Telshor-Lohman expansion work starts

RT Electric employees Antonio Rodriguez, left, and Jose Aguilar work on digging a hole Wednesday, July 29, for traffic light wiring on the corner of Telshor Boulevard

New work schedule spares Christmas shopping season

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Expansion of the busiest intersection in Las Cruces has begun and won't take as long as originally estimated, nor will it put a squeeze on Christmas shopping.

When Las Cruces city officials first announced they landed state funds to expand the intersection of Telshor Boulevard and Lohman Avenue, the bad news was that it would take 18 months to complete and would have to begin as soon as possible to secure that state money, which meant the street work would be happening during the holidays.

But the $2.28 million intersection expansion will now be done in five phases with a work stoppage between Nov. 25 and Jan. 4.

After Jan. 4, the road construction contractor will have 60 days to get the job done or pay a $1,500 per day penalty. Also, a $3,500 per day penalty will be assessed if work to be completed by Nov. 24 falls behind.

Michael Johnson, city public works director, said the city put the new requirements into the project when taking bids to see if a contractor would be willing to work quicker and work around the Christmas shopping season.

The idea worked and bids also came in lower than expected because of the recession, Johnson said. Morrow Enterprises $\,$ won the bid.

The expanded intersection will allow simultaneous left-hand turns off Telshor, reducing the amount of traffic light phasing and lessening the north-south traffic backups that are now commonplace dur-

As a result, traffic lights and utilities at the intersection will be upgraded. The driveways and sidewalks will be brought into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act and, of course, the road will be resurfaced. The project scope on Telshor reaches south to Foothills Road.

The first phase of work includes improvements to utilities from Lohman to Foothills. The next phase will take place north of Lohman and include more utility work and widening of the road. The third phase will involve the actual intersection and will include sewer work. The fourth phase will make changes to medians and the last phased will be final road surfacing and shoulder work.

"This has been long awaited and long overdue," Johnson said.

It is the city's busiest intersection used by about 42,000 vehicles a day.

Assistant Manager Robert Garza knows that well. He was still with the state Highway Department when Telshor was first widened as the current Interstate 25 interchange was put in on Lohman Avenue. A larger intersection was envisioned, but there wasn't enough funding, Garza said.

"It should have been done eight to 10 years ago," Garza said.

In anticipation of future widening, new businesses such as the Garduño's restaurant were required to be set back further than their owners would have liked with right-of-way agreements in place.

Though the city will be able to dodge some criticism by stopping road work during holiday shopping, with an intersec-tion that gets as much use as Telshor and Lohman does, "on a project like this, there is never a good time to do it," Garza said.

NMSU professor services set

McCarthy advocated for disabled students

New Mexico State University civil engineering professor William McCarthy, who was an advocate for students with disabilities, died Tuesday, July 28. Services will be at 10 a.m. Monday, Aug. 3, at St. Albert the Great Newman Center, 615 S. Solano Drive.

"Bill McCarthy was a great inspiration to us all – students and faculty alike," said Kenneth White, interim dean of the College of Engineering. "He was always student-oriented and put the needs of the student foremost in any decisions. "I first met Bill as an undergraduate working diligently to complete the challenging curriculum in civil engineering in the days before NMSU or others had made accommodations for those with disabilities either physically or mentally. It was my privilege to be his adviser for his Ph.D. and mentor in his early days on our faculty. He was a primary force in making changes on the campus to help students with disabilities enter science and engineering careers.

"We will all miss Bill and miss his leadership and loyalty to the students at NMSU. He was such a role model for students in engineering at NMSU, around New Mexico and the nation.

McCarthy was director for the Regional Alliance for Science, Engineering, and Mathematics Squared (RASEM2) for students with disabilities, a National Science Foundation-funded program that he started in 1999. The first of its kind, RASEM2 is a regional alliance between New Mexico and west Texas to support students with disabilities, helping them overcome the educational barriers they face in considering science, engineering, math and highly technical careers. The program provides support for student mentors, holds an annual summer camp for pre-college students and conducts teacher outreach program.

McCarthy received a presidential appointment to the NSF Committee for Equal Opportunity in Science and Engineering and served as a member of the NSF Education and Human Resources Advisory Committee. He was a member and vice president of the Engineering Foundation Board of Directors.

Paralyzed in a car accident in 1966 as a senior at Las Cruces High School, McCarthy was told to abandon his dream of becoming an engineer. He achieved his dream and more. McCarthy earned his doctoral degree at NMSU in 1981 and served as a graduate assistant during his advanced studies. He was a registered professional engineer in New Mexico.

McCarthy joined the civil engineering faculty in 1981, reaching the rank of full professor in 1995. He subsequently served as associate dean of engineering, interim dean of engineering and interim associate provost at NMSU in charge of student success and academic programs. He then returned to the civil engineering faculty in 2006.

During his tenure, McCarthy received numerous awards and recognition for teaching excellence, including the Frank Bromilow Award, The Chi Epsilon South-western District James M. Robbins Award and the Dennis Darnall Faculty Achievement Award. He served as president of the NMSU Chapter of Phi Kappa Phi and was a member of Chi Epsilon and Tau Beta Pi Honor Societies.

A scholarship honoring McCarthy is being established. For more information, call 646-2913.

Doña Ana County website still among the nation's best

Now second-ranked site

For the fourth consecutive year, the Center for Digital Government and the National Association of Counties (NACo) have named Doña Ana County's website among the best in the United States for counties with populations under 250,000.

The county's website is ranked second in the nation in its category - up from fourth in 2008, eighth in 2007 and ninth in 2006.

The website was overhauled in March 2005 in a joint project by the Doña Ana County Public Information Office and the Doña Ana County Information Technology Department. It is updated on a near-daily basis.

Doña Ana County will be among the top digital counties honored at a national awards ceremony, which will coincide with NACo's national conference in Tennessee. this weekend. District 1 Doña Ana County Commissioner Oscar Vásquez Butler will be on hand to accept the award on behalf of Doña Ana County.

The full list of winners can be viewed at www.centerdigitalgov.com

Each April, all counties in the U.S. are invited to participate in the Digital Counties Survey. County officials respond to questions that include more than 100 measurements and data points about online service delivery, infrastructure, architecture and governance models.

"Our website is constantly being improved due to teamwork and innovative ideas between the technicians and department heads and users," said Doña Ana County Manager Brian Haines policies and best practices in state and local government.

NACo is a full-service organization that provides legislative, research, technical and public affairs assistance to county governments. Created in 1935, NACo continues to ensure that the nation's 3,066 counties are heard and understood in the White House and Congress.

Summer learning academy teaches new math skills

Teachers from area school districts learn at NMSU sponsored event

Las Cruces Public Schools Summer Math Learning Academies were held during the week of July 20 to 24, with a total of 175 elementary teachers participating, including 136 teachers from LCPS and 39 from Hatch, Cloudcroft, Gadsden and Las Cruces Catholic Schools.

The academies were sponsored by LCPS and New Mexico State University's Mathematically Connected Communities Project (MC²).

"The goal of the academies was to provide professional development for K-5 teachers in order to deepen their knowledge and level of implementation of the math investigations core program with the students," said LCPS Director of Elementary Instruction Elizabeth Marrufo.

Session I was titled, "Mathematics in the Classroom K-5."

In the session participants:

- Explored numbers with an emphasis on the development of sound number sense and a deep understanding of numerical relationships and arithmetic operations
- Worked on visual and spatial problems to learn more about 2-D and 3-D geometry and their relationships to numbers
- Collected, organized, represented, and described data
- Studied implementation of investigations at their own grade level
- Assessed students' understanding by examining student work
- Explored adaptations and extensions at all levels to reach all students Addressed issues of communication with parents and the larger

"Building Computational Fluency K-5" was the focus of Session II.

- In the session participants:
- Learned about the structural foundations of computational fluency
- Examined their own and children's computational strategies
- Looked closely at the ways in which strategies for fluency develop
- Focused on activities/games in the Investigations curriculum that support the development of computational fluency
- Discussed the development of number and computation ideas at different grade levels
- Used assessment to make instructional decisions that support the development of computational fluency

Feedback was very positive for both academies. Comments written on the evaluation forms included:

- "I had a wonderful learning experience."
- "I gained great insights into how to create a community of learners."
- "I feel more comfortable with the Investigations curriculum."
- "I am feeling confident and excited about teaching the Investigations curriculum."
- "I have a better understanding of how a student might solve a problem, and I have learned strategies that I can use to reach a variety of learners."
- "The Investigations curriculum builds on computational fluency from K-5."
- "I can support math learning in more meaningful ways."

For more information, contact Sandy Nakamura or Mary Sloan of the LCPS Professional Development Center at 527-6054, or visit http://mc2.nmsu.edu/academy/general.htm

Life is good in Las Cruces

Bulletin's 2009 Community Guide features something for everyone

By David E. McCollum

McCOLLUM

In this week's edition of the Las Cruces Bulletin readers will find a colorful 116-page magazine titled "Life is Good in Las Cruces." This special publication has been in the works for a couple of years, and despite the challenging economy, we decided that this is the year to produce our premiere issue.

Our original plan was a bit more conservative in that we expected the magazine to be 48 pages. However, local businesses, organizations and institutions caught the vision of what we were trying to accomplish. Before we Mccollum knew it, our publication grew to 116 pages, and could have been larger, except for the fact that we were already overwhelmed by advertiser and community response.

Life is

The guide is included with this week's Bulletin. We originally planned to publish the guide on July 24. However, because of the increased number of pages, and our demand to maintain our quality standards, we chose to delay the printing and distribution of the magazine until July 31. Additional copies will be available throughout the year at more than 100 locations in the Doña Ana County area. We will also deliver guides throughout the state at tourist locations and chambers of commerce as well as city, county and state offices.

cens celebrating the fact that they live in such a wonderful city. Actually, the silhouettes are Bulletin employees whom Theresa cajoled into meeting at 6 a.m. somewhere on the West Mesa for the early morning

Our sales and marketing team, led by Claire Frohs and Jaylene Watkins, did an outstanding job of presenting the benefits of the "Life is Good in Las Cruces" concept to their clients. Our design team, under the thoughtful direction of Production Manager Rachel Courtney, did an outstanding job in producing the 150 ads and designing the 116 pages. The news team, headed by editors Kristine Sandrick and Gabe Vasquez, exceeded expectations as they produced a wide range of interesting and informative content. Using our own "Shop Local, Shop Las Cruces" business guidelines, the magazine was printed locally by Signature Offset at its modern printing facility on the west side of Las Cruces.

We are proud of our historic Las Cruces community. Hopefully, this feeling shows clearly through this publication, and will help other local residents share the positive attitude that our Las Cruces lifestyle is among the best in our country.

We trust you will enjoy "Life is Good in Las Cruces." If you need additional copies, just come see us during the week at 840 N. Telshor Blvd. We have an extra copy just for you.

School situation a mess

This is in reference to Beth Sitzler's article regarding the Palmer, Ethel, and Parker streets' opposition to Las Cruces Catholic School's request for a variance (Las Cruces Bulletin, July 3). The subsequent appeal on the variance by the neighborhood; and then the appeal on the appeal of the variance by the

If there is a possibility of an increase in student population, why not copy Las Cruces Public Schools' policy of building a new school on a new site? Surely the diocese has other parcels of land on which to build a school, even at the pre-primary to secondary levels and room to build a chapel.

