July Fourth events pop

Celebrations offer safe alternatives

Bulletin Staff Report

With the Southwest still in the grips of a persistent drought and wildfires raging in northern New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, it's probably best to take Gov. Susana Martinez's advice to enjoy fireworks and other July Fourth activities at one of the many events celebrating the country's birth.

The most recent wildfire is near Sam Donaldson's ranch by Hondo, and the fire near Los Alamos remains largely uncontained. For those enjoying fireworks at home, exercise extreme caution (see story about fireworks safety in Health & Well Being, page D1).

A list of area events for Fourth of July follows:

Las Cruces

- Independence Day Run 2011 starts at 6 a.m. Saturday, July 2, at 2500 N. Triviz Drive, at the multi-purpose path by the Kohl's Department Store parking lot.

 The annual Electric Light Parade
- starts at 9 p.m. Sunday, July 3, at Apodaca Park at the corner of Madrid Avenue and Solano Drive. The parade theme is "100 Years of Statehood."
- Fourth of July Street Fest and Fireworks, Sunday, July 3, and Monday, July 4, Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave. Music, food and other entertainment. (For more details on the entertainment, see Arts & Entertainment, pages C2 and C4.) The city's professional fireworks display starts at 9:30 p.m. Monday, July 4.
- Garrison flag-raising at 8 a.m. and lowered at 5 p.m. Monday, July 4, at Veterans Memorial Park, 2651 Road-
- runner Parkway.
 Southern New Mexico Speedway
 MVT Fourth of July Celebration, Saturday, July 2, Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds. Gates open 5:30 p.m. races start at 7:45 p.m., with fireworks at intermission. Cost is $12, but free for kids 10 and younger.

Levee rehab stops FEMA designation

Flood insurance likely not required

By Todd G. Dickson

Improvements to levees along the Rio Grande from Hatch to El Paso will likely result in the government not requiring flood insurance to those living along the barrier roads, an official with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) said.

Jim Orwat, FEMA project manager for Region 6 flood map modernization, which covers El Paso and Doña Ana County, said work on levees by the International Boundary and Water Commission (USIBWC) should result in their certification, which means flood insurance won't be required.

Orwat made the statements at a citizen's forum hosted by USIBWC Thursday, June 23, at the Doña Ana County Government Center

Although there are a few private companies providing flood insurance, the federal govern-ment covers the bulk of flood insurance. That fund took a beating following the widespread flooding by Hurricane Katrina in

FEMA responded by revising its flood plain maps, greatly expanding areas at risk. Many complained the proposed maps were simply carved out wide swaths of areas near water or drainage

City seeks decision on new impact fees

Public hearing to be held July

By Todd G. Dickson

A public hearing will be held sometime this month before the Las Cruces City Council acts mostly likely early next month – on the long-debated addition of new impact fees for roads, drainage and public safety.
At a council work session Monday, June 27, council members were mostly in agreement with City Manager Robert Garza that after almost five years of studying the fees, a final decision should be made.

The proposal stems from concerns about the city growing faster than the city's ability to provide services and the city's practice of letting developers build roads. In some parts of the city, this has created a patchwork of paved and unpaved roads as well as roads that vary from two lanes to multi-lanes.

Many in the development community say the impact fees will simply add to the cost of new homes at a time when the housing market is still struggling to come back.

Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima is proposing the city phase in the fees, starting with public safety, by 2013.

"I feel comfortable that the economy will eventually rebound, but I think we can wait a couple of

First Lt. Steven Rendon talks about testing a mobile command system inside a mine-resistant vehicle called a Caiman during the media day Wednesday, June 29, for Network Integration Evaluation exercises at White Sands Missile Range. Rendon is among troops living in the field for six weeks testing new systems.

Specialists Antonino Orozco and Michael Means explains how this drone called Raven can help them see the enemy remotely.

Lt. Col. Matt Fath briefs reporters on the layout of the camp and operations.

Warfare by smart phone

Field network technology tested at WSMR

By Todd G. Dickson

For the next four weeks, some 4,500 soldiers and support staff are at White Sands Missile Range testing a variety of new technology to bring wireless network capabilities to soldiers in the field.

The soldiers are living in tents as they would at a deployment in the rugged terrain and hot, dry summer conditions at the range.

The soldiers for the field testing – called Network Integration Evaluation (NIE) – are from Fort Bliss, many of whom have been deployed before to Iraq or Afghanistan.

That's important because the Pentagon wants to ensure the technology will work for the soldiers in the kind of conditions they'll face when deployed to an actual war theater, said Paul Meheny of the Program Executive Office Command for Integration, one of three military entities running the NIE. The others are Brigade Modernization and the Army Test and Evaluation Command.

Some of the technology is already being used in the field, but the exercise is looking at ways to make it work better, Meheny said. For example, soldiers are already using command centers with wireless network capabilities, but soldiers say their biggest drawbacks are that the commands are static – locked to being housed in a building or tent, he said.

The NIE is testing a portable version of the command centers in different vehicles used in the field, such as the mine-resistant Caiman vehicle, usually used to transport troops or for medical evacuations. One initial feedback Meheny said he received was a soldier telling him the Caiman doesn't have adequate space for him to work with the system.

"This is why we're doing this," Meheny said during a media day Wednesday, June 29. "We don't want to commit to something if it's not going to work for the soldier."

"One of the most important things the Army is doing for soldiers in battle is what we're doing right here, right now," said Gen. Lew Boone.

In a high mountain valley, not far from San Augustin Pass, is a camp like one that would be found in Iraq or Afghanistan, complete with razor wire, barricades and tents. One tent is air-conditioned for good reason – it's a full command center filled with computer equipment and touch-sensitive flat screens.

Pfc. Nicholas Johnson, who has extensive civilian experience in computer network administration and programming, is working on helping the command centers communicate with the kind of handheld computer and smart phones the soldiers are used to using in their everyday lives.

"Everything in here is off the shelf," said Johnson.

East of the base is a replica Afghan village at Oro Grande as well as soldiers playing the roles of insurgents and a Taliban-style force. There are even soldiers pretending to be enemy combatants in caves near the camp.

What makes WSMR uniquely suited to the exercises is its large land area of 3,200 square miles and proximity to Fort Bliss, said Monte Marlin, range spokeswoman. Also, the terrain is an attraction, said Jay Hayden, chief of WSMR Future Force Division.

"We've had soldiers return from deployment tell us the mountains here are just like what they see in Afghanistan," Hayden said.

The NIE exercises are going to become a recurring activity at WSMR. Future NIE exercises are planned for October and March and will be held at WSMR at least twice each year.

Good

Life is Good

Annual community guide debuts this weekend on newsstands throughout the Mesilla Valley

Why do we choose to live and do business in Las Cruces, New Mexico?

What makes our hometown so special? Who are some of the people who have contributed to our city's growth?

These are just some of the questions our talented writers, designers and photographers have attempted to answer in the third annual Las Cruces community guide, appropriately titled, "Life is Good in Las Cruces."

This handy, 228-page glossy magazine is designed with colorcoded tabs to allow readers to quickly locate the information for which they are looking. Individual section topics include Living in Las Cruces, Pets, Moving In, Giving Back, Culture/Heritage, Worship, Arts/Entertainment, Mesilla, Homes, Sports/Recreation, Education, Business, Agriculture, Government, Health, Senior Living, Resources and Road Trips.

Throughout the full-color magazine are several area maps, along with brief profiles of people who are identified as "local legends." Nearly 200 advertisers have chosen to support this special magazine that will be distributed not only throughout the Mesilla Valley, but also will be available in cities and towns throughout New Mexico.

The idea of a Life is Good magazine for Las Cruces was discussed several years ago soon after Jaki and I purchased the Bulletin in 2003. However, plans to sell and produce the guide were tabled each year, primarily because a couple of guides were already being produced, one by the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau, and the other published by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. We decided to move forward with the first community guide in 2009 after recognizing the distribution of our magazine would be different than the others. The CVB guide was targeted primarily to out-of-town visitors and the chamber guide was intended for business use. Our concept was to provide a comprehensive guide for the people of Las Cruces, in hopes that our fellow Las Crucens would be encouraged to invite friends and family to visit our beautiful city.

Our staff did a terrific job in putting this year's publication together. We normally stay pretty busy just by publishing our 100-page, five-section weekly newspaper. However, when we take on the challenge of a massive project, such as the community guide, each member of our Bulletin team has to work at maximum efficiency to plan, write, edit, proof and paginate the magazine. In order to minimize errors, we post a proof of each page on the walls outside the production and editorial departments. This past week, our walls were saturated with layers of proofs and corrected pages.

The two key people behind the planning and execution of this project were our features and special projects editor Natisha Hales and art director Theresa Montoya Basaldua. Their vision and leadership over the past year inspired the rest of the team in all departments to invest in the extra efforts to ensure the Life is Good community guide is a magazine readers will want to keep and share with friends and family. It takes a full year to make a project like this happen. Each of our Bulletin staff made significant contributions to the magazine's success. In fact, we have already kicked off planning for the 2012 special centennial community guide.

We expect readers will enjoy this year's edition of Life is Good in Las Cruces. If extra copies are needed, many advertisers will have complimentary copies available, or readers can drop by the Bulletin office to purchase one, or more, at a discounted price.

As always, we appreciate reader feedback on projects like the community guide. We also are interested in any new ideas for next year's edition. Thanks for reading. Let us know what you think.

And always remember, life IS good in Las Cruces.

Letter to the Editor

Wasting the planet

Joe Delk, you're heart-wrenching letter (Las Cruces Bulletin Friday, June 14) about the big bad wolf is ridiculous and definitely out of touch with the 21st century. Many ranchers have spent decades systematically eradicating wolves and many other needed predators, and the natural balance in New Mexico as well as other states has been impacted, and will continue with mice, rats, rabbits, etc., growing at an alarming rate.

Then the ranchers will have something new to focus on, won't they? What do you want to bet they will (complain) about that as well.

As for a wolf stalking children walking home from a bus stop, call me skeptical but I'll bet it was a loose dog. The kitten being killed by an alleged wolf and the children saw the animal and were told by their father that it was a wolf, right?

There is a real possibility that it may have been a coyote, and had the kitten been kept inside, as it should have been, it would have never happened.

Finally, wolves do not disrupt and destroy, that is the exclusive domain that can only be attributed to man. We are the species that destroys without real thought.

Piece by piece, we are doing just that as we lay this planet to waste with our willful and ongoing destruction.

'No' to nuclear waste

New Mexicans should be repulsed by Congressman Steve Pearce's proposed legislation to expand the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant (WIPP) near Carlsbad to accept transuranic waste from nuclear plants, making it the radioactive garbage capital of America.

Pearce's flippant approach is irresponsible and a danger to New Mexico and to future generations of New Mexicans.

He is ignoring totally the report that is being developed by the Blue Ribbon Commission on America's Nuclear Future. This congressman has no understanding of nuclear waste or its disposal. He simply says that his bill will create jobs for only 15 additional years. Then he further explains: "a lot of this government waste is just sitting out in cardboard boxes across the country on the surface of the ground. Why don't we put it down in the ground where it is not running anybody any risk?"

His answer is to store it in New Mexico for 100,000 years, which is the shelf life of nuclear junk. Pearce's dalliance with radioactive waste storage is a proposition fraught with potential disaster from the unknown future.

New Mexicans should fear the legislation for safety and health reasons. When Pearce is long dead and buried, the stored nuclear waste that he wants so fondly for New Mexico will be a scourge for future generations - for 100,000 years.

Celebrating the Fourth of July

Founders put their lives on the line for our freedoms

This is a very special day. We have many reasons to celebrate. Considering current events, there is very good reason to be extra patriotic.

We should pay homage to those patriots who pledged to each other their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. Then they signed a document that made them all revolutionaries, guilty of treason, if captured.

Upon winning that revolution, we became the first revolutionary power and now we are the oldest revolutionary government in the world. We also are holder of the oldest written constitution.

It was all very infectious. Gen. Marquis de Lafavette returned home after our war, and under George Washington's influence, made it the pet cause of liberals in France and Europe during the 1790s, introducing democracy in many countries throughout the continent.

Lafayette's friendship with Washington is the subject of "Adopted Son," a book by Dave Clary, of Roswell, detailing the relationship between the two and the wide-ranging influence it had on themselves and their countries. It's a good July Fourth read.

At this point in our history, when we're not feeling very good about some of our European allies, it may be helpful to remember the contributions of Lafayette, von Steuben, de Kalb and others, who helped us win our freedom.

Lafavette's contributions were especially crucial. He's the one who trapped Cornwallis at Yorktown and held him, though grossly outnumbered, until the rest of the American and French forces arrived. And he's the one who won the military and financial support of France

When the United States entered World War I, much of the motivation was gratitude to France for its help so many years earlier. That assistance is now mostly forgotten, but at the time, it was poignantly remembered by Gen. George Pershing's aide, Col. Charles Stanton, when he visited Lafayette's tomb on July 4, 1917, to announce, "Lafavette, we are here."

As we celebrate the document that officially declared the colonies to be in revolution, it is appropriate to remember that it is the only Revolutionary War date that we do celebrate, except for Patriot's Day, commemorating the beginning of the War, on April 19, 1775. It still is celebrated in New England, with one of the big events being the Boston

This would be a good day to reread the Declaration of Independence. It is an absolutely brilliant and inspired argument for overthrowing tyranny, and not just in the colonies' circumstance. It was a universal justification applicable to all people and all times.

Historian Samuel Morrison once said that had the American Revolution produced nothing but the Declaration of Independence, it would have been worthwhile.

Our founders fully understood that in order to espouse these universal, never-ending truths, they had to make it possible for revolution to occur again, even in their own country

Thus came the Bill of Rights. Many of its 10 amendments are under attack today, with questionable searches and seizures, trials that aren't speedy, gun control and public sentiment against the five freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment.

The willingness by many to surrender some of our cherished freedoms in return for perceived security is deeply troubling, but of most concern to someone in my business is the indication that many Americans have second thoughts about the First Amendment.

Polls over the last few years suggest that although Americans still support the ideals of the First Amendment, they have reservations about its reality. A majority think the press has too much freedom, that public demonstrations should not be allowed and that freedom of religion is not meant to apply to

And although 90 percent of Americans believe in freedom of speech, support falls to less than 50 percent when asked about specifics that are constitutionally protected. We are becoming reluctant to offend, willing to silence unpopular opinions and provocative ideas at the cost of freedom.

Where will we go from here?

Letter to the Editor

Just tax the air we breathe

With all the fees, fines and penalties being devised and imposed on us by government and city bureaucratic agencies tied down with incompetence and financial shortfalls in their administrations and the economic failures throughout the nation brought about by ideological political conniving, may I suggest taxing the air we

After all, with the approval of Congress, the tax-paying public is paying for the oil and chemical industries to pollute the air, water and land, and at the same time the middle class is paying to clean it up. So charging the public for breathing it will destroy the middle class more rapidly and that should please our District 2 U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce, Gov. Susanna Martinez and the entire GOP to boot.

All this is being done at the expense of our socialized national and state medical system, public schools and other hard-earned social functions which benefit the most vulnerable, our children, poor pregnant mothers, the poor, the unemployed, hard working men/women and the aged.

Anyone who opposes or speaks out against these injustices is classified as communist, Democrat, liberal, gay, socialist and un-American. U.S. Sen. John McCain's claim that "illegal Mexicans" are burning down Arizona's forests is the most recent outrageous comment of them

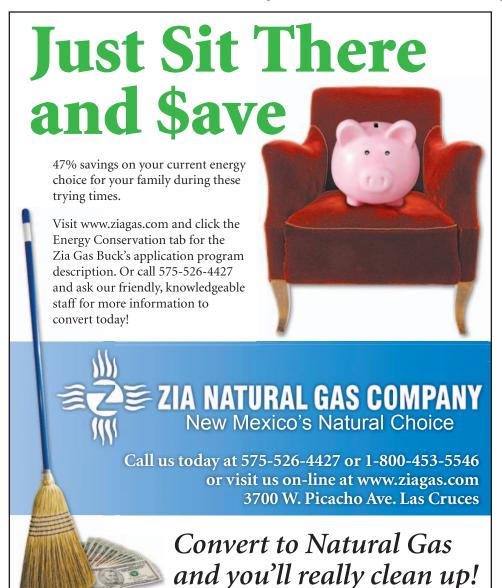

We have now become a nation of nasty lying politicians, cops and suspects, juries and jails.

But what should be of great concern to the taxpaying public is these laws and policies are promoted by the GOP, Republicans and five Supreme Court justices for the benefit of the rich and dysfunctional money-grabbing

Needless to say, the rich and the GOP, the ongoing downsizing and outsourcing of American corporations, do not create jobs. What they create is a nation of cheap wages, low-paid servant workers without the benefit of decent living conditions.

Shouldn't our great nation deserve much better?

Animal naming abuse

Common language on fauna betrays an anthropo-

"Words such as 'pets', 'wildlife' and 'vermin' are derogatory" says the director of the Oxford Center for Animal Ethics.

I imagine there are people in England who take the director seriously. But, as we watch this once-powerful nation disintegrate before our eyes, it may be observed that it has truly gone to the dogs.

Even using similes such as "sly as a fox," "drunk as a skunk" or "perky as a porpoise" are considered animal

Actually, the word "animal" is not approved and the description "differentiated being" is preferred, according to the director.

I would posit the question, "How vacant must a person's brain be to think up this kind of stuff?'

Then I realized, I do the same thing. Maybe I should offer my services to the Oxford Center for the nomenclaturally disadvantaged species, formerly known as the Center for (the A-word) Ethics.

The first thing I would do is change the name of the Oxford Center, in itself shows an oxencentric bias, implying that the faculty is ox-like in their thinking, a definite derogation of the bovine species.

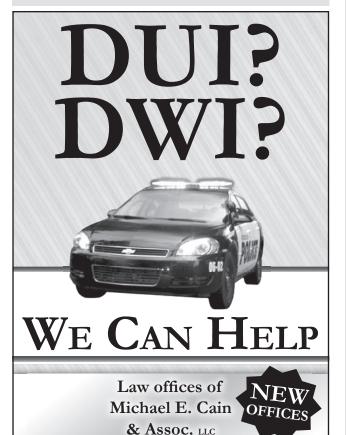

I would eliminate the Chinese calendar, no more year of the rooster." Rewrite history; "King Richard The Free-Living Cardio Ruler.'

Change car names; the Dodge Ethanol Charger. Edit phrases, "It's raining Salt and Pepper!" "Well, I'll be the brother of a simian's mother!'

How dare we humans call ourselves Buffalo Bill, Snoop Dogg, Michael J. Fox or Aardvark Montoya. It's OK to slander humans, manic depressive, reprimand, or commando. But cruel to use abducted, dogmatic, hoarse, medicate, lampoon, irate or supplicant.

It's nice to know there are other people who think outside the box. Civilization needs them to help us define the difference between normal and hallucinatory. The director illustrates my point and, forgive my anthropomorphic bias, is crazy as a loon.

The consent of the governed

Should we consent to a path leading to destruction?

"We, the people, are the rightful masters of both Congress and the courts, not to overthrow the Constitution but to overthrow the men who pervert the Constitution."

Abraham Lincoln

The most important duty we have as Americans is to ensure our Constitution is not perverted since it is the rule book for our government. Alas, the power the government has over citizens has increased over the years outside of the method prescribed in the Constitution.

At all times, each citizen must consent to be governed if we are to live in a free society. Without our consent, there is no legitimate government. We must decide when we will and will not give our consent.

Our country began because of an unjust government. The Declaration of Independence said we will no longer consent to be governed by England. They did not consent to our withholding our consent so there was the Revolutionary War. We won the chance to be free as long as we remain willing to fight for our freedom.

Over the years, we have found we cannot schedule the defense of our nation – we must defend it at the moment of attack. We must act in our defense when we are well and when we are sick.

We must defend our freedoms when we are rested and when we are tired. We cannot put off defending our country, we must do it or lose our liberty and Importantly, our nation is not the land, sea and sky. It is not the buildings, roads and houses. No, it is the hearts and minds of the people who make up this country. Our fight is for those hearts and minds. Each day the battle is on. We either defend our freedoms or we help the agents of evil destroy, first our Constitution, and then our very country.

It would be easier if we could meet on a battlefield, an army of Constitution defenders against those who seek to bind our citizens. Instead, we must meet in battle - often one citizen at a time confronting those in the government. That is our battle line. Our leaders are our leaders until we no longer consent for them to govern us.

Lately, it appears the leaders of both parties are leading us to destruction. They are ignoring the financial implications of spending vast sums of money far beyond the wealth of our country and citizens. And, they are trying to spend even more wealth we do not have.

We have an economy that produces about $2.2 trillion a year in tax revenue while our government is spending about $3.5 trillion. Worse, the promises made by politicians to fully fund Medicare, Social Security and other "entitlements" add up to more than $200 trillion. It would take all of our tax revenue for 100 years to pay for what has been promised to citizens today.

Can our country actually fulfill those romises? No, it is not possible. It is not if we will default on our promises, only

Further, the places where our country has borrowed money in the past are no longer lending, so we are printing bogus dollars to the tune of $2.4 trillion this

Can we continue being governed by people who are leading us to destruction? No. I never consented to spending the money of 100 years for the purpose of them getting more votes.

Often, it is one citizen at a time against the allied forces of the government. That makes for a lonely battle. Sadly, other citizens often are too preoccupied to see that an attack upon one citizen by our government is an attack upon us all. That the lions are preoccupied while they eat other animals does not really protect us from being eaten in

This Fourth of July, we must think past fireworks and a day off with hot dogs and beer. We must consider what our founders would think of this unsustainable financial perversion of debt.

Would they have withheld their consent to be governed? Yes, they would. The fight would have been on. Perhaps it is time to withhold our consent to this

Vision 2040: One Valley, One Vision

By Bill Mattiace and Charlie Scholz

"We want to make Doña Ana County and all of its communities, a truly great place to live, work and play for all of its residents of all ages, backgrounds, cultures and economic levels."

