Senator hears border issues

Cooperation good, more funding asked

By JIM HILLEY

U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman was in Las Cruces Monday, April 13, to listen to reports from members of local, state and federal law enforcement agencies on efforts to improve security on the U.S.-

Mexico border. The officers told the senior New Mexico senator there was improved cooperation between the various agencies, but more progress could be made increased funding.

"I think we BINGAMAN have made some progress addressing law enforcement issues on the New Mexico border," Bingaman said. "We have close to 1,400 Border Patrol Agents and are on our way to 1,600, which is what we were hoping for."

Bingaman cited efforts by the New Mexico National Guard and new Border Enforcement Security Task Force teams. He said construction of structural barriers are proceeding rapidly and that ATF (Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms) is working on deal with additional burdens on the border – and also the rest of the state – is just about due," Bingaman said.

Luna County Sheriff Raymond
Cobos told Bingaman that Luna

County is a success story because of his department's partnership with the gun-running problem. "Stimulus-package funding to the Border Patrol.

"We've seen our crime rate go

Spaceport America forms taxing district for bonds

Scheduling conflict also pushes back educational launch to May 2

By TODD G. DICKSON

A spaceport tax district was established through an agreement passed by the New Mexico Spaceport Authority and the board for the new tax entity in Doña Ana and Sierra

The spaceport authority board approved a Memorandum of Agreement with the new taxing district Wednes-day, April 15, and the tax district board approved the MOA later that day.

By passing the MOA, the spaceport authority can now pursue bonds, which will be acquired through the New Mexico Finance Authority. The bonds will be paid back by an increase in gross receipts taxes approved by voters in the two counties.

Besides being another layer of review, the tax district board made up of representatives from the two counties and the state – also will ensure that a quarter of the new money collected will go back to the communities for spaceport-related projects. Both Sierra and Doña Ana counties want that local portion to go to support science and math education.

The rest of the new money will go to paying off the bond. Current estimates for how much the authority can borrow based on the GRT increases range from $50 million to $60 million.

Recovery money to help improve levees

Upgrades aim to head off new home flood insurance expense

By Todd G. Dickson

Southern New Mexico's newest congressman and U.S. senator got a guided tour Monday, April 13, of the levee road system along the Rio Grande from Las Cruces to Canutillo,

For U.S. Sen. Tom Udall and Congressman Harry Teague, the trip gave a chance for the New Mexico Democrats to show how the federal reinvestment money will not only add jobs, but solve a problem facing the residents who live under the levee road system.

When the Federal Emergency Management Agency toughened its levee standards after Hurricane Katrina, the hundreds of miles of levee roads along the Rio Grande were consistently a few feet below the standard.

Residents who lived near the river never saw the river breach the long stretches of area between the river bank and levee roads, even during the worst rainstorms a few summers ago. Nevertheless, they found their homes now in new floodplains established by FEMA and they would be forced to buy expensive flood insurance if the levee roads weren't raised.

The cost of raising the levees – and in some stretches

Environmental films to make their debut

Festival to help celebrate Earth Day on April 22

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Be swept away by a world that goes far beyond the community, into the wilderness of America, the white water of India and adventures in Central America, and then bring it all back to Las Cruces' backyard, the Robledo Mountains.

All of this and more will take place as part of the Patagonia Wild & Scenic Environmental Film Festival, which makes its debut in Las Cruces from 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, April 22, at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Downtown Mall. The event will be held in celebration of Earth Day.

The festival will include a number of short films such as "The Last Descent," about a group of world-class whitewater kayakers on some of the world's most amazing rivers, "Hardrock Mining: Rethink, Reform," about the problem of 19th century values and policy guiding 21st century high-tech mining technology, and "Division Street," about the wild landscapes and urban sprawl seen throughout the United States.

In addition to a few other short films, the program will also feature speakers in the area of wilderness protection and other environmental interests that are key in the area and the world as a whole, including Jerry McDonald from the trackways, Pat Buls, a cowboy poet who is known for her horse ride from Las Cruces to Durango, Colo., Kevin Bixby of the Southwest Environmental Center and State Rep. Jeff Steinborn, among others.

"We're working on a direct effort to have young people involved in this event," said State Rep. Nathan Small. "Now is the time to find new ground and cut across our old divisions."

Coffee and light refreshments will be served to attendees, who will also have an opportunity to win raffle prizes such as a free bike tune up.

Tickets are $8 in advance for adults, $5 for students and kids under 18 are free. Tickets at the door will be $10. Call 496-9540 or visit www.nmwild.org for more information.

Bored in Las Cruces?

Next weekend Las Crucens will have to make tough choices about where to spend their time and money

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM The Las Cruces Bulletin

McCOLLUM

Las Cruces' busiest entertainment weekend starts early. At 7 a.m. on Thursday, April 23, Lou and Mary Henson will host the Boys & Girls Club community breakfast at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. This special benefit event will feature a guest speaker, Clark Kellogg, former NBA star, All American and now lead NCAA basketball announcer for CBS.

And then things really get busy.

Thursday evening, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., the string quarter La Cella Bella will be performing their unique assortment of pop and classical music at the St. Clair

Winery & Bistro on Avenida de Mesilla
The White Sands International Film Festival opens at 7 p.m. Thursday at Allen Theatre's sparkling new Cineport 10 Theatres at the Mesilla Valley Mall on Telshor Boulevard. The opening night film presentation

Valley Mall on Telshor Boulevard. The opening night film presentation is "The Red Violin" at Theatre 3, and it will be followed by an opening night reception until midnight in Mesilla at the St. Clair Winery & Bistro. Throughout the weekend, 47 short and feature-length films from around the world will be shown. Additionally, WSIFF will host a variety of workshops, panels and social events in various Las Cruces-area locations, culminating with the awards ceremony at the Cineport 10 on Saturday evening.

Included in this week's home-delivered Bulletin is a colorful, 16-page special edition dedicated entirely to the film festival. Copies of the magazine are also being distributed to hotels, restaurants and other single copy locations throughout our area. This is the first year the festival has been held in Las Cruces after several successful years in Alamogordo, N.M.

If you are into sports, the Aggie Athletic Fund is hosting a festive event Friday evening at the Farm & Ranch Museum. The theme is Chile Cheeseburger in Paradise where, in addition to a great meal, attendees can participate in a silent auction with a variety of items including NMSU Aggie memorabilia. The next morning, NMSU Aggie football coach DeWayne Walker will host an alumni golf scramble at the University Golf Course. Then at 6 p.m. the Aggies will hold their spring football game at Aggie Memorial Stadium. Also, during the weekend the 24th-ranked Aggie baseball team hosts Hawaii with single games on Friday and Sunday and a doubleheader on Saturday.

Friday, April 24, kicks off two weekends of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association Spring Showcase of Homes, which features 28 entries in all price ranges. Those wanting to see the latest in residential design can visit the homes from 4 to 7 p.m. Fridays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays. For a map of the showcase homes, see Page E5.

Another terrific option is the annual British Car Show that will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Mesilla Plaza. The event is free to the public and always includes unique and interesting automobiles that have been impeccably restored and maintained.

If wine is your thing, and you enjoy jazz, you probably won't mind the short drive on state Highway 28 to La Union in the southern part of the county for the annual La Viña Wine and Jazz Festival. The event costs $10 per person and will be open from noon to 7 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

For all you cowboys, the annual NMSU College Rodeo will be held at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday at the new arena at the Southern New Mexico State Fairground. These college rodeo competitors are among the best in the country and deserve our support.

If you have friends and family that live nearby, this coming weekend would be ideal for you to invite them to join you to attend any or all of the exciting events throughout Las Cruces throughout the weekend. They will not be bored.

Unhappy football fan

I have been a football season ticket holder for the last four years. So I was pleased to read the full-page ad that states "Season tickets are the very best deal, saving up to 60 percent of the single game price." It further states "Best deals are reserved for our best fans — our season ticket holders." I was really looking forward to reduced season-ticket prices.

Now, I received my invoice and did not see my savings or discounts. Fact is, my season ticket prices increased a whopping 45 percent over last year. This, from a team with an 11-38 record over the last four years. I was witness to a perfect season in 2005 (0-12).

Also included with the invoice they sent me was a memo from Steve Macy, associate athletic director. It states in big bold black letters "Our new flat pricing structure rewards our best fans with up to 60 percent savings on season tickets."

I suggest the department of athletics be required to take remedial courses in basic math skills so they can identify saving percentages versus increases percentages. Then, perhaps, they will stop the misleading advertisements and ridiculous memos.

Enforce immigration law

The Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigration Responsibility Act of 1996 provides that a federal, state or local government may not restrict officials from exchanging information regarding an individual's immigration status with Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Many local governments openly defy this rule. Bill S-95, presented by Sen. David Vitter of Louisiana, would add strength to this act of law by cutting off federal funds to those violators of the 1996 act.

Gang violence

Gang violence in Doña Ana County has recently been in the news. The leading risk factors for gang involvement include low income, learning disabilities, low achievement in and attachment to school, no involvement in positive activities outside of school, friends and peers who are delinquent, low exposure and attachment to conventional rules, expectations, role models, feeling of fear in school, early involvement in petty theft and behavioral disorders in the primary grades.

The majority of gang members are Hispanic, comprising 47 percent. Gang participants are much more involved with drugs. For example, 54-percent of male gang participants versus 9 percent of non-gang participants sold marijuana and other drugs in the last 12 months.

and other drugs in the last 12 months.

Anthony, N.M., and surrounding communities have also had heightened crime. As a resident and community member, I feel more needs to be implemented in the rural communities. An additional 15 deputies patrolling the Anthony area is not sufficient. School- and community-based programs need to re-evaluate goals that target youth and gang activity. Families and communities must also take on the responsibility of creating and helping to restructure their environment.

Nearby states reeling from budget woes

Arizona forced to make 30-percent cuts across the board

Reports from around the nation indicate that New Mexicans have escaped the current financial crisis with less pain than most of our fellow Americans. Numerous states already have enacted tax increases.

There may be more because most states have much longer legislative sessions than we do. Some range up to a year. Many of those states still haven't figured a way out of their dilemma. And some of those aren't discussing any other legislations until they set their budget for this year and next.

New Mexico lawmakers had our budget for the remainder of this fiscal year passed and signed by Gov. Bill Richardson on Feb. 6. Next year's General Appropriations Act was passed before the March 21 adjournment of the Legislature and signed by the governor on April 7.

A special session of the Legislature still is a possibility in case the economy gets worse or the federal government does something unexpected later in the year.

Everyone has their complaints about New Mexico's state government, but this certainly is an area in which it appears very competent.

Visiting some neighboring states recently, we have had the opportunity to witness the trials they are going through during the current financial crisis. Arizona, Nevada and California have been the three hardest hit states in the nation. Each have about a 30 percent budget deficit for this budget year and maybe another 30 percent for next year.

California's fiscal woes and attempted fixes all have been highlighted nationally. Nevada's and Arizona's dilemmas have been even worse.

In February, the Arizona Legislature told all departments they would have to cut their budgets in the 30-percent range for the rest of the year. No excuses. Lawmakers didn't say where to cut. They just said figure it out and report back to us.

Needless to say, many public services have been cut. Perhaps worst of all, the Revenue Department had to lay off 44 percent of its tax collectors and auditors for the last four months of the year ending in June

Those 208 tax collectors and auditors bring in many times their annual salaries in delinquent tax payments. But the only alternative was to lay off the employees who process tax collections and returns. That would have had an even greater impact on revenues that don't get collected.

JAY MILLER
Inside the Capitol

This all happened after the department had released all probationary employees and not filled their positions and after implementing furloughs for all remaining employees.

Although not too many people are taking much pity on the tax collectors, their impact on the budget is huge. Lawmakers are debating whether to restore some of those positions in next year's budget, but that budget may have to be even more austere than this year's cuts.

Another interesting situation developed in Arizona when the head of the Department of Transportation was called to testify to a legislative committee about the effects of the cuts on his department. It just so happened that the department head was himself on a mandatory furlough at the time.

He toyed with the idea of notifying the committee that he would be unavailable. It would have made a good point but the director decided that action would cause him a great deal more grief than just showing up.

The only New Mexico state employees

The only New Mexico state employees who received any cuts were the hundreds of top staffers hired by the governor. He cut their salaries 2-percent and took away their compensatory time and end-of-the-year payouts for annual leave.

They aren't getting much pity either. They are the ones who get the publicity and cause a public perception that we have too many state employees, all of whom are overpaid.

Highly destructive political policies Citizens reap harvest of government control

By Michael Swickard

Despite the citizen protests this week, our country will never return to the America of our founding because we have become a wholly different people.

For the last century, highly destructive political concepts have been planted in our political fields. The fruits of these ideas have moved us little by little to a nation where our original values of limited government along with personal control of our responsibility and independence have been replaced by total ownership and control of the people by the government.

Today, every event and crisis is seen by our government as a reason to increase control over citizens. In our future are at least seven harvests:

First, we will stop talking about the national debt. There is no will or ability to pay it. Our leaders for generations have known the national debt will never be retired. Occasionally, they try not to increase the debt. But no one ever talks of repaying it. Our country will default the debt when the interest becomes unsustainable.

Second, health care will be run entirely by the government under the guise of extending it to all citizens. We will have little say about our medical treatment. Our mortality rate will increase with government cost-containment and rules concerning the use of medical resources. We geezers will have no chance to receive really expensive treatments.

Third, personal ownership of firearms will end. Little by little, over the last century, personal firearm ownership has declined in other countries and ours. At some point firearms became illegal in those countries as they will be here.

Every crisis is

government

as a reason to increase control over citizens.

Easy or hard, our firearms will be taken from us like in other nations. The only armed people will be the authorities and the criminals.

Fourth, censorship and federal centralized dominance will prevail. The government will not tolerate criticism. Those voices will be squashed. State governments will be forced to give their powers to the central government as our Constitution is discarded.

Fifth, privacy as Americans have known it will no longer exist. Every day government will increase their surveillance of citizens to support total government control. At every moment what you say, write, read or do will be electronically recorded. There will be so much data that what we do may never be watched, but it will be recorded.

Sixth, discretionary use of resources by citizens will end. The consumption of fuel, electricity, water and food will come under the direct control of the government. We will be forced to follow resource use guidelines because little by little we have allowed that power over us. How much water, power or food we use will have to conform to rules established by the government. The statement, "This is all you need," will be applied to people deemed by the government of wanting more than they need.

Seventh, productivity of the society will decrease due to government rules. The overall wealth of the nation, entrepreneurialship and innovation will decline. Further, the variety and amount of available consumer products will decline. Most impacted will be our children, who will not be given so much from our shrinking discretionary funds.

Most people will adapt to this complete government control of our lives by keeping their heads down and mouths shut. Our group memory of liberty will erode and then disappear.

Can we change our fate? While we might be able to slow some changes, without a huge sustained change groundswell by the citizens, we will be systematically overwhelmed by the control hungry government. The majority of American citizens will never see the danger to their liberty.

We will have this future because the ideas and concepts of total government control of the citizens were planted and harvested in our political fields repeatedly over the last century primarily by Congresses of both parties along with both Presidents Roosevelt and Bush; Presidents Wilson, Johnson, Nixon, Carter, Clinton and now Obama.

We can only harvest in the future what we plant today.

America's funniest farm video revealed

It's curious why more cows aren't featured on America's Funniest Home Videos. Maybe it's because we cow guardians always have our hands full of hay forks, reins, twine cutters, squeeze chute handles, syringes or up the back of a cow. And, if the truth were known, you could stand in a pen or pasture full of cattle all day with your video recorder and see nothing more exciting than you would in a day room full of senior citizens after lunch.

See, cows are not like monkeys, puppies or bull riders who can always be counted on to show you some kind of bizarre body function, tail-pulling or booger-related behavior. Yet, I cannot count the number of stories I've been told wherein the dull, cud-chomping, cloven-hoofed grazer has made a fool out of our Supermanic cowboy hero!

In spring, Cowbelt cowmen can see green on the horizon from the top of the windmill. You can hear the tickertape sound of mental calculations dividing bales of hay left in sound of mental calculations dividing bales of may left in stacks divided by days till the grass arrives.

"It's gonna be tight," said Bob as he tossed the last two broken bales off the back of the hay wagon into the adoring crowd of cows. Pete, who was driving the horse-drawn flatbed wagon through the snow, pulled ahead of the cows and looked back. The three cowdogs had jumped on board and were lolling in the lazy morning sun.

"Bob," said Pete, "I believe that brockle-face calf there needs a scour pill." He stopped the wagon. Bob slipped off the side and approached the calf.

The calf's mama lowered her head and snorted a warning! In one smooth cowboy move, Bob grabbed a front and hind leg and swung the startled calf onto the wagon bed. The sudden movement spooked the horses. They jumped, knocking Pete over backwards. Bob ran to catch the wagon with the mama cow right behind him! Up on the wagon ... first Bob ... then the cow.

The dogs rose to full barking mode. The horses picked up speed. Soon a whirlpool of dogs set upon the cow. Our two intrepid cowboys flew off the wagon like bird poop on a wind-

The final scene in this America's Funniest Farm Video would be of the horses in a crazed run pulling the bouncing, bucking wagon across the bumpy terrain, the cow with legs spread wide trying to keep her balance, and the dogs circling her like Geronimo attacking Ward Bond's wagon train!

Spaceport

Besides bonds, the spaceport has about $140 million in direct appropriations to build the spaceport 45 miles north of Las Cruces, which is estimated to cost about $200 million.

This mix of funding is providing both flexibility and pitfalls, according to a report given to the spaceport authority. In preliminary meetings with state finance authority officials, they questioned what portions of the work can be considered for public benefit and how much for private usage, said spaceport consultant Aaron Prescott.

The spaceport is like an airport in that private companies get to use the facility to transport people and materials. So, like an airport, some facilities are more for operations by airport tenants and are seen legally as being more for private usage than for the public. This private-public determination greatly influences the interest rate charged on the bonds, Prescott said. For example, on a $58 million bond, $8 million of that could go to taxes if the projects being funded are deemed to be of a private benefit, whereas a public usage determination would make the bond tax-exempt, he said.

Spaceport staff will be working with the finance authority officials to sort out which portions of the project should be paid for by bonds or by direct appropriation, Prescott said.

Educational spaceport launch rescheduled

Meanwhile, the planned educational launch from Spaceport America originally set for Saturday, April 25, has been rescheduled because of a scheduling conflict with the nearby White Sands Missile Range. That launch, Prescott said, will now be held Saturday, May 2.