Why provoke neighborhood ire by proposing expansion, on an 11-acre tract already denselypacked and congested by traffic – traffic that has to come from different directions to a one-

The proposed compromises by the school seem entirely in the interests of the school and do not offer any viable alternatives to the neighborhood, such as decreasing traffic flow, albeit during certain times of the day, but with an overflowing concentration.

Why has this been turned into such a mess? If the diocese really wants a high school, why can't it emulate St. Michael's High School in Santa Fe, or Cathedral High School in El

On Saturday, July 11, I attended the "Thank You" ceremony at Veterans Park for J. Joe

Martinez received accolades from veteran's organizations and the public for all the hard work he does for veterans. It was great to hear his stories of family and friends. He also told everyone how Veterans Park and the Bataan Memorial came to be. It was very moving.

Earlier Martinez told me that he was glad to see me there because he had a special announcement to make after the ceremony. His announcement was that he had preliminary plans to build a monument for Vietnam veterans. The renderings were beautiful.

The ceremony was great, except for the very end. The organizer of the event began to make political and religious comments to the crowd.

I'm sorry, but that was not the time or place to state personal view points to the audience. We were there to give thanks to a very special person and as for myself, it made me very uncomfortable. I also noticed that I wasn't the only one that felt that way.

I'm a Vietnam veteran and when we were 'in country," I don't remember discussing our political or religious views with one another. Our main concern was if we were going to make it home safe and sound.

So please, choose wisely where and when you feel that it's necessary to state your views.

State employees take pay cut to court

Little sympathy likely to be found from the general public

As I predicted early this month, the state's public employees were denied a request for a temporary injunction prohibiting public employers from adding an extra 1.5 percent increase in their retirement contributions.

Early this year, the 2009 Legislature, decided to cut public employer contribu-tions to employee retirement and add it on to employee contributions. It will save the state around $43 million this year.

The legislative action affects all 57,000 public employees at the state and local levels of government, including education employees in public schools, colleges and universities. Their pay for next year will be 1.5 percent less.

It seemed evident when the hearing on the temporary injunction was postponed from its June 29 setting that the state district court didn't see a need for temporarily stopping the pay cut that would begin on July 1.

The actual hearing on the merits of the case will be scheduled for a later date. Although the public employee unions involved in the suit can point to some constitutional questions the legislation raises, Judge William F. Lang indicated he feels the proper place to resolve the differences is the Legislature.

That's a good indication of how the hearing on the merits of the case is likely to be decided. Public employees have heard that message and are gearing up for some heavy-duty lobbying of lawmakers. Don't be surprised to see an effort made to get it on the agenda for the possible special session of the Legislature this fall. The session will be necessary if August revenue projections indicate revenues sagging even more than anticipated during last winter's regular legislative session.

It is widely expected that will happen, however, at this point legislative leaders are said to be shying away from a special session, possibly because so many special interest groups are applying pressure to put additional items on the agenda.

A monkey wrench thrown into the works following the hearing on the preliminary injunction has been a news release from the Attorney General's Office announcing that Judge Lang granted the attorney general's motion to dismiss the case entirely.

During the two days following the attorney general's announcement, I have been in contact with the office seeking a clarification of the statement.

There has been no clarification or retraction of the announcement yet. I understand other news sources are now in contact with the Attorney General's Office so that may be clarified by the time you read this.

The public employees make the point that they are being subjected to discriminatory treatment because employees in the private sector are not subject to the pay deduction. While that is true, no public employee has been subject to a job loss, furlough, wage cut or loss of benefits as have many private sector workers.

That would seem to put public opinion on the side of the lawmakers who decided on the pay cut. But lawmakers are due some embarrassment themselves. They neglected to cut their own retirement contributions by the state and add it on to JAY MILLER Inside the Capitol their contributions. That's an issue that is likely to arise the next time they meet.

As for the public employee cuts, lawmakers said it is the least painful alternative to find another $40 million to balance the state budget. The state employees' union has constantly advocated that twice as much revenue can be gained from making big out-of-state corporations pay their fair share in taxes to the state.

Because New Mexico doesn't require something called "combined reporting," these companies can hide their New Mexico income by reporting it in states that charge a lower corporate tax.

Maybe docking public employees is less painful than disappointing big corporate lobbyists, but it shouldn't be. Local businesses are hurt too. Maybe some of the $80 million the state should be getting from the big boys could be used to lower taxes on local businesses.

Jay Miller may be contacted at inside the capitol @hot mail.com.

Bill costs jobs

Have you read the health care bill before the U.S. House of Representatives? No wonder the congressmen don't read these bills before they sign them, it's subsection this and subsection that, the pages become twisted and helter skelter, the meaning is lost from page to page. It's no wonder when our government becomes involved, lines form and prices rise. Have you ever seen the govern-ment do anything efficiently? Good luck with that.

This bill is not friendly to any of us. It is going to hurt in many ways. Because of the increase in taxes to pay for this health care debacle, small employers will cut jobs.

Estimates of 1.6 million jobs will be lost because of new small business taxes, mandates and bureaucracy according to The National Federation of Independent Businesses.

Over the next 10 years, this government takeover of health care will cost 4.7 million jobs according to Dr. Christina Romer, the chair of the White House Council of Economic Advisors. Since we are in the worst recession since the Great Depression, how can this government expect its citizen taxpayers to put up with this?

This is another bill that the president wants to be hurried along. Stop, look and listen, don't be caught up again in the spur of the moment. It has not worked for the country so far. BETTY FRETTEM

On Roewe

Thanks for your recent profile of David Roewe, new executive director of what was formerly the Las Cruces Homebuilders Association.

Roewe makes no apologies for vigorously representing his "industry," and people need to take him at his word. After only six months in the area, he clearly states his intention to transform the building association into a political power.

He has been belligerent and insulting in his public interactions, and excuses his rude conduct by saying, "It isn't a personal thing."

Yet, Roewe has gone out of his way to make it personal with his aggressive approach to anyone who disagrees with him.

I witnessed his conduct in the lobby of City Hall on July 6, and was basically told by him to "mind your own business" when I attempted to question his tirade.

I have known several builders who are conscientious and have good reputations. I am confident those builders are not going to agree with Roewe's combative approach. Most builders, like most citizens, want the best for Las Cruces.

We do not need or want Roewe's divisiveness. I sincerely believe that residents and home builders can work together for the common good. We have a mayor and city council who are willing to stand up to bullies like Roewe, and for that we're grateful.

We hope they will continue to do what is best for all the people of the city.

VIOLET CAUTHON

Poison reform

America's health care ystem does need reform. What is being considered in the kingdom of Washington, D. C., is not reform. It is poison. It reminds me of kingdoms that engage a "royal food taster" to sample the king's food before he eats it to make sure it isn't poisoned. Better to have the taster fall down dead than the king.

Congress and the president cooked it up. They know it is poison. They are trying to force the concoction on us. They know the results will not be pretty because they exempted themselves from having to eat from the same bowl.

The president said some will taste it and will have to decide to go to hospice and wait for the end of their life because they are too old, have too many health issues, or have too little to offer the kingdom to be qualified to get the antidote.

Few legislators admit that he/she has read it. The president admitted that he "unfamiliar" with it. The legalese is annoying but one can read and find the bad ingredients.
For example: Page 16

Line 1 Section 102 seems to allow one to keep "current" coverage. But starting at line 7 it makes it clear that one must be in private plan by the first day that the legislation is enacted. Line 10 makes it clear that if you are not in a private plan before day one, you cannot enroll in a private plan any day after that. If you have to change from your "current" coverage, sorry, you have to eat the public stew.

I am reading it. It's a killer. Tell our congressmen and Obama when they agree to be the tasters, giving up their current plan, then you will take a taste.

Political bait and switch schemes

Will the public ever learn from past government scams?

When unlimited

must give.

By Michael Swickard

A political phrase used often these days is "bait and switch." It refers to political promises to create attractive government programs, which then are switched to the detriment of the citizens. The health care debate smells of "bait and switch" like past government betrayals.

An example is income tax. Our current income tax came from the 16th Amendment in 1913. That first year, less than 1 percent of the population paid federal income tax.

The bait was that only the "rich" would pay income tax and almost every American was not going to be bothered by this tax on the rich. The switch came little by little as more Americans were required to pay income tax. If Americans had understood in 1913 that income tax would be applied to them at some point, it would not have passed. Likewise, it would be abolished if all Americans could today vote on having it.

In 1913, the people baited by the federal income tax were the 99 percent not paying the tax. In 1935, a new program baited Americans. It was the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance program, which we now call Social Security.
Initially 3 percent of a worker's wage went into a savings fund. Today it is 12.5 percent. But the switch was that in 1969 Congress turned Social Security into a Ponzi scheme by no longer saving any of the money paid into it. Instead, they put all of that money into their current government coffers and wrote an IOU from themselves to themselves.

I started paying Social Security in 1969 and not one cent of the money I paid into Social Security over my 40 years of work has been saved for me. The Social Security lock box only has an IOU instructing the future government to tax their citizens if I need any benefits.

Imagine if the citizens of 1935 were told that Social Security was going to take their money and not save it. They may have fallen for it because they did not learn from the bait and switch income tax. Will we learn our lesson before approving government health care?

The core bait on health care reform is the notion that with the government in charge of health care it will be available to all citizens and in unlimited abundance. Our desire for health care in America is unlimited. The resources for health care are limited. When unlimited desire meets limited resources something must give. That is the switch coming.

We all want to live longer and better but the resources to provide that health care are limited. Someone will have to decide which of our desires are wants and which are needs. An old saying goes, "Needs come in two sizes: yours and mine.

My problem is that the government and I may not see eye to eye on my needs. Then what?

President Herbert Hoover campaigned in 1928 saying everyone would be prosperous with him, "A chicken in every pot and a car in every garage." When you see depression era pictures there seems to be lots of cars and chick-ens missing amid the lack of prosperity. Given the track record of our government in bait and switch, all of the promises of national health care are just that, promises to be broken. Maybe there will be a few years before citizens feel the full impact of the bait and switch. But given the past actions of our government when implementing programs, our future is clear.

What is the litmus test for this bait and switch? Will Congress drop their own health care and embrace with the common peons this new plan? No, they understand that they do not want that health care. What they want is control of you.

Will we ever learn from the past government scams? Evidently it is doubtful.

Letters to the Editor

Supervised care is OK

For more than 17 years, my husband was treated for cancer. He underwent more chemotherapy sessions than I can remember, and had several hospital stays when things went badly. When his immune system suffered, a home health nurse gave him gamma globulin injections, and when he needed a PIC line in his arm, she cleaned it as well.

All this excellent care kept him on the job and active in his family and church, so that he was able to enjoy a bit of retirement before his health deteriorated and he died.

All this excellent care came from his health insurance plan, which I was glad to inherit. I needed knee surgery a few months ago, and the plan provided both the medical care and physical therapy afterward. As with a prior surgery several years ago, the insurer let me pick my doctors and therapist, and I didn't have to wait for years, as a friend is, until she is covered by Medicare.

This excellent health insurance is a federally supervised plan, which has covered us with no denials, no argument and no lack of choice. I have seen just how good federally supervised health care is, and I look forward to the day when such care is available to all Americans. DINAH LEA JENTGEN

Bill gives government control

President Obama is trying to pass a $1 trillion experiment on our health care system, hoping it will work and deliberately opening the door to rationing of health services.

Those targeted for minimum services will be the unborn, the elderly and the disabled. This legislation will give our federal government complete control over the life and death of American citizens.

Please ask your congressman and senator whether he or she is willing to exchange their current health plan for the one that the government designs as its public option. Then, make your decision on whether you really want to support the president's legislation.