This is the opening statement of our Vision 2040 report, One Valley, One Vision. We began to work on this project almost five years ago when Bill Mattiace, who was the mayor of Las Cruces at the time, said we were going to hire a company from Buffalo, N.Y., to give us a view of what Doña Ana County would look like in 2040. The consultant from Buffalo presented us with the final report in the fall of 2008

The public response to that report was almost entirely negative. Not only was there disagreement with the findings of that consultant, but also there was genuine disappointment the plan they came up with did not begin to really address the needs and concerns of the people who were surveyed. That report was more like a snapshot of our present situation rather than a look into our future.

So two years ago, we sat down and started it again. Building on the information that the consultants had gathered, a group of about 45 individuals, representing various interest groups and governmental organizations in our county, met monthly to gather information and exchange views on what they thought Doña Ana County would look like 30 years

This May, we had the final meeting of the Steering Committee of the 2040 Commission. We read the draft copies of the final report and we gave the staff our final comments.

This new report, One Valley, One Vision, incorporates the information and opinions that were gathered by the consultants from Buffalo. But it goes beyond that. What we have come up with is a broad and deep look at the strengths and weaknesses, the goals and the possibilities for Doña Ana County. Our work has resulted in a well thought-out projection of what our area can become economically and physically while still maintaining the natural beauty and the special culture that has drawn so many people to our land.

All planning is an ongoing process. As our needs change, we must adapt or adjust our planning efforts to reflect those changes. One Valley, One Vision is a living document. It does not mandate a specific course of action. Rather it points out directions in which we might go.

For example, using the 2010 Census data, the 2040 Commission has developed growth projections for various areas within the county for the next 30 years. This doesn't mean growth cannot occur in other places. It merely means what we are projecting are the most likely places for that growth

Similarly, our report suggests the agencies and governmental groups, who are responsible for the various parts of our land and those who are in charge of particular operations in the county, should work together with one another. We didn't order them to do that. We just recognized that intergovernmental and inter-agency cooperation, in conjunction with the stakeholders affected by the decisions and actions of those bodies, is necessary to make a better future for all of us.

Having this shared vision can mean stronger economic growth, recognition of the value of our unique environment and preservation of the rich historical and cultural heritage that is Doña Ana County.

We're proud to have been a part of the process that has created One Valley, One Vision. We hope you read the document and work with your community to make it come true.

Travel the New Mexico Space Trail

Locations across the state are highlighted in promotional map

By Michael Shinabery

One of the biggest fireworks displays in the universe, the creation of the Crab Nebula, was recorded on July 4, 1054, according to the website seds.org/messier. "Chinese astronomers noted a 'guest star' in the constellation Taurus ... about (four) times brighter than Venus, which was visible in daylight for 23 days. The Chinese record, translated, stated that more than a year passed before the light "gradually became invisible."

The Crab Nebula, located approximately 6,300 light years away, is 10 light years across and is expanding," reports astro.

Anasazi, Navajo and Zuni artists, and those at Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, also depicted the explosion on petroglyphs, pottery and in sand paintings. Such archaeoastronomical artifacts are recognized by the New Mexico Space Trail, which "ties the cultural and historical legacy of the Native Americans and Spanish explorers to the future of space exploration," said NM Museum of Space History Marketing Director Cathy Harper. More than 50 locations, many which the public can visit, are chronologically listed.

During the 2010 New Mexico Legislature, Rep. Dennis Kintigh introduced a memorial designating the trail, which NMMSH staff had been compiling for more than a decade.

'I was driving back from a meeting in Las Cruces and

I passed by the historical marker that documented the site of the murders of Albert Jennings Fountain and his son Henry in 1896," Curator George House said. "I thought, well, there are no spacerelated historical markers anywhere in the state. Let's combine the two and why not have a space trail?'

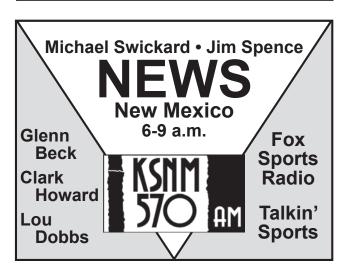

House envisioned roadside markers denoting the state's space legacy and promoting tourism.

"Mom and pop and the kids can drive through the state, make a summer vacation of it, and hit each site," he said.

But budget constraints precluded the state erecting new roadside markers. At the time, House was researching for a new Space In New Mexico museum exhibit. He had first delved into the subject in 1990 for a paper he presented at the joint Arizona/New Mexico Historical Society meeting in Santa Fe. There, he talked about White Sands Proving Ground, where Operation Paperclip German scientists reconstructed the World War II V-2 rocket and Atlas missile silos near Roswell and Artesia that held nuclear missiles.

While House developed the first space trail map, Harper expanded them. She also created a two-and-one-half minute weekly feature that airs on radio stations in New Mexico, Colorado, Nevada and California. The first programs delved into the prehistoric records, which included the Crab Nebula.

'By telling their stories, we discover the cultural importance that space has played," Harper said.

One locality commemorates Robert Goddard's experimentation into liquid fuel rocketry outside of Roswell. In the fall of 1929, Goddard wrote in his diary (published in "The Papers of Robert H. Goddard"), of meeting Charles Lindbergh. Goddard wrote that Lucky Lindy wanted to learn to what extent rockets could be employed on airplanes so that they could assist in taking off, in an emergency landing and in airplanes for warfare. Lindbergh convinced the affluent Guggenheim family to endow Goddard with $50,000 for two years' work, and another $50,000 promised, according to "The Space Program Quiz & Fact Book." He left Massachusetts, and his physics professorship, for New Mexico.

The Space Trail also recognizes German expatriate Wernher von Braun's work at White Sands. He immigrated under Operation Paperclip and developed the V-2, which House called "the grandfather of the Saturn V that took Americans to the

In Alamogordo, scientists studied visual orientation in space – in a swimming pool – at the New Mexico School for the Blind and Visually Impaired.

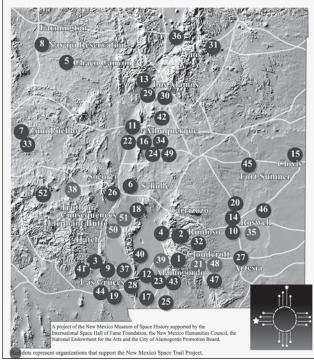

The problem of zero gravity. When you're flying an airplane you can easily get disoriented. Is a pilot going to get disoriented, confused, if he's in zero or sub gravity?" said Wayne Mattson, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and pilot who worked on classified missile programs. In 1957, scientists submerged blindfolded men on a seat that swiveled in many directions. They could tilt him in all different directions and it didn't affect him, as long as he was blindfolded. They found he did not know which way was up.

The Space Trail includes rugged sites where Apollo astronauts trained for lunar geology; the Sacramento Mountains where astronomer Alan Hale discovered Comet Hale-Bopp, and the National Solar Observatory studies the sun; and Holloman Air Force Base, where John Stapp endured high-speed sled rides to develop pilot safety systems, and where Joe Kit-tinger jumped out of a balloon gondola to study high-altitude bailouts.

"A volunteer at our museum, Mike Smith, told us tales of star gazing and joke telling in Clyde Tombaugh's backyard," Harper said. "Patti Brady, the daughter of a White Sands Missile Range rancher, explained how her parents were affected features. For example, the original proposed flood plain for sections along the Rio Grande from Radium Springs to Las Cruces would have extended to the east side of Valley Drive along many sections.

Using federal stimulus money, USIBWC has been making improvements to the levee road system along the Rio Grande. USIBWC intends to ensure the levee improvements results in FEMA certification, said Commissioner Edward Drusina.

The $75 million levee reconstruction money – mostly from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act – has allowed USIBWC to make improvements to the levees that would have taken the commission at least 20 years to complete, Drusina said. Besides improving some drainage and reinforcing the levee berms, the work primarily raises the height of the levee roads.

At the citizen's forum, some complained of slow work in the section near Sunland Park and others reported contractors improperly using Rio Grande water. Carlos Peña, principal engineer for USIB-WC, said the work has had to use some river water, but was done with approval of Elephant Butte Irrigation District. Also, some post-treated water has been used from the Las Cruces wastewater treatment plant, he said, which some may have mistaken as being river water.

USIBWC civil engineer Andrea Glover said the flood plain sections of the levees will be re-seeded and brought back to their previous conditions. She said the rehabilitation work will be done without changing the elevation, which would alter the flood plain standards the levee work is meant to resolve.

Orwat said the new FEMA flood standard is what is commonly referred to as a 100-year flood, but it is essentially a 1 percent chance a flood event would happen in any given year.

Although the levee work will likely result in certification, FEMA will still consider homes near the levees on flood maps as being at moderate risk, meaning flood insurance is not required but recommended because levees can fail, Orwat said.

He noted that the Talavera area east of Las Cruces was not eligible for the resolution process for the FEMA flood plain maps.

Impact fees

years," Miyagishima said.

For homes, city staff is proposing a flat-fee structure, regardless of the size of the home. The roads fee would be $1,056, drainage $438 and public safety $639, adding $2,133 to the total cost of a new home.

For businesses, the rates would be based on different factors.

The fees for hotels would be based on the number of rooms. The fee per room would be $634 for roads, $263 for drainage and $313 for public safety.

All other business fees are multiplied against a factor of 1,000 square feet of space.

For commercial retail and office space, the fees are $1,542 for roads, $639 for drainage and $735 for public safety. For institutions, the fees are $665 for roads, $276 for drainage and $204 for public safety. For industrial buildings, the fees are $739 for roads, $307 for drainage and $185 for public safety. For warehouses, the fees are $380 for roads, $158 for drainage and $83 for public safety. For mini-warehouses, the fees are $264 for roads, $110 for drainage and $26 for public safety.

City Councillor Dolores Connor said the city's experience with park impact fees not resulting in abundant funds for new parks should serve as a lesson that these kinds of fees don't generate the kind of money expected.

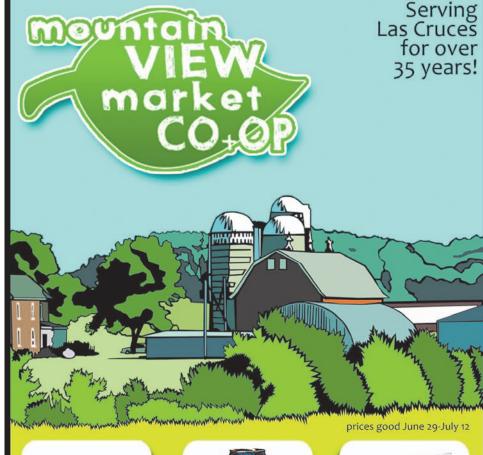

"Impact fees are not the end-all to everything people need in their communities," Connor said.

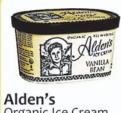

Judd Singer, who works in the development community, said the proposed fees will only serve to make homes less affordable to lower-income families. When added to existing impact fees, the added cost is about $5,000 to each home, he said.

"The hurt will be felt the most by those who can afford them the least," Singer said.

Councillor Olga Pedroza said she didn't believe the proposed fees would put a damper on new construction.

Councillor Nathan Small said public safety for citizens goes beyond police and fire protection. They also need safe roads and drainage to protect them from flooding, he said.

McGrath: Sports are academic

Jim Hilley Bulletin in the Zone

For many Las Crucens, early July means more than celebrating Independence Day. It means it's time for the It's Burger Time Sandra B. McGrath High School All-Activities Golf Tournament.

And while the name of the annual event is as big as a bite out of a Big Time Burger with hot chile, the tournament has contributed mightily to the success of local high school football in the past 18 years.

But there are those who question the tournament's focus on athletics. Tournament president Kevin McGrath said he thinks those critics are missing a fundamental aspect of the academicsversus-athletics debate.

"Some people question us as far as academics go," McGrath said. "I'd like to think from our standpoint, if it wasn't for the tools that we're giving these kids to be successful on the field, they wouldn't be successful on the classroom.

"In athletics you have to succeed in the classroom in order to participate. To me that's a driving force behind a lot of the kids that play these sports.

"If it wasn't for that grade point average that is required for them to stay eligible, they wouldn't be successful in the classroom."

With state government facing a huge budget crunch, a lot of the pain has been shifted to the schools. The Las Cruces Public Schools system is expecting to make do with at least $11 million less in funding this year than last year.

Cuts to the school districts don't sit well with McGrath.

"When I hear people wanting to cut funds on arts or athletics, it kind of upsets me," he said. "There are a lot of people who wouldn't be successful except for that."

To McGrath, it all goes hand-in-hand. "We are giving the students an opportunity to be successful," he said. "We're just giving them the tools they need."

And for McGrath, a lot of that involves

"I compliment every coach we have in the district," he said. "The fact that they're in there keeping those kids successful in the classroom means that they are not out there on the streets.

"I bet you a large portion of those kids would be on the street if it wasn't for baseball, softball, soccer, swimming, track, band – whatever the case may be.

"I think we have a direct impact on academics even though it's the athletic side."

I'm with McGrath on this one, and apparently, so are the people of Las Cruces who make the tournament a success.

With dropout rates being sky high, anything that keeps kids in school seems like a hole-in-one.

Add the 'ranch' sauce

Burger Time tournament president Kevin . McGrath said he feels humbled by the support the people of Las Cruces have given to his annual golf tournament. which will be at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course for the first time this year after 17 years at Las Cruces Country Club.

New venue for Burger Time tournament brings a different flavor to Las Cruces' favorite golf outing

By Jim HilleyLas Cruces Bulletin

The 18th annual It's Burger Time Sandra B. McGrath High School All Activities Golf Tournament will be July 7-9 at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course, 1274 Golf Club Road.

It will be the first time the tournament has not been at the Las Cruces Country Club, but tournament president Kevin McGrath doesn't see any abatement in the excitement the tournament brings to Las Cruces each July.

"We're looking forward to being up there," McGrath said on Tuesday, June 18. "The country club was like your home, you grow up there and they get you to dance and everything like that. It's just unfortunate that things didn't work out."

The original plan was for the tournament to move to the new Las Cruces Country Club at Sierra Norte on Jornada Road, but delays in getting the new course ready made the move to Sonoma Ranch necessary.

"Right now, Sonoma Ranch is doing a "Right now, Sonoma Ranch is doing a great job for us and rolling out the red carpet," McGrath said. "We appreciate that, and I know a lot of our people are looking forward to playing up here this year."

The tournament raises funds for academic, athletic and extra-curricular activities at Las Cruces public high schools.

McGrath started the tournament in 1993 to help the three high schools in Las Cruces – Las Cruces, Mayfield and Oñate – field competitive teams in football and compete on a statewide level. Since then, the tournament has ballooned into a major fundraising event in the City of the Crosses, and Las Cruces football teams have competed in 15 state championship games and won the championship 12 times.

McGrath looks back on the early days of he tournament with a sense of disbelief.

"That first year, when we counted and we saw $1,500, or whatever, we said, 'God that's great, super.' And then when hit $269,000 last year, it's just humbling," he said.

Bennett, a member of the El Paso Athletic Hall of Fame, has been chosen as the new coach for the Knights. Her hiring will become official next week when she signs her contract.

Bennett said she's not sure how many coaching victories she has compiled.

"I stopped counting a long time ago," she said with a laugh.

"Now, I'm more concerned about who we beat, not how many wins
I have."

Bennett, who has 33 years experience as a head coach, replaces Alice Borden who came to Oñate with no head coaching experience and spent only one season at the school before resigning in May.

Bennett had several coaching stops in El Paso, but spent most of her time (17 years) as the head coach at Montwood. She retired in Texas and spent the past two seasons as head coach at Santa Teresa High School.

She led Santa Teresa to a district championship last fall and a top eight finish at the state tournament. Her district championship there was the 13th of her coaching career.

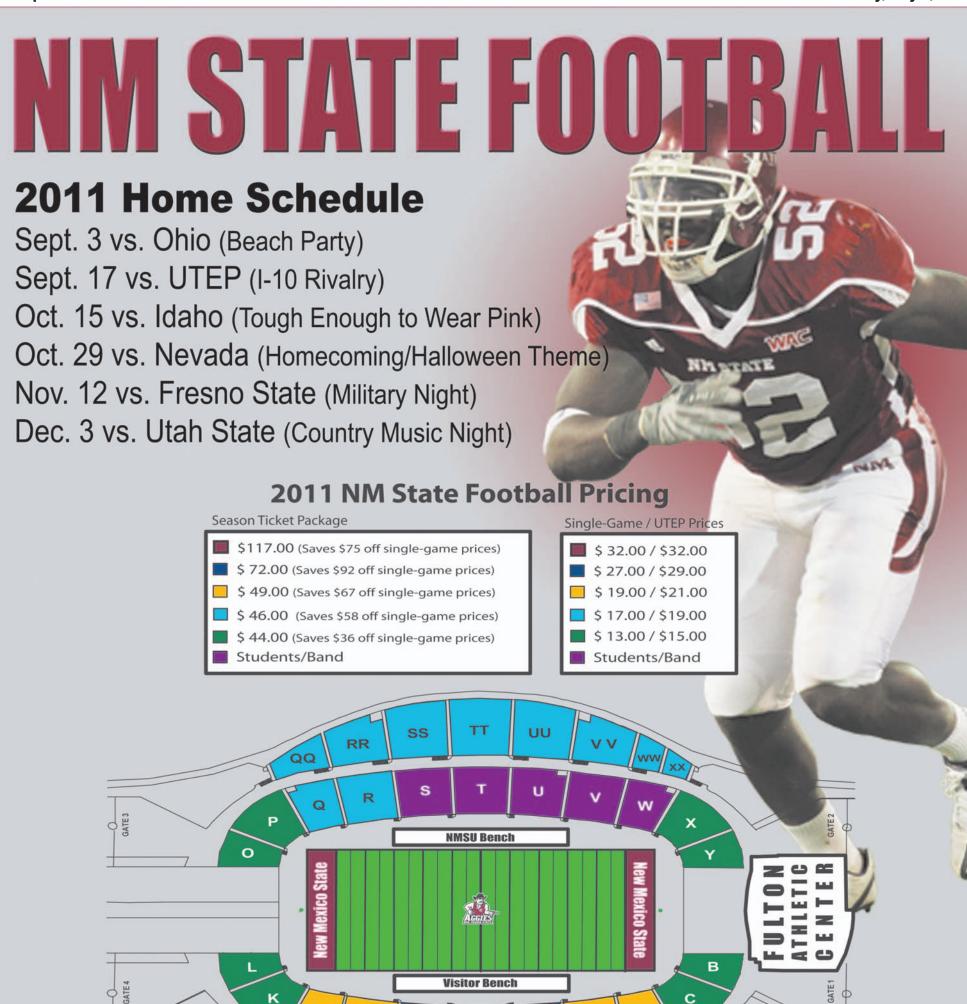

"Hopefully, they can carry that on," she said. "Tradition is something you have to carry on from year to year and hopefully we helped give them the start they need."

Bennett was hired at Santa Teresa by Principal Tom Phelps, who is now the principal at Oñate. She also has known OHS Athletics

Governor, NMSU president are among heavy hitters at annual football camp

By Jimmy CurrierLas Cruces Bulletin

It's never too early to start preparing for a test and with football season only two months away, more than 50 women took advantage of New Mexico State University head football coach DeWayne Walker's expertise Thursday, June 23.

The lecture didn't take place in a stuffy lecture hall, but in the NMSU Hall of Fame Building and football practice field.

The women learned all about football from the equipment the Aggies wear to defensive alignments and pass protection. Aggie coaches and players also ran the women during drills similar to the ones the players go through, such as agility, shotgun snaps, set blocking, box drills, back pedaling and punt returns.

NMSU President Barbara Couture attempted to catch a few passes in the drills, but Aggie alumnus Davon House, who was drafted by the Green Bay Packers, wouldn't cut her any slack, most guys I know.

The good-natured fun of that exchange was evident throughout the entire clinic.

"We're all about the community, ever since I've been here," said Walker, who is entering his third season at the helm of the Aggie football team. "I made an effort to not only get out and share from a football standpoint, but I think it's good to get women together. A lot of colleges around the country have

"He's done a great job and he's really connecting with the community," she said. "Everywhere I go, I hear what a great guy he is. He's getting a lot of respect out of his players and he's really connecting with the community. We expect the Aggies to do great things and this is a great way for the community to connect with the football players."

Offensive line coach and camp director Jason Lenzmeier said the objective was to get the community out and teach the game of football.

"Guys don't understand the game before they're taught," he said. "So, you got to come and learn, and I think anybody can learn football. Some of these ladies know more about football than most guys I know. A lot of ladies who come really know the game."

Louie Sandoval, equipment manager for the Aggies, gave a presentation on how much the uniforms cost and allowed the women to try on some of the equipment. He also pointed out that gloves have to be gray because teams were wearing white or colored gloves, making it more difficult for the referees to determine holding.

costs roughly $660 to provide a jersey, pants, shoes, shoulder pads and a helmet runs for each player.

Walker gave a slideshow presentation introducing the coaches and players, along with a few humorous stories.

Before heading to the Doña Ana County Republican Lincoln-Reagan Dinner, Gov. Susana Martinez and her husband Chuck Franco stopped by to lend support to the clinic.

"It's a really cool program and it's good to get women involved and understand the game," Martinez said. "I love the Tough Enough to Wear Pink program. It's an outstanding program."

Lynn Carroll, whose son Kyle Owen will be a freshman at Mayfield, was one of the more than 50 women learning more about football.

"I'm learning more about football to help him out," she said. "I'm going to watch his practices, and I hope this will help."

Lori Paulson, an Aggie alum, said she will attend more games now that her nephew, Mayfield graduate Brandon Betancourt, will be playing for the Aggies.

"I want to get more involved with the program," she said. "I'm more excited now to watch the Aggies because I know someone."

Hustling into the show

Detweiller having all-star year in Pecos League

By Jimmy Currier

Steve Detweiller is in Las Cruces not to take in the breathtaking views of the Organ Mountains, bask in the sun or eat the green chile, but to make it to the next level of professional baseball.

So far, he's on track, leading the Pecos League in RBI and doubles with 40 and 12, respectively, while ranking in the top 10 in batting average, with a .371 clip. He's had 15 multi-hit games and is a major reason why the Las Cruces Vaqueros have won 22 of their 35 ball games and are in second place, only two games behind the White Sands Pupfish.

