Voters to decide school bond issue

Mill levy, $65 million before voters Tuesday

By Todd G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Residents in the Las Cruces Public Schools district will decide Tuesday, Feb. 2, on passage of a $65 million bond issue and to keep in place a two-mill levy.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to p.m. at 28 consolidated precincts throughout the school district. Visit the LCPS website (www.lcps.k12. nm.us) for a list of voting locations.

Registered voters who live in the school district can vote in the bond

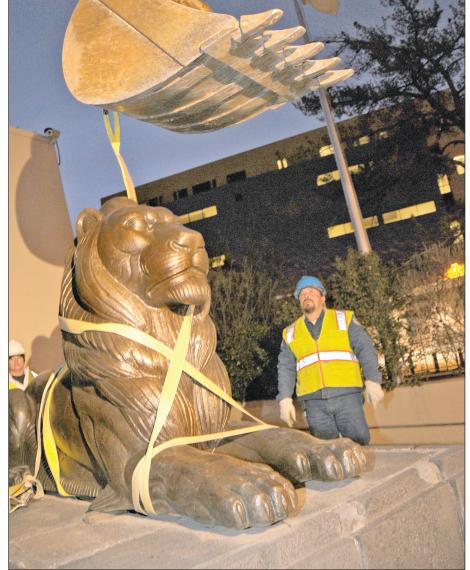

The bond debt is being structured so its passage will not increase property taxes. Along with the mill levy, the LCPS portion will remain at $9.807 per $1,000 of taxable property value, which is one-third of the assessed property value.

Bond supporters have been emphasizing the district's consistent enrollment growth rate of about 1 percent per year, which has required the district to open 12 new schools since

The schools plan to use the bond and levy money to pay for improving current school conditions, upgrading technology and constructing new schools and facilities, as well as renovations such as $10 million for Las Cruces High School.

For more information on voting in the election, call the Doña Ana County Elections Bureau at 647-7428. For more information on the bond issue and mill levy, contact LCPS Communications Director Jo Galván by calling 527-5811 or emailing jgalvan@ lcps.k12.nm.us.

More than 200 head to Santa Fe

Las Crucens get day to lobby state lawmakers

By Todd G. Dickson

Whatever limits the state budget crisis may put on what can be passed this 30-day session, it's not stopping 230 local residents from again heading to the Roundhouse to make sure lawmakers are aware of concerns from southern New Mexico.

Las Cruces Day in Santa Fe is officially Monday, Feb. 1, at the Roundhouse. Registration begins Saturday, Jan. 30, at the host hotel, Hotel Santa Fe.

As in past years, there will be a gathering at the Governor's Mansion on Sunday, Jan. 31. But the real lobbying begins early Monday with a breakfast for lawmakers before Las Crucens fill the Roundhouse rotunda. Las Crucens also will be recognized in both the House and Senate.

Members of a group called the Doña Ana County Legislative Coalition will be making a point to reach lawmakers on their legislative priorities.

The coalition is a partnership of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance, the City of Las Cruces, Doña Ana County, New Mexico State Uni-

Dona Ana County, New Mexico State University, White Sands Missile Range, Las Cruces Public Schools and The Bridge/Regional Education Initiative.

The coalition is supporting Las Cruces Public Schools' request for help to improve road access to new schools being built on the East Mass including a $100 million. the East Mesa, including a $100 million high school off Dripping Springs Road.

Las Cruces eyed for immigration center

'Campus' would house women, children being deported

By Todd G. DICKSON
The New Mexican

City-owned land west of the industrial park could be the future temporary stop for women and children being deported from the United States.

Davin Lopez, CEO of the Mesilla Valley
Economic Development Alliance, said a company trying to win the federal contract to create such an immigration center is interested in making the Las Cruces location part of its proposal.

In a report to the City Council at its meeting Monday, Jan. 25, Lopez said the center is needed because federal law prohibits women and children from being held in a detention facility if their only violation is that they are in the country illegally.

So the proposed center would be more of a "campus" facility with a capacity to house about 200 and would employ 150 people for jobs paying between $30,000 and $40,000, Lopez said.

The facility would cost between $15 million to $20 million to build, Lopez said, and the company is willing to consider wring leads are tractors to build it. sider using local contractors to build it. City councillor Nathan Small thanked Lopez for bringing up that concern in early negotiations.

"It bodes well that we're having these conversations on the front end," he said.

The city-owned land is about a half-mile west of the West Mesa Industrial Park, and the city would earn money through Payment In Lieu of Taxes (PILT) funds during the center's operation. Also, once the lease agreement with the city expired, the land would revert back to the city along with ownership of the facility.

Besides its proximity to the U.S.-Mexico border, the proposed site is close to Interstate 10, as well as Interstate 25 and S. Highway 70.

Lopez, who didn't disclose the comany name, said he was letting the council know about the proposal to schedule a future meeting with the company to get

Chamber celebrates 'Spirit of Las Cruces'

Record number of attendees at annual banquet are 'fired up' with pyrotechnics of new chairman

By DAVID McCOLLUM
The Las Cruces Bulletin

McCOLLUM

Nearly 400 local business leaders and dignitaries crammed into the main hall of the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum to recognize community award winners, celebrate the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce's successful year in 2009 and to positively look forward to an even better year for businesses in 2010.

Following a lively opening reception, Big Brothers Big Sisters Executive Director Stacie Christiano opened the affair with a heartfelt a cappella rendition of The Star Spangled Banner. After the invocation, new Chairman Kiel Hoffman led the solemn honoring of two key chamber members who passed away in the past year, longtime Conquistadore Doug Rains and former Chamber President Hotch Manning.

While dinner was being served, emcee Garrey Carruthers kept the program moving forward with his witty and insightful remarks about those in attendance. Jim Berry recognized his fine staff including Liz Banegas, Joel Courtney, Alesia Garcia Dutton, Janet Acosta Clifton and Alyssa Gintant.

Berry then announced Sarah Stegall as the recipient of the Volunteer of the Year, which was sponsored by Mesilla Valley Hospital. Other individual award winners and the sponsors of the award were: Savonne Griffin, Conquistadore of the Year (sponsored by MountainView Regional Medical Center); Buddy Ritter, Citizen of the Year (sponsored by Steinborn Inc. Real Estate); Crystal Apple Awards (sponsored by NMSU Arrowhead Research Center); Denise Briggs, Teacher of the Year; and Brenda Lewis, School Administrator of the Year.

The Nonprofit of the Year award, sponsored by MountainView Regional Medical Center, was given to the Salvation Army, represented by Capts. Cristian and Rebecca Sibaja.

Twelve local businesses had earned Business of the Month recognition (sponsored by the Las Cruces Bulletin) throughout 2009. These community-minded companies included Dickerson's Catering and Event Services, Bravo Mic Communications, Doña Ana Community College, Del Valle Printing, Insta-Copy Imaging, L&P Building Supply, A Perfect Fit, SpringHill Suites, Burger Time, ABC Printing, Action Equipment Rental and Comcast Cable. From this group, Action Equipment Rental was selected as Business of the Year (also sponsored by the Las Cruces Bulletin). The Business of the Year Award was accepted by AER Sales Manager Mike Zamora.

Following the awards, the outgoing Chairman John Hummer reflected on the successful past year, which was highlighted by the first ever Total Resource Campaign that generated more than $150,000 in new funds to support the chamber operations and activities. Hummer also recognized outgoing board members Bill Connor, Donna Stryker and myself for past service as board members and officers of the chamber.

Hoffman, the new chairman, then took the stage and outlined exactly what the chamber has done for the business community in the past year and what he plans to do in 2010. Hoffman then asked all attendees to reflect on the woes, problems and challenges that they had encountered in 2009, and to write each of those items on the back of a blank card. The cards were then collected and presented to El Cucuy, the "Spirit of Las Cruces," an effigy figure eerily similar to Santa Fe's Zozobra. Immediately the pyrotechnics began as strategically placed giant sparklers, hidden within gaudy, giant table centerpieces, rained "fire" upon the attendees. All the woes of 2009 were taken away as El Cucuy melted amidst the fiery action.

One thing is sure for 2010. Under the direction of Hoffman, no one will be

One thing is sure for 2010. Under the direction of Hoffman, no one will be able to complain about complacency of the chamber. The year 2010 will certainly be a year that will celebrate the Spirit of Las Cruces.

Go get 'em, Kiel!

With the school bond election coming up and hearing comments around the community that these are troubled times and we do not need to maintain or grow in our school system, it's perturbing that there are those who feel this way.

Let me give just a little history of my own family in this school system. I'm a native of Las Cruces, graduated from Las Cruces High School and New Mexico State University and coached at LCHS, NMSU and Mayfield High School. My entire family, their spouses and children basically have done the same.

children basically have done the same.

My grandmother, Mary Woodson, was a teacher and principal at Grandview, as well as my mother, Corine. The name was changed to Bradley Elementary in 1965, and the school was torn down in 1977. Many natives of Las Cruces are very aware of this history.

We do have a vested interest in Las Cruces and the education system. The punch line is simply this: Las Cruces has never turned down a bond issue and has provided a quality education and employment opportunities for many.

These are tough times. When hasn't it been tough when there are taxes involved? Tough times don't last – tough people and understanding people do.

This community has endured before during tough times and never has taken a step back. Las Cruces and the school system are and will continue to be one of the fastest-growing communities in the state. It's kept up with progress in a reasonable way, and it must continue.

There will always be those who complain about many legitimate factors in the school system and take it out on a bond election. There are those who don't have children in our schools and those who moved here and feel it's not their responsibility. Excuses are a dime a dozen, but is there any reason why we all can't help support education and maintain the progress that we have achieved up to this point?

Mediocrity is only for those who either don't care or look for excuses. The bottom line is simply this: We do not need to take a step back. We must accept the challenges that exist right now and prepare for the future just as many previous citizens of the community have always done in the past.

There is nothing in this request that isn't essential to growth and maintenance of our school system. We must pass both the bond issue for building new facilities and the mill levy to maintain existing ones. Taxes will not be raised and will remain the same. It's a neverending task to keep our school system in the top echelon and build and grow as a community.

Perhaps we should all take an attitude of gratitude and look at all the positives in our schools and community. Take 30 minutes and vote on Feb. 2.

Coyotes may be a danger

I have been watching coyotes hunting in the morning in the field across from the Casitas of Morningstar on Morningstar Drive. I stand on the balcony overlooking the field, have my coffee and watch the wildlife living there. Several times I have seen coyotes.

The danger is that parents in the neighborhood are letting their children walk through that field in the morning to go to the elementary school on the other side. These coyotes are hungry. Please post this so that they will be aware of the danger.

Little consensus on budget fixes coming out of the Roundhouse

Committee identifies 'low-hanging fruit'

Nothing is going to be easy now.

What will the next 20 days bring? Republican leaders say all $650 million of the deficit should be covered by cuts in government. Gov. Bill Richardson has ruled out increasing any of the taxes he has cut during the first seven years of his administration.

Some Democrats say all of the deficit must be covered by additional taxes. Their reasoning is that since taxes were cut by $1 billion during the good years of the Richardson administration, they should be reinstated now that the economy has turned bad. And some conservative Democrats say it should be a mix of governmental cuts and tax increases. But first, they contend, there has to be some agreement that everything is on the table for budget cuts and for tax

As this is being written, no agreements on anything have been reached. As the stalemate increases, one bright spot on the horizon may be the report from a committee on governmental efficiency Richardson appointed in December 2009.

The committee, chaired by former Republican Gov. Garrey Carruthers, was asked to take a quick look at the structure of state government and make recommendations about streamlining state government and saving taxpayers some money.

With only a month to do its work, the committee was asked to make recommendations for changes that could be made relatively easily.

The governor called it "low-hanging fruit."

The result was a report that identified $129 million in potential savings. Included were mergers and consolidation of many state govern-ment departments and the elimination of 18 boards and commissions that have outlived their purposes. The recommendations also included changes in Medicaid benefits and public school funding.

Richardson said the recommendations make sense and he is ready to pursue many of the recommendations immediately during this legislative session.

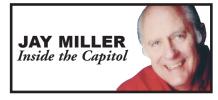

Carruthers also appeared before the Legislative Finance Committee shortly before the session started. Senate Finance Committee Chairman John Arthur Smith said he was pleased with the recommendations because the Legislature has a tremendous opportunity to redefine state gov-

That is a point on which Republicans also can agree. State government has expanded tremendously over the decades. During the first six years of the Richardson administration, the state budget grew by 50

The efficiency committee's recommendations may not be particularly easy to get through the Legislature. But nothing is going to be easy now that one-time sources of revenue for plugging the budget gap have been just about exhausted.

Elimination of 18 unneeded boards and commissions may be the easiest to pass. Many would like to see more of them go. Consolidating departments of state government will be tougher.

Since 1978, the state has doubled the number of cabinet-level departments. With some independent agencies added in, the governor's cabinet is now at 30.

The efficiency committee's recommendations essentially take the departments back down to their 1978 levels by returning the new departments that have been created since then back to their previous division status within other departments.

All of the new departments were created with much effort to pass them through the Legislature. The interest groups that pushed their creation will be back to fight their elimination.

An effort also will be made to consolidate some school districts. Back in the 1950s, school districts were pared down from more than

Since then, unsuccessful efforts have been made to trim that even further. It is a tremendous blow to a community to lose its school district and you can bet they will fight hard to prevent any future efforts.

Actually, the process already has begun. Smith has introduced legislation reducing the financial distribution to small and rural schools. So get ready for that discussion. Small districts already are organizing.

Up and down vote

Once again, the folks at the Las Cruces Public Schools or their political action committee (The Blue Ribbon Committee) are not being forthright in their advertisements and letters. Our taxes may not go up as a result of a renewed mill levy, but they would certainly go down if the levy is not renewed

MARK BEST

Bond passage sends message

I am voting for the Las Cruces Public Schools bond issue and two-mill levy on Tuesday, Feb. 2. Las Cruces has always supported our youngsters. Voting for the bond will again show commitment to our schools and youth. It means new roofs, improved technology, playground equipment, improved athletic facilities and more. It will also help pay for the final phase of the new high school.

I was an educator for more than 40 years and saw how this community supported its schools. Passage of the bond will have a positive impact on the thousands of children in the school district. It will also say that we, the citizens of Las Cruces, will once again continue to provide for our children.

Remember the bond issue will not raise the current property tax. So, join me and vote for the bond

Bond Issue & Two Mill Capital Improvements Levy

February 2, 2010

NO TAX RATE INCREASE

voting "yes" on both the bond issue & two mill levy will not increase the local school tax rate.

Voting "yes" will benefit every LCPS school.

About the Election

On February 2, 2010, voters will consider a $65 million school bond issue and renewal of a two mill capital improvements levy. If approved, bond funds will renovate schools; make major repairs and improvements to roofs, heating and cooling, and playgrounds; and will improve many school facilities. The bond funds will also help maintain compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act through remodeled restrooms and nursing areas. In addition, the bonds will provide safety systems and important technology infrastructure to support our students' current and future technology needs. Funding will also allow for the purchase of land for future school sites.

Also on the election ballot will be renewal of a two mill capital improvements levy which will provide funds to maintain all schools — protecting taxpayers' investments. The capital improvements levy also pays for school equipment, playground improvements, classroom furnishings, repairs and much more.

Extra Dollars Possible for Schools

* Many times, LCPS has qualified for additional state funds from the Public School Capital Outlay Council (PSCOC). When these funds are awarded, they match the local bond funds in a one-to-two ratio. For every one dollar that local taxpayers approve for these specific projects, the PSCOC awards two additional dollars. If the bond passes, LCPS could receive additional state PSCOC funds for several projects.

Disaster planning before or after the nuclear explosion?

Maybe we should get ready for the next disaster

By Michael Swickard

What is best? A - plan for disasters before they happen, or, B – deal with them afterwards? We have seen the results of B in Haiti and New Orleans.

How could New Orleans happen? It was not "if" a hurricane would devastate New Orleans, only "when." The national, state and local disaster preparedness for just such a hurricane was itself a disaster.

The Haiti aftermath makes me think of the Y2K worldwide disaster planning ten years ago. Some people stocked up on food, water, power generators and toilet paper. Most did not.

To those stockpiling I asked, "If your house has the only heat and lights, you can expect those who did not plan for the disaster to visit you. Do you have enough for everyone or will you shoot the neighbors to protect your supplies? And, how will you 'fit' in your neighborhood when the crisis is over?"

There was no disaster, and most Americans, even those with years of toilet paper stored said, "I told you Those were the "good old days" because the threat was imaginary.

Americans appear to not take a real threat seriously, that of terrorists exploding a nuclear device in the United States. A nuclear device could be smuggled into our country in a load of illegal drugs, since the United States is powerless to stop most drug smuggling.

Do our enemies wish to kill millions of Americans? Is there material for nuclear bombs available to terrorists? Does our government see this threat as credible? Yes to all of the above.

When I was young, we had nuclear attack drills where we crouched under our school desks. The first time I saw a nuclear blast flatten a house on television I realized that crouching under my desk was useless

What if we were not in the blast zone but must deal with the ensuing chaos? Two questions: How should citizens prepare? And, should our government compel us to be prepared?

I have been told that some of my columns are depressing. That does not mean we are not in danger. Some people ask if I could just write columns about puppies and good stuff. Nope.

So, what do we individual citizens do if one of our cities goes up in a nuclear flash and our country grinds to a halt for a while? Do many of us have emergency stores of food, water, protective tape and plastic liners to seal up a survival room?

Gosh, writing about that is not as much fun as writing about my dog, Conrad, who is fun to be around and does not worry in the least about nuclear explosions. Does Conrad's carefree attitude protect him from terror-

There are four main survival questions: Do you have several weeks of food and water? Do you have rudimentary medicine for you and your family if the authorities are unable to respond? Can you survive the cold or heat?

And, how do you deal with attempts to take your supplies by force? A huge problem in both Haiti and New Orleans involved looters and lawlessness.

Quite possibly we may not be faced with these hard questions since we may be vaporized instantly. Pleasant thought.

But we should be asking ourselves these questions and not just assuming our various government agencies will provide for us. Maybe neighborhoods must prepare with neighborhood leadership for a couple of weeks of being cut off from national or state disaster intervention.

Perhaps there would be teams within the neighborhood association who dealt with food, security, etc. rather than each family trying to go it alone.

But what if families or even neighborhoods do not want to prepare?

If they do not take good advice should we make them? That is the stickiest part. Should the government require us to be prepared for disaster? Should they force us all to buy survival kits and have inspectors check their viability every month?

After the nuclear flash is the wrong time to start planning. We need continuous real planning so we have no more disasters like New Orleans and Haiti.

What do we do with the people who make no plans and only want to talk about puppies?

ounty fairs, why?

