NM ideal for 'green jobs'

Udall tours algae fuel R&D plant in city's West Mesa

By Todd G. Dickson

Though U.S. Sen. Tom Udall had gone to bat to support Sapphire Energy's algaebased biofuel research, the New Mexico Democrat saw firsthand Tuesday, Aug. 17, the company's research and development facility at the Las Cruces West Mesa Industrial Park.

Because fuel made from the oil produced by algae has promise to reduce greenhouse gases and U.S. dependency on imported oil, it comes as no surprise that Udall would support developing technology to make algae-based fuel re-fining economically viable. And early that day, Udall touted the promise of "green jobs" for the state's economic future.

But there is something about seeing the culture dishes, beakers, jugs, bags and pools at work – all the while with Sapphire New Mexico Operations Manager Bryn Davis pointing out how nearly all the facility's 27 workers were from the state - that makes the promise less intellectual.

"This tells you we have a great oppor-tunity here to provide the clean-energy jobs of the future," Udall said after the tour.

That future for New Mexico is as verdant as the algae being grown at the Sapphire operation, according to speakers at an economic forum sponsored by the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce and Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, along with the New Voices for Business organization.

State Economic Development Secre-tary Fred Mondragón said New Mexico is one of the top-ranked states for renewable-energy efforts of solar and wind, along with algae-based fuels and biomass gas production. That's why it shouldn't be surprising to learn that "green jobs" is one of the fastest growth areas seen in the states, Mondragón said.

This sends a strong message that New Mexico is the place for green energy," he said.

NMSU starts anew Couture inaugurated as students return

By Todd G. Dickson

From moving boxes and merriment to classical music and a vision of the new era ahead, New Mexico State University was abuzz with activity even before its 19,000 students returned to classes Thursday, Aug. 19.

The week began with students moving into the dorms Sunday, Aug. 15, with assistance from community volunteers. In a way, that support from the community carried over in the theme of NMSU President Barbara Cou-ture's inauguration: "A New Era of Excellence through Partnership.'

Fulfilling that goal will be a challenge, Cou-ture acknowledged. NMSU is heading into an era facing greater demands of the university during a time of constricted state government support, she said.

That increased demand is more acutely seen through the land-grant institution's missions of research, and training a working class in a world where many future jobs are being created from developments in technology and the alternative energy industry.

That will require the NMSU community to find efficient and effective ways to accomplish those missions, Couture said, with greater sup-port from private industry and benefactors.

She recognized that the state is pushing New Mexico's higher education entrance standards as a cost-saving measure, but she added that high schools need to do a better job of preparing their graduates. Likewise, all campus departments will be tasked with finding barriers to student access and success, which will include a mid-semester review of freshmen progress and an effort to help new students settle on a major at an earlier time.

A zone change for Pro's Ranch Market on El Paseo Road is expected to be passed by the Las Cruces City Council when it meets at 1 p.m. Monday, Aug.

23, at City Hall. Though the economic doldrums set back the Hispanic supermarket from its original plans to open this summer, Pro's Ranch Market is getting a jump start with redevelopment loans from the Bank of Albuquerque and US Bank through the federal New Markets Tax Credit Loan Program.

That's good news for the El Paseo retail corridor revitalization efforts recently initiated, according to Councillor Nathan Small.

Pro's Ranch Market will be in a building that once housed the Community Action Agency of Southern New Mexico and had previously been a grocery supermarket. Its opening is seen as a catalyst to getting more retail stores opening in the El Paseo Plaza near the Wyatt Drive intersection, as well as along the main section of El Paseo.

Mike Provenzano, Pro's Market CEO, praised Small and city development officials for providing support to make the financing efforts successful.

"Their team and our team are working well together to bring jobs to the downtown areas,"

Provenzano said.

Stephanie Sanders, NAI 1st Valley property manager, said a number of new tenants also have signed leases for the El Paseo Plaza, including Melrose Fashions, La Casa de Vaquero

Besides bringing more retail activity to the El Paseo corridor, Pro's Ranch plans to hire 250 people just before the 2011 opening.

Pro's Ranch Markets is one of the fastest-growing Hispanic supermarket chains in the country. Since the first market opened in 1997 in central California, the company now has locations in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Pro's will feature a carniceria, panaderia with specialty pastry chefs, a cevicheria, tortilleria and a wide selection of other imported food and candy from Mexico.

Sometimes there are some really complicated ideas that can be best expressed with a simple quotation

People who know me well, also know that I like to illustrate an important point by telling a story. And those same people also know from experience that sometimes my stories will get pretty long. So, in order to enhance productivity (and avoid absolute boredom), I have tried to shorten my "teaching moments" by drawing upon a storehouse of succinct quotations. Some are attributed to famous people. Some are anonymous. Here are some of my favorites from politicians, humorists and famous philosophers. Hope you enjoy.

unnecessary and cruel On behalf of our members and supporters in Las Cruces and throughout the nation, we wish to comment on a column that is a classic example of what is wrong with our relationship to the natural world. Our comments address the needlessly violent reaction of the au-thor against a harmless snake who he described as acting "stiff, and likely, quite dead." Using such outrageous descriptions such as "fire-breathing serpent" and "evil," the author described gleefully how he killed a snake who would have done him no harm. Ludicrously proclaiming that "neighborhood women, children and small pets were saved," he admitted to an act of cruelty so egregious that it should be against the law.

People who are intolerant of wildlife would perhaps be more comfortable living on the 50th floor of a New York City apartment building where they would not encounter helpless native wildlife and be moved to unreasonably violent reactions.

Achieve tax fairness with sales tax

In a letter from Patti Graff in the Las Cruces Bulletin Friday, Aug. 13, she claims "there is nothing in our legal system that declares that some people are more important than other people as far as taxes are concerned."

Well Patti, then why is it that people who made more than $100,000 paid more than 75 percent of the total taxes collected in 2008, yet they comprise only 15 percent of all tax returns filed? The source of this data is directly from the IRS website.

Using your argument, then those other 85 percent of tax returns are getting some sort of legal benefit.

Would you support a more fair way of levying tax?

How about a tax system that abolishes all federal personal and corporate income taxes, gift, estate, capital gains, alternative minimum, Social Security, Medicare and self-employment taxes and replaces them with one simple, visible, federal retail sales tax administered primarily by existing state sales tax authorities

Those interested in such a plan should visit www.fairtax.org. It truly is enlightening.

Beam me up Governor Bill MainStreet New Mexico celebrates anniversary

If you think Gov. Bill Richardson has done some pretty weird things the past seven years, wait until you hear what he did 40 years ago as he began his career in government.

According to Andrew Basiago, Richardson was a young staff member for a secret federal government agency called Project Pegasus. The project teleported, Star-Trek style, child test subjects from New Jersey to the grounds of the New Mexico state capitol complex in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

According to Basiago, former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, now a Taos-area resident, headed the program. All we're told about Richardson is that he took roll for the adolescent astronauts in New Jersey.

Basiago has appeared on at least one late-night national radio show telling his strange story. Evidently, it was through this project that Richardson and Rumsfeld became attached to New Mexico.

Something about Project Pegasus seemed vaguely familiar to me so I Googled it. It's straight out of Captain Marvel comics.

That casino Jemez Pueblo wants to build between Las Cruces and El Paso is back in the news. It seems the Obama administration is taking a second look at some of the Indian gaming proposals rejected by the Bush administration.

This will make big Bill Richardson contributor Gerald Peters very happy. And it would be very bad news for Sunland Park racing owner Stan Fulton, who has gone to great lengths to keep competition out of the area.

Besides Santa Fe businessman Gerald Peters, Ruidoso Downs owner R.D. Hubbard has looked longingly at the area's big population base.

Ālso casting an eye on the area is the Fort Sill Apache Tribe from Oklahoma. The tribe has tried to start gambling operations at Akela, between Las Cruces and Deming.

That used to be the tribe's homeland back in the days of Geronimo before it was relocated to Florida and then Oklahoma. Don't be surprised to see the tribe make another effort.

The Fort Sill tribe isn't as tied to New Mexico, however, when it comes to the attempt by some of its members to move Geronimo's remains back to New Mexico.

When I first got into this business 23 years ago, MainStreet New Mexico was just getting started. I was impressed with the program because communities around the state were so enthusiastic about its possibilities.

Back then, Ursula Boatright ran the program out of Lt. Gov. Walter Bradley's office. Now, it is 25 years old and has helped create more than 2,700 new businesses and more than 9,300 jobs across the state.

The program celebrated its silver anniversary last week with

Graff's attitude is destructive

In the Aug. 13 edition of the Bulletin, Patti Graff displays an attitude that will, if continued by the American left, destroy our way of life.

She blames everything on Republicans and those who are not paying their "fair share" of hauling this huge monstrosity of a country we have created. We are on a collision course with disaster.

The problem is not the Bush tax cuts, it is bureaucratic policies fostered by both parties, each trying to hold on to its territory at the expense of the public good. The inefficient manner in which the oil disaster and Katrina were handled by bloated bureaucracies that had to follow their rules made these disasters worse.

Now, Louisiana loses again because the president has declared a moratorium on oil drilling in the gulf.

Graff is wrapped up in her party's talking points and, like many citizens, doesn't get it that the problem is not about the upper brackets being taxed. It is about where that money goes. She fails to mention that about half of the population on the lower end of the scale pay no taxes or get rebates from those who do.

We are fast approaching a time when inflation and poor political reasoning will take us to a point that we will not be able to afford fuel to take us on the wonderful highways the stimulus money is now providing. We will all be broke.

But hey, isn't that redistribution at its finest?

Quick, what is the purpose of the streets in our little slice of heaven? It is to get the citizens of our little burg to where each of us is going in the safest and most efficient manner. Note that safest is said before efficient in that sentence and hopefully in the design of our city streets. We want, we need and we demand safety as we travel the streets. Safety engineers have spent decades working on mak-ing us safer. While there is the danger of college students who have a testosterone-to-brains imbalance, most of us avoid that part of town when the students are back.

What we cannot avoid is that people have purposefully made the streets of our town ever so much more dangerous, and they will be downright crabby if we complain about their actions.

I can stand the criticism much more than I can stand needless deaths on our city streets. Lives are at stake, and no one seems to care about a real danger. There are some people in our community who are not keeping their eyes on the prize of safety; rather, they want beauty instead of safety. And that is the rub.

I am talking about the medians that separate the two directions of travel on our divided streets. It seems someone got the bright idea that those medians should be "improved" by trees, rocks and boulders like they are someone's front yard.

I like trees, rocks and boulders, but not in the median.

The median of divided streets is specifically constructed to give drivers safety space in case "stuff" happens. Example: every so often, people on motorcycles will tell you a driver in a car is inattentive and attempts to violate a rule of physics whereby two objects should not try to be at the same place at the same time.

> 2010 SEPT. 24-26 SPACE IS LIMITED FOR VENDORS!

> > The vendor application must be filled out completely and returned with full payment. Money orders and cashier's checks are acceptable methods of payment. Cash or Check's will not be accepted.

It will be off Solano and Hadley. Applications will only be accepted via mail ONLY. Spaces will be 10 x 10 only. Anything bigger will require you to pay for 2 spaces. All spaces will be assigned in the order they are received.

If you have any questions please feel free to contact: Barbara Head | (575) 644.6491 barbarahead@erdhcpa.com

ENCHILADAFIESTA.COM

The driver of the motorcycle can just let the car run over them or move out of the way by driving onto the median long enough to escape. If someone jaunts into your lane, you just move over into the median out of the way.

That is unless you are in a city where as a beautification project people have been putting trees, rocks and boulders in the median. For days, weeks, months and years it is somewhat nice to have trees and boulders in the median to look at as we drive by. Then one day - blam - someone hits a ton of boulder instead of just free space.

Maybe the leaders of our fine city should rethink putting anything in the medians that would hurt if you hit it. This is a test of thinking: if people say we need the beauty and it only kills a couple people a year, we need to remove them from a position of leadership. If they admit they had not thought of it and now that they do they see how dangerous this is, well, pat them on the back and support them.

Likewise, the city has been trying to get a grip on the sign ordinance.

The sticking point is that they want signs that are not distract-ing. Hello! No business wants a sign that is not distracting. But that is why the City Council gets the big bucks to think carefully.

Obviously, the component of safety must be included in the sign ordinance. Finally, the cell phone ban: The City Council thinks using a cell phone while driving is more dangerous than DWI and then said City Council lowers the price of the citation because they have been getting complaints. Well, what is the prize we want? Safety. Many of the traffic laws were initially tied to safety. But the city has come to depend on the revenue from the tickets, which seems a bit strange

If they truly want people to stop offending, collecting a nuisance tax does not get it done. It just does not look right for the kids. They think we are stupid and they are right. We say our first goal is safety, and then we do all of these other things instead of focusing on safety.

I worked for a big cattle company in the northwest and we kept "cookhouse pigs" for the crew. Every spring, 30 or so little weaner pigs were brought from the sale barn and put in our pig facility, a long steel Quonset hut. I knew enough to vaccinate them for Erysipelas, but I put off castration until the summer help, my annual vet-erinary student, arrived. As soon as he got settled in I put him together with a strong Basque sheepherder named Juan Garay and led him to the Quonset.

I would stay long enough to demonstrate on the first one, then I left the eager student with Juan to finish the job. You could hear the ruckus two miles down the road. It must have stuck in my mind because years later I found myself describing my first big rock concert as "A cross between Cape Canaveral and castrating pigs in a metal building!

Which brings me to my Wyoming friends, Louie and Ann and their experience with squealing shoats. Louie's hired man wanted to raise some feedlot pigs for his freezer. Louie worked at the sale barn so the next Thursday he brought home five little piglets weighing in at 10 pounds each. The hired man was pleased and said he could take couple more if they came available.

Next Monday, for the special feeder cattle sale, Louie's wife Ann came along to help with the books. Since it was bitter cold they took the good truck because the heater worked better. During the day a cattleman showed up with a little piglet he had caught running wild in his feed bunks. Louie thought, how fortuitous! He gave the man five bucks. The hired man would be pleased. They started home at the end of the day. It was dark, snowing, blowing and 35 degrees below zero! Ann couldn't hold the wiggling varmint so she drove.

After much experimentation Louie managed to squeeze the squirming swinelet between his knees, the curly tail-end at the edge of the seat. It was 32 miles home, although it seemed longer.

The piggy squealed all the way home. Every squeal piggy shot out a stream of all-natural, porcine-origin pungent effluence. It hit up under the dash and ran down onto the floor mats.

To survive the lusty ear-splitting caterwaul and the accompanying colonic expulsions, Ann hung her head out the driver's side window. Snow stinging her eyes, hands frozen to the wheel, she persevered by trying to think up names for the piglet. Louie sat in the wind tunnel with grim determination, hands locked on the stink bomb, trying to think up names for the hired man.

On arrival Louie had to be pried out of the cab with a tamping bar. They tried chopping his clothes but it was hard to do without hurting the piglet, so they let them thaw in the old pump house. Eventually they were both hosed off and sprayed with Lemon Pledge.

Man and pig survived, although the next summer they burned down the pump house!

Long journey for SAD Process requires careful consideration and must follow state requirements

C Let's do it

By Dolores Connor For the Las Cruces Bulletir

There has been a lot of conversation about Sonoma Ranch Boulevard as it travels north from U.S. Highway 70.

It has even been linked to "inexperience" on the part of the City Council.

Please note there is so much information to this project that the inexperience comes from those who want to push it through at any cost.

A look at the process In January, a resolution was passed by the council. Resolution 10-200 declared an intent to bring a Special Assessment District (SAD) in accordance with Sections 3-33-1 through 3-33-43, NMSA 1978. The next step was a preliminary hearing of the SAD. Several weeks of notice prior to the April

5 meeting were made to alert the public of the proposal. Åfter three hours of presentation and debate, there was not a consensus – I repeat consensus, not a vote – to the offer being presented. A vote cannot take place at a hearing. At that time, the council expressed to the developer their requests and inquiry as to how this would come together.

I added that the road should be complete from U.S. Highway 70 North to Dragonfly Road – a three-mile stretch. The proposal was only two miles long to Arroyo Road and did not include the property that would be in highest demand, which is closest to the golf course.

It would make sense to finish out the road and include the properties that would be developed sooner that those further away from the course.

After the meeting, there were those who told me I had no right to ask for the additional roadway because it was not part of the initial proposal, but Section 3-33-1(c), part of Resolution 10-200 states "the improvement district shall include, for the purpose of assessment or imposition of an improvement district property tax ALL the property that the governing body determines is benefitted by the improvement, including property lying without the municipality creating the improvement district if such property abuts or is served by improvements."

The council, being the governing body, has the obligation to include properties that will benefit from the SAD. Clearly, the roadway should be completed to the farthest north roadway which is Dragonfly.

At the April 5 meeting, the SAD was not dead, it just needed some response from the developer as to whether he was willing to continue or to drop it.

Where were all the people that have contacted us after the fact?

Why did they not show at the April 5 meeting or send notices of support prior to the meeting?

The developer never came back to the staff or council to keep the process in motion. If he had some compromise to the requests of the council, the process would have then moved back into resolutions and a preliminary hearing to get consensus and from there a formation resolution, which would lead to a formal bid process, council award of the bid, an assessment ordinance and a negotiated loan agreement.

This is what has everyone confused. The just that – preliminary.

developer paid for thousands of hours of review by bond counsel and New Mexico Finance Authority are false. There is no cost for either of these reviews until the loan is actually made and closed. The same resolution 10-200 also states "no costs or expenses related to such efforts will be paid or reimbursed by the City until financing for the District is obtained." The SAD is regulated by statutory legislative requirements making this a process that is greatly scrutinized. The thought that this complicated process would take place in a three month period from beginning to end is naive.

It would never have been in place by the time the elementary school opened and to have included the school was inconceivable.

What happens now?

I have met with the developer to look at the entire three miles of roadway to include turning lanes, bike paths, multipurpose paths, drainage, utilities, etc.

It can still be done, but lets do it correctly the first time. It is easier and less costly to change plans on paper than to pour the asphalt and find you have missing items to the plans.

Let's look at this as a possible project, it's just that at the April 5 meeting I was calling out "fore" so we would step back and look at was coming at us.

Dolores Connor represents District 2 on the Las Cruces City Council.

By Bill Mattiace

In 1968, I fell in love with Las Cruces. Flat out, head over heels, in love.

Moving from the East Coast to the rugged terrain of the Southwest, I was stunned by the beauty of the Mesilla Valley. The Organs to the east of us, cutting the sky above the desert and forming our backdrop, are nothing short of breathtaking. They are the landmark of our region and the most noticeable symbol of our city.

In 2007, recognizing the importance of this symbol, and because there was as yet no law to protect the Organs, I urged our County Commission to enact a moratorium on all development east of Weisner Road, from north to south. This move would have effectively ensured our Organs stayed clear of multi-million-dollar homes, strip malls, everything.

Yet, for some reason, this course was never pursued, and so we now find ourselves battling each other over what each of us thinks is the right course of action. Business leaders are at odds with each other, as are the leaders of our community. And now we even have anonymous donors funding ad campaigns in our city to try to influence our opinions.

But none of this is necessary. The Organs can be protected at the next County Commission meeting with a simple vote. This step would also put to rest many of the most controversial points of the wilderness bill currently being considered by the U.S. Senate. Chief among these are the potential border security problems and risks the Chamber of Commerce has brought up, and the lost access to public lands that others are concerned about.

For me, though, what's at stake is another symbol of our region. What's at stake is a way of life that stretches back three centuries. Ranching in this part of the country has a long and notable history. In the book, Tularosa: Last of the Frontier West," the author chronicles the decades of struggle that ranchers faced in our area. These stories, filled with suspense, danger and heroism, aren't tales from some faraway land, but actual events that happened in these very hills and mountains surrounding us. And these events still happen today.

The ranchers along the U.S.-Mexico bor-der, the ones who will most likely be put out of business if the wilderness bill is passed, are throwbacks to a time gone by. They are the stuff of movies and legends of books and stories. They still get up every day and work until the sun goes down in one of the toughest businesses you can imagine.

They aren't rich elitists; they are stewards of the land, caring for their ranches as very few people care for the environment - intimately and passionately. They aren't outsiders who've moved here to build a million-dollar house and then demand that the desert not be built on. They have lived here for generations and have seen Las Cruces turn from a dusty stage stop to the city it is today. My fear is that they will be gone in just a few years.

While the wilderness bill is lauded as protecting the Organ Mountains, it also converts hundreds of thousands of acres to the south and west of us into a wilderness area. This change is pretty significant for the ranchers who work that land. Because they won't be able to operate motorized vehicles in the wilderness area they won't be able to maintain fences, wells or other important pieces of equipment they depend on. New grazing rules will limit their access to the ranges their cattle depend on to survive throughout the year. To some, it matters little that these ranchers might go away. And in truth most of us wouldn't even notice. Not at first anyway. Yet as the traditions of our region leave us one by one – the ranching, the farming – our identity, built over 300 years, also changes.

Our green valley is gone, replaced by housing developments. We pay more for our food as more and more of it gets imported. Our desert remains unspoiled meaning no development and no vehicles (even including bicycles) - yet all of the things that defined us, the reasons we moved here, are suddenly gone. But this doesn't have to happen.

We don't have to see these ranches vanish into history, only to be remembered in textbooks and movies. In one month we can protect the Organ Mountains from any development without more time, money and energy wasted in fighting each other about it. And we can do it while also protecting our way of life here.

As to the desert areas also slated for wilderness designation, they're already protected. Their current designation excludes them from development anyway.

So let's protect the Organs now. Join me in urging our County Commission to make development off limits in the Organs.

Let's heal our community by putting this fight behind us, and keep the very symbols of our region – the Organ Mountains and the ranching culture – pristine for the next 100 years.

Water to be used for North Valley Water Treatment Plant

By Marvin Tessneer Las Cruces Bulletin

The Doña Ana Mutual Domestic Water Consumers Association (DAMDWCA) presented a proposal Wednesday, Aug. 11, before the Elephant Butte Irrigation District board to use surface water to build a North Valley Water Treatment Plant.

