Facts lost in wilderness discussions

'Sound bites' may obscure the debate

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

To those advocating for wilderness and those wanting further concessions to the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act, news reports oversimplify and create incorrect perceptions about the debate, both sides argue.

That was part of the common ground shared in presentations made by both sides to the Advertising Federation of Las Cruces Tuesday, Aug. 10.

John Hummer, speaking for the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce (GLCCC), said the business organization is "misperceived" as being opposed to creating wilderness areas in Doña Ana County.

The legislation is poised for a vote by the U.S. Senate after being passed by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, chaired by the bill's main sponsor, New Mexico U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman.

The bill in its current form seeks to designate 241,400 acres as wilderness and 99,150 acres as National Conservation Areas (NCA). The areas range from landmarks as well known as the Organ Mountains to the isolated Potrillo Mountains complex.

Hummer said the chamber agrees that most of the federal lands listed in the legislation should be protected, especially the Organ Mountains.

But for the Potrillo Mountains complex, the chamber is opposed to it getting a full wilderness designation because of its proximity to the U.S.-Mexico border, Hummer said. Wilderness restrictions would create entry barriers to law enforcement, he said, and the chamber is trying to shine a "laser beam focus on this issue."

Those bringing up the security concern, however, are dismissing that the legislation has removed more than 33,000 acres from the original request that creates a three-mile buffer zone along the border, said Nathan Small of the New Mexico Wilderness Alliance. Other

Students return to classes Public schools and university to re-open doors next week

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

Buses will roll, crossing guards will blow their whistles and the congestion of car and foot traffic will return to University Avenue.

Public school starts again Monday, Aug. 16, and New Mexico State University's fall semester begins Thursday, Aug. 18.

Las Cruces public schools are expecting about 25,000 students at the start of the week and about 19,000 NMSU students will be figuring out their class schedules by the end of the week.

While both public schools and the university continue to see growth in student numbers, there's also plenty of belt-tightening along the way as state government holds back on releasing funds as revenue predictions fall short in the current economic doldrums.

Despite the economy, NMSU is still expecting some enrollment growth, though probably not as impressive as in recent years. Between 2005 and 2009, NMSU's total enrollment went from 26,391 students to 34,150 – a 29-percent increase in four years. Last fall semester, NMSU saw an 8.3 percent increase in enrollment across all campuses. The head count for the Las Cruces campus last fall was 18,497.

NMSU is going into this academic year with a 10-percent cut in the money it gets from the state for instruction and general operations. Last spring, NMSU regents approved an 8-percent tuition increase to make up for the lost money and began a dialogue to find savings and efficiencies.

LČPS expects modest student growth, but growth nonetheless.

On Monday, Aug. 16, classes start for all grades, except pre-kindergarten and kindergarten. Registration for pre-kindergarten and kindergarten will be on Monday, Aug. 16, and Tuesday, Aug. 17, with classes starting on Wednesday, Aug. 18.

The new Monte Vista Elementary School, 4675 Peachtree Hills Road, will be ready for the first day of classes, but the opening of the neighboring new Mesa Middle School, 7225 Jornada Road North, has been delayed.

The $19 million elementary school will open to approximately 600 pre-school, kindergarten and elementary students from first through fifth grades. The new middle school is more than one-third complete. It will open to sixth- and seventh-grade students this fall and by 2011 is expected to have about 900 students. The new middle school will cost about $37 million to build.

Gov. Bill Richardson says he wants New Mexico State University to be a leader in immigration studies and wants innovative energy sources developed for New Mexico farmers and ranchers.

To further those goals, the governor announced Thursday, Aug. 5, that he was award-ing $200,000 from American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funds to NMSU's International Relations Institute.

Richardson joked at a press conference, held in NMSU's Anderson Hall that these funds didn't have to be approved by the state Legislature. In all seriousness, however, Richardson said ARRA presents New Mexico with a historic opportunity to invest in education and technology that will pay off for future generations.

'Immigration and energy are two of the most dominant issues facing our country, and New Mexico State University is wellprepared to advance the debate on behalf of our nation," he said. "I am pleased to release these funds to support the faculty, staff and students working hard on these innovative programs.'

Of the $200,000, $125,000 is devoted to the Renewable Energy, Water and Arid Lands Task Force to demonstrate simple and inexpensive energy and water solutions for the state's agriculture industry. Projects include a new solar power system for water distribution, a solar system for an animal watering station and a biodiesel project fueled by algae.

As the country wrestles with a national immigration debate, students, faculty and the Las Cruces community at NMSU are actively researching and teaching immigration trends in New Mexico, especially as it impacts immigrants' access to employment and education. To support these efforts, the Migration and Immigration Task Force will receive $75,000 to support a yearlong program of research, teaching and community outreach, including a visiting scholar.

NMSU President Barbara Couture said the funds will help the International Relations Institute in two very important areas - renewable energy and immigration. "NMSU has a long history of work and expertise in renewable energy and water use in arid lands," she said. "Our faculty and staff experts will bring valuable skills and experience to the table as we tackle these projects."

The impetus for the summer immigration institutes came from the tremendous interest expressed by community members and other attendees of two previous immigration conferences, held in March 2009 and this past March, Couture said.

"NMSU's work in renewable energy and immigration is important for fulfilling our land-grant mission to conduct research, teaching and service," she said. "It is also an excellent example of how NMSU can partner with communities in New Mexico and around the world to make a significant difference in people's lives.'

Richardson said there is conflict surrounding the national immigration issue and comprehensive reform is necessary.

"It is important we have a comprehensive immigration policy," he said. "We need a path to legalization and a better relationship with Mexico and Central America."

The governor said Arizona took a wrong step and the federal government has failed in immigration policy. He stressed the importance of developing a policy with other border states such as Texas, Arizona and California.

The International Relations Institute, which was established in 2006 by former U.S. Ambassador Delano Lewis, will help tackle some of those issues.

Lewis said the stimulus funds would help the institute further its goals and have an impact on international issues and the world.

"We are going to educate and have dia-logue on these issues," he said. "We want students to know that we are globally connected and what happens in one part of the world can have an effect here in Las Cruces.'

Back to school

The long, hot summer is finally over, and Las Cruces comes alive as students return

Does the calendar really say that we have already reached mid-August? The answer is "yes." New Mexico State University and Doña Ana Community College students are flocking back into town. Public and private schools are holding their first classes of the semester. Football fields, soccer fields and volleyball courts are alive with hopeful athletes, and the late summer and fall activities are about to begin.

Yes, Las Cruces is coming back to life. Lines are longer at the gas stations. Restaurants are starting to fill back up after a somewhat dreary summer. An attitude of optimism is in the air.

The start of a new fall semester is one of the best times of the year. The weather is beginning to moderate. Our sports teams are all undefeated. Not one student has failed a test. Car dealers are starting to sell a few more cars. Most everyone has a little money in their pocket.

Aggie fans are hopeful that this might be the year the football team will take a giant step forward and win enough games to qualify for a December spot in the New Mexico Bowl in Albuquerque. Mike Jordan's volleyball team has an eye on regaining a coveted spot in the top 20 national rankings and a win or two over Western Athletic Conference nemesis, Hawai'i. The Aggie soccer team is out to prove that last year's successful premiere season was not a fluke.

Mayfield, Las Cruces and Oñate high schools are racing to win another state championship or two before the new high school opens two years from now in the fall of 2012. Mesilla Valley Christian Schools look forward to another successful year as well.

Local golfers will delight in the plethora of charity scrambles and amateur tournaments almost every week during the fall. Some of my favorites include the Marvin Menzies 6th Man scramble at Picacho Hills on Sept. 2 (just after the Aggie basketballers return from their summer exhibition sojourn into Canada), the Hispano chamber scramble on Oct. 8, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce outing on Oct. 1 and the DACC event on Oct. 15.

The second annual SalsaFest will bring people to Downtown Las Cruces on Sunday, Aug. 29. The next weekend is Labor Day, which means it's time for the Southern New Mexico Harvest Wine Festival at the fairgrounds. The holiday weekend is also time for the world-famous Hatch Chile Festival.

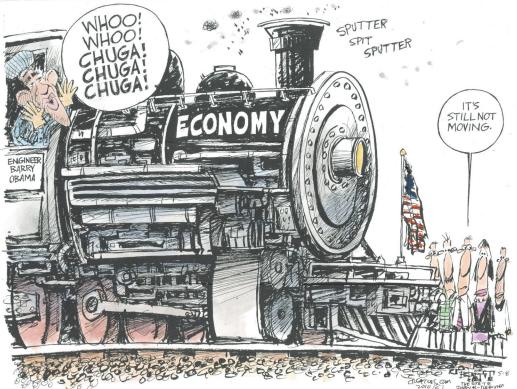

In three consecutive weeks, starting at the end of September, the Las Cruces area will host three "should not miss" events - The Whole Enchilada Fiesta (Sept. 24 through 26), the Southern New Mexico State Fair & Rodeo (Sept. 29 through Oct. 3) and the Cowboys for Cancer Research dinner-dance and team roping competition, along with the Cowboys Are Tough Enough to Wear Pink events culminating with the NMSU vs. UNM football game on Oct. 9.

The Las Cruces Symphony season gets under way on Saturday, Oct. 2, with a performance featuring classical violinist Judith Ingolfsson.

For folks with a more serious focus on the issues of the day, NMSU will host the Domenici Public Policy Conference featuring Karl Rove, Sam Nunn and Sam Donaldson among others, on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 1-2.

People who just want to get away from the bustling crowd can hike up into the Organ Mountains at Dripping Springs or Aguirre Springs.

In summary, there is definitely something for everyone in Las Cruces. This is just a reminder that "Life is Good in Las Cruces." We urge each reader to get out and enjoy what Las Cruces has to offer.

Letters to the Editor

Irresponsible drivers should just grow up

I represent all the responsible, law-abiding citizens of Las Cruces. For us, traffic cameras are a non-issue. And here's why. We obey the law. Taxpayers pay a substantial amount of money for engineers to measure and set maximum speed limits and automatic signals that regulate traffic flow.

For those of us who operate our vehicles within the speed limit, and who make every reasonable effort to stop when a signal turns yellow, the traffic camera is nothing more than another episode of "Candid Camera".

The complaints, including those of Anthony Avallone – which he so cleverly wraps up in the Constitution – come from people who apparently believe they can drive at whatever speed they wish and who believe traffic signals are optional.

Their, and Avallone's, irresponsibility is the cause of many wrecks and increasing insurance premiums.

I would say this: Instead of huffing over the perceived injustice of traffic cameras, why don't you advise all the whining, sniveling irresponsible drivers to grow up.

Bush tax law needs to be rescinded

I am indignant about some current discussions in the press regarding taxes and individual tax laws in the U.S. I feel that the tax laws as developed were completely and illegally disregarded during the Bush years allowing wealthy Americans to not ever pay taxes.

I feel this "law" was and is illegal and needs to be rescinded and the people who benefited from it should be charged back taxes for ten years.

There is nothing in our legal system that declares that some people are more important than other people as far as taxes are concerned.

I feel that the Republican Party lies about everything. My big issue is the budget, which gets used for whatever they please during the Republican years and the entire country goes to hell in a hand basket from neglect.

I tried to drive Interstate 40 after years of Republican rule. It hadn't been maintained for more than 10 years. Bridges were unsafe to use.

No maintenance. No supervision. No responsibility. If only the Democratic Party will be responsible for public safety, the price will go up. But the price will be paid by all citizens, not just the Democrats.

Comments concerning Sonoma Ranch inaccurate

Special Assessment District proposal misunderstood

By Sharon Thomas

A recent column by Michael Swickard contained many inaccuracies and reflects an incomplete understanding of the elements involved in the effort to extend Sonoma Ranch Boulevard north from U.S. Highway 70 to two new public schools and the new Las Cruces Country Club golf course.

Here is what has happened to date:

For some time now, the members of the Las Cruces Country Club (LCCC) have been anxiously waiting for their new golf course and club house located north of Highway 70 at the end of the proposed Sonoma Ranch Boulevard. Originally, the LCCC had an agreement with the developer, Philip Phillippou, to obtain their new facility. Phillippou would build a new LCCC golf course and clubhouse and the LCCC would give Phillippou their old golf course and country club located at Solano Drive and North Main Street. Phillippou did build the golf course, but not the clubhouse or other amenities, nor the extension of Sonoma Ranch Boulevard.

In Las Cruces, roads get built when the adjacent property is subdivided. The city does not usually build roads. If a developer asks to subdivide property in order to develop it, that developer is responsible for building the adjacent roads. In this case, several parties probably assumed that Phillippou would build the road when he subdivided the property. That group could include the members of the country club, other developers and builders who have projects in that area – and the Las Cruces Public Schools (LCPS). LCPS had agreed to participate in the building of the road as they know they are responsible for all off-site infrastructure (roads and utilities) needed for new schools.

Early estimates for their share of the road were around $400,000 and for bringing the utilities to the schools around $600,000, for a total of approximately one million dollars. LCPS is currently putting in that infrastructure. It is being built to complement city standards and will be added to when funding becomes available to complete the road to meet full city standards. LCPS cannot be reimbursed from the Special

The City of Las Cruces will be submitting an annual report for the reporting year of July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010 for storm water discharges from its Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as required under the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) General Permit No. NMR040000.

The report summarizes storm water activities that have been addressed in accordance with the City's Storm Water Management Plan (SWMP). The SWMP is intended to be used as a guide to help reduce pollutants associated with storm water and urban runoff which is considered a non-point source pollutant. Copies of the report will be available for public comment inside City Hall, 700 N. Main St. in the City Clerk's office, 1st floor, (575-541-2118) and Public Works Department, 2nd floor, (575-528-3171). Assessment District (SAD). Reimbursement for work completed before the SAD was in place would be highly questionable.

In January, John Moscato, who has apparently taken over Phillippou's projects in this area, came to the City Council to ask the city for support to apply for a SAD in order to extend Sonoma Ranch Boulevard north to the new golf course. Because this idea represented a possible solution to the problem of providing a road to the new schools as well, the City Council passed a resolution declaring its intent to form that district and "to levy assessments on real property benefiting from the improvements to pay the cost of the improvements and the district."

Part of the current confusion swirling around this road project probably stems from this resolution. First of all, it was a resolution, not an ordinance. Resolutions do not have the binding power of an ordinance. Secondly, "intent" in this case does not mean the SAD is going to be formed. "Intent" only triggers the process that must be followed in order (eventually) to pass an ordinance (the enabling legislation that would be binding, like a law).

The next step after the "intent" resolution was a "preliminary hearing." That hearing was held in April at a council work session and included information on the proposed SAD, the improvements to be included, the appraisal results, a possible financing plan and schedule, etc. Council members are not allowed by law to vote at a work session. They can attempt to reach consensus through discussion, but they cannot vote.

If consensus had been achieved at this meeting, the next step would have been to bring forward a "formation resolution" at the April 19, council meeting, which would have been followed by the need to procure construction bids in order to determine the cost of the project. Then, there would have been a date set for a public meeting, after which an ordinance could be passed to formalize the SAD and delineate all the requirements.

At that point, the city would have to decide where to go to get funding for this project – the bond market, New Mexico Finance Authority, etc.

Clearly, the process includes a number of statutory legislative requirements and could not have been completed before the new schools opened, even if consensus had been achieved at the preliminary hearing in early April.

In a SAD, the property owners agree to tax themselves in order to pay for the building of something from which they will all benefit. For example, the residents along an unpaved road might decide they want their road paved. They could go to the city or the county and ask for a special assessment on their properties in order to pay for the construction of the road.

The residents themselves can initiate a SAD or, more often, the city or county initiates the SAD for the purpose of correcting deficiencies – paving a dirt road, for example. Sonoma Ranch Boulevard was an unusual request because it was neither resident nor city initiated. Furthermore, in this case, the property to be assessed was not yet developed so the people who will eventually pay for the road (the future home and business owners who will pay the additional property tax assessment) could not be consulted. All of these factors contributed to the failure to gain consensus at the April work session.

In addition, it was unclear how the additional property assessment would operate. Most SADs previously approved by the City of Las Cruces have had triggers that determine when the SAD payments begin. There was no such trigger in this SAD proposal.

Furthermore, the city would have to assess and collect the additional property taxes or negotiate with the county to do so. That could be a complicated and costly project over the 20 years of the SAD as different properties will be developed differently and so have different resulting assessed values, plans might change over time, properties could be sold several different times, etc. From what we could ascertain, this would be a billing and collection nightmare.

Another problem is the fact that not all of the properties that will benefit from the road were included in the presented list of properties to be assessed. Even though the law requires that all properties that benefit should be assessed, the planned Metro Verde development, located at the end of the road and standing to benefit most from the project, was not included.

In normal practice, the developer gets private financing to cover the cost of roads in areas of new development. These are not normal times, so the developer asked the city to help get the financing through a SAD. The question before the council was whether or not it was fiscally responsible for the city to work with this developer to access the SAD process.

In order to protect our residents, the City Council must assess the risk to the city (and, therefore, the taxpayers) of joining in this SAD venture. Currently, the city has a very high credit rating. If the bond payments are not made, what happens? The city would be required to exercise the lien, sell the property, and use the proceeds to make the bond payments. If the property doesn't sell or the proceeds are less than the bond payment, the city does not have to make up the difference; those people who bought the bonds would suffer the loss. However, the city's credit rating could be indirectly, but severely, impacted. That could put a damper on the city's ability to borrow money for other projects.

The April work session was only a preliminary hearing on the SAD proposal, and no vote was taken. The City Council expressed concerns just as any responsible party would in a business negotiation. The first offer is seldom the final offer.

Some of those concerns came to the council from their constituents who had questions about the city entering into this particular business agreement with this particular developer on this particular property. There was no "anonymous" memo. Rather, citizens (taxpayers) were asking questions about the development and the developer's financial well being.

As in any business negotiation, the developer could come back to the City Council with a revised proposal that answers some of the concerns expressed at the preliminary hearing. Council could hold another preliminary hearing to hear another proposal. If consensus is reached, the process could begin.

Sharon Thomas is Las Cruces Mayor Pro Tem and represents City Council District 6.

A cloudy future for tax holiday? Budget problems may doom back-to-school tax break

Who did last weekend's back-to-school sales tax holiday really help? We know it helped shoppers to the tune of 7 to 8 cents on the dollar that they saved on sales tax on school-related items.

Merchants said they were happy with it, too. They said people could afford to buy more items because of the tax money they were saving. Gov. Bill Richardson called it a win-win situation.

But, as always, there is a cloud on the horizon. In January, state lawmakers will be taking a close look at all the tax breaks the state offers. That includes exemptions, deductions, credits, rebates, loopholes and tax holidays in order to balance their budget. The back-to-school sales tax holiday is about the only tax break that benefits real people. Most of the breaks benefit corporations and the wealthy that have the lobbyists to assure their tax breaks stay put. So we little guys could lose out.

Sixteen states currently have back-toschool tax holidays and all are taking a hard look at whether they should continue. Georgia has canceled its tax holiday for this year. In a well-researched article, the New Mexico Independent presented the results of some think tank studies of the 16 states with a tax holiday.

The conclusion of these think tanks, which range from conservative to liberal, is that

The one and only goal for New Mexico schools Reading skills must be first priority

By Michael Swickard

It is roasting time in New Mexico: fresh picked green chile and the New Mexico public schools for their Annual Yearly Progress (AYP) numbers.

We take green chile very seriously. Big Jim or Sandia? Two sacks – is that enough? Make it three, no four!

However, most people just shrug at the AYP numbers indicating three-outof-every-four schools in New Mexico are not making the proscribed annual yearly progress. Regardless, there is something far more ominous in the numbers.

Buried in the reports is data that indicates half of New Mexico students are not reading at or above their own grade level. This is outstandingly bad.

Reading is the core educational activity in schools. Half the seventh-grade students in New Mexico are not reading at least at grade level and they have textbooks written specifically for the seventh-grade reading level. Those students are holding textbooks written above their reading level.

Remember, at least 80 percent of all material presented to students is in written form. All tests are first a test of reading and then a test of the subject matter – including math.

Again, half are not reading at the level of the material being presented to them or of the tests they are taking.

It is time for action in New Mexico. We need to focus on one – and only one – goal right now, and that goal is for essentially all students to read at the level of their grade.

OK, for those who are stuck on numbers, I would set the goal at 90 percent of New Mexico students reading on grade level instead of 50 percent. This fix of the New Mexico schools is in two parts: First, students must either start at or above grade level and keep making one year of progress each year. Second, students must make catch-up progress on their reading level while also making one year of progress. These students must achieve catch up and yearly growth at the same time.

To truly fix the problem, no students should start third grade without being able to read at the third-grade level. This is an educational goal, not a political goal, like No Child Left Behind. It seems like it would be very hard, but how can we spend even one more dollar in schools where half the students are not reading at grade level?

It makes no sense to buy half the textbooks at a level above the students.

How New Mexico students got behind is very important. For many students it is their first day in school when it is obvious they lack the literacy and number skills of a 5-year old.

There is no way the schools can be blamed when students arrive with the literate skills of a 3-year old, some with the literate skills of a 4-year old and the rest at or above the required literate skills.

This requires a cultural change in society so that all children ages 1 to 5 are read to 20 minutes every day and spend at least five minutes each day in letter and number games.

This is how students start on the proper reading grade level their first day in school. It is not the school's fault that half the students start school below the kindergarten reading level and often never catch up, because they must make one year of annual growth and at the same time make up one or more years of catch-up growth.

This is very hard since they start behind and usually stay behind.

To improve New Mexico public schools it would seem two connected approaches must be used: First, students coming to school for kindergarten must arrive ready and able to work at that level of literacy and every student reading below their own grade level must catch up on their literacy. Second, the goal – the only goal, the goal everyone works on every day – is that students who are not reading at grade level must be placed in programs that increase their reading level, especially before they finish second grade.

To improve, New Mexico's public schools should forget everything else and make reading at grade level the goal.

they don't work. They are an expensive and ineffective gimmick according to several think tanks.

These think tanks contend that consumers simply buy the same items on different days to avoid taxes. They are a costly item for state government and a headache for business.

But Albuquerque merchants who were interviewed contended sales were up and didn't complain about having to separate the items that qualify for not being taxed.

The liberal Citizens for Tax Justice disputes the claim that tax holidays benefit working-class and poor families because very low-income people usually don't have the flexibility to shift their spending to take advantage of the holiday. It concludes that money saved by eliminating the tax holiday could go to state programs for the poor.

Pew Charitable Trusts contends that retailers sometimes hike prices during the tax holidays. But we don't hear those kind of charges in New Mexico. In fact, two years ago, Richardson tried to get the three tax holidays extended to seven days.

A possibility exists that some families may travel from neighboring states to take advantage of tax holidays, especially if they were planning a vacation or a visit to grandma anyway. Texas is the only neighboring state with a similar tax holiday, but its provisions don't seem to be as generous as New Mexico's.

The yearly loss to state and local governments is around $5 million. Cities and counties absorb about 40 percent of that loss so they might lobby for discontinuance of the holiday.

It appears very likely that a legislative interim committee will want to look at the holidays this fall along with all the other myriad tax exemptions.

Many other exemptions certainly take much more than $5 million out of state revenue but it is definitely within the range of other cuts lawmakers are considering. The holidays' popularity with the public may argue for keeping it around.

Just as we may be getting some shoppers from neighboring states that don't have a sales tax holiday or don't have as generous of a holiday, we need to look at what other states offer in terms of other exemptions we may want to cut.

Any one of them could take us from a competitive position to a non-competitive one and negatively affect our economy. Both of our gubernatorial candidates have pledged to take a look at tax breaks. So we know it will be a hot topic. The problem is, however, that tax policy is a terrifically complicated subject that can activate the law of unintended consequences very quickly.

The Doña Ana County Extension Office celebrated 40 years of improved nutrition education Thursday, Aug. 5, at the Doña Ana County Government Center.

The occasion was the 40th anniversary of the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP), which is part of the Ideas for Cooking and Nutrition (ICAN) Program that is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Gayla Weaver, ICAN home economist, said more than 200 people attended the open house.

"I was excited to see the tremendous support for the Expanded Food and Nutrition Program at the 40th anniversary open house," Weaver said. "The many lives touched by this outreach program, which has provided the tools for participants to change their eating habits and physical activity for the better, was evident by the testimonies of those attending the celebration."

improve the health and well being of their families, and deals with issues such as hunger, health and obesity.

Extension nutritionists use a learn-by-doing method to teach participants to make better food choices that can improve the nutritional quality of the meals they serve their families. They also give instruction on selecting nutritious foods, preparation, food safety and sanitation and managing food budgets.