"Most people just don't get it," said Ron, bemoaning the urban politicians that continue to whittle away at funding for county fairs and the ag extension service. "It's all about the kids learning real life."

To their misfortune, urban children have much less opportunity to connect with real life.

They look at some farm kid working on his show steer every day for months. It is beyond their comprehension. "Why," they think, "Would anyone want to waste their time in such a mindless pursuit?" and then they whip out their Game Boy and fall into a trance.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Thank goodness there are some politicians, corporations and influential associations that do get it. As farmers and livestock raisers continue to decline in numbers, it is even more critical that parents, county agents, ag teachers, 4H leaders, scientists and teachers instill in the next generations the realities of life that farming depends on. Does America want to become a net importer of food in 50 years?

I appreciate Mrs. Obama's garden, Whole Foods specialty markets, organic and natural producers. They have a niche market. But who is going to feed the other 99 percent of our burgeoning population, much less a hungry third world?

Those kids, our kids, who are fitting steers, doing chores, picking apples, showing hogs, driving the grain truck, learning to weld, riding pens, irrigating strawberries, managing a pasture, hosing the milk room, stacking hay and learning to read the sky are assimilating the mountain of knowledge that it takes to make dirt and rain into food.

Farm kids start learning the land and the livestock when they are old enough to carry a bucket When they help with the daily chores they are practicing. It's like taking piano lessons or tennis lessons except what farm kids learn has a much more profound objective; feeding

Our culture expends a great deal of effort on future NBA stars, astronauts, environmental lawyers, doctors and political science majors. But for every 100 rock stars, Rhodes scholars and Heisman Trophy winners our country produces, we better make sure we spend enough to train at least two future farmers, so the rest of them can eat. That is the essence of the county fair.

Beneath all the fun, auctions and show ribbons, the serious business of learning how to make a living off the land continues like an underground river.

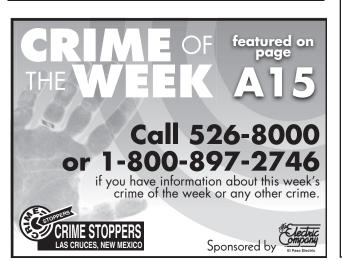

The list of "essential professions" is a short one. That's the reality of real life. Farm kids hold our future in their hands. They are in training to feed the world. And fair board members and county agents get it.

Let's Talk Taxes GREETINGS FROM THE IRS

The mail has just arrived and there amidst all of those other bills and letters is a piece of correspondence from the Internal Revenue Service. A feeling of dread comes over you...

STEP ONE - DO NOT panic or toss it, and please DO open it. It might even be good news.

STEP TWO – Read the letter thoroughly.

STEP THREE – Determine what they are looking for. MAIL from the IRS is a notification that they need verification of documents or substantiation of an amount claimed on the tax return. Education is vitally important in challenging economic times

By Norman E. Todd For the Las Cruces Bulletin

On Tuesday, Feb. 2, voters in the Las Cruces Public Schools district will have the chance to approve a school bond issue and mill levy. The school bond and the mill levy are both vitally important to our community. I hope voters will join me in voting "yes" for both issues.

The school bond would provide $65 million to continue investing in the capital needs of our school district. Money from the bond issue will be spent on new construction, major renovations and upgrades of existing school buildings, purchase of future school properties and many

The proposed construction and improvements are badly needed. First, new schools have to be built to keep pace with our district's growing enrollment. In this school year, there are nearly 600 more students enrolled. Our student enrollment increases about 1 percent every year. Schools and classrooms reach their maximum capacity and then new facilities have to be built. Money from school bonds is the way local residents pay for this new construction. The funds that our school district receive from the state pays for the daily operation of the district, including salaries, utilities and insurance.

Second, existing schools must be repaired, renovated, improved and upgraded. Most of our existing elementary schools – 15 of 25 schools were built more than 30 years ago. As these buildings age they require maintenance and upkeep. Older buildings also need to be remodeled to meet current needs. A large portion of the school bond money will be spent to upgrade security systems, to wire buildings for highspeed Internet connectivity and to upgrade electrical systems so they can "power up" computers and other new educational technologies being used today.

Our two largest high schools – Las Cruces High and Mayfield – were both built more than 40 years ago. If the school bond is approved, both schools will continue to be brought up to current building standards, as required by the state. An additional benefit from this bond issue is the "match" that our school district could potentially receive from the state. There are several projects that may qualify for additional funds from the Public School Capital Outlay Council on a 2-to-1 basis – for every dollar voters approve the state could match two additional dollars. Those projects are renovations and upgrades to Loma Heights and University Hills elementary schools and Mayfield and Las Cruces high schools.

Voters should also remember that a second item will be on the Feb. 2 election ballot.

The two mill capital improvements tax will bring important funding to our schools. The mill levy pays for classroom furnishings, student desks, copiers, computers, musical instruments and other equipment inside the buildings. It also pays for repairs and grounds improve-ments, and will furnish and equip new schools. Approving the bond issue and the mill levy will not raise the school tax rate in the district. Voters can be sure that money from the bond issue and mill levy will be spent wisely and well: a capital outlay committee, made up of parents, LCPS staff, principals, teachers and community members, meets regularly to provide oversight and input on all capital spending by the school district. Money from the last bond issue, approved in 2006, has been spent to complete-capital improvement projects, including the new elementary school, middle school and high school that are currently being built.

Anyone who wants additional information about this election should contact LCPS at 527-5811 or visit www.lcps.k12.nm.us.

These are challenging times in our community and in the world around us. But our current economic uncertainties and changing times should remind us of the value of a good education. There is no economic stimulus in the world that can equal a well-educated mind, a creative intellect and a desire to know more and do better.

Let's give our children the schools where that kind of learning can start – please vote "Yes" for our children on Feb. 2.

Norman E. Todd is chairman of the Las Cruces Public Schools Blue Ribbon Committee.

Letters to the Editor

Vote bond issue

On Tuesday, Feb. 2, I will be going to the polls to vote "yes" for the Las Cruces Public Schools bond issue.

This was an easy decision for me. The local tax rate will not go up, and the students of Las Cruces will benefit greatly. Passing the bond issue will result in much-needed improvements throughout the school system and will encompass everything from new construction to much-needed repairs in building, athletic facilities and much more.

Please join me and vote "yes" Tuesday, Feb 2.

DON BALL

Vote 'yes'
I am voting "yes" on the Las Cruces Public Schools bond issue and two-mill levy on Tuesday, Feb. 2. Furthermore, I recommend that your readers exercise their right and vote "yes" as well.

Las Cruces Public Schools now has more than 24,000 students, and is growing at a rate of more than 1 percent per year. We need the bond and mill levy to help keep pace with this growth, to build new schools to meet the growing demand and to maintain or renovate existing schools.

The local tax rate will not go up one penny if the bond and the mill levy are passed.

Bond projects will benefit students at almost every school in the district, and will pay for security upgrades and additions; improved technology; better athletic facilities; major construction projects; new roofs, shade structures, playground equipment; the final phase of construction at the new high school and much more.
The quality of any community is often judged by the quality of support given by the citizens to the public school system. Likewise, economic development and the general prosperity of a community is, more often than not, a function of the quality of the public school education and the systems that support and promote it.

This bond issue and mill levy are important to the future of our schools and our children.

Anti-abortion rally an inspiration

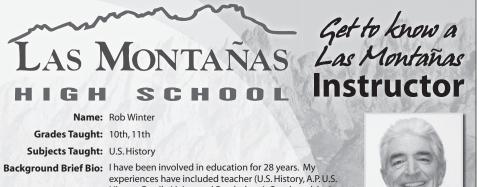

On Friday, Jan. 22, a pro-life rally was held on the steps of Las Cruces City Hall. Though it was cold and raining, 100-plus pro-lifers, young and old, came to peacefully and lovingly stand up for the culture of life. Tony Levatino, presented on Turning Point, a new women's health clinic. Emily Mauer shared her testimony of post-abortion syndrome and how she's found healing through Rachel's Vineyard Ministries.

Father Enrique Lopez challenged us all to respect the dig-nity of human life in all forms and ages. Heather Van Doorn informed us of the wonderful resources available to help a pregnant woman at the Mesilla Valley Pregnancy Resource Center. Rich Hinderliter told us all about the Gabriel Project, which also helps to provide for pregnant woman's needs. Martha Beasley spoke about Rachel's Vineyard Ministries and the healing that takes place for both women and men at their retreats.

Finally, Father Joshua from St. Anthony of the Desert Orthodox mission charged us with the task of not growing faint or weary.

I would like to invite everyone to an open meeting of the Doña Ana County Right to Life Committee from 7 to 8:15 p.m. Monday, Feb. 22, at the Mesilla Park Center, 304 W. Bell Ave.

Downtown Las Cruces Partnership is nationally certified program

The Downtown Las Cruces Partnership works in conjunction with the City of Las Cruces, the New Mexico Main Street Program and the National Main Street Center, using the successful Main Street Four-Point Approach to downtown revitalization. We frequently highlight our local program activities and Downtown progress, but what about our framework? What is this Main Street Four-Point Approach we talk about and how does it work nation wide?

About Main Street

The Main Street movement has transformed the way communities think about the revitalization and management of their commercial districts.

Four-Point Approach

The Main Street Four-Point Approach is a community-driven, comprehensive strategy used to revitalize downtown and neighborhood business districts throughout the United States. It is a common-sense way to address the variety of issues and problems that challenge traditional business districts.

As a unique economic development tool, the Main Street Four-Point Approach is the foundation for local initiatives to revitalize their districts by leveraging local assets – from cultural or architectural heritage to local enterprises and community pride.

The four points of the Main Street approach work together to build a sustainable and complete community revitalization effort.

Organization

This involves getting everyone working toward the same goal and assembling the appropriate human and financial resources to implement a Main Street revitalization program.

ization program.

A governing board and standing committees make up the fundamental organizational structure of the volunteer-driven program.

A paid program director coordinates and supports volunteers.

This structure not only divides the workload and clearly delineates responsibilities, but also builds consensus and cooperation among the various stakeholders.

Promotion

Promotion sells a positive image of the commercial district and encourages consumers and investors to live, work, shop, play and invest in the Main Street district. By marketing a district's unique characteristics to residents, investors, business owners and visitors, an effective promotional strategy forges a positive image through advertising, retail promotional activity, special events and marketing campaigns carried out by local volunteers. These activities improve consumer and investor confidence in the district and encourage commercial activity and investment in the area.

Design

Design means getting Main Street into top physical shape. Capitalizing on its best assets such as historic buildings and pedestrian-oriented streets – is just part of the story. An inviting atmosphere, created through attractive window displays, parking areas, building improvements, street furniture, signs, sidewalks, street lights and landscaping, conveys a positive visual message about the commercial district and what it has to offer. Design activities also include instilling good maintenance practices, enhancing the physical appearance of the commercial district by rehabilitating historic buildings, encouraging appropriate new construction, developing sensitive design management systems, and longterm planning.

Economic Restructuring

This strengthens a community's existing economic assets while expanding and diversifying its economic base. The Main Street program helps sharpen the competitiveness of existing business owners and recruits compatible new businesses and new economic uses to build a commercial district that responds to today's consumers' needs. Converting unused or under used commercial space into economically productive property also helps boost the profitability of the district.

The four points of the Main Street approach correspond with the four forces of real estate value, which are social, political, physical and economic.

Eight Principles

The National Trust Main Street Center's experience in helping communities bring their commercial corridors back to life has shown time and time again that the Main Street Four-Point Approach succeeds. It is guided by eight principles, which set the Main Street methodology apart from other redevelopment strate-

- 1. Comprehensive: No single focus lavish public improvements, name-brand business recruitment or endless promotional events can revitalize Main Street. For successful, sustainable, long-term revitalization, a comprehensive approach, including activity in each of Main Street's four points, is essential.
- 2. Incremental: Baby steps come before walking. Successful revitalization programs begin with basic, simple activities that demonstrate that

- "new things are happening" in the commercial district. As public confidence in the Main Street district grows and participants' understanding of the revitalization process becomes more sophisticated, Main Street is able to tackle increasingly complex problems and more ambitious projects. This incremental change leads to much longer-lasting and dramatic positive change in the Main Street area.
- 3. Self-help: No one else will save your Main Street. Local leaders must have the will and desire to mobilize local resources and talent. That means convincing residents and business owners of the rewards they'll reap by investing time and money in Main Street the heart of their community. Only local leadership can produce long-term success by fostering and demonstrating community involvement and commitment to the revitalization effort.
- 4. Partnerships: Both the public and private sectors have a vital interest in the district and must work together to achieve common goals of Main Street's revitalization. Each sector has a role to play, and

- each must understand the other's strengths and limitations in order to forge an effective partnership.
- 5. Identifying and capitalizing on existing assets: Business districts must capitalize on the assets that make them unique. Every district has unique qualities like distinctive buildings and human scale that give people a sense of belonging. These local assets must serve as the foundation for all aspects of the revitalization program.
- 6. Quality: Emphasize quality in every aspect of the revitalization program. This applies to all elements of the process from storefront designs to promotional campaigns to educational programs. Shoestring budgets and "cut and paste" efforts reinforce a negative image of the commercial district. Instead, concentrate on quality projects over quantity.
- Change: Skeptics turn into believers and attitudes on Main Street will turn around. At first, almost no one believes Main Street can really turn around. Changes in attitude and practice are slow but definite – public support for change will build as the Main Street program grows and consistently meets its goals. Change also means engaging in better business practices, altering ways of thinking and improving the physical appearance of the commercial district. A carefully planned Main Street program will help shift public perceptions and practices to support and sustain the revitalization process.
- B. Implementation: To succeed, Main Street must show visible results that can only come from completing projects. Frequent, visible changes are a reminder that the revitalization effort is under way and succeeding. Small projects at the beginning of the program pave the way for larger ones as the revitalization effort matures and that constant revitalization activity creates confidence in the Main Street program and ever-greater levels of participation.

also needs help reopening streets closed by the failed Urban Renewal mall concept. A mechanism for doing this in a tax increment development district, for which city and county governments are committing their shares of future gross receipts tax growth to the effort. The Legislature has yet to approve the state's portion, which could add more than $5.5 million to money for Downtown improvements.

The coalition is calling for the Legislature to adopt an interstate compact that addresses the educational transition issues of military children.

Operating monies are needed for the Regional Education Initiative, now called The Bridge. Doña Ana County leaders from business, education, economic development and government meet regularly to work on reducing the dropout rate and increasing academic relevance in career and technical education.

One of the more successful educational efforts has been the state allowing high school students to get college credits while attending classes that also fulfill high school graduation requirements. Critical to the dual-credit program is funding to support the cost of textbooks and other course-related materials for students.

The coalition is backing Eastern New Mexico Economic Development Alliance's Jobs for New Mexico Agenda to increase the number of higher-wage jobs.

The coalition supports funding for capital outlay at NMSU, such as $20 million to establish the Institute for Public Policy. The group also is going to bat for $7 million for the next phase of Doña Ana Community College's Gadsden Center.

The burden of handling the mentally ill at the Doña Ana County Detention Center will be greatly relieved with the creation of Crisis Triage Center, which is another coaliton priority.

In 2009, Senate Bill 37 was introduced as the Space Flight Liability and Immunity Act. It requires space flight participants acknowledge the risks involved with commercial human space flight. Virginia and Florida have already passed such legislation and Virgin Galactic – Spaceport America's anchor tenant - supports the

New Mexico legislation.

Another coalition priority is to get franchise fee legislation passed. Currently, an investor-owned utility collects a franchise fee on its billing for residents in unincorporated areas, which pay for county rights-of-ways. There is discussion at the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission about the legality of the collection of franchise fees. Without a statutory right to collect such fees, Doña Ana County could lose more than $1 million a year.

more details. Mayor Ken Miyagishima, who liked the proposal, asked Lopez to contact the company to see if a representative could attend the council's Feb. 16 meeting for a more detailed briefing.

In other City Council business, Miyagishima and councillors met with City Manager Terrence Moore in closed session before the regular meeting to discuss limited personnel matters relating to Moore.

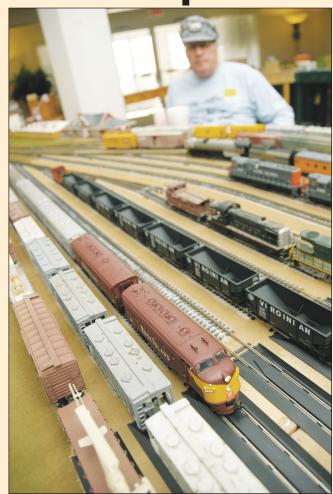

"As a result of the meeting, it was agreed by all to, at a later time, revisit certain terms of Mr. Moore's employment agreement with the City of Las Cruces, and offer further clarification where needed," Miyagishima said in a prepared statement. "Mr. Moore has agreed to this and will accept council direction as determined at the later meeting."

Moore's current employment agreement runs through August 2011.

Legislature 2010 Week two-

Bill aims to allow guns in restaurants

Permitted carriers now not allowed if alcohol is served

By STEVE TERRELL The New Mexican

People with licenses to carry concealed guns could take their firearms into restaurants that serve beer and wine under a bill that zipped through a Senate committee on Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Senate Bill 40, sponsored by Sen. George Munoz, D-Gallup, cleared the Senate Corporations and Transportation Committee by a 7-1 vote. Sen. Linda Lovejoy, D-Crownpoint, cast the only vote against the measure.

Gov. Bill Richardson sent an executive message to the Senate calling for such a bill to be considered. That's a necessary step in a 30-day session for bills not directly concerned with finance and budget matters.

Steve Aikens, a firearms instructor from Clovis who teaches courses that are required for concealed carry licenses, told the committee that no holder of such a license in the United States has been charged with shooting a gun in a restaurant since states began passing concealed-carry laws in the mid 1980s.

Aikens, who is founder of a progun website www.handgunlaw.us, said when license holders have to leave their guns in their vehicles when they go to get a meal, they are taking a chance of the weapon being stolen and the guns going into the hands of criminals.

Allison Smith, lobbyist for the New Mexico Restaurant Association, said her group is against the bill. She said restaurant owners are concerned about liability issues if guns are allowed. Smith also said they are concerned about what happens if a server brings an alcoholic drink to someone with a concealed gun. Even if the bill is passed, a person with a firearm would not be allowed to consume alcohol.

Munoz pointed out that no restaurant would be forced to allow concealed weapons.

The bill would apply only to establishments that derive at least 60 percent of its income from food eaten on the premises.

A fiscal-impact report for the bill, quoting an analyst from the Public Defender's Office, agrees with Aikens' point that the bill would reduce the number of guns stolen from cars. But it also quotes an analyst from the Public Safety Department that says the bill might make some concealed-carry license holders believe they have the right to drink alcohol in a restaurant.