"He's a hustler, who is willing to stretch a single into a double," Vaqueros coach Miguel Gomez said. "He works hard and his goal is to move up and that's what he's working hard for."

While anyone can look at Detweiller's statistics and see he's one of the better hitters in the Pecos League, judging his fielding ability takes a keener eye.

"His arm is very good," Gomez said. "He has a real strong arm from right field and he's pretty quick for being a big guy."

Detweiller went 1-for-4 in the Vaqueros' 12-inning 7-6 win on Friday, June 24, over the visiting Carlsbad Bats. He showed discipline at the plate, drawing two walks and scored a run in the second inning. Detweiller also showed off his glove and arm in the win.

"I want to play affiliated ball," Detweiller said. "I'm not here for the money or the fame. We're all out here to get to the next level and to play better ball."

But with thousands of talented ball players all over the globe competing for a major league contract, Detweiller knows there's work to do,

"I have to keep playing my game and keep on hustling," he said. "One thing I pride myself on is whenever somebody makes a little mistake, I capitalize on it quickly."

Detweiller said he loves wearing the Vaqueros uniform

"It's stress free. Everybody is here for the same reason," he said. "Everybody has the same goals. Miguel is a great coach and he helps with the mental game. He's there for you if you need to talk to him. It's a nice environment and it's awesome just to feel free and not worry about much."

Detweiller described Las Crucens as awesome.

"When you say you're from the Vaqueros, people want to talk to you and learn more," he said. "It's good to see the interest in the Vaqueros and people wanting to learn more about them."

Detweiller is no stranger to Las Cruces. He came here twice to Presley Askew Field to play against the New Mexico State Aggies while an outfielder with Fresno State. He was a star player for the Bulldogs, helping them win their first national championship in any sport. In

Bobcats coming to town

New Mexico State's first football foe for 2011 season looks to be a good match up

Jack Nixon Jack's Corner

As you consider your options for the type of charcoal you spark up for the Fourth of July barbecue, keep this in mind: In 60 days, the Aggies will be kicking off the new football season versus the Ohio Bobcats. It is that close.

The Bobcats have a couple of faces familiar to Aggie faithful on the coaching staff. Gerry Gdowski and Kevin Lightner are the quarterbacks coach and offensive line coach on Frank Solich's Nebraska alumni staff. Both Gdowski and Lightner coached here in the Mesilla Valley through the late 1990s and seem to have settled in there in Athens, Ohio.

Ohio has most of its returning starters on the offensive side of the ball. They went to the R+L Carriers New Orleans Bowl last year and will host New Mexico State in 2012.

The Aggies will not be without some inside intelligence on Ohio with the addition of offensive coordinator Doug Martin from Kent State. The Golden Flash beat Ohio last year 28-6, so Martin is familiar with the Solich approach. The offensive scheme that beat the Bobcats in the season finale of 2010 will be the same at Aggie Memorial when the curtain goes up in two months, but in fairness, the Bobcats will be familiar with it as well.

Ohio is a good opponent for the Aggies. They are a mid-major that has a similar budget and come from circumstances not unlike what the Aggies experience.

Football season tickets are on sale now and you will soon be seeing more information on the ticket packages and how their cost compares to other entertainment choices in the Mesilla Valley. The six-game home schedule has five teams that are replacing their quarterbacks for 2011, which should not be discounted.

Don't spend too much time swatting flies this fourth, kickoff is just around the Hitting the books hard: Twenty-six NM State athletes have been named to the Academic All-WAC team for the winter semester. The honorees are from the women's basketball team, track and field and swimming and diving teams. Rick Pratt's swimmers again were the "showoffs" of the group. Fifteen of the swimmers and divers earned the honors; Pratt's team continuously ranks high nationally for overall GPA for Division I programs.

Hitting the ball hard: Hoku Nohara led the NCAA in home runs and slugging percentage. She was the only player chosen first team that was not from a BCS school. Nohara is now hitting home runs in the humid Akron, Ohio, climate as a member of the pro Akron Racers softball team.

Whether it's health issues or academic issues or athletic issues, they focus on the kids," he said. "The community always goes out of its way to focus on the kids, and I think that's important. It's a tribute to Las Cruces.'

The Burger Time tournament has become one of the most successful ventures of its kind. The tournament's football endowment was fully funded in 2007, and currently raises $15,000 each year in interest, which is used to match funds raised by each school's football for activities and we've probably grossed over $1 million. We're sitting at around $500,000 in the endowment for the all-activities side of the tournament," McGrath said.

The fundraising focus was expanded from football to all high school activities in 2007.

"We'll just keep putting money in. A portion of our money goes to football still, even though it's 'all activities,' we don't want to forget about football. A portion of the money they raise gets put in their endowment."

The tournament is a four-person scramble

"There are five flights - Thursday afternoon, Friday morning, Friday afternoon, Saturday morning and Saturday afternoon," McGrath said. "Cost is $125 per person and we have corporate rates anywhere from $500 up to $10,000 depending on who wants to spend

NMSU roper prevails at national finals

The New Mexico State University rodeo team's Johnny Salvo won his second tie-down roping championship during the College National Finals Rodeo June 12-18 in Casper,

"Salvo, the 2008 tie-down winner, had time to make a businessman's run after the three ropers just behind him, entering the short go, either took a no-time or broke the barrier," according to a College National Finals Rodeo news release. "Salvo's 9.0-second run gave him a four-run total of 37 seconds, 2 seconds ahead of the next cowboy."

Salvo had runs of 10.3, 7.8, 9.9 and 9.0 for an aggregate score of 37.0 seconds.

game 3 of the 2008 College World Series, Detweiller hit two home runs and made the final catch against the Georgia Bulldogs.

"It's still unbelievable and dream to me," he said. "I thought it would never happen and thinking back I can barely remember the game. The only thing I remember is catching the last out and running it in. I don't remember swinging the bat. That whole two weeks was the most fun I had in a long, long time and I doubt I ever will have that much fun again."

As is customary, Detweiller and his fellow Bulldogs met President George W. Bush in the White House after winning the national championship.

That was insane," he said. "The whole team being in the White House. We're a fun group of guys and we're having a good time and soon as the president comes in, I've never seen older teenagers and young adults get so quiet and stuttered and not sure what to say. It was hilarious and George Bush is a funny guy."

Because most games for the Vaqueros start at 7:05 p.m., Detweiller doesn't get to bed until late. He said he wakes up around 12:30 p.m. and goes on the Internet until 3 p.m., looking up baseball statistics, recent events and checking up on his Fresno State Bulldogs. Afterwards, he gets ready for the game and after the game he said he usually goes home and sleeps.

"It's not easy to go out and have fun every night when you play every day," he said. "You dedicate yourself to it if you want to be successful.

Before coming to the field, Detweiller said he makes sure his socks are on the right way and that everything is in place.

"I make sure left is on left, right is on right and I have on the right sliders and the right shorts," he said. "I worry about my socks and I worry about everything. No spikes on with batting practice and spikes on for the field."

After batting practice, Detweiller and teammate Tress Diaz usually have dinner at Diaz' mother Alicia "Nana" Diaz's house, who is also Detweiller's host family. Before the game, it's off to a convenience store for two energy drinks.

"I'm very superstitious," he said. "I have the same routine." During the week, you can find Detweiller at Quizno's loading up on their $5 specials. He also likes to go to The Game Sports Bar & Grill, especially on Saturday when the restaurant hosts the entire team.

"We look forward to it," he said. "The food is so good there and it's a fun and good atmosphere.'

When he goes home to California, he likes to play Wiffle ball and fish. During the season, he can't play Wiffle ball because it throws off his timing.

Catch Detweiller and his teammates this weekend as the Vaqueros host Alpine Friday, July 1, and Saturday, July 2, at Apodaca Park. Both games start at 7:05 p.m.

Protect yourself from the heat

With the sun blistering and the desert a furnace, take doc's advice

Charlie Blanchard Golf Doctor

The winds have finally subsided, but the summer heat is upon us. Nighttime temperatures in the 70s are alright for sleeping, but the steady 100-plus daytime heat is wilting.

Playing golf in the dazzling sun as hot as we get can certainly present real health dangers. High summer heat in our region means two main concerns for folks who get their recreation outdoors: sun damage and heat illness.

Let's talk first about sun dangers. If you are new to Las Cruces and want to understand how hot the mid-day sun can be, crack an egg on any asphalt parking lot and watch it fry.

Solar radiation for golfers can cause sunburn and sun poisoning. It's sometimes a rude awakening to folks from up north. The burn is from ultraviolet radiation, and the symptoms might not show up until a few hours later, when you're out of the sun.

Exposed skin usually turns a deep red with painful burning and blistering. For folks who are new to the desert Southwest, it only takes a half hour (or even 15 minutes) of being out in the hot sun to get sunburned.

You don't have to turn lobster red to suffer from sun poisoning. Over-exposure to UV rays can result in pain and tingling, swelling of the skin, headache, dizziness, fever and chills, nausea and a painful rash.

One form of sun poisoning is a condition called "polymorphous light eruption" or PMLE. PMLE can occur in people who are exposed to intense sunlight they are not used to it. Most susceptible are people living in northern climates, where the sun isn't quite so hot, who are then exposed to extreme solar intensity. Symptoms of PMLE include skin rash, small bumps all over the body and often

The powerful radiation from the direct sun isn't the only way you can suffer from summer temperatures. Golfers and outdoor enthusiasts should be aware of the potential dangers of heat-related illness. Prolonged or intense exposure to extremely hot temperatures can lead to heat exhaustion, heat cramps and potentially

When the humidity is up, the problems can be even worse. Heat illness occurs when the body loses large amounts of absorbed water and salt through excessive sweating, especially from vigorous activity and exercise. In our typically low humidity, sweat evaporates very quickly, giving a person the false sense that he hasn't lost much water.

The secret is hydrating automatically, even before you feel thirsty. Those who are at the most risk for heat-illness are people who drink a lot of alcohol, people who have heart problems, people who are obese, people who are on a lot of medications, along with the elderly and

Heatstroke

Heatstroke, which is the most serious of the heat-related conditions, occurs when the body suffers from long, extreme exposure to heat and loses the ability to cool itself.

I am personally acquainted with the effects of heatstroke during my career of marathon running and Ironman triathlons. Extreme distance athletes who are well-trained can summon the will to overcome bodily pain (that should be a warning) and push on regardless, which sometimes leads to disaster. In prolonged extreme heat, the part of the brain that normally regulates movements and body temperature malfunctions and decreases the body's ability to sweat and cool itself. That's when the trouble begins.

Seek medical care

If you suspect sun poisoning, you should immediately get out of the sun. As soon as possible, take a cool (not cold) shower and/or apply cool compresses. Aloe gel is a recommended treatment for sunburned areas, and if pain is substantial, over-the-counter pain relievers (such as ibuprofen) are suitable.

Stay out of the sun until the condition resolves, and completely cover sunburned areas when going outside.

You should seek immediate medical care in cases where the sunburn forms major blisters or covers a large area and is very painful. Also, if you have facial swelling, high fever and chills, severe headache, confusion or faintness you should go to the doctor or ER.

When recognized in the early stages, most heat-related illnesses, such as mild heat exhaustion, can be treated at home. The first thing is stop the vigorous activity, get out of the heat

Get into a cooler environment, such as shade or an air-conditioned space, and elevate your feet while removing as much clothing as practical. Immediately drink water or rehydration drinks to replace fluids.

For a person with greater heat illness symptoms, WebMD urges you to help the person remove as much clothing as possible to expose affected skin surface to cooler air, out of the sun and heat. Help cool the person's entire body by sponging or spraying cool water and fanning the air around them to lower the body temperature. Ice packs should be applied on the groin, neck and armpits where large blood vessels lie close to the skin surface. Do not immerse the person in an ice bath. If the symptoms persist beyond the simple home treatments go to the ER or call 911.

Prevention is key, whether we are talking sunburn, poisoning, heat stroke, heat exhaustion or relatively minor summer health

For golfers, it's important to wear looser, breathable clothing. Some of the new ventilated fabrics for shirts and shorts are much better in this regard compared to the old sticky cotton stuff. Broad-rim hats will keep the sun from doing further damage to ears, face and neck because of the full shading.

The most important prevention of all is to apply sunscreen generously and often. WebMD recommends applying sunscreen 15 to 30 minutes before going outside, and reapplying every two hours; sunscreen washes off with sweat and none are really waterproof. Opt for a sunscreen with an SPF of 30 or higher, and make sure it's labeled "broad spectrum," which means it blocks both UVA and UVB sunlight.

When you apply it, cover your face, ears, nose, neck, arms, back of hands and legs. Don't skimp or do a hap-hazzard job – you'll pay the price later.

Stay hydrated

The only sure way to beat the heat is to hydrate, hydrate, hydrate. And not with beer. Drink water, while replacing electrolytes with legitimate sports drinks. Drink at least a quart

Every golf course has coolers at the tee areas, course ambassadors with coolers, or fountains. To be assured of cool, plentiful water - at the moment you want it - bring along a gallon insulated water jug.

Excess alcohol consumption on the golf course on really hot days will only make heat prostration more probable. Remember, don't drink and drive – don't even putt.

• There were two suspicious fires at the offices of the Las Cruces Bulletin on June 23 and June 27. Investigators determined the second fire was arson, resulting from gasoline being poured down a rooftop air conditioner. The Bulletin was not published as scheduled on June 25. Damage to the building and its contents was estimated at $40,000. Publisher

Steve Klinger said that suspicion was centered on disgruntled readers who did not like seeing their names printed in connection with criminal offenses.

- Barney Rawson of Las Cruces was taking part in the Interstate Batteries Great American Race in his 1931 Chrysler Roadster. Rawson would be accompanied by his nephew Steve, as chief mechanic. A field of 100 was competing in the 3,500-mile, 11-event race from Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., to New York City for the Statue of Liberty's Centennial Celebration. The winner of the timed event would take home $100,000. The Rawson entry was sponsored by Sunwest Bank, Paul Curry Homes, Auto Electric Service, McGonigle's Allstate Insurance and Glenn Cutter Jewelers.
- Organizers were expecting 50 hot air balloons for the fifth annual Whole Enchilada Balloon Rally over the Labor Day weekend. Serving on the rally committee were Patty Silver, chairman; Pat Lamb, immediate past chairman; Jim and Jeanne Botsford, and Mike Gillihan sites co-chairmen; Mary Lou Connell, registration chairman; Tom Szydlowski, FAA liaison chairman; Bob McNiel, logistics chairman and Jack Corder, who would return as balloonmeister.

Former New Mexico State University defensive back Davon House was honored by the NMSU Board of Regents Thursday, June 23, at the board's annual summer meeting. House was presented a proclamation for his accomplishments as a student-athlete. House, a native of Palmdale, Calif., was drafted by the Green Bay Packers in the fourth round as the 131st pick overall of the 2011 NFL Draft, becoming the first Aggie football player to be drafted since 2003. House left NMSU as a two-time first team All-WAC selection and ended his career with the Aggies ranked sixth all-time in interceptions for a career with 11 and first in interception return yardage with 319. He returned three interceptions for a touchdown in his career, while tallying 198 tackles, 46 pass break-ups and three fumble recoveries. In 2010, House led the team with two interceptions, 57 tackles and 10 pass break-ups. Pictured with House are NMSU Athletic Director McKinley Boston, Board of Regents Secretary/Treasurer Christopher Dulany, NMSU Provost Wendy K. Wilkins, Regent Mike Cheney, NMSU President Barbara Couture, Head Coach DeWayne Walker, Regent Vice Chair Ike Pino and Regent Chair Laura Conniff.

Bank robbery

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest of the man who committed a robbery in the drive-through lane of a local bank a year ago.

Shortly before 10 a.m. Tuesday, June 22, 2010, police were called to the Bank of the Rio Grande at 421 N. Water St. after a man was reported to have stolen a cash withdrawal from a customer who was conducting business in the drive-through lane.

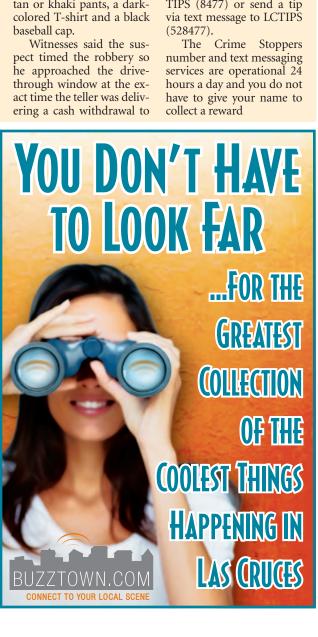

The suspect was said to be a Hispanic man, possibly in his early 20s, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, with facial stubble and possibly a goatee. He was wearing tan or khaki pants, a dark-colored T-shirt and a black baseball cap.

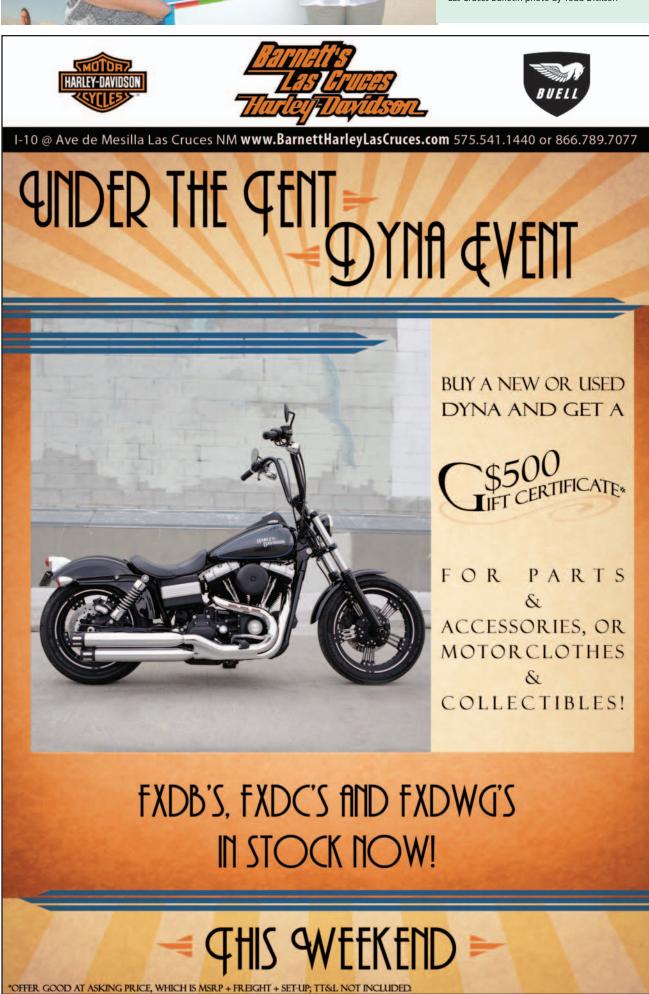

the customer. The suspect was last seen running from the drive-through lanes at the bank and heading west toward a residential area.

Detectives have reason to believe that more than one person may have been involved. The suspect or suspects may have made large cash purchases in the days and weeks following the robbery.

If you have any information on the robbery, or the identity of the suspects, you are asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to LCTIPS (528477)

Pearce airs views at town hall

Congressman speaks about deficit, national sales tax

By Jimmy Currier

A theater within the Cineport 10 was nearly full Saturday morning, June 25, but they weren't there to see "Cars 2" or "Bad Teacher." They came to hear U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce, R-NM, discuss the federal deficit and how to address it, and to ask him questions on a variety of topics.

After the meeting, the congressman said it's important to have a connection between elected officials and the people. Pearce said the greatest threat from the tragic town hall meeting in Arizona, where U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords was shot and six people died, was that people would quit showing up to meetings.

"In a republic, we're the voice for the people and they have to know they can touch you," he said. "They may not agree with you, but they are somewhat calm. If they couldn't reach me or come in and sit down, there would be this grimness, which doesn't occur."

Pearce's theme centered around the deficit, which exists because spending is at $3.5 trillion and revenue is at $2.2 trillion. To bridge the deficit, Pearce said it's best to create jobs because it will decrease spending and increase revenue.

"Every time we hire a person, two things happen," he said. "No. 1, they begin to pay taxes and the second thing is they come off unemployment, food stamps and welfare, so every job we create has a two-fold effect."

To create more jobs, Pearce said the tax policy needs to be reformed and that tax cuts always create more jobs.

"Tax policy has a lot to do with job creation and I'm thinking we need to create jobs more than any single thing," he said.

Deficits lead to debt and the debt is currently more than $14.3 trillion, which is a shade under the nation's annual Gross Domestic Product.

The Treasury Department has stated that Aug. 2 is the probable date when it won't be able to pay all of the nation's bills because the debt ceiling will be reached unless it is increased by a vote of Congress.

Pearce said to vote for an increase in the debt ceiling, he wants a dollar-for-dollar exchange, meaning that if the debt ceiling is increased by $1, then spending must be cut by $1. He also wants a spending cap and changes to government regulations and policies, which he said are killing job growth.

While cutting spending is a priority for Pearce, you won't find him advocating for cuts in defense. The congressman said he opposes any troop drawdown in Afghanistan after a woman in the audience told him the government is spending $122 billion a year and called for bringing the troops home.

lion a year and called for bringing the troops home.

"Everything has to be looked at with a view of what it costs and what not doing it costs," Pearce said. "We saw that 9/11 was the cost of not being prepared and it was about $2 trillion in one day and about 3,000 lives. That was the cost of doing nothing. I have supported (the war in) Iraq fully because I believe we are going to fight the war on terror and would rather fight it in their backyard rather than here. I believe fully that if we bring our troops home we will fight the battle here because al-Qaida has said they intend to annihilate America and annihilate Americans. I don't see any room for negotiation."

Pearce said he won't go for a tax increase to raise revenues.

"I majored in economics, and I will tell you if you could tax yourself to a good economy then Cuba would be there today," he said. "Cuba hasn't created jobs in decades. Germany had not created jobs in decades until they began to deal with the overspending."

Pearce said he supports the Fair Tax, which is akin to a national sales tax.