Bertha Silva, county extension nutritional educator and national award winner, said, "EFNEP is a tool that families and individuals can use to better their lives because when people learn together and cook together it sets off a spark that's needed for education to spread. EFNEP is the spark that's needed in people's lives and in communities."

on the edge of common sense When you need a cowboy

Baxter

There's an old saying, "A mule is as good as a horse, till you need a horse." Or, of course, the reverse!

Í saw a photo in the newspaper of a man standing in the surf trying to throw a rope around the tail of a beached baby humpback whale. My first thought was, "A marine mammal biologist is as good as a cowboy, till you need a cowboy."

How many times have you thought that yourself: "If only I had a cowboy." Like two years ago, when your cat got stuck up a tree. Sure, you called a fireman. They showed up with sirens blaring and lights flashing. Then they broke out the ladders and attempted to climb up the tree. A cowboy would simply have roped the limb, dallied and bent the limb back double. Then, with true

You realize that reasonable dialogue with moon-eyed zealots is futile ... cowboy clarity, he would have shucked the dally, released the limb and catapulted the cat into the neighbors stock tank where the Navy Seals could have rescued him. Or, say you were being picketed by HSUS, PETA and the lunatic fringe for texting non-organic messages to caged hens encouraging them to "Lay one for the team."

You realize that reasonable dialogue with moon-eyed zealots is futile so you call a cowboy. He rides through the protesters scattering a wagon load of Hefty bags filled with chicken noodle soup, which drenches the crowd. Then he calls the dogs who rush in and lick the whining protesters who slosh down the road with the dogs nipping at their heels.

Remember those times when the pigs got loose in the house and uprooted all your potted plants? Or when your pet camel fell through the swimming pool cover while grazing on the algae?

Or when your daughter brought home a suitor with his head shaved like a soccer ball, a stolen credit card and was a recidivist paint can sniffer?

Oh, what you would have given for a cowboy. Maybe we should start a nonprofit foundation funded by the United Cowboy Way, wherein each county could maintain a couple of cowboys-on-call. They would function like a cross between a paramedic, a dogcatcher and a psychologist to handle the myriad of emergencies that cry for a man with a horse and a rope. Think about that the next time you accidentally drop your heirloom Donald Duck lunch bucket down an abandoned missile silo or a rhino gets loose in the high school gym.

Remember, a 35-piece marching band is as good as a cowboy, till you need someone to rope a renegade tuba!

Miyagishima: Moongate action is to protect water Mayor reacts to company's response

By Todd G. Dickson

Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima said last week's action to begin a condemnation process against Moongate Water Co. is solely motivated by the need to preserve water in Jornada Bolson, an underground aquifer along the East Mesa.

On Monday, Aug. 2, the City Council approved a resolution giving its legal council the authority to begin a process to take over Moongate's private water system serving the East Mesa.

Following the council action, Moongate issued a press release that claimed the city is a bigger threat to the Jornada Bolson than Moongate and that the city pumps more water from the Jornada Bolson than all other water providers combined.

Miyagishima disputed Moongate's claims, saying the city's wells tapping into the Jornada Basin exist only for peak usage and as a backup to the city's main source of water – the Mesilla Bolson, another underground aquifer that follows the valley along the Rio Grande.

Unlike the Jornada Bolson, which is contained by mountains to the east and gets little recharge, the Mesilla Bolson gets recharged through seepage from the Rio Grande and its water is diverted along the valley's system of earthen irrigation canals.

That makes the Jornada Bolson very valuable to the city should anything happen to the Mesilla Bolson, Miyagishima said. "We have to be ready to serve the entire city if the need occurs," he said. Miyagishima said he would not have considered the eminent domain action if Moongate depended more on wells in the Mesilla Bolson.

> Based on legal documents from previous and ongoing lawsuits with Moongate, Miyagishima said the company's plans are to expand its use and access to the Jornada Bolson.

The mayor said the city needs to take this action now before Moongate expands more and the acquisition of its system becomes more costly.

The condemnation process will assess Moongate's assets and ask the company to set a price for selling its system. If the city does not agree to Moongate's asking price, then it's taken to court. A judge must agree to the public need of the eminent domain action and decide the final price.

Miyagishima said he realizes the action does not sit well with some who don't like the idea of the city using eminent domain and those who are happy with Moongate Water's service and prices.

But Miyagishima said the city needs to think ahead to the future when the East Mesa is more fully developed.

"Water to the city is the boiler of the engine for the city," he said.

For those East Mesa residents concerned that their rural lifestyle requires cheap water, Miyagishima said the city already has one water reclamation plant on the East Mesa and plans for more such plants in the future.

District 33 race sees contrasts

Incumbent, challenger differ on social issues

By Todd G. Dickson

Las Cruces Bulletin

Although they are both businesswomen, Democratic District 33 incumbent state Rep. Joni Gutierrez and her Republican challenger Virginia Robertson have different ideas for the role of state government, as well as stances on social issues.

Robertson, who operates an air quality business with her husband out of their home, said she's running to make the state's business environment more friendly to produce more jobs.

Robertson said taxes are too high and the regulations too burdensome to businesses, which keeps companies from coming to the state.

If elected, Robertson said she would advocate for cutting taxes and regulations. Also, state government could be run more efficiently and make the kinds of hard choices during economic instability that private business owners have to make, she said.

In terms of the state government's budget crisis, Gutierrez is part of a task force searching for solutions.

task force searching for solutions. Gutierrez said the state needs to take a longer-range budget planning approach, which is why she pushed to be put on the task force.

The group is looking at various ways for the government to operate more efficiently, Gutierrez said. And the task force isn't shying away from controversial proposals, she said, such as folding higher education into the Public Education Department.

Robertson, who identifies herself as a conservative Christian, contends that Gutierrez didn't oppose Gov. Bill Richardson's policies that have led to bigger government and that she also is "socially progressive."

Gutierrez said the Legislature didn't pass tax increases that many of those with progressive politics desired – such as increasing taxes paid by businesses. As for being "socially progressive," Gutierrez said she has voted for legislation such as the domestic partnership rights bill because she is for equal rights to all people. "If that's the label they want to put on me, so be it."

McCamley campaigns for PRC seat

Democratic candidate seeks series of debates

By Todd G. Dickson

Bill McCamley, the Democratic candidate for the District 5 Public Regulation Commission seat, is challenging Republican candidate Ben Hall to a series of debates throughout the 10 counties that the district includes.

McCamley said the debates are needed because many people don't understand how the PRC influences people's lives and businesses in New Mexico.

The PRC is the state's regulating body over almost all businesses. It also rules on telecommunications and utility rates, including those charged by rural water providers. The PRC's insurance superintendent approves rates charged to customers. The PRC also oversees a fund that helps pay for firefighting and emergency services throughout the state, as well as pipeline safety.

"The breadth and depth of the issues that the PRC deals with and their impact on the everyday lives of New Mexicans means that it is vital for people to have a chance to interact with us in an environment that will allow them to truly ascertain certain things about us," McCamley wrote to Hall.

The debates would help people know more about their experience and knowledge of the PRC's issues and challenge. Mc-Camley is a former Doña Ana County Commissioner, and Hall is a former legislator.

The PRC has been plagued by scandals over misconduct by commissioners and staff, as well as controversy over its lack of openness in some of its decisions – especially a recent increase in Blue Cross Blue Shield rates.

That's why ethics is a key part of McCamley's campaign and he touts his work to improve the county's ethics rules as a commissioner. "Ethics is something I care deeply about," McCamley said.

On issues such as health care, McCamley said he comes with a familiarity because of the work he did as a commissioner to improve health care access in the county. In areas such as utilities in which he isn't as familiar, McCamley said he has been researching intensely. He also has attended several PRC meetings, as well as meeting with as many officials as possible whose work is affected by the PRC.

And McCamley, who a few years ago ran for the Democratic nomination of the Second Congressional District, is out meeting voters – noting that PRC's District 5 has about 60 percent of the same area as the Second Congressional Distict.

One of the biggest challenges, McCamley said, is getting people to realize the importance of the PRC, though the scandals and controversies have, unfortunately, made people a little more aware of its existence.

McCamley said he wants to make the PRC operate in a way that people better understand. The regulations it deals with that is often written in complex legal language, he added.

"We've got to make the process more transparent so people know about the commission and understand what is going on," he said.

McCamley also said one of the PRC's problems is a lack of accountability. Unlike the private business world, many of the utilities and companies regulated by the PRC lack competition, he said. A good example of this is electric providers.

"You can't choose to get a new electric company if you don't like what PNM's doing, if you want electricity," McCamley said. "You can't vote for their board of directors unless you're a stockholder. The regular rate payers don't have that ability, so the PRC is the only mechanism to provide accountability for these very important issues that affect people every day in their pocketbooks."

Regulators in the PRC tend to be too close to the industries they regulate, McCamley said.

School zone safety laws require attentive driving Crossing guards go back on duty

Every driver knows to slow down to 15 mph in a school zone when the lights are flashing. But did you know it is illegal to change lanes in a school zone, or to pass another vehicle traveling in the same direction in a school zone?

"No person shall drive a vehicle on a street or detour at a speed greater than 15 miles per hour on all streets when passing a school while children are going to, or leaving school and when the school zone is properly posted," city law states.

Here are State of New Mexico and City of Las Cruces (CLC) laws regarding drivers and school zones: of

- Establishment
- speed zones is what allows CLC to designate where to place school zones. Speed zones may be marked by a sign containing a flashing yellow light, and when the light is in operation, the speed limit, instructions or regulations on the sign are in effect.
- A school zone and speed zone extends from the road sign announcing the start of the school zone to the road sign announcing the end of the school zone.
- A crosswalk is defined as "that part of a street at an intersection included within the connections of the lateral lines of the sidewalks on opposite sides of the street measured from the curbs or, in the absence of curbs, from the edges of the traversable roadway," and/or as "any portion of a street at an intersection or elsewhere distinctly indicated for pedestrian crossing by lines or other markings on the surface.
- "Whenever a vehicle is stopped at a marked crosswalk or an unmarked crosswalk at an intersection to permit a pedestrian to cross the street, the driver of the vehicle approaching from the rear shall not overtake and pass the stopped vehicle." (In other words, it is illegal for one vehicle to pass another in a school zone.)

and Sonoma Ranch Boulevard, is currently under construction. The $100 million school will open to about 2,000 students in August 2012.

This summer, 115 ninth-grade students began classes at LCPS' new Early College High School (ECHS), which is currently being housed in classrooms at Doña Ana Community College, 3400 S. Espina St., on the NMSU campus. An 8-acre ECHS site is located on Arrowhead Research Park on the eastern edge of NMSU, near the football stadium. It is expected to be complete during the summer of 2011. The ECHS eventually will be home to 500 ninth-, 10th-, 11th- and 12th-grade students.

Major renovation projects around the district include:

- The redesign of Las Cruces High School. The $30 million to fund the project comes from the 2010 bond issue and the New Mexico Public School Finance Authority.
- The $2.1 million renovation of Lynn Middle School, which is almost complete.
- The $2 million construction of a new drama classroom and performance area at Mayfield High School is nearly complete.
- The second phase of renovations at Mayfield is also under way. The $9.4 million project will include renovations of the nursing, administration and counseling areas and re-roofing.
- The $2.6 million renovation of Picacho Middle School, including the music wing, restrooms and an upgrade to the school's heating, ventilation and air conditioning

- system (HVAC), is just under way.
- The $3 million renovation of older classrooms at University Hills Elementary School, built in 1965, is now under way.
- The $2 million renovation of the kitchen and restrooms at Vista Middle School and resurfacing the school's parking lot are now under way.
- The $500,000 renovation of the nursing and health areas at Jornada Elementary School has begun.
- The $917,000 re-roofing of Mesilla Park Elementary School is under way.
- Alameda Elementary School will have its HVAC system upgraded, at a cost of $1.6 million.
- Phase I of a new baseball complex at the Field of Dreams is underway. The project will cost $2 million.

Most of the money for school construction projects comes directly from voters who live in the school district. General obligation bonds approved by voters in 2006 and 2010, along with capital improvement levies approved in 2006, 2008 and 2010, generated more than $130 million to build, renovate and furnish schools and classrooms. Additional funding has been awarded to LCPS by the New Mexico Public Schools Capital Outlay Council and the New Mexico State Legislature.

LCPS Superintendent Stan Rounds said the district continues to work with government leaders and community residents to find solutions for infrastructure, utilities and roadways issues resulting from new school construction.

'We will continue to work with the community and our governmental partners to en-sure we are good neighbors," Rounds said.

Hours are unchanged for most schools

School hours for the 2010-11 school year are unchanged from last school year for students in all grades, except for the 115 ninth graders enrolled in LCPS' new Early College High School.

Here are LCPS school hours for 2010-11: • Elementary schools: 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

- Middle and high schools: 8:40 a.m. to 3:35 p.m.
- White Sands School: 8:15 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. for elementary students; 8:15 a.m. to 3:25 p.m. for middle school students.
- San Andres High School: 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.
- Early College High School: 8:10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Classrooms at Doña Ana Community College, 3400 S. Espina St., on the New Mexico State University campus.

Warning bells generally ring approximately 10 minutes before the start of class. The school hours are the actual time when instruction begins, and all students should be in their classes before the final bell.

"It is very important that all students arrive at school on time ready to learn every school day," said LCPS Superintendent Stan Rounds.

Parents who have questions about school times can contact their child's school or the LCPS Department of Instruction at 527-6628.

Make an impact by volunteering

There are many ways parents and interested community members can volunteer with Las Cruces Public Schools, including serving on school advisory councils (SAC), acting as chaperones during school events, assisting with fundraising, reading to students and other school and classroom activities.

Every public school in Las Cruces has a SAC, which assists the school's administration with school-based decision-making and involves parents in their children's education. Each school holds a SAC election in May, with SAC members elected by a vote of their school's parents and staff. Members serve twoyear terms that begin June 1 and end May 31. Each council must have at least seven members, including school staff and community members. Visit http://lcps.k12.nm.us/Committees/ DAC/index.shtml for more on SACs. You also can refer to LCPS Policy and Regulation KCB: School Advisory Councils. Visit http://lcps. k12.nm.us/Committees/Policies/policies_k. shtml and scroll down to KCB.

Volunteers also are needed in the schools to act as chaperones on field trips and during certain school activities. Volunteers also can help organize and conduct school fundraising events such as pancake breakfasts, enchilada dinners and jog-a-thons.

Often, volunteers are needed to read to and/or tutor students in the classroom or help out in the school library. And, schools always need volunteers who are bilingual and can assist teachers in dual-language classrooms.

Anyone who volunteers for LCPS more than three times in one school semester or who chaperones at one or more school events is required to obtain a security clearance from the LCPS Central Office, including fingerprinting and a background check.

If a volunteer changes the school at which he or she serves, his or her security clearance information can be transferred from the old school to the new one by contacting the LCPS Human Resources Office: Candy Maldonado, 527-5979 or camaldonado@lcps.k12.nm.us, or Stacey Sanchez, 527-5992 or stasanchez@lcps. k12.nm.us. The contact can be made by either the volunteer or the principal at the volunteer's new school.

For more information, contact Special Assistant to the Superintendent for Community Relations Andrea Fletcher at 527-5802 or afletche@lcps.k12.nm.us.

Elementary school gets $2,500 Target grant

Target Corp. and the Las Cruces Target store have awarded Booker T. Washington (BTW) Elementary School a grant of $2,500 for the school library and media center, said BTW librarian Anna Lucero.

"The grant is intended to enhance certain areas of the library such as our nonfiction science and Spanish," Lucero said. "This will enable staff to enhance their curriculum because of the additional resources, which will also allow our students to work on projects simultaneously. We are very excited and grateful for this opportunity," she said.

Lucero offered special thanks to Target employees Ryan and Morgan for providing information and assistance with the grant .

For more information, contact Lucero at 575.527.9595 or anlucero@lcps.k12.nm.us.

Couture inauguration Aug. 17 Ceremonies mark beginning of new era at NMSU

with the ability to feel like I'm part of the

BARBARA COUTURE,

NMSU president

family.

New Mexico State University is carrying on a celebration of change and partnership with the inauguration of Barbara Couture as the 25th president of the institution from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday, Aug. 17.

The inauguration is being held in conjunction with convocation and is free and open to the public.

"The inauguration of a new president is to both the university and the community at large a kick off versity and the community at large a kick off to introduce a new administration and give the president an opportunity to express their goals and impressions, and in this case, emphasize a new era of excellence," said Laura Conniff, Board of Regents member. "It is also an opportunity to recognize faculty and showcase what NMSU has to offer."

"This inauguration is a way to feature the theme of the ceremony – 'A New Era of Excellence through Partnerships," Couture said. "I want the university community to feel that the university is moving forward, that we are a community, that we have a direction and that we can get there together."

Partnership is exactly what Couture wants to focus on in the coming years at NMSU – a partnership with the Las Cruces and Doña Ana County communities, with state legislators, businesses and supporters in the academic community.

"We live in a day and age where people need partnerships to be successful," she said. "Our success, our way of moving forward – even when resources are tight – is going to be determined by our success in being good partners with our community, with one another as colleagues of this university, with our state and with the disciplines that we represent here as we provide excellent programs for our students."

Couture said when she first arrived at the university in January, she identified some issues that needed addressing – top among them being the budget. She said she wants to take time to find a way for everyone at the university to work more effectively and efficiently, so as to make the best use of the funding and resources available from tuition and state appropriations. Couture said she plans to work hard in the coming years with communities in New Mexico to help improve the opportunities for students to do well at NMSU and successfully graduate so they can become contributing members in New Mexico communities.

The president said she also wants to look at different processes at the university to see whether there is a way to make them run more smoothly, and continue to work on research structures to support research faculty in obtaining grants and contracts to help them continue their good work.

This is an exciting time, Couture said, one in which the university will do better academically and with its research mission, in an effort to help New Mexico as a state move forward economically and socially.

"NMSU is like one big family," Couture said. "People enjoy living here. They enjoy being a part of the university and they enjoy being together with everyone. They take great pride in this place. That just makes me smile all over. I have been thrilled with that ability to feel like I am part of the family. I hope folks here will feel the same way about me for a long time."

The inauguration is at the Corbett Center Student Union Ballrooms. Attendees are encouraged to RSVP in advance if they plan to attend the ceremonies or the free luncheon immediately following the event.

Other public events are planned the week of Aug. 16 to help celebrate the new era of partnership.

The community is invited to take a walk into the past at the Gallery of Presidents in the Corbett Center Art Gallery from 8 a.m. to noon Monday, Aug. 17. The gallery will showcase portraits of all the presidents of the university as well as a timeline of significant events at NMSU over the years, and around the world. Former NMSU presidents William Conroy and Gerald Thomas will be available to talk with guests. Refreshments will be served at the event.

The public is invited to attend "New Era of Excellence through International Programs and Partnerships" from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the Corbett Center Student Gallery for a forum about international programs at NMSU.

The public is also invited to attend "Choirs and Cupcakes," a free musical event from noon to 1 p.m. Aug. 18 on the patio outside of Taos Cafeteria at Corbett Center. Although sweet snacks will be provided, attendees are asked to bring their own sack lunch.

Before being appointed as president of NMSU, Couture was the senior vice chancellor for academic affairs and professor of English at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. She also served as the dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Washington State University in Pullman. Couture earned her bachelor's degree with high distinction from the University of Michigan where she also earned a master's degree and doctorate in English language and literature.

For more information or to RSVP, visit http://inauguration. nmsu.edu. For more information on the inauguration, call Jolie Tixier, director of Presidential Events, at 646-7737 or email jolie@nmsu.edu.

E STOPPERS

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering $1,000 for information that leads to the identification and arrest of the person who fired at least one gunshot that struck a man's leg as he left a party early, shortly before 3 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 8.

Las Cruces Police were called to a local hospital after a 22-year-old man walked in with an apparent gunshot wound to his lower left leg. The injury was not lifethreatening, and the victim was treated and released.

Detectives learned that the man was leaving a party near Stanford Street and Vassar Court when someone fired several gunshots. One of the shots struck the victim's leg. The victim told detectives he then drove to MountainView Regional Medical lieve the suspect may have been in a white car, possibly a Grand Am, Cavalier or similar-model vehicle.

If you have any information on the identity of this suspect, call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 800-222-TIPS (8477) or send a tip via text message to LCTIPS (528477).

The Crime Stoppers number and text messaging services are operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Program addresses pipeline safety

Excavators can learn precautions at company-sponsored dinner

The Pipeline Group's annual "Public Education – Contractor Awareness Program" will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 19, in the Elks Lodge Ballroom, 3000 Elks Drive. The program is sponsored by a group of companies with a common goal of preventing accidents and damages to underground pipelines and utilities.

A free dinner will be catered by Dickey's Barbecue Pit for all persons involved in excavation related activities in Doña Ana and Sierra counties. Following the dinner, a brief safety program will be presented that stresses the importance of accident prevention by identifying pipeline and utility rights of way, use of one-call systems and the importance of working with pipeline and utility companies to safely excavate in the vicinity of underground facilities. The Texas law requiring notification to a one-call system before excavating will be discussed. Sponsors will provide promotional materials, including notification information for their companies, safety related brochures and other safety reminders. Each year, many lives are injured or lost, plus millions of dollars in repairs and lost products are incurred due to "third party" incidents – someone digging into a pipeline. Thousands of communications, some life-threatening, may be disrupted when expensive fiber-optic cables are damaged or severed. These types of excavation can be financially devastating to the responsible party. This safety program is an attempt to help those who do excavation work to avoid such situations. Sponsors for the program include El Paso Natural Gas Company, Kinder Morgan Energy Partners LP and Plains Pipeline LP.

For more information, call 800-982-8752 or visit www. pipelinegroup.com.

detailed language added to the legislation allowing access to law enforcement, he said.

"That story has been tough to get out there because people are concerned right now about border security," Small said.

To tell their sides of the story, both sides said they have been reaching out to traditional news media through interviews and guest columns. Also, both sides are using the Internet through YouTube videos, web pages and emails. Both sides characterized their efforts as grassroots.

Despite the debate's focus on media and marketing, both sides also spent time disagreeing on what they see as facts of the debate.

Supporters of the legislation contend that wilderness will be an economic benefit to the area through eco-tourism and as an attraction to businesses wanting to locate in the area. This view is supported by the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces.

Hummer and Tom

Hutchinson of GLCCC took issue with the assertion that wilderness would attract businesses. They said companies looking to relocate are more likely to look at education and labor force training than whether there was wilderness close by.

People looking to re-locate, however, do consider the surrounding natural landscapes and want to be reassured that those views – the open spaces and dramatic mountains - won't be compromised in the future, said Realtor Renee Frank.

'These are the images that come to mind when we think of Las Cruces," she said.

JOHN HUMMER, GLCCC past chair

Frank noted that she is a member of the relatively new Green Chamber of Commerce that supports the legislation out of its philosophy that a healthy business environment be balanced by a healthy natural environment.

Those desiring less restrictive protections than wilderness designation questioned who was funding the slick flyers and television commercials being put out by the Hispano chamber.

John Muñoz, speaking for the Hispano chamber, said the organization's support of the effort shouldn't come as a surprise – it has supported wilderness legislation since retired Republican U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici began working on the proposal five years ago.

Muñoz said the Hispano chamber and GLCCC agree on the legislation more than they disagree, but that gets lost in inflammatory "sound bites" from the passionate advocates on both sides of the debate.

Hummer said GLCCC's leadership has been accused of using fear tactics because of its focus on the security question.

"We're not trying to stir up fear," Hummer said. "The fear is already there.' Jerry Schickedanz, chairman of People for Preserving Our Western Heritage, said his group also has been mischaracterized as being driven by "five angry ranchers," despite its membership being as broad-based as the coalition supporting the wilderness designations. Schickedanz said his group supports less restrictive alternatives for land protection that will accommodate access for ranching and border control, as well as floodwater control.

"We can throw rocks at each other all day and not hit anyone," he said about the debate.

Inspectors require escorts along border

County deputies accompany NMDA officials on inspections

By Marvin Tessneer Las Cruces Bulletin

The fear of violence on the United States-Mexico border has reached a level that has prompted the New Mexico Department of Agriculture to enlist escorts of Luna and Hidalgo county deputies for the protection of cattle scale inspectors, the NMDA reported.

"The ongoing concern with border vio-lence has limited NMDA's travel to remote border areas," said NMDA director Miley Gonzalez. "These are locations where inspectors have to go to certify the livestock scales, and their safety is a priority. That's why we are pleased to now have the protection of the Luna and Hidalgo county sheriff's departments.'

Inspectors are required by law for Consumer Services Division inspectors to test about 1,000 livestock scales throughout the state - with 25 scales south of Interstate 10.

"Livestock scale inspections are important to both ranchers and the buyers of their livestock," Gonzalez said.

"It's our job to make sure these scales are accurate," said Joe Gomez, division director. "This ensures a uniform market place for New Mexico cattle. But these inspectors are in jeopardy.

