designation

ALLEN

John Dee Allen, associate broker at Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, was recently awarded the Graduate Realtor Institute (GRI) designation by the Realtors Association of New Mexico (RANM). Allen is a member of RANM and the Las Cruces Association of Realtors.

He was awarded the designation after completing at least 90 hours of classroom instruction, covering subjects, including contract law, professional standards, sales and marketing, finance and risk reduction. Courses are taught by leading real estate instructors from around the state.

Individuals completing the program learn the fundamentals of brokerage and other areas of real estate specialization, allowing them to better serve prospective clients and customers.

Allen joins a select group of residential specialists in New Mexico who have earned the designation.

The institute is designed to educate practitioners about local, state and national real estate practices that affect Realtors, their clients and customers. The designation indicates to the public the individual has obtained a professional educational foundation on which to base the services they provide. Only members of the organization may earn the GRI designation. The institute is more than 25 years old and has graduated thousands of Realtors nationally.

Tax day is coming

Window to apply for property tax exemptions and file valuation protests will close very soon

Gary Sandler's

Connection

If you own one or more of the 85,000 parcels of real estate that exist in Doña Ana County, now's the time to exercise your right to file for money-saving property tax exemptions and/or protest the assessor's valuation of your holdings. Here's how being proactive can reduce your tax liability.

Head of household exemption. According to Doña Ana County Assessor Andy Segovia, any head of household, married or single, is entitled to receive a $2,000 reduction in the taxable value of their primary residence. The calculation works something like this. If your home is assessed at $150,000, your taxable value is calculated by dividing the assessed value by a factor of three, which in this example results in a taxable value of $50,000.

Your actual property tax bill is determined by multiplying the taxable value by the tax rate applicable to the area in which your property is located. In Las Cruces school district 02, for example, the rate is 0.027868, which translates to a property tax bill of about $1,392. When the applicable rate is applied the new taxable value of $48,000, your tax bill will be reduced by more than $55, resulting in a new tax bill of more than $1,337.

Veterans exemption. Veterans and qualified surviving spouses can also apply for a veteran's exemption of $4,000. In our scenario, this exemption would further lower the taxable value of our $150,000 home, reducing the property tax bill by an additional $111. When utilized in concert, the two exemptions will save a homeowner more than $166. That's a 12 percent reduction in the amount of your property tax bill.

Veterans who are 100 percent disabled

(or their qualified surviving spouse) can apply for a 100 percent exemption, meaning that the vet or spouse will be exempt from paying any property taxes on his or her primary residence.

Valuation freeze. If you will be 65 years of age or older by Jan. 1, 2012, and earn less than $32,000 per year, you can apply to have the assessed value of your home "frozen" at its current level.

Valuation protest. If you think the assessed value of your property in 2010 was less than the value established by the assessor's office, you might want to protest the valuation. The process is easy and requires that you submit a simple form to the assessor. A hearing will be scheduled, at which time you can present evidence of the lower value. Evidence can be in the form of a Realtor market analysis, a formal appraisal, or data from websites such as zillow.com and trulia.com. You'd better hurry, however, because protests must be lodged with 30-days of the mailing of the Notices of Value – which was April 1.

If you're not sure whether your property currently carries the head-of-family exemption or if you'd like information on filing, check your Notice of Value or call the assessor's office at 647-7400.

Veterans may receive information regarding their exemption eligibility through the New Mexico Veteran's Service Commission located at 2024 Griggs Ave., or by calling the commission at 524-6220.

See you at closing!

New Mexico State University Board of Regents declared a tuition increase during their April 8 meeting. The increase will generate about 80 percent of the 4.6 percent budget cut state funding will receive July 1.

Tuition increase is good news for local businesses

The higher education budget is critical for Las Cruces economy

Chris Erickson
State of the Economy

State funding for higher education took another hit in this year's budget. New Mexico State University system budget, which includes four community colleges, the main campus and extension offices across the state among other entities, was cut 4.6 percent.

NMSU is the largest single employer in Las Cruces, so a cut in funding is a concern for local businesses as the university is an important customer, not to mention its employees. Overall, NMSU supports directly and indirectly about 20 percent of the county's economy.

For the 2012 fiscal year, which begins July 1, NMSU-Las Cruces will receive $8.2 million less from the state. These cuts come on the heels of previous funding reductions. The university has allowed positions to go unfilled and programs have been cut to the bone.

The NMSU Board of Regents approved an increase in tuition and fees for the main campus that will generate an additional $6.9 million. The remaining $1.3 million shortfall will be made up with administrative savings and by allowing vacant positions to remain unfilled.

While continued state funding is better, tuition increase is a good second best for local businesses it means that the university's local spending, including payroll, will remain relatively constant, allowing NMSU and its employees to continue to be important sources of sales. NMSU uses tuition revenue to buy local products and to pay local workers who in turn spend in Las Cruces.

Of course, higher tuition means students who are paying more to attend NMSU have less to spend on other things. For students who are native Las Cruces and who pay for their tuition out of their own income, the net impact on the local economy is close to zero. Higher tuition means more revenue for NMSU, but is offset by decreased local spending by local students.

But for most students, two-thirds of who come from outside Doña Ana County, and many of whom receive financial aid, higher tuition is paid for by sources from outside the county. This means that a tuition increase brings resources into the county. In effect, higher tuition diverts revenue from outside our community to local businesses via NMSU's coffers. The most important way this happens is NMSU uses tuition increases to pay its employees who then spend locally.

Based on the above logic, one might think that local businesses should be lobbying for higher tuition. To which I say, "Yes," they should, at least those businesses that sell to NMSU or NMSU employees. Higher tuition that resulted in higher local spending is a benefit to the Las Cruces economy.

The above recommendation comes with a couple of caveats.

First, state funding is better than tuition because it subsidizes both local students as well as students from outside the area, so it has a bigger bang for the buck in the local economy.

Second, to the extent that some students can't afford higher tuition and drop out, tuition increases will not result in higher revenue.

If NMSU were to raise tuition substantially so that we lose our advantage as a low cost, high value added institution, NMSU could lose students to other institutions. But as things stand now, even with tuition increases, NMSU remains a low-cost school. Even with tuition increases, being an Aggie is a bargain.

Buy Local business fair

Businesses with 10 employees or less are invited to introduce themselves to the public in a small business fair emphasizing buying locally. The event takes place from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, April 26, at the Las Cruces Event Center, 522 E. Idaho Ave. The event is free and open to the public.

The event's theme, "Buy Local," is intended to promote the concept that buying from locally based businesses contributes to the health of the area's economy. While getting acquainted with these small businesses and learning what they have to offer, attendees can earn eligibility to win gift cards and other door prizes that will be given away throughout the evening.

Only 30 vendors will be featured in the event; however, organizers anticipate staging the event in the future, possibly more than once a year. Vendors who cannot be accommodated in the first Buy Local Small Business Fair will be placed on a waiting list for the next one.

Businesses who would like to sponsor the event are encouraged to contact the event center. Their names will be featured prominently on the event's literature.

For additional information or to get a vendor application, call George Pintar at 680-6515.

City to collaborate on early literacy project

Thomas Branigan Memorial Library will be a participant in the developing Doña Ana County Children's Reading Foundation project. The project, advanced through the office of State Senator Steve Fischmann and School Board Member Maria Flores, will foster literacy among children from birth through third grade. The coalition of local community organizations that already engage in the promotion of literacy in one form or another will partner to promote the mission of the foundation. The foundation is working to establish 501(c) 3 status as a public-private partnership, funded through grants and private donations.

Initially, the foundation will pursue two major avenues of work. The first is forming the coalition to spread the message "The most important 20 minutes of your day – read to a child." The second is to support and fund the "Ready for Kindergarten" program throughout the county that teaches parents best practices to work with their pre-school children in increments of five to 10 minutes to prepare them for success throughout their lifetime.

Nationally, the vision of The Children's Reading Foundation is that every child learns to read early and well, thereby reaching his or her full potential in school and life. The three-fold mission of The Children's Reading Foundation is to:

- Encourage and educate families about their important role in raising a reader;
- Support schools in assuring that students read on grade level by the end of the third grade; and
- Facilitate community involvement in helping young readers be successful.

There will be opportunities for individuals to contribute time, money and talent in support of this effort to increase success for the children of Doña Ana in their reading life. For more information about the initiative and the participation of Branigan Library, contact Lynette Schurdevin at 528-4009.

WAVE seeking participants for print project

The WAVE (Wellness, Alcohol and Violence Education) program and Take Back the News are inviting community members impacted by sexual and dating violence to share their stories in an upcoming Take Back the News Community Print Project. By sharing your story, you confront the stigma associated with sexual and dating violence and encourage others to better understand this important issue. A sense of empowerment can be achieved through the public sharing of your experience. By adding your voice – your story – you also will help others understand how violence affects real people, including survivors and their loved ones. For more information, call WAVE at 646-2813 or visit www.facebook.com/wave.nmsu.

Call for vendors

The Southern New Mexico Pride Planning Committee, which consists of representatives from the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender community and its allies, are currently looking for vendors for the 2011 Southern New Mexico Pride Festival. The outdoor event celebrates and embraces the diversity within the city of Las Cruces and will take place from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. June 18 at Pioneer Women's Park. The committee invites interested vendors, groups and other nonprofit organizations to be one of the many vendors already registered to set up a table or booth providing information about their organization or merchandise to sell. Booths are $5 to $20 and reservations must be submitted by June 14. Donors and sponsors are exempt from booth fees. For more information, visit www.southernnmpride.org.

Comcast offers missing children information

Every year, an estimated 800,000 children are reported as missing in the United States. Comcast New Mexico has launched Missing Kids On Demand and online at xfinity.com/news/missingkids, a first-of-its-kind public service initiative that will make information about missing children available to millions of Comcast video customers and consumers across the United States. The new initiative is in partnership with the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children and will enable Comcast customers and consumers to support efforts by law enforcement across the country to help bring missing children home.

SCORE announces 2011 seminar schedule

Picturing El Paseo progress report

Las Cruces corridor will bring economic and community growth

Bulletin Staff Report

While some Las Crucesians know El Paseo Road was selected for revitalization by the federal government, few are aware of the positive impacts the renovations could bring to the community.

Las Cruces was one of four U.S. cities selected to participate in the 2010 Smart Growth Implementation Assistance (SGIA) Program, developed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and involving the U.S. Department of Transportation-Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The SGIA program provided the City of Las Cruces with technical support to improve community-planning processes and develop a vision for El Paseo Road.

This vision will eventually lead to a redevelopment plan for a vital economic corridor that links the Downtown district the New Mexico State University area. The goal of this collaboration between Las Cruces and its federal partners is to implement longrange planning that incorporates smart growth and livability at the neighborhood level. Below is a break down of the components of the project:

Mobility and safety. This component came to a close with the completion of the Road Safety Assessment (RSA), Oct. 26-27, 2010. The RSA team consisted of nine representatives with planning, engineering and enforcement backgrounds from the New Mexico Department of Transportation, the Las Cruces Metropolitan Planning (MPO) Organization, the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Police Department, Las Cruces Roadrunner Transit, the Federal Highway Administration and VHB Consultants. The key safety challenges and observations from the data review indicate that the El Paseo corridor has significant access management, congestion and safety issues.

According to the MPO crash analysis, the intersection at El Paseo Road and Idaho Avenue has the highest crash rate in the city. The intersection at El Paseo and Boutz Roads has very high peak pedestrian traffic particularly during student dismissal at Las Cruces High School. Poor access management has reduced capacity and increased congestion and crashes due to unexpected vehicle maneuvers. Many conflicts between motorists, pedestrians and cyclists were identified, with a high number of those involving pedestrian traffic consisting of young, aged and the disabled. The consultants provided short-, medium- and long-term recommendations that will help the city develop safer, more reliable and more economical transportation choices. These include policy changes as well as on-the-ground modifications to lighting, pavement, signaling devices and sidewalks.

Economic development. At this time, the EPA Office of Policy, Economic Development and Smart Growth is in the process of developing tools to address equitable redevelopment in areas impacted by petroleum brownfields. The funding for the consultant comes from the Office of Underground Storage Tanks (OUST). EPA consultants along with city staff are looking at how communities can prioritize areas for brownfield redevelopment, conduct research on business development and retention in redeveloped areas and identify methods to get community input from landowners, business owners and the public at large. The focus will be developing tools that will work in a wide range of communities, and the city's El Paseo corridor will benefit from being a model and testing ground. This component began in late February and is expected to continue

Public engagement. The most robust component of the project has been the effort to develop a new and innovative public engagement model. The intention was to involve individuals who may not ordinarily attend public meetings or express their views on city planning efforts, such as seniors, the disabled, students and minority populations. The project offered participants an opportunity to engage in several kinds of activities designed to heighten their creativity and evoke candid opinions about problems and opportunities that exist along the corridor.

Perspective drawing, mapping exercises, Photovoice collages and visual-preference surveys are a few of the activities that focused on concerns, such as walkability, connectivity and transportation, economic revitalization, affordable housing and urban design. The input collected during two intensive visioning workshops is currently being analyzed and a report of the results is expected to be completed in May. The report will include a vision statement derived from the public input, which will be a useful starting point for any future planning efforts to redevelop the El Paseo corridor. Many of the techniques developed during the visioning process will be used during the planning process.

Green infrastructure. Communities in arid and semi-arid climates are increasingly recognizing green infrastructure as a cost-effective approach to storm water management that conserves water. The one-day conference "Green Infrastructure in the Southwest: Challenges and Opportunities" was held August 2010 and drew about 200 people from the Southwest as well as parts of Mexico. The focus of the conference was on the applicability of green infrastructure (GI) and low-impact development (LID) techniques in arid environments, which present the challenge of less frequent, but often very intense rain events.

Participants learned that GI is not new, and is not always hard or expensive. It has many ancillary benefits, including livability and heat island reduction, in addition to the primary objectives of improving drainage and storm water quality. A fundamental principle of GI and LID is that one should design for the common event as well as the extreme event. Finally, successful implementation of GI requires significant adaptation to local conditions. There is no cookie-cutter solution that will work well. The proceedings will be published in a report that will be available to the public in May.

In addition. The Picturing El Paseo website (www.picturingelpaseo.org) is in the process of being updated. New features on the site include: the Road Safety Assessment document, a preliminary vision statement, the results of the Visual Preference Survey, a preliminary data analysis of the public input and PDF documents of all of the public input. The Green Infrastructure Conference Summary Report will be added in May.

For more information on the Picturing El Paseo project, visit www.picturingelpaseo.org or call one of the following city planners: Susan Lowell at 528-3079, Andy Hume at 528-3047 or Carol McCall at 528-3209.

In Good Company: SmartStyle Southwest

'What Not To Wear' without the cameras

New business owner wants everyone to look their best

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

Although Las Cruces cannot compare to Paris or New York in terms of fashion, local fashion guru Piper Gibson is offering styling services with her new company SmartStyle Southwest.

"Las Cruces isn't known for its fashion, but it actually has so many great places for wardrobe staples," Gibson said, adding that she encourages her clients to utilize the Mesilla Valley Mall and Target. "If a client wants to travel to El Paso, I am willing, but there are also a lot of great places here."

Gibson grew up in southwest New Mexico and graduated with a bachelor's degree in textiles and merchandising from New Mexico State University.

"I have always been into styling and intrigued with the fashion industry," Gibson said.

Pursuing her career, Gibson started working for Neiman Marcus in Las Vegas, Nev., as a buyer after graduation.

After Neimans, Gibson moved to El Paso, where she worked for a denim company as a merchandiser and buyer, but the company was outsourced to China, leaving Gibson looking for her next opportunity.

"My love for the Southwest and love for fashion kept me here," Gibson said, adding that she never considered moving to a fashion mecca such as New York. "The Southwest is home, and I am amongst my family and friends."

Noticing her own body changing after childbirth, Gibson said she saw a market to help new moms learn how to "dress right with their new body type."

"There is a different demand here than in L.A. or New York," she said. "We don't have celebrities running around, but I believe everyone, even the 'average' person, should look and feel their best. The services are to cater and help everybody."

Gibson said one of the biggest challenges when it comes to picking out clothes is knowing your body and what flatters or accents target areas, a service that she offers in packages and seminars.

"In addition to my regular service, I also offer one-hour seminars that target dressing right for your body type," Gibson said. "During the hour, we discuss body types, how to dress, what to accentuate, etc."

Gibson also said she likes to pair the seminars with a clothing swap and offers the seminars for as little as $5 per person with a 10 percent discount on all other services to participants.

Though hiring a personal stylist may seem out of the ordinary for some, Gibson said the benefits are endless.

"Everybody wants to feel their best, and women usually drag their husband with them to the mall for advice. However, husbands aren't always the best for this position, and often people will buy clothes they never wear," Gibson said, adding that most people only wear about 20 percent of the clothes in their closet.

With Gibson's services, she said clients receive a free initial consultation that includes budget analysis and discussing what the client is looking to achieve. During the second meeting, Gibson goes through her clients' closet and helps to get rid of old, unworn clothing, including taking the clothes to the charity of their choice. The closet breakdown also includes pairing current clothes to make new outfits and taking photos of the possibilities.