"That way, people who have illegal incomes for the first time would pay taxes," he said. "People who sell dope or run prostitutes get to live tax-free in America and there's something wrong with that game, so let's tax these people."

He also mentioned that one of the biggest leakages in the revenue system is people working for cash.

"The IRS has zero plans to go in and take on the cash economy so a sales tax would fix that," he said.

Don't expect any additional revenue from the taxation of marijuana or even a reduction in spending related to federal marijuana raids. The congressman said he does not support legislation introduced by Reps. Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Ron Paul, R-Texas, which would eliminate marijuana from the federal schedule of controlled substances. The Ending Federal Marijuana Prohibition Act would limit the federal government's role in a marijuana enforcement to cross-border or interstate smuggling and allow people to legally grow, use or sell marijuana in states where it is legal without fear of federal prosecution.

"I don't agree with it," Pearce said. "Mr. Paul would basically

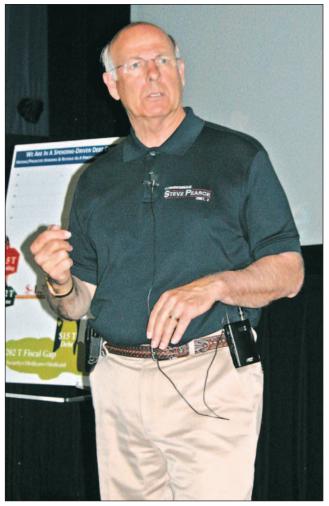

"I don't agree with it," Pearce said. "Mr. Paul would basically legalize drugs and I don't want to do that. I didn't support Gary Johnson and his legalization of marijuana. I think as a society we have to understand that there are things that will break us."

Vanessa Wills of Santa Teresa asked the congressman about term limits, saying that politicians in Washington are often out of touch with reality because they stay too long.

of touch with reality because they stay too long.

Pearce pointed out that he's OK with term limits, but it must also extend to bureaucrats.

"If you limit the elected official then you got to figure out how to limit the unelected official," he said. "The hardest problem I run up against are the bureaucrats, who know they can outlast me. It takes a while to get your feet wet and if you're going to eliminate the elected ones know that the unelected ones are even worse."

U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce discussed his views on the budget during a town hall meeting on Saturday, June 25, at Cineport 10.

Robert Westbrook of the Las Cruces tea party said he thought Pearce did a good job delivering his message at the town hall meeting.

"He was very patient with the questions he got from 'the left," he said. "I thought he was full in his answers and complete in his thoughts, giving an overall picture to explain his thoughts."

NMSU regents adopt housing plan

Community colleges work to smooth transition

At a regular meeting Thursday, June 23, the New Mexico State University Board of Regents adopted a master plan for housing at the university.

The housing plan, which is an addendum to the university's overall master plan, was originally completed in 2002. The 2009 update the regents adopted at the meeting was based on recommendations by Brailsford and Dunlavey Inc., a facility planning and program management firm

The firm's report to the university provides guidance on long-term strategic planning and is intended to be a high level overall plan for investment. The plan reflects significant changes in the on-campus housing market over the last few years, including a dramatic increase in occupancy, a new focus on programming for enhanced student retention, and replacement and renovation of older facilities.

In other business, the regents heard reports from the four NMSU community college presidents, who discussed the infrastructure, enrollment and programs of their individual campuses. As a whole, the NMSU community college presidents are committed this year to initiatives that smooth the transfer of students from community college campuses to the Las Cruces campus.

"We are so proud of all that you do for the NMSU system and the state of New Mexico. You make such a difference," said Regents Chair Laura Conniff.

Additionally, the regents recognized

Davon House, defensive back for the NMSU football team from 2007-2010, who was drafted by the Green Bay Packers in the fourth round as the 131st pick overall in the 2011 NFL Draft.

The board also presented the Above & Beyond Award to Curtis Ewing, manager of NMSU's ICT Systems Group. The Above & Beyond Award recognizes full-time employees who go the extra distance in service to any and all aspects of the NMSU system. Individuals are recognized for performance that goes "above and beyond" their regular responsibilities and for demonstrating a positive attitude that inspires others. Ewing manages both the PC and Unix server groups at ICT, which are responsible for the core computer systems that keep NMSU running, including email, banner, mynmsu and other critical administrative systems.

Business

take two

Samantha Roberts Business Editor

I have lived in Las Cruces for almost 10 months, for as long as I have worked at the Bulletin. I drive down Picacho Avenue to get to work and back home five days a week – about 40 to 45 times per month. Which means I have made this drive more than 400 times.

As I have said before, when I drive I am constantly looking at things around me – billboards, houses for sale, potential business stories, etc. I can't help but think, "What did Picacho Avenue look like in its prime?"

I have heard stories about fabulous antique shops filled with hidden treasures and undiscovered secrets, but I still see those today. Is Picacho Avenue slowly making a comeback?

Though the area may never be restored to its former glory, the street still has so much potential. People fill the parking lot of Peddlers Pavilion every weekend, bringing new and used items to sell by the truckload, from couches and beds to knickknacks and treats.

Welcome Coyote Traders. I have heard about this place for years. A new antique piece of furniture would arrive at Chris' apartment, and I had to know where he got it. The answer was always the same Coyote Traders, it's an amazing store that you have to go to in Las Cruces.

Needless to say, I was a bit disappointed to find the store had closed, and overjoyed when I found the doors open again one June afternoon.

Other big things are happening on Picacho Avenue – streetlights have gone up at the intersection of Picacho Avenue and Picacho Hills Drive, and The Big Chair Café has transformed into the popular Le Rendez-vous Café.

Although I have yet to try it, I am very excited to visit the new Vintage Café, located next to Dickerson's Event Center. With the weather heating up, perhaps a bit too much, a nice cold one at Guacamole's sounds so good.

Perhaps my favorite part about the corridor is the view of the Organ Mountains when driving east. Friends constantly tell me I live too far away from town. They can take their closeness, and I will keep my "long" drive.

Picacho, Expanding Santa Teresa POE

Ceremony holds promise for those crossing the border

By Samantha Roberts

As Las Cruces continues to grow, so do surrounding areas, including Santa Teresa, but with this growth comes many complications.

What began as an idea many years ago will turn into a reality with the groundbreaking of the expansion of the Santa Teresa Port of Entry (POE) Thursday, July 7.

The event will be led by Juan "J.D." Salinas, regional administrator for GSA's Greater Southwest Region, and Ana Hinojosa, director of field operation in El Paso for the U.S. Customs & Border Protection agency, as well as other dignitaries, such as New Mexico Secretary of Economic Development Jon Barela and Sen. Jeff Bingaman. Also on the guest list are more than 200 invitees.

"This event signifies a great moment for everyone that has put in the hard work to make this a reality," said Jim Creek, executive director of the New Mexico Border Authority.

Santa Teresa serves as the closest port of entry for people traveling from Chihuahua, Mexico, and Jerónimo Port as well as Juárez International Airport to the U.S.

There is just not enough room for everyone," Creek said. "Especially in the last few months, traffic has actually decreased because people are getting so frustrated with the long wait times.

Creek said the Santa Teresa port's popularity comes from the increased economic activity in Santa Teresa; a newly built road that connects the Jerónimo Port to southern New Mexico; the ease of access to El Paso shopping centers, such as The Outlet Shoppes at El Paso; and the increased violence in Juárez has deterred people from making the trek through the hostile city.

With all the extra people, the current roads - two northbound non-commercial and commercial lanes and inspection booths; and two southbound non-commercial and commercial lanes and inspection booths – are not enough.

"For non-commercial 'private' vehicles, the wait time can be as long as three to four hours," Creek said. "It is the longest of any port in El

EBID stops farmers' water

A first in 30 years, Mesilla Valley agriculture hits all-time low

For the first time in more than 30 years, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District has cut off the water supply to farmers, which was already at a record low of 4 acre-inches.

By Marvin Tessneer

A dissipated mountain snow pack runoff has forced the Elephant Butte Irrigation District to set its final 2011 Rio Grande surface water order date to Friday, July 1, said EBID manager Gary

"The snow pack runoff didn't come down to the reservoir," Esslinger said. "We had very little wet water to start with. We started off the season with 53,000 acre-feet with water we had in the reservoir. But the snow pack runoff from southern Colorado evaporated in the wind and high temperatures and was soaked up in the dry arroyos, and it didn't make it to Elephant Butte, and we can't deliver water to the farmers.

"This is the first time in my 33 years with the irrigation district that we've had to shut off the water during the season. During that time, I've also seen the wettest years, in 1980s and 1990s, when we had water coming over the Paso or Doña Ana County."

Luckily, Creek said he and a team have been able to find the funding.

"Plans have always pointed at expanding the roads," he said. "In early 2010, we met with federal, state and private officials to establish a committee and attempt to fix the problem. We were able to find federal money – stimulus funding or Homeland Security funding. It's all federal money, just a different color."

Since 1997, the number of annual northbound passenger vehicle crossings at the Santa Teresa POE has gone from less than 100,000 to more than 500,000 and is continuing to grow. In regard to these numbers, Creek said plans are also looking at future capacity for the port.

"We are definitely keeping our eyes on the future," he said. "Economic development cannot grow without the capacity to expand."

After construction begins – late July or early August – the anticipated completion time is about 14 months.

Being added are two northbound non-commercial lanes and inspection booths, an expanded secondary inspection area for non-commercial vehicles, a pedestrian walkway and expanded inspection area, one additional commercial lane and inspection booth, a new southbound inspection facility and renovations to the current Main Port Administration Building.

"This will enable the trucks to flow smoother and will give us 50 percent or more truck capacity," Creek said. "In 1998, there were no expectations of pedestrian traffic; however, in April, more than 15,000 people crossed the port, intermingled within cars. We really need the pedestrian crosswalk."

Though things seem to be flowing smoothly, Creek said he expects to encounter staffing problems.

"We are increasing the size of the administration building because we will have to increase the number of staff," he said. "The infrastructure we will have, but getting the increased staff members is the hard part because they are needed all around ports. Since there has not been an increased budget for customs and border to hire additional workers, no one is able to financially support the increase.

"We will work with other states and congressional delegation to hammer out this issue. It is a common need right now."

To learn more about the Santa Teresa POE, the public is invited to listen in on a monthly business meeting at 10 a.m. the last Thursday of the month at Santa Teresa Country Club, 75 Feather Moon Drive in Santa Teresa. The meeting is attended by U.S. and Mexican private and public sector officials, who discuss border issues.

From milk to cheese, butter

Prime Timers get a first-hand look at the dairy industry

By Marvin Tessneer

Las Cruces Bulletin

Producing milk in New Mexico is challenging.

"Every day there's something different," said J.L. "Joe" Gonzalez of Gonzalez Family Farms who spoke before Prime Timers at their meeting Tuesday, June 21.

The Gonzalez dairy milks 1,880 Holstein cows near Mesquite twice daily in two milking parlors and ships out 123,000 pounds of milk daily. At peak production, a Gonzalez dairy cow produces an average of 93 pounds of milk per day. Dairies measure production in pounds, not gallons.

The Prime Timers participants are mostly retired farmers, but anyone is invited to attend their meetings, held the second Tuesday of each month. Meetings bring in guest speakers to educate the audience on the latest in Mesilla Valley agriculture.

The current cost of milk production, $22.62 per hundred-weight (cwt), is out-pacing the prices dairymen receive for their product, $17.46 per cwt. Gonzalez traced the costs back to government regulations. The New Mexico Environment Department requires dairymen to construct and line waste-holding lagoons with clay or synthetic material, test soils annually, monitor and test wells quarterly and issue public notice of

"We have to monitor wells and take soil samples to check for nitrates and chlorine and total dissolved solids," Gonzalez said.

Dairymen have to meet environmental regulations, which add to expenses, with the Food and Drug Administration, USDA, Environmental Protection Agency, New Mexico Department of Agriculture and the Office of the State Engineer.

As the dairy industry grows, so do problems, such as public conflicts, water use, odors, dust, flies and land use.

"Dairy cows consume between 45 to 55 pounds of dry feed a day, and the daily cost ranges from $7.50 to $8.50 a day. The feed ration includes alfalfa, corn silage, cotton seed, steam-flaked corn, canola, dry distillers grain, molasses, soy hull pellets, corn germ meal and vitaminmineral packs," Gonzalez said.

Although alfalfa supplies are declining, Gonzalez said, "A lot of guys are going into cotton this year and many are going into pecans." Cotton requires less water than alfalfa, and traditionally, pecan farmers have been allotted more water, which could be the reasons for the switch, he said.

To keep track of the animals, all dairy cows are marked with ear tags.

"This is done for record keeping, freshening, breeding, treatment, drying and milk weights during the cow's life," Gonzalez said.

The Gonzalez workforce describes the complexity of dairies – 14 milkers, four each of cow or calf feeders, four herdsmen, two mechanics, two office staff people, one truck driver and three supervisors.

"The pleasant climate has attracted dairymen to New Mexico," Gonzaliez said. "But dairymen also found sound dairy herd health programs, low facility costs, ample feed supplies and affordable farm land good reasons for moving here."

Once the cows have been milked, a number of things happens with the byproduct, including 38 percent is used for cheese, 32 percent for fluid milk and cream, 13 percent for butter and 17 percent for ice cream and other products. At the meeting, guests got an extra dose of education.

It takes 21 pounds of milk to make a pound of butter and 9.8 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese, Gonzalez said.

With all that milk, it's no wonder milk production led New Mexico agriculture income in 2008 at $1.36 million. State dairymen had 338,000 head of milk cows that produced 7.9 billion pounds of milk.

On June 1, the EBID opened the 2011 irrigation season with a 4-inch allotment, the lowest since 1964 when the irrigation district started off the season with 3.5 inches, according to EBID records.

The EBID ditch riders will continue diverting water from the canals until the meager supply plays out.

"The farmers are discouraged and really hurting," said Scott Adams, who said it is the worst water season that he has seen while farming in the Hatch Valley for 30 years. "Not having water gives you a desperate feeling. We need snow next winter up in the mountains to the north."

At the end of May, the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service reported the May-to-July forecast for the Rio Grande flow at San Marcial, just above Elephant Butte, was 155,000 acre-feet, 35 percent of the 30-year

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman announced that farmers and ranchers in Doña Ana, Lea, Otero, Curry, Quay, Roosevelt and Union counties are now eligible for low-interest emergency loans from the Farm Service Agency due to to continuing drought conditions.

"The drought is having a terrible affect on New Mexico's agricultural sector," Bingaman said. "I'm glad several New Mexico counties are now eligible for USDA loan assistance."

Façade Squad hits Main Street

Downtown Camuñez Building gets a facelift

Bulletin Staff Report

If you have walked or driven down Main Street in the last few days, you have probably noticed some changes. No, not the dramatic progress on the blocks of Main from Las Cruces to Mountain avenues. That work is adding to revitalization in a huge way.

The work being done on three building facades and in La Placita is the center of interest. With the help of some patching, primer and a lot of volunteer energy, COAS Bookstore, Main Street Boutique and the Camuñez Building are all getting quick makeovers of the faces presented to Main Street. Meanwhile, next to the Camuñez Building, the rest of the tile mosaic walkway in La Placita is being installed.

For the Façade Squad effort, Will Powell, Elmo Baca and Heather Barrett Crane of New Mexico MainStreet were in the thick of things, providing guidance, ideas, patching, primer and muscle. They were joined by volunteers Misty Alaniz of Main Street Boutique, Mark Edrys of Magic 105 and Doug Roby of the Doña Ana Arts Council. The City of Las Cruces was represented by volunteers, Elizabeth Vega, Kelly Medina and Christina Nape. Rounding out the group were volunteers Steve Newby, Paul Couture, Greg Smith, Gary Sandler, Andrea Camuñez, David Chavez and Wayne Huber of the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership.

"Las Cruces is the eighth community within the state to participate in New Mexico Main-Street's Façade Squad," Powell said. "Even after just one day, positive improvements have been accomplished, and many in the community have complimented on the work happening."

In La Placita, the tile mosaic sun is being joined by other tile elements in artist Glenn Schwaiger's design. A $20,000 Centennial Legacy Award from the Friends of New Mexico MainStreet is making completion of the mosaic walkway possible. The artist and his DACC students have been working to install the rest of the tile so that it will be complete in time for the New Mexico Centennial SalsaFest! Aug. 28.

Smith pointed out that, when completed, La Placita will be the grand entrance to the center of Downtown Main Street.

"There are no parking spaces on the two center blocks of Main Street, so when people are coming to enjoy the center of Downtown, many will be parking on Water Street and coming through La Placita," Smith said.

Opportunities to volunteer are still available. Call the DLCP at 525-1955 to volunteer

Texas-based company relocating to Alamogordo

New Mexico Economic Development Cabinet Secretary Jon Barela announced that Federal Rated Security Technologies (FRST) will be relocating its Dallas Metroplex operations to Alamogordo. The announcement was made during the Otero County Economic Development Council (OCEDC) annual meeting. FRST expects to create 15 to 20 high-wage jobs in its first year and an additional 50 jobs by the end of its second year in Alamogordo.

"We are excited for the work that will take place in Alamogordo that will lead to regional growth and create high-wage jobs," Barela said. "We intend to continue to work with the high-tech industry to bring more jobs and companies to New Mexico and the Alamogordo high-tech cluster."

FRST will focus on the emerging market for dual mode, manned or unmanned operation, utility vehicles for security, military and emergency management operations. FRST is working with a nationwide supplier network to provide key commercial off-the-shelf components to enable the development of an economical solution and accelerate their entry into the market place. Over the next several months, FRST will be finalizing the product design in consultation with its customers to ensure critical operational capabilities are met. The Alamogordo facility will serve as the hub for FRST's product design, integration, manufacturing and test operations. It is anticipated the facility will serve to attract additional industry partners to Alamogordo as operations grow and manufacturing begins.

Volunteers needed for volleyball tournament

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Southwestern New Mexico will hold the second annual Mudd Volleyball Tournament Saturday, Aug. 6, at the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds Rodeo Arena.

Volunteers are needed to help support this event, including members of the planning committee, referees and assistants for the game-day activities.

Teams are available for $400, and several affordable sponsorships opportunities are still available. For more information, contact BBBS at 523-9530 or visit www.bbbsofswnm.org.

Changes with Good Morning Las Cruces

Big changes are coming to Las Cruces' premier networking event, Good Morning Las Cruces. The event, typically held early in the morning, will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 10, at the Hilton Garden Inn, 2550 S. Don Roser Drive. The time change has been made to address those Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce members who are unable to attend early morning functions, but would still enjoy the networking opportunity.

The evening will begin at 5 p.m. with a continental breakfast and special presentation by Barbara Couture, president of New Mexico State University. Couture will speak about the upcoming 2011-12 school year and the relationship with area businesses.

Chamber members are invited to drop off door prizes for the event at the chamber office, 760 W. Picacho Ave., by Monday, Aug. 8.

The cost for the event is $15 for members or $30 for nonmembers and includes the continental breakfast. Registration will be limited to two representatives per company or organization. The sponsors for Good Morning Las Cruces are Comcast, Council of Conquistadores, Las Cruces Sun-News and the Las Cruces Bulletin. To RSVP, call the chamber office at 524-1968.

NMPRC approves construction on power plant

The New Mexico Public Regulation Commission approved an order that will see El Paso Electric (EPE) construct a multi-million dollar power plant near Sunland Park.

The natural gas-fueled plant, which is expected to cost approximately $84 million, will serve an estimated 50,000 customers in the Las Cruces-El Paso area.

Commission Chairman Patrick H. Lyons, one of three commissioners to vote in favor of the project, said the plant will bring much needed electricity to one of the state's fastest growing areas.

"This is a very important project that will serve tens of thousands of customers in that particular region, including White Sands Missile Range and Holloman Air Force Base, among others," Lyons said. "In addition to the benefit of serving the electricity needs of customers, the project is good for economic development and job creation in one of the state's fastest growing regions."

On the Agenda

NM counties eligible for drought aid

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman announced that several New Mexico counties have been declared eligible for disaster assistance due to their proximity to Texas counties that were declared disaster areas due to continuing drought.

As a result of the declaration, farmers and ranchers in Doña Ana, Lea, Otero, Curry, Quay, Roosevelt and Union counties are now eligible to be considered for low-interest emergency loans from the Farm Service Agency, which is part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

"The drought is having a terrible affect on New Mexico's agricultural sector," Bingaman said. "I'm glad several New Mexico counties are now eligible for USDA loan assistance."

Golf tourney save the date

Join the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces Sept. 16 – Mexican Independence Day – and celebrate local and regional heritage with a golf tournament and an afterhours fiesta. The event will include beer tasting, a shotgun start, midnight fiesta and piñata contest. The event will be held from 1 p.m. to midnight at Sonoma Ranch Golf Course. For more information, call 532-9255.

AAA New Mexico open house

The Las Cruces branch of AAA New Mexico will be having an open house from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, July 16, at the Citizen's Bank building, 3991 E. Lohman Ave. AAA will be offering the community a chance to discover all that AAA has to offer, including roadside service; auto, home and life insurance; and expert travel planning.

Open House activities include a free car battery check, free insurance policy review, door prizes, travel specials, refreshments and lots more. For more information, call 523-5681.

Help a child in need

The start of the school year is usually an exciting time of the year for children accompanied by new clothes, a new backpack and all the essential school supplies. For many Las Cruces' children, having the back-to-school basics is just not a reality. Help provide backpacks, school supplies and basic need items for children in need. New backpacks, socks, underwear, toothbrushes, toothpaste, hairbrushes, books and school supplies are needed. Donations will be received though Monday, Aug. 8, at the following locations:

FirstLight Federal Credit Union, 3105 Del Rey Blvd., 300 E. Foster Road and 3791 E. Lohman Ave.; MECA Therapies, 1350 Hillrise Circle; and Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, 1990 E. Lohman Ave. Donation deadline is Aug. 8.

This initiative is coordinated by the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, FirstLight Federal Credit Union and MECA.

