Budgets: No gains, much pain

City finances stay flat, schools dodge layoffs By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces city government is looking at an essentially flat budget, while the local school district is seeing significant revenue decreases.

The good news for the Las Cruces Public Schools, Superintendent Stan Rounds said, is that the district should be able to avoid laying off employees.

Like the school district, the Las Cruces city government has been responding to the economic slowdown by not being so quick to hire new people.

At a budget presentation Monday, May 16, to the City Council, Budget and Research Administrator Dick Gebhart said the city's budget for the coming fiscal year will make permanent vacancies, including management. This includes 17 vacant positions and a 27 percent reduction in management positions, he said.

In all, the city's work force will drop from 1,339 positions to 1,323.

Gross receipts taxes (GRT) reflect the local economy because it is a tax on goods sold and services provided. Las Cruces hasn't felt the losses of jobs and income as badly as many other communities in the state and the city's GRT is showing some recovery, Gebhart said.

Money for the city's general fund comes mostly from GRT. With government-funded construction projects winding down, the city is expecting a decrease, but there has been some signs of private, commercial properties making a slow comeback – but not at a fast pace.

Schools wind down for summer break

Graduations set for this weekend

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

With Las Cruces high schools graduating this weekend, the end of this school year is near.

To be exact, Wednesday, May 25, is the last day of classes for most Las Cruces Public Schools students, not counting those schools on yearround schedules.

The total enrollment of LCPS students is more than 24,000, but nearly 1,500 of them will graduate over the weekend.

Friday, May 20, the district's alternative high school, San Andres, will graduate 27 seniors at 6 p.m. at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Main St.

The Pan American Center at New Mexico State University will be the place Saturday, May 21, for the three main high schools graduations. At 9 a.m., is Oñate High School with 467 set to graduate. At 1 p.m., Mayfield High School will graduate 458. Finally, Las Cruces High School will graduate 473 at 5 p.m.

As for Mesilla Valley Christian Schools, graduation is 7 p.m. Friday, May 27, at 3850 Stern Drive. The last day of classes for the private school is Thursday, May 26.

Magazine: NMSU is in top 100 for serving Hispanics Two programs in top 10 nationally

New Mexico State University has been rated among the top 100 colleges for Hispanic students, according to the May 2 issue of the Hispanic Outlook in Higher Education magazine.

The rankings show the top 100 institutions for Hispanics based on the number of degrees awarded. The information, made available by the U.S. Department of Education's National Center for Education Statistics, was compiled and reported by The Hispanic Outlook.

"We owe our success to the faculty and staff who work tirelessly to create an atmosphere of achievement for Hispanic students," said Executive Vice President and Provost Wendy Wilkins. "The efforts of those students are, most particularly, to be recognized and celebrated."

NMSU ranked 23rd for the number of bachelor's degrees awarded to Hispanic students, with 41 percent of degrees awarded going to Hispanic students.

NMSU ranked 29th for the number of master's degrees awarded to Hispanics, with 27 percent of degrees awarded going to Hispanics.

In a separate ranking of the top 10 number of bachelor's degrees awarded by academic program, NMSU achieved eighth place for "Agriculture" and seventh place for "Education."

Aggie athletes shine

New Mexico State University's sports teams show skills both on the field and in the classroom

When Jaki and I moved to Las Cruces nearly 15 years ago, we were excited to be coming to a community with an NCAA Division IA sports program. We truly enjoy college athletics, and we looked forward to becoming NMSU Aggie fans.

However, it did not take long to learn that there were some deep-seated problems among student athletes in Aggieland. It seemed that every week the daily newspaper headlines announced that another Aggie football or basketball player was in some sort of trouble. Also, there seemed to be little concern among the institutional leaders that grade point averages and graduation rates among student athletes at NMSU were among the lowest in the nation.

My how things have changed. Fast-forwarding to 2011, we find that Aggie student athletes, now, are consistently averaging better than a 3.0 GPA. In fact, they have accomplished this milestone consistently over the past six years, maintaining a 3.0 or better for 12 consecutive semesters.

When current NMSU Director of Athletics McKinley Boston was hired by thenpresident Mike Martin, his first task was to build a comprehensive strategic plan for all of NMSU athletics. The mission statement that evolved from that initial strategic planning effort stands true today – that NMSU become "one of the top mid-major athletic programs in the nation." This commandment, repeated often by Dr. Boston, requires all NMSU athletics programs to excel "on the field" and "in the classroom."

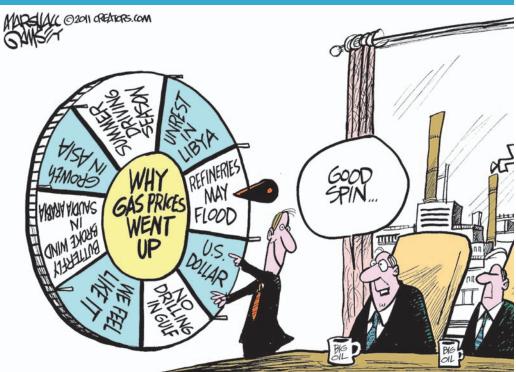

The past couple of weeks have provided great excitement for NMSU and Aggie fans. First, the men's golf team won their fourth consecutive conference championship. Under the direction of New Mexico born-and-raised coach Scott Lieberwirth, the Aggie golfers have now won six of the past eight conference championships and are competing this week at the NCAA regionals in Erie, Colo. These guys also won in the classroom by posting a composite 3.2 GPA.

Then there's the incredible story of the NMSU women's softball team coached by Kathy Rodolph. The team played tough competition throughout the season and consistently defied the odds and experts to garner a school record of 43 wins (so far) against only 15 losses. They won the regular season championship with only four league losses. Then, they won the post-season tournament by sweeping undefeated through the winner's bracket, defeating hometown favorite and tournament host Fresno State, the only team in the NCAA to qualify for every NCAA tournament for the past 30 years. Six Aggies were WAC All-conference first team performers. Valerie Swedberg was named WAC Freshman of the Year and Rodolph was named WAC Coach of the Year. In addition to these outstanding recognitions, the Aggie softballers took care of business in the classroom as well, earning an overall 3.305 GPA.

Other spring winners and individual WAC champions include Courtney and Camille Shultz, who finished 1-2 in the 10,000-meter cross country and Kelsey Brennan who won the javelin throw. (Kelsey also plays volleyball for the Aggies.) These three ladies along with Jndia Cleveland (400-meter hurdles) and LaSasha Aldredge (400-meter run) have all qualified for the NCAA regional meet. Importantly, the ladies track and field team averaged a GPA of 3.1.

Something that many Aggie fans may not know is that all student athletes and teams are expected to do more than compete well in the classroom and on the field. They also are evaluated on their participation in community service projects in Las Cruces, and are encouraged to support their fellow student athletes in other sports.

A big tip of the hat to Dr. Boston, NMSU President Barbara Couture and Associate Athletics Director for Student Development James Hall for their ongoing commitment to excellence, both on and off the field of play. And thanks to the hard-working student athletes whose competitive spirit and dedication is worthy of our admiration.

Killing Medicare

After years of paying premiums into the health insurance plan called Medicare, Americans are witnessing a huge "gotcha" at the hands of our Republican legislators. Reeling from the backlash of indignation following out-and-out attempts to kill the program, our crafty representatives are clipping away at the body of the best health insurance plan most citizens have, and trying to disguise those cuts as "caps."

No one is fooled, guys. We know that caps keep those who paid into the system from using the system, while you try to hide that you have been raiding Medicare for years to pay for those tax breaks for the rich.

Seniors paid their premiums over the years, and to steal their coverage amounts to an immoral theft from most Americans to support the lifestyles of the rich.

Dinah Jentgen

Protect wild lands

Recently, the Republicans for Environmental Protection, a conservative organization, has harshly criticized fellow Republicans like Congressman Steve Pearce for having "a tin ear for the stewardship ethic of traditional conservatism." Pearce is simply out to destroy wilderness. He and his anti-wilderness cohorts have introduced totally irresponsible legislation in the House of Representatives to eliminate the protection of millions of acres of unspoiled lands in our wilderness study areas including New Mexico. His sheer demagoguery and misinformation wants you to believe that conserving resources and saving wilderness areas are "restrictive."

In 1947 President Harry Truman warned us about people like Congressman Pearce and his ilk: "The battle for conservation cannot be limited to the winning of new conquests. Like liberty itself, conservation must be fought for unceasingly to protect earlier victories. There are always plenty of hogs who are trying to get natural resources for their own personal benefit. Public lands and parks, our forests and our mineral reserves, are subject to many destructive influences. We have to remain constantly vigilant to prevent raids by those who would selfishly exploit our common heritage for their private gain. Such raids on our natural resources are not examples of enterprise and initiative. They are attempts to take from all the people just for the benefit of a few."

These are words that should be remembered by Americans. The American public needs to stand up now to stop the rape and pillage of our wilderness areas by a few Republican extremists.

This has nothing to do about jobs or wasteful government spending. This is about the anti-wilderness ideology of a group of rabblerousers trying to impose their fanatical views on the American people.

Prom dresses a perfect fit

With our local high school proms now behind us, the Cinderella Prom Dress Project has put the dresses to rest until next year. The third annual event is designed to collect donated prom dresses and give them away to local high school girls. Hundreds of dresses have been donated and hundreds have been given away. The Cinderella Prom Dress Project in Las Cruces is the largest prom dress project in New Mexico. That would not be possible without the generosity of many.

First and foremost, a huge thank you to La Tienda, the unique boutique. Madie and the volunteers at La Tienda went out of their way to assist. Thank you, also, to Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Doña Ana Storage, Emerald Isle and Helping Hands Event Planning.

The Las Cruces community once again came forward with generous donations in dresses, volunteers, storage space and cash gifts. The young ladies who shopped for the gown of their dreams were gracious and polite.

Thanks for helping animals

ACTion Programs for Animals (APA) thanks all those who came out to the Clean Your Paws for a Good Cause dog wash fundraiser on May 7. APA is grateful to all their volunteers who worked the event as well as to The Country Dog, for lending their space, do-it-yourself dog wash stations and supplies to the event.

The fundraiser was sponsored by Blue Ribbon Pet Sitting and The Las Cruces Petsitters' Guild. Barb's Flowerland provided a wonderful doggie flower bouquet that was raffled off, and each doggie mommie also received a carnation from the flower shop.

The event raised more than $1,100 for APA's pet food bank and other services for no- and low-income pet guardians.

No way to rule a democracy

The only time the United States has been attacked by a foreign nation since World War II was when Saudi Arabians attack on 9/11. Our response has been to attack or threaten every oil producing country in the Middle East except Saudi Arabia. Afghanistan has a long sought-after oil pipeline route from the southern Russia oil fields to the Indian Ocean.

Either we have been ruled by idiots since 2001 or else there is something being achieved that the rulers don't wish to disclose. Either way, it's no way to rule a democracy.

We certainly have no business in deciding who rules the countries of Asia and Africa. It's just not democratic, is it?

When disaster occurs in other countries, Americans respond with massive public and private aid. Why don't they do the same when it is a disaster in the United States?

In at least one case, our government is not coming to the aid of people it has harmed. In fact, it appears to be hiding the evidence.

On July 16, 1945, our nation was at war. We had lost hundreds of thousands of troops retaking South Pacific islands the Japanese had taken several years earlier. All that was left was to take the Japanese mainland. Estimates of casualties in that battle ranged as high as 1 million.

Scientists at Los Alamos were working at a feverish pace to finish two different types of atom bombs our politicians felt could likely end the war without invading Japan. The scientists were confident that the "Little Boy" bomb would work, but weren't as confident about "Fat Man."

Our government decision makers didn't want the tactical disadvantage of dropping a dud on a country it knew was also working on a nuclear bomb so the decision was made to use it on us first to see if it worked.

Working without supercomputers, they still were able to estimate the amount of devastation from the blast. What they didn't know were the after effects. They protected themselves well and, as far as we know, none died from aftereffects. During the past decade, numerous obituaries have appeared in the Santa Fe New Mexican about scientists who worked on the bomb dying of old age.

But what about the people who lived in the counties near Trinity Site? Some lived on ranches closer to the blast than some of the scientists' observation posts. Those ranchers weren't warned of what was about to happen. They all survived, so the government thought it had successfully played with people's lives – in the name of national security – and won.

New Mexicans had been poisoned and the government wasn't willing to own up to it.

And that was the end of that. No further testing was done. New Mexicans breathed the air, drank the milk and ate the meat and vegetables they raised, unaware that some of it may have been poisoning their bodies.

Then people started dying of cancer and other radiation-related diseases. It was noted first in laboratory workers and then in people who lived downwind from the Nevada nuclear tests of the 1950s.

But no one paid attention to New Mexicans living downwind from both the Trinity test and the Nevada tests. Why not?

Many reasons are given. Trinity was too far in the past. New Mexico was too far from Nevada – even though southern Nevada was part of New Mexico when we were a Spanish territory.

Maybe it was hopelessness. In 1942, ranchers from what now is White Sands Missile Range were kicked off their property. They were told they would get their land back as soon as the war was over. It didn't happen. They never were adequately compensated despite fighting the government for more than 50 years.

Part of it was patriotism. The government needed to conduct the test and would do right by its citizens. Everyone had to sacrifice for the war effort, so it is best not to complain.

Finally, the facts became overwhelming. New Mexicans had been poisoned and the government wasn't willing to own up to it. A group called the Tularosa Basin Downwinders Consortium, headed by Fred Tyler and Nina Cordova, was formed to gather evidence and present it to our congressional delegation.

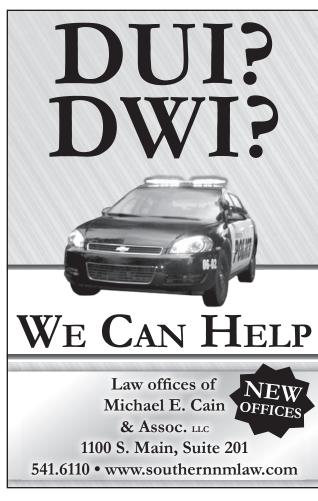

Last year, their efforts were bolstered by a Centers for Disease Control 10-year project to analyze every document generated by the lab during its existence to identify any medical information that has not been made public.

The report indicated that no studies have ever been made of the internal radioactive doses received by residents.

Last year, New Mexico's entire congressional delegation introduced bills to make eligible New Mexicans a part of the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act.

They went nowhere. Soon, we'll look at possible reasons why.

DON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE Father of the bride

It was a chance for Kurt to shine. He was father of the bride. Kurt is a seasoned, tough-hided, bow-legged Wyoming cowboy. He was not the kind of person you would ask to help you select the bridesmaids dresses or the pattern on your china. But his daughter knew that, so she asked if he could make it possible for her and her bridal party to arrive in a horse-drawn surrey.

"Sure," he said beaming, "That's what dads are for!"

The wedding was taking place at a big ranch headquarters, east of Cheyenne. Jolene was helping plan the wedding. On the afternoon of the rehearsal, she spotted Kurt putting a horse through it's paces pulling a sulky.

For you quarter horse people, that is a two-wheeled rickshaw with bicycle wheels. She waved and they visited. He explained that the horse he had planned to use for the surrey didn't work out so he was testing a new horse in the sulky. The next time she saw Kurt, he was limping up the lane, shirt hanging off his shoulder and his hat down around his ears.

In the paddocks behind him she could see a trail of broken sulky. Wheels, shaft, seat and harness spread across three fences. The horse was nowhere in sight.

On closer inspection, to her horror, the left side of Kurt's face looked like somebody had scraped it with a cheese grater. Gravel and dirt were embedded in the wound and flaps of skin hung down, dripping blood. Jolene was a nurse and insisted that he let her take him to the emergency room in Cheyenne.

"Nope," he said, "Ain't gonna do that. It's not that bad. Yer a nurse, you can do it."

She explained she didn't have instruments, but by luck there was a vet tech in the gathering crowd who offered an emergency kit. The only place with electricity, lights and running water was the ladies bathroom. Jolene cleaned the wound best she could but there were still flaps of skin hanging down. "I don't have a scalpel or any local anesthetic," she apologized. He offered her his castrating knife, and you know it was sharp.

"This is gonna hurt," she said. "Don't worry," he said, "Cowboys been bitin' bullets since Buffalo Bill shot himself in the foot."

After her triage was completed, the only bandage she could find was a Pampers that one of the young mothers lent her. Which didn't seem out of place in the ladies room.

As for the wedding next day, they cancelled the surrey. The bride and her entourage rode in on a hay wagon pulled by a tractor, oh, and every wedding photo in the scrapbook showed Dear ol' Dad doin' his part, in right side profile.

Money grubbin' government Authorities today treat the citizens as little more than sources of revenue

66 Law-abiding citizens are being hassled more and more instead of criminals.

Michael Swickard In My Opinion

Our nation's founders worried that government without strong limitations, even government in a republic, could become as oppressive as King George III who inspired the American Revolution. They sought to keep government from unduly oppressing citizens. Over time, though, always for a "good cause," government was able to grab more and more power. Government today is arguably as oppressive as it was with King George in 1776.

Citizens today serve the government rather than the other way around. The authorities live regally as if they are our betters. We are just "giving units" providing the funding for their imperial authority. We have seen enormous changes in our society these past 50 years. Picture the Andy Grif-

Picture the Andy Griffith Show, 2011. Mayberry leaders decree that law enforcement must help balance the budget. Andy quits in disgust. Barney is tasked every day with writing 10 tickets and arresting two citizens.

In the first episode, Barney arrests Aunt Bee for parking "funny" and perp-walks her into jail. She is crying. The fine is more than she has so the town government confiscates her car. Floyd, the barber, puts up a fight on a warrant for unsightly weeds. Goober tasers Floyd. It stops his heart and he dies. Each episode shows the effect of a police state after money rather than justice.

Far fetched? Not really. I grew up with enormous respect for law enforcement, but have lost much of my respect since officers have allowed politicians to turn them into money grubbers instead of law enforcement officers. The citizens know that all of the new procedures we are seeing involving the police are thinly veiled attempts to get more money from citizens rather than enforcing an orderly society.

Each separate act of sneaking money out of our pockets makes us respect members of law enforcement less and less. Where is their outrage about being used as tax collectors? We citizens recognize that the fine system does not extinguish behavior; rather, it is a direct financial resource leaders count on. Our society is ethically bankrupt when government entities are made the beneficiaries of their

More importantly, an administrative citation should never result in a citizen being arrested, handcuffed and perp walked into jail. That is to collect fines. Likewise, I am concerned with the proliferation of the codes officers. Law-abiding citizens are being hassled more and more instead of criminals. And, there is never ever a time when a codes violation should result in an arrest. Last week, in my town, a citizen was arrested for weeds in her yard. I spoke to one city leader who was happy about the arrest. He was willing to arrest citizens for administrative rather than criminal activity.

I have no problem with citizens getting tickets; I have a problem when it is tied to the financial needs of the controlling government.

for criminals. There are administrative ways

In my 20-minute conversation he expressed happiness about the incarceration because it showed citizens they would get into big trouble if they did not do exactly what they were told. Government says jump. We must reply, "How high?"

The voters need to ask every city, county, state and federal leader where they stand on this issue. Who is there to protect the citizens from oppression and who only want to increase the government's power? What does each think is the legitimate role of government in a free society?

Is there ever a time to arrest non-criminals? Should the police intimidate citizens instead of going after real criminals? Who thinks the police should concentrate on the robbers, rapists, gang members and felons, yes, the criminals, not the code violators? Voters need to know this and act upon it the next election.

Those of us who believe in limited government must take the government back from the oppressors. We must assert our authority over our servants. They will not give up their power easily. Power is all they respect. It must be done if we are to live free.

Money grubbing politicians have taken the honor from the members of law enforcement. Are we citizens going to throw those politicians out of office next election? Stay tuned.

'Pilotless parasite' vulnerable to radar jamming

By Michael Shinabery New Mexico Museum of Space Histor

The Strategic Air Command had intended to activate a squadron of Air Force RASCALs, a weapon the website designation-systems. net described as "the first nuclear-armed, airlaunched standoff missile"

But on May 26, 1957, The Associated Press reported the Air Force was re-evaluating inventory and "aiming at development of a new design of guided missile" for supersonic bombers.