Last year, a similar bill by Munoz passed the Senate by a 26-15 vote. The 2009 bill also passed House committees, including the House Judiciary Committee, which voted 10-2 for a do-pass recommendation. But the bill never made it to the House floor.

The next stop for Munoz's current bill is the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In Brief

House passes border security measure

The House on Wednesday approved a measure (HJM 9) that asks for officials from four state agencies to work with federal officials to coordinate safety and other efforts along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The state officials would come from the Homeland Security and Emergency Management Department, the Department of Public Safety, the Department of Transportation and the Border Authority.

The measure's sponsor, Rep. Nate Cote, D-Organ, said the legislation aims to keep residents safe.

"We must address the overwhelming criminal activity occurring across our border and take measures to prevent it from spilling over into New Mexico," he said. "We need to keep our citizens who live or travel along the border safe from criminal drug and cartel activity. The fact that this legislation was met with no opposition reflects the importance of the initiative."

The measure now goes to the Senate for consideration.

Steinborn seeks veteran property tax exemption

Veteran organizations would get a property tax exemption under a proposed constitutional amendment sponsored by Rep. Jeff Steinborn, D-Las Cruces, and Purple Heart recipient Sen. David Ulibarri, D-Grants.

"Now more than ever, we need to support our veterans organizations and help keep them strong," Steinborn said. "Removing the property tax burden on veterans posts will help ensure these facilities remain open, for both our current veterans and those men and women returning home from combat. I'm confident that if we put this on the ballot, New Mexicans will overwhelmingly approve this measure."

Under Senate Joint Resolution 7 veteran organizations chartered by the United States Congress would be exempt from property taxes contingent upon voters passing a constitutional amendment referendum. If passed by the New Mexico Legislature, it would be placed on the 2010 November election ballot for consideration by New Mexico voters.

Ulibarri, also serves as the co-chair of the Legislative Interim Military and Veterans Affairs Committee. He is a co-sponsor of SJR7 with Rep. Steinborn.

Domestic partner issue divides many

Some call social legislation diversion to budget focus

By STEVE TERRELL
The New Mexican

The battle in the Legislature over a bill to establish domestic-partner rights pits social advocates and lobbyists who normally are allied on a variety of issues against each other variety of issues against each other.

Sen. Peter Wirth, D-Santa Fe, introduced Senate Bill 183 on Tuesday. As has been the case with previous domestic-partnership bills, it is backed by Gov. Bill Richardson.

Also working for the bill are various left-leaning activists, civic organizations and churches. But opposing it are New Mexico's Roman Catholic bishops, who have stood alongside many of the domestic-partnership proponents in past legislative fights to end the death penalty and cockfighting, increase the minimum wage and to preserve funding for poverty programs.

The church's opposition last year – after years of staying neutral on the issue – was credited by many on both sides for defeating a domestic-partnership last year by a decisive vote in the Senate.

"I don't know of any vote that's changed," said Allen Sanchez, executive director of the New Mexico Conference of Catholic Bishops. Sanchez was referring to last year's 17-25 Senate vote against the bill.

"But what does have a good chance of passing are bad (budget) cuts," said Sanchez, who had just spoken at a rally in the Rotunda for those opposing cuts to social programs. "Our time will be divided by the domestic partnership bill. All the advocates should come together to stop the bad cuts from passing."

Chile conference's hot topic

Crop mechanization progress continues

By Marvin Tessneer

The annual state Chile Conference will be Feb. 1 and 2 at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, $705~\mathrm{S}$. Telshor Blvd.

Mechanical harvesting and removing pod stems will be the subject of reports at 11 a.m. Tuesday by Paul Funk of the USDA Southwest Cotton Ginning Research Laboratory and Ryan Herbon of the New Mexico State University Manufacturing Technology and Engineering Center.

"Labor is the largest and most variable cost in the production of chile here," Funk said. "Land, fertilizer and other inputs are somewhat constant worldwide. Harvest labor costs vary tremendously from one country to another. The goal of mechanization is to reduce harvest costs. During the last 10 to 15 years, there has been an alarming decline in New Mexico chile acreage. Production of chile will be retained here only when our harvest costs are competitive globally.

New Mexico chile growers follow safer health standards than growers from other countries, he said.

Mesilla Valley farmers have to be flexible with crop programs. Most grow cotton and chile as part of their crop rotation, which they practice to prevent the buildup of bacteria, virus and fungi in their field soils, Funk said.

Gene Baca also will speak on the latest developments with the New Mexico Chile Association at 8:20 a.m. Tuesday. Baca is the association president and Bueno Foods vice president.

An open forum on new chile vield initiatives will start at 1:20 p.m.

Estrada announces PRC run

Las Crucen seeks Republican nomination

Las Cruces native and businessman Jamie Estrada has announced he is seeking the Republican nomination for the District 5 seat on the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission (PRC).

Estrada said the PRC is in need of independent, qualified and strong leadership. Having successfully worked in both the private and government sectors, Estrada said he will bring strong administrative and industry expertise to the PRC.

The PRC's core responsibility is to protect New Mexico consumers while ensuring that New Mexico's regulatory environment will attract jobs and new investment opportunities to the state.

The recent conduct by some PRC members has affected the commission's productivity and has caused the public to lose confidence in the current administration," Estrada's announcement stated.

Estrada vowed to restore the public trust and get the PRC back on track for the people of New Mexico.

"In the weeks and months ahead, I look forward to hearing from voters across central and southwestern New Mexico about their concerns and how the PRC can better protect consumers and make New Mexico more competitive," Estrada said in his announcement.

Estrada is a business and international trade policy consultant. From 2005 to 2009, Estrada served as U.S. deputy assistant secretary of commerce for manufacturing. He negotiated with trade officials around the world to remove trade barriers and prevent burdensome regulations for U.S. businesses in the energy, health care, transportation and information and communication technology sectors. During his tenure, Estrada launched new initiatives to open and expand overseas markets for U.S. nuclear and renewable energy and environmental technology companies.

Before his presidential appointment to the Commerce Department, Estrada worked for Intel Corp. where he began his finance career at the company's Rio Rancho, N.M., site and advanced to several operational, strategic and management positions over a nearly 10-year period. He played a key role in the 2000-02 expansion of Intel's manufacturing capacity in New Mexico. While working in the company's governmental affairs office in Washington, D.C., he advocated for accelerated broadband deployment and for opening overseas markets to U.S. technology products.

Estrada was born and raised in Las Cruces and his family has deep roots in the Mesilla Valley. He received his bachelor's degrees in economics and finance with distinction in university honors from New Mexico State University and earned his master's degree from Georgetown University. Walker picks defensive backs coach

NMSU signing day 'spectacular' scheduled Feb. 3

New Mexico State University football coach DeWayne Walker announced Friday, Jan. 22, that Will Martin has been hired as the Aggies' new defensive back coach for the 2010 season. Most recently, Martin was the assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at College of the Desert.

"Martin and I go way back when he used to work my defensive back camps when I was in the NFL and I think he is the type of guy that will bring a lot of experience as a former defensive coordinator," Walker said. "He kind of reminds me of how I got my career started in the junior college ranks. Martin understands our type of defense and what we like to do from a fundamental standpoint. I think this will be a smooth transition with him working with coach Mike Rutenberg to continue to improve our secondary.'

Prior to his defensive coordinator duties at College of the Desert, Martin was the school's defensive coordinator and recruiting coordinator from 2006-08. In 2006, Martin was also with the San Diego Chargers as a defensive backs intern.

Before coming to College of the Desert, Martin was the defensive backs coach for Riverside Community College from 2003-06. Prior to his stint at Riverside, he was the head coach at Moreno Valley High School from 2000-03.

Signing day

Walker also announced the second annual Aggie Signing Day Spectacular will be at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 3, on the third floor of the Stan Fulton Athletics Center on the New Mexico State University

The event is open to the public and Aggie fans are encouraged to come and be a part of a very special occasion as Walker introduces the new additions to the Aggie football team in the 2010 recruiting class

The evening will feature a chalk talk from Walker on the 2010 recruiting class and his vision for the New Mexico State football program as well as an introduction of the new coaching staff. A video presentation on the strength and conditioning program will be shown, along with a 2009 highlight video and a top-10 plays of 2009 video. Walker will also recognize defensive back Davon House for his first team all-WAC selection in 2009.

A cash bar will be available along with some light snacks beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Long jumper lends a hand

World-class athlete mentors NMSU track team By JIM HILLEY
The Las Cruces Bullet As New Mexico State University track and field athlete Jordan Wood practices her approach to the high jump, she gets a little extra advice on how to position her body. "You have to fight going into the turn, ... twist before you reach that spot ... your shoulders weren't square ... you can't beat the force of gravity, but you have to fight it!" That advice is coming from one of the best long jumpers in the United States and the world, Trevell Quinley, who lives in Atlanta and is in Las Cruces visiting his parents, prac> home-cooked food. Quinley said his parents Alfred and Latricia Lynch moved to Las Cruces when his father was transferred to the Lockheed-Martin facility at White Sand Missile Range.

some

"They love it in Las Cruces," he said. "They just miss having a Trader Joe's."

Quinley said his next competition will be at the World Outdoor Championships in Australia at the end of February.

Aggie track coach Orin Richburg is glad to have Quinley pass his experience on to his athletes.

"He shows them that you don't have to be spectacular, but you have to be consistent to be successful," Richburg said.

Richburg met Quinley when he was coaching the U.S. relay team at the Beijing Olympics, and he also coached Quinley's sister Shevell, who was on his 2006 World Junior Team.

As one of the country's top long jumpers, Quinley is someone the young athletes will listen to. In 2008, he was the U.S. Indoor Champion and Olympic Trials Champion in the long jump. In the Olympic Trials, he posted a personal best jump of 27 feet, 5-1/4 inches, which qualified him for the Olympics in Beijing. It was the sixth best long jump in the world that season.

Unfortunately, Quinley could only watch the Olympic Games as a spectator because a groin injury kept him out of the competition. Perhaps even more frustrating, his jump in the U.S. Trials would have been good enough for the Gold Medal in the Olympic Games.

"It was less than I jumped, but I don't regret anything,' he said. "I was able to be there and that was a great experience.

During his college career, he was two time runner up in the PAC-10 before capturing the conference crown in 2005, his senior season. He went on to place fourth in the NCAA Outdoor Championships. At Merrill F. West High School in Tracy, Calif., Quinley earned three letters in track and two in basketball. He was the state champion in the long jump

Quinley is now 27 years old, but feels he still has his best days ahead of him.

"The best long jumper in the world right now is Dwight Phillips, and he is 32 and had his personal best last year." he said, "As you get older you don't get faster and stronger but you get better technically."

world's top

Andrea Aragon didn't leave much doubt about her future when she got the opportunity to play on the varsity level four

It was during the Holiday Hoop-La Tournament at the Pan American Center and the Las Cruces High School girls basketball team was trailing Los Alamos by 10 points at halftime. Aragon, then a freshman, had recently been moved up to varsity and led a second-half rally with 14 points as LCHS came back to win. She finished with 22 points.

"We knew she was for real then," Las Cruces coach Matt Abney said.

Hundreds of points, steals and assists later, Aragon has set the standard for players in Abney's program. She had more than 100 steals and 100 assists last season, and is on pace to hit those marks again this year. She leads the 19-1 Bulldawgs in scoring this season and is closing in on 1,000 career points at LCHS.

As outstanding as the numbers are, it's something else that impresses Abney

"In four years, she has never taken a play off in practice," Abney said. "Every drill and everything we do, she does at game speed. Her work ethic in practice is what makes her so special."

Aragon has been playing basketball since third grade and her parents, Joe and Carolyn, have been there every step of the way. Joe, who has coached youth teams in town, is usually there for Aragon's individual practice routine that continues year-round.

During the summer, her sessions are every day. She said she works out about three times a week during the fall and four times a week during the season. With her father's supervision and depending on the weather or facilities availability, she does drills either at home in the driveway, at the LCHS gym or at the Activity Center at New Mexico State University. A cousin usually is there as well, and sometimes her brother joins the workout.

"I actually like to practice," she said.
"It's fun. I enjoy it a lot."

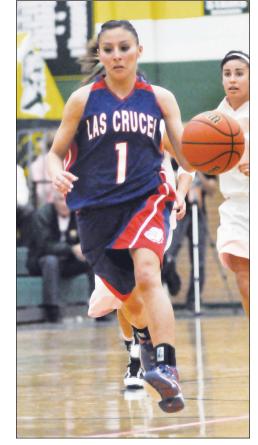

The hard work has paid off.

Aragon is one of the top players in the state, specializing in defense and 3-point shooting. She leads the team in steals (70), assists (96), scoring average (14.3), 3-point shooting (36 percent) and free-throw shooting (86 percent).

"She's quick, fast and very aggressive,"

Aggies win at USU

Junior guard Jasmine Lowe hit two free throws with nine seconds remaining to give the New Mexico State women's basketball team a 56-55 road victory over Utah State at the Spectrum Center Saturday, Jan. 23.

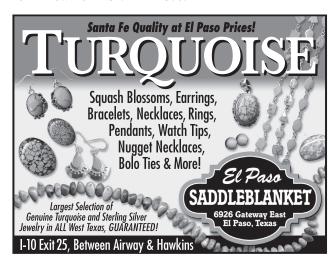

The home-standing Aggies used an 11-3 run in the late moments of the game to give Utah State its first and only lead of the half at 55-54 with only 12 seconds remaining in regulation. On the next possession, Lowe penetrated the lane and was fouled to give her two shots at the charity stripe. Lowe's makes from the line secured the NMSU victory. Utah State's Alice Coddington drove the length of the floor in the final seconds but her layup attempt from the left side danced off of the rim.

Lowe scored all nine of her points in the second half after missing her initial eight attempts in the first 20 minutes. NMSU senior guard Crystal Boyd notched her sixth double-double of the season with a game-high 23 points and 11 boards.

The road win stopped the Aggies' three-game losing streak. As a result, NMSU improves to 13-7 on the year and evens its record at 3-3 in the Western Athletic Conference (WAC). Utah State fell to 10-9 overall and 2-4 in league play with the loss.

New Mexico State returns home Sat. Jan. 30 to host the Nevada Wolf Pack for a 7:05 p.m. start inside the Pan American Center.

The game will be televised on Aggie Vision with playby-play provided by Kyle Doperalski. The contest can also be heard live on the Aggie Sports Radio Network with Lorn Brown on KSNM-AM 570.

The long and short of it

Around the greens is where you score

"The devoted golfer is an anguished soul who has learned a lot about putting just as an avalanche victim has learned a lot about snow." – Golf writing legend Dan Jenkins

When we talk about the "short game" we're actually referring to play that is within 60 yards of the putting green and play on the green itself. These are golf shots that include short pitches, chip shots, sand bunker shots and, of course, putting. The variety of challenges you face from 60 yards in realistically accounts for more than half of your shots in a full round of golf. Consistent with the old saying "drive for show putt for dough," on and around the green is where scoring takes place.

Your wedges and your putter are your "scoring clubs." Astonishingly, the vast majority of weekend golfers spend practically no time practicing their chipping and putting. Not surprisingly, the pros and scratch golfers spend a lot of time practicing their short game.

If you are truly committed to jacking up your game with a real golf makeover, you've got to sharpen your short game. It takes a thorough grasp of technique, plenty of practice and some imagination.

Chipping

Let's start with your greenside chipping. Please understand that my disclaimer here is that a picture or a demonstration is worth a thousand words. Consider the shot you have to play when your ball is a few yards off the green and sitting in medium rough with a decent lie, perhaps 40 feet from the pin. You have several options. And it's important that you consider a few options quickly and automatically, since you don't want to be stuck as a one-trick pony.

One option is to take a sand wedge, play the ball back in your stance, hit down on the ball, landing it half way to the hole with a little "bite" and letting it roll the rest of the way. A classic wedge chip. Delicate variations may be needed if the ball is sitting on top or lodged way down deep in the rough.

You also have the choice of taking a six iron, for example, and making a very abbreviated swing that amounts to almost a long putt. This is the "bump-and-run" shot, where you are landing the ball just onto the green surface and watching it simply roll most of the way to the hole.

Another play is to take a hybrid or a fairway wood and essentially create a long putt. The difference is that the 18 degrees (or so) of loft will lift the ball out of the long grass and get it running fast. It's also a great shot for very tight lies, with little or no grass under the ball, and for steep uphill short shots.

Lastly, you can always putt the ball, which I do quite often. There's an old adage that your worst putt will be a lot better than your worst chip. Putting and bumping it with a hybrid will take the bladed or thin "skulled" misshit out of the equation. It'll spare you the embarrassing chunk or duff as well.

Naturally, confidence around the greens comes from hundreds of instances where you have executed these shots properly and with good results. They lodge in the recesses of your long-term memory and reside there as accumulated unconscious evidence that you know how to do it. Hours and hours of practice prepares you to transfer your learning and confidence to the golf course when it really counts.

Putting

Over the years, volumes have been written on how to putt. Thousands of videos have been made and millions have been sold. If I had a dollar for every different putter that has ever been manufactured in the last hundred years, I'd be rich. Tom Watson once said that putting is a game within a game, and I think he was right. Golf legend Doug Sanders mused that "the trouble with golf is you're only as good as your last putt." A missed final putt can really stick in your mind.

I am not a putting guru, mind you. I fashion myself a very good putter and have some valuable advice if you're struggling with your flat stick, and would like to make a giant step forward on the greens. I'll offer the advice in the form of insightful, short and sweet putting tips. Con-sider and apply them as you will.

If your putting method is a good one, go with it and trust it on every putt. If it isn't working so well, have a professional look at you and be willing to completely change it. Be informed that the two most common causes of poor putting among high-handicappers are lack of distance control and off-center hits. As for technique, the "reverse overlap grip" is now conventional and taught for putting. Playing the ball slightly forward in your stance is also recommended, so that you're contacting the ball slightly on the up-stroke and impart overspin.

The putting stroke is thought of as mostly a pendulum action, with the length of the backswing matching that of the follow through. Modern teachers promote a shoulder turn motion in contrast to an overly wristy stroke. Smooth tempo and rhythm are critical, and can be practiced with a little "tick-tock" metronome to listen to as you putt. Finally, keep your eyes down and steady until well after impact with the ball, disciplining yourself not to peek to see how you did. Especially on short putts.
Get lost in your routine. Have a compact routine that doesn't vary. Don't think about anything; don't distract yourself by the chaos and jabbering going on around you, or the consequences (read $) of a make or a miss. Don't allow any room for negative thoughts to sabotage any putts at any time.