New Mexico State University students from the Las Cruces and Doña Ana Community College campuses and those from three other universities, community colleges and several high schools in the state will be launching experiments into space.

UP Aerospace has held several launches from Spaceport America with its 20-foot-tall SpaceLoft XL rocket carrying primarily commercial payloads. Because it offers relatively low-cost launches, fund-ing was acquired for a launch just for students, and Spaceport America Executive Director Steve Landeene has said he wants the educational launch to become an annual event.

More information will be coming about how people can view the educational launch.

down substantially and several loads of contraband have been taken off the streets," he said.

Cobos said loosened rules on receiving border security funding would be a big help. "Give us the tools and we'll do the job.

Interagency cooperation was also cited by Grant County Sheriff Raul Holguin as an important factor in increased border security.

"I don't think I've ever seen a great a group of individuals develop such a rapport." Holguin said.

Las Cruces ATF

George Gillette, an agent with ATF also praised cooperation among agencies. "I'm proud of the cooperative atmosphere among law enforcement in New Mexico," he Gillette said the ATF's presence in New Mexico would be greatly increased with a group fighting firearms traffic to be located in Las Cruces. Gillette told Bingaman that ATF operations in the area would be up and running no later than Sept. 1.

Bingaman told the law enforcement officials gathered in the Las Cruces Police Department Briefing Room that he was one of several senators who dined recently with Mexican President Felipe Calderón, who asked for help from American law enforcement to stem the flow of weapons into Mexico.

I-10 checkpoint expansion

Agent G.D. Rogers from the U.S. Border Patrol said that staffing for his agency was at almost 100 percent and they had seen positive results in curbing illegal traffic flow. He said checkpoints designed decades ago were badly in need of expansion. Work on the I-25 checkpoint north of Las Cruces will be completed in August, he said.

"The I-10 checkpoint work will start next month to create separate commercial and passenger lanes," Rogers said. "Commercial traffic will be separated from private traffic almost a mile from the checkpoint.

"In effect, we will have three checkpoints, two commercial lanes and one for private vehicles," he said.

Rogers said that the Border Patrol has been able to provide a great deal of assistance to the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department, including loaning the local agency such items as night-vision goggles and surveillance equipment.

Drug Enforcement Administration Special Agent David Cota told Bingaman that there were 20 task-force agents from nine different agencies providing analysis capabilities to local law enforcement. He said a recent cooperative effort with Mexican authorities code-named "Accelerator" had resulted in 750 arrests, the confisca-

Cota told Bingaman most drug seizures in New Mexico involved marijuana smuggling.

National Guard presence

Maj. Gen. Kenny Montoya of the New Mexico National Guard reported that while at one time 227 guardsmen were stationed on the national border, that number was down to 67.

He said the National Guard assists local law enforcement primarily by improving their technological capability using cameras and remote sensors and by observation. Montoya broke the mission into two parts: "Stop drugs and terrorists from crossing the border and also stopping kids from wanting to do drugs."

Julio M. Velez, a special agent for the Department of Homeland Security, said his department had a great partnership with law enforcement in New Mexico, particularly with the sheriff's departments.

"They are our second line of defense next to the Border Patrol and the National Guard," he said.

Velez said the state of New Mexico allocates DHS money to the five border counties in New Mexico to hire police, purchase vehicles and get equipment, but that an increased border security mission was something new and would require supplemental funding. He said that the federal government was allocating more than $10 million to local law enforcement in New Mexico during fiscal year 2009 for Operation Stonegarden to "continue to make them an effective partner."

Velez said his agency also shares intelligence with local agencies in a weekly conference call that involves not only the DHS but also the Pentagon and the White House. He said the agency is able to share intelligence on various groups including "leftists, rightists and anar-rebuilding them to replace substandard construction – was daunting to the International Boundary and Water Commission, which oversees the levee roads.

Then came the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act looking for "shovel-ready" projects, and the levee road repairs fit the criteria. The commission will be getting a total of $220 million from the economic recovery spending bill for a variety of projects and $72 million of that will go to improving 170 miles of levee roads in New Mexico.

Had the commission made improvements through its normal funding channels, it would have probably taken 20 years to make all the upgrades, said Bill Ruth, U.S. commissioner.

Now that work will begin this fall and should be finished by 2011, he told the visiting lawmakers. "This money will allow us to get this done in the next 18 months, so it's a very positive impact for the local community."

The tour began at La Llorona Park off Picacho Avenue, where levee road improvements have already begun with funding the commission already had in hand. Running up to about Mesilla town limits, the new levee roads are not only taller, they are wider and more level. The new federal recovery money will take the work up to Hatch and down into Texas, where a railroad close to the river by Canutillo presents some challenges.

Udall said the levee work will create 300 new jobs, but Teague said the work was about more than creating jobs.

"The end result is not only going to be a positive impact on the economy, but we're going to save people from having to buy flood insurance for their homes," Teague said.

Udall said the recovery spending helps keep that money in the pockets of the homeowners, which also helps the local economy.

Though FEMA has reduced the area of expanded floodplains along the Rio Grande from its original proposed floodplain map revisions, some homeowners living close to the levee road – especially those with mortgages – may still have to buy flood insurance until FEMA certifies the levees and revises the floodplain maps again.

Ruth said the commission is trying to work with FEMA to develop that process of recertification as the work gets done. FEMA has been resistant to recertify the levee roads until all the work is completed.

Denish says collaboration key to improving juvenile justice

Speech caps three-day NMSU symposium

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

After seeing progress over the past 10 years, last year proved to be a setback in the state's efforts to prevent young people from getting involved in the criminal justice system, Lt. Gov. Diane Denish said in her keynote speech Wednesday, April 15, for the J. Paul Taylor Symposium on Social Justice at New Mexico State University.

Where the state's efforts to better screen and track juveniles through the justice system have been good innovations, last year's marked increase in juvenile cases shows there is still a lot of work to be done to prevent young people from criminal activity, Denish said.

"We're not trying to get people in the criminal justice system, but keep them out of the criminal justice system," she said.

That means more has to been done for prevention, including improved crisis intervention and better assessment of young people at risk, she said.

With the state's finances struggling, solving these problems will take a collaborative effort between the state agencies, local government and nonprofit groups, Denish said.

Reflecting on the recently concluded legislative session in which she presides over the state Senate, Denish acknowledged that working in collaborative manner is often a difficult process. But that is what needs to happen to make a difference, she said.

"We are all better, stronger if we work collaboratively," Denish said.

Only through a process that finds consensus can long-term, sustainable solutions be found, she said.

Denish noted that the focus of the J. Paul Taylor three-day symposium is about finding collaborative solutions to social justice issues. That's makes the symposium a fitting tribute to the retired lawmaker and educator from Mesilla, Denish said

Training program lands F-117 parts

After a year of working with the Defense Department, Doña Ana Community College's aerospace technology program will get real, hands-on contact with donated aerospace equipment from Holloman Air Force Base. About 300 parts that were once used for training and repairs of F-117 Stealth fighters were delivered Saturday, April 10, to DACC's Workforce Development Center.

With the private space industry still in its early stages, the program's 40 students were getting little access to aerospace equipment, said Jerry Welch, technical and industrial studies dean.

"This is the closest thing we have now to an actual spacecraft," he said about the donated aircraft parts.

Food for thought

About $2,000 worth of food was gathered by the students and others, which was donated to the Community Action Agency of Southern New Mexico.

Kids get a kick out of Kids, Kows and More

Students get a chance to learn where food really comes from

By Marvin Tessneer

Fourth-graders discovered that learning is fun during the Kids, Kows and More program held on Wednesday and Thursday, April 1 and 2, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

More than 500 students from White Sands, Mesilla Park, Valley View, Alameda, Hillrise, Mesilla and Hermosa Heights enjoyed learning at the 4-H Agriculture Appreciation Day.

Appreciation Day.

The students learned how cotton gins separate lint from seed during the cotton demonstrations given by Ty Lightfoot

In the dairy barn, they watched Cody Lightfoot attach a milking machine to a cow and learned how the milk is transferred to a large container.

The chile demonstration was given by Megan Sprague of the Chile Pepper Institute, who showed slides of different varieties and the differences in pod tastes and pungency.

The children got a big kick out of Remus, the talking tree, as part of the pecan demonstration. Juliette Williams of the Extension Master Gardener program gave the talk.

Eva Madrid and Rafael Realivasques, 4-H agents, said the Extension Service put on the program to teach students the importance of the food and fiber industry and where their food comes from.

The planners considered the program a success because of the collaboration of demonstrators, sponsors and the Extension Service. The students responded well to presenter questions to see if they were learning that food does not simply come from market shelves.

The program sponsors included Price's Creamery, Doña Ana County Farm and Livestock Bureau, New Mexico State University Extension Plant Science, Mesilla Valley Cowbelles, New Mexico Agriculture in the Classroom, New Mexico Beef Council, Chile Pepper Institute, New Mexico Department of Agriculture, Southwest Border Food Safety and Defense Center, the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, Southwest Cotton Ginning Laboratory and Irrigated Pecan Growers Association.

Governor acts on last bills

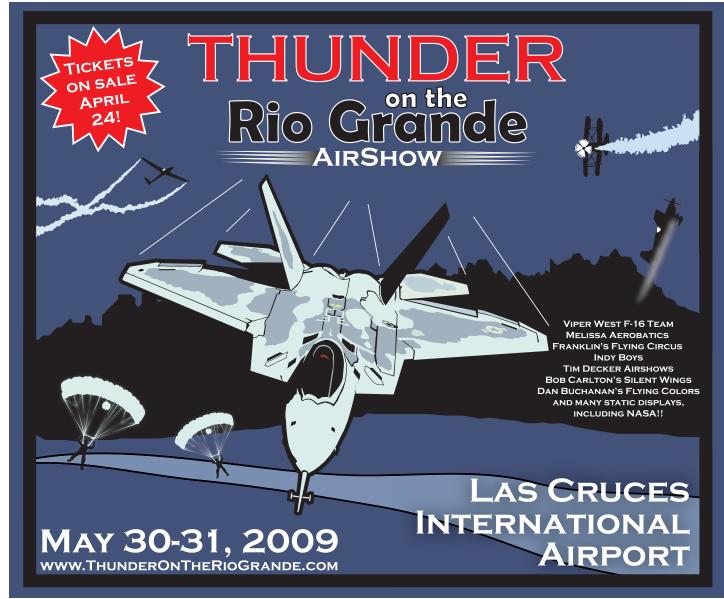

Garcia's 'green jobs' signed; lawmakers award her service

On the last day before vetoes become automatic, Gov. Bill Richardson on Thursday, April 9, signed a package of renewable energy and green jobs bills, including a bill by Senate Majority Whip Mary Jane Garcia, D-Doña Ana.

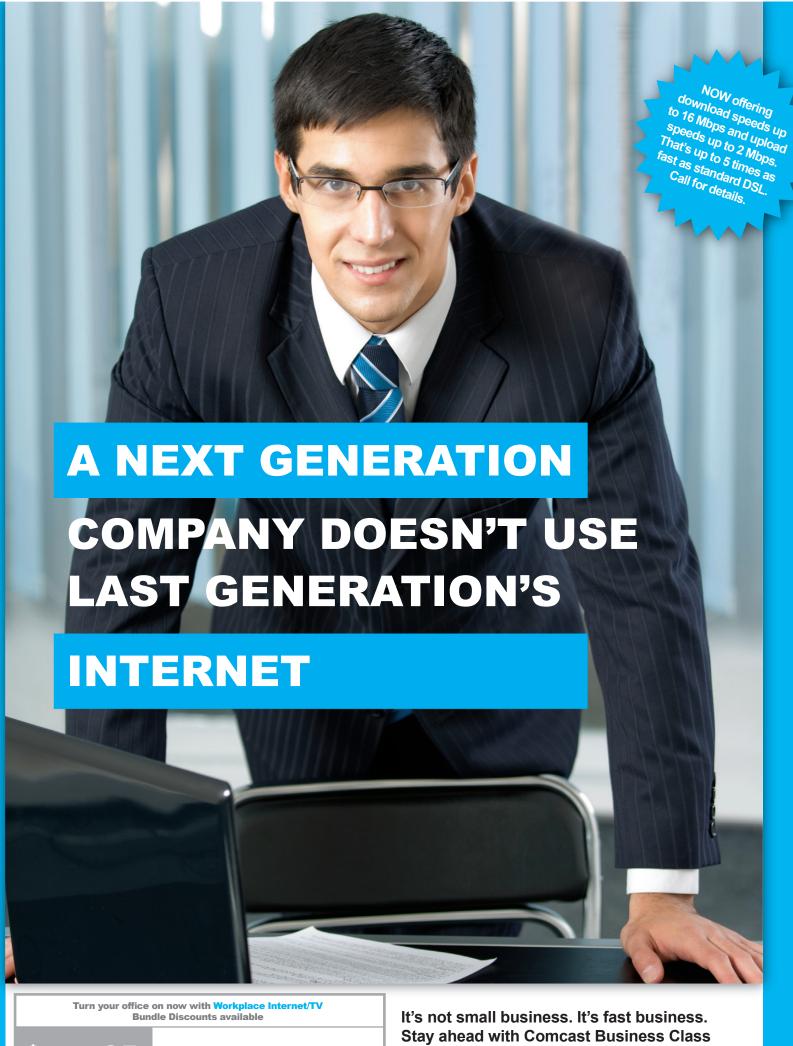

Her bill creates a higher education fund to develop research programs and educational courses in the fields of energy efficiency and alternative energy. Funds will be awarded on a competitive basis to the eligible higher education institutions.

Other bills concerning green jobs signed by Richardson included funding to help disadvantaged New Mexican get training, support for training programs in green industries, a tax credit for using alternative energy systems such as solar photovoltaic and geothermal technologies, a tax credit to piggyback on federal solar credits, a tax credit for installing a ground-coupled heat pump, a provision to allow people to tax themselves in order to afford buying solar energy systems and permission to counties and municipalities to form renewable energy financing districts to help fund renewable energy improvements.

On the last day of the legislative session last month, lawmakers also surprised Garcia with a Milagro Award, recognizing her 20 years in the Legislature – 13 years in a leadership role – and for consistent advocacy for women, children and animals.

Sonoma link almost complete

Final section to connect U.S. 70 with Lohman Ave.

By Gabriel Vasquez

Major arterial work to connect Sonoma Ranch Boulevard and Lohman Avenue to U.S. Highway 70 could be finished before summer, said Donnie Brainard, president of Alameda Property Group.

"We've been waiting for this for a long time," Brainard said.

There's good news for nature lovers, walkers and joggers, too.

"We've finished up the trail system
... from (Highway) 70 all the way to Lohman Avenue," Brainard said.

"We're trying to tie it up to the Triviz trail system" trail system.

The important linkage in what is considered to be the fastest-growing area of the city will relieve traffic traveling in and out of the East Mesa and its many subdivisions.

"U.S. Highway 70 enjoys the highest traffic count in Las Cruces and serves commuter traffic to NASA Space Cen-ter, White Sands Missile Range, Holloman Air Force Base and communities throughout the region," according to the Alameda Property Group.

According to city planning, Sonoma Ranch Boulevard will eventually be five lanes wide with full curb, sidewalk and gutter systems. Developers anticipate the road to be a vital part of the East Mesa's growth and will be especially important in connecting residents with new commercial development, such as the new Wal-Mart set to break ground in the Rinconada Town Center – a 103-acre, 900,000square-foot retail development.

We're finishing up with Rinconada right now, we have one last little piece to go," Brainard said. "We're just waiting on Wal-Mart."

Brainard, speaking at the Mesilla Valley Economic Development's April

Business on the Border Forum, speculated the retail giant will break ground on its Rinconada store at the end of 2009 or start of 2010.

"My gut feeling tells me it's going to

Secret shoppers improve service

Friendly feedback key to perfecting customer relations

By Gabriel Vasquez

You may have seen them at a big chain store, peering over your shoulder, discretely following others or twirling their hair while pretending to look at expensive

But secret shoppers don't always have to be sneaky watchdogs.

In fact, when used appropriately, secret shoppers can be an incredibly useful tool to help business owners gauge their level of customer service.

"Sometimes, I walk out of a business and say to myself, 'I can't believe that individual spoke to me to that way,' said Fred Espinosa, commercial account executive for Comcast. "Some of us say, 'I'm just going to leave it at that.' Instead, you should tell the business owner what happened."
Espinosa, speaking to a group of business owners and customer representatives at the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce's small business workshop on Thursday, April 9, said that in "yester-day's mentality," giving a manager or business owner feedback would be considered an insult, but in today's sales atmosphere, the feedback is viewed as a "thank you."

"It's important that we help each other to improve our businesses," Espinosa said.
"Write (management) a letter or a note and say I visited your establishment, and here are the things I found."

Espinosa, a native Las Crucen with more than 30 years experience in sales and management, said business owners and managers should consider asking a friend, acquaintance or even a stranger to visit their establishment, inquire about purchasing or purchase their product and report the results to management – either in exchange for free service or a strong incentive, such as a half-off coupon.

Take that information and compile it. Let it be the basis for how to help your customer service team grow," Espinosa

Chain restaurants often hire professionals or use internal staff to "secret shop" a particular server or host, and many times, the feedback generated from the visit can make or break a server's job.

"These are challenging times right now," Espinosa said. "We want to know that we have whatever edge possible in order to make it in this environment."

Board holds quota at two-acre feet

LASER leveling ensures farmers make most of allotted water

By Marvin Tessneer

As the Elephant Butte Irrigation District gets the watering season underway, Mesilla Valley farmers are irrigating fields to water early onion, lettuce, alfalfa and pecan crops and to prepare chile and cotton seed beds.

Last month, EBID ditch riders delivered 37,434 acrefeet of water to fulfill 37,286 patron-farmer orders, normal for the early part of the irrigation system. That delivery leaves a balance of 139,237 acre-feet in the district's 2009 Rio Grande Project allocation.

During its April meeting, the board voted to leave the farmer allocation at two acrefeet. Board members believe they should not increase the allocation until the water is in the reservoir.

EBID consultant J. Phillip King advised holding the allocation at two-acre feet because of the fluctuating mountain snow runoff.

"This winter's snow pack started out good," he said. "But I want to see how the runoff shapes up. I would want to see the water in the reservoirs before raising the allotment.'

An acre-foot contains 325,900

gallons of water.
Farmers are doing their part to conserve water with LASER (light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation) land leveling, which allows farmers to run irrigation water up and down the furrows faster and more efficiently.