The article, which the Alamogordo Daily News published, stated: "A House appropriations committee report on the Defense Department budget yesterday disclosed that an existing 'air-to-ground' missile program had been cut back. ... The committee report said investigation by the committee's staff had indicated that a reduction in the RASCAL air-to-ground missile program was justified."

The Bell Aircraft Company

developed the RASCAL, an acronym for RAdar SCAnning Link. The liquid-fueled, rocketpowered weapon, which an Oct. 28, 1957, Bell press release called "long range," was deployed far from anti-aircraft batteries, thus the label "standoff missile."

A Sept. 1, 1953, classified Air Force document, (declassified Oct. 6, 1982), called the RASCAL a "supersonic pilotless parasite bomber." According to the document, the project was approved on April 29, 1946, and was also known by such test designations as XB-63, and GAM-63 (Guided Air Missile). The document

The RASCAL weighed 13,000 pounds, was 35 feet long, and carried 293 gallons of fuel and "a 3,000 to 5,000 (pound) warhead," the document said. The three rocket engines each produced 6,000 pounds of thrust, for a total of 18,000 pounds, launching "at altitudes from 25,000 to 35,000 feet." The missile would then "climb to between 50,000 and 60,000 feet, cruise to within 20 miles of (the) target, and then dive at an angle of 30 (degrees) ... at speeds of Mach 1.5 to 2.5 through all weather conditions to any tactical or strategic radar target within a range of 100 miles of the launching point."

point." "U.S. Bombers: B1-B70" (Aero/1962), listed the Boeing YDB-47E Stratojet as the transport aircraft.

The Bell release announced the RASCAL had been tested in 1957 at the Air Force Missile Development Center, Holloman Air Force Base, Alamogordo. The release touted the GAM-63 "scored four direct hits on a target here during the last five weeks." The missiles were launched from a B-47 bomber at a target with "a radius of only 1,500 feet"; the successes were characterized as having been "right in the pickle barrel." Testing was concluded at month's end, at which time the RASCALs were to "become operational." The missile never was used in combat, and on Sept. 9, 1958, GAM-63 was cancelled.

One reason may have been that the RAS-CAL's weak point, according to the document, was that deployment was "dependent upon a human operator to guide it into lethal range of the target. An airborne-radar-jamming station between the director aircraft and the pilotless parasite bomber (would) probably neutralize its operation."

Missiles such as the RASCAL were early products of the Cold War nuclear proliferation. Interestingly, while The AP reported in 1957 that the House Appropriations Committee recommended "trimming" $75 million from the guided missile budget, the government did not "cut (any) ballistic missile programs."

In 1953, the year the first guided XB-63 was launched, Stanton Coblentz wrote in "From Arrow to Atom Bomb:" "We face a crisis in which, admittedly, civilization is in danger, and in which mankind itself may not survive. In these precarious circumstances, it is no more than elementary caution and common sense to fight with our best weapons, to put forth our best resources, our most capable and trained minds. If we fail to utilize these, we will have cut down our chances possibly to a fatal extent. When all is said, war is not a convulsion of nature. ... It is produced, as we have seen, primarily by one thing: the mind of man."

Four years later, Henry Kissinger wrote in "Nuclear Weapons and Foreign Policy," published for the Council on Foreign Relations, that "Mankind has at its disposal the means to destroy itself at the precise moment when schisms among nations have never been deeper."

John Keegan wrote in 1993 in A History of Warfare, "nuclear weapons have ... killed no one" since the U.S. dropped the atomic bomb on Japan in 1945. "The 50,000,000 who have died in war since that date have, for a the most part, been killed by cheap, mass-produced weapons and small-calibre ammunition, costing little more than the transistor radios and dry-cell batteries which have flooded the world in the same period."

Keegan's career positions included senior lecturer in military history at the Royal Military Academy, and defense editor of London's Daily Telegraph.

That same year, James Dunnigan wrote in How to Make War "even after all the post-Cold War nuclear-weapons cuts take place, there will still be several thousand nuclear weapons left" that would be "enough to fry the planet." A "massive exchange of nuclear weapons" would leave, he said, "tens, if not hundreds, of millions of people ... dead on the first day." Survivors would "perish during the following few years from disease, starvation, exposure, radiation poisoning, and the violence of civil disorder."

Keegan said "the cause of most death and destruction from a nuclear war is the elimination of the intricate web of interdependent industries and their transportation nets that produce enormously wealthy modern societies. Even Third World nations, he wrote, "are dependent on the major industrial societies for key technologies and emergency food supplies."

Murphy was suspended from the bench Monday, May 16, following the indictment. Through his attorney, Murphy said he is innocent of the charges, which include demanding or receiving a bribe; bribery of a public officer or employee; bribing, intimidating or retaliating against a witness and criminal solicitation.

Prosecutors allege that Murphy paid, in the form of a campaign contribution, to get his appointment from Gov. Bill Richardson in 2006, and that he told another potential judicial applicant to do the same.

NMPolitics.net reported Wednesday, May 18, that Third Judicial District Judge Jim T. Martin also won't hear criminal cases for the time being because of his role as an alleged witness to the bribery solicitation.

EBID holds farmer meetings

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District is meeting with farmer constituents to discuss strategies for making the most out of the initial four acre-inches of surface water allotment which is scheduled for release beginning June 1.

Farmers on the Rio Grande in southern New Mexico are gearing up for an irrigation season in the middle of an official "exceptional" drought and lower than expected runoff from snow melt in the Upper Rio Grande Basin.

During a grower meeting at the Hatch Community Center, EBID Treasurer-Manager Gary Esslinger told farmers this season is parallel to the short water year that occurred in 1964. "We're back in that situation," Esslinger said.

Initial plans call for the "bundling" of water to get the most efficient delivery to farmers up and down the system. Esslinger said that communication between the district, ditch riders and growers is also key in planning efficient water deliveries.

The district is also providing additional training for its field employees and putting hydrology experts on the ground to better orchestrate flows through the EBID's 350 miles of laterals and canals.

Esslinger also briefed farmers on some possible, positive scenarios including the district's request for 100,000 acre-feet of "credit water" from New Mexico Rio Grande Compact Commissioner, John D'Antonio.

There is still some runoff coming into Elephant Butte Reservoir and it could provide additional water to help extend the season beyond July. In addition, there may be some relief if a monsoon season materializes and EBID is able to capture storm water runoff in its system.

The district has placed weather stations in key areas that will alert officials to possible runoff scenarios which may help prevent flooding while capturing the water for agriculture.

In the meantime, EBID officials urged growers to review the district's pump policy available on its website www.ebid-nm. org as most farmers are currently pumping ground water to irrigate crops due to the lack of available surface water.

Currently, there is no surface water in the canals, so farmers are free to use the EBID conveyance system to meet their needs; however, movement of groundwater through EBID's system must be coordinated and measured by the district if there is surface water in the canals.

The recent landmark agreement between El Paso Water Improvement District No. 1 and the EBID allows farmers to "dip into their savings account" of groundwater without triggering possible litigation. It is this groundwater, and coordination between EBID and growers, that will help pull everyone through the record-setting drought, according to an EBID press release.

Midnight movie party offered to graduating LCPS seniors

All Las Cruces Public Schools seniors are invited to attend a Midnight Movie and Gaming Party, which will be held from midnight to 2:30 a.m. Saturday, May 21, at Allen Theatres Cineport 10 at the Mesilla Valley Mall, 700 S. Telshor Blvd.

The event is hosted by Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) of Oñate High School, said OHS SADD Chapter Advisor Christina Adams.

The featured movie will be "Pirates of the Caribbean 4: On Stranger Tides." There also will be video gaming on a big screen – slots are limited, so students must reserve a time in advance.

The cost is $4 per student with SADD College Contract for Life. Tickets and contracts will be available at the theater door.

SADD's mission is "to provide students with the best prevention tools possible to deal with the issues of underage drinking, other drug use, risky and impaired driving, and other destructive decisions." For more information, email Adams at cadams@lcps.k12.nm.us.

Local Rotarians give back to local food programs

The annual Taste of Las Cruces hosted by the Rotary Clubs of Las Cruces is set from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday, June 9, at the Las Cruces Convention Center, 680 University Ave.

The event cost $35 per person to attend and sample food from 24 local restaurants. A silent auction and door prize drawings also will be held. Proceeds go to local food programs at Jardîn de los Niños and Casa de Peregrinos. Event sponsors are the Las Cruces Rotary Club, Mesilla Valley Rotary Club and the Rio Grande Rotary Club.

For more information about buying tickets prior to the event, call 527-3463. Tickets also will be available at the door.

The UP Aerospace SL-5 rocket launch is scheduled for 7 a.m. Pre-launch and launch coverage can be viewed at www.KRQE. com or www.launchnm.com/

"We're expecting over 800 students and their families and members of the public to be on-hand to watch this year's launch," NMSGC Director Patricia Hynes said. "We are privileged to share it with the world on the Internet,"

The Student Launch Program was created by the NMSGC to promote science, technology, engineering and mathematics programs for area students. There are 35 sensors including electromagnetic field, carbon dioxide detectors, radiation, acceleration, temperature, pressure and piezo-electricity sensors. Descriptions of the student experiments are available online at www.launchnm.com.

Based out of New Mexico State University, NMSGC is a member of the congressionally funded National Space Grant College and Fellowship Program that is administered by NASA. The program promotes lifelong learning in areas of science, technology, engineering and mathematics as it pertains to space-related activities. The consortium supports a wide range of projects and scholarship opportunities, including the Student Launch Program.

Launch set at spaceport Student send experiments into space

As launch officers make their final preparations for the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium's (NMSGC) SL-5 Student Launch, all systems are a go for launching from Spaceport America Friday, May 20.

Engineers from UP Aerospace have prepared the rocket for the launch rail and are doing final systems checks, as NMSGC officials are finalizing preparations to host more than 800 students for the NASA sponsored launch.

All experiments will have sensors or video data recorded. All data will be downloaded after the launch at Spaceport America. Having students and teachers from New Mexico, Texas and Arizona all together with experiments on this rocket will be a great day for New Mexico, said NMSGC Director Patricia Hynes. The student launch program was created by the NMSGC to promote science, technology, engineering and mathematics programs for area students. This program provides annual access to space for student experiments at the end of the academic year.

Roadblocks target mussels State inspectors looking for infected boats

The New Mexico Department of Game and Fish will be conducting roadblocks to inspect boats and related equipment for aquatic invasive species at popular reservoirs during the boating season. Officers will establish roadblocks to contact boaters and ensure that vessels and gear are invasive-species free.

Aquatic invasive species include zebra and quagga mussels, which occur in water bodies in states adjacent to New Mexico. There are not any infested waters in New Mexico, yet. These devastating organisms are carried from place to place on boat trailers and boats. They attach to any hard surface and can live out of water for weeks at a time. The mussels reproduce rapidly, causing irreversible environmental damage and can seriously damage boat engines by clogging engine cooling systems and causing motors to overheat. The costs of dealing with an infested water body can be significant.

To stop aquatic hitchhikers, the best safety practice is "Clean. Drain. Dry. Every time."

For more information about aquatic invasive species, visit www.wildlife.state.nm.us and click on the Stop Aquatic Hitchhikers logo in the "Issues and Answers" section, then click on the Stop Aquatic Hitchhikers stop-sign graphic.

Set your sails for the Rio Grande Fourteenth annual Raft the Rio embarks June 11

The Southwest Environmental Center's 14th annual "Raft the Rio" will be held Saturday, June 11, on the Rio Grande, near Las Cruces.

The family-friendly event is open to individuals and teams of all ages willing to get wet and have fun. Creativity and the use of discarded materials in building rafts are highly encouraged.

The 3-mile rafting adven-ture will begin at La Llorona Park beneath the Picacho Avenue bridge, and end upstream from the Calle del Norte Bridge ("Mesilla Bridge"). Refreshments, food vendors and live music will be available at the finish line.

Prizes will be awarded to homemade boats in the following categories: first to fin-ish, least likely to finish (must be floating at start of race), best use of recycled materials, most spirited (most enthusiastic crew), best theme (most thorough application of a theme to vessel and crew), and Champion of the River (best promotes appreciation for the Rio Grande).

This year there are two divisions - 'kids and open. Prizes will be awarded in both divisions. The kids division race begins at 10 a.m, followed by the open division at 10:15 a.m. To be eligible for the kids'

EBID to begin taking water orders Gates open on May 31 for irrigation starting June 1

By Marvin Tessneer

Elephant Butte Irrigation District dispatchers will start taking water orders for the 2011 season Monday, May 23. EBID will take the water orders from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Monday through Friday and from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 28, the district management announced. The Caballo Reservoir gates will open Tuesday, May 31, to start the irrigation season on June 1. Piver flow is expect to start the irrigation season on June 1. River flow is expected to reach Leasburg Dam in about two days after the gates are opened.

Because of the lower-than-average Rio Grande Basin snow pack runoff, the district announced an initial allotment of four inches for farmers. At this point, EBID will release water to a farmer only once during the season.

A normal allotment to grow crops is three acre-feet. Farmers are checking wells to make sure they are in working order to supplement the river surface water. The district is making arrangements for farmers to share well water within the district, EBID management said.

The irrigation outlook is not promising. The storage at Elephant Butte Reservoir is 368,700 feet, which is 18.7 percent of capacity, the Bureau of Reclamation reported.

Friday, May 20, 2011 Fires burn in Gila All trails on Organs opened

The Bureau of Land Management announced the closure of Pine Tree Trail in the Aguirre Spring recreation area was lifted Tuesday, May 17.

As an added safety measure, hikers are encouraged to stay on the trail as rehab work on fire lines near the trail is continuing.

Meanwhile, the fire in the Gila Wilderness is still burning after consuming more than 75,000 acres. Residents of Gila Hot Springs have been evacuated, but are allowed to travel to their homes with proof of residency.

The following campgrounds off New Mexico Highway 15 remain closed: Upper and Lower Scorpion, Grapevine, Woody's Corral, Forks and TJ Corral. Heart Bar Wildlife Area is also closed to public access.

Fire management teams are encouraging people to use extreme caution when off road or celebrating graduations this weekend.

Budget

Gebhart estimates the general fund will go down from $79.6 million to $79.4 million. With the government expecting a $19 million drop in revenues, Gebhart said, most of the decrease is the result from those government-funding projects and the city's utilities department relinquishing its role as fiscal agent for Rio Grande Natural Gas.

Building permits, compared to the last couple of years, are beginning to pick back up, though slowly, Gebhart said. Because all property tax is first collected by the state, there is a two-year delay before the city gets to see the growth in revenue from improved construction trends. Also, there has been some depreciation seen on the value of non-residential property, he said.

One bright spot that Gebhart noted is the current fiscal year is coming in under budget by about $4 million. This year's ending balance will be about $18 million, he said, and next fiscal year's budget should end with $14 million, which is more than half of the reserve fund required by the state.

There is some money in the budget for pay step increases to unionized workers and merit raises to nonunion workers. Gebhart said the budget includes progress to rebuild the city's vehicle replacement fund and to finish the current round of police academy training. There is money set aside for increased health care and other possible growing liabilities, such as unemployment insurance, depending on legislative actions.

City Manager Robert Garza said the city is not in a growth mode, which made the budget process less complex than recent years. The city held six public budget meetings, starting in September, 2010, which Garza said helped break the budget into digestible pieces.

Garza noted that none of the executive staff will be up for the merit pay increases.

The next evening – Tuesday, May 17 – Rounds told the Las Cruces public school board that there are enough teachers and other workers retiring or leaving the district to avoid the more dire possibilities, such as layoffs, he voiced upon learning of reduced per-unit funding from the state.

The district is eliminating 195 positions in next year's operational budget of $175 million. Rounds told the school board the district will be seeing less funding from virtually every source.

General funding from the state will go from almost $188 million to $180 million, with declines also foreseen in grants, money to pay off debt and funds for capital projects. There are slight increases for federal programs and in an assortment of other special funds.

Reading

The encouragement to read every day to children will be found in doctor's offices and delivery rooms, and followed up with training and support for parents, he said.

The effort is based on a successful program in Kennewick, Wash., where the national Children's Reading Foundation was started, Fischmann said. One of the reasons the state senator became interested in it was the similarity in demographics between the northwest city and Las Cruces. With a campaign that reaches nearly every resident, children's school performance has improved, he said.

Whatever differences in opinion there are about the best way to improve educational performance, Fischmann said early literacy is uniformly seen as a child's critical foundation to learning. That means not just getting children up to reading level by the third grade, but exposing them to fundamental principles of reading and language by the time students start kindergarten, he said.

"I believe we can turn Doña Ana County into the premier center for early childhood education and that's really our goal," he said.

Speaking at the kick-off event at New Mexico State University's O'Donnell Hall, Gov. Susana Martinez talked about programs she visited at schools in the state where children are reading beyond grade level. Martinez said her strong focus on education comes from her experience as a prosecutor in which she saw a lack of education leading people to criminal lives.

Las Cruces Catholic Bishop Ricardo Ramirez said he's also seen that connection when he ministers to prisoners. Reading is not only a skill for living a more substantial life economically, he said, but it is the gateway to spirituality through reading the Bible.

Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds said he supports the new foundation because it will show children that the adults in the community really do care about them. He said he shares the governor's vision that education is key to economic prosperity and the state's social well being.

"Let's take a vow today that a year from now every child will be reading at grade level," Rounds said.

Doña Ana Community College President Margie Huerta said she is confident the community can get behind the foundation effort as it has for so many other good causes. "Isn't it true that Las Cruces always comes through?" Huerta asked.

After the kick-off speeches, participants went to area schools to read to children. That was followed up Saturday, May 14, with a literacy conference at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. That evening, the foundation organizers held a fundraiser at Rokoko Gallery in Mesilla.

On Monday, May 16, LCPS hosted the first training sessions for the workshops that will be given to new parents to help them learn and get access to developmentally appropriate reading techniques and materials.

Working with Fischmann are Las Cruces School Board member Maria Flores, former public school teacher Terry Miller, former Dartmouth professor Douglas Hoffman and the National Reading Foundation.

Conference brings area literacy forces together

Richard Coltharp That's the Way of the World

OK, let's play a guessing game.

You have to guess the topic of an event. Here's a clue: the topic was interesting enough to get more than a hundred Las Crucens out of bed and standing in line at 8:30 a.m. on a Saturday. No, it was not a big sale. Not a car wash. Not a golf tournament. Not even a parade.

Nothing that exciting, at least on the surface.

The topic? Reading. Or, more accurately, learning how to read. The event? The Doña Ana County Literacy Conference. You've never heard of it, you say? Understandable since it's the first one we've had. Did you know that there are more than 30 organizations in Doña Ana County devoted to promoting literacy? Neither did I, and neither did many of the area schoolteachers and literacy advocates who attended the conference.

But representatives from most of the local literacy organizations were there Saturday, May 14, and it was an important opportunity for all the groups to get together and learn more about each other. Kudos to the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce for coordinating the event, and kudos to these sponsors: Loyal Order of Moose 2081, Las Cruces Machine Mfg. & Engineering Inc., the Las Cruces Public Schools Foundation, the Children's Reading Foundation of Doña Ana County and the New Mexico State University College of Education.

Getting these literacy groups together with each other, and with teachers, and enabling them to energize their collective goal, helps everyone in southern New Mexico.

These groups are working to help southern New Mexicans, age zero to adult, learn how to read. Some groups are focused on the very young. Some groups are focused on the adults. Others, in between. If they succeed, we all win.

And if kids don't learn to read, we all lose.

'The key is all of us working together," said state Sen. Steve Fischmann, one of the leaders behind the most newly minted of these literacy groups - the Children's Reading Foundation of Doña Ana County.

The Reading Foundation kicked off on the auspicious date of Friday the 13th, but Gov. Susana Martinez and others were on hand at New Mexico State University to bid the program good luck.