This is the one thing that makes the best players

mentally tough. They don't sabotage themselves. Being overly concerned with the outcome of a putt is a negative thought. Make the best stroke you can, and learn from how the ball responds. Detach yourself. Observe everything that happens on the green.

We must realize all good putters have peaks and valleys; they make a lot for a while, and miss some for a while. Tour pros go through these cycles; hacks go through ups and downs. Expect it and don't be shaken by the inconsistencies, trivialities and vagaries of putting. If you have a good putting stroke, and know you can make putts, just struggle through the slump, like a major league hitter goes through a mid-season batting slump.

Good putting stroke or not, you still have to practice a lot to get the most out of your play. I suggest setting up your personal practice program, using drills and putting aids that address your particular needs. For example, if you tend to pull or push putts inside of 10 feet, practice with a string line or a chalk line. If you struggle with lag putts, spend some time on drills that give you the feel from 20, 30, 40 and 50 feet, so it becomes automatic and you can trust it.

Half your total practice time should be devoted to chipping and putting. That's where the scoring happens. As you continue to practice your confidence will grow. And building confidence is one of the topics of next week's article, as we tackle the mental game.

Cruces High School Athlete of the Week

Samantha Harding is a 15-year-old sophomore at Las Cruces High School. She is on the Bulldawg girls' swim team. Harding swims distance free, individual medley and backstroke. She is the defending state champion in the 500-yard freestyle. This season she has bettered her performance and is currently ranked No. 1 by over 12 seconds with a time of 5:12.97. She is a member of our No. 1 ranking 200 Medley Relay and 400 Freestyle Relay that also broke school records this season. Last weekend Harding won the 200 Freestyle and 100 Backstroke and was a member of our winning 200 Medley and 400 Freestyle Relay in Rio Rancho. Sam hopes to earn a swimming scholarship at a Division I school. She is working hard to defend her state championship in the 500 yard Freestyle, and breaking her own school record.

She is a hard worker and an excellent student, with a 3.75 GPA. Harding has participated as a volunteer in Dress a Child and Coats for Kids. She is also a member of a local club swimming team, WILD.

A well-deserved tip of the 10-gallon hat

Heap of Aggies shine in academics

The Aggies stood tall in the saddle when the Academic All-WAC selections were announced for the fall term.

This is not an honor given just for show, specific criteria must be met. You must have played in at least 50 percent of your team's games and have a 3.0 or better grade-point average. That is a tall order to accomplish with a student-athlete's world filled up with practice time, travel and weekend competition. To have grades that are in the upper fourth of the scale and be a team regular takes some mighty spe cial people.

Again, this year Pete is proud to say 33 Aggies earned the honor from the top brass at the league office. Thirteen players on football head coach DeWayne Walker's team garnered allleague honors, including grad student Ross Conner, seniors Marcus Anderson, Jamar Cotton, Joe Suder, Ka'ua Adolpho and the team's top tackler Jason Scott. Both quarterbacks and their targets earned the academic tip of the 10-gallon, too. Both Trevor Walls and Jeff Fleming along with returning receivers, Todd Lee, Darrius Preston and Julius Fleming were at the head of the WAC's academic class. Blockers Kyle Smith and Ronny Torres are coming back next year as well and showed that brain and brawn can coexist with their selection as well.

The idea that championshiptraining habits lead to championship study habits were proven out in the Aggie cross country programs. NM State won the women's conference title and had 14 squad members in the league academic parade. Ingrid Flores, Brandi Gutierrez, Brittany Hurtado, April Lewis and Jessica Payne were leading the pack on the championship trail and in the chase for academic excellence. The men had a pair of Harts, James and Michael, in the spotlight along with Austin Brackeen, Christopher Galli, Marcus Porter, Ian Ruybalid, Terry Williams, Kevin Taft and Victor Sanchez.

The super surprise of the fall, the NM State soccer team, placed sophomore Marisa Moya on the team in the first semester of its existence. Mike Jordan's squad had a trio of seniors and a pair of sophomores tabbed for their hard work. Kelsey Brennan, Jennah DeVries and Erin Birmingham were on the WAC top squads for their play on the court and also get the nod for their studies Seniors Kelli Goodan and Krista Altermatt had four great years in both arenas as well.

The numbers keep increasing year by year. More honor roll students, higher graduation numbers and recognition by our conference as well as district academic awards are on the rise at NM State. It was once said that "to climb the ladder of success, a ladder must first be provided.

That's what is going on at NM State.

Winning close ones

Teams that keep their cool make it to postseason play

"Jack, good teams win close games." That is what Lou Henson told me once as we were traveling somewhere during his second term as head coach of the men's basketball team. He was referring to a story about a tough road loss in St. Louis in the 1970s when the Crimson and White were competing in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Since this tidbit came from one of the smartest coaches in America, I retained that nugget of information that I believe to be a truism.

This year's Aggies have been in five games that were decided by four points or less. Their record is 5-0 in those tight games as we head into the weekend's match up with Louisiana Tech. The crux of this is that a team that plays as one and has developed a trust in each other will hang together when it gets dicey at the end.

The win in Honolulu is the latest example of this statement. Hawai'i's Hiram Thompson tied the game with 12 seconds to be played. NM State head coach Marvin Menzies didn't need to call a time out to reorganize or tell the team what to do, he just hollered for them to get down court and put the pressure on the Rainbow Warriors defense. The result, the team got the ball to its best shooter, junior guard Jahmar Young who clipped the cords with less than a second left and another game went into the win column.

The confidence the team has developed enabled them

Utah State and Fresno State at home and on the road at Idaho and Boise State. Ironically, NM State had the lead at San Jose State at halftime but fatigue played its hand and a good Spartan team pulled away through the final five minutes

It should be comforting to Aggie fans to see their team operating with confidence in all situations on the court. The inner strength that has appeared this year is a sign of maturity, individually and collectively. As far as the early season games that were blowouts, anther Aggie team suffered similarly and wound up in the NCAA Tournament.

In the 1998-99 season, the Aggies were crushed twice by Boise State and Texas Tech. That team learned to eat pressure for breakfast and laughed at tight situations.

They were a hybrid team of transfers from a school that dropped athletics and leftovers from Neil McCarthy's last team in Las Cruces. They took some lumps but had the inner strength to hang with Boise State in the Big West title game and reversed the double digits regular season losses into a 10-point win.

Teams that can keep their cool when the heat is on are the ones that play in the post-

Keep marriage energized during the stale periods

Time apart can strengthen children of single parents

My wife and I love each other very much, but we're going through a time of apathy. We just don't feel close to each other. Is this normal, and is there a way to bring back the fire?

This happens sooner or later in every marriage. A man and woman just seem to lose the wind in their romantic sails for a period of time.

Their plight reminds me of seamen back in the days of wooden vessels. Sailors in that era had much to fear, including pirates, storms and diseases. But their greatest fear was that the ship might encounter the Doldrums.

The Doldrums was an area of the ocean near the equator characterized by calm and very light shifting winds. It could mean certain death for the entire crew. The ship's food and water supply would be exhausted as they drifted for days, or even weeks, waiting for a breeze to put them back on course.

Well, marriages that were once exciting and loving can also get caught in the romantic doldrums, causing a slow and painful death to the relationship.

Author Doug Fields, in his book "Creative Romance," writes, "Dating and romancing your spouse can change those patterns, and it can be a lot of fun. There's no quick fix to a stagnant marriage, of course, but you can lay aside the excuses and begin to date your sweetheart."

In fact, you might want to try thinking like a teenager again. Let me explain.

Recall for a moment the craziness of your dating days – the coy attitudes, flirting, fantasies, chasing after the prize. As we moved from courtship into marriage, most of us felt we should grow up and leave the game playing behind. But we may not have matured as much as we'd like to think.

In some ways, our romantic relationships will always bear some characteristics of adolescent sexuality. Adults still love the thrill of the chase, the lure of the unattainable, excitement of the new and boredom with the old. Immature impulses are controlled and minimized in a committed relationship, of course, but they never fully disappear.

they never fully disappear.

This could help you keep vitality in your marriage. When things have grown stale between you and your spouse, maybe you should remember some old tricks. How about breakfast in bed? A kiss in the rain? Or rereading those old love letters together? A night in a nearby hotel? Roasting marshmallows by an open fire? A phone call in the middle of the day? A long-stem red rose and a love note? There are dozens of ways to fill the sails with wind once more.

If it all sounds a little immature to act like a teenager again, just keep this in mind: In the best marriages, the chase is never really over.

As a single mother, I'd like to leave my children with friends or relatives for a few days and get some time for myself, but I'm worried about how this might affect them. Will they feel deserted again?

Not only is a brief time away from your children not likely to be hurtful – it will probably be healthy for them. One of the special risks faced by single parents is the possibility of a dependency relationship developing that will trap their children at an immature stage. This danger is increased when wounded people cling to each other exclusively for support in stressful times.

Spending a reasonable amount of time apart can teach independence and give everyone a little relief from the routine. Therefore, if you have a clean, safe place to leave your children for a week or two, by all means, do it. You'll be more refreshed and better able to handle your usual "homework" when you return.

Temple Beth-El welcomes its Scholar in Residence

History professor speaks to the public Feb. 12 and 13

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

David Ruderman, professor of modern Jewish history and director of the Center for Advanced Judaic Studies at the University of Pennsylvania, will be this year's Temple Beth-El Scholar in Residence Friday and Saturday, Feb. 12 and 13, at the temple, 3980 Sonoma Springs Ave.

Rabbi Paul Citrin said the temple's Scholar in Residence program began as a way to further the congregation's understanding of a particular topic and to encourage them to further their own Judaic study.

"A Jewish academic comes in and spends the day with the congregation and gives them a level of depth beyond adult education classes," he said. "In a small community such as ours, it is even more important to bring in guests from around the country to keep a connection to academic trends in the broader world."

Citrin said subjects and speakers vary year to year. Last year, he said the Scholar in Residence was a Cantor who taught the congregation about Jewish music. This year, Ruderman's topic is "The Jewish Encounter with Medicine and Science."

"David was chosen because he is probably one of the foremost Jewish scholars today," Citrin said. "He has published seven books, lectured widely and he is an engaging speaker."

and he is an engaging speaker."

Ruderman will give three presentations, the first of which will take place around 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 12, following the Sabbath evening service. The title of this presentation is "The Rabbis, Kabbalists, Magicians and Physicians – An Introduction to the History of Jewish Medicine and Science."

Saturday, Feb. 13, will kick off with a reception from 12:30 to 2 p.m. in the temple's Social Hall. During this time, Ruderman will speak on "Three Jewish Doctors of Early Modern Europe and their Vital Contributions to Jewish Culture."

That evening, Ruderman will present "Kabbalah, Science and Loving One's Neighbors: A Popular Hebrew Text of the 19th Century" at 7:45 p.m. Before the presentation, a Havdalah service will take place at 7:30 p.m. Coffee, dessert and conversation will conclude the evening.

Citrin said the presentations are free and open to the public. For more information, call the temple at 524-3380.

Taking care of eyesight

Vision loss a major concern for elderly

By Bob Nosbisch

Over the past few months as holidays were celebrated and temperatures dropped, many people traded abdominal crunches for the crunch of cookies, gave up Pilates for pie and traded shaking in aerobics classes for baking in the kitchen. Candy bars replaced barbells; licking fudge replaced lifting weights. After all, the weather was colder and it was quite easy to don a sweater or long pants, thus allowing people to help hide their body sizes and shapes.

As the weather turns warmer, people will be more conscious of how they look in T-shirts or shorts. They will work to develop "fab abs." The walking trail on Triviz Drive should see an increase in usage. Running, jogging, walking or biking will replace sitting or lying on the couch, watching TV or reading books. More people will head to local gyms, swimming pools, or maybe baseball or soccer fields. Home improvement stores will see an increase in customers getting ready to plant flowers, mow lawns or tend to various home repairs.

The point is that many people

The point is that many people will revert to taking care of their bodies as they did before the holiday season. Others may be trying out exercise for the first time. As people become more self-conscious of how they look in warm weather clothing, they will take time or make time to take care of their bodies.

Unfortunately, one body part that many people continue to neglect, regardless of the weather, is the eyes. Some people still insist on reading in dimly lit rooms, keeping their eyes glued to computer screens for inordinate amounts of time or neglecting regular visits to the eye doctor. While poor vision affects people of all ages, this column is aimed at people who are more susceptible to Age-related Macular Degeneration or AMD.

Free dental work from Bright Star

Gilbert's Dentistry from the Heart event to be held Feb. 12

Dr. Brian Gilbert of Bright Star Dental is offering a no-cost way for people in need of dental care to get one free service during his Dentistry from the Heart event from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 12.

For the fourth year, he and his staff will spend the day providing patients with a free cleaning, one free extraction or one free filling.

free filling.

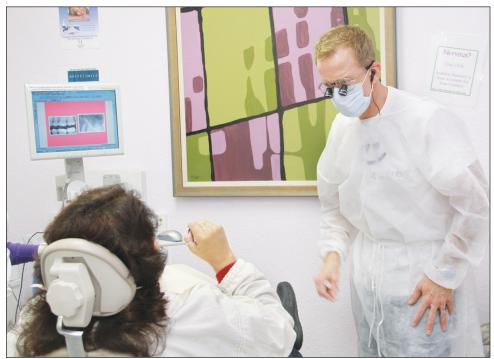

Over the past three years, they have provided more than 600 services to people who have come to the office the Friday before Valentine's Day.

The services are free to adults on a first-come, first-served basis, regardless of income level, as long as they are 18 or over and bring their valid, government-issued photo ID. Each person will be required to complete a short health history form.

"We're doing this to help people's lives," Gilbert said. "It's a gift back to Las Cruces"

Due to the number of people who are expected, Bright Star Dental has made arrangements for a shuttle to run between their office and Young Park, located nearby on South Walnut Street. They ask that everyone park there and take the shuttle to provide parking places in Arroyo Plaza for neighboring businesses.

Gilbert, a New Mexico native, recently celebrated 20 years of practicing in Las Cruces. He said he strongly believes in giving back to the community. Along with this annual event, he offers scholarships to five students going into health care fields and last year kicked off his first Hal-

Giving women a 'makeover for the spirit'

'Look Good ... Feel Better' boosts cancer patients' self-esteem

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

While the treatment isn't the most pleasant, the side effects of chemotherapy can be devastating, especially for women. Skin changes and hair loss are just some of the dreaded results of chemotherapy, and while patients are not only physically ill, they also can feel depressed and self-conscious.

To curb those feelings, the American Cancer Society's (ACS) local Cancer Resource Center (CRC)—located inside the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center—is bringing local female cancer patients the opportunity to feel beautiful again.

Through "Look Good ... Feel Better," a national, non-medical group program, female cancer patients in active treatment can help to combat appearance-related side effects of cancer treatment by learning makeup techniques for free. Key partners include the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association Foundation, the ACS and the National Cosmetology Association.

On Friday, Feb. 5, licensed cosmetologists trained by the ACS will volunteer their time to help women cope with skin changes and hair loss using cosmetics and skin care products donated by the cosmetic industry. Each participant will receive a bag of name-brand cosmetics – available for all complexion types – valued between $300 and $500, said CRC Chair Marie Roberts.

"When the ladies come to the session, a licensed cosmetologist will apply the makeup and help these women look good," Roberts said. "After chemo, the skin changes and the makeup they're using may not be appropriate anymore, or maybe they just want a change. The cosmetologists will also style wigs if they have one."

Although Feb. 5 is the first "Look Good ... Feel Better" event in Las Cruces, Roberts said the CRC plans on holding monthly events for up to six women at a time.

"When you're going through treatment, you look at yourself in the mirror, and you don't always feel like you're looking at the same person," said Roberts, a breast cancer survivor. "Programs like this are very helpful when a woman is depressed, which is almost a given during a serious illness. I feel very strong about it. These ladies need this."

Those interested are asked to make a reservation for the next session to be held Friday, Feb. 5, at the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center, 150 N. Roadrunner Parkway. For more information or to make a reservation, call Roberts at 556-8644 or 382-5910.

reduce the chances of getting AMD. These recommendations include regular visits to the eye doctor, learning and watching for the signs and symptoms of AMD and taking care of yourself.

If you are 65 or older, you should get a complete eye exam every one or two years, even if you see well. PBA says you should ask for a dilated eye exam, which will help your doctor check for such diseases as AMD.

help your doctor check for such diseases as AMD.
Signs and symptoms of AMD include dark or empty spaces blocking the center of your vision; blurry type in books, newspapers or magazines; and straight lines, such as the sides of buildings or telephone poles, appearing wavy. If you have experienced any of these, you may have AMD. Knowing these signs and symptoms may prompt you to see your eye doctor, which may help you from developing more severe eye problems down the road.

As for taking care of yourself, PBA says your risk of AMD or other eye diseases and vision loss will be lessened if you stay active, eat healthy foods and avoid smoking. Quitting smoking also may reduce your risk of developing glaucoma or cataracts.

operation. Gilbert's staff of 20 meets several times to iron out the details of the event, from scheduling who will be cleaning teeth to figuring out parking. They'll be stuffing goody bags with free toothbrushes and offering coffee to those waiting in line for their free procedure. When patients approach Bright Star Dental, which is located in the Arroyo Plaza at 2001 E. Lohman Ave., they'll be greeted by staff waiting outside to sign them in and provide a short health history form to be completed. Then they'll receive a number and wait their turn to be treated.

Once inside, if they need an extraction or filling, it will be completed by Gilbert. Cleanings are completed by Gilbert's hygienists, three of them working in rotation in four rooms. The goal is to provide quality service quickly in order to serve as many people as possible.

"Sometimes people ask if I can extract or fill two teeth," Gilbert said, "but I can't. We have to serve as many people as we can."

It's a busy day that staff says goes by in a blur. They arrive early and stay late, at the end of the long hours setting up the office to go back to regular service on Monday. But they find it to be a very satisfying day as well.

"While we provide a free service to any adult who comes that day, we really want to help those who can't afford regular dental care," Gilbert said.

With more than 100 million Americans without dental

With more than 100 million Americans without dental insurance and the recession causing people to cut back on their expenditures, the number of people not able to afford care is quite large. Last year, Bright Star Dental provided free dental care to 192 patients during Dentistry from the Heart. This year, they hope to exceed that number.

To spy or not to spy?

Just a quick peek at what your employees have been doing on the Internet could subsequently boost productivity in the workplace.

That's the message of a story pitch I received via email from Pandora Corp., a software company that just created The Office Software, a program to "combat cyberslacking and security risks" at work. According to the company, social networks are destroying employee productivity. It claims time, money and resources are being wasted at a "higher rate than most employers

I hate to say it, but it's probably

The company cites that 64 percent of employees use company time to browse sites such as Facebook. I would estimate at least 25 percent of professionals I know who use Facebook during work hours. Some more than others.