Third, Gibson offers shopping-buddy services for three-hour periods that include picking out key pieces to help utilize current clothes a client already owns.

"Sometimes people have some really great pieces, they just don't know how to wear them," Gibson said. "I always say, 'Don't buy something you don't absolutely love.' If you are shopping and think, 'This is cute but ...' just say no. There should never be a 'but' involved in the sentence."

Other styling tips include:

- Wear nude shoes if you want your legs to look longer. Whether it is a heel or a flat, the neutral color will give the illusion of a longer leg.
- The legs also look longer if you pair the same color pant with the same color shoe.
- Always utilize a tailor. This helps if you are on a budget and find a cheaper pair of pants that may be too long. A tailor can fix this problem.
- Long necklaces are in because they also make the body look taller and leaner. They draw the eye down and create what she likes to call an "instant diet."
- Although some people shy away from certain colors, any color, such as orange, can be great if used the right way. I also always say err on the side of caution. Know your body, and if you don't, find a good friend you can trust to give their honest opinion.

If you are still skeptical about the benefits of a personal shopper, Gibson is offering her services half off during the month of April.

"You may have $1,000 to spend on a whole new wardrobe or only $100. No matter what amount, you don't want the money to be wasted with clothes you won't wear. They will just become part of the unworn 80 percent," she said.

Q&A

Talking business with owner Piper Gibson

What inspired you to go into business?

I love to help people, and I love fashion. Helping people look and feel great is a driving force for my business.

What is unique about your business?

You don't have to be a celebrity to look and feel great, but my business is unique because I give everyone the opportunity to get that star treatment.

Who are your customers?

My customers include anyone who would love a fashion makeover or just some advice on looking great and dressing for their body type.

Where do you see the business in five years?

In five years, I really see my business expanding by training others to do what I do. I would love to have representatives all over who can give great fashion advice and offer services.

What is the best part of your job?

The best part of my job is helping other people. When other people feel good about their appearance it makes what I do even better.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

I keep my competitive edge by keeping up with what is trending in fashion, looking at lots of magazines, checking out celebrities and utilizing the Internet. It is a great tool.

What do you look for in an employee?

Right now, I am my only employee.

What is your business philosophy?

I believe everyone should look and feel their best regardless of age, size or budget.

What is the best business decision you've made so far?

To be my own boss.

What adjustments or improvements have you made so far?

I am just getting started, so I am sure there will be many improvements made along the way.

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

Having a passion for what I do has best prepared me for the business world.

What advice would you give to others starting a business?

You have to love what you do.

What items do you carry, in brief, and their price ranges?

I offer affordable fashion and wardrobe advice, it is like "What Not to Wear" on a personal level without the video cameras.

What is your most popular item?

My most popular service is being a shopping buddy. So many people drag their significant other along for fashion advice, and that may not always be the most honest choice. Having a professional that can look at your body type, pick great pieces for you and offer an honest opinion is a great shopping tool.

What is your opinion of the Las Cruces business climate?

Las Cruces has a lot of opportunity, and since my business is unique, there are a lot of potential clients out there.

What is the most important thing about your business that you wish people knew?

SmartStyle Southwest services is a great gift. Your wife, mother or significant other will love the gift of looking and feeling great. I work with all budgets, and the first consultation is free. All services and gift certificates are 50 percent off during April.

What are your business goals?

I want to find great clients in Las Cruces and expand in the future. When you look good, you feel good, and everyone should have that opportunity.

What obstacles do you face or have you overcome?

I think getting started is a big obstacle, but getting your foot in the door is really another important step.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will on May 4, 2011 at 11:00 AM, Front entrance to the Doña Ana County District Court, 201 W. Picacho, Las Cruces, NM., sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title, and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following described real estate located in said County and State:

Lot numbered 17 in Block numbered 4 of Country Club Park Subdivision, Plat No. 10, Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on the plat of said Country Club Park Subdivision, Plat No. 10, filed in the Office of the County Clerk of Doña Ana County, New Mexico on December 18, 1972 in Plat Book 11, Folio 30.

The address of the real property is 2390 Fairbanks Dr., Las Cruces, NM, 88001. Said sale will be made pursuant to the Decree of Foreclosure entered on March 7, 2011 in the above entitled and numbered cause, which was a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $146,464.88 plus interest from February 9, 2011 to the date of sale at the rate of 6.375% per annum, the costs of sale, including the Special Master's fee, publication costs, and Plaintiff's costs expended for taxes, insurance, and keeping the property in good repair. Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash.

At the date and time stated above, the Special Master may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above-described real property subject to rights of redemption.

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned Special Master will on May 4, 2011 at 11:00 AM, outside the front entrance to the Doña Ana County District Court, 201 W. Picacho, Las Cruces, NM, sell and convey to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title, and interest of the above-named defendants in and to the following described real estate located in said County and State:

Lot numbered 1 in Block numbered B of Edgewood North Subdivision Number One, Las Cruces, New Mexico, as the same is shown and designated on the plat of said Edgewood North Subdivision Number One, filed in the Office of the County Clerk of Doña Ana County, New Mexico on April 18, 1966 in Plat Book 9, Folio 95.

ALSO KNOWN AS:

Lot 1, Block B, Edgewood North Subdivision, in the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico, as shown and designated on Plat No. 666, thereof filed in the office of the County Clerk of said County, on April 18, 1966, and recorded in Book 9, Page 95, Plat Records, Doña Ana County, New Mexico.

The address of the real property is 1005 Jasmine Drive, Las Cruces, NM 88005. Said sale will be made pursuant to the Decree of Foreclosure entered on February 18, 2011 in the above entitled and numbered cause, which was a suit to foreclose a mortgage held by the above Plaintiff and wherein Plaintiff was adjudged to have a lien against the above-described real estate in the sum of $153,349.61 plus interest from February 22, 2011 to the date of sale at the rate of 1.3% per annum, the costs of sale, including the Special Master's fee, publication costs, and Plaintiff's costs expended for taxes, insurance, and keeping the property in good repair. Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash.

At the date and time stated above, the Special Master may postpone the sale to such later date and time as the Special Master may specify.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that this sale may be subject to a bankruptcy filing, a pay off, a reinstatement or any other condition that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, at the time of sale, this sale will be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Special Master and the mortgagee giving this notice shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above-described real property subject to rights of redemption.

Dated: , 2011.

Draft Environmental Impact Statement for the Proposed Pueblo of Jemez 70.277-acre Fee-to-Trust Transfer and Casino Project, Doña Ana County, New Mexico

AGENCY:

LEGAL NOTICES

Las Cruces Bulletin - your legal publication for Las Cruces and Doña Ana County, New Mexico

Bureau of Indian Affairs,
Department of the Interior

ACTION:
Notice of Availability

SUMMARY: This notice advises the public that the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), as lead agency, in cooperation with the Pueblo of Jemez, intends to file a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for the proposed approval of a 70.277 acre fee-to-trust transfer and casino project to be located within Doña Ana County, New Mexico. Details on the proposed action, location, and areas of environmental concern addressed in the DEIS are provided in the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION section of this notice. This notice also announces a public hearing to receive comments on the DEIS. DATES: Written comments on the DEIS must arrive by June 1, 2011. The public hearing on the DEIS will be held on Saturday, April 30, 2011, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., or until the last public comment is received.

ADDRESSES: You may mail or hand-carry written comments to William Walker, Regional Director, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Southwest Regional Office, 1001 Indian School Road NW, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87104. The public hearing will be held at the Loma Linda Elementary School, 1451 Donaldson Avenue, Anthony, New Mexico 88021. See the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION section of this notice for locations where the DEIS is available for review and for directions on submitting comments.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Priscilla Wade (505) 563-3417. SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Pueblo of Jemez proposes that 70.277 acres, within a 102.13-acre tract of land, be taken into trust and that a temporary and a permanent casino be constructed on these trust lands. In addition, a hotel is proposed for construction on the 31.855-acres remaining in fee status. The proposed site is located on the southwest corner of Interstate 10 and New Mexico State Road 404 (O'Hara Road), adjacent to the City of Anthony in Doña Ana County, New Mexico. The Pueblo of Jemez, through its Tribal Gaming Enterprise, will operate the casino facility. The BIA is the lead agency for the DEIS on this project. There are no cooperating agencies. A public scoping meeting for the DEIS was held by the BIA on March 16, 2005, in Anthony, New Mexico.

The Pueblo proposes to build and operate a 24,000-square foot temporary casino while building a permanent gaming facility with a planned 103,500 total square feet on trust-acquired land that is adjacent to a proposed 90,000 square-foot hotel facility located on fee land. Access to the facilities would be from O'Hara Road and the west frontage road along I-10. The temporary and permanent casinos and hotel would include associated parking.

Environmental issues addressed in the DEIS include land and water resources, air quality, biological resources, cultural resources, socio-economic conditions, resource use patterns, public services, noise, hazardous materials, visual resources, environmental justice, growth-inducing effects, cumulative impacts, and unavoidable adverse effects. Alternatives to the proposed project considered in the DEIS include: (1) Trust Acquisition with temporary and permanent casino, and hotel construction; (2) Trust Acquisition with permanent casino and hotel construction; and (3) No Action.

Directions for Submitting Comments: Please include your name, return address and the caption, "DEIS Comments, Pueblo of Jemez Proposed 70.277-acre Fee-to-Trust Transfer and Casino Project" on the first page of your written comments.

GALACTIC

Virgin Galactic has launched its search for Pilot-Astronauts.

This unique opportunity initially involves working as part of the WhiteKnightTwo and SpaceShipTwo spaceflight system test and development team in Mojave, CA, and then taking the experience gained from that program to the spaceline's commercial operations at its operating base, Spaceport America, NM.

You will be the very first commercial Pilot-Astronauts and successful candidates will have to be very special: both a full course graduate of a recognized test pilot school and highly and broadly experienced. Virgin is looking for pilots with significant experience of both high performance fast-jet type airplanes as well as large multi-engine types - not only that but prior spaceflight experience is an advantage.

The first Pilot-Astronaut will support the ongoing flight test program of the spaceflight system to start in June 2011. Additional Pilot-Astronauts will be drafted as the flight test program reaches key milestones towards commercial launch activities.

Pilot-Astronauts primary responsibilities are to operate the spaceflight system in accordance with government regulations and company policies and procedures; delivering a sub-orbital spaceflight service to Virgin Galactic Customer-Astronauts which is as safe and enjoyable as possible.

Virgin Galactic essentials for a Pilot-Astronaut successful candidate: You must be a US citizen (compliant with ITAR 22 CFR §120.15) and hold a current FAA commercial (or equivalent) pilot license and FAA medical. You must also be a graduate of a recognized test pilot school with at least 2 1/2 years post-graduate flight test experience to include a diverse flying background; a minimum of 3,000 hours flying large multi-engine aircraft, high performance fast jet aircraft and low lift-to-drag ratio glide experience (e.g. simulated flameout landings) in complex aircraft.

Very limited exceptions to the above may be considered for those with truly outstanding test flying or spaceflight experience.

Tracey Bryan: Moving Doña Ana County forward

Tracey Bryan advocates high school success through nonprofit programs

By Samantha Roberts
Las Cruces Bulletin

“Every time I advocate for The Bridge, I feel that I can back what I am saying because I was there once before,” said Tracey Bryan, president/CEO of The Bridge of Southern New Mexico.

Born in Houston, Bryan said her mom and mentors who believed in her abilities shaped her future and influenced her career.

Nearing her high school graduation, Bryan had made up her mind that she did not need college, but her mom also had an opinion on the subject.

“I was already making money – an amount that I currently thought was a lot – and thought I didn’t need college,” Bryan said. “But, my mom said, ‘You will go to college, and you will get a degree.’ There was no room for debate.”

While attending Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas, Bryan submitted an article to Blue Bell Ice Cream.

“I started working for Blue Bell during my freshman year of college,” she said. “I submitted an article for our campus newspaper on the popularity of Blue Bell’s commercials. I sent their PR department my story, and two weeks later I had a job. That job led into a career.”

“The whole experience at Blue Bell was amazing. I got to debrief an astronaut that took ice cream into space.”

Bryan graduated with a bachelor’s degree in journalism and said she enjoyed the job at Blue Bell so much because she was able to utilize her writing degree.

After getting married, Bryan and her husband Scott moved to San Diego for his consulting job in 1997, and Bryan began working for a local nonprofit – Jacobs Center For Neighborhood Innovation.

She described the center as a “blend of philanthropic people driven by entrepreneurship and helping low-income neighborhoods.” Its mission is based on the philosophy that residents must envision, drive and own change in their community to make it meaningful and sustainable.

“I loved the work I was doing,” Bryan said, adding that she was surrounded by adults who invested their time to mentor. “As a youth, I had mentors that helped me and believed in me. It was so neat to be on the other side of that fence. I was a mentor learning to make a community better.”

Ten years after moving to California, the couple was transferred again, this time to Las Cruces. After a short time in the City of the Crosses, Bryan admitted her heart was still invested in the Village at Market Creek, an old community in southeast San Diego, until she learned about a local nonprofit in Las Cruces.

“I saw an ad for The Bridge (known as REI from 2007-09) and I thought it was interesting work,” Bryan said.

She sent her résumé to the board because she said she was only interested in learning more about the nonprofit.

“I met with the board to share my stories from San Diego because I truly believe what they are doing there are lessons people all over the world are going to learn.”

The rest is history. As president/CEO of The Bridge, Bryan is responsible for fulfilling their vision – to create an environment that allows all students to graduate with skills to compete in an international workforce.

“The Bridge is charged with collaboration,” she said. “The name is perfect because we connect business partners with educational opportunities within the community.”

“Right now, early college high schools are working across the country. They have a 90 percent graduation rate and more than half of the attendees are first-generation (college students). In Las Cruces, not one student has dropped out. This is a model for the Doña Ana County.”

“I want to help the whole country move forward.”

TRACEY BRYAN,
president/CEO

Bryan said more early college high schools that target industry professions are key to the country’s success.

“They are so beneficial because in four years, students receive a high school diploma and a two-year degree,” she said. “Students who attend these high schools are also less likely to need remediation courses, which costs tax payers a lot of money. This model cost 16 percent less than the average, normal high school.”

Bryan said she is also a big believer in dual-credit courses because they also reduce the likelihood of needing remedial courses and increases the odds that a student will attend college.

In addition to creating extended and alternative education, Bryan said she would like to see Las Cruces become a community of mentors, such as the ones who helped her as a teen.

“Whether (the mentors) come from home, other students, teachers or businesses, young people need people to say they can do it,” Bryan said. “They need a bigger vision for themselves.”

Continuing to partner with community leaders, Bryan said she believes The Bridge and Las Cruces have the skills to succeed.

“The Bridge already has great assets,” she said. “But we need to build a pipeline so kids don’t leak out and can make it to the end, whether that is a two- or four-year degree. Success in workforce happens at different levels.”

“I have had some pretty cool jobs, but this is at the top. I can make an impact here. (Las Cruces) has all the elements to make an impact on improving education.”

Although she has little time for any hobbies, Bryan said her work is her passion and creates plenty of fun. She also said she gets excited thinking about the nonprofit’s future possibilities.

“It is a blast to do work that matters,” she said, adding that she does not take her responsibilities lightly. “(Las Cruces) is a neat community. There is a willingness to collaborate. If The Bridge is successful in implementing some of their educational projects that prevent dropouts, the whole state can benefit.”

Dropouts affect an entire community because those students are not equipped with the education to be members of a higher workforce, Bryan said.

“I truly believe that industry jobs – high paying middle class jobs – that require a two-year degree are the future leader of employment,” Bryan said. “That is the area we need to be sending young people to train.”

“It is my personal goal to measure program outcomes and share the information. What works here could work in the rest of the country. I want to help move the whole country forward.”

Artists decorate wooden hearts for a good cause

By David Edwards
Las Cruces Bulletin

More than 90 artists have pumped their creative energies into creating some original art using wooden hearts as a common thread. And, as is often the case, the artists are donating their time and talents for a good cause – the AVANCE Corazones de Familia HeART Auction.

AVANCE is a relatively new nonprofit group whose mission is to unlock “America’s potential by strengthening marginalized families in at-risk communities through effective parent and child education and support programs.” The program’s philosophy could perhaps be best summarized as “Parents – the first teachers. Home – the first classroom.” The name is derived from the Spanish word meaning “to advance.”

While only in its second year in New Mexico, AVANCE has been around for 38 years in Texas (where it started) and elsewhere. A little more than two years ago, the El Paso group was being urged to offer classes in southern Doña Ana County. That started the expansion into New Mexico.

“We focus on parenting skills, primarily,” said Public Outreach Coordinator Rebecca Cram. “When the mothers come to their classes, they bring their children, and the children are provided education in numeracy, literacy, childhood development, fine and gross motor skills through specifically designed activities.”

Yearlong classes are offered in a number of locations across the county. Classes meet once a week for three hours.

Offerings are:

- Parenting education – addressing literacy issues, health education and economic opportunities leading to improved quality of life
- Self-investment – which includes life-skills such as budgeting, nutrition, English as second language training, promoting economic self-sufficiency and preparing children for academic and personal success
- Toy making – encouraging education through play and enhancing parent-child interaction.