The plan is to divert EBID surface water from the Leasburg Canal to the proposed water treatment plant. The proposal was presented by Mariano Martinez, DAMDWCA's general manager, and Karl Tonander, Souder, Miller and Associates vice president of environmental services.

The Doña Ana MDWCA has 3,892 residential connections. If the association wins approval to build the treatment plant, it would purchase supplemental surface water rights by dealing directly with the water rights owners, not the EBID, Martinez and Tonander emphasized.

The proposed water treatment plant is a regional concept that would extend from Fort Selden to the Las Cruces city limits, said Charles Huestis, DAMDWCA president.

"It's an organized approach to preserve our ground wa-ter, which is limited," Huestis said. "There is only one river to recharge our ground water. One way to preserve our ground water is by using surface water and treating it to make it domestic water. We'll purchase water rights surface water at market value.'

The DAMDWCA is the largest domestic water association in New Mexico. If the association wins approval for the water treatment plan, it would apply for state and federal grants, Huestis said.

"We'll have to have some more meetings and talk to the association about their plans," said EBID Board Chairman James Salopek.

If approved, the proposed water treatment plant would be constructed at the Fort Selden Water Co. site, east of the Leasburg Canal near the diversion point and west of Interstate 25 and the railroad tracks.

"Having access to all possible water resources is critical in this arid environment, especially when considering the population growth that we have experienced in the Mesilla Valley," Tonander said. "The proposed Surface Water Treatment Plant would be an important step toward a balanced approach to future water management and will help preserve our limited groundwater supplies.2

While the treatment plant is operating, it would not interfere with agriculture irrigation, Tonander told the EBID board.

Currently, the DAMDWCA owns about 100 acre-feet of EBID water rights. The diversion would vary, according to the EBID season. Tonander said if the irrigation season is conducted for six months, the treatment plant would request 200 more acre-feet. If the season is extended for eight months, the plant would ask for an additional 250 acre-feet.

District 4 Doña Ana County Commissioner Scott A. Krahling will deliver the commencement address, and Judge Conrad Perea will administer the oaths of service.

The public is encouraged to attend the ceremony.

City: Treat trash containers properly

Use Grappler service for large items

The City of Las Cruces would like to remind residents of the proper way to use their city-issued trash containers. With high winds in the area, trash can scatter easily from containers that are over serviced. The city offers the following tips:

Do not overfill the container. The lid must be completely closed.

Do not pile trash on top of the container.

If you need a second container, one can be ordered by calling Customer Service at 541-2111 for an additional $3.72/month. The Grappler service is available twice a month for bulk

continued threat of West Nile virus Fogging trucks deployed

With two cases of West Nile virus already reported in El Paso County this year, Doña Ana County is stepping up its mosquito abatement program in advance of the upcoming school year.

Fogger trucks are being deployed throughout the county, particularly in areas near schools. The county's Vector Control Division also is responding to about 500 calls each week. Although not all calls are returned, they are logged and mapped for vector-control planning and action. The finding of West Nile virus in El Paso County strongly suggests that infected mosquitoes also are in Doña Ana County.

Each summer in Doña Ana County, the proliferation of mosquitoes follows the summer rains and lasts into the autumn season. It used to be that mosquito populations abated in winter, but heartier varieties of mosquitoes now are found in the region that survive through the winter months and continue to bite.

Most birds are carriers of the virus, but they are not affected by it and don't become ill. Humans are susceptible to the virus, as are horses. Dead birds for which to be on the lookout include crows, ravens, blue jays and hawks. If you see a dead bird of this type that has no apparent injuries, call Vector Control at once at 526-8150, so that the bird can be retrieved and tested.

Doña Ana County is involved in a comprehensive testing program in which mosquitoes are trapped weekly from different sites around the county and sent to a state lab for evaluation. This testing allows the county to identify areas where problems may occur and prioritize abatement procedures accordingly.

The county owns and operates three vector-control trucks that are equipped with spraying equipment. These trucks are regularly sent out in the predawn hours to places where mosquitoes are most likely to breed. Spraying, however, is only one component of a successful control program. Vector control also can provide mosquito-larva-eating fish to private residents whose land is marshy or contains large bodies of standing water. These fish each consume five times their own weight in mosquito larva each day.

The spray and the fish, however, are the second-best tools available to government. The best tool is an informed and motivated population whose members will, individually, address problem areas on their properties. Working together, the risk of mosquito-borne illnesses that affect wildlife, livestock and most importantly - humans in Doña Ana County.

Doña Ana County's Vector Control unit has some helpful tips on how to mitigate these flying, biting, blood-sucking nuisances. Mosquitoes reproduce and their larvae mature in standing water. Removing unnecessary standing water inhibits opportunities for mosquitoes to lay eggs near your home. Empty standing water in old tires, buckets, plastic covers, toys and concave objects that can hold water.

Periodically replacing containers with fresh water can eliminate the full development of mosquito larvae. Circulate and treat water in swimming pools. Change water troughs every three days and birdbaths, fountains, dog dishes, wading pools, rain barrels and potted plant trays at least once a week. Yards, pastures, parks and fields that are over-irrigated are large-scale breeding sites for mosquitoes.

For more information, call the county's Vector Control Division at 526-8150. Residents calling from outside the Las Cruces area may call toll-free at 877-827-7200 and request the Vector Control Office extension.

Consortium to host FAA space center

Pat Hynes and the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium at New Mexico State University have been selected as the hosts of the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) Center of Excellence for Commercial Space Transportation (COE-CST) coalition. Winning the nationwide competition to host the COE-CST now enables NMSU to serve as the hub of a minimum $5 million, fiveyear research coalition addressing key challenges in the development of the commercial space industry.

"It's a great day not only for education in the state of New Mexico, but also for the emerging commercial space industry and the role that Spaceport America will have in its continuing growth," said Spaceport America Executive Director Rick Homans. "This COE-CST reaffirms and cements New Mexico's leadership in the vanguard of commercial space."

Homans said the center would likely facilitate development of launch-vehicle systems, technologies and operations research for Spaceport America.

"We commend Dr. Pat Hynes and her team, and are excited to work with her innovative consortium from New Mexico, Florida, Texas, Colorado and California, as well as companies like Virgin Galactic, SpaceX and other members of the NMSU COE-CST industry advisory board," Homans said.

"Today's announcement means the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium at NMSU will be at the center of development for industryenabling technologies such as space launch operations and traffic management, space commerce and commercial human spaceflight for launch facilities like Spaceport America here in New Mexico," NMSA Board day, Aug. 18. More information on the COE-CST announcement can be found at www.faa.gov/news/press_releases. Spaceport America has been providing commercial launch services since 2006. The spaceport is the world's first purpose-built commercial spaceport and is under construction near Truth or Consequences. This stateof-the-art launch facility is expected to become fully operational in 2011. Officials at Spaceport America have been working closely with leading aerospace firms such as Virgin Galactic, Lockheed Martin, Moog-FTS and UP Aerospace to develop commercial spaceflight at the new facility.

The economic impact of launches, tourism and new construction at the spaceport will benefit the people of New Mexico.

Las Cruces named Playful City

For the second year in a row, Las Cruces has been named a Playful City USA by KaBOOM!, a national nonprofit organization. Las Cruces is one of 118 communities nationwide to earn the designation.

Playful City USA communities are chosen for creating initiatives designed to increase the quantity and quality of play and playgrounds, while improving access to existing play opportunities. Communities large and small, urban and rural are part of the 2010 list.

KaBOOM! selected Las Cruces in part, for its outstanding dedication to play. A notable aspect of its commitment to children – the City of Las Cruces has hired summer recreation staff who promote and provide children with access to play.

Las Cruces was also selected for its number of usable, open play spaces that are engaging, exciting, interesting, fun and safe. "Through the Playful City USA program, other communities across the country look to Las Cruces as a role model. These cities and towns will examine our best practices and look to replicate them in their communities," Mayor Ken Miyagishima said. "I take a tremendous amount of pride in knowing that what we're doing here in Las Cruces will improve the lives of not only our children, but children elsewhere as well."

KaBOOM! is a national nonprofit organization that envisions a great place to play within walking distance of every child in America. Since 1996, KaBOOM! has used its innovative community-build model to bring together business and community interests to construct more than 1,800 new playgrounds, skate parks, sports fields and ice rinks across North America.

City of Las Cruces outlines future water plans

The City of Las Cruces says it is working to help ensure that the community has ample water supplies for future growth.

On Aug. 2, the Las Cruces City Council approved action that would allow for the condemnation of Moongate Water Company on the City's East Mesa. In a press release, the city called the action "a proactive effort to extend the life of the Jornada Basin."

The Jornada Basin is a large, confined aquifer with minimal recharge. The other underground water source, the Mesilla Basin, is an aquifer that is recharged by the Rio Grande and therefore does not have the same limitations as the Jornada Basin, the release states. Water level measurement data compiled by Las Cruces Utilities staff, in coordination with the New Mexico Office of the State Engineer, indicate that the aquifer level in the Jornada Basin is generally dropping at a rate of four to five feet annually in some areas, according to the release. "Moongate Water Company's

"Moongate Water Company's continued, cumulative pumping of the Jornada Basin, coupled with large water rights claims and Moongate Water Company's service territory within the city limits, will ultimately result in the future depletion of the aquifer. Consequently, several thousand East Mesa residents not connected to the City of Las Cruces distribution system may find themselves without a reliable source of water," the release states.

"City of Las Cruces customers receive water not only from cityrun wells on the East Mesa that draw from the Jornada Basin. They are connected by an elaborate water distribution system that will allow water from wells in the Mesilla Basin to supplement water from the Jornada Basin, thereby extending the life of the Iornada Basin. In addition, should the Jornada Basin water level drop below practical pumping levels, or water quality deteriorates, customers connected to the City of Las Cruces system can be supplied with water from wells in the Mesilla Basin," the release states.

According to the city, more than one-third of the city's water customers reside on the East Mesa, but the city's East Mesa wells produce less than one fifth of the city's total well production. The city has been pumping water from the Mesilla Basin to East Mesa customers for several decades, and now transfers roughly one billion gallons per year, it said.

"The city's newly completed South Jornada water project will allow the city to serve additional East Mesa customers with renewable Mesilla Basin water, again extending the life of the Jornada Basin," the release reports.

"The city's long-term plan is to utilize the Jornada Basin as a drought reserve, rather than a primary water source for growth in newly annexed areas of the East Mesa. The city's acquisition of the Moongate Water Company system through the use of eminent domain is ultimately a strategic attempt by the City of Las Cruces to combine the two largest East Mesa water systems into a single system that will extend the life of the Jornada Basin, and provide reliable service to all its customers," the release states.

In the release, the City of Las Cruces reminded residents that summer water restrictions are currently in effect. Addresses ending in odd numbers may water outdoor vegetation on Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays. Addresses ending in even numbers may water Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. No watering is allowed between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. No watering on Mondays.

Bike run supports local Red Cross

A motorcycle run to support the Southwestern New Mexico American Red Cross will begin at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 22, at Barnett's Harley-Davidson/Buell, 2600 Lakeside Drive. The entry fee is $10, and registration will take place from 10 to 10:30 a.m. Stops include Stahmann's Country Store, the Red Cross, 1301 E. Griggs Ave., Crosswinds Grill at the Las Cruces International Airport, the Blue Moon Bar in Radium Springs and the Pic Quik in Hatch.

Anything with wheels may be entered, and proceeds will support the Red Cross in providing emergency services to those affected by disaster and support its emergency communication services for the Armed Forces and military families.

For more information, call the American Red Cross at 526-2631.

Wine-making workshops

Wine-making workshops for fun or college credit will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 24, at Skeen Hall Room N132 on the New Mexico State University campus. Will Gorman, professor emeritus, and Bernd Maier, extension viticulture specialist, will provide instruction on how to make high-quality amateur wine, current technologies used in wine production and how to analyze and monitor the impact of fermentation on microbial performance and wine quality. The enrollment fee is $100. Workshops will take place through Tuesday, Dec. 7, with some instruction taking place on selected Saturdays at the Fabian Garcia Farm on University Avenue.

For more information, contact Gorman at 649-

Science Café Aug. 26

Geologist Greg Mack will lead a Science Café discussion on "Exploring for Oil and Gas in New Mexico" at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 26, at the Las Cruces Museum of Natural History in the Mesilla Valley Mall.

Mack, a member of the Department of Geological Sciences at New Mexico State University and secretary of the New Mexico Geological Society, will discuss methods of locating resources under the earth, some of the challenges faced in exploration and the two major oil and gas basins in New Mexico – the Permian and the San Juan.

Science Café is presented by Sigma Xi, the Scientific Research Society, in cooperation with the Las Cruces Museum of Natural History. Free and open to the public, café discussions are presented to advance greater public understanding and use of available science. For more information, call 522-3120.

Safe Haven sidewalk sale

Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary will hold its semi-annual Sidewalk Sale from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 28, at 144 Wyatt Drive. There will be many large items and some great bargains available. SHAS will also have cats and dogs from the sanctuary for adoption.

For more information, call 527-4544.

Special Forces veterans meet

The Special Forces Association Chapter 80 will hold its monthly meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 28. All current and former U.S. Army Special Forces service members are welcome to attend. For more information, call Leonard Boulas at 541-1449.

In addition, the Special Forces Association will have a roast beef dinner from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Sunday, Aug. 29, at VFW Post 3242, 2001 N. Mesquite St. The meal includes roast beef, mashed potatoes, gravy and "fixins." Cost is $5. Funds raised will support community-related activities.

LCHS reunion

The Las Cruces High School class of 1980 will have its 30-year reunion Friday and Saturday, Sept. 3 and 4. For more information, visit www. lchs80.org or call Shaun Cooper at 650-4757.

Iris sale

The Mesilla Valley Iris Society will hold its fall iris rhizome sale from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 11, and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 12, at the Cineport 10 entrance at Mesilla Valley Mall, 700 S. Telshor Blvd. The sale will include hundreds of iris rhizomes in every color at excellent prices. Proceeds from the sale benefit the society and its projects. These locally grown rhizomes thrive in southern New Mexico gardens. The irises often sell out on the first day of the sale, so plan to go to the event early for best selection.

A12 | News Las Cruce Water dispute heats up Couple forced to keep taps open

By Todd G. Dickson

Billy Moreno still gets emotional when he describes how he felt when his wife Teresa was threatened with being thrown in jail if the couple didn't re-open lines from their wells to adjacent residents.

That was in late June after those residents took the Morenos to court to get their water turned back on.

Moreno said he has lived on the property at the edge of the city limits since 1990. It is located at the end of Moreno Road off Elks Drive.

The property came with two wells, with original water rights of 19.4 acre-feet, which Moreno said was plenty to serve the cluster of other homes – mostly manufactured homes – in the small residential area.

Five years later, the Office of the State Engineer (OSE) reduced those water rights to 17.4 acre-feet, which was still adequate to serve those living there.

As the owners of the wells, the Morenos sold the water to renters and other residents and as a small water system provider, they had the water tested by a lab at New Mexico State University. The water always came back with no problems cited, Moreno said.

But the Morenos' troubles began in 2003 when OSE reduced their water usage to 8.6 acre-feet. They could have faced a fine of $250 per day had they exceeded that usage.

That's when the Morenos decided to shut off the water to roughly half of the residents living there.

Moreno noted that at the same time they sought to find a water supplier for the other residents through the Doña Ana Mutual Domestic Water Consumers Association (DAMDWCA), which held a public hearing in 2004. Moreno said the water association promised to provide water to the residents, which hasn't happened.

Meanwhile, with OSE restricting their well usage, the Morenos were forced to cut some of the well lines, reducing the water service to 16 people through six connections. As a result, the state Environment Department notified the Morenos that they were no longer a public water system, as defined by state law, and no longer had to test the water.

When the cut-off residents took the Morenos to court, District Judge Manuel Arrieta granted a temporary restraining order against the Morenos, which resulted in sheriff's deputies showing up on June 26 to order the Morenos to turn the water back on.

"They were threatening to throw my wife in jail," Moreno said. "Who is he to tell us what to do? I told them, put me in jail, not my wife. I'm the original property owner."

The deputies allowed the Morenos time to reopen the seven shut-off water lines, which have been capped. In the process of re-opening the underground lines, Moreno figures that some mud must have found its way into the lines because the residents complained about discoloration.

The Morenos took the water to be tested,

City awarded transit grant Money will buy new RoadRunner vans

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman has announced the City of Las Cruces will receive a grant award of $146,700 to help purchase new vans for Road-Runner Transit.

The funding was secured by Bingaman in the bill that funds the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Transit Administration (FTA).

"This investment in Las Cruces will help make getting around easier for New Mexicans who depend on public transportation," Bingaman said.

which was found to be contaminated, while water from the lines that remained open came back clear, as it always had before.

"We never had this problem before we capped the wells," Moreno said. "But, now, if they find any tiny, weeny thing, they say it's no good."

The Morenos have hired a lawyer to help them resolve the situation. They continue to provide water – for free – and worry that they will be facing penalties for over-pumping the wells before the year is done.

Nor does it appear that DAMDWCA has the funding right now to serve the other residents, Moreno said.

"It has created a lot of tension here," Moreno said.

NM airports get grants Las Cruces getting $95,000 award

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman announced that four New Mexico Airports have been awarded grants through the Federal Aviation Administration.

"Our state's airports play an important role in helping attract good jobs to New Mexico. I'm glad our state is benefiting from these FAA grants," Bingaman said.

Aztec Municipal Airport will receive a $1.2 million grant for reconstruction work on runway 8/26.

Three other airports were awarded grants to conduct a Wildlife Hazard Assessment at the airports.

The assessment will gather data on the wildlife that occupy the airport property. The data will help to identify the different species and will provide insight on their daily/seasonal activities, populations and their local movements.

- Those grants include:
- $100,000 Grant County Airport
- $95,000 Clovis Municipal Airport
- $95,000 Las Cruces International Airport

no reason New Mexico can't be the leader in solar generation," Mondragón said.

The state has such a strong position that the world is noticing, he said, as illustrated by the recent announcement that CFV Solar Test Laboratory - a photovoltaic (PV) test company jointly owned by CSA Group, the Fraunhofer Institute for Solar Energy Systems ISE, the Fraunhofer USA Center for Sustainable Energy Systems CSE and VDE Testing and Certification Institute – plans to open a new laboratory in Albuquerque.

66 ... there is no reason New Mexico can't be the leader in solar generation.

FRED MONDRAGÓN, secretary, New Mexico Economic Development Department

Aside from getting facilities like the testing lab, algae-based fuel refineries and renewableenergy generation plants to locate in the state, Mondragón urged Udall to seek incentives for manufacturing solar energy materials – mostly solar panels at this point – in the state, instead of being made in another country, such as China.

New Mexico's congressional delegation has been able to land $105 million in federal stimulus grant money for Sapphire for the creation of a demonstration algae-based fuel refinery near Deming, Mondragón said.

Meanwhile, the New Mexico job market can produced, Udall said. Though some find these approaches as interference in the free market, they will be driving forces behind the creation of new markets for renewable energy, he said.

Unfortunately, Udall said, Congress is mired in obstructionism by Republicans that has never been seen before. 'That's the sad reality of what we're dealing with," he said.

In the interim, more familiar resources of oil and natural gas are still needed, Mondragón said, because as windy and sunny as some parts of the state are, there are days that the wind doesn't blow and the sun doesn't shine.

As for biofuels, the challenge will be making the industry work with agriculture in a sustainable fashion, Udall said.

That's one concern that algae-based fuels can avoid. During his tour of Sapphire, Direc-tor of Corporate Affairs Denise Gitsham reminded Udall that the company is committed to using land such as that found on the West Mesa that will never be realistically used for agriculture and to use water that's not fit for crops, people or animals. New Mexico has an abundance of such land and brackish water. Udall agreed.

Meanwhile, algae is a "voracious consumer" of carbon dioxide – a greenhouse gas – while leaving post-production waste that is essentially protein that could be used in animal feed. The philosophy – and challenge – is to waste nothing and in a manner that is costeffective with low-impact to the environment, Davis and Gitsham said. For example, coal-fu-dioxide that the utilities would love to supply to an algae-production operation such as Sapphire, but there are no tax incentives to make it worth the effort, so Sapphire uses industrially produced carbon dioxide.

Meanwhile, the fuel produced is molecularly identical to fuels refined from oil, Davis said. That shouldn't be surprising, considering the oil that's extracted from the ground was once organic matter – with a lot of it being algae.

The Sapphire R&D facility has been on the Las Cruces West Mesa Industrial Park for a little over a vear.

A14 | News Las Cruces Bulletin FYI assists child interviewing Safehouse used for abuse investigations

By Todd G. Dickson Las Cruces Bulletin

A critical part of the investigation process for child abuse cases is interviewing the children. Families & Youth Inc. (FYI) offers the place to conduct those interviews.

The FYI Safehouse and Children's Advocacy Center opened its doors in 1997 and has been in great use since the law enforcement and social work communities increased its focus on child abuse in the region.

Unfortunately, it is a much-needed resource.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, the center conducted 242 interviews, followed by 37 interviews in July, said Mickey Curtis, FYI clinical director.

The safehouse is essentially three rooms. In one room, there is a place for the family, siblings and significant others to wait in a private, comfortable environment. On the other side of the wall is a smaller room with large sofa chairs where one-on-one interviews are conducted by trained interviewers. In the corner of that room is a video camera, which feeds into an adjacent room where the interview is recorded as case workers or police investigators watch – sometimes giving suggestions via discreet radio communications to the interviewer through an earpiece.

"It's really an extra tool that we can use to be extra sensitive to a child," said Connie Campos, one of the center's forensic interviewers, who noted that a child can "clam up" and be less willing to reveal something to a police officer in a more traditional interview setting.

"What we do here is create a safe place for a child to talk," Campos said.

Campos said there are days she conducts back-to-back interviews. Cases that require the safehouse come from either the state's Children, Youth and Family Department or law enforcement. The center and its staff are part of a multidisciplinary team that handles many reported cases of abuse.