Through LASER leveling, farmers program field grids on their computers specifying how they want their land graded for irrigation. They set up an antenna in the center of a field that sends signals from their computers to their tractors as they move around the fields to cut soil where it is too high or

Pending home sales up 65 percent from January

Number of closed sales should increase over the next 45 to 60 days

A powerful combination of lower home prices and the federal government's recent announcement of its new $8,000 first-time buyer tax credit is having a positive impact on new and existing home sales in many areas of the country, including Las Cruces.

According to a printout dated April 12 from the Multiple Listing and Information Service (MLIS) arm of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR), pending home sales rose 65 percent during the first 102 days of this year.

A sale is considered pending when the purchase agreement has been signed but the transaction has not yet closed. The MLIS report reveals some interesting details.

- Detail No. 1: A combined total of 198 new and existing Las Cruces area homes, townhomes and condominiums were subject to pending contracts on April 12. That's a 78-unit, or 65 percent increase, over the 120 pending sales reported by MLIS on January 1, and roughly equivalent to the 197-units reported pending in February 2008.
- Detail No. 2: The 135 pending contracts reported on existing-homes alone as of April 12 made up the largest portion of the overall increase, rising by 47 units, or 68.1 percent, more than the 69-units reported pending on New Year's day. We've seen this level of pending sales activity in the past, both in July 2008 and November 2007.

• Detail No. 3: The 63 new-home-sale contracts pending on April 12 represented a net increase of 12 units, or 23.5 percent, more than the 51 units that were awaiting closing on January 1. It is interesting to note that the 51 units reported pending on January 1 marked the lowest number of pending new-home sales on record since I began keeping score in early 2005.

Since the Pending Home Sales Index is the most accurate indicator of future closing activity, there's little doubt that the number of closed sales will rise over the next 45 to 60 days. The question is, however, whether prospective homebuyers will have sufficient confidence in our economy to seize the benefits today's market has to offer and keep the ball rolling.

Buyers who are currently on the fence should explore the benefits of purchasing a home now. It is my belief that the closer they look at the possibilities, the more apt they are to realize that now is indeed a terrific time to purchase a Las Cruces area home.

IN GOOD COMPANY: R-con Construction Inc.

Local construction business on deck for national award

R-con grows from one-man maintenance shop to prime WMSR contractor

By Kristine Sandrick

Ricardo and Renee Araiza suspect their clients have been talking about them.

The Las Cruces-based "mom and pop" company won the regional Small Business Association (SBA) award after Ron Taft, White Sands Missile Range's small business advisor, nominated their construction firm. They figure Taft must have talked to R-con's clients at WSMR, Holloman Air Force Base and Lockheed Martin, and that the reports must have been good.

We treat our customers like gold, the way we would want to be treated, and their praise of us won it for us and our employees as well," Renee Araiza said.

Several Las Cruces companies Taft has nominated have won regional SBA awards, beating companies in six states. Now R-con is in competition for the national SBA award to be presented in May in Washington, D.C.

"Our first job at White Sands was just a little walkway project for the museum, but because of that we became familiar with the agencies there,' Ricardo Araiza said.

the agencies became familiar with them, too. The Araizas worked to become a government-certified contractor, filling out all the paperwork to be on the list of preferred providers, and their "little walkway project" has turned into six major construction projects at WSMR, Holloman and NASA. R-con also handles ground maintenance for government installations in Virginia, Georgia, Kansas, Delaware and Texas.

Building big at WSMR

At WSMR, R-con is building a 700,000square-foot sports complex, a security lighting project and, with the Army Corps of Engineers, are constructing an "urban city that soldiers will use for training before going to Iraq," Ricardo Araiza said. The $1.7 million project will be completed on schedule this month.

Both Ricardo, R-con president, and Renee, company secretary, are from Truth or Consequences. The couple met at New Mexico State University where he was studying civil engineering and she was going to become a nurse.

But also an active Army reservist, Ricardo Araiza left school to fuel helicopters and tanks during the first gulf war. After the war, while finishing school, the couple started their first company, "All In One Maintenance, as a way to make ends meet," Renee Araiza said.

"We had one very important client ... Dr. Dwight Newton, who owned several commercial rental properties, including Bonita Plaza. So we started taking service calls," she said. Soon she took over as office manager for the rental properties, and when Newton decided to put a group Continued on following page together to build Las Cruces Surgical Center, he asked the Araizas to handle the construction for him, too, saying, "You can do this, Ric." R-con Construction was born.

After the center was completed, R-con began to build houses and then took on some small projects for WSMR.

"We established ourselves more quickly than we expected," Renee Araiza said, which led to other opportunities at Holloman, NASA and other government bases.

Both of them hold general contractor licenses, which allows R-con to construct commercial and residential properties.

"We wouldn't be where we are without our employees – 110 engineers, electricians, plumbers, carpenters, painters and laborers – many of whom have served their country proudly ... (they are) highly ethical and dependable. We find that veterans transition smoothly into the demanding work structure such as R-con's," Renee Araiza said.

"R-con operates with a simple philosophy of customer satisfaction through quality workmanship and competitive pricing. R-con stands behind every project completed because a company is only as good as the last project completed," she said.

They've both had to learn everything about running their company from learning how to deal with the paperwork, in terms of what is involved with each and every contract.

In the past three years, the company has exploded. According to WSMR's Taft, the company's annual revenues in the last 12 months totaled $7.7 million.

We established ourselves more quickly than we expected.

RENEE ARAIZA,

Secretary

In addition to putting in the legwork and "burning the candle at both ends," as Renee Araiza said, the owners give a great deal of credit to their employees.

"We have just great employees who have as much to be proud of as we do, and we couldn't do without them," she said.

"Our biggest hurdle has been the progression," Ricardo Araiza said. "It's like building the Great Pyramids where you think you can't do it but you take one block at a time and learn through the process."

Being selected for the SBA competition was not something the Araizas expected. "Ron Taft nominated us as prime contractor of the year for the six-state region and it was unexpected for us," Renee Araiza said. "We are very much like a family here. We had our 10-year anniversary last year and brought everyone in to celebrate with us," she said.

Burning the candle at both ends is paying off for R-con. The Araizas figure with the growth at WSMR, their company is going to be busy for many years to come.

Talking business with founders Ricardo and Renee Araiza

What is unique about your business?

What differentiates us from others in the construction field is that we self-perform many trades in house. We have the ability to perform concrete, framing, plumbing, electric, HVAC and the finishing trades. We have seen that this allows for better control during construction, increased productivity and a competitive edge.

What is your business philosophy?
The philosophy is simple customer

The philosophy is simple, customer satisfaction is truly important to us; we work hard to insure that the customer is pleased with the project.

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

For Ricardo Araiza, growing up in the construction field working in the business he parents started in T or C, where he acquired the skills to start the maintenance company. But each of them, Renee and Ricardo, had several jobs throughout their teenage and early adult years that taught them something about business. They learned construction skills money management, people management and how to treat the customer.

What advice would you give to others starting a business?

If there is a skill or service that people excel at, plus the fact that many hours will be spent to grow and maintain the business. There is a huge learning process and there will be failures along the way but how you react and learn from it will ultimately determine your future success.

Despite out-of-state causes, politicians place local blame

Local officials have little influence on state business cycle

It is a truism that economics and politics are closely linked.

A strong economy makes re-election easier while recession is bad news for those in office. Thus, it is not surprising that politicians on both sides of the aisle are busy trying to spin the economy. For incumbents – the biggest incumbent of all is Gov. Bill Richardson – the goal is to put the best face on the current recession. But what is the reality? Are those putting the best face on the economy, the governor included, whistling Dixie, or is the situation better than some might think?

New Mexico is currently suffering the most severe recession in decades, arguably the most severe on record. Our state has lost 12,200 jobs since February 2008. Unemployment is up 1.9 percent. Construction employment has fallen 11 percent over the last 12 months and manufacturing is down 6 percent.

Having said that, count me among those who view the glass as half-full.

While the New Mexico economy is in recession, the recession remains mild. The national economy has shed jobs at a rate of 3.5 percent; in New Mexico, the rate of decline was 1.4 percent. The state unemployment rate is 5.7 percent, well below the national rate of 8.5 percent. More importantly, the New Mexico unemployment rate is low by historical standards. A decade ago, for the New Mexico unemployment rate to be below the national average was a rarity. In recent years, New Mexico has routinely outperformed the national economy.

Incumbents would like to take credit for New Mexico's superior economic performance. The performance of the economy, however, has little to do with politicians. New Mexico is relatively immune from the national business cycle. We have a relatively large service sector – which is relatively insensitive to the business. cvcle - and a relatively small manufacturing sector - which is relatively sensitive to the cycle. Expansion in military spending in the state has also helped to mitigate the current downturn.

Of course, while incumbents cannot take credit for the local economy, neither can they be blamed. New Mexico is in a sharp downturn, less severe than the national recession, but still a recession. That the unemployment rate in New Mexico is lower than the national average is little solace for those without work. The turnaround is likely to be delayed at least until the summer.

But the source of New Mexico's economic woes is not from our state. The recession cause can be found on Wall Street and the excesses of the sub prime mortgage market. Here, New Mexico is in good shape. Our banks were conservative, thankfully, thereby missing most of the sub prime debacle. Consequently, default rates are relatively low. According to RealtyTrac.com, foreclosure activity in New Mexico actually fell 25 percent during February. Meanwhile, foreclosures were up 6 percent nationally. No New Mexico banks have asked for bailout

Politicians try to take more credit than they deserve for good times and try to give more blame to their opponents during bad times. There is actually very little that state government can do to mitigate a business cycle. Richardson's popularity is no doubt being undermined by the current economic recession, but blaming him for the downturn in the state's economy makes little sense.

Richard Wagner, area director for the Department of Workforce Solutions, said he received notice from the Unemployment Insurance Call Center that eight Pat Goff's Employees had been displaced as the store closed last week.

"I'm sure it's probably because of the economic conditions right now," he said.

Mesilla Valley CASA: Helping families in crises

CASA workers protect the interests of children in foster care

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern

Often when a family faces abuse or neglect, a positive outcome can seem unattainable. Anita, a young mother of three small children, knows this all too well. Fortunately, she also knows about second chances, thanks to a group of advocates devoted to providing help when help is needed most.

In the Mesilla Valley, a Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) acts as an advocate for children in foster care. A CASA works to protect a child's interests and helps to replace a life of hurt with one of hope. As a CASA, volunteers are able to serve as the eyes and ears of the court. By maintaining consistent contact with children associated with abuse and neglect, a CASA is able to take first-hand knowledge to the court so the best interests of the children are met.

Anita was involved in a relationship where she was a victim of domestic violence - a relationship she managed to escape. Before long, she met a man she loved and trusted, and Anita was ecstatic when she married the man and gave birth to a daughter. For her, life seemed to be almost perfect, until she learned her new husband might be abusing her two young sons.

When the allegations against her husband were substantiated, Anita felt helpless. She didn't know what she was going to do, but she did know after suffering a dramatic blow to her self-esteem and without family support, she could not provide the type of care her three children needed. Upon that realization, she placed her children in foster care and began to seek therapeutic, job and housing counseling with the hopes that she would soon be able to give her children a good life.

Anita and her children were introduced to CASA volunteer Courtney Erickson, who understood children who are victims of abuse or neglect often feel brutalized. Erickson also understood Anita needed someone who recognized what she was going through, and treated the woman who had been through so much with respect.

Erickson worked with Anita, helping her find a life that included a focus on her mental health and parenting skills, while communicating with the courts about the best way to handle Anita's case. In addition, Erickson helped Anita apply for housing and look for an affordable apartment. By showing Anita she believed in her, Erickson was the driving force behind Anita's transformation and ultimately the reunification of Anita with her three children. Without an organization such as Mesilla Valley CASA, Anita – and women like her – may never find the support they need to make a change.

Currently, there are 85 CASA volunteers advocating for community children and their families, but with the current economic crises, Mesilla Valley CASA faces a decrease of 77 percent from one source of funds. Also with the stressful situations families face, Mesilla Valley CASA is sure to see an increase in services.

Throughout the nation, 100,000 nonprofit organizations will shut their doors within a year due to the current economic crisis. With decreases in funding and increases in individuals who need services, both the nonprofits and the people they serve are hurting.

One way Mesilla Valley CASA finds financial stability is through an endowment with the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM). The CFSNM serves as a leader able to bring together groups of people who can improve the quality of life for individuals throughout the community while providing fiscal support and administration are served. As a leader, the CFSNM manages 30 endowments for nonprofit agencies within Southern New Mexico.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM uses knowledge to help connect people who care with causes that matter. Donors are encouraged to inquire about donating to an existing fund or creating a new fund. LCHBA, public works director respond to impact fees

Added cost means trouble for new homeowners

One of the principles of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association (LCHBA) is to fight for affordable housing. The table at right indicates the actual hard dollar costs levied by the city on the construction of a $100,000 home.

Too often, the builders get blamed for the rising cost of a new home, but in reality, layer after layer of regulation from city government and gross receipts tax now will account for an additional 22.8 percent to the cost of a starter home.

Impact Fees are in the form of "regressive taxation." Most taxes are designed to tax the successful, but not impact fees; they hurt the poorest and the young.

With these new increases, we have just followed in the footsteps of Boulder, Colo. and Santa Fe in pricing our children out of any chance of living in their hometown, in their own home.

The increase in impact fees for commercial construction are so high, that implementing those fees will drive commercial construction to other cities, eliminating jobs in Las Cruces. Just the impact fees on a 100,000-square-foot office building would be in the neighborhood of $750,000 before a shovel of dirt was turned. Impact fees are a job killer.

Our purpose is not only to say this is a bad tax, but we suggest the city consider imposing an excise tax on all property transactions to fund the infrastructure that we need, or to seek an increase in the property tax sufficient to meet the demands outlined in the report for infrastructure improvements.

Proposed impact fees not a simple matter

The discussion of impact fees is a very complex discussion that cannot be adequately addressed in a simple response.

The City of Las Cruces Roadway Design Standards currently require transportation and drainage infrastructure to be constructed by developers at the time of development. This results in piecemeal construction of major roads and lack of connectivity that is vitally necessary to address the traffic demands in the growing areas of our city. It also does not provide the necessary level of service that meets citizen expectations.

One of the options under consideration by the city is the proposed implementation of impact fees for transportation, drainage and public safety. The implementation of these fees is currently being reviewed and considered by the city council. It is important that the proposed fee amounts under consideration be compared to other cities with similar characteristics.

The analysis completed by the Las Cruces Home Builders Association is overly simplistic and does not consider the many moving parts that frame this intricate issue. We look forward to a continuing dialogue with the Las Cruces Home Builders Association and other interested stakeholders and citizens in Las Cruces in order to ensure that road, drainage and public safety infrastructure is in place in a timely manner to address the needs of our growing community.

I encourage all interested parties to follow this discussion over the next several months through public input meetings as well as meetings of the city council and the Capital Improvements Advisory Committee. The input from all affected and interested parties will be invaluable in providing a solution that will be beneficial to all.

Science co-operative weather observer.

The area had a trace of rain on March 9, but did not receive any measurable precipitation through January and February. The total rainfall for the year was .03 of-an-inch, or 3 percent of average precipitation for this time of year.

The climate trend is also not promising. La Niña, the equatorial Pacific climate pattern, had been pushing storms north and east of New Mexico, and the forecast is for a dry spring in the southern part of the state, according to the National Weather Service.

The Biad Chili Co. sells chile seed in New Mexico, Texas, Arizona, Colorado and Chihuahua, and Christopher Biad reported an increase in chile planting.

"The prices for grains and other crops have gone down, and chile is more appealing to growers," Biad said. "A lot of dehydrating plants have had to turn down green chile grower contracts because so much green chile is being grown."

The Biad company also has exclusive selling rights for two new varieties that were developed by Paul Bosland, New Mexico State University chile breeder, NuMex Heritage Big Jim and NuMex Heritage 6-4.

NuMex Heritage Big Jim and NuMex Heritage 6-4.

"The original varieties were developed years ago," Biad said. "But Paul Bosland has brought them back to get the traditional flavor content and higher production."

The Biad company also sells New Mexico variety seeds such as 6-4, Joe Barker, Big Jim Sandia and R Naky.

Biad also has contracts to grow chile on more than 200 acres of leased land.

W.R. Johnson of Luna County reported that he has reduced his onion acreage by 20 percent, 450 acres from what he had planted last year.

what he had planted last year.

"We're getting good onion stands, the potential for a good harvest is there," Johnson said. "But the processors have a large supply of onions, and we have to reduce the supply in hope of getting better prices. The whole idea is supply and demand." He said that his onion acreage contains sweet yellow, white and red sweet varieties, including the farm area's yellow Carzalia Sweet onion. All were developed by NMSU for this area, Johnson said.

Southern New Mexico is the major onion-producer in the state. In 2008, farmers harvested 6,600 acres of onions, for a production of 3.5 million pounds and a net value of $44.5 million, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service, New Mexico Field Office.

Farmers will start onion harvest at the end of May and wrap it up in late August.

Cattle ranchers also are concerned about the lack of rain storms. Many ranges have forage cover, but the grass is dormant and needs moisture to "green up." Earthen tanks are dry, and ranchers are filling cattle tanks with well pumps and putting out supplemental feeding for their cattle.

The lack of grazing also has broken the spring calving cycle. Ranchers are complaining that they should have baby calves on the ground now.

The outlook is not promising. Many ranchers believe that high temperatures in February and March indicate continued hot weather in April, May and June, and the recent winds have been drawing moisture out of the range soil.

"These prolonged winds that blow heavy and for a long times can perpetuate the drought," Corralitos Ranch manager Brian Foster reported.

Shoppers

For the restaurant and hospitality industry, customer service is an integral component of doing business. All industries, however, should be just as mindful of the level of customer service they offer as the most important strategy to keep customers coming back, Espinosa said.

Managers and owners should also take time to connect with their employees to assess how committed they are to the business, and to strengthen the bond between management and staff.

Take a break from the computer, the spreadsheets, the Facebook, and say, 'I'm going to dedicate this day to spending some time working with the people that work with me," Espinosa said. "Regardless how much you make, and how much they make, these are the people that are pushing for what you're pushing. If you take care of them and nurture (them), the customer service is going to come naturally."

Those same relationships can develop into mentorships, Espinosa said. For small businesses, a mentorship can give a manager or owner more time to develop his own business strategies while the mentor handles a majority of the day-today business operations and customer interaction.