AVANCE provides healthy and safe educational and child development centers located in community centers, parish halls and elementary schools from Hatch to Sunland Park. The class schedule roughly follows the school year and after completing it, many of the participants sign up for a second year.

Parents with a child from birth to 5 years of age – or those expecting – qualify for the free classes. Grandparents and child caregivers can also qualify.

According to Executive Director Anthony Trujillo, AVANCE’s livelihood is grants.

“We have the AmeriCorps grant, which gives us 16 AmeriCorps workers and for the last two years we have had a significant grant from the Kellogg Foundation,” Trujillo said. “But things are drying up, and we are trying to transition to being more locally supported.”

Trujillo touted AVANCE’s judicious use of the funding they receive.

“We are probably the most efficient organization in our whole network in terms of number of parents served versus the money we spend,” he said.

“New Mexico is a poor state, and it just doesn’t have much funding available. We are hoping to develop a local constituency to help fund this program.”

“This is the first time that we have offered classes countywide and we have really been focused on expansion. Last year we had 10 classes – all in the lower valley. But this year we decided to blanket the county and increased it to 24 classes. Now we can concentrate on filling up the classes and improving the quality.

“Public outreach is very important to us – making sure people know us. Our classes enable us to serve about 300 families each year and then the next year we serve 300 more.

We found out that there is something in this county that we never run out of and that’s mothers with babies.”

The HeART auction is a fundraiser, and it is hoped it will be an annual event that will develop into a major money-maker. The auction will also serve to help get the word about AVANCE out into the community. While the El Paso AVANCE office has had a HeART auction for a number of years, this is a first for Las Cruces.

“El Paso holds theirs in February around Valentine’s Day,” Cram said. “We are hoping to draw the Mother’s Day crowd.”

Trujillo and Cram, who is new to the area, have both been impressed by the strong artistic talent in southern New Mexico.

Artists from Las Cruces, the surrounding area and across the state, as well as from other areas around the country, were given a choice of two sizes of wooden hearts. They could paint them or decorate them in whatever fashion they desired, and the end results include everything from burnt wood, leather, watercolors, collage and oils.

The smaller hearts will be sold during a silent auction with prices beginning at $20 and the larger hearts will go up for sale during a live auction. It all takes place starting at 1 p.m. Saturday, April 30, at Peace Lutheran Church, 1701 E. Missouri Ave. There is a suggested donation of $5 for admission. Light refreshments will be served, and there will be entertainment in the form of a string quartet.

Organizations such as AVANCE are changing the lives of the children of marginalized and at-risk parents, so join the artists who stepped up to help them and “have a heart.”

Putting their best faces forward

Sculptors create life three-dimensionally

By David Edwards
Las Cruces Bulletin

Tomi LaPierre is in love with faces. In fact, she loves them so much she considers “the human face and form the most extensive palette imaginable.”

This love is evident in the sculptures she creates. She even went as far as becoming certified in forensic facial reconstruction – recreating the face of an often unknown individual having only skeletal remains to go on. But just creating a face isn’t enough for LaPierre. She wants to communicate expression, attitude and emotion.

Kelly Hestir is perhaps best recognized in this area by the magnificent bronze sculpture commemorating the Bataan Death March installed at the Las Cruces Veteran’s Memorial Park. The Bataan Death March Memorial Monument was installed and dedicated in April 2001, and it took Hestir nine months to complete the 8-foot-tall statue of the three soldiers.

LaPierre is a “techie” and operates LaPierre Electronics with her husband Robert. They take on odd little electronic projects that no one else wants to do.

“He’s the brains, and I am the brawn,” she says.

LaPierre used to do portraits but tells of the day her sister-in-law handed her a piece of clay.

“I asked her what I was supposed to do with it and she said, ‘You make things.’ So I did,” LaPierre said.

Making things out of clay progressed to making sculptures, and her self-described “love affair” with metals led her to work with bronze.

“Bronze is really the ultimate,” she said. “Now don’t get me wrong, I don’t have anything against other mediums, but I love working in bronze.”

LaPierre also enjoys sculpting more than working in two dimensions.

“Sculpture is like having a 360-degree picture,” LaPierre said. “You turn it just a little bit every day, and every day you have a different picture.”

LaPierre has a booth during the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market, but just during the warmer months because she likes to take clay with her to work on models.

“The clay is hard to work with when it’s cold,” she said. “Plus, I am not into self-abuse.”

People frequently come up to her booth and, upon seeing the clay models, ask if she is going to paint metal over them. She takes the opportunity to educate them about the process involved in sculpting a bronze – from making the models to creating molds, the foundry process with its slurry and sprues and finally casting and patinas. It is labor-intensive and not cheap.

But she obviously loves it and loves her faces.

Hestir, who is also known for being one of the co-founders of the ArtForms organization of artists, is working more in clay these days and in smaller sizes than the Bataan statue. A piece she currently has on display at the Main Street Gallery is carved from 100-year-old adobe bricks she salvaged from a demolished building in Mesilla. To keep it from further crumbling, it is sealed in hard wax. She hopes someday to do an entire adobe wall.

She did her first sculpture when she was about 9 or 10 years old by carving a bar of soap. She took a sculpture class in high school and graduated with Master of Fine Art degree, specializing in sculpture from the University of Hawaii.

In the almost 10 years since the Bataan memorial was dedicated, Hestir said she has continued to do graphic design, illustration, painting and even dabbled in animation – she used to create 3-D projections for environmental installations. She has also taught studio classes at the Las Cruces Museum of Art and has re-emphasized sculpture since renting a work space at Mikey’s Place – A Workshop for the Arts.

“I am working more with traditional clay – specializing in portraits of humans and animals,” Hestir said. “My work usually has allegorical themes.”

Hestir was invited by Carolyn and Henry Bunch to participate in the opening of their new Adobe Patio Gallery & Studio in Mesilla and said she will be bringing new works to the Main Street Gallery after its owners Jim and Kris Turrentine purchased one of her pieces.

Both Hestir and LaPierre effectively capture life moments in three dimensions and 360 degrees.

NMSU faculty shines on

Fundraiser supports College of Arts and Sciences

Students, faculty, staff and alumni of New Mexico State University's College of Arts and Sciences saw a different side of the faculty during a unique night of entertainment, music and performances highlighting the talents, research and achievements of all 24 departments of the university's largest college.

"Shine On: Shining Stars of the Past, Present and Future" was held Friday, April 8, at the Las Cruces Convention Center. The fundraiser, produced by NMSU Creative Media Institute's Mark Medoff, a Tony award-winning playwright and Oscar-nominated screenwriter, took months of preparation and commitment from faculty representatives from each of the college's departments.

"Shine On" was a celebration of the extraordinary talent and dedication of the faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences," said Christa Slaton, dean of the college. "The program featured the personal journeys of faculty throughout the college – how they were inspired by their own professors and mentors in life and how they chose to dedicate themselves to helping New Mexico State University students reach for the stars and achieve their dreams. It was inspiring."

The evening began with a reception during which guests browsed photo and personal remembrance displays of College of Arts and Sciences faculty who have retired or passed away. NMSU students who make up the Crimson Quartet opened the night's entertainment, singing their rendition of the "Aggie Fight Song."

A dinner followed with entertainment provided between courses. Twenty-four faculty members from each department in the college presented personal monologues or demonstrations to share with the audience.

"Shine On" was an extraordinary evening," Geological Sciences Department Head Nancy McMillan said. "I was unprepared for the emotional and intellectual impact of the testimonies from my colleagues in the college."

McMillan was one the many representatives who provided insight into their journey to academia and the people and events in their lives who shaped their careers.

"Many of the presenters are people I know well, and yet I saw much more deeply into their lives than I have in all the years I've known them," McMillan said. "Each presentation was significant, funny, poignant and revealing. Together, the presentations expressed perfectly the essence of the College of Arts and Sciences – together we explore creativity in a thousand different ways."

Also featured during the dinner was the animated short "The Way to the Stars," created by CMI faculty and students, as well as a documentary short featuring faculty interviews and focusing on the research and projects taking place within the college.

"I was amazed at the talent, dedication and expertise represented by the faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences," said Associate Dean Kenneth Van Winkle, who coordinated the event. "Their personal stories

New Mexico State University sociology and women's studies professor Mary Benanti performs a monologue she prepared explaining her journey and inspiration that led her to academia at the College of Arts and Sciences' "Shine On: Shining Stars of the Past, Present and Future" celebration.

described what the College of Arts and Sciences offers to the students of this region and beyond."

The evening concluded with musical entertainment from the NMSU Choir accompanied by the Rio Grande High School choir and led by NMSU music professor Jerry Alt. The performance included a song, "Mars and Venus," composed by NMSU alumnus Justin Raines.

The celebration also provided an opportunity to share with the entire university and community the unique role that the college plays in the lives of every student who graduates from NMSU. Those in attendance included NMSU President Barbara Couture and Provost Wendy Wilkins, Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima and Regents Chair Laura Conniff, and regents Mike Cheney and Chris Dulany.

Proceeds from the dinner will fund the Dean's Fund For Excellence, which in addition to helping students also will provide support for faculty and researchers in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Call to Artists

LAST CHANCE

NEW MEXICO FILMMAKERS SHOWCASE

The New Mexico Film Office announced a call for entries for the 2011 New Mexico Filmmakers Showcase in Albuquerque May 13-16 at the Guild Cinema. The showcase is an annual event featuring a vast range of creative talent of New Mexicans from around the state. Last year, nearly 100 filmmakers had their work screened.

The showcase is open and free to the public, with no cost to enter a film or attend the screenings. This year's deadline for entries is Friday, April 15.

A panel of local film professionals will critique the films in various categories, and winning films will be traveled around the state by the New Mexico Film Office in collaboration with local theaters and public access channels. Narrative, documentary, animation and experimental films all qualify for entry. There is no minimum run time and the maximum run time is two hours.

As the guild has a limited amount of screen time, film submissions will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Friday, April 15. Entry forms will be at www.nmfilm.com. For more information, call 505-255-1848 or 505-476-5611.

SOUTHWEST JEWISH ARTS FESTIVAL

Temple Beth-El of Las Cruces has issued a call for artists for a juried art show, the Southwest Jewish Arts Festival, which will be held Sunday, June 12, at Temple Beth-El. The show is open to Jewish artists from New Mexico and the El Paso area. The media are painting, sculpture, printmaking, ceramics, fiber arts and jewelry. Entry forms are located at the Temple website, www.tbcl.org. For more information, call 524-3380. Submissions are free and must be postmarked no later than Friday, April 15.

'THE 25TH ANNUAL PUTNAM COUNTY SPELLING BEE'

Auditions for the musical "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee" will be held from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, April 16, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St. Needed are four women and five men between the ages of 16 and 40. Auditions will consist of cold readings from the script and singing selections from the score. Rehearsals are May 23-June 23, with a run schedule June 24-July 10 with possible extension to July 17, should audience response warrant.

For more information, contact director Tom Smith at tomsmith@nmsu.edu or 635-5194.

Thursday and Friday, April 21 and 22, at the Champion Studio, 12410 Montwood in El Paso.

Rehearsal and performance dates will be Sept. 19-Oct. 9. The production will be staged at the Plaza Theatre in Downtown El Paso. Those auditioning are asked to bring a headshot and bio as well as appropriate footwear. Street shoes will not be allowed in the audition space. Cast members will be paid and contracts will be issued – performers must have their schedules available. For more information, call the opera at 915-581-5534 or email info@epopera.org.

RIO RANCHO MEDICAL CENTER

Presbyterian Healthcare and Distinctive Art Source are inviting participants in a call to artists for the new Rio Rancho Medical Center in Rio Rancho, N.M., opening fall 2011. Artwork selected by Presbyterian Healthcare art committee will be purchased and installed prior to opening for permanent display in the new Rio Rancho Medical Center. For more information, call Jen Lundeen at 703-956-1946.

MAIN STREET GALLERY CENTENNIAL EXHIBIT

The Main Street Gallery is celebrating the New Mexico Centennial, the annual Southwest Chile Harvest and the 2011 Main Street SalsaFest. The gallery is sponsoring a juried exhibition of artwork related to the Chile theme. The entry deadline is July 15. The dates of the show are Aug. 27-Sept. 27. For details and a prospectus of this juried show, contact the Main Street Gallery/Big Picture at 647-0508 or exhibit@mainstreet-gallery.com. In the subject area of the email, write "Chile Exhibit Entry" or "Chile Exhibit Question."

BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

The Branigan Cultural Center seeks proposals for solo and group exhibitions to be presented in 2012. Artists living and working in the Southwest or working with themes of cultural significance are eligible to submit.

Artists/groups must exhibit in 2012 on dates determined by the cultural center. Proposals should clearly indicate the types of objects that will be displayed (paintings, sculpture, etc.) and estimated linear and/or square footage of exhibition space needed for presentation of the exhibit. Final determination of square footage devoted to the presentation of the exhibition will be made by the Branigan Cultural Center.

For consideration, submit the following proposal materials:

- A brief statement on the proposed exhibit, including the medium of works to be exhibited, theme or general content of the show and title of proposed show
- Artist's resumé/s or mission statement of group including exhibition record

- A CD-R containing five to 10 images (jpg format) of the works intended for exhibition (or works of similar artistic style and quality to be exhibited)

The deadline for submissions is Saturday, April 30. Submit packages to Branigan Cultural Center, Attn: Director, P.O. Box 20000, Las Cruces, NM 88004. For more information, call 541-2156 or email rslaughter@las-cruces.org.

SNM PRIDE 2011

The Southern New Mexico Pride Planning Committee, which consists of representatives from the gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered community and its allies, are looking for vendors for the 2011 Southern New Mexico Pride Festival. The outdoor event celebrates and embraces the diversity within the City of Las Cruces and will take place from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 18, at Pioneer Women's Park.

The committee invites interested vendors, groups and other nonprofit organizations to be one of the many vendors to set up a table or booth providing information about their organization or with merchandise to sell. The cost is $10 for for-profit booths and $5 for nonprofit booths before June 1, after which all booth fees are $20. For more information, visit southernmpride.org.

Nourishment for the soul at 'Spitfire Grill'

Black Box Theatre hosts enriching performance

Review by Gerald M. Kane

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

For years, I have admired the biting and witty theater criticism of John Simon, formerly of New York Magazine.

In preparation for attending the opening night performance of the current Black Box Theatre production, "The Spitfire Grill," I read his review of the 2001 Playwrights Horizon production of "The Spitfire Grill" in New York. His words stopped me cold.

"The Spitfire Grill" is soulful and transcendent, containing amiable country-flavored tunes," Simon wrote. "It is not often that material moves me to tears, but this was one of those occasions. What even in normal times would be a joy is, in these troubled ones, sheer nourishment."

That's a good enough recommendation for me – and should be for you to call the Black Box Theatre immediately to ensure that you will not miss out on seeing this outstanding, intimate work of musical theater.

Simon was joined in his praise by most New York critics. "Spitfire" has garnered numerous theater awards and has enjoyed more than 350 productions, pleasing audiences from one coast to the other as well as countries around the globe.

"The Spitfire Grill" provides audiences with an opportunity to visualize a world in which healing and comfort can take place despite forces which try to destroy the peace of mind and spirit so many of us seek.

The musical is based on the moderately successful 1996 film of the same name, which in itself is reminiscent of themes in other films in which independent, strong-willed women overcome the boulders thrown in their paths. Films such as "Fried Green Tomatoes" and "Heavy" come to mind.

"The Spitfire Grill" enriches and deepens the story much more than its source, with the addition of the music and lyrics by James Valcq and Fred Alley, who also re-wrote the somber ending of the film and made the musical more upbeat.

Some might argue that the musical ties up its many loose ends in too neat a package by play's end, but in a world so in need of hope, healing and light, why quibble?

The current production at the Black Box Theatre boasts a dedicated and talented cast. Most notably it features the musical talents of Autumn Gieb, Jade Diaz and Virginia Ostendorf. The entire cast sings their souls out, most ably assisted by musicians Karen and Tom Warren.

Nikka Ziemer's direction is thoughtful

The musical performances of Diaz (Percy) and Virginia Ostendorf (Hanna) shine in "The Spitfire Grill," now playing at the Black Box Theatre.

Shelby (Autumn Gieb), Percy (Jade Diaz) and Joe (Phillip Alvarez) find new hope at The Spitfire Grill, the only restaurant in the small Wisconsin town of Gilead.

and nuanced. As always, Peter Herman's scenic and lighting design fills the bill, although I would have preferred to see the 20-year aging of the restaurant spoken about throughout the show. The walls looked all too pristine for me.

The story focuses on the arrival of Percy Talbott, a winsome young woman newly released from prison in the small Wisconsin town of Gilead. Why was she imprisoned? What are her dreams and hopes? All answers are revealed by the show's end.

Percy, with help from the town sheriff, finds work at the Spitfire Grill, the town's only restaurant, managed by crusty Hannah Ferguson (who has her own secrets and longings), and becomes the catalyst for others in town, most particularly Shelby, Hannah's chauvinistic nephew's wife, to re-examine their lives and determine how to treasure each day and the beauty that surrounds them.