At a community town hall meeting last month, local law enforcement officials talked about the need for more investigators and more places such as FYI's safehouse to conduct the interviews, which become a critical part of building abuse cases.

Some people have notions about these interviews that are quite right. Though there are others in another room observing the interview, the child is notified the interview is being recorded, Campos said. Also, the interview is straight-forward questions and answers, without the use of dolls or props for the child to illustrate what happened. The room does have a large notepad on which the child can draw, if figures are needed to describe what happened, Curtis said. Finally, the interviewers are trained to not push the child into telling something that isn't true, Curtis said. The interviewer works off what the child reveals.

"We want to make sure we get an accurate and clear story," Curtis said.

Sometimes the interview process can reveal the incident in question can be a misunderstanding, Campos said. But should the interview reveal that some kind of abuse has happened, then there are resources at FYI for family, should one of the parents need counseling to help deal with what the child revealed, she said.

The interviews can be as short as five minutes or can last up to an hour, Campos said. "We try not to let the interviews go for more than an hour," she said. "That's just too hard for most children."

The majority of cases seen by the center are for sexual abuse cases, Campos said. Most of the interviews are with girls, and most of the alleged offenders are a male parent or person known to the child.

Because time usually elapses before the incident is investigated, there is usually no physical evidence, Curtis said, which makes the interviews an important part of the investigation. The interviews can also help the District Attorney's Office determine if the child will make a good witness, should the case come to trial.

At the town hall meeting last month, participants also talked about reaching out to the spiritual community, which was something FYI was already working on. FYI is one of the sponsors for a faith-community training that aims to help members of the faith community respond appropriately when they observe or learn of a child abuse situation or incident.

Besides helping the faith community learn what resources are available to them, the training will help them react in a compassionate, non-judgmental way, Campos said.

cements a feeling of connectedness between everyone at the university - from faculty and staff to students - and truly shows that we all have to work together to make NMSU great.

A larger community

Couture said the university will endeavor to increase its research and academic partnerships, which she noted is fitting with its growing international activities.

Couture, whose inauguration coincided with the fall convocation of faculty, urged those working for the university to be builders instead of critics. Her charge: "Get to work and create a new era for NMSU.'

Couture made a point to start off her address by reviewing the history of NMSU and how its previous presidents had served during both flush and impoverished times and situations.

"The history of New Mexico State University is an especially proud one, bolstered by strong traditions of the peoples of this state and the defiant 'dare to be different' attitude that has distinguished this Land of Enchantment," Couture said. "We have never been afraid to take on new research challenges and create innovative academic programs in our pursuit of excellence. Yet we will be challenged to do so during this decade, like never before, by the constraints of shrinking resources and increasing demands on our creative and educational services."

Couture also emphasized the strength of the university's diversity at her inauguration. A group of diverse people are more apt to find better solutions than individually, she said. Too many people these days, however, are afraid of difference or of loss to see the benefits of diversity, she said.

Many of her goals are set to be accomplished over the course of five years, but many hope she stays at the helm longer.

Up until the 1990s, NMSU presidents tended to serve many years, but in the 20 years since, there has sometimes been a quick succession of presidents.

Dan Lopez, president of the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, quipped that this had been the fifth inauguration ceremony he had been part of, and "I don't want to be coming back in a couple of years."

Couture began her tenure at NMSU in January, but was plunged into working the Legislature as it grappled with a large budget shortfall that required a special session to resolve. Couture assured the audience that she and her husband Paul feel they have found a new home at NMSU. They have embraced this part of the world and feel assured by the caliber of faculty, she said.

"Today, I am humbled by the outpouring of our university community, alumni, friends and supporters across the state of New Mexico and their enthusiasm for the future of this great place," she said. Before being appointed as president of NMSU, Couture was the senior vice chancellor for academic affairs and a professor of English at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. She also served as the dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Washington State University in Pullman, Wash. Couture earned her bachelor's degree with high distinction from the University of Michigan where she also earned a master's and doctoral degree in English language and literature.

Temple Beth-El Rabbi Emeritus Gerald Kane closed the inauguration with a blessing of NMSU's 25th president. He noted that Barbara is the patron saint of architects, geologists, stonemasons and artillerymen, so he encouraged her to lean on the strengths found in those professions to create a unique vision, to honor the past, to fortify foundations and to lead with courage.

A man of many talents

When your old man speaks, it's best to listen, apparently.

Kyle Nelson was all ears when Mark Nelson, his father and assistant football coach at Bixby, Okla., High School, issued some strong advice.

"He told me that the quickest way to make any football team is to be a specialist," Kyle Nelson said.

Which explains why young Nelson became a polished deep snapper back in China Spring High School in Waco, Texas.

It's a specialized talent. One not many football players have. In kicking situations, deep snappers line up at the center position and zip the ball with velocity back to the punter or holder for place kickers.

If the snap is slow in getting there, it often results in blocked kicks, a disaster that often turns football games around.

Nelson is the deep snapper for New Mexico State these days. He's also the starting tight end for the Aggies.

A good one, according to offensive coordinator Mike Dunbar.

"He's a good blocker," Dunbar said. "Good hands. He had an excellent spring practice.'

At 6-foot-4, 220 pounds, Nelson might be light for a tight end but big for a pass receiver.

In certain situations, Dunbar will alternate both Kyle Hipp (6-5, 250) and Ronny Torres (6-4, 248) with Nelson to beef up blocking assignments at tight end. Nelson often moves to slot receiver under those circumstances.

As a starter last year, Nelson caught 12 passes for 112 yards and one touchdown. Tight ends, however, earn their keep as blockers. Nelson, although shy in weight, still makes high grades in that area.

He's grateful to be playing any posi-tion for NMSU. "I'll play anywhere," he said. "As long as we win."

Winning teams are blessed with good quarterbacks. Nelson likes the Aggies' three QB contenders.

"Jeff (Fleming) is great," Nelson said. "He's smart.

'Matt (Christian) is an accurate passer. Tanner (Rust) moves around well. He's mobile."

Nelson makes it clear any of the three is capable. "I like them all," he said. He's also confident the Ags will be a success this season. "We will if we play hard, smart football," he said.

"And, if we play together." During football practice, Nelson is spread thin. He works on blocking techniques and running passing routes.

Then he moves over with NMSU's punters and place kickers and concentrates on his deep snaps.

Nevada and Fresno State jump to MWC

By Jim Hilley and Gabriel Vasquez

As of Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 18, it ap-peared the Western Athletic Conference would be bolstered by the addition of Brigham Young University as a non-football playing member. The Salt Lake Tribune was reporting that the defection of BYU from the Mountain West Conference (MWC) to become an independent in football and join the WAC in all other sports was a "done deal."

The reported decision by BYU was due to the Provo, Utah university's unhappiness with television revenues received from the MWC. The university was reportedly ready to package its own football rights with the expectation of raking in more revenue that way.

At that time, there was even speculation on WAC-related blogs that MWC members San Diego State and University of Nevada-Las Vegas might also join the WAC – leaving the MWC in dire straights and the WAC looking like the new intermountain powerhouse.

The announcement on Wednesday that the MWC had invited Fresno and Nevada to join its ranks seemed odd considering that reports had circulated that all current WAC teams had agreed to a $5 million buy-out clause, making a defection from that conference prohibitively expensive. Soon, however, the Reno Gazette Journal was reporting that numerous sources were saying Nevada had never signed the buy-out clause, and the Fresno Bee was reporting that Fresno would accept the MWC invitation. Both Nevada and Fresno State announced

"Fresno State is honored to have been invited to join the Mountain West Conference, and I am pleased to announce that we will accept the invitation," Fresno State President John Welty said.

After a similar statement from Nevada President Milton Glick, it became apparent the WAC was now teetering on the brink.

Glick said Nevada had agreed to the buyout, but never signed it, and the $5 million figure was "in the high range." Glick also indicated that the buy-out clause was indeed spurred by BYU's approaching the WAC concerning its plans. Glick said the Mountain West might be willing to cover some of the cost of the move, and other support would be sought from Nevada supporters.

According to a report in the Fresno Bee,

The departure of Boise State followed by the exit of Fresno State and Nevada on Aug. 18, leaves the Western Athletic Conference with only six remaining members. A valid NCAA athletic conference must have a minimum of eight teams.

Fresno State did sign the clause and will seek to pay the funds out of the Bulldog Foundation.

In a conference call on Thursday, Aug. 19, WAC Commissioner Karl Benson said the WAC and its members have shown tremendous resiliency and are confident that the remaining six teams will continue to bring success to the WAC.

He said the conference was initiating a process to target prospective members to the WAC.

Benson said he was informed on the morning of Wednesday, Aug. 18, that both Nevada and Fresno State had been made offers by the Mountain West. At 5 p.m. that day, the schools informed him of their decision to accept the invitation to join the MWC, a "selfish" move, he said.

Benson also said the conferences' legal counsel is of the opinion that the buy-out clause is enforceable, and the WAC expects payment from Nevada and Fresno State within 60 days. "I wish I had made it $20 million," he said.

NMSU Soccer team hosts UTEP Friday By Jimmy Currier Las Cruces Bulletin of her athleticism."

There is not much rest for the Aggies after hosting UTEP Friday, as they host Montana at 6 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 22, and the Hotel Encanto Aggie Classic in Las Cruces starts next week.

Needham is expecting a big crowd of crimson-and-white clad fans. "Starting off the season with UTEP is a great way to start it," he said. "We got a big rivalry game at home. I look forward to seeing everyone out there Friday night. The more people we have, the harder it is for them to play, so we look forward to entertaining everybody. Friday night is going to be a lot of fun."

Last season, the Aggies had a large contin-gency travel south on Interstate 10 to support the Ággies against UTEP. Although the Ággies lost 1-0 in overtime, fan support didn't wane.

Needham, who has been involved with soccer programs across the country, said Las Cruces supports the Aggies.

The continued support of this community is like nothing I have ever seen," he said. "This community, by far, is the most unique place I've been in how well they support our Aggies."

Fans can expect to see more of an attacking style on the pitch this season.

Onthegreen: Last shot turns PGA nightmare

Young Dustin Johnson suffers from controversial penalty

German golfer Martin Kaymer walked away with the Wanamaker Trophy, symbolic of his win on Sunday in the PGA Championship at the Whistling Straits golf course in Wisconsin. But others, like course designer Pete Dye and even the PGA itself, walked away with mud on their faces in terms of public perception. Late in the afternoon on Sunday, Aug. 15, 26-year old Dustin Johnson – memorable earlier this year for his meltdown in the U.S. Open after leading by five shots – held a oneshot lead at 12-under par as he stepped onto the 18th tee and the 72nd and final hole of the tournament. Eighteen is a 500-yard, par 4 with a creek running below a treacherous clover-shaped green. The hole is aptly named "Dyeabolical." Kaymer and Bubba Watson had already posted scores of 11-under.

Known to be a long bomber with the driver, Johnson sprayed his tee shot well right, up into the crowd standing outside the restraining ropes, with his ball coming to rest in a small patch of sand, overgrown by grass and weeds, probably only 8 by 10 feet in size. After much bustling and gallery movement, Johnson took aim from about 220 yards and proceeded to pull his shot short and left of the green, where he had a short pitch shot to a tight pin, which he executed brilliantly.

Register all teams at Texas Roadhouse or Sonoma Ranch golf Course-Ask your favorite Bartender or Server for more information

With a chance to win outright, Johnson missed his 12-foot par putt. Immediately, a PGA rules official approached him as he was walking off the green to talk with him about his play back in the small sandy patch. It turns out that, before taking his shot, Johnson had grounded his club (probably 3 times) in the sand, which was deemed to be a sand bunker, and therefore a hazard.

There are more than 1,000 sand bunkers at the Pete Dye-designed Whistling Straits. Instead of heading to the range to prepare for a three-way playoff for the championship, Johnson had to record a 2-stroke penalty and write down a 7 on hole No. 18. He would finish tied for fourth and win $270,833

Anyone watching the scenario unfold on television had to be stunned. Later, in a locker-room interview, Johnson told reporters, "It never even crossed my mind that I was in a bunker.'

It's a nearly reasonable notion, given the fact that the gallery had trampled the mixed sand and turf area, where straw-like grass was strewn about, and no rakes were in sight.

As the sports media processed the events of Sunday afternoon, there seemed to be two opposing sentiments: one was that common sense isn't in golf's rule book; the other be-ing don't blame the PGA Tour for Johnson's mistake. While the debate has taken some ugly turns in the golf blogosphere, I'll try to provide a fair and unbiased look at the issue.

On Monday, Fox Sports online columnist James Achenbach railed against the PGA for failing to take into account the reality of thousands of spectators: "Rules officials should have taken charge and cleared the area. Though it is against the unofficial code of officiating, I wish someone could have cautioned Johnson in a situation such as this."

As I watched Johnson's play in the sand unfold, I wondered what tournament Nick Faldo and Jim Nance (of CBS) were watching, and why they wouldn't question the whole bunker situation. I think Johnny Miller would have been all over that one.

"The PGA failed to maintain order," claims Achenbach. "They allowed the (crowd) situ-ation to get out of hand," he says, bitterly complaining that "this is a black eye for golf; the championship was decided not by a golf shot but by a rules sheet."

From my view I couldn't help but wonder what the whole episode unfolding at that small piece of sandy bunker would have been like if the player had been Tiger Woods, and the tournament was on the line for him. I have the sense that Tiger's caddy, Steve Williams, would have slowed the whole process down, bullied the crowds clear and summoned a rules man in a white shirt, with clipboard and walkie-talkie. And where were those eagle-eyed rules guys when Tiger had 15 spectators move a 2-ton boulder in Scottsdale, Ariz.?

Much to my surprise, players' reactions to the Johnson nightmare were outspoken. Rickie Fowler tweeted that "from the TV coverage I never once thought of (Johnson) being in a bunker; I just thought it was a bare spot. I think a bunker that fans have been standing in all day should be considered a waste bunker."

You are permitted to ground your club in a 'waste" area.

Jason Gore bluntly called what the PGA did "an absolute BS ruling." Ian Poulter tweeted that the ruling was "shocking" because of the sprawl of 900-plus bunkers and "probably only 100 rakes." From longtime player Casey Wittenberg came the harshest criticism: "Wow! The PGA of America just became the biggest joke in golf history!' Closer to the actuality of what went on with Johnson on the 72nd hole, short-game guru Dave Pelz weighed in strongly with this observation: "They should tear up the rules and start over. It's way too complicated." Don't hold your breath, Dave.

The larger question is how will the PGA of America justify holding their championship at tricked-up Whistling Straits in 2015? Players may boycott.

From the very first moment when players set foot on Whistling Straits during tourna-ment week, the PGA had posted the following notice: "All areas of the course that were designed and built as sand bunkers will be played as bunkers (hazards), whether or not they have been raked. Such irregularities of surface are a part of the game and no free relief will be available from these conditions." Each day for each round, players were given a sheet specifically stating the "local rules" that were in effect, making undeniably clear how the sand rulings would be determined.

How could Johnson not have wondered whether his ball was actually in a hazard? How could his caddy not have noticed? Why didn't they call over a rules guy, since officials were there dealing with spectators anyway?

There might have even been a question about getting relief from trampled groundunder-repair. Johnson admitted in a later interview, "I only look at (the rules sheet) if I have a reason to, and I didn't see I had a reason to. Maybe I should have looked to the rule sheet a little harder.

And maybe his caddy should have done that for him.

There is little argument that what happened in the fading sunlight on Whistling Strait's 18th hole was a brutal way for a contender to be denied his chance to capture a major title. But it seemed that Johnson did not intelligently size up the matter on the spot, which is something that happens when things come down to the last second in sports. Robert Lusetich of Foxsports.com rightly commented, "It was sickening to watch, and it didn't seem fair. But don't blame the PGA of America, and don't blame golf's rules.'

When all of the emotions and misperceptions are stripped away, we are left with the reality that each golfer is responsible for his own actions and decisions. Dustin Johnson blew it. But he didn't whine and try to deny grounding his club ala Michelle Wie.

Over the years there have been quite a few mess-ups in important tournaments. Actually in 2004 at Whistling Straits, the first time the PGA Championship was played there, Stuart Appleby was victimized by the same bunker rules and assessed four penalty strokes. "I'm very (ticked) and angered that this is the way the 2010 PGA came to an end," Appleby said.

It just shows that "fair" and "golf" don't come out of the same sports dictionary. Was the 1968 Masters title ripped from Roberto De Vicenzo's grasp when he signed his card for a higher score than he shot? Maybe.

Was the chance to win the PGA stolen from Dustin Johnson?

I think not.

High-point leaders in two Las Cruces Horseman's Association gymkhana contests strengthened their leads in July by turning in good times in barrels.

Las Cruces Bulletin

Jerry Curry and Jacki Middagh, 40 and older division, were high-point leaders with 40 points each. Middagh and her horse ran the barrels in 18.33 seconds

Middagh and her horse ran the barrels in 18.33 seconds for 10 points, and Curry was timed in 18.75 seconds for seven points.

Kaysha Nakama and Brady Reno also were high-point riders with 46 each in the 18-39 division.

Reno handled the barrels pattern in 18.25 seconds for 10 points, and Nakama followed with 18.41 seconds and eight points.

In the 13-17 Division, Lindsey Wilken added 36 points to her season total with firsts in barrels, 17.59 seconds, and flags, 7.70 seconds.

High-point riders in other age divisions were:

Ten-12: Samantha Wagner rode the barrels and flags patterns in 19.15 and 8.56 seconds and gained 39 points.

Seven-nine: Cameron Taylor widened his lead to 46 by guiding his horse around the barrels in 19.13 seconds and the flags in 12.07 seconds.

said. "They're (Aggies) always going to work hard and always going to be committed."

Reuniting with McMillion on offense this season are Nina Yanes, Crystal Burns, Lauren Cope, Cassie De Leon and Veronica Subu. Dani De La Vina, Kristin Powers and Cassandra Branch will also see some time on the pitch.

"There's a whole core of them that are going to get it done," Needham said. "That's something I look forward to this year. We don't need the goals to come from just one person. They can come from a whole bunch of people, and that will take pressure off anyone."

Sophomore mid-fielder/forward Cope, who scored three goals last season, said expectations are high for the Aggies.

"We look forward to winning games and doing good this season," she said. "We're playing as a team and working hard. It's going to be a lot different than last year. I can see a winning season right here. We're going to push it to the limit."

The Aggies have senior Baili Foutz, sophomore Vanessa Novella and redshirt freshman Lauren Allen back in the middle, while Yanes, Burns, Cope and De La Vina provide additional support.

<sup>4</sup> In the midfield, we have some key returning players who played a lot of minutes last year and gained that valuable experience," Needham said. "It's a quality group of players. I think their fitness level is very high, which is one of the main demands of that midfield position.

"All of them can score goals and that's another positive, you don't have to rely just on the forwards."

Bulldawg veterans return Coach Miller: This is Buurma's team

By Craig Massey s Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces High School football coach Jim Miller isn't surprised that his Bulldawgs enter the season ranked third in the state. He's not impressed either.

'Those rankings – it's nice to be recognized, but we don't pay much attention to that," Miller said. "They see that we have several starters back, including our quarterback. But it's not how you start the season, it's how you finish."

The Bulldawgs, who finished with a 7-4 record last year, return six starters on offense and six on defense, as well as some other players who saw regular action in 2009.

Leading the way is quarterback Jeremy Buurma, who is entering his fourth season on the LCHS varsity.

"It's always huge when you have a two-year starter at quarterback," Miller said of the 6-1, 170-pound Buurma. "We moved him up to varsity as a freshman, and he played behind Dante (Caro) for two years. He knows the ins and outs of our offense. We're very fortunate to have him. This is his team this year.'

Buurma will be joined in the backfield by a pair of outstanding runners in Xavier Hall and Daniel Martinez. Hall, a 5-7, 175-pound junior, is the brother of former LCHS standout and New Mexico State University player James Hall. He is a returning starter who rushed for nearly 1,000 yards last fall. Martinez played some last year and adds great quickness.

"Like James, Xavier has great vision and great moves, but he is more of a power runner, and James was more of a quick, scatback," Miller said.

Other returning starters on the offense are receivers Josh Watson and Tanner Shoemaker and linemen Ethan Bustos (guard) and Robbie Trigo (tackle). Another player, tight end Wes Bannister, played a lot last year.

"We're replacing three starters on the offensive line from last year, so that's what we're working on right now," Miller said. One of the probable replacements is 6-5, 230-pound Ramon Jimenez, who was a standout on the junior varsity last year.

Miller said the Bulldawg offense, which has been prolific most of the time, will have the same look in 2010.

"We've been pretty consistent with it for the past 13 years," he said. "We put this in back in 1999, with the shotgun (formation) and all. We've added a few things along the way, but we'll use the same type of stuff."

On defense, Las Cruces is replacing several defensive linemen and linebackers. Returning starters include the 5-11, 235-pound Trigo at defensive tackle, Jeff Segovia at defensive end, Watson and Shoemaker at safety, Martinez at cornerback and Israel Valles at linebacker. Martin Villegas played some last year and will be one of the defensive tackles.

"We'll have to replace some guys up front and at linebacker," Miller said.

Sustaining a legacy Alumni volleyball game a chance to reminisce

have become

trademarks.

One of the best preseason events in the Mesilla Valley is Saturday, Aug. 21. The New Mexico State volleyball alumni game tips off at 7 p.m. inside the Pan American Center and will serve as both a preview of the coming year and a look back at the school's most consistent winner for the last two decades. The alumni who are returning all represent NCAA teams through the years.

This year's Aggies have been picked for second place in the WAC and head coach Mike Jordan is expecting a return to NCAA post-season play with a renewed emphasis on defense.

Jordan said recently that he started thinking about his approach to this year last November. The team had just beaten NCAA-bound Colorado State on the road, but the year was one that was lacking something. Second place in the WAC and a berth in the conference finals would not seem like a down year to most programs, but Aggie volleyball under Jordan has raised the bar higher than most programs.