And me? Guilty as charged. The problem, for me personally, is that I receive updates on my cell phone about who's posted what, who tagged me in a photo from an event I don't remember, or who's having a lousy day because they got a parking ticket or because their favorite restaurant was closed for lunch. Seemingly unimportant facts and events, but I must admit, often interesting to read.

The new software from Pandora Corp. encourages cybermonitoring at work.

"Employers have every legal right - and in some cases a duty – to monitor employee Internet activity," said Pandora Corp. co-founder Jamie Leasure. "And in this economy, companies can't afford lost productivity.'

I would argue that a company's financial success hinges little on the amount of time its employees spend on Myspace or Facebook, and that putting more money and resources into cybermonitoring would probably be counterproductive. But the software exists for a reason.

At big corporations, many sites, including Facebook, have restricted or limited use. Some companies See Spy on PAGE B2

Kiel Hoffman, incoming chair of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, eliminates the woes and worries of the collective business community with the help of "El Cucuy," who helped carry the bad spirits away during the chamber's Annual Banquet held Friday, Jan. 22, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

By Gabriel Vasquez

People's worries went up in smoke. community members and businesses were honored and local leaders and legislators listened closely to the collective voice of the Las Cruces business community Friday, Jan. 22, at the Greater Las Čruces Chamber of Commerce Annual Banquet, held at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

Along with fireworks, dancing and inspirational speeches, nearly 400 gathered to celebrate the chamber's accomplishments in 2009. "We all survived 2009," said outgoing board chair John Hummer. "We still have a ways to go, but in the midst of what happened a year ago, we were able to pull together as a chamber and launch a great Total Resource Campaign."

The chamber's 2009 Total Resource Campaign was modeled using a fundraising program created by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in the '80s, which has been "replicated by many other chambers in the country" to raise money in troubled economic times, according to chamber offi-cials. During the 2009 TRC campaign, teams of business owners and Conquistadores – the goodwill ambassadors of the chamber – helped raise more than $150,000 in cash, trades and sponsorships to help the chamber grow. The chamber's new chair, Kiel Hoffman of Pioneer Bank, led the TRC campaign last year.

"Under Kiel's leadership, we will continue to grow stronger in the future," Hummer said.

Hummer also thanked the chamber's volunteers and staff for a "very successful 2009."

State unveils new supercomputer

'Encanto' to serve as gateway for economic development

By Gabriel Vasquez

The world's fastest public-access supercomputer was unveiled during a "Connect New Mexico" presentation Monday, Jan. 25, in a teleconference meeting with virtual participants and stakeholders from across the state.

"Encanto," as the state is calling it, is a technological powerhouse, capable of processing 127 trillion calculations per second with 28.7 terrabytes of local memory and a direct connection to the National LambdaRail, a high-speed national computer network that operates over fiberoptic lines.

The project was developed by the New Mexico Computing Applications Center (NMCAC) based in Albuquerque and is housed at an Intel facility in Rio Rancho, N.M. The NMCAC has a close business relationship with Intel.

"The center couples tremendous intellectual talent in New Mexico with the supercomputer Encanto to solve problems in business industries and the community," said Gov. Bill Richardson, announcing the project via teleconference from the Roundhouse in Santa Fe.

About a dozen professors, IT specialists and members of the media gathered Monday at New Mexico State University to take a peek at the new technology. Eight other partner higher education institutions at their respective "gateway sites' also participated in the event. Connectivity will soon be made available to 24 other sites across the state, Richardson said, all of which will have access to the blistering processing capabilities of Encanto for education and business needs.

The end result of the project, Richardson said, will allow urban and rural communities to participate in high-tech economic development.

This is an unparalleled resource in growing New Mexico businesses and attracting new businesses to New Mexico," he said. "It sets us apart from other states. Companies that relocate here can tap into our supercomputer resources ... this is one of the offers that we're making."

Specifically, Encanto will help the film industry transfer large amounts of high-resolution and bandwidth-heavy data to their respective worksites around New Mexico, and back to Hollywood, said Shaun Cooper, chief information officer for NMSU.

"One of the big pushes in terms of economic development was the film industry," Cooper said. "It's very expensive for (film companies) to deliver their product without traveling back to Albuquerque. It becomes very expensive to move back and forth from one place to another."

Also, the NMCAC is working on Encanto-based projects in the fields of aerospace, aviation and clean and renewable energy technology. As a "green grid" is developed in New Mexico, for example, Encanto will analyze grid performance, cybersecurity and map out scaling models before the system ever goes online.

But Encanto is not just limited to business and economic development, officials said. The computer will provide educational opportunities for institutions of higher learning and K-12 schools. It will enable students to virtually walk through the human body, universe, or even help medical technicians learn to save lives after accidents in real-time settings.

"The supercomputer will provide remarkable new educational opportunities in high-tech performance computing throughout the state at the gateway sites," said Jami Grindatto, director of corporate affairs at Intel for Southwestern states, in a statement. "This network of sites gives supercomputer access to all New Mexicans and will help create the high-tech workforce of the future."

ABRIEL VASQUEZ I The Las Cruces Bulletin

Christina Pheley, senior communications specialist for New Mexico State University, and Shaun Cooper, chief information officer and associate vice president for NMSU, watch a 3-D movie created by University of New Mexico students with the help of Encanto, the world's fastest public access supercomputer, Monday, Jan. 25, at NMSU.

The NMSU gateway, housed at Jacobs Hall, Room 128-C, will be made available to students for both fun and research, Cooper said. In total, there will be 32 other similar sites around the state. Sites already operational include NMSU, the University of New Mexico, Eastern New Mexico University, Western New Mexico University, New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, Santa Fe Community College, San Juan College, New Mexico Military Institute and ENMU-Roswell. All other gateways will be operational by March, NMCAC officials said.

have gone as far as to only allow employees access to their local area network.

For me, and for many others as well, the Internet plays a big part in the way I perform my daily work duties. I use it to gather information, research, use maps, find breaking news, story ideas, and occasionally Facebook.

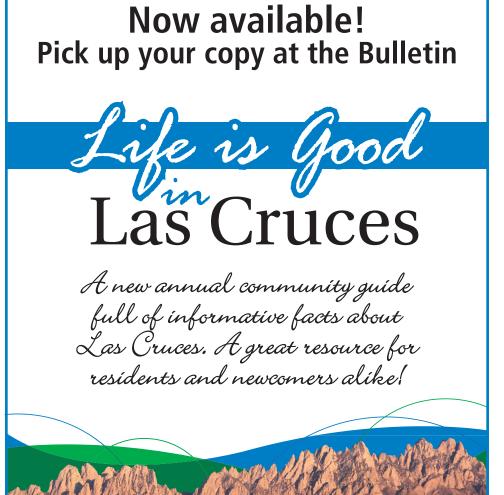

Perhaps in an unspoken agreement, many employers seem to feel that it's OK to occasionally surf non-work-related sites while on the job. The difference of opinion probably comes into play when surfing turns into an obsessive distraction, which then, could lead to decreased productivity.

Because social networking has interwoven the fabric of our social lives through easily accessible technology we use everyday, "cyberslacking" will probably exist as long the technology does.

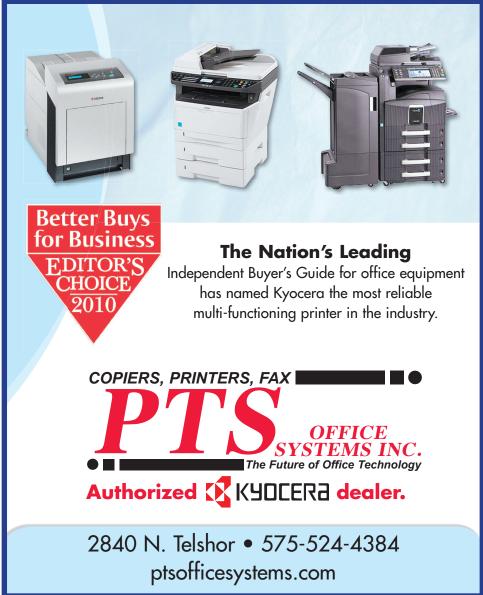

The question you should be asking yourself when you're reading status updates at work, however, is "Could I be doing something more productive?"

Chances are, your answer will be "yes." Perhaps then, it's best to wait for lunchtime. But if the urge is too strong, there's probably software out there to monitor your employer monitoring you.

Las Cruces area home sales off to a good start

Nationwide sales fall by 16 percent in December

Pending sales of new and existing Las Cruces area homes, townhomes and condominiums are on the rise, according to data from the Las Cruces Association of Realtors' (LCAR) Multiple Listing & Information Service (MLIS) arm. Pending sales are those that are "under contract' but not yet closed.

The Pending Sales Index is the foremost leading indicator of the number of closings that will take place 30 to 60 days into the future. As of Jan. 26, MLIS listed 173 residential properties under agreement and awaiting closing, up 25 units, or 16.9 percent, over the 148 pending sales posted at the end of January 2009.

When it comes to the closings themselves, the 34 closed transactions posted through Jan. 26 trailed the 40 closings posted during the same period last year by six units, or 15 percent, which was not unexpected. That's because many firsttime buyers closed in November 2009 in an effort to snag the $8,000 tax credit, which pulled what would have normally been December closings into the November window.

Markets across the country are experiencing the same phenomenon, according to the National Association of Realtors (NAR). The trade association reported last week that nationwide December closings fell 16.7 percent below the number of closings booked in November.

buyers closed in November 2009 in an effort to snag the $8,000 tax credit ...

As I mentioned in last week's column, now is a ... many first-time great time to buy a home.
Unless Congress takes additional steps to prop up the housing market, interest rates will rise and mortgages will be more difficult to obtain. Two other good reasons to get on the bandwagon now are the $8,000 tax credit for first-time buyers and the $6,500 tax credit for current homeowners. Both programs require that buyers sign purchase agreements by April 30 and close their transactions by June 30 in order to receive the credits. If you're on the fence and not sure if the time is right for you to buy a new or

Ethics reform long overdue

Corruption major barrier to economic development

This isn't the way democracy is supposed to work, folks. Popular ideas are supposed to pass in election years. And if the idea also makes good sense, then all for the better.

The governor's ideas do make good

The governor's ideas do make good sense; most editorials have come out in favor of their passage. They derive from the recommendations of a bipartisan commission co-chaired by NMSU College of Business fearless leader and former Republican governor Garrey Carruthers.

Richardson wants whistleblower protection. He wants disclosure of contributions made by those bidding on state contracts. He wants a ban on campaign contributions by corporations, contractors and lobbyists. The governor wants to place restrictions on legislators becoming lobbyists. And he wants the creation of an independent ethics panel.

Most of these reforms, or ones similar to them, have been adopted in other states. For example, 41 states have independent panels to investigate unethical behavior by legislators.

Ethics reform is not just about good government, although that is enough of a reason for reform. It is also about economic development.

Corruption is like a tax. It diverts resources from the private sector to public officials. But unlike a normal tax, corruption is also unpredictable. A business doesn't know how much spending is needed to gain the particular outcome desired. Pay your property tax and you know that you will be allowed to continue to do business at your present location. Pay your corruption tax and the politicos may or may not give you what you want.

In this sense, $1 of corruption is more onerous than $1 of tax because businesses don't like uncertainty. Risk is bad for business. States with a reputation for corruption, even the soft corruption of campaign contribution abuse, will find it harder to recruit business.

Take, for example, the case of developer SunCal. Last year, a bill to issue a $408 million TIDD bond was defeated in the House on a 33-33 vote. The bond would have helped finance SunCal's development of a 57,000-acre planned community on Albuquerque's westside. The failure to pass the TIDD bond happened despite 12 lobbyists and campaign donations to various legislators. The defeat was a surprise to the real estate industry in the state, which had expected SunCal's massive lobbying effort to pay off in profits. Instead, it was just money down the rat hole.

In a survey of reporters conducted by the New York Times released in December 2008, New Mexico ranked third most corrupt, behind Rhode Island and Louisiana. This is bad news, since even the perception of corruption is enough to discourage business form locating in New Mexico. Gov. Bill Richardson's proposed ethics reforms will help to turn our image around. And it might also actually reduce corruption. Won't that be good?

Tessneer keeps deeprooted interest in ag

By JIM HILLEY
The Las Cruces Bullet

The son of an Arkansas farmer, Marvin Tessneer grew up in Racine, Wisc., where his father moved to work as a precision machine engineer. After attending school in Racine, Tessneer joined the U.S. Navy and after showing an aptitude for communications, was trained as a radio operator.

To me, the International Morse Code was not dots and dashes but was like musical notes, not very melodious, but I thought of it that way, and I picked it up quick," Tessneer said.

Stationed in Gulfport, Miss., he was weeks away from being shipped out when news of the atomic bomb at Hiroshima reached Gulfport, and he never saw combat. He trained as a Third-Class Radioman, but was sent to work as a storekeeper for the NROTC at Tulane University and later at the University of Wisconsin-Racine and at the main cam-

"I trained to do something for the war effort, but ended up in an office. It was very frustrating," he said. While missing out on the horrors of war, Tessneer said he feels a great deal of sympathy for his friends and neighbors who did see combat.

"I heard about kids who went to war, some never came back, some came back maimed, some came back helpless drunks," he said. "I've met a lot of vets later who were in combat and there is a

While at Tulane University and still in the reserve, he came so close to being called up for active duty that they gave him a uniform, but the call never came.

Tessneer, who describes his early outlook as that of a "poet and a dreamer," studied international relations and minored in German, but later switched his minor to English.

As a young man, Tessneer said he had a "bad attitude," but over the years he has come to believe that with the "right" attitude, anything is possible.

Tessneer's career as a reporter began at weekly newspapers in Littleton and Gunnison, Colo.

"Gunnison is on what they call the 'western slope' and was a mining town, which means they have a boom-and-bust economy," Tessneer said. "I was not there very long because the mine was slowing down and, when the publishers combined two newspapers into one, my job was eliminated.

At that time, the latent "poet and dreamer" in Tessneer lured him to Mexico City.

"They used to call it the Paris of the New World' and what a beautiful city it was," he said. "They had a very good bus system at reasonable rates so I was able to travel around."

He obtained a work permit and took a job for a publishing company that conducted business in several European countries and Japan and needed English writing skills.

On a trip to Banco de Valle de Mexico, Tessneer met Irma Becerra, who was working at the bank while taking a break from law school after an illness.

"She was very well-educated and was also studying piano at a music academy – she auditioned her way in," he said.

They were married in 1956. Tessneer did not feel that his career at the publishing company held much promise, so the newlywed couple decided to move to the U.S.

Returning to Wisconsin, Tessneer found work at the Monroe Times Daily in Monroe, where he covered sports and the County Commission.

The Tessneers had two children while in Monroe – Deborah and Kevin – who would go on to graduate from Las Cruces High School and New Mexico State University.

After four years of working in Monroe, Tessneer and his family moved to Farm-

"I liked the Southwest, and first I went to Farmington where I worked as sports editor, but being a sports writer was hard on my family, so I took a job with the Las Cruces Sun-News," he said.

At the Sun-News, Tessneer covered local government, including the City Council and County Commission.

"I was impressed because at that time they were making a community-wide effort to build a new hospital. I covered all those meetings starting in the mid '60s," he said. "Ben Archer was chairman and they worked on it for four years. They finally selected a location on university property – I was impressed that the community came together and built the hospital.

It was at the Sun-News that he developed his passion for covering agriculture in the Mesilla Valley.

"I saw when I came here that agriculture was important. I started out putting together an agriculture page, mostly with stuff from the university or the agricultural association. I remember the first year the irrigation district said it would start out the season with less than a foot of water and I realized how important it was to the people," he said. "I don't think people understand the importance of agriculture here – both culturally and economically – it's what makes Las Cru-

Tessneer catalogued the history of agriculture in the Mesilla Valley during his time in Las Cruces.

"I learned about the history. At one time here, cotton was king, but they were losing their market so they had to diversify. They planted onions, lettuce and chile," he said. "I admire the farmers. Farmers are good businessmen, they have to make a profit and show a cash flow. They bring a lot of business in and spend their money in town. They raise safe food and fiber for the people.

But the agriculture industry is losing land. People should be watching real close. Agriculture is not growing, it is leveling off. The city is interested in buy-ing water for purification out of the Rio Grande. What will that mean to farmers?"

Tessneer later worked for the Hatch Courier, and eventually was asked by David McCollum, publisher of the Las Cruces Bulletin and a former colleague at the Sun-News to work for the Bulletin. Over the years, Tessneer has been recognized several times for his reporting and advocacy of the agricultural community in the Mesilla Valley. He is an honorary Chapter Member of Future Farmers of America and an honorary lifetime member of 4-H.

In 1992, the New Mexico Farm Bureau (NMFB) recognized Tessneer as the Outstanding Reporter of the Year in the state of New Mexico. "Marvin was covering agriculture before I came to the farm bureau

Local businesses support charitable giving

Generous support allows foundation to keep helping

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) makes an impact in the community, but not without the help of generous donors.

Some of those donors are business leaders who strive to bring excellence in commerce and a charitable spirit to the area.

The CFSNM's Founder's Circle recognizes individual donors as well as business donors who contribute $5,000, $10,000 or $15,000 to cover operational expenses within the foundation.

Operational funds donated are used specifically to keep the doors open so the foundation can perform its work. Like all businesses, whether they are for-profit or not-for-profit, staff needs to be paid, funds need to be managed responsibly, vices and the public needs accountability. In addition to day-to-day expenses, the foundations pays for their annual audit, professional liability insurance, fund management fees and other professional services. By receiving operational support through donations from local companies, the foundation is able to keep its long-standing commitment to the community while offering services at some of the most reasonable rates statewide.

"These donors recognize the importance of adequately funding the operation of a foundation," said CFSNM Executive Director Luan Wagner Burn, referring to the Founder's Circle, which is split into three tiers - Heritage, Leadership and Foundation. "This support allows us to continue providing an array of charitable services including planned giving.

In 2009, 11 individuals or businesses donated $5,000 or more toward the CFSNM's operational expenses, including

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the foundation is that you need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people throughout our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds you can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to your heart. Through our planned giving programs, you can honor loved ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of southern New Mexico for generations to come. The CFSNM can advise you on how best to maximize contributions, no mat-ter what size. For more information, visit our website at www.cfsnm.org or call Luan Wagner Burn at 521-4794.

EPA joins effort to redevelop El Paseo

Agency to provide recommendations to City Council

By Gabriel Vasquez

Many have spoken out about the issue for years. El Paseo Road isn't what it used to be, or what it could be.

As part of the city's efforts to reinvest in the historic, mixed-use El Paseo corridor - pockmarked with empty retail spaces, low-income housing and a variety of businesses – the U.S. Environmental Protection and other federal agencies are getting involved in planning efforts.