"The Spitfire Grill" is a special show that lives up to the standards that Ceil and Peter Herman have established at the Black Box Theatre over the past decade. I recommend it to you without reservations (which I would make quickly!).

"The Spitfire Grill" runs through Sunday, April 24, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St. Performances are at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Sunday performances are scheduled at 2:30 p.m. April 17 and 24. The performances will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 20, and Thursday, April 21. Tickets are $10 regular admission and $9 for students and seniors over 65. All seats on Wednesday and Thursday are $7. For reservations, call 523-1223 or visit www.no-strings.org.

Gerald Kane has reviewed theater and opera for NPR stations and newspapers in New Orleans, Phoenix and Kansas City as well as for the Las Cruces Bulletin. A former member of the American Theatre Critics Association, he is the Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El in Las Cruces. He has reviewed the Santa Fe Opera productions for the Bulletin for the past nine years. He is currently teaching "Studies in Film: Jews on Screen" in the English Department of New Mexico State University.

Classic thriller comes to NMSU

'An Inspector Calls' keeps audiences guessing

American Southwest Theatre Company at New Mexico State University Theatre Arts presents J.B. Priestley's classic thriller, "An Inspector Calls," running Friday, April 15, through Sunday, May 1, at the Hershel Zohn Theatre on the NMSU campus.

Set in 1912, the play focuses on the well-to-do Birling family at their home in Brumley. The family is visited by Inspector Goole, who questions them about the suicide of Eva Smith. Over the course of the evening, as secrets are revealed, the interrogation pushes the family to their breaking point.

"This is a phenomenally compelling thriller," said Managing Director Tom Smith. "Audiences will be kept guessing about the truth of who did what to whom until the very end."

The production, directed by Mike Wise, also features scenic and lighting design by Jim Billings, costume design by Deborah Brunson, sound design by M. David Sage and properties by David Hereford. The cast includes NMSU students Austin Dennis, Valerie Cadena, Claire Koleske, Omar Freitekh, NMSU faculty Claudia Billings and Ken Peterson and local actor Dave Edwards.

All evening performances will be held at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday matinees are at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at the Hershel Zohn Theatre Box office between the hours of noon and 4 p.m. or by calling 646-4515.

It's the perfect combination

Amaro pairs wine with music

By David Edwards
Las Cruces Bulletin

It was a wind-whipped spring evening, the end of a day like so many of them are in southern New Mexico, yet three dozen or so wine and jazz lovers were enjoying the fruit of the vine and the stylings of Roman Chip and Miguel Torres at the Amaro Winery.

The weather had prompted a move from outside on the patio of the winery and wine tasting establishment to inside, under the high ceilings and heavy wooden beams, flanked by shelves filled with wine bottles and wine accessories and walls with the works of local artists.

Patrons sipped wine and noshed on trays of cheese, crackers, grapes, meats and chocolate. A family played Scrabble, and conversations flourished, but appreciation for the music was always expressed. The reds and the whites flowed freely with the constant attention of the two sommeliers and everyone seemed mellow and relaxed – all while the winds raged outside.

Did everyone miss the fresh air and the al fresco sipping and munching? Maybe. But no one seemed to mind. There would be other music and wine nights outside on Amaro's patio.

The family-owned and operated winery has been open for a little over a year.

"We opened in December of 2009," said Kelly Denton Allen, part-owner and manager. "We started doing music last spring. When the weather's really nice we have it on the patio but we move it inside during the winter."

The music will soon expand back to Friday and Saturday nights, after happening only Saturdays with occasional Fridays during the colder months. The schedule is somewhat flexible depending on what else is happening in town.

"When New Mexico State has graduation, for example, we won't have a big crowd that night, so we probably won't schedule music that night," Denton Allen said.

The musical genres are quite varied – in addition to jazz there is folk, soft rock, blues, Southern rock and alternative. There really isn't a cover charge, but it is hoped that music lovers will have a glass or two of the wines that are made on site with New Mexico-grown grapes by winemaker Benjamin Maier.

Maier is involved in every aspect of the process – from the growing of the grapes, harvesting, transporting, crushing, fermenting, aging and bot-

Santa Fe Opera comes to Las Cruces

Review by Gerald Kane

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

For the past eight summers, it has been my privilege to review the season of five operas produced each year by the Santa Fe Opera for the Las Cruces Bulletin. The Bulletin and I have received positive feedback from the reviews.

In part, as a result of the reviews, more and more Las Cruces opera lovers are making the trip north each year to attend these sublime performances. The New Mexico State University Alumni Office programs an annual trip for this purpose. Allen Theatres also has begun a regular opera series of live broadcasts from around the world.

Critics and visitors from around the globe make the pilgrimage to Santa Fe annually to see innovative performances of both classic and new opera productions by some of the best singers in the world.

Recognizing that it is important to "grow" the audiences for opera within our own Land of Enchantment, the Santa Fe Opera embarks around the state to "bring the opera mountain to the people," so to speak.

Performances are arranged for the public as well as for audiences of students in the public schools who have never been exposed to opera.

Las Cruces has been added to the tour for the second year. Students saw the performances Monday, April 11, and for those of us who braved the wind Saturday, April 9, to the Rio Grande Theatre, we were thrilled to see and hear a top-notch concert featuring an original music educational work, "Words and Music" as well as a selection of arias, duets and concert songs.

In short, it was well worth the wind gusts to arrive at this opera oasis. The concert was provided to us at no charge, and the benefits were huge.

We were treated to the outstanding young voices of Santa Fe Opera apprentices Ashley Logan and Alan Dunbar, ably assisted on the piano by Kirt Pavitt, who has been directing the Spring Tour for the past 15 years.

"Words and Music" consists of "amuse bouche" portions of popular arias by Puccini, Mozart, Gounod and, yes, Irving Berlin. The concert section included songs by Samuel Barber, Gounod and an intermezzo by Brahms.

We were honored to have the Santa Fe Opera's General Director Charles MacKay introduce the evening with charm, warmth and class. It set the tone for what we hope is an annual visit – with a little less wind.

OPENING

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY announces "The Cheated Eye," the 2011 Master of Fine Arts show. Works in a wide variety of media by graduate students in the NMSU studio art program will be displayed. The exhibition showcases artwork from Brad Adams, Bethany Carlson, Kyle Coffin, James Gamble, Rebecca Muñoz and Natalia Rodriguez. The opening reception will be held at 5 p.m. Saturday, April 16.

The gallery is located at 1390 E. University Ave. Call 646-2545.

NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM opens a new art show this month that features a talented Las Cruces artist.

"Bonnie Mandoe: Gifts of the Rio Grande" opens in the museum's Arts Corridor Friday, April 15. An opening reception is planned for 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 21. Admission to the reception is free. The exhibit will be on display through July 31.

The show features 40 of Mandoe's colorful oil paintings. Subjects include irrigation in the Mesilla Valley, cotton gins and the Rio Grande.

The museum is located at 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children 5 to 17. Call 522-4100.

LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART showcases the artistic talents of Las Cruces high school seniors during the annual "All-City High School Seniors Exhibition."

Beginning Friday, April 15, and running through Saturday, April 23, the show includes artwork by students graduating from Alma d'Arte Charter, Las Cruces, Mayfield, Oñate and San Andres high schools and is judged by local artists Janice Cook and Jeannie Rundell. An opening reception and awards presentation for the artists will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, April 15.

The high school seniors' creative work covers a wide range of artistic media including ceramics, sculpture, printmaking, drawing and painting, photography and mixed media. The opening reception is catered by students in high school culinary arts programs who compete for awards in creativity, taste and presentation. The four-member student band, "Sunlight Community," will be performing original music.

The museum is located at 491 N. Main St. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Call 541-2137.

ONGOING

LOS ARTESANOS GALERÍA displays "Earthscapes: Painting in Oil," an exhibit of oil paintings by two award-winning Mesilla Valley artists. The many faces of Mother Nature are captured in the beautiful and diverse paintings of Alice Terry and Mark Ploss. The exhibit runs throughout the month of April.

Alice Ploss has very successfully presented her oil work throughout the Mesilla Valley. She creates oils that are quite realistic and colorful. Her bold pieces often depict small elements, such as leaves and flowers, in large scale and are seen in many area homes as well as commercial and public venues.

Mark Ploss, a retired Las Cruces firefighter, represents larger elements nature with oil on canvas. He is especially fond of landscapes, both in larger works and very small pieces. His work spans the spectrum from the grand and dramatic panorama of sky, storm clouds and mountains, to the quiet beauty of the dunes and the flora of White Sands.

Los Artesanos Galería is located in the Old Tortilla Factory at 1910 Calle de Parian. Hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday through Sunday. Call 526-1144.

Javier Bardem stays 'Biutiful'

Actor plays man who experiences constant sorrow

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"Biutiful" is a film that I wish I would have had time to watch again before doing this review. It is detailed and complex, although easy to follow.

It is also a very heavy drama, replete with every sort of human evil imaginable from the self-created type such as trafficking humans to the kind that is rarely preventable – cancer.

It also offers a very different view of Barcelona, one that turistas will never venture to, and one certainly knows that something like this exists in some form or another.

Javier Bardem plays a single parent who does most anything to support himself and his children. Somewhat psychic, believers in such things know he can communicate with those who are about to die, rather than conjuring spirits or ghosts of the past. At times he may be "talking" to himself.

He maintains a relationship with his drug-addled ex-wife, who has become, shall we say, an "erring sister" to support her habit. She assists in helping make Uxbal's (Bardem's) life even drabber.

Most of his activities are dark – dealing in undocumented workers, supervising the sale of counterfeit handbags. At a crucial point, however, his mostly victimless crimes (as he sees it) allow for viewers to "be on his side," whatever that side might be.

Not to mention the fact that he has terminal cancer.

But Uxbal's money-making attempts are all done to take care of his children, two little ones he treats with the utmost respect and tenderness whenever possible. His Alejandro González Iñárritu directed "Biutiful," which earned an Oscar nomination for Best Foreign Language picture.

Though Uxbal (Javier Bardem) has been diagnosed with terminal cancer and he doesn't live the most stand-up life, his daughters – including Ana (Hanaa Bouchaib) – mean everything to him.

desperation is so great that he cannot see the "unseen" effect that his lifestyle and that of the children's mother will have on them in future years. Kids know. They always know.

Uxbal has side relationships with a Chinese underworld-type figure, the one who operates the factory where fake bags are made by indentured Chinese immigrants. With this side story comes another side story, the fact that the Chinese "boss" is secretly gay and cannot, under any circumstances, resist his lover.

A second side story exists, making this film similar story-wise to director Alejandro González Iñárritu's other major work, "Babel." In that side story, we are witness to the trials of an African family living in Spain. Uxbal knows their secrets and does his best to assist them, but to little avail. But both of these chapters seem forced and tacked on. I found it best to concentrate on Uxbal and his efforts, none of which have "honor," to keep life going under the most strenuous of life events.

Uxbal is able to hold his fragile world together until the ultimate calamity befalls him – in an attempt to save a few bucks, he purchases some faulty space heaters to be used in the basement quarters where the Chinese workers live, including one who has helped him with child care. From this point on, his life falls completely apart, his web of mistrust and abuse of others caving in on him.

"Biutiful" (the title is from Uxbal's daughters' misspelling of beautiful) is not a beautiful film to watch. Filled with harsh images and people, it remains a love story, as Bardem's character does his best to take care of his family.

Nominated for two Oscars, one for Bardem's outstanding performance – he remains one of our finest actors when in the proper role – and for Best Foreign Language picture. It won neither.

Lovers of happy endings will be disappointed, but fans of movies with complex stories, fine acting and impervious direction will be more than pleased.

Go see it.

A wasteland or life anew?

Documentary highlights Brazilian trash pickers

The CineMatinee for Saturday, April 16, is "Waste Land" (2010, 95 minutes, not rated, Academy Award-nominated for Best Documentary for 2011). Filmed over nearly three years, "Waste Land" follows renowned artist Vik Muniz as he journeys from his home base in Brooklyn to his native Brazil and the world's largest garbage dump, Jardim Gramacho, located on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro.

There, he photographs an eclectic band of "catadores" – self-designated pickers of recyclable materials. Muniz's initial objective was to "paint" the catadores with garbage. However, his collaboration with these inspiring characters as they recreate photographic images of themselves out of garbage reveals both the dignity and despair of the catadores as they begin to re-imagine their lives. Director Lucy Walker ("Devil's Playground" and "Countdown to Zero," both of which have previously screened at the Fountain) and co-directors João Jardim and Karen Harley have great access to the entire process and, in the end, offer stirring evidence of the transformative power of art and the alchemy of the human spirit.

The screening is sponsored by Friedman Recycling, Keep Las Cruces Beautiful and the South Central Solid Waste Authority.

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the old west, or anything in between – and "movies that missed us," films that are notable but never had a lot of publicity.

The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment. At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico connection, drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state (nearly 500) or perhaps featuring a star or story from New Mexico talent – film festival-quality movies in an old adobe theater.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

Go 'West' for a good meal

Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism students learn through delicious 'lab'

Las Cruces Bulletin

It was mentioned to me during a recent conversation with one of the organizers of a charitable event that the School of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management at New Mexico State University was doing the desserts for their fundraiser.

"Have you ever eaten at their restaurant?" he asked.

I had to confess I had not – and part of me was equating the experience with having one's hair cut at the beauty school. I didn't want to have my stomach be part of someone's learning experience any more than I wanted to have my hair butchered by a fledgling stylist.

It turns out that taking a chance was well worth the risk. Not only did I have a couple of great meals at an amazing price ($8), but I found out it helps the HRTM students not only with the experience, but financially as well.

The 100 West Café is located on the ground floor of Gerald Thomas Hall – the College of Agriculture, Consumer and Environmental Sciences on the NMSU campus. Lunches are prepared and served from noon to 1 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Dinners are served from 5 to 6 p.m. Wednesday evening. With the windows of time being so small, it is best to arrive a bit early, and the place definitely fills up.

100 West Café is nicely, if not extravagantly, appointed with cloth napkins and flowers on the tables. The servers are smartly dressed, and the preparers have their own chefs' jackets complete with embroidered names. They are definitely there to serve and make your meal as pleasant and tasty as possible. Grades are probably a good motivator.

The menus for the week are posted on Mondays – visit aces.nmsu.edu/academics/shrtm/100-west-caf-menus.html – or on a television screen outside the café entrance, with buffets on Tuesdays and Thursdays and an a la carte menu Wednesdays and Fridays. The variety of menus is designed to give the students as much experience with different dishes as possible.

My Thursday buffet was of the Mexican variety – no complaints about that from this chile lover. There were three salad choices – ensalada Mexicana, fresh fruit and guacamole with chips. The entrées were red and green enchiladas and tamales. Side dishes were Spanish rice and corn with jalapeños and red peppers. There was a variety of desserts, including cobblers and cheesecakes.

Everything was really delicious, and the red chile enchilada sauce was some of the best I have had in quite a while – thick and spicy. I left very impressed with everything – from the atmosphere to the service and food.

The next day, I had the potato chowder with smoked salmon and grilled trout with tomato butter sauce. Green beans and wild rice complemented the fish, and I finished with a fresh berry sabayon – berries served in a glass with a dollop of sweet cream sauce on top.

Just looking at the upcoming week's menu makes me want to download another parking permit and return. It does take a bit of planning if you plan to go to lunch. Evening parking is probably a bit easier, and all lots are on the west end of Gerald Thomas Hall.

"We have a number of regular customers – mostly faculty and staff," said instructor John Hartley. "But we are getting an increasing number from the community."

The café has been in existence for about six years, and there are two instructors – Hartley, who teaches the intermediate classes that create the a la carte Wednesday and Friday lunches, and Maurice Zeck, who teaches the beginning foods class that does the lunch buffets on Tuesday and Thursday as well as the Wednesday evening buffets.

Zeck also teaches the advanced course that does multi-course wine dinners four to six times per semester, but those dinners are only available to those on a mailing list.

The students rotate between serving, hosting, bussing and cashiering in the "front of house." They then move along to appetizers, entrées, desserts and even washing dishes. About half the class works in the front and half in the kitchen on any given day.

Hartley said there is a very big difference between HRTM's food classes and a culinary school.

"Our degree is really an applied business degree, and we want them to get familiar and comfortable with food," Hartley said.

I can testify that they are very comfortable, and I wouldn't be concerned about not getting a good "do" for your stomach.

Crossword Puzzles

Diagramless, 21 x 21

Like a regular crossword but with an added challenge. Sleuths must also create the diagram and figure out where the numbers and black squares go.

Student dancers showcase talents

"We are One – Dance and Drum," a show highlighting student dance troupes from southern New Mexico, Albuquerque, West Texas and Chihuahua, Mexico, will present dance styles and rhythms from the Middle East, Sub-Saharan and North Africa as well as American tribal belly dance forms at 2 and 6:30 p.m. Saturday, April 16, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

Dance troupes performing in the show include the New World Dancers and Drummers, Eternal Dancers, Hamsa-Metropolitan Belly Dance, Gypsy Fire, Troupe Afrah, Rakassat Alddhab, Silver Dunes Dancers, The Arabian Chicks and Jewells of the Desert with the Desert Heartbeat Drummers as well as other dance troupes from the tri-states area of New Mexico, Texas and Chihuahua.