"Your creative imagination is not built just for you," Espinosa said. "In today's customer sales environment, mentorship is more vital than anything else. Take somebody from scratch and build them up, you can grow yourself as well as others.

Fred Owensby: The strongest link between vision and success

SBDC director helps small businesses cross the finish line

By Gabriel Vasquez

So you've got a great business idea, but not much cash to back it. You apply for a loan.
Unfortunately, lenders are hesitant to take entrepreneurial risks, unlike the visionaries sitting at the other end of the bargaining table.

That's where Fred Owensby comes in.

Owensby, director of the Ďoña Ana Community College Small Business Development Center (SBDC), has a hawk's eye for feasibility – usually, he can tell you if a great idea is just that, "a great idea, but not a viable business plan."

"There's two types of people that we work with," Owensby said. "Those looking to start a business and those who already have an established business.

Owensby and his staff serve as full-service small business consultants, and can guide a prospective business owner through the entire start-up process or help an existing business owner expand, for free.

Sound too good to be true? It's not, more than 1,200 small businesses in Doña Ana and Sierra counties are SBDC clients, and the list is growing.

"First, we listen to the idea," Owensby said.
"Then, we help in getting that idea systematically put down on paper - a business plan. (Prospective owners) list what their business will do, show the industry research to support it, talk about what their various products and services will be, list the unique benefits of their product and who their target market will be."

Easier said than done for a solo venturist looking to turn an idea into reality. Owensby and his staff will then examine the financial projections of said company. From breaking even to going bankrupt, SBDC consultants are paid to give their clients the straight numbers, good or

'Some will realize that their business idea is just not viable," he said. "Sometimes, that is a success, that the person does not go into business and fail. They educate themselves at the same time and re-think entering that

Owensby said despite the hobbling national economy, "now's a good a time as any to start a business."

If the plan makes sense (and cents), the numbers add up and the market is open, "you will succeed," Owensby, a native New Mexican who comes from a fifth-generation ranching family, said he is truly invested in seeing his fellow New Mexicans succeed. Having worked for several years as a loan officer and vice president of International Bank in Angelfire, N.M., and for the New Mexico SBDC for more than 11 years, Owensby has the industry and community knowledge to give his clients the soundest business advice possible.

"We have made some great headway in the last 5 years helping the southern communities of Doña Ana County," he said. "To be able to sit down with a potential entrepreneur and give them the information and expertise they need to write their business plan, and helping them get the funding they need, is very satisfying."

On his downtime,

Owensby enjoys the outdoors, camping and hunting, fishing and hiking and has developed a passion for the guitar.

"I love the classic country stuff like Willie Nelson and Ray Price," he said.

His wife Carol is an educator at Doña Ana Community College, and his daughter and son both attend Mesilla Valley Christian Schools. His daughter's name is Sarah and his son's name is Garrey, named after his grand-father and Owensby's father-in-law, New Mexico State University business dean Garrey Carruthers.

Owensby said he hopes to receive his Ph.D. in education later this year and eventually get more involved in education, either as a teacher, professor, dean or superintendent.

75 years ago 1934 • Elephant Butte Irrigation District Manager N.B. Phillips reported that the Upper Rio Grande Basin snow pack was 95 percent of average and could provide a 300,000 acre-feet runoff. But, he advised, the southern Colorado arroyos were dry and could soak up a great deal of the runoff water before it reached Elephant Butte Reservoir.

50 years ago 1050 • Las Cruces had received only one-hundreth-of-an-inch of rain since early April, and no rain had been recorded in the community in December, January and February.

• County Agent Don Chappell advised scattering okra seeds among cotton because the okra plants quickly show signs of root knots that are caused by nematodes, a microscopic worm that can kill cotton.

The agreement was made after a meeting between New Mexico officials and Chihua-

Communication important to a happy, healthy family entity

Patience and respect help relationships grow

You've often said that boys and men are usually not natural communicators. Boy, does that describe the "men" in my life! What can I do to keep everyone talking to one another?
Every family needs at least one highly communicative person in the home, and it looks like you are the one. Many boys are inclined to bottle up whatever frustration they are carrying inside. Unless you take the initiative to pull them out, some of them may withdraw within them-selves and stay there emotionally. I urge you to do whatever is required to get into your son's world. Keep talking, exploring and teaching. Communication is the goal. Everything depends on it.

In 1990, Saddam Hussein and his Iraqi army invaded the tiny, oil-rich country of Kuwait and subjected its people to terrible brutality. Their troops were poised to attack Saudi Arabia and thereby control half the world's oil supply. U.S. President George H.W. Bush demanded repeatedly that Hussein withdraw his forces, but he stubbornly refused. Thus, on Jan. 17 of the following year, Operation Desert Storm was launched. Several hundred thousand allied troops attacked the Iraqi army from land, sea and air. What do you think was the first objective of the battle?

You might expect it to have been Saddam's tanks, or his planes or his frontline soldiers. Instead, the allies destroyed the Iraqis' communication network. Stealth bombers smashed it with smart bombs and other weapons. In doing so, our forces interfered with the ability of the Iraqi generals to talk to each other. They had no way to coordinate their effort or direct the movements of their army. The war ended a few weeks later.

What happened in Desert Storm has direct relevance for families When the communicative link between members breaks down, they become disorganized and distant from each other. If husbands and wives stop talking to each other or if parents and children grow silent, they slip into misunderstanding and resentment. Steel-reinforced barriers are erected, and anger prevails. For many families, this is the beginning of the end.

Let me urge you mothers to talk regularly to your sons (and, of course, to every other member of the family). It's a skill that can be taught. Work hard at keeping the lines of communication open and clear. Explore what your children and your spouse are thinking and feeling. Target your boys especially, because they may be concealing a cauldron of emotion. When you sense a closed spirit developing, don't let another day go by without bringing hidden feelings out in the open. It's the first principle of healthy family life.

Does the feeling of being trapped in marriage only hap-pen late in life, or does it some-times occur earlier?

Trapped reactions can occur among teenagers during courtship or any time within a marriage from the first day of the honeymoon to 50 years thereafter. It happens any time one partner devalues the worth of the other and feels stuck in the relationship. It forms the cornerstone of midlife crises among men, and are typical of women who feel their husbands are wimpy and lacking in confidence. I believe the majority of divorces can be traced to the twin reactions of disrespect and marital claustrophobia.

Are there times when good, loving parents don't like their own kids very much?

Yes, just as there are times in a good marriage when husbands and wives don't like each other for a while. What you should do in both situations is hang tough. Look for ways to make the relationship better, and never give up your commitment to one another. That is especially true during the teen years, when the person we see will be very different in a few years. Wait patiently for him or her to grow up. You'll be glad you did.

Las Cruces welcomes Walk MS

Volunteers needed for April 25 event

When we walk together, our individual movements add up to something more powerful — a bold, unified gesture that will help create a world free of multiple sclerosis (MS).

Join the National MS Society for Walk MS: Las Cruces on Saturday, April 25, at NMSU Corbett Outdoor Stage.

Every hour of every day, someone is diagnosed with MS, making the need for Walk MS even more important. More than 400,000 people nationwide have MS.

Proceeds from Walk MS help fund research, programs and support for persons with MS. Walk MS: Las Cruces starts at 9 a.m. at the Railyard Park.

Sign-in will begin at 8 a.m. The route is one mile to accommodate people with mobility issues. Walkers may choose to do up to four laps.

Participants can walk individually, in a corporate team or form a team of friends and family members.

Participants can register by calling 1-800-FIGHT MS, or by logging on to http://walknmx.nationalmssociety.org. Walkers can also register the day of the event. There is no fee to register and no minimum pledge. Volunteers are also needed.

MS interrupts the flow of information from the brain to the body and stops people from moving. MS is an unpredictable, often disabling disease of the central nervous system. Symptoms range from numbness and tingling to blindness and paralysis. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot be predicted, but advances in research and treatment are moving us closer to a world free of MS.

Studies show early and ongoing treatment with an FDA-approved therapy can reduce future disease activity and improve quality of life for many people with MS. Talk to a health care professional and contact the National MS Society at http://walknmx.nationalms-society.org or 1-800-Fight-MS to learn about ways to help manage MS and about current research that may one day reveal a cure.

Relay for Life comes to NMSU for the third year

Celebrating cancer survivors by walking and staying up all night

By BETH SITZLER

New Mexico State University, with the help of Colleges Against Cancer, will host its third annual American Cancer Society (ACS) Relay for Life event at the NMSU horseshoe from 6 p.m. Friday, April 17, to early morning Saturday, April 18.

The event was designed by ACS as a way to celebrate cancer survivors by bringing community members together for a rally while raising funds for the organization.

"(Relay for Life) promotes togetherness for the city community and the college community for one cause," said Taurean Summers, an NMSU public health senior and member of the College of Health and Social Science relay team.

During the overnight event, teams of students, faculty, staff and community members walk along a track to signify the journey taken by a cancer survivor. One member from each team must remain on the track at all times.

"People should get involved for several reasons, but mainly because it's a great atmosphere and a positive thing to do that makes you feel good about yourself," said Mark Castelo, an NMSU senior majoring in management and marketing and promotions co-chair of the event.

The event will begin with cancer survivors walking the first lap. This will set the mood of the event as one of celebration and remembrance. The event will continue with food, music and games.

Castelo said some games played in the past include Lap Poker, in which participants receive a card for every lap completed until someone gets a winning hand; Miss Relay, in which male participants dress up as women using only the clothing and accessories worn by other relay participants; and Rootbeer Pong, a take-off of a popular party game involving a ping pong ball and cups.

"They're fun things for college students," he said, explaining that three Relay for Life events take place in Las Cruces – for youths, the college and the community – and this event is geared towards college students, but all community members are invited to attend.

There also will be a luminaria ceremony held after dark to honor cancer survivors and remember those who have lost the battle with cancer.

"Everyone stops, and it's kind of a somber moment of reflection for those that have died of cancer," said Castelo, whose mother Bernice is a cancer survivor.

Despite the fun, games and self-reflection, Castelo said the purpose of the event is to promote hope and a cure for cancer.

"I think people should get involved to do something for someone other than themselves," he said.

Summers, who has lost family members to cancer said even though his team of 16 has a monetary goal of $1,000, their ultimate goal is to raise cancer awareness.

"We want people to become more educated on (cancer) and its research," he said, adding that cancer isn't always terminal. "People can grow from it."

Corporate sponsors of the event include International Delights Café, Roberto's Mexican Restaurant, Milagro's Coffee and Papa John's Pizza.

All the proceeds will go to ACS, which Castelo said has one of the lowest administrative costs of the large nonprofit organizations. ACS will then use the proceeds to fund various programs, such as helping cancer patients and family members, and research.

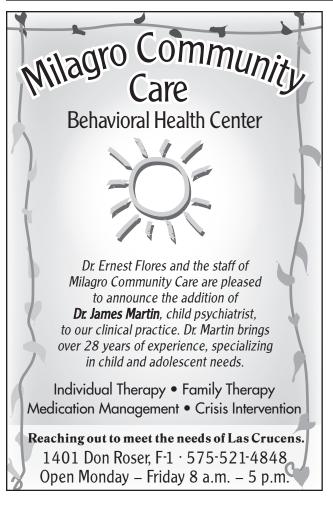

For more information or to make a contribution, visit www. relayforlife.org/nmsunm. To learn more about ACS, visit www.RelayForLife.org or call 1-800-ACS-2345.

Students hold Take Back the Night event

The New Mexico State University Wellness, Alcohol & Violence Education (WAVE) Program, in conjunction with campus organizations, community agencies and local business supporters, will host its fourth annual Take Back the Night March and Rally at 6:30 p.m. Friday, April 24, at the Band Shell, located on the corner of University Avenue and Espina Street. The event, held during National Sexual Assault Awareness Month, is an opportunity to support victims and survivors, shed light on the ubiquity and impact of the issue and foster a proactive and inclusive community approach to bringing sexual violence of all forms to an end.

The event will commence with a march on University Avenue, followed with a performance by local musicians, refreshments from local businesses and the opportunity to connect with community agencies. The motivational rally will begin at approximately 8 p.m. and will include key speakers on issues related to sexual violence, an open-mic segment for anyone affected by sexual violence to speak out and a candlelight vigil. The candles will burn in acknowledgement of the millions who have experienced sexual violence and the firm belief that it does not have to continue.

According to RAINN (Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network), 17.7 million American women and 2.78 million American men have been victims of attempted or completed rape. Children and youth under the age of 18 comprise 44 percent of those who are victims of sexual assault. Additionally, because sexual violence is underreported to law enforcement – as many as 60 percent of acts of sexual violence go unreported – 15 out of 16 rapists will walk free, never spending a single day in prison (www.rainn.org).

White Sands film festival comes to Las Cruces

By KRISTINE SANDRICK The Las Cruces Bulletin

Movie lovers need to buckle up for a magic carpet ride through time, space and a wide range of cinematic emotions as Las Cruces welcomes the fifth annual White Sands International Film Festival (WSIFF) Thursday through Sunday, April 23 to 26.

Aspiring actors, moviemakers, film fanatics and the general public are invited to the numerous venues around town for movies, education and parties.

WSIFF will screen outstanding short and feature-length documentaries and narrative features from around the world, but focuses on New Mexico filmmakers. The weekend includes a diverse program of panels and workshops, covering topics ranging from acting to narrative screenwriting, hosted by experienced industry professionals. The festival also affords networking opportunities for the next generation of filmmakers.

Allen Theatres Cineport 10 will feature more than 45 independent documentary and narrative films plus an award ceremony; New Mexico State University's Creative Media Institute (CMI), Doña Ana Community College East Mesa campus and the Rio Grande Theater will host an assortment of movie-making panels and workshops; and Hotel Encanto will be the place to land for "after parties."

"I am very pleased they moved (the event) to Las Cruces, and I am pleased to be able to host it. Filmmakers need to be on the screen," said Russell Allen, vice president of operations for Allen Theatres Inc. "I'm excited for the people who have taken their love and done something with it to get to the big screen."

See great feature films

Artists from around the globe entered more than 140 independent films for the competition, which focuses on Latino and New Mexico filmmakers as well as films that used the Land of Enchantment as a backdrop.

New Mexico film highlights include "The Land of Space and Time." Created by award winning filmmakers Michael Lennick and Shirley Guilliford, it tells the story of the development of the United States Space Program and features Holloman Air Force Base and White Sands Missile Range. Also included in the program is "How the West Was Lost," a documentary written and directed by Las Crucen Erik Ness, and produced and funded by the New Mexico Farm & Livestock Bureau, about the proposal to create 200,000 acres of wilderness in Doña Ana County. WSIFF also will screen CMI animations called "Ugly Animation Festival."

Scanning the screening schedule, one finds an intriguing array of movie options. Just imagine how the moviemakers depict these scenarios. There's a movie about a young woman who illegally enters the country and falls in love with an ICE agent. In another, a Chicana from East Los Angeles makes her dead brother's dream her own and travels to Spain to learn the dance from the gypsies. In another feature, a lovestruck soul suffers a hilarious, emotionally engaging and ultimately shocking quest to woo Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice.

Movies are in English or have English subtitles, but with films from all over the world, be prepared to hear some dialogue in Arabic, Spanish, the Queen's English and the Queen's English with an Aussie accent.

Thanks to the academy

One feature of the film festival is that moviegoers have the opportunity to rate what they see; it's sort of an ad hoc motion picture academy. Movie patrons can register at www.wsiff.com to rate films, workshops and panels, and to write reviews.

shops and panels, and to write reviews.
WSIFF also has a Facebook site and a page on MySpace where film fanatics already have been sending messages, inviting friends and telling buddies they're coming to Las Cruces.

Hollywood comes to Las Cruces

An important part of the weekend's magic carpet ride includes meeting some Hollywood heroes. Actor Jamison Jones, ("He Was A Quiet Man"), will teach the Business and Art of Acting. Casting Directors Donn Finn ("Titanic" and "L.A. Confidential") and New Mexico's own Jo Edna Boldin, will host Auditioning for TV and Film. NMSU's own Mark Medoff, Oscar-nominated and Tony Award-winning writer of "Children of A Lesser God" and "100 MPG," will discuss screenwriting and directing Lesser God" and "100 MPG," will discuss screenwriting and directing.

Other participants in the festival include screenwriters Kathy Gori and Alan Berger ("I Love You Phillip Morris"); author and professor Sam Smiley ("Playwriting," "The Structure of Action"); Jon Hendry, IATSE Local #480 Union Leader; and Bill Hanson from Apple Computers.

Planners agree it will take some time to build momentum for the WSIFF in Las Cruces, but with more than 200 visitors coming in from out of town, panels and workshops for the Oscar wannabees and a weekend of movies from a four-minute narrative to a full-length documentary, the WSIFF promises an award-winning time for movie mayens, moguls and maniacs.

The Art Nouveau period was characterized by flowing designs of plants, flowers and beautiful women combined with exotic enamel, high karat gold and precious gemstones. Popular during the Art Nouveau period were such unusual gemstones as tsavorite garnets and cut coral in many shapes mixed with plique-a-jour enamel and intricate goldsmith techniques never seen since. Many of these pieces were handmade by artists in France, Great Britain and the United States

The Art Deco period designs were in contrast to the Art Nouveau period and were characterized by geometric shapes, mostly straight lines and circles. Many famous architectural buildings were designed during that time including many of the Trost designs in El Paso.

Susan Eisen Fine Jewelry & Watches was founded in 1980, and does custom jewelry designing, repairs and jewelry and fine art appraising. The art gallery showcases designs and art by Southwest and nationally known artists and opened in May 2008.

② NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The artwork of Virginia Maria Romero is on display at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum and features the traditional paintings of this talented Las Cruces artist. It will show in the arts corridor through Aug. 2.

Romero's work, which mostly consists of paintings, is inspired by traditional retablo painting and has recently included more contemporary influences such as totem animals, including wolves and abstract natural forms. The show displays the evolution of her work.

Romero paints images and altars that take a more contemporary approach, while still maintaining the old tradition. Through her artwork, she has been able to create a visual bridge between the historical spirituality of the people of New Mexico, to the current issues that the people face today.

② IN EFFECT GALLERY

In Effect Gallery, 514 W. Griggs Ave., will feature local up-and-coming artist Jesse Miller, who will show a number of his works, from oil paintings to assembled pieces and beyond.

Miller was born in Columbus, Ga., and, with both parents being in the service, adapted quickly to being moved from school to school a dozen times or so. He now resides in Las Cruces and attends Oñate High School, graduating this May.