We're here to facilitate the process in developing the public participation tools that the city can use in order to undertake this process," said Clark Wilson, senior urban designer for the EPA's Smart Growth Program. "We provide education for communities that want to grow and develop, and want to do it in a smarter way

On Tuesday, Jan. 19, and Wednesday, Jan. 20, a consortium of EPA officials, representatives from the U.S. Department of Transportation, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, El Paseo business owners, commercial Realtors and city officials met to develop a vision for the corridor and identify barriers and challenges the city could face as it moves forward with its

"This is a new experience for the federal agencies to work together on a project like this," said City Councillor Sharon Thomas. "And on our level, it's a new experience for the city to work across a number of departments."

The EPA's involvement is a result of an application the city submitted to participate in the agency's Smart Growth Implementation Assistance program, a highly selective group of projects carried out by the EPA every year. Out of more than 100 nationwide applicants, Las Cruces was chosen "because the issues that Las Cruces is dealing with could, in the future, be applied to other cities, Wilson said.

Other communities participating in the program this year are Louisville, Ky., Montgomery County, Md., and the entire state of California.

According to the EPA, "to succeed, the city (leadership) knows it must engage in a robust public input process that will address both neighborhood and regional concerns.

EPA officials at a dinner Wednesday, Jan. 20, said they expected the area to be in a greater state of disrepair, but recognized issues such as "a large amount of concrete, revitalizing the area with affordable housing and bringing more businesses in.'

City Councillor Nathan Small said he envisioned entertainment venues, such as a comedy club, to be main attractions to the corridor. He also wants to see better public transportation and an improved pedestrian

The study, which started in October 2009, will take about a year to complete, after which a public gathering will be held to showcase the findings, Wilson said. Thereafter, council will implement its own regional comprehensive plan for the area.

"It will be an ongoing effort," Thomas said. "We will have the opportunity to apply for funding for a lot of things as a result of being chosen for this project.'

A soon-to-be big draw to the area is Pros Ranch Market, which plans to open its Mexican-themed supermarket on what was formerly El Paseo Plaza sometime this year. Walter Skowronski of NAI 1st Valley, who represents the company in Las Cruces, attended several of last week's meetings and said he has mixed feelings about the program.

The good thing is this will bring attention to public transportation in the area," he said. "And city (officials) and councillors have been helpful in supporting our concerns, so that is encouraging.'

But, Škowronski said he is unsure if the right population is being targeted to provide input at the meetings held thus far.

There was a comment made that the people who are coming to these public meetings are more educated, they're out of the area and they are much older, which is a totally dif-ferent demographic of the people in the (El Paseo) area," he said. We're going to figure out how to get input from people that actually live

A two- to four-day community meeting is planned for sometime in the spring, said Susan Lowell, planner for the City of Las Cruces.

This shopping plaza on El Paseo Road has undergone a number of commercial vacancies throughout the years. Work is under way to repave the parking lot.

Banquet

Hoffman, in a lengthy but inspirational address, spoke about the chamber's goals for 2010, which include raising membership to 1,100, becoming a nationally accredited chamber of commerce and expanding the current chamber's office location.

"Another thing that we're going to spend a lot of time doing this year is staying involved in issues that affect business owners, the schools, the university and all of the things associated with growth and development," Hoffman said. "We're going to take a stand to make sure that if we pass laws or have changes, that we make sure they are good for business in Las Cruces. We're putting our arms out to elected officials."

Hoffman thanked Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima for his attendance.

"We're really working hard to make sure the chamber and the local leadership can work together," Hoffman said.

Last year, Gil Jones, a former city councillor with close ties to the chamber and local economic development organization, was ousted by progressive Gill Sorg, who took control one of the city's largest districts. Similarly, former Mayor Pro Tem Dolores Archuleta, considered "pro-business" by some, was defeated in the same election by Olga Pedroza, another progressive. Jim Harbison, a city council candidate endorsed by Realtors and the Building Industry Association, was unsuccessful at bumping now Mayor Pro Tem Sharon Thomas, also a progressive, from her council seat, leaving many in the business community worried about an "all-green" council, as some have referred to it.

"Over the last several years, I have heard from some people that our business community are not good guys," Hoffman said. "That growth and business isn't necessarily a good thing. Well, we're going to keep going and keep doing things right. We want to grow responsibly, we want to use common sense, but we also want business to prosper here, and we have so many great opportunities to do that."

At the tail of Hoffman's speech, attendees were asked to write their fears, worries and laments on small piece of paper. At the end of the speech, the papers were metaphorically burned using a papiermâché recreation of "El Cucuy," a fabled Mexican version of the boogeyman, and an eruption of fireworks. The display earned a standing ovation.

"Whether you like it or not, I'm a different kind of leader," Hoffman said. "I'm about fun. Those of you that have worked with me know that part of volunteering is about having fun. It's mandatory."

Also at the banquet, outgoing board members Bill Connor, Donna Stryker and David McCollum were honored for their service to the chamber.

"(McCollum) set in place a succession plan for future leaders of the chamber," Hummer said. "He wasn't looking just to (2007), but he was looking to the long-term to make sure we remained a stable chamber."

The most significant recognition came during the awards portion of the banquet, during which five persons, one business and one nonprofit were honored.

"The awards have become a very special part of this function," said chamber President and CEO Jim Berry.

Local artists and community set to celebrate For the Love of Art month

Visual arts, performances and studio tours planned all month long

By Kristine Sandrick

Some have called Las Cruces "Santa Fe without the attitude." The Las Cruces area arts community has an attitude, too, that of one big happy family.

For 12 years, the local arts community has been hosting For the Love of Art Month in February throughout Mesilla

"In the very beginning, Myriam Jarvis and Kelly Hestir were instrumental in developing the ArtForms organization, said Flo Dougherty, artist and owner of Blue Gate Gallery. "Within a year or so they decided to have a citywide celebration for the love of arts in February."

ArtForms Artists Association of New Mexico is a nonprofit organization that serves to promote visual and performing arts. For the Love of Arts programs invite members and even nonmembers to display their talents for the community.

Dougherty said she has been involved with ArtForms since its roots, having recently served as president for three years, and added the nice thing about the organization is that it involves all art

"It's not just painters, but dance, theater, music – it's a total package of sister arts that caught on quickly," she said.

Since the first celebration in 1998, Dougherty said For the Love of Arts has involved everyone in the city, whether they belong to the organization or not. She also said it goes beyond the city to other areas in the community.

What to do?

With so many wonderful art celebrations happening throughout the valley during the 28 days of February, where does one start?

"The event guide lists all the activities, where and when they are held, plus a list of all the studios that are going to be on the studio tours and what kind of work they are going to exhibit," said Catherine Brenner, owner of Unsettled Gallery and president of ArtForms.

It also gives concise directions to art studios, she added.

Sounds like this could be a busy month for area hotels and restaurants, too. Brenner said the events are being promoted throughout the Southwest with guides distributed in the Phoenix, Tucson and Tubac, Ariz., markets plus El Paso, Ruidoso and Cloudcroft, providing snow in the mountains doesn't prohibit deliveries.

Cheryl Fallstead, writer, publicist and president of the Foundation for the Las Cruces Museums, said the main events are ArtForms member shows, studio tours and performing arts.

"I just think it's neat that there is so much going on during the month," she said. "There's the official For the Love of Art Month events, then there are individual events people do during the month that also celebrate the arts.'

She added that since all art forms are celebrated, the event has expanded to include writers and musicians.

We will also celebrate for the Love of Literature month, and New Horizons Symphony Orchestra joined ArtForms so we can bring musical art to the month's celebrations," she said.

Full palette of events

The celebration begins with the annual ArtForms Member Exhibit at the Branigan Cultural Center Friday, Feb. 5, as part of the monthly Downtown Ramble. The Shannon Gallery will be filled with art of all forms - painting, watercolor, sculpture, photography, paper, jewelry, wood, glass, fiber arts Studio tours are scheduled for two Saturdays and Sundays, Feb. 13 and 14, and Feb. 20 and 21. Artists at 28 locations will open their studios to show visitors where they create their work, discuss their techniques and offer art for sale. This is a unique opportunity to meet artists, learn the stories behind their work and possibly buy a memorable piece to add to a collection.

On the performance side, one major event is the American Southwest Theatre Company's Mardi Gras Gala, 7 to 11 p.m. Friday, Feb. 5, at the New Mexico State University Golf Course Clubhouse. The event includes appetizers, desserts, dancing, games and a cash bar. At the very least, masks and Mardi Gras beads are appropriate for this festive fundraiser. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster.

The Las Cruces Friends of Chamber Music also has planned events. The La Catrina String Quartet will perform a benefit concert at the Rio Grande Theatre to support the chamber group in its musical and educational outreach programs. Another fundraiser for Friends of Chamber Music scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 20, is an annual Victorian Tea Fundraiser at the Victorian Tea Room on South Main Street. Call 523-1774 for more information or visit www.lascrucesfriendsofchambermusic.org.

New Horizons Symphony Orchestra's has scheduled its first Pops Concert, featuring soloist Paul McLaughlin in "Bugler Holiday." The orchestra will also play popular tunes such as the "Star Wars Medley," "The Syncopated Clock" and "Night on Bald Mountain." The concert is free and open to the public at the NMSU Atkinson Recital Hall.

The art of writing will be celebrated during For the Love of Lit, at the Branigan Cultural Center, with writers and the audience surrounded by visual arts created by ArtForms artists. Poet Wayne Crawford will host the reading on Saturday, Feb. 27, featuring local poets and writers.

Get out and enjoy the arts, all month.

Black History Month features speakers, performers, movie

'Enlightenment' is theme for this year's events

New Mexico State University's Black Programs, in collaboration with various on-campus and community organizations, is celebrating Black History Month by hosting a collection of speakers throughout the month of February.

This year's celebration is different from those in the past in that it consists mainly of guest speakers.

"The theme for this year is enlightenment," said Festus Addo-Yobo, director of Black Programs. "We have people coming in from different backgrounds to give us an insight on how we can become progressive."

Opening up Black History Month is guest speaker Pierre Orelus, a writer and native of Haiti whose research interests include colonial and neocolonial studies, critical literacy, critical pedagogy, and pedagogy for self-liberation and liberation of others. Orelus will speak at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 1, at the Corbett Center Student Union Art Gallery.

Marjol Rush Collet, who is the cousin of the late Langston Hughes, a writer who is well known for shaping the contributions of the Harlem Renaissance of the 1920s, will be the second guest speaker. Collet will appear at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4, at the Corbett Center Auditorium.

Omar Tyree, a New York Times bestselling author who has published 16 books and has been recognized as one of the most renowned contemporary commercial writers, will be the third guest speaker at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 11, at Corbett Center's Auditorium.

A documentary, "Prom Night in Mississippi," will be presented by producers Paul Saltzman and wife Patricia Aquino at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 16, at Corbett Center's Auditorium. The documentary features a Mississippi high school that had been integrated since 1970, but was still holding separate white and black proms. They, along with friend Morgan Freeman, were instrumental in making a change.

As in years past, Gospel Jazz Night will include J.J. Harrison and Youthful Praise and will take place at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 20, at NMSU's Atkinson Recital Hall.

Closing out the month-long celebration is a luncheon that will replace the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Dinner. Regent Isaac "Ike" Pino will be the guest speaker for the luncheon taking place at 11 a.m.

As part of the Black History Month celebration, "Prom Night in Mississippi" movie producers will present the documentary, with features a high school that had been integrated since 1970, but was still holding separate white and black proms.

Wednesday, Feb. 24, at the NMSU Golf Course Clubhouse Banquet Room.

"This year we made a change in that we wanted to have someone from our community speak at the luncheon," Addo-Yobo said. "Pino has been a great influence in the community and has gone on to do great things."

Co-sponsors for the events include NMSU's College of Arts and Sciences and College of Education, ASNMSU, Black Student Council, the State of New Mexico's Office of African American Affairs, NMSU Bookstore and Campus Activities.

"We want to encourage the NMSU campus and Las Cruces community to be a part of these great events," Addo-Yobo said.

Pick up a brush and paint

A watercolor lesson with Marie Siegrist

By KRISTINE SANDRICK

Perhaps you've been thinking about a new creative outlet. If you've ever wanted to be an artist, Las Cruces is a great place to learn. Hundreds of experienced and burgeoning artists live in the Mesilla Valley, attracted to this place by the natural beauty and sunny, clear skies. In fact, there is so much talent in our community, one wonders if the Rio Grande flows with creative juices.

Some of us have wanted to try something new but don't have the first clue about how to go about it. The Las Cruces Bulletin would like to help. In this column, local watercolorist Marie Siegrist talks about how to make that first mark on a clean sheet of watercolor paper.

Siegrist was nearing the end of a Wednesday morning class she teaches at the Mesquite Street Studio. Eight or nine watercolorists were seated around a large worktable, and Siegrist, who has been teaching watercolor painting since 1986, counsels beginners and experienced painters.

"When somebody wants to start painting for the very first time, I suggest they keep it very simple," she said.

Siegrist listed the first supplies to buy:

- No. 10 round brush
- No. 6 round brush
- 1/2-inch flat wash brush
- Watercolor paint warm- and cool-colored paint in each of the primary colors, i.e., red, green and blue, plus one tube of burnt sienna, for a total of seven tubes
- Something to hold water, a spray bottle and a white plastic plate for a palette
- Good watercolor paper, such as Archer, Windsor Newton or Fabriano Artistical

"The reason for the good paper is that you get very discouraged if you start to paint on paper that is inadequate," she said. "And eventually you'll want to get a palette with wells and a cover to keep paints from drying out."

Students gather around her table as she shows them how to paint a cypress tree. She takes a round brush dabbed in hooker's green paint. A Siegrist painting featuring a house and cypress trees sits in the background.

"You have to first establish the light side indicating where the sun is coming from," she said, making quick, vertical strokes shaping the left side of an elegant cypress tree.

The paint on the left side is lighter than the right, due to the "sun" coming from the left.

"You can putter and work it as long as you like. Just try not to have all one value," she said.

Values are the dark and light colors. The magic combination directs the viewer's eye to a focal point, "where the lightest lights and darkest darks come together," she said, adding that some people use a piece of red acetate paper to note the values changes, that is, to see the lights and darks in their work.

Some of us have wanted to try something new but don't have the first clue about how to go about it.

She said it's very important to keep a sketchbook.

"I'll make a line drawing with annotations to help me remember what I was impressed with," she said.

Her sketchbook is a record of scenes that have captured her attention over the years. Some sketches are years old, but Siegrist said she wants to paint them some day. And for the rookie artist who is afraid to make that first mark and possibly ruin a perfectly good sheet of paper, Siegrist offers this advice

"I tell them to make a few marks on the watercolor paper," she said, possibly indicating where the mountains should start or the house appears on the hillside.

Of course, we all have to start somewhere. Siegrist was a beginner growing up in Wisconsin.

Expressing her desire to paint, her parents gave her a bucket of water and a brush and pointed her to the brown door on their house in Milwaukee.

Those paintless brushstrokes led to art classes, eventually studying wi number of nationally known painters.

"I always enjoyed drawing and got my first real set of paints when I was in my 20s," she said.

You can find beginners watercolor kits for under $20. If it's something you've always wanted to try, go for it. Just tell your internal art critic to take a hike and go with the flow.

Using a flat brush, Siegrist adds lines to shape her cypress tree. She also painted the piece shown in the background with cypress trees behind an adobe wall.

The Shed: Local flavor, old school style

Red chile sauce has been used in recipes for generations

The Old

Café

and Grill

810 S. Valley Drive 525-2636

By JEFF BARNET For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Gabriel Mendoza, owner of The Shed, comes from a family that for generations has had a passion for both cooking and building in the Mesilla Valley. Mendoza has combined both at The Shed at 810 S. Valley Drive, where he renovated the building, designed the interior and has developed a menu of creative, flavorful dishes.

His grandfather on his mother's side instilled in him the importance of flavor, he said.

"He used to take me to a little Mexican restaurant in Las Cruces and we'd have Mexican cocoa," Mendoza explained. "He'd analyze every flavor, every nuance."

Mendoza is a hands-on owner who likes to work in the kitchen, where he can taste the chile, he said.

We do red chile from the pod, old school. We take a dry chile pod, then it is sun-dried, rehydrated, then we remove the stems, blend it, strain it, then season it," he said, adding that this red chile recipe has been handed down for generations.

Green chile, freshly roasted, and red chile are found in The Shed's most popular items, such as the breakfast enchiladas, burritos, eggsadillas and eggs benedict, which features a red or green chile hollandaise sauce. Breakfast is served all day with items beginning at $6.99. And, yes, you can have green eggs and ham served with a creamy basil-pesto sauce. The Shed also has three different kinds of pancakes with six choices of added ingredients, including chocolate chips and pecans, starting at $3.

Lunch also is served all day, along with soups and salads, and every sandwich is made with one of The Shed's homemade breads. Mendoza said the fish tacos, made with sautéed talapia and blue corn tortillas, are very popular. Another favorite is the calabasita enchiladas made with three kinds of squash and diced green chile, he said. In addition, the restaurant offers a range of pasta dishes including basil pesto fettucini. Lunch items generally begin at $7.99. And Wednesday through Saturday only, The Shed makes nine kinds of wood-fired pizzas with fresh ingredients, beginning at $11.99.

The menu includes a wide range of both meat and vegetarian dishes, Mendoza said, including both a daily meat soup and a vegetarian soup.

The Shed offers many tasty dishes, but where else in town can one have green eggs and ham?

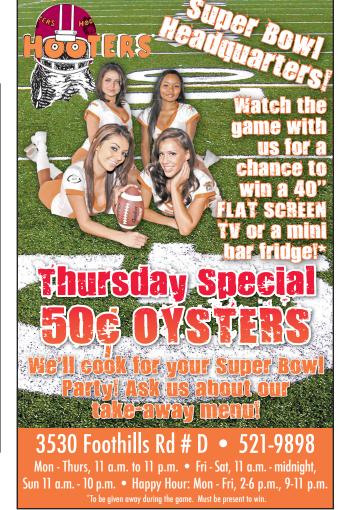

"Our soups are excellent," Mendoza said.
"Our posole is also very popular."

Wednesday-Sunday 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Mendoza explained that the eight kinds of breads he offers – including green chile-cheddar, rye and Parisian – are all made with organic grains and sweetened with local honey. The salads are made with either Romaine lettuce or spinach.

"We serve good food with quality ingredients," he said. "And to that we add good service. If you do that, people will come back.'

The Shed has a pleasing décor, designed by Mendoza, with corrugated tin both inside and out. The interior, with 16 tables, is brightly decorated with Southwest colors. In warm weather, Mendoza opens the 17-table outdoor patio shaded by traditional wooden latias.