Tickets are $5 for the matinée and $8 for the evening performance on sale at My Place Jewell, 140 Wyatt Drive, Suite A, or by calling 639-1616.

Sunrise Elementary teacher wins contest

Barnes & Noble, the world's largest book-seller, announced Victoria Medina from Sunrise Elementary has been named the local winner of the "Barnes & Noble My Favorite Teacher Contest."

Medina was chosen from 21 entries at the Barnes & Noble at the Mesilla Valley

Mall. Medina was nominated by student Sage Hemmerlein. Students were invited to nominate their teacher by writing essays, poems or thank you letters that share how their teacher has influenced their life and why they appreciate and admire their teacher. Entries were judged on the compelling nature of the teacher's qualities, the sincerity of the student's appreciation and the quality of expression and writing.

Medina will be recognized at an event at the Mesilla Valley Mall Barnes & Noble where she will receive a special award acknowledging her achievement, a set of 10 Sterling Children's Classics books for her personal or classroom library, and additional recognition and praise from the community. Sage Hemmerlein, who wrote the winning essay, will receive a certificate of recognition and will be honored at the Mesilla Valley Mall store during a ceremony for the winning teacher.

Medina will now be entered into the regional competition where six winners will be chosen. Each regional winner will receive a NOOKcolor eBook Reader and a $500 Barnes & Noble Gift Card. From the pool of six regional winners, Barnes & Noble will name one teacher the "Barnes & Noble National Teacher of the Year." The winning teacher will receive $5,000 and the title of "My Favorite Teacher."

DACC theater presents 'Simply Maria'

Doña Ana Community College Theatre Arts will present "Simply Maria or the American Dream" by Josefina López at 7:30 p.m. April 14-16 at the East Mesa Auditorium, 2800 Sonoma Ranch Blvd.

The play tells the story of Maria, a young Latina aspiring to be an actress, and her dream of going to college. López is one of the most produced Latina playwrights in the country and, when discussing 'Simply Maria', she said the frustration over the lack of Latino voices in theater inspired her to write her first play.

"I hope to give Latinas an opportunity to play characters that have dignity and courage, qualities that representative of who we are."

Art in Las Cruces

Under the direction of then City of Las Cruces Landscape Architect Joni Gutierrez (who now serves as the state representative for District 33), the colorful palms at the intersection of Espina Street and Missouri Avenue were constructed in the mid-1990s and designed by an ASA Architect team member. "They were the only palm trees to survive the freeze," Gutierrez said.

Other plays by Josefina López include "Real Women Have Curves" and "Confessions of Women from East L.A."

Admission is $5 and children 12 and under are free.

Dance institute hosts Eluza Santos

Brazilian dance professional and guest artist Eluza Santos will be teaching classes in jazz and modern dance with a Brazilian influence Monday, April 11, through Saturday, April 16 at New Mexico State University's Activity Center. All classes are open to the public. Classes are $10 each and $8 for Pan American Dance Institute members. Register at the door or in advance by calling 646-2070.

Look Who's Dancing is Saturday, April 16

Local celebrities and New Mexico State University DanceSport students will compete at the third annual Look Who's Dancing at 7 p.m. Saturday, April 16, at the Pan American Center on the NMSU campus.

This year's contestants include Mesilla Mayor Nora Barraza, NMSU's Paul Couture, Amanda Cruz, Savonne Griffin of FirstLight Federal Credit Union, Lucas Peerman of the Las Cruces Sun-News, Audrey Hartley, and Lt. Col. Andrew Taylor of NMSU's Army ROTC.

Tickets are $16 for reserved seats, $11 general admission and $6 for students. For tickets, call the Pan Am box office at 646-1420. For more information about Look Who's Dancing, call 646-2070.

ASTC season tickets on sale

Tickets and coupon books for the American Southwest Theatre Company at New Mexico State University Theatre Arts are now on sale.

The season will open with the classic drama "Miss Julie" by August Strindberg. Following will be the Theatre for Young Audiences production of "hard 2 spel dad" and the classic screwball comedy, "Once in a Lifetime." The spring semester will bring Neil Simon's beloved "Brighton Beach Memoirs" as well as a High Desert reading. The season will close with the '60s musical revue, "SHOUT! The Mod Musical."

Season tickets are $52 and $48 for senior citizens, NMSU faculty and staff and students. A special Take Your Pick Coupon Book featuring eight coupons redeemable for any performance in any combination is $100. In addition to cost savings, season subscribers also receive invitations to special events, receive priority reserved seating, and vote for annual acting awards.

For more information, call the NMSU Theatre/ASTC box office at 646-4515 or visit theatre.nmsu.edu/astc/box_office.html.

'Comedy at the Cabaret'

The Boba Cabaret will bring well-known comics from across the U.S. to the Boba Café with its all-new 2011 Stand-Up Comedy Series. Show dates are Friday evenings, April 29, May 27 and June 24.

Headlining and kicking off the series will be the "Politically Correct" Russ Rivas. Rivas' credits includes television appearances on "Late Night With Craig Ferguson," "King Of Queens," "West Wing," Comedy Central Prime, as well as a headliner at famous venues including the Riviera Casino in Las Vegas, Nev., and the Improv in Los Angeles.

Opening for Rivas is Dave Graham, who has appeared with Ron White (Blue Collar Comedy Tour), Sherman Hemsley (The Jeffersons), as well as appearances on Comedy Central's hit show "Insomniac" with Dave Attell.

Although stand-up comics can be dangerous to young ears, the Boba Cabaret pledges to keep these performances rated PG-13.

Dinner seats at 6 p.m. with show time at 7 p.m. Cocktail show seats at 8:15 p.m. with show time at 8:30 p.m. Tickets for the dinner shows are $27.50, which includes hors d'oeuvres, dinner entrée, beverage (beer and wine included) and gratuity. The 8:30 p.m. cocktail performance tickets are $10 per person. For reservations, call 647-5900.

T-Model Ford comes to Sparky's

T-Model Ford, the hardest touring bluesman over 80 – and one of the few touring bluesmen over 90 – hits the road in April for the first of four scheduled 2011 U.S. tours celebrating the release of his eighth album, "Taledragger." His tour will make a stop Thursday, April 21, at Sparky's in Hatch.

After a rough-and-tumble 2010 that saw highs of his 90th birthday and sixth marriage and lows of a stroke that temporarily hindered his playing, T-Model Ford kicks off 2011 with a bang. Recorded live with his backing band GravelRoad (their first recording together after touring with him for three years), the newly released album has already received critical acclaim from New England to New Zealand as his best record yet.

'Hanna' kicks some serious tail

Saoirse Ronan is a young marvel

Las Cruces Bulletin

Audiences have a rare opportunity when they watch the new action/suspense/espionage film "Hanna."

They can enjoy the current Cate Blanchett or they can watch the future Cate Blanchett also known as Saoirse Ronan – the young Irish-American actress who made such a splash in 2007's "Atonement" and 2009's "The Lovely Bones."

Ronan – whose first name is pronounced "sir-sha" sort of like "inertia," but she is anything but inert – plays a child trained to be an assassin/super soldier. She out-Bournes James Bourne by hunting with a bow and arrow; dragging deer carcasses through the frozen, snow-covered forest; doing pull-ups while reciting her memorized life history with its invented details and engaging in some very physical battles with her father Erik (Eric Bana).

Hanna is being prepared for the day she will be sent (or perhaps taken) to do battle with Marissa Wiegler (the always superb Blanchett), who has some unknown, but certainly dark, connection to the girl and her father.

The day finally comes when Hanna is ready and a signal is activated so that Marissa and her CIA operatives will know where to find the girl while Erik takes off with a pre-determined plan to meet up when "the witch" is dead.

Hanna is taken to a CIA facility where she is questioned, kills a substitute Marissa and escapes while leaving a wake of dead agents behind. She ends up in Morocco, followed by some of Marissa's associates, led by the really nasty Isaacs (Tom Hollander of the brilliantly satirical "In the Loop" and the "Pirates of the Caribbean" series).

Saoirse Ronan plays the teenage assassin title character in "Hanna," now playing in theaters.

Hanna meets up with an eccentric English family on holiday in their ramshackle RV, a member of which is another teenage girl (relative newcomer Jessica Barden in an endearing role) and the two bond while the bad-dies follow. The tension mounts throughout as Erik wreaks some havoc of his own as he and Hanna race to meet each other at "Mr. Grimm's house" in Berlin.

The entire film, with the exception of the Moroccan scenes, has a gray European feel, which I always associate with those Cold War spy thrillers.

Atmospherically, it reminded me more of films like "City of Men" and is perhaps in some ways a cousin to movies of that genre.

Director Joe Wright ("Pride and Prejudice," "Atonement" and "The Soloist") keeps things moving at a good pace and, while he is normally known for period pieces, he wholeheartedly embraces the action genre. The editing and soundtrack by The Chemical Brothers are excellent.

The story and screenplay by Seth Loch-head and David Farr is crisp, smart and very real. The use of a 16-year-old as an assassin is certainly a new idea. It is effective and avoids any objectification of our female hero. Hanna is an innocent who really has no idea how man-woman relationships work (or in this case boy-girl) relationships work – she hasn't ever seen a television or electric lights either. She has never heard music, and in one marvelous section experiences gypsy guitar and dancing as well as a first kiss attempt by a Spanish boy. Let's just say it doesn't quite turn out the way he had hoped.

Wright weaves elements of fairy tales into his story and some key scenes occur in a creepy, run-down amusement park and the seedy gingerbread-looking house of Erik's associate "Mr. Grimm." The climactic moment even happens with the gaping mouth of a wolf – actually a part of a defunct roller coaster ride – as a backdrop.

When I first saw the trailer for "Hanna" I was really interested in what it was about, as I hadn't heard any advance word about it. I really haven't revealed anything in this review that isn't spelled out in the trailer – we know that Hanna is a trained assassin and a bit about her mission. We know that Blanchett's character is the baddie and Hanna kills a bunch of people during her initial escape. I appreciate not knowing too much else – trailers too often say too much.

I probably knew less than one-fourth of what was to happen and had no real idea where the plot was going. I am tempted to spill a few other small details that wouldn't really require a "spoiler alert" warning, but don't want to ruin the experience for those who haven't seen it. Let's just say there are still some surprises.

Ronan has already put together an impressive body of work at this young age, and I look forward to her continuing career. Blanchett is one of my absolute favorites and can elevate even mediocre material. (Are you listening "Benjamin Button"?) I always enjoy Bana as well and he is thoroughly convincing as a German-accented rogue agent. He even conveys a real affection for Hanna – while helping her with her lessons or beating her up or having his own butt kicked.

"Hanna" was thrilling and engaging. I was never bored or found my attention wandering, despite the flood of spilled soda from up the aisle causing my feet to stick to the floor. I didn't feel stuck with "Hanna" though.

“ The use of a 16-year-old as an assassin is certainly a new idea. ”

Let that special someone know how you feel with a little pizazz.

East meets West at the Tree-planting ceremony

Photos by Niki Rhynes

John Randall helped hang earth flags and decorative art at Galería Tepín Sunday, April 10, during the Border Book Festival. The art was made in honor of Mother Earth and Rabindranath Tagore's 150th birth anniversary.

Sudeshna Sengupta used sand found locally to create an Alpana around the tree-planting site. Alpana is an Indian form of Mandala art that is used to bless, mark and adorn the ground on special occasions such as the tree-planting ceremony.

You are what you drink, too

Natisha Hales
in Dieting*

During the weight loss challenge that recently wrapped up, there were several principles that have stuck in my mind, especially one from our fitness expert Bill Davila.

He said he has the same answer for people who want to lose or gain weight – drink more water. The gain, of course, would be very temporary.

In today's world, where our beverage choices have ranged from caffeinated, sugary, dyed soft drinks to flavorful sugar-free varieties, our bodies have relied heavily on one thing since the beginning of mankind, and that is water. Colorless, flavorless (although I beg to differ), calorie-free water.

Of the materials that make up our brains, muscles and blood, the main component is water. It assists with so much of our bodies' functions – absorbing essential nutrients, boosting our metabolisms, moisturizing our lungs, flushing our systems of toxins.

With so many drink choices out there, we can't forget how important water is and the multiple health benefits that come with drinking plenty of it.

We lose more than 2 liters of water each day from daily activities so it's important to replace that, since water is responsible for approximately 60 percent of our body weight, according to the Mayo Clinic. The clinic suggests drinking a little more than 8 cups of water each day to replace any fluids that are lost.

That sounds like a lot of water, but think about it this way – if you work full time, have an 8-ounce glass of water every hour that you're working. You'll get used to it, trust me. When nutrition expert Laura Smart told us to drink half our body weight in ounces of water, many of us may have thought she was a little nuts, but we adjusted. And the best part is when you're craving water with lemon, not the diet soda you used to have at 2 p.m. every day.

Depending on your lifestyle, you may need more or less water. If you drink alcohol regularly, you'll need to ensure that you keep drinking water so you don't become dehydrated. The same goes for those who drink coffee regularly, like me. I love having a cup of coffee in the morning, but my beverage of choice for the rest of the day is water.

Drinking plenty of water each day can aid in weight loss without you even realizing it. It seems kind of ironic, but drinking more water actually helps the body retain less water (as well as a diet that is not very high in sodium). If you drink a lot of sugary beverages with a high caloric content, replacing those drinks with water will cut a surprising amount of calories from your diet.

And if you're like me, the day you give in to your cravings for a soda, you'll be surprised at how sweet it is, and you won't even finish the whole thing.

Going in for a check-up

Gabby Granillo, a nursing student at New Mexico State University, prepares Riley Morris, 4, to get his blood pressure checked at Memorial Medical Center's health fair held Wednesday, April 6, in the MMC Office Building. The opportunity allowed nursing students to practice checking vitals while helping members of the community stay on top of their health.

Hospital earns certification

MountainView has become noted for joint replacement

By Natisha Hales
Las Cruces Bulletin

When MountainView Regional Medical Center recently became the first hospital in New Mexico to receive the Joint Commission Gold Seal of Approval for its joint replacement program, it was also one of just a handful of facilities in the nation.

The gold seal speaks to MountainView's commitment to provide high-quality care to patients throughout southern New Mexico and the region, said Dr. Ed Sweetser, the physician champion of the team of doctors, nurses, therapists and others.

"It was a very thorough process, one that took about eight or nine months," said Sweetser, who helped launch the initiative toward certification in January 2010 along with MountainView CEO Denten Park.

The hospital's approach included a multi-disciplinary team that comprised Park, Sweetser, Disease-Specific Care Coordinator Mary Ferreiro, Chief Nursing Officer Gayle Nash and Blanca Morales-Peña, director of therapy services.

The process also included the development of pain protocols, patient education and the study of clinical pathways that had proven successful for joint replacement patient management. Hospitals seeking the certification also must meet national standards and demonstrate consistent use of evidence-based, clinical practice guidelines for joint replacement.

After conducting extensive research, including a visit to the already-certified Northwest Medical Center in Tucson, Ariz., and examining procedures in post-operative care that shortened hospital stays from four or five days to three, the hospital received a site visit, where all aspects were looked at thoroughly.

MountainView Regional Medical Center is the first hospital in New Mexico to have a joint-replacement program certification.

"It was a completely exhaustive process," Sweetser said. "They examined everything – from our procedures to our paperwork."

Now that MountainView's joint-replacement program is certified, the hospital has received inquiries from other area facilities. In June, Sweetser will discuss the hospital's certification process at the University of New Mexico's Orthopedic Seminar.

"We are proud of our joint replacement team and their efforts to bring the highest quality health care services to Las Cruces," Park said in a release. "We are delighted to remind our community that they do not need to travel outside of Las Cruces to receive the best possible care."

For more information on MountainView's joint-replacement program, call 556-6620.

Crohn's and Ulcerative Colitis are collectively known as Irritable Bowel Disease or IBD. As many as 1 million Americans

Ciclovia comes early this month

While Easter Sunday falls on the usual day of the monthly event, the mission of helping families stay fit continues, as the April Ciclovia Las Cruces has been moved to Sunday, April 17, at Young Park.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. families are invited to participate in the free activities, which range from aerobics classes and jumping rope to jumping balloons and facepainting.

Health related organizations will also be on hand to provide information on health issues and parenting, and the New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service's Kitchen Creations program will provide free recipes.

To assist with a large group of participants, volunteers also are needed to set up and tear down or help out in any other capacity.

For more information, contact June Donohue at 522-0289.

Health Briefs

Animal shelter needs votes

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley is one of 93 shelters vying for a chance at $100,000. The shelter needs to make it into the top 50 in order to secure a contestant slot for this year's Save More Lives Challenge. Anyone can vote through Friday, April 15, by visiting www.votetosavelives.org.