The Reading Foundation has made big strides in the other 19 U.S. communities where it exists, particularly in Washington, where the foundation began in 1996, and where eight communities participate. The concept is simple: "Read with a child. It's the most important 20 minutes of your day."

It may be simple, but it's also profoundly true.

The Reading Foundation is a great program. Each of the other different literacy groups in Doña Ana County has a specific role, and they all serve critical functions.

It was nothing short of moving to be in the room and watch lights go on in people's eyes as literacy advocates learned how they could help teachers, and teachers learned how they could help literacy advocates, and how both, together, could better help students.

Las Cruces Public Schools superintendent Stan Rounds attended the event, and saw the potential on that early Saturday morning.

Given a chance to address the crowd, Rounds said, "It shows me something about all you teachers. You're in it for the kids. I'm so proud of you."

But Rounds also recognized a key concern for everyone, and he expressed appreciation for the groups addressing the very young children. "How do you get parents to be actually involved with the children?" he asked. "What happens before five years old is so critical.

And we can all play a role in helping these young children, as well as their parents. Because in helping them we ultimately help ourselves; we help our whole community.

Immerse in Camp Invention Annual program will be at Desert Hills Elementary

The nationally acclaimed Camp Invention program returns to Las Cruces Public Schools this summer. It will be held Monday-Friday, June 6-10, at Desert Hills Elementary School, 280 N. Roadrunner Parkway.

Created for children entering grades one through six, the exciting Camp Invention program is a weeklong adventure in creativity that immerses its participants in engaging, hands-on activities in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM), as well as history and the arts.

Each day, children rotate through five integrated modules that employ creative thinking to solve real-world challenges. Children learn vital 21st century life skills such as problem solving and teamwork through imaginative play. New to the 2011 Camp Invention lineup is the SPARK program, in which children will construct life-sized clubhouses made of PVC piping to crack puzzling codes and solve a mystery in The Curious Cypher Club module, investigate polymer science and create their own bouncy balls to take home in the Bounce. An Atomic Journey module, and explore innovative survival traits of the planet's W!LDest animals in the W!LD: Wondrous and Living Designs module.

All Camp Invention programs include a module in which children participate in high-energy games that challenge their minds and bodies, as well as a renowned invention module, in which children upcycle pieces and parts of discarded household appliances and other donated materials to create new machines.

Since its inception in 1990, nonprofit Invent Now programming has grown to include nearly 1,500 school partnerships in 49 states. In 2010, more than 70,000 children participated nationwide. The Camp Invention program was created in partnership with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, which continues to support Invent Now's noble mission to inspire creativity and inventive thinking in children of all ages.

The Camp Invention program has been featured in Child, Principal, and Better Homes and Gardens magazines, as well as dozens of other educational journals and general publications. The program has also been the focus of National Public Radio's Science Friday and studied by Harvard's Graduate School of Education. In a recent survey, 90 percent of parents said the Camp Invention program helped their children enjoy science.

Every program participant receives a Camp Invention Tshirt that features clever, new artwork each year. Early registration and alumni discounts are available.

Menzies mulls the good byes

It's never easy to say good bye. During a visit with New Mexico State University coach Marvin Menzies on Tuesday, May 17, the conversation touched on some departures that are affecting the Aggie basketball program. The most obvious is Troy Gillenwater's decision to leave the Aggie program and try to earn a living playing professional basketball.

Menzies said Gillenwater's absence has changed the emphasis a little in recruiting, but he is confident that the players already on the roster can step in to Gillenwater's position.

"We like what we have in the program already, but when those guys move, you have to fill their positions," he said.

"Wendell (McKines) will now spend more time playing at the small forward, whereas before he might have played more at the wing. He is very experienced at it and he's a big-time team guy, so he'll do whatever the team needs."

Menzies said the team will still run an offense that will allow McKines to get some time on the wing, especially in fast-break situations.

"We'll still be in a good position to utilize all of Wendell's strengths," Menzies said.

"It (Gillenwater's departure) will hurt our depth a little bit at positions like the wing, where you have guys playing that aren't as battle tested. We're looking to do a little fine tuning. We got some feelers out and we're looking at some kids and some kids are still looking at us, so we'll see." Menzies seemed unconcerned about Menzies seemed unconcerned about signing players to National Letters of Intent. He said he has a chance of signing one player, but most of his recruits don't come in via that route.

The Aggie coach said he stays in close contact with Gillenwater, who is in the process of selecting an agent and is working to maintain his conditioning.

Another departure that will affect Aggie basketball in the 2011-12 season is the loss of Boise State to the Mountain West Conference. With only eight teams playing in the WAC, the Aggies have two more games to schedule against nonconference opponents. Menzies couldn't give any specifics

Menzies couldn't give any specifics about the schedule, but said he is looking to find mid-major teams willing to play home and away series, such as the Aggies played against Louisiana last year.

"We have our marquee games, the ones everybody knows about are already in place – the schedule with Arizona and UNM and UTEP. Outside of that there's still some pending," he said.

Aggie softball team relaxed and ready for tournament

By Jimmy Currier For the Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University's softball team added another page to the history book last weekend, clinching its first NCAA tournament berth.

The Aggies didn't allow the selection committee to determine their destiny, winning the Western Athletic Conference tournament in three games to add a conference tournament trophy next to the regular season trophy in the display case.

Hoisting the trophy was the culmination of eight years of recruiting, practice and a determination to win for head coach Kathy Rodolph and her team.

When she first arrived at NMSU in 2004, the Aggies were 14th from the worst in Division I softball, she said. Now, the Aggies are 49th in the country and looking to be one of the top 16.

"It's been a remarkable turnaround," Rodolph said. "It's been a steady determination and the will to go after and recruit the type of players we need to compete in the WAC."

She wanted the Aggies to compete with Fresno State and they did just that, defeating the Lady Bulldogs on their home field to win the WAC tournament championship 5-0.

"Being able to take them down on their field has been a goal of mine since I got here," Rodolph said. "We've been close many times and honestly we were sick and tired of coming up short."

Last year, the Aggies were two and done in the tournament they hosted. Since the Aggies started play in the WAC in the 2005-06 season, they had never won more than one game in a conference tournament.

The 2011 New Mexico State Aggie softball players and coaches pose with banners and trophies signifying their WAC Tournament championship, something no NMSU softball team had accomplished before this season.

"We have seven seniors who are very talented," Rodolph said. "They have the experience and they courageously have come through and are leading us."

One of those seniors, Hoku Nohara, delivered what might be the biggest home run in Aggie softball history. Trailing 4-3 in the bottom of the seventh inning against Hawai'i, a team the Aggies hadn't defeated in seven tries, Nohara smashed the ball over the fence for a walk-off two run home run.

"I think it meant a lot to all of us, especially to me," Nohara, a native Hawaiian, said. "Going back home and losing to them three times in front of my family was kind of rough, but we finally got them when it counted."

Rodoĺph said there was no bigger hit than Nohara's home run.

"That set us up into the winner's bracket and we just swept Boise at home and we knew if we had the last at bats we could rely on our offense," she said.

The Aggies didn't need much offense for their remaining two games as they played perfect defense and Celisha Walker and Alex New-

Hard work pays off for Banegas Mayfield track standout headed to NMSU

By Craig Massey

Jenna Banegas has been hanging around Mayfield High School for as long as she can remember.

Her earliest memories of the school from which she is graduating this weekend, is when her grandfather – former head football coach Jim Bradley – would pick her up after kindergarten and take her to his office where he studied game film. Later, she spent several years as a "ball girl" at Mayfield's football games, coached by her grandfather, and later, her uncle Michael Bradley.

Growing up in a family that emphasizes hard work, preparation, and achievement in the classroom and on the playing field, it's no surprise that Banegas was a success at the school she has called home for much more than the four years she actually spent there as a student.

Banegas, who was a member of Mayfield's state championship basketball team last winter, capped off her high school athletic career by winning the state title in two track and field events, and finishing second in two others. She is the state's best in the 100 meters, and also was a member of Mayfield's 4-by-100-meter relay team. Her time in the 100 was 12.19 seconds.

It was the second year in a row that the school's 4-by-100 relay team won it all (Banegas was a member of the team last year, too), but winning the 100 was especially gratifying because she wasn't able to compete in the event last year at the state meet because of an apparent paperwork miscue.

"And I broke my hip playing basketball last year, too, so I was still recovering," she said. "There was controversy the whole year. Winning it this year felt so good." Banegas, who is the daughter of Jeff and Debbie Banegas, was one of two girls on her football team as a seventh-grader, and the only

Aggielnsider

The 'vital' statistic

Winners on the softball diamond don't cut any corners when in the classroom

Let's go over a few things about the NCAA bound Aggie softball team. Batting and pitching statistical superlatives? No, that has been covered already. WAC Tournament honors? Kind of old news. A position-by-position comparison of NM State and first round opponent Texas Tech? I will leave that for someone else.

What I want to write about is the first thing head coach Kathy Rodolph wanted to talk about at the team's watch party May 15. The fact that in addition to having the best competitive year in NM State softball history, the team is among the top 40 for grade point average nationally with a team cumulative GPA of 3.3.

Before she got to the specifics of how her team won the WAC tourney, the coach wanted to brag about the classroom work that she said is always "the most important job" for her team.

Two of Rodolph's seniors have already been accepted into the NM State nursing program. Teresa Conrad and Kandis Jones were named CoSIDA Capital One Academic All-District selections – the awards coming softball's way aren't just because they can hit a two strike, off speed pitch. Rodolph has a background that stressed studies as well.

As she was honing her coaching skills, Rodolph taught science. Physics, biology, the type of courses that you can't bluff your way through as those studying journalism or philosophy might be tempted to do. The physics of hitting a softball and the focus on solving a knotting problem are part of what the WAC Coach of the Year used to grow and learn her craft. The skills developed in school complement those on the diamond. Self control, determination and persistence make for winners in both categories.

These ladies aren't bookworms that spend all their time in study hall – care and concern for others is also on their list of things to do. Softball has also been the perennial leader in the athletics department in the amount of hours devoted to community service. The numbers aren't in on this year's volunteered hours, but I am guessing softball will win that contest, too. When you see the complete picture of this successful team, it just gives you more reasons to smile.

Faces in the crowd: A member of the men's basketball team that beat Jerry Tarkanian, aka Tark the Shark, Reggie Jordan checked in recently. Jordan is coaching professional hoops in Mexico and taking online courses. One of his dreams is to be a NCAA Division-I college coach. He made it all the way to the NBA as a free agent, playing for the Los Angeles Lakers and Minnesota Timberwolves. I wouldn't bet against him achieving this goal either.

Aggie student-athlete spotlight

A successful year in, out of the classroom Athletes learn to make the right decisions

I am pleased to write our final piece of the Aggie weekly update. I am very thankful to the Las Cruces Bulletin for their willingness to provide a wonderful platform for the Las Cruces public, New Mexico State fans and stake holders to get to know our student athletes, coaches and administrators who worked so tirelessly in their efforts to help us become one of the best mid-major athletic programs in the country.

By most standards for success and our commitment to broadbased excellence, we have had a very successful year. The most important baseline for us is the overall academic success of our 460 student athletes.

For the 12th consecutive semester, all 17 men's and women's teams cumulative grade point averages combined are at or above a 3.0. In spring 2011, the cumulative GPA for all 17 men's and women's teams combined was a 3.013.

For the 12th consecutive semester, scholarship student athlete representation (3.0 semester and/or cumulative grade point average or higher) was more than 50 percent of the student-athlete population. This spring, 56 percent, or 217 student athletes, achieved a 3.0 or higher semester GPA. We also have 56 percent, or 244 student athletes, maintaining a 3.0 or higher cumulative GPA at the end of the spring 2011.

We had 26 student athletes post a perfect 4.0 GPA in the spring semester, and three student athletes maintain a perfect 4.0 cumulative GPA.

The Academic All-WAC awards are given to student athletes who have been with the institution for one academic year, carry a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 or higher and participated in 50 percent of the team's contests. For the 2010-11 academic year, we had 42 honorees from the fall sports with the winter and spring sports to be announced at a later date.

Earlier this month, we had 28 student athletes participate in the spring 2011 commencement ceremonies. Additionally, student athletes earned more than 6,000 credits during the spring semester, or 15 credits per student athlete.

Our student athletes experienced success within the WAC, and NM State will finish no worse than third place in the final WAC Commissioner's Cup standing, which reflects a composite point total earned through finishes in WAC regular season and tournament championships.

Our student athletes once again volunteered more than 5,000 community service hours in support of youth in our community. Each of our student athletes, as a condition of team membership, must commit to a minimum of 15 community service hours a year. Many of our athletes exceed that threshold.

Most of the athletes are involved in life-skill activities with the goal in many cases to help them make better life choices such as forgoing eligibility to play pro, walking away from an argument and choosing to stay away from risky environments.

Alex Newman Sophomore Softball

Sophomore right-handed pitcher Alex Newman pitched a complete-game shutout over Fresno State, May 14, to lead the Aggies to their first WAC Tournament title and an NCAA Tournament bid. With the victory, Newman tied the single-season win mark in program history set by Sarah Seagraves in 2005. Her ERA for the week was 0.60 with a win in two appearances. She struck out six while giving up just one earned run.

man were on fire in the circle – defeating Boise State 7-0 and Fresno State 5-0.

The Aggies celebrated their WAC championship at the Game Sports Bar & Grill Sunday, May 15, and also discovered who, where and when they will play in the NCAA Tournament.

The WAC champions head west to Tucson, Ariz., to face Texas Tech (40-14) of the Big 12 at 5 p.m. Friday, May 20. Meanwhile, Arizona (40-16) of the PAC-10, the No. 8 national seed overall, will host Ivy League champion Harvard (36-14) in the second game Friday.

The four-team regional is a doubleelimination tournament with opening games Friday. Three games will be played on Saturday, eliminating two squads. The regional championship will be held Sunday for the right to advance to the 16team NCAA Super Regional.

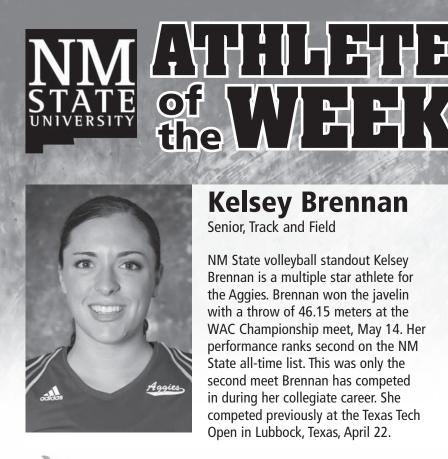

"Texas Tech plays in the Big 12, which has outstanding competition, but we feel that the WAC's underrated and we face strong competition as well," Rodolph said. "It's going to come down to we're going to match our offense against Tech's pitching and see if they can hold us in the circle."

Rodolph stressed the importance of the match against the Lady Red Raiders. Because the Aggies are the road team in this game, if they win, they will play Arizona – barring an upset of monumental proportions – but will be the home team. A loss and the Aggies more than likely play Harvard and probably Texas Tech again and would have to beat Arizona twice to advance to the Super Regional.

As for the Lady Wildcats, the Aggies are familiar with them. Arizona took two games in Las Cruces this season -7-2 and 7-5 in eight innings. However, the last time the Aggies played at Arizona, the Wildcats shut them out 9-0 and 8-0 in 2010.

The Aggies were scheduled to arrive in Tucson Wednesday, May 18, after two straight days of practice in Las Cruces. Rodolph spoke of the consequential importance of practice.

"The more you play, the less you practice. The less you practice, the more you get out of shape and the more you get out of shape, the higher the risk of injury," she said. "Our pitchers need to throw and our hitters need to hit. We need to make sure we field and keep our arms in good shape."

A big reason the Aggies are in the NCAA tournament is the bat of freshman outfielder Valerie Swedberg, who won Most Valuable Player honors at the WAC Tournament. She went 3-for-9 in the tournament with two home runs and five RBI, while posting a 1.000 slugging percentage.

Nohara, junior Tiare Jennings and Newman, a sophomore, also earned alltournament honors.

Nohara went 3-for-9 with two home runs, four RBI and a 1.000 slugging percentage. She hit a two-run walk-off home run against Hawai'i in the opening game and her first inning home run against Boise State put her atop the WAC alltime home run list with 63.

Jennings drew five walks through three games to go with her 3-for-7 performance at the plate and three RBI.

Newman was clutch in the championship game giving up four hits in the shutout. Her ERA for the tournament was 0.60 with a win in two appearances. She struck out six while giving up just one earned run.

Holguin to play with the Aggies Trakh signs Mayfield star

New Mexico State women's basketball head coach Mark Trakh announced that Elena Holguin, a shooting guard from Mayfield High School, signed a National Letter of Intent this week to play basketball at NMSU beginning in the fall of 2011.

A prolific shooting guard, Holguin was a key component of Mayfield's 2011 Class 5A state championship title this season. She averaged 26.3 points per game in the state tournament. The 5-8 guard also featured prominently in four consecutive district titles while her team compiled a 104-12 record under head coach George Maya.

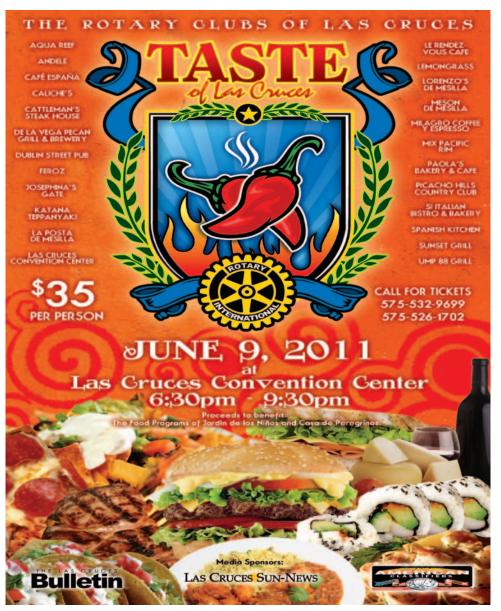

"We are excited to sign Elena," Trakh said. "She really excelled on the state championship team and is a great local prospect for us. Her signing is a big step in the right direction to help us recruit the best local talent as well as accomplished athletes from across the state and borderland region."

As Mayfield's top 3-point shooter, Holguin averaged 16 points per game. She also was second on her team in rebounds and assists.

Holguin earned recognition on the 2010-11 New Mexico All-State First Team and took home state tournament Most Valuable Player honors as a senior. Additionally, she earned All-District accolades on three occasions including a District Player of the Year honor. Holguin was also a three-time All-Tournament selection and named a North/ South All-Star in New Mexico.

Trakh also announced that Paige Melville, a point guard from Terrigal High School in New South Wales, Australia, signed a National Letter of Intent this week to play basketball at NMSU beginning in the fall of 2011.

A multi-talented point guard, Melville was the floor general for the Hornsby Spiders in the Australian Basketball Association. Previous to Hornsby, Melville played for the Central Coast Crusaders in New South Wales.

Joe Bullock remembers his dad

Local businessman writes a touching Golf Digest article

The greatest thrill

at his club.

TOM WATSON

Las Cruces High School

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

It's not often that I get to do a genuine "feel good" story. This one is about a true gentleman who is a real pillar of the community as well as a good friend. It's about Joe Bullock, President of First American Bank (Las Cruces branch). But as of this week, other than being a golfer, a husband and a dad, he is famous. Joe's article "Dad's Last Shot: A final swing punctuates a life lived well at a less-hectic pace of play," was published in the June issue of Golf Digest magazine. "Instead of 15 minutes of fame I get 16," Joe quips, in his typical self-effacing manner.

Joe, with his twin brother Van and two older siblings, grew up in Artesia. In case you've never been to Artesia it's a quiet small town in far eastern New Mexico, not far from the oil-rich Permian Basin of Texas. Oil and natural gas drilling are abundant in the mostly flat surrounding landscape to the east. Farming and cattle ranching are also important sectors of the economy. Joe's father, Bill Bullock, owned the Bullock Feed and Seed store, which you can still see as you swing through downtown on U.S. Highway 70.

Ostensibly, Joe's story is about his remarkable dad, but his keener purpose was to identify something that has been mostly lost in our fast-pace, pressurized, digital culture in which there is distance with so many family members. Joe, like me, misses a simpler time in America.

