Bowling alley horror examined

Film to debut on 20th anniversary of deadly robbery

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Almost two decades have gone by since a Saturday morning changed Las Cruces forever, but a filmmaker is hoping a new documentary about the horrific crime will help bring new clues to solve the mystery behind what is known as the Bowling Alley

Charlie Minn's "A Nightmare in Las Cruces" revisits the events of Feb. 10, 1990, in which two unknown men in an apparent robbery of the Las Cruces Bowling Alley shot seven people "execution style," resulting in four deaths and a scene of almost unimaginable carnage.

Steven Teran, an employee of the bowling alley who was pursuing a career in law enforcement, arrived at 8 a.m. with his two girls, 2-year-old Valerie and 6-year-old Paula Holguin. His plans were to drop off the girls at the bowling alley's day care center under the supervision of 15-yearold Melissa Repass, daughter of the bowling alley's manager Stephanie Senac, and 13-year-old Amy Houser, Melissa's friend.

Senac, the teen girls and cook Ida Holguin already were are the bowling alley, but Teran and his

President must first prepare for budget battles

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Barbara Couture, New Mexico State University's new president, hasn't had the time to unpack some 470 boxes of possessions she and her husband Paul brought with them from Nebraska since they arrived here last week.

During that first week, Couture said she has been working long hours and meeting many people as she prepares for the start of not only the spring semester of classes that started Thursday, Jan. 14, but also the 30-day legislative session starting Tuesday, Jan. 19, that has state government facing a huge budget shortfall.

Preparing for the legislative session has been "Job 1," Couture said at a press conference Friday, Jan. 8. Couture, formerly the senior vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and chief academic officer at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, was selected by NMSU regents in November 2000 following a patiental ground and in 2009 following a national search and is the university's first woman president not serving on an interim basis.

Normally, new NMSU presidents begin their jobs with a series of briefings and vistality of the series of briefings. its to the university colleges, labs, facilities, branch campuses and research centers scattered across the state. That will have to come later as Couture arrived just as lawmakers and Gov. Bill Richardson were releasing preliminary budget figures and funding options – none of which paint an encouraging picture.

Though she acknowledges that New Budget crisis colors governor's final act

Richardson's legacy hinges on session's solvency solution

By Todd G. Dickson

Editor's note: Leading up to Las Cruces Day in Santa Fe on Feb. 1, the Bulletin will be running a series of stories about issue or concerns relating to the 30-day legislative session that begins Jan. 19. Many of these stories also will be found in the Bulletin's Legislative Guide that will be distributed to lawmakers and key government officials.

Bill Richardson is facing the final regular legislative session with probably the most daunting challenge he's faced during his historical two terms as governor.

He is calling on lawmakers to cut spending and to consider tax increases he hopes will only be temporary in a shaky economy still trying to regain its legs.

Though the primary focus of the session is the budget, there no doubt will be time spent reviewing his two terms. More than any other governor before, Richardson has attempted to bring New Mexico into the modern economy and his influence has reached far beyond the state through his presidential run and diplomatic missions.

Richardson's philosophy could be found in his statement at last summer's groundbreaking for Spaceport America. The bold investment of $198 million into building a spaceport for the emerging commercial space industry showed the world, he said, that New Mexico isn't afraid to think big.

Even during the 2002 campaign for governor, Richardson couldn't simply run for office. He had to break a world record while doing it by shaking 13,392 hands in an eight-hour period – beating the record that former president Theodore Roosevelt set on inauguration day in 1907.

Like Roosevelt, he then led a charge on a multitude of fronts in a spirit of unbridled optimism and unchecked hubris. His office churned out what felt like daily initiatives – DWI reforms, tax cuts, tax credits to attract the film industry, creating a new approach to funding road projects - Governor Richardson's Investment

Holiday closings set

City, county and public schools observe King holiday Monday

Most City of Las Cruces offices will be closed in observance of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday on Monday, Jan. 18. Emergency services such as fire and police will not be affected.

The following are schedules for city offices and services during the holiday:

- Transit administrative offices and Rideshare offices will be closed; however, there will be regular bus service and Dial-a-Ride service.
- Solid Waste offices are closed; however, normal trash pickup will continue.
- pickup will continue.The Foothills Landfill will remain open for normal business hours.
- The regular City Council meeting will be held at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19, in City Council Chambers.
- Most Doña Ana County offices will be closed. The administrative offices of the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Department will be closed, but law enforcement in the field will not be affected.
- All Las Cruces Public Schools and the LCPS Administration Building will be closed.

School bond election voting under way

Absentee and in-person voting has begun and will continue through Friday, Jan. 29, for Las Cruces Public Schools' $65 million school bond issue and two-mill levy election.

Registered voters may contact the Doña Ana County Clerk's office at 647-7428 to receive an absentee ballot.

In-person voting is at the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. Voters must be at least 18 years old and residents of the school district. Jan. 5 was the last day to register to be eligible to vote in the election.

Polls will open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on election day Tuesday, Feb. 2, at 28 consolidated precincts throughout the school district. Visit www. lcps.k12.nm.us for a list of voting locations.

Passing the bond and mill levy will not raise the local property tax rate. The LCPS portion of the local property tax rate will remain at $9.807 per $1,000 of taxable property value if the bond is passed.

Funds generated by the bond issue and mill levy will benefit all LCPS schools. Those funds will improve student and staff safety, provide more and better technology, fund major construction and renovation projects (including $10 million for Las Cruces High School), provide new and improved athletic facilities, construct new schools and help the school district plan for long-range growth.

Bond issues passed since 1991 have generated more than $105 million to build new schools and to renovate, expand and improve classrooms and libraries throughout the district.

For more information on voting, contact the Doña Ana County Elections Bureau at 647-7428 or bobba@ donaanacounty.org. For more information on the bond issue and mill levy, contact LCPS Communications Director Jo Galván at 527-5811 or jgalvan@lcps.k12.nm.us.

Vote 'yes'

School bond issue needs your support to ensure minimal local needs are met

By David McCollum

McCOLLUM

Our local Las Cruces Public Schools district once again needs your vote to approve the proposed bond issue and renew the current capital improvements

There is nothing fancy in the two issues for which the voting date is Tuesday, Feb. 2. The two most important considerations for voters should be that the monies being generated from this vote are for basic needs for our expanding public school facilities, and the fact that voters' approval of the bond/levy WILL NOT GENERATE A TAX RATE INCREASE.

Among the projects listed on the proposed $65 million bond issue are major renovation and construction for several schools, including Loma Heights Elemtary, University Hills Elementary, Picacho Middle, Las Cruces High and Mayfield High, along with funding for the final phase of the new high school. Some of these projects may be available for matching state funds, assuming the bond issue is approved.

Other key projects include new roofs at Fairacres, MacArthur, Mesilla Park and Oñate High and heating and cooling (HVAC) replacements at Alameda, Jornada, White Sands and Picacho Middle schools. Also included in the bond are kitchen updates at Conlee and Vista middle schools, remodeling the nurse area at Jornada and refurbishing restrooms at Conlee, Doña Ana, East Picacho, Highland, Picacho, Sierra and Vista middle schools.

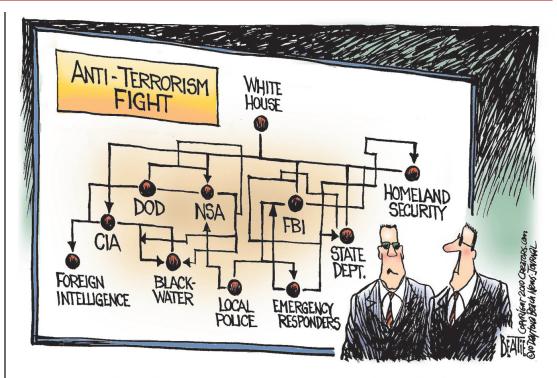

Additionally, 12.3 percent of the bond issue is wisely planned to be set aside as a contingency of all project and for potential property acquisition for future schools sites.

If any voters have concerns about how wisely our school district is handling their money, I was impressed to hear comments made at a luncheon last week by state Sen. John Arthur Smith from Deming. Smith is the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and is known for his conservative approach to budgeting and tax dollar expenditures. In his presentation, Smith touted our local LCPS Superintendent Stan Rounds as being "possibly the best" public school leader in the state when it comes to budgeting and managing his district's financial resources.

Smith also warned the audience that Las Cruces Public Schools, because of the projected growth of the region, will face some of the biggest funding issues in the state. Smith encouraged business and community leaders to become more active and visible to our state legislators, especially this year when our state currently faces a potential shortfall of around $800 million. When state dollars are this tight, there is a real potential that, unless we make lots of noise from southwest New Mexico, there won't be much money to go around after most of it is divvied up between Albuquerque and Santa Fe.

As for the critical school bond and levy issues, early voting is now open at the Doña Ana County offices. Voters can verify their voting locations in upcoming editions of the Bulletin or by visiting www.lcps. k12.nm.us.

In the past 55 years our community has supported every school bond issue. Never have we had a vote as important to our overall community as this. Please take the time to get out and vote "Yes" on Feb. 2.

"The problem isn't connecting the dots . . . the problem is, this is how the dots are connected."

A Christian nation?

Michael Swickard's article correctly implies that we are in danger of being ruled (bullied) by the minority. This is an ironic result of the goodwill and forbearance produced by living in a country where our worldview has been permeated by the Christianity-derived principles of the majority.

For example, American's want everyone to be accepted and valued, since the Bible says, "Be humble, thinking of others as better than yourselves" and, "... do to others what you would have them do to you ...

The main flaw in his essay is the idea that we are, or should be, a "Christian" nation. We are, however, primarily a nation of believers who mostly identify themselves as Christians.

We don't just tolerate other ideas, we embrace their holders and seek to accept and incorporate whatever is good and beneficial.

However, while we do (and must) remain open and gracious, we cannot allow anyone to undermine our foundations via threats, lawsuits and specious arguments.

To do so is to eventually lose our identity and the liberty we cherish, since our principles are the source of these infinitely valuable pos-

Constitution destroyed

Health care reform contains in its entirety many destructive actions for the balance of power of our federal, state and local governments. Many items, which are denied by Democrats, are honestly contained within the health care reform legislation. I suggest people quit listening to tired cronies and spending real time studying the total content of the legalese in the document.

This health care bill bypasses and in effect makes portions of the following Constitutional Amendments null and void. The 10th Amendment has many areas of rights and powers that shall vanish. The Ninth Amendment is effectively cut off at the knees. The Fifth Amendment is effectively bypassed by calling a fine a tax and stopping the use of the amendment to challenge the charge effectively bypass the this amendment. The Fourth Amendment is rendered useless illegally by forcing the release of your financial, employment, physician and hospital records and information, thus, bypassing the unreasonable search and seizures portions of this amendment.

The mentioned items are only a few of the rights and freedoms being stolen from the American people by this so-called health care bill. It is a complete power grab by the current administration and destroys the balance of power crafted by the Constitution. The American citizens must wake up and taste these bitter poisonous pills being forced down their throats.

The king's blueberries

There was a monarchy whose blueberry crop failed to produce sufficient blueberries for the pancake market. The king told his clueberry czar that he must find a solution to the problem.

The benevolent czar decreed that the blueberry crop would be divided into four equal portions. Equal amounts would be removed from each portion until one new portion equaled the amount of one of the four original equal portions. Pancakes were made for the king using one container of full blueberries. This required borrowing one quarter from one of the other containers. The next now half-full container required borrowing one half from another container. This was used in pancakes for the blueberry czar. The now one-quarter full container required all of the blueberries from the last three-quarter full container.

This made pancakes for all the undersecretaries and officials of the king.

The remaining full container of blueberries was placed in the king's vault in case the next blueberry crop failed altogether.

The servants and commoners were given the empty container of blueberries for their pancakes. They were happy to get any pancakes at all and never complained about their blueberry pancakes.

The king was pleased with the wisdom of his czar and promised him an even larger portion of blueberries next

The moral of the story is, if you live in a monarchy, hide your blueberries

Games bring in revenue

But money from Fiesta Bowl is an easy target for cuts by the state Legislature

University of New Mexico administrative expenses continue to be a favorite whipping boy when state budget-cutting conversations arise.

Although salaries and expenses of administrative staff at other colleges and universities in the state aren't frequently publicized, they do come in for criticism too.

We are told salaries must be high in order to attract the best, but is that argument just copied from the one used by captains of industry, where everybody helps everyone else get the biggest salaries they can?

UNM football expenses also are getting beat up on. Basketball spending is escaping consternation while the team is winning. Those victories are helping pack the Pit despite the inconvenience of the construction project to expand the arena.

But revenues from the big basketball crowds will never play the role of revenues from big time college football. A story floated around several months ago that Alabama football coach Nick Saban bailed out that university's $3 million deficit with a contribution from the athletic department.

New Mexico's two largest universities are learning the value of big time college football. UNM plays in the Mountain West Conference and New Mexico State University plays in the Western Athletic Conference. Both conferences did well during the recent bowl season.

National Collegiate Athletic Association rules call for bowl participants to share their revenues with the other universities in their conference. Although neither the Lobos nor Aggies qualified for a bowl game this year, they both will get help with their athletic budgets courtesy of the top teams in their conferences.

Our two big schools might do even better, were it not for the stranglehold that the very big daddies have on college football. The mightiest conferences have formed what they call the Bowl Conference Series.

They picked the richest of the bowl games around the country and said only teams in their BCS conferences will play in those bowl games. After some pressure, they relented and said they would allow one or two non-BCS teams to play in the big bowls. Those teams often come from the Mountain West or WAC conferences.

It usually requires a perfect record to go play with the big boys and our regional conferences have done very well for themselves and for us. The BCS bowls bring in big time money – in the vicinity of $20 million to split among the teams and their conferences.

This year, Boise State University and Texas Christian University won the two conferences NMSU and UNM are in. It is highly likely that the top teams in the BCS put out the word that they did not want to play either team.

For some reason, the teams from the smaller conferences perform much better than they should, according to the sports analysts. The reason given is usually that the little guys play with a chip on their shoulder because they are overlooked.

Whatever the reason for our dominance, the big boys managed to avoid having to play either Boise State or TCU by having them play each other. It took a lot of fun out of watching that bowl game because it eliminated the David and Goliath scenario.

But it did provide a big chunk of money for athletic budgets at two New Mexico universities. And it may cause our Legislature to look a little more closely at those athletic budgets.

Nation is on the verge of writing bad checks

America must plan to retire debt

By MICHAEL SWICKARD For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"Debt is the fatal disease of republics, the first thing and the mightiest to undermine governments and corrupt the people."

- Wendell Phillips

Years ago, I lived in a small town. One day, an opportunity came up if I could get $800 quickly to an Albuquerque Music Store. The banker listened carefully and then wrote out an order to the bank teller to give me the cash.

"Come in tomorrow and we will sign the papers, he said. That was a differ-

I still have that special 12-string guitar. Why did I get the loan? Because the banker knew I would pay it back. I would not have gotten anything if I was known to write bad checks. This brings me to wonder why China and other nations still lend us money.

In the last several decades, our country has consistently increased the national debt without any talk about retiring that debt. Our country is spending more and more of its resources just servicing the interest, not the principle, which just grows bigger every year. Worse, in the last year our national debt grown significantly. Should we care?

We should because there is the question of what will ultimately happen when we are forced by the magnitude of our debt to cheat our lenders. Will any country lend us a penny when they realize we will not pay them back? Doubtful.

The way Congress has structured the national debt is a Ponzi scheme where our country is borrowing money every year to service the interest debt on previous loans. It is not "if" we will finally be unable to service our interest debt, it is just when?"

For decades, the national debt has been bantered about but neither party has shown the slightest interest in starting to pay the enormous sum back. Congress cannot stop spending more than they have. In real life, and in Congress, this will precipitate a long fall and harsh realities.

Some people say we cannot even start getting out of debt because of the magnitude of the debt. The amount of money needed would be the total output of our country for perhaps 10 years. So because paying it back will be so difficult, our country ignores the financial realities and just keeps on spending.

My friends, that is writing more checks not because you have money, but because you have checks. There is only one ending to this and it is not pretty.

Congress has accelerated its spending to the point that the dollar has little backing in the world. As a debtor nation spending a great deal of its resources servicing debt and then borrowing even more resources from other countries, we know how this will end one day since it can have no other ending. It appears we hope we pass on before the effect of our profligate spending comes home to roost, which it will.

Our kids and grandkids will have significantly fewer resources and most of their lives will be spent dealing with the financial structural flaws of debt we foisted upon them. I wonder if they will even realize that we knew we were doing this to them but did

The question we need to ask every politician before we spend any more money is: "What is your plan to repay the national debt? How soon will that be done?

When politicians avoid the question and talk about "bringing more goodies home to the fine people in New Mexico," we must remind them it is a bad check since no money backs them.

Like the grasshopper who never believed that it was time to save for winter, our nation is talking about spending significantly more money on health care reform and cap-and-trade legislation.

The "fun" discussions in Washington are about spending more money. Paying our debts is never addressed.

As Ogden Nash wrote, "Some debts are fun when you are acquiring them, but none are fun when you set about retiring them.

Please ask each national politician for a plan to retire the debt, not just come close one year or another to balancing that year's books. See what they have to say. Vote accordingly.

The public can also help by texting "Haiti" to 90999 to send a $10 donation to the Red Cross, through an effort backed by the U.S. State Department. Funds will support American Red Cross relief efforts in Haiti.

To date, there have been no requests for blood products from the government of Haiti. Communication with those in Haiti is still difficult. People should contact the U.S. Department of State, Office of Overseas Citizens Services at 888-407-4747 if trying to reach a U.S. citizen living or traveling in Haiti.

While donations are coming in for Haitian relief, the initial American Red Cross response is made possible in part by contributions from members of the Red Cross Annual Disaster Giving Program (ADGP).

Regents approve bonds

At a special meeting Wednesday, Jan. 13, the New Mexico State University Board of Regents gave final approval for the issuance of $78.67 million in system revenue bonds with a total interest rate of 3.93 percent.

Jennifer Taylor, senior vice president of business, finance and human resources at the university, requested the bonds to finance building and improvement projects. The sale of bonds is the means by

The sale of bonds is the means by which institutions such as NMSU borrow money for projects. This action will allow the university to self-fund capital construction and renovation projects, including improvements to the health center, the second phase of the Chamisa student housing complex and a new campus bookstore, arts center and central utility plant expansion. The bond issuance also will allow the university to refinance about $13 million in outstanding debt, resulting in an 8.44 percent savings.

Taylor said the university's Master Plan for development of the Las Cruces campus is the driving force behind the selected projects, identified by NMSU as priority initiatives to meet current campus population needs and position the university for continued growth.

"Even in the current economic climate, we have a responsibility to continue to grow to meet the needs of our current and future students," Taylor said.

Revenue bonds are special types of municipal bonds distinguished by their guarantee of repayment solely from revenues generated by a specified revenue-generating entity associated with the purpose of the bonds. Only the revenues specified in the legal contract between the bond holder and the bond issuer are required to be used for repayment of the principal and interest of the bonds.

This celebration will honor the Sheriffs' deputies for outstanding service to Doña Ana County.

Tickets are $30 and ticket sales end Friday, Jan. 15.