Allen Batts, a Luna County sheriff's investigator, said the NMDA inspectors still talk about the March killing of Arizona rancher Robert Krentz and it is still fresh on the minds of those who work along the isolated border areas.

"These inspectors are out doing their jobs, and they aren't trained to keep an eye on their surroundings like we are. It's important for us to be there," he said.

Everyone deserves to be safe when they need to work," Gonzalez said. "For our inspectors during this time of year, their work happens to be in remote areas along the Mexican border where, unfortunately, there are risks involved. Often they don't have cell phone service, so we are being proac-tive and had in this way for the local tive, and, luckily, this year federal funds are available to help with that."

For this year, owners of the three livestock scales in Doña Ana County - in a designated safety corridor roughly south of Interstate 10 from Las Cruces to the Arizona border - did not request inspections. But had those been requested, NMDA would have arranged for escorts from the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department.

A representative for the Agriculture Committee of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce (GLCCC) points to the assignment of deputy escorts as supporting the chamber's public concern about border security. The chamber's position opposes having the Potrillo Mountains area designated as wilderness and requests the less-restrictive designation of National Conservation Area.

"Creating the Potrillos as a Wilderness Area would be expanding human and drug smuggling corridors like they have in Arizona," said Steve Wilmeth, Agriculture Committee spokesman and rancher.

Wilmeth is a partner with Tom Cooper on the Butterfield Trail Ranch north of I-10 where they graze Beefmaster-Red Angus crosses for hybrid vigor on 90 sections of range. Cooper also is active with the People for Preserving our Western Heritage organization.

The chamber also is asking that Broad Canyon be removed from possible wilderness designation. Broad Canyon is an important Doña Ana County watershed that can capture and store water and provide floodwater control, according to the chamber's position.

Luna County Sheriff deputies prépare to accompany state livestock inspectors during a recent inspection.

Former chief favors wilderness

Colburn says act addresses border security concerns By Todd G. Dickson

A former federal administrator with the U.S. Border Patrol says he supports the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act as groundbreaking legislation to balance natural preservation with border security.

Ron Colburn, a former national deputy chief with the Border Patrol, said he spent many years dealing with these issues in the Arizona border region with Mexico.

Problems with wilderness areas along the U.S.-Mexico border in Arizona – especially at the Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument – is often cited by the legislation's opponents as an $\frac{1}{2}$ example why it shouldn't be passed in its current form. Colburn agrees the monument was once flooded with border crossers who left large amounts of trash in their wake. The situation now is not so bad, Colburn said, but it took considerable work between different government organizations to forge agreements.

But the process of advanced negotiation and accommodation made by the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act's main sponsor – U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman – should avoid the kinds of problems experienced in Arizona, Colburn said.

'This is what I've been waiting for," Colburn said at a press conference Thursday, Aug. 5, at Branigan Memorial Library.

Colburn said he has long been interested in finding a balance between preservation and border security, so he was interested in the process for the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act. When the legislation came out of committee in the U.S. Senate, he reviewed the language of the legislation and found it addressed many of the kinds of issues that officials had to hammer out agreements for in existing wilderness areas.

For example, the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act has no restrictions for border air support, he said. That's critical as the Border Patrol seeks to use more technology to enforce border security.

Colburn said that rugged, undeveloped terrain can be as effective a barrier to illegal immigration as a fence. Before coming out publicly to support the legislation,

Colburn said he spoke with many of his former colleagues still working in the Department of Homeland Security.

"The Border Patrol is saying to me that they are very satis-fied with the language in the bill that will allow them to do their job in New Mexico," Colburn said.

Colburn's statements echo those in a letter from Alan Bersin, U.S. Customs and Border Protection commissioner, to Bingaman about the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act.

"Recent changes to address the operational needs of the Border Patrol would significantly enhance the flexibility of U.S. Customs and Border Protection to operate in this border area," Bersin wrote.

The Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act "should be a model for future consideration of wilderness designation along the border," Bersin wrote.

Recycling gets second chance Public meetings to be held later this month

By Todd G. Dickson

The South Central Solid Waste Authority (SC-SWA) is finding a way to pay for curbside recycling that wouldn't be as costly as a fee proposed a few years back.

Residents - especially retirees on a fixed income killed the City of Las Cruces' previous attempt to offer the service for a fee many felt was too high.

At the City Council meeting Monday, Aug. 9, SCSWA Director Patrick Peck said the service can now be offered at a more affordable rate.

SCSWA has been able to offer single-stream recycling for paper, some plastics and aluminum by working with a company that provides curbside recycling in El Paso - Friedman Recycling.

Las Cruces and Doña Ana County residents can drop off recyclables in bins located at six commercial sites, 17 schools and eight collection community centers in the county.

Peck presented the City Council with two options to pay for the recycling for 28,000 residences in Las Cruces. One option would be to increase the base fee from $3.09 to $4.98 for all customers. The second option would charge everyone a fee of $2.59 per month.

Most councillors said they preferred the second option. Councillors are planning a public meeting toward the end of the month to get input about which option would be preferable.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he believed residents are more receptive to the idea of curbside recycling than a few years ago.

Čouncillor Nathan Small said he believed people will get behind a reasonable approach to curbside recycling.

John Keith Sports Editor

I've heard that to succeed in radio and TV broadcasting, you need a name that's short and easy to pronounce.

Kyle Doperalski is doing OK anyhow. He's been called the other voice of Aggie athletics. Jack Nixon, of course, is New Mexico State's long time throat who's been on board since statehood, it seems.

Nixon gets the gravy. He does football and men's basketball. Doperalski fills the gaps, broadcasting a ton of NMSU's non-revenue sports.

A fugitive from the University of Nebraska, Doperalski arrived at NMSU in August 2006 as manager of the Aggie Sports Network. He broadcasts Aggie volleyball, softball, women's basketball and baseball with Jeff Matthews, at home and away.

He also anchors the Aggie coaches' shows. On rare occasions, he subs for Nixon in football and men's basketball.

Doperalski's voice is often heard on Aggie Vision, New Mexico State's TV package that covers a large area of the southwest and is sprinkled across parts of the U.S

Doperalski helped plan and develop Aggie Vision, one of the more innovative projects in college athletics.

I bring personal testimony as to its wide ranging exposure of NMSU sports. Sitting in a Scottsdale, Ariz., restaurant recently, I looked up to see the Aggie women's basketball game on TV, compliments of Aggie Vision.

The next evening, sitting in the same restaurant, I watched NMSU play vollevball.

Doperalski may lead the athletics department in frequent flyer miles. 'I'm on the road a lot," he said.

Traveling with six Aggie teams, he is rarely home. Which, right now, is OK with his new wife Elizabeth, an assistant professor in New Mexico State's school of Hotel, Restaurant and Tourism Management.

"I think she understands my job requires me being on the road a lot," Doperalski said with a touch of hope.

Despite marathon waits in airports, long bus rides to game sites, sometimes in hostile weather, Kyle likes his work.

"I like traveling with the coaches and players," he said. "Getting to know them. That's probably the most satisfying part of my job.

"I like broadcasting the games. Bringing the Aggies into people's homes when the teams are on the road."

I forgot to ask Kyle Doperalski if sports writers ever misspelled his last name.

I'd hate to be the first.

Aggie trainer Jim Spooner keeps team ready for action

By John Keith

In a little more than three months - after the Aggies play their last football game this season - Jim Spooner will get a day off.

Not before Nov. 27, when New Mexico State closes against Hawai'i.

Until then, Spooner faces monster work weeks, seven-day marathons, from 6:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. daily.

You pay a price to be the head trainer for New Mexico State's football team.

There's paperwork, more than there should be. Taping ankles (the Aggies use 20 to 25 cases of tape a week). Treating concussions. During practices, you walk the sidelines, constantly alert for injuries. Deal with heat and other problems, too many to list.

'There's a lot of emphasis nationally on concussions now," Spooner said. "They're hard sometimes to detect. We're particularly careful in our effort to deal with head injuries.'

During the season, Spooner's in the training room at 6:30 a.m. "Mostly just to get things ready for the players," he said.

for taping and treatment. "We have 12 students and two graduate students working as student trainers," Spooner said. "Six of us tape ankles before each practice. "There is one student trainer assigned to each of the different positions on the team."

During the preseason, NMSU alternates one-a-day and two-aday practices. During two-a-days, Spooner and his staff must have the team taped, treated and on the field for a 9:15 a.m. start.

"After a short lunch break, we're back in the training room at 1:30 p.m.," Spooner said. "Afternoon practices start at 3 p.m."

NCAA rules require that every Division 1A team must give its players one day off a week completely away from football.

"When our players are off," Spooner said. "I use that day to catch up on paperwork, treat rehabs (injured players) and telephone doctors to try and squeeze a player into his or her busy schedule for MRIs or whatever else a player needs done. That's hard to do sometimes because doctors' schedules are usually set weeks and days in advance."

Trojans chase the trophy

Bradley keeps Mayfield's goal simple: Win the New Mexico championship

By Craig Massey Las Cruces Bulletin

The faces may change each year on the Mayfield football team, but the goal remains the same.

We relentlessly pursue the state championship every year," said Mayfield coach Michael Bradley. "That's our goal."

The Trojans will chase the blue trophy this year with a team minus many key players from a squad that went 11-2 last year and made it to the state championship game. The five returning starters, however, are some of the top players in the state, and the newcomers have graduated from a junior varsity team that went undefeated.

Bradley is optimistic heading into the season.

"The last few years, we've had senior-dominated teams," Bradley said. "Nobody knows most of these guys, but I think they're going to get in there and do well.

"We're not building, just reloading."

The Trojans' defense is always strong and will be anchored this year by one of the most talented players to ever suit up at MHS. Matt Ramondo is a 6-5, 290-pound nose tackle who has given a verbal commitment to attend Arizona State next fall.

We've been blessed with good nose tackles the last 15 years, but we've never had anyone with his size," Bradley said. "He's a big kid, dominant, strong and has good speed."

Ramondo will be joined on the defensive line by Jesus Olivas at tackle, and ends Juan Goday, Joseph Quigg and Bobby Chavez, a transfer from Santa Fe. The linebackers are returning starter Brock Baca, Galen Spencer and Cesar Aguirre. The secondary features great speed in Zane Ortega, Braxton Smith, Devante Minor and Lucas Ogaz. Minor, who missed most of last season with an injury, can line up at any of the secondary positions, and will also be a threat on offense.

"We'll be a little bit quicker on defense than

A20 | Sports Las Cruces Bulletin We hear from our Famous Japanese Pro

Our guru weighs in on putting, Tiger's problems and his own game

If you've been following my writings in this space over the last three or four years you know that I periodically talk with my esteemed golf guru from the East. We discuss a wide variety of issues and I find it especially enlightening when I seek his advice and wisdom.

It turns out that our Famous Japanese Pro has been touring the southern provinces of China, educating himself on how the Chinese sports authorities approach the game of golf, which they seem to be embracing madly these days. He has since returned to his home in Yokohama where I was able to reach him by satellite telephone.

Doc: I don't intend to do a debriefing on your China trip, but I am wondering about your reaction regarding the status of golf in China.

FJP: Golf soon very big. Doc: Did the Chinese bigwigs approve of and welcome you doing some research on their progress in the business of golf? And what about access to the organizers, golf course designers, golf teachers and aspiring competitors? Were they very open? FJP: Google censorship make pro angry.

Doc: Oh, I see – a sensitive issue. So let's talk of a different matter. My readers know that you have a way of unlocking some of the most mysterious secrets in golf. Well, this time the burning question on my readers' minds isn't about scoring per se, it's about putting. I get asked about which putter is best. Which stance - the proper grip. About practice drills, and training and alignment aids. There is so much information out there it's an overload. There are plenty of putting experts and short game gurus that you would think the secret to great putting would be out by now. So the question, simply put, is how to make more putts? FJP: (pause) Hit shot closer to hole

Doc: Right. I guess that says it all. Other golfers have complained to me about how they practice and practice – and play round after round of golf – and never seem to get any better. And believe me I have seen this before, so I know what they're talking about. It's weird - these people just keep playing for years, and never, ever improve. I would think just the sheer factor of experience would cause some better performance. And I have no real advice. FJP: Problem is "LOFT."

Doc: What do you mean "LOFT?" FJP: Lack of functioning talent.

Doc: Let me turn to the Tiger Woods situation. The Tiger Woods scandal and his ensuing personal troubles, brought on mostly below the transfer of the second states of the on mostly by himself, have been amply documented in the media over the past months. His marriage disintegrated. He has lost hundreds of millions of dollars in canceled endorsement contracts. I'm just wondering how you've been feeling about the Tiger debacle.

FJP: Bad for golf – good for rivals. Doc: Despite his cautious statements over the winter, not being sure when he would return to tournament golf, Tiger did resume playing in competition in April, and played the Masters where he performed decently.

And he's been playing all the majors, along with numerous other events. But he hasn't won in 2010. He hasn't even contended. Right now Tiger is playing the worst golf of his career. It's awful.

FJP: Watching Tiger very painful. Doc: Many of the so-called experts are seriously doubting whether T. Woods will break Jack Nicklaus' legendary record of 18 major championship victories. Eclipsing the 18 majors has always been Tiger's (and Earl Wood's) lifetime Holy Grail. FJP: Plenty golf left.

Doc: Sir, do you think Tiger has to make some personal changes before he can win again? FJP: Must lose arrogance.

- Doc: We both know that Tiger has way too much talent to go to waste. Other sports heroes have made life-changing mistakes, and have weathered rough times, while suffering through extended slumps in their performance. If you were asked to give Mr. Woods some advice on how he can regain his fan base and get back to being the popular, winning, dominant golfer he has always been viewed as, what might you tell him?
- FJP: Humility must precede greatness. FJP: Now I ask question of esteemed golfing doctor. OK? Lately golf game go south. Playing golf more like anguish, no fun. But I play same clubs, same 18 hole, same ball, same swing. Score go up, confidence go down. Lose money, lose sleep, worry over game. One friend say take two weeks off – then give up game. No happen. Pro too stubborn. You have secret esteemed doctor? Doc: Golf goddess very fickle.

Northern latitudes Aggies can fit some pieces together

The Aggies men's basketball trip to Canada may provide a benefit that will not become obvious until February rolls around.

Two projected starters are not planning on making the trip for reasons that will not keep them from playing during the season. Senior forward Wendell McKines couldn't get his passport in time and junior forward Troy Gillenwater is rehabbing a foot injury that should be just fine when they tip it off for real. Without them on the court in the "Great White North," it is a perfect time for the reserves to learn by doing. Head coach Marvin Menzies is toying with the idea of going big with McKines and Gillenwater both in the starting lineup and will need more depth in the frontcourt. Sophomore forward B.J. West, freshman center Tshilidzi Nephawe and sophomore center Abdoulaye N'doye will need to be ready and these series of exhibitions will lay the groundwork.

Another newcomer who will benefit from this week under the Canadian sunset is freshman guard Christian Kabongo. This freshman is someone who will be expected to play a prime roll and will get some seasoning early so he won't be quite as green this coming November. Kabongo will likely be a reserve at both guard positions and his maturity will be counted on when his name is called off the bench.

Canadian native and sophomore forward Tyrone Watson is no doubt eager to show his skills in his homeland. His family will be traveling over from Hamilton, Ontario, and will likely see a lot of Watson on the court. Watson had some solid moments last year on both ends of the court. His play was both enthusiastic and under control. Watson had a good understanding of his shooting range and also served as a gadfly to opponents on defense at critical times.

(Hamidu)

Jack Nixon Jack's Corner

This isn't to say that the trip to Canada won't help returning starters junior guard Hernst Laroche and junior center Hamidu Rahman as well. Rahman showed up for workouts weighing a trim 240 pounds. This means he has shed about 50 pounds of "baby fat" since his freshman year. Rahman is taking his opportunity in this sport seriously. New strength and conditioning coach Trei Steward will likely put some more muscle on his frame, but that kind of weight gain will be beneficial.

As far as Laroche, this trip back home to "La Belle Province" will be more a pleasure trip than a mandate to prove what he can do. His first two years at point guard set him up to be one of the most effective playmakers in Aggie history. If he does a little showing off for his pals, what is the harm in this scenario?

Team bonding, a chance to see a new part of the world and a jump start on the development of some young players are the items on Menzies "to do" list for this trip.

Helps students succeed in academic endeavors

The Academic Support Programs and Services Center is committed to providing quality educational services that achieve academic, personal and career success for all student athletes. The ASPSC offers a full range of support and referral services to assist student athletes in their holistic growth and development.

Our early-warning academic system links student athletes with resources pertinent to their individual needs. The addition of the following programs and services is part of our early-warning system: bi-weekly progress reports; new student orientation; student-athlete handbook; class attendance and academic appointment policy; study hall; internal tutoring program/campus tutoring programs; crimson scholar; math success center; writing lab; departmental tutoring; academic mentoring program; writing and reading comprehension program; pre-advising and degree progress (NCAA, WAC, New Mexico State); monitoring of academic progress and athletic eligibility; bi-weekly meetings with head coaches or team academic liaisons and student athletes; CHAMPS life-skills program/living learning community and student athlete annual evaluation; and exit interviews. The academic center is open 72hours a week for athletes to engage in their educational pursuit.

In the end, all NM State athletic teams strive for the ultimate athletic goal of winning a national championship and their expectation for greatness in the classroom is no different. For the 10th consecutive semester, all 17 men's and women's sport team's semester and cumulative gradepoint averages combined at NM State are at or above a 3.0, and all 17 men's and women's sport teams spring 2010 semester GPA combined averages were 3.051.

In addition, all 17 men's and women's sport teams spring 2010 cumulative GPA combined was a 3.153. Furthermore, for the 10th consecutive semester, scholar student-athlete representation (3.0 semester and or cumulative grade-point average or higher) was higher than 50 percent for the student-athlete population, where 59 percent, 224 student-athletes, achieved a 3.0-plus semester GPA or higher for spring 2010.

Academic All-Conference awards are also awarded to student athletes who have been with the institution for one academic year, carry a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher and participated in 50 percent of the team's contests. NM State didn't disappoint; for the academic year 2009-10, 33 honorees for fall 2009, 35 honorees for winter 2010, 31 honorees for spring sports and 49 freshman/transfers made Academic All-WAC.

Our ultimate goal is to ensure every student athlete will be assured to have the necessary tools to maintain and surpass steady progression toward their No. 1 goal of obtaining their degree from NM State.

With 86 percent of student-athletes graduating from NM State after exhausting their eligibility and 63 percent of the total student-athlete population graduating from NM State (GSR) the vision continues to be a reality. In fall 2009, 27 student athletes participated in commencement ceremonies and 62 student athletes participated in the spring 2010 commencement ceremonies capping of a wonderful year.

NMSU picked second in WAC coaches poll

Hawai'i is favorite in conference race

The Western Athletic Conference volleyball coaches have selected Hawai'i to win its 15thstraight WAC regular-season crown in 2010. The coaches also voted on the preseason award winners and Hawai'i junior Kanani Danielson was the unanimous pick for WAC Preseason Player of the Year.

The Rainbow Wahine received eight of the nine first-place votes with New Mexico State earning the other first-place vote. Hawai'i earned 64 total points followed by New Mexico State with 57. Fresno State was picked to finish third with 44 points.

Hawai'i is coming off a 32-3 season in 2009 that saw the Rainbow Wahine earn their 14th-consecutive WAC regular-season title with a perfect 16-0 record.

New Mexico State placed the most players on the preseason all-WAC team with four, while Hawai'i had three and Nevada had two. Joining Danielson on the preseason team are teammates Brittany Hewitt and Dani Mafua, New Mexico State's Kelsey Brennan, Jennah DeVries, Kayleigh Giddens and Whitney Woods, Nevada's Lindsay Baldwin and Kylie Harrington, Boise State's Sadie Maughan, Fresno State's Brianna Clarke and Idaho's Kelsey Taylor.

The 2010 season begins the weekend of Aug. 27 with all nine teams in action.

Ags open volleyball practice NMSU looks for return to post-season play

By Jimmy Currier Las Cruces Bulletin

New Mexico State University senior outside hitters Kayleigh Giddens and Whitney Woods don't want this volleyball season to end the way last year's did - missing the NCAA tournament. The Aggies finished 20-9 in 2009 and second in the WAC at 13-3, missing out on postseason play for the first time since 2005.

"It was definitely a heartbreaker because knowing you're good enough but not making it is like losing to Idaho. It's a big thing for us," Woods said. "It's not something we're used to. Losing to Idaho, we don't do that. It was definitely a big heartbreaker."

Last season, Idaho upset New Mexico State, 3-1, in Moscow, Idaho. That loss may have contributed to the Aggies not making the postseason.

Woods focused on improving her skills and getting the ball in play during the off-season.

Giddens had to watch some of the action from the bench last season with an injury.

"It's a little upsetting that we missed out," she said. "I wanted to be there for my team. This year, I'm ready to go full force. I'm back and ready to be here."

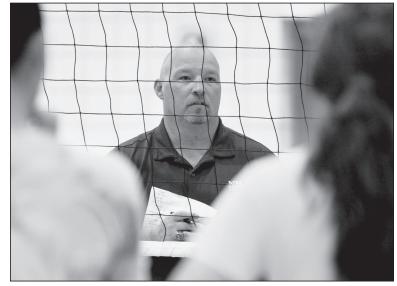

In the off-season, she worked on running, jumping and losing weight.

'It will take pressure off my knees so I can jump higher and be stronger for my team this year," she said.

Giddens and Woods, along with juniors Kelsey Brennan (middle hitter) and Jennah DeVries (setter), were named to the preseason all-WAC team, voted on by conference coaches.

All four preseason All-WAC selections were first-team picks a year ago and hope to accomplish that feat again in 2010. Giddens finished conference play averaging 4.47 kills per set - top in the WAC - and ended the year with 4.00 kills per set overall Woods and Brennan were in the top 10 in blocks last season, while DeVries was second in the conference in assists.

"We have four first team allconference players back, which is a great start," coach Mike Jordan said.

"There's going to be good competition for a couple of lineup spots on our team and we are deeper than we were last year. I like the look of this team a lot. I think we can be every bit as good as we were in 2008, when we tied Hawai'i for the title and were nationally ranked all year.'

The Aggies are picked by the coaches to finish second in the nineteam league. Eight of the nine coaches chose Hawai'i to win its 15th consecutive WAC championship, with the Aggies receiving one first-place vote.

For the Aggies to be successful, it's going to take a team-effort.

Intensity, hard work and everybody believing we can do it," Giddens said. "We have to trust in each other and be a team."

Woods acknowledges that the Aggies are a young team – 10 of 17 players are underclassmen.

'We have to have the right mentality," she said. "We can't have the mentality to go out there and think that just because our opponents are ranked sixth, they're better than you. They're girls just like you are. That's how I go out and think.'

Jordan is excited that the Aggies have started practice.

"Every year, there's a lot of hope and excitement," he said. "We're fired up. We got a lot of quality returning players and a really good recruiting class. It's fun to see them all at the same time. Right now, we're getting everybody on the same page."

Practice starts out simple and progresses to more complex drills. We're walking through a lot of stuff to make sure the new players understand the terminology, system and techniques," he said. "Once we get caught up then we will start competing and trying to figure out what the lineup is going to look like."

The Aggies open the 2010 season at the Florida State Tournament in Tallahassee, Fla., Aug. 27, taking on Florida International in the first match of the tournament. The Aggies face nine teams who reached the 2009 NCAA Tournament this season. Those teams include Arizona, Florida A&M, Florida International, Florida State, Hawai'i, LSU, New Mexico, Rice and Texas State.

"Our preseason schedule is very tough again but we like it that way," Jordan said. "If we're healthy we'll do well. I think our conference is better top to bottom and there are no easy wins.

NMSU opens conference play Sept. 23, in Ruston, La., taking on Louisiana Tech. The 2010 WAC Volleyball Tournament will be held, Nov. 22-24, at the Orleans Arena in Las Vegas, Nev.

Aggies take three of four in the Great White North Canadian tour continues for NMSU

While the temperature is cooler in Canada, the New Mexico State men's basketball team is on fire, winning three of four games. The Canadian tour started Tuesday, Aug. 10, with an exciting 80-76 win over McGill University. Senior guard Gordo Castillo led the Aggies with 21 points – 16 coming in the second half. Four other Aggies were in double figures, including junior point guard Hernst Laroche scoring 10 in his homecoming.

Later that night, the Aggies dominated Vanier College 88-57. Laroche, from Montreal, scored eight points against his former team. Sophomore guard Bandja Sy led the Aggie attack with 21 points.