The missing element may come down to chemistry. A core of four first-team allconference players is back, and there will be a return to the 5-1 style of play. His veterans are sold on the new players as well who have entered the program.

Junior setter Jennah DeVries, along with senior outside hitters Kayleigh Giddens and Whitney Woods, all agreed that team chemistry is much better heading into this up in the competitive spirit. With the return of the volleyball alumni, fans have the chance to catch up on what their favorites have been up to and reminisce about the achievements of the past.

With one exception, all of this year's returnees played on NCAA teams. Among others that will play for the alumni is Alice Borden, now a high school coach at Oñate

High School and Stevi (Adams) Maytubby, who just left Jordan's staff to follow her husband to his job in Texas. Alyssa Gintant and Angel Tirado are part of a contingent that has remained near the Mesilla Valley along with last year's front-line star Krista Altermatt.

Big hitters on the front line have become one of Jordan's trademarks, and some of his best are coming from a little farther away. Angela Lobendahn-Peterson, Sarah Silagy (Ochoa) and Anna Callis have not missed a reunion game since they graduated, and one of the Aggies, best setters, Jackie (Choi) Parker will also make the trek.

Current NM State Senior Woman Administrator Maria Roth also finds time to suit up for this game. It is something these women do to honor and sustain the legacy

Get a kick from soccer Exciting second season

begins Friday, Aug. 20

Greetings Aggie soccer fans.

We look forward to an outstanding season. Our first year behind us, we are poised to have an exceptional year in 2010, and we look forward to entertaining you every step of the way.

In 2009, our program was based upon several founding principles and had one goal in mind when we entered camp in August of last year. We would play with passion, commitment and have a lot of fun. We would earn a berth in the WAC Tournament in November. The season was a whirlwind - as most of you would imagine - with 22 freshmen and only two players that had ever played in a NCAA Division I soccer match. In the end, we achieved each one of our goals and surpassed expectations in so many ways.

This season, we will move forward in making this program a force to be reckoned with in the WAC. Our vision and goals will remain the same as we continue to make New Mexico State and Las Cruces the best place to play college soccer in the United States.

Our players look forward to entertaining the Aggie faithful this season and for many years to come. As a community, this is the most unique place that I have ever had the pleasure to coach. You embrace your student athletes, celebrate our successes and mourn when we fall short.

We have an excellent group of young women returning for this season. We will be more experienced, stronger, fitter and more organized after getting our first season under our belts and an outstanding spring training segment.

Our returning group of players will absolutely welcome the newcomers and understand that each one of these new players will bring something special into our program. The combination of players we had report to camp Aug. 3 will allow us to achieve many great things this year. We will play attrac-tive, attacking soccer, we will score goals and we will be a pleasure to watch. We will work harder, be fitter, and more organized than any other team in the WAC, and we will strive every day to bring a WAC Championship to New Mexico State and Las Cruces

In closing, we finished the 2009 regular season 9-8-1, earned a national ranking and went to the WAC Tournament. We could not have done any of these things without your support and attendance at our matches. I ask you again to come out and support this group of women. They will make you proud to wear crimson.

Let's see if together we can break our attendance ranking of No. 15 in the nation from our inaugural season and make Aggie Memorial Stadium a very difficult place for UTEP and the rest of our visitors to compete.

Mark your calendars for 7 p.m., Friday Aug. 20, your Aggies vs. I-10 rival UTEP. Go Aggies!

Teenagers need more rest Kids prepare for school Helping your kids get through adolescence with backpack blessing

My 13-year-old daughter has become increasingly lazy in the past couple of years. She lies around the house and will sleep half a day on Saturday. She complains about being tired a lot. Is this typical of early adolescence? How should I deal with it?

It is not uncommon for boys and girls to experience fatigue during the years of puberty. Their physical resources are being invested in a rapid growth process during that time, leaving less energy for other activities. This period doesn't last very long and is usually followed by the most energetic time of life.

I would suggest, first, that you schedule your daughter for a routine physical examination to rule out the possibility of a more serious explanation for her fatigue. If it does turn out to be a phenomenon of puberty, as I suspect, you should "go with the flow." See that she gets plenty of rest and sleep. This need is often not met because teenagers feel that they shouldn't have to go to bed as early as they did when they were children. Therefore, they stay up too late and then drag through the next day in a state of exhaustion. Surprisingly, a 13- or 14-year-old actually needs more rest than when he or she was 9 or 10, simply because of the acceleration in growth.

In summary, your daughter is turning overnight from a girl into a woman. Some of the physical characteristics you are observing are part of the transformation. Do everything you can to facilitate it.

How can parents prepare their younger children for the assault on self-esteem that is almost certain to come in adolescence? That was a tough time for me, and I want it to be easier for my kids.

Well, one important approach is to teach boys and girls valuable skills with which they can compensate in years to come. They can benefit from learning something that will serve as the centerpiece of their self-concept during the difficult years. This would include learning about basketball, tennis, electronics, art, music or even raising rabbits for fun and profit. It's not so much what you teach your child. The key is that he or she learns something with which to feel good when the whole world seems to be saying, "Who are you and what is your significance as a human being?"

The teenager who has no answer to those questions is left unprotected at a very vulnerable

time of life. Developing and honing skills with which to compensate may be one of the most valuable contributions parents can make during the elementary school years. It may even be worth requiring your carefree kid to take lessons, practice, compete and learn something he or she will not fully appreciate for a few more years.

Should school children be required to wear clothes that they dislike?

Generally not. Children are very concerned about the threat of being laughed at by their friends and will sometimes go to great lengths to avoid that danger. Conformity is fueled by the fear of ridicule.

Teens, particularly, seem to feel, "The group can't laugh at me if I am identical to them." From this perspective, it's unwise to make a child endure unnecessary social humiliation. Children should be allowed to select their own clothes, within certain limits of budget and good taste.

Having a child diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder can paint a pretty bleak picture. Is there anything good you can tell us?

There are some advantages to having attention deficit hyperactivity disorder. In a sense, even the word disorder is misleading because the syndrome has many positive features. As Time reported, "(ADHD adults) see themselves as creative; their impulsiveness can be viewed as spontaneity; hyperactivity gives them enormous energy and drive; even their distractibility has the virtue of making them alert to changes in the environment. Kids with ADHD are wild, funny, effervescent. They have lots of life.'

Let's not forget, also, that ADHD can be treated successfully in many cases.

• U.S. Rep. Joe Skeen (R-NM) participated in the groundbreaking for the new $7.4 million USDA Jornada Experiment Range building at New Mexico State University. The Jornada Range had been established in 1912. The new center was to be used to study desert ecology, monitor arid range conditions and develop practices to restore and manage ranges for controlled livestock grazing that would protect the range. Skeen, a sheep rancher from Picacho in Lincoln County, was a member of the House Agricultural Appropriations Committee. He charged at the groundbreaking that environmentalists and government regulators were being unfair in their criticism of farmers and ranchers.

breakfast Meal benefits are invaluable

Natisha Hales Adventures in Dieting

In a busy world where no one seems to even have time to think for themselves, important things - you know, nutrition – seem to be an afterthought. The abundance of fast-food restaurants and grocery freezer food with processed fillers furthers this by "helping" us elimi-nate the "stress" of cooking after a busy day of work and school.

Instead, we're more fatigued and feel more stressed because our bodies aren't getting what they need and they're about to riot. So, keeping the great advice of my sister in mind and making small changes that lead to big results, I've decided to add something little in my diet that I have always skipped. OK, so breakfast isn't a little thing at all. It does, after all, break the fast between the 12 or so hours since you've eaten dinner. (When we're awake, how long is it after a meal before we feel like we need to eat again – three, four hours tops?) And doing the research, trusted sources, such as the Mayo Clinic, not only testify to the importance of breakfast, but they also talk about how it contributes to weight loss.

My morning cup of coffee doesn't cut it for breakfast either. In fact, New York's St. Barnabas Hospital Chief Dietitian Milton Stokes says I'm just setting myself up for failure, according to an article posted on WebMD.com.

Mayo Clinic Dietitian Katherine Zeratsky said eating breakfast assists with weight control because it reduces hunger later in the day. The scientific explanation: skipping breakfast leads to prolonged fasting, which can increase the body's insulin response. That increases fat storage and weight gain. So while eating breakfast helps control weight, skipping breakfast increases the risk of obesity. Yeah, didn't know that.

But now that I do know that, it makes perfect sense to me. On top of that, when I do eat breakfast, I have more energy. That's not only important for me, but it's important for Maya. She has a long day of learning ahead of her. Although I've been hiding my weight gain behind my stressful schedule, I real-ize that it's not like I have to make eggs Benedict for breakfast each morning or prepare made-from-scratch blueberry pancakes. A healthy breakfast is as simple as a boiled egg, a piece of fruit and a bowl of whole-grain cereal with skim milk. Now that I think about it, I have all of that in my fridge, and it takes 10 minutes to prepare (at the longest) and even less time to eat.

Residents eager to contribute to cancer research

By Natisha Hales Las Cruces Bulletin

It's not just one of the largest fundraisers in Las Cruces. It's a way to honor hundreds of local residents who have lost their battles with cancer and those who have survived. And it's a way for Las Crucens to do their part to fund cancer research and resources.

Event Chair Denise Nemiroff said at least 600 participants have registered for the annual Las Cruces Relay for Life to be held Friday, Aug. 27.

The Relay begins with open-ing ceremonies at 6 p.m. featuring the survivor lap, during which approximately 200 local cancer survivors will walk the first lap at the Maag Park T-ball complex on Hadley Avenue.

You cannot miss the first lap," said C.R. Blossoms owner Sharon Baron, who has participated in the Relay for Life at some level for the past six years. "Whether you know somebody on the track or not, it is very, very emotional because they're the survivors. It is absolutely remarkable. I have a hard time holding back tears when I talk about it.

Baron, along with co-chair Desarae Terrazas, is also spearheading efforts to honor those survivors and other loved ones during the Relay for Life by selling luminarias, moons and stars that can be donated in their names.

"It doesn't have to be someone who has a lost a battle or survived cancer, it can be for anyone you want it to be," Baron said.

The luminaria ceremony will be held at 9 p.m. Friday. Throughout the night, participants will jog, walk or run the track until the event ends at 8 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 28.

Cancer doesn't sleep, so we don't either," said Nemiroff, who has chaired the event for the past three years. At the age of 12, Nemiroff lost her father to lung cancer, and she "relays" for him.

Nemiroff is looking to the community to raise $110,000 this year, benefiting the American Cancer Society, which has a local Cancer Resource Center housed in the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center. The center, operated entirely by volunteers, is devoted to supporting cancer patients and assisting them from the day they are diagnosed.

"They've served nearly 300 people in the community just in the last year," Nemiroff said. "We're all volunteers, so the money is really going to those resources."

Donating time and talent

Nearly $70,000 has already been raised for the cause, Nemiroff said, and she is confident that the goal will be met by the end of the event, thanks to local businesses who are raising money or donating goods or services to the event.

Among approximately 60 area businesses that are contributing on "all different levels" is Memorial Medical Center, which has two teams raising funds and participating in the Relay. The hospital also is holding a silent auction to raise additional funds.

Best Buy will set up a Wii competition, and numerous food and arts and crafts vendors will be on hand during the event. Live music from local bands will play until midnight, and Element OP Productions will take over from there.

"They all donate their time and talent," Nemiroff said. "They're wonderful."

In addition to volunteering on the Luminaria Committee, C.R. Blossoms is also holding a raffle. Two quilts, on display at the flower shop, 1615 N. Solano Drive, will be given away at 11 p.m. Friday, Aug. 27. Tickets are available for $1 each or six for $5. During the Relay, the florist shop will sell carnations for $1 each.

"I hope we sell each and every one of them," Baron said, since all funds raised by vendors at the event will also go to the American Cancer Society for research and resources.

Hoping for a breakthrough

Those resources and breakthroughs in research will help patients such as Kris Turrentine, who has been fighting cancer for nearly 20 years.

Turrentine was diagnosed in 1995 with colon cancer that "came out of the blue for me," she said. Luckily, the tumor was discovered at an early stage and surgeons were able to successfully remove the cancer. Turrentine was considered cancer free for almost five years.

A lump that appeared in her breast turned out to be a malignant tumor, and again her fight continued. In 2000, it was suggested that Turrentine have a mastectomy.

'Of course I was up in arms," she said. "I had all imaginable tests done and decided to have the mastectomy as an outpatient.'

Her husband Jim Turrentine served as her nurse after the surgery, which was considered successful. After seven months of chemotherapy, Kris Turrentine thought she was in the clear.

But two years later, another tumor in the same vicinity was discovered in the chest wall. This time, she was prompted to undergo radiation therapy, which was considered successful.

However, a little more than a year ago, during her regular CT/ PET scan, another tumor was discovered in her liver.

"Each time, I think it can't be," Turren-tine said, "but now it's

She has been diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer, and oncologists discovered that Turrentine's body was unable to naturally fight the cancerous cells, and without that natural ability, the cancer would just keep coming back, no matter the treatment.

Turrentine is in her 12th and final week of chemotherapy at the MMC Cancer Center and is taking Herceptin, a medication designed to kill cancer cells.

Each time she undergoes chemo, she endures terrible side effects.

"If I'll have the treatment on a Friday afternoon, by Saturday night I'll be in a fetal position for the next 36 hours," Turrentine said. "You just feel so bad, you just want to pull up the covers, and you want everyone and everything to go away.

"The nausea invades the whole body, and there's nothing you can do about it. If it wasn't for my husband, I wouldn't have eaten at all. Jim forced me to eat because I wouldn't have done it otherwise."

Turrentine's story touched not only her good friend artist Linda Gendall, but Gendall's 7-year-old grandson Mason Blatner as well.

> Curious Mason inquired more about the disease after his grandmother told him she was going to have lunch with a friend with cancer.

> tions, and I explained as much as I knew," Gendall said. "Kris and I had lunch, and later that day, I was in the studio. Mason loves to go to the studio with me, and he painted a cheeseburger. "When he was done, he > told me, 'I want you to give this to your friend so she can give it to her doctors, and they can buy or sell it for new machines that will make your friend better.'

"At that point, he didn't even know her name, but he wanted to help."

Emotions running high, Turrentine accepted the painting and took it to the MMC Cancer Center. Since the hospital already was holding a fundraiser for Relay for Life, Mason's painting, as well as photographs and a story, will be part of the silent auction. "(Oncologist) Dr. (William) Adler was totally blown away," Turrentine said.

Though Mason lives in Albuquerque, Gendall said the family would come down for the event.

This also will be the first year Turrentine has felt well enough to give more than the usual to the Relay for Life.

"I have only made contributions in the past," she said. "But this year, I will be participating.

She hopes that she will continue to feel well throughout the year, although she said doctors will not know if the medication is working for another few weeks. She will still undergo a CT/PET scan every six months in addition to heart scans because of the medication.

"It's very intensive," she said. "But I know if I don't continue, it will only be a matter of months before another tumor comes up.

"I know the medication is kind of iffy, but they say people have lasted 10 years. I'm hoping that when my 10 years is up, so to speak, they will have something new."

And that's the goal of Relay for Life, Nemiroff said - to find a breakthrough to help people like Turrentine and children who have lost a parent to cancer.

"I know there's a cure," she said. "There has to be a cure so other kids don't have to go through this.'

Goodbye overdraft

I've recently been prompted by my bank that I should talk to a bank representative or teller immediately.

The message I got from the ATM was that significant changes were occurring to the way the institution processes the way I withdraw money.

Are they lowering my withdrawal limit? Charging an additional non-company ATM fee? Issuing new ATM cards? I was curious.

Turns out, the bank would soon eliminate overdraft fees from my checking account. Well, kind of.

My institution wanted me to opt in to a program that charges a fee for overdrawing my checking account, something they had been doing since I first got my student checking account in 2002. Had they finally heard my pleas? Did

Had they finally heard my pleas? Did enough customers respond with sob stories about how a 50-cent miscalculation cost them hundreds of dollars in overdraft fees? Or perhaps their reserves were healthy enough that they could eliminate the automatic service altogether.

Not exactly.

A new federal law, Regulation E, requires customers to have to opt in to any program that charges a fee for overdrafting an account with an ATM or debit card. The hefty fees can no longer be a basic component of a checking account.

Apparently, enough consumers complained to federal regulators that banks were "preying" on struggling account holders with a range of fees. This is good news for college students

This is good news for college students and low-income folks who need a basic checking account to process payments and establish credit.

Bank of America recently announced it would do away with overdraft fees altogether. It's not even giving its customers an option – they will simply not spend a customer's money if they don't have it.

Most of the other bigs are pushing strong marketing campaigns to save the service, hence the ATM message that's been prominently displayed before I withdraw money during the last two months.

I have to admit, as a writer and someone who deals with public relations and marketing types on a daily basis, I noticed the language being used to allow

Peter Ibarbo of the Ibarbo Consulting Group, a business assistance startup that works with companies seeking to export their products to international markets, speaks during the 2010 Business Owners and Entrepreneurs Symposium Friday, Aug. 13, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

The new face of business Entrepreneurs come together to discuss local challenges

By Gabriel Vasquez Las Cruces Bulletin

Problems in the small business world present new opportunities, but uncertainty with new regulation is preventing many business owners from making confident operational and investment decisions.

That was the consensus of small business owners, economists and other participants of the Entrepreneurs and Business Owners Symposium held Friday, Aug. 13, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

"When new regulation is presented and there's a threat of it being imposed, it creates a huge, huge difference (for a business)," said Peter Ibarbo of the Ibarbo Consulting Group, a company that helps businesses export their products and services to international markets. "We just went through this situation at the border with cap and trade."

Ibarbo was referring to three industrial parks in Santa Teresa that were reporting high levels of carbon emissions, after which regulators were pushing for action to bring the parks into compliance with the state's clean air standards.

"The readings that were being performed in that region were from a meter that was right next to a landfill," Ibarbo said. "All of the industries along the border were under threat of having to implement, at an increased cost, a system to comply with whatever cap-andtrade was being implemented. "That could have really hurt their business." Ibarbo said there are no heavy-polluting facilities along the Santa Teresa corridor.

For Theresa Gonzales, vice president of RTD Hardware, health care reform presents the biggest uncertainty to her business.

"Health care has always been very expensive for us, we have never been able to offer it to our employees," she said. "Partly because of the expense and our number of employees."

RTD Hardware employs 10, Gonzales said. Katie Hayes, executive director of congressional and public affairs for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, has been traveling the nation explaining the requirements and future regulation associated with health care See Symposium on page B2

Las Cruces faring better than most

City makes modest job gain despite the downturn economy

By Gabriel Vasquez

Leaving Las Cruces, the economy goes from bad to worse.

That was the message delivered by three economics professors at New Mexico State University during a televised economic update forum organized by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, Aug. 11, at KRWG-TV studios.

"As you go from local, to state and to the national (economy), it gets worse," said NMSU economics professor Chris Erickson. "The bad news is that we have a weak economy, the good news is that it could be a lot worse and we're not as bad as the average for the nation."

After 12 consecutive months of job loss, Las Cruces made modest employment gain in May and June, the latest numbers available, Erickson said.

The Las Cruces economy bottomed out in September 2009, after which it gradually decreased its negative employment growth for seven months before finally adding jobs.

"We're in the process of recovery at this point," Erickson said. "The fact we're gaining jobs in Las Cruces is good news."

jobs in Las Cruces is good news." And paradoxically, New Mexico has experienced growth in personal income during the recession, despite the decline in employment.

"That includes payraises, profits and payments from the federal government," Erickson said. "We continue to see weak, but positive growth in that area."

Las Cruces' southern New Mexico neighbors – Grant, Lincoln, Luna, and Otero counties – remain in the red, with negative employment growth since June 2009. The hardest hit is Grant County, whose employment rate dipped 6.2 percent in one year, mostly driven by problems in the mining industry which will not likely recover, Erickson said.

Nationally, the unemployment rate held steady at 9.5 percent in July and lost 131,000 jobs despite earlier job gains this year. Private industry gained 71,000 jobs during that month, but 143,000 government jobs were eliminated as the U.S. Census wrapped up its decennial count, according to statistics from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"For the first few months of this year we had some rather good gains in employment, but the last two months have been in decline again," said NMSU economics professor Jim Peach. "We are looking at something like 2014 before we will once again have the number of jobs we were having before the beginning of the recession."

The cause of the recession, the national housing market, remains sluggish.

See Update on page B2

New Mexico State University professors Jim Peach, Chris Erickson and Ken Martin discuss the economy during a televised update held by the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce Friday,

Update

"We have not yet recovered," Peach said. "On housing prices, we're a little bit up from where we were a year ago but still way behind. If you look at housing starts and new houses sold, those numbers are not very encouraging."

Peach predicted an increase in foreclosures for the remainder of the year.

"Housing is simply not fixed," he said.

The credit market is just as bad, if not worse, as banks continue to pad their reserves and limit lending opportunities.

"Traditionally, banks, collectively in the U.S., would have $3, $4 or $5 billion in excess reserves," Peach said. "Since late 2008, we've been at nearly $1 trillion dollars in excess reserves ... 250 times what we normally have in the banking system."

NMSU business professor Ken Martin said the stock market has experienced turbulent highs and lows since April, largely brought on by the Greek sovereign debt crisis and the May 6 "flash crash."

"Investors thought Greece was going to default on its debt," Martin said. "Since then, the European Central Bank stepped in with a rescue plan led by Germany.

"European banks underwent a stress test and most banks passed with flying colors. This went a long way to stabilizing those markets." The May 6 flash crash involved U.S. corporate stocks and was followed by an immediate rebound that recorded the second largest point swing in history and the largest one-day point decline, according to the Dow Jones.

Aua. 13.

"Liquidity evaporated from high-frequency traders and some stocks lost a tremendous amount of value," Martin said. "This had the effect of really scaring off a lot of individual investors."

Erickson said the local economy will continue to outperform its neighbors, as well as the state and national economy because of its diverse base of employment and the recent influx of troops from Fort Bliss.