A cash bar will be offered prior to the dinner, starting at 6 p.m. The commission also is accepting sponsorships. Gold sponsors are those giving $500 or more. Silver sponsors are for those contributing between $300 to $499. Gold and silver sponsorship includes two dinner tickets. Bronze sponsors are for those contributing between $100 and $299. Tables of eight are available.

To purchase tickets, call one of the following commission members: Patricia or Bill Rothengass at 521-9171 or Nancy Greene at 521-4027.

Make checks payable to Special Deputy Sheriffs Commission or just SDSC.

Chavez announces commission run

Gilbert Chavez, businessman, has announced his candidacy for Doña Ana County Commissioner in District 1.

With strong family roots in the district, Chavez said he is able to recognize the opportunities and constraints of the district physically, socially and economically.

CHAVEZ

"I am an Armed Forces veteran, USN – Vietnam era, and have been a licensed professional surveyor since 1979, practicing in the Mesilla Valley," Chavez said. "I know this district and the citizens that live and work in this district. My family and I have always strived to make Doña Ana a great place to be and I want to continue those efforts by serving as a county commissioner."

Chavez was appointed by Gov. Bill Richardson in 2003 as member of the New Mexico Board of Licensure for Professional Engineers and Professional Surveyors. He is active in the National Council of Examiners for Engineers and Surveyors (NCEES) and recently retired from public service.

"Having worked for 20 years as city surveyor for the City of Las Cruces and 19 years in private practice, I have a strong background in land use planning and related issues including work in boundary surveying, land development, flood control and infrastructure in both the public and private sectors," Chavez said in his announcement. "I have a strong commitment and will continue to make decisions that are the best for all concerned as we move forward and grow in District 1."

Mesilla Valley CASA selling tickets to Valentine's Day event

The Mesilla Valley Court Appointed Special Advocates (CASA) is holding its Valentine's Day celebration at 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 13, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. for a no-host bar. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. with the comedy show starting at 8 p.m. Dancing will begin at 9 p.m.

The fifth annual fundraiser includes dinner and Las Vegas-style entertainment with comedy, dancing and music. Tickets cost $50.

Impact fees subject of City Council meeting

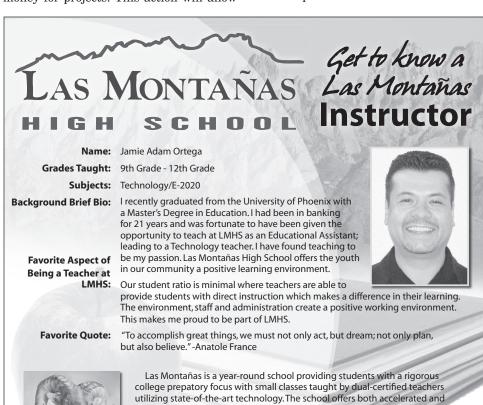

Mayor Ken Miyagishima said he will call a special council work session for 1 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 17, to continue working on how impact fees should be structured.

The council held a work session on impact fees Monday, Jan. 11, without arriving at a consensus.

Part of the discussion centers on whether the impact fees should be limited to areas of new growth, or be citywide.

Also, city administrators need more time to evaluate the cost of impact fees.

Miyagishima said he is concerned that proposed impact fees for major road improvements, public safety and storm drainage could add too high a cost to new housing. An independent study by James Beckett and Associates of Austin, Texas, has estimated the combined impact fee for the three additional public services could add $5,100 to the cost of building a home, which would be passed on to buyers.

Las Montañas students will gain work experience and community involvement through service projects. By the time students graduate from Las Montañas, they will be prepared for either higher education or for the workforce.

children apparently walked into a robbery in progress. One of the robbers met them at the door and brought them into an office where the four women were lying on the floor. They were ordered to also lay on the floor and the robbers began shooting them. The robbers started a fire in the bowling alley and fled.

Police believe Teran, Paula Holguin and Houser died instantly. Repass was able to call 911 and attempted to put out the fire. She, Ida Holguin and Senac would survive their injuries. Teran's toddling daughter Valerie would die en route to the hospital.

The suspects, two Hispanic men, have never been caught.

Minn was a college student in Chicago when he first saw an "Unsolved Mysteries" episode about the massacre.

"I'll never see the show the same way," Minn said. "I was mesmerized. I was shocked and angered by the brutality – how they could shoot these kids and women. It's haunted me ever since."

After working in broadcasting, including a stint as a television reporter in Albuquerque, Minn said he realized his real love was making documentaries.

"This is my niche," Minn said. "I love telling true stories and I'm fascinated by true crime."

Minn never forgot the bowling alley massacre story. He would even periodically call the Las Cruces Police Department. Minn said it frustrated him that the case remained a mystery and the criminals responsible were never caught.

"It's as if they walked out of the bowling alley and vanished," Minn said. "The case had become 'old and cold' as they say."

In July 2009, he began to seriously research the case with the intent to make a documentary. Through New Mexico State University's Creative Media Institute, Minn found sophomore student Jacob Bayless, who agreed to help him make a film about the massacre. Also assisting the effort was fellow NMSU student Amer Jandali and many others from the Las Cruces community eager to be part of the project.

Production began in September 2009 and the 100-minute film is still being edited in New York City by Sara Vander Horn.

Shot in high-definition video, "A Nightmare in Las Cruces" will make its debut on Feb. 10 – which coincidentally is also a Saturday – at the Cineport 10 for a nine-day run.

Key to the production was the cooperation of Mark Myers, the Las Cruces lead detective on the case. Over the years, Las Cruces police detectives have pursued thousands of leads that have led nowhere. Especially frustrating to police, Minn said, was a Cuban woman who claimed to have sheltered the two men, but none of her tips panned out and detectives eventually concluded she was just seeking attention.

The film includes interviews with the detectives, the surviving victims – Senac died in 1999 – and their families. One of the original detectives – Homer Jackson who now lives in Farmington, N.M. – also is haunted by the case, Minn said. The film also includes a re-enactment of the crime and the actual 911 call made to police by Repass.

At the time of the crime, the older suspect was described as being in his late 30s to early 40s, 5-foot-5 inches tall, medium build and between 160 to 180 pounds. The younger suspect was estimated to be in his 20s, 5-foot-6 inches to 5-foot-8 inches, medium build and about 190 pounds.

The two suspects did not wear masks or gloves, and were seen by many running across Amador Avenue and an alleyway. Before the crime, they were seen by another bowling alley employee outside the building. Las Cruces Police believe that someone may have sheltered them after the incident.

Minn said he and others involved with the documentary will be talking about the film and the crime at 6 p.m. Monday, Feb. 1, at the Barnes & Noble Bookstore on the Mesilla Valley Mall.

Minn said he hopes the documentary will bring fresh leads to the case. Myers can be contacted by calling 528-4222, ext. 4101, and Minn said they can be assured that their identity will be kept safe. For those wanting even more assurance that their identity will be protected, they can call Crime Stoppers at 526-800 or 800-897-2746.

Walking tour stars Mesquite homes

Group plans future treks in historic neighborhood

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

More than 50 people met at Klein Park on Saturday, Jan. 9, for a walking tour of the Mesquite Street Historic District.

Though the tour was hosted by the Branigan Cultural Center, board members of Las Esperanzas described the walk as a dry run for the tours Las Esperanzas is planning to familiarize people with the original Las Cruces town-site neighborhood.

"If you look around the park, you can see what Las Cruces used to look like, primarily single-story adobe houses," said Greg Smith, president of the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership, who provided architectural commentary for the tour.

Some of the sites visited were:

- The Nevarez House, 100 S. San Pedro St.
 The 1913 adobe home was a destination for eloping couples seeking marriage licenses in the 1920s and 1930s from Jesus or Miguel Nevarez, brothers who alternated as county clerk.
- The Valencia Apartments, 119 S. Campo St. Constructed in the late 1880s, the adobe house was converted into apartments, where famed pilot Lela Carwardine once lived. It was recently renovated by Las Cruces Abstract and Title Co.
- The Santa Rosa Rico House, 339 E. May Ave.
 The territorial-style adobe, built in the 1890s, was the home of former city marshal Santa Rosa Rico, the lone survivor of an 1882 Chihuahua Apache wagon-train raid in between Lordsburg and Clifton.
- raid in between Lordsburg and Clifton.

 The Jose Camuñez House, 306 S. San Pedro St.
 The blue adobe home, originally white, built around 1920, was the residence of former town trustee and early fire chief Jose Camuñez in 1914.

More than 50 people attended a tour of the Mesquite Street Historic Neighborhood hosted by the Branigan Cultural Center on Saturday, Jan. 9. Though the tour visited a number of historical homes, the new federal courthouse provided a modern backdrop.

Partnership (GRIP) that was used to fund large-scale public infrastructure, including the Rail Runner – and restructuring the educational department.

In his first term, there was plenty to be optimistic about. The housing market was booming. The stock market seemed a smart place to invest. Oil and gas prices were on the rise. During those heady days, he won a statewide special election to use money from the Permanent Fund for expenses and projects.

In 2005, Richardson announced the state's partner-ship with English billionaire Richard Branson to build a spaceport in southern New Mexico.

During his two terms, Richardson has signed legislation that has banned cockfighting, allowed medical marijuana use and repealed the death penalty.

Richardson won re-election in 2006, and then ran for president, during which he had to defend New Mexico law that allows illegal immigrants to obtain driver's licenses. He never could catch the same level of popularity on the national stage that he enjoyed in New Mexico.

Upon Richardson's return to New Mexico, everything that could go wrong with state finances seemed to hit at

Though the state didn't engage in the kind of reckless home loan financing seen in other parts of the country, buyers from out of state couldn't unload the homes they owned elsewhere to move to the Land of Enchantment and New Mexico's housing boom came to a standstill.

Unemployment rose and people spent less, causing loses in both state income and gross receipts taxes.

Normally, the state could depend on high oil and gas revenues – so much so that taxpayers received refunds twice under Richardson. But oil and gas prices plummeted. The state couldn't even depend on its investments as the stock market also plunged.

Richardson now comes into this 30-day budget session with state revenues down by $1.2 billion over a two-year period. Continuing the work of two prior special sessions, Richardson and lawmakers must find ways to bring down the state's spending another $500 million and find new revenues by either raising taxes or discontinuing tax breaks – or both. Richardson has said he will not agree to personal income or capital gains taxes or decreasing business tax incentives or credits.

"We've used these tax cuts and incentives to successfully create thousands of jobs in the state, and I will not give up these tools when we need them most," Richardson said in a prepared statement.

That's because – despite the recent effects of the economy – Richardson can honestly point to significant job growth in New Mexico during his terms as governor. No matter the resolution of this current legislative session, Richardson can still say that New Mexico is no longer at the bottom of lists for things such as school performance. tion functions and he has raised teacher pay.

Early in his first term, Richardson caught flack for having State Police escort his entourage of vehicles at high speeds across the state.

"I'm not going to stand here and say we'll never speed again," Richardson said at the time. "There may be exceptional circumstances. But we are going to slow down."

The problem is that it's just not in Richardson's nature to slow down, or to exit quietly for that matter.

Couture addresses faculty

Spring Convocation at New Mexico State University Tuesday, Jan. 12, opened not only the new semester, but also introduced the direction of new President Barbara Couture. Speaking before the campus community at the Atkinson Recital Hall, and to off-campus faculty, staff and students via the Internet, Couture laid out five areas of focus for the university:

NMSU's state-aided budget

We all have read the initial proposal from the Legislative Finance Committee and our governor's response," said. "To say this is not going to be an easy budget year is to be at risk of understatement. Like nearly every state in our nation, New Mexico is facing state budget shortfalls and it will be a very, very difficult session ahead for the men and women of our Legislature.

Couture acknowledged that the university, like every other state agency, will have to trim the budget and demonstrate that it is operating as efficiently and as effectively as possible.

"We don't know yet what the impact of the final state budget will be, but we do know now that if the budget as proposed by the LFC stands, we will face major damage to our instructional programs and our primary research areas,'

Student enrollment

'Key to that success are the relationships between our university campus and each of our system community colleges," Couture said. "Equally important is the work we do with our local and statewide high schools to encourage young people to go to college.

As a land-grant institution, NMSU has the facilities, faculty, staff and locations to reach out to young people, adults, businesses, industries and governments across the state, providing general and specialized educational opportunities.

The academic and research core

"I am eager to learn more from you about where our departments and colleges have been building research and scholarly expertise, how this expertise has translated into academic programs that we are uniquely qualified to deliver, and how our faculty are connecting with the federal, state and foundation sources of funding that can help them continue and expand their work," Couture said.

Visit NMSU Extension sites and campuses statewide.

"We serve a wide and varied constitu-ency, from a wide variety of cultural groups to traditional, state-of-the-art, and futuristic industries and research laboratories," Couture said. "All are important to our mission, and as soon as we have completed our important work in Santa Fe, we're going to get to know all of these constituencies better."

Private funding

Couture recognized he important role private funding plays in supporting public universities and NMSU's Doing What Counts Campaign

"NMSU is now in the midst of a campaign to raise $225 million in support for the university by December of 2010," she said. "I am proud to announce today that of Dec. 31, 2009, the Doing What Counts Campaign exceeded $216 million.

She noted the many alumni, donors and friends of NMSU who have contributed to this success.

Mexico is going through some tough economics times, other states are facing similar challenges, Couture said, and New Mexico is blessed to have a diverse economy that will help the state meet those challenges.

Couture agrees that all entities receiving state funding must do their part, but it will require a cooperative effort to keep the growing university meeting the needs of its students and living up to its land-grant mission of research and community service.

For Couture, it's critical that NMSU maintain its academic quality and keep the university accessible to students. NMSU needs to keep its academic programs intact and provide strong support services that help students succeed, she said.

NMSU has the advantage of being supported by a strong community college, she noted, that is working to help students transition into higher education and is willing to nurture innovative efforts such as the early college high school. Doña Ana Community College will provide space for the high school, which will eventually be located on the NMSU campus. The concept is for it to introduce high school students to higher education by having them take classes on a college campus.

"It's important for young people to see college education as a viable future," she We have to maintain our commitment to undergraduate education.

Besides NMSU having a good working relationship with public schools, NMSU also enjoys close ties with the community. The Las Cruces Convention Center is being constructed on NMSU land to provide realworld experiences for NMSU's growing hospitality and tourism program.

NMSU also enjoys the enthusiastic interest and concern of alumni and others who care deeply about the university and its direction, Couture said.

"No one is afraid to tell me what they think we should be doing," she said. "New Mexico State is very fortunate to have such loyal supporters."

Another immediate and priority task before Couture is to get her administration team more firmly in place. There are many holding key administrative positions in interim roles and Couture said she will be actively working on filling those positions. But she also acknowledges that career advancement in higher education today often requires talented people to work at different institutions over the course of their careers.

Couture's own career reflects this mobility. An award-winning writer, she earned her English bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Michigan and she began her academic career as an English professor at State University in Detroit, where she also served as an associate dean for curriculum in the College of Liberal Arts and associate dean for metropolitan programs and summer sessions in the College of Lifelong Learning. Couture was dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Washington State University in Pullman before she went to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Couture chairs the executive committee for the Council on Academic Affairs for the Association of Public and Land-grant Universities, has been the principal investigator for a National Science Foundationfunded grant, sits on the editorial boards of three academic journals and is wellpublished, including six books that she wrote or edited.

But Couture and her husband Paul say they feel like they have found a new home at NMSU and southwest New Mexico.

"We are delighted to be here," she said. To encourage Couture to stay, the NMSU Foundation is offering her a $500,000 bonus if she stays for at least five years. Her annual salary is $385,000 and includes use of the presidential residence and a car.

As soon as the semester gets rolling and she can break away from the Legislature. Couture promised she'll begin visiting NMSU's branch campuses and research centers across the state.

"I've found the best way to learn about a place is to see where they are doing their ork," she said.

Couture said she is strongly supportive of NMSU's land-grant mission, especially in the its agriculture "legacy" as the people of the world look for better ways to feed

Couture said she has heard from many colleagues who agree with her that she is heading an institution that is respected in the academic community.

Parking shortage hinders Downtown housing project

Businesses say they can't lose more parking

By Todd G. Dickson

A proposed affordable housing complex on a city-owned Downtown lot continues to face opposition from businesses and Realtors trying to attract new businesses to Downtown because they would lose parking.

With available tax credits to improve the likelihood of funding such a project, the Albuquerque-based Supportive Housing Coalition of New Mexico has asked the City of Las Cruces to let them use a lot off Water Street next to the El Paso Electric Co. offices, which is used for Downtown parking.

Though officials say the new city hall and reopening the rest of Main Street would offset the parking loss, Downtown business owners and Realtors countered at a public hearing Tuesday, Jan. 12, that the new federal courthouse has yet to figure out where their workers are going to park. They also pointed out that the city's Downtown revitalization plan envisioned building parking garages or mixed used developments that included parking, but the apartment complex plans barely have enough spaces for its tenants.

After again hearing those parking concerns, coalition Executive Director Mark Allison acknowledged that parking is a crucial issue that only the city could resolve. Allison said he would consider looking at the city's office center – which will be vacated with the opening of the new city hall – as an alternative site. Allison said he had reservations about the former hospital off Alameda Boulevard because the city would first have to demolish the building, which would likely require environmental clean up for substances like asbestos.

City community development and housing officials started the meeting by defending the concept of affordable housing, saying it would add to local property values and not be a drain economically. Allison said the apartment complex would be attractively designed.

Laura Szalay, a real estate broker, said she agreed it was "a lovely project," but that the real issues are its location and the shortage of parking Downtown. Because of the parking shortage, she and her colleagues said they have a hard enough time already trying to attract new businesses to Downtown. Regardless of the project's quality, affordable housing carries a stigma that – coupled with the loss of parking – would be a detriment to attract new businesses to Downtown, "Parking has always been a key component of the Downtown revitalization plan," said Gil Jones, a real estate broker and former city councillor.

Because of the high costs in building parking structures, Jones said parking could also be the revitalization plan's "fatal flaw.

City Manager Terrence Moore noted the city has bonding capacity that could be used to pay for a Downtown parking structure, but he cautioned there are many other city needs that may seek that funding.

The City Council will revisit approving the proposed site when it meets at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19, at City Hall, 200 N. Church St.

State budget: 'Plenty of blame to go around'

Lawmakers hope finger-pointing won't mire budget resolve

Editor's note: Leading up to Las Cruces Day in Santa Fe on Feb. 1, the Bulletin will be running a series of stories about issue or concerns relating to the 30-day legislative session that begins Tuesday,

When the New Mexico Legislature convenes for a 30 day session from Jan. 19 through Feb. 17, legislators will face a bleak revenue picture due to the weak economy. Both belt tightening and revenue enhancement will most likely be needed to produce budgets for fiscal year 2010 as mandated by the state constitution.

There is plenty of blame to go around," said state Sen. Mary K. Papen who sits the Legislative Finance Committee.

Even as the economic woes began to hit, there were those PAPEN both in the Legislature and in the administration who had trouble accepting the severity of the coming crisis, Papen said. Now, no one should be in denial about the state's finances, and if the political leadership doesn't acknowledge the problem, the session will be an exercise in futility, she said.

"The general public still has not fully grasped the magnitude of the problem,' state Sen. Steve Fischmann said.

Fischmann said the state had a projected revenue of $6.4 billion before the economic downturn. Now, the revenue is close to $5 billion, leaving a shortfall of almost $1.4 billion.

He attributes the budget shortfall to additional spending and unwise tax cuts.