Mendoza said he encourages Las Crucens to support local restaurants. "It's an eight-minute journey from Roadrunner to Valley, but I think it's worth the trip," he

Let's Talk Taxes GREETINGS FROM THE IRS

The mail has just arrived and there amidst all of those other bills and letters is a piece of correspondence from the Internal Revenue Service. A feeling of dread comes over you...

STEP ONE - DO NOT panic or toss it, and please DO open it. It might even be good news.

STEP TWO – Read the letter thoroughly.

STEP THREE – Determine what they are looking for. MAIL from the IRS is a notification that they need verification of documents or substantiation of an amount claimed on the tax return. It could be a simple matter: forgotten signature, missing attachment etc. you may be able to quickly and easily resolve the issue, IF NOT proceed to step four...

STEP FOUR – If you used a tax professional to prepare your return, you should contact that person for help immediately. If you prepared your own return or cannot reach the person that prepared your return you may wish to contact an Enrolled

An enrolled agent is, licensed by the US Department of the Treasury to represent taxpayers before the IRS for audits, collections and appeals. To attain the enrolled agent designation, candidates must demonstrate expertise in taxation, fulfill continuing education credits and adhere to a stringent code of ethics.

The biggest mistake taxpayers make is procrastinating getting help or even ignoring that correspondence hoping it will go away. Usually, penalties and interest will be added-so, the sooner you seek help, the less it will cost.

Now you're thinking, what about that possible good news mentioned earlier? An unexpected refund, of course. Now, open that letter!

Tax Consulting, Planning and Preparation all year round. Accounting and Operational services available.

Arrows fly in movie of epic proportions

'Red Cliff,' 'MI2' director Woo brilliantly depicts historic battle strategy used by the two opposing sides is brilliantly depicted ...

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

Wow! I don't think I'll ever see as many arrows in flight at one time ever again, as I did during several scenes of the comparatively exciting and sprawling John Woo-directed film, "Red Cliff."

This is a tale that takes place at the end of the Han Dynasty, which began in China in 206 B.C., after the defeat of the Qin, who are said to have had tyrannical rule over the people. "Red Cliff" is a blend of fact and fiction, which does falter a bit by not offering any historical overtones of how this war came to be.

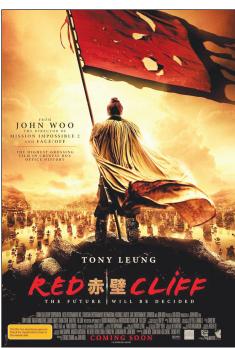

"Red Cliff" is the story of two factions, a David and Goliath situation, so to speak, that occurs when Cao Cao, a military leader for the emperor, convinces him that a good course of action for the failing dynasty would be to take on a pair of rebellious warlords, Afghanistan and Iraq, (oh, wait, file that under current events) Liu Bei and Sun Quan.

The warlords, who aren't exactly friendly, learn of the plan separately and are convinced by Liu Bei's brilliant and young strategist, Zhuge Liang, to join forces for the impending invasion. Add into this mix a fierce female warrior, along with a few stereotypes, and you have all of the trimmings for an epic movie.

In fact, the film is based on an epic and respected historical novel, "Romance of the Three Kingdoms." The original version of the film, which will probably never be released stateside, is more than 4 hours in length and the most expensive movie ever made in China, not to mention that it is the most commercially successful

Director Woo, whose U.S.made-films include such action-laced potboilers as "Hard Target" and "Mission Impossible II," apparently has ... an all-action-allgiven up on the fiasco that is Hollywood and returned to China to continue his career.

And he does well in this movie. Although the story is a bit slim, and it is of course an all-action-all-the-time piece, the strategy used by the two opposing sides is brilliantly depicted. Computer-generated-imagery, also called CGI, is used extensively, but with better effects than other films of this ilk. Particularly interesting is the use of weather and a plan hatched by Zhuge Liang when the arrow supply for his leaders is nearly depleted. The battles see-saw back and forth, and Woo's appetite for combat encompasses the 30-minute battle scene that concludes the film and the war.

Woo manages his characters well, and at times it does become a bit overwhelming in its scope and magnitude, but all in all, "Red Cliff" should keep you near the edge of your seat and perhaps make you curious enough to want to see the long version should it become available later. Make sure you buy a large popcorn for

'Lust in the Dust' sizzles under New Mexico skies

Remember Tab Hunter? Catch him in this western spoof

The CineMatinee for Saturday, Jan. 29, is "Lust in the Dust" (1985, 84 minutes, made in New Mexico).

After forming a match made in trash-movie heaven in John Waters' "Polyester," Tab Hunter and Divine reunited for this deliciously silly Western comedy, which borrows its title from the nickname for "Duel in the Sun," the turgid Western inspired director Paul Bartel's affectionate spoofery.

With Hunter wearing two hats as hero and coproducer, the movie indulges its own outrageous excess while staying true to the dustiest traditions of the Western genre. It's just good enough to watch without shame, and rude enough to hide from more likely to be offended members of the family.

Nothing's sacred in Chile Verde, N.M., the wild western town where lone gunman Abel Wood (Hunter) arrives after rescuing corpulent saloon singer Rosie Velez (Divine) from being defiled by Hard Case Williams (Geoffrey Lewis) and his gang of misfit gunslingers. Saloon owner Marguerita Ventura (Lainie Kazan) gets hot 'n' heavy for Abel, and passions flare up in a race for hidden treasure, the map to which is tattooed in two sections on Rosie's and Marguerita's ample posteriors.

To reveal more would spoil the wretched hilarity. One needn't love Westerns to enjoy this tawdry and bawdy comedy, but it helps if you know the legacy of screen villains such as Henry Silva, who is riotous here while barely shifting his vile expression. No doubt, this is the wackiest Western that ever cooked under the "blistering, burning, blazing, scorching, roasting, toasting, baking, boiling, broiling, steaming, searing, sizzling, grilling, smoldering, very hot" New Mexico sun.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m. and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theatre is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, please call 524-8287, and leave

Former wrestler still looks good in tights

'The Tooth Fairy' is a sweet, silly movie with a thoughtful message

By Kristine Sandrick The Las Cruces Bulletin

Four solid movie options this weekend and I chose something fun, "The Tooth Fairy." It's not in 3-D and there are no aliens battling earthlings to rule the universe, but I figured there would be no lines at the Allen Theatres on Saturday afternoon.

Wrong. There was a healthy line at Cineport10 and after snaking through the lobby to the ticket window I saw the sign, "The Tooth Fairy 4:35 show is SOLD OUT."

Huh. Really.*

The 2:10 p.m. show Sunday afternoon was packed with an all-ages audience. Dwayne Johnson, aka "The Rock," was the draw in the title role, along with Ashley Judd as Carly – his love interest – Julie Andrews as Lily, a sort of tooth fairy CEO, and Billy Crystal as the inventor of important tooth fairy paraphernalia. We're talking about your shrinking paste, a cat-away horn, barking mints and, of course, fairy dust that makes the sprinkled forget what they saw.

Johnson plays Derek Thompson, a hockey player who's created more of a following by knocking out opponent's incisors than knocking in goals, earning the big, tough jock the oxymoronic moniker.

Not a "believer" in much of anything, Thompson is stuck in the minors, dating Carly and on the verge of telling her 6-year-old daughter Tess there is no such thing as a tooth fairy when a summons pops out from under Tess's pillow to appear in tooth fairy land.

The 6-foot-4-inch hockey tough sprouts wings and a tutu – the latter because of a mix up in the male fairy outfits – and he's sentenced to two weeks of tooth fairy duty.

"The Tooth Fairy" takes us through silly fun twists and turns as a jock learns how to fly, sneak into kids' rooms to retrieve teeth and leave a buck without waking the children, parents or the cat. Thompson meets Crystal who equips him with a goody pouch filled with the aforementioned fairy products and Tracy, played by the tall, string bean Stephen Merchant.

Of course, what would a tooth fairy movie be without its lessons? While learning the ins and outs of tip-toeing into houses, the kindly but skeptical Thompson learns to believe in himself. More importantly, he learns not to squash – but rather to support – children's dreams.

OK, sure, Johnson can't act. But he seems to have fun with this role and takes the audience along with him. Besides, the audience gets to see "The Rock's" legs and with calves like that, who needs to act?

The story is delightful, fanciful and silly. And it has a lesson: that no matter how one feels about their circumstances, there's no point dumping that on a child.

As for the all-ages audience, there were a couple of dozen seats saved for kids who had a birthday party in the theater lobby, and three seniors sitting next to me. The lady next to me said she came to see the movie because, "I just think he's cute."

Just what the dentist ordered on a chilly Sunday afternoon.

*I went early Sunday to buy my ticket in advance. You can do that, you know, buy tickets when the box office opens for any movie that day

A quiet country retreat

Southwest home offers comfort and elegance

By BETH SITZLER The Las Cruces Bulletin

After living all over the world, Don and Torchy Brown said they knew exactly what they wanted from their Las Cruces home, at 5540 George Catlin Road.

Cruces home, at 5540 George Catlin Road.

After living in India, Phoenix and a few places in between, the couple said they wanted a quiet retreat that featured plenty of room to display their works of art, including tapestries they acquired from their travels to the Island of Rhodes and Turkey.

"We wanted to have plenty of wall space and we wanted our home to feel open," Torchy Brown said.

After viewing a home constructed by Twighlight Homes, Torchy Brown said they hired the company to build a home in 2004 with a similar floor plan but tweaked to fit their lifestyle.

"We enlarged the dining room, added the little seating area, made the master bathroom bigger," she said

"It's an elegant home and it's comfortable," Don Brown said. "It has a great layout."

Don Brown said they chose their lot, which sits atop a 5 acres hill in the Las Alturas area, because of its views and peace and quiet.

"It's country living, but it's very close to everything," Torchy Brown said. "That was the appeal of this lot."

"It seems like it is a ways out, but it is really easy to get to town," said Realtor Susan Kane with Steinborn Real Estate, who is representing the listing.

Country life was a top priority for the horse enthusiasts, who included a 30-by-40-foot, two-stall barrel and corral on their property built by GL Green.

Skylights are located throughout the home, including in the master bathroom.

go through fences. It's very open out here."

"The terrain is great for riding horses throughout the property," said Kane, adding that the barn can be converted into an office, workshop or another room to fit the new owners.

Guests to the 2,440-square-foot main house are greeted by a courtyard, which features several native plants and flowers and leads to the custom-made door from Albuquerque.

"The courtyard is my wife's," Don Brown said. "It looks great in the spring and fall. It's a nice place to have coffee in the morning."

"It has great color," said Torchy Brown, adding that she enjoys watching birds, rabbits, coyotes and other wildlife from the courtyard.

Designed with a split floor plan, the great room is the heart of the house. The great room was designed to accentuate the home's Southwest design. Pine beams and corbels divide the space from the entrance. Vigas and a tongue-and-groove pattern decorate the ceiling while a kiva fireplace warms the room.

"It's a very livable house. It's very open and it has a nice flow," Torchy Brown said. "We didn't want a house with a bunch of rooms. We wanted to have space."

Near the great room is the kitchen and dining area. Tile countertops and hickory cabinets envelop the kitchen, which includes a bar area, stainless steel appliances, a ceramic sink and an island with seating. A round wall of windows holds the dining room, enclosing guests in the scenic landscape.

Just beyond the eating area is the master suite. A door leads to the wrap-around patio, while the large bedroom's round walls transition seamlessly to the bathroom, which includes a Jacuzzi bathtub, walk-in shower with a bench and walk-in closet.

The other end of the home was designed to be a private guest area. A small seating area next to a large window is perfect for enjoying a hot drink, reading a book or simply taking in the view of the mountains.

"We just thought this was a nice area and a good way to use the space," Torchy Brown said. "It really is nice for company and gives them space outside of their rooms."

A round wall leads to the guest bathroom and two bedrooms. While the Browns are currently using one of the rooms as an office, both rooms can be transformed to fit the new owner's needs, Kane said.

Several doors lead to the wrap-around patio, which features not only a view of the Organs, but also of a new pecan orchard next door.

The Browns said they wanted a low-maintenance that reflected with the surrounding desert.

"We tried to keep our yard as natural as possible," Torchy Brown said.

Along with rock, the backyard features a variety of cacti, including Argentina cactus, which Don Brown said sprouts giant white blossoms. The backyard also features Mexican alders, while the front yard contains honey mesquite.

"We added a lot of cactuses and succulents to our landscape," Don Brown said.

While the Browns said they have lived in a similar Southwest-influenced home in Arizona, they have never had such a comfortable and spacious abode as this.

"Everyone who has been here says, 'You truly have a beautiful home," Don Brown said. "It's a beautiful, livable home."

Say goodbye to food waste

Handheld vacuum system prolongs the life of food

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

During a time of cutbacks and reduced spending, households are being more cautious with their hard-earned money, even in the grocery store.

According to a study by the University of Arizona, Americans waste $100 billion in food annually. Many factors contribute to this large amount of waste, the largest reason being food spoilage.

Perishable food items can deteriorate before the consumer has a chance to devour them. One way to extend the life of your food, which will save you money and reduce waste, is to use a handheld vacuum system when storing your food.

What is it?

The handheld vacuum system is a packaging process that removes air from specially designed storage containers and bags to extend the shelf life of foods. The system, which includes a compact vacuum appliance, works on food items that are stored in the refrigerator, freezer and pantry.

By removing air from the containers, which come in a variety of shapes and sizes, the natural oxidation process of food is reduced. Oxidation affects the nutritional value, flavor and overall quality of these items.

Removing the air can also discourage the growth of mold, yeast and bacteria.

While vacuum packaging doesn't completely stop foods from deteriorating, it does slow the process down, allowing these items to be enjoyed longer.

How does it work?

The handheld vacuum system is simple to use. After charging the vacuum appliance, place the food item – from fresh fruits to soups and breads – into either the specially designed bag or container, sealing the storage unit. Place the vacuum appliance over the valve and press the start button.

After the air has been removed, which takes about 10 seconds, store the item as usual.

Where can it be found?

The handheld vacuum system can be purchased at most kitchen-appliance stores, including Target and Bed, Bath & Beyond.

How much does it cost?

The price of the handheld food storage system depends on the brand. Most vacuum appliances are sold separately and cost between $20 and $40. Bags and containers also vary in price depending on quantity, and can be as little as $8 for 12 bags or as much as $35 for three containers.

Chocolate Chip Cookies

3/4 cup sugar
3/4 cup packed brown sugar
1 cup butter, softened
2 large eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
3/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups semisweet
chocolate chips
1 cup pecans or walnuts,
chopped, if desired

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Mix sugar, brown sugar, butter, vanilla and eggs in a large bowl by hand. Stir in flour, baking soda, and salt. The dough will be very stiff.

Stir in chocolate chips by hand. Pecans, walnuts or other nuts, can be added at this time if desired. Keep stirring and folding the chocolate chips and nuts into the dough until they are evenly dispersed.

Drop dough by rounded tablespoonfuls 2 inches apart onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 8 to 10 minutes or until light brown. Let them cool completely before removing from the cookie sheet. (Recipe adapted from www.popularcookierecipes.com.)

Helpful hints:

Package fresh, perishable foods soon after they are purchased.

To keep hard cheese fresh, vacuum package it after each use. Soft cheeses, however, should never be vacuumed packaged.

While the vacuum system bags are great for meats, fruits and vegetables, liquids and powders should be stored in the containers. Soft or airy baked goods, such as muffins, should also be packaged in a container so they can retain their shape.

Package cookie dough and freeze to enjoy later.

Swap seeds at new MVM event

Seed Share promotes gardening, biodiversity

By Beth Sitzler

To promote local biodiversity and get Las Crucens excited about gardening, Mountain View Market and Local Solutions will host a Seed Share from noon to 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 31, at 1300 El Paseo Road, Suite M, in the Community Room.

During the Seed Share, members of the community will be able to drop off their leftover seeds and browse other seeds, taking what they please to plant at home.

"It's an opportunity to get people excited about gardening in the spring," Mountain View Market volunteer Jon Simmons said about the event.

Simmons said there are several benefits to planting a home garden.

"Growing your own food is satisfying on so many levels," he said. "You can grow varieties not found in the grocery store."

Along with producing tasty treats, Simmons said home gardens relieve part of the food-system strain and use less resources than commercially grown produce.

While the free event is designed to get the public excited about gardening, it also will help the spread of

"By exchanging seeds, we are producing more successful crops because the plants are better adapted to our climate," Simmons said.

More winter stuff

There is still time to prepare your home's plants for spring

Your winter work isn't over yet. Here is a list of things to do and not to do.

Do not prune wisteria, lilac, flowering quince, for-sythia or any other early spring flowering plants or trees. If you do, you may lose most or all of the spring show these plants have to offer. The best time to prune these beauties is after they have flowered.

You definitely do not want to cut off the flower buds that are developing during this time of year. If you have had trouble getting these shrubs to flower, you may want to apply super phosphate or triple super phosphate as soon as possible. This nutrient will help plants produce blossoms, whether it is a flowering or fruiting tree

Do not water your lawn and garden the same way you have been watering during the summer months. I still hear of people who have not changed their timers from last year. As a rule, you can water dormant Bermuda grass, trees and shrubs twice per month during the winter months. Yes, you should still water dormant plants, trees and grass if we have had no recent rain fall

Do not fertilize warm season lawns, such as Bermuda, at this time, even if the days seem very warm. Your lawn will not green up during these cold months. If you have had trouble with winter weeds, in the past you can use a pre-emergent at this time that does not contain fertilizer. The optimum time to fertilize warm season lawns is late

If you have a cool-season lawn, such as fescue or rye, you can fertilize now to get it back to that "spring green" color. You can use 16-8-8, or any other lawn fertilizer. If you have had early weeds spring up last year in late winter, now would be great time to use a pre-emergent herbicide on your cool season lawn. Pre-emergent herbicides are available with or without fertilizer, in liquid and granular form.

You can prune your roses any time between now and Valentine's Day. Be sure to remove any dead or diseased plant tissue. Try to "open up" the center of the rose bush. This will help increase air circulation and allow sunlight to enter the center of the plant, which will help with flower health. The Rose Society recommends using Elmer's

You definitely do not want to cut off the flower buds that are developing during this time of year.

GARY GUZMAN The Gardening Guru

Water dormant lawns, trees, shrubs and flowers less during winter than you would in the summer time.

Glue instead of pruning sealer for the newly cut limbs. Remove any leaves that have fallen or that are still on the limbs, especially if they had powdery mildew or insects. You can apply dormant oil after they have been pruned and cleaned. There are systemic insecticides and or fungicides available to help prevent the infestation of insects or diseases, which can be used now.