The shelter also is in need of dog crates, leashes, dog treats (with no red dyes) and long-strand shredded paper. Donations can be dropped off during normal hours of operation or left at the door if the shelter is closed.

The shelter also is seeking volunteers to help with dog walking, off-site adoption events, outreach programs and more.

For more information, call 382-0018.

Mental health and wellness conference held

The Women's Intercultural Center and doctoral students of New Mexico State University Department of Counseling and Educational Psychology are sponsoring a Mental Health and Wellness Conference.

The conference will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 23, at the Women's Intercultural Center, 303 Lincoln St., in Anthony, N.M. Attendees will learn about self-care and stress reduction, mental health and illness, family communication, community resources and their rights as consumers.

The conference is free and designed for the entire family. For more information or to register, call the Women's Intercultural Center at 882-5556.

The Women's Intercultural Center, based in Anthony has been educating and empowering women since 1993. Its programs interweave leadership development within three major components: education and personal development, economic self-sufficiency and consciousness-raising for change.

Through collaboration with other organizations and agencies, the center also offers other special services, trainings and workshops that help meet the needs of southern New Mexico and west Texas.

Animal ordinance input sought from community

The Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley has scheduled three public meetings to gather input on proposed changes to the animal-control ordinances of both Doña Ana County and the City of Las Cruces.

The meeting schedules are as follows:

- 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, April 16, headquarters of the Doña Ana County Humane Society and Spay and Neuter Action Program, 2405 W. Picacho Ave., Suite 103
- 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, Doña Ana County Government Center Conference Room 1-113, 845 N. Motel Blvd.

- 10 a.m. to noon Thursday, April 21, Las Cruces City Hall Conference Room 2007-C, 700 N. Main St.

The proposed revisions to the ordinances, as recommended by an ad hoc committee, can be viewed on the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley's website by visiting www.ascmv.org/docs/ord.pdf.

Red Cross continues Champions campaign

The Red Cross will wrap up its Champions campaign at the end of April.

Villalobos and Ken Binkley of Las Cruces.

The annual Champions campaign allows individuals, groups, corporations and other organizations to raise funds in creative ways to benefit local Red Cross programs and services in Catron, Doña Ana, Grant, Hidalgo, Sierra, Luna and Otero counties.

Each champion pledges to raise at least $1,000. The goal for the chapter is $50,000. For more information on how becoming a champion for the American Red Cross, call 526-2631 or visit www.redcrossnewmexico.org.

Malaria, mosquitoes presentation

The Las Cruces Museum of Natural History is hosting its monthly lecture series at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, at the museum inside Mesilla Valley Mall, 700 S. Telshor Blvd.

Dr. John Xu will discuss the devastation caused by malaria, how mosquitoes transmit the disease and the use of mosquito control as an effective preventive measure.

Xu joined the biology department at New Mexico State University in 2008 after completing medical school in China where his doctoral research focused on malaria and mosquito interactions using genomic approaches.

He also worked as a research assistant at the University of Minnesota Microbial and Plant Genomics Institute. Xu currently teaches microbiology, genomics and bioinformatics to undergraduate and graduate students at NMSU. For more information, call 522-3120.

The home at 945 Canterbury Arc features a traditional style commonly found on the East Coast.

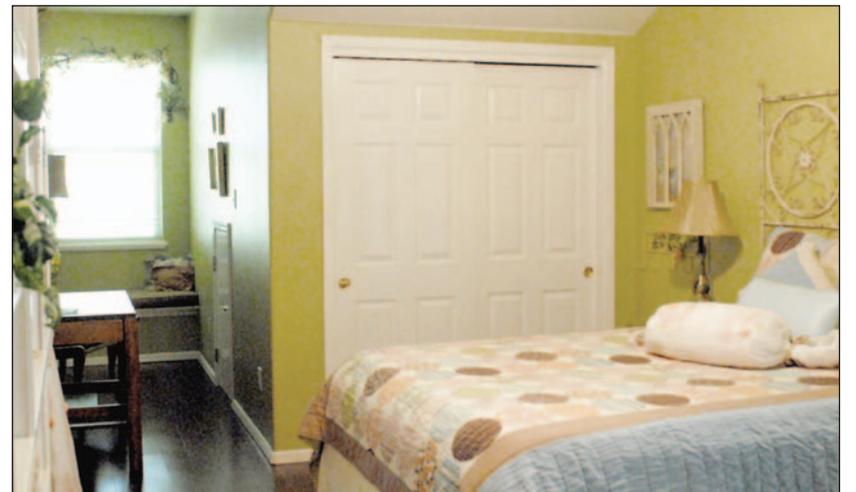

Hardwood floors fill the home, which was built in 1996 in the Mesilla Park area.

Throughout the years, the home has seen several upgrades, including to the kitchen.

Wood floors cover the shared living spaces, including the informal dining area nestled beside a window.

The home includes five bedrooms, all of which feature their own unique color palette.

Two-story home fit for a growing family, entertaining guests

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Nestled in the lush surroundings of Mesilla Park is a neighborhood more reminiscent of the traditional styling of the East Coast than the rustic aesthetics of the Southwest.

Among the Victorian-inspired residences on Canterbury Arc is a palatial two-story home built in 1996 by Ed Emerick that combines simplistic luxury found in the 1800s with contemporary features for a modern residents.

"Ed built this home with a family in mind," said wife Joanne Emerick. "It's a fun home, with a large yard for kids and pets to play outside in, yet it's a home that has a feeling of luxury. It's a flexible home that can meet any need."

Joanne Emerick said the couple received the 0.31-acre lot at 945 Canterbury Arc from her in-laws, Sarah and Lewis Emerick.

"They purchased the land in the '60s and through the years developed it," she said.

Needing to accommodate four growing children, Ed Emerick designed the home to include a variety of shared and private spaces as well as an abundance of storage.

"He always loved architecture and designing. That's what thrilled him the most," she said, adding that the home has been updated throughout the years.

After entering through the large wood front door surrounded by glass blocks, guests are greeted with a music room and formal dining area.

"We can seat 12 people or so at this table (in the formal dining room)," Joanne Emerick said. "We do a lot of entertaining and this house is great for that."

Working as the decorator for Emerick Real Estate & Construction, Joanne Emerick said the home is filled with unique furnishings and a bevy of decorative materials she has collected over the years as well as family memorabilia.

"I really enjoy the music room because there are so many wonderful things on the walls that remind me of events we've had or places we've been," Joanne Emerick said.

Wood floors lead to the master suite. The large carpeted room includes several built-in niches for an entertainment center as well as shelving. It also features two walk-in closets, which Joanne Emerick said can be transformed into one grand space.

In addition to the variety of storage, the room also has a seating area set against windows looking out to the backyard and freshly planted greenery.

"We wanted to have a green fence," Joanne Emerick said. "The view from the master is very serene."

The theme of green continues in the bathroom, which features unique green granite countertops surrounding the double sinks. Wanting a more contemporary feel, the couple included a linear strip of decorative tile

Beyond the master suite are the shared living spaces. The informal living room contains a fireplace draped in green marble beside the built-in entertainment center. Forest-green wainscoting surrounding the kitchen bar complements the earthy color palette.

The kitchen, which opens up to an informal breakfast area that looks out to the lush backyard, features a contemporary white and glass-tiled backsplash as well as custom-designed cabinetry.

"I told Ed we had to keep this part open so we could find just the antique hutch to go in there," Joanne Emerick said.

A side exit for convenience can be found beside a hall that leads to a half bathroom, the laundry facility and two-car garage. Beyond the extra-large utility room is the family's craft room, which Joanne Emerick uses to make dried flower arrangements.

Designed in a circle, each room features either window seating with storage or desk as well as under-eave storage.

"We used every nook and cranny," Joanne Emerick said.

An all-purpose room completes the upstairs. Consisting of two desk areas and even more storage, Joanne Emerick said the large area is where the family would gather to work, play games and watch TV.

Snow not required

No matter the weather, ice scraper is a handy tool

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

With winter gone for another eight months or so, Las Cruces can pack away their seasonal gear – sweaters, mittens, scarves and long johns. You can also say goodbye to your ice scraper, for the time being.

A handheld tool created specifically for the car, the ice scraper consists of a flat blade designed to run along a surface, removing any collected ice or frost.

Since the creation of the ice scraper, it has seen several changes to its design and material. Although metal blades are available, most ice scrapers have a plastic or acrylic blade that will slightly bend to fit the shape of the window or windshield. They also can include several ridges along the top that can be used to whack and break sheets of hard ice.

Modern changes to the ice scraper also include extendable handles to help users reach those out-of-the-way areas in one swipe. Ice scrapers attached to mittens were created to help keep exposed hands warm and protected from the elements.

Unable to fully predict the weather, it's a good idea to keep an ice scraper in your car for those unexpected storms.

While your ice scraper may not be needed during the warm spring and sweltering summer months, that doesn't mean you have to forget about it. Instead, put it to use in new ways around the house.

1. Clean away dough: After thoroughly dusting your workspace with flour, you may still notice some remnants of leftover dough. Easily remove these sticky specs with an ice scraper. Wash the scraper, and once it has dried, skim the top of the surface with the car accessory. When you're done, run a wet sponge along the countertop.

2. Skip the spatula: If your handy flipper is missing in action, use a clean ice scraper in a pinch. The scraper is about the right size and can be used on nonstick pans. When doing this trick, be sure to use only a plastic scraper. You don't want to scratch or damage the finish of your pan.

3. Remove paint splatter: So you just finished painting your bathroom, and as you're admiring your hours of hard work, you notice specs of paint splattered across your sink and countertop – what are you going to do? Before you begin to panic and reach for the turpentine, grab your ice scraper instead. Carefully use it to scrape the paint away. This will work on any nonmetallic surface, and it won't leave scratches.

4. Repair dents in wood: Gouges in your wood floors are easy to fix when you have an ice scraper laying around. Plug the hole with wood filler and then use the ice scraper to smooth and level it. After it has dried, you won't be able to tell that a dent was ever there.

5. Wipe away wax: Another activity usually associated with the cold, winter months is snow skiing. Many skiing experts and enthusiasts will coat their skis with a layer of wax for a smoother, quicker ride. While this might be fun on the slopes, that wax can be an annoyance to remove. Get it off faster with the help of an ice scraper. Just run it along the surface and the wax will flake off, leaving a bare plane ready for next season.

6. Defrost your freezer: Not just for your car, an ice scraper can remove built-up ice from other areas as well. The next time frost builds up in your freezer, instead of taking the time to defrost it, clean it out with an ice scraper. Use it on the walls, ceiling and floor of the freezer in a matter of minutes for a fresh surface.

7. Transfer cookies: In addition to tackling your frying tasks, an ice scraper can also replace a spatula when baking cookies. The next time you use cookie cutters to make a batch of sugar cookies, use the scraper to lift the dough to your baking sheet. The scraper will keep the soft dough intact better than you could using your fingers.

8. Give sawdust the brush off: If you have a fancy ice scraper that includes a snow brush on one end, get even more use out of it in the garage. The brush can be used to clear away sawdust and other fine particles from your workbench and hobby area. When you're done, be sure to diligently remove any clinging bits. It's better than having to deal with wet sawdust later on.

Rolled Sugar Cookies

1 1/2 cups butter, softened
2 cups white sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
5 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

In a large bowl, cream together butter and sugar until smooth. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Stir in the flour, baking powder and salt. Cover, and chill the dough for at least one hour, or overnight.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Roll out dough on floured surface 1/4 to 1/2 inch thick. Cut into shapes with any cookie cutter. Place cookies 1 inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets.

Bake 6 to 8 minutes in preheated oven. Cool completely. (Recipes adapted from allrecipes.com.)

Baked Pretzels

1 cup beer
1 tablespoon margarine
2 tablespoons white sugar
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups all-purpose flour
3/4 teaspoon active dry yeast
1 egg
1 tablespoon warm water
2 tablespoons kosher salt

Using a bread machine, measure first six ingredients in order listed into baking pan. Select the dough/pasta setting and press start.

When the cycle is complete, remove dough to a lightly floured surface. If necessary, knead in enough flour to make dough easy to handle. Roll into a 14-by-9-inch rectangle. With a sharp knife, cut into 18 14-by-1/2-inch strips. Gently pull each strip into a rope 16 inches long. To shape into pretzels, curve ends of each rope to make a circle and cross ends at top. Twist ends once and lay over bottom of circle. Place on greased baking sheets. Do not let rise.

Combine lightly beaten egg and 1 tablespoon water; brush on pretzels. Sprinkle with kosher salt. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 18 to 20 minutes or until done. Remove from sheets and let pretzels cool on wire rack. (Recipe adapted from allrecipes.com.)

Las Cruces learn to knit

Branigan Library class reaches out to community through handcraft

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Whether interested in “Yarn Bombing” or creating a treasured blanket for a loved one, Las Cruces have the chance to learn the intricate art of knitting at the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave.

Offered from 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, the Beginning Knitting Program is just one way the longstanding institution is connecting to the people it serves.

“This class began with the idea that the library would like to offer more adult educational programs for the community,” said librarian Carmella Lee.

Not sure what exactly to offer, Lee said she reached out to the Munson Senior Center and got in touch with Aurora Ybarra, RSVP coordinator.

“I let her know that we were looking for volunteers to do programs here, and Renee (Short) was one person who said ‘yes,’ and it’s grown from there,” Lee said.

Originally from New York, Short said she came to Las Cruces for the weather. While she previously had a career teaching business at the Fashion Institute of Technology and owned a personal training, nutrition and consulting company, Short said she was interested in doing something else.

“During a conversation I had with Aurora, she showed me this email she got from Carmella,” she said. “I saw that they needed some help and I was looking for some sort of volunteer opportunity.”

A lifelong knitter, Short said her mother taught her the art when she was just 4 years old, among other handcrafts.

“She mentioned that there weren’t any programs available for beginning knitters,” Lee said.

“Someone who really wants to learn how to knit has no opportunities to do so,” said Short, who instructs the knitting class.

RENEE SHORT,
instructor

Not knowing what sort of response to expect, Lee said the library started the Beginning Knitting Program in February. Originally planning to offer the class once a week, Short said they quickly realized just how many Las Cruces wanted to learn the handcraft.

“We had room for 10 people and we ended up with 40 people on the waiting list,” said Lee, adding that they extended the class to three nights a week.

Consisting of 10 students per class of men and women ranging in ages from 30 to 74, Short said the Beginning Knitting Program covers a variety of facets, including the history of knitting, knitting as an art and the fundamentals of the yarn art.

“We do all the basics,” Short said. “There are two stitches (knit and purl) and everything else is a variation of those two.”

“The students are re-learning how to use their hands and retraining their brain. It can be frustrating, but I tell them to keep doing it, eventually they’ll get it.”

Designed to be like any other class, Short said students are assigned homework and take quizzes as well.

Two of the classes have recently moved on to the next level of instruction, which is devoted to garment making.

“Making a garment requires a different set of skills,” said Short, adding that this includes math. “To make a garment, you have to identify the proper size and how many stitches are needed per inch.”

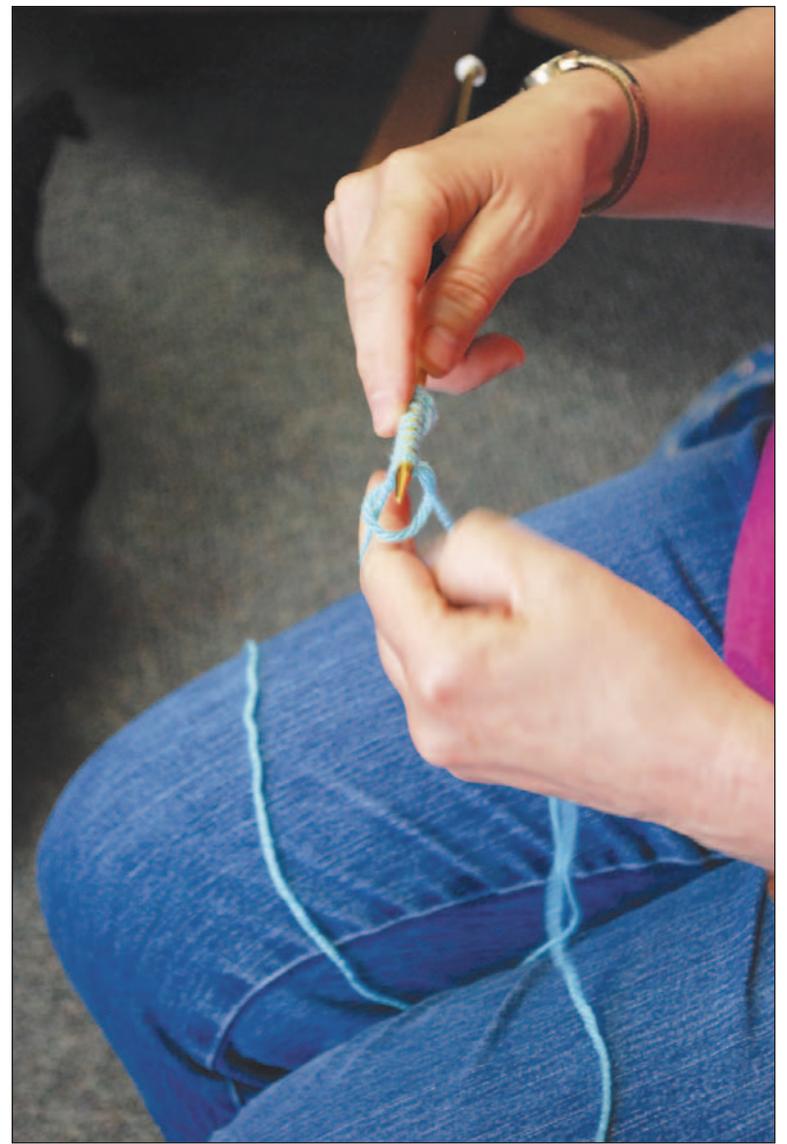

Each week of the 10-week course, students will knit a garment, starting with something small and working their way up to a large final project that will incorporate all of the skills they’ve learned.