Vote Las Cruces No. 1

The Las Cruces Farmers & Craft Market ranked No. 9 in the 2010's top farmer's market in the nation. The market missed a tie for eighth place in the nation by one vote, and the No. 7 spot by two votes. Make sure this doesn't happen again. Help make Las Cruces No. 1 by voting for the Las Cruces Farmers & Craft Market at www.lascrucesfarmersmarket.org. For more information, call Eric Montgomery at 541-2288.

Following the Facebook craze

Community Foundation connects through social media

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) is always looking for new ways to reach the community and partner donors with needs. Their most recent outreach is over the Internet.

The CFSNM is embracing social media through Facebook, Twitter and blogging. Currently, the CFSNM has a Facebook page, as does the Unified Prevention! (UP!) Border Region Coalition for a Drug Free Community, a program within the foundation. UP! can also be found on Twitter @upcoalition and at www.unifiedprevention.com.

The Young Philanthropists (YP), another program within the foundation, started the internal social media campaign with the startup of its Facebook page.

"There are more than 500 million active users on Facebook and this number is growing daily. People spend more than 700 billion minutes per month on Facebook," said Stephanie Armitage, YP member and volunteer director of social media for the group.

"Social media is about being where potential donors are. It lets you focus on your relationships with your customers, donors, workers and volunteers all in one click."

The CFSNM utilizes social media to cultivate new audiences and introduce them to the foundation. As was the intention of the formation of the YPs, the CFSNM is working to create a new generation of donors, and social media reaches younger people as well as social media savvy older donors. By using social media, the CFSNM can also advance causes that are meaningful to the community in an instant.

Facebook works for organizations such as the CFSNM because it brings stories of success and needs where people are congregating. By offering a social media update, the CFSNM is able to share stories about charitable giving and engage in feedback.

"People are discussing your organization

"People are discussing your organization online, and you have to respond," said Armitage about the importance of social media. "If they are not talking about you, then you need to guide them to you. Let them know there is something out there they need."

For the CFSNM, social media and outreach is not just about fundraising, but about building relationships with the community and empowering the community to take action when needed. The CFSNM is dedicated to building relationships to build philanthropy that impacts southern New Mexico.

"The future is not just about putting your name out there, but also engaging in conversation with real people. To do that, you must focus on peer to peer communication, and in many cases that is through social media," Armitage said.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the Community Foundation offers

Maniatis named director of New Mexico film office

New Mexico Economic Development Department Cabinet Secretary Jon Barela announced that Nick Maniatis has been named director of the New Mexico Film Office.

Maniatis previously served as the executive director of the New Mexico Independent Power Producers. He has worked on many film projects in New Mexico and was an appointed board member of the Governor's Council on Film and Media Industries from 2002-09. He also was a board member of the Digital Film Institute from 2003-10.

"Nick has deep knowledge of the film landscape in New Mexico, and with his leadership, we're looking forward to the film industry continuing to be an important part of the state's economy," Barela said.

Maniatis worked in many capacities in film and television production throughout his career, including "Grace Under Fire" (1995-96), "World War II: When Lions Roared" (1994), "A Different World" (1992-93) and "Candid Camera" (1991-92). Maniatis is a former member of the Director's Guild of America

"I'm looking forward to working with film and media companies to continue to build and grow a sustainable industry here in New Mexico," Maniatis said. "New Mexico is a wonderful location for the film industry. We have the climate, culture and a talented and experienced workforce. I hope to foster an environment that encourages long term job and economic growth in communities across New Mexico."

Maniatis is a 1988 graduate of the University of Redlands, where he received a bachelor's degree in sociology with a minor in business administration.

EPE names Vice President of Transmission and Distribution

El Paso Electric Co. appointed Robert Clay Doyle to serve as vice president of transmission and distribution. In that position, Doyle will oversee the transmission and distribution divisions, which include substations, transmission and distribution design, operations, construction and maintenance.

Doyle has been with El Paso Electric since 1992 and has served in various capacities, including vice president of New Mexico affairs, manager of the Corporate Projects Office, project manager of Corporate Transition to Competition, supervisor of Distribution Dispatch and distribution monitoring engineer. Doyle holds a master's degree in electrical engineering as well as a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from New Mexico State University. He is a registered professional engineer in New Mexico and holds certification as a Project Management Professional.

Doyle has been a fundraising team leader for the local affiliates of Habitat for Humanity, the Kiwanis Clubs of Las Cruces and the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce. He also is an active participant with the Boy Scouts of America and serves on the board of The Bridge of Southern New Mexico and the board of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance.

Holguin recognized by Allstate

Allstate agency owner Ray Holguin has been designated an Allstate Premier Service Agent for 2011. Bestowed upon less than one-third of Allstate's nearly 12,000 agency owners across the country and eight of Allstate's New Mexcio agencies, this designation is being presented to Holguin's Allstate agency for its commitment to putting the customer at the center of their work.

The designation is awarded to Allstate agency owners who have consistently demonstrated excellence in delivering an accessible, knowledgeable and personal customer experience, and in achieving outstanding business results.

Holguin's agency is located at 324 W. Amador Ave. For more information, call 525-9645.

Benefits of foreign-born

The United States, a state of immigrants

Chris Erickson State of the Economy

I know how to start an argument. I just explain to the people sitting around me my views on immigration.

I did this at a family gathering recently and I thought my father-in-law was going to have apoplexy. The steam shot out of his ears and two nostrils.

Admittedly, I'm a radical when it comes to immigration. I would open borders in North America and allow the free flow of labor between the United States, Canada and Mexico. In fact, I would go farther. I would eliminate quotas and return to the open-door policy of the 19th century before we had any immigration laws.

Freedom of movement is a basic human right that immigration laws limit. They are holdovers from a more repressive past. The medieval serf could not travel from the manor without permission of the lord. Later, nation states imposed internal restrictions on movement as a means of control. Indeed, limiting freedom of movement was a basic tool of totalitarian governments of the mid-20th century. Communist countries told people were they could and couldn't live even to the point of assigning a specific apartment or house. Even today, China restricts immigration from rural to

The right to immigrate is a human right - that is my basic reason for supporting immigration reform. Beyond this libertarian argument is an economic argument.

Immigration is America's secret weapon. America has been able to attract a disproportionate number of a talented, hardworking immigrates to our benefit. What attracted them are our excellent universities, entrepreneurial economy and welcoming culture. Immigrants help the U.S. to maintain our economic and technical advantage. Forty percent of Ph.D.'s in science and engineering are U.S. policy is making life hard for immigrants. Long waits and arbitrary quotas discourage would-be immigrants, or leave them uncertain for years. The path to permanent residency and citizenship is unnecessary difficult. Our immigration policy based on family reunion rather than on technical skills makes no sense from an economic prospective.

Other countries are taking advantage of our mistakes, thereby gaining a competitive advantage. By opening their universities to immigrants and by providing a clear path to citizenship, these countries attract the talents and skills needed for a 21st century economy. The educational demographies of economy. The educational demographics of immigrants to both Australia and Canada, for example, exceed those of U.S. immi-

Illegal immigration has soured many Americans on the benefits of immigration. Illegal immigration diminishes respect for the law and weakens labor rights. Moreover, illegal immigration brings out the worse aspects of the American psyche. Unfortunately, on the edge of the immigration issue lurks racism. A xenophobic fear of the other animates much of the discussion. We need to rise above this as a nation.

America is a nation of immigrants, something to keep in mind as we celebrate Independence Day. Immigrants have contributed to our national life in ways that are many and profound. A list of great Americans will include many born in foreign countries: Thomas Paine, Alexander Hamilton, Irving Berlin, Albert Einstein, Madeline Albrecht and Sergey Brin are among the immigrants who have contributed to America's greatness.

Christopher A. Erickson, Ph.D., is an associate professor of economics at New Mexico State University. He is the great grandson of immigrants. The views expressed here may not be solved. the Regents or Administration of NMSU. Erickson can be reached at chrerick@nmsu.edu.

Providing real estate services without a license now a felony

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

In 2008, the New Mexico Real Estate Commission (NMREC) fined two Ruidoso-area property managers $1,000 each for managing 12 rental complexes without a license. At the time, their actions were considered a misdemeanor under New Mexico law. Were those managers found guilty of such behavior today, they'd be facing felony charges.

A new law that went into effect July 1 makes it a fourth-degree felony to lease, rent, manage, sell, exchange, auction or option property for others without a real estate broker's license. The penalty for conducting such activities can carry a fine of $5,000 and up to 18 months in jail, according to NMREC Chief Investigator Walter Mullen.

While the practice is particularly pervasive in tourist-driven communities, I have encountered similar situations right in Las Cruces. In one instance, a father advertised his daughter and son-in-law's property for sale in a local newspaper and negotiated on their behalf when a buyer wanted to make an offer. On another occasion, a local property owner represented his out-of-state next-door neighbor and leased the neighbor's rental property to a tenant on the owner's behalf. Neither was licensed to conduct such activities.

Another aspect of the real estate business that often puts real estate brokers behind the eight ball has to do with referral fees. Both state and federal laws prohibit the payment of referral fees to unlicensed individuals, according to Mullen. It is not uncommon for real estate brokers to acknowledge referrals from friends, relatives, past clients and others by giving something of value to the person providing the referral.

In some cases, brokers pay the referring party a portion of the brokerage fee generated from the transaction. In other instances, gifts, such as a weekend hotel stay or a night on the town, are given in lieu of cash. Both scenarios are strictly prohibited under the law.

Real estate is a serious and complicated business that is best handled by individuals who have the background. Buyers, sellers, landlords and tenants can be easily deprived of the rights and obligations they enjoy under the law when the rules, regulations and laws are not followed to the letter.

To see the full-text of the law, visit http://laws. uslandlord.com/laws/ nmstatelaw.html. Good Luck.

See you at closing.

Serving guests a slice of the Mesilla Valley

Hotel Encanto takes pride in its accommodations

By Jimmy Currier

When traveling to a city, people often want to sample the local cuisine. Whether it's red chile enchiladas or a green chile cheeseburger, you don't want to eat at the same ol' fast food or upscale casual dining when on the road. That mindset is transferring to lodging accommodations as more people search for a hotel that captures the local atmosphere.

Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces prides itself on providing an ambience that reflects southern New Mexico's rich Spanish and Mexican colonial history and tradition. On the east side of town off Telshor Boulevard, this full-service hotel overlooks the Mesilla Valley, with some rooms offering breathtaking views of the Organ Mountains and other rooms offering picturesque shots of the city.

"I think that our property is unique compared to other flagship properties in this area," said Susan Raitt, director of sales and marketing. "We're a boutique hotel, not a cookie-cutter. We bring something very different to each guest experience. We want you to feel Las Cruces and what it's about. When you visit our property, you're experiencing Las Cruces."

Hotel Encanto has 203 guest rooms and seven hotel suites; throughout seven floors. Suites include parlor, Jacuzzi and junior styles. The hotel also features beautifully decorated, spacious and comfortable guestrooms and public areas, along with rich and elegant custom-designed carpets, fabrics and furnishings.

"It's luxury at an affordable price," Raitt said.

Guests' needs are met with a 24-hour front desk and concierge, a fitness center, room service, valet and laundry service, complimentary parking, luggage and local shuttle service, an outdoor heated pool and Jacuzzi Spa. The hotel is also pet-friendly. James Wilson, a sales manager who has been with the company for 23 years, said each one of the company's 105 employees takes customer service seriously.

"Guest relationship is priority No. 1," Wilson said. "The guest is the whole reason we are here. They write our check, and we have to take care of them. We want people to have a good experience, and we just don't want them to come here because it looks nice or because it's the biggest hotel. We want them to come because it's the best hotel. We do a great job to focus on that and reward people for that."

Café España, housed within the hotel, serves rediscovered New Mexican foods. If you're in the mood for a drink and want to relax or dance, check out Azul Lounge, an upscale club featuring musical entertainment and specialty cocktails.

If you're wanting to relax after a round of golf, hiking the Organ Mountains or a long day, spend some time in Mercedez Day Spa, within the hotel. The spa provides massages, hair services, nail services and facials.

Hotel Encanto has been accommodating guests in Las Cruces since Oct. 15, 1985. American Property Management Co. took ownership in 1994, later evolving and creating Heritage Hotels and Resorts in 2004. The Albuquerque-based company also owns three hotels in Santa Fe, two in the Duke City and one in Arizona.

There are plenty of guest packages to choose from, including a "Housepetality" package for pets. Raitt said guests will receive amenities for their pets such as a treat, water bowl and a tag for the door that says there's a dog inside. Wedding and romance packages are also popular guest options.

In August, Raitt said the hotel will run a special summer rate of $69 for standard rooms.

"We're offering a staycation rate for anybody who would travel out of town but they're on a tighter budget," Raitt said. "They would like to stay in town, enjoy our pool, our bar, our restaurant and our Mercedez Day Spa."

The hotel isn't just for leisure, offering print and copy services, 10,000 square feet of meeting and exhibit space and a business center. Raitt pointed out the hotel has a full-service audio-visual company on site that provides LCD projectors, screenings, laptops, flip charts and anything they may possibly need.

Whether you're a family on vacation, newlyweds, in town for business, in town for sports. Hotel Encanto wants to roll out the red carpet for you. Both Presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton have enjoyed the luxurious accommodations at Hotel Encanto.

While the detail-oriented staff at Hotel Encanto will strive to provide the best possible experience for its guests, sometimes the sailing gets a little choppy. Nevertheless, Wilson said that all guest complaints are handled expeditiously.

"Our general manager is very involved with any guest issue, and we try to correct the issue as it happens," he said. "I don't think we've had too many problems that weren't resolvable."

When responding to a complaint, it's important to listen, Wilson said.

"Don't make excuses," he said. "Gather all the information without blaming anyone else. Ask them what they want for a solution because sometimes we overthink it and we should accommodate them whenever possible, but we need to respond quickly to whatever their needs are."

Wilson also pointed to how to turn a negative into a positive.

"Strangely enough, if something goes a little off and you fix it, then the guest usually has a better experience," he said. "They walk away saying, 'Wow! This was better than I thought."

It's Burger Time. No, it's golf time, and thanks to the help of Burger Time owner Kevin McGrath, golf time means southern New Mexico sports will get more time on the field.

McGrath was born in New York, but his father's job transferred the family to Las Cruces in the early 1960s.

There was no one in Las Cruces when we moved here," McGrath said. "Maybe 5,000 people and a

Main Street – that was it."

Despite the dim population, McGrath saw a chance to succeed in the Mesilla Valley and began taking courses at New Mexico State University while working at Burger Time making donuts.

The restaurant business is in my blood," he said. "When I was younger, I used to wake up at 3 a.m. and deliver milk with the milk man, just because I enjoyed doing it. I also like washing the dishes and making the Dilly Bars."

While working at Burger Time, McGrath said he was able to meet the owner and move up "through the ranks."

"I decided it was better for me to focus on my career, so I dropped out of school and made Burger Time a full-time job," said McGrath, adding that he "quickly moved up to managing a Burger Time location."

In 1984, former Burger Time owner Marvin Lloyd passed away and McGrath said he purchased the company.

'I never thought the circle would be so complete," he said in regard to his promotions throughout the company. "Being in this business comes natural, but no, I never thought I would be the owner of something like this."

From New York to New Mexico, McGrath said he would never think about leaving the Land of Enchantment.

"I have gone back to visit New York a few times," he said, "but this is home. New Mexico has great people and a great atmosphere. New York is too crowded and just doesn't have the same feel or passion like we have here in Las Cruces."

McGrath said this passion can be seen and felt at NMSU games, a hobby of the sports lover.

His love of sports and Las Cruces led McGrath to create a golf tournament that has dominated high school fundraising efforts in southern New Mexico - the It's Burger Time Sandra B. McGrath High School All-Activities Tournament, named after his late wife.

Time to be excessive

Making a show of our national pride

By David EdwardsLas Cruces Bulletin

Did you ever notice how the Fourth of July falls almost exactly in the middle of the year? I'm sure the Founding Fathers planned it that way - so we'd have a three-day weekend somewhere between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

What makes a good July Fourth anyway? I guess it's probably going to always come down to the big three - fireworks, food and

When I think of fireworks and how we, as Americans, want them to be, I can't help but remember how an old high school friend of mine described his perfect explosive aerial display.

It would come in three stages:

Stage one would be a re-enactment of the battles of Lexington and Concord. The "shot heard 'round the world," as it were.

Stage two would present a unique scene within a scene of the Battle of Fort McHenry "bombs bursting in air" all around the Stars and Stripes as Francis Scott Key pens "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Stage three would depict the Declaration of Independence with the musical accompaniment of Kate Smith (or maybe Christina Aguilera) singing "God Bless America."

I know. It's not likely that fireworks displays could ever be that elaborate. All that in one three-stage rocket? Come on, let's be realistic.

Now food is a different story. What can't we achieve in the way of grilling? Are we not the masters of meat? Steaks, burgers and those ever-loving hot dogs are always at our mercy, especially on the Fourth of July.

about any food item you can think of. I am sure somewhere American ingenuity is being applied to come up with a barbecue pit the size of a football field or actually make a frankfurter the size of the Oscar Mayer Weinermobile. You can always buy 55-gallon drums of mustard and relish at Sam's Club.

Now, music is another story. I am sure (well, almost sure) that we weren't the first to time our fireworks to music - either live or recorded. Some Russian guy came up with the idea to put live cannons in one of his overtures. But music always goes well with outdoor celebrations - patriotic or otherwise.

All of this must be leading to something and here it is.

We are a nation of excess. All our holidays have become commercialized and the Fourth of July is no exception. But all over-the-top celebrations – of which we are the masters – are fine as long as we always remember (as we are told every year, every holiday) the reason for the season. If you're going to be excessive, what better holiday to do so than the one that celebrates our freedom to be excessive? So have a great time on July Fourth and be grateful that we can be excessive. And take advantage of the local public festivities.

The City of Las Cruces is hosting its annual Electric Light Parade beginning at 9 p.m. Sunday, July 3. The parade begins at the corner of Madrid Avenue and Solano Drive. It proceeds south on Solano to Hadley Avenue, east to Walnut Street and then north to Spruce Avenue. The theme for this year's parade is "100 Years of Statehood" in anticipation of the New Mexico Centennial celebration.

The Fourth of July Street Fest will begin We can make the world's largest of just after the parade at 1600 E. Hadley Ave. The Monday, July 4, the Street Fest begins at 4 p.m. with local performers. The line-up consists of Amparo Arvizu, followed by the Crooked Beaver Creek Band and concludes with Natajja. Who will also sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

At 7:30 p.m., The Iguanas from New Orleans will perform their brand of Latin and Caribbean-tinged rhythm and blues. Mayor Miyagishima will give his welcome and comments and the fireworks display will follow at 9:30 p.m. While some of the fun is the risk of brush fires, the city always puts on

This year's headliner is Lowrider Band scheduled for 10 p.m. The group features original members of the band War and the composers of Lowrider, Cisco Kid and Spill the Wine.

The Town of Mesilla will also have a fireworks display beginning at 9 p.m. in the field located off of Calle de Mercado. For more information, call 524-3262, ext. 116.

MARCIE BOWMAN.

local actress vulnerable.

By David Edwards

Marcie Bowman was bitten by the acting bug while she attended high school in Battle Creek, Mich. Ironically, something happened at that time that almost cured her.

'I was 17, and it was my senior year," she said. "I had been selected to do a dramatic monologue in front of the whole school. At the last minute, it was changed to a comic piece. I don't think I'm very funny, and when I got up there, I said the first line and my mind went blank."

What followed was what she describes as four or five seconds of "pure hell" as some people started to applaud. But she held up her hand, stared at the floor and finally "made some stuff up.'

"I calmly left the stage, went to the bathroom, locked myself in a stall and started crying," she said.

Her acting teacher found her later that day and assured her she had "something special" and encouraged her to "get back on the horse." It was another nine years before she followed that

Born in Kentucky, Bowman moved 13 times from state to state while growing up. It didn't seem unusual to "follow a boy" to Arizona after high school. She put acting aside and focused on visual art – she is also a painter – eventually getting an associate's degree in graphic design.

Following a different boy led her to Las Cruces where she found herself enrolling at New Mexico State University. She didn't declare a major at first, but took an introduction to acting class, which she loved.

"I went to change my major to theater arts and somehow, even though I hadn't done anything, it had already been recorded that way," she said. "It was kind of bizarre."

Bowman had a hard time finding her niche in the theater department.

"I was kind of a wallflower, I guess," she said. "I wasn't a 'big' actor – I was more subtle in my approach."

Her advisor suggested she take an introduction to film acting class taught by wellknown playwright and director Mark Medoff, who was teaching it for the first time in the newly formed Creative Media Institute (CMI).

"I fell in love with acting again for the first time since I was 17," she said.

Medoff, whom she considers a mentor under whose direction she "blossoms" every time they work together, cast her as the female lead in the first big CMI project "100 MPG."

Other film projects and plays have followed – even though she says she "dies" every time she goes onstage - and she is in demand for both and stays very busy in her chosen craft.

Summer of 2010 found her working hard on two separate film projects, both horror films.

"A lot of first-time directors like to make horror films," she said. "They can usually be done on a low budget, and there is a large fan base out there. Sometimes they can make a splash."

The films Bowman worked on have been completed, or very nearly, but no real release dates have been set.

"Folklore: An American Tale of Terror," directed by Johnny Tabor, is getting a good buzz on the Internet.

"It's about five friends taking a trip across New Mexico in 1974 and stuff happens," Bowman said. "That's all I can tell

The other film, "Last Days," was shot in El Paso. It is a psychological thriller written and directed by Andrew Jara and is being sent around various film festivals.

"It was a summer of sweat and blood," Bowman said.

She recently completed "Arcane," a web series conceived by former Las Cruces resident now Los Angeles actor Andrew Galves and another Los Angeles actor Frank Rodriguez. A science fiction/action film, it was written and directed by Rajeev Nirmalakhandan and involves the intrigue surrounding a plot to genetically engineer the perfect human. It will be available for viewing on the web and it is hoped to be picked up by some sponsors, which could mean more episodes.

After making a name for herself in local theater, Marcie Bowman is ready to venture to Hollywood.