"We went through a lot of tax cutting in the last eight years," he said, adding that the tax cuts amount to about $700 million annually.

Because of the shortfall, he said legislators are going to have to take a hard look at creating a balanced budget.

"The problem is too big to be solved by just cuts or just increasing revenue; we need to do both," Fischmann said. "We need fixes on both sides."

Though District 31 Sen. Cynthia Nava remains open-minded to solutions, she said the state needs to remain conservative, but state-funded programs have already been strained enough.

The Department of Finance and Administration has already put on hold several economic development

Several legislators point to the state's system of rebate programs as part of the solution.

"I'd like more information to see how well those tax breaks are working," Nava said. "Some of those tax breaks we've given we can no longer afford."

Papen said that whether it's trimming back tax credits or raising the state gross receipts taxes (GRT), the effects should be examined closely first.

"Something has to give, but we have to be very prudent and very careful," Papen said. "We have got to look at the long haul." New Mexicans millions of dollars every year.

"Unfortunately, economic development has become a euphemism for corporate welfare. We have to restore sanity to economic development programs," he said.

The only way to resolve the problem is to reduce tax incentives or make budget cuts - of course, tax increases are deadly for elected representatives," said Sen. Mary Jane Garcia the Senate Majority Whip.

Nava said she's not ready to remove tax credits that will adversely affect the state's economy, such as those credits that lure businesses and make New Mexico their home for the long term.

"We don't need to cut off our nose to spite our face by reducing tax breaks that will reduce revenue," Nava said. "We have to make a certain stand, and there's going to be some type of tax enhancement to balance."

Food tax comeback?

One of the possible budget fixes is to rescind the repeal of the food tax.

"I will not vote for a food-tax repeal," Mary Jane Garcia said. "You have to look at who it's going to hurt. Who is helping the middle-income people? A nation or a state without a middle class is not a democracy.

"I don't want us to be raising taxes without researching every avenue," Papen

Papen said she believes there is room in the state budget to cut spending without loss of services.

"We need to cut the fat, and the fat needs to go," Papen said.

Fischmann said he opposes reinstating the gross receipt tax on food because it has a disproportional impact on low income residents – "the people suffering the most" and it has unintentional consequences on support services that purchase large quantities of food, including school lunches and nursing homes. "It will affect institutions that conduct a lot of public services," he said. "I think there are better revenue solutions.

"A lot of offices out there are lightly funded and aren't big enough to make an impact," Fischmann said. "We need to focus on the things that make a positive

Nava said she is not sure if returning the gross receipts tax on food is the right answer.

"It's a very regressive tax," she said. 'Low-income families already struggle. We need to look at some of the upperincome tax breaks. We cannot support tax breaks given to the upper bracket.

Sin tax appeal

Another means of enhancing revenue often brought up is to increase the state's 'sin" taxes – taxes on alcohol and tobacco.

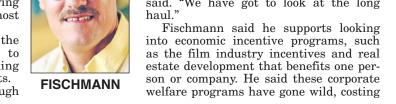

Papen said that before lawmakers start heaping taxes on liquor, they should be aware about how high those taxes already are, and the jobs that depend on those sales, she said.

"Hopefully, all the groups will be able to find common ground and be able to find the money we need. Constitutionally, that's what we have to do – balance the budget – but we need to do that in a way that causes as little hurt as possible to the people of New Mexico," she said. "All of us are going to be hurt somehow."

Mary Jane Garcia said she wouldn't be surprised if the legislature look at a tax on tobacco to the tune of $1 a pack and raising taxes on the wealthy making $250,000 and up.

Members of the House of Representative are facing the same problems.

Rep. Joni Gutierrez said she believes there are ways to raise revenues without making life tougher for working-class New Mexicans or diminishing the services they

GUTIERREZ

Gutierrez is skeptical that a proposal to increase taxes on alcohol and tobacco will raise enough money to shore up the budget balances.

In the state government, Gutierrez said there are basically two kinds of spending: one-time capital outlay projects and continual funding for day-to-day operational expenses.

"They are difficult to tell apart," she said.

To a certain degree, it doesn't matter, as the state is struggling to make budget in both kinds of spending.

"Both have stress on them," she said. Rep. Mary Helen Garcia said she would apport increased taxes on tobacco.

support increased taxes on tobacco.

"We're going to have to enhance taxes somewhere, or we're not going to be able to sustain (state government)," Mary Helen Garcia said.

She said she is in favor of a "sin tax," enhancing the taxes on cigarettes and a 5-cent tax on soda or a glass of wine.

glass of wine.
"It's a great discussion at this time to possibly consider the need to repeal the gross-receipts tax on food," she said.

In addition to tax increases, Mary Helen Garcia said she is also interested in examining the effectiveness of tax credit initiatives designed to lure new industries – such as film – to New Mexico.

"I want to take a close look at that and see if these programs are actually working," she said. "The reports from the (film) industry say they are, but the report from the state isn't so good."

Some industrial tax credits that provide breaks for companies headquartered outside of New Mexico could stand to be removed or reduced with little consequence, she said.

"I don't see Wal-Marts moving out of New Mexico any time soon," Mary Helen Garcia said, "but for some of the industrial companies, maybe. We'll have to look at those."

Tough hours

Rep. Nate Cote said the solution will not be easy be easy.

"The government got bigger than we need to provide core services. We like to keep 10 percent in reserve, but now we are down to 1 percent. We're going to have to be very frugal and conservative with the 2010 budget," he said. "We're going to spend long tough hours on this and we're getting a lot of pressure from different entities from different entities to not increase tax revenue in their areas."

The Organ, N.M., resident also thinks tax credits and incentives need to be reexamined.

"Currently we have a lot of tax credits and exemptions that need to be seriously looked at. The 25-percent credit for the film industry appears to many to be a giveaway program. Yes, we have made some good movies in the state, but we have natural beauty and natural backdrops that should continue to appeal to the industry (without the tax credit)," he said.

"I'm open to a junk food tax, I am not for an increase in food tax other than maybe a small tax on bottled water. A lot of it is purchased by tourists, it would be an item that would be low on the pain scale.

"Any new taxes must be fair and equitable and broad based. We must not impose any hardship and difficulty while people are struggling in the current economy."

Cote said he wouldn't be surprised to see a discussion on increasing the excise tax on vehicles, but thinks whatever happens in this session, any revenue enhancements or budget cuts will have a sunset clause or review provision for when the economy turns around.

STEINBORN

Rep. Jeff Steinborn believes a solution is to eliminate special interest handouts.

"There rarely was a tax cut or tax credit the government said 'no' to during the good times. They need to go away," Steinborn said.

He said the special session held in October 2009 was "a good first step" for the budget cuts that will need to take place in the regular session.

"There was more than $700 million in reductions to state personnel," he said. "We reduced state agencies by 7 percent."

Rep. Diane Hamilton has a short answer for what caused the budget shortfall.

"Overspending," she said. "When we were fat, we spent all the money we had. If we had been more prudent, we wouldn't be in this situation."

Hamilton said she thinks part of New Mexico's budget problems stem from overregulation of the state's extractive industries.

"The majority of the money we had came from severance taxes," she said, "but if you make it difficult for miners to drill, the money dries up.

HAMILTON

"We all want a green world, but we're not ready yet. You have to have fossil fuel as a stop-gap, and we need to not be dependent on foreign countries.

The solution to the current budget situation, she said, is to reduce spending.

"I would like to see people moved from the state payroll through attrition," she said, "moving people to different areas could save some money and careful spending can save some more.

"Each department needs to tighten their belts. Cuts are going to have to be made in every department. I don't believe one area should take all the cuts."

Government growth

When talking to constituents about the fiscal squeeze facing lawmakers this session, state Sen. Dianna Duran says remarkable government growth during Gov. Bill Richardson's administration led New Mexico to a precarious position that was revealed when the recession hit.

For Duran, the growth is most easily seen in the increase of exempt employees the government hires outside of the state classified personnel system who serve at the pleasure of the governor.

closed 59 positions by executive order, his administration had about 580 exempt employees – including some budgeted but unfilled positions – with most making more than $100,000 a year, which amounts to an estimated $125,000 per exempt employee with benefits factored in, she said. By comparison, Gov. Gary Johnson's administration only had 173 exempt employees and most made less than $100,000 salaries, she said.

"That is only one area where we have grown and grown and grown," she said.

Johnson was a Republican, as is Duran – one of only 15 GOP legislators in the Senate. But Duran said fiscal conservativism isn't an exclusive trait to Republicans in a poor state like New Mexico, and she is quick to point out that the state Senate – with leadership from conservative Democrats such as John Arthur Smith and Tim Jennings – tried to curb government growth even before the economy went south.

Senators then were concerned because the government was growing at a faster rate than the state's tax revenues. That's even worse now with state revenues dropping from $6 billion to $4.2 billion, causing state cash reserves to drop from about 8 percent of the total budget to less than 1 percent currently.

Going into this legislative session, lawmakers need to be more realistic and not look for short-term solutions on the expectation that the recession is ending with better times ahead. Not in this budget, Duran said. Even the most optimistic economists are saying the economy won't see any significant improvement until 2012.

With lawmakers needing to pass a budget that shores up a shortfall of more than $400 million, "it's going to be pretty hard," Duran said.

Pull up a chair, gingerly

In basketball, they call it protecting your home floor.

In the WAC opener against Nevada on Saturday, Jan. 2, Louisiana Tech might have carried it a little too far.

During theouts, the Wolfpack's team took folding chairs onto the court near the team bench, sat down and listened to coach Dave Carter deliver instructions.

Almost every college basketball team in the country follows the same procedure.

La Tech, however, thought Nevada's players sat their chairs down too hard, scratching the playing surface that was sanded and sealed in December 2009. School officials were also miffed when they thought Nevada's team spilled Gatorade and water on the floor, creating a dangerous, slippery surface.

The court is named after Karl Malone, former La Tech and NBA great. He was there that night, complaining about the way Nevada treated "his" floor during timeouts.

The Wolfpack was eventually told not to bring their chairs onto the floor, but the request fell on deaf ears. That angered La Tech even more. Enough that the school filed a complaint with the WAC office in Denver

Jeff Hurd, a conference representative, sent a memo to all member institutions, instructing them to make sure the chairs they use had soft legs and to please clean up the floor afterward.

You'll see New Mexico State's team carrying chairs out on the floor during timeouts. Coach Marvin Menzies brought the idea from Louisville, his previous employer. Herb Taylor, the Aggies' basketball game manager, said he received the WAC office memo last week. "It had little effect on us," he said.

"We always make sure ball boys mop up the floor after timeouts. We've had no problems here and don't anticipate any.

After reading about the incident at Louisiana Tech, I'm not sure whether Nevada's team abused the playing floor or not. I am also not sure how much Karl Malone got himself involved. There were rumors that he personally picked up Nevada's chairs and threw them into the dumpster. A La Tech school official later denied the incident.

I even wonder if the Bulldogs were so angered by the situation they failed to realize they won the game,

There's Tony Mathiason, the trainer, a man of few words who speaks only when spoken to. Stealth Cat, the 5-year-old mare and 2008 Texas-bred Horse of the Year that Mathiason trains, never met a stranger. A genius at public relations. You walk by her stall, she stretches her neck out, looking for attention. Stroke her head and she's yours.

Stealth Cat might, Mathiason said, be the best horse in trainer Steve Asmussen's barn of 26 at Sunland Park Racetrack and Casino.

Mathiason is one of seven assistant trainers scattered across the country on Asmussen's payroll. The latter, of course, is world famous. Asmussen's horses won a record 650 races in 2009.

"Make no mistake about it," Mathiason said, "Steve is in charge. He's very hands on."

Each day, Asmussen stays in touch with Mathiason and his other assistants by telephone.

On Dec. 27, 2009, Stealth Cat, an attractive bay mare sprinter with a white blaze running down her nose, won the $50,000 Bold Ego Handicap of five and one-half furlongs at Sunland Park.

Mayfield's star shot blocker

Mayfield Coach

By Craig Massey

In the midst of a frantic fourth-quarter comeback attempt last Friday night, a Highland Hornet guard sliced through the lane for a layup attempt against the Mayfield Trojans. The ball never made it near the basket and came rocketing back in the direction of the shooter.

Not all of Josh Trujillo's blocked shots come this easily, but then the 6-8 senior makes a lot of plays look easy.

Trujillo is one of the reasons the Trojans were off to a 10-4 start heading into this week. As perhaps the tallest local high school athlete in recent memory, he and 6-5 teammate and close friend, Jeremiah Willis, give Mayfield a towering one-two punch around the basket.

"With him and Jeremiah, we feel we have probably the best set of posts in the state," said Mayfield coach Tommy Morrow. "That makes us a contender."

Unlike a lot of very tall post players on the high school level, Trujillo is light on his feet, moving easily on the court. He also has a soft shooting touch, averaging close to 20 points per game.

Trujillo is just as effective on the defensive end of the court. He gets multiple blocked shots each game and alters countless others.

"Blocking shots is my favorite part of the game," Trujillo said. "It gets the crowd going."

It also gets the Mayfield coaches going.

"We've never had a guy that gave us that vertical component before," Morrow said. "We have a great leaper in Avron (Garcia), but when you're 6-8, you don't have to gather yourself to jump. You're already up there. It's a whole other dimension and it's a great dimension to have.

Trujillo, whose father is 6-4, came to Mayfield as a

In the thick of the race

Aggie guard Jahmar Young's 32 points against Idaho on Monday, Jan. 11, helped the Aggies sweep a road trip to the state of Idaho and remain in the thick of the WAC basketball race. The Aggies (10-7, 3-1) return home to face Fresno State (10-7, 3-0) at 7 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23, in the Pan American Center, before hitting the road to face Hawai'i at 10 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 21.

Menzies set to host luncheon

New Mexico State University basketball fans are invited to join men's basketball coach Marvin Menzies for the NMSU Coaches Luncheon at noon Friday, Jan. 15, at Eddie's Bar & Grill in the Days Inn and Suites, 901 Avenida de Mesilla. Menzies will preview the Aggies' game with Fresno State scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16, in the Pan American Center. The cost of lunch is $6.95 per person.

Each package ordered will receive a voucher redeemable for a large, one-topping pizza and four soft drinks at the Lorenzo's restaurants on University or Lohman. The food voucher is redeemable any time and is good through 12-31-2010.

likes her workouts. We get her up at 5:30 a.m."

It was 11 o'clock Monday morning and Stealth Cat had just finished lunch. She stretched her neck trying to rub her nose against the face of one of Mathiason's assistants.

Like most trainers, Mathiason has worked horses all his life.

"I trained 'em when I was a kid," he said. "I rodeoed for a while. Rode bulls and broncs.

"Did I ever think of doing something else for a living? Nah. I'd do anything to get away from the spud farm."

Mathiason has a home in Idaho where potato farming is big. He is seldom there. "My mom lives in the house," he said. "She takes care of the place."

Training race horses is fairly simple, Mathiason said. "Feed 'em, gallop 'em and keep 'em happy.

"I work from 4:30 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. Every day."

Mathiason also trained Grand Slam Andre, a 3-year-old gelding who won the $107,000 Riley Allison Futurity at Sunland Park on Dec. 29, 2009.

"The horse was only here for 10 days," Mathiason said. "He's in Houston now. I don't know when he'll race here again."

Grand Slam Andre, Mathiason said, "is a man's horse. Kids can't ride him.

"He's well-mannered, and he has a will to win. You can take horses who train well, look good and are well-bred. Grand Slam Andre was all of that, but he had a will to win. The will to win is what separates the good ones from the not so good. They have to have that," he said.

"He's really easy going and plays harder than his demeanor makes you think," said Morrow. "This summer, he really stepped up and became a dominating

Only once recently has he played against some one taller than himself. It was in a summer league game last year against Los Alamos High School senior Alex Kirk, who has signed to play with the University of New Mexico Lobos next year. Kirk is 6-10.

When asked how he did against Kirk, Trujillo just smiled and said he did alright.

"He was tall, but he was slow," Trujillo said. "I had the speed advantage on someone ... finally.'

Trujillo, who said he has received some recruiting interest from the coaches at Western New Mexico University, is focused on getting Mayfield into the state tournament. His team struggled against full-court pressure from Hobbs earlier in the year and on Friday night, he and his teammates were still dizzy from Highland's 20-point comeback in the second half.

The Trojans hung on for a 75-71 victory, but Trujillo knows improvement has to come.

Ags' Conrad nabs WAC honor again

Swimmer sweeps sprints

Junior swimmer Kelly Conrad was named the Verizon Wireless WAC Swimmer of the Week on Wednesday, Jan. 6.

This is the second career honor for Conrad. She previously won the award as a freshman.

Conrad helped direct the Aggies to a win over Idaho, Jan. 2, with two individual top honors. She swept the sprint freestyle events winning both the 50 free (24.65) and 100 free (52.77) at the meet. It was the second consecutive meet where she won both events. Conrad was also the anchor for the winning 400-freestyle relay (3:33.93).

Ags fall to OSU, Arizona

The New Mexico State swimming and diving team fell to Oregon State, 138-123, and No. 2 Arizona, 204-57, in the double-dual meet at Tucson, Ariz.

"It was exciting and heartbreaking to battle Oregon State and come so close," head coach Rick Pratt said. "We had some beat-up swimmers from this week of training, however, we still had several season bests and some great

"It will be nice to start classes next week and get back to a normal routine," he said. "We need to be better when we head to Boise State in three weeks.'

In the 1,000 free, sophomore Brittney Moore and senior Liz Thomson scored for NMSU in third and fourth place, respectively. Moore, freshman Haley Gansneder and Thomson also provided points in the 500 free, taking second, third and fourth.

Sophomore Maria Spies had a solid meet with a second-place finish in the 200 breast and a fourth-place showing in the 100 breast. Junior Kelly Runestrand also challenged in the breaststroke events with fifth in the 200 and sixth in the 100.

Senior Meghann Percy recorded a team-best fourthplace showing in the 100 back as freshman Beth Cate led the way with fifth in the 200 individual medley and sixth in the 200 butterfly.

In the sprint freestyle races, junior Kelly Conrad and senior Tessa Bain paced the Aggies in the 50 free in sixth and seventh, respectively. Additionally, Conrad claimed

Fresno tops Ags 77-67

NMSU gets first loss in WAC

New Mexico State senior guard Crystal Boyd scored a career-high 26 points and notched her fifth double-double of the season with 11 rebounds. It was not enough, however, as the New Mexico State women's basketball team fell 77-67 to Fresno State at the Pan American Center Wednesday evening.

The Aggies scored the final seven points of the first half behind buckets from sophomore forward Tabytha Wampler, junior guard Danisha Corbett and a trey from junior guard Jasmine Lowe in the final 90 seconds. NMSU continued its run to open the second half after a hoop from Boyd and a three from junior guard Madison Spence to build a 36-31 lead.

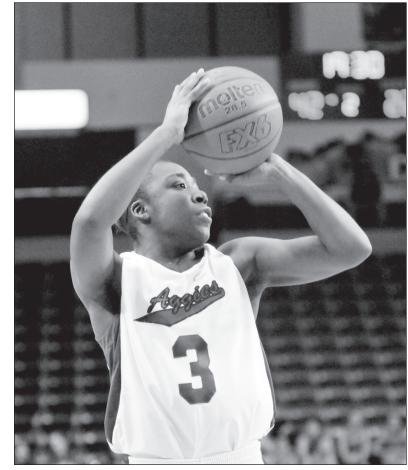

The Bulldogs fought back to tie the score at 40-40 minutes later, then took its first lead of the half at 47-44 after a three-pointer from Hayley Munro. The guard knocked down another from beyond the arc to ignite a 16-4 run over the next six minutes to break the game open at 63-48. NMSU closed to within eight with 3:20 remaining after a three from Boyd but could not close the gap down the stretch.