“The students have their own individual goals,” Short said. “This could be to make a tank top to wear to work or a shawl for church or a sweater for their brother.”

In addition to the students’ personal goals, Short said she wants to use the garment-making class to network with various nonprofits around town. Through this, they will construct hats, gloves and scarves to donate to Coats for Kids; hats for cancer patients receiving chemotherapy; booties and caps for newborns; and small afghans for those in assisted-living facilities who are wheelchair-bound.

“As we grow, I want to reach out more,” she said. “I’m hoping our students will want to participate with our networking goal as well.”

While the knitting program will take a break in the summer, Short said they have already received interest in the fall classes.

After such a successful response, Lee said the library is looking forward to conducting even more classes open to the community, including scrapbooking and researching genealogy programs.

“One thing I’d like to see is us doing more community outreach with not just library personnel teaching, but community members coming in and teaching classes as well,” Lee said. “I’d like the community to be as much involved with us as we’re involved with them.”

Featured company: Easy Lawn

Supplying green grass year-round Lifelong entrepreneur builds career in synthetic lawns

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Living in the desert, Las Cruces know the importance of conserving water, and one local company is making it easier for them to do so while still allowing them to have lush green grass.

Created in 2003 by Ash Bianco, Easy Lawn has provided synthetic grass and putting greens to those in the Las Cruces and El Paso area who want to be environmentally friendly without using xeriscaping.

"I felt like living in the desert, it isn't easy to grow grass, so this is a good alternative," Bianco said.

Originally from Phoenix, Bianco said he moved to Cloudcroft before attending New Mexico State University in the City of the Crosses.

Deciding school wasn't for him, he jumped around between Phoenix and Cloudcroft before ending up in Albuquerque. It was while he was in Albuquerque that he first discovered the synthetic grass industry.

"One day, I saw an article in the newspaper on synthetic grass," he said. "I was completely enamored with the concept."

Although Bianco and his wife Shannon owned a small digital security company at the time, he said he saw an opportunity to branch out into a relatively unknown facet of the landscaping industry.

"I've been an entrepreneur my entire life," he said. "The (synthetic grass) field didn't exist nine or 10 years ago."

Seeing an opportunity to start something new, Bianco and his family moved back to Las Cruces, and he began Easy Lawn.

"I never thought in a million years I'd be selling synthetic grass for a living," he said.

Since being established in 2003, Easy Lawn has provided for the synthetic grass needs of Las Cruces and El Paso.

Providing a 'green' product

Created from a synthetic material, the sheets of grass have holes in the backing that allow water to drain through to the accompanying screening.

While some may think all artificial grass is the same, Bianco said the material has come a long way, and there is now a plethora of options to fit any function or style preference.

"People who move here from Ohio will usually want something (that looks) completely different than a guy who moved here from Phoenix," he said. "It all depends on what they grew up with and what they consider to be grass."

Bianco said the grass can be tall, short, dark, light and even two-toned, with a brown tint around the base for a more natural look.

"Manufacturers try to mimic real grass only to a certain degree," he said.

If a client doesn't know exactly what they're looking for, Bianco said he can help them select an artificial grass to fit their lifestyle.

"Some grasses are softer, which makes them great for pets and kids," he said. "I can make recommendations based on what they intend to use the grass for."

Considered a sustainable product because it doesn't require any water, Bianco said artificial grass has several benefits. Although it will become warm in the sun, synthetic grass has a life expectancy of 12 to 15 years and is very durable.

"It looks green year-round, even in the winter," he said.

Plus, it requires very little maintenance.

"Occasionally you'll have to go over it with a leaf blower to fluff it up like a carpet," he said, explaining that the material can become matted if constantly walked over.

To help the grass stand tall, Bianco said there are grass products that are thick and bounce back quicker.

"There are products that are less thick but still visually attractive," he said. "If it's in the front yard and is just for looks, not walking on, then you can use something less thick. If you're putting it in the backyard and have kids and dogs or entertain often, then spend more money and buy something thicker."

Bianco said synthetic grass can be used in a variety of ways, including on front and backyards and playgrounds. In addition, Easy Lawn installs putting greens, which is different than synthetic grass, but offers the same benefits.

"They're visually appealing. They're not flat, they're contoured," he said. "They're made to perform like a real putting green."

Usually installed by avid golfers, Bianco said many use the putting greens to improve their game because they can receive more feedback on their put.

"It's in their backyard, so it's more convenient, too," he said.

After a little more than six months in business, Bianco said Easy Lawn branched out to the El Paso market, which he attributes to his knowledgeable staff and high-quality driven installation team.

"My installation team is great," he said.

High quality also extends to the service Bianco said he provides to his clients, which

In addition to synthetic grass, Easy Lawn also installs putting greens in neighborhoods throughout the region to help golfers with their swing. Both of the materials are considered sustainable because they don't require any water to maintain.

"I don't use just one brand," he said. "I'll carry five different brands if I like the grass. I want my clients to be able to pick the best product for them."

Bianco said he also walks the client through the entire process so there aren't any surprises along the way.

"When I go to someone's house, I tell them everything that is going to happen with this grass," he said. "When it's installed, I tell them how it's going to lay, where the seams are going to be and how the grain is going to face. I educate the client on what they can expect the grass to do because it's a big investment."

More than grass

Employing between four to seven people, depending on the time of year, Bianco said Easy Lawn offers much more than just synthetic grass and putting greens.

"For the most part, we're a full landscaping company," he said, adding that they can install shrubs, trees, flagstone and small concrete pads.

Easy Lawn also creates concrete curbs that surround the synthetic grass.

Working to get the word out about what they have to offer, Bianco said he markets Easy Lawn at specialty shows in the region, including the Home & Garden Show held in March at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

"If there is a home show in the area, we're going to do it," he said.

Preparing the company to take on whatever comes its way, Bianco said they are ready for a revival in the housing market and plan to continue to provide for the region's grass-alternative needs.

"It's very rewarding to take a business a lot of people doubted and be successful," he said. "When I started, it was an unknown industry. Now, a lot of people know about it."

Want to go green on your next remodel?

Tile can be added to your environmentally friendly product list

Are you planning an upcoming remodel for your home? Going green and using sustainable building materials continues to be a top trend in home improvement.

Remodeling green isn't just about using products with recycled content, it's also about using superior products that will stand the test of time and reduce energy costs.

You can choose from a number of options when remodeling green, including modern energy-efficient appliances and low-VOC paints. Traditional products can also be environmentally friendly. For example, many homeowners choosing to go green are selecting ceramic tile for a variety of reasons.

Ceramic tile is inherently a sustainable product. It's a great choice because it lasts up to four times longer than carpet and wood flooring. It never needs to be refinished like wood floors do, contributing to a low life cycle cost. To clean, all you have to use is hot water, which means no harsh chemicals are flushed into the ecosystem.

Tile also doesn't release fumes or fibers into the air like carpet can. Many people dislike carpet because it houses microbes and other germs, and dirt can become deeply embedded, requiring a costly cleaning by a professional. Tile eliminates these issues entirely.

Getting all the great eco-friendly qualities of tile doesn't mean a sacrifice of good design. Tile of Spain manufacturers offer stunning options in any size, format, texture, color and pattern. From modern, sleek designs to ornate, classic patterns, visit www.spaintiles.info to find tile that will perfectly suit your design personality.

Emerging technology has eliminated some of the concerns people tend to have when it comes to tile. Adding new tile used to be a daunting task. Tearing out old layers and disposing of them is messy and time-consuming. New slim tiles are only 3 to 6 millimeters thick and thin enough to be applied over existing tile, offering a new look to walls and floors with less hassle, and saving construction waste from the landfill.

Tile no longer has to be cold. It's an ideal product to use in raised flooring and radiant heating. In fact, technological advances now allow for the tile to work in tandem with a home's HVAC system. High-tech tiles adopt the temperature of the room and once past a certain temperature use nano energy storage cells to absorb thermal energy and then slowly release it back into the room. This technology alone can save the average home more than 16 percent in electricity bills.

Dry-setting tile is now an option for home remodelers as well. Tile can be applied without mortar or grout, which means if you move, you can take the tile with you. Or you can change it in a few years without a lot of work.

If you don't like the appearance of grout lines and worry about keeping these areas clean, there are new options in large format tile which can lessen the number of joints. Additionally, rectification of tile, a process where the edges of the tile are shaved off for perfect calibration, makes it possible to get a very tight "credit card" joint that allows a more seamless appearance.

If sustainability is a key consideration when remodeling, make sure the products you select are durable, easy to clean and are good for the health of your home and the environment. Ceramic tile helps you accomplish all of the above on your green checklist.

Finding your own style

Are you traditional and formal or shabby chic?

Maureen Villmer
Practical Design

Is it any wonder that most of us start our adult life not knowing what style of decorating that we really like the best?

A first apartment furnished with hand-me-downs from parents and a few items from a secondhand store doesn't really make for a decorating style. Over the years, our living arrangements result in a conglomeration of styles and mismatched pieces. Now is the time to assess your current home decorating status and what you want to work towards in the future.

Are you looking to give your first home or apartment some personal flavor? Are you a bit older and ready to replace items from your younger days? Are you firmly settled but tired of the style that you committed to years ago? No matter what your age, decorating history, or current situation, you can achieve your home decorating goals. This does not have to be a complicated process dictated by rules.

The truth is, though there are plenty of particular styles out there, you don't necessarily have to pick one and stick to it. A home integrated with a few different styles can be interesting and inviting. What matters is that you feel right at home.

Waverly is a company that makes fabrics, floor coverings, wallpapers and the like. They have a website that you can visit to take a simple quiz that will identify your decorating personality (www.waverly.com). The questions asked in this quiz will help you zero in on colors and accessories to make your space feel like your own. It will identify your decorating personality.

Do you have a taste for traditional style? Traditional styling tends to be more formal than informal, with antique furniture and accessories, original oil paintings, Oriental rugs and chandeliers that might have some crystal. Window treatments tend to be more elaborate. Antebellum homes in the South offer a good example of traditional furnishings and decorating.

If you want to introduce a traditional decorating style into your home try these steps: decorative and comfortable pillows with fringe or trim, a few good furniture pieces in quality wood. You can use rich paint colors and faux finish painting.

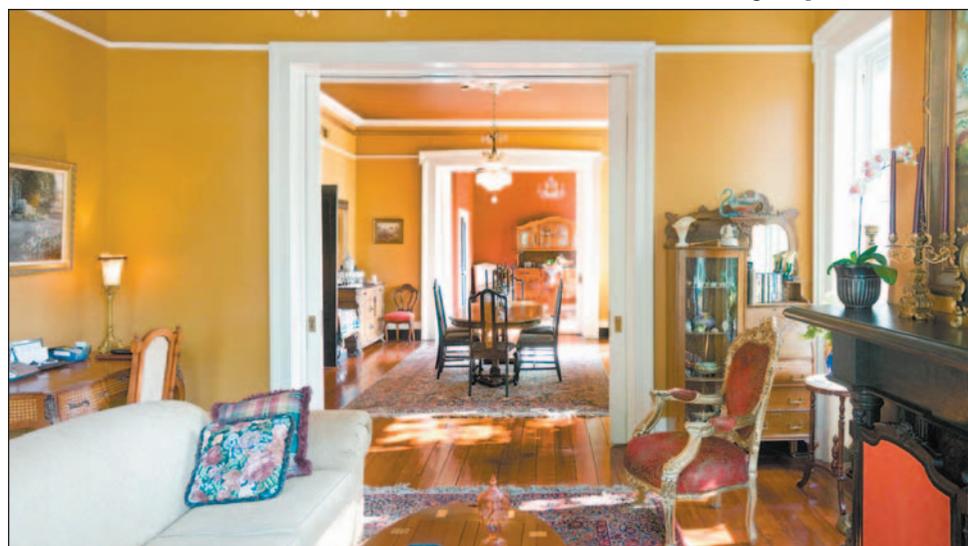

Arrange furniture in formal groupings such as pairs of chairs or two sofas flanking a fireplace – very traditional.

Does traditional seem too structured or too formal for you? Try a more informal, relaxed look. Informal style is homey, warm and inviting. It tends to be more relaxed. Here are things that make a setting more informal:

neutral colors (such as tan, gray, beige and off-white with earth tones) and natural fabrics (such as cotton, linen and wool). New synthetic weaves give a natural look and add durability.

If your style is on the traditional side, fill your home with antique furniture and decorative pillows.

Window coverings are in the form of simple shutters, blinds, or shades as well as simple side panels. Wicker, iron and rattan fit into a more casual setting. Simple collections such as family photos can be grouped on a table or mantle. The flooring in informal-style decorating tends to be hardwood, tile, stone or even stained concrete. If carpet is used, it shouldn't be too plush.

If you like an informal style, you'll love rustic. While some of you may associate rustic with log cabins, mountains and Western, a true lover of rustic can make even a New York loft feel warm and homey. One fabric that is a must is denim.

When you think of rustic, try some of these ideas: a leather or suede sofa, iron or antlered candlesticks, handloom plaids, striped blankets or throws and a horse blanket. Framed pictures of deer, moose, horses, birds or any other wildlife will help the look. Rough-hewn furniture made of twigs, stone accents around your fireplace, mirrors framed in hammered pewter and of course blue jeans will add to the look.

Two other styles that tend to be informal are the cottage style and its cousin, shabby chic. For cottage style, consider adding wicker trunks or baskets and shelf displays of collections. Quilts and other decorative textile fibers can become art for your walls. Gardens with lots of flowers and a picket fence will add to the look and feel.

Shabby chic has a sense of being lived in through the use of vintage accessories, cushy furniture, worn and imperfect. This look has been around for a long time with the use of old lace tablecloths, dreamy and soft floral fabrics, light painted furniture, wrought iron curtain rods hung with filmy sheer fabric and colorful fresh cut flowers. Shabby chic is not particular pieces but items that balance elegance with old and weathered patina, soft throw rugs and pastel colors.

Architectural details add interest to the shabby chic look. Anything old and beautiful will work: old pillars, glass doorknobs, an old mantle, rusted iron brackets and old lace tablecloths. Everything old is new again with the shabby chic interior.

Next time we'll about the Latin influence in decorating, exotics, country French, Tuscan style and eclectic. As an interior designer, I try to find out what style you are and help you achieve that style. Everyone is different and that's the beauty of having a decorating style.

Hard-working honeybees deliver sweet goods

Following a hierarchy, insects communicate through bee dance

Steve Svenheim
Local Truly Nolen of America Expert

Honeybees are a familiar symbol in the United States representing a strong work ethic while their honey is a symbol of the success that results from community effort.

A very small segment of the 20,000 bee species, honeybees are among the few that actually produce honey and build nests of beeswax.

While honeybees exist throughout the U.S. today, they're not native to the Americas. Originating in areas including Asia and Europe, they were brought to the eastern U.S. by European colonists and started spreading west; honeybees actually arrived on the west coast by ship in the mid-1800s.

The highly publicized Africanized honeybee, which will sting aggressively, spread from Brazil to the U.S. Swarms of this species are not usually dangerous, however, once an Africanized honeybee swarm establishes a hive, they can be very aggressive in defense of their home. Therefore, contact a pest control professional to remove a swarm as soon as possible.

Swarms of honeybees commonly occur during the warm spring season when bees are looking for a new place to call home. Depending on the weather, honeybee swarms are expected to fade out at the end of June when summer arrives.

In recent years, U.S. honeybees' numbers have declined. In 2007, the U.S. and Canada saw colonies decline by up to 70 percent.

Honeybees form colonies with social structures familiar to most of us, led by a queen bee who reproduces, fertile males called drone bees and female bees that don't reproduce, known as worker bees.

The worker bees find food outside the hive, and communicate with each other by a bee dance. Honeybees are important not only for the honey and beeswax they produce, but also for pollinating plants.

Honeybees start new colonies by swarming – a flight that includes a mated queen and large group of worker bees. Here are a few tips to help keep bees from nesting on your property:

- Conduct an initial inspection of your property for bees, looking for potential nesting areas such as a small hole leading to a shady area. Other possibilities include under a house's eaves and in thick bushes.
- Block potential nesting sites by screening, caulking, filling or taping, to name several options depending on where the site is.
- Inspect your property often. While bees typically swarm from March to July, it can be later in warm climates.
- Call a pest control professional to remove bees if you find a nest. Don't block an entry point if you see bees coming and going.