Even at a relatively young age, Miller has developed his own unique style in his approach to his art. Although he only seriously began painting about three years ago, he has already completed more than 100 paintings on canvas and most sell quickly. Additionally, he somehow found the time to compile and submit multiple advanced placement portfolios throughout the arts community.

From having a graffiti mural inside Oñate to doing some "tagging," or graffiti art — on others' property — Miller finally realized that if he did not re-direct the artist inside, he would probably never get into school, or have the opportunities available to his peers. Graffiti is/was the driving force behind Miller's art. In Effect Gallery is a contemporary, cosmopolitan liberal arts venue. Call 526-1551 or email ineffectgallery@mac.com for more information.

O DOÑA ANA COUNTY GOVERNMENT CENTER

More than 100 pieces of original student artwork from the Las Cruces and Gadsden public schools have been installed in the first-floor corridors of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. The exhibit includes paintings, etchings and drawings. The artists range from elementary to high school students.

The student art shows have been a rotating fixture for Doña Ana County's main lobby since 2000, with hundreds of works by local student artists displayed for the public during that time. The student art exhibit complements the permanent art collection within the Doña Ana County Government Center, which includes a series of historical photographs in the upstairs rotunda, as well as a spectacular photograph of the Organ Mountains donated in 2007 by Las Cruces artist R. Frederick Silva. The piece, titled "Fall Splendor," hangs on a second floor east wall, adjacent to the main entrance to the administrative offices of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners and the county manager.

On permanent display downstairs is an original oil painting by Las Cruces artist Alice Terry donated to the Doña Ana County Government Center last February for permanent display. The painting, titled "Heart of the Problem," depicts a dry desert arroyo and represents the artist's respect for the power of arroyos and the damage they can inflict to property during the summer Monsoon Season inherent to southern New Mexico. Also on display downstairs is a scale model of the USS New Mexico, a Virginia Class nuclear submarine.

On semi-permanent display in the main lobby is one of New Mexico's most famous painted ponies. Caballo de Las Cruces is covered with more than 2 million tiny, decorative, glass beads. The pony is for sale by the Doña Ana Arts Council, with the proceeds to benefit the historic Rio Grande Theatre. To date, none of the bids for it have met the minimum allowable for sale. The pony will remain on display near the main reception desk of the Doña Ana County Government Center until it changes ownership. Caballo de Las Cruces was designed by local artist Julienne Hadfield. The beading process took more than 4,000 hours to complete by a dedicated group of more than 100 community volunteers. The pony was designed to honor Las Cruces and the surrounding area.

The public is invited to view the student art show, Caballo de

Visiting artists perform stellar vocal harmonies

Abluegrass concert with music by Cahalen David Morrison and Brianna Lane will be performed at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 21, at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall. Rarely would someone think a sound so inherently natural could be born out of emails and long-distance phone calls, but after having played together twice, Lane and Morrison saw that collaboration was bound to happen, and so it did.

Somewhere in the correspondence between Minneapolis, Tierra Amarilla, N.M., and dozens of solo tour stops, Harbor Collective was born.

Lane's sweet, gravelly voice has the purity of youth and the prudence of old age, and her guitar playing is rooted in obvious years of performing. She is also a well-seasoned traveler, knitter and runner.

Morrison hops back and forth between instruments effortlessly, showing prowess on most things with strings. His voice lies somewhere between ragged and beautiful, but is always steady. He is also an accomplished baker and babysitter.

Together they will be performing a mash of tunes – originals, covers and traditional tunes – mostly from the old-time, blues and country traditions. These two nearly veteran songwriters will not disappoint

La Cella Bella: Four women making beautiful music

Original works, new rock arrangements make group unique

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Finding music for four cellos has proven difficult for the group La Cella Bella, but that hasn't stopped the women from becoming a popular favorite for events and dinners with their original works and the occasional rock music ensemble.

The group, made up of Alison Reynolds, Alicia Dolan, Debbie Eckles and Tatianna Dickens, have varying levels of expertise on their instrument, but all bring a little something extra to La Cella Bella. They play mostly pop music, but have a classical repertoire as well.

"We play songs of the Beatles, Eric Clapton, Eurythmics, Eagles, Paul Simon, Green Day, Lifehouse, Coldplay, Etta James and some other older jazz tunes, fiddle and celtic tunes," says Reynolds, who has been playing the cello since she was 9 years old. "Basically, we try to play something for everyone.

The group began after Reynolds joined the New Horizons Symphony Orchestra and met Eckles and Dickens. She arranged one of her first tunes. "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" for cellos, and shortly thereafter the group had 11 pieces and decided to take their group "public." They played with various other members, but added their fourth player in Dolan later. Their first performance was at The Bean in Mesilla, and from that, the group was asked to play at Spirit Winds and a few weddings.

The entire group participates in arranging songs for the cello, and since the beginning, their 11 pieces has grown to more than 40. Most of the music is arranged by Reynolds, and she says sometimes people will suggest specific songs when they book the group to play.

"When I listen to a song that I am thinking of arranging for the group, I listen first to the bass line," Reynolds says. "If there is an interesting bass line, along with a good melody, chances are it will make a good arrangement.'

Dolan is working on a few of her original pieces and hopes to have them complete in the near future. She also says the group is unique because it plays a variety of genres. "I have always been bothered by people who think that because you play a certain type of instrument, then you are supposed to restrict yourself to playing a specific kind of music," Dolan

Dolan played with the El Paso Symphony for 19 years, the Las Cruces Symphony for five years and the El Paso Opera for 15 years. She also teaches private cello lessons.

"Playing in a group for me has always been more fun than playing alone," says Eckles, who plays the violin, viola, cello and a little piano. "What I love about La Cella Bella is that we play fun music and people have fun listening to us.

Eckles began playing the violin in eighth grade and played with the Las Cruces Symphony Orchestra for 21 years. She took up the cello 12 years ago with Reynolds, who was her teacher. She now plays principal viola with the New Horizons Symphony Orchestra.

Reynolds also plays the guitar and in high school, started playing folk music and pursued a music career after she graduated. Eventually, she went back to school for music and got married and had two children, putting music on the back burner for a while. Now, she is getting back into performing.

"I love to play with La Cella Bella," Reynolds says. "I get to relive a bit of my band days without the need for all the equipment, and it is a lot easier on Dickens began playing the cello in second grade, but took 14 years off to attend college, support her husband through law school and help her son, Zack, recover from autism.

"I'm inspired by love and gratitude," Dickens says. "Music helps me express what is in my heart. Being a member of this group has broadened my horizons as a musician, and it allows me to think more creatively.

The group will perform at St. Clair Bistro on Avenida de Mesilla from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday, April 23. Call 649-5135 for more information.

Call Eddie Farrell's restaurant any day, any time, and if he's there, he swears he'll make you a pie.

"It doesn't matter if I haven't opened or already closed, call me and I'll take care of you. It's a done deal," he said.
For Farrell, a former New York City police detective turned Las Cruces pizza-maker, "done deal" is not just a motto, but a way of life.

"I've been saying it for years," he said. "Whenever somebody asks me for a favor or asks me to do something, boom, it's a done deal and the story ends."

Farrell said he brings something truly unique and authentic to the Las Cruces culinary scene, New York-style pizza that is "crispy, thin, delicious and cooked all the way through – the only way to have pizza," he said.

In January, Farrell opened Eddie's Done Deal Pizza, a humble concrete homage to the pizza joints he grew up around, "one like there was on every other block in the Bronx," he said. It is located at 1103 S.

Solano Drive, the location which was formerly Casa de Menudo.

Using a 50-year old recipe he learned as a kid while slinging dough at a neighborhood pizzeria in the Bronx, Farrell creates the perfect New York City pie - thin and crispy with gooey, whole-milk cheese, a hearty homemade sauce and a generous helping of fresh toppings.

"I use my own techniques, and make the same dough and sauce I learned to make when I was a kid," he said. "It's beautiful."

Together with cook Santiago Martinez, a native of Patterson, N.J., who Farrell describes as "the hardest working man I've met here," Eddie's Done Deal Pizza has attracted a growing base of steady customers.

Patrons of Eddie's have an option of ordering a large one-size-fits-all, one-topping pie for $11. Each additional topping – pepperoni, Italian sausage, onions, green chile or jalapeño – is available for 50 cents extra.

Farrell also offers meatball, Italian sausage and pepper "hero" sandwiches – "with ingredients shipped straight from New York," Farrell said – for $6, along with traditional sausage and pepperoni calzones, also for $6.

Depending on the day, you could also be treated to one of "Eddie's specials," usually a scrumptious Italian dish inspired by his mother's home cooking.

"I care when I cook, and I never serve anything that's not quality," he said. "Since I opened, I've only tossed two pies in the trash. Everybody takes their pie home or finishes it on the spot, it's great."

Farrell said his customers vary - from college students to retirees - but all have one thing in common, they don't leave without first getting an earful from a loud, proud New Yorker that is happy to share his love of the Big Apple by making sure his customers remember, "If you come back, it's a done deal."

La Posta de Mesilla

One of their most famous dishes, the "Tostada Compuesta," originated at La Posta in 1939. This dish consists of a toasted corn tortilla cup filled with frijoles, red chile con carne, topped with chopped lettuce, diced tomatoes and grated cheddar cheese. If you prefer green chile, the local" favorite is the sour cream enchilada. This dish consists of corn tortillas smothered with green chile sauce, topped with grated cheddar cheese or monterey jack cheese and sour cream, and includes refritos, rice and our very tasty Mexican slaw. Other La Posta favorites include their compuesta salad, red enchiladas, folded and rolled tacos, beef or chicken flautas, chile rellenos, as well as a wonderful selection of desserts including their very delicious homemade flan and empanadas. Perhaps one of their best kept secrets is their tasty succulent steaks, served with your choice of baked potato, red enchilada, or steak fries, and includes a side of their green chile (of course!).

THEATER

Acting their way into our hearts

'Leading Ladies' performances and cast are a must see

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Looking for a laugh-a-minute live performance that will leave you feeling like there are a few less cares in the world? Then look no further than "Leading Ladies," now playing at the Las Cruces Community Theatre.

The play, which features a very talented and capable cast, is the story of two struggling theater actors, Leo and Jack, who get a hair-brained idea to try and claim the inheritance of "Max" and "Steve" from a dying woman, which they read about in the newspaper. The problem is, Max and Steve are women. The men decide to dress as women to convince the woman's family that they are the real "Maxine" and "Stephanie."

Through a number of mishaps and mix-ups, the two find a little something else other than money from a dying woman. The best part about the play is the cast - a talented group of individuals who, together, make up a witty, engrossing group that you will love to watch.

Ceil Herman, owner of the Black Box Theatre, is a capable and talented director and leads this cast into a graceful and powerful performance, with plenty of witty lines to keep even the biggest grump entertained all evening.

Amy Lynn Upshaw is fantastic in her role as Meg, cousin to Max and Steve, and offers the audience a glimpse of a true theater act. She is making her debut on the LCCT stage, but was previously a television actor and had her chance on American Idol in 2004. She is phenomenal in her role, and hopefully she will continue on in the Las Cruces theater scene with future roles.

Not to be outdone, the remainder of the cast is just as talented – Matthew Esqueda plays Leo who dresses up as Maxine, and does so with a certain amount of grace and hilarity. He has been seen in past productions of "Cloud Tectonics," "Holy Ghosts" and "Seussical," among others, and is more than convinc-ing in his role in "Leading Ladies."

Another mentionable performance was from Corey Dlask as Jack and Stephanie, whose tall, lanky frame makes him a tad on the awkward side as he towers over the entire cast as Stephanie. He has a lot of the physical scenes, being pulled in opposite directions, dancing and being a part of the comical side of the performances, but is convincing throughout.

Gidget Chairmaine plays the role of the dim-witted and endearing Audrey to a tee - and yes, that's her real name. Audrey is a platinum blonde beauty with the blonde brains to match, which provides comic relief at various junctures in the play. Her boyfriend through much of the play is Shaun Hadfield, who plays Butch, and has his own share of witty

Rounding out the characters are Ken Eastlack as Doc, Carmen Call as Florence and Walter Carr as Duncan, all of which add even more talent to the already stellar cast of characters.

"Leading Ladies" is one of the LCCT's finest and should not be missed.

The play runs through Sunday, April 26, and performances are at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Tickets are $8 for regular admission and $7 for students and seniors over 65. Groups of 10 or more are $6 per seat, and children 6 or under are $5. For reservations, call 523-1200 or visit http://lcctnm.

ASTC presents 'She Stoops to Conquer'

The American Southwest Theatre Company at New Mexico State University Theatre Arts is pleased to present the classic play, "She Stoops to Conquer," from Friday, April 17, through Sunday, May 3, at the Hershel Zohn Theatre on the NMSU campus. It is the final production of the 2008/2009 ASTC/NMSU

Oliver Goldsmith's 18th century comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," follows the courtship of Charles Marlow and Kate Hardcastle. Charles is nervous around upper-class women, so Kate poses as a barmaid in order to win him. The play is a love story filled with laughter.

Director and NMSU Theatre Arts faculty member Tim Pinnow observes that "period plays like 'She Stoops to Conquer' often get a bad rap - people assume they'll be long and boring. Not this play and not this period. Our production brings the vivacity of the Georgian period alive through a bit of time travel. We're bringing 1785 to you."
Pinnow leads an experienced production team including NMSU Theatre Arts faculty members Jim Billings (scenic design), Deb Brunson (costume design), David Hereford (props design) and Mike

Wise (stage management).

The cast includes NMSU Theatre Arts students Amy Archibeque (Miss Hardcastle), Kari Bahmer (Bar Patron), Sean Dolan (Marlowe), Grady Easterling (Diggory), Matt Jones (Tony Lumpkin), Jordan Kelley (Bar Patron), Aldo Maldonado (Roger), Esther Martinez (Maid), Kiera Quinn (Bar Patron), Christopher Rivas (Hastings), Bryant Shockley (Landlord) and Sarah Vannest (Miss Neville).

Community actor David Edwards (Mr. Hardcastle) and NMSU faculty members Ruth Cantrell (Mrs. Hardcastle) and Richard Rundell (Sir Charles Marlow) round out the cast.

"She Stoops to Conquer" will be at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and at 2 p.m. Sundays. There will be a Thursday performance at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 30.

Ticket prices are $15 for adults, $13 for seniors and NMSU faculty/staff and $10 for students. For more information, call the NMSU Theatre/ASTC box office at 646-4515 or 1-800-646-ASTC.

Cultures and love make this film bloom

'Cherry Blossoms' plays at the Fountain Theatre

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG The Las Cruces Bulletin

"Cherry Blossoms" is a sweet lesson about cultures and love, which are the mainframes for this touching and slightly unusual film.

Trudi and Rudi, a German couple, have been married for years. Although their differences are massive – she is adventurous, he is a homebody – they have a strong marriage and raised three children who are now all on their

However, as much as Rudi resists change, it is on its way – big time. Trudi discovers that he only has a short time to live. For reasons that are not entirely clear, Rudi. at first, is unaware of this. She convinces him to go to Berlin, as a first stop on a trip to Japan, a country she adores, to visit two of their children (the third lives in Japan). He begrudgingly agrees.

It is here where director Doris Dorrie's work first kicks into gear. The couple's children, distant and somewhat self-centered, are not overly interested in this visit, although they do not know at the time about Rudi's health. A side trip to a seaside resort, another favorite place for Trudi, turns into tragedy, when she dies peacefully in her sleep, leaving the stagnant and rudderless Rudi on his own.

Soon, however, he realizes how little he did to make his wife's dreams come true and travels to Japan to stay with his youngest son,

Karl can barely be bothered with this interloper, and offers little in the way of solace or serenity for the confused and grieving Rudi. Rudi begins to explore, ever so slightly, the world outside Karl's confusing apartment, and soon happens upon a young woman, Yu, who is a busker of sorts, who performs a traditional dance known as Butoh.

Their friendship melds as Rudi finally begins to open up, while helping Yu work through the grief she feels after losing her mother. He fully realizes how much his wife meant to him, and how he may have not been the best of husbands.

Rudi does not reveal his new friendship to Karl, who remains too busy at his work to share much time with his father, but he does begin to realize the great loss he now holds by not spending more time learning about and from his mother.

Dorrie does a fascinating job of combining two distinct cultures and two distinct generations, never allowing for the film to feel maudlin or corny. Beautifully photographed during Hanami, cherry blossom time, Dorrie takes full advantage of all the brief possibilities for extraordinary beauty during a short season. In an interview which discusses the film, Dorrie helps flesh out the story a bit by offering this bit of information about her film: "That's what it's all about – that each person, each plant, each animal is granted a moment when it can truly blossom and reveal itself. But what often happens to us, and to Rudi, is that we just keep suppressing it. We never allow our true self and our true beauty to reveal itself, to blossom like the cherry tree does.

She also notes that the tale was inspired by Yasujiro Ozu's "Tokyo Story" and its own spiritual predecessor, Leo McCarey's 1937 U.S. drama about an elderly couple who are separated by circumstances "Make Way for Tomorrow" (screens as a CineMatinee at the Fountain on May 9).

This story, at times, is told a bit too slowly, and the mood has a slight melancholic feel to it until the last third. However, it is kind of like being on a train going up a mountainside – the journey might be a bit laborious, but once you arrive, it is certainly worth the wait.

A journey of love is examined

WSIFF film 'Courting Condi' has it all

Review by Beth Sitzler

The movie begins with Devin Ratray telling his mother he met someone. In fact, he has loved "this someone" for six years - Secretary of State Condoleezza

His mom, and probably audience members, laugh at the notion that Buzz from "Home Alone" is in love with the woman Forbes Magazine named the world's most powerful woman in 2005.

"Courting Condi," directed by Sebastian Doggart, is the first-ever musical docu-tragi-comedy and follows Ratray's efforts in wooing Rice, as he travels the country, learning about the person behind the power.

Armed with music, the thing they have in common, and "love discs," which are love letters set to music and video, Ratray is determined to sing his way into Rice's heart. He begins his journey in Birmingham, Ala., where Rice grew up.

He talked to childhood friends and learned about the things that influenced her, such as her minister father and her desire to become a concert pianist

Segregation also was influential in her life since she grew up during the Civil Rights movement and even lost a friend in a church bombing in 1963. This and other instances made her determined to make a difference in Washington, D.C.

Next, they adventured to Denver where Rice lived from 1969 to 1981. Along with talking to former teachers, they interview Rick Upchurch, Rice's only former fiancé and former Denver Broncos' football player, much to Ratray's dismay.