Report: Welfare of children in New Mexico improves

State moves up 5 spots in national rankings

New Mexico has moved up from last year's ranking of 48th in the nation for child well-being to 43rd according to the 2009 Kids Count data book, the newest edition of the annual state-by-state study on the health and welfare of America's youth.

The data book, published by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, was released July 28. It shows that New Mexico has also improved its ranking on six of the 10 key indicators of child well-being since 2000.

Still, the report presents a mixed picture for the state's children. New Mexico ranks among the bottom 10 states on four of the 10 key indicators used in the report: teen birth rate (ranking 49th among the states), children without secure parental employment (ranking 44th), child poverty rate (ranking 47th) and children living in single-parent families (ranking 48th).

Some of the most striking improvements are in New Mexico's infant mortality and teen dropout rates.

"Our low infant mortality rate has long been the highlight in the Kids Count data book," said Christine Hollis, Kids Count program manager at New Mexico Voices for Children.

New Mexico's infant mortality rate is lower than the national average, ranking 14th in that indicator.

In addition, New Mexico's teen dropout rate has been cut in half since 2000, ranking New Mexico 36th nationally. Kids Count defines this indicator as the percentage of 16- to 19-year-olds who are not enrolled in school and are not high school graduates. This definition may not track exactly with New Mexico's Public Education Department determine dropout rates, however.

"The expansion of our investment in Medicaid and education, especially Pre-K and K-12, during the Richardson/Denish administration is starting to pay off," Eric Griego, Executive Director of New Mexico Voices said. "However, more investment is still needed to move these numbers further, particularly given the current economic downturn."

The 2009 Kids Count report contains the most recent U.S. Census Bureau data available – most of it from 2006-07 – which does not reflect the effects of the current recession

NM Voices, the Annie E. Casey Kids Count state affiliate, has prepared a supplement to the Data Book, available at www.nmvoices.org/kidscount.htm, showing more clearly New Mexico's ranking on each of the 10 measures, what the state would need to do to gain a national ranking of No. 1, and policy efforts that could help move New Mexico in this direction. A link to the national data book can also be found there.

Nationally, the data book shows large disparities for children based on race or ethnicity, which may impact New Mexico's ranking.

"Because New Mexico is a minority-majority state, we are concerned that the report shows that, on several measures, Hispanic child well-being is worse than child well-being in the U.S. as a whole," Hollis said.

Hispanic teens, for example, have the highest teen birth rate nationally (83 births per 1,000 females ages 15-19, compared to the overall teen birth rate of 42 per 1,000), and more than one-third of the country's Hispanic children live in single-parent families.

"New Mexico also has the second highest percentage of Native Americans, and the indicators for Native American children are dismal," Hollis added.

Nationally, Native Americans have the highest teen death rate (95 deaths per 100,000 teens ages 15-19, as opposed to the national average of 64/100,000), and more than half (52 percent) of Native American children live in families where no parent has full-time, secure employment, versus 33 percent of U.S. children overall.

This year's report marks two decades of Kids Count data collection and includes an essay that takes stock of how much progress the country as a whole has made in collecting data that can help move public policies that improve children's well-being.

Probation, Parole and

In the 20 years of data books, New Mexico has always ranked in the bottom 10 among the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The state hit its highest overall ranking of 40th in 1995. the state's lowest ranking of 48th dogged it for five years in 1999, 2001, 2004, 2006 and 2008.

This year's Data Book is complemented by the launch of an expanded web-based Kids Count Data Center (http://datacenter.kidscount.org/databook), containing multiple measures of child well-being that include information on national, state, county and metropolitan levels. Information specific to New Mexico is found at http://datacenter.kidscount.org/nm.

Kids Count is a program of NM Voices for Children and is made possible by grants from the Annie E. Casey Foundation.

NM Voices for Children is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization advocating for policies to improve the health and well-being of New Mexico's children, families and communities.

Soldiers Show at OHS Aug. 12 and 13

The U.S. Army Soldier show will return to Las Cruces at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11, and at 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 12, in the Oñate High School Performing Arts Center, 5700 Mesa Grande Drive. The theme of this year's show is "Lights! Camera! Action!"

The show is a high-energy, 90-minute live musical review showcasing the talents of active duty soldiers who were selected by audition. They are amateur artists who have a passion for music, dance and performing.

The cast is composed of soldiers coming from aviation, biological, infantry, medical, musical, signal, transportation and other tactical units. The show is assembled in five weeks, and tours across the country and overseas for six months.

The Soldier Show always invites someone from the local military installation to join them to sing one song during the show. This year Spc. Victoria Chang is excited that she is the "one." After a series of auditions and permission from her unit she headed to Ft. Belvoir, Va., the base of operations for the group. Chang is stationed with the McAfee U.S. Army Health Clinic as a preventive medicine specialist.

The Soldier Show is free and seating is on a first come, first-served basis.

effort to find the man and how an action plan called for in a 2007 state "Code Helen" law wasn't in place.

At a press conference Tuesday, July 28, Hardman-Hartley and others announced the formation of the Senior Safety Network to provided organized volunteer support next time an elderly person or Alzheimer's sufferer goes missing. The group will act as "a second set of eyes and ears for the members of law enforcement to assist in locating the person as quickly as possible," Hardman-Hartley said.

The group – which includes many with expertise in dealing with Alzheimer's patients, those with dementia and the elder – also will offer consultation and assistance to authorities during the search, as well as provide training to officers in dealing with the population.

The Senior Safety Network will begin establishing a database of telephone numbers, text numbers and emails to provide immediate notice of a missing elderly person. "It's basically a telephone tree,"

Hardman-Hartley said.

When a person is missing, a "Code Helen" will be called and a team from the network will begin consultation with those involved – family members, health care providers and police – to determine what services may be needed.

The Senior Safety Network volunteers also will begin giving regular training sessions to family members and others on how to deal with the elderly who suffer from dementia or Alzheimer's.

"This is about preventing another tragedy," Hardman-Hartley said. "We cannot bring Mr. Smoot back to us or take away the pain that the people who loved him most are feeling."

Hardman-Hartley, who spent a good part of the press conference explaining to reporters she wasn't the person to explain why Smoot wasn't found earlier or why a "Code Helen" system wasn't already in place, said the Senior Safety Network is a way to help care for a significant population in Las Cruces – the elderly.

Hardman-Hartley said the group isn't being formed to affix blame to local authorities, but rather to "back these guys up."

Alaina Johnson, Heritage Assisted Living assistant administrator, said public outreach and education will be an important function of the network to combat denial that family members may have about an elderly person in the early stages of Alzheimer's or dementia.

"When it comes to this, people need to plan for the worst and hope for the best," Hardman-Hartley said.

A misnomer addressed at the press conference is that a missing person has to be missing more than 24 hours for authorities to begin looking for them. Someone can be classified as a missing person immediately if it its determined they may be in danger, especially an elderly person missing from an assisted living situation.

"We're hoping this will be the catalyst for making a better system," Hardman-Hartley said.

Crime Stoppers: '94 homicide

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $2,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest of the person or persons involved in a murder that occurred 15 years ago near the Rio Grande.

At approximately 10 p.m. on June 28, 1994, Robert Rocha, 43, was found shot to death on the west side of the Rio Grande, north of the Mesilla Dam Bridge, at an area known as Shady Grove. Rocha was found next to his pick-up truck.

Doña Ana County Sheriff's investigators learned that Rocha was employed at White Sands Missile Range but never arrived for work on that day. It is believed he drove to the river late in the afternoon or early in the evening and was killed shortly thereafter.

The Cold Case Unit from the Doña Ana County Sheriff's Office is investigating.

If you have any information regarding the Rocha's homicide, call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 526-8000 or outside the Las Cruces area at 800-897-2746.

The Crime Stoppers number is operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Moongate flood control meeting

Doña Ana County will hold a public meeting to discuss the proposed Moongate Stormwater Diversion Channel west of Moongate Road.

The meeting will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 13, in the Oñate High School Cafeteria, 5700 Mesa Grande Dr., with representatives from the Doña Ana County Flood Commission and Public Works Department as facilitators.

This will be the first meeting of its kind devoted solely to the proposed stormwater-diversion project. Residents in the affected areas are invited to attend, ask questions and

Tikes in Spikes league

The City of Las Cruces is sponsoring a Tikes in Spikes Mini-Football League for children ages 4 to 7. Registration will be held from 8 a.m. to noon Saturday, Aug. 15, at Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave. Cost is $250 per team with a roster of 10 players.

The league will be divided into two divisions: ages 4 and 5 and ages 6 and 7. This six-week league season will take place from September to November. The goal for this season will be to teach kids fundamental football skills with an emphasize on character education. Volunteer coaches are needed. To coach in the Tikes in Spikes Mini-Football League, contact the City of Las Cruces Athletics Office at 541-2560. Parents may place the name of children not on a team on a waiting list.

For more information, contact Meerscheidt Recreation Center at 541-2563. The TTY number is 541-2661.

Audubon presentation

A presentation by the Mesilla Valley Audubon Society titled "eBird: What, Why, and How" will be given Wednesday, Aug. 19, at the Mesilla Valley Bosque State Park Visitor Center, 5000 Calle del Norte. eBird is a web-based database for bird sightings that is becoming increasingly valuable for birdwatchers as well as for conservation efforts. During the program, participants will find out more about its value and receive a quick training session on how to use it. For more information, contact Storm Sermay at 382-3348.

The Mesilla Valley Audubon Society will also host a field trip to the Pitchfork Ranch, Saturday, Aug. 22, with a possible overnight extension. The group will visit some of the areas covered at the society's June 17 chapter meeting and will also at the flowing Power Circums Inches in the society. and will stroll along the flowing Burro Cienega looking for riparian species and early fall migrants. Our target species will be the rare Botteri's Sparrow, which if summer rains have been good, should be singing and undergoing its late season breeding in the tall native grasses.

The trip will include easy to moderate walking, but some rough terrain is possible. To register for this trip or for more information, contact David Griffin by Thursday Aug. 20 at 382-2080 or griffinbio@gmail.com.

Las Cruces firefighters spray down a gas leak Wednesday, July 29, in central Las Cruces.

Gas leak causes home evacuations

Las Cruces firefighters evacuated a central Las Cruces neighborhood after a utility crew damaged a gas line.

Firefighters were dispatched just after 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 29, to the intersection of Hadley Avenue and Manzanita Street. A utility crew working in the area bored through a gas line causing a natural gas leak.

When fire department units arrived, they immediately evacuated residents and secured the area. Crews from the City of Las Cruces Gas Department were able to control the leak in approximately 90 minutes, according to a press release.

Displaced residents were allowed to return to their homes. No injuries were reported during the incident.

New space opportunities focus of ISPCS

Space symposium to explore payloads other than tourists

By Todd G. Dickson

The program for this year's International Symposium for Personal and Commercial Spaceflight (ISPCS) is taking shape and will focus on what it takes to safely fly people into suborbital space and what other opportunities the new generation of space vehicles offer.

The ISPCS will be held Oct. 21 and 22 at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. Since 2005, it has been attracting spaceflight industry leaders, from new entrepreneurs to established companies such as Ariane Space.

With construction starting on Spaceport America north of Las Cruces, the symposium's focus will be split between two main topics during the two days, said Pat Hynes of the New Mexico Space Grant Consortium, which sponsors the ISPCS.