"We have the advantage of having Fort Bliss in our backyard," he said. "The very rapid increase in troop levels at Fort Bliss has resulted in a pretty major stimulus to the Paso del Norte region, which includes Las Cruces."

Erickson said the military base has added at least 1 percent to local economic growth the past five years.

Peach offered a long-term solution to resume economic growth and increase job growth at a faster pace.

"I think we need to do an awful lot on infrastructure and transportation," he said. "We need massive public works projects such as the interstate highway system proposed by Eisenhower in the '50s.

"We need bold programs that will spur technological advancement and employment growth."

reform to various business organizations since the act was first passed.

"Employers wanted real reform," she said. "We felt we were paying too much and not knowing what quality we were getting and not knowing why our premiums were still going up when we didn't have any major incidents." To improve the ability of small businesses to purchase insurance for employees, a system of insurance exchange pools will be created in each state by 2014 to allow small businesses to buy services in bulk, allowing them more leverage and flexibility in the insurance they offer.

"We are hopeful these insurance exchanges will be designed in such a way that it will allow for greater competition," Hayes said. "More benefit options that will allow (businesses) to navigate through the choices as a small business and individuals to have better information to make those decisions."

Tax credits up to 35 percent for businesses with 50 or less employees that offer insurance are already available and will increase to 50 percent in 2014, when most of the provisions in the health bill come into effect.

"This is such a huge bill and such a huge new law that it's going to take a long time to let customers to resume their overdraft fee structure was a bit vague.

Nowhere was the word "overdraft" used in the solicitation to initiate additional communication about the service. The messages had a sense of urgency (they were prominently displayed on my bank's website, too). I thought I would be losing out on a critical service or that additional fees would somehow be imposed on my account if I didn't respond. it fully go into effect," she said.

Bryn Davis, operations manager for Sapphire Energy, said although pending federal regulation has created an atmosphere of uncertainty in the small business community, businesses in New Mexico are not over-regulated or carry heavier tax burdens than other states.

"The cost of compliance is a given entity that you have to deal with," he said. "But it's no more costly in Las Cruces and in New Mexico than other places. The things that make it tough are new regulations and trying to figure out their impact."

Bill Gilmer, vice president of the El Paso branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, agrees that regulationfueled uncertainty is playing a factor into a sluggish recovery.

"That's exactly what people are concerned about – not so much where the economy is going – but where a whole screen of long-term policy issues are going to go," he said. "That makes it difficult for (business owners) to make commitments. Whether it's job commitments, capital spending commitments – those are decisions that are very difficult to make right now."

The symposium was sponsored by the Arrowhead Center, Doña Ana Community College Small Business Development Center and the New Mexico Procurement and Technical Assistance Program.

Don't get me wrong, the service is valuable to people who absolutely must make a purchase even if they don't have the funds, and pay for it later, if they can.

Take for instance running out of gas on a rural, desolate highway. Or accidentally overspending and being short on a 200-mile bus ticket back home. In these extreme circumstances, a $36 dollar overdraft fee is justifiable.

But a $36 fee for a 50-cent budget miscalculation just doesn't sit right with me.

Good thing I don't have to worry about it anymore.

Former mayor opposes city's use of eminent domain

Bill Mattiace featured speaker at Las Cruces Business Network meeting

By Jimmy Currier

Former Las Cruces Mayor Bill Mattiace, who now serves as vice president of governmental affairs for the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, spoke about eminent domain, wilderness and gross receipts tax revenue at the Las Cruces Business Network meeting Friday, Aug. 13.

Eminent domain has become a hot topic in Las Cruces because of the city's plans to file a condemnation suit against Moongate Water Co.

Mattiace and several at the business network meeting disagreed with the city's proposed use of eminent domain.

"It's simply a forced buy," Mattiace said. "I've never been a fan of eminent domain."

With the economy suffering and gross receipts tax revenue down in Las Cruces and throughout New Mexico, the use of condemnation and eminent domain is a terrible signal to businesses, Mattiace said.

"The worst thing you want to do is send out a message to companies that want to come to Las Cruces that 'Oh! That's the council that wants to use condemnation," he said. "Maybe we should go to Santa Teresa or another community that doesn't use the threat of eminent domain."

The City of Las Cruces has spent more than $1 million on legal fees in its pursuit to condemn Moongate Water Co. Mattiace said that money could be put to better use.

'They've spent a million and a half on lawyers. I would have looked for better lawyers," he said. "The dollars should go to improving neighborhoods, community centers and affordable housing, not condemning small private businesses.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima said the condemnation process is solely motivated by the need to preserve water in the Jornada Bolson, and he wouldn't have considered the eminent domain action if Moongate depended more on 66 I've never wells in the Mesilla Bolson, according to the Aug. 13 edition of the Las Cruces Bulletin.

Moongate brought water service to the East Mesa in 1971 and has more than 4,000 customers. The city argues that Moongate is depleting the Jornada Bolson – a major underground aquifer primarily north of U.S. Highway 70 - without recharging it. Moongate argues that the city is a greater drain to the Jornada Bolson.

East Mesa resident Lynne Wainman said she is happy with the service she receives from

Moongate and thinks the city's eminent domain process is wrong. She said her rates would more than likely increase if the city took over the water service because she lives outside the city limits and would have to pay a surcharge.

"They built a family business serving people with quality service, and the city says, 'This is financially good for our coffers, let's take them over," she said. "What kind of message does this send?"

Harold "Chub" Foreman, a former New Mexico state senator and currently president and co-owner of Valley Leasing & Development Inc., is concerned about an eminent domain domino effect.

"What concerns me is what if the city doesn't like another water company and decides they're going to shut them down, too," he said.

Mattiace agreed with the domino-effect scenario and compared the city's actions to when the city spent $30 million trying to condemn El Paso Electric Co.

Another hot topic issue Mattiace discussed was the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks Wilderness Act. Mattiace and the GLCCC opposes federal legislation that would designate 241,400 acres as wilderness and 99,150 acres as National Conservation Areas because it could create entry barriers to law enforcement. The areas include the Organ Mountains and the Potrillo Mountains Complex, near the U.S.-Mexico border.

"I love the Organ Mountains. It's a pristine gem in the valley," he said. "But I'm concerned with so much federal land that does not have public access or public monitoring."

Mattiace suggested making the land a national park, a national recreation area or a federal wilderness area.

just about anything. Home repairs, vacation, supplemental retirement income, purchasing an RV, obtaining in-home care, paying for prescription drugs and paying off bills or purchasing an annuity are just some of the possibilities.

Since its creation in 1989, the reverse mortgage has helped thousands of seniors 62 years of age or older use the equity in their homes to supplement their incomes, provide financial security and raise their standards of living to levels that would be otherwise difficult to achieve. With a little due diligence and a bit of planning, you might find that a reverse mortgage might be just the financial tool you're looking for.

Need some extra cash? Flip your finances with a reverse mortgage

What do actor Robert Wagner, former U.S. Sen. Fred Thompson and the late Peter Graves have in common? They're all TV pitchmen for companies involved in the reverse mortgage business.

What's a reverse mortgage? According to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), it is a "special type of home loan that lets a homeowner convert a portion of the equity in his or her home into cash.

Hold it right there! "... lets a homeowner convert a portion of the equity in his or her home into cash?" What's so special about that? Isn't that how a not-so-special, aka "normal," home loan works? Well, yes, to a point.

With a normal home loan, you sign the papers, take the cash and pay back the loan over an agreed-upon period of time. With a reverse mortgage, just the opposite is true. You sign the papers and take the cash (either in a lump sum or monthly payment), but don't have to repay the loan until you no longer use the home as your principal residence. Here's how it works:

To be eligible for the nation's most popular reverse mortgage, HUD's Home Equity Conversion Mortgage (HECM), you'll have to be 62 years of age or older, and must live in the home and either own your home outright or have a low mortgage balance that can be paid off at the closing with proceeds from the reverse loan. The amount of the money you'll get from a HECM depends upon your age, the appraised value of your home and current interest rates. In general, the older you are and the more valuable your home (and the less you owe on it), the more money you'll receive.

The location of your home also has a bearing on the amount of your loan. The size of an HECM depends on the maximum FHA loan limit, which varies by county and is adjusted annually. Currently, the FHA loan limits for Doña Ana County range from $271,050 for a one-family home to $521,250 for a four-family home. Your home must be a single-family dwelling or a two-to-four unit property that you own and occupy. Townhouses, detached homes, units in condominium complexes and some manufactured homes are also eligible.

Once you've been approved for your reverse mortgage, you'll have to decide how you'd like to receive the proceeds of your loan delivered to you. According to HUD, there are five methods by which you can receive your funds. Your first option is referred to as tenure. Choosing this option will result in your proceeds being disbursed to you in equal monthly payments for life, as long as at least one qualifying borrower is alive and continues to occupy the property as a principal residence.

Another option is called term, which will provide you with equal monthly payments for a fixed period of months (or term). The amount of the payments and number of months are chosen in advance. The third option is like a traditional line of credit. Under this provision, you may take unscheduled payments or installments at the time and in amounts that you choose until the line of credit is totally tapped out.

No. 4 on the list of choices is the modified tenure option. Selecting this alternative allows you to receive your proceeds through a combination of a line of credit and regular monthly payments to you for life, as long as you remain in your home. If you desire to have a combination of a line of credit and regular monthly payments to you for a fixed period of months, you'll want to choose option No. 5 – the modified term.

What if you outlive the term of the loan? Not to worry. HUD says you'll never be required to repay the loan as long as you or your co-borrower continues to live in the house and keeps the taxes and insurance current. HUD also says you can never owe more than your home's value. When you do sell your home, or no longer use it for the primary residence, you and your estate will repay the cash you received from the reverse mortgage, plus interest and other fees, to the lender. The remaining equity in your home, if any, belongs to you and your heirs.

So what can you do with the proceeds of a reverse mortgage? According to the National Reverse Mortgage Loan Association (NRM-LA) and HUD, you can use the money for

Return student finds hope, support Over the Rainbow

Money helps pay for books, supplies, day care and more

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

When 27-year-old Dalys De Arroyo decided to return to school, she knew it would be hard as far as finances went, but she was determined to enroll.

When she found out she had received the Over the Rainbow Scholarship from the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM), she realized the struggles wouldn't be quite so hard.

"Because our financial situation wasn't great, I was concerned about paying for school," said De Arroyo, who is currently attending Doña Ana Community College and studying to become a diagnostic medical sonographer. "The scholarship helped me in so many ways. I was able to purchase the materials I needed and get together everything to start my first semester."

The Over the Rainbow Scholarship provides $500 to women such as De Arroyo who are facing financial need but are committed to a higher education. The money can be used toward the cost of books, day care or other expenses not covered by regular tuition scholarships.

Nancy Baker, department head of government at New Mexico State University started the Over the Rainbow Scholarship within the CFSNM in memory of her mother, Dorothy Baker.

Dorothy Baker grew up as a coal miner's daughter in Appalachia and always had a strong desire to attend college. With that dream came numerous obstacles, including finances. As the oldest in a large family of working poor, she did not receive help with funding from her parents. In addition to the financial barrier, women's colleges in Virginia in the 1940s did not permit their students to work and take classes.

Nancy Baker grew to admire her mother's appreciation of education and her desire to see everyone have the same opportunity to attend school for higher education. When her mother passed away in 2004, Baker created the Over the Rainbow Scholarship through the CFSNM.

For more info

For more information on the Over the Rainbow Scholarship call the foundation at 521-4794 or visit www.cfsnm.org.

"Throughout her life, she fervently believed in the power of education to transform women's lives," Nancy Baker said. "This passionate commitment to helping women achieve their educational dreams is the foundation of the Over the Rainbow Scholarship. The name of the scholarship comes from the fact that Dorothy's mother Pearl, who only was allowed to attend school through the third grade, named her after a book Pearl remembered as a child. It was, of course, 'The Wizard of Oz."

Scholarships created through the Community Foundation allow community members like De Arroyo to focus on their education without focusing on logistics. The CFSNM is able to award funding and keep accurate records for tax purposes, and the scholarship committees are able to make recommendations to the Community Foundation before the foundation awards the money.

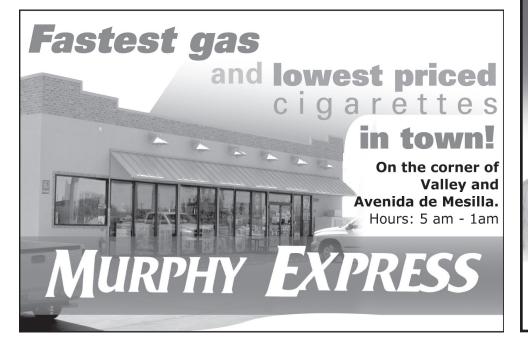

The Over the Rainbow Scholarship is awarded to undergraduate women students who enroll at DACC or NMSU.

"I really appreciate SpringBoard! for the work they do to help women like me with an ambition to continue on with professional goals," De Arroyo said. "An education is so important because it will give me the opportunity to get a job which will help me, help my family and increase my knowledge."

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is dedicated to helping the Southern New Mexico community now, and in the future. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM offers opportunities for local people who want to give back locally. The beauty of the foundation is that donors need not be wealthy to make a positive difference in the lives of people in our area. Through the establishment of permanent funds, donors can sustain local charitable organizations, provide scholarships to area students and fulfill wishes that are close to their heart. Through our planned giving programs, donors can honor loved COMMUNITY ones or leave a legacy that benefits the people of southern New Mexico for generations to come. The CFSNM FOUNDATION can advise donors on how best to Of Southern New Mexico maximize contributions, no matter what size. For more information, visit

EBID sets closing dates

Sept. 1 is order deadline By Marvin Tessneer

The Elephant Butte Irrigation District water supply is running low, and in response, the board of directors has set Sept. 1 as the last order date, said EBID water master Ricardo Bejarano.

The final water delivery date will be Sept. 7, Bejarano said.

The EBID dispatch number is 524-8003. The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation had allocated 268,585 acre-feet to the EBID for the 2010 irrigation season, and the district granted 2-acre-feet to the farmers. During July, the district delivered 45,172 acre-feet of water to 2,817 farms, and during the first part of August, the EBID diverted 19,653 more acre-feet into farmers' fields, leaving an allocation balance of 38,877 acre-feet, Bejarano said.

An acre-foot of water covers an acre 1 foot deep and contains 325,900 gallons.

As of Aug. 1, storage in the reservoirs was down a total of 504,520 acre-feet – 443,480 in Elephant Butte and 61,040 in Caballo. Last year at this time, the figures were 698,967 acre-feet total, 634,387 in Elephant Butte and 64,580 in Caballo, according to the bureau.

Sam's gets new look, expanded selection

Sam's Club has completed a cosmetic upgrade of its Las Cruces store, 2711 N. Telshor Blvd. The new look also expands popular shopping categories and adds additional items, according to the company. The new layout is designed to make shopping easier and faster by placing the most purchased products in more convenient locations. The company expects to remodel 150 facilities similarly this year.

Summer Science Institute completes fifth year

"A Science Smorgasbord," was held at New Mexico State University's College of Engineering June 14-18. The event, part of Reaching the Pinnacle's Annual Summer Science Institute, promotes science and technology. This vear, 22 area high school students participated in hands-on activities mixed with demonstrations by science, technology, engineering and mathematics faculty and other STEM experts so that students were able to experience STEM both from the practitioners' experiences as well as through their own. This year students built model bridges, watched chemistry in action, built and launched rockets and saw cuttingedge research on squids. For more information on RASSI and other programs sponsored by RTP, visit rtp.nmsu.edu.

Bingaman's bill to strengthen border security

A measure cosponsored by U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman aimed at strengthening border security has been signed by President Obama.

The bill sets aside a total of $600 million for border security activities. Specifically, the legislation would add 1,500 new immigration enforcement officers, including 1,000 new Border Patrol agents to form a "strike force" to be deployed to areas that need it most, 250 new Customs and Border Protection officers at ports of entry and 250 new Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents to fight weapons smuggling, human trafficking and drug organizations.

"We've made a lot of progress in recent years to secure our border, but there is more work to do. This bill invests in border security personnel – as well as the tools they need – to step-up efforts to fight drug trafficking and the smuggling of contraband across the border," Bingaman said.

Among other things, the bill also sets aside funding for the following:

- $14 million for communication equipment for new officers
- $32 million to deploy unmanned aerial vehicles along the border
- $6 million to deploy forward operating bases along the border
- $8 million for Federal Law Enforcement Training Center
- $10 million for Federal Judiciary resources for increased caseload
- $196 million in additional funding for the Department of Justice to hire prosecutors, ATF, DEA, FBI, and U.S. Marshal agents

The bill is paid for by raising fees on H-1B visas (for temporary skilled workers) for companies who have more than 50 percent of their employees on H-1B visas (this does not affect U.S. tech companies). It also raises fees on L visas (given to multi-national transferees) for foreign companies.

B10 | Business Las Cruces Bulletin Friday, August 20, 2010 In Good Company: Literacy Volunteers of Doña Ana County

The county's best-kept secret

Literacy volunteers work to improve education, reading for local workforce

By Gabriel Vasquez Las Cruces Bulletin

It's a startling figure, and one that reinforces the need for their services 50 percent of adults in Doña Ana County read at a fourth-grade level or below.

That's according to Sheila Mc-Caskill, chair of the advisory council for the Literacy Volunteers of Doña

Details

Why a literate workforce is good for business:

- Increased competitiveness
- Expansion of current and potential customer base
- Improved work quality and customer service
- Better communication throughout the company
- Improved employee morale, job satisfaction and retention
- Improved employee safety
- Access to qualified job-seekers

Ana County (LV-DAC). "That's considered functionally illiterate," McCaskill said. "Twentyfive percent of New Mexicans statewide don't have a high school degree or GED.

That translates into not having a literate workforce to support the businesses that are here and those that want to come here.'

LV-DAC is the county's hidden gem, McCaskill said, because it helps hundreds of people in the county become well-versed in basic reading, writing and math. At no cost.

"Our program is the best kept secret in Doña Ana County," McCaskill said. "The program is free to learners, the training is free to tutors.'

The program was established in 1984 as a community response to local needs. LV-DAC operates solely with the help of volunteers and currently serves about 500 learners in the county, McCaskill said.

LV-DAC works in conjunction with the Adult Basic Education division at Doña Ana Community College and is funded by the New Mexico Coalition for Literacy, but is lacking the necessary operating funds to expand its operations to effectively serve the entire county, McCaskill said.

'Our other funding comes from grants and individual contributions, but right now our situation is extremely limited," McCaskill said. "With the economy the way it is, our major grantors have cut back or cut us out completely. It's a challenge,' she said.

The program gives preference to the least educated and serves the communities of Las Cruces, Hatch, Chaparral, Anthony and Sunland Park, although volunteers in the southernmost communities are lacking.

"People don't want to drive to Anthony," said LV-DAC volunteer Jacqueline Kiefer. "It's very difficult to get those people in satellite regions to come out and help, but we keep plugging along.'

Kiefer, who recently moved to Las Cruces from Chicago, said she saw the need for help and decided to make it her calling.

"When I came here from suburban Chicago, I saw a tremendous need that wasn't being filled," she said. "These people fall through the cracks.

When I found that this organization existed I said 'I have to be a part of this.' I have to try to make a change in somebody's life.

Currently, there are only 100 LV-DAC volunteers for 500 learners, Kiefer said.

"Our ideal situation is to have them one-on-one," she said. "But some of our volunteers choose to host group sessions, which helps, but we really need more volunteers."

Volunteer tutors commit to at least twice-a-week sessions and can choose to teach either English as a Second Language, math or basic financial skills. Many of the learners who come to LV-DAC are first identified by the Adult Education Division of DACC, which tests them in comprehensive math and reading skills. Most of the learners enrolled in the program come from the Hispanic community, although there is a large section of the Asian community, McCaskill said.

Literacy courses also include ba-sic financial teaching if necessary, which is what McCaskill teaches.

"It's consumer math, something that's practical and they can relate to," she said. "Adults can grasp concepts much easier when it's part of their day-to-day life.

"How do you figure out a finance charge on your credit card? How about discount shopping? We teach in a variety of ways because it makes it real for them and its easier for them to grasp the concepts that way."

Most of the tutoring in Las Cruces takes place at the Quintana Learning Center at DACC, although volunteers can choose to meet with learners at a location of their choice.

"Right now getting more tutors is the most important thing for us," McCaskill said. "We have a backlog of learners. If we don't match them soon, they lose interest and they disappear.

Very close behind that need is more funding to underwrite the expenses of the program, such as supplies and materials.

The only requirement for learners is that they be 18 and over and show a need for the services.

LV-DAC will host a Monte Carlo Night Fundraiser Friday, Oct. 15, to re-introduce the organization to the community and to raise funds. They are currently looking for more sponsors in addition to Wal-Mart and North Main Family Health.

To volunteer, enroll in the program or become a sponsor, call 527-7544.

Las Cruces Bulletin European deficit holds a few lessons for the United States U.S. economic circumstances differ from UK, Greece

Europe is on an austerity binge. It began with the debt crisis in Greece and has spread to Ireland, Spain and other European countries. Germany has announced a program that would save $100 billion by 2014, halving the German deficit as a percentage of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) to 2.5 percent. The United Kingdom, currently running Europe's largest deficit as a percentage of GDP at 12 percent, has adopted a radical deficit cutting program that includes program reductions, tax increases and wage freezes.

U.S. politicians point to the Europeans as an example for the United States. But the lessons from Europe for us are limited. The United States and the European Union member states start at very different places.

The differences have been highlighted by the recent recession, which originated in the U.S. housing market. Using this fact, many opined that our country's status as the premium financial safe haven would be undermined. Observers commented on the potential erosion of the dollar as a global reserve currency.

In that event, the opposite has occurred. The dollar's position as the world's reserve currency is stronger now than before. The U.S. remains the preferred safe haven, as testified by our extremely low interest rate. In fact, the subprime mortgage crisis has done more to undermine the Euro than the dollar.