Honeybees, among the few bee species to produce honey, have been on the decline in recent years, with the United States and Canada seeing up to 70 percent fewer of the buzzing insects.

Company offers tours of Las Cruces

Enchanted Spirit Journeys explores area's historic buildings

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

Enjoying the New Mexico environment, taking in Las Cruces' history, all while spreading awareness about historic building preservation were a few of the goals Eva Booker set for herself when she created Enchanted Spirit Journeys.

Booker said she got the idea for the walking tour company last summer after becoming involved with Las Esperanzas, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the preservation of the Mesquite Historic District and Original Townsite.

"No one else was doing it, and most cities have tours of their downtown and historic districts," Booker said. "Plus, I love history."

While occasional tours take place throughout the city, Booker said she wanted to create something more consistent that residents and tourists could count on and look forward to on a regular basis.

In addition to conducting hours of research on the area, Booker said she attended tourism classes at Doña Ana Community College to gain a better understanding of what holding a tour would entail.

"I did a pilot tour in the fall with my class," she said. "It was really helpful to learn the technicality of running a tour."

Booker debuted Enchanted Spirit Journeys in March with a ribbon cutting by the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce at the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market, where she will continue to set up shop every Saturday to generate interest.

Booker said as of now, the walking tours will visit three sites: the Mesquite Historic District and Original Townsite neighborhoods on the second Saturday of the month; the Mesquite Historic District and Original Townsite Downtown area on the third Saturday of the month; and the Alameda Depot Historic District on the fourth Saturday of the month.

Throughout the tours, Booker said she points out and discusses the different architecture found in these areas and how they relate to changes in the city's history.

"With a lot of these buildings, you can still see how the lots and blocks were originally laid out," she said, adding that she also provides participants with the history of former

Booker said one of the missions of Enchanted Spirit Journeys is to support local preservation efforts.

"These are key historic buildings that need to be preserved," she said. "There are a number of places on the tour that need to be remodeled before they can be opened to the general public."

Not just wanting to celebrate the past, Booker said the tours visit galleries, restaurants and other businesses in these areas, including Amaro Winery, the Railroad Museum and the Armijo House, which will be opened to future tours. The walk to the Mesquite neighborhoods will also visit during the Camino del Arte, a monthly tour of area businesses.

"I want to support other businesses in the area," she said.

Booker said she has big plans for Enchanted Spirit Journeys and wants to work with other businesses and tour groups to branch out to other facets of the community.

"I have so many ideas," she said.

In addition to a tour of Mesilla, which is already taking place, Booker said she would also like to offer a biking tour that will begin at Llorona Park off Picacho Avenue and venture to the Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park.

"I also want to do one on the Camino Real, which I'm doing research on now," she said.

Because the historic trail extends from Anthony to the county line, Booker said this would be a driving tour.

"I want to do things that involve history and getting people out into the beautiful New Mexico environment," she said.

She said she also wanted to collaborate with the Las Cruces Green Chamber on a tour that will highlight green businesses in Las Cruces.

Starting Enchanted Spirit Journeys has also allowed Booker to learn about her own family history in addition to that of the city.

Although she came to the area a few years ago, Booker said her father's family had been in Las Cruces since its establishment, including her great-great-great grandfather Don Manuel Nevarez who moved from Chihuahua, Mexico, and was a territorial representative.

"It's been great to learn about my family," she said, adding that her great-grandfather's house still stands on the corner of Las Cruces Avenue and Campo Street.

With hopes to one day market Enchanted Spirit Journeys outside of Las Cruces and the state, Booker said she wants the touring

Recycling Briefs

Friedman Recycling will be on hand during the Earth Day celebration from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 16, at Young Park to help educate the community on the importance of recycling.

Friedman Recycling at Earth Day event

There's a new kid in town – Friedman Recycling, and it will be front and center at this year's Earth Day event at Young Park Saturday, April 16, the region's largest Earth Day celebration.

Last year, an estimated 3,000 adults and children visited the interactive educational demonstrations, kid's activities and games, local arts and crafts and live music.

Earth Day at Young Park is organized by New Mexico State University OASIS (Organization of Aggie Students Inspiring Sustainability) and is free to the public.

- This year, Friedman Recycling will provide:
- Demonstrations with new Friedman Recycling trucks lifting bright blue recycling bins
  - Enormous (1,200 to 1,800 pound) bales of recyclables
  - Free Price's Creameries ice cream treats for the first 1,000 kids
  - "Green Team" students in Keep Las Cruces Beautiful recycling costumes to show what's recyclable and what's not
  - "Stop, don't drop your trash" music
  - Answering curbside recycling questions

Educational, family-friendly Earth Day booths will operate from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. The live music will continue until 10 p.m. Vendors will offer everything from natural soaps to sustainably produced coffee, incense, hemp jewelry, tie-dyed and hand-woven clothing, garden accessories, seeds and plants.

Dead palm trees can be turned into mulch by calling the Las Cruces Utilities Solid Waste Section at 528-3700.

Have a dead palm tree?

Drooping palm trees can be seen all around the region after the devastating arctic freeze that hit the city in early February. The question in many minds is, "Did the tree survive?"

If you decide your palm tree did not survive, and you have it removed, the city can offer disposal options, rather than land-filling the organic material that was once a thriving palm tree.

To have your palm tree mulched, it must be cut into sections no longer than 2 feet in length or diameter.

Residents can drop off this material free of charge at the Yard Waste Recycling Location at 555 S. Sonoma Ranch Blvd., just south of Lohman Avenue, open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays. Compost is available free of charge at this facility.

Commercial businesses are charged $20 per ton to drop off the 2-foot tree lengths.

If you place yard waste out for the Grapppler, keep yard waste separate from any other trash and your trash can. When personnel and trucks are available, we are sending a separate Grapppler Truck into neighborhoods to specifically pick up yard waste. This material is then taken to the composting facility rather than disposed of in the landfill.

An amount equal to one level half-ton pick up truckload will be picked up free of charge on your pick up day. Larger loads will be charged based on the amount of trash picked up.

For more information about the Grapppler service or other questions and concerns, call the Las Cruces Utilities Solid Waste Section at 528-3700.

Friedman sponsors CineMatinee

Friedman Recycling, Keep Las Cruces Beautiful and the South Central Solid Waste Authority will sponsor the CineMatinee for Saturday, April 16, at the Fountain Theatre, one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza.

During the event, the Mesilla Valley Film Society will show "Waste Land," a documentary film directed by Lucy Walker. "Waste Land" follows renowned artist Vik Muniz as he journeys from his home base in Brooklyn to his native Brazil and the world's largest garbage dump, Jardim Garmacho, located on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro.

The film will begin at 1:30 p.m. and admission is $4 for the general public and $1 for film society members. For more information, call 524-8287

About 20 percent of the items taken to Friedman Recycling in El Paso are non-recyclable.

Learning how to 'Recycle Right!'

"It's the biggest curbside program being launched this year nationwide," said Patrick Peck, director of the South Central Solid Waste Authority, coordinating with Friedman Recycling to provide curbside to 30,000 Las Cruces homes. "And we want to be sure that everyone is recycling right!"

Because all the recyclables in our region go to the Friedman Recycling processing center in northeast El Paso, "Recycle Right!" is a regional program. Both Las Cruces and El Paso will be working in unison to send out the same, clear message – "Recycle Right!"

That means: first, no food contamination in the recyclables; second, recycling only items for which there is a stable market to process them into new goods; and third, buying new items made of recycled products.

Recycling, when done right, can conserve our natural resources, save landfill space, conserve energy and reduce water pollution, air pollution and green house gas emissions that cause climate change.

It is very important that everyone recycles only the accepted recyclables on the list. Every curbside program is different depending on the needs of each region. A label showing what can be recycled has been melted onto every curbside bin lid as a reminder. To date, 99 percent of the curbside bins have been delivered to Las Cruces homes, and crews are now just working out the bugs – picking up extra bins and catching up on the homes that were missed in the initial distribution of bins.

On a tour of Friedman Recycling, participants learned that 20 percent of the materials that arrive at the facility are non-recyclable (food, food-contaminated plastics and cans, scrap metal and garden hoses to mention a few). These items slow down the process and sometimes even ruin entire loads of recyclables.

Getting the right kind of recyclables is the main goal of this new program.

Morris Friedman, president and COO of Friedman Recycling, the company managing curbside recycling in Las Cruces, said, "The list of recyclables has greatly expanded. We are now accepting a wider range of items, including clean and empty plastics 1 through 7, rigid laundry hampers, milk and juice boxes and cartons, small electronics and pots and pans. All of these items can now go into the blue bins."

This is not only the biggest curbside program being launched this year nationwide, it's also one of the most extensive programs in the country.

Thank you for recycling! If you have curbside recycling questions, please visit www.friedmanrecycling.com, or call Friedman Recycling at 877-500-RECYCLE.

Kosher Passover plates

Celebrate the Seder with a spicy recipe

Sunny Conley
Chile Knights

Happy Passover to my Jewish friends! Longtime chile aficionado, retired Las Cruces Rabbi Gerald Kane, emailed me just before the New Year a favorite recipe he prepares during Passover – green chile bagels.

“Hi Sunny, Better early than late! Here is a great Passover bagel recipe. [This year] Passover begins with a Seder on the evening of Monday, April 18, and concludes at sunset on April 26. You should publish the recipe on the Friday prior to Passover IMHO (in my humble opinion)! Consider it ‘done.’ Jerry”

A breeze to prepare, I’m certain you’ll enjoy these bagels – each bite delivers an addictive pepper bite. Also shared are other Passover recipes I’ve collected on cyberspace travels. Recipes are tweaked to please fellow chile-pepper enthusiasts. Enjoy!

Rabbi Kane’s Passover Green Chile Bagels

2/3 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cumin
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1 cup matzah meal
3 eggs

1/2 cup green chile, chopped

Combine oil, boiling water, sugar, salt and spices. Bring to a boil. Remove from heat and add matzah meal all at once. Stir in eggs one at a time, beating well after each egg. Stir in green chile. Let stand 10 minutes. Form into 12 balls and place on a greased cookie sheet. Poke a hole in the middle of each ball with a wet finger. Be sure to poke a hole. If not, they become rolls.

Bake 20 minutes at 400 degrees. Turn oven temp down to 350 degrees and bake 15 minutes longer. Cool completely and serve.

Acorn Squash Stuffed with Granny Smith Apple Stuffing

This stuffing recipe is especially tasty. Raisins soaked in sweet wine give the dish a delightful flavorful boost while the chiles deliver the expected bite.

2 acorn squash (about 1 1/4 pounds)

2 tablespoons margarine, melted

Salt

Cinnamon

Halve the squash and scoop out seeds and fibers. Trim bottoms so halves sit flat. Brush cut surfaces with melted margarine and sprinkle with salt and cinnamon. Place in baking pan with cut sides down. Put 1/2 cup water in pan, or enough to just cover the bottom of pan.

Stuffing:

1/4 cup raisins

1/4 cup sweet wine

3 medium Granny Smith apples

1/4 cup roasted green chiles (medium-hot), stemmed and seeded

4 tablespoons margarine

1/4 cup brown sugar

1 tablespoon fresh-squeezed lemon juice

Bake squash 30 minutes in preheated 350-degree oven. While squash is baking, soak raisins in wine to plump. Chop apples to 1/2-inch cubes, peeled or unpeeled. In small frying pan, melt margarine and add apples. Cook 3 to 5 minutes, until slightly wilted. Stir in sugar and lemon juice.

When squash has cooked 30 minutes, turn cut sides up. Drain raisins and add to apple mixture. Fill squash cavities with mixture. Cover and bake 20 to 30 minutes more or until tender. Makes 4 servings.

Sweet Potato Chocolate Cayenne Rum Torte

1/2 cup (1 stick) unsalted Passover margarine

1/3 cup plus 2 tablespoons granulated sugar

6 large eggs, separated

1 1/2 cup cooked and mashed sweet potatoes, fresh or canned

1 teaspoon rum extract

1 teaspoon cayenne pepper

10 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted and cooled

1 to 2 tablespoons of sifted, unsweetened cocoa powder for dusting

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a 9-inch spring form pan with parchment paper.

Cream unsalted margarine or butter with the 1/3 cup sugar. Blend in the egg yolks, then the mashed sweet potatoes, then the rum extract and cayenne pepper, and finally the cooled chocolate.

the egg whites gently until they are a bit foamy. Increase to a higher speed and slowly add in the 2 tablespoons of sugar until stiff, glossy peaks are formed.

Fold one third of the egg whites into the sweet potato/chocolate mixture and work them in well to loosen the batter. Then, gently fold in the remaining egg whites, blending well but carefully.

Spoon the batter into the prepared pan and bake for about 40 minutes or until the cake has risen and appears slightly cracked on top. Cool in the pan for 20 minutes, then place on a cooling rack. Chill the cake for at least two hours before serving (or freeze for up to one month). Dust with cocoa powder and garnish with halved strawberries. (Recipe adapted from Marcy Goldman’s “A Treasury of Jewish Holiday Baking” (1998)).

Marinated Brisket with Kosher Chili Sauce

1 (5 to 8 pounds) whole beef brisket, fat trimmed

1 (24-ounce) bottle kosher chile sauce

1 package kosher onion soup mix

Place trimmed brisket into a large baking pan. Mix chile sauce with onion soup mix. Add 1 cup of water or more to make it slightly thin. Add crushed chiles de arbol. Stir thoroughly. Pour sauce over the meat, cover pan with foil and marinate 12 to 24 hours in the fridge.

Place covered pan into a 275-degree oven and cook 6 to 8 hours, depending on brisket size. Check tenderness every 3 hours. Meat should come apart easily.

Splendid and Spicy Carrot Soufflé

2 pounds fresh carrots, stemmed, peeled and boiled until soft

6 eggs

2/3 cup sugar

6 tablespoons matzoh meal

2 teaspoons vanilla

2 sticks butter, melted

3 shakes hot sauce

Dash of nutmeg

Topping:

6 tablespoons brown sugar

4 tablespoons butter, melted

1 cup walnuts, chopped

Place carrots and eggs into food processor and purée. Add next five ingredients and process until smooth. Bake in greased 9-by-13-inch Pyrex pan at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Add topping and bake for 5 to 10 minutes more. Can be made a day in advance.

Become the sauce king

Stirr offers at-home chefs hands-free whisking

By Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletin

When it comes to mastering the art of cooking, one task that may need some practice is creating that perfect sauce.

While there are numerous types of sauces out there – from Bolognese to ketchup – there are five grand sauces, also known as “mother sauces.” These sauces provide the foundation for almost every other sauce.

The first is the demi-glace, which is created from a brown veal stock and has a roasted or caramel aroma. This sauce has a deep brown color and is translucent and highly glossy.

Next is the velouté. This sauce is created from veal, chicken or fish stock, and its flavors will reflect whichever base is used. Also made with a roux, it will have a slight hint of nuttiness.

The béchamel sauce originally required lean veal, however, modern interpretations of this mother sauce rarely include it. It is a white sauce that is thickened with milk and a roux. For added flavor, it is simmered with aromatics.

Probably the most commonly known sauce is the tomato variety. Coarser than the other grand sauces, tomato sauce has a rich veggie flavor and no bitterness or acidity, but shouldn't be overly sweet.

The last mother sauce is hollandaise. Created from egg yolks and reduction ingredients, such as vinegar and peppercorns, this sauce has a predominantly buttery flavor, which is then balanced with lemon juice.

No matter if making one of the grand sauces or another liquid coating, many recipes require constant stirring to achieve the proper consistency. Get help whisking your sauce into shape with a Stirr.

What is it?

Created by Ütensil, a cooking-gadget company based out of London with the mission to “design and manufacture the best kitchenware in the world,” the Stirr was created to help at-home chefs take on multiple cooking tasks.

Considered a hands-free, battery-operated whisk, the Stirr allows you to constantly stir whatever sauce, gravy, custard or soup you're creating so your hands are available to handle other jobs in the kitchen.

Consisting of a stainless-steel whisk with silicone legs, the Stirr is attached to a cylinder handle, allowing it to be easily grasped and moved in and out of the pan. The soft legs allow the gadget to be used on nonstick pans because they won't scratch or damage the surface.

How does it work?

Easy to use, the Stirr does all of the work for you. Simply set it into a medium-sized saucepan and turn it on to one of its three speeds. Be sure to use a medium-sized pan, because the gadget will not perform as well if it is used in a small or large pan.

The specially designed legs will swirl around the pan, mixing the contents at a consistent speed. This will not only allow the ingredients to incorporate thoroughly, it will also prevent them from burning, sticking or clumping.

Because the gadget runs on four AA batteries, you won't have to worry about cords falling into the pan. The Stirr can run for up to four hours with one set of batteries.

Where can it be found?

The Stirr can be purchased online at www.solutions.com and www.amazon.com.

How much does it cost?

The Stirr costs between $23 and $30. Since it can only be purchased online, be sure to factor in the cost of shipping and handling into your final costs.