After the loss, the Aggies stand 12-5 overall and 2-1 in the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) standings. The Bulldogs improve to 12-5 overall and remain undefeated at 3-0 in the WAC.

Fresno State's defense clamped down on the Aggies over the next four minutes, sparking an 11-0 run for a 20-13 cushion. The Bulldogs held their biggest advantage in the half of eight points at the 3:55 mark, leading 27-19. But the Aggies closed the half on a 12-4 run to knot the score at 31-31 going into the locker rooms.

The Aggies next game is at 6 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16, against Louisiana Tech in Rustin, La. The game will be broadcast live on the Aggie Sports Radio Network with Kyle Doperalski on KSNM-AM 570.

Walker stays as NMSU coach

New Mexico State coach DeWayne Walker released the following statement, Thursday, Jan. 14, announcing that he will remain the Aggies' head football coach in 2010.

"In order to put an end to wild speculation and inaccurate reporting, I am announcing that I will happily remain the head coach at New Mexico State University for the 2010 season," Walker said.

"I am proud to be a New Mexico State

"I am proud to be a New Mexico State Aggie and remain committed to making this program a winning one," he said. "I feel good about the direction of our program. We are going to have a great recruiting class and hire excellent coaches. We are building a program that Aggie fans can be proud of"

Walker thanked New Mexico State University, Southern New Mexico residents and Aggie fans for being patient. During the past week there were reports in the local daily paper and on the Internet of speculation that he would be hired as the next defensive coordinator for the NFL's Seattle Seahawks by their new coach Pete Carroll.

Instead, Walker said he is looking forward to the challenge of the 2010 season at NMSU.

Jasmine Lowe gets WAC award

Aggie junior 'competes at a high level'

Junior guard Jasmine Lowe was named the Verizon Wireless WAC Women's Basketball Player of the Week, the conference office announced, Monday, Jan. 11. This is the first career honor for Lowe.

"Jasmine is very deserving of the Player of the Week honor," head coach Darin Spence said. "She has competed at a high level for us, leading the way to a tough road victory at Boise State and a solid home win versus Hawai'i. Jasmine has been consistent at both ends of the floor and her shot selection has allowed her to shoot a high percentage. She has the tools and the drive to be one of the best in the WAC. I'm excited for her and proud of her."

Lowe, a San Francisco native, averaged 21.5 points on 57 percent shooting, 5.5 rebounds, 3.5 assists and 3.5 steals as the Aggies opened WAC play 2-0. She scored a game-high 26 points in New Mexico State's first-ever win at Boise State, including 12 of the team's final 27 points. She followed it up with a gamehigh 17 points, a career-high-tying six rebounds, four assists and three steals in a win over Hawaii

Transform your game – get organized

Now is the time to get your golf plans in motion

There is power,

genius and magic

with the simple

act of making your goals and dreams

Editors note: This is the first of a four-part series that will give you the motivation and ideas needed to transform your game and yourself as a golfer.

Let's face it, January is the time when we all buy health club memberships under the illusion we'll finally get in shape, and it's when we swear we'll finally start the diet we've been putting off for years.

It's now that we come face to face with the clutter that has surrounded us and we look longingly and jealously at the nifty stuff (like boxes) on the shopping channels that offer us hope that we can finally get organized. We think that the dawning of a new year might just bring us hope that we can break some bad habits, but we need some source of courage and hope.

So it is with our golf game. We need some courage and hope. Maybe you need a nudge, too. Well, here it is.

When folks up north are frozen in the off-season, out here we're still playing golf and loving it. Which makes it the perfect opportunity to tune up our golf games and make the changes we have been seeking for so long. Maybe it's time for a golf makeover.

Make a plan

To help you with your golf makeover, this is the first of our four-part series on rebuilding your golf game. Today we deal with getting organized and coming up with a plan that will get the job done. In the next few weeks, we'll cover solid, reliable swing fundamentals you can count on; short game tips and techniques that are sure to save you strokes around the putting green; and how to become mentally excellent even in the face of adversity.

The first thing I'm suggesting is for you to take a dispassionate look at how you presently play the game of golf. Have you ever seen yourself swing a golf club? It might be an eye-opener. In your heart of hearts, do you think you honestly know how to swing a golf club? If not, maybe this is the time to learn.

I know, Dr. Bob Rotella says to play golf without thinking about it. Forgive me if it sounds harsh, but most of the golfers I see flailing away on the range are wielding a golf club without thinking about it, and I'm thinking they may need to think about how they're doing it, since they don't have a clue as to the proper way to do it. These are the same ones who say they don't need lessons. Do you want to get better? Do you want to make a quantum leap in your ability? It isn't God-given you know. You have to work at it. Go get a teacher. Email me and I'll make a referral to a professional for you.

A hard look

Next, take a hard look over how you played last year. Notice what you did well and what you did poorly. If you see yourself as a golfer who is less accomplished than you would like to be, have you recently considered building a fundamentally sound and correct golf swing? Age really is not relevant here. You could be 30, or you could be 70, it doesn't matter when it comes to fundamentals.

With all due respect, have you ever wondered what makes you think your swing is very effective? It's time. It's time to take lessons. It's time to get it right.

If not now, when? When you're 90? Or is it that you're content with the status quo, uninterested in getting any better, and still want the same sandbagging strokes from your buddies.

Hopefully, you are the person who still wants to achieve things and gain some mastery within this great game that Arnold Palmer said is both "deceptively simple and endlessly complicated.

Now is the time to write down your golf goals for the coming year. Is this the season you'll break 100? Break 80? Are you going to take 3 strokes off your handicap? Win a tournament, or a flight? I urge you to be very specific about your aspirations and (with ink and paper) commit to them with all your energy because they will never happen otherwise. There is power, genius and magic with the simple act of making your goals and dreams tangible tangible and public. and public.

Practice

Let's look at how you can plan for success in the new golf season. Practicing may actually be the key. Go figure. Coach Herb Wimberly has a general rule that you'll need to hit at least 500 balls before any slight swing change becomes habit. Well, get started. Will you allocate the time to hit 500 practice balls over the next month? Make appointments with yourself to practice. Trust me, it will pay off; maybe literally when you win your bets.

The same principle is true with putting. The more you practice the luckier you get. Make an appointment with yourself to practice your short game. Put it in your day

Recently, I had a fellow tell me, "I'm just a lousy putter and I'll never get any better." Not wishing to give advice where it isn't welcome, I thought to myself, "Friend, what you need most, before any golf lessons and practice time, is a big attitude adjustment."

As Wimberly will confirm, playing your best golf is mostly tied to having a positive attitude. Why wait any longer for your private attitude adjustment. Do it now. Stuck figuring out how? Get help.

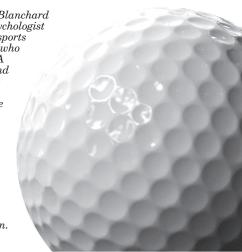

Embarking on a golf game makeover, complete with goals and plans and determination, is going to require you to monitor your progress and measure your results. Keep your stats! Fairways, greens, putts, sand saves, the whole enchilada.

If you don't know where to start and would like to get a handy guide and format in your hands right away, I'll send you one. Just send your request to me at the Bulletin and include a self-addressed-stamped-envelope. Also include any comments, suggestions, ideas and feedback, which are always welcome.

Happy makeover.

ACCE INSIDER

NMSU well-qualified to host championship

Softball tournament coming

There is more respect for NM State coming from the Western Athletic Conference. If you got the idea that Karl Benson and his staff didn't appreciate what they have in southern New Mexico, you need to change that thinking right now.

The Aggies are hosting the WAC softball championship tournament this spring. That in itself is nice, but it is further proof the league office is happy to have NM State as a member. Every sport championship that can be hosted by a member school has come to Las Cruces.

Baseball and swimming are held at neutral sites, but you know McKinley Boston would be happy to host those sports as well. Think about it for a second

The road to the basketball, volleyball, cross country, tennis, golf and now softball postseason championships have all come through our school at one time or another. It can't just be the beautiful weather that keeps Benson and his staff coming back. It has to be something a little deeper. Something like top quality facilities, professional organization and administration and just old-fashioned friendliness that a neighbor shows a neighbor. These sorts of qualities are things worth taking pride in and realizing that you don't have to have to be the biggest to be one of the best.

Ole Pete thinks this is worth pondering since sometimes we are too close to a situation to see all of the good things we have. I say good things but you could add good people too.

A well-run event is a lot more than dusting off the seats and opening the turnstiles. Arrangements for visiting teams' lodging and transportation are something that must be done months in advance and it is on the NM State administrative leaders to make sure it gets done.

Arranging for the teams to have an area and time to practice their sport before they compete and the availability of top quality playing fields is in the mix too. There just has to be an equal opportunity and fair treatment for everyone coming to the tournament even though it is at one team's home.

You have to think our town's commercial community has had a positive effect on all of this too. Clean comfortable hotel rooms, a variety of restaurants and some venues for sight seeing or shopping just add to the spice that makes up an enjoyable visit, win or lose. Take pride Aggie fans, in knowing that the people at the top like what they have added to the conference in NM State.

It will be ladies night

Aggie women to be inducted at FCB's Hall of Fame event

When the First Community Bank Hall of Fame ceremony comes around, it will be "Ladies Night."

For the first time in the history of the hall, all of the inductees are women. Mari Sanchez Galaz, Jane Egan Noble and Rachel Cueller will take their places next to Lou Henson, Charley Johnson and others as being in the elite of NM State athletes.

Back when Title IX came into being, I was among those who felt it was a heavy handed attempt to force change and was sure it would have disastrous effect on the college landscape.

Spending good money to give women an equal playing field as their male counterparts was hard to understand if you were somewhat square-headed.

Women's programs had been ignored at most schools and at the time were emerging from intramural status. It seemed like idiocy to take such a bold step and seemed sure to ruin the male-oriented collegiate sports scene.

Well, I and thousands of others were wrong. Now it is hard to imagine a year of athletic competition at NM State without our women's programs.

Mike Jordan's volleyball

Mike Jordan's volleyball team is a major attraction, pulling in attendance figures that prove fans want to see women play. Likewise, Darin Spence's women's basketball team has a fan base that continues to grow and the NM State soccer program started out with attendance figures that ranked in the top-15 nationwide.

The measure of a successful program can't always be broken down to gate receipts, but 30 years ago few believed that these teams could draw 100 fans regularly. An additional positive of expanding opportunities for women in athletics are in the results of studies that show taking part in competitive sports increases self-esteem and confidence and better prepares participants in dealing with problems and circumstances that everyone faces in real life.

Sanchez Galaz played her high school basketball at Oñate High for another Aggie, Connie Vau. She earned two degrees and now works for the Department of the Defense at White Sands. She led the team in assists all four years and set the school record for 3-pointers in a game with 10. Egan Noble was a member of two NM State conference championship teams and twice was named a Wilson All-American.

Cueller became the standard bearer for cross country runners at the school by leading NM State to the Sun Belt Conference Championship and became the first Aggie to be invited to the NCAA Cross Country Championships.

Country Championships.
So here's to the Class of 2010, they are joining their peers male and female as one. Here is to our growth in learning that change can bring something much better than we imagined.

Weekly one-hour show for Spanish-speaking community

Pastor Vasquez hosts new Christian outreach program on Comcast cable

The Spanish-speaking community in Las Cruces now has its own locally produced Christian outreach program debuting on the Las Cruces Channel 98 (LCC98).

The new one-hour program, called "Luz a Las Naciones," meaning "Light of the Nations," will air 5 p.m. Sundays on the Las Cruces Channel on Comcast cable 98. Hosted by Pastor Freddy Vasquez and his wife, Maria Vasquez, the show will feature discussions with local community members, inspirational music and a spiritual message from Pastor Vasquez.

"The key to our growth has been the interaction with the community and our new church, which is situated in a central location in Las Cruces," Pastor Vasquez said. "With the help of the staff at the Las Cruces Channel we will bring a weekly spiritual message of God to the Spanish

"Our goal is to offer our community programming with local residents doing the shows. People of Hispanic cent of the city's residents," LCC98 President Chris Soular.

Pastor Vasquez said the reason for his passion is a miracle that saved him from a life of gangs and drugs. This miracle changed his heart, giving him a new opportunity in life

The Lord brought me into this city to make a difference in peoples' lives through the preaching of the word of Jesus Christ," Pastor Vasquez said.

The Las Cruces Channel 98 currently broadcasts on weekends both on Comcast Channel 98 and on the Internet at www.lascruceschannel. com. Interested organizations are encouraged to visit the website or call 650-3398.

Pastor Joel Osteen and his wife Victoria will share their ministry Feb. 12 at the Pan Am Center.

'A Night of Hope'

Joel, Victoria Osteen bring ministry to Pan Am Center

Joel and Victoria Osteen, pastors of the largest church in America will hold a worship event at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 12, at the Pan American Center on the New Mexico

State University Las Cruces campus.

"A Night of Hope" with Joel and Victoria Osteen is an outreach of Joel Osteen Ministries. The evening is a time of praise and worship where attendees will hear an inspirational message of hope and God's love from Joel and Victoria along with the electrifying music of Dove Award-winning Cindy Cruse Ratcliff, Steve Crawford and the Lakewood Band and Ensemble.

Joel and Victoria Osteen are pastors for a new generation. Referred to by many as a voice of hope, Joel Osteen reaches one of the largest audiences in the United States and across the globe. Millions of people worldwide are inspired through his weekly television broadcasts, New York Times bestselling books, worship events and popular weekly podcast. He and Victoria are the pastors of one of the largest and most diverse churches in America – the 40,000 strong Lakewood Church in Houston.

Teach boys and girls the importance of respect

Talk about a father's impact on his daughter and what he should hope to accomplish through that relationship.

Fathers have an incalculable impact on their daughters. Most psychologists believe, and I am one of them, that all future romantic relationships are influenced positively or negatively by the way a girl interacts with her dad in the childhood years.

If that is true, then fathers should give careful thought to this responsibility and seek to be what their daughters need of them. There are, I believe, at least seven components to that assignment.

First, a dad's leadership at home should be a model of strength and authority, but always tempered by love and compassion. Harsh discipline tends to close down a sensitive feminine spirit, but permissiveness and capriciousness can create lifelong disdain for men.

Second, a dad must remember that he is being watched closely by that little girl around his knees. The way he treats her mother will teach her volumes about how men and women should relate to one another. Blatant disrespect toward his wife will not be missed by the child.

Third, I think it is good to begin "dating" a daughter when she is 6 years of age, or even earlier. Dad should let the child help plan their evenings and then see that they occur when and where promised. These times together are not intended simply for fun, although that is important. The father can also use them to show his daughter how a man treats a woman he respects. He can open doors for her, help her with her chair and listen attentively when she speaks. Later, when she is a teenager, she will know what to expect – or insist on – from the boys she dates.

Fourth, a dad should always look for ways to build the self-confidence of his little girl. If she believes he thinks she is pretty and "special," she will be inclined to see herself that way. He holds the key to her self-acceptance.

Fifth, a father should keep the lines of communication open throughout childhood so that he is seen as someone to whom his daughter can turn when she needs advice. She will need that counsel before she is grown.

Sixth, God designed men to be the "providers and protectors" of their families. Their daughters should perceive them that way. Dad is often his little girl's "hero," and it is wonderful when that kind of relationship develops.

Seventh, a father must be the spiritual leader of his family, making clear his devotion to Jesus Christ and to the principles in Scripture. He should give the highest priority to bringing up his daughters, and his sons, in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

It's not an easy responsibility raising girls, is it? But those who do the job properly can rest in the knowledge that they have given their daughters the best chance for a successful marriage, if they choose to wed.

Can boys and girls be taught to treat each other with respect? That seems like a tough assignment.

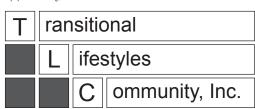

They certainly can! Young people are naturally more sensitive and empathetic than adults. Their viciousness is a learned response, resulting from the highly competitive and hostile world in which they live – a world we have allowed to develop. They are destructive to the weak and lowly because we adults haven't bothered to teach them to feel for one another.

One of the values children cherish most is justice. They are uneasy in a world of injustice and abuse. Therefore, when we teach children respect for others by insisting on civility in our classrooms, we're laying a foundation for human kindness in the world of adulthood to come. It is a fundamental attitude that should be taught in every classroom and every home.

Let's assume two of your new year's resolutions are to get more exercise and improve your diet. You've heard that exercise and a good diet are important, not only to help prolong your life, but also to help you feel better about yourself. You say to yourself, "This is the year in which I'm going to make these resolutions and stick to them."

Let's assume a third new year's resolution is to reduce wasteful time spent on your computer. You've told yourself, "This is the year that I spend less time on social media sites just to find out which friend just ate a delicious tuna fish sandwich, which friend is bored and which friend needs a game piece."

To reach your fitness goals, you don't need to "rob Peter to pay Paul." In other words, you don't need to totally forsake the Internet because of the voice in your head that says you should be on a treadmill instead of online. Instead, use the Internet to help complement your exercise and diet.

Research from a Pew Internet report shows many people are doing just that; they're using the Internet more frequently to find health information. Why not you? Information that can help you change your life and lifestyle is readily available in both English and Spanish on a number of Websites. You can learn new ways to find online health strategies by checking out the following Websites. They will help you track what you eat during the day, start a meal planner and understand different types of fats.

Some of these Websites, such as www.fruitsandveggiesmatter.gov, are interactive. On this site, you choose the Analyze My Plate activity and select a breakfast, lunch or dinner menu and then see how your food choices can make a difference in counting calories or fat.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture offers at least two Websites to help meal planners, provide food pyramid information and furnish other information for new mothers, children and pre-schoolers. These sites are located at www.cnpp.usda.gov (main

Branching out in the community

Physicians Health Choice partnering with LULAC

By NATISHA HALES
The Las Cruces Bulletin

In an effort to reach out to the community, Physicians Health Choice announced a yearlong partnership with the League of United Latin American Citizens with a reception Monday, Jan. 11.

Physicians Health Choice, a Medicare Health Advantage Plan that provides services for those with Medicare throughout Doña Ana and Otero counties, is working to fulfill an obligation to the community, said Community Relations Specialist Jacqueline Gonzalez.

"It came together as part of community efforts to reach more individuals to let them know what we offer," she said. "We are in the business of health care for seniors, but we also have to be good corporate citizens in the community. It's not only important for our patients to be healthy, but also socially active in the community."

The reception also served as a way to foster relationships with community leaders and business leaders. Teaming up at the reception with LULAC and the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, Gonzalez said Physicians Health Choice was able to voice that goal to a diverse group of attendees that included business and community leaders, elected officials, community members and several of the company's physicians.

The partnership with LULAC includes sponsoring events such as Navidad en el Barrio, which benefits underprivileged children.