It seems that we may have shady mortgage lenders, but our economy is fundamentally stronger than those of many EU states. The Greek fiscal crisis laid bare this fact by revealing shady accounting practices and excessive leveraging not perpetrated by private corporations but by national governments.

Historically, a country facing a financial crisis like Greece would float its currency, but this isn't possible when Greece is part of the Euro zone. Some have argued that Greece should exit the EU, get its financial house in order and then re-enter. Such a suggestion is not realistic as it seems unlikely that a newly issued drachma would find many buyers. Moreover, the exit of Greece could well mean the end of the Euro zone, a fundamental corner stone of European unity.

Other differences undermined the relevance of the European fiscal austerity program for the U.S. Interest rates in Europe are higher than in the U.S. This is a symptom of fiscal excess of Europe, but also provides a means by which Europe can avoid a double dip recession while balancing its budget. To wit: The European Central Bank can lower interest rates to offset the fiscal belt tightening.

In the U.S., historically low interest rates persist, indicating a continuing strong international appetite for U.S. government securities. It also means that monetary policy has little ability to stimulate the economy. Deficit fighting actions could well push us into a double dip recession that the Federal Reserve could do little to prevent.

Deficit fighting by the U.S. could push an already shaky economy into a stall. Given the delicate nature of our economy, this is not recession fighting.

Fair may become quarterly event Organizer: First-time event is well-received by public

An organizer for Masterminds de Las Cruces, a small business development and networking group that hosted the Southern New Mexico Small Business Benefits Fair at Doña Ana Community College Thursday, Aug. 12, said the event went well and the group hopes to host the event on a quarterly basis.

We had a good mix of employers, students and just the general public stopping by. Even the business people really seemed to enjoy it," said Eldeliza Nava of Prepaid Legal Services, one of the organizations hosting the fair.

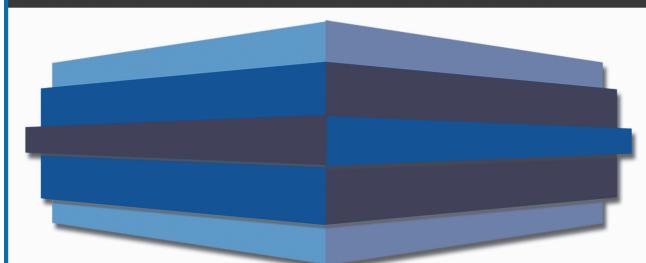

We had a good response for a first-time event and we hope to be able to do it quarterly."

The fair was developed as an opportunity for residents of southern New Mexico and employees of area businesses to learn about the various companies and services that are available to them. Companies represented at the event put on displays showing how they could help residents and businesses save money, make money and identify potential resources for running a successful business.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF Erica Lynn

ON'T LET NEW MEXICO OFFICIALS REMOVE YOUR RIGHT TO K FROM THE LAS CRUCES BULL

Keep Public Notices in your local newspaper!

Pending future legislation may remove your right to read public notices in newspapers, moving them from the public domain to radio and TV stations. We're concerned. And you should be too.

What is a Public Notice?

A public notice informs citizens of government related actions and other public activities that affect citizens' everyday lives. A public notice has four elements:

• INDEPENDENT: A public notice is published in a forum independent of the government. In Las Cruces and Doña Ana County, the notices are published weekly in the Las Cruces Bulletin. Daily, these notices are available online.

• ARCHIVABLE: Public notices are archived for one year in a secure, and publicly available format at www.lascrucesbulletin.com. Also, the public can access 40 years of public notices for free at the Thomas Branigan Memorial library, or by coming to the Bulletin office at 840 N. Telshor Blvd. Suite E.

• ACCESSIBLE: Las Cruces Bulletin public notices can be accessed by all citizens. Public notices for a majority of the newspapers in the state can be found in print, online and on the New Mexico Press website, www.publicnoticeads.com/NM, anytime, anywhere, free of charge.

• VERIFIABLE: The public and the source of the notice are able to verify that the notice was published, by a notarized affidavit provided by the publisher.

Why publish Public Notices in the Las Cruces Bulletin?

• The Las Cruces Bulletin has more than 40 years of experience publishing public notices and the community relies on finding notices in their local newspaper. By mastering the process of publishing a notice, the Las Cruces Bulletin provides a valuable public service at a low cost.

• The Las Cruces Bulletin is a single, convenient location for notices for Las Cruces and Doña Ana County. Because the Las Cruces Bulletin publishes notices online and in print, we offer wide access to a broad range of people in different demographic groups. Whether accessed at a school, Las Cruces library, coffee shop or in the comfort of one's own home, the Las Cruces Bulletin can be read any time, day or night.

• The Las Cruces Bulletin authenticates notices. The Las Cruces Bulletin serves as an official printed record of publication and provide sworn affidavits that ads were published along with physical proof. The Las Cruces Bulletin can prove that a public notice has been properly run according to law to satisfy due process requirements. Electronic media present serious challenges to authentication, and make public actions vulnerable in litigation.

• Technical notices should be in writing. Many public notices are written in precise legal language that may require more than one reading for comprehension. Foreclosure notices, unclaimed property notices and tax sales notices can present difficult and technical language that will not be easily understood over the airwaves. Furthermore, a public notice printed in a newspaper produces a permanent record. Radio, TV and the Internet does not, nor does it assure timeliness. Also, a newspaper is archived for years and is not subject to computer crashes and hackers.

The Las Cruces Bulletin is your watchdog. Don't let that role change now. Contact your local state legislators today and voice your opinion.

Feliz Cumpleaños J. Paul Taylor

Birthday party set for Mesilla Plaza

By David Edwards Las Cruces Bulletin

There is going to be a big birthday party on Saturday, Aug. 28, in the Mesilla Plaza, and it wasn't J. Paul Taylor's idea. Even if it is his 90th birthday – he normally prefers to celebrate a little more privately. That's just the way he is, perfectly happy not drawing attention to himself. He just goes about working for good, making a positive impact on people's lives and contributing to the community and the state.

Taylor has always been that way; his devotion to education would seem to indicate a desire to improve the lives of others. His public service, serving for 18 years in the state Legislature – where he was the most "un-politicianesque" politician – was marked by constantly keeping the needs of the underprivileged at the top of his agenda.

When asked what he feels his legacy will be, he hesitated only slightly before saying, "My interest in cultural affairs, but that also touches on education. That was my life."

Taylor conducts a school tour of his home in Mesilla.

His time in the Legislature was something he never expected to do. It was, he says, "pushed" on him. He was first asked to run for governor, which he immediately dismissed as "absurd."

A couple of weeks later, he was asked to run for state representative, but was hesitant because his opponent was a Hispanic female.

"I had spent so many years trying to elevate both Hispanics and females that I didn't want to run. But since I was Hispanic they finally convinced me," he said.

His campaign manager thought he was a terrible campaigner because instead of just passing out the brochures, he would visit with everyone.

"I wasn't going to tell them to vote for me, I said I would give them the brochure and say, 'Here's some information about me, and if you want to vote for me – fine, and if you want to vote for the other person – fine.' She (my manager) would just shrug her shoulders," he said. Taylor's values were always put above politics.

Taylor and his late wife Mary donated their home along with two adjoining commercial properties - one of which will be converted to an interpretive center - to the Museum of New Mexico to be operated as a state monument. Officially the Taylor-Barela-Reynolds-Mesilla State Monument, the house is filled to the brim with historic furniture, art objects, paintings and other items that have been collected since they moved into the house in 1953.

He began collecting art at the age of 5 when his aunt gave him a piece of pottery from the Maricopa Indians of Arizona. His collection grew from there.

vine: Devotional Art in New Mexico." He is a member of the NMSU Center for the Arts honorary committee.

Taylor received a New Mexico Endowment for the Humanities "Contribution to the Arts" award in 2000 and a state Historic Preservation Division "Heritage Preservation Lifetime Achievement Award" in 2004.

Unlike most birthday parties, gifts are requested instead to the Friends of the Taylor Family Monument, an organization created to preserve and operate the Taylor Monument. Donations will go toward future preservation and educational programs.

"The donation of the home and other properties are just the beginning," said Cynthia Garrett, the chair of the Friends of the Taylor Family Monument. "It will need to be maintained."

The event is free, however donations of $90 per family will be recognized with a charter membership in Friends of the Taylor Family Monument. All donations are tax deductible as permitted by law and will be used to support the monument. Donations of any size may be mailed to: Friends of the Taylor Family Monument, P.O. Box 1305, Mesilla, NM 88046.

Friday, August 20, 2010

The celebration will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 28, in the Mesilla Plaza. There will be a gathering of family and friends with music, entertainment and refreshments.

For more information, call 915-5756 or email friendsoftaylormonument@gmail.com. Taylor related a story that reflected his character and thoughtfulness for others: "When I was a teaching principal in Doña Ana in the mid-'50s, a mother came to see me about her daughter, who was doing fine by the way. She came with a wrapped box and at the end of the conference asked, 'Mr. Taylor, do you like wine?' Well, I don't but I accepted the gift. My wife thought we should make a tradition out of getting some of this homemade wine every Thanksgiving and Christmas. Whenever I would go to buy it, they would insist on me having a glass. Well, this was a big glass and I would have to sit there until I drank it, and then had to sober up before I went home."

Here was this distinguished educator and humanitarian in a bit of a pickle because he got involved in helping a student, was communicating with a family and being considerate of other people's feelings. Very typical.

Taking an aerial perspective

By David Edwards

Joyce Macrorie has never been one to let circumstances bottle up her creative energies. A trained printmaker, she once happened to be working in Mexico during a student strike that closed all the printing presses. Since she couldn't do print work, she decided to take up jewelry.

"I had two little diamonds," she said. "And I took them to a jewelry maker to have them made into earrings." She pressed the jeweler to teach her how to make jewelry, and when he agreed, Macrorie worked for a year in his shop in exchange for the earrings.

"I think he was just too polite to tell me no," she said.

When she got back to Michigan, she sold her press, her paper and everything else related to printmaking and just made jewelry for eight years.

Years earlier, as a military wife in Germany, printmaking wasn't a portable or convenient art form, so she focused on her painting. Upon moving to Santa Fe in 1979, the jewelry market was just too saturated, so she went back to printmaking and painting. She now does all three and has added encaustics (a pigmented wax process) to her repertoire.

Moving to Las Cruces about three years ago, because she tired of the cold, she worked with several other artists to run the Patio Art Gallery. After it closed, she opened her own gallery, which she is now re-opening after a three-month hiatus and a little remodeling. Macrorie and fellow artist Linda Gendall are even calling the show "new paint - new floors," and it will open Friday, Aug. 28, with a reception from 1 to 4 p.m.

The Joyce T. Macrorie Studio Gallery is located at 639 S. San Pedro St. and is a bookend of the Mesquite Street art district along with the Unsettled Gallery at 905 N. Mesquite St. Unsettled will open a show by the Border Artists group on the same day with a reception from 5 to 8 p.m.

"We want people to come to the area to eat lunch at one of the neighborhood restaurants then come have some wine and mingle," Macrorie said. "Then they can go to Unsettled, have some more wine, view the show and go out to dinner." Macrorie's painting style ranges from realism to abstract, and she is fond of what she refers to as aerials.

"Several years ago, I was lucky enough to go up in a small plane with a family from Santa Fe," she said. "We had to fly very low and we would take photos. We spent all day, landing and taking off again. I used the perspective of the aerial view for the paintings." After a while, she no longer needed to go aloft to find the views she paints. She can visualize the real or imagined views in her mind.

Macrorie creates monotype prints on a press where she applies the paint to a plastic plate. The paper is then placed on the plate, and a roller presses the paint onto the paper essentially creating a one-of-a-kind print. But Macrorie explained that there can be "ghost" prints using the plate again immediately following the initial pressing.

Other artists included in "new paint – new floors" include Gendall and works by OR-Dima.

Macrorie's artist statement says, "In my experience, all art has to offer a somewhat different trip – a new or at least a compelling experience with each encounter." She hopes her newly re-opened gallery offers a little different trip, and the art district along Mesquite Street will compel you to experience something new.

By David Edwards Las Cruces Bullet

Feb. 3, 1959, is commonly referred to as "The Day the Music Died" because of the tragic plane crash that took the lives of musicians Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "The Big Bop-Richardper" son. Early rock 'n' roll suffered a terrible blow.

Local music lover and author Stan Blitz intends to supplement the interest many people have for the music of that era and give long overdue credit to musicians and music industry profession-radio show host als from New Mexico on a new weekly radio show. "Blast from the Past" will be airing from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Sept.

18 on KSNM AM 570. Blitz says the show will focus mostly on the '50s and '60s and will not only play music, but will also examine the history of rock 'n' roll.

'I want to have local guests and will also play some taped interviews," Blitz said. "I know a great many people connected to the music industry from all over, not just New Mexico.

"One of my guests will be Peggy Sue. The Peggy Sue of Buddy Holly fame."

Each week will have a different theme that may focus on a particular era or region, such as Memphis or Chicago. Blitz will present interesting facts from this nostalgic time in the music industry. Did you know, for example, that there has been one No. 1 hit that came

'Magic Impossible' returns to the Rio Grande Theatre

Mitchell has lots of tricks up his sleeve

Bulletin Staff Report

"Magic Impossible," the brainchild of local magician Chris Mitchell, returns to the Rio Grande Theatre with an interactive show featuring illusions, classic magic and a tailor-made journey through his world of controlled lunacy Sat-urday, Aug. 21, at the Rio Grande Theatre.

This year, Mitchell will showcase live theater in Las Cruces, not only by performing in the historic Rio Grande Theatre, but by also teaming up with the American Southwest Theatre Company to promote their upcoming season at NMSU.

Mitchell started his own magical journey at the age of 8 and has been fine-tuning his act throughout the United States, Canada and the Caribbean ever since. He was a featured performer for the 1993 NCAA Final Four in New Orleans for Coca Cola and has performed for the Commodore Cruise Lines aboard the Enchanted Isle. He worked as the Magic Consultant for the USA Network's television series "The Big Easy" and was an honorary Grand Marshall for a Mardi Gras parade.

In Las Cruces he has performed for several corporate and charitable events. Mitchell teaches magic classes to young people, icebreakers to executives and looks forward to sharing the gift of magic with all.

The Rio Grande Theatre is located at 211 N. Downtown Mall. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. and the show begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults, $10 for children 12 and under and can be purchased via the website at www. riograndetheatre.com. For more information, call 523-6403.

Stan Blitz will bring to life on his radio show the era that introduced dance trends such as the bunny hop to the world.

LAST CHANCE LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART

Works by Rigoberto A. Gonzalez are on display at the Las Cruces Museum of Art through Saturday, Aug. 21.

"Barroco en la Frontera: Baroque on the Border" is inspired by "life along the border - the brutality associated with drug cartels, tales from folklore and everyday moments of domestic tran-quility." These paintings depict anger, fear and despair through the use of dramatic lighting, strong shadows and vibrant color in 17th-century Baroque style.

The Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Call 541-2137.

Documentaries highlight southern NM attractions

Two videos highlighting the public lands in southern New Mexico are available for viewing and reproduction. Environmental News Trust, a nonprofit organization, recently filmed and produced two short documentaries on Fort Stanton-Snowy River Cave National Conservation Area (NCA) and Prehistoric Trackways National Monument. Both videos are available for viewing online.

Fort Stanton-Snowy River Cave NCA is home to an historic fort established in 1855 and used by the Buffalo Soldiers to protect settlers in the area. Beneath the 25,080-acre NCA lies the largest calcite "river" formation in the nation. Discovered in 2001, the Snowy River is intriguing and fascinating scientists.

Prehistoric Trackways National Monument contains footprints of amphibians, reptiles, plants and petrified wood dating back 280 million years. This "megatrackway" is helping scientists understand animal behaviors from a time predating dinosaurs.

Both areas are part of the National Landscape Conservation System, a collection of some of the country's most scenic, historic, natural and cultural attractions. The National Conservation Lands are home to rare plants and animals, dinosaur fossils and Native American sites. These lands conserve the essential fabric of the West by playing a role in protection lands, water and wildlife for future generations.

Call for artists

JARDIN DE LOS NIÑOS WINTER FUNDRAISER

Jardin de los Niños is looking for artists eager to help educate homeless children. The 2010 winter event at Josefina's Old Gate in Mesilla is a gallery-style show and holiday art raffle. The organization is asking for prints or original pieces of art with an estimated value of $200 to $300 to be donated to the raffle. Each person attending the Deck the Walls gallerystyle event will draw a number that corresponds to a piece of donated art.

Everyone who buys a raffle ticket walks away with a piece of art, and every artist who donates art gets his or her work promoted. Every homeless child served by Jardin de los Niños gets a chance at a better life. For more information, contact Allison Smith at 644-4609 or aklobby@gmail.com.

BIG BAND ON THE RIO GRANDE

The Big Band on the Rio Grande has resumed its weekly Wednesday night rehearsals and finds that there are some empty chairs. At the first rehearsal the organization found that there are openings for piano, bass and drums. The BBRG, a volunteer organization, has been around since 1989 playing concerts and dances and keeping the big band tradition alive. For many years, the band played tea dances every month and some occasional concerts. At present, the band plays four or five concerts each year and some dances as requested.

Those interested in auditioning for the band should contact James Helder at 373-2188.

MESILLA VALLEY FINE ARTS GALLERY

Talk about using your noodle!

China Express has Vietnamese offerings as well

By David Edwards Las Cruces Bulletin

Jim Wong owns Chinese restaurants in Las Vegas, Nev., and when he was traveling the Southwest looking for a place to establish another one, he decided that Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz. were already pretty saturated. The next stop on the map was Las Cruces. Bingo.

When he looked around the City of the Crosses and the area near the crosses themselves, he saw fried chicken, burgers, subs and pseudo-Mexican food, but no Chinese food. Bingo again.

He thought he had the right place so he recruited a staff – including friend Mike Wong who had recently moved to El Paso – and on July 30, China Express opened at 2443 N. Main St.

One more thing. How to make China Express stand out from similar restaurants in Las Cruces? Wong looked around and saw no Vietnamese restaurant. Bingo No. 3.

I've only had Vietnamese once before and that was a number of years ago in Austin, Texas. I don't remember too much about it other than it being soup and being tasty.

Apparently, soup is very popular in Viet Nam, but even more a staple of the Vietnamese diet is rice noodles. Noodles are everywhere. And they combine with a variety of other, sometimes unique, ingredients to create those wonderful soups.

It only took a few trips to China Express to sample the four special Vietnamese items on the menu – spicy beef soup, beef Pho soup, charbroiled pork chops on rice and the spring roll with pork and shrimp.

Both soups come in large bowls with an ample supply of fresh bean sprouts, cilantro, lime and, as a tribute to the Southwest I guess, jalapeño. I suggest you just go for it and dump everything into the bowl – lime juice, of course, and de-stem the cilantro.

The spicy beef has a thicker noodle along with fresh raw onion and beef chunks. The broth is a darker color than the Pho, which uses a thinner noodle and adds meatballs along with the beef pieces. Both were outstanding, but I lean more toward the spicy in almost all things.

The grilled pork chops are thin, tender, very lean and served on a bed of sticky white rice. A very nice little salad with lettuce, cucumber, carrots and pickled radish fills out the plate along with a sweet fish sauce. Once again, I recommend combining them as you eat to experience the blend of flavors.

The unique spring roll contains very thin vermicelli, lettuce, steamed shrimp and pork wrapped in rice paper and served with a teriyaki-like dipping sauce. All the Vietnamese dishes take a few extra minutes to prepare, but all were great and alone enough reason to make me want to come back.

I don't want to neglect the other offerings at China Express. The steam table items are all fresh and appealing – lunch buddy's son approved of the teriyaki chicken and lo mein. On one trip I noticed the staff checking to make sure the items were at the proper temperature.

The steam table combos are inexpensive with single entrée/one side or two entrées/one side variations.

There are more than 60 items on the made-to-order menu with appetizers, soup, traditional noodles, fried rice, egg foo young, pork, chicken, beef and shrimp choices.

The restaurant is very clean and bright with just a suggestion of Asian influence in the décor and the staff is very courteous and helpful.

"We want new customers to give us a try of course," manager Mike Wong said. "But what we really want is for them to become regulars."

And if you're looking around for fast Chinese food or those wonderfully different Vietnamese dishes and you happen upon China Express – bingo.

Review by Jeff Berg

As Syracuse, a well-cast Colin Farrell casts his fishing net one day and snags a beautiful woman(?) Ondine (Alicja Bachleda) from the depths. This of course triggers a change of events, emotions and lives for anyone who comes by Ondine.

Syracuse, an alcoholic, is also the father of a young wheelchair-bound daughter Annie, wise beyond her years, who is positive that Ondine is a "selkie" – a mythical sea creature, similar to a mermaid, who communicates by song.

Alcohol is still part of Syracuse's life. Although he is in recovery, his wife - from whom he is separated - still enjoys spirits and imbibes them frequently with her new partner and drinking friend.

So, when Syracuse nets Ondine, it is not much of a surprise that he doesn't know how to handle the situation, other than to try to keep her a secret.

Where lies loyalty? 'One Man's Hero' asks

The CineMatinee film for Saturday, Aug. 21, is "One Man's Hero" (1998, 120 minutes, rated R). "One man's hero is another man's traitor," so says U.S. Army Sgt. John Riley (Tom Berenger) prophetically at the beginning of "One Man's Hero." National righteousness tends to be rather self-serving.

If you've grown up with only a 20th-century sense of history, you may have an impression of the United States as having ceaselessly fought for freedom in the face of tyranny. Many Vietnamese people would beg to differ. So would the other occupants of the North American continent in the 19th century. To them, the U.S. was an opportunistic, expansionist nation and anyone who stood in the way was in trouble, be they Canadian, Native American or Mexican.

"One's Man's Hero" is the true story of Riley and the San Patricio Regiment. It takes place on the battlefields of the Mexican-American War. Half of the soldiers in the U.S. Army in the 1840s were Irish, having fled famine in their homeland for the promise of American citizenship. As Catholics in a Protestant army, sharing the same religion as the enemy, they were held in suspicion.