After deciding she wasn't going to be a concert pianist, Rice became interested in international affairs and global politics and despite a loving relationship and marriage proposal, Rice took a job in Washington, D.C.

While visiting Stanford University, where Rice was the first African American woman provost, they discover the cutthroat side of Rice.

Lastly, after a quick visit home to mom and dad in New York, Ratray goes to Washington, D.C., where he encounters a very honest focus group. The result of this leg of the journey will surprise audiences.

Ratray is actually a good singer and his powerful love ballads, such as "Invisible," makes the audience believe the love he has for Rice.

Doggart does a wonderful job combining footage of Rice, historical photos, interviews and Ratray's "love discs" in a way that tells Rice's full story.

It's amazing how many people they were able to speak with, including Academy Award-winning songwriter Carol Connors, Rice's stepmother Clara Bailey Rice, actor Adrian Grenier, comedian Jim Norton, Republican political consultant Frank Luntz and many of Rice's biographers as well as former friends, classmates and colleagues.

Despite the good music, historical facts, humor and shocking events, "Courting Condi" is very informative and can be a lesson to all the song-writing, hopeless romantics.

OBSERVE AND REPORT

this movie – stick with something a little less graphic.

Dark and twisted doesn't begin to describe

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH

Aside from the fact that two men beside and in front of me at the theater fell asleep - and one woke himself up snoring – the movie "Observe and Report" was still a bust.

Seth Rogen, playing his darkest role to date, delivered a tremendous performance as Ronnie Barnhardt – just not the performance that can be traditionally enjoyed when watching one of his flicks.

Rogen plays a mall security guard who suffers from bipolar disorder and is a tad on the violent side. He isn't exactly bad in the role, but it is painful to watch - one of those that makes you feel like he can't do anything right and will never get a big break.

The plot is about a mall plagued with a naked flasher problem, one who assaults women in the parking lot. Ronnie makes it his goal to take the man down, and in the meantime, asks out Brandi, played by Anna Faris, and tries out for the police force. While the pervert runs loose in the mall, Ronnie is unable to apprehend him, so the mall administration brings in a surly police detective played by Ray Liotta, for whom Ronnie has a particular distaste. Ronnie's bipolar disorder becomes a problem, though, and he fails his psychiatric exam to join the force, which sets him off, causing a scene inside the mall and leads to subsequent violent scenes that are a bit difficult to swallow.

While the ending is a happy one – with a good moral about being happy about who you are – getting there isn't exactly a cake walk. The film is littered

Grade:

Seth Rogen as Ronnie in Warner Bros. Pictures' and Legendary Pictures' dark comedy "Observe and Report," now playing at Allen Theatres.

violent outbursts, one in which two mall security guards beat a group of kids with their own skateboards. At times, it's difficult to concentrate on anything at all because of the 10 minutes of full frontal nudity that is the mall pervert running around assaulting people.

The overall feeling of the movie is dark, twisted and violent with an underlying theme of downright gross humor, but Rogen does his part justice. He shows his true versatility by departing from playing the "funny guy." His depth is evident and his talent is unmatchable. He has a bright future ahead of him, even if this isn't a movie to put on the mantle.

On a lighter note, "Observe and Report" was shot in Albuquerque and Bosque Farms, N.M. – the mall is familiar! – and recently, Gov. Bill Richardson commended the filmmakers for their environmentally-friendly filming practices throughout the movie.

Supporting film in New Mexico is important, so maybe people should see the film despite its flaws – but if you want something lighthearted, better stick with the Miley Cyrus movie.

The man behind the scene

JOHN KEITH

Sports Editor

In 1997, they were buddies on the football staff at Cal-Berkeley.

Juan Lozano was the student manager, DeWayne Walker the defensive secondary coach. Twelve years later, they are, like the country song, together again. Walker's the head football coach at New Mexico State, Lozano the Aggies' director of football operations.

Off stage and hidden from public view, Lozano's job may cover more ground than any other on Walker's staff. Lozano books and orchestrates Walker's off-the-field calendar. He handles player and team issues as well. He might be asked for his voice in scheduling team travel for the 2009 season. "I'm not sure about that, yet," Lozano said.

You've noticed, of course, that Walker has already invaded Las Cruces with speaking engagements, a pancake breakfast and a promised summer of scheduled coaching clinics. He is the most visible football coach in NMSU history and has yet to coach a game here.

I'm not sure whose idea it was when Walker and Lozano invited the local media to lunch a few weeks ago. Great move, considering journalists' penchant for free meals.

Lozano surrendered a lucrative law career to re-join Walker in Las Cruces. "I like the city," Lozano said. "I like working in a city with a large Hispanic population. I feel comfortable here Walker knows the value of Lozano's expertise. "Juan is my right-hand man," he said. "He keeps me on point as far as my schedule goes, and with all my administrative duties, Juan has been influential in our efforts to get our program out into the community.

"He is a lawyer by trade, very well educated and speaks Spanish. His background, I feel, will be very beneficial at both the administrative and community levels," Walker said.

Lozano is busy designing the First Annual DeWayne Walker Spring Golf Tournament, scheduled for Satur-day, April 25, at the University Golf Course. It is one more opportunity for Aggie fans to meet NMSU's coaching staff in a festive atmosphere.

All golfers, good and bad, are encouraged to participate. Handicaps will be used. The tournament will tee off in foursomes with an 8 a.m. shotgun start. Walker and his staff will be stationed at different tees to be the fifth player for any group when needed.

Registration will begin at 6 a.m. A brief awards ceremony and lunch will follow the event.

Ag women find new life

Paul Brilliant, the Aggie women's golf coach, works with Maggie Murphy in preparation for the WAC tournament, scheduled for April 20-22 at Nevada's Wolf Run Golf Course.

WAC golf tourney up next for NMSU

The Las Cruces Bulletin

It was the Baylor Spring Invitational, the eighth tournament of the year and the third of the spring season, before the Aggie women's golf team found an identity. Hopefully, anyhow.

"We finished second at Baylor," said New Mexico State coach Paul Brilliant. "Before that, we struggled, but we played some tough competition.

Then came the BYU-Dixie Classic one week later. "We finished fifth in a strong field," Brilliant said. "I could tell we were making progress."

The spring schedule has not been kind to NMSU. Brilliant's team opened with a 17th place finish in a 17-team field at the Arizona Wildcat Invitational, Feb. 22-24. The Aggies were sixth out of seven teams at the Pepperdine Invitational, March 2 and 3 before the breakthrough finish at

New Mexico State, Brilliant thinks, will be in the hunt when the WAC championships tee off April 20-22 at Nevada's Wolf Run Golf Course.

"I don't know what to think," Brilliant said when asked to pick a winner. "San Jose State will be the favorite. They're ranked in the top 20, but any one of the WAC teams have a shot."

Jackie Booth, NMSU's assistant coach, believes the Aggies can win the tournament if the players have grown Kristi Covarrubia was destined to be an athlete. The only question was going to be in which sport would she play and excel.

As a young child, she played some basketball, gave soccer a shot and was the only girl on her baseball team. As a 7-yearold, she gave softball a try and has never looked back.

She still throws the javelin for the Oñate High School track team, but softball has been her sport of choice for the past 10 years, and her father has been with her through every heartbreaking loss and every thrilling victory.

Oñate softball coach Bobby

Ags' Simon gets WAC award

Pitches shutout at Fresno State Bulldogs

Hawai'i outfielder Kolten Wong and New Mexico State University righthanded pitcher Daniel Simon have been named the Western Athletic Conference Baseball Hitter and Pitcher of the Week, respectively, for April 6-12.

Simon, a junior from Susanville, Calif. (Lassen HS), pitched 6.0 innings in a 2-0 shutout win against Fresno State. Simon allowed no runs on two hits to get the WAC road victory. He also tallied three strikeouts. With the win, Simon improves to a perfect 7-0 on the season with a 2.93 ERA.

Simon's win at Fresno State marks the first time since 2005 that the Bulldogs – the defending national champions – have been shutout by a WAC opponent at Pete Beiden Field.

Psychopathology of golfers

Part one of a two-part series on golf disorders

As someone trained and licensed in the mental health field, your intrepid Doctor of Golf has had to deal with the "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual"

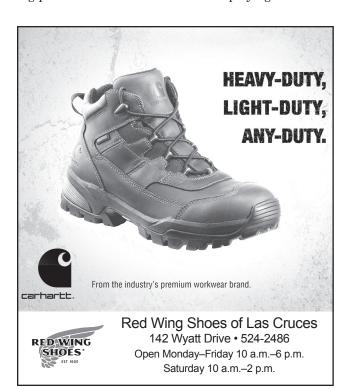

(DSM IV) for may years.
DSM IV represents the rather comprehensive compendium of mental and related disorders, as published by the American Psychiatric Association – the shrink's

I have long thought there should be a similar tome for golf, which would be definitive for afflictions of the brain and behavior as they apply specifically to golf-ers. In fact, for some time I've been working on that very project, and here are some of my current analyses summarized, of course. (Please understand that the intent here is strictly humor and parody, with no intention of disrespecting persons who suffer from serious emotional and behavioral conditions.)

Lesson-avoidant personality disorder - A pervasive pattern of feelings of golfing inadequacy and hypersensitivity to negative evaluation as indicated by the following typical behaviors: fears criticism by golf teachers; is preoccupied by feelings of rejection when suggestions are made; ignores golfing failures in favor of avoiding learning situations; is afraid to take risks in golf learning situations because of feeling inept or inadequate and tends to take advice and quasi-information from inappropriate sources like poor golfers or random unqualified sources.

Intermittent club-throwing disorder – A pattern of behavior marked by several public episodes of failure to resist aggressive impulses that result in hurling or flinging golf clubs in anger, usually following bad luck or bad golf. The nature of these episodes is grossly out of proportion to any precipitating physical or social stressors. As yet no correlation has been found between club-throwing and antisocial personality disorder, or even spear-chucking expertise (M*A*S*H* circa 1980s).

Greenside Tourette's - This syndrome can involve motor or vocal tics (or both) which are sudden, rapid non-rhythmic movements or noises that usually occur by a discourteous player mostly while an opponent is putting or preparing to putt. Examples would include talking loudly, rattling pocket change, coughing, dropping clubs and other far more creative and loathsome distractions. The disturbance may not be due to the direct effects of alcohol or drugs, and the onset is usually after someone has played considerable golf and lost money over the years. The afflicted may be heard yelling profanities to himself even while playing alone.

 ${\bf Post\text{-}tournament\ stress\ disorder\ (PTSD)}-{\bf This}$ is a serious, sometimes career-ending, condition where the person has been exposed to a traumatic event in competitive golf where the event is so overwhelmingly disappointing and distressing that it has caused serious emotional disturbance.

Recent examples would be Sean O'Hair losing a five-stroke lead to Tiger Woods at Bay Hill, and Kenny Perry making bogey-bogey to lose the Masters. Phil Mickelson was tormented and crippled for a brief period following the 2006 Open. Other famous examples can be found throughout golfing lore.

Symptoms include: experiencing recurrent and intrusive recollections of the event; recurring dreams (actually nightmares at that point) of the tragedy; having flashbacks before, during and after subsequent tournaments with the "yips" often interfering with play; physiological reactions to the event such as excess nervousness and shaking; and often there is the inability to recall exactly the details of the trauma correctly. Be alert for difficulty sleeping as the strokes and rolls of the ball are replayed at night over and over; irritability and outbursts whenever the topic is brought up; difficulty concentrating with a quick startle response, say to a golf cart brake release; hypervigilance, often seen in not entering tournaments or taking chances. Treatment is long and arduous

Reactive cell phone attachment disorder of adulthood – This adult developmental disorder is marked by uncontrollable attachment to one's cell phone or Blackberry as seen in compulsive checking of voice messages, texting and otherwise fidgeting with scrolling and buttons while it is obviously an inappropriately social or sport situation, such as in the middle of a golf match.

Sometimes, the patient will recognize that the behavior is unwelcome by others and will even apologize, but then goes right back to playing with the phone. The disorder involves the persistent disregard for traditional social decorum (as opposed to slacker decorum) and the serenity of those within ear- and eyeshot. Even a short time out of reach of the high-tech instrument produces anxiety similar to a panic attack.

DR. CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

Selective mutism (formerly elective mutism) -This is a consistent and even inconsistent failure to say "that's good" or "pick it up" when it is obvious that the situation or the length calls for conceding the putt. Poor social skills, meanness or being oblivious to the common courtesies of a friendly golf match are usually involved. Golfers sometimes refer to the condition as "lockjaw." The disturbance interferes with the social relationships of certain groups and even ends longtime friendships. Duration can last a lifetime. Inability to find a golf game and the resulting loneliness seem to be the only cures.

Golf Channel-induced insomnia – Sleep disturbance becomes distressful and potentially dangerous medically when it causes clinically significant distress in social, occupational, sexual or other important areas of functioning. A predominantly male phenomenon, with origins in the mid-1990s, Golf Channel sleep disorder afflicts men between the ages of 16 and 96, with most reporting that they can't sleep and then turn on the Golf Channel, rather than the other way around.

These patients rarely recall what infomercials they were watching, but they say, almost invariably, that it helped them to return to sleep if they spent enough time feeling brain-dead in front of the cable tube.

Sometimes Golf Channel insomnia (some call it "Golfer's Obsessive Lazy Fadeout" or GOLF for short) occurs in the course of another disorder, which is often compulsive golf club and swing aid purchasing. The upside is it does tend to stave off depression due to golfing blues. This disorder is not to be confused with golf course induced Hypersomnia, which is basically going to sleep in the middle of an important match or tournament. Some find that normal. I do not.

ACCIE INSIDER

April 25 is a busy day for Aggie football fans

Golf and spring game on tap

... Aggie fans can spend the entire day with head coach DeWayne

Walker ...

There's a full day of fun coming your way Saturday, April 25. Ole Pete is here to tell you it is the day you get to know everything about Aggie football you might ever want to ask. I'm convinced of this, because all Aggie fans can spend the entire day with head coach DeWayne Walker and his staff.

That morning the first ever DeWayne Walker Spring Golf tournament tees off. You don't have to be a scratch golfer – because no one else in this group will be – but you do have to be ready to have some fun and talk some football.

The scramble format has a shotgun start at 8 a.m. If you happen to make it to five shots on a hole, coaches will be on various holes to take that fifth swing for you. It will give you a chance to get a drink and ask them what they plan to do on third and long, whether or not they'll pull a blitz on first down or play it basic. Naturally, all of this takes place at the NMSU Golf Course.

That is just the appetizer for the day's events. The main course is that night at Aggie Memorial Stadium when the spring game unfolds. For those of you who have to work or maybe aren't golfers, one event is not mandatory for the other. In other words, bring the kids, the in-laws, your uncles and everyone to the spring game to see the first phase of the development of Aggie football under Walker. It's a team that looks a little more run oriented than what we have seen lately and with the head man a firm believer in defense, you know that has been a point of emphasis as well.

Ole Pete's not gonna quit telling you that football season has got to be in your mind every month of the year. The spring game is another example of how this coaching staff is going above and beyond to get to know you and our town. That is because they know this program can only show its stuff when there is a partnership on the field and in the stands.

There is a fee for the golf tournament, golfers expect that, but there is no admission charge for the spring game that night. Come on Aggie fans join in the fun, Walker and his staff are holding out a hand, don't leave them hanging.

PETE

Ags' baseball for real

NMSU is making giant strides during a remarkable 2009 season

I think it is time to put your believer clothes on now with regard to this year's Aggie baseball team. In the past, the standard line of thinking has been that February and March have provided exciting starts to years that never quite developed when WAC play began. Not in 2009.

New Mexico State earned national attention last month with an impressive showing against San Francisco and has held its own in conference play.

A learned sports competitor and philosopher named Rick Flair has said, "to be the man, you have to beat the man." The Aggies did that last weekend in their series with defending NCAA National Champions Fresno State. Statistics and home run records are fun but doing it on the field against those ahead of you is the true test of a team's strength.

The 2-0 shutout victory over the Bulldogs last Saturday showed that head coach Rocky Ward has shored up the two areas that needed it: defense and pitching. In other words, the fundamentals of the game. Kicking around teams from the Northeast who are just happy to get to a climate where they can wear shorts doesn't keep you in the top 25, shutting out Fresno State does. Playing other top 25 programs helps too. The Aggies and the University of New Mexico split two games this year, taking wins from the other's home field.

If you listen to what Ward says, there is still a lot of season left, but the gloves and the arms are holding up at this point to go with NMSU's hitting power. The current road trip that began before Easter ends this weekend in Reno versus Nevada. To this point, Nevada and the Aggies are the teams with the best conference records to date.

Most coaches are content with a split on road trips and look to makeup the progress at home. Being able to hang together on this extended jaunt through the west is another indicator of true growth.

It is a mature team that keeps it together through May and it looks like New Mexico State fits that mold. Ward is looking for a third invite to the NCAA postseason for his program.

You look familiar:

A walk-on for football head coach DeWayne Walker's squad has a top-notch legacy pedigree. Joe Cordova, a 6-8 inch receiver, is the son of Aggie alums. His father, John, was a lineman in the late 1970s and mom, Diane Tschaar, was a top women's basketball player around the same time.

Devin Brooks, Sophomore Track and Field

New Mexico State sophomore hurdler Devin Brooks broke the school's 100-meter hurdle record at the UTEP Invitational, in El Paso. She crossed the line in a time of 14.04, which surpassed Sandra Anane's record of 14.07 that was set in the 2007 season. Brooks finished second with her personal-best time (14.04) and also recorded a personal-best mark in the 100-meter dash with a time of 12.14, which is 10th on NMSU's all-time record list.

Sophia Marks, Junior Women's Tennis

Junior Sophia Marks led the Aggie women's tennis team to a 2-1 record with wins over Utah State and Louisiana Tech. She went 2-1 in her singles matches. Combining her two singles victories, Marks only lost a total of one game as she beat USU's and La. Tech's No. 1 players. In her only loss, Marks nearly upset Fresno State's Melanie Gloria, who is the No. 14-ranked singles player from the No. 15 Bulldogs. Marks fell to Gloria, 6-2, 2-6, 10-3. In doubles play, Marks along with Aleksa Costa went 2-1 and the lone loss came to the nation's top-ranked singles team from Fresno State. In the two victories, the duo only lost one total game.