The Aggies were tested Wednesday, Aug. 11, needing overtime to defeat McGill University's alumni team. The Aggies scored the first seven points in overtime to secure the 98-93 victory. Laroche, one of five NMSU players scoring in double digits, sank two free throws at the end of regulation to force overtime. He ended the game with 15 points. Freshman guard Christian Kabongo led the team with 19.

"This was a tough one," head coach Marvin Menzies said. "You could see the fatigue in the guys, and it was evident in their play because they couldn't go long stretches like they did yesterday. We settled into a nice groove at the end of the game, and this team (McGill) had a couple more additional players that play overseas, and they were very tough."

The overtime game may have drained some energy from the Aggies as they lost later that night 74-68 to Dawson College.

Foul trouble hurt the Aggies in the second half with Laroche, Watson and Rahman fouling out. NMSU squandered a 42-30 halftime lead.

"I didn't like the outcome, but it was a real valuable lesson," Menzies said. "We had opportunities to win the game, but the kids have to learn to play with a lead and take care of the ball."

Sophomore forward Tyrone Watson led the Aggies in scoring with 15 points.

The Aggies played the Kia All-Stars Thursday, Aug. 12. Two more games remain on the Canadian tour, both against Carleton University in Ottawa, Ontario. Game time is at 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 13, and 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 14.

Senior forward Wendell McKines did not make the trip to Canada because of passport issues, while junior forward Troy Gillenwater made the trip, but is not expected to play because of an injury.

Format change announced for WAC hoops tournament Top two teams receive first round bye WAC Commissioner Karl Benson announced that the league will change its postseason men's and women's basketball tournament format, effective for the 2011 tournament.

The change was recommended by both the WAC men's and women's basketball coaches and approved by the WAC Board of Directors earlier this summer. The change will reward teams based on regular season success, giving the top two teams byes into the tournament semifinals.

"I thought it was a very good direction to move into," said New Mexico State men's basketball head coach Marvin Menzies. "A lot of other conferences have used that model, and it seemed to be successful for them. After visiting with some of those coaches, it was evident to me that they liked it and in our position, hopefully, with where we will finish in conference, it will give us an advantage."

Under the format, the tournament begins on Wednesday with two men's and two women's games featuring the No. 5 seed against the No. 8 seed and No. 6 versus No. 7. The winners then advance to Thursday's quarterfinal matchups to play the No. 4 and No. 3 seeds. The winners of those games then advance to Friday's semifinals against the top two seeds. The change also results in two men's and two women's games being played each day of the tournament except for Saturday, which features the men's and women's championship games.

Aggie women's head coach Darin Spence said he was also happy about the location change for the tournament.

"I think it is an exciting time for the league to play the tournament at a neutral site," he said. "I think it is time to give it a shot. I know our fans like going to Las Vegas, so I think the change is good."

The 2011 WAC Men's and Women's Basketball Tournament is March 9-12 at the Orleans Arena in Las Vegas and includes the top eight teams in the regular season standings. Ticket information will be available soon at www.wacsports.com.

injuries are usually directed to Dr. Michael McGuire.

"They're both great to work with," Spooner said. "They have busy schedules but they're as cooperative as time allows them to be."

Most Division 1A football teams hold challenging workouts during the summer months. NCAA rules say they must be voluntary, but players know that if they don't participate, they are miles behind in conditioning once fall practice begins.

"They (summer drills) really help," Spooner said. "If we didn't hold summer workouts our players would not be anywhere near ready physically for early fall practice, most of them in the heat, and most of them demanding.

"In football now, there's more speed, more size, more collisions. A 265-pound lineman can run a 4.4 in the 40-yard dash now." Spooner said he works well with DeWayne Walker, NMSU's head coach.

"The best I've ever worked with," Spooner said.

"He knows injuries, what's going to happen after a player is hurt.

"I never had a coach as understandable as coach Walker. His NFL background helps him understand (what has to be done)."

Spooner, who earned his undergraduate degree at Boise State, is well traveled in his profession.

He worked as a graduate assistant at Penn State and was both a graduate assistant and a full time trainer at Nevada.

He's been in professional hockey and was the trainer for the Amsterdam Admirals, the NFL Europe affiliate.

He is familiar, in other words, with sevenday work weeks, long hours and – yes – months without a day off.

ZMS' Sandoval leaps to sixth at Hershey Games Qualifies for finals by winning NM event

Gabriela (Ela) Sandoval, 12, a seventhgrade student at Zia Middle School, competed in the Hershey's Track and Field Games 2010 North American Final Meet held Saturday, Aug. 7, in Hershey, Pa. She placed sixth in the 11-to-12 girls age group in the standing long jump. She had qualified for the event by winning the long jump at the New Mexico Hershey's State Track and Field Games held this summer in Roswell.

At those New Mexico Track and Field Games, she also anchored the winning 4-by-100-meter relay team and placed second in the 100-meter dash. At the Las Cruces area Hershey's Games held in June, she placed first in the standing long jump and the100meter dash.

The Hershey's company has sponsored the Hershey's Track and Field Games for 33 years. The program is the largest youth fitness program of its kind in North America. This year, more than 400,000 youths participated in local meets and state and provincial finals. More than 450 athletes participated in the North American Final Meet.

Ela Sandoval is the daughter of Gabe and Minerva Sandoval and a member of the Stallions Track Team.

we've been," said Bradley. "We'll concentrate on forcing turnovers, getting after it and making plays."

Replacing the graduated Austin Hooker at quarterback is junior Axton Franzoy, a 6-1, 175-pounder.

"He's a leader and one of the hardest workers on the team," Bradley said of Franzoy. "He has all the characteristics of being a good quarterback. He's comparable to Austin, but could be even better."

sion I prospect in running back Brandon Betancourt, a 5-11, 175-pounder who has given a verbal commitment to New Mexico State. The only other starter returning on offense is guard Andy Zapien. Other key offensive line players are center Caymen Green, guard Jaquin Acosta, Sean O'Neill, Daniel Garcia and Ramondo.

Goday will be the tight end, and Ortega and Minor are the top two receivers, followed by Ryan Cosper and Avron Garcia.

"We have a tremendous amount of speed with that group," Bradley said. "We'll throw and run the ball to keep the defense off balance.

"Depth is the key this year. We'll spend the next couple of weeks looking for depth."

Church Kids need to be independent before college

Those with the most trouble can rise to the top

My sister's daughter went off to college at 18 and immediately went a little crazy. She had always been a good kid, but when she was on her own, she drank like a lush, was sexually promiscuous and flunked three of her classes. My daughter is only 12, but I don't want her to make the same mistakes when she is beyond our grasp. How can I get her ready to handle freedom and independence?

Well, you may already be 12 years late in beginning to prepare your daughter for that moment of release. The key is to transfer freedom and responsibility to her little by little from early childhood so she won't need your supervision when she is beyond it. To move suddenly from tight control to utter liberty is an invitation to disaster.

I learned this principle from my own mother, who made a calculated effort to teach me independence and responsibility. After laying a foundation during the younger years, she gave me a "final examination" when I was 17 years old. Mom and Dad went on a two-week trip and left me at home with the family car and permission to have my buddies stay at the house. Wow! Fourteen slumber parties in a row! I couldn't believe it. We could have torn the place apart - but we didn't. We behaved rather responsibly.

I always wondered why my mother took such a risk, and after I was grown, I asked her about it.

She just smiled and said, "I knew in one year you would be leaving for college, where you would have complete freedom with no one watching over you. I wanted to expose you to that independence while you were still under my influence?

I suggest that you let your daughter test the waters of freedom occasionally as she's growing up, rather than tossing her into the big wide ocean all at once. It takes wisdom and tact to pull that off, but it can be done. If you do the job properly, the time of release in six or seven years will be a gentle transition rather than a cataclysmic event.

My two kids are as different as night and day. You'd never even know they were born to the same parents. One of them is having trouble in school, and the other is something of a superstar. I'm very worried about the one boy. Do some kids start out doing poorly and then catch fire? Thank goodness they often do. Let me give you an encouraging illustration. Several years ago, I attended a wedding ceremony in a beautiful garden setting, and I came away with some thoughts about parents who are raising a child like yours.

After the minister had instructed the groom to kiss the bride on that day, approximately 150 colorful, helium-filled balloons were released into the blue California sky. Within a few seconds the balloons were just scattered all across the heavens, some of them rising hundreds of feet overhead and others cruising toward the horizon. A few balloons struggled to clear the upper branches of the trees while the show-offs became mere pinpoints of color on their journey to the sky.

How interesting, I thought, and how symbolic of children. Let's face it. Some boys and girls seem to be born with more helium than others. They catch all the right breezes, and they soar effortlessly to the heights, while others wobble dangerously close to the trees. Their frantic folks run along underneath, huffing and puffing to keep them airborne. It is an exhausting experience.

In short, I have a word of encouragement to you and all the parents of low-flying kids. Sometimes the child who has the greatest trouble getting off the ground eventually soars to the highest heights. That's why I urge you as parents not to look too quickly for the person your child will become.

This week in the history of the Mesilla Valley

• New Mexico State University President Roger Corbett, while addressing the 36th State 4-H Conference, urged the youths to make friends during the conference and to learn to live together. "It is something that nations have not learned to do," he said.

• NMSU named Philip Leyendecker the dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. He had been acting dean since the death of Robert Black and was the first NMSU graduate to be named to the position.

• NMSU Vice President William O'Donnell received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Colorado State University. He had graduated from CSU in 1926.

• The Las Cruces Public Schools named three new elementary school principals: Arlie Prater for Mesilla Park, Joe Sipko for Doña Ana and Lucy Merecklen for Valley View. • Teresa Gallegos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.V. Gallegos of Mesilla, completed her training at the Regina School of Nurses.

• United States farmers are being penalized for their efficiency, Gov. Toney Anaya said at the New Mexico Department of Agriculture's Western Association meeting. U.S. farmers are the most efficient in the world, but their efficiency has created an overabundance of crops and livestock that depressed prices paid to farmers, Anaya said.

• The New Mexico Vocational Home Economics Teachers Association named Lois Melton of Las Cruces High School Teacher of the Year for her innovative teaching practices.

• Frederick "Rick" Richardson, who had transferred from Lincoln County, was named Doña Ana County 4-H agent.

• Las Cruces received 1.18 inches of rain one night to bring the year's total up to 6.61 inches.

Read the label well Find out what you're eating

By Dr. Barry Fisher For the Las Cruces Bulletin

One of the best ways to control what we eat is by preparing food ourselves. However, realistically, that is not always possible.

The FDA has required food manufacturers to give us the information that we need to control our intake. Every packaged food is labeled with a nutrition label that gives us the essential information to know what we are eating. How do we use this label?

First, it is important to know what the size is of the portion being reported. For example, a label tells us that the package contains four servings of 1 ounce each. Each of these servings contains 155 calories, mostly from fat. In addition, each ounce has 2 grams of protein, 1 gram of sugar and 148 milligrams of sodium (probably in the form of salt). This is probably a label on a small bag of potato or corn chips. It is unlikely that we would eat only 1 ounce, so the label becomes deceptive if we think that bag of chips will only give us 155 calories. In fact, after we have eaten the entire bag, we will have ingested 620 calories. This is typical of the deceptive, but legal, way that the food industry fools us into thinking we have only eaten a small percentage of the calories that we devour. A 3-ounce bar of chocolate is labeled only 135 calories per portion, but this 3-ounce bar was stated to contain seven portions.

How many calories should we be taking in daily? The simple answer is that we should consume what we burn every day in order to prevent weight gain or loss. When we consistently take in more than is used, we gain weight. Take in less, and we lose weight. For most of us, we need about 1,600 to 2,200 calories per day to remain at a normal weight.

The variation in daily requirements comes from people having different total lean body mass and different levels of daily activity.

Protein intake is also essential to good health. Most of us require 1.1 grams of protein per kilogram (2.2 pounds) of lean body mass. Needless to say, we would not be getting much of this from the above package, even if we ate the entire 620 calories (1 gram of protein per ounce times four equals 4 grams of protein in the bag).

This particular packaged food appeals to us because of its fat and salt content, which makes it something we like. To make this more appealing to the consumer, the manufacturer might put the words "cholesterol free" on the front of the bag to deceive us into thinking that this food has to be good for us because it contains no cholesterol.

Red Ribbon Bash to raise funds and awareness about HIV/AIDS

By Jimmy Currier Las Cruces Bulletin

Hundreds of Las Crucens will enjoy a fun evening of dancing, dinner and festivities to raise money for the Southern New Mexico AID & Comfort Partnership (SNMACP). The 12th Annual Red Ribbon Bash will be Friday, Aug. 20, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

SNMACP was created to improve peoples' lives by providing supplemental medication support to those living with HIV or AIDS in southern New Mexico.

Donny Grooms, SNMACP, organizer, hopes the Aug. 20 event breaks fundraising records, by collecting $50,000.

SNMACP works with the State of New Mexico Department of Health to fill the gap of prescription medications services not covered by state or federal programs. SNMACP started this in May, after Camino de Vida closed in March. To help SNMACP start, Camino de Vida provided the New Mexico Community Foundation, the fiscal agent for the Southern New Mexico with more than $51,000 to continue providing services.

"We pick up a tiny, tiny portion of what Camino used to do," Grooms said. "They did case management, housing and food. Now, the Department of Health does that but there are some gaps in coverages that states and federal programs do not provide. That's where our focus is, to fill in these gaps."

Cat Taylor, who was diagnosed with HIV in 1996 at the age of 36, said SNMACP is vital to helping patients.

A large crowd enjoyed the atmosphere at last year's Red Ribbon Bash, held Sept. 26, 2009, on the patio of the historic Alameda House. This year's bash is expected to be just as elegant and will be held Friday, Aug. 20, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

"If you don't have the money, you don't have the hope and you don't have the chance," she said. "That is what we are trying to do with Southern New Mexico Aid & Comfort – get the money to bring it to people who don't have access to finances to be able to save their lives."

"The bash" is a major fundraiser for SNMACP so it may achieve its goal of providing medication to patients. The event titled "Evening of Hope" starts at 6 p.m. and will feature a sit-down dinner, live and silent auction, 50/50 raffle and Wheel of Hope, sponsored by Spirit Winds. La Cella Bella will provide the music and the event concludes with a dance to the tunes of Tequila Nights. (See related story on page C2.)

"All of us are totally volunteer. We do have day jobs," Grooms said. "We squeeze in the aid and comfort partnership work into the wee hours of the night and after hours. We hope to continue it and 'the bash' is important."

Grooms said it's not only about raising money but also awareness about HIV and AIDS. He hopes to have more than 300 people attend the Red Ribbon Bash.

"AIDS and HIV are prevalent. It's happening. There are infections everyday and people are dying from this everyday," he said. "It's not a popular cause. People don't want to think about catching it or having friends or knowing someone with it. It's a huge denial issue. People don't want to think of this and there's a horrid stigma of being HIV positive or having AIDS."

Grooms pointed out that when someone is stricken with cancer,

TJ Jasso likes to help others. He also doesn't like a normal routine. Jasso, a registered nurse and diabetic educator at Memorial Medical Center, traveled to Haiti on Saturday, Aug. 7, to help in the construction and cleanup effort.

"I don't quite know what to expect," Jasso said Thursday, Aug. 5. "It's going to be an adventure – we'll see. It will get us out of our comfort zone."

Jasso left Las Cruces on Aug. 6 for Miami with his son Rick Jasso and fellow Sierra Vista Community Church members Dr. Ron Adams and Veronica Flores. On Saturday, the four flew to Port-au-Prince, Haiti, to join the rest of the Baptist Global Response team and hundreds of other volunteers who are helping to rebuild the island-nation. They are staying at the Convention Baptiste d'Haiti compound facility, one of the Haitian Baptist conventions close to the Port-au-Prince airport.

Jasso knows he will face challenges during the trip, but is looking forward to the learning experience. Running water, cell phones and electricity will be non-existent.

"It will be difficult to leave my comfort zone and work in unfamiliar conditions that lack basic tools and supplies," he said. "This is an opportunity to provide our services to people who really need them, it will also be an eye opener that will make us appreciate what we have."

Haiti is slowly recovering from an earthquake in January that killed more than 230,000 people and affected more than 3 million people in the island-nation in the See Nurse on page A31

Doña Ana County employees and visitors to the Doña Ana County Government Center donated 43 pints of blood Friday, July 30, during the 10th annual Judy Price Memorial Blood Drive conducted in the rotunda of the center.

Since the drive was started in 2001, nearly 700 pints of blood have been donated in honor of the late Judy Price, who died Sept. 4, 2001, after a long battle with cancer.

Price began her employment with Doña Ana County on April 15, 1991, as director of planning. She was named acting assistant county manager in September 1991 and held the position for four months before returning to the Planning Department.

In 1994, under her leadership, the department was renamed the Department of Community Development to indicate the wide range of services provided. On Dec. 13, 1995, Price was appointed acting county manager while a seven-month search for a permanent manager was underway. In July of 2000, she was again named acting county manager, and she remained in the position until Jan. 22, 2001.

Doña Ana County normally holds an unnamed second blood drive toward the end of the year. The 2011 Judy Price Memorial Blood drive will be conducted next July.

VA speeds access to health benefits

As part of Secretary of Veterans Affairs Eric Shinseki's effort to streamline access to benefits, the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has removed the signature requirement for veterans who electronically submit an online 10-10EZ Application for Health Benefits.

"This singular action will reduce days, if not weeks, for veterans who apply online to access their hard-earned medical benefits and upholds the promise to reduce access barriers to needed care for this nation's veterans," Shinseki said.

Previously, veterans filling out the online application were required to print a copy, sign it and send to their local medical center or wait for a copy to be mailed to them for signature and mailing before enrollment into the VA health care system.

For more information, visit www.va.gov/ healtheligibility or call VA's toll free number at 877-222-VETS (8387). The online form is available at www.1010ez.med.va.gov/sec/ vha/1010ez.

Rural New Mexicans eligible for affordable prescriptions

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman (D-NM) applauded the Obama administration for implementing provisions he wrote that make prescription medications more affordable for patients served by rural hospitals and other safety-net hospitals.

Safety-net providers – health care providers that treat a high percentage of low-income and uninsured patients – and their patients are able to purchase outpatient medications for discounted prices through the 340B Drug Discount Program. These facilities and patients can save an average of 20 percent to 50 percent of the cost for covered outpatient medications.

Before the new health insurance reform law was enacted, these safety-net providers only included high-Medicaid disproportionate share hospitals (DSH), community health centers, federally funded programs such as the AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP) and urban clinics for Native Americans. Bingaman wrote a provision into the law that expands the definition of eligible hospitals to include rural hospitals, children's hospitals and cancer hospitals. The administration announced today that these new providers may apply to participate in the 340B program.

"Under the new law, rural hospitals and their patients can save up to 50 percent on the cost of prescription medications," Bingaman said. "This is great news for many New Mexicans, whose prescription drugs will now be more affordable."

The newly eligible rural hospitals include critical access hospitals, and certain sole community hospitals and rural referral centers.

Minority support of donor registries increasing

The number of minorities registering as organ, eye and tissue donors is increasing, according to a survey commissioned by Donate Life America.

Currently, nearly 90 million people in the United States are designated donors. In New Mexico, 1 million people have registered to be donors through the Motor Vehicle Division or online at www.nmdonor.org according to Patricia Niles, CEO of New Mexico Donor Services.

Increasing the number of people registered as organ, eye and tissue donors is critical to the more than 108,000 men, women and children awaiting organ transplants, including 687 New Mexicans, and the hundreds of thousands more who could benefit from cornea and tissue transplants. Registering through a donor registry is the only way to ensure that if you are a candidate for donation, your decision is irrevocably honored.

Of those surveyed who wished to be donors, 78 percent of Caucasians, 77 percent of African-Americans, 69 of percent of Hispanics and 60 of percent Asian-Americans said they registered on donor registries. Furthermore, increasingly more people, including minorities (72 percent African-American, 71 percent Hispanic and 71 percent Asian) want their decision to donate honored, even if a family member has different wishes. Still, with minorities comprising 54 percent of those waiting, there is much work to be done.

The nationwide research of 5,100 adults identified several prevailing misconceptions that are shared by not only ethnic minorities, but most Americans:

- 48 percent of people incorrectly believe that in the United States there is a black market where people can buy or sell organs and tissue.
- 28 percent people mistakenly believe that a brain dead person can recover from his or her injuries.
- 25 percent of people falsely believe that doctors will not try as hard to save their lives in an emergency if they know they are registered donors.
- 16 percent of people are concerned that they will not be able to have regular funerals if they are donors.

As the 14th annual National Minority Donor Awareness Day – was observed Sunday, Aug. 1, first recognized by President Clinton in 1996 – the importance of getting the facts and increasing the number of donor designations is emphasized.

To learn more about this research, the need for organ and tissue donors or to register a donation decision, visit www.donatelife.net or www.nmdonor.org

Vision testing encouraged

As many children are heading back to school in the next few weeks, Prevent Blindness America is encouraging parents to have their children take an exam before they head to class – an eye exam. Because so much of a child's learning is visual, healthy eyesight is imperative for classroom success. Star Pupils, a new online program from Prevent Blindness America, provides no-cost educational materials on a variety of children's eye health topics. Starpupils.org also houses an easy-to-use chart on the vision requirements for enrolling children in school for each state. Find the requirements for New Mexico at www.starpupils.org/pba/content/getting-ready-school.

County Alliance seeks HHS volunteers

Doña Ana County is seeking volunteers to serve on its Health and Human Services (HHS) Alliance, which serves as the primary advisory body to the Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department to improve the health status of Doña Ana County residents.

The alliance improves coordination and collaboration, nurtures public understanding, strengthens accountability, promotes informed policy-making and provides an opportunity for ongoing community input.

"Members of the alliance have the opportunity to participate in borderwide issues," said Health and Human Services Department Director Silvia Sierra, noting that the alliance considers a broad range of health and human services needs and facilitates direct lines of communication between internal departments and external agencies.

"Membership reflects a cross-section of the community," said alliance Chair Tony Martinez. "The membership includes individuals with a wide range of strengths, abilities, experiences and resources found within the community. Diverse membership enhances collaboration and helps the alliance develop a more comprehensive response to community needs."

Doña Ana County is soliciting applications for the following vacant categories: advocate, consumer, educational or provider. To request an application for alliance membership, contact Laura Henry at the Doña Ana County Health and Human Services Department at 525-5834 or laurah@donaanacounty.org. Deadline for applications is 5 p.m. Monday, Aug. 30.

New school year good time to establish good habits

As kids head back to school, parents are faced with the di-lemma of finding foods to pack for lunch and snacks that kids want to eat and that are good for them. Most snacks available in the grocery stores are full of fat, sugar and salt with little nutritional benefit, so finding healthy choices that kids are willing to eat isn't always an easy task.

Luckily, many food and beverage manufacturers are beginning to make this task a little bit easier by adding ingredients with a variety of health benefits to many foods popular with kids. These ingredients are often called functional ingredients.

look at the portion size, then the calories, protein and sugar in each portion to gain more knowledge about what you are eating and how it will affect your weight and meet your daily needs. Under the nutrition label is the list of ingredients listed in order of the quantity contained. The major ingredient is listed first, and the others follow in decreasing content listed by weight. Although the manufacturer does not tell you the exact recipe for the food, the ingredients are listed.

It will always be more beneficial to buy natural foods and cook for yourself, but we will not do that for every meal. Since the information is on the package, use it to help yourself to appropriate quantities of the food that you enjoy and avoid the useless, excessive calories that lead to an overweight condition.

Caribbean.

While this will be Jasso's first disaster mission, he's no stranger to missions or helping people. As a child, Jasso accompanied his uncle on missions. In 2008, Jasso was awarded the Mercy Award and this past March he received the Daisy Award - both awarded by Memorial Medical Center – for helping a diabetic patient that was in severe need of medical assistance.

Jasso is prepared to offer his nursing skills in Haiti, saying he will bring his stethoscope, gloves and blood pressure cuff.

Just in case they need me, I'm ready. You never know," he said. "The focus is on helping people and helping re-establish their lives anyway we can," he said. "There are still collapsed buildings and the clean up hasn't happened."

While Jasso said he hopes to make an impact on people's lives in Haiti, he said his life would be impacted after the trip.

"Some experiences will impact our lives," he said. "We will see a lot of people missing limbs and see firsthand the impact and devastation the country and people have suffered."

The day before packing for Miami, Jasso said he was ready for the trip.

"It's coming to reality now and I know on the plane my adrenaline will be pumping," he said. "I'm excited about going, but also a little nervous. Everyday will be an adventure."

Most kids know what they like when it comes to food choices, so the most successful functional ingredients are those that add nutritional benefits without changing the taste, texture or quality of the food.

One issue being addressed with functional ingredients is bone health. While many parents may think of bone health as an issue for older adults, taking care of kids' bones while they are young can help prevent problems like osteoporosis later in life. This is particularly important during the preteen and teen years, when bones are growing fastest. By the time teens finish their growth spurts around age 17, 90 percent of their adult bone mass is established, according to the National Institute of Health.