Joe decries the absence of fathers and sons sharing their time on the golf course these days, and believes that children need more than golf lessons and golf camps to learn the lessons of life that golf affords.

"The article started with my devotion to a handbook I've been working on for some time dealing with parent-child relationships through golf," Joe explains. "I call it 'Junior Golfers of America.' It's a guide or manual on how adults can positively influence kids."

A recent letter from Jack Nicklaus "was very supportive to my idea." Joe says he sent Golf Digest some of his junior golf plans, but the editors found the story about his dad far more interesting.

The golf course in Artesia was carved out in the 1940's. Over the years a lot of blue-collar folks played there cheekand-jowl with some of the most wealthy local businessmen of that day. I've been in Artesia, Hobbs and Clovis, and you can't tell the rich folks from the everyday folks by their appearance. Unless you live there.

Herb Wimberly, winner of the New Mexico Open in 1960 (shooting 62, 71 and 63), confirms that view.

"No, you can't tell because they're all about the same – pretty neat people."

Joe's tale is about preparing his aging dad to hit his driver in the first shot to commemorate the opening of the second nine holes at the country club. It took nearly 60 years to give the members 18 holes.

"Things move slowly in Artesia," recalls Joe, "but life was good there as a kid."

Joe fondly remembers playing countless rounds of golf with his father. He looks back on his childhood and notes it was a time in America where fathers and sons could go out on a golf course at the closing of the day, not needing a tee time, and enjoy their special moments together.

"That's been lost today," Joe laments, adding that parents and children rarely even sit down to breakfast or dinner anymore.

Bill Bullock, who passed due to heart complications within a couple of months after hitting his superb commemorative first tee shot, was a fine golfer in his day.

"I recall coming home from college golf, and Dad challenged me to a match," Joe writes. "He shot 61 and sent me back to college to try my luck against younger competition."

That wasn't the only lesson Joe learned from Dad. His feed store business and his golf kept Bill in touch with the real, salt-of-the-earth folks that he keenly observed day after day, and year after year. Through Bill's life experience, he gained a wealth of wisdom, often stated in what Joe refers to as "Dad's jewels." Here are a few examples from the article.

"Trust everybody, but brand your calves."

"The people you play golf with will have forgotten your score by the next day, but they will remember how you behaved forever." "When you die, you don't want to be mad at anybody, and nobody would be mad at you." And one more that Joe remembers, not in the article: "It's almost worthwhile losing something because you're so happy when you finally find it." In 1996, golf journalist James Dodson wrote Final Rounds about he and his father, who had two months to live, as they set off on the golf journey of their dreams to play the most famous courses in Scotland. Throughout their poignant journey, father and son humorously reminisced and reaffirmed their love for each other, as James found out what it means to have his father also be his best friend.

I found the prologue even more touching, where Dodson recounts an earlier interview with golf legend Tom Watson in which he asks him for the best moment of his golfing life.

"It's funny," Watson said as he paused, "the greatest thrill I had may have been the day my father invited me to join him and a couple of his regular golf buddies at his club. I was so excited, really aching to show him what I could do. I guess I was maybe eleven or twelve. Even now I think about that. It was a very powerful moment. My father means so much to me. I can always hear his voice in my head, telling me to keep my head still or make a good swing. I don't know if I ever felt that way again, you know?"

In my own case I certainly know, from memories of golfing with my father.

Joe says most of the emails he has received from people who have read the article talked about memories of fathers and how they related emotionally.

"People just wanted to tell me about their dad," Joe shares. Joe sees a disconnect these days, with teaching our kids from the standpoint of spending time together, in our highly selfcentered society. But he believes there's still a chance kids can re-connect with golf as common bond.

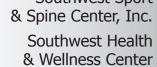

If you're a parent, make time to play golf with your kids – don't just play golf exclusively with your buddies. And kids, if you're listening, as you get older, never turn down an opportunity to go to the golf course and play with your dad.

Enemies on the rink; sisterhood off the rink

By Jimmy Currier

When Lisa Landreth and her friends Katie Woodard and Ami Montoya strap on their helmets, pads and roller skates

Sunday, May 22, they will transform into Barbie Bombshell, Geura Beef and Hearno Evil. The girls will compete for roller derby glory at Dickerson's Barn, 3920 W. Picacho Ave. The bout starts at 6 p.m., and after months of practice and planning, they're ready for action.

Landreth will be the primary jammer for the Spitfire Sallies. Her job is to get past the Reguladies Derby's blockers, while Montoya, better known as "Hear no Evil", is the first line of defense.

"My assignment is to go after this one," she said. "I'm the first line of defense and I try to prevent her from reaching the pack. Sometimes, I'm successful and sometimes not."

So, how does the match work? Each team has a jammer and four blockers. The jammer's role is to skate past the opposing team's skaters, picking up a point for each one passed. Both teams have jammers skating around the rink at the same time. The jam lasts for two minutes and the bout is two 30-minute halves.

If you think this is a new sport, think again. Women's flat track roller derby has been around since the Great Depression. In 1935, Leo Seltzer held The Transcontinental Roller Derby in Chicago, where more than 20 teams skated 57,000 laps around a rink – the equivalent of 3,000 miles – making roller-skating a popular sport. A few years later, the sport became more physical and the fan support really picked up.

In the 1970s, roller derby began to be more sports-entertainment than actual sport, with staged hits, fighting and predetermined winners.

Now, all the hits are real, there's rules against fighting and

NMSU baseball hosts Hawai'i

The New Mexico State baseball team (32-20, 7-13 WAC) wraps up its regular season with a home stand against Western Athletic Conference leader Hawai'i (30-21, 15-5 WAC). The four-game series at Presley Askew Field started with a doubleheader at 3:05 p.m. Thursday, May 19, which is followed by a single game, Friday, May 20, at 6 p.m. The series finale is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 21.

Track and field finishes strong

The New Mexico State women's track and field squad finished in sixth place at the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) Outdoor Track and Field Championships in Honolulu. Friday, May 20, was the final day of competition.

The Aggies scored 82 total points during the championships placing them behind champion Louisiana Tech who had 152 followed in order by Utah State (138), Nevada (125.5), Fresno State (92), Idaho (91), NMSU (82), Boise State (69) and host Hawai'i at (65.5).

NMSU in Great Alaska Shootout

The New Mexico State men's basketball team is set to play in the 2011 Carrs/Safeway Great Alaska Shootout in November. Along with host Alaska Anchorage, men's teams from California-Irvine, Central Michigan, Dartmouth, Murray State, New Mexico State, San Francisco and Southern Mississippi will appear in the tournament.

First-round matchups have been set for the men's tournament, commencing with Southern Miss-Alaska Anchorage and Murray State-UC Irvine, Wednesday, Nov. 23, followed by San Francisco-Central Michigan and New Mexico State-Dartmouth, Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 24. While she is only a shade over 5 feet tall, Banegas is blessed with plenty of athletic ability, including strength and good technique. However, it's her hard work that sets her apart, according to coach Kevin Grassel, who just completed his first year as the team's head coach. Before this season, Grassel concentrated on being the program's strength and conditioning coach.

"Whatever she does, she's successful at it," Grassel said. "She works hard and there's no quit in her. She has a work ethic, and a determination and wants to be successful. She has goals and accomplishes them."

Mayfield also got a state title from Rigo Moreno in the 300-meter hurdles (39.39). Joining Banegas on the state champion 4-by-100-relay team were Amber Lalla, Taylor Black and Elena Holguin. Mayfield finished fourth overall at the state meet (com-

Grassel said. "Whatever she does, she's going to be successful at it."

That drive to succeed is something that has been passed down in her family.

"We were taught that hard work pays off," Banegas said. "Grandpa – coach Bradley – has always said that's the key to everything. If you do something, put everything you have into it."

Banegas edged Oñate's Kendra Walker to capture the 100meter state title, but fell just short in the 200, taking second behind Walker. The two, who developed a friendly rivalry during the past two years, will be teammates next year on the New Mexico State University track team. Both earned scholarships, as did Black, a standout in the pole vault.

"Every time Kendra and I race, it's always good," Banegas said. "We're both so competitive, but we're also friends. Next year we'll be teammates. It's going to be so much fun.'

CrimeStoppers Home invasion

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest of the suspects involved in a home invasion armed robbery.

Las Cruces Police are investigating the incident that occurred Thursday, May 12, at a home on the 1200 block of Mormon Drive. At around 11 p.m., someone knocked on the door and the homeowner opened it to find four armed men, who forced their way inside.

The suspects ransacked the home and took a wallet, a laptop computer and an Xbox gaming console.

The four suspects were believed to be Hispanic in their late teens or early 20s. The suspects were all described as around 5 feet 6 inches or shorter. Three of the suspects have a thin build while one Was of medium build. All four suspects were said to be wearing hooded sweatshirts with bandanas covering their faces. One of the suspects was armed with a double-barrel shotgun while the other three displayed handguns.

If you have any information on who may have committed this crime, call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to LCTIPS (528477).

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

NMSU gives people access to telescopes

Astronomy open houses held monthly for public

Though the night sky appears to be calm and gentle when viewed by the naked eye, through the lens of a telescope, it reveals its true nature of twists and turns going back millions of years.

In order to present a closer look at the secrets the night sky holds, New Mexico State University's Department of Astronomy hosts free monthly open houses at the Clyde W. Tombaugh Campus Observatory, located on the Las Cruces campus.

"We live in a great area for astronomical interest," said Jim Murphy, department head. "There are lots of beautiful and in-teresting objects to behold in the night sky, appreciate the physical processes that make them be present where they are, have the characteristics they have, and think about what their evolution over time might be."

At the open houses, the community is encouraged to look at astronomical objects, ask questions of astronomers and graduate students, and mingle with fellow stargazers.

"One of the primary reasons we do this is to help inspire people about the skies," said Bernie McNamara, a professor of astronomy. "A lot of the astronomers who work here – the graduate students as well as the faculty – got their beginnings as amateur astronomers. We're upholding a long tradition of professional astronomers sharing their enthusiasm for the sky with people who have an interest."

One popular astronomical object always viewed at the open houses is the moon in its various phases. The community can also view star clusters, double stars, planets and possibly even a galaxy or two. As the seasons change, different celestial objects come into view. Astronomers at NMSU might also gear topics of interest at an open house to coincide with a timely astronomical event.

Murphy said some of the telescope eyepieces are high and can be difficult to reach, but they are prepared to accommodate the public in any way they can so that any interested person can take a peek at the celestial objects.

"We love having kids come out - along with their parents or siblings. No age is too old or too young," he said.

Starting time for the event depends on the season - the open houses start when it gets dark. Participants are invited to come and go as they wish. NMSU astronomers and graduate students are eager to stay at the observatory as long as needed to answer everyone's questions.

"We cordially invite the community every time we have an open house to come and take advantage of the opportunity," McNamara said. "These are really meant for the community. It's a public outreach effort with the Department of Astronomy on behalf of the university.'

Code Talkers to be honored locally Navajo WWII veterans to take part in ceremonies

The Walk of Honor at Veterans Memorial Park will now include the names of the 29 original Navajo Code Talkers. Danny Montoya, a local citizen, bought a brick for each of the Code Talkers.

Since we don't have any monuments in the southern part of the state honoring them, this is a good way to remember the great contributions they made during WWII and the lives they saved with their unique communication skills as code talkers," Montoya said.

Montoya encourages others in the community to buy a brick or two for the Navajo Code Talkers.

The public is invited to the dedication of these bricks at 11 a.m. Memorial Day, Monday, May 30, at Veterans Memorial Park, 2651 Roadrunner Parkway.

In attendance will be Keith Little, Navajo Code Talker and president of the Navajo Code Talkers Association, along with Code Talkers Frank Chee Willetto and Bill Toledo.

The visiting Code Talkers also will take part in other Memorial Day ceremonies with local veterans, including the raising of the Garrison Flag at 8 a.m.

Before and after the 11 a.m. ceremony, they will also be available to autograph their books for sale. Proceeds of the book sale go to the Navajo Code Talkers Association for their planned Navajo Code Talkers Museum and Veterans Center to be built 17 miles northeast of Gallup, N.M. and two miles east of Window Rock, Ariz.

World War II veterans are invited to attend the garrison flag raising and the dedication ceremony.

Code Talkers is a term used to describe people who talk using a coded language. World War I veteran Philip Johnston proposed the use of Navajo to the United States Marine Corps at the beginning of World War II. Johnston, son of missionary parents and raised on the Navajo reservation, spoke Navajo fluently. Navajo was a good choice to use as code because few people outside the Navajo themselves had ever learned to speak the language, and it was not a written language.

The Navajo's recruitment for the Code Talkers began in the government boarding schools and they had to be between the ages of 18 and 30. There were no legal birth records kept on the reservation, so many lied about being older or younger to get recruited. Carl Gorman, one of the original 29, was in the 10th grade when he was recruited to join the Marines.

Out of the 200 recruited, only 30 were approved and out of the 30, 29 made it into the program.

In time, more than 400 were recruited and trained to be code talkers. Their mission was to construct an alphabet based on their native language. They used Navajo words to replace military terms and some of those words were not in the Navajo vocabulary. There were no Navajo words for "bomb" or "grenade" so they gave them the terms of "eggs" and "po-tatoes," respectively. Tanks were "turtles." The difficult part was memorizing it all.

The Navajo Code Talkers were commended for their skill, speed, and accuracy accrued throughout the war. At Iwo Jima, Major Howard Connor, 5th Marine Division signal officer, had six Navajo Code Talkers working around the clock during the first two days of the battle. These six sent and received more than 800 messages, all without error.

Connor later stated that "Were it not for the Navajos, the Marines would never have taken Iwo Jima."

The Navajo Code Talkers mission was classified and after the war they could not talk about what they did other than, as instructed, say they were "radio men." Finally, In 1968, 23 years after the war, their mission was declassified.

The Las Cruces Veterans Walk of Honor brick program is facilitated by the Parks and Recreation Section of the Facilities Department. For more information about the bricks, call 541-2550.

Business

Branding University population dips with a purpose

Samantha Roberts Business Editor

Branding your business can be one of the most effective ways to market your company. Just like farmers brand their cattle to claim ownership, business owners can benefit from putting their logo and "brand" on pens, stationary, magnets, etc.

Last week, I stated that people see up to 8,000 impressions of companies trying to advertise their product per day. Although adding your name into the mix might seem intimidating, it is helpful, and the more times people see it, the better.

One of the best ways to start this branding process, in my opinion, is through networking and passing out those business cards.

The business card not only carries the company's logo, typically, but also puts the company's name into a person's hand. This person could be a potential client.

To extend beyond the business card, think about a simple logo that can be reprinted on other marketing material such as McDonald's and the "golden arches." This symbol has become an icon and the multi-billion dollar company can run an advertisement with just an empty box of fries carrying the "M," and people will know what is being advertised.

Though your business may never reach that height, it is good to have big goals and learn from the successful conglomerates.

Sarah Stegall with Surefire Promotional Products is a great local example of this. She is not McDonald's, but if you have been to a Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours, then you probably have a notepad, lint sheets, sticky notes, memo boards, gum or some other creative giveaway with her surefire logo on it.

Stegall said she feels the best way to get people to remember her company is to give them something they will see every day that has Surefire's logo on it.

Things other than businesses can also

With students out of session, surrounding stores tweak strategies By Samantha Roberts

Spring has sprung and summer is on the way, but students at New Mexico State University have already packed their bags and headed elsewhere to visit family, start summer vacations or begin a summer job. So what impact does that have on businesses within the NMSU area that rely on college student spending? For Bernie Digman, owner of Milagro Coffee, 1733 E. University Ave., the summer brings in a whole new group of customers.

"We notice a change in the population that we see," Digman said. "A lot of people don't come to our store when school is in session because of the traffic and parking. When school lets out, we see a different set of faces.'

Since Milagro Coffee has been in business for more than a dozen years, Digman said this has become the "norm" and he staffs accordingly, including some college kids who "stick around and have more availability.

"This has become the normal thing that happens, so we are used to making the ac-commodations," he said. "We do see a decline in volume, but I tribute that to the warmer weather. The heat tends to slow all food service businesses down."

With a majority of college students running

the coffee shop, Digman said the turnover can be another struggle of having a coffee shop by a college, but he added the pros outweigh the cons

"These past few months are usually the busiest time of the year," he said. "With Mother's Day and finals, a lot of coffee is consumed and papers that were procrastinated are being written. Around the holidays is another busy time, such as Thanksgiving and students coming back in January.

'Coffee shops have proven to do better in college areas, so we can put up with some of the uncertainties. It's an advantage to be where we are.

Las Cosas closes its doors

Gourmet kitchen store leaves Mesilla

After nearly five years of running Las Cosas Kitchen Shoppe in Mesilla, owners Bob and Pam Weaver are closing their doors Wednesday, June 15.

The gourmet kitchen store has everything needed to furnish a topnotch kitchen from pots and pans to spoons and accessories and specializes in quality named brand products.

"The community has been so supportive," said Pam Weaver, adding that the Santa Fe branch will remain open and customers can still order products online.

To get the really good deals, customers will have to hurry to the Las Cruces store, 1740 Calle de Mesilla, where everything has been reduced 20 to 70 percent.

"The better deals are happening now," Pam Weaver said. "All the good stuff is going really fast, but there is still a good choice to pick from.'

The Weavers are closing the Las Cruces store to focus their efforts on the Santa Fe location. Pam Weaver said the choice was due to a lack of consistent foot traffic, but that doesn't damper her positive attitude.

We really carry some great high-quality products, such as All-Clad, ScanPan, LeCreuset and fine cutlery, such as Henckels, Global and Wusthof," she said. "And they are all at great deals right now.'

For more information or to purchase products online, visit www.lascosascooking.com. Orders more than $100 ship for free within the Continental United States.

Summer

Other local restaurants in the area, such as The Mix, completely adjust their menu and specials according to when NMSU is in session.

"Typically speaking, yes, as soon as a group of people graduate and students leave for the summer, business slows down until summer one starts," said Chiaki Miyazaki, owner of The Mix, 1001 E. University Ave., Suite D4.

With 100 percent of her front of the house staffed by college students, Miyazaki said she is constantly training new employees.

"Luckily, some of (the students) stay," she said. "Not all of them graduate at the same time or leave Las Cruces. Right now, we are training three or four new people because four servers left. I hire people ahead of time and expect the turnover at the end of every semester."

In addition to changing her staff, Miyazaki said she also changes her menu, catering to students during the school year and the community during the "off season."

The Mix runs a special almost every day, she said, especially during the slow times.

"During the summer, we want to bring in people from the community, so we have drink specials and/or two-for-$20 deals where two people can eat for $20," she said. When school starts again, we will have beer, sake and sushi specials.

"Our busiest time of the year is around February – Valentine's Day," she said. "While school is in session, we have a late-night happy hour and karaoke after 9 p.m." Even with NMSU students in classes,

Even with NMSU students in classes, Miyazaki said September through December tend to be their slower months. She said this is the large amount of NMSU and city functions that occur during these months.

"There are so many sporting events and functions during that time," she said. "Our customers go to those events and business slows down. I don't think the spring has as many events in Las Cruces and our busiest months are January to the last week of May."

Each of the restaurants that surround the NMSU campus are affected by students leaving, some good and some bad, but summer vacation has an impact on more than just the restaurants.

Since college students can be notorious for last minute printing, FedEx Office Print & Ship Center, 1001 E. University Ave., stays busy during the school year, but the summer rings a different tune.

"There is a lot less traffic," said James Reynaud, the FedEx assistant store manager. "The days are slower and the sales are down."

Though the summer has a significant influence on the store, Reynaud said the store doesn't do anything to offset the changes, instead, "they just cross their fingers and wait until August."

be branded, such as a university, band or area within the community.

Our friends at the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership are working to brand Downtown Main Street as a go-to location for entertainment, food, music and more.

Branding is also huge at New Mexico State University. The slogan "Live, Learn and Thrive" can be seen on almost all of its marketing materials and the athletics department has turned its focus from "NMSU" to "NM State"

Perhaps the most recognized form of branding at NMSU, or NM State, is Pistol Pete.