"We have plans to do things together at senior centers and also at the state level,"

Physicians Health Choice and LULAC entered a yearlong partnership to benefit the community. From left: PHC Marketing Manager Oscar Gallegos, Network Manager Laura Southern, Community Relations Director Jacqueline Gonzalez, New Mexico LULAC President Paul Martinez, PHC Sales Manager Rosendo Martinez, Texas LULAC District 4 Director Elvia Hernandez and Doña Ana County Commissioner Oscar Butler.

Gonzalez said. "We're looking at the needs of the community and being involved in senior-centric activities.

"We just want our demographic to know anyone who has Medicare is eligible to sign up with us. We want the community to know we're there as a resource to guide them through that complex process. We'll absolutely hold their hand through handling their health care. And they can walk through the front door and see a person. We're not just a 1-800 number."

Growing through loss focus of conference

Keynote to address 'compassion burnout'

By Natisha Hales

Though sometimes we may expect it, no one can say they're ready to handle a loss of a loved one. Through its 21st Annual Growing Through Loss Conference, Mesilla Valley Hospice is offering much-needed resources to the community.

much-needed resources to the community.

The conference will be held Thursday and Friday, Feb. 4 and 5, at St. Paul's Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave.

Through the hospice's Center for Grief Services, the community already has access to free grief and bereavement counseling, but this conference is a way for the public and professionals to understand growth through loss, said MVH Marketing Coordinator April Anaya.

"In its 21 years, the conference has evolved," she said. "It's now attended by community members and professionals, and we now offer continuing education units for socials workers, nurses and school counselors. They all attend to get information to professionally serve the community."

The conference begins at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 4, with a free screening of the documentary "Solace: The Wisdom of Dying," by registered nurse Camille Adair of northern New Mexico. In the film, Adair follows hospice patients she was caring for and tells their story, along with the perspective of experts in the field.

"It's a really well-done documentary," Anaya said. "Her big goal was to try and teach all people what we can learn from those on end-of-life care."

The screening will be followed by a question-and-answer session focusing on how the dying teach leaving and how hospice and health care professionals have a special role in sharing their stories and wisdom with mainstream culture.

Grief

books, Rubel also has worked as a bereavement counselor, but has a personal tie with grieving and bereavement as well, Anaya said.

"Her father, a New York police officer, committed suicide when she was pregnant with triplets," she said. "She's going to be a great resource to professionals, but to the general public as well. She has a personal story that will give people a different look."

Her keynote presentation, "Building Resiliency: Preventing Burnout and Compassion Fatigue," will focus on the stress of caring too much and explore ways to cope with a stressful career, distinguish between burnout and compassion fatigue and examine ways to build resiliency in participants' personal and professional lives.

Following Rubel's presentation are several breakout sessions that will run throughout the remainder of the afternoon. Presented by experts in the community, session topics won't just cover loss through death, but also the sense of loss one's family and friends have after incarceration, addiction and mindaltering illnesses such as Alzheimer's disease er's disease.

"It's still a sense of loss because they're not the same person you used to know," Anaya said. "It's still grieving."

The cost to attend Friday's events, including a continental breakfast and lunch, is $25 for New Mexico State University students and $35 for the general public. For those who are attending for continuing education units, the cost is $50.

Free vaccination clinic Jan. 23

The New Mexico Department of Health and Memorial Medical Center will hold an H1N1 immunization clinic from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 23, at Memorial Medical Center, 2450 S. Telshor Blvd. All vaccinations are free and will be available for adults 18 and older.

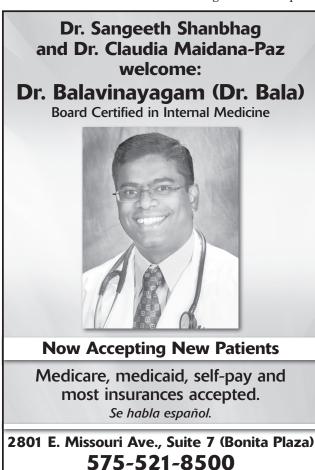

The clinic will be held in the Annex Conference Rooms. People are asked to enter the west parking lot from Terrance Drive and follow signs to the clinic. Those interested can call Memorial Medical Center at 521-5300 for information about the clinic.

Those who cannot attend the H1N1 clinic are encouraged to call their primary health care providers first to ask if they are providing H1N1 vaccine. H1N1 vaccine arrives in New Mexico weekly, so it's important to check often. Those without insurance or a health care provider, or whose provider will not offer the H1N1 vaccine, can get the vaccine from a local public health office. Call the local public health office first to check the availability of H1N1 vaccine. The phone number for the Las Cruces area public health office is 528-5001.

Business is good in Las Cruces

New year, new column, same editor. Hello folks, and welcome to the Las Cruces Bulletin Business Section in 2010.

After coordinating this section for more than a year, I decided now was the right time to start a weekly column.

I've made some observations during my time here, and I want to share them with you.

Business is good in Las Cruces. The right mix of industry exists in the Mesilla Valley to keep our economic livelihood strong for years to come. That's thanks to White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico State University and the robust health care industry in our area. Our weekly columnist, economist Chris Erickson, has been driving that point home all year. The bottom line is we're better off than most and we will probably stay that way for years to come.

Business is friendly in Las Cruces. You won't find a whole lot of cutthroat business owners with shady tactics in this town. Small business owners are family men and women, and franchise and corporate representatives are mostly local and they care about their clients and customers

The real estate industry has taken a hit. Developers, realtors and property owners are working together to restore stability to the housing industry and to the dedicated workforce that supports it. Look for bright spots in the real estate industry this year.

Southern New Mexico is making a strong stand up north.
Thanks to a dedicated business community and local and regional lawmakers, our voice is stronger then ever in Santa Fe. Expect more attention to be paid to Las Cruces, Doña Ana and its surrounding counties as the spaceport, federal courthouse, new city hall and civic center wrap up construction this year. Also, more people locally are getting involved in

Denish talks small business

Lt. Gov. meets with southern NM business owners

By Gabriel Vasquez

Lt. Gov. and gubernatorial candidate Diane Denish stopped by Las Cruces Friday, Jan. 8, to listen to the concerns of small business owners and take the message back to the roundhouse.

Just days before the 2010 Legislative session, which starts Jan. 19, Denish said it was important for her to show support for small business and to start developing a strategy to help struggling business owners in the southern part of the state.

"We're here to see what it's going to take to help them create jobs," she said. 'And there are some obstacles that they're facing.'

In Las Cruces, Denish spoke at the Small Business Development Center, 2345 E. Nevada Ave., to a large group of business owners and area leaders.

Before coming to Las Cruces, Denish hosted roundtable meetings in Alamogordo and Carlsbad. She visited Lea County, Ruidoso and Silver City after Las Cruces.

A major triumph during Denish's time in office, she said, was increasing micro-lending opportunities for small business-es with the help of the Small Business Investment Corp.

"In five years, we have impacted about 1,800 businesses," she said. "And a requirement for those loans is that at least 50 percent have to be outside of the Albuquerque and Santa Fe area. That's how job growth happens in New Mexico, through small businesses.

Access to capital is still a critical problem for many would-be business owners or those looking to expand, Denish said. She said she wants to work with community banks and state microlenders to increase access to that capital as the year development, Denish said, "education is key to the economic stimulus."

She said dual-credit programs have been successful, but must be expanded in the area to continue the move to push students into careers early.

"You're seeing kids choosing their career paths earlier and earlier now," she said.

Teaching methods should be reviewed,

"I think our job is to transform education that makes learning relevant for kids so they can get high-paying jobs," she said. "Instead of them thinking they can graduate, do $7 an hour work and be on easy street."

She said IDEAL New Mexico, an Internet-based learning service provided by the state, has been especially helpful in reaching out to students in rural areas.

"This technology is lifesaving," she said.

"But we have to warm -technology proficient." See Denish on PAGE B3 "But we have to train more teachers to be

Leadership NM makes stop in Las Cruces

By Gabriel Vasquez

The mission of Leadership New Mexico is to develop a group of torchbearers to guide the state's future prosperity and enhance the quality of life. The group's motto is "Shaping One Leader at a Time."

This year, the organization's goals remain the same, and two Las Crucens have joined the distinguished yearlong program. Bryn Davis, operations manager for Sapphire Energy, and Bill Connor, supervisor of customer service for El Paso Electric, are halfway through the program, which starts each year in September.

"I've had an interest in this for years, and I was previously involved as an instructor, so I've recognized the importance of this program from the get-go," Davis said. "We are in our third full session and already, I've learned quite a bit.

Leadership New Mexico takes its core program participants across the state and teaches them about the chosen area's regional economy, history and culture. It also connects them with key business leaders and legislators.

Leadership New Mexico started in 1994 as the New Mexico Leadership Network. Seed money was secured in 1995 and it became a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization. Since then, more than 700 participants from 64 New Mexico communities have participated in the program.

Davis said the exposure to other communities has broadened his perspective on the challenges facing the state.

One of the things that for me, personally, has been very enlightening, is the great focus on the pueblos, the Navajo Nation and the tribes and what impact their activities have on our state," he said.

Connor, born and raised in Las Cruces, said he's learned significantly about other communities by networking with their business and community leaders.

"One of the areas I felt I've always needed more exposure to is the concerns and issues from other parts of the state," he said. "With the networking aspect (of the program), I have been able to build relationships with these leaders, use them as resources and build up my knowledge base.

The organization held one of its six three-day sessions in Las Cruces last week, teaching participants about the Mesilla Valley and economic development related to New Mexico State University and White Sands Missile Range. Participants also connected with local leaders to help develop their own network in southern New Mexico.

A tale of two budgets – which will prevai

LFC recommendations hit Las Cruces, NMSU hard

The state's Legislative Finance Committee and the governor have released budget proposals in anticipation of the 2010 legislative session. On the surface, the two budgets are similar. Projected spending is nearly identical, each calling for appropriations of $5.4 billion. Both cut spending by about the same amount. The LFC budget calls for spending cuts of 2.8 percent and the governor recommends 2.4 percent cuts.

There are some differences. Much of the press attention has been focused on the LFC-recommended 2 percent across-theboard cut in state employee salaries. The governor doesn't impose a salary cut, but rather calls on all state agencies to cut by 3 percent. The governor's approach seems more balanced. After all, the LFC imposes the same salary cut on a janitor earning $18,000 a year as a $100,000-per-year manager. The lack of fairness in that is self-evident.

The overall differences between the two budgets are small in the aggregate, but the cutting sources are quite different. As it turns out, the LFC recommendations are much harsher for higher education, which means bad news for Las Cruces.

The LFC reduces funding for higher education overall by $64.8 million, or 7.6 percent.

For NMSU, main campus funding for instruction is cut by 10.3 percent. Such draconian cuts to NMSU would affect core functions. While no specific plans have yet been announced, reduced class offerings are almost inevitable. It may mean cutting programs. If the LFC proposal stands, it could permanently damage NMSU's ability to perform its mission. Beyond cutting appropriations, the LFC assumes large tuition increases. In-state tuition would be increased by 6 percent, community college tuition by 9 percent and out-of-state tuition by 15 percent. Such tuition increases during a period of high unemployment bring into question access to the university, especially for the least advantaged. In essence, the LFC is funding the budget with a backdoor tax increase. The governor's budget proposal assumes no tuition increases.

Of course, these are tough times. All programs are likely going to take a hit this budget year, but the cuts to higher education are excessive. Higher ed represents 15 percent of the state budget, but accounts for 43 percent of LFC's proposed budget cuts. Higher education is bearing nearly three times its burden. Under the governor's budget proposal, higher education accounts for 6 percent of the cuts.

We are in a recession. Revenues are down. Higher education in general and NMSU in particular can expect budget cuts. But the cuts envisioned by the LFC are short-sighted. If enacted, they would undermine NMSU's core mission. They would result in a poorer quality of education for students.

Economic growth in this century will depend on highly skilled workers. Extreme care needs to be taken to nurture our educational institutions if New Mexico is to remain competitive.

committees at the state level to ensure we get a piece of the pie.

Support for entrepreneurs is strong. Although capital investment money is still hard to come by, the support system is in place for potential business owners who want to open shop. The Arrowhead Center is growing at an impressive rate, and organizations such as the Small Business Development Center, WESST Corp. and SCORE continue their strong support for new and existing business owners. Let's not let those resources go unused or under utilized.

Las Cruces is poised for more growth. Local Census Director Rachel Garcia Banegas told me she's confident that our metropolitan area population exceeds 100,000. We'll have to wait for the official census numbers later this year, but look for more companies relocating to the area after the numbers are released.

Economic development efforts are on the right path. Thanks to the work of Davin Lopez and the rest of the staff at the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance, strong business recruiting is under way to attract more companies specializing in the high-tech, manufacturing and green energy industries. Our environment in southern New Mexico is ideal to support growth in these areas, especially in solar energy development.

Look for our area to gain interest among filmmakers this year. A hotly debated issue (think "Due Date"), the support seems to be stronger than the opposition for bringing more films to the area. Visits from representatives of the governor's film council in 2009 and town hall gatherings hosted by local film professionals were all focused on drawing attention to the area and building a workforce to support that industry. Programs such as the Creative Media Institute and Creative Media Technologies are graduating highly skilled students with a wealth of experience to support the movie and digital media industries. Look for more of them to stay here and develop careers instead of leaving to major film hubs such as California and New York

ing staff, including a team of dedicated journalists, designers and advertising representatives truly care about making your reading experience the best it can be. Special projects such as the 2010 Southwest New Mexico Legislative Guide will have revised content, a vibrant layout and will continue to support our local businesses and nonprofit organizations. Look for additional special sections this year, with revised content and the signature Bulletin touch.

will be an evening of dancing with The Liars. We also have a few surprises for our guests that promise to make the evening one to remember."

The event will honor the members, businesses and organizations that made the greatest contribution to the chamber and the community in 2009.

"The annual banquet allows us to showcase our accomplishments from the previous year, highlight our goals for the coming year and thank the volunteers that make the chamber so successful," Courtney said.

Tickets for the banquet are $65 for members and $130 for non-members. Tables of 10 are available for $650 or can be purchased for $1,000 with special preferred seating and recognition at the event.

The Annual Banquet is also a time during which the new board members and officers are installed for the year, Courtney said. The outgoing chair and outgoing board members will also be recognized for their service. Outgoing board members Bill Connor, David McCollum and Donna Stryker will be recognized for their time and service with the chamber. Incoming board chair Kiel Hoffman will present to the membership his plans for the chamber in 2010.

"We are expecting the annual banquet to be a sold-out affair this year, as usual," said chamber President and CEO Jim Berry. "We will have a waiting list available for those interested in attending that haven't made their reservations yet."

Awards will be presented to businesses and volunteers in the following categories: Business of the Year, Citizen of the Year, Nonprofit of the Year, Volunteer of the Year, Crystal Apple Award and Conquistadore of the Year.

Citizen of the Year honors an individual who has supported the chamber, area businesses and the community as a whole throughout the year.

Business of the Year will be presented to one of the 12 member businesses that have were recognized in the chamber's newsletter in 2009. All 12 business honorees will be further recognized at the banquet.

Denish also said she was open to reviewing state budget cuts that sliced 30 percent from the aerospace engineering program at New Mexico State University.

"I would absolutely want to look at this again," she said. "I'm not a person that thinks you can just cut the budget across the board. We need to look at what we can fund fully, what's working, what has to be put on hold and what isn't working at all. We must continue to fund programs that are attracting students."

Similarly, she noted the importance of Spaceport America as a lure for high paying jobs in the area.

"The spaceport is probably going to hit some delays because of the economy, but we shouldn't lose our vision for that," she said. "The small satellite program at NMSU and the spaceport are complimentary to each other."

Another area Denish said she would be open to reexamining is the way the state handles the purchase and transfers of liquor licenses.

"It might be time to look at this again," she said. "There have been some changes in the liquor industry recently that might allow us to go back and look at it."

To compete with the "very strong liquor lobby" in Santa Fe, Denish said, counties in favor of changing the law should "come together, come to the table and give a strong presentation."

Lastly, Denish said struggling small business owners should plan carefully in the coming year and keep faith that their livelihood will endure past the recession.

"Plan ahead, don't get over your head, be persistent and use the resources available to you," she said. "One of the benefits of hosting these roundtable tours is that many business owners are introduced to resources that they had no idea even existed."

No substitute for effective communication

Professor builds business on occupational writing

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

There is no "ain't." Don't use double negatives and forget about ending a sentence with a preposition.

These time-tested rules of grammar are taught to most kids at an early age. But as students and apprentices turn into professionals, there's a whole new world of communication rules that come into play, said professional communication expert and New Mexico Institute of Technology professor Clinton Lanier.

"What I specialize in is, communication within the workplace," Lanier said. "From things like memos, emails, business correspondence to bigger things like instruction manuals and grant writing."

Lanier, who started his small business Lanier Infomedia in 2009, said there's a great need in the workforce for technical writers, professional communicators and communication consultants.

"I've got a lot of students who are focusing on just this field right now," he said. "The discipline of technical communication is expected to grow at a greater-than-average rate because of the increasing technology in our lives."

And the truth is, in the office, we let our fingers do the talking as much as we do verbally, Lanier said. Often, professionals are in a hurry, quickly blasting off emails with typos, grammatical shortcuts and improper caps usage. But when the message is critical and understanding is key, careful attention to detail, professionalism and intelligence is a must, he said.

"Professional emails should not contain the word 'lol,' but people do that all the time," he said. "A lot of people don't realize how formal email is in the workplace."

Lanier has provided his consulting services for small and large companies for more than six years, he said. He has a bachelor's degree in English, a master's in technical writing and a Ph.D. in rhetoric and professional communication from New Mexico State University. He started his career as an information developer for IBM, where he worked for two years, before moving on to being technical editor for SpecPro and a personal consultant. In 2006, he moved to Tennessee to teach at the University of Memphis before finding a job back home as an assistant professor and director of website redesign at New Mexico Tech.

Clinton Lanier, owner of Lanier Infomedia, provides businesses with technical, professional and business communication consulting services. His business is located "anywhere I take my laptop," he said.

GABRIEL VASQUEZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

"I was starting a family and wanted to move back to this area to start a business," Lanier said. "There's a good network of communication professionals developing here in Las Cruces."

Lanier also emphasizes to his clients the importance of having an understandable, easy-to-use and professional website.

"A business just can't do without it these days," he said.

He specializes in starting websites from scratch or redesigning them to ensure they get the appropriate message across to the target audience as efficiently as possible, he said.

"You'd be surprised what difference having the right meta tags can do for a business website," he said. "One-size-fitsall websites don't work that well. The cookie cutter approach doesn't work."

Often, Lanier said, web developers or web hosting companies will "oversell," the client, providing them with services, at an extra cost, that the company doesn't need or can go without.

"The business should understand exactly what they need, and that's where the professional help comes in," he said. "The companies that don't get this type of help will fall behind."

Lanier, a Mayfield High School graduate, said the appeal of starting his own business was not just being his own boss, but helping small businesses succeed to grow the economic base in his hometown.

grow the economic base in his hometown.

"That's one of the greatest satisfactions for me," he said. "I feel very fortunate to be in this type of business."

The only downfall, Lanier said, is that anywhere he lays his laptop is his office.

"It can be tough to get away from work sometimes," he said, "because I can work

But it does help with the overhead costs, he said, which are little to none.

And when a job's too big to tackle himself, he hires colleagues, former and current students as contractors to help with the project.

"It's good to know the network of professionals in this area," he said.