Riley revolts against his bigoted and brutal superior officer and flees along with a group of fellow Irishmen. Intending to find a free port and return to Ireland, they instead fall into the hands of a local rebel leader, Cortina (Joaquim De Almeida). When the Americans invade Mexico the Irish deserters choose to organize into a regiment in the Mexican army, the San Patricios - San Patricio being St. Patrick in Spanish. The stateless Irishmen debate their loyalties but fight professionally and bravely for the only country offering them refuge and fair treatment. In any event, the only option they have is to fight and win, or die in the attempt.

One Man's Hero" provides an interesting perspective on historical events that many viewers may be unaware of. It is fair to the bad guys, but is quite unequivocal in asserting that Mexico was victimized by a more powerful nation with less than noble intentions.

There are certainly better films about loyalty, betrayal and having to choose sides. The significance of "One Man's Hero" arises from the specifics of the historical circumstances it takes up. It is said that the victors write history. This film shows that that is not always the case.

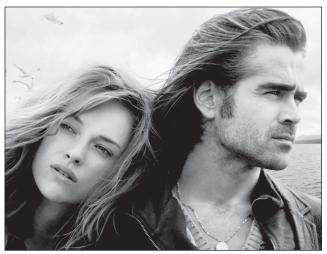

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is 1:30 p.m. and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 and leave a message.

It turns out that Ondine does have a magical voice, as Syracuse finds out when he takes her with him in his fishing boat and returns with a hold full of fat lobsters. But on who or what she should use it comes with great debate and a few points of darkness.

As time goes on, the withdrawn and sad Syracuse starts to feel those good old stirrings of love for Ondine – who, by the way, is not like a mermaid in the physical sense. Ondine the selkie is all woman and has no pesky tail fins to try to fit into a pair of jeans. It also helps that Ondine helps around the house and helps to take care of the family. There is a slight notion of role-playing here, one that is hard to avoid and can be aggravating at times.

Alicja Bachleda in the title role and Colin Farrell as Syracuse in Neil Jordan's "Ondine" at the Fountain Theatre

Ondine, and to the credit of direct Neil Jordan, Ondine is more or less accepted as she is and for who she is. Although this is a fairy tale for adults (sort of), we don't have to suffer through a series of heartless bastards trying to have Ondine as their own water-dwelling Rumpelstiltskin.

But in the end, one may find "Ondine" somewhat mystifying and frustrating. Certainly the film is able to bring out the legends and the stuff of legends, but at times it remains hazy and filled with good moments and scenes. Other times, it lapses into melancholy and pointedly violent misunderstandings, which rather take away some of the magic from the picture.

All in all, however, it is a well-made drama, which could have used a bit more mirth, but does make good points about the inadequacies we all face on a daily basis, and how there is not a magic creature to come and make it all better.

Life's a video game And 'Scott Pilgrim' defeats all comers

Review by David Edwards Las Cruces Bullet

If you lived in a video game, you would be slightly larger than life, have some extraordinary powers (or have the ability to acquire them), get points for accomplishing certain tasks, pick up some "health" when a particularly brutal week at work has knocked you on your keister and maybe even pick up an extra "life" or two.

If life were like a graphic novel (just a longer comic book, if you aren't familiar with the term), you would exist in a world of heightened reality, dramatic visuals where everything was sharply defined and cleanly drawn. The sounds that punctuate various moments, such as dogs barking, doors slamming or maybe even hearts breaking, would receive a visual assist by having the actual words appear in space (remember when phones in the comics used to go "R-R-R-I-I-N-N-G-G-G"?).

If life for a 20-something was actually like it is in "Scott Pilgrim vs. The World," then everyone - even uncool people - would be in a killer rock band just on the verge of stardom and get to date the tough-talking, mysterious, pink-haired vixen of their dreams (or the tough-talking, muscle-bound, leather-clad bad boy, if you are of that persuasion). This after dumping the cute but younger and slightly annoying Asian girlfriend with the awesome name of Knives Chau.

But life isn't like that at all. You don't get to engage your "enemies" in combat – even the talky, texting tweens next to you who disrupt the movie – and using flaming samurai swords and sweet ninja skills have them turn into a shower of coins when they are defeated.

That's why "Scott Pilgrim vs. The World" is so much fun. It's pure escapist fantasy that is presented in a truly clever and original way.

Director Edgar Wright (who also co-wrote the script and directed both "Hot Fuzz" and the dearto-my-heart "Shaun of the Dead") has created a totally original style that looks like a cross between a live-action video game and graphic novel (it is based on a series of graphic novels by Lee

or extend the joke. The screen is alive with all sorts of visual jokes and really looks like no movie I have ever seen. The battles are right out of the Mortal Kombat and Street Fighter genre

The film has a quirky humor about it as well - very sly and off beat. There are characters named Stephen Stills and Young Neil (a joke no doubt lost on the tweens next to me) in Scott's band "Sex Bob-Omb (fun music written by Beck, also no doubt lost on the tweens next to me), Toronto jokes, music-industry jokes and especially painful dating/relationship jokes that the 18 to 35 crowd will no doubt find funny (even old guys like me get them ... I think). Just clever, subtle and good-hearted.

And Michael Cera – who has become sort of the young comedy Everyman since "Superbad" - plays Scott with a combination of his usual deadpan and a much more active, animated persona. (My friend Megan Bob accuses him of always being in simpering, bewildered, charm mode but sorry MB, Cera shakes off most of the SBC in this one.) "Scott Pilgrim" gives him the opportunity to not only be geekily charming, but kick, punch, sword fight, dive through windows, get knocked through walls and absolutely shred his bass guitar.

Pilgrim's surrounding cast of friends, relatives, band mates and enemies (Jason Schwartzman as super bad guy Gideon Gordon Graves) is memorable as well, but Mary Elizabeth Winstead as Ramona Flowers, the girl of Scott's dreams, makes all of us fall in love with her, so we root for Scott even harder as he must defeat her seven evil exes in order to win

her. "The World" in which Scott Pilgrim exists is a surprising unfamiliar one where no one seems too surprised when a giant holographic ape is the instrument called upon to defeat a pair of giant holographic dragons that suddenly attack Sex Bob-Omb during a crucial battle of the bands. The unexpected is what keeps you so entertained.

ÔK, so "Scott Pilgrim" could have ended a time or two earlier, and the ultimate lesson about self-respect was so subtle that the tweens next to me probably missed it, and it is going to appeal to a much narrower audience than testosterone-loaded senior citizens, but "Scott Pilgrim vs. The World" deserves to be seen and, trust me, enjoyed.

Remodeling leads to spectacular home Barrel ceiling one of several unique design elements

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

Sometimes it takes a little work to find the perfect house. From hunting to remodeling, Johnine and Wally Vette did it all to transform their home at 515 Old Farm Road into a wonderful Southwest abode.

Located just a short drive down University Avenue, past the New Mexico State University chile and onion fields, is the Conlee Farm subdivision, which consists of about 90 homes built in the 1980s and 1990s.

"It's within walking and biking distance to Mesilla, which is nice," said Realtor Laura Szalay of Keller Williams Realty, who represents the listing. "It's kind of a secret neighborhood."

"The neighborhood is so unique," Johnine Vette said. "All of the homes are custom. There aren't any cookie-cutter homes."

The couple was exploring the neighborhood in 1993 when they stumbled upon the 2,498-square-foot home.

"It had so much we wanted," said Vette, adding that this included peace, quiet, privacy and a Southwest style.

While the home included many of the things the Vettes were looking for, it didn't have everything. After purchasing the home, the couple hired Tom Capron of Capron Builders & Design to remodel the residence, which included a new roof and airconditioning system.

At the center of the three-bedroom home is the spacious living room with a 13-foot-high ceiling. A deep terra cotta color covers a large wall and stone fireplace, featuring a wave design and track lighting to display the couple's collection of Native American baskets.

Behind the living room are the dining area and kitchen. The couple added texture to the walls to reflect the Southwest feel, but they kept the barrel ceiling of the kitchen intact. The kitchen also includes corian countertops, a tile backsplash and Kowalski cabinets.

A few years ago, the couple transformed the corner next to the built-in desk and mail area into a breakfast nook, great for enjoying a view of the landscaped backyard.

Designed with a split-bedroom floor plan, two of the home's bedrooms are located to the left of the entrance next to a full bathroom. While one room, currently the couple's athome office, features white walls with a terra cotta accent wall, the other room features different shades of teal, as well as several windows for extra natural light.

"I love it," Vette said. "I love the light." One room the Vettes didn't want to add

One room the Vettes didn't want to add color to was the master suite, which received a fresh coat of neutral paint when the couple moved in.

"We wanted the room to be more serene," Vette said. "The light paint and tall ceiling lends itself to the room's openness."

The couple, however, did change the master bathroom, which they gutted and transformed to fit their needs.

Light granite, almost a lavender color with gray flakes, graces the countertops that enclose two sinks. Instead of using the cabinets found in the kitchen, Vette said they chose cherry cabinets for the bathroom.

A smaller waved wall, similar to that found in the living room, discreetly hides the toilet, as a walk-in shower with a glass door resides in the corner.

"One great thing, in the shower the controls are near the door," said Vette, explaining that she doesn't have to get in the shower to warm up the water and risk becoming soaked.

As elegant as the home's interior is, the Vettes wanted the outdoors to be just as special.

Featuring a 600-square-foot covered patio decorated in brick and featuring two seating areas, Vette said she and her husband chose the home based on the backyard, which was originally covered in 8 inches of gravel and surrounded by a large rock wall.

"We walked out onto the patio and said, This is it," she said.

Wanting the backyard to be an extension of their living space, the Vettes hired a landscaper to convert the area into a lush, outdoor oasis.

"Everything is perfectly maintained and manicured," Szalay said.

Gravel and several native plants, including crape myrtle, Mexican elder and vitex for shade, surround a large patch of grass.

"We didn't want grass all around. We wanted a specific grass area," Vette said. "We also wanted color, something for the hummingbirds."

In 2004, the couple once again added to their outdoor sanctuary by opening the patio on the right side and extending the yard's features to the side of the home.

"We opened up the wall because it was a wasted area," she said.

Along with a walkway to the hot tub, the area also includes a pergola built by Wally Vette, great for entertaining. Thanks to the work they put in to transform the backyard, Vette said the patio is her favorite area of the home.

"We spend a lot of time out here, just about every evening," Vette said. "We both really enjoy it. We've had a lot of fun with family and friends. When we have company over, they gravitate out there. It's so easy to serve them since the kitchen is right there and it has that long countertop."

With so many changes and upgrades made throughout the year, Vette said the house is ideal for those who want a stylish home that is easy to care for.

"It's well maintained," she said, "and it's close to everything."

Dried beans solve all your problems

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletir

Living in the Southwest, we are exposed to delicious food, from melting cheese to chile-covered tortillas. Along with spicy peppers and gooey dairy products, a common Southwest food staple is the bean.

Dried beans have been a part of a nutritious diet for more than 20,000 years and can be found in culinary dishes around the world.

While dried and canned beans can easily be swapped in most recipes, dried beans contain less sodium, making them better for your health. The health benefits of beans also include high amounts of protein, fiber, vitamins and minerals.

Despite their nutritional value, dried beans can be time consuming to prepare. Most beans need to be soaked for at least an hour, while some require being soaked for as long as three hours.

If you have a pound or two of dried beans sitting around the home waiting to be used, instead of eating them, put them to work in some creative ways.

1. Replace a missing game piece: Game night is a great time to get together with family and friends and share some laughs. But what if the playing pieces of your favorite game go missing? Don't fret, tear up the house or cancel your big night, instead get some dried beans. Available in a variety of sizes, dried beans can replace everything from checkers to Monopoly pieces.

2. Soothe sore muscles: After a long day at work or an intense workout session at the gym, help your muscles relax and unwind with dried beans. Place a few handfuls of the substance into a cloth bag, clean sock or folded towel with the ends tightly tied. Microwave it on high for at least 30 seconds and no more than a minute. After the beans and cloth have cooled for a minute or two, place it on the muscle that needs extra care and attention. If the beans become too cool, pop them in the microwave. Your hot bag of beans can be reused several times and can conform to different areas of the body.

3. Create a beanbag: There are plenty of things you and the kids can do with beanbags, from juggling contests to tossing games. Make your own beanbags at home by pouring 3/4 to 1 1/2 cups dried beans into an old sock or homemade bag. Sew the end so the beans won't leak out. The beanbag can also be squeezed as a way to exercise your hand muscles or relieve stress.

4. Shake things up: Give your kids a fun and musical arts-and-crafts project by having them create their own maraca. Easy to make, all you need are dried beans, a hollow object

- teaspoons dried rosemary
- teaspoons dried marjoram
- 1/2 teaspoons black pepper 1/4 teaspoons crushed red pepper
- 5 bay leaves
- 8 cups water
- 1 smoked ham hock (about 1/2 pound)
- cup onion, chopped
- (14.5-ounce) can no-salt-added 1 diced tomatoes, undrained

To prepare dried-bean mix, combine first five ingre-dients in a large bowl. Divide the bean mixture into five equal portions (about 2 1/2 cups each), and place in airtight containers.

To prepare spice mix, combine the salt and the next six ingredients (salt through bay leaves) in a bowl. Divide spice mix into five equal portions. Place in small airtight containers.

To prepare the soup, sort and wash one portion dried-bean mix, and place in a large Dutch oven. Cover with water about 2 inches above beans. Let it stand for 8 hours then drain.

Combine the drained bean mixture, 8 cups water and the ham hock in a large Dutch oven; bring to a boil. Add 1 packet spice mix, onion and tomatoes. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 2 hours. Uncover; cook 1 hour. Discard bay leaf. Remove ham hock from soup. Remove meat from bone and shred. Return meat to soup. (Recipe adapted from http://find.myrecipes.com.)

and you have a percussion shaker. Whether you're using a jar, soda can or paper towel tube, fill it about halfway with dried beans and seal the opening with a piece of paper and tape. Decorate your noisemaker with construction paper, glitter, markers whatever you want. The maraca can also be used to train your dog. Loudly shake it when your dog misbehaves to deter him or her from repeating the disobedient behavior.

5. Decorate your Halloween pumpkin: With jack-o'-lantern season just around the corner, now is the time to start thinking about new design ideas. Give your pumpkin a more artistic and 3-D look with dried beans. Glue the beans to create beady eyes, withering teeth or other freaky embellishments.

6. Revamp an old stuffed animal: Transform your old stuffed animals into beanie creations with dried beans. Remove the inside stuffing and fluff and fill the toy with dried beans. Sew it closed and give the new and improved toy to a beloved young one.

Five tips to help build a better salad

Get a healthy dish without sacrificing taste

Salads are a staple for people trying to eat well or save on fat and calories, but not all salads are created equal. While all greens are low in calories, many people sabotage what could be a nutritious dish by adding heavy toppings such as fried chicken, croutons or a higher fat cheese.

Tasty toppers don't have to be loaded with calories and fat. With a few new ideas and simple switches, a salad can be revitalized and turned into an even better meal.

It's easy to make an inspired, flavorful lunch or dinner by mixing up a typical salad. A few simple switches, like changing up the type of cheese sprinkled over the top a salad, can make a big difference. With the right combination of vegetables, protein, fiber and nutritious fats, salads can become a satisfying and enjoyable better choice.

Banish the boring factor of that next plate of greens. Here are five great additions to consider when it comes to building and topping a salad:

1. Go (leafy) green. Iceberg lettuce has a nice crunch, but almost no nutritional value. Use a variety of darker greens such as spinach, romaine, arugula, dandelion greens, kale, watercress and herbs to add flavor and more nutritional value than iceberg lettuce. Want more essential vitamins? Darker greens are higher in foliate and rich in vitamins A. C and K.

2. Choose a better, more flavorful cheese. Simply changing the type of cheese used to top a salad from typical shredded Cheddar to feta crumbles cuts calories and fat without sacrificing great flavor or texture. The tangy, rich flavor of feta will make any salad more exciting.

3. Fill up on lean protein. Adding protein can build texture and flavor, and transform a salad from a side dish into a satisfying entrée. Many of the proteinbased salad toppings people typically choose are deep-fried, breaded or greasy, adding unnecessary calories, cholesterol, sodium and fat. Skip fattier toppings, such as bacon and fried chicken strips, and opt for lean proteins instead. Try grilled chicken or thinly sliced lean steak, canned beans of all kinds, tofu, hardboiled eggs or water-packed tuna.

4. The crunch factor. Choose walnuts, almonds or even sunflower seeds instead of oilv croutons or processed bacon bits. Nuts provide a satisfying crunch along with fiber and omega-3 fats. Nuts, such as almonds, can be a great choice because they contain important minerals including calcium, magnesium and potassium.

5. Dress to impress. To cut down on dressing, not taste, forgo traditional salad dressing and instead add a squeeze of citrus fruit and a sprinkle of fresh herbs, along with a few dashes of oil and vinegar. Balsamic vinaigrette and low fat or fat free dressing varieties are also smart options.

Skeptical about the possibilities of making a less heavy version of a favorite salad that satisfies an appetite? Try this new recipe for traditional taco salad full of tasty lean protein, crunchy tortilla chips, flavorful herbs and vegetables, tangy cheese, creamy dressing and amazing flavor combinations. More feta cheese recipes can be found at www.athenos.com.

Approximately $70,000 raised for hospice care

By Jimmy Currier

Hundreds of Las Crucens enjoyed a wonderful evening of feasting on Saturday, Aug. 14, at the third annual Mesilla Valley Hospice Men Who Cook event.

Guests enjoyed dishes ranging from a cool and creamy shrimp and crab dip to lip-smacking Southern pulled pork barbecue sandwiches and a heavenly blueberry fantasy cake at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. In all, 64 chefs prepared dishes that tantalized the taste buds and expanded the waistline.

The Men Who Cook event raised roughly $70,000 for Mesilla Valley Hospice. The money will be used for the hospice's charity care fund, MVH Marketing Coordinator April Anaya said.

The charity care fund, Anaya explained, is money set aside to provide hospice care to patients who normally wouldn't have the ability to pay.

Anaya was pleased with this year's Men Who Cook event.

"A lot of people had fun and it was really neat seeing it all come together," she said. "In the beginning, we get the chefs together and the recipes submitted so we can put the cookbook together. Watching it all come to fruition is really neat. Everyone comes together for a good cause."

In addition to the mouth-watering cornucopia, the event also featured music and a silent auction.

Lasagna with Veal and Mozzarella

- 16 to 20 lasagna noodles (fresh homemade
- noodles are the best to use)
- 1 3/4 cup diced or grated mozzarella cheese (about half a pound) 2 eggs, hard-boiled and diced 5 tablespoons butter, melted

- Veal Sauce 1/2 pound lean ground veal
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 1 1/2 cups puréed tomato Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 1/3 cups freshly grated Parmesan cheese 1 egg

To make the meat sauce, heat the butter and when it starts to foam, add the ground veal and brown thoroughly. Add the wine and cook rapidly until the smell of the wine disappears. Add the puréed tomatoes and bring the sauce to a boil. Season with salt and pepper. Reduce the heat and simmer. Mix the Parmesan cheese and the egg in a bowl, then stir them gradually into the meat sauce. Simmer the sauce until it thickens.

Cook the pasta noodles in boiling salted water until al dente, drain and put the strips on a cloth kitchen towel to dry.

Butter an oven-proof dish and line the bottom and sides with the pasta strips. Cover with meat sauce, then sprinkle evenly with some of the diced hard-boiled egg and mozzarella cheese. Cover with another layer of pasta, then sauce, hard boiled egg and cheese, and continue in the same way, ending with a layer of pasta. Pour the melted butter over the lasagna and bake the dish in a pre-heated 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes or until the top is just beginning to brown. Serve very hot.

Featured Realtor: Renee Peterson

Staging homes for happy clients

Former flower shop owner takes her design passion into real estate

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

All Realtors bring something to the table, whether it be an outgoing personality, exten-sive business knowledge or time-management skills unmatched by others.

As for Realtor Renee Peterson, she brings not only an entrepreneurial spirit, but a natural talent for staging and design to her clients.

While her family was from New Mexico, Peterson spent about 30 years in Chandler, Ariz., where she worked as an administrative assistant for a local car dealership and fire department.

Although she enjoyed Arizona, Peterson said she grew tired of the city, and in 1995 wanted a change.

'It grew so rapidly, I wanted my little hometown back, and it wasn't there," she said.

Peterson said her mother's family has lived in Las Cruces for four generations. Her greatgreat-grandfather was one of the original set-

The relocation to the City of the Crosses brought with it the opportunity for a new career. After searching through a local paper, Peterson said she spotted an advertisement for a flower shop, which she purchased and named Renee's Fox Florists.

as on Bamert Road, which was named after the

"I had spent a lot of time in Las Cruces," she

"I tried to find something I felt I would enjoy doing," she said. "I took a leap of insanity." Owning a flower shop brought on a new batch of challenges - challenges Peterson welcomed.

"I loved helping people and doing things to assist them," she said.

To help with the demands of her company, Peterson hired the No. 1 flower designer in the state, which helped Renee's Fox Florists earn the title of the best flower shop in Las Cruces by a local newspaper for four years in a row. The flower shop also worked as a stepping stone for Peterson to follow a childhood passion – design. "I always had an eye for design," she said. Peterson decided to sell the flower shop and in 2004 became a licensed associate broker.

"I wanted to be in immediate contact with the public and be my own boss," she said of her decision to join real estate.

From florist to Realtor

Since joining the business, Peterson has found much success in the real estate industry, helping in the sale of about 10 homes a year.

'I had so many loyal clients and great people I met in the flower shop of course it helped when I transitioned into real estate," she said. "I had a name and reputation of being reliable."

Peterson has learned multiple facets of the real estate world, including the importance of staging – a practice she has devoted herself to through her company Staged for Success, which she began when the housing market took a downturn a few years ago.

"I saw the market for it," she said. "I would look at my listings and make suggestions. I realized it was something I enjoyed doing, and people really appreciated it."