Although I wasn't in Las Cruces when Pete's guns were traded in for lassos, making him Lasso Larry, I do know NMSU students, alumni and community members were up in arms about the situation, and rightfully so. A school is not a school without a recognizable mascot and team spirit to support it.

Business owners and future business owners alike, the next time you are pondering your next great idea, think beyond the product and how many people will want to buy it. Unless you invented sliced bread, you are going to need a little help from branding.

Want to build more equity in your home

Pay a little extra on your mortgage each month

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

Twenty-eight percent of homeowners with mortgages owe more on their homes than they're worth.

Whether the real estate is located in Las Vegas, Nev., or Las Cruces, it's more important now than ever to reduce mortgage balances as much as possible. Every $1 reduction in the value of a property reduces the amount of equity the property owner has in it by $1. Equity is the difference between what is owed on the property and the amount it would sell for on the open market.

While it is impossible for homeowners to exercise any sort of control over local and national market forces, and by extension the amount of equity they have in their homes, they do have control over the amount of interest they pay on their mortgages. Enter the biweekly and extra-payment plans. Here's how they work:

In a traditional monthly payment scenario, borrowers make one principal and interest payment each month (not counting reserves for taxes and insurance), year-after-year, until the loan is paid in full – usually 30 years down the line.

On the other hand, many borrowers are now utilizing biweekly and extra-payment options to pay off their loans five to eight years sooner. Take the biweekly plan, for example:

The monthly principal and interest payment for a $200,000 loan financed over 30 years at 5 percent interest is calculated to be

Traditonal versus biweekly and extra payment plans

$1,073.64 per month for 360 months. The biweekly payment on the same mortgage amounts to half of the scheduled payment, or $536.82 every two weeks. In the traditional scenario, borrowers make 12 equal monthly payments each year. With the biweekly option, borrowers make 26 equal half-payments (every other week for 52 weeks) for a total of 13 full payments each year.

The whole idea here is to reduce the amount of mortgage interest a borrower pays over time by accelerating the reduction of the principal portion of the loan. While lenders and third-party providers charge their customers between $195 to $700 to sign up for their biweekly programs, you and I have the ability to realize similar savings without having to pay for the privilege. Unless your mortgage has some sort of prepayment penalty written into it – which most traditional mortgages do not – you can simply pay a little extra towards the principal each month. As the accompanying chart illustrates, borrowers who choose their lender's biweekly option and pay on their $200,000 loans until they are paid in full save more than $32,000 in interest over the life of the loan. Making biweekly payments also shortens their loan term by almost five years.

You and I can realize more or less the same result by simply making the equivalent of one extra principal and interest payment per year. In our $200,000 scenario, that equals around $1,200 annually or $100 extra per month.

Adding an extra $200 per month to the monthly payment in our $200,000 scenario produces an even more impressive result, saving our fictitious borrower almost $61,560 in interest charges over the life of the loan, shortening the borrower's loan term by almost one-third.

Don't have the extra bucks to add $100 or $200 to your monthly payment? Use your income tax refund and pay the extra amount in a lump sum. The interest savings is almost identical to the savings obtained by paying monthly. To payoff a loan even more quickly, include in the extra payment of an amount equal to the monthly reserve for property taxes and insurance.

Now for the fine print. It's important that borrowers check the terms of their mortgage to make sure they aren't charged a prepayment penalty when adding additional principal payments to their loans. Borrowers should also be wary of third-party vendors who offer biweekly payment plans. For a fee, they'll take your money and forward it to the lender on your behalf. This is problematic for two reasons. One, if you're going to mail a payment to someone, mail it directly to your lender and avoid the fee altogether. Two, what happens if the third-party vendor takes your money but doesn't forward the payment to your lender on time, or at all?

Well, there you have it. Adding a little extra cash to your mortgage payment each month can reap substantial benefits, including reducing the amount of interest you pay, knocking five to eight years off your mortgage and the addition of more equity to your home "savings" account. All with no cost and virtually zero extra effort on your part.

Until then, I hope to...

See you at closing!

Going into default isn't constitutional

Discussion of federal debt ignores points of 14th Amendment

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

There is a lot of discussion about the debt ceiling. Will it be increased? If not, will the government default? It seems that we are on course for a showdown on this issue sometime this summer.

The fact is that the United States can't default on its debt. The 14th Amendment ensures that we can't. Section 4 of that amendment states that legally issued debt of the United States "shall not be questioned." Moreover, the Supreme Court in Perry versus United States, one of the so called "gold clause cases," has also ruled that the government must honor its legal debts.

If the debt ceiling is reached, since debt cannot be defaulted on, the effect will be the same as the failure to pass a continuing budget resolution. That is, the government will have to shut down operations, furloughing employees. The disruption will be significant, but once the debt ceiling is raised, adverse effects will likely quickly reverse.

A default on the debt, by contrast, even if only temporary, would have a devastating effect on the U.S. economy. The increase in the cost of financing the federal government will immediately increase the deficit by at least $1.5 trillion over 10 years.

The negative consequences won't stop there. The credit worthiness of the economy as a whole depends on the government. After all, how can IBM have a better credit rating than the U.S.? It makes no sense. If government debt is downgraded because of a default, the effect will be to downgrade the debt of the entire private sector. You think tax increases are negative for business, how about a default induced interest rate hike.

Consumers will be affected also as auto, mortgage and credit card rates rise. Then there are those who depend on Treasury debt for income. American citizens hold 53 percent of U.S. debt. Default means that these American's will not be receiving their expected payments.

Then there is the impact on foreign currency markets. The U.S. is the world's major reserve currency. This means nations hold dollars the same way that gold was held in the 19th century, as a backing for the local currency. Indeed, the reason China holds so much U.S. debt is precisely as reserves in which to invest its huge trade surplus. Japan, England, Germany and many other countries are major U.S. debt holders The U.S. benefits greatly from this willingness of foreigners to hold our debt. It means that we can borrow at lower rates.

Even the threat of default is disconcerting to financial markets, so why do we even have a debt ceiling? After all, Congress has already approved taxes and spending. These two determine the needed borrowing. A debt ceiling is redundant. The reason dates back to 1917, just after the entry into World War I. Up until that time, the custom had been for each new debt issue to be approved individually by Congress, but demands of financing the war made this impractical. So Congress approved a total amount that the treasury could borrow without coming back for further authorization and the debt ceiling was born.

Tim Geithner, the secretary of the treasury, said the debt ceiling won't be broached until Aug. 2, giving the administration and Congress time to negotiate. But this sort of brinkmanship doesn't seem the way to run a country. It's time to come up with a longterm solution to the debt problem.

Recognizing hard work Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico selected as Nonprofit of the Year

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) was honored as Nonprofit of the Year by the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces during the 2011 annual banquet Friday, May 6, at the Las Cruces Convention Center.

"During uncertain economic times when thousands of nonprofits nationally have been forced to close their doors, the CFSNM has ensured the viability and sustainability of dozens of nonprofits in our southern New Mexico communities, many of which encountered a higher demand for service with reduced funding during the past year," said Gabe Vasquez, Hispano chamber executive director.

The CFSNM is actively involved in community change by providing financial management for community nonprofits and individuals, creating partnerships and building a new generation of givers.

The CFSNM manages permanent assets of more than $10 million, with much of that money focusing on long-term impact through 175 endowments – 34 of which are agency endowments. By creating endowments, nonprofits and individuals are able to place their money in a financially prudent organization that handles the management of the funds and tax issues while they focus on their mission. The CFSNM also manages 17 deferred gifts and 25 temporary funds.

In an effort to end underage substance use and abuse, the CFSNM created the Unified Prevention! Coalition for a Drug Free Doña Ana County. In addition, the CFSNM secured a $110,000 grant from the Walmart Foundation for an after school middle school collaborative and served as the fiscal sponsor of the Adolescent Health Services program in Las Cruces and Gadsden school districts. Seeing an opportunity to create a new generation of charitable givers, the CFSNM established the Young Philanthropists, an ideal opportunity for charity and networking among 21 to 40 year olds.

"We salute the work of the foundation in keeping a healthy nonprofit community in Las Cruces and for bringing bold innovative programs such as the Young Philanthropists and Border Region Coalition to the area," Vasquez said.

The theme for the banquet was "Somos Unidos," or "We are United," in the spirit of collaboration that continues to grow among economic development organizations in the community. Gov. Susana Martinez was the keynote speaker during the event, addressing more than 475 people in attendance.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the Foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of Southern New Mexico for generations to come. The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. For more information see our website at www.cfsnm.org or call Luan Wagner Burn, Ph.D., at 575.521.4794. To donate, mail your check to CFSNM, 301 South Church St., Suite H, Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Springer family: New Mexico family does restaurants

Lessons learned by the Springer group

By David Edwards

Las Cruces Bulletin

Tom and Jeanine Springer, owners of De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery, were looking for someone to handle marketing and events for the establishment and they thought they had come up with just the right person – their daughter Ashley Springer.

The problem was Ashley Springer already had a career in publishing and was working for Albuquerque the Magazine at the time. She had graduated from the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism at Arizona State University and had been writing for several magazines.

Ashley Springer said she didn't really have any marketing background and certainly no experience with restaurants, but her lack of experience didn't seem to concern her dad. After all, this was his first restaurant venture as well. It took about eight months for her to make the decision to give it a shot.

As a builder and commercial real estate developer from Farmington, N.M., Tom Springer had been involved in the creation of the original restaurant housed on the site – owning both the property and building. He had overseen the remaking and remodeling of the former Mexican food establishment.

The bookkeeping side of the business was under control with Jeanine Springer in charge. The only thing missing was someone to help with promotions, advertising, booking entertainment and generally attracting customers.

"I was concerned about the 'daddy'sdaughter' thing," Ashley Springer said. "People thinking, 'What's she going to do? Sit in her office, playing on Facebook all day and get a paycheck?' Which is, of course, what some people thought when I got here."

In order to prove that wasn't just there to collect a free paycheck, she handled the marketing and promotions for a year.

Then, one day she said she woke up and realized taking over operations was needed.

"I felt we were on our way to something amazing, but there was a lack of organization," she said. "I have always been a very organized person. So I made a to-do list for every manager and told them it had to be completed by next week. It worked and then some.

"I couldn't say enough about my team right now. I don't even have words for it. They are so amazing. They are there for each other and pull together every second. They are willing to open and close, work extraordinary hours, and I never hear them complain."

With his daughter now handling general operations, Tom Springer can afford to relax a bit and focus on continuing to tweak and

"He tells them this is like their house," Ashley Springer said. "It helps them want to take care of it and gives them that sense of ownership."

While De La Vega's is a large operation with a restaurant and bar quickly turning into a latenight spot, the Springers still want there to be a strong familial feeling among the employees.

There is no attempt at De La Vega's to be "corporate," Ashley Springer said. Responding to employee suggestions helps with developing a sense of pride, strength, cohesiveness and enjoyment. A number of special events and promotions, such as monthly "Cajun" nights and the upcoming "Full Moon Wine Dinner," have come from Executive Chef Bob Brainard, Bar Manager Nick Pederson and others.

The family appreciates the support they have received from the community and continue to do what they can to give back, she said. Memorial Day will mark the "Thank You, Las Cruces" party with all day specials.

With not much practical restaurant experience at the beginning, the Springers have relied on the expertise of Brainard and other friends in the business. They also credit the New Mexico Restaurant Association with giving them tremendous support.

"We have come so far in all of our knowledge in the industry," Ashley Springer said. "It has been a real blessing."

Counting more than clothes

Park Avenue Cleaners monitors stains and bottom line

By Jimmy Currier For the Las Cruces Bulletin

For nearly three years, Jay Schantz has been focused on getting your dirty clothes clean.

Day-in and day-out, Schantz can be found at his Park Avenue "$2.99" Cleaners store operating and owning his own business. Sure, there are 80-hour workweeks, but it's worth it, Schantz said.

'It's rough," he said. "You put a lot of hours into it, but you know you've grown the business each year and you put pride into what you're doing. I'm working for myself. It's mine and we're making it."

Come June 1, Schantz and his wife Mary Anne will celebrate their third anniversary of operating Park Avenue Cleaners.

The store, located at 3115 N. Main St., Suite A, is a true mom-and-pop operation, with the Schantz' son Clayton pressing clothes and taking orders alongside his parents. The store also has two more employees.

The Park Avenue Cleaners cleaned more than $200,000 in revenue in 2010 and Schantz said he hopes to do more in 2011, including adding more employees. In the interim, he is watching the bottom line like a hawk and monitoring expenses and revenues on a monthly basis.

'I've learned to keep labor costs and overhead down to keep those doors open," Schantz said. "I've got to pinch all the pennies I possibly can."

When the business first opened, it cost only $2.29 to have any garment dry cleaned. Now, it's $2.99, and Details

Las Cruces Bulletin photo by Jimmy Currier Jay Schantz, owner of Park Avenue Cleaners, 3245 E. University Ave., inspects a pair of pants before placing them in a bucket to be dry-cleaned. Working alongside him is his son Clayton.

Schantz said it wasn't an easy decision to increase prices.

"I really hated to do it, but to keep the doors open we had to," Schantz said. "Luckily, it worked out. It didn't scare a lot people away and it kept our doors open."

While several retail establishments offer discounts to certain customer classes, Schantz said Park Avenue Cleaners doesn't do that. The prices are kept low for everyone, so there's no cross subsidization.

"We don't give discounts to the military or law enforcement, and the main reason why is we try to keep our price low enough for everybody, he said. "We support the military and support the police, but if I give them a discount, I feel that I got to give everyone else a discount, too. Teachers are important, business people are important. Everyone out there working is important, and we feel that if we can keep the price low enough for everybody, it works out for everyone."

As well as treating people equally, Schantz said he also believes in treating customers with respect.

We make ourselves stand out by being a family-owned and operated business," he said. "When the customer comes in, we want that customer to it's important for customers to clean items out of the pockets and to follow the care instructions on the garment.

Schantz also said the clothes that come into Park Avenue Cleaners he treats as his own.

"I want that garment looking good as it possibly can," he said. "Just like if I were going to wear it."

With baseball season in full swing, Schantz might have some extra cleaning on his plate. That's because yellow mustard stains are some of the hardest to treat. Another hard stain that take's a slugger's effort to remove is red chile, which is in no short supply in the Mesilla Valley.

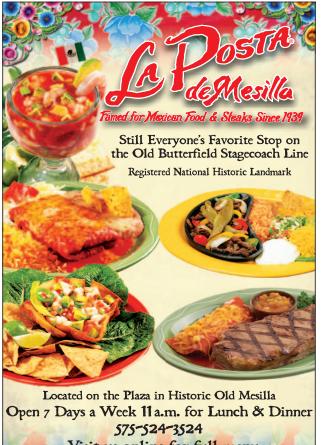

So, what process does that mustard-stained white polo go through before being delivered to you fresh and clean?

First, Schantz takes your order at the counter.

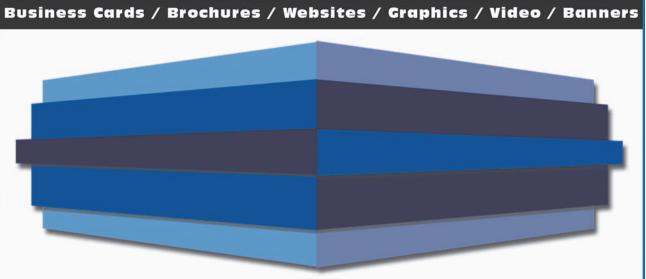

Next, he will pre-treat your stained shirt and then place it into a bucket with other light colored clothing. These clothes, roughly 50 pounds worth, will be placed into a dry cleaning machine for 30 minutes.

Next, the shirt will be pressed using a steam press. (If you're thinking about buying one because you hate ironing, they cost about $80,000.) Schantz or one of the store's associates hangs your shirt and it is inspected.

The shirt is then sent to the bagging area where it is bagged and ready for pick-up. Between the time the shirt was dropped off and picked up, it will have been counted five times.

Sounds of summer Music in the Park series comes back to the city Memorial Day weekend

Time for the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival Memorial Day weekend

Las Cruces Bulletin

Bad day? Wine a little during ... .. the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival

By Samantha Roberts

Cruces Bulletin

An art that spans throughout human existence, the process of making wine intermingles with history, agriculture and civilization.

Luckily, the artful craft made its way to the Mesilla Valley, where local wineries have worked to perfect their reds, whites and everything in between for the Southern New Mexico Wine Festival from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday through Monday, May 28-30, at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds.

This year's festival will include entertainment by Cadillac Kings and Guitar Slim on Saturday, The Mixx Band and Josh Grider on Sunday and Billy Townes and The Liars on Monday.

'Most of these bands have played at the festival before, but the audience really seems to like all of them for their different genres," said Dawn Starostka, owner of Helping Hands Event Planning. "We try to hit a couple of the popular genres, such as oldies with Cadillac Kings and softer music on Mondays. That tends to be a mellower day. Josh Grider, a country singer, is a hometown boy and country is always popular as well as The Liars.'

Also during the festival, participants can discover and taste award-winning wines from venues throughout southern New Mexico. Participating wineries include Amaro Winery, Luna Rossa, Heart of the Desert, St. Clair and St. Clair Specialty Wines, Blue Teal, DH Lescombes and DH Lescombes - VIP, San Felipe, Dos Viejos, Wines of the San Juan, Tularosa Vineyards, Tierra Encantada Winery, Ponderosa Valley Winery, Rio Grande Vineyards & Winery, Black Range Vineyards and La Viña.

"I am glad we have such a good number of wineries," Starostka said. "I would always love to have more, but the 17 or 18 we have is great. Even if you come every year and taste the same wines from the same wineries, they still taste different. There are also a lot of award-winning wineries participating this year."

The Liars

PRESENTED BY THE NEW MEXICO WINE GROWERS ASSOCIATION

The Memorial Day tradition is sponsored by the New Mexico Wine Growers Association.

"It's a three-day weekend so people have time to get everything done," said Starostka in regard to the festival falling on Memorial Day weekend. "With an (ever-growing) list of activities people have, you can still find at least one day with free time. Plus it kicks off the summer, so it works out nicely."

In addition to the wine sellers, arts and crafts vendors will be in attendance selling jewelry, pottery, cooking and entertaining ware as well as local agricultural products, such as goat cheese, salsa and spices.

"There are at least 30 to 40 percent of new vendors at the festival each year," Starostka said. "This allows people to find their favorites from previous years or check out the new ones. Even though some of the vendors are from El Paso or Albuquerque, the majority of them are local and it feels good to support the local businesses instead of supporting a big box."

This year's food vendors include grape and cheese platters, quesadillas, bratwurst, gorditas, hamburgers, sandwiches, ice cream, fries and onion rings, corn dogs, tacos, funnel cakes, sausage, nachos and roasted corn.

Admission to the festival is $15 for all adults over the age of 21 and includes a souvenir glass. Entrance is free for those under 21, who must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

Monday, May 30, is Military Monday, which includes a $3 discount for all military personnel.

More information on the New Mexico Wine Industry can be found at www.nmwine.com. For festival information, call Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232.

Singing men of Las Cruces celebrate

Local singers have 40 years of musical experience, fun Bv David Edwards

George Jarden came to choir directing in an odd way through swimming.

He became a swimmer under the tutelage of Peter Daland, who would go on to become a legend at the University of Southern California. Jarden took over as swim coach at his hometown Rose Valley, Penn., while he was in medical school, and started working with local women in an early morning exercise group he dubbed "The Mer-mas."

"Every year we did an aquacade," Jarden said. "My sister would do the choreography, and I would teach it to them along with the strokes. One year, I wrote a song for them 'My Wonderful Rose Valley Rose' and got a group of about 20 guys to sing and record it to use in the aquacade. After it was over, I let them come up with the notion that they wanted to stay together and sing as a group. That's when we formed The Men of Rose Valley."

Jarden had been around music all his life, particularly by Gilbert and Sullivan, so forming a men's choir was a natural product of his love of singing, he said.