The first day will bring in experts on space flight safety, such as Bryan O'Connor, chief of Safety and Mission Assurance at NASA. He will be part of a panel that will include representatives from new space entrepreneurs such as Space X, the leading company in NASA's contest to find new vehicles to service the Space Station, and Virgin Galactic, Spaceport America's anchor tenant that will be flying tourists into suborbital

The symposium's first day also will look at the role research universities such as New Mexico State University can play in helping the new industry.

Besides developing a passenger spaceliner, Virgin Galactic also is planning to build what it is calling Spacecraft2 to carry scientific payloads into suborbital space, Hynes said.

Virgin Galactic's mid-air launch system has been able to reach sub-orbital space at 62 miles above the Earth's surface. Exploration and understanding of this realm of the atmosphere has been limited in the past, Hynes said. Yet, it is where much of our weather is formed and where communications traverse.

In light of this additional need for suborbital spaceflight not linked to space tourism, the second day will look at what potential experiments and other activities will find a home in the payloads of Virgin Galactic and other suborbital rockets, Hynes said. With its weightless environment, the area of suborbital space provides opportunities for micro-gravity experiments and technology development at a much more affordable scale than with traditional launches of orbital rockets, she said.

The second day of the symposium also will look at the growing potential from new space delivery systems for smaller, more compact satellites.

Scheduled to speak on the ISPCS second day is Yngve Bergqvist, CEO and founder of the Ice Hotel at Spaceport Sweden. By building a hotel completely out of ice, Bergqvist has created a popular tourist attraction at the Swedish spaceport, drawing many tourists who aren't even interested in space, Hynes said.

"He made something out of nothing in the middle of nowhere," she said. "We can learn from that."

Other symposium speakers include: XCOR President Jeff Greason; Gary Payton, deputy under-secretary of the Air Force for Space Systems; Wayne Hale, deputy associate administrator for Strategic Partnerships and past Shuttle Program manager; astronaut Michael Lopez Alegria; and Ken Bowersox, vice president of Astronaut Safety and Mission Assurance, Space X.

Attendees who register before Oct. 1 get a discounted price of $375 for the full two-day conference. Registration after Oct. 1 is $445.

For more information on ISPCS 2009, visit www.ispcs.com.

As in past years, there will be the free Leonard R. Sugerman Public Forum Oct. 20.

Nominations sought for child advocates

October dinner will honor public service, citizen advocacy

Nominations are being sought for two awards named for New Mexico child advocates Alice King and Patty Jennings. Winners of the awards will be honored at New Mexico Voices for Children's Spirit of Hope Celebration dinner in October.

The First Annual Alice King Public Service Award will honor a public leader who has demonstrated outstanding commitment to and service for New Mexico's children and families. The Patty Jennings Citizen Advocacy Award will be presented to a New Mexican who has demonstrated outstanding community service in advocating for New Mexico children. NM Voices is also seeking nominations for its 16th Annual Amy Biehl Youth Spirit Award, which honors youth ages 13 to 26 for their outstanding contributions in the public interest.

Alice King was New Mexico's longtime first lady while her husband, former Gov. Bruce King, served three terms in office. She founded the New Mexico Girls Ranch and the New Mexico Children's Foundation, was chair of the New Mexico Children's Trust Fund and was a major supporter of the Carrie Tingley Children's Hospital.

Patty Jennings, the late wife of state Senate President Pro Tem Tim Jennings, was an advocate for early intervention, special education and other services for children with special needs. She was instrumental in the creation of the New Mexico Medical Insurance Pool. Both women passed away within the last year. This is the first year NM Voices is giving awards in their names.

"Both Alice and Patty were champions for children, and we owe them a debt of gratitude," said Eric Griego, executive director of the child advocacy organization. "The former first lady's work, in particular, really paved the way for much of the work we do now to improve the well-being of New Mexico's children."

Amy Biehl, a graduate of Santa

Fe High School, lost her life while working to end apartheid in South Africa. NM Voices has given awards in her name to New Mexico youth since 1993.

Nomination deadline for all three awards is 3 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 23. Awards will be presented at the Spirit of Hope Celebration, at 6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23, at the Embassy Suites in Albuquerque. Our Spirit of Hope Host Sponsor for this event is Pachamama.

Nomination criteria and forms, as well as submission instructions, are available online at www.nmvoices. org. Forms are also available at NM Voices during regular office hours at 2340 Alamo Ave. SE in Albuquerque.

For more information, call 505-244-9505

New Mexico Voices for Children is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization advocating for policies to improve the health and well-being of New Mexico's children, families and communities.

Camille Debroux and Santana Sanchez of Girl Scout Troop 97 recently hosted a booth at the Downtown Farmers & Crafts Market to collect health and comfort items for military personnel recovering from war wounds. Their troop is working with the American Legion Riders to get donations of personal hygiene items (toothbrushes/paste, deodorant, shampoo/conditioner, lotion, etc.), clothing (sweat pants, lap blankets, pajama bottoms, rubber soled slippers, etc.), and recreation items (calling cards, portable CD and DVD players, board games, playing cards, forever postage stamps, etc.). Donations may be dropped off at the local Girl Scout location. For more information, contact Anna Debroux at 496-8575.

After 100 years, Boy Scouts are still making a difference

Yucca Council makes a positive impact in El Paso and southern New Mexico areas

By JONATHAN BUTZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

For almost 100 years the Boy Scouts of America have helped young boys transform into productive citizens. Celebrating its centennial in February 2010, the organization hasn't changed its core values, but has adapted to the demands of modern-day life.

The Yucca Council, which oversees BSA in the El Paso and southern New Mexico areas, has churned out a number of successful local citizens who have made contributions to their schools and communities, including professors, clergymen and lawyers.

In its annual Scouting for Food event, the local BSA collected more than 8 tons of food to donate to food banks. With plans for a new scouting park between Las Cruces and El Paso, in addition to a new venture program, BSA seems to be thriving.

"We often find in our society that there's a struggle for character and life skills," said Yucca Council District Director Randall Andreasen. "More and more we're seeing single-parent families, and often it's hard to have a positive male influence. We try to provide those services."

Opportunities abound for children to grow, learn and be challenged, ultimately giving them invaluable life skills they will carry with them for the rest of their lives.

Just ask recent Las Cruces High School graduates Cody and Clark Pederson, both Eagle Scouts who plan to attend University of Arizona, and will later participate in a two-year mission abroad for their church.

"It's a great program all in all. It teaches career paths, personal responsibility, physical fitness—it's a great venue to learn about everything," Clark Pederson said.

The boys said they remember times when balancing Advanced Placement level classes, band and track with BSA became difficult, but they remained faithful to the program and said they are now glad they did. Balancing such a workload, Clark Pederson said, was part of the learning process at BSA.

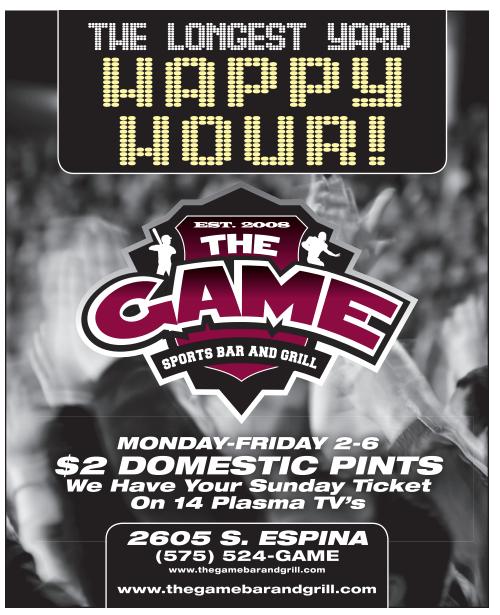

"Even if you don't feel like you will succeed much right now, stick with it. Just keep working and results will come up," Clark Pederson said.

Andreasen said he is excited about the BSA and its future impact on the community; however, he said he would like to see more youth and community members getting involved with the BSA.

"It's a family program and gives the opportunity for families to get involved with their children's lives," Andreasen said. "BSA is not a babysitter. It's not a dumping ground for your kids. It's about getting involved with your kid's lives."

Although both Cody and Clark said they plan to eventually settle down and raise families, there are still very career-driven. Both boys seek futures in engineering and said their experiences in BSA have prepared them. Offering opportunities in computer science, aviation and technology, BSA has come a long way from the old days of tracking, pinewood derbies and rabbit raising.

Andreasen said it is easy to get involved with BSA, and fees usually only come out to around $15 a year. For more information, visit www.yuccabsa.org.

Students examine energy use

NMSU group will produce materials targeting wasteful use of cell phones, lap tops and chargers

A group of New Mexico State University computer science student researchers this fall semester will compile a list of energy saving solutions by examining and analyzing data about the energy consumption of electronic devices used by students.

The Computer Science Graduate Students Organization at NMSU, led by president Hadi Sharifi, will create posters and literature for the campus and surrounding school districts outlining ways people can live a more sustainable lifestyle by performing simple tasks to prevent energy waste.

Sharifi, a computer science doctoral student, said the research team will conduct surveys on campus beginning in the fall 2009 semester to get a sampling of how the NMSU community is using and charging their electronic devices, in particular cell phones and lap tops.

While the surveys have not been done, the group does have predictions on what some of the biggest energy consumers for the cell phone user surveys will be: animated backgrounds, playing music files, leaving the phone on when not in use and improper charging.

"We would like to educate others on energy saving techniques so they can customize their settings to use the least amount of energy while still getting the maximum quality service from their product," Sharifi said.

The group has made many similar predictions for results from the laptop-user surveys including using the computer when it is plugged into the electrical charger.

"While you're charging anything (whether a cell phone or laptop) you shouldn't use it during charging because it shortens your battery life." Sharifi said.

Once the group's findings are assembled, they will disseminate the information campus and communitywide and to cell phone and laptop manufacturers.

"We are hoping to educate others. If they know how much energy they are wasting, they might find it more acceptable to use other techniques to save energy," he said.

"The department of computer science recognizes the importance of developing and assessing new knowledge with relevance to the roles of energy and sustainability and has many other projects for the Year of Sustainability at NMSU," said computer science department head Enrico Pontelli.

Two other projects include studying the best energy saving practices within the department's computer network and also using sensor networks to more efficiently manage temperatures in the department offices.

Fights ensue. There's an occasional fatality.

Passion runs deep when they tee it up in soccer overseas, often before crowds of 100,000 or more.

Michael Needham, the very first women's soccer coach at New Mexico State University, expects no violence when the Aggies play here this season. He'd settle for a crowd, though, at NMSU's Saturday, Aug. 15 exhibition home opener against New Mexico

Needham, short in height, long on energy, will welcome a roster of 30 when practice opens Wednesday, Aug. 5. Nine players are from New Mexico and four are locals. Janell Montoya, Jordan Baneges and Cassie DeLeon played at Mayfield. Cristianna Smith is a Las Cruces High graduate. Many of us have never seen a live college soccer match. I caught a glimpse of one on television while surfing for Baywatch re-runs.

Soccer looks like a lot of hustle and little scoring. Like trying to sell real estate these days.

Needham relishes coaching NMSU's inaugural team. "I don't have to follow another coach," he said. "There's no pressure of following a big winner. I don't have to teach a new system. Our players don't have to re-learn anything. "We're starting from scratch. I told our recruits that they will be making history as the first team ever here.

The Aggies will dress in new quarters located next to the football locker room. Needham will office there. They'll play home games in Aggie Memorial Stadium.