The primary nutrient involved with bone health is calcium. And, while milk is an obvious choice when it comes to calcium, not all kids like milk. And some are lactose intolerant. Food and beverage manufacturers are making the job of choosing calcium-rich foods easier by adding certain calcium-rich functional ingredients to food products that are already popular with kids.

One such functional ingredient that has been getting a lot of attention recently is calcified minerals. The main benefit of calcified minerals is their ability to enrich calcium content to

'Unfortunately, there's a fear factor that you can get it from breathing or kissing," he said. "You can't catch it by casual contact. You can't get it from drinking or eating after each other, but from direct blood to blood."

Taylor echoed those comments and said it is important for people to be educated about HIV and AIDS

"I wish people would stop being ignorant," she said. "You can't get AIDS through hugging or touching. Ignorance is simply a lack of knowledge. HIV still has a stigma so people don't talk about it. It took a lot of guts for me to come out and talk about it. HIV and AIDS has gone back beyond the curtain and now we are having a new outbreak."

The transition from Camino de Vida to SNMACP has been challenging, Grooms admits.

Is a nonprofit a business?

Short answer, yes.

Nonprofits are a type of business. They are crucial to the wellbeing of our community and employ hundreds in Las

The term, nonprofit, or not-for-profit, is used to describe an organization that has a specific, usually humanitarian, mission, rather than to make a profit.

Nonprofits, like businesses, can be incorporated. These usually employ people and have a rather organized structure. Unincorporated nonprofits, such as neighborhood watch groups, usually don't have much structure and do not employ anyone, rather they operate solely with the help of volunteers.

Local organizations such as Big Brothers Big Sisters, Mesilla Valley Hospice, United Blood Services, the Colonias Development Council, La Casa, Jardin de Los Ninõs and countless others, work tirelessly to better the community and provide a living for hundreds of Las Crucens in the process.

Nonprofits are exempt from state taxes because they work for the common good. To ensure these organizations are, indeed, working for the common good, the state requires certain organizational structures be put in place, such as a board of directors or board of trustees. The board, much like a board of directors for a major corporation, is responsible for keeping the group on track and fulfilling its institutional mission.

Like businesses, some nonprofits need a management team – a president and CEO, executive director, accountant, business manager, communications director, etc. The list goes on.

Funding is the tricky part.

Most nonprofits are funded by state and federal grants, loans and sometimes service fees. Because it's difficult to plan a budget that hinges on the approval of potential funding sources, many nonrecurring, it's hard to predict just how financially stable a nonprofit organization will be.

That's why you'll often see a call to action for a specific nonprofit in town with limited or less-than-expected funding. To help offset these losses and to generate somewhat stable revenue, nonprofits

Preppin' for pigskin season Restaurants begin marketing upcoming NFL mania

By Gabriel Vasquez Las Cruces Bulletin

Let's face it. Las Crucens love their football. Overwhelmingly, it seems, they love the Dallas Cowboys, but that's another story.

Restaurateurs know this. From local mom-and-pops to franchises, restaurants are prepping for the fall football season with promotions and special events to get people in the door and chowing down.

"Our theme for the fall is 'Your game is on at The Game,'" said Marci Dickerson, owner of The Game Sports Bar & Grill on the corner of Espina Street and University Avenue. "We're gearing up and we're excited, starting with three brand new 55-inch TVs on the patio and additional TVs inside."

It's no doubt that what the World Cup means to the international sports community, the Super Bowl means to locals, Dickerson said, although Las Cruces is a far stretch from the closest NFL franchise.

"It's the busiest time of the year for us," she said. "Football season really brings people together."

In addition to its new TVs, the restaurant will run a $6 "Steak, Spud and a Bud" promotion on Saturdays and Sundays during football season. It also will feature 50-cent wings for Thursday night games. For those who want to be around the action, but don't want to spend all day watching football, they can partake in a Sunday afternoon game of poker.

We have plenty of activities and specials for those who want to watch the game but just want to relax and entertain themselves too," she said.

At Buffalo Wild Wings, 2750 Mall Drive, manager Johnny Vigil is gearing up for the season with new drink specials in addition to regular and seasonal football promotions.

"We show every single game here," he said. 'The NFL is our bread and butter. Out of all the sports - baseball, basketball and UFC - the NFL is the most popular. It's one that everyone can get into. Everyone has their own team.

A proven way to teach a particular subject is to make it fun.

Roughly 55,000 people, each fall, have fun navigating their way through the Mesilla Valley Maze and, along the way, learn about the state's deep-rooted history in agriculture.

The corn maze is a perfect way to enjoy some family fun, but at the same time visitors can learn about the importance of agriculture in our state," said New Mexico Department of Agriculture (NMDA) Director and Secretary Miley Gonzalez.

NMDA spokeswoman Noreen Jaramillo was at the Mesilla Valley Maze, 3855 W. Picacho Ave., Wednesday Aug. 4, to announce a partnership with the maze's creator Anna Lyles. The partnership will help New Mexico promote local agricultural tourism.

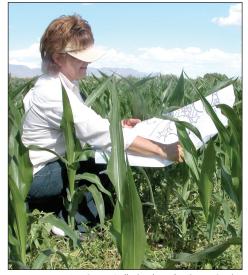

"The Mesilla Valley Maze was the first corn maze to pop up in the state. Now it's grown into a popular tourist destination for New Mexicans, residents from other states, and even other countries," Jaramillo said. Lyles said the NMDA is a "friend" of agriculture and is excited about the partnership.

'The NMDA is fabulous," she said. "They really have what's best for agriculture at the forefront of their heart and understand the economic and cultural impact of agriculture. We cannot find better supporters. They do a great job in promoting New Mexico agriculture and marketing our products."

Lyles' maze has been entertaining and perplexing visitors from across the globe for the past 12 years.

"On average, we see about 55,000 maze visitors each fall," she said. "We have a big map that asks folks to put a sticker on the location See Maze on page B3 raise funds. They're the best at it. From mud volleyball to the Mayor's Gala, nonprofits try to appeal to a wide variety of donors.

Any nonprofit, unincorporated or incorporated, is eligible for tax exemption. There are several types of IRS tax-exempt status, but the 501(c)(3) designation is the most favorable because it is exempt from federal taxes. Donors to the nonprofit can also take a tax deduction for the amount of their donations, making the donation process a lucrative move for donors. Other classifications, such as 501(c)(4) and 501(c)(6) are also federally tax-exempt, but only a 501(c) (3) allows donors to deduct their contributions.

A common misconception is that nonprofits don't make any money at all. To the contrary, there is revenue generated, but it can only be used for the operations of the organization, including payroll and infrastructure. Nonprofit foundations can also grant revenue to other nonprofit organizations.

Then there's advertising and marketing. Like any good business, a nonprofit has to be made widely known to the public. Some of the most innovative and effective marketing campaigns have come from nonprofits. Remember Smokey Bear? McGruff the Crime Dog? How about the crash test dummies?

When a nonprofit goes belly up, its assets are not sold or liquidated, rather, they are given to another nonprofit.

So aside from the traditional for-profit business mission and their tax-exempt status, nonprofits are very similar to businesses in the way they are organized and run. Our local nonprofit leaders, then, are more than just advocates for their cause.

They're extremely talented and versatile business men and women.

"The start of the NFL season is really the start of our busy season."

The sports bar formula has certainly worked for Buffalo Wild Wings, not just locally, but nationwide. As many more expensive, linentablecloth type establishments floundered in the recession, Buffalo Wild Wings increased its revenue by more than 30 percent and earnings grew by more than 24 percent and topped all previous estimates, according to the company. Many of these gains are from newly opened restaurants, including ones in Las Cruces and El Paso. At franchised locations, sales rose 3.7 percent in 2009 and 2.8 percent for company-owned establishments, proving that the beer, wings and sports formula is still a hit, even in a down economy.

While the corn maze doesn't officially open until Sept. 25, the cutting of the maze is underway. Blackham Roman Greiner and Associates (BRG) and Summit Engineering are teaming up to do the job.

"This is awesome," said engineer Kerry Greiner of BRG. "It's such an amazing thing. Anna has so much trust in us."

Greiner explained they are using surveygrade GPS to set the boundaries in the 9-acre cornfield. He said the equipment allows them to work much faster and still get precise layouts. In six to eight weeks, the corn will be 10 feet high and people will have to use their mind and legs to meander their way through the maze.

"The corn is still short enough where you can stand in the maze and actually see the design take shape," Lyles said. "So many people enjoy the final product, but the process to get the maze ready is really a sight to see."

This year's theme will commemorate the 80th anniversary of the discovery of Pluto. The maze design will feature stars, a man looking through a telescope and a dog resembling the Disney character Pluto.

In 1930, Clyde Tombaugh discovered the ninth planet. Tombaugh later moved to Las Cruces in the 1950s, where he died in 1997.

Lyles sketched the design and Mike Sanders, a surveyor with Summit Engineering, made the detailed copy that was used for the corn maze. In choosing the design, Lyles said she wanted to honor space exploration and Tombaugh's legacy. Although Pluto was demoted from a planet to dwarf planet by the International Astronomical Union in 2006, Lyles said Pluto is still considered a planet in Las Cruces.

Is now the time to refinance? Individual circumstances dictate the answer

Gary Sandler's Real Estate Connection

It's no secret that mortgage interest rates are at historic lows. Freddie Mac reported last week that the average conventional 30-year and 15-year mortgage rates were 4.49 percent and 3.95 percent, respectively. As a result of this enticing news, refinancing is on the minds of many Las Cruces homeowners. The decision to take the plunge is a highly personal matter, however, and is specific to each borrower's situation.

Take, for example, the saga of the regular reader of this column who phoned me a few days ago to ask if the time is right for him to dive into the process. Since there is no such thing as a "one-size-fits-all" answer, the first order of business was to identify the components of his contemplated action.

Motivation. Typically, there are three reasons people choose to redo their loans: Reduce their monthly payment, reduce the term of their loan or generate cash for planned or emergency expenses such as health issues, financing college costs, adding to or remodeling a home, or paying off high-cost debt. Our homeowner's motivation is to reduce his mortgage obligations as he moves further into retirement. But that's just the beginning of what he has to consider.

Cost. One of the main considerations is how much the process will cost and how long it will take to recoup the investment. Our homeowner's $185,000 loan carries an interest rate of just below 6 percent. If he were to refinance today at 4.5 percent, he would reduce his interest cost by about 1.5 percent or $2,775 annually. If the price tag to do the deal is, say, $2,500, he would recoup his investment in less than a year. If he remains in the property for at least that amount of time, he wins. If he leaves prior to that time, the switch may not be worth the cost.

Term. Our homeowner took out his current loan about 5 years ago, leaving 25 years remaining on the balance. If he were to refinance into another 30-year loan, he will, in effect, add 5 years to his original mortgage. Since his goal is to reduce his mortgage obligations, not extend them, he's better off exchanging his 30-year loan for a new 20-year product – instantly reducing his mortgage term by an additional 5 years. Because he's paid on his current loan for 5 years, and because the new interest rate is significantly lower than his current rate, his principal and interest payment will remain virtually unchanged.

Equity. Our reader has lived in his home for quite a while,

U.S. mortgage rates

Product	Rate	Points
30-Year fixed	4.49%	0.7%
15-Year fixed	3.95%	0.7%
5/1 adjustable	3.63%	0.6%
1-Year adjustable	3.56%	0.7%

Source: Freddie Mac, Aug. 5, 2010

giving him the equity he needs to satisfy lender requirements. Equity is the difference between the value of a home and the amount owed against it. Our borrower will have a much easier time obtaining a loan because he has at least 20 percent equity – meaning that he will ask to borrow no more than 80 percent of the value of his home. If he had less than 20 percent equity, his cost to obtain the loan could rise, perhaps offsetting, reducing or eliminating the benefits the refinance would have provided.

Tax benefits. This is where things really get personal. Reduced income tax deductions brought about by paying less mortgage interest could have a measurable effect on one's tax picture, so our homeowner would be wise to check with a tax professional or online site such as www.bankrate.com to determine to what extent, if any, the refinance will impact his tax obligations.

It is also important that our refinance shopper do his due diligence and shop carefully for his new loan. Not all shoe stores carry the same shoes, and not all lenders carry the same loans. And even if two shoe stores happen to carry the same products, they may not offer them at the same price. The same holds true for lenders.

Finally, qualifying guidelines vary from institution to institution, so don't take the word of just one lender. I've personally worked with buyers who have been told by Lender "A" that they don't qualify, only to be told by Lender "B" that they're as good as gold.

See you at closing.

Education is floundering A college degree is still vital to future earnings

Friday, August 13, 2010

After more than 100 years as the most educated country on earth, we have lost that position according to a new report authored by the College Board. The College Board is the New Jersey-based organization

The College Board is the New Jersey-based organization that administers the SAT. According to the report, as recently as the 1980s, the U.S. led in college graduation rates, but has dropped dramatically since then. Currently, according to the College Board, we now rank 12th among 36 industrial states in the number of adults 25 to 34 who have completed an associate's degree. Among the 50 states, New Mexico ranks 48th, ahead of only Louisiana and Arkansas.

In a time of recession, such as today, when we hear about college graduates who can't find a job, we may forget the importance of college for prosperity. But a college degree remains the key to a prosperous lifestyle. The salary gap between college graduates and non-graduates is at the highest level ever. A dollar spent on college pays a return in increased earning power of 18 percent, according to some studies. A bachelor's degree increases lifetime earning by $1 million even after netting out the cost of going to college. College graduates are also less likely to be unemployed.

The college-educated also increase the return to those they work for. Manufacturing requires engineers; business requires managers. A receptionist working at a professional office earns more than one in a warehouse.

Beyond the economic benefits, a college education improves quality of life. College graduates, on average, have better, more interesting jobs; they live longer and are healthier; their children are healthier and better educated. They generally enjoy life more than the less educated. Taking a course in comparative literature, for example, not only trains a student in critical thinking skills desired by employers, but teaches the student how better to appreciate what they read.

The College Board report, called The College Completion Agenda, makes ten recommendations for improving U.S. college completion rates. The first five of these recommendations focus on preK-12 education. The study recommends more state-financed preschool programs, better high school and middle school college counseling, dropout prevention programs, an alignment with international curricular standards and improved teacher quality.

Of these recommendations, here in Las Cruces, better high school counseling can be achieved quickly. NMSU is ready to work with counselors who are surprisingly reluctant to work with NMSU. If LCPS were to improve coordination with NMSU in this area, better results would follow nearly immediately.

Better teacher quality could be achieved over a few years by imposing higher entrance standards at state education colleges. If education colleges required a 2.5 GPA for admission to upper division courses, new graduates would be better qualified. Of course, a high GPA doesn't guarantee a good teacher, but it helps on average.

The remaining five recommendations have to do with higher education. High college tuitions are criticized. Recommendations are made to increase need-based financial aid, and further efforts to keep college affordable. Colleges are also called on to clarify and simplify the admission process, and to ease credit transfer between colleges and from community colleges to universities. The final College Board recommendation is to establish a new "honors GED" program for students transitioning to college.

Increasing the number of college graduates is doable. Currently, Canada has the highest percentage of college graduates among 25 to 34 year olds at 57 percent. President Obama has set a goal for the United States of 55 percent college graduates by 2025 in this age group. This is something we should do.

SpringBoard! changes the lives of aspiring women Scholarships help local women attend college

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

Soon, SpringBoard! scholarships will be awarded to local women who are continuing their education. The impact of those scholarships will not only help each individual, it will impact their families and the community as a whole.

SpringBoard! was established in 2004 through the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico to help improve the lives of women in the region. The scholarships provide opportunities for advanced education to New Mexico State University and Doña Ana Community College.

'This program specifically targets women who have a hard time getting into an educa-tional program because they either dropped out of school and had children or had to go to work and now realize they need more of an education to do better in life," said Ammu Dev-asthali, a founding member of SpringBoard!

In the fall of 2009, Christine Camacho, Magdalena Montelongo, Rhoda Lewis, Roselane Perez, Maria Morales, Ilma Garzon, Mary Nunez, Denise Geller, Patricia Troncoso, Aracely Silva and Amanda Archuleta were awarded scholarships. SpringBoard! also awarded an Over the Rainbow Scholarship (a fund established in the Community Foundation to honor the memory of Dorothy Ellen Baker, a daughter of an Appalachian coal miner who valued higher education for women) to Dalys Sanchez, and grants to Stephanie Luna and JoAnn Ramos so the two women could pay for their GEDs.

The SpringBoard! committee usually receives more than 30 applications each year, but are limited with their awards by the amount of money raised for the program. With more funds now available, more scholarships are available to women seeking to continue their education and change their lives.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the foundation is that donors need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people in our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds, donors can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to their heart. Through our planned giving programs, donors can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of southern New Mexico for generations to come. The CFSNM can advise donors on how best to maximize contributions, no matter what size. For more information, visit www. cfsnm.org or call Luan Wag-

continue to relocate and expand to city park

By Gabriel Vasquez

Not many people know about the West Mesa Industrial Park, a 1,820-acre development located on Interstate 10, eight miles west of Las Cruces. It is home to several companies specializing in light and general manufacturing, and more are coming.

Most recently, Alaska Structures (AKS), a company in Las Cruces for more than 10 years, has expanded from its South Main Street facility into the 180,000-square-foot West Mesa building previously occupied by Rea Magnet Wire.

"I can confirm they are now occupying the old Rea building, and have taken over part of the Parkview site as well," said Da-vin Lopez, president and CEO of the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance. The Parkview Metals site, vacant since 2007, stands at 100,000 square feet. AKS leased all but the office space in the building as it continues to consolidate its El Paso operations into Las Cruces.

" (AKS) will need more employees, but I do not know if they are hiring right now," said Christine Logan, administrator for the city's Economic Development Department.

AKS designs, engineers and manufactures fabric-building systems for extreme environments for both military and commercial use. It recently was awarded a large contract that called for the expansion. Expected employment for the Rea site is 75 to 90 employees, city officials said, with a possible expansion of up to 170 employees once the Parkview site is fully operational.

"It's safe to say, that any local company that expands at this rate can only be a great opportunity for us," Lopez said. Although industrial buildings are still available for lease, space on the West Mesa is becoming more of a hot commodity.

"Don Billings has a 6,000-square-foot pec building available on Trigg Loop and NAI 1st Valley is marketing a 23,000-squarefoot facility on Crawford Boulevard," Logan said. "Although there are not many buildings available, there are several development-ready land parcels available through private land owners and the city."

Current West Mesa tenants include Sam-son Equipment, which continues to do well and is looking to acquire additional land for expansion. F&A Dairy Products has completed a significant expansion and has recently upped its employment number to 93.

The Sapphire Energy research and de-velopment site continues to grow and now employs 24 full time and has added several interns from New Mexico State University.

Onion producers Barker Produce have a new facility under construction on the West Mesa and Premier Distributing opened a facility there in February and employs 63 people in the park.

State markets chile in the sky NMDA begins nationwide advertising campaign

By Marvin Tessneer

The New Mexico Department of Agriculture is conducting a New Mexico Green Chile Promotion to show consumers how to get their "green chile fix."

NMDA is working with New Mexico green chile growers and shippers during August and September to support the campaign, which involves working with about half a dozen retail stores across the nation to show clerks how to display and sell green chile, according to NMDA public information officer Noreen Jaramillo.

"Our staff is actually there at the store promoting green chile and visiting with customers," said David Lucero, NMDA Marketing and Development Division director. "It's usually the sound of the roaster and the wonderful roasted green chile smell that draws the shoppers in. We give them samples and usually they're hooked."

The NMDA staff members are training retail store clerks how to roast green chile for consumers and explain the best way to cook with green chile. The funding for this training program comes from the USDA's Specialty Crop Block Grant, Jaramillo said.

"Because of our successful green chile promotion in the past, about 2,400 retailers throughout the United States now carry and sell New Mexico green chile," Jaramillo said. "And there are even residents in these states who preorder green chile.

"The retail campaign is all about showing consumers how to get their green chile fix."

The NMDA Marketing and Development Division also has gone beyond the retail stores in its green chile promotion with a full-page advertisement in the Southwest Airlines Spirit magazine that is seen daily by thousands of its passengers, Jaramillo said.

"Just about everyone in New Mexico already knows about our chile treasure," said NMDA Director-Secretary Miley Gonzalez. "This is another approach by our Marketing and Development Division to reach the folks who might not otherwise ever think about eating or cooking with green chile. Not just any chile, but with authentic New Mexico green chile."

Jaramillo expanded on the campaign.

"We want to reach residents from different parts of the United States, so the ad lists the names of the retailers, let's say in California, Texas or New York, that carry New Mexico green chile."

Green infrastructure conference

The City of Las Cruces will host a conference focusing on green infrastructure and low impact development from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26, at the Ramada Palms de Las Cruces, 201 E. University Ave. The terms, green infrastructure and low impact development, are used to describe a land planning and engineering design approach to managing storm water runoff. They emphasize conservation and use of on-site natural features to protect water quality. In addition, the concepts highlight the importance of the natural environment in decisions about land use planning. The conference will be useful to planners, engineers, contractors, developers, researchers architects, landscape architects and other government officials involved in policy development, finance, design, construction and maintenance. The conference registration fee is currently ongoing. The cost is $75. Registration is available by logging onto www.las-cruces.org/ council/sustainability.asp and clicking on the link for the website to register. You can receive a registration form by calling Planner Carol McCall at 528-3209.

Udall's office accepting internship applications

U.S. Sen. Tom Udall is inviting New Mexico college students to apply for internships in each of his state offices. To apply for an in-state internship with Udall's office, visit tomudall. senate.gov and click on the "Internships" link. The online application is accessible from that page. All internships are unpaid, but may count toward college credit. Students should check with their respective college or university for requirements. College students from New Mexico or college students attending New Mexico schools are given first preference, and students of all majors are encouraged to apply. The dates for internships in Udall's New Mexico offices are flexible and all state offices are currently accepting applications for the 2010 fall semester.

Feds pass education, Medicaid bill

The U.S. House of Representatives put their stamp of approval Tuesday, Aug. 10, on HR 1586, the Education Jobs and Medicaid Assistance Act, saving the jobs of an estimated 1,000 New Mexico teachers, according to the office of Lt. Gov. Diane Denish. The bill allocates $64.8 million in education funds. The state will also receive a share of $16 billion in Medicaid funding.

Area teachers build rockets as they participate in sessions addressing rocketry and microgravity during New Mexico State University's Summer of Innovation Teacher Professional Development Workshop in June and July.

Teachers learn rocketry NMSU workshop provides science training

Ever heard the saying "It's not rocket science?" Now area teachers can say they know the true meaning of this phrase after participating in New Mexico State University's Summer of Innovation Teacher Professional Development Workshop.

NMSU partnered with the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium for the workshop held in June and July. The event was made possible by the Launch to Learn NASA Grant, which only four universities in the nation received.

Teachers are able to network and gain different perspectives. We come together to try to reach students and get them interested in the science, technology, engineering and mathematics fields," said Brian Claar, a science teacher at Camino Real Middle School. "It gives us a good way to get ideas to share with our kids and get them involved."

More than 130 teachers participated in workshops addressing microgravity, including the science behind it and how it affects objects. The sessions prepared teachers to run their own summer camps. In each camp, fifth- through eighthgrade students work on a four-week curriculum to develop an experiment for a sounding rocket. 'This is the launching of a lot of ideas. I think the rocketry, the actual dynamics of it, is really going to go over well with my students," said Rey Lujan Gaytan, a teacher with Cimarron Municipal Schools.

Sounding rockets are an inexpensive way to study microgravity, and each experiment created for the rockets will only last about five minutes. The students will be able to send their experiments into space at Spaceport America, the only site in the nation allowing them this opportunity. Twenty experiments will be selected for the launch in 2011.

"This is such an awesome opportunity, we are hoping that many teachers will try to develop an experiment to launch next spring," said Laura Tomlinson, an assistant project director.

For more information, contact Susan Brown, director of STEM Outreach for the Institute for Excellence in Math and Science Education, at 646-7302 or Judy McShannon, of the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium, at 646-6414.

A 'Happy Meal' for small businesses?

State, federal and municipal business organizations double up on services

By Stephan Helgesen

The number of small business assistance organizations in New Mexico doesn't quite equal the number of McDonald's or Starbucks franchises yet, but they are seemingly everywhere. The real question is, "Are they providing real value for the taxpayers' money?"

At last count, there were more than a hundred federal, state, regional, county and municipal organizations and offices that provide some form of counseling to small businesses - all of which are paid with our taxes. That doesn't include the nonprofits, private sector consultants or other companies.