When he moved to Las Cruces in May 1970, it didn't take him long to join vocal performance groups such as Los Pastores, which performed the Nativity story every Christmas. His first involvement with that group was in December 1970, and he asked if there were men interested in forming a choir. He sent out a letter in January 1971 and 22 men showed up. That was the beginning of Voz Vaqueros – "voz" is "voice" in Spanish and "vaqueros" is literally "cowboys," but the two combined became the official moniker for "the singing men of Las Cruces."

The 18 months that followed were jam-packed with appearances – 53 to be exact – according to program notes for the group's 40th anniversary concert. There were concerts, inaugurals, city observances, openings, benefits, banquets, parades, church services, Christmas concerts, Songs We Like To Sing concerts, Easter sunrises, weddings, funerals, dedication of the original Memorial General Hospital, football and NCAA TV basketball National Anthems, halftime shows ... on and on.

"I even sang 'Bridge Over Troubled Water' for a practical nursing graduating class," Jarden said.

This Saturday and Sunday, May 21-22, Voz Vaqueros will give a concert celebrating its 40 years. The group has had as many as 70 members at times and spawned a choir for women Previous performances have included Christmas-themed concerts with other singing groups.

Voz Vaqueros will celebrate its 40th anniversary with a free concert.

The Las Cruces Community Chorus in 1973 and the Voz Vaqueros Children's Chorus in 1984. Both groups performed with the men a number of times and were the genesis of other choirs and groups.

In 1972, Voz Vaqueros created "Las Cruces," the city's "unofficial official" song, one of the group's most memorable accomplishments. Former New Mexico Gov. Jerry Apodaca was at one time a member and wanted the group to go to Santa Fe to be the official U.S. bicentennial chorus and perform at the Round House, but Jarden has steadfastly maintained his position that no public money be used to support artistic endeavors.

Tom Reader, while not a charter member, joined Voz Vaqueros in 1971 shortly after that initial meeting.

"I was raised on a farm and my brothers and I enjoyed short periods during our school day where we got to sing," Reader said. "When I got to high school, I sang in the male choir and mixed choirs, but when I got to Las Cruces there wasn't much going on as far as singing other than church choirs.

"Over the years, George – who is an excellent director and a mainstay of vocal music in the area - has provided an environment where people can sing just for the fun of it."

Jeff Peckham is one of the newer members of Voz Vaqueros and was recruited while singing carols at a party this past Christmas.

"I have learned more about music the past five months than in my whole life," Peckham said. "I am one of the kids in the group I guess you'd say. They are a great group of guys. I am having a lot of fun.'

The concerts – "Songs We Like To Sing" – will be a retrospective of favorites over the years including a tribute to the U.S. military, a couple of Christmas songs such as "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" with Jarden on the recorder and Jarden's all-time favorite song "It's A Small World." Every member of the group will perform a solo of some kind.

Jarden is fairly certain that this concert will be his swan

"Forty years is a long time to do anything, but I am pretty sure they'll find a director and they will continue," said Jarden in regard to his future retirement. "It would be nice if they would.

He said he is proud of the fact that he has never turned any singer away, regardless of ability, and has always followed the philosophy of one of his role models - fellow Pennsylvanian Fred Waring "The Man Who Taught America To Sing."

"He said not to try to educate the audience, just perform," Jarden said. "Do songs that entertain them."

According to another of Jarden's all-time favorite Voz Va-queros numbers – "I'll be Loving You ... Always" – it seems the influence the group has had on the vocal music landscape of Las Cruces will always be felt and remembered.

Featured performer: DJ Amer Native Las Crucen spins unique beats

DJ Amer rocks Hurricane Alley every Tuesday

By Amanda Green ne Las Cruces Bulleti

Every Tuesday night, Hurricane Alley hums and pulses with a mix that - courtesy of local DJ Amer electrifies the dance floor. Born and raised in Las Cruces to come an overnight sensation to local nightclubs looking to fill their floors.

After graduating from Las Cruces High School, where he was student body president, he headed to New Mexico State University. He studied international business and earned his bachelor's degree in December 2010.

Along the way, Jandali learned to balance schoolwork with something else he loves - music. His fascination began as a freshman in high school when he went to visit family in Beirut, Lebanon, and watched his cousin Ziad "mix beats" on his computer, bouncing his head up and down with headphones.

When he returned home, Jandali began mixing music at home, and was soon doing house parties, sorority/fraternity parties and entertaining anywhere else he could share his sound.

In 2009, Jandali traveled to Spain as part of a study-abroad program. One night at Spain's Club Boss, watching the house DJ perform, Jandali knew he wanted to turn his passion into a career.

"I looked up at that booth and I knew that that was where I wanted to be one day," he said. "Everyone said it was impossible."

The next week, a chance meeting with a Club Boss promoter got Jandali the gig. DJing in Spain, he mastered his craft, learned a few tricks of the trade and brought them all back to the Mesilla Valley when he returned to resume his education.

Part of what makes DJ Amer so refreshing distinctive among Southwestern nightlife is his unique blend of mixes. He credits that blend to traveling and his multi-cultural experiences.

"I love to incorporate music and beats from other parts of the world into my music," he said. "When I returned to Las Cruces, I began to use things that I learned while I was in Spain.'

He brought European flair to a local scene and created his own tracks.

DJ Amer has performed at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, opening for the Starkillers, and at the Garden Club in El Paso, opening for DJ LM-FAO, where you can still find him Friday nights.

Thursdays, he's at The Plum and Saturdays at 1914, but every Tuesday he comes home to Las Cruces to pump up the crowds of Hurricane Alley and open for DJ Black.

The crowds love his energy and positive attitude that seems to radiate onto the floor.

"I don't consider what I do work," Jandali said. "It's what I love to do."

Los Artesanos Gallery offers a wide variety of exhibits created by local artists. Patrons can peruse and purchase pottery, warm glass, gourds, water colorings, paintings, jewelry, metal arts and sculptures.

The gallery is spacious and located off the Mesilla Plaza. While the gallery is housed within the Old Tortilla Factory, you won't find any New Mexican foods here, but you will find 100 percent local art.

This is for local artisans," said Rudy Lucero, who is one of three co-owners of the gallery. "Everything here is made by people from southern New Mexico."

The gallery sees mostly tourist traffic, averaging 25 to 30 visitors a day, and even a few ghosts.

Lucero said the gallery and other galleries within the Old Tortilla Factory have felt the presence of other spirits and that paranormal investigations have confirmed their suspicions.

French monks must deal with approaching violence

Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"Of Gods and Men" is based on the true story of an incident that took place in the 1990s. Eight French monks, who lived in a small almost idyllic monastery in the mountains of Algeria, learn the violence of civil war is about to reach them.

Led by Brother Christian, we learn the monastery has been in the same place for years, living in harmony with the neighboring village, which practices the Islamic faith. The monks are Catholic, but they help all who come by. One is a medical practitioner and an ad hoc lawyer, who also doles out shoes to the needy on the side; others cultivate the monastery's garden, beehives and tend to their goats and, of course, each day they attend worship and vespers in their small chapel.

Brother Christian and others study the history of Islam and have read and acknowledge the Quran, but it does not integrate his own faith in any way.

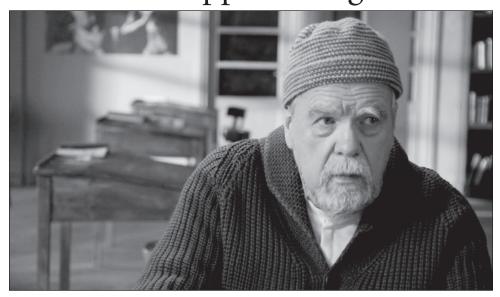

The war looms closer, and it becomes obvious the rebels, who are battling the Algerian army, will be coming soon. Several of the monks meet with local officials and army officers who try to convince them it is time to move on, to reach safety back in France before it is too late.

But it is later than they think, as the rebels, who amount to little more than pigheaded terrorists, attack a nearby construction site, killing the innocent Croatian workers who are there. It is not long before this rabble pays its first visit to the monastery, demanding medicine and medical assistance for a wounded comrade.

From this point, the film becomes like a version of the Alamo, except one side doesn't have guns.

The monks discuss their possible fate, with the question being, "Should we stay or should we go?" Some, mostly the elders, never give it a second thought and acknowledge their wish to stay, even though Brother Christian has already told the rebel leader they are staying, without consulting his fellow brothers.

Others are not quite as sure. Their reasoning is sometimes logical, sometimes personal, but it is a while before a consensus is reached.

"Of Gods and Men" is

"Of Gods and Men" is mostly in French with subtitles. Except for one violent scene and a tongue lashing, it can be enjoyed by all. The film opens May 20 at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla.

The brothers continue their daily routine, administering to the village residents, who seem oddly uninvolved except for their own fear of the war (in fact, they seem quite ungrateful, making the monk's presence, at least to me, rather unnecessary. It feels like the monks are just an asset to be used when needed, especially for medical issues). Not one of the residents shows any interest in Catholicism, which is not something the brothers try and share with them.

"Of Gods and Men" is a beautiful film. It gives pause for one to reflect on one's own faith and, of course, the opportunity for the viewer to decide what he or she thinks the monks should do. Do they stay and continue to serve a seemingly uncaring populace or do they move on to safety, where they can serve another town, village or city in a similar way?

The age range for these gentle men averages around 50, so it seems likely, if one does the math, that they would still have another 100 years of service to offer others. There is nothing they can do to stop the war what is the point?

The film lacks tension at times, and some viewers may find the pace not to their liking, but one must remember that life in a monastery and a small rural village is nothing like what we generally experience. Few of us know what it is like to be so devoted to a belief that it may cost us our life.

Balance and direction is important in a film of this nature, and it is well achieved, thus creating a moving and thought-provoking look at how a cause or vendetta can affect everyone, everywhere.

Remarkably, Jeff Berg has been a guest at the Christ in the Desert Monastery in Abiquiu. A totally unique experience, he highly recommends it. jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin. com.

The heart of 'Pearl' Girl earns pilot's license at age 13

The CineMatinee for Saturday, May 21, is "Pearl" (2010, 106 minutes, rated G).

"When you find a dream to call your own, all it takes is one leap of faith and your heart takes flight ... and sometimes that dream will carry you further than you ever imagined." - Eula Pearl Carter-Scott

Those are the inspirational words that open the movie "Pearl," based on the true story of a Pearl Carter, a Chickasaw Indian girl from Marlow, Okla., who became the youngest licensed pilot in the United States in 1928. Pearl was a headstrong and independent young girl who learned from her father to never say you can't do something. Despite being blinded at age 16, George Carter Sr. was a very successful businessman who encouraged his youngest daughter to follow her dreams.

Pearl starts driving at 11 years old to chauffeur her father to his business meetings all over Oklahoma. At age 12, Pearl is befriended by the famous aviator Wiley Post. With her father's permission, Post gives Pearl her first flight lessons. Eventually, George agrees to build a hangar and buy Pearl her own airplane. With the help of a full-time flight instructor, she earns her pilot's license at age 13 and starts performing as a barnstormer and commercial pilot by age 14.

In 1929, the Great Depression and the Dust Bowl hit Oklahoma, causing financial difficulties for even the wealthy Carter family. Pearl, who earns money chauffeuring businessmen around the state and barnstorming, takes on a part-time job as a waitress at the local diner. This is where she meets and falls in love with Lewis Scott. They eventually marry and Pearl gives birth to the first of her three children. Despite her husband's wishes, she continues to fly as a daredevil pilot in barnstorming shows.

Featuring beautiful cinematography and rich period settings, "Pearl" is a familyfriendly historical drama about a spirited, young girl. She pursues her dreams against the backdrop of the deepening Depression and catastrophic Dust Bowl and comes to value the love and support that flows from strong family ties. "Pearl" is an independent film, so there are no big Hollywood stars or fancy sets.

What makes "Pearl" such an amazing story is not because a 14-year-old girl in 1920s rural Oklahoma became the world's youngest licensed pilot, but when you think of the obstacles she must have faced, it is amazing she even dared to dream of being a pilot at all. (Review from http:// justchickflicks.com)

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society that showcases past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

Don't be doggin' me 'bout the dogs

Frankly, they're as good as the custard

By David Edwards

I had an interesting conversation a couple of weeks ago about hot dogs – interesting not because of the subject, but with whom I had it. It seems my Pilates instructor loves hot dogs.

This is a woman who takes good care of herself and watches what she eats. I guess we all have our little vices. Maybe, because she teaches Pilates and yoga and leads numerous highly physical classes almost daily, she can afford to indulge herself occasionally in one of those foods that taste so good there's no way it can be good for you.

I would have to go along with her when it comes to those muchmaligned, but much-loved guilty pleasures. I remember telling a nutritionist friend over the phone that part of my eating plan included 98 percent fat-free hot dogs. I had asked her if I should stop eating them during my recent de-tox diet.

They're made of turkey and only have 40 calories," I said. "But they have modified corn starch, and I'm not supposed to eat corn."

I could hear her take a step back. "You eat hot dogs to lose weight?" she said.

Hey, wrap them in a low-carb tortilla with some fat-free Swiss cheese, nuke it for about 30 seconds, pile on some salsa and it gets you through lunchtime.

I'm not talking about mild mannered puppies; I'm referring to a real hot dog. A 100 percent beef Nathan's hot dog – one of those quarter pound dinner franks. Would you think it was crazy to say that a Las Cruces institution famous for its frozen custard was one of the best places around to get one of those fabulous frankfurters covered with a variety of unique and delicious toppings?

You wouldn't think I was mental if you knew, as one of my Bulletin colleagues recently stated, "Caliche's hot dogs are crazy good."

Caliche's has been serving up the best frozen custard around for nearly 15 years. They have a wide assortment of toppings and things to mix into it, such as nuts, fruits, cookie pieces, peanut butter, fudge, candies, sauces and even spicy green chile marmalade. Custard is essentially an old fashioned homemade ice cream. The ingredients were originally blended and cooked on the stove and then hand-cranked in one of those freezers with ice and rock salt packed around it to do the freezing.

Caliche's makes their custard fresh every hour using a recipe more than 100 years old. It is premium ice cream with about 10 percent air in it, which compares to the 80 percent air content found in most soft serve ice cream. It comes as all sorts of sundaes – both classic flavors and specialty ones. They can even cater large parties with a variety of toppings.

Caliche's also serves a variety of non-custard flavored sodas, lemonades, limeades, flavored iced tea, malts, shakes, floats and iced coffee drinks. They have a happy hour on non-custard drinks from 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday when it's "buy one, get one free." A variety of non-dairy smoothies will be on the menu soon, just in time for the summer months.

Late owner David Wortham hit upon the idea that people might want something else to eat besides custards and such so Caliche's started offering sandwiches and hot dogs. With what might be one of the best deals in town, you can get two hot dogs and a large drink for $5. That's any hot dog on the menu, and there are some great choices.

The Spicy Dog has green chile relish with honey dill mustard, and the Chili Dog is just served straight up with Texas-style chili. Combine those two and you get the Super Dog. Cheese and jalapeños - (onions if you like) what could be better than a Nacho Dog? Do you like Frito pie? They actually have it on the menu and you can add a little of that spicy relish along with the Texas chili, cheese and onions served on a bed of corn chips. I got ahead of myself there - I wanted to say they have a Frito Dog with the same add-ons.

For the simple eaters, they have regular dogs with ketchup and mustard, but the Aggie Dog comes with barbecue sauce and shredded cheese. There are some combinations that were meant to be - the Pucker Dog comes with sauerkraut and mustard. If you are a bit more adventurous and into the cabbage, try a Slaw Dog with fresh coleslaw or make it a Chili Slaw Dog. The Windy City Dog is just what it says - the classic Chicago-style dog with sweet relish, onions, tomato, mustard and a pickle spear.

If for some reason you aren't a hot dog fan, there are two really fine smoked turkey croissant sandwiches - one with avocado, lettuce and tomato, and the other with bacon and Swiss cheese. Both come with chips and a choice of slaw or potato salad. There are also nachos in addition to the afore-drooled-over Frito pie.

Folks will always go to Caliche's for their frozen custard – maybe even some who still don't know what it is - but believe me, their hot dogs are also worth a visit. I'll be the first to admit I'm crazy for them.

'Bridesmaids' creates comedy that extends beyond the previews

Review by Samantha Roberts

Since I planned on spending the weekend with a friend/future bridesmaid of mine, I thought, what better movie to see together than "Bridesmaids."

I admit to being skeptical on just how fun-ny this flick would be, and I highly underestimated the entertainment factor. I'm not the kind of person that thinks people getting beat up or puked on is funny, but in this movie, you cannot help but laugh. And I laughed the whole way through, producing tears at times. Simply put, "Bridesmaids" is direct and hilarious.

It starts with two best friends, Annie, played by the gifted Kristen Wiig, and Lillian, played by Maya Rudolph, who was a little more oddly cast but it worked.

The movie begins with and holds a laidback, improv acting technique. Although a bit different at times, it makes the film relatable and it's nice to see a not-so-perfectly-edited movie every now and then. It makes me feel more normal, at least. Director Paul Feig focused on the plot and script instead of every hair being combed in the perfect place.

When Lillian gets engaged, she asks Annie to be her maid-of-honor (MOH). The planning begins with a lavish engagement party thrown by Helen (played by Rose Byrne), Lillian's fiance's boss's wife. Helen is over-the-top nice and has buttered Lillian up, but Annie is not falling for it and feels threatened by her wealth and perfection.

One of the best scenes was the MOH speech battle, which consisted of Annie trying to talk to Lillian in Spanish while attempting to outdo Helen's bilingual skills.

The dynamic between Wiig, who has a ma-jority of her career invested in "Saturday Night Live," and Byrne is so funny. Not to mention the rest of the bridesmaids, including Lillian's manly future sister-in-law Megan (Melissa McCarthy), who has a great amount of selfconfidence; the newly married and homely Becca (Ellie Kemper); and Lillian's cousin Rita (Wendi McLendon-Covey), an over-worked mother of three misfit boys. This cast ups the ante, and I think this movie has the potential to be "The Hangover" for women.

I am always disappointed when a funny movie does not extend beyond the previews, but every single scene of this laugh-out-loud measure of going above and beyond can be seer e. From an accommodating clubhouse to a first-casino, the 19th hole has never looked so inviting.

Though skeptical, the bridal party follows Annie to a hole-in-the-wall restaurant, where the groups gets food poisoning in "Bridesmaids."

comedy provides some sort of humor such as Megan hitting on the "secret" air marshal while the group is Vegas bound. (Spoiler alert: The group's Vegas trip is derailed when an overly medicated Annie gets them kicked off the plane.)

In addition to the laughs, a significant amount of romance is sprinkled into Annie's life along with tragedy and "hitting rock bottom.

Annie struggles with failing friendships, relationship problems, overcoming a break-up and a failed bakery and accepting who she is becoming, all while trying to plan the perfect wedding and compete with "Miss Goodie Two Shoes.

I was especially pleased with "Rhodes," played by Chris O'Dowd. Although a little too stubborn for my taste, O'Dowd plays an OCD Canadian cop who falls for Annie and her baking skills, particularly her cream puffs. And no good movie is complete without good music, don't worry this film provides that, too. Wilson Phillips anyone?

This perfectly written comedy leaves you wanting more, but I suggest considering the R rating if you are debating on taking the kiddos.

I did take Dave Edwards' advice and sit through the credits. Thank you. It was worth the wait.

When my friend and I got out of the movie, I was shocked because I thought 'Bridesmaids" was only one hour and 15 minutes; however, due to time change confusion it is actually two hours and five minutes. The point being, I was so enthralled I really believed I had only been in the movie for a little more than one hour. My friend Heather said, "I wasn't ready for it to be over. I could have watched two more hours of that movie."

It's not too often someone says that, especially with the attention span of Americans today.

If you choose to see "Bridesmaids," don't think you are going to get an enlightening, deep movie, because you aren't. But you will get a light-hearted comedy that will leave you smiling. Just don't go see it with your bridesmaids if there is any tension between who you picked as your MOH because of potentially awkward scenes. I learned the hard way.