NMSU will probably be outmatched in its regular-season opener at UTEP on Friday, Aug. 21. "They're a top-100 team, and that's better than you might think, considering there are probably 300 D-1 teams in the country, ham said. "They're very athletic. It'll be our 18- and 19-year-old players against 23-year olds.'

Needham said he is not a shouting coach. "I'd like to think I'm a players coach," he said. "A facilitator, not a dictator.

Right now, since we are a young team, I want to get good team chemistry. That's important."

Until this season, New Mexico State was the only absentee in WAC soccer competition. All nine teams participate now. Fresno State won the post-season tournament last year and qualified for the NCAAs. Utah State and Hawai'i are also among the WAC's best, Need-

There's nothing like optimismAgs open football drills Aug. 5

By John Keith

At this time each year, when New Mexico State University nears the opening of fall football practice, optimism runs high.

For good reason.

Right now, the Aggies are undefeated, untied and un-injured personnel-wise. They have a new coach, a three-game home schedule to open the 2009 season and enough new faces in the lineup to be hopeful.

"I think we're a hungry football team," said coach DeWayne Walker, the new man on the block.

He will welcome 90 players when NMSU opens fall drills at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 5.

"These kids are tired of losing," Walker said. "Yes, I'm optimistic." The goal this season, Walker said, will be at least seven victories, which would make the Aggies bowl eligible.

Walker may be the first NMSU coach in years to start the season with three winnable home games. The Ags open against Idaho on Sept. 5, and follow with Prairie View on Sept. 12 before hosting UTEP on Sept. 19. Historically, NMSU has opened on the road against the likes of Nebraska, Texas and Georgia. Money games they are called.

This season, the money game is at Ohio State on Oct. 31 and the payoff is a meaningful $900,000. One game in the middle of the season when Walker's team is grooved and hopefully healthy.

The key to success this season will hinge largely on NMSU's mentality, Walker said. "When we have adversity during a game, can we pull together and overcome it and win?" he asked. "In the past, when the team got behind, it seemed like they told themselves 'well, here we go again.'

We have to change our mental attitude.

"Walker said Gary Uribe, the Aggies' strength and conditioning coach, is optimistic about where the team is now following summer conditioning drills.

"I think," Walker said, "we'll be strong offensively.
"We are deep at running back with Tonny (Glynn) and Marquell (Colston). They're mature running backs.

"Our offensive line will be solid, and I think we have some playmakers at the receiver positions. "Our quarterbacks (Trevor Walls, Jeff Fleming and freshman Tanner Rust) are young but athletic. I think there is room for improvement at that position.

"Defensively, we'll be fast. We have a good defensive line, four good linebackers (Jason Scott, Sam King, Jamar Cottonand Ross Conner) Our secondary looks good.' Walker said the team will miss senior linebacker Nick Paden, a force in NMSU's defense last year with 107 tackles, seven for a loss and two pass interceptions. Paden has a knee injury that has failed to respond. He is expected back in 2010. "As a new staff, we were animous to see Nick play," Walker said. "We will miss him." All practices will be open to the public. For the first two days, NMSU will wear shorts and helmets only. They'll add shoulder pads on Aug. 7 and practice in full pads for the first time The first two-a-day practices will be held at 9:15 a.m. and 3 p.m. Aug. 10. Aggies need a 'kick' for success in 2009

Walker still looking for kicker

New Mexico State football coach DeWayne Walker does have a mystery to solve this month. Practice starts next Wednesday and he needs to solve the mystery of the missing kicker.

Missing is really the wrong word, since there are a few candidates for the job, but who to choose?

The Aggies have had some stellar placement men through the years. Let's remember a few of them as we wait for the latest kicker to tee them up

The most famous of the Aggie booters depends on your criteria. If it is Super Bowl rings, then it's Roy Gerela. He was a member of the Steel Curtain Gang that won the big NFL game consistently.

Danny Villanueva has been the most successful NMSU place kicker in terms of his life after football. Villanueva started with the Rams and came within an eyelash of an NFL title ring in the "Ice Bowl" game versus Green Bay. His skill as an investor and entrepreneur rivals Donald Trump in the world of business.

Some other Aggie kickers worth mentioning include Dario Aguiniga and Dat Ly. Aguiniga has the most field goals made in NMSU history and nailed two game winners that made my heart beat much faster than it was supposed to. Both of his winning kicks came versus Louisiana-Lafayette in the Sun Belt wars at the start of this decade. Aguiniga ended the game in Lafayette in

JACK NIXON Jack's Corner

2001 with a 43 yarder that put the win in the Aggies ledger, 49-46. The next season at homecoming, he cemented his reputation as the "Cajun killer" with a 45 yarder into the wind as time ran out, for a 31-28 homecoming win. Ly came to this country with his family from Vietnam. They fled at the end of the war, settling in Wichita, Kan. He hit five field goals in one half during NMSU's upset win over Kansas in 1988. The five field goals for the game during one half remain the best ever in Aggie history.

Frank "Bubba" Culin hit the most extra points during the high scoring early 1990s under Jim Hess. Culin missed only 10 of 138 attempts in his career that ended in 1995.

Nick "the kick" Cecava from Alamogordo, N.M., Skip Vernon from Albuquerque and academic all-American Andy Weiler from California rank just behind the aforementioned kickers in the stats.

New Mexico State has been without a steady placement man since Aguiniga got his degree at the end of 2003. If there is a Gerela or a Culin in the group Walker is auditioning, happy days are a

Big Ag weekend on tap

NMSU volleyball, soccer teams kick off 2009 season

It's practically August now and that means the good stuff is startin' soon.

There's a big weekend coming up so mark your Palm Pilot, your iPhone or just put a big "x" on the wall calendar. Aug. 22 and 23 is the weekend to dive into the new season at New Mexico State headfirst.

On Saturday, Aug. 22, the alumni of volleyball head coach Mike Jordan's championship program will be back to play the current team in the exhibition game that has become a welcome

The following day, Sunday, Aug. 23, marks the first-ever home match for NMSU soccer versus Idaho State. This is just the start of a fun-filled fall for

Look at all the great players who care so much about Jordan and the tradition he has built that they come back from all corners of the country to share fellowship and get some spikes down as well. From the early days, Robin Shook, from the championship years, Morgan Reader, Stevi Adams-Maytubby and Shari Hearne along with the WAC championship members are expected to likely to be on hand when it is time to tap it off. It is one thing to have good teams; it is another to build the camaraderie that exists in the Aggie volleyball has brought forth. Tailgating, being there in larger and larger numbers and following the team when it travels is proof of the strength of what has been going on. That is something soccer head coach Michael Needham is looking to duplicate.

The women's soccer program boots it off at Aggie Memorial on Saturday, Aug. 23, with a pair of exhibition games a little earlier in the month. That's quite a way to get primed for a crimson and white year of celebration. I want to remind you that season tickets are on sale for both sports and you are needed to build the spirit.

Some may remember that volleyball at New Mexico State was kind of a throwaway activity for fans before the Jordan era began. Considering the effort Needham has put into the preseason, it looks to ole Pete that he is on track to duplicate what Jordan has made a Coach "J" will be waggin' a finger in my face reminding me that it didn't happen overnight. It never does when you are building a house of winners. You need a strong foundation to support that big house, and it's time you joined the foundation of another Aggie fall activity.

Richburg to coach USA relay teams

New Mexico State's head cross country/track and field coach Orin Richburg will coach the USA men's and women's relay teams as they compete in the 2009 IAAF World Championships in Berlin, Germany, Aug. 15 through 23.

Last summer, Richburg took the reigns as the head relay coach for the USA track and field Olympic team in Beijing. He was appointed to this position by a group of his peers and has been a member of the Olympic coaching circuit for several years.

The USA relay team brought home a pair of gold medals in the women's and men's 4x400-meter relay.

"Being nominated by a group of my peers is very gratifying and I am proud that I get to represent my country at the games," Richburg said.

Events of the championships are set to begin Saturday, Aug. 15, but Richburg's athletes are not set to compete until Friday, Aug. 21, starting with the mon's 4x100 meters relay. men's 4x100 meters relay.

While Richburg is coaching the USA team abroad, his Aggie cross country team will set off to camp in Ruidoso, N.M., Aug. 15 to 18.

Last season, Richburg had 15 student-athletes earn all-WAC status for the cross country, indoor and outdoor seasons, including six first team all-conference selections. For the second year-in-a-row, the Aggies had three student-athletes competing at the 2009 Midwest Regional Championships.

Carolyn Bivens

stepping down.

THE GOLF DOC

Doc: It's been nearly a year since we've spoken. My readers have been asking about you. Where have you been and what have you been doing.

FJP: Retreat. Mount Fuji

Doc: Wow! Did you climb Mount Fuji? Mount Fuji is 12,395 feet high. That's impressive; and at your age a major accomplishment.

FJP: Not climb. Just look.

Doc: Oh, right. Anyway, while you were away lots of things have been happening in golf. Kenny Perry, David Duval and Tom Watson all suffered heartbreaking losses. On the verge of his first major, Kenny Perry couldn't close the deal in the final holes of the Masters, and then lost in a playoff to the Argentinian Angel Cabrera. Of course Cabrera made a miracle par save and putted out of his mind to beat Perry, but Perry sadly handed it to him. If Perry weren't so well-loved and such a nice guy the golf media would have skewered him as a goat like they did Scott Hoch when he missed the famous four-footer to lose his FJP: Nerves always unfortunate.

Doc: While you were admiring Mount Fuji in your native land, David Duval nearly "stole" the U.S. Open, coming out of oblivion to contend until the final holes. Ranked 900-and-something in the world in June, he really played brilliantly in the Open, only to have his hopes dashed with a 71st-hole bogey. But his confidence is way up, and I think we will hear a lot more from Duval, who finally seems to be at peace with his family and occasional tournament play.

FJP: A talent too rare to hide.

Doc: Then there's Tom Watson, the real heartbreaker, at the British Open played this year at Turnberry. That was the very site in 1977 where Watson bested a fit Jack Nicklaus in the Open that became celebrated as "The Duel in the Sun." In case you haven't gone through all your newspapers yet - I know you don't do email or any of that stuff - I'm talking about five-time British Open winner Tom Watson, not PGA Tour long-drive bomber Bubba Watson. Tom Watson, now 59 years old, played 71 holes of the Open better than anyone else in the field, regardless of age. Heck, Tiger Woods didn't even make the cut. That is until making bogey from the middle of the fairway on the 72nd hole. That historical error meant a tie with

FJP: Best to avoid playoff.

Doc: Well, Watson seemed demoralized by his weak 8-foot par putt on 18, which would have won the Open, leaving the door open for Cink. The playoff wasn't even FJP: Mr. Cink great golfer.

Doc: Back in 2005 Cink contended for the U.S. Open until bogeying the 72nd hole at Shinnecock. He would have been in a playoff with eventual winner Ratif

Doc: True. In the British Open playoff Watson collapsed and Cink won going away. "Déjà vu, all over again" with Kenny Perry. What do you make of all

FJP: Best to avoid playoff.

Doc: The biggest news in women's golf is LPGA commissioner Carolyn Bivens stepping down. Actually she was pretty much forced out, mostly by a group of tour players who staged a rebellion and made it impossible for Bivens to stay on. The players reportedly resented Bivens' push to transform the Tour's "dykes-on-spikes" image into a star-studded entertainment attraction that would rival the men's tour and be a big-bucks TV attraction.

FJP: No-cut contract best.

Doc: Bivens was recruited to run the women's tour in 2005, largely to revamp the marketing position and profitability potential of the LPGA Tour.