Q&A:

Talking business with owner Clinton Lanier

What inspired you to go into business?

I was doing consulting work for the past six years, and I thought it was time to start a business. I have more than 10 years of experience in this field.

Where do you see your business in five years?

I think it will definitely grow. I'm one of the only people doing this type of work in Las Cruces. Most similar businesses are in Albuquerque.

What's the most important thing about your business you wish people knew? This is not a service that might help shops for businesses, he said, so that all employees can be on the same page and develop a standard operating procedure.

This is not a service that might help a business, this is a service that will help a business.

He added that something as simple as a business plan, proposal or a bid should be written in an effective and professional manner, and often, that requires consulting with an expert.

"Businesses must succeed through communication," he said. "This is not a service that might help a business, this is a service that will help a business."

Hispano chamber names new director

AMANDA OLIVAREZ CRUZ,

Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces has announced the hiring of Amanda Olivarez Cruz as its new executive director.

Olivarez Cruz is the former banking center manager for BBVA Compass Bank of Las Cruces. She joined the chamber in September 2009 on an interim basis to replace outgoing executive director Rachel Garcia Banegas, who stepped down to take a position with the U.S. Census Bureau.

"I'm very excited to be here, I see so much potential in this organization," Olivarez Cruz said. "I look forward to a very productive year."

Olivarez Cruz is a native of Tulia, Texas, where she began her career in banking in 1996. In addition to working for BBVA, she has worked for Wells Fargo and served on the Tulia City Council for three years.

Hispano chamber board president Gilbert Apodaca said the chamber's Hiring Committee interviewed five applicants for the position, but that Olivarez Cruz' financial expertise and leadership skills stood out above the rest.

"Amanda believes and demonstrates our mission on a daily basis," Apodaca said. "She knows the importance of serving our membership, keeping members and adding new members. We have special events throughout the year that she will take the lead on. She works closely with the Education Committee to assure the Middle School Recognition Program is a success and she's committed to our priorities. With her leadership qualities, we will be successful."

Hispano chamber board member John Muñoz also said Olivarez Cruz will be especially helpful in the chamber's efforts to promote workforce development through its popular educational recognition program. "With Amanda's communication and leadership skills, we will be able to effectively advocate for economic growth through our early educational focus and workforce development program," he said.

Olivarez Cruz said her priorities for 2010 include retaining and growing membership, meeting with business owners and planning and promoting the events the chamber puts on every year.

"I'm going to give 100 percent to each one of our members," she said. "I will also plan and schedule to make sure our annual events, such as the banquet and golf tournament, continue to be successful.

She added that moving to Las Cruces has been a blessing.

"I love Las Cruces," she said. "I'm from a small town, but Las Cruces still has that small town feeling, and that's what I love about it. Everyone has been wonderful to me and I feel very blessed to be here. The community has really supported me.

He traveled to find his way back home

Realtors' spokesperson, lobbyist brings a wealth of international experience to job

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

Isaac Chavez traveled the world in his youth, joined the military, started and ran a business in another country and came back home to share his talents with the community that helped raise him. Chavez, the governmental affairs director and spokesperson for the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR), said he's glad he made the move back home, not just to start a family and return to his roots, but to advocate for some of the hardest working people in town – Realtors.

watchdog. He regularly attends city council, county commission, planning and zoning, development review and ratepayer advisory meetings. But here's the catch – if it wasn't included in his job description, he would probably attend them anyway,

"I've had a passion for politics since I was very young," he said. "No particular reason. It's just always interested me."

Chavez grew up in Las Cruces. He's a fifth-generation Chavez from the area, he said. In his youth, he traveled and lived across Europe with his father.

"I've lived in Malta and Spain," he said. "Spent a lot of time in London, Germany and north Africa. It was a unique experience for a kid from Las Cruces."

Chavez joined the New Mexico Military Institute at age 15, where he stayed for six years before attending New Mexico State University to earn his bachelor's degree in government.

After graduating, Chavez joined the service as a member of Judge Advocate General's (JAG) Corps.

"JAG Corps is reserved mostly for lawyers and paralegals," he Instead going into the legal field, Chavez enlisted as a reservist and took his college friend up on an opportunity to teach English in Japan.

There, he taught at a remote fishing village outside of Nagasaki. Citing his inherent knack for business, Chavez said he thought he could do it better, and started his own teaching school, Isaac's School of English, which he ran successfully in Nagasaki for four years with the help of his new bride, Ellie Chavez.

"I went to Japan and fell in love," he said. "Which was the best thing that could have harmoned to me."

have happened to me.'

Chavez and his wife returned to the Mesilla Valley in 2004, where he said they had a "lavish" wedding at the San Albino Catholic Church in Mesilla. The trip to Las Cruces reminded Chavez of life back home, he said, and he asked his wife to return to the states with him to start a family.

"We started a family, closed up the school in Japan and came back here," he said. "Before we left, our school was teaching four different languages and I was somewhat of a local celebrity there.

Chavez' face was on billboards, taxis and myriad other advertisements throughout Nagasaki, he said. But still, he felt the need to return home.

"During the time I was in Japan, I was still very active politically," he said. "When I came back in 2005, I thought about my dream of getting into politics, so I decided to pursue it."

Chavez ran for both state Senate and City Council but was defeated.

"It was a great learning experience," he said. "After being gone for so long, I really got to know my community again. It was the right time for me to come back and Chavez dabbled in a couple of business ventures, including buying a laundromat, before joining the real estate boom.

"When I closed my laundromat down, my sister recommended that I get into real estate," he said. "And I was very successful doing that.'

Chavez worked for EXIT Realty, during which time he stayed involved in politics by serving as vice chairman of the city's parks and recreation board. He also joined the LCAR Board of Directors and the Realtors Political Action Committee.

It was his wealth of personal, professional and political experience that led him to his current post as governmental affairs director and spokesperson for LCAR.

"I had to give up my real estate license and my position on the board, but it was worth it," he said. "I was hired on my

Today, Chavez is busy cranking out press releases, updating LCAR's Facebook page, networking with city leaders, business owners and politicians and attending dozens of meetings and professional development seminars throughout the country.

"I'm a lobbyist now," he said. "And I think my career has been suited for that position.

Chavez said real estate is the third most regulated industry in the U.S., and as such, has to keep a pulse on all legislative activity that could affect the livelihood of the Realtors he represents.

"I invest so much time and energy into making sure that some lawmaking body doesn't put unnecessary requirements or regulations that would make it harder for Realtors to do their job," he said. "I'm like the last line of defense between undue regulatory burden and my Realtors making a decent living."

Chavez deals with issues such as impact fees, property tax increases, utility rate increases and affordable housing on a daily basis, he said.

"Two wins we had last year: The domestic chicken proposal and the decision against shorter setbacks. We fought those tooth and nail," he said.

Some of LCAR's priorities for 2010 include impact fees, utility rate increases and the possible requirement of sprinkler systems in all new homes, he said.

"And we will have a seat at the table to discuss those issues," he said. "Because that's what good lobbyists do."

Friends, neighbors perform at LCCT One-Act Play Festival

Community theater stages festival over two weekends

By Kristine Sandrick

Community theater is a gift. It's an outlet for regular folks - friends, neighbors and coworkers - to express their creativity. Whether they prefer to write, direct or act, the community is the beneficiary of their public display of talent. Their words, stories and characters come to life before our eyes.

Since 1963, the Las Cruces Community Theatre (LCCT) has staged more than 250 plays, giving community writers, directors and actors a venue to perform for local audiences. Five more plays are being added to the roster Friday, Jan. 15 through Sunday, Jan. 24, as the LCCT presents a festival of one-act performances at its Downtown Mall location.

Directors were invited to submit published or unpublished one-act plays.

"We are looking for the opportunity to see the work of new directors," said Nikka Zeimer, a long-time theatrical person who is on the LCCT board and produced the one-act plays in 2008.

The theater group made a departure from the one-act scene in 2009, hosting a statewide one-act competition instead. Theater companies from the four corners of New Mexico came to Las Cruces to perform. The LCCT won with "I Remember You" and went on to the regional competition in Kerrville, Texas.

"It's a real plus to get original plays and this year we are fortunate in that we have new directors," Ziemer said.

James Jensen, retired from the Air Force, is premiering his own original one-

"We get to see his work as a playwright and as a director," Ziemer said.

The two met last year when she was directing "Look Homeward Angels" for the LCCT and Jensen, who has a background in theater, was the stage manager.

"He did a great job. Now, we get to see him in his original play and his directorial debut," she said.

Ziemer said audiences also will be able to see Marshall Vickers directing for the first time. Vickers is directing the published play, "Nobody Sleeps."

Shawn Hatfield, LCCT board member and house and stage manager, is also making his directorial debut with Madelyn Browning's first play, "Confessions.

"We also have Les Boyce directing his own original one act spoof on Shakespear's 'Hamlet,'" Ziemer said.

Boyce is not a new director, but the play is all his.

"Basically, what we'll be seeing for two weekends is the work of new directors and new one-act plays," Ziemer said.

Ziemer is no rookie to the stage, having been involved with high school and college productions. She's been in Las Cruces for 25 years and has been active with the community theater.

"I got involved with the community theater in 2004 ... I helped Phil and Ceil Herman at the Black Box and have acted at Hershel Zohn," she said.

Ziemer said the LCCT has been planning these shows since the fall, with auditions being held over two Sunday evenings in mid-December.

"One of the big challenges is the rehearsal time over the holidays," she said.

By definition, everyone one involved is from, well, the community.

"It goes from students at the university to retired people," Ziemer said, "and gives people the opportunity to see new talent emerging in our community, whether its people who have moved here or students who are coming of age to direct. It also exposes the community to one-act plays."

The LCCT doesn't produce one-act plays during its regular season.

When the LCCT was launched in the '60s, the first play was produced in the churchyard at St. Genevieve's Catholic church, which at the time was across from the Rio Grande Theatre. Since then, the theater has found its home on the Downtown Mall and has staged everything from original works to Broadway

More than 20 members of the community are involved in the one-act plays including extras, stagehands and the production team. It all takes place over the next two weekends at the LCCT, 313 N. Downtown Mall. The five plays take about the same amount of time as one traditional play with intermission.

Cost is $5 for general admission and free for season ticket holders. Call 532-1200 or visit www.lcctnm.org.

It's good 'The Boys are Back'

But someone else will have to do the cooking

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG For the Las Cruces Bulletin

With schmaltz opportunities abounding, director Scott Hicks ("Shine" and "Snow Falling on Cedars") carefully negotiates the minefield of emotions with only a few stumbles in this quietly moving and humorous film, which stars the heartthrob of many, Clive Owen.

Owen, whom I saw at a glance when he appeared at a special screening of the film at the Mill Valley Film Festival in October, 2009, did not acknowledge my presence or help revive my wife who swooned as he walked by to get into his waiting vehicle.

Theron sizzles in 'The Burning Plain'

Two screenings set for complex film shot in and around Las Cruces

The CineMatinee for Saturday, Jan. 16, is "The Burning Plain," much of which was filmed in and around Las Cruces (2009, 110 minutes, rated R).

The Mexican screenplay writer Guillermo Arriaga has an impressive record of well-received, multi-narrative dramas: "Babel," "21 Grams" and "Amores Perros." He has a gift for revealing the mystery of human personality and the consequences of the choices we personality and the consequences of the choices we make in our lives. In his debut as a director, he takes a multidimensional look at the reasons behind the self-destructive behavior of Sylvia (Charlize Theron), a restaurant manager in Portland, Ore.

The back-story strands include the love affair between Mexican-American Nick Martinez (Joaquim Almeida) and Gina (Kim Basinger). They are both married, but get involved in a passionate relationship in New Mexico. They die in bed together when a fire sweeps through the place in the desert where they have been having sex. At his father's funeral, Nick's teenage son Santiago (J. D. Pardo) sees Gina's daughter Mariana (Jennifer Lawrence). Out of mutual curiosity, they begin a relationship that is fraught with danger and strangeness.

The other back-story deals with Santiago (Danny Pino) who is a single parent of 12-year-old daughter, Maria. He works as a crop-duster. Her life is upended when he is involved in an accident and decides to take some drastic action.

Theron gives a searing performance as Sylvia, the woman with a dark past of pain, loneliness and anger. She has turned into a person who casually has sex with strangers but does not enjoy it. When Carlos (Jose Maria Yazpik), Santiago's best friend, shows up in Portland, she knows that he has something important to tell her.

In "The Burning Plain," Arriaga again demonstrates the skill and ease in his mastery of the multinarrative medium. We find ourselves bonding with Sylvia as she faces a challenge familiar to most of us: the need to come to grips with the past and put

The Fountain Theatre will screen this movie twice – at 1:30 and 4:15 p.m. – on Saturday, Jan. 16. Admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. Call 524 2327

But that's OK, he makes up for that by turning in a nice performance as suddenly single dad, Joe Warr, an Australian newspaper sportswriter.

When his wife suddenly dies of cancer, Warr is completely unprepared to take on the duty of both parents, but nonetheless does so, in a kind of well meaning but sometimes dangerous method of what might be called "primal" parenting.

Most anything goes for Artie, his younger son from this marriage, and things change dramatically when his slightly older son, Harry, decides to join the fray, known as the Warr household. Driving on the beach while sitting on the hood of the Range Rover is all part of a day's schedule, along with complete disregard for good eating habits, as cold cereal becomes the seven major food groups by proxy.

For the most part, Warr is overwhelmed and reticent about giving up the lifestyle he shared with his wife, which mostly included weekend fathering as he loped around the (beautifully shot) Australian countryside, covering his favorite sports, players and teams for a metro daily paper.

The women that happen into the film, except for the ghostly appearance of his wife, Katy, who offers great maternally-based advise when Warr is about to come apart, all fall into pretty much the same category annoying. The nosy mother-in-law and ex-wife all object wholeheartedly to what is going on, even though Warr's parenting skills work well for what he is doing with his

A neighbor woman comes onto Warr as a possible love interest, only to find that she is soon relegated to the role of housekeeper in the decidedly (as time goes by) more settled Warr household.

"The Boys are Back" turns in terrific performances by Owen and young Nicholas McNulty, and this combined with a refreshed version of an old story beautifully photographed, help to make the film something that appeals to all, while escaping the "chick flick" label.

Skip the silly title of this film, which makes it sound like a gangster reunion piece, and enjoy the acting provided by Owen and the mostly believable story of fatherhood discovered.

Jeff Berg is a board member of the Mesilla Valley Film Society. These reviews reflect his opinion of the movie only, not that of anyone else connected with the film society. Jeff Berg was raised in a single parent household for which he is glad. Write me at jeffberg@lascrucesbulletin.com

FEATURED ARTIST

George Mendoza: Conquering the world from his backyard

Internationally renown artist's Mulberry Tree painting inspires design for fabric collection

imagination

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Years ago, George Mendoza painted a mulberry tree in his backyard at 1830 Baldwin Drive. The tree - and Mendoza - have now gone worldwide.

Mendoza's "Wise Tree" painting is the inspiration for a collection of fabrics that began international distribution in the fall of 2009 via Westminster Fibers, Inc., an England-based company with a division in North Carolina. Westminster bought the rights to 37 of Mendoza's painting designs for its Free Spirit brand of clothing, bedding, quilts, table clothes and more.

A second collection will be out in May. The collection is currently ranked No. 7 in sales in the international quilt market. Mendoza's designs are in North America, Europe, Great Britain, Asia and Australia.

"It's a fluke that has gone worldwide," he said. "It's like blind guy gone wild." Mendoza, who is legally blind, is Mendoza, who is legally blind, is something of a legend. He has been the subject of two PBS documentaries. He has published novels, shown his paintings worldwide and ran in the Olympic games for people with disabilities in 1980 and 1984, posting a 4:17 mile. He has traveled the world as a motivational speaker.

At age 15, he became legally blind due to a rare form of macular degeneration. After living in limbo for several years, Mendoza said he first found solace in running, then later in painting, writing and filmmaking.

"It's the power of imagination," he said. "There are no limitations to the mind's eye."

The artist in his "studio" at 1830 Baldwin Drive.

What color is the wind?

Mendoza said his vision is approximately 20/800. "I live in a world of gray mist with colors on top of it," he said.

The colors and shapes – dazzling, whirling, bright – are with him all day. When he was 15, a girl who was born blind asked him, "What color is the wind?"

A Franciscan friar also encouraged him to paint his visions, and by the early 1990s, Mendoza had taken up painting seriously.

"The art came out of the tragedy," he said. "Adversity can crush people, but it can also bring greatness. I'm lucky to be blessed with many gifts. Painting is a gift, I think"

He has created more than 250 paintings, most of them done at his home studio.

"The backyard is where the imagination flows. The sunlight is so beautiful, so powerful. I put up my easel, pop open a can of Coca-Cola. My neighbors think I'm insane," he said with a laugh.

He said his images, which are bright and cheerful, seem to have hit a chord during a time of recession.

"My art is free and full of spirit," he said. "I guess that is something people need at this time."

Quilters in particular have been taken by his designs, he said. His work will be the theme of next year's Las Cocheras' President's Quilting Challenge: "By George." When his agent, Ketra Oberlander of the Art of

When his agent, Ketra Oberlander of the Art of Possibility Studios in California, called him in the summer of 2009 to tell him that he had a cotton fabric deal, he didn't think much about it.

"I didn't plan this at all," he said. "I worked hard and "I didn't plan this at all," he said. "I worked hard and got lucky. My art hit the digital age. The strange thing is that what I've really been working on is the script."

Mendoza and collaborator James Nathan Post are hoping to finish the script of "Touching the Sun," a feature film about Mendoza's life as a runner, speaker and artist, by the spring.

"I want Hollywood to meet the art world and be razzle-dazzled," he said.

'It's OK to see different'

Mendoza has lived in Las Cruces for 37 years. "I could never live anywhere else," he said. "What

"I could never live anywhere else," he said. "Wha would I do in New York?"

The warmth and support of family and friends and the people of Las Cruces has been tremendous, he said. He gives special credit to Thomas Kindig, who designed his website, and Frank Castillo, friend of 35 years. His art is so deeply influenced by the desert, he said, that not only must he be in Las Cruces, but he must stay at 1830 Baldwin Drive.

"I'm kind of superstitious," he said. "As though the creativity comes from 1830 Baldwin. If I left, would it stop?"

Though he loves "being the messenger with the message," he put aside motivational speaking after air travel became too cumbersome. He wrote 10 fantasy novels, which he describes as "the 'Wizard of Oz' meets 'Braveheart," and published three of them.

"Right now, it's the feature film," he said. "After that, who knows? I just roll with it."

His message, he said, has been the same. "Dream big and take risks," he said. "My mother taught me that. The imagination is powerful. Maybe blindness isn't such a bad thing. It's OK to see different in this world."

Fruit, sherbet concoctions are good for what ails you

By Kristine Sandrick

Cold and flu season is upon us but you can help keep germs at bay by enjoying a healthful smoothie from Keva Juice.

Located across from New Mexico State University and a toss-of-an-apple west of Kinkos, Keva Juice is one of a dozen such shops in the state. Robin Jenkins manages this store.

We make the best-tasting smoothie and offer nutrition in the tastiest form we can," she said.

Smoothies are blended concoctions loaded with fruit, juice and sherbet, and can be jazzed up with supplements to help cure what ails you. There are also non-dairy choices, which are made with honey rather than sherbet.