Omega-3 ... everyone needs it

Laura Smart

First I'd like to thank Las Cruces Bulletin Health Editor Natisha Hales for asking me to write as a guest columnist while she's away. I guess she thought since the 15 Bulletin weight loss challengers lost a combined 246 pounds in 90 days while I was their nutrition coach, I must know something about healthy living.

Omega-3 fatty essential acids promote concentration and mental acuity, while supporting a healthy cardiovascular system and joint health. Studies have shown that taking an Omega-3 supplement lowers blood pressure and cholesterol, decreases triglycerides, increases brain function, helps with joint pain and arthritis, decreases symptoms of ADHD and decreases thickness of arteries.

It's also helpful to those who have experienced prostate cancer, breast cancer, depression, hormone imbalance or psoriasis. There are several other healthrelated problems that can be alleviated or eliminated just by supplementing with 1,000 milligrams a day of Omega-3.

The American Heart Association recommends eating cold-water fatty fish, such as mackerel, salmon, albacore tuna or sardines, at least two times a week. If you don't like fish or are a vegan, you can get your Omega-3 from fresh fruits, whole grains, extra virgin olive oil and walnuts. This is the Mediterranean diet of longevity.

Most people are not able to get enough Omega-3 in the foods they eat, so a supplement is a guaranteed way to get a sufficient amount.

You can supplement with fish oil or a plant-based oil, such as flaxseed, perilla seed, chia seed, kiwiseed, black raspberry seed, pomegranate seed or pumpkin seed. If you choose to go with fish oil, be sure to research where the fish is from, as there can be heavy mercury in some fish. Know the company. Call and ask questions about the ingredients, and be sure to take a non-gelatin capsule, such as a licap (vegan). Gelatin is bovine and who knows what those cows were fed.

You now have two options after reading this short article about Omega-3. You can do nothing, or you can choose to be proactive and preventive in your lifestyle eating habits by incorporating a highquality Omega-3 supplement.

Do your homework and research the company who manufactures the supplement you decide to take or you can contact me at lauralsmart@comcast.net.

I've already researched Omega-3 and have been taking it for six years. I have a great deal of energy and no aches or pains. I also had my first CT chest scan for a research project on how secondhand smoke affects flight attendants

May is Mental Health Month

You can learn more and make a difference By Jimmy Currier

If you have diabetes and don't seek proper medical care, there is a high probability that your condition will worsen and you will eventually die.

The same can be said for some forms of mental illness.

But physical and mental illnesses are rarely viewed with the same seriousness. That's one of several reasons why Mental Health Month was created and designated in May.

To help convey the message of mental health, the National Alliance on Mental Illnesses (NAMI) was created. The organization is dedicated to improving the lives of individuals and families affected by mental illness.

Recently, NAMI New Mexico held a fundraising walk in Albuquerque. Of the 43 teams competing, the local branch NAMI-DAC (Doña Ana County) raised the most money $8,660.80.

Beckey Beckett, the education coordinator for NAMI-DAC, said the team had 20 walkers and, overall, 512 individuals participated. Statewide, NAMI raised $101,964, but Beckett said there's still work to do to get to the goal of $150,000. She said the easiest way to contribute to the goal is to visit www.nami. org or contact local NAMI President Pamela Field at 312-2288.

It's not always easy to recognize the symptoms of mental illness, but NAMI can help individuals be more astute to the problem with its family-to-family program. This is a

Fighting cancer close to home

Cancer Resource Center brings education, support to Las Cruces' doorstep

By Amanda Green r the Las Cruces Bulletin

The Cancer Resource Center (CRC), located in the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center, has become an invaluable asset for those battling cancer in and around the Las Cruces area, as well as their family, friends and the doctors that serve them.

The CRC has provided fighters and survivors medical and support services to continue living their lives closer to home. Before its existence, the closest cancer center was in El Paso, but Las Cruces was soon home to its own location.

The CRC focuses on the whole person and considers the needs of family members, caregivers and co-workers. They work to give patients access to numerous support programs that provide information, guidance and an understanding of living life with cancer.

CRC is not another medical program, but a small group of volunteers who provide the tools and information for the cancer community so that individuals affected by the disease continue to live their lives. Some of the service CRC provides is financial counseling, education, diet and nutrition and also a variety of support groups so no one has to fight alone.

One of the support groups, Reach to Recovery, matches survivors of breast cancer with those still fighting. This is done through volunteers with the American Cancer Society as a way of allowing cancer patients important one-onone support with someone who has faced a similar battle.

The CRC also provides transportation and gas cards for patients through the Road to Recovery program. This supports the needs of patients who have difficulty in traveling to and from treatment at the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center. The CRC can also arrange for a cleaning service to tidy up the homes of some patients every few weeks.

"Anything to make life comfortable for them and their families," said Nick Orr, a volunteer at the CRC. "We're here to give them a helping hand in their time of need.

Another nationwide program that the CRC is involved with is See Cancer on page D2

Those living with cancer often face unexpected concerns. The Look Good ... Feel Better program, part of the Cancer Resource Center, provides women with wigs and other accessories to help deal with the sometimes drastic appearance changes that come with cancer and its treatment.

to promote recovery.

In addition to the educational component, participants will also gain empathy by understanding the subjective, lived experience of a person with mental illness.

While the family-to-family program won't be offered until

- September, there are upcoming events before then. At 4 p.m. Saturday, May 21, NAMI-DAC will host a fundraiser at the Fountain Theatre by showing the film "Un-listed," a documentary on schizophrenia.
- NAMI-DAC will also put on a car wash at 8 a.m. Saturday, May 28, at the Burger King at the intersection of Telshor Boulevard and Lohman Avenue.

Mental illness affects one out of four people, according to www.nami.org. Beckett said it's important for friends and family members to know the triggers mentally ill people may have

"It's important to have a relationship with your family," she said. "If you know the triggers, then you know what can help and what can't help."

Beckett told a story of a friend who has a manic disorder. "She said if you come out and see me paving my asphalt, that's how you know I'm manic," Beckett said. "It's always been our joke that if she wasn't feeling well, we would call her and ask her if she's paving her driveway and she would say, 'No, not yet'. That's the kind of thing you pick up among people."

Lives touched at the AIDS Candlelight Memorial

Photos by Niki Rhynes

Reverend Linda Mervine of First Christian Church started the vigil by lighting candles at the "Touching Lives" 28th annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial at Young Park Sunday, May 15. Participants lit candles in remembrance of those who have lost their lives to AIDS as well as to show support for those living with HIV/ AIDS and increase awareness.

Las Cruces City Councillor Olga Pedroza read a letter sent from U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman.

Ken Wake, a volunteer with International AIDS Empowerment of Las Cruces and El Paso, lights a candle.

Randy Granger gives a special musical presentation.

Janet Lindsey of FYI gave an emotional speech during the 28th annual International AIDS Candlelight Memorial. Lindsey urged participants to donate or become a volunteer to Camp Orazones. The camp provides four days of fun and freedom to children and families affected by HIV/ AIDS.

Pets slim down at Jornada Vet Clinic

Weight-loss challenge takes on pet obesity

To raise awareness of pet obesity, Jornada Veterinary Clinic in Las Cruces recently completed a 12-week Project Pet Slim Down course for 16 overweight dogs and cats.

Pets and owners participated in nutrition lectures and activities and had biweekly weight checks.

All pets that participated in Project Pet Slim Down lost weight, and the top three participants were awarded prizes during the graduation ceremony Saturday, May 14.

Pet obesity is one of the biggest issues in animal health today, with 54 percent of cats and 57 percent of dogs in the United States considered overweight. The Project Pet Slim Down program from Purina Veterinary Diets helps overweight pets get slimmer. Project Pet Slim Down provides a structured weight loss program that pet owners can take advantage of by working with their veterinarian.

Veterinarians and veterinary technicians at Jornada Veterinary Clinic have taken the initiative to increase obesity awareness, proving that weight loss can be achieved in dogs and cats. Pets that are leaner live longer, healthier lives.

NMSU nursing students earn Nightingale scholarships

The New Mexico Center for Nursing Excellence has awarded six 2011 Nightingale Scholarships to nursing school students in doctoral, Bachelor of Science and associate degrees and practical nursing programs to help them pursue nursing degrees.

Scholarship winners are Anabelle X. Gutierrez-Sisneros of Española; Francisca Sequeira of Las Cruces; Mari Upshaw of Albuquerque; Michelle DeArmond of Gallup, N.M.; Sharayne Panana of Rio Rancho, N.M.; and Michelle Stinnett of Las Vegas, N.M.

They were chosen on the basis of academic achievement, financial need and recommendations from faculty at their nursing schools. Each winner will receive $1,000.

"All of these students exemplify outstanding academic performance, demonstrated leadership and a genuine desire to make a difference in the lives of their patients and the com-munity as nurses," said Ellen Interlandi, president of the board of directors of NMCNE and a clinical consultant with the New Mexico Hospital Association.

Gutierrez-Sisneros is pursuing a degree in the doctoral pro-gram in nursing at New Mexico State University. She also works as a nursing retention specialist and adjunct faculty member in the Northern New Mexico College Associate Degree in Nursing Program and maintains a private behavioral health counseling practice.

Now, in the first year of her doctoral studies, she plans to complete a research dissertation about the health of the Genizaros, de-tribalized people in Mexico, analyzing nursing and health disparities at the U.S.-Mexico border.

She has 28 years' experience in Rio Arriba working with pregnant and mentally ill teenagers and adults, has provided counseling on substance abuse to alcoholics and heroin addicts and has counseled domestic violence victims and perpetrators.

In addition to her current position at Northern New Mexico College, she volunteers with the National Alliance on Mental Illness and also lives and works among Tewa Women United.

Upon completing her degree, Gutierrez-Sisneros hopes to become a college instructor in cultural anthropology and nursing. She has a 4.0 GPA and is the single parent of a grown son.

Sequeira is pursuing a Bachelor of Science degree in Nursing at NMSU, with an expected graduation date of fall 2011. She has a 3.64 GPA. She is an active member of the Student Nursing Association and belongs to the Golden Key International Honors Society, The National Society of Collegiate Scholars and Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society.

"I am committed to becoming a nurse because I am concerned about the high rates of diabetes and obesity in my community," Sequeria said. "I was poor growing up, and I know that people who are struggling with financial situations have the highest rates of illness. By teaching individuals in poor, rural areas on New Mexico to implement programs they can understand within their respective cultures, we can improve their health."

After earning her degree, Sequeira said she plans to work as a clinical nurse specialist or community health nurse, and eventually wants to pursue a master's degree in nursing.

Las Cruces Catholic School wins $1,000 from Subway

Las Cruces Catholic School earned $1,000 in funding for new exercise equipment in the third annual Great El Paso-Las Cruces Subway Restaurants Fitness Challenge. The challenge ran from Jan. 22 through March 11, encouraging elementary students in the area to get active and eat healthy.

Throughout the seven-week challenge, students tracked their daily physical activity, whether it was walking or riding their bike to school or after school activities or sports.

Las Cruces Catholic School was among the top three performing schools, with the most physically active students and the only school in Las Cruces to win. An award assembly was planned to recognize participating students, teachers and administrators at Las Cruces Catholic School.

Friday, May 20, 2011 Las Cruces Bulletin Finding some secluded tranquility Renovations add light, comfort to peaceful Soledad home

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletir

Over the Soledad Canyon hills and through the Talavera desert lays a Southwest-inspired ranch-style home.

Built in 2003 by Desert Meadows, the 3,369-square-foot residence captured the attention of Joy and Robert Biedermann, who were searching for a home that offered peace, quiet and a variety of living spaces.

"We had looked all around, but we liked the privacy and the size of the lot," Joy Biedermann said.

The Biedermanns purchased the home in 2005, and while they enjoyed the style of the home and its many different features, they decided to renovate the property to better suit their needs. From putting in new flooring to transforming rooms, the couple made the residence their home.

A short drive near the base of the Organ Mountains, a dirt road leads to the gravel driveway. Large curved flagstone stairs glide past the tiered native landscaping of yuccas and blooms sage bushes to an iron gate.

A front courtyard, covered in rocks and a few plants, including rose bushes, features a fountain as well as a fish pound. More than a private oasis, the front courtyard features a 180degree view of the valley.

You can see as far down to the mountains in Deming," said EXIT Realty Horizons Broker Chris Harrison, who represents the listing. "This high up, you have peace and tranquility."

Once inside the rustic wood door, guests are surrounded by an array of artistic details, including Southwest-inspired beams, vigas, corbels, hand-textured walls and lighted nichos as well as purplish Italian porcelain tile.

"It's porcelain through and through," Joy Biedermann said.

One large renovation task was the transformation of a bedroom to the right of the front door.

"We really wanted a formal dining room," Joy Biedermann said.

Knocking out the wall, the couple opened up the narrow hallway, adding an abundance of light throughout the home. They also converted the closet into a china nook with knotty oak cabinets. Wanting the room to flow with the rest of the house, they included wood beams on the ceiling, which also complemented the elegance of the room.

"We would have people over for dinner and we could look out to this beautiful view of the city lights," she said.

There is a lot of natural light in here," Harrison said of the home. "It's very linear, so there is light coming in on both sides. There aren't any dark interior areas.'

"We like the split floor plan," Joy Biedermann said. "It has more privacy."

While the couple repainted all of the rooms, Harrison said they left one as it was. This room, most likely designed for a child, showcases blue carpeting paired with blue walls and clouds on the ceiling. A smiling sun resides in the corner.

The wing also includes a three-car garage, which features insulated doors. In addition to extra shelving, the area houses a water softener and a reverse osmosis system for drinking water.

A laundry room completes the area. A seemingly ordinary doggie door leads to one of the property's most unique features, Robert Biedermann said – a pet terrarium. Enclosed on all sides as well as the top with mesh fencing, the graveled area works as a sanctuary, Harrison said, keeping pets of any size protected from wandering wildlife.

"This could even handle a large bird," Harrison said.

While the Biedermanns don't have animals of their own, Joy Biedermann said they found it useful when pet sitting for their neighbors, adding that the critters could come and go between the two areas as they pleased.

"It was comfortable for them and very safe," she said. "With the gravel, it was very easy to clean up.

The kitchen features custom knotty oak cabinetry as well as tile countertops. A moveable island is also found in the area as well as a wet bar.

Putting a great spin on it Prepping your own salads has never been easier

kitchen gadget: Salad spinner

Now that the sun is bright and our backyard gardens are in bloom, it is the perfect time to explore the process of veggie loading.

Veggie loading is a term that describes a culinary trick that incorporates many different varieties (and colors) of vegetables into a sauce or salad in a unique way that helps to lessen the boredom of repetition many people find with produce.

Purchasing produce that is both local and organic not only betters your community, but helps fuel a healthy body. Without the use of chemicals or other harsh pesticides and preserving waxes, organic, leafy greens are the cornerstone to a well balanced, and vitamin enriched diet. The lack of chemicals, however, require that you do a little of the dirty work by washing all of your produce. It is suggested to wash even store prepped, often labeled prewashed, produce because you never know who it's met between the field and your shopping cart.

The trick of veggie loading is to mix it up and combine unusual ingredients to form fantastic salads and fresh sides. A handy tool in the salad process and a must-have in any salad lover's arsenal is the salad spinner.

What is it?

The salad spinner is usually a set of plastic bowls - one inside of the other. The inner bowl is a colander, meaning that it has slats or holes to allow water to escape. The lid, specially formed, has a button, crank or pull cord that moves the inner bowl, causing it to spin freely inside its shell. There is a collection reservoir at the base of the bowls that is used to catch any excess water.

How does it work?

Prepping, washing and drying lettuce can be tedious work, often overwhelming, depending on the size of the head or the packing of the leaves. A salad spinner makes the last step of the process quick and easy

Start by taking the strainer out of the spinner container, and putting in all your lettuce and any other veggies that need to be washed. Make sure not to fill it too high. Run water over the strainer until everything inside is washed thoroughly. Shake off the excess moisture, then put the strainer back into the spinner. Put the lid on tight, and use the button, crank or pull cord to spin the sieve for about 20 seconds.

The inner bowl spins so that the excess water on the lettuce, kale or cabbage is flung to the outer bowl. The wastewater collects at the base of the two bowls in a reservoir, leaving your lettuce air dried without the mess. No need to pat the greens with a paper towel or wait for them to drip-dry.

Where can it be found?

Salad spinners are an easy to find item, and depending on the desired quality, you can purchase one at your nearest retailer. You can find it in the kitchen prep

Common types of lettuce

Arugula has long, spiked, dark green leaves and a peppery flavor. It is perfect to pair with tangy dressings and bold flavors, or mix with other lettuces as an accent note.

Romaine lettuce is hale and hearty. Its crunchy texture can stand up to any dressing.

Butter lettuce is a crisp-head lettuce, meaning its leaves form a compact head as it grows and it works beautifully in salads, especially with light dressings.

Oak leaf lettuce is a loose-leaf lettuce, meaning the leaves stay loose and attached only at the base as they grow. They make excellent salads and work with a wide range of dressings.

area, usually near the mixing bowls.

Online providers, such as www.thepamperedchef.com, also offer them in a wide variety of sizes and colors to suit your culinary needs.

How much do they cost?

Discount retailers such as Target or Walmart generally have store brand spinners that will run you less than $20, but often lack quality spinning mechanisms. They may only be good for a few uses. Other shops, specialty stores and reputable online merchants can guarantee quality and longevity starting at $29 to $39.

Helpful hint

I

When using the salad spinner, make sure to hold the lid firmly on top of the bowls when pulling/pushing the spinning mechanism; otherwise, you're in for a shower of lettuce.

Strawberry Summer Salad

- 1 cup mayonnaise 1/4 cup white sugar
- 1 tablespoon white vinegar
- 1 tablespoon poppy seeds 1 head iceberg lettuce, torn
- into bite-size pieces 1 bunch fresh spinach, washed
- and stems removed
- 1/2 cup red onion, diced 1 (16 ounce) package fresh
- strawberries, hulled and sliced

Make a dressing by whisking together the mayonnaise, sugar and vinegar in a small bowl. Stir in the poppy seeds; set aside

Toss together the lettuce, spinach and onion in a large bowl. Drizzle the dressing over the salad and toss to coat. Add the strawberries and lightly toss again. Serve immediately. (Recipe adapted from http:// allrecipes.com.)

Friday, May 20, 2011 Las Cruces Bulletin Another look at vinegar Potent ingredient has many outdoor uses

By Beth Sitzler as Cruces Bulletin

Editor's note: This is part two in a two-part series.

Used for 10,000 years, vinegar isconsidered one of the oldest ingredients in the world.

Loved by many cultures, the renowned substance is especially popular in Roslyn, S.D., the home of the International Vinegar Museum and the International Vinegar Festival, held every June.

In addition to its cleaning properties, vinegar is a must-have in the kitchen. Cider vinegar, made from apples, is the most popular cooking vinegar in the United States, while raisin vinegar, which is produced in Turkey, is commonly used in Middle Eastern cuisine.

Vinegar isn't just for cooking and cleaning the inside of your home, however. While these are its two main uses, the pungent liquid has several applications outside the home.

1. Guard your backyard: Stop weeds and nosy critters from destroying your yard or garden with the help of vinegar. Fill a squirt bottle with the liquid and spray down the cracks of your pathways or rocks to kill intruding weeds and grass. Also, stop pesky critters, such as cats, deer, dogs, rabbits and raccoons, from entering your garden by placing vinegar-soaked rags around the area. Attach them to posts, and the unpleasant smell will keep them at bay.

2. Brighten your bricks: Bricks can play an important part in the look of a home whether it's by covering the walls, lining the floors or accenting the fireplace. Keep them looking brand new with the help of vinegar. Dip a mop or rag in a solution of 1 cup white vinegar and

1 gallon warm water and clean the area. The bricks will look brighter.

3. Remove bumper stickers: Is that dated McCain/Palin sticker still cluttering the bumper of your car? Get help removing the sticky art from vinegar. First, saturate the top and sides of the sticker with undiluted distilled vinegar. After it has soaked for 10 to 15 minutes, use an ice scraper or expired credit card to get it off. Use a more pungent vinegar to remove any leftover glue residue. This trick can also be used to remove window decals.