At the time, say some of the players who like Bivens, her vision was that "these girls deserve more (money)," a notion which would be a harbinger of the heavyhanded approach she took with tournament owners and sponsors, especially to raise funds for player benefits.

Bivens did get in a little hot water a couple of years ago when she dictated that the Asian players would have to learn to speak English for the press interviewers. That attempt went over about as big as someone trying to bully Wal-Mart to take down all the store signs that are in Spanish.

Bivens' enemies must have seen her as an uncompromising, take-no-prisoners executive, despite wanting to elevate the players' status. In the environment when Bivens was hired, those were go-go times for golf. Now the economy sucks. No fewer than seven tournaments have been lost to the tour since 2008, while many accuse her of being hard-nosed in dealing with

Do you think forcing her out was wrong?

Golf Doctor

FJP: Wrong to kick ball and take names.

Doc: That's not quite the saying, but I know what you mean, Pro. These are times that demand the ultimate in emotional intelligence to build, not destroy, business relationships.

Interestingly the new acting commish is Marsha Evans who is a retired Navy Rear Admiral. Since 1998 she has been CEO of the Girl Scouts and CEO of the American Red Cross - she's a heavy in terms of organizational know how.

But now I'm really confused. I'm a Navy veteran myself (Lieutenant, destroyers, Vietnam), and I certainly know that it would take a very special, very tough woman to earn stars on her shoulder boards. A kick ' and take names gal. So they trade one hard-liner for another? On the other hand, the tour is desperate for a commish who is truly politically savvy and can repair relationships. I would recommend Condoliza Rice to the tour, but she wants the NFL job.

FJP: Rough sailing ahead.

Doc: On to another topic, are you working with any emerging superstar golfers these days?

FJP: One.

Doc: Who is she?

Doc: Ahh so.

FJP: A boy, 59. Teaching Samurai code.

Aggies sign two pitchers

Both long on experience

New Mexico State softball coach Kathy Rodolph signed two transferring pitchers to play for the Aggies.

Torrey Schroeder, a right-handed pitcher from Texas, and Alex Villalobos, a right hander from Oklahoma State, will help fill the void in the circle that was created with Kim Watson's graduation last spring.

Both players are eligible for competition this upcoming season.

"One thing we really needed once Kim (Watson) graduated was maturity and experience and someone who wants the No. 1 or No. 2 role, and we found just that with these two," Rodolph said. "I'm really excited to have them because they are a perfect fit and will help our younger pitchers graduate, so-to-say, into being ready for top NCAA competition."

Schroeder played three seasons with the Longhorns as a pitcher and first baseman. In 40 appearances in the circle, she compiled a 12-4 record with a 3.54 ERA. She started 24 games at Texas, including a career-high 16 last season where she struck out 64 batters and opponents only hit .241 while facing Villalobos spent last season on the OSU pitching staff and one year prior to that at Central Arizona College. She appeared in 15 games for the Cowgirls, making two starts and finished her sophomore season at Oklahoma State with a 2-2 record and 2.90 ERA (121) and wins (65).

Broncos No. 1 in WAC polls

Aggies ninth in media poll, eighth in 2009 coaches poll

The New Mexico State University football team has been selected to finish eighth in the 2009 Western Athletic Conference football coaches poll and ninth in the media poll, released Wednesday at the WAC Football Media Days.

The Aggies received 104 points in the media poll and 13 points in the coaches poll.

In 2008, the Aggies were picked seventh in both the coaches and media polls, finishing with a 3-9 record and a 1-7 conference mark.

"Based on our record last year, that is probably where we should be ranked in the preseason poll," NMSU coach DeWayne Walker said. "The beautiful part about this is that we still have to play the games and we will use this as a motivating factor for our team and try to improve our football team and see where we are at the end of the season."

"We can't worry about what others think of us," senior wide receiver Marcus Anderson said. "We just need to go out and win football games."

"Honestly, to me these are just numbers," senior linebacker Ross Conner said. "This give us as a team and me personally more motivation to prove people wrong and to go out and have a successful season."

In the media poll, Boise State received the No. 1 spot with 55 of the polls' firstplace votes, followed by Nevada (444), Fresno State (365) and Louisiana Tech (360)

Hawai'i and San Jose State received 275 and 263 points. Utah State (170) and Idaho (110) finished just ahead of the NMSu (104) to round out the voting.

The media also voted on preseason players of the year. Nevada quarterback Colin Kaepernick was voted the Offensive Player of the Year while Boise State cornerback Kyle Wilson was picked as the Defensive Player of the Year.

In the coaches poll, Boise State received 64 points from the nine WAC coaches while Nevada was close behind with 55 points. Fresno State and Louisiana Tech finished tied for third with 45 points, followed by Hawaiʻi (36), San Jose State (34), Utah State (21), NMSU (13) and Idaho (11) rounded out the coaches poll.

The Aggies open the season against Idaho at Aggie Memorial Stadium at 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 5.

for the Bulldawgs."

And play he did. Patrick contributed to the team as a sophomore on special teams, then started at tight end as a junior. As a senior last fall, Patrick starred at tight end and also played defensive end and linebacker as the Bulldawgs won another state championship.

Jaquess was among a group of about 30 seniors who helped the team to a perfect record, defeating Eldorado in the state championship game in Albuquerque. Jaquess and many of his former teammates are back in Albuquerque this week for the North-South Football All-Star game. The contest is set for Friday evening.

Jaquess' former Bulldawg teammates in the game include James Hall Jr.,

Dante Caro, Mike Bernal, Jacob Lilley, Luis Olivas, Will Bruce and Zane Bischof.

"It's going to be like a family reunion," Jaquess said. Also on the team

Also on the team are Mayfield's Michael Nakamoto, Matt Flores, Jacob Ceniceros, J.D. Ordunez and Isaac McConkey as well as Onate's Eric Flores. There are 14 city athletes representing the South.

Hall will attend New Mexico State next fall on a football scholarship, while Bernal and Flores are headed to Eastern New Mexico University. Caro and Jaquess will play for the New Mexico Lobos.

Jaquess, who is now 6-foot-1, 190 pounds, will be an invited walk-on at UNM and the Lobo coaches will move him to the fullback position.

"They really liked his motor and his ability to block," Brent Jaquess said. "I liked getting the big block that "I liked getting the big block that sprung someone for a touchdown," said Patrick, who scored six touchdowns of his own last fall. "That's what makes me happy, having the important block."

The 2008 season was like a dream come true for father and son. Bulldawg football had been a huge part of their lives for many years and in Patrick's last season at the school, the team achieved all of its goals.

"It's been a special time," said Brent.
"And we were able to have a lot of quality time together. Having your kid play for you is great, but to have him play at such a high level and win a state championship was icing on the cake.

"More is expected of a coach's kid, and Patrick went above and beyond the call," Brent added.

Without counseling, chances of marital failure are greater

Rewarding children can be seen as a bribe to some parents

If you were a counselor who was helping someone manage a crisis situation, your recommendations to exercise tough love could potentially kill the marriage. Doesn't that make you nervous? Have you ever regretted taking a family in this direction?

Before I answer that question, you need to understand how I see my situation. My role is similar to that of a surgeon who tells a patient he needs a coronary-artery-bypass operation. The man sits in his doctor's office, hearing the probabilities of success and failure.

"If you undergo this operation," the doctor says, "research shows you'll have a 3 percent chance of not surviving the surgery."

Wow! Three out of every 100 people who submit to the knife will die on the table. Why would anyone run that risk voluntarily? Because the chances of death are far greater without the surgery. The "love must be tough" confrontations and ulti-

The "love must be tough" confrontations and ultimatums are like that. They may result in the sudden demise of a relationship, but without the crisis, there is a much higher probability of a lingering death. Instead of bringing the matter to a head while there is a chance for healing, the alternative is to stand by while the marriage dies with a whimper.

I'd rather take my chances today, before further damage is done. A blowout is better than a slow leak.

I am uncomfortable using rewards to influence my kids. It seems too much like bribery to me. I'd like to hear your views on the subject.

Many parents feel as you do, and in response I say: Don't use them if you are philosophically opposed to the concept.

It is unfortunate, however, that one of our most effective teaching tools is often rejected because of what I would consider to be a misunderstanding of terms. Our entire society is established on a system of rewards, yet we don't want to apply them where they are needed most — with young children.

As adults, we go to work each day and receive a paycheck every other Friday. Getting out of bed each morning and meeting the requirements of a job are thereby rewarded. Medals are given to brave soldiers, plaques are awarded to successful businesses and watches are presented to retiring employees. Rewards make responsible effort worthwhile.

The main reason for the overwhelming success of capitalism is that hard work and personal discipline are rewarded materially. The great weakness of socialism is the absence of reinforcement; why should a person struggle to achieve if there is nothing special to be gained?

This system is a destroyer of motivation, yet some parents seem to feel it is the only way to approach children. They expect little Marvin to carry responsibility simply because it is noble for him to do so. They want him to work, learn and sweat for the sheer joy of personal accomplishment. He isn't going to buy it.

Consider the alternative approach to the "bribery" I've recommended. How are you going to get your 5-year-old son to behave more responsibly? The most frequently used substitutes are nagging, complaining, begging, screaming, threatening and punishing.

The mother who objects to the use of rewards may also go to bed each evening with a headache, vowing to have no more children. She doesn't like anything resembling a bribe, yet later she will give money to her child when some opportunity comes along.

Since her youngster never earns his own cash, he doesn't learn how to save it or spend it wisely or pay tithe on it. The toys she buys him are purchased with her money, and he values them less. Most important, he is not learning self-discipline and personal responsibility that are possible through the careful reinforcement of that behavior.

Yes, I do believe the judicious use of rewards can be very helpful to parents – but they're not for everyone.

Mountain View Baptist Church welcomes new pastor

Pastor Robb Redlin brings experience from around the world

By BETH SITZLER The Las Cruces Bulletin

Pastor Robb Redlin and his family will join Mountain View Baptist Church, 301 N. Solano Drive, Sunday, Aug. 2, as the congregation's new pastor.

Raised in Adrian, Mich., where his dad was a police officer, Redlin said he knew at an early age that he wanted to spend his life following the word of God. At the age of 15, he said he decided to dedicate his life full time to Christian service.

After graduating from high school, Redlin attended Pensacola Christian College in Pensacola, Fla. It was there that he met his future wife Barbara. Once he had completed his time at the university, he began his ministry career.

"I want to reach out to the community and see God's word spread," he said.

Over the years, Redlin has traveled around the country and over seas to spread the word of God and serve the community. He has worked as a youth pastor outside of Chicago and Florida, and also spent time working as a Christian school teacher.

Following his 12 years of service as a youth pastor, Redlin packed up his family and moved to Wales, England, to work as a pastor of a congregation.

Following his three years abroad, Redlin and his family decided to head back to the states and find a new congregation to call home.

Upon his return, a friend located in Las Cruces recommended him for the pastor position at Mountain View Baptist Church, since the previous pastor was relocating to a church in Texas.

"I wasn't sure if I wanted to work with an established church or a small church that needed help to grow," he said.

In the past, Redlin said he would help small churches grow. After much consideration, he decided to continue that tradition and accepted the pastor position at Mountain View, which was formed four years ago.

"We're excited. My wife is from the Southwest and is glad to come back," he said, adding that the area's hot, summer days are a welcome change from Wales' drizzly weather.

Along with years of experience, Redlin is also bringing with him a loving family.