"It was 10 very intense days of filming," she said. "But I got to do my first fight scene, my first sex scene. I got to be dangled off the back of a truck with a leaf blower in my face in 105 degree heat. It was great."

Bowman is currently in rehearsal for "The Iris Incident," a new play by CMI instructor Amy Lanasa and directed by Medoff. It will be performed at the Black Box Theatre beginning Aug. 12. Bowman gets to play a character that is slightly brain-damaged - one of those quirky, slightly darker characters she enjoys so much.

Then she is going to make the jump to Los Angeles.

"I need to take the chance before it's too late to take the chance," she said.

When asked what her approach to acting was, Bowman replied, "I just want to be as authentic and natural as possible."

Despite that early trauma, what appeals to her about performing?

"Acting is like wearing your heart out on your sleeve ... it is frightening and makes me feel vulnerable," she said. "But when the right moments and elements come together, it is like magic. And you just hope that you can make a connection with someone ... a cast member or audience member. The drive to want to be better ... to connect better. These things keep me coming back for more even in my darkest hours.'

Featured band: Fourth of July performers

From norteño to Tejano to country rock

Local performers to appear at Fourth of July Street Fest

barking on a professional singing career in 1985. A singer of traditional Mexican music, Arvizu favors the mariachi genre and while considered a solo performer sings with a variety of musical accompaniment. For Street Fest, she will be performing with a norteño trio.

Formed in 2009, the Crooked Beaver Creek Band is a Texas country/ Southern rock band. With each member of the group coming from a different and varied musical background, the blending of this wide range of styles gives them a unique sound. The band's musical interests and influences range from Jimi Hendrix to Johnny Cash.

The members of CBCB are Aj Alba, lead vocals and rhythm guitar; Jacob Guajardo, bass; Mike "G Spot," lead guitar; and Javier "Hollywood," drums and harmonies.

Closing out the local program before The Iguanas take the stage is Natajja Gomez, who goes simply by

She started singing at the age of 5 and sang in choirs and performed in musicals while in school. Natajja cites Selena as her childhood and all-time idol. But other artists who have influenced her include Laura Canales, Shelley Lares and Brad Paisley. She describes her music as "Tejano with a touch of that New Mexico sound." She will also sing the national anthem on Monday night.

Natajja always dreamed of singing professionally, and now she is starting to achieve some recognition in New Mexico, Texas and 18 other states as well as in Mexico and on Internet radio. With her first single "Cuatro Caminos" climbing various charts across the country and her first CD available in stores, her dreams are beginning to come true.

She is currently working with threetime Grammy-winning producer Mario Ortiz, who is working to create a new Tejano sound.

The national acts will bring a wide variety of music to Street Fest 2011, but you'll want to get there early to support the talented locals also on the bill.

paperwork and even an arc lamp.

Jeri Langlois' art will be highlighted in the El Paso Electric Gallery for the month of July, featuring paintings, acrylic, oils and watercolors. The Las Cruces-based artist was mainly influence by Georgia O'Keeffe and her subject matter mostly focuses on landscapes and architecture. The pieces have a mild spiritual flavor. Her work is available for purchase.

The Rio Grande Theatre is one of several galleries along Downtown Main Street that will open its doors from 5 to 7 p.m. on Friday, July 1, to participate in the Downtown Art Ramble.

"The Art Ramble brings a lot of people Downtown and it shows that something is going on," said David Salcido, manager of the Rio Grande Theatre. "Come down and see what Downtown has to offer."

The Rio Grande Theatre has been entertaining Las Crucens and visitors since 1926 with the opening of the silent film, "Mare Nostrum." Southwest architect Otto Thorman created the look of the Rio Grande Theatre in the Italian Renaissance revival style popular in the 1920s and 1930s. The two-story theater was re-opened to the public in 2005, after eight years of fundraising and renovating.

Currently, the Rio Grande Theatre is a 422-seat, state-of-the-art performing arts facility, with a 40-foot fly loft, dressing rooms, digital projector, sound and lighting equipment, acoustical panels, refrigerated air, a refurbished lobby and galley spaces. It also houses the offices of the Doña Ana Arts Council.

RAILYARD ARTS PILOT PROJECT

The Railyard Arts Committee is accepting applications for temporary public artworks to be installed in designated areas on the Railyard Park + Plaza in Santa Fe. The Railyard is a "cohesive urban art environment," designed and intended as a "work of art in itself." Artists, organizations and collaborative, creative teams are encouraged to propose projects, particularly those that respond to the landscape of the Railyard Park + Plaza and emphasize community engagement and participation. Collaborations across disciplines of artists, scientists, historians, sociologists, etc., are especially encouraged, and various art forms from visual to performing arts, are welcome. Projects will be temporary in nature and must be able to be installed and removed from the Railyard within a sixmonth period. For more information, visit www.railyardpark.org/programs/railyard-art-project.

ARTS INTERNATIONAL

The El Paso Art Association's production of the 2011 Arts International Exhibit sponsored by the Cancer Treatment Institute will be held Oct. 15-Nov. 11. Artists are encouraged to submit their entries by Aug. 31 by visiting www.artsinternat.com, where an online registration and prospectus can be submitted. For more information, call the EPAA office at 915-534-7377.

'THE 39 STEPS' AUDITIONS

No Strings Theatre will hold auditions for "The 39 Steps" at 7 p.m. Sunday, July 31, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St. The play is adapted by Patrick Barlow from the novel by John Buchan, the movie of Alfred Hitchcock and an original concept by Simon Corbie and Nobby Dimon, and will be directed by NSTC's Artistic Director Ceil Herman.

Needed are three men (ages mid-20s and up) and one woman (mid-20s to mid-40s). Two of the men and the woman will be playing multiple roles.

Auditions will be cold readings from the script. A perusal copy of the script is on reserve at the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave.

The scheduled production dates for "The 39 Steps" are Sept. 16 to Oct. 2 with the possibility of extending a fourth weekend to Oct. 9, if audience response warrants. For more information, contact Herman at 523-1223 or nstcbbt@zianet.com

In the fall of 2012, a group of New Mexico and regional organizations will present "SEA2012 Albuquerque: Machine Wilderness," a symposium and season-long series of public events exploring the discourse of global proportions on the subject of art, technology and nature. The prestigious ISEA symposium is held every year in a different location around the world, and it is an international honor for Albuquerque to be selected as the first host city in the U.S. since 2006. This project will draw a wealth of leading creative minds from around the globe, and engage our local community through in-depth partnerships. The ISEA2012 symposium will consist of a conference based in Albuquerque (Sept. 19-24, 2012), a multi-site exhibition at The Albuquerque Museum and 516 ARTS (Sept. 20, 2012-Jan. 6, 2013), and an expansive, regional collaboration throughout the fall of 2012, including art exhibitions, public events, performances and educational activities. ISEA2012 is seeking proposals from exhibition artists and conference presenters. To apply, visit www. isea2012.org. For more information, email info@isea2012.org

Review by Jeff BergFor the Las Cruces Bulletin

I could spend this entire review telling you about what happened to my brother-in-law after he, his wife, my wife and I saw "Win Win" in a "ritzy" area of Cincinnati near the town where my in-laws live.

It has to do with a psychopathic woman talking all through the movie, but if you want to know the story, drop me a note at the email address at the end.

Now, on with the review. 'Win Win," from a fresh, original story, is directed by Tom McCarthy, whose previous films include two outstanding pieces of work, "The Station Agent" and "The Visitor."

McCarthy seems to have a knack for making great visual stories from small events, using simple people in everyday environments.

In this picture, Paul Giamatti stars as Mike Flaherty, a small-time lawyer feeling the financial pinch. His clients are mostly the elderly, and when he hatches a plan to make extra cash on the side, rather illegally, his whole life changes for the better, at least for a while. One of Flaherty's clients is Leo, played by the funky character actor Burt Young, who many vears ago co-starred in a film, "Convoy." "Convoy," directed by the immortal Sam Peckinpah, is a terrible film based on a popular song of the '70s of the same name, which outlaw truckers and their radio.

I digress.

Leo has a touch of dementia and needs someone to handle his financial affairs. Flaherty arranges for that person to be him, made in Las Cruces "epic" told the tale of a bunch of communications through the then ultra-popular CB after he finds out Leo's caretaker was receiving a handsome salary, which Flaherty then takes for himself after putting Leo in a nearby retirement facility.

On the side, Flaherty coaches high school wrestling, and into his life one day comes Kyle, Leo's grandson who has run away from his drug-addled mother to come stay with his grandfather. Flaherty and his wife decide to have the lad stay in their home and enroll him in high school, not knowing that Kyle was a state champ wrestler at his previous school. He works out for Flaherty's pathetic team and soon the team has new life, spirit and prestige, as Kyle leads them to victory after victory, inspiring even the lousiest wrestler on the team to new heights, more or less.

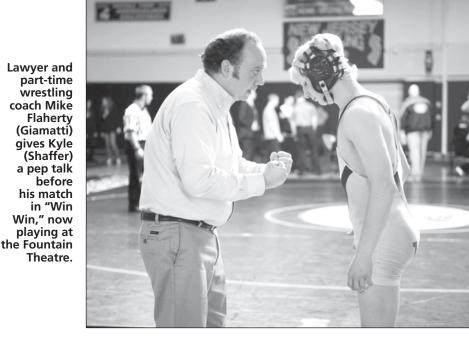

All goes according to plan until Kyle's mother shows up, intent on getting the allowance Flaherty is using to "pay" himself for Leo's care, and to claim what she thinks rightfully belongs to her. Leo was not the ideal father; Cindy is certainly not the ideal mother.

Soon, Flaherty's plan is revealed and all Hades breaks loose, but during this time, the relationship between Kyle and Flaherty's family has taken root. Kyle and Mike Flaherty have something in common that one has to look under the surface to find.

In McCarthy's two previous films, he was able to tell his story about an everyday kind of bloke simply and with grace and intelligence. "Win Win" continues that tradition, and even the predictable parts are believable and "Win Win" is a tale of morals, one in which we learn how they can be abused, learned and renewed. It is fun to note that in this particular film, the characters that have the most are the youngest and oldest.

"Win Win" wins.

Jeff Berg has nothing more to say today. jeffberg@ lascrucesbulletin.com . Berg is a board member of the Mesilla Valley Film Society. This review is intended as his own opinion and not that of any of the other board members of the film society.

FILM REVIEW "Win Win" opens Friday, July 1, at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla.

Celebrating six years at the Fountain

The CineMatinee for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, July 2, is "Heartland" (1979, 96 minutes, rated

July 2 is a special day for the CineMatinee film series, which begins its sixth year at the Fountain Theatre. The series began in March 2002 at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum and was moved to the Fountain July 1, 2006. The first film shown at the Fountain was this unique, realistic and moving documentary-like Western. Hence, the film society felt it is time to show it again.

"Heartland" is a gritty realistic Western that pays tribute in a semi documentary style to the men and women who toughed it out during pioneering times. Former documentary filmmaker Richard Pearce shows the hardships of life in the harsh wilderness of Wyoming circa 1910. Writer Beth Ferris adapts it from the letters of frontier woman Elinore Randall Stewart and allows it to be a terse and moving film.

Clyde Stewart (Rip Torn) is the Wyoming taciturn Scots rancher who pays the passage from Denver of the young widowed Stewart (Conchata Ferrell) and her 7-year-old daughter Jerrine (Megan Folsom), where she's to be his housekeeper for a year. Elinore works hard and tells her boss she would like to own her own ranch: "All my life I've been working for somebody else."

After going through the harsh winter and respecting his housekeeper's work ethic and fierce independence, Clyde proposes and they have a simple wedding.

This Western makes it a point to show that the pioneer women deserve as much credit as the men for helping to build the West, as they work hard in unpleasant primitive conditions and held the family together during rough times. It's a Western without villains or shoot-em up action, but is a robust and authentic look at the everyday mundane struggles on the frontier.

The Mesilla Valley Film Society will also host a special Fourth of July event with the final chapter of made-in-New Mexico Westerns at noon. The screening is a compilation of more than 20 Westerns shot at least in part in New Mexico from 1947 to 2004. The clips feature stars such as Robert Mitchum, Henry Fonda, Cate Blanchett and even Dean Martin.

CineMatinee is a unique blend of movies presented by the Mesilla Valley Film Society which showcases unique films, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the Old West or any-thing in between – and "movies that missed us" – films that are notable but never had a lot of

The series is designed to show area residents that film is a form of art and education as well as entertainment. At least one film a month for this series has a New Mexico connection, drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state (nearly 500) or perhaps featuring a star/story from New Mexico talent ... film festival quality movies in an old adobe theater.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe, one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287, and leave a message.

'Putnam County Spelling Bee' provides comic relief

Review by Gerald M. Kane

The back story behind the original New York production of "The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee" is in some ways more fascinating than the play itself.

The nanny of exceedingly talented playwright Wendy Wasserstein's daughter showed Ms. Wasserstein a "treatment" of an idea about a nonmusical comedy about spelling bees her improvisational troupe "The Farm" was performing.

Wasserstein thought it was a terrific idea and played the "matchmaker." She assembled a writer, composer, playwright and production team. The play was produced and tweaked in a variety of settings, until it garnered rave reviews in New York, not to mention winning the 2005 Tony Award for best book of a musical as well as best supporting actor in a musical for Dan Fogler and the 2005 Drama Desk award for best musical and best book of a musical.

In 2006, I saw the Chicago production of the show, and was quite impressed. Most especially, I was delighted by the musical's clever premise and fascinating character development. The idea of selecting four members at random from the audience to be integrated with the actors into the actual performance was a stroke of genius.

When I took my seat at the Black

Box Theatre for the Las Cruces production, which will run through Sunday, July 17, I was asked by an audience member what to expect. Knowing and admiring the magic Tom Smith, the show's director and choreographer, has created on many a Las Cruces stage over the years, I told the person to expect a long, (the show, with an intermission, runs for two hours), pleasant evening that will move pretty fast. I was correct.

Smith and his company keep up the speed, and Trae Blanco's musical direction is spot on. Peter Herman, as usual, has designed a functional, simple set, and performances, while in need of a bit of polish on opening night, were just fine.

My basic quibble with this particular production is with the costuming. Most especially, I was annoyed by the choice of wardrobe for William Zimmerman in the pivotal role of William Barfee – that's pronounced "Bar-FAY" – one of the plays eternally ongoing bits of humor.

While conventional "type-casting" went out the window years ago, Barfee's character in "Bee" is iconic in the realm of musical theater. As conceived by author Rebecca Feldman and book writer Rachel Sheinkin, Barfee is a heavy-set sickly, unkempt, "nerdy" individual, whose "over-the-top" humor (a cross between Pee Wee Herman and Jack Black) heavily contributes to the overall success of the show.

The addition of little touches, such as bottle-rimmed glasses, short pants and a shirt with its front tail flopping in the breeze, would have, without much effort, replaced Zimmerman's tall, lanky, jean-clad, T-shirted young man wearing a cape for no reason I can figure out, and added an much-needed aura of "klutziness" to his character. In my opinion, his performance needed more of a "wow" element to push it over top as was the case with award-winning Fogler in New York.

Carrie Klofach as Olive sang and acted with much charm, talent and empathy, but she too could have used some costume first aid. She tripped around the stage in an out-of-character, much-too-long, floor-length jean jumper, when the original design for Olive's costume is pink pedal pushers and patterned socks.

Costume designer Petrina Strader could have easily found the help she sorely needed at the show's website. Granted, these are small details, but as is often said, "God (and the devil) is in the details."

The "adults" in the cast were quite effective, most especially Kelsey Wymore's portrayal of a "corporate" sponsor (whose ankle tattoo seemed out of character), and the Stephen Colbert-like portrayal by Vice Principal Douglas Patch, the "word caller," wonderfully played by Mike Dick.

But there is no need to be picky,

So much to explore

City's four museums offer unique exhibits

Cheryl Fallstead Foundation for Las Cruces Museums

When I ask people which four museums are operated by the City of Las Cruces, sometimes I get a confused look and a reply that begins with the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

That's when I get the opportunity to explain that while the Farm & Ranch is a fine museum, it is operated by the State of New Mexico, not the City of Las Cruces. Then I remind them that the Museum of Art, Branigan Cultural Center, Railroad Museum and Museum of Natural History are the four operated by the city.

For those who volunteer for or work at the museums, it's hard to understand that more people aren't aware of what these four fine facilities have to offer. No matter your area of interest, one or more of the museums has something you'll enjoy.

If you love art, visit the neighboring Museum of Art and Branigan Cultural Center on the north end of Downtown Main Street, which exhibit works by local and regional artists. While you're at the Branigan, make sure to enjoy the permanent exhibit on the history of the Mesilla Valley. You're sure to learn something you didn't know.

Head south on Water Street, turn right on Las Cruces Avenue, pass Pioneer Woman's Park, and you'll end up at the Las Cruces Railroad Museum. It is housed in our historic Santa Fe Railroad Depot, a delightful building filled with history.

Before you enter the museum, you'll want to take a look at another historic delight: our Centennial Caboose. Those of us who remember the days when a bright red caboose signaled the end of a train can enjoy a moment of nostalgia. Notice that the caboose may only be viewed from outside. That's because this wooden car is more than 100 years old and needs some tender loving care.

The museum plans to construct new stairs to allow visitors to enter the caboose safely and to return the interior to its original condition. But that costs money. We are getting close to meeting a challenge grant that will provide $1,000 in matching funds once we raise an additional $1,000.

The Railroad Museum is still seeking donations to restore its Centennial Caboose, which is more than 100 years old.

If you love a caboose, help us restore this one by making a donation. You can either make your donation in the special box inside the museum or mail it to Foundation for Las Cruces Museums, P.O. Box 2794, Las Cruces, NM 88004. We appreciate donations of every amount – as they say, every little bit helps.

Of course, if we surpass our goal, that only means more funds are available to really do the job right, including a major project of installing a cover to protect the caboose from further sun and water damage.

After you enjoy the many historic items on display at the Railroad Museum, you can head to the Mesilla Valley Mall to explore the most visited of the city's four museums, the Museum of Natural History.

Enjoy the permanent exhibit of Chihuahuan Desert denizens, then discover more about forests in the traveling exhibit "A Forest Journey" that opened last weekend and continues through Sept. 11. This exciting hands-on exhibit teaches about the types of forests, basic botany, the uses of trees and conservation.

Taking a taste of Tokyo

New eatery offers Japanese, Korean dishes

By David Edwards

The first time I ever had Japanese food was 1980 or 1981 in Dallas. I ordered the sashimi - a variety of raw fish with different sauces.

When I ordered it, the Japanese woman told me, "You are more Jap anese than I am." Guess she wasn't a fan, but I was not deterred.

I loved the whole experience, but being a poor graduate student, going to expensive restaurants wasn't something I could make a habit of. It was a number of years before I would have more chances to turn Japanese.

Restaurants that offer Japanese cuisine have gradually appeared in Las Cruces, offering traditional dishes such as tempura, teriyaki and the popular sushi.

I am still not familiar with many Japanese dishes, but I am trying. I have even gotten better with chopsticks – although I still can't catch a fly on the wing. Thanks Mr. Miyagi.

With the newly opened Tokyo Sushi restaurant, there are more opportunities than ever to experience something new – maybe even Sushi chef (as a matter of fact, he is a Certified Sushi Technician) Kimber Kim was born in Japan, but grew up in Korea – there are several Korean dishes on the menu - and moved to California where he opened his own restaurant. Upon relocating to Arizona, Kim found out about a local Japanese restaurant in need of a chef and that brought him to Las Cruces. Tokyo Sushi has been open about three weeks.

"I have been surprised at how busy we have been," Kim said, even though it really has been just a soft opening for now. "Customers who know me are just finding out that I am here." Kim's approach to his restaurant involves four B's – best quality, best price, best service and best portions. He prides himself in using highquality meat and fish, the latter being a key ingredient in Japanese dishes. There are more than 50 different sushi dishes on the menu, but there are other items from which to choose if that isn't your thing. Noodle dishes both the thicker udon-type with broth and the thinner yakisoba "fried noodle" – are available as well as fried rice dishes. All can be ordered with chicken, beef or seafood.

The lunchtime bento boxes have a teriyaki meat (chicken, beef or salmon) or a chicken katsu (fried cutlet), gyoza (dumplings), vegetable tempura and rice. Just about everything on the menu comes with miso soup and a salad with a creamy sesame dressing.

On our initial visit, Girlfriend and I played it fairly safe with a chicken and beef combo bento box and vegetable tempura appetizer and tempura (with shrimp) combo. We ventured into the sushi realm by ordering a cherry blossom roll - salmon, avocado and cucumber with a piece of spicy tuna and sweet chili sauce topping each piece.

The next day, we spread our wings a bit more when she ordered the chicken yakisoba, and I tried the Korean bibimbap (which literally means "mixed meal"). There was a variety of mixed, julienned vegetables and greens with a fried egg right in the center. Under the egg was a pocket of rice and beef. A side bowl of sweet chili sauce is mixed in, and everything is tossed together. Lunch Buddy became temporary dinner buddy as he joined me, Mom and Sister on Saturday evening. I guess I don't get my adventuresome nature from my mom as she is usually pretty conservative in her food choices – chicken fried rice suited her just fine. Sis was a bit bolder choosing a seafood yakisoba and spicy California roll - salmon, avocado and cucumber with a slightly crunchy bat ter and spicy sauce on top. Jack went for the chicken udon noodles and a cherry blossom sushi roll.

I couldn't resist laying it on the line and ordered the Korean style spicy chirashi sashimi bowl – raw tuna, salmon, yellowtail, red snapper and sea bass arranged artfully on top of a bowl of sushi rice and greens with chili sauce. Everything was terrific and the mochi - sticky rice pounded into a thin rice cake and filled with ice cream – was a sweet ending to the meal.

Kim and his staff indulge in a custom which assures communication between servers and kitchen staff. When an order is placed or ready to be picked up, one party will call it out, "Order please." The answer from the other side is "Hai!" - meaning "yes" or "I got it." The verbal response helps make sure everyone is stening to each other.

Is Tokyo Sushi worth a trip? The answer is a resounding "Hai!"