4. Clear away bird droppings: Those unsightly bird droppings don't have to ruin your outdoor patio experience. Remove them from your patio, walls and cement driveway with apple cider vinegar. Soak a rag in the liquid and use it to wipe off the contaminated areas.

5. Refreshen patio furniture: After a snowy winter, your outdoor patio furniture may not only be dirty, it may also have spots of mold. Give them a good cleaning without the need of harsh chemicals by using vinegar instead. For your plastic furniture and patio umbrellas, create a mixture of 2 cups white vinegar and 2 tablespoons liquid dish soap in a bucket of hot water. Use a soft brush to work into the grooves of the items. It can also be used on seat pads and other mesh fabrics. Rinse them off with cold water and let them dry in the sun.

6. Lure annoying insects: Don't let gnats, flies, mosquitoes or other pests disrupt your outdoor barbecue this summer. Keep them away with the help of vinegar. Place a bowl of apple cider vinegar near your food items, but far enough away that it doesn't bother you and your guests. The vinegar will stop the bugs from reaching your goodies.

7. Disinfect air filters: Whether it's your air conditioner or humidifier, you want to keep these essential appliances working properly during these dry, hot months. One way to do so is by keeping their filters clean. Easily filled with dust, soot, pet dander and possibly bacteria, every 10 days or so soak the filter in a vat of equal parts white vinegar and warm water for about an hour. Then squeeze the liquid out of the filter and let it dry overnight before using

8. Protect a painted concrete floor: After time, the paint on your painted-concrete floor can begin to chip, flake and peel away. Help keep it intact longer with vinegar. Simply cover the concrete with white vinegar before painting. Be sure to let the vinegar dry before applying the paint. Vinegar can also be used to keep paint attached to galvanized metal.

9. Save a dirty paintbrush: Forgot to clean your paintbrush after your last do-it-yourself project? Don't toss it in the trash - instead get your vinegar. Recommended for synthetic-bristle paintbrushes, soak the art tool in a cup of full-strength vinegar until the paint dissolves. If the paint still remains, place the brush into 1 to 2 cups of boiling vinegar for 10 minutes. After the paint is gone, thoroughly wash the brush in hot, soapy water.

10. Comfort a sunburn or itching: If your time outdoors has resulted in an unpleasant sunburn or itchy hives, get help easing the discomfort with vinegar. Cool that sunburn by gently dabbing the area with a cotton ball or soft cloth drenched in white or cider vinegar. This will especially help if it is applied before the burn begins to sting. That same vinegarsoaked applicator can also be used Around-the-house item: Vinegar to instantly stop itching caused by insect bites and exposure to poison ivy or poison oak.

11. Help germinate flower seeds: The next time you're in a hurry to plant woody seeds, such as moonflower, passionflower, morning glory and gourds, reach for the vinegar. To speed up the germination process, lightly rub the seeds between sheets of fine sandpaper, then soak them overnight in a solution of 1/2 cup apple cider vinegar and 1 pint warm water. The next morning, rinse them off and they will be ready for planting. You can also use this solution to germinate many herbs and vegetable seeds – just skip the sandpaper.

12. Preserve cut flowers: One of the benefits of planting a garden is that you have fresh, colorful flowers ready for cutting right at your finger tips. Make your garden's bounty last longer by adding 2 tablespoons white distilled vinegar and 1 teaspoon sugar to your 1-quart vase. This solution can also be used to perk up droopy flower buds.

After eight years in the real estate industry, Realtor Quint Lears is still focusing on "the American Dream" – new-home ownership.

Originally from Maryland, Lears came to the Southwest after the U.S. Air Force brought him to Alamogordo. When it came time to leave the military, he said he decided to stay in the area to study communication full time at New Mexico State University.

"I really got into real estate while I was in college," he said, adding that he took real estate and college courses at the same time.

Sometimes challenging to do both, Lears said during one summer, he would often drive down from Alamogordo and pitch a tent at the campgrounds in Las Cruces to attend class.

"It was a good way to save money so I could afford to do both," he said.

After earning his real estate license, selling properties came easy to him, said Lears, ex-plaining that he sold his first home in a matter of days.

"I realized that I enjoyed sales, and I wanted to sell the largest product I could," he said. "(With residential real estate) I really enjoy the people and the process and the product."

Lears said what sets him a part from other local Realtors is his specialization in newhome sales.

'I'm not the one-stop shop," he said. "New-home sales are what I do.

"It's a really special feeling to own a new home. It's the American Dream.'

Strictly focusing on this niche, he said a new home has several benefits, such as unused materials and more energy efficiency.

"They don't build them like they use to – they build them better," he said.

Gaining a reputation for his hard work in new-home sales, Lears said a few fellow Realtors suggested that he speak with Kimble Hakes, who at the time was getting his company, Hakes Brothers, off the ground.

While Hakes was at first hesitant about getting outside sales help, Lears convinced him of the importance of delegating the sales and marketing aspects of the company to him, and he was brought onto the team four years ago.

"I love the people, I love creating communities," he said. "There is a thrill. I counseling process.

'It's not just babbling about a product," he said. "We're stewards of the industry."

Also, Lears said he learned how beneficial it is to have a process.

"Not selling by accident," he said. "Be purposeful and positive."

This includes avoiding procrastination, thinking big, watching your ego and always learning.

"He's always telling me to keep moving," Lears said. "(Richey) isn't waiting for the news to tell him how the market is, he creates the market."

Using his mentor's words of wisdom, Lears said he "makes his own market" by using a problem solving-type process to find the home that best suits the client's needs, wants and vision.

"I feel like in sales, you're in a unique position of both service and leadership," he said. "People want us to fix their problems. It's really important to care about the people and they can sense if you do or not."

While he said his greatest accomplishment is building a family with his wife Norissa and 23-month-old son Emerson, Lears said he hopes to grow his success in real estate by becoming more involved with the National Association of Home Builders and gaining more education.

Junk that old vehicle

Cars for Homes another way to help Habitat

It takes their car off their hands and it helps

MARIE SCHWARTZ,

MVHFH development officer

the community ...

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

How can locals go green and get rid of their old junker all while providing low-income families in the community with affordable homes? By participating in the Habitat for Humanity International Cars for Homes program.

The Cars for Homes program was created by the international organization as a hassle-free way for the public to dispose of their old cars and help out their local Habitat affiliate, including the Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity (MVHFH).

"I love this program because it not only helps the nonprofit build homes, but it cleans up the community," said MVHFH Development Officer Marie Schwartz, adding that many used and unwanted cars end up in a junkyard d or just sit idle.

While the program has generated more than $8,000 for MVHFH since its inception, Schwartz said they wanted to reintroduce it to the community to help create more interest.

In honor of Earth Day held April 22, MVHFH kicked off "Every day is Earth Day," a yearlong initiative for its Cars for Homes program during which community members are encouraged to donate their vehicles.

"Habitat for Humanity is very big on recycling, and this is a form of recycling," she said.

Schwartz said that although the program is called Cars for Homes, they accept a wide range of vehicles, including trucks, RVs, boats and construction equipment.

"As long as you have the title, you can donate it," she said, adding that this includes those items that no longer operate.

Schwartz said there are two ways to donate a vehicle. First, community members can visit the Cars for Homes website, follow the instructions, fill out the required information and set up a pick up date. She said the car will be picked up and towed away free of charge two or three days after the processing center in Rhode Island receives the title.

"When they punch in their zip code, the money will go to us," she said, explaining that the local Habitat affiliate covers not only Doña Ana County, but several outlying communities. "They'll know their money will come to our local Habitat – Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity."

Also, the MVHFH office can be contacted directly. The vehicle then can be either picked up or dropped off. "They can give us the title and their car," she said.

The donated vehicles are sent to the program headquarters to be sold or transformed into scrap metal.

"Either way, we get the money," she said.

In addition to helping clear away unwanted vehicles,

Schwartz said the program has several other benefits.

"It's tax deductible to the fullest extent of the law," she said. "Plus, it helps us build homes for people in need. It's a win-win situation. It takes their car off their hands and it helps the community at the same time."

Schwartz said Cars for Homes is just one more way members of the community can contribute to the nonprofit.

"We're trying to raise $128,000 for construction materials by next build season, (which will begin in October)," she said. "We also always accept building materials and volunteers.

"I'd like to thank those people who have donated their cars and those who are considering doing so."

For more information, call the MVHFH office at 525-0475, 877-277-4344 or visit www.carsforhomes.com.

Freeze damage still lingers

Is there green under all that dead tissue?

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

By now, you know which trees or shrubs made it through this past winter storm.

Some palms, mesquite, Mexican elder, Palo Verde and ash, among others, may look partially dead or alive, depending upon their condition. It appears that most of the California fan palms that I have seen are recovering. They apparently do not know how to read as most of the literature on these trees suggests they should have perished with the freezing temperatures in February.

Other palms in the area are hit and miss. Magnesium sulphate should help the palms off to quick recovery if the new growth is emerging with yellow fronds.

Some mesquites, Mexican elder and Palo Verde took a big hit as well. If you are one of the many who have extensive damage to your tree, you have some decisions to make. Any of the trees listed above may have masses of dead plant tissue. This should be removed as soon as possible.

If you find that removing all the dead tissue will greatly alter the form or appearance of the tree, you may want to remove it altogether or cut it back down to ground level. In most instances, especially with the Palo Verde, this action may be the best.

I have noticed most of these trees are producing green growth only at the base of the trunk. Removing the remainder of the dead tissue should help the new growth recover much faster.

The new growth will almost certainly come out in "shrub" form. It is best to let the masses of off-shoots grow to a couple of feet. You can then remove all but one stem or leave several stems to form a multi-trunk tree. You will be amazed at how fast these basal shoots grow.

Since the growth is so rapid, it will be best to support these soft wooded limbs during the windy season, which looks like it will be around longer or later than usual.

If you do not want to give this a try, you can always remove the tree and replace it with something new. For some ash and other shade trees that do not grow off basal shoots, this may be your only alternative.

Keep in mind, the cold hardiness of the replacement plant. I keep hearing people say "the 50-year freeze" or "this won't happen again in our lifetime," but who really knows?

Gary Guzman, owner of Guzman's Color Your World Gardening Centers, can be reached at gary@lascrucesbulletin.com.

We definitely view scorpions as one of the "bad boys" of the bug world, and the Southwest is a U.S. hotspot for them.

There are about 2,000 species of scorpions worldwide and they primarily live in southern regions, which satisfy the creatures' preference for warm temperatures. Arizona has the greatest density of scorpions among U.S states.

Not every scorpion sting is deadly. About 50 scorpion species worldwide produce venom potent enough to cause a serious human reaction, and the poison of only 25 of those species is lethal to humans. Scorpions use the venom in feeding to paralyze the insects they capture.

The numbers are smaller in the United States. Only one of the native species here can cause major reactions and kill, and that's the Arizona bark scorpion, found mainly in the Southwest desert. While very rare, only a small percent of untreated adults could potentially die from this scorpion's sting, the risk is much greater for untreated children under 5 and older adults that may already have other health issues. If a child is stung, medical treatment or advice from a Poison Control Center should be sought immediately.

Bark scorpions live under rocks, logs and, of course, tree bark. But, due to their small size they are also the most common house scorpion. They'll live in firewood, garbage pails, bed linens, shoes and clothing on the floor. Scorpions don't go on the attack, but they will sting if handled or otherwise disturbed. They are nocturnal and seek refuge during the day. Between its lifespan of six to eight years, giving birth to 10 to 25 offspring a year and their 1- to 2-inch size, the bark scorpion is one of the most frightening household pests. They move into homes through small cracks to feed off crickets, fleas, ticks and other scorpions.

Truly Nolen recommends the following tips to protect your home from scorpions this spring and summer:

- Keep windows and doors closed.
- Check closet corners with a black light because scorpions prefer dark and humid places. Better yet, perform a black light inspection outdoors on a dark night, to identify where they are harboring around the yard.
- If a homeowner notices the disappearance of insects or finds insect body parts piled in remote corners, call an expert immediately.

Time for sandals and micheladas

Sides complement this week's burger choice

Pair "micheladas" and "sandals" with a hearty burger and you've got the works for a springtime patio party!

"Micheladas and sandals?" you ask. "What the heck?"

Micheladas are spicy beer cocktails prepared with dark brew and a variety of sauces, including hot chile. This Mexican drink is ideal on a warm, desert day, but then so is sandals or "huaraches" in Spanish. But the huaraches to which I refer are also named for a side dish, masa dough shaped like a favorite summer sandal and then grilled and slathered with cavenne butter.

These two sides - micheladas and huaraches – make superb accompaniments to this week's burger buster – Napa Valley Slaw oozing with chile rojo and sandwiched between buns draped in avocado cream. ¡Muy delicioso!

Michelada Cocktail

1 ice cold Mexican beer (dark is better) Coarse salt (for the rim) 1/4 cup fresh lime juice

1 to 2 dashes of hot chile sauce

(such as Tabasco or Cholula) 1 dash of soy sauce

1 dash Worchestshire sauce Beer mug or large glass (preferably chilled) Ice

Lime wedge for garnish

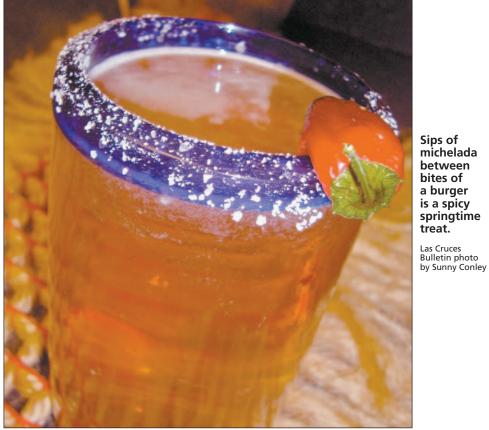

Salt the rim of the glass by wetting the edge with some of the lime juice then dipping it into a plate with salt on it. Fill glass about half way with ice and pour in the lime juice, chile sauce, soy sauce and Worchestshire sauce. Mix with a spoon then slowly pour in the beer to the top of the glass. Push the lime wedge onto the edge and serve immediately. After a few sips, add remaining beer into the cocktail.

Napa Valley Slaw Burger with Spicy Avocado Crema

Slaw

1/4 head Napa cabbage, thinly sliced (about 3 cups)

1/2 sweet onion, thinly sliced (about 1 cup)

1 bunch fresh cilantro leaves, finely chopped 1 lime, juiced

1/2 teaspoon ground cumin Salt and pepper

Mix all the slaw ingredients together. Set aside for at least 30 minutes to let flavors meld.

Burger patties: 2 pounds 73 percent lean ground beef 6 tablespoons Chile Rojo, recipe follows Salt and pepper

To make the burger patties, take 6 table-spoons ground beef and mix with 6 tablespoons Chile Rojo, recipe below. Make 6 equal hand-formed patties with the remaining ground beef.

Place 2 tablespoons of the chile mixture onto the center of each patty. Carefully enclose each patty around the chile mixture to form a ball. Carefully flatten each ball back into a thick patty, keeping the chile mixture inside. Season the patties liberally with salt and pepper.

Prepare charcoal grill for medium-hot di-rect-heat cooking. When the grill is hot, cook the burgers over a medium-high flame until done, about 3 minutes per side for medium rare. If the exterior of the patties begins to burn, move them to a cooler side of the grill until the centers have had a chance to cook.

Add a slice of cheese to each patty about 1 minute before they are done. Let patties rest off the heat for 1 or 2 minutes after cooking. Meanwhile toast the buns on a cooler side of the grill.

Chile Rojo Purée:

1 dried ancho chile and 1 dried pasilla chile, seeded, stemmed and soaked in warm water for at least 30 minutes, or 4 tablespoons good-quality ground chile powder

- 1 fresh jalapeño chile pepper, stemmed, seeded and minced
- 1/4 cup onion, minced
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 canned chipotle chile in adobo sauce 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons tomato paste
- 1/4 cup hearty red wine (such as Zinfandel or Cabernet Sauvignon), plus more if needed

Add all ingredients, except extra wine, in a blender or food processor. Purée thoroughly, using extra wine if necessary to make a thick, smooth sauce.

Avocado Crema:

- 2 ripe avocados, peeled and pitted
- 1/2 cup sour cream 1/2 jalapeño chile pepper, finely
- minced, optional
- 1/4 cup red bell pepper, minced
- 1 lime, zested 1 lime, juiced
- 1 large ripe tomato or 2 Roma tomatoes, diced
- Salt and pepper

Mash the avocados in a food processor. Add the rest of the ingredients and fold gently until thoroughly mixed.

To assemble:

- 6 (1-ounce) slices sharp Cheddar 6 good-quality soft hamburger buns
- 1/3 cup of remaining Chile Rojo mixed with 1/2 cup ketchup

Spread each bun bottom with a layer of Avocado Crema. Add about 1/3 cup slaw, a patty with melted cheese, then a tablespoon of chile rojo ketchup and, finally, the bun top. Makes 6 burgers. (Recipe adapted from Tom Wickham, Portland, Ore.)

Huaraches with Cayenne Butter

2 cups masa harina

1 teaspoon baking powder

1/4 teaspoon salt Sour cream, optional

In a bowl, stir masa flour, baking powder, salt and broth until dough holds together well, adding a little water if needed.

Divide dough into 4 equal portions for large sandals or 8 for smaller portions. Shape each portion into a 6-inch-long log on a sheet of waxed paper. Pat each log into a 1/8-inchthick oval, about 4-by-8-inches.

Place a griddle or two frying pans (10 to 12 inches) over medium-high heat. When pan is hot, flip masa dough onto pan and peel off paper. Cook until bottom of masa is light brown, about 3 minutes. Use a wide spatula to turn huaraches over. Makes 4 servings. Serve immediately, brushing each sandal with Cayenne Butter, recipe below.

Cayenne Butter

1/2 stick butter, preferably real butter 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper 1/4 teaspoon fresh parsley, minced

In a small glass bowl, melt butter in microwave for just a few seconds or until melted. Don't burn! Add cayenne pepper and fresh parsley. Stir. Serve warm with huaraches. Top with sour cream, if desired.

Keller Williams goes 'RED' Realty company spends the day giving back

By Beth Sitzler

What seemed like a regular Thursday for most was in fact an opportunity for Realtors of the Keller Williams Realty family to give back to the community in which they work.

Thursday, May 12, was RED Day (Renew, Energize and Donate) for the international company, including the Las Cruces office, 1300 Avenida de Mesilla, said Broker Laura Szalay. Each year, on the second Thursday in May, every employee takes it off to devote their time to renewing and energizing aspects of their community.

When looking for a project and an organization to support, Keller Williams Realtor Cosette Casciani-Eaton suggested the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces, 330 W. Las Cruces Ave., which her children and nephew attend.

"As a group, there is so much need and they do amazing things for the kids in our community," Szalay said.

The group of Realtors, family and supporters spent the day making repairs, painting and fixing up a part of the facility as well as the outdoor furniture.

"We're professional painters now," Szalay joked. "Not only can well sell them, now we can paint them.

"It's very rewarding. It's exciting to see such a transformation in a short period of time."

Not just working on their own, the Realtors turned to mem-

"We measure our success by your level of satisfaction."

Gina Hoffman Schweinebraten Vice-President Casey Carpet of Las Cruces, Inc. bers of the community for support.

"It's neat to see everyone donate and help out," said Keller Williams Realtor Sherrell Grimes.

Among the businesses that donated supplies and their time were Hacienda Carpet & Tile, Casey Carpets of Las Cruces, Mesilla Valley Kitchen, Lowe's Home Improvement, Nick's Office Furniture & Supplies and Douglas Home Inspection.

"Tameko (Ticeaĥkie, department manager of administration of Lowe's Home Improvement) was a big help," Szalay said. "She was out here at dawn."

The Realtors also received help from their spouses and children, who not only supported them, but also contributed to the more than $600 raised by Keller Williams for the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces.

Members of the local Keller Williams Realty office and their supporters paint and repair part of the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces facility during the company's RED Day Thursday, May 12.