With all that help, our small businesses should be thriving. Unfortunately, the reverse is true. Small-to-medium sized enterprises (SMEs) are rapidly becoming victims of the recession from the problems that all SMEs face. That's not good news for our state's tax base. It's even worse news for our labor market, which desperately needs the jobs that SMEs create (it's estimated that well over half of all jobs created in the USA are created by small businesses).

There's no group of businesspeople whose impact on American society has been so grossly underestimated as SMEs, and while there are more small business assistance organization employees than doctors per capita in New Mexico, I believe they are not living up to their potential and need to be used in a more coordinated, effective fashion.

The challenges to our family-owned businesses are great. In addition to the long hours and resulting low per/hour take-home pay, a family-owned busi-ness has the added burden of living the company 24 hours each day – at home, as well as at the workplace. The business becomes their life as well as their livelihood. Every decision affects the business just as every business decision affects the family in some way. These are burdens not shouldered by the "captains of industry" (though I'm sure some feel personally involved in their billion-dollar operations).

What kinds of business support services do SMEs need, and can they get them in New Mexico?

Many have said that a small business is just a large business without capital, customers and clout. That said, small business' needs generally fit into 10 categories: 1. More customers, 2. More hours in the day, 3. Market stability and predictability, 4. Less government regulation, 5. Better access to capital, 6. Tax relief, 7. A competitive advantage, 8. Information, 9. Better trained workers and 10. Better advisors.

New Mexico's SME advisor community is actually two communities: economic development offices (state, regional and municipal, such as the State Economic Development Department) and SME business assistance organizations such as the U.S. Commercial Service and SBA. Both communities' have their own missions, but they often tend to duplicate each other's services, wasting valuable tax dollars. Economic development organizations exist to keep jobs and investment in their communities while they search for new investment. Small business advisor organizations give advice and counsel, as do private sector companies and consultants. The "menu" of their services covers many of the needs expressed in the 10 categories mentioned above. Both groups fall into three categories: those with timetested practical experience, those who think they have it – but don't – and those who do but are not offering the right services.

How does a small business choose the right advisor or the right SME assistance organization?

Choosing the right advisor is always difficult, and with so many to choose from, the decision is even more difficult. After counseling thousands of small businesses in 24 countries for 30 years, I can honestly say that that decision ought to be easier than it is, and that the logical first choice for most small business owners should be the organization that's closest to home, but proximity seldom guarantees a successful outcome.

If a small businessperson belongs to a trade association or an effective chamber of commerce, they could be good starting points to get a referral. Often, a company simply needs to find one person who they trust and who understands the business they're in and has proven, on-the-ground experience.

The debate about whether we should be spending so much money on supporting federal, state and local business assistance organizations (and their programs) is an on-going debate and needs to be joined. For my taxpayer money, I think an election year is the perfect time for a thorough review.

Stephan Helgesen is the former director of the State of New Mexico's Office of Science and Technology and is a retired foreign service officer who worked in 24 countries. He is the CEO of Second Opinion Marketing, an Albuquerque hightechnology consulting firm.

DON'T LET NEW MEXICO OFFICIALS REMOVE YOUR RIGHT TO KNOW FROM THE LAS CRUCES BULLETIN

Keep Public Notices in your local newspaper!

Pending future legislation may remove your right to read public notices in newspapers, moving them from the public domain to radio and TV stations. We're concerned. And you should be too.

What is a Public Notice?

A public notice informs citizens of government related actions and other public activities that affect citizens' everyday lives. A public notice has four elements:

A public notice has four elements:

• INDEPENDENT: A public notice is published in a forum independent of the government. In Las Cruces and Doña Ana County, the notices are published weekly in the Las Cruces Bulletin. Daily, these notices are available online.

• ARCHIVABLE: Public notices are archived for one year in a secure, and publicly available format at www.lascrucesbulletin.com. Also, the public can access 40 years of public notices for free at the Thomas Branigan Memorial library, or by coming to the Bulletin office at 840 N. Telshor Blvd. Suite E.

• ACCESSIBLE: Las Cruces Bulletin public notices can be accessed by all citizens. Public notices for a majority of the newspapers in the state can be found in print, online and on the New Mexico Press website, www.publicnoticeads.com/NM, anytime, anywhere, free of charge.

• VERIFIABLE: The public and the source of the notice are able to verify that the notice was published, by a notarized affidavit provided by the publisher.

Why publish Public Notices in the Las Cruces Bulletin?

• The Las Cruces Bulletin has more than 40 years of experience publishing public notices and the community relies on finding notices in their local newspaper. By mastering the process of publishing a notice, the Las Cruces Bulletin provides a valuable public service at a low cost.

• The Las Cruces Bulletin is a single, convenient location for notices for Las Cruces and Doña Ana County. Because the Las Cruces Bulletin publishes notices online and in print, we offer wide access to a broad range of people in different demographic groups. Whether accessed at a school, Las Cruces library, coffee shop or in the comfort of one's own home, the Las Cruces Bulletin can be read any time, day or night.

• The Las Cruces Bulletin authenticates notices. The Las Cruces Bulletin serves as an official printed record of publication and provide sworn affidavits that ads were published along with physical proof. The Las Cruces Bulletin can prove that a public notice has been properly run according to law to satisfy due process requirements. Electronic media present serious challenges to authentication, and make public actions vulnerable in litigation.

• Technical notices should be in writing. Many public notices are written in precise legal language that may require more than one reading for comprehension. Foreclosure notices, unclaimed property notices and tax sales notices can present difficult and technical language that will not be easily understood over the airwaves. Furthermore, a public notice printed in a newspaper produces a permanent record. Radio, TV and the Internet does not, nor does it assure timeliness. Also, a newspaper is archived for years and is not subject to computer crashes and hackers.

The Las Cruces Bulletin is your watchdog. Don't let that role change now. Contact your local state legislators today and voice your opinion.

Legislative contacts can be found in the Bulletin's 2010 Legislative Guide For a free copy of this guide, come to the Bulletin office at 840 N. Telshor, Las Cruces, NM or call 575-524-8061

C2 | Arts & Entertainment Las Cruces Bulletin Making a big 'bash' for hope Annual event held to help local HIV/AIDS community

By David Edwards

Las Cruces Bulletin

What if they gave a "bash" and there was no food?

What if they gave a "bash" and there was no music or entertainment?

What if they gave a "bash" and there was no art to enjoy (and maybe even buy)?

In fact, what if they gave a "bash" and no one came?

Well, it would be a nightmare and months of planning and preparation would have gone for nothing. The hopes of people with HIV/AIDS who desperately need services and prescriptions but have difficulty getting them would go down the drain.

But fortunately, through the efforts of volunteers and the staff of Southern New Mexico AID & Comfort (SNMAC) – an organization formed to fill the gap after Camino de Vida Center for HIV Services ceased operation in March – this bash is going to go as planned. Everyone hopes.

In fact, the bash is officially known as "An Evening of Hope" and it will commence Friday, Aug. 20, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

This is the 12th annual Red Ribbon Bash and one of the founders of the event is Donny Grooms.

The Southern New Mexico Aid & Comfort Partnership is a volunteer group who have come together to continue this 'must attend' event in Las Cruces," Grooms said.

"We were born out of the closure of the Camino de Vida Center for HIV Services who lost their state funding some nine months ago. We are currently working with the State of New Mexico Department of Health to fill in the gap of prescription medications not covered by any state or federal program in 10 counties (Region Five) in southern New Mexico.

"People are still dying and new cases are still being reported," Grooms continued. "We just hope to help make sure that no one is denied treatment because they lack the ability to pay." (See related story on page A29.)

What about those essential "What ifs?"

Dickerson's Farm and Ranch Catering Service is preparing the food and Marci Dickerson said, "It's going to be a great meal."

There will be hors d'oeuvres, salad, chicken, beef and vegetarian entrée choices, side vegetables, rolls, beverages and dessert.

Las Cruces cello quartet La Cella Bella will provide music throughout the evening. La Cella Bella plays a wide variety of music from pop to classical. One of the group's members, Alison Reynolds, said performing at the Red Ribbon Bash is becoming a habit.

"We love the event, it's such a great cause and they do such wonderful work," she said.

Tequila Nights will perform the music for the dance that concludes the evening. Chris Valenzuela, one of the band's percussionists said they like to do anything they can to help the community. Valenzuela is very familiar with the "Bash" - his wife worked at Camino de Vida - and Tequila Nights has played its wide range of music for the event before.

"We wanted to help out and do what we can to help generate more money for the cause. If there's anything we can do as a band, we want to do it," he said.

Doors open at 6 p.m. with a social hour before the sit-down dinner at 7 p.m. Live and silent auctions will take place during the evening with great giveaways. Jewelry, vintage wines, art and some weekend getaways including ones in Las Cruces, Truth or Consequences and Silver City will be up for bid. Chef Steven Widmer from the Village at Northrise will be "auctioned off" to provide a fabulous dinner for eight. Donations for the auctions are still being accepted.

Call 993-2121 for tickets, more information or to donate auction items or be a sponsor.

Email: snmac@live.com Website: http://redribbonbash. org.

A 50/50 raffle will be conducted during the event along with a "Wheel of Hope" sponsored by Spirit Winds Gift Source. Participants pay $10 for an opportunity to spin the wheel. Prizes range from $5 to $50 and when the wheel stops you win the prize that matches the number on the wheel.

Title sponsors for "The Bash" are Dr. Constance Wash, medical oncologist and hematologist, Southern New Mexico Cancer Center, and The Village at Northrise. Sponsorships are still available.

Tickets are $75 each and may be reserved with a credit card by calling 993-2121. Email Southern New Mexico AID & Comfort at snmac@live.com or visit their website at http://redribbonbash.org.

'What if" they threw a "bash" and no one came? Well, you are the only thing that might be missing from that equation - so that's on you.

And the only reason I can think of that would make not having a "bash" at all a good thing, is if there were no gaps in services or shortfalls in funding for victims of HIV/ AIDS. Now that is something to "hope" for.

Featured artist: Lee Herman Music? How about my place? Promoter brings house concerts to LC is filled with links to musicians' websites, music

By David Edwards Las Cruces Bulletin

Lee Herman is an art collector.

Not the kind of "objet d'art" one might find sitting around on pedestals or hanging on the walls. His collection does reverberate from the walls, however. Herman collects musicians, and I don't mean he just purchases CDs or concert DVDs – he has them perform right there in his living room. He doesn't keep them locked up or anything - he actually lets them go on to other gigs, often in someone else's living room - but the memories bounce around his house for a long time afterward.

He is a promoter of house concerts – or as he likes to say "home" concerts. About once a month Herman provides a very warm and welcoming atmosphere for the audience and musicians alike as everyone gathers in his living room for an intimate show.

"It is very different than a club," he said. "Or even a café or restaurant. We are here to be part of a pure listening situation."

While the audience gets to hear and see the musicians "up close and personal," the performers also are a part of the intimacy, which Herman says works for them as well.

When they ask a question, the audience responds. There is a much more private give and take than in a club or theater," he said.

In fact, the word private is very key to the house concert situation - it's like Herman is throwing a private party for his friends. Everyone shows up with food and drink, they socialize for a while then adjourn to the living room to listen to some great music.

A $15 donation is suggested from each guest with all the funds going to the musicians, who are also housed and fed – which contributes to the "family gathering" feel of the whole affair. Everyone is welcome but reservations are required and each show is limited to around 45 listeners.

Herman goes to folk festivals and folk alliance conferences to scout musicians that pique his interest. "I look for something that grabs me," he said. "I book very few performers that I haven't seen in person.'

There is a diversity of style in the musicians he selects, and that is by design. The shows feature acoustic musicians - singers and songwriters performing traditional folk, bluegrass and blues. The house concert website and videos. Herman doesn't want people showing up without knowing anything about the music, which creates a risk that they might not like it.

"Not everything is going to be to everyone's musical tastes," he said. "But it's a big trust thing. Most people know ahead of time what to expect, so they aren't disappointed."

Herman said he gets about one booking request per day, and about ten percent of those create real interest for him or touch him "at some level." Other times he sees someone live and approaches them directly about coming to a "party."

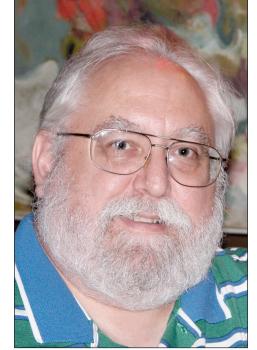

Many of the musicians that follow the house concert "circuit," make the bulk of their living doing it and sometimes it takes a while for them to come through the area – usually on their way to or from a larger market.

The whole thing may take a bit of doing but Herman came here from Colorado Springs, Colo., where he was part of a house concert organization that produced classical as well as local artist shows. His first local event was in the fall of 2007 and he is booked - with just a few exceptions – through 2011.

"There is a global network of home presenters," Herman said. "And the whole movement has exploded in the last few years."

The Las Alturas House Concert series has extensive information about upcoming shows and links on the website http://houseconcerts. wordpress.com. For more information, contact Lee Herman at 522-5197 or houseconcerts@ comcast.net. You can also find him on Facebook and MySpace.

While he laughs at the notion of being a musician himself, he readily admits that he is a lover of music with a very "selfish" motive - he gets to host these wonderful musicians in his home surrounded by good food and friends without the distraction of clinking bar glasses or even the sound of an espresso machine.

Las Cruces resident Lee Herman brings touring musicians to the Las Cruces area.

SECOND ANNUAL SUMART FEST

Now calling artists in all media for the second annual SumArt Fest, Sept. 10 through 12, at Mikey's Place – Workshop for the Arts, 3100 Harrelson St.

Entry fee is $50 per booth. There is a $20 discount with three hours of volunteer work to set up or promote the festival. Pay entry fee via PayPal (on their donations page), with cash or check payable to SumArt Fest. No commission on sales. Deadline is Friday, Aug. 20.

Download the artist entry form at www. sumartfest.org and return, with two to three images of artwork and a short artist's statement, by email to chris@sumartfest. org

SumArt Fest 2010 is happening in con-junction with the Doña Ana Arts Council's 'Color Las Cruces, a Community Arts Festival.

SumArt brings together artists of all ages, walks of life and ability levels to stage energetic and inclusive arts showcase events. SumArt facilitates cross-fertilization and social awareness, and it values participation over consumption. It accomplishes this through demonstrations and hands-on workshops, open mics, regional music and dance showcases, live art battles, screenprinting and painting.

AMERICAN SOUTHWEST THEATRE COMPANY AUDITIONS ANNOUNCED

The American Southwest Theatre Company (ASTC) at New Mexico State University Theatre Arts has announced auditions for its fall 2010 productions.

Needed are men and women ages 18 to 60. Auditions will be held at the Hershel Zohn Theatre on the NMSU campus from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 21, with callbacks scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 22. You may sign up for an audition slot on the callboard in the Hershel Zohn Theatre lobby through Friday Aug. 20.

All actors are asked to prepare one contemporary monologue running no longer than 60 seconds. NMSU Theatre Arts majors only are asked to prepare an additional Shakespearean monologue running no longer than 60 seconds.

Opening the fall season will be the farce, "The Comedy of Errors." Performances run Sept. 24 through Oct. 10. Next will be a staged reading of a new work, "Good Lonely People" by Carol Carpenter as part of the High Desert Play Development Program. Closing the semester will be the family classic "A Christmas Carol," adapted by Tom Smith. The role of Ebenezer Scrooge has been pre-cast. Performances run Nov 19 through Dec. 5.

All productions will be performed at the Hershel Zohn Theatre. For more information, call Mike Wise, production coordinator, at 646-5418.

THE NEW DESERT HARMONY SINGERS AUDITIONS

The New Desert Harmony Singers are looking for a few quality singers – both men and women - who will add to the momentum the group is presently building toward an even better performing and more entertaining chorus.

Practices for the group are every Tuesday night at 7 p.m. at St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 225 West Griggs Ave. Preparations are presently underway for the December concert, which is scheduled for Dec. 4 at the Oñate High School Performing Arts Center. For information about the New Desert Harmony singers, or to schedule an audition, call Dave Kinkaid at 650-4417.

CELESTIAL SOUNDS RESUMES REHEARSALS

Celestial Sounds, a community women's choir, is looking for women who enjoy singing. Singers should be at least 16 years old. Rehearsals will begin at 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30 at the Peace Lutheran Church, 1701 Missouri Ave. The group meets weekly on Mondays leading up to performances in December and May. The music ranges from the classic to contemporary and popular selections. The group will be singing Benjamin Britten's "A Ceremony of Carols" as part of the December concerts on Dec. 5 and 12. The group is looking for a few more singers in all parts. Call Jeannine Vigerust at 524-0930.

ew for The Las Cruces Bulletin

"Nunsense" director Art Haggerton said it best, "There is something about the Little Sisters of Hoboken which tugs at the heartstrings and tickles the funny bones of even the most cynical theater-goer."

The nuns are members of the Little Sisters of Hoboken order, performing in the Mount Saint Helen's School auditorium during a benefit for the order as they try to raise money to bury four sisters. The order's cook, Sister Julia Child of God, has accidentally poisoned 52 members of the order with a bad batch of vichyssoise. But because the Reverend Mother bought a VCR, there was only enough money to bury 48 of them.

The show combines musical revue with a bit of audience participation, and there is even some nun-tap dancing (which, by the way, was wonderful). Pamela Norton is the Reverend Mother (she alternates in the role with Susie Whelpley). Debbie Ringshall is Sister May Hubert, Kristy J. Lund (red high tops and all) is Sister Robert Anne, Megan Thompson is Sister Mary Leo (the novice), Kathleen Murphy is Sister Mary Amnesia, Cyndi Ann Cross is Sister Mary Perry-Winkle, Linda Wray is Sister Ann Thracks and Cecilia Rodriguez is Sister Mary Widow. During the shows when they are not playing the Reverend Mother, Norton is Sister Mary Mugione and Whelpley is Sister Mary Michael.

The show opens with the nuns wandering through the audience asking questions and giving prizes for good answers. (There's a short audience quiz later on.) But the highlight of the evening (or afternoon, if you attend the Sunday matinee) is the music and the singing.

Norton (she was playing the Reverend Mother during the performance I attended), Ringshall, Lund, Thompson and Murphy perform absolutely delightful solos - including Sister Mary Leo's "Benedictine," Sister Mary Amnesia's "So You Want to be a Nun," Sister Robert Anne's "Playing Second Fiddle," the Reverend Mother's "Turn Up the Spotlight" and "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" and Sister Mary Hubert's "Holier Than Thou" and "Tackle That Temptation with a Time Step." There also were some great performances by the sisters in duets, trios and quartets.

It's the company numbers, however, that steal the show. The sisters have an energy that fills the community theater auditorium as they join together for "Nunsense Is Habit-Forming" and "We've Got to Clean Out the Freezer," among others.

This is the eighth time Haggerton has directed one of the "Nunsense" shows for LCCT since the show premiered off-Broadway in 1985. The original "Nunsense" book, music and lyrics by Dan Goggin has become the second-longest running off-Broadway show in history. Because the show was so successful, Goggin wrote five sequels.

Marcus Vickers is assistant director and lighting designer for the LCCT production, Sean Murphy is stage manager, Kara Aris is tech operator, Les Boyce is the production photographer and Shaun Hadfield serves as associate producer. The wonderful set was built by Blair Armstutz, larrychandler, Haggerton, Murphy, Norton, Vickers and Doug Roby.

Musicians are Mary-Lynn Brown, who plays the piano during the first and third weekends of the production, Pat Courter, who is the pianist during the second week, with Michael Cross on percussion (he also had a couple of speaking lines in the show).

'Nunsense" is not to be missed by Las Cruces theater-goers. But there are only two weekends left. And, since the show will likely sell out, you'd be well advised to make reservations ahead of time by calling 523-1200 or visiting the LCCT website at www.lcctnm.org.

"Nunsense" continues through Sunday, Aug. 22, at Las Cruces Community Theatre, 313 N. Downtown Mall. Shows are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 13-14 and 20-21, and 2 p.m. Sunday afternoons, Aug. 15 and 22. Tickets are $10 for adults, $9 for students, senior citizens and military, $8 each for groups of 10 or more and $7 for children age six and under.

Sister Mary Amnesia (Kathleen Murphy) talks to "Sister" Mary Annette in "Nunsense.

'Iolanthe' comes to the Black Box Theatre

The Gilbert & Sullivan Company of El Paso proudly presents, "Iolanthe; or, the Peer and the Peri" for its summer 2010 season at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall.

"Iolanthe" presents a topsy-turvy love story involving fairies and members of the House of Lords – a political fairy tale that only Gilbert & Sullivan could conceive, and which will delight audiences of all ages. This fanciful comedy is considered by many to combine Sullivan's finest opera compositions with another of Gilbert's comic plots and his witty and waggish dialogue.

The two performances are at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 21, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 22. Tickets for "Iolanthe" are $10 and $9 for students and seniors over 65. Reservations are recommended, as space is limited, and may be made by calling 523-1223.

Local tattoo artists will be available for onthe-spot tattoos, piercings, appointments and demonstrations. Non-tattoo artists will display their handiwork as well.

Numerous raffles will occur each day, courtesy of local merchants.

Face painting and temporary tats are available for kids.

Live music will be provided by Cruces Cult Regicide and DJ Rel. Food, drink specials and special motel room rates will be available.

Cost is $5 per day or $10 for all three days. Free admission to those 13 years and under accompanied by an adult.

Proceeds to benefit La Casa Domestic Violence Shelter and the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces. Call 524-8591 or 496-5263.

The Doña Ana Arts Council presents 'Color Las Cruces'

Entries are now being accepted for artists to compete during the inaugural plein air competition "Color Las Cruces" taking place on Sept. 11 and 12. During the event weekend, juried artists will compete for cash and merchandise prizes in one of two plein air categories. To compete, artists will go to a pre-determined outdoor location in Las Cruces during a fourhour period on Saturday morning, where they will begin and complete a painting, then return with the finished piece. Artists may enter in one of two categories – Professional or Open. Entry deadline for both plein air categories is Friday, Aug. 13. Winners will be announced on the evening of Sept. 11 and shown on Sept. 12.

Following a popular trend that draws upon the French expression en plein air, meaning "in the open air," the Doña Ana Arts Council (DAAC) proudly presents the first Color Las Cruces Plein Air Competition and Community Arts Festival. The premiere event will be two full days of ongoing activities in Downtown Las Cruces, featuring an artist workshop, a "Quickdraw" competition, two plein air competitions, a VIP Artist Reception and a citywide gallery hop.

Guest judge (and workshop instructor) is Kevin Weckbach, a noted professional fine artist. Winners of the two plein air categories will be announced Saturday evening at the VIP Artist Reception, where attendees can meet the artists, sample food from the best restaurants in town, enjoy wine from local wineries and take in a live performance on the theater stage. A public exhibit and sale of completed paintings will take place in participating galleries from noon until 4 p.m. Sunday afternoon with artists in attendance.

On Thursday, Sept. 9, and Friday, Sept. 10, Denver artist Kevin Weckbach, guest judge of the plein air competition on Saturday, will give a two-day plein air workshop, which is open to artists of all levels. The class size will be limited for personal instruction and a fee will be charged for the workshop, so attendees should contact the DAAC immediately to reserve space.

For artist prospectus, artist entry applications, workshop enrollment and any general information, visit www.las-cruces-arts.org, or call 523-6403.

Color Las Cruces is sponsored in part by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau, The New Mexico Tourism Department and the Frame and Art Center.

Good Luck Café brings back some fond memories

By David Edwards Las Cruces Bulletin

When I moved to Las Cruces in 1965, it didn't take long for my dad to sniff out a place with good, cheap Mexican food.

The little place he discovered was a converted house on Mountain Avenue called El Ranchito, and it had just what we were looking for. At the time, a dinner plate-sized sopapilla compuesta was an incredible 35 cents. Add a soda for another 50 cents and you could eat like a king for under a buck. The flat sopapilla had lettuce, tomato, cheese and the best green salsa ever.

When I was in college during the early '70s, we still frequented "El Cheapo" – inflation had driven the compuesta cost up a little, but you could still eat for around two dollars. I had, however graduated to most often selecting the green enchiladas, the hottest I have ever eaten. About once a week, my friend Brian and I would go for lunch and once we had sweated our impurities out with the "nuclear enchies," we would hit DQ for a dip cone. It was a very Pavlovian response.

El Ranchito, sadly, is long gone and I guess in some way I still search for those fondly remembered flavors and feelings.

Hours 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Seven days a week

I had seen the Good Luck Café for years not realizing that it was only open for breakfast and lunch, so I had neglected giving it a try. I am really glad I finally figured it out.

Owners Claudia Herrera and Hortencia Marquez started Good Luck almost six years ago – Oct. 9 is their anniversary.