Jenkins said there are many different flavors and combinations, with the recipe options listed on a menu board. Customers can order a smoothie by name or create their own drinks.

Sunday 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The most popular smoothies, Jenkins said, are Passion Paradise - made with mango and guava juice, peaches, strawberries and pineapple sherbet; Lime Me – raspberry juice, strawberries, raspberries and lime sherbet; and Mellow Mango – strawberries, peaches, mango juice and pineapple sherbet. Smoothies come in 12, 24 and 32 ounces. Prices range from $1.63 for a shot to just over $4 for a large

While the drinks come in a variety of flavors and sizes, things get more interesting when you add a supplement.

Consider adding vitamins, chromigizer - which controls metabolism, protein, fiber, immunigizer – with Echinacea or Kevagizer – ginseng and bee pollen, a natural stimulant for the brain "that helps you receive energy without the effects of an energy drink," Jenkins said. There are also supplements for stress relief, which are some of the shop's most popular.

"With any size smoothie, you get one free supplement and every additional supplement is 47 cents," Jenkins said. "The most popular supplements are Keva and the stress relief." $\ensuremath{\mathsf{E}}$

Keva is made from wheat grass.

For just $1.63, including tax, you can down antioxidants in a shot of wheat grass or acai. The benefits are amazing, Jenkins said.

STEVE MACINTYRE I The Las Cruces Bulletin

Keva Juice is open seven days a week and offers blended, healthful beverages and supplements.

Some people who are really busy will come in and take two shots of wheat grass a day," she said.

Yum, right?

"We cut it off while its growing so it's as fresh as possible. You get the most amount of nutrients as possible the moment it's cut it starts losing nutrients," Jenkins said.

Custom smoothies can be conjured up on the spot, so if you feel like an apple you can have apple.

"We can do whatever you want," she said.

What about calories?

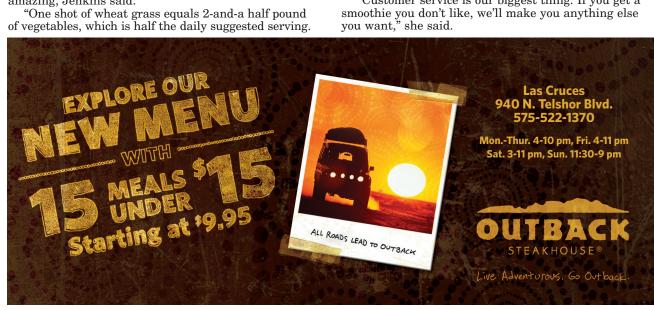

The calorie count varies among Keva Juice's offerings because the sherbets have different calorie counts, Jenkins said. The Liquid Olympian has the highest number of calories with 271 per serving. Made from orange juice, honey, bananas, strawberries and peaches, the Olympian probably gets its calories and carbs from the fruit and honey.

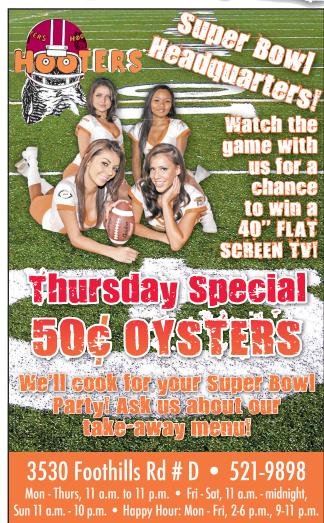

The lowest is Berry Berry Good," Jenkins said. It's made with raspberry juice, raspberries, blueberries and yogurt for approximately 140 calories.

She suggests that people have a Keva meal a day instead of a piece of pizza because the fruit, supplements and juice in a smoothie are much more healthful with the protein and nutrients it contains.

"It's better for you than a cheeseburger that has empty calories," she said. "Plus, Keva juice is really good when you're sick because the amount of nutrients in the vegetable content is a massive immune boost and is good to fight off colds."

People who aren't feeling well swear by it, she added. 'Customer service is our biggest thing. If you get a smoothie you don't like, we'll make you anything else

'Daybreakers' doesn't have much bite

to keep horror

Stylish film not going to set the world on fire

By JIM HILLEY

When I was given the assignment to review "Daybreakers," I wasn't all that excited about it. I am not a fan of the horror genre, with terrified victims walking foolishly into ambush after ambush by whatever nasty and evil creatures that inhabit the world of that particular movie. You want to scream at the characters "Hey, your in a horror flick, maybe you shouldn't be walking backwards in the woods at night!" I can definitely live without movies like that.

"DAYBREAKERS"

Running Time: 98 minutes Director: Spierig Brothers Starring: Ethan Hawke, Sam Neill and Willem Defoe

But "Daybreakers' actually edges a little closer to the sci-fi realm than just being a horror flick, though it does have its startling moments and enough blood and mayhem to keep horror aficionados happy.

In "Daybreakers," a vampire epidemic caused by a bat-bite in Central America has turned almost everyone into bloodsuckers and the few humans left are on the run. When they are caught, they are hooked up to huge machines that farm their blood.

Unfortunately for the vampires, the supply of human blood is dwindling quickly. When the vampires face blood deprivation they rapidly transform from still humanlike vampires into subsiders – more animalish and batlike than human and desperate for blood. As the blood supply dwindles, more and more vampires descend into subsiderdom, causing a rapidly escalating security problem. Not a pretty sight.

The creatures in the movie are the work of special effects powerhouse Weta, and are well done, but vampires that explode in flames when shot by an arrow are a little silly.

Edward Dalton (Ethan aficianados happy. Hawke) is a hematologist working for the preeminent blood-producing corporation. That company is headed by the greedy Charles Bromley, juicily played by Sam Neill of "Jurassic Park" fame.

Dalton and his team of scientists are under tremendous pressure to come up with a blood substitute before a lack of blood turns everyone into a subsider.

As Dalton is traveling home from work in the pre-dawn hours an accidental meeting with some humans in the wild leads him to a rendezvous with Lionel "Elvis" Cormac (Willem Defoe), a leader of the human guerilla movement.

It turns out Cormac was once a vampire, but due to some unusual circumstances he has been cured of the vampire disease and he has regained his human nature.

The plot of this movie is fairly predictable, but directors Michael and Peter Spierig pull the film off with a lot of style. Neill and Defoe do a great job with their roles and Defoe is able to deliver some great one-liners. Hawke does well in his role, but it just doesn't have a lot of meat to it. In fact, almost all of the characters in "Daybreakers" could have used a little more character development.

One of the better aspects of "Daybreakers" is the fun the movie has at the upside down world of vampires. Pay attention to the little background details of life in the movie and you'll get a couple of good chuckles out of it.

Southeast meets Southwest architecture

Mississippi family's home reflects the local culture

By BETH SITZLER The Las Cruces Bulletin

When Gene and Amy Ramsey moved to Las Cruces from Mississippi, they wanted their new home to reflect the one-of-a-kind architectural style of the Southwest.

"We came from the Southeast and this style was very unique to us," Amy Ramsey said. "We wanted to stay true to that style."

With the help of Ray Franich Construction in 2004, the Ramseys did just that when they built their home at 5498 Saddle Ridge Court, which features kiva fireplaces, tile floors, nichos, Santa Fe wall texture, vigas and beams.

"I love the nichos," Ramsey said.
"We tried not to waste any space at all."

To enhance the architectural features of the home, Ramsey said about three years ago she painted several walls, shelves and nichos various Southwestern colors.

"I had seen the local area and had seen my friends' homes and I noticed recurring colors that went with the Southwest style. It complemented our architecture," she said. "I wanted it to be colorful. I used the same colors but in different variations."

Located on a culde-sac in the Summit Chase subdivision, Ramsey said they chose the corner lot for its view of the Organ Mountains and privacy.

"My husband grew up in the country, so we wanted to live in an area that didn't have any road noise," she said. "We also wanted a view of the mountains since we're from Mississippi and that is unique to us."

When guests drive up the gravel driveway to the home, they are surrounded by native plants, including multiple varieties of cacti from Sal "The Cactus Man" out of El Paso.

"We tried to keep all of the colors natural," she said. "We wanted the natural desert to go with the adobe style of our home."

Once guests are past the courtyard and through the large wooden door, they are greeted with ceramic tile floors, splashes of turquoise and red and tall ceilings.

"It's a really special home," Ramsey said. "A lot of thought and planning went into the design and landscaping of it"

While the family chose to use ceramic tile for the home's flooring, they used travertine marble to decorate the walls and two fireplaces.

"Ceramic is the best surface," Ramsey said of the durable material.

Using a split-floor plan design with the shared living areas at the center of the home, the master bedroom is located away from the three other bedrooms.

"You can have privacy and fellowship," Ramsey said. "It's a great family home and a great entertaining home. We tried to have fewer and bigger rooms so the home was open and spacious."

The master bedroom, located next to the study, features a door to the patio. The bathroom consists of a Jacuzzi bathtub, walk-in closet, separate granite sinks and a large walk-in shower.

While two of the bedrooms feature soft, earth-tone colors, their daughter's room has bright turquoise, orange, fuchsia, lime green and purple walls.

Ramsey said her favorite areas of the home are the kitchen and great room, which features vigas in a spoke pattern extending from the fireplace.

"We have an absolutely fabulous kitchen," she said. "It has a galley-style working area, a baking area, a nook and an elevated bar."

how to arrange their appliances for the most convenient use.

"It's a very efficient kitchen," she said. "I thought it was a very unique kitchen."

As with the front yard, the backyard also features a variety of native plants. With the help of a landscaper, the Ramseys designed a backyard that is both functional and ornate.

"We put in a lot of planning into the backyard," Ramsey said. "We didn't put any cactuses in the backyard because that is where we spend most of our time."

Instead of using the prickly plant, the family used drought-tolerant trees in the backyard, such as crepe myrtle and decorative plum and ash trees, all of which are connected to a drip system for easy core.

system for easy care.

The family also brought a piece of the Southeast to their Southwest backyard by planting a magnolia tree, which is the Mississippi state tree.

"We took a trip to Tucson, to the University of Arizona," Ramsey said. "It's a beautiful campus and I was surprised to see the magnolia tree everywhere. I wouldn't have thought, but the magnolia tree is very drought-resistant. It has very fragrant blossoms with a lemony scent."

The Ramseys also created a decorative and functional arroyo in the backyard as well as a fish pond and fountain.

A flagstone walkway leads guests from the circular patio to the Jacuzzi while stairs lead to the viewing deck, great for enjoying the Las Alturas area.

Since putting their home on the market, Ramsey said they have received positive feedback from visitors.

"Everyone loves the color, the layout, the backyard," she said, adding that she hopes the home's new owners will love the home as much as they have. "We really enjoyed living there. It's a very comfortable, private, quiet place to be." Details

Household product can repel bugs, treat pimples

By Beth Sitzler

Smudges, spots, dirt and grime around the house don't stand a chance against the spraying power of window cleaner.

Window and glass cleaners were invented in 1933 by Erich Drafahl, the founding father of Windex. The product was first stored in a tin container until the creation of the spray bottle in the mid-20th century.

Designed to clean a plethora of surfaces, including glass and tile, the product originally contained detergent, ammonia, fragrance and blue dye. Nowadays, the solution can be found in a variety of fragrances and colors and can include a number of additives, such as vinegar and lemon, lime or orange juices.

The cleaning product became a pop culture icon thanks to the 2002 film "My Big Fat Greek Wedding," in which the spray was used to cure all ailments.

While some may have been surprised by Gus Portokalos' excessive use of the spray product in the hit movie, window cleaner does have several uses in addition to making glass sparkle.

1. Remove clothing stains: As hard as removing an ink stain from fabric can be, there is a solution. Spray the spot with window cleaner and let it dry. After the cleaner has fully dried, spray the area again and wash the garment with cold water. Don't put the item in the dryer until the stain is completely gone and don't try this on silk, wool or their blends. Be sure to do a test on a seam or hardly-seen area of the clothing before treating a large portion to make sure the color doesn't run. If the garment's color changes, moisten the fabric with white vinegar and rinse with cold water. The acid in the vinegar will neutralize the alkaline ammonia in the cleaner.

2. Reduce a pimple: It may seem strange to think of window cleaner as a beauty product, but the ammonia in the liquid can help reduce pimples. Wet a cotton ball with the solution and dab the area. Let it sit for a few minutes before washing it off with soap. Make sure you're not allergic to the ingredients in the cleaner before trying this trick.

3. Slip off a stuck ring: If a ring has become stuck on your finger, removing it will be a breeze with window cleaner. Just spray the cleaner on your finger and gently pull off the ring. The spray will work as a lubricant, allowing the jewelry to slide off with ease.

4. Relieve a bee sting: If you have a close encounter with a bee, reduce the swelling and pain of the sting by squirting the spot with a small amount of window cleaner. This trick will only work with window cleaners that contain ammonia and aren't concentrated. Also, if the stinger is attached to the skin, be sure to flick it away before spraying.

Homemade Window Cleaner

1/2 cup ammonia 1/2 cup water 1/2 cup rubbing alcohol

Combine the three ingredients and pour the mixture into a spray bottle. Use the homemade cleaner on glass, tile countertops, stainless steel, linoleum floors and car windows and windshield. Wipe up the cleaner in a circular motion with either a soft cloth or crumpled newspaper.

5. Make your gold shine: Window cleaner makes a great cleanser for metal jewelry and crystalline gemstones, such as diamonds and rubies. Spray the piece and gently scrub it with an old toothbrush. Don't try this with opaque stones, such as opal or turquoise, or organic gems, such as coral or pearl, since the ammonia and detergents can discolor these porous items.

6. Rid your home of bugs: It can be a nuisance to rid your home of infiltrating insects such as ants and gnats. One way to get the job done is to use window cleaner. Repel gnats by spraying the cleaner into their vicinity. The spray will also kill ants and keep them away.

7. Clean your floor: If you want to clean your linoleum flooring and don't have time to use a soapy bucket of water, grab your window cleaner. After sweeping the floor, spray a small area with the cleaner and rub it with either a paper towel or Swiffer sheet. This method allows you to clean a big or small area in no time and because the spray dries quickly, you won't have to wait to walk on the floor.

DA discusses changes to the state if elected

Susana Martinez speaks to BIA-SNM about running for governor

By BETH SITZLER

Doña Ana County District Attorney Susana Martinez, who is running for governor, spoke to the Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico (BIA-SNM) during its monthly meeting Tuesday, Jan. 12, and said big government is hurting business in the state.

Martinez, who was named Heart Magazine's Woman of the Year in 2007 and ran unopposed for the DA post in 2008, said she has proven herself

she has proven herself as a leader through her work in the

She said careless spending by Richardson and Lt. Gov. Diane Denish has contributed to the growing deficit.

"They want taxpayers to bail them out," she said of possible tax increases. "Our current government has put us in this position because of overspending, waste and fraud."

Martinez said the District Attorney's Office has also felt the effects of the deficit and has drastically reduced its spending in several ways, including not filling five vacant positions and even going as far as to keep its computer paper under lock and key.

Martinez said the current government also hasn't been business friendly and has in fact pushed industries, such as oil and gas, out of the state to other areas, including Texas.

"The state isn't competitive anymore," she said. "It's not business friendly."

She said there is too much red tape for small business owners to cut through and not enough license and regulation transparency, which can be discouraging and detrimental to a business.

"The government doesn't create jobs, small businesses create jobs. The government creates the environment for the small business."

Martinez said as governor she will reduce the size of the state government and will surround herself with a team of experts to create fact-based regulations.

"I know how to make evidence-based decisions," she said. "If they aren't evidence-based, they falter."

The state of education

Along with the economy, Martinez said the current government has failed in the area of education.

"Some of our children are still passing the third grade to the fourth grade and can't read at that level," she said. "Fifty percent of our kids don't graduate. We have got to revamp our educational system."

Through her office, Martinez said she and her staff are fighting truancy by working with the Las Cruces, Gadsden and Hatch school districts and prosecuting parents of children who miss excessive amounts of school.

"We started to hold parents responsible," she said. "After the first parents were prosecuted, attendance shot up overnight."

Along with prosecuting parents, which Martinez said hasn't occurred often, her office is also holding classes for at-risk high school students in the Doña Ana County Government Center on Motel Boulevard.

"We make kids see the light," she said. "We have to think outside the box to make sure our kids graduate. We don't want to fail another generation."

In her plan, Martinez said children will have a say in where they attend school and can use the money allotted to them by the state to attend any school.

"The tax credit will follow the child to a school the parents feel will benefit the child," she said. "This will create competition for their money."

Martinez said education is very important to her and will be her top priority if she is elected to office

Ethics reform

As a district attorney, Martinez said she has worked hard to fight corruption, and has even taken on public officials, such as convicting the Doña Ana County Clerk of five felony charges.

"My work is certainly something that speaks for itself," she said. "I usually tell people not to listen to what I say, but to look at what I do."

Martinez said she will take this dedication to the state level and will rid the government of "pay-to-play" procedures while maintaining the state's safe environment, especially along the border.

"We're doing a good job at this point," she said of border security, "but we've got to keep that going."

Martinez said it will be a challenge to reform the state government and tackle the important issues, but it's a challenge she is willing to face with the support of the community.

the community.
"I can't do it alone. I have got to do it with you," she said.

Helping the first-time homebuyer

Realtor Angela McMillan focuses on educating the client

By BETH SITZLER

As the oldest of seven children, Realtor Angela McMillan knows the importance of hard work and selfreliance

"If you expect a lot from your child, then they will expect a lot from themselves," she said. "I appreciate that now that I'm older."

Born in Las Cruces, McMillan's parents lived in student housing on the New Mexico State University campus. Her father, a professor, got a job at the University of New Mexico and moved the family to the Albuquerque area.

"I grew up in Bosque Farms," she said. "It was a great place to live."

McMillan said her family had a wide range of animals on their land including dogs, chickens and even a hull

"We had a pet bull. We rode him around," she said. After graduating from high school, McMillan came back to Las Cruces to attend NMSU, where she earned a bachelor's degree in economics. After graduating, McMillan decided to stay in the City of the Crosses and began exploring the world of real estate.

"I've always been in the profession in some way," she said

After working as an assistant for a commercial broker, McMillan became an assistant for a Realtor friend in the residential sector.

"I was her assistant for a year or two then I became my own agent," she said. "She was a great Realtor. She jump started my career."

Seven years ago, after working as an assistant, McMillan decided to take the next step in her real estate

"I was attracted to the flexibility," she said of her decision to become a Realtor. "It's a lot of fun. It's a job you're excited to go to. You get to meet a lot of people."

Working one-on-one

Having experiences with both commercial and residential real estate, the mother of two said she chose to stick to residential for the personal connection she develops with her clients.

"I realized commercial wasn't for me," she said. "It's a male-dominant business and you don't work with individuals, you work with corporations. There is no one-on-one contact.

"When you work with a first-time homebuyer, they get excited and their face lights up when you find them just what they're looking for. I don't think anyone in the corporation gets that same feeling."

It's that feeling of helping someone accomplish their goals on which McMillan thrives.

"You help them explore their dreams and help find them a home that meets their needs and expectations," she said. "I enjoy the good feeling that comes from helping people find their home.

"I've always wanted to help people and real estate is a wonderful way to do that."

While McMillan works with everyone, she said she especially enjoys working with first-time homebuyers.

"It's a whole new experience for them," she said. "You help them through the entire process and they're very grateful. It's very rewarding."

grateful. It's very rewarding."