"We're very big on family, and we enjoy being around people" he said

After he and Barbara Redlin tried to conceive, they were told they couldn't have children. They began to look into adoption and decided to visit the Ukraine. It was there that they found their son Tell, 13.

"It was a wonderful match," Redlin said about Tell, who was 5 years old when they adopted him.

Blessed with a son, the couple decided to look into adopting another child three years ago while they were in Wales. Before they had the chance, however, a miracle happened.

"My wife said that something was wrong, that she didn't feel right," he said.

After Barbara Redlin went to the doctor, they discovered that she was pregnant with their daughter Annie, now age 2.

"The doctor said she only had a small window of opportunity to get pregnant," he said.

Redlin and his family are currently visiting relatives in Michigan, but he said he has big plans for when he gets to the area.

"I want to be a help to the people of Las Cruces," he said. "I want to reach out to the community, not only the church."

Las Crucens may also catch Redlin and Tell at the golf course.

"My son and I both enjoy sports, especially golf," he said

BONNIE BURN,

League of Women Voters

Obama hopes for reform legislation by year's end

By Todd G. Dickson

Politics and conflicting opinions about how to fix the health care system are slowing down national reform efforts, but President Barack Obama is pushing Congress to get legislation passed before the end of 2009.

Locally, the League of Women Voters is trying to get people informed and actively involved to counter the money and influence by primarily the health insurance lobby, which the group contends is the main beneficiary from keeping the status quo.

At a recent forum on health care reform, Bonnie Burn, local league president, noted how the health insurance industry has consolidated as it went from a predominately nonprofit model in the mid-1990s to a market dominated by forprofit companies.

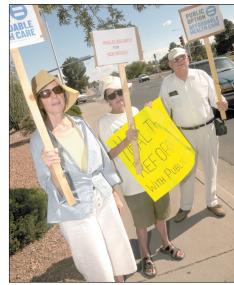

"In 1988, the top-10 insurers covered 27 percent of all insured Americans," she said. "Today, four publicly traded corporations – WellPoint Inc., UnitedHealth Group, Aetna Inc. and Cigna – cover 85 million people, or almost half of all Americans with private insurance.

By being more responsible to their shareholders than patients, Burn said these companies measure what they pay out for care as their "medical loss ratio." If less is paid out, thereby reducing the medical loss ratio, shareholders enjoy more profits, she said.

Despite the hot weather, supporters of health care reform took their messages to Main Street Thursday, July 23.

STEVE MACINTYRE

let the government stand between you and your doctor,' be aware that the insurance companies are already 'standing between you and your doctor," she said. "(Insurance companies) are practicing 'rationing' by making decisions about your coverage, such as rejecting applications, rejecting claims, excluding people because of pre-existing conditions, rescinding insurance when claims are more than the insurer wishes to pay and increasing your deductibles.

Burn's words are supported by an article written by Doris Isolini Nelson, a member of the league's Health Care Education Task Force.

She wrote that after the defeat of health care reforms in the mid-1990s, managed care became the mantra for a private sector solution.

"Before 1995, the great majority of employer plans were traditional indemnity-insurance, paying a fee for service and allowing access to any doctor, paying whatever the doctor or hospital required," Nelson wrote. "In 1978, 95 percent of Americans with employer-sponsored coverage had fee-for-service plans. In 1998, only 14 percent were enrolled in such plans. This drop was accompanied by an increase in enrollment in a wide variety of managed care insurance plans, includ-ing Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOs), Preferred Provider Organizations (PPOs) and Point of Service plans (POSs). These plans controlled costs four ways: 1) limiting the choice of doctors by paying the total fee only if the physician was in the plan's network; 2) requiring patients to see a primary care doctor before obtaining a referral to a specialist; 3) requiring prior permission by doctors for admission to hospitals, diagnostic tests or medical procedures; and 4) negotiating predetermined fee schedules for physician payment which have been discounted from the usual fees.

In 2004, the National Coalition on Health Care (NCHC) reported that since 1998 not only premiums but also the rate of increase in premiums had escalated, even during a period of low inflation.

According to a report this year by the NCHC, employment-based health insurance premiums have increased 120 percent since 1999 and by an even higher rate since 2000, according to the Nelson report.

Meanwhile, the average employee contribution to provided health insurance has increased more than 120 percent with out-of-pocket deductibles, co-pay for medication and co-insurance for physician and hospitals rising 115 percent.

Along with the increased cost, the health insurance industry is doing little to improve health care quality, Nelson contends. The health insurance industry is marketing for younger enrollees, who are generally healthier and less prone to seek medical treatment.

In 2004, NCHC reported on "an epidemic of sub-standard care.

The dominant finding of our review is that for most care that has been studied, there are large gaps between the care that people should receive and the care they do receive," the NCHC reported.

According to a major study by the RAND Corp., less than 55 percent of patients under a managed-care model get the care recommended by their doctors.

As the industry consolidated and prices escalated, more people became uninsured and businesses began dropping their health care benefits.

"The percentage of people (workers and dependents) with employment-based health insurance has dropped from 70 percent in 1987 to 62 percent in 2007," Nelson wrote. "This is the lowest level of employment-based insurance coverage in more than a decade.

Nelson noted other ways insurance companies manage risk and reduce their medical loss ratio. They include reducing covered services, raising deductibles and co-pays, and refusing coverage for pre-existing conditions.

"Even nonprofits such as Blue Shield of California are obliged to follow prevailing market practices lest they be swamped with the highest-cost customers," Nelson wrote. "Insurance companies have established departments dedicated to reviewing applications of customers who file costly medical claims. The goal is to discover evidence that the clients failed to disclose pre-existing conditions when they applied. Insurers cite these omissions as grounds to cancel policies retroactively, a process known as rescission.

Treatment center cuts off Presbyterian

Company says insurance requirements would raise costs

By Todd G. dickson

The New Mexico Vein Treatment Center in Las Cruces recently informed 120 of 1,800 active patients that it will no longer accept their Presbyterian Health Insurance

In a letter to patients of the center, CEO Erik Khan wrote the "decision was made after careful consideration of Presbyterian Health Plan's inability to reduce physician costs, which ultimately would reduce costs to their patients.

In an interview with the Bulletin, Khan said Presbyterian had been one of the more difficult health insurance carriers his staff has had to work with in terms of getting approval for often life-saving procedures. But when the Albuquerque-based insurance company demanded his physicians carry $1 million worth of malpractice insurance settlement coverage – five times what they have now – it was the proverbial last straw, he said.

To carry that level of malpractice insurance would cost the physicians $85,000 per patient. Khan said it was too expensive and he had to make the difficult decision to cut loose his Presbyterian patients.

"We want to take care of people," Khan said. "But (Presbyterian) wanted to increase our cost beyond our ability to cover that cost."

The center and its two physicians – Khalid Y. Khan and partner Alfredo F. Gurmendi – provide surgical services such as lung surgery, minimally invasive vein and arterial surgery and advanced wound healing therapy. There are only two other physicians in Las Cruces providing those kinds of surgical services, Erik Khan noted, and if the center's former patients can't be seen by them, they will have to go elsewhere.

The problem he's had with Presbyterian is illustrative of the kind of issues being discussed on a national level in the health care debate, Khan said.

Of the center's nine employees – not counting the doc-- there is a full-time employee whose job is dealing with insurance companies.

Besides the liability issue, Khan said Presbyterian's own slow internal approval processes often created worrisome delays in treatment of serious illnesses

For example, a person's chest is X-rayed and a possible lung tumor is detected. The next step in diagnosis is to have a CAT scan, which Khan said could - and should - be done immediately at Memorial Medical Center just across Telshor Boulevard from the center. To pay for the CAT scan, the insurance provider must approve the test. Should the scan reveal a tumor, the surgery and/or treatment must also be approved by the insurance before it can be done. And the insurance company may likely require the center to conduct more tests before the treatment is approved.

With Presbyterian, that process of approvals can eat up a month before the patient is finally getting oncology treatment, Khan said. Without getting the prior approval, the insurance company most likely won't pay, leaving the patient shouldering the expense, he said.

"This is where the risk versus cost of health care insurance has become an issue," he said.

And there are a number of patients the center does work with who don't have insurance, Khan said. Even though it is ultimately the patient's responsibility to find ways to pay the medical bill, the doctors will take on patients based on their medical needs, not whether they have insurance, he said. So it chaffs Khan when doctors are sometimes depicted as being the ones conducting unnecessary tests or procedures that are adding burdens to the cost of health care. President Barack Obama's recent example about tonsillectomies is especially irritating to Khan because the reimburse rate to a doctor for the procedure is only about $260 and infected tonsils can present a real health hazard.

Doctors put in long hours and work weeks – often without vacations – because they care about their patients, he said.

Just as it's bothersome to have health insurance providers dictating the malpractice insurance of his center's doctors, Khan said doctors need to retain the control to make decisions about the best treatments in consultation with their patients.

As for his center's former Presbyterian patients, Khan's advice to them in his letter was to "consult with an insurance agent to gain proper coverage."

In an emergency situation, however, the center's physicians will be on call as they always have been for emergency surgeries, he said.

Senior Olympians prepare to attend National Senior Games

New Mexico will be well represented

New Mexico Senior Olympic athletes are gearing up and training to compete at the 2009 Summer National Senior Games, Saturday, Aug. 1 through Santuray, Aug. 15, in Palo Alto, Calif., at Stanford University.

This year, and this year only, qualifying standards have been relaxed. Atheletes who participated in a state qualifying game in an individual sport (except golf) and finished are eligible to participate in the 2009 National Games in that sport. More than 14,000 athletes are signed up to compete in five-year age divisions.

New Mexico will be represented very well at the games with about 400 athletes competing. There are 25 sports in which seniors will compete, including seven demonstration sports: equestrian, fencing, lawn bowling, rowing, sailing, soccer and water polo. New Mexico will have transportation shuttles to assist athletes to their sport venue and to get them around Stanford University during the games.

Throughout the two-week competition, athletes will have the chance to socialize at the special events. For example, on Aug. 8, Nationals will host a Celebration of Athletes, and all athletes attending must be dressed in the state's "uniform" and be seated together.

"Athletes from New Mexico are always the envy of all other states because our delegation is suited out in bright red wind suits with a beautiful artistic scene done by artist Mark Reid from the Dexter area and the athletes truly stand out beautifully," New Mexico Senior Olympics Executive Director Ceci Acosta said. "We anticipate a good showing of 200 athletes for the celebration. I am so proud to say I work for this bunch from New Mexico as director of the organization. This will be my 10th year to attend the Games at Nationals."

The state reception is in the second week of the games, from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, Aug. 7, at the Hilton Garden Inn in San Mateo, Calif. The reception allows athletes an opportunity to share game experiences with one another and to show off their medals.

The social aspect of the games is very important to the seniors as many have traveled to the games alone. Other special events will be held throughout the games including activities such as the Flame Arrival Ceremony, South of the Border Fiesta, Real Texas Barbecue, '60s Be In and Psychedelic Ice Cream Social," farewell party and much more.

New Mexico Senior Olympics athletes going to nationals will be recognized at the New Mexico Conference On Aging Sports and Fitness Fair, Wednesday, Aug. 26.

Senior Olympics Summer Games are funded in part by a grant made available from the N.M. Aging and Long Term Services for health promotion activities. NMSO is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization headquartered in Roswell, N.M.

case enters litigation

Judge requests that attorneys focus on beneficial water use

By Marvin Tessneer

At a water rights hearing on July 15, District Judge Jerald A. Valentine ordered that attorneys submit briefs to determine whether or not the amount of water necessary for pecan growers should be determined separately from others.