Herrera worked as a waitress in El Paso for 17 years – she learned everything about running a restaurant and cooking by being observant. It was working there that she met Marquez, who also worked at the restaurant for a number of years. The name of the restaurant? The Lucky Café.

When the two had a chance to move to Las Cruces and open their own place, they trusted a little of that luck would rub off on them. That was part of the reason their café is so named.

But you may notice that the large sign outside the restaurant merely says "Café" – it was a donut shop back in those days I mentioned earlier. But they don't feel they need to change it because their regulars know where they are and will bring others to eat there. In fact, they have such a solid relationship with their regulars that they have considered putting up their pictures along with their favorite dishes.

"We know what they are going to order when they come in," Herrera said. "They always encourage us and nothing makes us feel more proud than making our food better."

One customer I met comes in almost every day. He first met Herrera when she was passing out advertising flyers down the street after the restaurant first opened. He has been a faithful "family" member ever since.

And if you like your food prepared a bit differently, no problem. They will fix it however you want it.

Mom doesn't like a lot of sauce smothering her chile relleno, Sis wants extra onions on her green enchilada, lunch buddy (still no-carb) didn't want the rice and beans with his steak tacos and nephew tried the menudo (available every day). It had lots of meaty tripe pieces and wasn't overloaded with hominy. Still not in the mood for a full meal of menudo (it got the nephew seal of approval by the way), I was happy with my steak tampiqueña smothered in melted cheese and peppers, with green enchiladas, rice and beans. The rellenos are large and very cheesy and the sauce complements them nicely. Mom's flautas were nicely crisp on the outside and filled with flavorful flank steak.

I need to mention the salsa that accompanies the meal. The green really sold me on Good Luck and the red has a very interesting and addictive taste that I believe comes from the comino and some other "secret" ingredients. Really nice.

The steak tacos, menudo and caldo de rez are probably their most popular items. They also have tortas and seafood – both of which I want to try on my next visit.

Good Luck Café has a nice family atmosphere, good food and good prices. And while the green enchiladas weren't of the radioactive variety, they were quite good and when I was through eating I'll be darned if I didn't find myself stopping by DQ for a dip cone.

Sudoku

Complete the grids below so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains every digit from 1 to 9 inclusively. It is a game of logic, not math, and there is only one solution per puzzle. Have fun and exercise the grey matter. Tips and computer program at www.sudoku.com

Are you gonna use that? 'Please Give' – I'm sure it'll make me feel better

Review by Jeff Berg

We all know someones, or someone - perhaps even ourselves – who make(s) efforts to help the homeless or teach the ignorant or feed the hungry, right? Altruism is oft necessary in our society, and there are, of course, those who also help themselves while helping others.

That is the general storyline behind "Please Give," a genteel comedy of "manners," so to speak.

Catherine Keener plays Kate and Oliver Platt plays Alex, a married couple living in the heart of New York City. They have a teenage daughter Abby (Sarah Steele), one not atypical to many of us.

Keener has the ultimate guilt complex, as shown when she offers her leftovers from a swanky restaurant to a man who she thinks is homeless.

I'm standing in line for tickets," he scolds her as she proffers the Styrofoam box of chef-designed food.

One would think the incident would make her shrink to the size of her shoe, but it does not. Rather, she feels pangs of guilt, but still continues to try to be merciful to others. Throughout most of the movie she tries her uncomfortable best to "help" others, while actually helping herself.

Historical 'Redskin' Silent film shot at Acoma

The CineMatinee film for Saturday, Aug.14, is "Redskin" (1929, 82 minutes, the film is silent, but in original color, made in New Mexico). In the silent era, the American West was still unknown territory. New Mexico had only been a state for 17 years when Paramount sent a crew to Acoma Pueblo, outside Albuquerque, to film "Redskin." The scenario and story were by Elizabeth Pickett, who clearly had a sophisticated understanding of First Nations peoples for her time. This film deals with issues that still have contemporary resonance. Jim Chee, the hero of Tony Hillerman's Navajo detective novels, grapples with similar tradition versus modernity issues.

As Wing Foot, the hero of "Redskin," Richard Dix plays a Navajo abducted to a government boarding school as a child, but his partial assimilation into white society leaves him neither Indian nor white, just "Redskin." The abuses of these schools, where children were beaten for speaking their own language and forced to deny their traditions, still provoke anger among former students.

Dix starred in 45 silent features, most notably "The Vanishing American" (1925), a more melodramatic and racist view of Native American life – only 13 survive. "Redskin" is an honest effort, ahead of its time, to present the complex web of prejudices between and among Indians and non-Indians. The film was photographed partially in a "ravishing" early Technicolor process; but only the scenes of Native American life, after all the Indians are the heroes.

The Pueblo tribe had allowed Pickett to make some documentary films in 1925, and "Redskin" pays careful attention to authentic detail. The breathtaking two-color Technicolor cinematography evokes the dramatic landscape of Ansel Adams' photographs, with locations at Acoma Pueblo, White Sands and Gallup, N.M., and Canyon de Chelly, Ariz.

Acoma Pueblo (where Corn Blossom lives in "Redskin") contains the oldest continuously inhabited homes in the U.S. Native Americans have lived there since 1150 A.D. The Pueblo people settled the top of this mesa, 367 feet above the valley, at 7000 feet above sea level to escape marauding bands (a conflict echoed in the plot).

In 1929, the only way to the top was a series of handholds carved out of the rock, and the movie company asked permission to cut a dirt road to the top to transport their equipment. This is still the only road, unpaved until 1993.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m. and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

However, Keener and Pratt run a business that has made them wealthy. They buy and sell the belongings of the dead. Yup. When you croak, they move in for the kill, if you'll excuse the pun, buying and selling household items from family survivors, and some of the items are antique quality and higher in value than the previous owner possibly knew. Commentary on the deceased's decorating skills or lack thereof is also a part of their repertoire, along with continually humiliating their much more balanced daughter in various ways.

This business, of course, sort of contradicts Keener's attempts at being helpful to others, since she is preying on the families of the bereaved to help continue the family's semi-lavish lifestyle.

Pratt is not the same way. Much more like me, he is cynical, funny and bombastic – and one hell of a wheeler-dealer. Daughter Abby is constantly embarrassed by her mother's antics, and leans more toward her father's behavior - driven and she can be somewhat sarcastic.

Business remains good, so good that they need more room to house and peddle their goods, and their neighbor in the apartment next door two bickering granddaughters, Rebecca (Rebecca Hall) and Mary (Amanda Peet). One of the film's most surprising and amusing scenes is the opening, in which we join Rebecca as she practices her profession as a radiologist. You'll never be able to look at breasts in the same way again.

But Andra also may or may not be aware of the reason that Kate and Alex are being kind to her. Suspicious, she certainly knows the grand axiom that skepticism is a virtue.

'When she sees you, she sees a vulture," says Abby to her mom at one point when speaking of Andra.

These characters co-mingle to good effect throughout the story. The prescribed personalities of each are believable, and one may be able to latch on to one with the thought of "Hey, that's me!"

Deftly directed by Nicole Holofcener, who did one of my top 300 films "Lovely and Amazing" a few years back, the characters, comedy and emotions are well handled. There are no "bad" people in the film – just people being themselves - and at times it is like looking in a mirror. You may never feel bad about your liberal guilt again.

Crime can't hide Heroes? These are 'The Other Guys'

Sorry, but regardless of what you think is funny - Will Ferrell makes me laugh.

I don't really have an explanation for it, he just does. And now I have to add - I don't really have an explanation for it - Mark Wahlberg makes me laugh. That's right. Freakin' Marky Mark makes me laugh. Who knew? It is already tough enough for me to swallow that the leader of the Funky Bunch and former underwear model is taken seriously as an actor (he was nominated for Best Supporting Actor for "The Departed"), but now I have to admit that he cracked me up in "The Other Guys."

Of course there is the Ferrell factor, which provides plenty of comedy, but Wahlberg's character has more than his share of funny moments. He is a tightly wound disgraced beat cop who is widely known as the "cop who shot Jeter" for mistakenly shooting the New York Yankee superstar, thus costing the Bronx Bombers the World Series.

Terry Hoitz (Wahlberg) is partnered with police accountant Allen Gamble (Ferrell) and this mismatch – with Hoitz striving to get into the action ("I'm a peacock, you gotta let me fly!") and Gamble content to file reports and track down scaffolding violators - is what makes for hilarity.

The movie is very much both homage and spoof of cop/buddy/action films and so there is plenty of action tempered with humor. The opening sequence with Samuel L. Jackson and Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson as the "hero" cops who wreak millions of dollars worth of damage to arrest some Rasta-types with a quarter of a pound of pot is "Lethal Weapon-esque," complete with the one-liners, car crashes, slowmotion bullets and explosions.

Hoitz and Gamble get involved with Bernie Madoff-like Wall Street swindler David Ershon (Steve Coogan) who has an international squad of protectors, or maybe kidnappers, who may or may not be trying to kill him if he doesn't make sure that a $32 billion deal gets made.

The movie does get bogged down a little in the plot, but the comic bits usually don't interfere with the movie's forward motion and aren't just stuck in for laughs.

Ferrell plays a bit of a nerd as opposed to a blustery blowhard ala Ron Burgundy in "Anchorman" or a child-like innocent as in "Elf." He is content to push papers and do the record keeping necessary for the hero-types to be heroes.

An interesting twist on this is his strange power over hot women. Eva Mendes plays Dr.

Will Ferrell and Mark Wahlberg add their own spin to the standard buddycop flick in "The Other Guys," now playing at Allen Theatres.

Sheila Gamble, Allen's wife, who is constantly being told how plain she is and shouldn't dress like a "hobo." Of course Mendes is a total knockout and her being married to Allen and his ability to draw beautiful ladies to him is something that amazes and frustrates Hoitz. We find there is a dark secret in Allen's past, which explains why he is so content to be a boring paper pusher.

It's great to see Michael Keaton return in a comic role. His turn as the police captain who does double duty at Bed, Bath & Beyond and unknowingly quotes '90s girl group TLC was a real highlight.

That's the kind of humor that runs through "The Other Guys." It is really "out there" sometimes and won't strike everyone funny. In fact, it veers pretty wildly on occasion, such as when Allen runs his Prius police car over a body at a cocaine bust and murder scene after screaming "America!" His car remains covered with coke throughout most of the rest of the movie.

Another of my favorite sequences involves having Mama Ramos (Sheila's mom, complete with walker) acting as a go-between as Allen and Sheila, who are unable to talk face-to-face because of surveillance. She must describe what the couple would like to do to each other in bed as a way of making up after a fight, when Allen's dark alter ego "Gator" temporarily took over.

It's silly a lot of the time, but kept me really entertained throughout. I can't help but laugh when you poke fun at the Broadway musical "Jersey Boys" one minute and then have Ferrell trashing Coogan's office the next because he misunderstood and thought it was "bad cop, bad cop." Ferrell didn't let me down, and Wahlberg was a real surprise.

Allen carries a wooden ceremonial pistol throughout most of the movie because he was fooled into firing it in the office – his "first desk pop." I felt like I had a real, only occasionally misfiring, fully loaded lethal weapon to blow away the mediocre, mostly unfunny movies of the summer.

A property built for horses Builder combines passion with comfortable living

By Beth Sitzler

The Mesilla Valley is filled with lush farmland and ample space for horses. Local builder Jarrett Smith took advantage of this in 2006 when he constructed his home at 11110 Doña Ana Road.

Located near Radium Springs, in the shadows of the Robledo Mountains, Smith purchased a 8.64-acre lot from two friends who had bought a large portion of land with the inten-tion of dividing and developing it.

"It's hard, especially at this time, to find a small to mid-sized track of about 8 or 10 acres," he said.

Wanting not only a spectacular horse property but a one-of-a-kind home, Smith went to work creating a spacious 3,119-square-foot house that combined his signature Southwest style with rustic touches.

"His houses are so incredibly beautiful you don't want to put a lot of frou-frou in it," said Realtor Kaye Miller of Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, who represents the listing. "They're beautiful on their own.'

"This is almost the Las Cruces style. Some call it Santa Fe or pueblo style," said Smith, adding that this includes a flat roof, rounded parapets and windows, posts, vigas and corbels. "I like (my homes) to look refined."

A drive along the bank of a canal leads to Smith's long gravel driveway, which then takes guests to a front courtyard, complete with different colored rocks, small bushes and yuccas. Behind the massive knotty-pine front door, carved in Mexico, porcelain tile leads guests throughout the three-bedroom, split floor plan house.

Arches, wood trim and nichos add depth and interest to the interior. A nicho in the entrance is home to a wall-mounted water feature that includes Smith's family's livestock brand known as "The Club."

Immediately to the left is the home office. As with the dining area, the tile in the office was laid a diagonally to add visual appeal. The room, great for those who want to work from home, also includes built-in shelves and cabinets with crown molding.

Not wanting to waste any space, Smith said he included only a few hallways, which are designed to add to the home's visual appeal.

"I've always considered myself to be a value type of builder," he said.

A small hallway to the right of the entrance leads to two bedrooms. The pink and purple bedroom – perfect for a young girl – has its own bathroom. The second bedroom is also attached to a bathroom, which can also be accessed from the hall.

Wanting the bedroom to be special, Smith hired local artist Janet Hartog to paint a coun-try scene, complete with hills, blue skies, homes, trees and a bird's nest.

"She spent forever in this room," he said. "She had a vision."

On the other side of the home, down another hallway, is the master suite. The room includes a fireplace and access to the backyard. Wanting the room to be architecturally appealing, Smith includes several small touches, such as large windows to bring in the surrounding view, a recessed faux-finished wall for the bed and a tray ceiling, which can be found in all the rooms.

The bathroom features a jetted bathtub, two sinks, a vanity and a walk-in shower. Glass blocks line the wall allowing for added natural light while maintaining the room's privacy.

The large walk-in closet includes a built-in ironing board for convenience and a dressing area, which eliminates the need for extra furniture in the bedroom.

At the center of the home are the shared living spaces.

Great for entertaining dinner guests, the dining room is set back for more privacy. As with all of the rooms, wood plays an important role from the Douglas fir beams and corbels at its entrance to its spruce tongue-and-groove ceiling.

With 12-foot ceilings, the living room features a view of the Doña Ana and Organ mountains. The room also includes a corner fireplace encased in stone.

Stone features continue in the bar of the kitchen. Also great for entertainment, the kitchen has tan granite countertops, wood-panel appliances, decorative cabinets, pine vigas and a breakfast nook enclosed in a round wall of windows.

"It's really handy," he said. "We put the kids over there (in the nook) and the adults over there (in the formal dining room). We can seat a lot of people."

As with the front courtyard, Smith chose low-maintenance landscaping for the backyard. Gravel surrounds an area of grass, small shrubs and a few fruit trees.

"I did want some peach trees," he said, adding that along with peaches, they planted plum and apple trees.

Beside the covered patio, which includes a built-in grill and ample room for seating, is a small area for a swing set.

Surrounding the property, Smith has planted 5 acres of alfalfa and Sudan grass. He has also devoted 3 acres to his passion – horses.

A 6,750-square-foot barn and corral with 12 horse stalls is located at the front of the property. "I set it up for ease," he said of the corral, which includes cameras and automatic water. Designed to be his private sanctuary, Smith said he has enough land to do what he loves. "My favorite area is the barn. I can go out there and rope the dummy and brush the horses," he said.

"It's hard to find a good horse property," Miller said. "He's an excellent builder, but he loves horses.

Smith said it is difficult to find land designed for horses that includes a suitable house and nice barn facilities - they usually have one or the other. Ultimately, Smith has found a way to get the best of both worlds.

"It's a nice family home," he said. "It's a little fancy, but that's what's nice about being the builder - you can add that stuff.

MFA connects to communityState programs putsfamilies into housesBy Beth Sitzler
Las Cruces Bulletinpairs to citizens of Catron, Doña Ana, Grant, Hidalgo, Luna, Otero and Sierra counties,

Interested community members throughout the region attended a town hall meeting Friday, Aug. 6, to learn how the New Mexico Mortgage Finance Authority (MFA) and its legislative oversight committee are helping southern New Mexico.

Created in 1975 by the state Legislature, MFA works to help advance the acquisition, rehabilitation and improvement of residential housing for New Mexicans of low or moderate income through more than 30 programs.

"We wouldn't have what we have here in Las Cruces if not for fostering a partnership," Mayor Ken Miyagishima said of the organization, which isn't a state agency and doesn't receive funds for operating costs from the state.

State Treasurer James Lewis told attendees that the MFA is a two-way street and feedback – both positive and negative – from citizens is needed for the organization to operate to its full potential.

"Working together makes a big difference," he said.

State Rep. Jose Campos (D-Santa Rosa), a member of the MFA legislative oversight committee, said he was eager to hear about the challenges and concerns facing southern New Mexico residents – residents who sometimes feel ignored by the northern portion of the state.

"It's encouraging to see so many people here who are concerned about affordable housing in not only Doña Ana County, but in the southern part and entire state," said Campos, who, along with other committee members, visited single- and multiple-family housing projects in the region. "These are very important needs. A challenge in small, rural communities is having a staff that is informed enough to install programs. They're usually in larger communities. We're trying to get that outreach to rural communities."

In the last five years, MFA has helped finance more than $158 million in mortgages, down-payment assistance and housing repairs to cutzens of Catron, Dona Ana, Grant, Hidalgo, Luna, Otero and Sierra counties, said MFA Senior Policy and Program Advisor Erin Quinn.

"We're very active in this part of the state," she said.

The programs provided by MFA cover multiple facets, including homeownership, housing and community development and their targeted initiatives.

MFA received about $95 million in 2009 from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, funds that have helped run several of its outreach programs, including weatherization – which received approximately $27 million for more than 2,800 homes, Quinn said.

She added that the first-time homebuyers tax credit loan program provided about 500 loans valued at approximately $2.5 million.

"That really has helped people get into homes who otherwise wouldn't be able to," she said.

In addition to home rehabilitation and assistance to first-time homebuyers, the organization also has programs to help fund homeless shelters, programs of which the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope has taken advantage.

"They have been crucial in helping us," said Executive Director Pamela Angell. "We're trying to get people off the streets and into homes, and MFA helps with that."

Several concerns were discussed during the town hall, the most prevalent being securing financing.

While Quinn said this is a global issue, many feel it is especially difficult for those areas that haven't had new affordable home construction in years – such as Hobbs, Deming and Silver City – since they can't accurately be appraised.

One suggested solution was to create a pilot program to construct four to 16 units to establish an affordable-housing market in these areas.

"It's meetings like this that we come up with new programs," said MFA Executive Director Jay Czar. "We strive to continue to improve."

Superpowers come in all kinds of shapes and sizes

These extreme insects can do amazing things

Insects may make pests of themselves, but it's hard to deny they have amazing abilities that would dwarf even human record holders.

Insects have tremendous adaptability. Those abilities allow them to survive in difficult settings and can make controlling insect pests a challenge at times.

For example, fleas are known for their jumping ability, which helps them elude predators and find new places to feed. Inch-for-inch, they would far out-jump even the best human long and high jumpers. A flea's 13-inch long jump, when translated to human terms, would be 450 feet. For a human to jump the equivalent of a flea's 7-inch high jump, he or she would have to jump up 250 feet.

The current world record for humans is a 29.5-foot long jump set by Mike Powell of the United States in 1991 and Javier Sotomayor of Cuba currently holds the record high jump at 8.08 feet. The world's best power

The world's best power being the most fertile insect in the world. in one of the world's smaller creatures – the ant. Ants can drag food that is 25 times heavier than their own weight. That's the equivalent of a 100-pound human carrying around a VW bug.

Other amazing insects

Great balls of fire: Ants are also tremendous organizers. In times of flooding, red imported fire ants will clump together in balls and float to higher ground. The leaf cutter ant colonies are actually cooperative farms. Workers bring pieces of leaves deep into the colony – leaves that will act as compost for a fungus crop that becomes food for the ants.

Most fertile: The Australian ghost moth is one of the most fertile of all insects. According to a study from the University of Bergen in Norway, one female was reported to lay 29,100 eggs. When dissected, there were 15,000 fully developed eggs in the moth's ovaries. Queens of the African driver ant can lay broods with up to 4 million eggs every 25 days.

Fastest fliers: The insects with the highest reliably measured airspeeds are desert locusts and corn earworm moths. These two fly at average airspeeds of about 21 and 17 mph, respectively. Many insects surely fly faster, but their airspeeds have yet to be studied with modern methods. According to a study by the School of Physics, University of New South Wales, there is a report of a male horsefly that was estimated to achieve an airspeed of 89 mph while chasing an air rifle pellet. The highest sustained ground speed record-

world champions of noise making. The African cicada produces a calling song with a mean sound level of 106.7 decibels. Two species of North American cicadas produce an alarm call with a mean sound level of 105.9 dB. Both decibel levels are near that made by snow blowers or jet planes.

Long live the queen: The queens of African mound-building termites can live up to 60 years. The longest-lived immature insect is the 17-yearold cicada. The young spend 17 years underground, feeding on tree sap. At the end of the 17 years, the insects crawl from their underground lairs, shed their armor and seek a mate. Life on the surface is very short – during their two weeks as adults, the cicadas don't even bother to eat.

As national spokesperson for Truly Nolen of America, Barry "The Bug Guy" Murray has more than 20 years of experience in the pest control industry. For more information, to ask the expert a question or to see the brand-new "Insect Inquirer" blog, visit www.trulynolen.com.

The unexpected uses of the marshmallow Sweet treat not just for the campfire

By Beth Sitzler

The summer is just the time to enjoy a camping trip, and an excursion into the wilderness wouldn't be complete without roasting a bag of marshmallows.

The fluffy confection, first created by the Egyptians in 2000 B.C., is made from water, gelatin, flavoring and sugar or corn syrup.

It shouldn't be confused with marshmallow the herb, which was used by many ancient societies for medical purposes and was the source of the original candy.

According to http:// mallowmaster.com, Americans buy more than 90 million pounds of marshmallows per year. While the fluffy treat is a year-round snack, the majority of its sales take place in October and December.

Marshmallows can be consumed in anything from s'mores to Peeps, but the sugary substance has other uses beyond satisfying a sweet tooth. Try the following tasty tricks around the house.

1. Help a sore throat: Has a scratchy throat been keeping you up at night? Get some relief from a marshmallow. Pop two or three in your mouth and chew on them before swallowing – don't swallow them whole. The gelatin that holds the marshmallow together will help soothe the pain and irritation in your throat. Plus, unlike hard candies, the fluffy treat doesn't have jagged edges or as high of a sugar content.

2. Treat a mouth abscess: If a bump or shallow abscess has formed in your mouth, draw out any pus with a marshmallow. After the boil or abscess has come to a head, place the airy substance in your mouth so they are touching. The sugar in the marshmallow will attract pus cells, bacteria and other dead matter. When you are done, throw the marshmallow away – don't eat it. While a good home remedy, don't use this trick as a substitute for proper medical care.

3. Give yourself a pedicure: Are your tootsies in dire need of a pedicure, but you've run out of cotton balls? Instead of making a trip to the store, use marshmallows to separate your toes. Separating your toes will make it easier to paint your nails. After you're done, toss out the marshmallows.

4. Make edible glue: Thanks to the gelatin and sugar found in a marshmallow, the substance makes a great edible glue. Melt a batch of marshmallows until it forms a liquid. The marshmallow glue will create a strong, cohesive bond to many sweets, including hard candy, suckers, caramel and sugar ribbon. Use the glue when it is in liquid form because once it starts to congeal and harden, its bond won't be as strong.

5. Soften your sugar: Keep your sugar soft and moisture free with the help of marshmallows. Add a marshmallow or two to your sugar bowl or bag of brown sugar. It will absorb excess moisture and humidity, which can cause the sugar to clump. Unlike other moisture-absorbing tricks, marshmallows won't affect the taste of the sugar because they are made from the same substance.

6. Decorate a cake: No one wants a mouthful of wax, so nothing can ruin a birthday cake quicker than a dripping candle. Even candles made from edible wax can leave a bad taste in your mouth. Protect the precious icing from peril by sticking the candle in a marshmallow on top of the cake. The fluffy material will not only catch trickling wax, but can add a colorful look to the special dessert. 7. Stop a cone from

Homemade Marshmallows

3 packages unflavored gelatin 1 cup ice cold water, divided 12 ounces granulated sugar, approximately 1 1/2 cups 1 cup light corn syrup 1/4 teaspoon kosher salt 1 teaspoon vanilla extract 1/4 cup confectioners' sugar 1/4 cup cornstarch Nonstick spray

Place the gelatin into the bowl of a stand mixer along with 1/2 cup of the water.

In a small saucepan, combine the remaining 1/2 cup water, granulated sugar, corn syrup and salt. Place over medium-high heat, cover and allow to cook for 3 to 4 minutes. Uncover, clip a candy thermometer onto the side of the pan and continue to cook until the mixture reaches 240 degrees, approximately 7 to 8 minutes. Once the mixture reaches that temperature, immediately remove from the heat.