While Peterson said she always had an eye for design, she didn't really get into staging until she traveled to Phoenix to take a staging course from Barb Schwarz, the founder of the decorating practice.

"I've always had a passion for decorating and setting up homes," Peterson said. "It just comes naturally for me."

After the training, she received the Accred-ited Staging Professional (ASP) certification. "It's quite unique to have that designation, and I'm the only certified ASP in town," said Peterson, who works with several builders to stage model homes.

personalize a home to fit the homeowner's taste and lifestyle, staging is depersonalizing a home so it will appeal to everyone. "A home becomes a product when it goes on the market," she said. "It can sometimes be very difficult for sellers to detach themselves."

Owning her own inventory, Peterson can fully stage 11 homes and stages about 10 to 12 a year. During consultations, which are free for anyone who lists with Steinborn & Associates Real Estate, she offers tips on decluttering, accessorizing and adding elements to accentuate architectural elements.

Peterson said she is able to be both a Realtor and a stager for her clients, a task that has its own difficulties and rewards.

"One minute I'm wearing a Realtor hat, the next I'm wearing a staging hat," she said, adding that as a perfectionist it is a challenge to balance both roles.

Her ability to do both has provided her with several rewards, including friendship. "I become long-term friends with my clients," she said. "Plus, I know I'm helping someone along the way."

Peterson said her staging skills set her apart from other Realtors in the area.

"I can take off my Realtor hat when I go into a staging situation, and I can look at it as a buyer and set it up so a buyer would appreciate it," she said. "It's proven that staged homes sell quicker and for more."

Obtaining her dream

In the current real estate market, Peterson said it's important for those in the home industry, whether buyers or sellers, not to get frustrated and give up because the market will recover.

Also, as a seller, it is essential to present your home in the best possible light, she said.

'It's important, because in this market you need something different and special," she said. "Your home should always be in show condition and be well maintained. It needs to be set apart from the other homes.

Peterson said she feels lucky to have the skills to help her clients sell their homes, which has also allowed her to at last follow her infatuation with design.

"I think I finally came full circle and am finally doing my true passion," she said. "With staging I see the benefits. It helps people sell their home and move on. Plus, I get to meet so many great people, it's very rewarding."

As the market begins to show signs of improvement, Peterson said she looks forward to building her business and relationships in the community as well as becoming more successful.

"I owe my success to the values my parents instilled in me and the support they gave me to keep me going in times of adversity and not giving up on what my true dreams were," she said. "I knew there was something out there I really wanted to do. They taught me not to give up until I obtained that dream."

Meet the new owners of EXIT Realty Horizons Top-producing Realtors desire to expand office, focus on the agents

By Beth Sitzler Las Cruces Bulletin

If you happened to walk around the EXIT Realty Horizons office on July 30, you might not have noticed anything out of place – calls were being answered, customers were being helped, agents were going about their day as usual.

While the day may have seemed like any other, the brokerage underwent a big change that day – Qualifying Broker Chris Harrison and Associate Broker Joe Arnone officially became the new owners of the local franchise, purchasing it from Kathy and Chuck Olson.

"It was a smooth transition," Harrison said. "It was behind the scenes, and there was no interruption to service."

With the purchase, Harrison and Arnone will bring years of experience and customer service as well as leadership to the local EXIT Realty office.

A desire to lead

While the two friends have similar goals, Harrison and Arnone come from different backgrounds.

Harrison was born in Tennessee, but his father's career in the military took the family across the globe. After graduating from high school in Germany, he followed in his father's footsteps and joined the Army, where he worked as an attack helicopter pilot.

"I got out as a captain in 1994, and I've been interested in real estate ever since," said Harrison, adding that he received his license and joined EXIT Realty Horizons in 2004. "I love the interaction with people and helping them do something that is normally the most important thing of their financial lives. It's gratifying to help people achieve that dream."

During his time at EXIT Realty, Harrison has helped many customers find their dream home – including his good friend Arnone.

Arnone, a native to northern New Mexico, attended the University of Southern Colorado, where he earned bachelor's degrees in sociology and criminology.

More than four years ago, after several years in the real estate industry as an appraiser and Realtor, Arnone came to Las Cruces and joined the EXIT team.

"When you see a first-time homebuyer and help them with the process and give them the keys, it's a pretty cool experience," he said.

Harrison's and Arnone's desire to own the franchise first sprouted four years ago.

"We both had an entrepreneurial spirit," Harrison said. While the duo had the dream, other factors got in their way to owning the brokerage, which started in 2003 and includes 32 agents.

"We talked to Chuck and Kathy a few times about how we could own a piece, or all, or our own franchise," Harrison said. "The timing was never right for him and us at the same time. When he was ready to make the decision, he called us."

"The idea was always to sell," said Chuck Olson, who added that he owns 10 EXIT Realty franchises in the southern New Mexico and El Paso region.

With the time finally being right, Chuck Olson passed the torch to the charismatic coowners, both of whom have been top producers for the local franchise for several years.

"Both are extremely competent and well liked in the office," Olson said.

The duo said they, with the support of their families – including Harrison's wife Sherri and three children and Arnone's wife Bobbie – paid for the brokerage and everything in it with cash to eliminate any possible institutional debt.

"We wouldn't have done it without (our families) and their blessing," Harrison said.

Becoming agent centered

In their new leadership role, the co-owners said they will make slight changes to enhance the agents' experience at the broker-

300 million years later, cockroaches still hated Their adaptation skills make them a nuisance

I hate them. You hate them. We all hate them. You know you do. There is perhaps no living thing on Earth more reviled than the cockroach.

These pesky insects can make a grown man or woman scream, tremble and run for cover. Frankly, they have no redeeming qualities and most people just want them eradicated.

Based on fossil evidence, cockroaches have lived on Earth for more than 300 million years. Their sizes vary considerably, with some species growing up to several inches long.

Cockroaches are one of the most adaptable and successful insect groups, having survived environmental shifts for hundreds of millions of years. There are approximately 4,000 to 7,500 species of cockroaches worldwide and approximately 60 species are found in the United States. They are in nearly every part of the world, in a wide range of habitats. Unfortunately, many of Barry Murray The Bug Guy the biological characteristics that make them so successful also make them one of the most difficult pests to manage.

Cockroaches, especially the German cockroach, are the most commonly encountered household insect pests in much of the U.S. However, only a few of the cockroach species found in the U.S. routinely enter and infest our dwellings.

In addition to the German cockroach, the most common of these found in Las Cruces are: the American cockroach, the Oriental cockroach and the Smokey Brown cockroach. Two other species found elsewhere in the U.S. are the Australian cockroach and the Florida wood cockroach.

See Cockroach on page E10

Joe Arnone and Chris Harrison have recently purchased EXIT Realty Horizons and look forward to establishing an agent-centered office.

age and making it a more agent-oriented environment.

"It's not 'us' versus 'them," Arnone said. "There isn't a boss-versus-agents attitude."

"We know our agents can help customers more efficiently if they can do their job without an employer-employee relationship," Harrison said. One way they will do this is through a leadership council, which will give every agent a voice in what happens at the franchise.

"We have agents here with great ideas, and we want them to be able to express that," Arnone said.

"People will give advice and suggestions," Harrison said. "We want to have a feeling in the office that agents want to work here. We don't mandate and direct. The mood here will be very light and happy."

By becoming more agent-centered, Harrison added that EXIT Realty will in return be more customer-oriented.

"We give them the tools, backing and support to provide for the customer," he said. "So far, the brokers have really responded."

Harrison said these changes will help grow the company and attract new, highly qualified agents to the brokerage.

"People don't want to work for us, they want to work with us," he said.

As for the community, the co-owners said the public can expect to see EXIT Realty continue its efforts to help the Mesilla Valley Habitat for Humanity.

"A percentage of every home sale in the office goes to Habitat for Humanity," said Harrison, adding that agents will also make an effort to help in the home construction process.

Olson said with the local office sold, he will focus on his duties as regional franchise owner, which includes selling franchises in southern New Mexico and El Paso.

He said he is pleased with the office he and his wife Kathy Olson have built in Las Cruces and with the Realtors, who he said are "competent, ethical and don't sacrifice ethics for money."

"I would like to acknowledge that over the years we have been able to work with a great group in our office," he said. "We have a great group of agents. I'm proud of what we've accomplished."

Get perfect pasta portion

Spaghetti measurer helps with serving-size control

By Beth Sitzler

If you saw "Eat Pray Love" this weekend, you probably found yourself envious of the multiple plates of delectable dishes Julia Robert's character Liz devoured in the movie during her adventures in Rome.

Her love affair with the Italian dishes had her noshing on the best feasts the ancient city had to offer, including pizza, fresh vegetables, gelato and, of course, pasta.

Pasta is one of America's favorite dishes with about 1.3 million pounds of the starchy substance being sold in 2000, according to www. ilovepasta.org.

While enticingly satisfying to the palate, large consumption of pasta can be detrimental to the waistline. Many argue pasta is one of the "bad" car-bohydrates that should be avoided since it's difficult to burn off.

As with anything, portion control is key to maintaining a healthy weight while indulging in treats, such as pasta. An easy way to watch your serving sizes is to measure long strands of the dried dough using the pasta measurer.

What is it?

The pasta measurer is an easy way to measure servings of dried spaghetti or other long pastas, such as capellini and angel hair. Thanks to the gadget, you no longer have to guess how much spaghetti you're cooking and run the risk of boiling too much or not enough.

There are several different types of pasta measurers, including an adjustable wheel, measuring stick and sliding gadget.

The adjustable wheel, probably the latest in pasta-measuring designs, is a simple circle with a lever-controlled opening - imagine the aperture of a camera, growing larger or smaller with a turn of the knob.

The pasta-measuring stick is the oldest and most simple of the portion-control devices. Made from numerous materials, such as wood, metal and plastic, the stick has several holes of varying sizes cut out.

Lastly, the sliding pasta measurer is an easy-to-hold gadget, reminiscent of a magnifying glass. With a push of a finger, the adjustable slide clicks into place, marking the correct spaghetti proportion.

No matter with type of pasta measurer you choose, you will get perfect portions every time you use it.

How does it work?

Whether you're using a stick, adjustable wheel or the sliding gadget, each pasta-measuring tool is easy to use.

Adjust your measurer to the serving size you desire – most range from one serving to four. Once you have your portion set in place, push the long-strand pasta through the opening. However much can fit in the hole is how much that serving equals.

Most pasta measurers are dishwasher safe, however, if your stick gadget is made from wood, you should hand wash it with warm water and soap to prevent damage.

Featured Gadget: Pasta measurer

Where can it be found?

A common kitchen-supply store item, the various types of pasta measurers can be found at Bed, Bath & Beyond. It can also be purchased online at www.amazon.com and www.buy.com.

How much does it cost?

Depending on the type of pasta measurer, the gadget can cost anywhere from $2 for the measuring stick to $10 for the adjustable wheel.

Cockroach

These six species represent the majority of all cockroach infestations in and around buildings. In some parts of the U.S., one species may be more prevalent than the others. Some will exist under unusual circumstances such as inhabiting ant, wasp, termite colony nests, caves, animal burrows and even mines.

Because cockroaches contaminate food with their excrement, as well as emitting an unpleasant odor, these insects are considered by homeowners and entomologists to be among the worst household pests.

Many of the environmental requirements of cockroaches (high humidity, warmth and food sources) can be found in a typical home. Cockroaches evolved as scavengers feeding off decaying plant materials, and will readily feed on carbohydrates. They also feed on a variety of other foods, including paints, wallpaper pastes and bookbindings.

Prolific breeders, cockroaches can be very difficult to eradicate. A single female can produce more than 35,000 young each year. The life cycle begins when a mature female cockroach produces an eggcase or ootheca. Females can carry an egg case with them for quite some time, dropping the case wherever it may fall (i.e., in pockets, briefcases, drawers).

This can lead to the rapid spread of these insects, because each ootheca may contain hundreds of eggs that hatch into small versions of the adults, called nymphs. Nymphs can be recognized by the absence of wings. Mature cockroach nymphs are almost as large as the adults, but require another molt to reach adulthood A cockroach-prevention program should include:

- Cut down on their food supply Vacuum or sweep the floor after every meal.
- Wash dishes in soapy, hot water to eliminate all traces of grease
- Keep trash in a tight-lidded container.
- Keep compost as far from the house as possible. Cover each new "deposit" with a fresh layer of sand or soil. Store unused portions of chips, cereal, cookies, flour,
- sugar, rice and other bulk foods in tightly sealed plas-tic containers or large glass jars with screw-on lids.
- After a pet has eaten, remove their food bowl and sweep the floor.
- Don't walk through the house eating: contain crumbs in one room.
- Don't forget to clean crumbs from under appliances daily.

Dry up their water supply

- Roaches can go much longer without food than without water. To keep roaches away, keep them thirsty.
- Fix dripping faucets. Pour some Lysol into toilets at night to make the - water undrinkable. Keep sink plugs over drains.
- Don't over water houseplants. Soggy soil is a delicious cockroach cocktail.

Keep them out

- To prevent roaches from migrating in to your house, seal common roach entryways.
- Fill holes where pipes disappear into walls with copper wool or caulk
- Caulk cracks around windows, eaves, doors, etc. Doors should have door sweeps so roaches can't crawl
- under them. On slab foundations, seal the weep holes with copper
- wool.
- On pier and beam foundations, make sure that all the vents are screened or sealed. Cockroach control usually requires an ongoing treatment program. Many pest control companies require monthly or quarterly treatments to guarantee that roaches will not return. Because cockroaches can be so invasive and unhealthy, it is of the utmost importance that you follow the above steps and keep a regular pest control schedule.

Let the chile consumption begin

Rabbi Gerald Kane

Readers receive a taste of flavorful dishes by locals

As promised, here are more scrumptious chile recipes to help celebrate this year's harvest.

As a perk, two of the recipes are shared by Las Crucens. Bill and Verna Gillett contribute My Mother's BBQ, green chile pork shoulder, and Rabbi Gerald Kane shared his inventive Cookies with a Kick: Triple Chocolate Pecan Bites. The cookies were featured and gobbled up at the 2010 Men Who Cook fundraiser for Mesilla Valley Hospice.

I also include a few of my Southwest favorites - A Gallon Pot of Hot - green chile stew - Enchanting Chicken Enchiladas with Green Chile Sauce and Green Chile Tater Barcos (potato boats). Viva los chiles! (Hurray for chiles!)

My Mother's BBQ

Dear Sunny

Recently Bill and I made this recipe that I got from my mother to serve to a group that was having a garage sale to help a lady who now resides in assisted living. Some asked for the recipe and others commented on it, so we thought we would send it to you. Bill and Verna

5 to 8 pounds of pork shoulder

- or beef shank
- 1 cup onion, chopped
- 4 teaspoons butter
- 1 cup ketchup
- 1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
- 2 (10.5-ounce) cans tomato soup
- 1 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 to 1 cup New Mexico chile to heat and taste tolerance, roasted, peeled and diced 1 (6-ounce) jar pickle relish

Cook onions for 3 minutes in butter. Add other ingredients and bring to boil. Add sauce to meat, either pork, beef or both. Meat should be extremely tender so it falls apart easily. Shred meat with fork and remove fat and bone.

A Gallon Pot of Hot (Green Chile Stew)

I gleaned this recipe from a favorite cookbook of mine, "Seasoned with Sun, Recipes from the Corner of Texas and Old Mexico" by the Junior League of El Paso Inc., 1989. But I tweaked it a bit. The recipe calls for bacon fat, but I include the bacon too! 3 pounds beef, cubed

1 1/2 cups onion, diced

- Bacon fat (I fry 4 bacon slabs)
- 3 cups tomatoes, diced
- $1 \ 1/\overline{2}$  cups green chile strips
- 1/2 cup beef stock
- 1/2 cup chicken stock
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons pepper
- 2 teaspoons garlic salt
- 2 teaspoons cumin

2 pounds potatoes, peeled and cubed Sauté beef and onions in bacon fat. Add tomatoes, chile strips, stocks and seasonings.

There's nothing quite as satisfying as a hot pot of sizzling green chile stew.

Cook over low heat until meat is tender. Add cues potatoes during the last 30 minutes. Serve with warmed flour tortillas. (I prefer hearty corn tortillas.)

Enchanting Chicken Enchiladas with Green Chile Sauce

12 corn tortillas 4 cups Green Chile Sauce, recipe below 3 cups chicken breast, cooked and minced 1 pound shredded Monterey Jack cheese 1/4 cup onion, minced

1 to 2 cups sour cream Salt to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Heat tortillas on griddle, in microwave or heat in oil until flexible; cover with a towel and keep warm. Make Green Chile Sauce (see recipe below). Mix one cup chile sauce with the minced chicken. Put 1/4 cup of the mixture on each tortilla and roll up.

Place tortilla rolls, seam-side down, in a baking dish, cover enchiladas with shredded cheese and add onion, if desired. Pour remaining sauce over enchiladas. Bake enchiladas for about 20 minutes. Top with sour cream and return to oven for 10 minutes or until all is hot. Serve immediately.

Green Chile Sauce

- 1/4 cup olive oil 1 clove garlic, minced 1/2 cup onion, minced 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup water 1 cup green chiles, roasted, peeled, stemmed and chopped
- Salt to taste

Put oil in a heavy iron skillet and sauté garlic and onion. Blend in flour; add water and green chile; mix well. Add salt. Bring to a boil and simmer, stirring frequently for 5 minutes.

Green Chile Tater Barcos

6 large baked potatoes, halves, pulp removed and mashed

6 hot green chiles, roasted, seeded and stemmed 3 hard boiled eggs, chopped 1/2 cup butter, softened 1 cup sour cream Extra sharp Cheddar cheese, shredded Salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Mix mashed potatoes, chiles, chopped eggs, butter, sour cream and salt and pepper. Fill boats with mixture. Top each potato with shredded cheese and heat in oven 15 minutes. Makes 6 boats

Cookies with a Kick: Triple Chocolate Pecan Bites

Hi Sunny,

I have tinkered with a number of recipes and came up with this one. Let me know what you think. There was quite a wind that kicked up at the start of the (fundraiser) at 6 p.m. It was hot! But it became tolerable by 6:45 p.m.

2 large eggs 1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract 2 1/4 cups all purpose flour 1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder 1 teaspoon baking soda

- 1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter,

3/4 cup light brown sugar, packed room temperature

3/4 cup granulated sugar

1 1/2 cups semisweet chocolate chips

1 teaspoon cinnamon, for tossing 1 teaspoon chili powder, for tossing.

(Omit if using Stahmann's Mild Chili Dusted Pecan Snacks) Using an electric mixer, beat butter and sugars until combined. Beat in eggs 1 at a time. Add vanilla. Sift next 6 ingredients together. Gradually add dry sifted ingredients to butter mixture, beating until just blended. In a separate bowl, combine white and semi-sweet chocolate chips and chopped

pecans. Toss chips and pecans with 1 teaspoon of cinnamon and 1/4 teaspoon chili powder. Carefully stir tossed chips and nut mixture into dough until just combined.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Line two large baking sheets with parchment paper. Drop dough by rounded tablespoonfuls onto sheets, spacing 1 1/2 inches apart (16 per cookie sheet).

Bake for about 9 to 11 minutes in a conventional oven, or 10 minutes if using the "convection bake" setting. Turn trays around halfway through baking. Remove from oven. Let stand on sheets 3 to 5 minutes. Transfer cookies to racks and cool completely. Makes 48 to 54 cookies.

An ounce of planning is worth a pound of construction costs

Kitchen remodels can increase your home's value, function

One of the best areas to remodel in terms of payback when you sell is your kitchen. You will not only get most of the dollars you reinvested, but you will also get to enjoy the benefits while you're there.

It's very important to give a lot of thought to what you're going to do before you do it. Here are a few things to think about. First, how do you use your kitchen? Do you share the food preparation, cooking and cleanup with another person? If so, you need to be sure that your paths do not constantly cross as you work. When more than one person is normally involved, you often need separate workspaces for each: a food preparation area and a cooking area. You need adequate counter space for both and perhaps even separate sink areas.

Next, if your kitchen is also the "gathering place" for company (as most are), you need to keep the guests out of the way of the food preparation, cooking and cleanup. They need a place to eat, drink and visit that will not interfere with the tasks at hand. Generally speaking, you will need to provide half of the space for guests and half for the cooking chores.

Maureen Villmer Practical Design

Often a bar can be a good way to divide the space.

Having "traffic lanes" as wide as possible will keep the cooks from interfering with one another. You should spend some time analyzing where each person will be moving during the prep and cooking phases and also during the cleanup phase.

I am currently working on a kitchen remodel where the sink and the dishwasher are too close to be practical. Think about the door to the dishwasher being open and where you stand to load it. Is there enough room to maneuver without blocking someone else who might be gathering the dishes? When you're loading and unloading, are you blocking a traffic lane? Will you be hitting your shins as you load and unload?

Another area to consider ahead of time is the light available in the kitchen – both natural and artificial. I am also working on a kitchen remodel where there isn't a window above the sink. To overcome facing a wall, we are adding a windowframe mirror to reflect light from another window. Another possibility is to actually put in a window with an exterior window box.

In addition to adding light, it's also a great way of bringing nature into the room. You can have a small plant or cactus garden that requires very little care.

To help keep the traffic lanes under control, you might consider a table with a relatively small footprint – but one that can be expanded when needed. You'll save lots of space most of the time and you can increase the seating when needed. Generally, I plan 3 feet from the table edge back to allow adequate room to get in and out of the chairs. You'll also need that space to set up and clear the table easily.

Yet another approach to solving the space the table takes up is to build a "bay" for the table to set into. In addition to opening up your kitchen space, it can also provide another opportunity to bring some nature into the kitchen with plants.

Analyze your storage needs before you start your remodeling. In one remodeling project, we removed cabinets in order to build a pantry. The pantry provided much more space and add versatility. It also costs less than cabinets.

These are just a few of the things that should be considered before you start the work. If enough thought is put into it ahead of time, you'll be able to enjoy an efficient kitchen and then reap the benefits of pre-planning later.