Angie Ortega Junior Softball

New Mexico State junior right fielder Angie Ortega led the Aggie softball team to its first WAC sweep of the season against San Jose State. She had three home runs, including a grand slam, with a .500 batting average and 10 RBIs. Ortega recorded at least one hit in each outing. In the opening game, she hit back-to-back home runs and had a team-high six RBIs. Ortega smacked a three-run bomb, her 11th of the season, in series finale.

NMSU hosts rodeo at the fairgrounds

Eight college teams will compete April 24 and 25

Rodeo athletes from eight schools will ride to qualify for the College National Rodeo Finals during the Aggies' home Rodeo, Friday and Saturday, April 24 and 25, at the Southern New Mexico Fairgrounds.

The field includes New Mexico State University, New Mexico Highlands University, Mesalands College, University of Arizona, Central Arizona College, Cochise College, Navajo Technical College and Diné College. Performances at the Southern New Mexico Fairgrounds will start at 7 p.m. both days. General tickets cost $5, and military active duty $2. New Mexico State students will be admitted for free.

This will be the Aggies' big rodeo to wrap up the season and will attract about 170 athletes, including the top collegiate rodeo contestants in the Grand Canyon Region, said Aggie coach Jim Dewey Brown.

Bailey Gow, was National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association champion barrel racer and Wyatt Althoff earned NIRA All-Around Cowboy after placing third in Tie-Down Roping and fifth in Team Roping with his partner Matt Garza. Mumme hired to coach McMurry

Division III program 2-18 last two seasons

Hal Mumme, the former football coach at New Mexico State, has accepted the head coaching job at McMurry University in Abilene, Texas.

He was formally introduced at a press conference on Wednesday, April 15.

Mumme, 57 years old, replaces Donnie Gray, McMurry's former coach who was fired after a 2-18 record over a two-year span.

McMurry plays in Division 111 and belongs to the American Southwest Conference.

Mumme was fired from New Mexico State last December after the Aggies finished 3-9. He won a total of 11 games in four years.

McMurry, a team without a winning season since 2000, finished 0-10 last year.

Mumme, who recently underwent surgery for prostate cancer, said he feels fine and is anxious to start his new job.

He didn't say whether or not he would hire members of his former staff at NMSU.

Sophia Marks wins player of the week

Ags' No. 1 player faced tough field

New Mexico State junior Sophia Marks has been named the WAC Women's Tennis Player of the Week for April 6 to 12. This is the first player of the week honor for Marks, who made second team all-WAC last year for the Aggies in both singles and doubles.

"To have the success that she's had playing at the No. 1 position and playing against a very tough schedule that we've faced speaks volumes for how great of a player she is," said coach Don Ball. "She has been playing great for us and to basically play even, as she lost in a third set tiebreaker, with one of the nation's best players is outstanding. We are thrilled for her and excited she received this honor."

Marks, a junior from Grantham, England (University of Lincoln), led the Aggie women's tennis team to a 2-1 record last weekend with wins over Utah State and Louisiana Tech. She went 2-1 in her singles matches and 2-1 in her doubles matches.

Combining her two singles victories, she only lost a total of one game as she beat USU's and La. Tech's No. 1 players. In her only loss, Marks nearly pulled off an upset of Melanie Gloria, who is the No. 14-ranked singles player in the nation from No. 15-ranked Fresno State. Marks fell to Gloria, 6-2, 2-6 and 10-3.

In doubles play, Marks, along with teammate Aleksa Costa, went 2-1 together and their only loss was to the nation's top-ranked singles team from Fresno State. In their two victories, they only lost a total of one game.

Ags to host 3 in women's tennis

NMSU to play season's final home matches

The New Mexico State women's tennis team hosts Idaho, No. 32 Boise State and Hawai'i, Saturday and Sunday, April 18 and 19, at the NMSU Tennis Center.

The Aggies (9-10, 3-2 WAC) play their last matches before the WAC Tournament, Saturday at 9 a.m. against Idaho and at 1:30 p.m. against Boise. Mexico New State concludes weekend against Hawai'i, at 10 a.m. Sunday. Sunday is Senior Day and the Aggies will honor Stephanie Eusebe and Paulina Zuniga.

Zuniga has won 117 combined singles and doubles matches entering this week-end and is 8-3 in WAC singles play. Eusebe was named to the second team All-WAC in singles last year and in her two years as an Aggie, she has won 68 combined singles and doubles matches.

New Mexico State has won three of its last four matches. Junior Sophia Marks leads the team with 11 singles victories this season. Marks won two of three last weekend playing in Fresno, Calif. She narrowly to the nation's 14th-ranked singles player, Melianie Gloria, from No. 15 Fresno State, 6-2, 2-6, 10-3. Idaho (18-6, 3-2 WAC) also won three of its last four matches. Boise (20-2, 7-0 WAC) has had three straight sweeps. Bronco junior Picchit-tra Thongdach is No. 72 in the singles rankings. She is joined by sophomore Lauren Megale as the No. 73 ranked doubles team, who is also ranked No. 80 when partnered with Vivien Silfany.

Hawai'i (10-11, 2-2 WAC) will begin the weekend by playing No. 15 Fresno State, Friday April 17. Fresno, Hawai'i and John all play against the resp. Friday. and Idaho all play each other on Friday and the match times are set for 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Fresno faces Boise, at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Sophia Marks leads the team in singles victories.

tough enough mentally. "That's what turned us around at Baylor," she said. "We've played some tough teams this spring, but I told our players that the only difference in them and us was their mental toughness. They don't putt any better than we do. They don't drive the ball any better. They just think tougher.'

Brilliant and Booth are coaching young, inexperienced golfers this season. "We have one freshman, three sophomores and one senior on the squad," Brilliant said. "We're trying to find an identity - some tradition."

At the conference tournament, Brilliant will play Maggie Murphy No. 1, Successory Chanachai at "Mint" "Pang" No. 2, Apinporn "Mint" Swaschuto at No. 3, Buz Bowerman-Ritchie at No. 4 and Ashley Elias at No. 5.

Aggie Women's Golf Coach Paul Brilliant and Maggie Murphy, his No. 1 player, work on the putting green.

NIKI RHYNES I The Las Cruces Bulletin

To acquaint his team with the Wolf Run golf course, Brilliant asked Scott Lieberwirth, the Ag men's golf coach, to review the layout, hole by hole. Lieberwirth's team has played Wolf Run before.

"The gals wrote down what he said," Brilliant explained. "What to expect on each hole, the fairways and the slant of the greens, etc. It's valuable information. It ought to help us."

Covarrubia

an outstanding job coaching Kristi Covarrubia. He often would have them step in and provide her with more of the one-on-one instruction.

"I owe a lot to them," he said. "I try to let the other coaches coach her more. If I say something, she'll respect it, but if they tell her, it reinforces it.

"I had to learn how to separate the player from the daughter," he explained.
"On the softball field, she's another player. But at home, she's my kid."

The irony in all of this is that Kristi

Covarrubia probably needs less coaching than most players.

"She's self-motivated and pushes herself," said Bobby Covarrubia. "She's gifted with a great arm, but she's a great kid with a great work ethic, and she's a good student.'

Kristi Covarrubia has started for Oñate since her freshman year, but missed her sophomore year after suffering a knee injury playing basketball. A polished fielder and reliable hitter, she has been a consistent force for a strong OHS softball program under the direction of her father.

She plays shortstop and loves it because "it puts you in position to have to know everything that's going on and be smart about what you're doing."
Wise beyond her years, her transition to becoming a leader for the team was smooth and effortless. As a senior, she has welcomed the responsibility of setting an example for her more inexperienced teammates. The young Knights have put together another good season, but are chasing Las Cruces High and Mayfield in the district standings.

"You always have to have the work ethic," she said. "We have to keep our confidence up and get the young players to understand that the level of play is different in high school.'

Kristi Covarrubia also offers one more piece of wisdom.

you don't have fun and enjoy doing what you're doing, then you're not going to succeed."

Step into this year's LCHBA Showcase 26 entries make up this year's diverse roster of homes

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

As Las Cruces grows, the city's builders, architects and designers work to shape the face of the community, creating an image imbedded in the minds of residents and visitors.

Every spring, along with the flowers, the winds and the warm-weather festivities, the Spring Showcase of Homes offers those in residential construction a chance to expand that image – a chance to bring the latest ideas in residential design to the forefront.

In its 36th year, the Las Cruces Home Builders Association Spring Showcase of Homes will take place over the weekends of April 24, 25 and 26 and May 1, 2 and 3, and will feature 28 homes from all over Las Cruces.

Though the market has seen better days and the number of homes in the showcase has dwindled from last year's 53 entries, for David Roewe, LCHBA executive officer, there is no better time to buy a home or support the city's building industry. From cabinetmakers to sheet rockers and interior designers, Roewe said everyone can benefit from the popular event.

"Our purpose is to promote and protect the building industry, and that is the point of showcase," he said.

Whether coming to Las Cruces for the first time, looking to relocate to one of the area's newest subdivisions or planning a massive remodel, those in the industry say there is no better place to explore housing options than at the showcase.

"Ninety percent of the people that come to the show will come just to get remodeling ideas. Out of 1,000 people, 900 are thinking, 'I need a new kitchen,'" Roewe said. "If it does nothing more, I hope it sparks people's imagination."

With prices ranging from $100,000 to $1.5 million, the showcase offers something for everyone for everyone.

"We have a great array of homes out there, price wise," Roewe said. "Everything from the beginner homes to homes for people looking for something a bit more special."

With all the incentives offered today, Roewe can't say enough about the advantages for first-time homebuyers and said the showcase presents the perfect opportunity.

"I'd love to see a bunch of people buy houses," he said. "I want people to start thinking about how they can afford to buy their first home. The magic is here right now, and I have just been beating the drum on the first-time homebuyers."

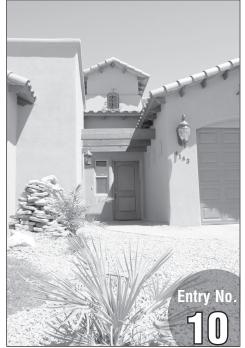

With the LCHBA celebrating its 50th anniversary in 2009, this showcase is especially commemorative for Beth Marr of Steinborn GMAC Real Estate, who is serving as chair of this year's event.

"These homes are constructed by the finest builders in Las Cruces," Marr said. "It's the best that the builders have to offer."

The showcase is not only a local attraction, Marr said, but also brings in people from across the country looking for a quality, affordable place to live.

"In the past, we have seen people from Arizona, Nevada, California. It's an event that is looked forward to each year," she said. "You see such a variety of people from all over the country. It's becoming a regional and national event."

For attendees, the showcase also offers a chance to visit with local builders and see some of the area's newest subdivision. Builder JB Stearns, president of the LCHBA and owner of JB Stearns Custom Homes, said interacting with participants is the best part.

"I talk shop with people," he said.
"I always hope I am educating people, whether they work with me or not."

After showcase, each home can be viewed through its own website and will serve as a concrete example of what a builder can accomplish.

"If you're selling something, you have to have something on the ground to show people what you can do," Roewe said. "Not everyone might like that house, but if they like the quality and what they see, then they are going to have that person build a house for them somewhere else."

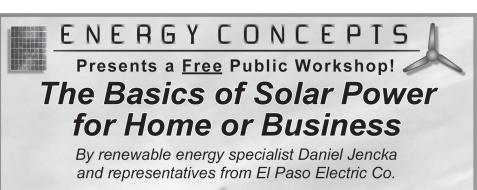

Official Showcase of Homes magazines will be available Monday, April 20, and the event makes for "a great family weekend that doesn't cost you anything," Stearns said. Each home has a designated showcase flag and their will be markers throughout the route taking attendees in the right direction.

"Grab a magazine, and the map will take you on a route from one to 28," Marr said.

Senate Bill 291 dealing with amendments to the New Mexico Sustain-able Building Tax Credit (NMSBTC) was passed during the recent legislative session in Santa Fe and signed into law by Gov. Bill Richardson Wednesday, April 1.

New Mexico's tax credit to purchasers of qualified green and efficient homes is administered by the N.M. Energy, Minerals and Natural Resource Department, and is considered one of the most generous tax credits in the nation. The recent changes included in SB 291 enhance incentives for builders and homebuyers by streamlining the certification process and increasing the available tax credits.

New residential construction qualifies for the Sustainable Building Tax Credit through certification within either of two approved green-building programs. The first is Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) for Homes, a national green building program administered by the U.S. Green Build Council. The credits earned can second certifying program is BGNM, which is now also be taken administered by the Home Builders Association of Central New Mexico.

Qualification requirements of projects under the LEED program are unchanged. BĞNM has now adopted use of the new American National Standards Institute accredited National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) 2008 National Green Building Standard. Although similar to the preceding NAHB Model Green Home Building Guidelines, an additional qualifying level has been added (Emerald) and the NMSBTC now allows for higher dollar incentives using the new standard, up from the previous gold level minimum of $4.50. The state tax credit dollar amounts available for projects certified under the new NAHB Green Building Standard are now equal to those using the LEED for Homes program.

Updated provisions for field verification within each of the programs are designed to reduce the amount of documentation required by builders and homebuyers. The state tax credits earned can also now be taken by the builder of the home or transferred to the buyer. Not-for-profit builders participating in these projects can benefit from the tax credits by using state allowed tax credit for cash transfers. Individuals not able to use the total state tax credits earned can also exchange credits for cash value.

The tax credit dollar amounts are significant, and in most cases well exceed the costs required to incorporate green and efficient features to participate in the programs. A 3,000-square-foot Silver certified home (LEED or BGNM) will earn $12,500 in state tax credits. A similar-sized home qualifying at the highest program levels, Platinum or Emerald, will earn $22,450.

Manufactured homes and commercial construction projects continue to qualify for New Mexico Sustainable Building Tax Credits under provisions of the recent

RE/MAX Classic grows with the city

D. Elaine Johnson wins 2008 NM Owner/Broker of the Year

By BETHANY CONWAY

After spending eight years at 1005 S. Telshor Blvd., D. Elaine Johnson and her company, RE/MAX Classic Realty, can be found in new digs this month at 2805 Doral Court.

Serving buyers and sellers since January of 1995, the move marks the fourth time Johnson has had to find a new location to accommodate her growing team of Realtors.

Initially housed in the former Matrix Capital Bank building, Johnson created RE/MAX Classic Realty with a team of only two agents. Today, that number has reached 47 and her firm is the second largest in the city of Las Cruces.

"One day I said to myself, 'I think I can do this," Johnson recalled when asked why she started her real estate firm. "I did not have a clue how to do it. I had to learn a lot and learn it quick."

Recently inducted into the RE/MAX Hall of Fame and the recipient of RE/MAX International's 2008 Owner/Broker of the Year award for the state of New Mexico, it's safe to say Johnson found her way.

The daugnter of a military man and wife of an engineer, Johnson moved from place to place for the majority of her life. That is, until she returned to Las Cruces after living for more than a year on the South Pacific's Quadulan Islands.

"Everywhere we moved I was always looking for a house, and I was always helping the Realtor find my house," she said. "I found out that I could do a really good job for myself, so I thought maybe people would enjoy that."

She chose the RE/MAX franchise for its

She chose the RE/MAX franchise for its reputation, philosophy of ownership and educational benefits.

"It was hard getting it off the ground because RE/MAX is not for everybody," she said. "We are the only franchise that has had the same owners since the very beginning. We are in 70 countries, so we are global, which I think is important for Las Cruces because with the university, White Sands, Holloman and Fort Bliss, we are getting people globally.

"Wherever you have been in the world, more than likely you've seen a RE/MAX sign."

With their own satellite, which allows them to offer training seven to eight hours a day via their TV production studio and online, RE/MAX agents are able to stay on top of their game.

"They put out a three month TV guide, so you know what is laid out for three months and you can pick and choose what you want to learn," she said. "Plus, we do a lot of in-house training."

By asking her agents what they are interested in learning about, from pho-

"I am still very passionate about this business. I wake up every morning thinking, 'What am I going to do for my people today? How am I going to help them?" she said. "I love the management side of it. I have 47 people doing business, and all 47 ways are right. I empower them to run their business.'

Most recently, she helped her team of Realtors by offering up something that is essential in any workplace – space. "We remolded that place (1005 S. Telshor Blvd.). We added onto it. We had them stacked in there in such small spaces, and they were such great sports," she said.

When the time came and Johnson knew they needed to try something new, she said the market was right to purchase the building on Doral Court. In the new building, they not only have more space, but they have room to grow.

"I have shared spaces, private space, exclusive spaces it just depends on what fits that person," she said. "I have spaces for 12 to 15 people more if we grow, and since we have grown every where we have gone, we expect that. I am comfortable filling up this building."

After almost 15 years as owner/broker, Johnson said no matter what challenges come her way, "I am all in."

"For me, you still have to love it so much that no obstacle upsets you. A problem is an opportunity to find a solution," she said, adding that her team of Realtors must have the same mentality.

"It's not for the faint of heart. Not in this market," she said. "Everybody wants to be in real estate when the market is good, and nobody wants to be in it, except for the diehards, when the market is bad. If you're not in it for the right reasons, you're not going to make it."

Serving on the board of both the Las Cruces Association of Realtors and the Multiple Listings and Information Service, Johnson knows what it takes.

"This is a great business. It's very challenging, but it is also very rewarding, and the biggest reward is the people you meet.

Gabby Estrada, secretary at RE/MAX Classic Realty, enjoys the ample space in their new office at 2805 Doral Court.

Inside the 'Platinum Trailblazer'

Don and Beatriz Rudisill reach for the highest level of LEED certification

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Editor's note: This is the first article in a series following the construction of Las Cruces' first Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Platinum Certified home. Though owners Don and Beatriz Rudisill will not know whether they achieve this certification until their home is complete, sharing their story will help others on their journey to becoming green.

For Don Rudisill, the story behind his home at 4367 Isleta Court is in many ways similar to that of "the first penguin"

Reaching for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Platinum Certification – never before achieved in southern New Mexico – he is a lot like the first penguin that takes the plunge into cold, unfamiliar territory.

"When you watch a film about penguins, most people notice how they bunch up on the edge of the ice. No penguin wants to be the first to jump into the water where unknown dangers may lurk," Rudisill said, referencing an excerpt from "The Last Lecture" by Randy Pausch. "The same happens with building something new. Many people like the idea of a green home — improved energy efficiency, a healthier home and improved utilization of the planet's resources all sound good — but there are many unknowns."

After two years of intense planning and overcoming many obstacles, Rudisill is blazing a trail for others to follow – a green trail. He will accomplish this with the help of builder Jim Graham of Sun and Earth Inc., who has 30 years of green-building experience.