Turn the mixer on low speed and, while running, slowly pour the sugar syrup down the side of the bowl into the gelatin mixture. Once you have added all of the syrup, increase the speed to high. Continue to whip until the mixture becomes very thick and is lukewarm, approximately 12 to 15 minutes. Add the vanilla during the last minute of whipping.

Combine the confectioners' sugar and cornstarch in a small bowl. Lightly spray a 13-by-9-inch metal baking pan with nonstick cooking spray. Add the sugar and cornstarch mixture and move around to completely coat the bottom and sides of the pan. Return the remaining mixture to the bowl for later use.

When ready, pour the mixture into the prepared pan, using a lightly oiled spatula to evenly spread it around the pan. Dust the top with enough of the remaining sugar and cornstarch mixture to lightly cover. Reserve the rest for later. Allow the marshmallows to sit uncovered for at least 4 hours or overnight.

Turn the marshmallows out onto a cutting board and cut into 1-inch squares using a pizza wheel dusted with the confectioners' sugar mixture. Once cut, lightly dust all sides of each marshmallow with the remaining mixture, using additional if necessary. Store in an airtight container for up to 3 weeks. (Recipe adapted from www.foodnetwork.com.)

dripping: The next time you serve the kiddies ice cream, place a marshmallow in the bottom of the ice cream cone. The marshmallow will absorb melting ice cream, preventing the liquid from dripping out the bottom. It will also be a delightful surprise for consumers when they reach the end of their cone.

8. Quickly fix frosting dilemmas: The next time you're frosting a cake and you run out of icing, don't panic – get your marshmallows.

The spongy confection can quickly be transformed into a frosting in three easy steps. First, bring a pot of water to a rolling boil. Next, create a double boiler by placing an aluminummixing bowl on top of the pot. Lastly, melt the marshmallows in the bowl while whipping them. Whisking will prevent the fluff from burning and add an airy texture to the frosting. If your frosting is too thick, add a splash of corn syrup or water to thin it out.

Marshmallows can be consumed in anything from s'mores to Peeps, but the sugary substance has other uses beyond satisfying a sweet tooth.

Featured Realtor: Jake Mossman

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

While seemingly two different worlds, Realtor Jake Mossman has found a connection between music and real estate.

Born and raised in Las Vegas, the northern New Mexico native said music has always been an important aspect of who he is.

"I've been a musician my whole life," he said

He attended the University of New Mexico and earned a Bachelor of Fine Arts in classical guitar. With degree in hand, Mossman moved to Los Angeles and traveled to Europe, where he studied flamenco.

During one trip to Spain, Mossman met his future wife Salomé. After the couple married, they decided to move back to the Land of Enchantment, but this time they relocated to Las Cruces, a place he had visited before during a performance.

"I was stunned by the place," he said of the City of the Crosses. "It has a great real estate market."

The move also prompted Mossman to look into a new career - one that gave him financial stability and the flexibility to continue his musical endeavors.

"I wanted to do something concrete and helpful," he said. "I wanted to be a service in people's lives directly."

When he started to look into buying a home, he took a few real estate courses to better educate himself on the market and purchasing process. Once the classes were complete, he realized he was very close to earning his real estate license.

"My idea morphed from buying a house to becoming a Realtor," he said.

While he was new to the market, he had previous experience in buying and flipping homes - a pastime he and his father both participated in. "Helping neighborhoods runs in the family," he said.

Mastering real estate

Entering a new field, Mossman joined EXIT Horizons Realty, a relatively new franchise that is quickly growing throughout the United States, he said.

After joining the company, he said he received excellent training from former owners Kathy and Chuck Olson.

"They trained me from knowing nothing about real estate to where I am today," he said. They also left a huge stamp on my heart to do what's right for the client, what's ethical for the community and do things the best that I can.'

While Mossman said he enjoys working with all clients – buyers and sellers – he especially takes pleasure in resales.

"You form a connection with people and help them more," he said. "It takes a certain type of knack. You have to have people skills to work with sellers."

Since houses are staying on the market longer – increasing from 90 days to an average of six months, he said - Mossman said it is important to form a rapport with his clients.

"Depending on the price, it can take as long as a year," he said. "I do have really good friends as sellers."

One way he helps his clients is by making sure from the very beginning they are qualified buvers.

"My best advice is to secure financing before you begin searching for property," he said.

Still involved in the arts community, Mossman has performed at Boba Cabaret, the Rio Grande Theatre and the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. His musical and artistic abilities have worked as a connection to several of his clients who share similar interests.

"I attract artists," he said, adding that he has worked with painters, jewelers and gallery owners.

Thanks to his adventures as a musician, Mossman said he has developed the ability to quickly and easily retain new knowledge, which comes in handy as a Realtor. "As a musician, you're taught how to learn and absorb in-formation," he said. "In real estate, there is always a new system and information to learn. It's ever changing. Being able to absorb information is part of my job."

Being an artist has also been helpful to Mossman since he can do his own graphic design work, saving his clients both time and money. From photography and flyers to mailers and invitations, he said he can do anything the client wants. "I rely on technology for organization," he said, explaining that he is a digital person and doesn't use paper files. "I feel like I'm a faster agent.'

A top producer

With the housing market beginning to show signs of recovers, the tough economic time has pushed several local Realtors out of business – about 33 percent of the agents in Multiple Listing Services since 2006, Mossman said.

"I have been kicked around in the business," he said. "I've always moved forward."

His persistence and ability to serve the client has allowed Mossman to continue during a difficult time. For several years running, he said he has been one of the top three producers for the local EXIT branch, and in 2008, he was in the top three of EXIT producers in New Mexico and west Texas.

As a top producer, he said he has 25 to 30 transactions a year with last year being his best year yet.

'I pledge prompt and courteous customer service, attention to detail, professional photos and design and marketing services," he said. "And with buyers, I can offer skilled searching and home hunting services for free and contract negotiations and a closing gift."

While he has been successful in real estate, Mossman said he isn't in it for the money.

"At music, I never expected to make money," he said. "I wouldn't be in real estate if I didn't enjoy it."

In the future, Mossman said he plans to record another CD as well as continue growing his career in the housing world.

"I would like to continue at EXIT and I look forward to listing and selling more property," he said. "One day, I would like to take up architecture.'

With the local EXIT branch recently being sold to Chris Harrison and Joe Arnone, he said he is eager to see how it will better serve the community.

"The tone at EXIT is going to change," he said. "I'm excited to see how they will grow the company."

Jake Mossman represents the home at 5384 Redman Road.

The home at 2059 Cortabella, also represented by Mossman, features a regional design.

Flavor at a push of a button Oil sprayer is a secret to low-fat cooking

By Beth Sitzler

Las Cruces Bulletin

A few weeks ago, I wrote about the many uses of cooking spray (Las Cruces Bulletin, July 16).

From working with messy dough to defrosting a freezer and speeding up nail polish drying time, the fine mist of vegetable oil does much more than simply creating a slick, non-stick surface.

For those of you who aren't interested in using store-bought, chemical-filled cooking sprays around the house and in the kitchen, there is a gadget for you – the oil sprayer.

What is it?

A great alternative to store-bought cooking sprays, the oil sprayer allows you to use the oil brand and type of your choice to coat your pots, pans, cookware and food.

The hand-pumped sprayer is made from aluminum or stainless steel. It measures about 8 inches in height and less than 2 inches in diameter, allowing it to be easily handled. Also, the push trigger can be used effortlessly with the touch of a finger.

Great for non-stick cooking, the sprayer can be used the next time you grill, roast or sauté a meal. It eliminates the need of basting with brushes and using chemical or propellant laced cooking sprays.

The gadget can also be used to add flavor to food items, such as bread, salad, pizza, pasta and much more. In addition to flavor, the easy-to-use sprayer also dispenses less fat than other, more traditional oil and butter distribution methods.

Reusable, the oil sprayer is easy to clean and can be refilled multiple times.

How does it work?

Designed to be easy to use, the oil spray can works with any oil. After removing and thoroughly washing all of the gadget's parts, fill the canister half full – which is about 1/3 cup – with the liquid. Don't fill any further since the extra space is needed to build pressure so the mechanism will spray.

Tightly screw on the white cap. With the sprayer firmly set on a flat surface, such as a countertop, pump the cap about 10 times or until you feel resistance.

Once the pressure has built up, remove the cap and spray. At full pressure, the sprayer will operate for about 15 seconds before it needs to be pumped again. It should be used at no more than a 45-degree angle.

After the sprayer is empty, fill it halfway with hot water and a drop of liquid soap. Pump it 15 times and let it spray for 15 seconds. Rinse and repeat these steps with fresh hot water. Empty and clean the sprayer about every six to eight weeks. Do not place it in the dishwasher.

Where can it be found?

The oil sprayer can be found around town at Las Cosas Kitchen Shoppe in Mesilla or at Bed, Bath & Beyond and Sears. It is also available online at www.amazon.com and www. chefsresource.com.

How much does it cost?

The oil sprayer costs about $10, but can be purchased for as much as $20, so be sure to look around for the best deal.

Helpful hints:

The sprayer can be filled with a variety of liquids, including olive and vegetable oils, vinegars and juices, such as lemon and lime.

If using a flavored oil, be sure to strain it through a fine filter before pouring it into the sprayer. Chunks of food items, such as garlic and pepper flakes, will clog the narrow pipe and nozzle.

Fertilizing for vibrant colors Healthy, happy blooms just a few easy steps away

Gary Guzman Gardening Guru

This is the time of year when some plants may look "weak" or "tired."

The use of an iron-based product will help maintain healthy "green leaf tissue" on plants that suffer from excessive yellowing. This will also produce vibrant colors on blooms of flowering plants such as crape myrtle, vitex, roses, red bird of paradise, bedding plants, just about any other type of flowering or green plant or tree. A product with the word chelate or chelated works best.

A product with the word chelate or chelated works best. There are products that can be apply directly on the leaves or in the soil. This will work wonders in potted plantings as well. During the summer months, we tend to water every day, which flushes out vital nutrients in the soil.

These products are not to be used instead of a fertilizer, but rather in conjunction with a regular fertilizer program. You can use water-soluble fertilizers, granular or timedrelease fertilizers. It doesn't matter what you use as long as you use something, and use it consistently. Plants don't live on water alone.

If you find that the steps mentioned do not work on your potted plants, it might be an indication that you need to repot or add new fresh soil. You may also want to check for insects either on the plant or in the soil itself.

You also need to remember to remove any old flowers, diseased tissue, or insect infested leaves or branches as soon as they appear. It doesn't matter what time of year it is, if it looks bad, you should probably remove it.

Following these simple steps should provide you with healthy, happy blooming plants all season long.

Make mine a mi Ductless air systems deliver, don't leak

Miles Dyson Living Green

A key obstacle in the design of any comfortable and efficient home is how to cost-effectively heat and cool the interior.

Traditionally, we solve this problem by installing a centrally located heating and cooling air handler system, which delivers condi-tioned air via ductwork and large blower fans to each room. As residential building science has evolved and provided tools to measure and accurately predict heating- and cooling-efficiency losses, we see this traditional system can cause as many problems as it solves.

The problems

Ducted delivery systems are installed either at the ceiling or under the floor. Installing ductwork under a slab requires additional engineering and, if not done correctly, can lead to cracking of the slab. Ductwork under the slab can also be impacted by ground moisture and can become a source of mold contamination.

Ductwork at the ceiling is usually routed within the attic space. The typical attic is a harsh environment. Temperatures in the summer linger above 130 degrees and drop well below freezing on winter nights. The attic is also full of other things, such as trusses to hold up the roof. Ductwork is twisted and kinked in spaghetti-like fashion through the trusses to reach registers at all room areas. Fiberglass insulation, dust (and dust mites), rodents and various other contaminants often share the attic with the ductwork.

Conventional flexible, hardboard and sheet metal ductwork is difficult to install as an airtight or sealed system. This is a key reason duct-leakage testing has become so important in the residential energy-efficiency field. According to industry statistics, the average new home built to code leaks 20 to 30 percent of its heated or cooled air to the exterior. Older homes tend to be even worse with 25 to 50 percent of the total flow leaking to the outside.

Conditioned air that is not leaked is directed through ducts in the attic (with minimal insulation value) where energy is lost by conduction to the worse-than-ambient temperatures. Since most ductwork is not airtight, contaminants from the attic space are transported to the air we breathe in the home.

The mini solution

One heating and cooling system resolves these energy loses and air quality issues. High efficiency, ductless split-system heat pumps, are also known as "mini splits." Mini split heat pump systems combine small, quiet, cassette air handlers at each large interior room with shared, exterior mounted, smaller footprint, condenser coils.

Mini split technology is novel in our area, but this type of system was first developed in the mid-1960s. Refrigerated air conditioning was introduced in Japan during U.S. reconstruction efforts after World War II.

The first conventional split and window mounted air conditioning units installed were very expensive to operate (postwar utilities ran as much as five times higher in Japan than in the U.S.). Cooling units tended to be a nuisance due to the limited space available for residences and the high noise level of the equipment. These issues, combined with generally high population density, led to the development of the ductless mini split systems.

Even though now widely used in Europe and in Pacific Rim countries, mini split heat pump air conditioning and heating units have most often been installed locally as solutions to comfort problems in isolated living or work spaces. Improved pricever-increasing ing, efficiency ratings (as high as 26 Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating for some new Fujitsu equipment), industry installer acadvanced systems that ceptance and a wide variety of off the shelf configurations make mini splits a great option for whole house air conditioning and indoor air quality and heating in retro-fit or new home applications.

Las Cruces Bulletin

I recently walked a Build Green New Mexico program home under construction by DAWCO Builders in Anthony, N.M. This home will utilize Sanyo mini split ceiling-mounted indoor air handler cassettes and outdoor heat pump condenser units for all of the air conditioning and heating.

There is zero ductwork in the home and very limited air loss or exchange to the attic space from rooms in the home. Walter Lujan, owner of DAWCO builders in El Paso, is installing four air handler ceiling mounted cassettes and two exterior compressors in this 2,600-square-foot home.

Conditioned air is moved to smaller rooms, such as bathrooms and utility areas, using low wattage fans. After taking advantage of available tax credits and deducting the cost of duct and sheet metal fabrication and installation.

overall equipment and installation costs are less than a comparable capacity standard efficiency system. Walter explained that even though this style of heat pump system installation carries a very respectable 17 SEER cooling efficiency rating, the true efficacy comes from a different design aspect.

A traditional ducted system has one or two large air handlers to move warm or cool air to the rooms in the home. It is all or nothing. When the thermostat is activated, conditioned air is supplied to every room in the house, regardless of the temperature in areas remote from the thermostat. Mini splits have room-by-room controls.

When the afternoon sun is baking the bedroom on the west side of the house and the kitchen on the east side is cool in the shade, cooling capacity is concentrated where the heat load is located in the home. A conventional system may be rated at 5 tons (60,000 BTU cooling capacity), and the full capacity, including the all the required electricity to support that capacity, kicks on to cool the home. Since the workload is divided for a mini split system, the condenser coil can supply fractional capacity to satisfy air conditioning demand to only the areas that require it. The result is lower overall tonnage or capacity needed and much less electricity used.

Higher-end mini split units have sensors to find hot or cold spots within individual rooms and then automatically concentrate air flow to those areas via motorized dampers.

Mini split heating and cooling systems are technologically advanced systems that deliver cost-effective proven comfort, indoor air quality and energy efficiency in existing or new home applications. Most mini splits also qualify for Federal Energy Efficiency tax credits and our local El Paso Electric EPE Savers rebate program.

Chile recipes for harvest season

Do you have a dish to share with readers?

Chees Nacho

Produce aisles are filling up fast with our much-beloved green chile.

Whether you like your peppers mild, medium, hot or extra hot, the hearty pistols are loaded with unforgettable flavor. They taste best fresh off the roaster. Just peel and add them to your favorite recipes.

For the next few weeks, I'll share recipes dear to Land of Enchanter's hearts – traditional Nu-Mex style recipes that no other state in the union can claim as their own.

If you have a special recipe you prepare at each harvest and would like to share it with Chile Knights readers, send me an email at sunny.conley@gmail.com. Be sure to include how long you've been making the recipe and why it has become a family favorite. "Aquí está a la cosecha!"

Zia's Favorito Chile Verde Sauce

This all-time favorite sauce crops up in plenty of recipes such as chile verde, enchiladas verde, chilaquiles or any other recipe that calls for a green chile sauce. Make a double recipe or more. It freezes well.

 tablespoon shortening cup chicken broth
 cup onion, chopped
 tablespoon garlic powder tablespoons flour tablespoon salt
 cup favorite green chile, roasted, peeled and chopped

Heat shortening in a medium-sized skillet on medium heat. Sauté the chopped onion in shortening. Add flour and cook for 1 minute. Add remaining ingredients and simmer for 20 minutes. Makes about 2 cups.

Hatch Green Chile Salsa

Unexpected guests? No salsa? Then this recipe is for you! Takes only minutes to make and minutes to meld flavors. Serve it as a dipper for chips or as topping for grilled or baked chicken and pork. Rather than jelly, I slather it on peanut butter sandwiches. Really! It tastes delicioso!

1 large tomato, chopped 1/2 cup favorite green chile, roasted, peeled and chopped 1 small onion, chopped 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt Juice from 1/2 lime

Combine all ingredients in a mediumsized mixing bowl and marinate for at least 15 minutes. Serve with any recipe that calls for green salsa. Great for a dip or as a dip starter. Add sour cream to make the mixture thicker. Add crisp chunks of bacon for crunch. If adding bacon, substitute garlic powder for the garlic salt. Makes about 2 cups.

Cheesy Green Chile Nacho Bites

This is an ideal tapa to serve at parties and potlucks. They disappear fast!

48 tortilla chips 1/2 cup sour cream

6 ounces jalapeño cheese or habanero cheese, cut into squares

48 jalapeño chiles, stemmed and seeded and cut into 1-inch squares

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Place tortilla chips on baking sheets. Top each chip with a square of cheese. Spoon 1/2 teaspoon of sour cream on top of each piece of cheese. Top with a piece of chile. Sprinkle with red chile powder. Heat in oven for 2 to 3 minutes, or until the cheese melts. Serve warm. Makes 4 dozen.

Chorizo Poppers

These poppers are simple to prepare and naughty – so addictive. They'll disappear in a flash. Better double the batch!

Commercially prepared pastry for 9-inch, double crust pie 3 tablespoons sour cream 5 to 6 ounces chorizo 1/4 cup favorite roasted green chile pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Cut pastry into circles 3 inches in diameter. Set aside. Remove casings from chorizo. Fry chorizo in a small skillet at medium heat. Drain. Combine chorizo, sour cream and chile in a small mixing bowl.

Place a spoonful of mixture, off center, on each pastry circle. Fold pastry in half over filling, and pinch edges together to seal. Pierce top of turnovers with tines of a fork. Place poppers on an ungreased baking sheet and bake in oven for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden. Makes 2 1/2 dozen.

Hwy. 28 Cornmeal Sandwich Casserole

This dish delivers all the flavors of the valley – a pungent green chile medley sandwiched between two layers of heavenly cornmeal laced with hot pepper jack cheese sprinkled with Mesilla Valley pecans. Lots of texture, lots of buzz!

 pound ground beef
 teaspoon salt
 pound ground pork teaspoon pepper
 cup onion, chopped
 3/4 cups grated hot pepper jack cheese clove garlic, minced cups canned tomatoes cup cornmeal, plus 2 tablespoons cup ripe black olives, chopped cup favorite roasted green chiles, stemmed, seeded and chopped cups water

Mesilla Valley pecans, minced

rs? ites and o ted tof fsour o powers. tet e

Delicious chile like this will soon fill grocery store aisles.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Fry ground beef and pork in a medium-sized skillet at medium heat until beef is browned. Add onion and garlic to meat mixture and cook until onion is tender. Add tomatoes, olives, green chile, salt and pepper to mixture and cook for approximately 20 minutes. (Add water to the mixture if a thinner consistency is desired.) Add 1/4 cup of cheese and 2 tablespoons of cornmeal to mixture, cook for 2 to 3 minutes, and set mixture aside. Place remaining cornmeal and water in a medium-sized saucepan. Cook cornmeal mixture, stirring occasionally, until cornmeal is thick.

Spread half of cornmeal mixture in bottom of a greased 9-by-13-inch baking pan. Place meat mixture over top of cornmeal and spread remaining half of cornmeal over top of filling. Top with remaining cheese and pecans. Bake in oven for 20 minutes. Makes 12 servings.

Mesilla Valley Green Chile Pie

This pie can be served in bite-size pieces as hors d'oeuvres or cut into large wedges as a main entrée.

- 8 favorite whole roasted green chiles, preferably Big Jim or Sandia, stemmed
- 2 tablespoons cream
- 1/4 pound extra sharp Cheddar
- cheese, cubed
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon black pepper
- 5 eggs

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease a 10-inch pie plate. Slit chiles open lengthwise (remove seeds, if desired) and shape chile in pie plate to form bottom crust. Place all remaining ingredients in a blender container and blend at low speed. Pour egg mixture over chiles and bake in oven for 30 minutes, or until pie is set. Makes 1 10-inch pie.

Note: The pie may be served in wedges as a main dish, or in bite-sized pieces as hors d'oeuvres.

Rio Grande Tortilla Boats

Shortening 12 corn tortillas

Salt

- 3 cups Rosarita fat free frijoles 2 cups Hatch Green Chile Salsa
- (Ŝee recipe above) 2 cups grated sharp cheddar cheese
- 1 1/2 cups lettuce, shredded
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 1 1/2 cups guacamole, commercially prepared or your favorite recipe Sour cream

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Heat 4 inches of shortening in a heavy pan at medium-high heat. Fry each tortilla in hot shortening, submerging it with a round, wooden roller, ladle, or similar object. Tortilla will form into a cup shape.

Drain on absorbent towels and sprinkle lightly with salt. Fill boat with 1/4 cup of beans, 2 tablespoons of salsa and 2 tablespoons of cheese.

Place boats on a baking sheet and bake for approximately 10 minutes, or until cheese melts. Garnish boats with lettuce, tomato, guacamole and a swirl of sour cream before serving. Makes 12 boats.

E12 | Homes & Southwest Living Las Cruces Bulletin Friday, August 13, 2010 Builders Without Borders holds workshop Funds from hands-on class to benefit citizens of Haiti at the Black Range Lodge in Kingston (www. blackrangelodge.com). The cost is $75 per day.

On Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 14 and 15, in Kingston, N.M., architect Alfred von Bachmayr will teach a hands-on workshop on earthen plasters and earthen floor installation. Builders Without Borders (BWB) co-directors Derek Roff and Catherine Wanek will also give presentations on rainwater harvesting, composting toilets and straw bale building design essentials.

Santa Fe architect von Bachmayr is the founder of World Hands Project (WHP). BWB and WHP have submitted project proposals to the government of Haiti to create prototype building systems that are seismically resistant, ecological and empowering to the Haitian people and their economy. All workshop proceeds will go to support rebuilding projects in Haiti.

The Jan. 12 earthquake in Port-au-Prince was an enormous tragedy for the people of Haiti, causing the deaths of 230,000 and leaving 1.4 million homeless. Yet, in its wake there is an enormous opportunity for Haiti to rebuild, restore and revitalize itself in ways previously not possible. Since the earthquake, Berkeley architect Martin Hammer has visited Haiti twice with assessment teams from the Earthquake Engineering Research Institute and the World Monuments Fund. He is currently working with BWB to help create sustainable reconstruction, and is giving a series of presentations about his experiences and vision for Haiti.

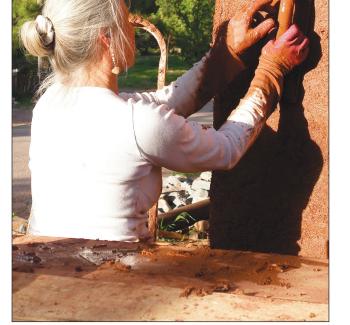

The August natural building workshop in New Mexico will help support both BWB, Martin Hammer's work and the WHP proposal in Haiti. The workshops will be held at the Black Range Lodge in Kingston (www. blackrangelodge.com). The cost is $75 per day, or $115 for both days, including lunch and free camping. For more information, call 895-5652 or visit www.builderswithoutborders.org

The general public is invited to an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday afternoon, at the Black Range Lodge, which will feature a tour of a straw-bale house and an introduction to building with straw and earth, rainwater harvesting and solar cooking.

Admission is free, but a $5 donation for rebuilding in Haiti is suggested. Kingston is located in the Gila National Forest, nine miles west of Hillsboro on N.M. Highway 152.