Ms. Diaz, see me after class

'Bad Teacher' doesn't live up to its potential

Review by David EdwardsLas Cruces Bulletin

I am sold on Cameron Diaz. I was very wary of her staying power when the model-turned-actress first appeared in 1994's "The Mask." She has done almost 40 films since then and her dramatic turn in 2002's "Gangs of New York" sealed the deal for me.

Not only can she carry the weight of being A-Rod's current girlfriend, she's proven she can carry a film. Diaz is the titular character in "Bad Teacher," and while she does drive the movie as a foul-mouthed, hard-drinking, drug-using middle school teacher, she gets plenty of support from other cast members.

Jason Segel (TV's "How I Met Your Mother" and highly amusing films such as "Forgetting Sarah Marshall" and "I Love You, Man"), Phyllis Smith ("The Office"), "Saturday Night Live" alum Molly Shannon and John Michael Higgins – a veteran of such ensemble pieces as "Best in Show" and "A Mighty Wind" – all give nicely fleshed out performances as those involved with Elizabeth Halsey's (Diaz) near train wreck of a teaching career.

Even Diaz's ex Justin Timberlake is tolerable as a substitute teacher from a wealthy family and is the object of Elizabeth's attention.

Segel is very comfortable and endearingly

funny as the gym teacher who is persistent in his pursuit of Elizabeth – he is extremely perceptive when it comes to what makes her tick and sees through her shallowness to the lovable pot-smoking, potential alcoholic underneath.

But the real film stealer is English actress Lucy Punch ("Dinner for Schmucks" and "You Will Meet a Tall Dark Stranger") as the appropriately named Amy Squirrel, who is just as annoyingly enthusiastic in her teaching style as Elizabeth is uninvolved. Ms. Squirrel is the one who divides the cafeteria into "quadrants" for lunch supervision and gives students apples instead of the other way round, because she "learns as much from them" as she teaches. Her "crazy energy" often leaves her students slack-jawed, but she always wins the bonus awarded to the teacher whose students score the highest on the annual state test.

The $5,700 bonus check becomes a source of inspiration and motivation for Elizabeth – winning it is not a source of pride or a raising of her teaching standards – she is saving money in order to have a breast enlargement. After being dumped by her sugar daddy boyfriend and forced to return to teaching, which she got into for all the right reasons "shorter hours, summers off, no accountability," she has dedicated herself to finding a man who can take care of her. Large breasts are apparently a key item in her syllabus (sili-bust?).

The humor is very raunchy and continues this summer's trend of R-rated comedies following in the steps of "The Hangover Part II" (which now is the all-time box office champ of that genre, despite my efforts to warn you) and "Bridesmaids" – which I have yet to see, but by all accounts is hilarious. If it isn't, I shall be seeking recompense from my friends who have seen it multiple times.

I chuckled all the way through "Bad Teacher" with a few out-and-out laughs sprinkled in. Everyone in the cast was very credible – from students and co-workers to parents and Abe Lincoln impersonators – and they all had their moments. Eric Stonestreet ("Modern Family") as Elizabeth's slacker roommate Erik and Thomas Lennon in a key role as an employee of the state test creators were involved in several of my favorites.

When a movie has a title such as "Bad Teacher" – sort of like "Bad Santa" – it almost leads one to anticipate some sense of reform in the main character and, without giving too much away, Elizabeth does find a number of novel ways to connect to her students on her quest toward asset-improving surgery as well as battle Squirrel for the attention of Scott Delacorte (Timberlake). There are enough laughs along the way to keep the audience interested and, in some cases, surprised and grossed out.

Now, I know that one of the chief elements of comedy is exaggeration and "Bad Teacher" takes full advantage. There are some bad schools and bad school districts particularly in large inner city areas, but "Bad Teacher" stretches credibility to its extreme. I may be somewhat out-of-touch or naïve when it comes to the current conditions in our schools, but it is pretty hard to believe Elizabeth could get by with some of her antics.

Granted, she could likely skate by as a firstyear teacher, teaching four classes and planning a big wedding, but when she is forced to return the second year and does nothing but show movies and sleep during her class (it seems she only has one by the way) it doesn't seem anyone would put up with it. There are some rumblings from the over-achiever who dresses like she's running for office, but it doesn't come to much.

Downing the contents of miniature liquor bottles and sneaking out of winter dance chaperoning duties to smoke a doobie with a couple of fellow teachers seems a bit farfetched as well. Creating a contrast between the "bad" and suddenly "good" teacher is necessary, I suppose, but her change is strictly for the wrong reasons – going from grade "A" to "D," cup size that is. "Bad Teacher" could have used some extra credit, but it still gets a passing grade.

burnin' love

Bob Nosbisch Getting the Word Out

With all due respect to Elvis Presley fans everywhere, this article will attempt to answer the following questions.

Are hugs important? Certainly they feel good, but are they important?

You may have a friend or family member who is very affectionate. You look forward to seeing this person because his or her hugs are genuine and make you feel good. The hugs are uplifting, revitalizing and re-energizing.

You also may have a friend who gives artificial hugs. This person does not stand directly in front of you. Instead, he or she will face you and stand slightly to your right or left. The distance between the two of you is not closed, so you wonder if your friend thinks you have been infected or contaminated. Maybe your friend thinks you're wearing a new cologne, Eau de Smelly Gym Socks.

There also exists the possibility you have a friend who doesn't hug at all.

But why do hugs feel so good? Before this question is explored, a disclaimer is in order. The hugs discussed in this article do not include unsolicited hugs.

The National Institutes of Health Research says hugs and other physical affection not only affect the brain, but also the heart and other body systems. Dr. Kathleen Light of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill studies oxytocin, a hormone that makes us feel good, reduces our blood pressure and improves our moods.

Light studied oxytocin in married couples and in couples who live together. She found that people who get lots of hugs had the highest levels of oxytocin. Light also found that mothers and babies who had lots of warm contact with each other produced higher levels of oxytocin.

Even though the research on this subject is new, Light offers the following advice.

Mothers should have as much warm contact with their infants as possible. This is especially crucial during the first few weeks of babies' lives.

The act of giving birth increases oxytocin levels so mothers who have had caesarean sections may need even more warm contact time with their babies.

Couples who have warm contact such as hugging, sitting close or holding hands several times a day have higher oxytocin levels than those who do not.

Some studies show that massage will decrease stress hormones, not only in the person receiving the massage, but also in the person giving it.

So the next time you're with someone you passionately care about, give that person a real, genuine, meaningful hug. In addition to feeling good mentally, this action may help you feel good physically, too, as the level of your stress hormones and blood pressure decreases. Give that person a hug, a hug of burnin' love.

Firefighter offers tips on how to be safe this summer

By Jimmy CurrierLas Cruces Bulletin

With the Fourth of July just around the corner, summer is in full swing and that means more barbecues, fireworks and camping. While these are fun pastimes, the Las Cruces Fire Department wants to remind everyone that we're still in a drought, and the risk of fire is elevated.

"It's still dangerous and extremely dry," said Las Cruces firefighter Nathan Beyer. "We're really short on rain, and it's left everything extremely dry, so we're susceptible to fire and high winds.'

The city has limited the use of fireworks to areas that are paved, barren or have a readily accessible water source. Fireworks are not allowed in areas that are covered wholly or in part by timber, brush or native grass.

Also, remember fireworks purchased outside of Las Cruces may be prohibited within the city and could result in citations or fines. The city has different regulations than the Town of Mesilla and Doña Ana County.

"Anything higher than 6 feet is no good," Beyer said. "Even if it just sits on the ground and shoots higher than 6 feet you, shouldn't be shooting those off because the winds can catch

If the city's fireworks show on July Fourth isn't enough pyrotechnics for you, then stick to the following fireworks for your home show: cone fountains, crackling devices, cylindrical fountains, flitter sparklers, illuminating torches, toy smoke devices and wheels. Those fireworks are allowed by the city, while items such as these are prohibited: aerial spinners, helicopters, mines, missile-type rockets, Roman candles, shells, stick-type rockets and chasers. Violating these rules can result in citations or fines, according to the city.

If by chance or misfortune, you have an accident with the fireworks and catch on fire, Beyer says to stop, drop and roll.

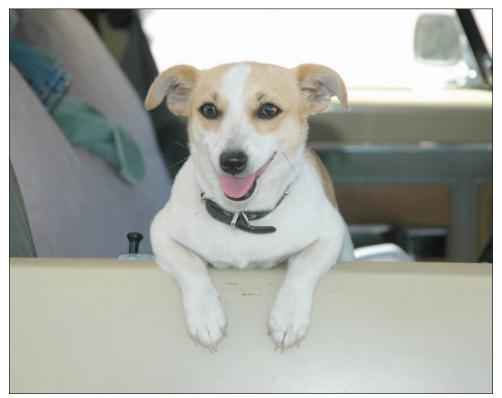

"Stay calm, roll around on the ground and you'll get it out pretty quick," he said.

It's also a good idea to have water nearby for any fire accidents, Beyer said.

"If there's a fire, and you have a hose nearby try to put it out," he said. "The most important thing is to make sure everyone is out of the way. If it's close to the home, then get everyone out of the home. The more water you got nearby, the better."

Try to beat the heat this summer

In extreme temperatures during the summer, do not leave pets or children in the car, even for a few minutes. If you must leave your pet in the car, make sure it has access to water and is in a shaded area.

High temperatures can produce deadly results

By Les Parr

the Las Cruces Bulletin

It's a hot topic, and we can't get away from it. The summer temperatures are a constant conversation piece, but it can be much more than that. It can be deadly.

Twelve children have died and 28 others have been hospitalized due to heat-related illnesses in New Mexico between 2005 and 2009, according to information compiled by Chris Minnick of the New Mexico Department of Health. The agency is reminding residents to take particular precautions, especially with children and elderly. The department of health is also reminding parents to never leave children unattended in vehicles in this kind of weather.

Each year, an average of 36 children in the U.S. die in an automobile as a result of heatstroke, reported the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Rapidly rising temperatures inside a locked car can be fatal for a small child in just a matter of minutes.

In Las Cruces, the fire department has only had to respond to two heat-related emergency calls from May 1 to June 23 of this year, according to Kristen Anderson, who researched on the incidents

New Mexico Health Secretary Dr. Catherine Torres issued some advice for families.

"Never, under any circumstances, should you leave your child in your car because the inside of the car can reach extreme temperatures very quickly that could cause a serious health emergency," she said. "If you see a child alone in a car, and you cannot find the parents or caregivers, and the doors are locked, call 911 immediately to help get them out.

"Parents should also teach children not to play in any vehicle. Car keys and remote openers should never be left within reach of children."

People who take their pets with them in their vehicles should be aware that these same conditions apply to the pet, and extreme heat such as that in a vehicle can be fatal for the pet, also

Whether in the car or in the yard, make sure all animals have plenty of fresh water and are able to move out of the direct sunlight.

People at the greatest risk of heat-related illness include the elderly, the very young and those with chronic diseases. People in these groups should be monitored frequently. Healthy people can also become ill if they participate in strenuous physical activity during hot weather conditions, warns the department of health.

"If you suspect heat stroke in someone, move the person out of the sun and into a shady or air-conditioned space, cool the person by covering him or her with damp sheets or by spraying with cool water, direct air onto the person with a fan or newspaper, have the person drink cool water if he or she is able and dial 911 immediately," Torres said.

Dehydration and overexposure to the sun can cause heatstroke, a potentially life-threatening illness that causes the body's normal mechanisms for dealing with heat stress to shut down. The main indication of heatstroke is an elevated body temperature greater than 104 degrees and changes in mental status, ranging from personality changes to confusion, to the department of health.

The New Mexico Department of Health is not the only agency issuing heat-illness prevention tips. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) also have words of caution.

The CDC advises the best defense is preparation. Drink more fluids, regardless of physical activity, but don't drink fluids that contain alcohol or large amounts of sugar, and don't just wait until you are thirsty. Stay indoors as much as possible. Wear lightweight, light colored and loose fitting clothing. Never leave anyone in a closed, parked vehicle. Visit adults at risk at least twice a day and watch for signs of heat exhaustion. Infants and young children need more frequent watching.

One of the things the EPA advises is to prepare for hot weather before it happens. This advice is a little late for folks living in the Las Cruces and the Southwest. However, the EPA offers additional heat illness prevention advice. The agency points out prolonged hot weather often means drought, which greatly increases the risks of wild fires, which are already occurring in the region.

Another interesting issue, according to the EPA, is urban and suburban areas can be "heat islands," zones that can be from 2 to 10 degrees warmer than the surrounding countryside. Because they are warmer, they naturally take more energy to keep cool, which raises costs and reduces air quality. The EPA suggests communities invest in long-term strategies such as promoting or installing cool or vegetated "green" roofs, planting more trees and vegetation and switching to cooler pavement materials.

People also should know and plan ahead of time what they can do to keep their food safe during an emergency if there is a blackout period. Moving to a lower floor or basement can help. Stay out of the direct sun and wear sunscreen SPF 15 or higher

Last but not least, according to the EPA, try to stay healthy, limit outdoor activity to mornings and evenings if possible and never leave anyone or any animal alone in a car or by a pool or other risky locations, not even for "just a few minutes."

Fire safety

While grilling a succulent, juicy rib eye is a recipe for a successful barbecue, it can also be a recipe for disaster, especially if the grill master had one too many beers.

Beyer said to remain vigilant of the flame.

"No. 1 is to not overuse charcoal and lighter fluid," he said. "Gas grills are pretty safe because the fire can't get too far from the grill itself. Also, make sure the grill is clean and is being supervised at all times. You don't have to stand next to it until you're done, but don't throw something on it and walk away for a half hour."

If a fire flares up, Beyer says to close the lid on a charcoal grill, and for gas grills to shut off the propane or natural gas. He also advised to have a fire extinguisher nearby.

In fact, grilling is the only thing where a fire is allowed in the city.

"We have a ban on open burning in the city unless it's for cooking," Beyer said. "There's no burning of weeds or grass and we've suspended burn permits until the fire marshal decides we've had enough moisture to make it safe again for open burning."

Beyer and the rest of the firefighters want everyone to have a safe summer.

"Don't put yourself or your family in danger, if there's a fire, pick up the phone and dial 911," he said.

It's also imperative for people, specifically children to remember that fire is not a toy.

"It's important not to play with matches, lighters or fire," Beyer said. "We've had fires in the past because kids played with them. They're best left to grownups. If it burns, a kid shouldn't touch it unless the parents are around."

The Lincoln National Forest is a great place to get away from the heat and enjoy the great outdoors, but the drought and wildfires are limiting the outdoor fun. As of Thursday, June 23, the forest is closed because of extreme fire conditions, meaning no camping, fires, hiking or bicycling in the forest east of Las Cruces. To check the status of the Lincoln National Forest, visit www.fs.usda.gov/lincoln.

West of Las Cruces, the eastern portion of the Gila National Forest is still open, but fires aren't allowed.

"If you're backpacking, bring prepared food," said Linda Torteson Gonzales, a fire information officer. "It's extremely dry"

It's so dry, that in her 20 years of service, Gonzales has never experienced conditions like this, she said.

"We are beyond extreme drought," she said. "This is completely unprecedented dryness, and we've hit less than 1 percent relative humidity, which I thought was impossible."

Be aware that any spark can cause a fire, Gonzales said.

"Whether you're welding, a backfire from your car, or you pull over with a hot muffler in weeds, it can start a fire. A cigarette thrown out the car window can start a fire."

The only cooking allowed is using a gas-powered grill or stove with a shutoff valve in a developed campsite, Gonzales said

Grill safety

- Keep the grill on a level surface away from the house
- Ensure that all furniture and accessories are far from the grill
- Never grill inside the home
- Store gas cylinders outside and away from the house and make sure the valves are turned off when not in use
- Never allow burned coals to smolder in any container on a wooden deck and make sure to soak the coals before disposing of them in heavy-duty aluminum foil and put them in a non-combustible container away from the house.

Fireworks safety

- Fireworks may not be sold to anyone under 16 years old
- Fireworks may not be sold to anyone who is intoxicated
- Keep in mind the hour of usage and be considerate of your neighbors
- Be aware that dry weather conditions have left grasses and weeds susceptible to fire
- Keep a water supply a garden hose and a bucket – handy in case of fire
- Children should never use fireworks without adult supervision
- Never let children light fireworks
- Light only one item at a time and move away from it
- Use fireworks outdoors only and keep them away from combustibles and busy areas

Fourth of July pet safety

While families enjoy the pops and bangs of fireworks during the Fourth of July, the noise can be terrifying to pets, and the fireworks can also pose a poisonous threat to animals. Make sure you keep your pets safe over the holiday weekend so you and your family can enjoy the Fourth of July.

For pets with noise phobias, especially dogs, they may cower at the sounds of thunder and fireworks. They may try to escape from the situation, which can mean broken windows, torn fences and chewed doors, resulting in lacerations and other injuries. To avoid a potentially hazardous situation, follow these tips:

- Keep your dog at home. If you're heading to a park or open lot to set off your fireworks, leave your dog at home. They probably won't enjoy the display as much as the rest of the family, and there are many other hazards around, especially if the dog tries to run away from the noise.
- Keep pets indoors. If you're lighting fireworks on your private property, keep your pet inside with the blinds or curtains closed and the TV on for distraction. If possible, provide a quiet place to where a dog can escape if scared.
- Keep pets away from the fireworks or grilling area. Pets may try to sniff or eat fireworks, which contain dangerous chemicals, and if too close, pet hair can catch fire.
- Use a leash. If you must keep your pet outside, keep it on a leash so it can't run into traffic or other hazards.

An extra-large, handcrafted front door measuring 8 feet high and about 4 feet wide accented by two rectangular windows bring guests indoors. Inside, they are then greeted by an intricate entrance and windows to the Organ Mountains.

"When you walk in, you see these wonderful things," said Realtor Kaye Miller of Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, who represents the listing. "First you focus on this (a ceramic tile medallion accented with copper-looking tile) and then the mountains."

Separated by a half wall topped with carved wood columns and matching corbels, the great room is directly across from the entrance. Featuring a 20-foot ceiling decorated with vigas and planks laid in a wagon wheel pattern, the room has several large windows that bring in natural light and the view.

A fireplace also rests in the room. Miller said Nancy Charles, who decorated the home, painted an outline that reflects the mountainscape of the Organ Mountains in its nicho.

Split into two wings, to the right of the entrance is a bedroom enclosed behind French doors. Burk said they transformed the bedroom, one of four in the home, into a den.

"I spend a lot of time in here on the computer or watching TV," said Burk of the room, which includes a tray ceiling with recessed lighting and a curved wall of windows that look out to the front courtvard.

A hall lined with a large nicho and built-in shelves leads past a half bathroom, which features a unique granite sink bowl on a granite countertop, to the master suite.

A round wall of windows surrounds a seating area as a kiva-style fireplace covered in ceramic tile with a mosaic pattern rests near a door to the wrap-around patio. The bed is set against a recess in the wall, giving the room another visual detail. An ornate arch then leads to the master bathroom.

Miller said custom oak cabinetry stained a rich color fill the room, which also includes a corner jetted bathtub draped in tile and two sinks along with a vanity covered in granite. A free-standing shower continues the tile motif of the home, she said, and includes a wall of glass blocks for light. A large L-shaped walk-in closet finishes the room and uses every inch of available space.

The formal dining room rests to the left of the entrance. Created to be a private, elegant getaway, the room includes solid oak floors and a tray ceiling with rope lighting.

Beyond this area is the kitchen. The kitchen features a curved breakfast bar expanding 16 feet, great for entertaining guests. Offering ample workspace, it features a pre-sink with garbage disposal in addition to the regular sink. A pot filler is conveniently placed in the ceramic tile backsplash over the stove top. Vigas also line the skylight.

"He tried to make each skylight interesting," said Miller, explaining that each includes some sort of unique detail.

Off the kitchen is the informal dining area. Nestled under a faux-cove ceiling, Miller said it's a great area to enjoy breakfast while gazing out to the backyard. The other bedrooms, which share a Jack and Jill bathroom and feature walk-in closets, finish the home.

Burk said something he noticed right away was the quality of construction Smith put into the home.

"When you're inside, you can't even hear the wind blow no matter how strong it is," he said. "It's extremely well built.

"I think the thick walls and the solidness of it makes the home unique and special."

"Anyone whoever buys a Jarrett Smith home knows he really builds a quality home," said Miller, adding that Smith also revisits the homes he constructs if the owner has any problems or questions.

Out back, the large wrap-around patio includes plenty of room for entertainment, thanks to the built-in grill and fireplace. Featuring a mixture of grass, rock and native plants, the landscaping had plenty to offer the Burks, including more flagstone paths to the front of the home and around the .9-acre lot.

While the landscape was completed before the couple's arrival to the home. Burk said they had a curved wall built to enclose a hot tub with a rock fountain.

"There is plenty of room for a pool back there, too," Miller said.

Enjoying the peacefulness of a gated community, Burk said it's also a great location because it is a short drive from important amenities, such as MountainView Regional Medical Center and shopping centers.

The large kitchen was designed to be both stylish and functional and includes granite countertops.

Singing sweet songs of steam

Pie bird vents dessert for a crisp, evenly cooked delight

By Beth Sitzler

With the Fourth of July just around the corner, now is the time to celebrate everything American - freedom of speech, baseball, high fives and apple pie.

According to a 2004 survey conducted by Crisco, one out of four Americans prefer apple pie, followed by pumpkin, sweet potato, chocolate, lemon meringue and cherry. That same survey also revealed that one in four people would rather dine on homemade pies than those from a bakery, pastry shop or diner.

While the debate over what makes a perfect pie rages on, most can agree that a delectable pie begins at its crust. Flaky, crisp, yet not too dry - achieving such a feat can be challenging.

A significant problem athome chefs can face is a soggy crust, which can result from steam unable to escape the top crust. One way bakers keep their pies well ventilated is by cutting slits into the upper crust.

Although functional, this can mare the appearance of the dessert. Ventilate your pie without the slits by using a pie bird instead.

What is it?

Originally created in the 1700s, the pie bird has been the answer to soggy, spilt-over pies for centuries by acting as a vent.