To better help her clients understand what they are looking for, McMillan sits down with them and thoroughly discusses everything from features and location to price to price.

"It's not the same for every person," she said. "For some, their highest priority is having a brand new home. For others, it's the area. A lot of times they don't even know what it is.

"I really care about my clients as people, not just as clients. I like to educate people who have never been through – or have not recently been through – the home buying process."

Even after discussing wants, needs and prices, McMillan said some clients have a harder time than others making a decision.

"I have people that just freeze up because it's terrifying in some ways to become an owner of your own home," she said. "But there are so many rewards.

"I know it's scary. I've been there and I remember what it is like. It's very exciting too. It's worth it when you buy your own home."

Currently on everyone's mind is the state of the housing market, which is recovering from a national downturn.

"Compared to the rest of the nation, we're doing very well," McMillan said. "We could be better, but we could be worse. Fortunately, we haven't seen plunging home prices. We're counting our blessings."

While McMillan said homes in the high-end price range have seen a decline and are staying on the market longer than before, home sales in the $100,000 range are thriving, thanks to first-time homebuyers.

"There is a lot in that market," she said. "First-time homebuyers are in a good position right now. Buyers are lucky because they can find a great piece of property. There is a lot to choose from."

Also great for first-time homebuyers is the federal housing tax credit, an area that McMillan said she has had a lot of experience with.

"I've taken classes designed to meet their needs," she said. "A lot of things about the tax credit have to be understood before hand."

One thing, McMillan said, many might not know about the $8,000 tax credit, which was extended to June, is that tax recipients have to stay in their home for nine years. If they move before the nine years have passed, McMillan said they will have to pay back a portion of the tax credit.

"The percentage lessens the longer they've been in the home," she said.

Despite any stipulations attached to the tax credit, McMillan encourages all first-time homebuyers to take advantage of it while they can.

"It really is a great deal. You're given $8,000 to start out with," she said, adding that one of her clients bought a new stove with part of the tax credit.

McMillan said she also attends other classes on real estate to stay up to date and educated about the field she has recently broken into.

"I'm in a place where I have learned a lot about real estate, but I still have room to grow," she said.

As she continues to expand her real estate horizons,
McMillan is also attending NMSU to earn a master's degree in speech language pathology, another way she hopes to help the community.

"I would like to be able to continue to serve people in real estate and other areas," she said. "The future holds a lot of opportunities for me to help people in the area of real estate.

Whatever the future holds, McMillan said she is enjoying where her real estate experiences are taking

"Ultimately, if I look back on my real estate career,
"Understanding the Brown and friendships," I hope that I helped people. I've made friendships, and that is more important than numbers," she said. "Success isn't necessarily measured in numbers, but in the happiness of the client.

January is National Radon Action Month

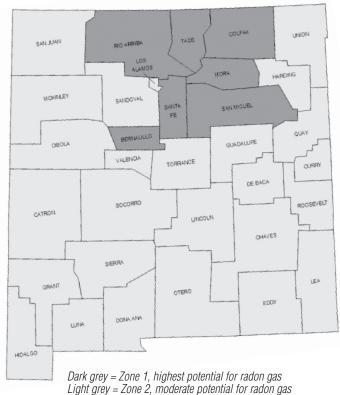

Cancer-causing gas infiltrates homes

For two weeks straight, Stanley Watras set off the radiation alarms as he entered his workplace at the Limerick Nuclear Power Plant in Pennsylvania. Authorities at the plant were stunned to learn that the source of the radiation was astoundingly high levels of radon gas in the basement of the Watras family home and not from the nuclear plant itself. That was in 1984.

Since then, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Surgeon General have determined that exposure to radon gas is the second-leading cause of lung cancer in the United States and the No. 1 cause of lung cancer among non-smokers.

Radon, which has been found in all 50 states, is a naturally occurring radioactive gas released in rock, soil and water from the natural decay of uranium. Radon typically moves up through the ground to the air above and into homes through cracks and other holes in the foundation. It can also be introduced in small amounts through water from private wells. The gas is released into the air when the water is used for showering and other household uses.

The EPA assigns one of three "zones" to each of the 3,141 counties in the U.S., rating the average short-term radon measurement that can be expected in a building without the implementation of radon control methods. Zones are assigned numerical ratings of one, two or three, indicating whether the designated areas are considered to be areas of (1) "high," (2) "low" or (3) "moderate" risk.

According to EPA's Map of Radon Zones, nearly three-quarters of New Mexico is considered to have "moderate" levels of radon emissions, while the remaining one-quarter of the state (seven counties in northern New Mexico to be exact) is coded as being at high risk of experiencing radon emissions. Although Doña Ana County is designated as having moderate levels of radon emissions, actionable levels of radon (more than four picocuries per liter of air, pCi/L) or higher have been found in Las Cruces.

As part of the EPA's National Radon Action Month's activities, homeowners and prospective purchasers are encouraged to test for radon by conducting an easy and inexpensive do-it-yourself test. The New Mexico Environmental Department has free radon test kits available for people who share their test results with the department and participate in a statewide radon survey. Residents can also purchase those test kits for less than $25 at local hardware and home improvement stores. The price of the test includes the cost of the mail-in laboratory analysis by an EPA-approved lab.

If elevated radon levels are present, simple abatement solutions for the average home can be employed at a cost of about $800 to $2,500, with $1,200 being the nationwide average, according to the EPA. A popular remedy for preventing the gas from entering the home includes sealing cracks and other openings in foundations along with using a system with pipes and fans called "subslab depressurization." The remedy prevents radon from entering the house by rerouting the outside atmosphere gasses that would normally radiate into the structure from beneath the slab.

If remedial work is necessary, Michael Taylor of the New Mexico Environmental Department (NMED) points out that it is against New Mexico law for anyone other than EPA- or state-certified or qualified radon mitigation contractors to legally install radon mitigation systems that meet state requirements.

If you're building a new home, radon mitigation systems can be integrated with construction at a nominal cost. Since radon is such a hot topic across the country, there's plenty of informa-tion available on the subject. The booklets "Homebuyer's and Seller's Guide to Radon," "Reducing Radon Risks," "A Citizen's Guide to Radon" and "Radon, A Physician's Guide" are available by calling EPA's National Hotline at 800-SOS-RADON or by logging on to www.epa.gov/

State radon information and free testing kits may be obtained from the NMED phoning Taylor at 505-827-1093.

Should you have your home tested? Doing so is like chicken soup ... it certainly couldn't hurt.

Snowy weather watch

survive is sub-zero temperatures.

Spot the jumping snow flea in winter

The snowy weather might give you a better glimpse of one tiny creature - the snow flea. Although it's not really a flea or even an insect.

Snow fleas, a kind of springtail easily seen jumping around on the snow, are small measuring about 1 to 2 millimeters. They are wingless and jump around propelled by tail-like appendages, moving as much as 4 inches in one jump, or 100 times their size, according to the University of Missouri extension service.

The creatures, which dine on decaying matter lay eggs in the Earth after mating in the spring. The resultant nymphs molt several times before maturing to adults come winter.

Winter is one of the more common months to witness these little bug-like creatures. Snow fleas aren't alone in their winter survival mechanism, which is to form a sort of anti-freeze in the body that helps keep them from freezing in subzero temperatures.

There are about 6,000 species of springtails worldwide. Scientists have excluded them from the Insecta order, categorizing them in a class called Collembola, according to UM. They're not limited solely to the cold. They exist wherever there is moisture, in habitats such as leaf litter, firewood and logs. Inside the house, they can be brought in on houseplants and may be found in wet areas such as the bathroom and kitchen.

They won't harm the plants, so there is really no need to do anything about them. And the best way to keep springtails out of other areas of the house is to clean the areas and keep them dry.

Winter work

Prune and plant now for a better spring garden, yard

GARY GUZMAN The Gardening Guru

Happy new year to all. Another year has already gone by. That was much too quick. Well now we are in the middle of winter, although some days it does not feel like it. On the days that "it does not feel like winter" you can take advantage of the extra prep time for spring.

I'm sure by now you have seen what old man winter can do to some plants during the freezing temperatures. You can begin to remove any dead tissue on just about any plant that has been killed by the cold. Your lantana probably needs to be removed by now. I don't mean to dig it out of the ground - just remove the dead material that is above If you have leaves the ground. You can plant panstill lingering ons around the area around, consider

work them back

sies, stock or snapdragfrom where you just removed the lantana. These plants will provide color even in the sub-freezing temps. This will also keep the area from looking unsightly and act as a reminder of where your lantana will come back later this spring. Be patient as the lantana needs warm soil to re-emerge for the upcoming season. This could be as late as April or May.

Now is the time to do a majority of your pruning. Most dormant trees and shrubs should be pruned now. Keep in mind the natural shape of the plant when pruning. All plant material should still have an attractive sil-

When pruning, keep the natural shape of the tree or bush in mind to retain an attractive silhouette and balance. Remove any criss-crossed, dead or severely damaged limbs.

houette after pruning. Look for dominant branches that may have to be removed. These are branches that grow the fastest and may make the rest of a tree or shrub look out of balance. Remove any criss-crossed, dead or severely damaged limbs. Remove any branches that are directly above or below each other. Leave the one that will give the best balance.

When pruning, don't go cutting away at random. The best rule of thumb is to have a reason for every cut that you make. Always use sharp pruners and do not leave any nubs. Also when pruning always make sure the cutting blade is closest toward the main trunk

After pruning, you may apply dormant oil to the rest of the plant to help get a jump on insect prevention. There are also some systemic insecticides that will work for up to one year from the date of application, which will help eliminate the need for spraying all together.

Oleander, especially newly planted ones, may have some winter damage. Since we are in our coldest month, I have found it best not to cut these back until March. Do not be tempted to remove them as in most cases it is just the top that has winter die back and not the crown or roots. These plants will come back and grow to the same size, or close to it, by the time mid-summer comes

Again, just like the lantana, these plants will need some heat to begin their new growth. Larger, more established oleander should not have this problem other than just some winter damage on the outer most tips. Dwarf oleander are not as cold hardy as regular oleander and may need to be cut back drastically every year, depending on how much damage was incurred.

Most palms should not be cleaned or pruned until late March. Some of the dead fronds may help act as insulation and keep new growth from late spring freeze damage. Sago palms may look completely dead at this time of year. In most cases, these will come back if you remove the yellowing or dead fronds off in late spring. Yes, you can cut these all the way back until they look like a pineapple.

These will also need considerable heat before they begin their slow come back. Mediterranean fan palms and windmill palms should not have any winter damage, although they may have a "winter foliage look." Do not be tempted to fertilize palms too early in the season. Late March and after should be the earliest time to feed

If you have leaves still lingering around, consider a compost bin or work them back into the ground. If you have any leaves that may have had insect infestation or diseases last season, it is best not to reuse them as it may re-infest your plants this season.

Of course, you can still plant just about any type of plant currently available. The list includes fruit trees, shade trees, flowering trees, roses, grapes, evergreens

If you still have those old pots from various nurseries, please recycle them. Do not take them to the landfill or dispose of them. Most nurseries will take back 1gallon or larger pots and reuse them. Please call before dropping them off to make sure your location takes them back.

Adventures in homemade salsa

Refreshing condiment can be served with fish, vegetables

 $\mbox{Salsa}-\mbox{I}$ love it, especially the homemade variety. Its aroma and snappy taste are delicious and so refreshing.

A favorite of mine is cantaloupe salsa prepared with sweetened dried cranberries. I can eat it straight from the bowl. It's that tasty. Equally good is fresh orange basil salsa underscored with a buzz of serrano chile pepper. Spoon it over vegetarian black bean cakes or a veggie frittata for the ultimate taste bud pleaser. Salsa is low-cal, so indulge guilt free.

Red Jalapeño Veggie Frittata

- 1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 1/2 cups (4 ounces) presliced button mushrooms
- 1/2 cup green bell pepper, diced 1 red jalapeño, seeded, stemmed and minced 1/2 teaspoon garlic, minced 2 cups (2 ounces) packed arugula leaves
- 6 eggs
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 2 tablespoons cilantro, chopped
- 12 cup Gruyere cheese, shredded

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Heat a 9-inch ovenproof skillet over medium heat, then add 1 tablespoon oil. Add mushrooms, bell pepper, jalapeño and garlic. Sauté until vegetables are tender, about 3 to 4 minutes. Add arugula and stir until wilted, about 1 to 2 minutes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste, then transfer to a plate.

In a medium bowl, whisk together eggs, salt and cilantro. Add remaining 1/2 tablespoon olive oil to skillet, swirling to coat bottom and sides. Pour in egg mixture. Evenly distribute vegetables over eggs, and then sprinkle with cheese. Cook over medium-low heat until edges are set, about 3 to 4 minutes, then transfer to oven and cook until eggs are set, about 7 to 10 minutes. If some spots remain soft, finish under broiler for 1 to 2 minutes. Loosen edges of frittata with rubber spatula and transfer to a serving plate. Serve with fresh orange-basil salsa (see recipe below). Makes 6 servings.

Fresh Orange-Basil Salsa

- 2 navel oranges, separated and
- cut into small pieces
- 1 large tomato, cored and diced finely 1 scallion, thinly sliced
- 1 tablespoon fresh basil, minced garlic clove, minced
- tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1 serrano pepper seeded, stemmed and minced
- 1 dash salt

Combine all the salsa ingredients in a bowl. Let sit for at least 1 hour.

Serrano-Soy Halibut

- 1/3 cup toasted sesame seeds
- 3 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce 3 tablespoons mirin (Japanese rice cooking wine) 3 tablespoons toasted sesame oil
- 2 cloves garlic
- 2 teaspoons serrano chile pepper, seeded and minced
- 1 tablespoon honey 2 tablespoons fresh orange juice 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 5 (4-ounce) halibut fillets, about 1-inch thick

Olive oil, for brushing 2 scallions, thinly sliced

In a food processor, coarsely grind sesame seeds. Add soy sauce, mirin, sesame oil, garlic, serrano chile, honey, orange juice and lemon juice. Process for another 30 Preheat grill to medium. Brush fish lightly with olive oil. Apply sesame-soy mixture thickly on each fillet. Grill fish until just opaque in center, about 7 minutes, turning occasionally and basting with additional sesame mixture. Transfer to a platter and sprinkle with chopped scallions. Makes 6 servings. (Recipe adapted from Sprouts Farmers Market magazine 2009.)

Turkey-Feta Burgers with Cantaloupe Salsa

Cantaloupe Salsa

- 2 cups fresh cantaloupe (1/2 medium cantaloupe), cut into 1/4-inch cubes
- 2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, chopped
- 1/2 red bell pepper, cut into 1/4-inch cubes 1 serrano chile pepper, stemmed,
- seeded and minced 1/4 cup sweetened dried cranberries
- Juice of 1 lime
- 1 tablespoon rice vinegar 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin

Turkey burgers

- 1 pound ground turkey meat (a mixture of white and dark meat)
- 2 large cloves garlic, pressed
- 1/2 cup feta cheese, finely crumbled
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon pepper
Combine all salsa ingredients in a bowl and stir to combine. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes

Combine turkey, garlic, cheese, salt and pepper in a large bowl. Mix gently, just until combined. From into 4 patties. Preheat grill to medium-hot and brush with vegetable oil. Grill burgers, turning once, until opaque throughout, about 4 to 5 minutes per side. Serve with salsa. Makes 4 servings. (Recipe adapted from Sprouts Farmers Market magazine 2009.)

Grilled Chicken with Cuban Salsa

Cuban Salsa

- 1 can (15 1/2-ounces) black beans,
- drained and rinsed ripe mango, peeled and finely chopped
- 3 tablespoons red onion, chopped 3 tablespoons fresh lime juice
- 2 tablespoons fresh cilantro, chopped
- 1 medium size jalapeño chile pepper, minced

- Grilled Chicken 4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves

Homemade salsa is a refreshing alternative to commercially prepared varieties.

In a medium bowl, stir together the beans, mango, onion, lime juice, cilantro and jalapeño. Set the salsa aside while grilling the chicken.

Place the chicken in a shallow dish. Add the lime peel, lime juice, oil, salt and pepper, and rub the mixture into the chicken. Cover and let stand for $15\,\mathrm{min}$ utes. Meanwhile, preheat the grill or broiler. If using the broiler, coat a broiler-pan rack with cooking spray. Place the chicken on the grill rack or broiler pan. Cook 4 inches from the heat, turning once, until the chicken is no longer pink in the thickest part, about 10 to 12 minutes. Serve the chicken with the salsa. If desired, slice the chicken into strips to serve.

Vegetarian Black Bean Cakes

- 4 cups cooked black beans, rinsed and drained if canned
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup bread crumbs
- tablespoon olive oil, plus oil for greasing pan
- 1 medium onion, finely diced
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- celery rib, sliced thin
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin

1/4 teaspoon salt Liberal seasoning of freshly ground pepper

Place 3 cups of the black beans in a large bowl. Process the remaining cup of beans with the eggs until smooth. Stir this mixture into the whole beans along with the breadcrumbs.

Heat the oil in a medium skillet over medium heat. Add the onion, garlic and celery and sauté until very tender and beginning to brown. Sprinkle on the cumin and cook 1 more minute. Scrape the vegetables into the bean mixture and add the salt and pepper. Stir to mix Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly oil a baking sheet. Using a 1/3-cup measuring cup, scoop up 12 portions of the bean mixture and place on the baking sheet. Flatten out with the scoop or your hand. Bake 10 minutes, flip and bake 10 more minutes. Serve the bean cakes with a spoonful of orange-basil salsa on each. Where's the tender beef?

Break tough fibers with this spring-loaded gadget

By Beth Sitzler

You can find a wide variety of food products every Wednesday and Saturday, during the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market on the Downtown Mall, including fresh vegetables, homemade breads and locally raised and butchered beef from Maynard Cattle Co., near Mountainair, N.M.

Beef is a popular dinnertime meal. In 2005, more than 63 pounds of beef were consumed per capita in the United

With more than 10 different American primal cuts of beef, there is a piece of meat perfect for every occasion. Chuck, the upper shoulder section, is used for roasts as well as hamburger meat, while the short loin supplies T-bone steaks.

The tenderness of a piece of meat depends on its cut. Some cuts are tough because they come from a muscular part of the cow. These cuts are usually great for slowcooked recipes, including brisket.

If you have a tough cut of meat, however, there are ays to make it tender, including marinades.

While chemical tenderizers do exist, get soft, delectable meat without extra fat and additives by using the spring-loaded meat tenderizer.

Most home chefs are familiar with the meat mallet, but the meat tenderizer is a spring-loaded gadget that has multiple rows of needles that are inserted into any piece of meat before being cooked.

There are several benefits to tenderizing meat before cooking. When meat is heated, the internal fibers bunch and shrink, making the meat tough. Tenderizing breaks down those fibers so they are short and don't become hard

How does it work?

The spring-loaded meat tenderizer is very easy to use. Simply press the spikes into a piece of raw meat.

The tool will break meat fibers without loss of the meat's juices. It will also allow for a quicker cook time.

Where can it be tound?

The spring-loaded meat tenderizer can be found at various kitchen specialty stores including Las Cosas de Mesilla Kitchen Shoppe. It can also be found on several websites such as www.amazon.com and www.williams-

How much does it cost?

Depending on its size and brand, the spring-loaded meat tenderizer can cost as little as $6 and as much as