You can also prune just about any other shade tree or shrub that is not mentioned above. This includes ash, oak, mimosa, golden rain tree, crape myrtle, mesquite and so on and so on. As a rule, you want to have these plants pruned before they leaf out this spring. You can fertilize them when you see new growth emerging. Please follow the recommended amounts listed on the label when applying fertilizer or any other chemical.

Not just any old fence or gate

Torres Welding creates ornate and functional home pieces

By Beth Sitzler

In 1983, Sam and Cindy Torres began a welding company in a 30-by-30-foot shop. Now, 27 years later, Torres Welding Inc. has grown into a 10-employee business located in an 8,500-square-foot facility at 3885 Tierra

When he was in the National Guard, Las Cruces native Sam Torres attended welding school after basic training. He then used that training in the automotive industry before pursuing a career in welding.

"I worked at different firms and learned on the job how to manufacture," he said, adding that most of his experience was in general welding, which includes heavy steel structures.

After Sam Torres spent several years working for other companies as a foreman and supervisor, Cindy Torres, who worked as a bookkeeper, said her husband of 33 years came home one day and declared that he was going to start his own welding business.

"We had $500 in our checking account," she said with a laugh. "But it was time to start our own business."

Welding a reputation

When Torres Welding Inc. first began, Sam Torres said he was a one-man team, receiving help only from his wife. He said he didn't own the right equipment to conduct large jobs like he had in the past. Instead, the company began fabricating decorative doors, spiral staircases, fencing, railing and gates, and it soon found its niche in the ornate welding market.

"There was a need in Las Cruces for ornate welding," he said. "No one else was doing it, so we took it over."

As time passed, the company's popularity grew and the couple began hiring additional staff and taking on larger projects. Now, along with ornamental iron, Torres Welding Inc. also conducts general welding and custom fabrications.

"Being able to diversify has kept us alive," Cindy Torres said. "We do a variety of welding.

Sam Torres' work can be seen throughout the area, including Ruidoso, Deming and Hatch, N.M., as well as El Paso. In town, the company has fabricated ornamental iron for George Rawson, owner of Pueblo Builders and developer of Sonoma Ranch, as well as several gated communities in Picacho Hills. Currently, they are creating ornamental iron fencing for the new Premier Distributing Budweiser plant and a metal building addition for Wendell Hull and Associates.

Working mostly with repeat customers and referrals, the Torreses said customer satisfaction is their top priority.

"We take pride in what

Sam and Cindy Torres began their welding company 26 years ago.

we do," Sam Torres said. "We strive to do good, quality work. We want to make the customer happy. If they call with a problem, we go out and fix it right away. We take care of our customers.'

Sam Torres said each customer has different wants and needs, and with the motto "If you can imagine it, we can create it," Torres Welding Inc. works to fulfill those expectations. After talking with the customer and making a sketch of the piece, the Torres Welding crew then cuts, welds, paints, assembles and installs the piece.

Most jobs, he said, take about a week to fabricate, paint and install. This process is now easier, thanks to the shop's hardworking staff.

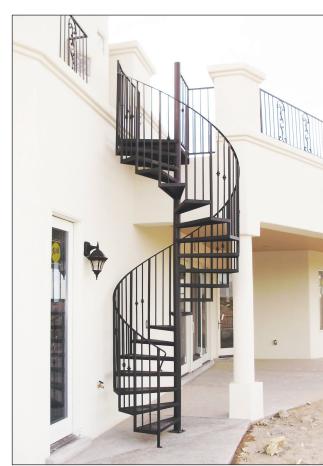

"We strive for teamwork," Cindy Torres said. "If we don't work together, a project isn't going to be a success. One guy can't do an entire project. Everyone pulls together to get the job done.'

Cindy Torres said most of the employees have been with the company for several years.

"Our shop foreman, Chance Thedford, has been with us for 10 years and he always gives 110 percent," she said

"We're picky on who our employees are and the quality of work they do," Sam Torres said.

With a reputation of hard work and a quality product, the Torreses said they were given the opportunity 10 years ago to construct a 20-by-8-by-30-foot memorial for St. Genevieve's Catholic Church, across the Rio Grande Theatre in the Downtown area.

Torres Welding Inc. was approached by Randy Farmer, a long-term customer, about the project.

"An artist drew the sketch and we did the fabrication from there," said Sam Torres, who was baptized in the church.

The quality of their work has also won the company several awards from the Home and Garden Show, held annually by the Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico, including Public's Choice in 2004 and 2005, and the Judge's Award for Best Business Representative in 2004 and 2007.

Life outside the shop

For the Las Cruces couple, their company has allowed them to make a better life for their family, including their sons Steven and Anthony.

While Sam Torres said the only art training he had was in middle and high school art classes, he has always loved working with his hands. Along with welding, Torres said he expresses himself artistically through building hot rods and drag racing cars.
"I consider it an art form," he said, adding that one of his cars has been featured on "Pass Time," a drag racing show on the Speed Channel Cable Network.

Along with building a successful welding business and raising two sons, the Torreses said they are proud of Picacho West Mini and RV Storage, a commercial storage facility the couple built seven years ago.

Welding, however, is still their pride and joy.

"(The most rewarding aspect of our job) is seeing the quality of the finished product," Cindy Torres said.

"For me, it's hearing the customers say they really appreciate our work," Sam Torres said.

Growing over the past 27 years, the Torreses said they are grateful for all of the opportunities they have been

"(The biggest challenge) is not knowing where the next job is coming from," Cindy Torres said. "You never know if it is going to be feast or famine. The business has taken care of us all of these years.'

The Torreses said they plan to continue growing the business and their standards of professionalism and customer satisfaction.

"We're going to continue to serve the people of Las Cruces with quality work," Sam Torres said.

Torres Welding Inc. also creates decorative doors.

Saving Las Cruces history

DACC students work to restore Phillips Chapel

By BETH SITZLER The Las Cruces Bulletin

Editor's note: This article is the first in a series following the restoration of Phillips Chapel CME Church, constructed in 1911 on North Tornillo Street.

Las Cruces is full of rich history, from the Mesquite Historic District to the old Santa Fe Depot, now the Las Cruces Railroad Museum. This history, however, is quickly deteriorating as century-old buildings fall into disrepair.

One such structure is the Phillips Chapel Christian Methodist Episcopal (CME) Church, 638 N. Tornillo St. Still an active church, the adobe building has begun to fall apart at the seams.

To save the historic building, a local team has joined together with the help of community members and experts to restore and preserve the structure. The Phillips Restoration Committee consists of Beth O'Leary, anthropology professor at New Mexico State University;

A quick history

Phillips Chapel CME Church, constructed in 1911, was founded by Daniel and Ollie Hilber and was the only African American church in Las Cruces for several years.

"My granddad bought this lot for $45," said Fielder, grandson of the church's founders, during a church celebration in October 2009.

Playing an important role in Las Cruces' history, Fielder said in the mid-1920s, after the city chose to segregate its schools, the church was transformed into Lincoln High School to accommodate African American students until Booker T. Washington Elementary was built in 1934.

With the help of NMSU anthropology graduate student Terry Moody, Phillips Chapel CME Church was placed on the New Mexico State Register of Cultural Properties and professor and church steward.

the National Register of Historic Places in 2003.

Although the history of the church has been recognized locally and nationally, the small adobe structure has slowly deteriorated over the years. Grass has even sprouted in the walls' cracks and crevices.
Often, Ron Taylor said, people don't know how to prop-

Taylor on board.

"If we screw up, it will no longer be 'historic," Pat Taylor told his class Friday, Jan. 22.

Pat Taylor, who has worked with adobe for 30 years and is with the Cornerstone Community Partnership in Santa Fe, said many adobe structures fall apart because they are covered with cement, which traps moisture.

"Adobe is like a sponge and the water has to go some-

He said he will show students the correct way to treat adobe so moisture is released and also will give them a better understanding of the material's naturally occurring wet/dry cycle. He added that the restoration project will be based on the preservation efforts of the San Miguel Chapel in Santa Fe.

The first task the class faces is conducting a conditions assessment and preservation plan. This includes evaluating damage as well as researching the building's historic context, which will require hours of looking through archived photographs and documents to note changes in the structure.

"If we don't do this homework, we're working blind," he said. "We must know what early conditions of the building were so we can understand our approach.

Fiumara, who is taking the course and will lend his painting expertise, said they recently tested the moisture content of the church's structure to see if any damage has occurred to the lower brick.

"It starts from the foundation up," Ron Taylor said.

"The basic problem these structures have is the moisture is rising and isn't able to escape readily through the cement plaster," Pat Taylor said, adding that most place cement on water-damaged areas, causing the moisture to move throughout the building until the walls collapse under the weight. "It's literally drowning the walls."

With a class of 18 students ranging in age from lateteens to early-70s, Ron Taylor and Fiumara said each have their own reasons for taking the course.

For David Chavez, president of Las Esperanzas, a society devoted to the preservation of the Mesquite Historic District, his desire stems from wanting to learn more about his beloved neighborhood.

"It's fantastic. I'm having a blast," Chavez said. "It's way overdue. It's an opportunity for us to see what we can do in the Mesquite Historic District and throughout the Southwest.

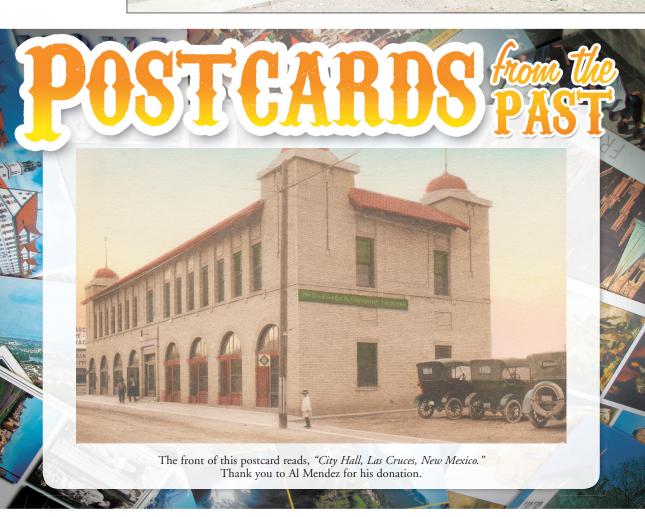

Chavez added that the class is very lucky to have Pat Taylor as an instructor, who is very well versed in this

"We're going to walk out with a lot of knowledge and will have a better appreciation for these structures," he said.

Ron Taylor said the community has been generous by donating funds, services and materials, including ACME and Rio Grande Rock.

Since the project is self-funded, Ron Taylor said they are still in need of help. Donations can be mailed to Phillips Chapel CME Church, C/O Clarence Fielder, 640 N. Almendra St., Las Cruces, NM 88001.

Selling your home?

Easy improvements can attract buyers

Real estate pros often coach their clients on the value of making "curb appeal" improvements to help sell their homes. Outside painting and minor repairs signal that the house has been well maintained.

That's a great marketing tactic, but an even better advantage is offering multiple bathrooms. So, if you're planning to put your house on the market and want to make it stand out, consider going a step further and adding a new bathroom.

A spare bath is a great investment. Second only to kitchen remodels for recouping resale value, bathroom additions boast a 63.5 percent rate of return, according to Remodeling Magazine's 2008-09 "Cost vs. Value" report. And when an up-flushing, macerating toilet – or "up toilet" – is used for the project, its comparatively lowinstalled cost makes a bathroom addition very affordable.

An up toilet can be installed virtually anywhere in the home. That's because this type of plumbing system operates above the floor, using small-diameter piping to pump waste and water up, not down, and into sewer or septic lines. As a consequence, there is no need for the mess and heavy expense of digging through flooring, especially the concrete variety in the basement.

"An up toilet is a super alternative, and it can go where traditional plumbing cannot," said Mike Coletto, an independent plumbing, heating, cooling and electrical contractor in Illinois with extensive experience installing and servicing up toilets manufactured by SFA Saniflo.

Macerating technology is ideal for adding a bath in tight spots, Coletto said, such as under a stairway or inside a closet. The simple installation process drives the cost

"With no digging," Coletto said, "I can install a Saniflo system in about half a day."

Best of all, this type of home renovation reaps instant rewards, improving the quality of life now and paying dividends

So, if you are thinking of selling your home, now is the time to plan your new bath installation. Last year's first-time homebuyer tax credit fueled an impressive increase in the home-resale market. The incentive helped drive year-

- Pick up debris and store trash cans out
- Install new bulbs in porch and security lighting.

- Check bricks and pavers for cracks. Replace them and reset any that are
- Patch worn or cracked asphalt or cement in the driveway.
- Edge grass and remove weeds that may have grown over walkways.
- Repaint the front door and freshen up chipped and peeling paint trim.
- Clean and polish the brass on door-knobs and lock housings, or replace them if severely tarnished.
- Replace any broken glass panes.
- Clean out gutters and downspouts.

Take chalk out of the classroom

Clean, repel ants with this artistic material

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Since the 1800s, blackboards and sidewalks around the world have been decorated with chalk.

Traditionally, blackboard chalk was created from natural chalk, which is composed mostly of calcium carbonate with small amounts of silt and clay, and came in either white or yellow. Nowadays, the sticks are made from gypsum, which contains calcium sulfate, and come in a rainbow of colors.

Sidewalk chalk – the same as blackboard chalk, only bigger – has been used by unconventional artists for years to create breathtaking and eye-catching drawings in unlikely places.

Even if you aren't an artist or teacher, chalk is a handy item to keep around the home. Use this schoolhouse staple in a variety of unexpected ways.

1. Stop ants: Use chalk to create a barrier around your home that will keep out invading ants. Draw chalk lines around windows and doors on the outside of your home, and around water pipes inside your home. The calcium carbonate, a nontoxic substance, will repel the tiny insects. Ground chalk can also be sprinkled around garden plants to keep ants and slugs at bay.

2. Clean clothing: Grease stains and collar rings can ruin any piece of clothing. Save these garments with the help of chalk. Heavily mark that ring around the collar with white chalk. The chalk will absorb the sebum oil holding the dirt to the shirt. For grease stains, rub the chalk on the spot and let it absorb into the fabric before brushing it off. Repeat this until the stain is gone, then wash the item as usual.

3. Deter tarnishing: As time goes on and silverware becomes exposed to air and food particles, the utensils will begin to tarnish. One way to slow down this inevitable occurrence is to store the silverware with a piece of white chalk. The chalk will absorb moisture and airborne particles. This trick also works with costume jewelry and tools by placing a piece of chalk inside their containers.

4. Restore white suede: Unsightly marks on white suede, such as scuffs and spots, can be covered with the help of chalk. Rub the area with a piece of white chalk and watch the smudge disappear.

5. Prevent closet mildew: To prevent moisture from collecting in your closets that can lead to mildew, tie several pieces of chalk to pieces of string and attach them to a closet rod. The chalk will absorb surrounding moisture

Around-the-house item: Chalk and leave your closet dry as a whistle. Be sure to replace the chalk every few months for the best results.

6. Keep a screwdriver in its place: A nuisance to any handyman is a slipping screwdriver head. Help the screwdriver stay in place by rubbing the end with chalk. The chalk will allow the head to grip the screw, making turning much easier.

7. Polish marble and metals: Make your marble countertops and metal sinks sparkle by cleaning them with chalk. Use a mortar and pestle to grind several sticks of chalk into a powder. Dip a soft cloth in the powder and wipe the marble or metal surface. Rinse with clean water and dry thoroughly.

8. Recycle it: Do you have tiny stubs of chalk cluttering a drawer? Rather than throwing them away, use them to create one big, rainbow stick. Shave down the chalk pieces into a powder, or crush them using a mortar and pestle. Add less than a cup of water to the powder and mix. Pour the mixture into a mold or shape it with your hands. After it dries, the chalk can be used to create art on your sidewalk or driveway.

9. Create your own wrapping paper: Make a special statement by fabricating your own marbleized wrapping paper. Add some water to a shallow basin that is large enough to fit a standard piece of paper. Use a butter knife to cut the chalk into flakes and add them to the basin. Quickly dip a piece of paper into the basin and let it dry. You can use a blow dryer to speed up the process. After the sheet has dried, spray a layer of hair spray to set the chalk.

Plaster of Paris Chalk

Plaster of Paris Tempera paint (liquid or powder)

Find a large container to mix the plaster in and a few smaller ones to mold the chalk in. Paper cups and egg cartons work well for molding the chalk.

Wear plastic gloves to protect your hands and do not breathe in the plaster dust. Mix a small amount of plaster of Paris with water in a sturdy container (a disposable plastic container is the easiest). The plaster should be stiff, but creamy. Use a stirrer to mix, never your hands.

Add a small amount of tempera paint to the plaster. Stir well for a solid color or only slightly for a marbled look. For an even more marbled look, add two or more colors of paint to different sides of the container and stir only partly.

Pour the plaster into containers. When the plaster of Paris hardens (in about 20 to 30 minutes), take the chalk out of the containers. It won't be completely dry for about a day, but you can use the chalk as soon as it comes out. (Recipe adapted from www.enchantedlearning.com.)

Eggshell Chalk

8 eggshells

1 teaspoon hot water

1 teaspoon flour

Wash the eggshells and let dry completely. Grind up the eggshells using a mortar and pestle until it is a fine powder. Pick out any bits of shell that are not ground. Combine the water and flour in a bowl until they form a smooth paste. Stir in the powdered eggshells and mix well. Add a drop of food color for colored chalk, if desired. Form mixture into a ball or log. Place on waxed paper and let dry for three days. When chalk is dry, it may be used to draw on sidewalks or other concrete surfaces. Who will be the horsefly of the Super Bowl?

Although persistent, this insect is important to flowers

The Super Bowl match-up between the Indianapolis Colts and the New Orleans Saints poses an important question: Will the Colts feel the Saints' sting like a horsefly they can't shake? Or will they easily swipe them away and claim the championship?

I'm sorry fans. I have no crystal ball and can't help you with that question. I can, however, tell you every-thing you ever wanted to know about the horsefly.

No groans of disappointment, please. These insects can quickly draw all your attention if they bite you whether you're a horse or a human.

noisiest of flies, so you can see and hear them heading your way as well. Unlike some bugs that have more of a stinger, horseflies have mandibles that rip or cut the - sometimes actually taking out a chunk of skin. Once they do the damage, they lick up their victims' blood. It won't make you feel any better to know that the females need a blood meal to reproduce.

Here's some more bad news: Horseflies are present around the world. And their virtue - I know, it's hard to believe - is that they're an important pollinator of as gadflies, a term the dictionary defines as somebody regarded as persistently annoying or irritating. We'll find out a week from Sunday which team – the Colts or the Saints – better earns the distinction.