Simple in design, the bird is traditionally made from porcelain, but nowadays can also be found in ceramic and even silicone. Also, the shape of the gadget isn't restricted to solely a bird - it can also be found the form of vegetables and other figurines, which happen to be a hot collectible for some.

No matter the shape of material, the pie bird has the same design. The slender gadget includes small arches along its base, which allow steam and juices to enter the hollow cavity. An opening in the top of the utensil – typically a gaping mouth when a bird – lets the built-up steam be released out of the pie.

Releasing the steam will help prevent the pie from boiling over and the crust from becoming soggy. $I\bar{t}$ also helps promote even cooking throughout the dessert staple.

Along with these benefits, the pie bird is an important tool because it will help support the upper crust of the pie. Often times, the filling in the pie will collapse, causing the top crust to fall. The pie bird will work like a pillar in the center of the dessert, keeping the crust lifted to allow it to cook and crisp evenly.

How does it work?

The pie bird is recommended to be used for fruit and meat pies. After lining the bottom of the pie pan with the unbaked crust, set the pie bird in the middle.

Pour the filling into the piecrust, surrounding the pie bird. Spread it around to make sure it is evenly around the figurine. Next, cover the pie with the top layer of crust. Cut a slit in the center of the crust so the pie bird's head can stick out.

After the dough is set snuggly around the pie bird's shoulders, pinch the slit to seal it, crimp the edges as normal and bake the pie.

When the pie is cooked, let it cool with the bird still inside. It can be removed after the first piece of pie has been cut.

When finished, wash the pie bird with soap and warm water.

Where can it be found?

The pie bird can be found at cooking and bake ware stores around town, including Bed, Bath & Beyond. It can also be purchased online at www.cheftools.com.

How much does it cost?

The pie bird costs around $3 to $5.

Three Berry Pie

- 1 cup fresh strawberries, halved
- 1/2 cup white sugar 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 2 cups raspberries 1 1/2 cups fresh
- blueberries
- recipe pastry for a 9-inch double crust pie

In a large mixing bowl, stir together sugar and cornstarch. Add strawberries, raspberries and blueberries; gently toss until berries are coated. When using frozen fruit, allow fruit mixture to stand for 15 to 30 minutes, or until fruit is partially thawed.

Line a 9-inch pie plate with half of the pastry (see recipe below). Stir berry mixture, and transfer to the crust lined pie plate. Top with second crust around a pie bird, and seal and crimp the edge. To prevent overbrowning, cover the edge of the pie with foil.

Bake at 375 degrees for 25 minutes when using fresh fruit, 50 minutes for frozen fruit. Remove foil. Bake for an additional 20 to 30 minutes, or until the top is golden. Cool on a wire rack. (Recipe adapted from http:// allrecipes.com.)

Pastry for Double-Pie Crust

2 cups all-purpose flour 3/4 teaspoon salt 2/3 cup shortening 6 tablespoons cold water

In a bowl, combine flour and salt; cut in shortening until crumbly. Gradually add water, tossing with a fork until dough forms a ball. Divide dough in half so one ball is slightly larger than the Roll out the larger ball to fit a 9-inch or 10-inch pie plate. Transfer pastry to pie plate. Trim pastry even with edge of plate. Pour desired filling into crust.

Roll out second ball; cut slits in pastry. Position over filling. Trim pastry to 1 inch beyond edge of pie plate. Fold top crust over bottom crust. Flute edges. Bake according to recipe directions. (Recipe adapted from http://allrecipes.com.)

Pool heating with solar

Extend your swimming season and comfort

Solar has proven itself as an amazing, reliable and affordable energy source for electricity and hot water for showers. Did you know that solar water heating systems are beneficial for pools?

It seems reasonable to expect the hot southern New Mexico temperatures and strong sunlight would keep your pool warm without the need for additional heating. Was it not for evaporation, that might be the case. Evaporation removes more than just the water you replace each day. The evaporating water takes your pool's heat with it, continuously cooling your pool.

One way to reduce evaporation, increase daytime heating and reduce nighttime heat loss is to install a pool cover. If you have a rectangular pool this can be an easy way to reduce heating and water costs while also keeping your pool warm and clean. For pools with more exotic shapes, a cover may not be an easy solution.

A pool cover alone may not be enough to extend your swimming season or create a comfortable water temperature to complement triple-digit summer afternoon temperatures. For those of you who would like to get more value from your pool and extend your swimming season from April to October, solar may be the answer. As air temperatures rise, so must pool water temperatures to reduce the shock effect of cold water on a hot day. Solar can help increase the water temperature to offer a better complement to our triple-digit summer afternoon highs.

A solar water heating system has a unique ability to not just heat your pool, but actually manage the temperature. Covered pools can get too hot during the middle of summer. Removing the cover at night can help reduce the water temperature, but you'll also loose water to evaporation and risk debris blowing into your pool. By running your solar hot water system at night, the solar collectors can be used to radiate heat out into the night air without evaporation. Now you can maintain a desirable water temperature throughout the summer.

The solar heating system integrates easily into your existing pool equipment using your filter pump to circulate the pool water through the solar collectors. The solar collectors are backed by a long 12-year warranty. Hale Huber of Sun-Tech Services tells me he has many systems in Las Cruces working great after 25 years in service. Maintenance is a biannual event requiring only a few minutes to turn valves that redirect water through the collectors or drain it into the pool.

It's easy to get caught in the trap of paying high gas heating bills or putting up with a cold and uncomfortable pool. You have a third option, use the powerful New Mexico sun to heat your pool.

You have a pool. Get more enjoyment from it. Forget about those high annual costs that may cause you to abbreviate your swimming season enjoyment to save money.

For more information on how a solar pool heating system can enhance your swimming enjoyment and reduce energy costs contact Hale Huber at Sun-Tech services.

Mellow Honek is a managing member at Sunspot Solar Energy Systems LLC, a Las Cruces solar photovoltaic systems contractor featuring New Mexico made products. For more information on the power of solar, call 541-3533 or visit www.sunspotenergy.com.

Casa Mexicana enters new era

Peña family still meeting your tile needs

By David EdwardsLas Cruces Bulletin

Martha Orta always wanted to be a nurse, but from the age of 14, she found herself working in the family business – Casa Mexicana Tile.

The tile store was started by Orta's father Isidro Peña in 1978. Originally in the beginning, tiles were made on premises one at a time on a concrete press, but Peña eventually got into the distribution of tile imported from around the world.

The business was always run by the family and had a familylike atmosphere – with customers as well as employees.

"My father was always the brains of the operation," Orta said. "My mom was the nurturer and made us all gel and work

Peña had been gradually stepping away from the business over the last 10 years, and it is now Orta who must act as both brains and mother-figure. Family is still important though, as she is aided by her son Michael and sister-in-law Sara Ceniceros in the daily operations of the store and its 25,000 square feet of

While Orta is technically the "administrator," she actually doesn't give much importance to titles, especially in a familyowned and operated business.

'You may be the 'president,' but if you see something that needs to be done, you get in there and do it," she said.

Under Orta's management, and due in part to current economic conditions, Casa Mexicana has become a bit more streamlined and, out of necessity, more selective when it comes to which tiles they carry and which manufacturers they use.

'We used to buy tile from more than 100 manufacturers," Orta said. "Now it's about 44. We wanted to stay with a good core of companies. Ones that we know who do great things for us - backing us up as far as inventory or quality.

"We used to have companies that had maybe one unusual tile, but their service was not the best."

Casa Mexicana has always been concerned with service, even more so in these more difficult economic times.

"People are shopping more," Orta said. "They used to come in, purchase and walk out. They don't do that anymore. They are much more frugal. They pay attention to everything out there, really looking at everything before they make a decision. We try to not stand out just for the types of products we offer, but for the quality."

Well educated consumers - ones that have done their research - are a welcome change as far as Orta is concerned because those customers realize that when it comes to purchasing tile it isn't just a matter of price.

'You really do get what you pay for," she said. "If you buy tile from big box retailers just because it's cheap, you may not notice until you try to install it all the variations. There are differences in size, shades and dye lots from one box of tile to the next. We make sure that those things are consistent throughout all the tiles you buy from us. Once you start installing – it's too

Longevity is another factor when it comes to tile quality, according to Orta.

"It wasn't that long ago that people were building homes with the intention of living in them for a few years, then selling them and moving on," she said. "Picking tile that was going to last wasn't necessarily something they thought too much

"Buying cheap tile and having the colors fade or the glaze start to flake off is going to cost you more in the long run. You have to pay someone to take it out, then buy new tile and have that put in. You want something that will last.'

Orta said most of the customers Casa Mexicana deals with these days are remodeling - often one room at a time. It's an indication that homeowners are staying in homes for a much longer period of time.

Casa Mexicana has a tremendous selection of tile, still imported from Europe and South America.

"The Italian tile is still the best in the world," Orta said. "Spanish tile is a close second. The Italians are building plants here in the U.S. They are U.S. made using Italian techniques."

Orta is particularly proud of the selection of Talayera tile Casa Mexicana imports from Mexico.

Talavera is a clay tile that is fired, hand painted and then fired again using techniques and designs passed down from artisan to artisan, generation to generation. The results are vibrant colors that add beauty to certain areas of the home.

Casa Mexicana has always kept up with current trends and products even offering items that appeal to those customers with more unique tastes – maybe not typical of the area. They also offer glass, metal, stainless steel, travertine resin products and a number of "green" products made from as much as 50 percent recycled materials.

"The staff's combined experience and knowledge make the customers feel comfortable," Orta said. "They know we aren't just telling them a bunch of fluff. We want them to be better consumers. We answer questions and offer advice even if they don't buy tile from us."

Orta will soon graduate with a degree in community health from New Mexico State University – "something I needed to do for myself" – but she doesn't plan on leaving the tile business, which is still about family.

A new purpose for old skateboards

Warped Tour inspires different types of boarding tricks

By Beth Sitzler

While the Vans Warped Tour brought together herds of rockhungry visitors to the New Mexico State University Intramural Fields Wednesday, June 29, the promoters tried to do more than simply hold an entertaining show.

In 2005, the tour implemented its Warped Eco Initiative with the goal of reducing its carbon footprint. Along with using Earthfriendly technology, such as a solar powered stage, vehicles fueled by biodiesel and posters printed on recycled paper, the tour also created waste and recycling programs to educate audience members.

The initiative has seen success. According to statistics from the 2008 summer tour, Warped Eco Initiative collected 40,000 pounds of recyclables and diverted approximately 750 pounds of recyclables per show from being sent to landfills.

Created in 1995 by Kevin Lyman, the idea behind Warped Tour was to combine music and extreme sports. More of a "lifestyle event," according to NMSU Coordinator for Booking and Marketing Special Events Bobbie Welch, the show's focus is beyond just music.

In honor of Warped Tour and its mission of extreme sports and recycling, here is a look at the different ways you can use an old skateboard around the home.

1. Use as a paint caddy: Painting your home can be backbreaking work. Get some help from a skateboard. When painting the lower half of the wall, sit on the board and roll yourself along with the paintbrush and can. Now you won't have to bend up and down and potentially pulling a muscle.

2. Cart around your laundry: Tired of lugging that heavy laundry basket around? Give it wheels with the help of a skateboard. Just store the basket on top of the board and when it comes time to do laundry, simply roll it over

3. Move the impossible: No matter if it's a heavy planter full of soil or an armload of trash, move those large, awkward objects with ease by using a skateboard. Simply load the item onto the board and transport it to its new location. Easy to do, just be sure to watch out for stairs, curbs and any bumps in the road ahead of you.

> 4. Recycle it all together: It may come as a surprise, but there are companies that recycle skateboards to make a variety of new items. Maple XO, a Canadian company created in 2005, uses old boards to create jewelry and other fashion accessories, including women's shoes, tote bags and cuff links.

5. Construct a piece of furniture: Even if you don't have the skills to transform your skateboard into a bracelet or a pair of earrings, you can still turn it into a piece of furniture. Using your power tools, take dowels to it and mounting it on your

them to create larger pieces

6. Make a work of art: Along with furniture, old skateboards can be turned into works of art. Remove the truck and wheels so all you have left is the deck. Carefully peel off the grip tape which will require a sharp blade and a hairdryer - and sand the top of the deck. Now you have a blank canvas to work with. Cover it in paint, or decoupage the surface with images you've cut out of magazines or decorative paper. After you've let it thoroughly dry, display it on a wall for all to see.

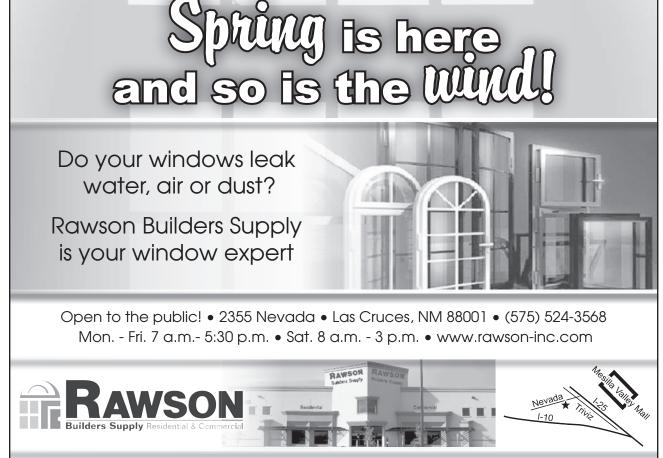

7. Get help filming: The next time you're trying to create a low-budget film masterpiece, skip the expensive dolly and use a skateboard instead. The board makes a great alternative by just setting the camera on top and wheeling it around. Capturing those perfect pan shots will be a breeze.

8. Give it new life: If none of the previous suggestions appeal to you, get new use out of your old skateboard by simply donating it. Throughout the United States there are nonprofit organizations that accept old skateboards that are then refurbished and given to children of low-income families. It's an easy way to spread the skateboard joy.

Builders and home energy rating system raters involved in the El Paso Electric Energy Star New Homes Program were recognized for their work during a luncheon Thursday, June 27, at De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery.

Reaching for Energy Star

EPE recognizes builders for energy-efficient homes

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletin

Those in the area looking for a new, energy-efficient abode to call home have a few more options thanks to the El Paso Electric Co.'s Energy Star New Home Program.

Kicked off in September 2010, EPE recognized and awarded checks to the five builders who completed the program during a luncheon celebration held Thursday, June 27, at De La Vega's Pecan Grill and Brewery.

"We hope to (certify) 200 homes by the end of the year," said Paul Royalty, EPE manager of energy efficiency and utilization.

The program was created by the utility company as a way to encourage local builders to construct more energy-efficient homes. In addition to offering educational opportunities to those unfamiliar with Energy Star certification, the program also provided participants with incentives.

Builders were rewarded based on where their homes landed on the Home Energy Rating System Index. Those who built a new home with a HERs rating of 80 to 61, received $500; $750 for homes with a 60 to 51 rating; and $1,000 for homes that have a rating of 50 or under.

Builders who were recognized for their participation were GL Green & Associates, Schueller Homes, Tanda Builders, Team Builders and Hakes Brothers, which completed nine of the 13 homes certified by the program.

Also in attendance during the luncheon were some of the HERs raters who worked along side the builders. The raters — including Miles Dyson of Inspection Connection, Larry Perea with Solar Smart Living and Javier Ruiz of Senercon — provided third-party testing for each of the homes to ensure they met the strict Energy Star requirements set by the Environmental Protection Agency, which established the program in 1992.

In addition to being third-party certified, the Energy Star homes included a variety of efficient materials to save energy, including high-performance windows, tight construction and ducts, efficient heating and cooling systems and efficient products such as lighting, appliances and water heaters.

With a great start to the effort, Royalty said he hopes to bring in more builders to the next installment of the Energy Star New Homes Program.

Area builders interested in participating in the program can contact Robin Harder at 505-440-7548 or rharder@icfi.com. For more information about the Energy Star program and other EPE energy-efficient rebate programs, visit www.epesaver.com.

Don't let buzzing bugs ruin your celebration

Keeping yellow jackets away from your festive July Fourth gatherings

The July Fourth holiday weekend is here. It brings warm weather, outdoor fun and annoyances. In fact, do you know who loves outdoor activities such as picnics as much as you do?

Those buzzy scavengers that hover over spilled soda and other sweets – the yellow jacket, an aggressive wasp, will sting multiple times if provoked. These wasp colonies are active all summer. During the warmer months, yellow jackets may seem more plentiful since they're attracted to summertime meat and sweets, including fruit and nectar from picnics and barbecues.

A single yellow jacket can sting multiple times, unlike honeybees. The sting is painful and can be harmful for those who are allergic to the insect's sting. The sting is similar to that of a bee or fire ant, and if you're aware that you are allergic to one insect you will most likely be allergic to all three.

Often mistaken for honeybees, yellow jackets are wasps that differ in many ways. Their bodies aren't covered with fuzz like honeybees, and they are not considered significant pollinators. But no matter how annoying they seem, they still have a job to do. They eat flies, caterpillars and other bugs throughout the summer months.

Fewer yellow jackets are seen during the fall and winter months. Come spring,

You may notice a yellow jacket or two joining your July Fourth picnic this weekend. Keep them away with a few simple tricks.

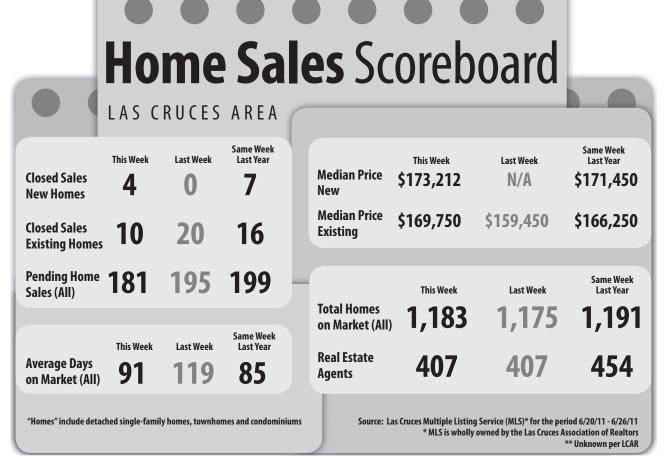

fertilized queens start new colonies.

For this July Fourth holiday weekend picnics and barbecues, here are a few tips to keep yellow jackets away:

- Keep food covered while you dine outside
- Clear away all dirty dishes immediately after your picnic or barbecue
- Cover beverages with a lid and drink with a straw
- Cover garbage cans and tie trash bags tightly

Celebrating Fourth of July

Fiery feast in honor of Independence Day

Sunny Conley Chile Knights

"On this day in 1776, the Continental Congress, setting the 13 colonies on the road to freedom as a sovereign nation, approved the Declaration of Independence."

What's red, white and blue everywhere? Fourth of July celebrations of course! To commemorate the occasion, food fireworks are on the agenda – fare that sparks with peppery goodness.

Hit the park or patio armed with a parade of dips, chips, hot dogs, steaks and tater salad, each exploding with sass and flavor. When the sky darkens and the fireworks commence, ignite taste buds with star spangled fiery fudge pops. "Feliz día de la independencia!"

2 tablespoons fresh lime juice 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar 1 tablespoon honey 1/2 small jalapeño, seeded, deveined and chopped 1/2 teaspoon salt, preferably sea salt 1 small garlic clove 1/2 teaspoon mustard

Celebrate the Fourth of July with a juicy grilled steak, served topped with a slab of roasted green chile.

2 to 3 large handfuls baby arugula (or spring greens), well washed and dried 3 cups cooked black beans

1/4 cup feta cheese, crumbled 1/3 cup sliced almonds, toasted

For the dressing, in a blender or food processor purée lime juice, vinegar, honey, jalapeño, salt, garlic and mustard. Add the olive oil and purée until everything comes together. Taste and adjust with more salt, honey or lime juice, if needed. Set aside until you are ready to serve the salad.

Just before serving, gently toss the arugula in a large bowl with a small amount of dressing. Arrange on a platter. In another bowl, toss the beans and most of the almonds with a generous splash of the dressing. Arrange the beans on top of the arugula and finish by sprinkling with the remaining almonds and the crumbled feta cheese. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Care-free container gardening

Succulents are easy to grow, can withstand the dry climate

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

Some of the easiest plants to grow are succulents. With our hot, dry, sunny climate succulents are one of the best choices for pots and containers.

Select an area that gets at least six to eight hours of direct sunlight per day or even light filtered shade all day long. Use a succulent and cactus soil mix or a soil that is light in weight and very porous. If you use a saucer, it is essential that you use an inch or two of pebbles so the soil does not act as a "wick" and draws up moister from the standing water.

There are cactus fertilizers available to help maintain a rich color, especially during the summer months. If you cannot find a succulent and cactus fertilizer, you should be able to use an all-purpose water soluble plant food at one fourth the recommended rate.

These plants are quite versatile and look great when planted alone or with several varieties in one container. One of the taller succulents is sedum "Autumn Joy," which typically can grow to around 24 inches tall or more.

"Hens and Chicks" is a very popular one that multiplies throughout the growing season. "Stone Crop" sedum has a reddish appearance, particularly during the early spring season. Other sedum cultivars come in an array of textures and colors varying from small leaflets in light yellow to dark green and broad leaflets ranging from green to red and white.

Ice plant, which includes but not limited to delosperma, drosanthenmum, lampranthus and malephora, will grow and cascade down a pot or container. These should be used for larger sized containers, however.

Most ice plant flowers will close when a shadow is cast on them, so placing them where the sun always shines its best.

Aptenia, or "Hearts and Flowers," is a rapidly growing ground cover or cascading plant that thrives in full sun. It can also be used as a hanging basket that doesn't need as much water as most other hanging plants. Unlike all the previous plants mentioned, the aptenia is not always perennial during our coldest months of the year. Still, its quick growth makes up for its weak frost resistance.

If your pot dries out for a day or two, most of these plants mentioned will make a quick come back. If you're one of those who "forgets" to water that certain pot, then succulents just might be the answer.

Gary Guzman, owner of Guzman's Color Your World Gardening Centers, can be reached at gary@lascrucesbulletin.com.

A variety of succulents can survive in our hot climate, even if gardeners forget to water them for a day or