"It a very ambitious project," said Miles Dyson, owner of Inspection Connection LC and the only certified Home Energy Rater in Las Cruces. "He has it very well laid out." Dyson, southern New Mexico's go-to guy when it comes to achieving LEED and Build Green New Mexico (BGNM)

Dyson, southern New Mexico's go-to guy when it comes to achieving LEED and Build Green New Mexico (BGNM) certification, will inspect the home throughout the entire process. Credit categories for LEED homes include Sustainable Sights, Locations and Linkages, Indoor Environmental Quality, Water Efficiency, Materials and Resources, Awareness and Education and Energy and Atmosphere.

The trail began when Don and Beatriz Rudisill sat

The trail began when Don and Beatriz Rudisill sat down to create the home's footprint. The unusual floor plan is partially the result of the couple trying to meet the LEED requirements for passive-solar design. According to the LEED program, the maximum conditioned square footage for a three-bedroom house should be 1,900 square feet. By going above this amount, the couple loses points. By going below it, they gain points.

By going below it, they gain points.

"We are trying to stay under 1,690 square feet, which gives us three points (toward LEED Platinum Certification)," he said. By creating a storage closet for seasonal clothing near the master bedroom and a sunroom on the southeast side of the house – two areas that will not be heated or air-conditioned – they will be able to add extra space not counted toward their conditioned square footage.

"This is going to generate a lot of solar heat in the winter," Rudisill said of the sunroom. "During the summer months, we intend just to leave the windows open, and this will be a bonus room. Jim (Graham) is going to put a fan in here, because in the winter it will produce surplus heat that we will be able to blow into the house." Solar hot water panels hidden behind the parapet over the garge roof will provide additional heat.

Another way they were able to gain points and energy efficiency was by keeping all of the hot water within a 20-foot radius. For this reason, the kitchen and bathrooms are all "clustered within the center of the house."

"If you look at the plans, we had this 20-foot circle drawn, and that created another requirement for the floor plan," Rudisill said.

When it came to the slab itself, they used 30 percent fly ash – a waste product from coal after it has been burned in a boiler.

Next on the list was the framing, which was done using finger-jointed lumber.

"You take scraps that are too small to be used and make a usable piece out of it," Rudisill said.

When it came to placing the Marvin windows with ULTREX fiberglass frames, Rudisill also had to be very particular in order to gain LEED points.

"I put a lot of time into trying to capture the views because we are given glass budgets. You have to keep the glass within a certain percentage," he said.

One of the most important attributes of the home are the

One of the most important attributes of the home are the Structured Insulated Panels manufactured by KC Panels of Animas, N.M, which will make up its 4-inch thick walls. Graham said this is the first time he has used the insulated panels. The thermal resistance, or R-value of the panels, is so high they perform almost twice as well as standard 6-inch walls and result in more than 30 square feet of space being shifted from the walls to the available living space.

They are held together by polyurethane foam.

"The foam creates a complete seal around the building," Rudisill said. "So again, through using this one product, we are saving space and improving energy efficiency. The air-tight seal contributes to improved indoor-air quality, and the foam has a class-one fire rating, improving the safety of the home."

From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, April 18, and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, April 19, during the Guild of the Las Cruces Symphony Association's green home tour, titled The Greening of Las Cruces, residents of Las Cruces will get a chance to visit the construction site and view these panels up close.

"I have an interest in trying to get the information out there about what really goes into a well-built house," said Rudisill, adding that by educating the public he is actually gaining more points toward the home's certification.

Though the Rudisills are hopeful they will reach their goal, they won't know if LEED Platinum Certification will be achieved until the project is complete.

be achieved until the project is complete.

"Being the first to attempt the Platinum level means that we have to be the first in the area to earn certain points. One of the areas that we are earning points is by working as an integrated design team. We have been working very hard as a team with Miles, Jim and several subcontractors all putting their heads together to help ensure that the rating is achieved."

Assuming they achieve the platinum rating, the Rudis-

Assuming they achieve the platinum rating, the Rudisills will receive $9.50 per square foot in tax credits – close to $15,000.

Grilling veggies is easier than ever with this perforated pan

By BETHANY CONWAY

Here's another interesting gadget from the grilling isle.

Popular for centuries, the wok, previously featured in the Bulletin's Homes & Southwest Living section, is a popular addition to any kitchen because of its large, bowl-like shape. Because of their depth, woks enable a chef to toss veggies and meats around vigorously without the food to spilling over on the stovetop.

Though chefs aren't really worried about making a mess when cooking outdoors, the grilling wok works on the same principles but lets one add that grill flavor.

What is it?

The grilling wok makes it easy to enjoy some of those favorite Asian dishes at an outdoor picnic or barbecue. It is peforated, almost like a colander, which allows the heat to cook the veggies or meats uniformly.

Most outdoor woks are designed in a 12inch square shape and made of stainless steel, though they also come in cast iron. Flared sides make it easy to toss food while grilling.

How does it work?

Using a grilling wok is not much different than using a regular wok. Simply toss the desired meats and veggies in a bowl, sprinkle with a bit of olive oil, season, transfer to the wok and place on the grill. Toss regularly.

Where can it be found?

Like all other grilling items, this time of year the grilling wok can be found in abundance at kitchen supply and grocery stores.

How much does it cost?

Coming in everything from stainless steel to cast iron, this gadget ranges in price from $14.99 to $50.

Step aside fat cats

Kitty Litter wisks away odors and more

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

It might be hard to believe that cat owners once used sand, dirt and ash in their litter boxes, but the neighbor of Kitty Litter inventor Ed Lowe was one of them. Her struggle with constant paw prints and dirt on her floors convinced Lowe that there must be something better, and he changed the lives of cat lovers everywhere.

Lowe, whose family owned an industrial absorbents company, convinced her to use clay. The first person to use this material in litter boxes, Lowe dubbed his 1940s invention Kitty Litter. The name is now a general term for this absorbent product.

Though cat litter may bring to mind thoughts of feline clean up, there are surprising ways this clay-based item can be used around the house. Though cats can go through a bag in no time, keep a fresh stash set aside for these unusual uses.

1. Deodorize smelly objects: Cat litter can take the place of baking soda in many instances. Put it in a small container in the fridge to get rid of unwanted odor. Sprinkle a bit on stinky diaper pails and trash cans. Place a cup of cat litter inside knee-high panty hose and place it in a stinky shoe overnight. It can also be used to get the smell of cigarette smoke out of old books.

2. Stop smells before they start: When it's time to put away seasonal items, such as clothing, outdoor gear or linens, pack them away with a tied off sock full of cat litter. When it's time to pull these items out again, they will smell nice and fresh.

3. Absorb liquids: For years, mechanics have used cat litter to clean up oil spills in the garage. A 10-pound sack of litter will absorb more than a gallon of liquid, including paint and gasoline. Next time you have an ugly spill try covering it with Kitty Litter and then sweeping up the mess.

4. Make a clay mask: Some may see this suggestion as a bit twisted, but all-natural, 100-percent clay, scent-free cat litter can be used to make a detoxifying mask. For those who are brave enough, mix three tablespoons of clean cat litter with about three tablespoons of water and mix with a mortar and pestle. Apply it to your face, wait 10 minutes, then wash clean.

5. Keep out of a sticky situation: Though this tip is mainly for those living in colder, snowy climates, cat litter has long been used for added traction when a vehicle is stuck in the dirt, snow, ice or mud. Keep a bag of it in the trunk so you're always prepared.

6. Prevent grease fires: To keep the fire in an outdoor grill from flaming up, put a layer of litter on the bottom to prevent a grease inferno.

Around-the-house item:

7. Secure flower arrangements: To anchor dried or artificial flowers, put cat litter in a vase and then insert the stems.

8. Grow healthy plants: Use equal parts all-natural cat litter and soil to plant flowers, vegetables and shrubs. It will keep the soil evenly moist, improves root development and is safe for any kind of plant.

9. Prevent falls: Kitty litter also can be used in place of salt when it comes to treating icy sidewalks. Simply sprinkle some kitty litter on icy areas and guests and family will be sure footed as they approach your residence.

10. Control algae: A type of clay called bentonite, which is found in most cat litters, is the main material used for clearing up algae in ponds. Those who have a pond full of koi can use cat litter to control and prevent algae. Use about one pound of all-natural cat litter for every 2,000 gallons of circulating pond water. The water will turn muddy at first but will clear up in about 24 hours.

Multi-faceted millipedes

This lengthy creature may surprise you

The slow-moving millipede seems to harbor as many surprises as it has legs. It's a pet, the star of a game, larger than expected and sometimes beautifully colored, to name a few points of astonishment.

The millipede never struck me as especially popular with humans or glamorous, but people welcome this creature as a pet. It's also the star of a Nintendo game released in 1988 that's simply called Millipede.

Giant African millipedes are among the varieties kept as pets and reach an adult length of 10 inches – compare that to the most common millipedes that range from a half an inch to an inch-and-a-half. The African millipede can live up to 10 years. Don't break out that crystal-studded collar and leash, though. They're kept in aquariums and fed fruits and vegetables.

The millipede is clearly not always the little bug I think of, curled into a tight little ball as it protects itself in the moist soil of my garden. Large or small, millipedes have other protection mechanisms. They secrete a caustic compound that can irritate the skin and in some instances leave a stain. Primarily nocturnal, they like moist areas and usually are herbivores.

Millipedes are essentially harmless and aren't damaging when they get in the house. They can be controlled by restricting the moisture and dryness in the home and garden. In the garden, don't let fruits and vegetables rot on the ground.

Millipede varieties can also be beautiful, and that's the case in New Mexico. Desert millipede's can grow to 8 inches and their colors remind me of hot sun on red rock. In California, there's a nocturnal millipede that glows in the dark, according to the American Tarantula Society.

The millipede is often confused with the centipede, whose name would indicate it has 100 legs, but they are different. Milli-pedes generally don't try to bite, centipedes do. Millipedes will curl up when threatened, centipedes will not. Millipedes are slow moving; centipedes are quite speedy.

Did I say as many surprises as millipede legs? Well, I'm about to let you down twice. Despite its name, the "thousand legger" doesn't have a thousand legs – at the very best, it has 750, but more commonly 40 to 400. So if you're trying to calculate how I equated legs and surprises, you can stop. Chalk it up to millipede math.

A look at taste-bud teasing chile

Celebrate Earth Day with down-to-Earth dishes

Earth Day is celebrated annually on April 22. I can't think of a better way to commemorate the occasion than with dishes prepared with fresh or dried red chile – the ripe form of green chile known for its earthy undertones.

My favorite fresh reds (rojos frescos) are jalapeño and serrano; dried (rojos secos) de árbol, chiletepín, chile piquin, cayenne, chipotle (dried, smoked jalapeño) and chile colorado (also known as New Mexico red). The dried variety can be purchased whole, crushed, flaked or powdered. Grocery stores stock fresh chile in the produce section, but look for dried in the Mexican food aisle.

According to Mark Miller, author of the time-honored pepper guide, "The Great Chile Book," certain reds taste best when paired with particular dishes. Some reds deliver a sweeter and/or smoky flavor, so keep this in mind when selecting a pepper for a recipe. The number (1 to 10) assigned to each pepper designates its heat level. Ten is taste bud hot! The letter "S" means "sweet heat" and "Y," smoky.

Avocado Vichyssoise

Avocados are a semitropical fruit native to Mexico and Central America. Now grown in California for export, the Hass variety accounts for up to 85 percent of the more than 80 varieties known.

Rich in dietary fiber, vitamins K, A, B6, C and folate, avocados also provide unsaturated fats containing oleic acid. The fats in avocados lend their creamy texture to this soup and to other dishes such as sauces and dips.

2 large ripe avocados

Juice of 1 lemon

4 cups mushroom broth (see below)

Vegetable stock or water

1 potato, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes

Sea salt and freshly ground pepper

1/4 teaspoon hot pepper flakes

1/2 cup rice milk or soy milk 4 tablespoons chopped fresh chives

or basil pesto, optional

Peel, pit and slice avocados in half and place in a bowl with lemon juice.

In a saucepan, bring broth to a gentle boil over high heat. Add avocados with lemon juice and potato. Season to taste with salt, pepper and hot pepper flakes. Cover, reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes or until potato is soft. Let cool.

In a blender, combine rice milk and avocado mixture and blend until smooth. Transfer to a bowl, cover and refrigerate for 1 hour or until well chilled. Ladle into soup bowls and garnish with chopped chives. Serves 4.
Tip: Avocado Vichyssoise may be made up to two days in advance and stored, tightly covered, in the refrigerator.

Mushroom Broth

This broth is brown, rich and full of earthy mushroom essence

8 ounces shiitake mushrooms

1 leek, white and light green parts, sliced cup onion, chopped

1 clove garlic, finely chopped

2 tablespoons olive oil

3 cups vegetable stock or water, divided

1 teaspoon pure maple syrup

1 teaspoon salt

Trim and discard mushroom stems. Slice caps and set aside.

In a large saucepan over medium heat, combine leek, onion, garlic and oil. Cook, stirring frequently, for about 10 minutes or until very soft. Add mushrooms and 1/2 cup of the stock. Bring to a gentle boil. Cover, reduce heat and simmer

Add remaining 2-1/2 cups of the stock, maple syrup and salt. Bring to a boil. Cover, reduce heat and simmer for 45 minutes.

For a clear broth, strain through a sieve and discard vegetables. For a thicker soup, using a slotted spoon, lift out half the vegetables and transfer to a food processor or blender. Process for 30 seconds or until smooth. Pour into a bowl. Repeat with remaining vegetables. Keep remaining broth hot in the saucepan over low heat. Return purée to the saucepan and stir into the liquids.

Store stock in clean jars with lids in the refrigerator for up to two days or freeze in 2- or 4-cup portions in freezer containers for up to two months. Serves 4.

Note: Avocado Vichyssoise and mushroom recipes are from "The Vegan Cook's Bible" by Robert Rose.

1 teaspoon garlic, minced Pinches dried sage, dried thyme, cumin and ground ginger (or adjust to taste)

2 red jalapeños

Salt and pepper to taste

1/4 cup (or less) vegetable broth

4 ounces fresh Parmesan cheese, thinly shredded

Prepare pasta according to directions. In a heavy skillet, add about 1/4 cup of broth and a splash or two of olive oil. (Squash produces its own juice so be careful to limit the amount of broth.)

Add spices and gently simmer uncovered over low heat for 5 minutes. Add vegetables and continue cooking until squash is tender but not mushy. Do not overcook.

Toss veggies with pasta. Scatter with a handful of cheese. Sprinkle with cilantro and serve. Serves 4 as a main meal or 6 as a side.

Taters with Rojos Secos

12-14 small new potatoes, halved

1/2 teaspoon white cumin seeds

1/2 teaspoon fennel seeds

1/2 teaspoon coriander seeds, crushed

1 teaspoon salt 1 onion, sliced

3 fresh red chiles, chopped tablespoon fresh cilantro, chopped, plus extra to garnish

Cook the potatoes in boiling, salted water until al dente. Remove from the heat and drain the water. Set aside until needed.

In a deep-frying pan, heat the oil over a mediumhigh heat, and then reduce the heat to medium. Add the crushed chiles, cumin, fennel and coriander seeds, and salt and fry, stirring for 30 to 40 seconds.

Add the sliced onion and fry until golden brown.

Then add the potatoes, red chiles and cilantro. Stir well. Reduce the heat to very low. Cover and cook for 5 to 7

Local leak expert says, 'Every drop counts'

American Leak Detection recognizes Earth Day by offering ways to conserve

Some people may recycle bottles and cans, others might volunteer to help clean littered parks, and still others will decide to use biodegradable products in recognition of Earth Day on Wednesday, April 22. But, one local leak detection expert is letting community residents know they can also join the "green" bandwagon and make a huge impact on helping the environment – right in their homes

"You don't even have to take one step outside your front door to make a difference. All you have to do is be mindful of the way you're using your water," said John Seaver, owner of American Leak Detection Serving New Mexico. "It takes small steps to conserve water. Our mission this Earth Day is to educate consumers on how they can take steps to take better care of Mother Earth."

Earth Day was first celebrated in 1970 when 20 million Americans championed for a healthy, sustainable environment. Earth Day is now celebrated every year by environmentalists, recognized in schools by both teachers and students and is a nationwide effort where people come together for a common cause. Seaver said American Leak Detection Serving New Mexico is proud to do its part in the campaign.

uses over 100 gallons of water each day. Many times, people waste water without even realizing it," Seaver said. "Our goal this Earth Day is to provide simple advice to area residents that will lessen the amount of water they use in the local community."

The following are five water conservation tips from American Leak Detection:

- 1. Think smart when using water appliances. With dishwashers and laundry machines, homeowners can save gallons of water simply by waiting to use them until they have a full load. In fact, a dishwasher conserves more water than hand-washing dishes. According to the American Water Works Association, an automatic dishwasher uses 9 to 12 gallons of water, while hand washing can use up to 20 gallons.
- 2. Refrigerate drinking water. Avoid running the faucet to get a cool glass of drinking water. Let the refrigerator do the work by storing a container of water in there to keep drinking water cold.
- 3. Conserve water when washing produce. Use a bowl of water to clean fruits and vegetables instead of running water over them. In addition, always think of ways to reuse water. For example, the water from washing produce can be reused for watering houseplants or the garden.
- 4. Avoid unnecessary flushes. An average family of four uses almost 900 gallons of water per week, just by flushing the toilet. Keep children from repeatedly flushing the toilet for fun, and dispose of hand tissues, insects and other wastes in the trash, not the toilet.

5. Stop that annoying drip. A leaky faucet can waste 100 gallons of water each day, Seaver said. That's why it's important to make sure to fix leaks in the kitchen and bathroom. If you detect a leak, call a professional right away. The sooner it is fixed the less water will be wasted.

American Leak Detection Serving New Mexico utilizes specially trained experts and quality equipment to detect leaks before they require major home repairs. The company implements its own proprietary methods and technology to ensure the most non-invasive leak detection possible. Since 1974, the company has been in the forefront of water conservation, Seaver said, and has dedicated itself to resource protection.

"Every drop counts," Seaver said. "Water is a precious resource, and we really should take steps to make sure we're using it more efficiently. We hope these tips help those in the Las Cruces area stay mindful of the ways they use water in their homes. Our recommendation is that they try to do one thing each day that will result in saving water. The more often they look for ways to conserve, the easier it will become routine."