"The issue is that the amount of water necessary to produce one crop in a stream system could affect the other water rights claims," the judge said.

The court litigation is the latest development after the recently formed Southern Rio Grande Diversified Crop Farmers Association protested the Office of the State Engineer's agreement to grant pecan growers 5.5 acrefeet of combined surface and well water annually. All other growers were granted 2 acre feet of water this year.

While discussing his request, Valentine referred to New Mexico Water Code, adopted by the state in 1931.

One paragraph reads:
"Beneficial use is the basis, the measure and the limit of the right to the use of water."

The statute continues to say that, although beneficial use is not clearly defined in the New Mexico Constitution or state statutes, New Mexico courts have established many important requisites. One is the maximum use clause that was included to prevent waste. No matter how early a water rights owner's appropriation priority is dated, he is not entitled to receive more water than is necessary for agricultural use. Water rights owners are allowed full use of their water, but they should avoid waste, according

While attorneys were writing their briefs, Valentine asked them to consider several points listed under "Calculating Duty" in the water codes statutes:

"Amount of water diverted; place of diversion as related to use; amount necessary for particular crop or land; season of the year and general irrigation or water-using practices that are

Local restaurants expand their sidewalk presence

By Gabriel Vasquez

If you wanted to get fancy, you could call it "dining alfresco."

But really, it's not that complicated. With year-round warm weather and sunny skies, patio dining should come natural to Las Crucens - and if it hasn't yet, there are signs it's catching on.

Gary Ebert, owner of Zeffiro Pizzeria Napoletana, in the heart of Downtown Las Cruces, said opening an outdoor dining area is one of the best moves he's made since opening the restaurant earlier this year.

"We wanted to have an outdoor European bistro feel to make this a fun neighborhood to come to," he said. "When we started setting up tables, we didn't know how popular it would be, but it's turned out that people really

Ranching pioneers have tamed the Organs for 120 years

By Marvin Tessneer

Four generations of ranchers were represented Saturday, July 25, when the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce honored the W.W. Cox family at the 2009 National Day of the American Cowboy celebration held at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

Two great-grandsons, Ronald and Mark Cox, were among the family representatives.

"It's not just the Cox family they're honoring," Mark Cox said. "It's recognizing a way of life that is going away."

Ronald Cox expressed his gratitude for the event.

"All of our family friends have come out to honor our family," he said. "And we appreci-

The auditorium was filled to capacity. Several old saddles – some belonging to the Cox family - chaps and lariats were set up as the backdrop to the event.

businesses in the Downtown corridor, (patio dining) will really take off."

Gayle Glenn, manager at International Delights, is no stranger to the dining alfresco concept, having an established outdoor dining area frequented by hundreds of loyal patrons each week.

"The patio area is very important – it's a big draw for us," she said. "For one, it has a smoking section which has become really rare here. Also, dogs are welcome and people often come with their dogs to enjoy lunch."

Although International's patio faces a shopping center parking lot, custom-ers still visit to enjoy the weather, European feel and of course the food and beverages, Glenn said.

"It gets packed in the summer because it's very cool in the evenings," Glenn said. "We have umbrellas on almost every part of the patio, so you can be outside but not deal with the New Mexico sun. Although we have a whole demographic of regulars that we see everyday - sometimes twice a day

- we're seeing more and more new faces."

El Sombrero Patio Café, open since 1956, has built its dining experience around its small, but well-decorated and shaded patio.

"The patio is very important to us," said El Sombrero Manager Cody Dolan. "Especially on a nice night or a nice afternoon, it draws a lot of customers.'

Dolan said the restaurant's owner often spruces up the patio by adding plants and keeping a modern look, often rearranging its colors, furniture and seating area.

Tony Montenegro, bar manager at Brigid's Cross Irish Pub, said with an irresistible view, fans in the summer and heaters in the winter, the restaurant's patio has become increasingly popular.

"At night, and on the weekends, it's especially busy," he said. "You also have a very nice view. You can see all of Las Cruces lit up at night - it's great."

Whether the great climate, views, European style or desire to be outdoors attract present and future restaurantgoers, it's certain Las Cruces is catching on to dining alfresco.

The concept is catching on with students, as well. Even in the dog days of summer, a young crowd is usually hitting the books and enjoying a latté or two at Starbucks Cafe on University Avenue. Similarly, during the evenings, the large patio area at The Game Bar & Grill on Espina Street thrives, with a vibrant mix of young and old enjoying their favorite food and drink to good conversation.

And for the happy hour crowd, the patio at Si Señor Restaurant on Amador Avenue is surely a familiar place. Dozens, if not hundreds, frequent the popular restaurant for its outdoor eating and drinking space each week.

Daniella de Luca, employee at New Mexico State University, said she would like to see the number of outdoor venues increase.

"I really think there could be more," De Luca said. "I tend to go to places like Farley's, Boba Café, and other outdoor spots around town, but I'd like to see more."

to see more."

Rebecca Lujan, 25, said the first step in revitalizing Main Street Downtown should be to make it inviting to the general public, and that means adding pedestrian-friendly businesses.

"You have to make them accessible," Lujan said.
"Look what happened to Garduños, the atmosphere was great but they went out of business. They had an amazing building and a great patio, but it just didn't Lujan said Si Señor is her favorite outdoor spot to relax with friends.

El Paso has recently caught the patio bug as well, passing an ordinance last week streamlining the permit process for restaurants and bars that want to expand outdoors in an effort to promote outdoor dining and entertainment.

The ordinance includes standards for things such as fence height around the patio, lighting, signage and what type of canopies and awnings can be used.

On the East Coast, which arguably has less days of outdoor dining potential, patio cafés spill over onto curbs and sidewalks in busy Downtown and retail districts in towns both big and small.

"That would be nice here, but I'm not sure if Las Cruces is ready for that," De Luca said. "But it would be great to have some more opportunities to eat outside and socialize with friends."

Among the photos were pictures of W.W. Cox on horseback, the San Augustine headquarters with the Organ Mountains in the background, an advertisement of W.W. Cox Purebred Herefords and W.W. Cox's grandsons Bill, Jay and Rob Cox in World War II military uniforms.

Three panels of family photographs on display on one of the museum's corridors caused a traffic jam, as eager attendees rushed to see the historic mementos.

The photographs included W.W. and friends, cowhands roping, Hal, Jim and A.B. Cox's families, roping and branding, Hal Cox as a boy shoeing a horse and family picnic shots. One that attracted attention was of cowboys herding cattle in front of the former Loretto Academy at the end of Main Street on the way to the railroad.

Sara Cox-Hopkins, one of W.W. Cox's granddaughters, accepted the "American Cowboy of Doña Ana County" proclamation given to the family by the chamber.

"I would be remiss if I said nothing about the women in our lives,' Cox-Hopkins said. "These women were good-hearted women that were tough enough to hang in there and provided all of us with food, clean houses and a lot of knowledge.

"There are two main sayings that a true cowboy has and that most have lived with our whole lives. One is that a sorry cowboy was like having two good men gone, and the other, if a person did their share and worked hard and did it right, it was that he or she had made a 'hand.' Well, I hope that one day, when I see all of these cowboys again, that they will say, Sarita, you made a hand."

The Cox legend started in 1888 when then Texan W.W. Cox arrived in the Tularosa Basin as a sheepherder. He

Some farmers decided the best way to contest their water allotment was to organize, and they called on Bill Gomez to organize the Rio Grande Diversified Crop Farmers Association. Gomez is a retired professor with the New Mexico State University's Extension Service.

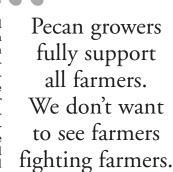

The association was organized on April 30 when officers were elected:

Looking ahead to a legal battle, the association has been building membership based on farmers' acre-age. The membership fee is $5 per acre, and as early as this month, farmers have signed up more than 14,500 acres.

"And I get five or six more members a day," Gomez said.

tract has been signed but the transaction has not yet

No. 1 on the new-home sales production list is the Las Colinas area. Located just off Sonoma Ranch Boulevard, the neighborhood is responsible for producing more than a quarter of all, local pending new-home sales, with 20 properties currently awaiting closing. Las Colinas also tops the "most affordable" category, with average and median listing prices of $159,465 and $159,900 respectively. The median price is where half the sellers are asking more and half are asking less.

The Sonoma Ranch area is currently producing the second-highest number of new-home sales, accounting for 16 percent of the total number of contracts currently pending. The East Northrise (near Highway 70 and Porter Road) and the Peachtree Hills area (near Highway 70 and Holman/Dunn Road) each account for an additional 12 percent of signed contracts

The High Range neighborhood placed first in the existing-home category, registering almost 11 percent of the 156 sales currently in line to close. Sonoma Ranch and Las Colinas are currently responsible for 10 pending sales each, or 6.4 percent of the total number of new-home purchases. Not far behind are the Elks and San Andres areas (San Andres is west of town near the Field of Dreams), each accounting for an additional seven sales. In total, the five areas account for almost one-third of existing-home contracts currently in play.

Since pending sales reveal only the asking prices of the properties, actual selling prices of the 231 new and existing-homes currently awaiting closing won't be revealed until closing. A clue to future sales prices is in the list-price-to-sales price ratio of the 121 closed sales booked during the past 45 days. During that period, new-homes brought 96.6 percent of asking price, while existing-home sales generated sales prices equal to 94.2 percent of asking.

What does the future hold for July and August sales? I'll cover that topic in future columns, so stay tuned. Until then, I hope to ..

See you at closing!

Behavior economics gaining traction

Wall Street, academics and policy makers taking notice

Traditional economics is based on the assumption of the rational decision maker who weighs the alternatives and comes to a well-reasoned choice. But with markets acting irrationally, the financial system in trouble and the economy in a tailspin, this concept of "homo eco-

An alternative view of economic decision making, called behavior economics, is gaining traction with professors, policy makers and brokers. Behavior economics eschews the traditional economic view of rationality and replaces it with insights from psychology and cognitive science about decision making.

Cognitive scientists, for example, have identified a number of heuristics – mental rules of thumb – used to guide decision-making. These rules can lead to a correct prediction in many instances. Heuristics gave our ancestors a certain "survival advantage" by providing pressing answers, in most cases, without delaying the decision-making until a "reasoned" solution could be found.

CHRIS ERICKSON

State of the Economy

Behavior economists make a good point - people aren't rational, a fact known at least since Aristotle. Of course, traditional economists have never claimed otherwise. What mainstream economists have argued instead is that insight into the workings of the economy can be gained by assuming that people act "as if" they are rational. This reliance on simplifying assumption of rationality has been borne out time and time again. Economists have been able to help design policies that have substantially improved the workings of the economy using it.

Indeed, the period beginning around 1983 and ending last year, is often referred to as the "Great Moderation. This is a period without precedence in the history of industrialized countries - 25 years of low inflation, low unemployment and no major recession. Much of the credit for the Great Moderation can be laid at the feet of traditional economists, who used their theories to help develop policies that laid the foundation for long-term success

Traditional economics have had considerable success, but the record isn't perfect. The current recession is exhibiting the ongoing failures of the economist's profession. So here come the behavioral economists who argue that reliance on rationality will lead down the wrong path. Wall Street is taking notice, with behavior economists now commanding premium salaries.

Can behavioral economics provide insight to improve our wealth of knowledge? Undoubtedly, the answer is yes, but before turning to it, be sure not to throw out the baby with the bath water. Traditional economics has made tremendous strides in understanding the economy. The assumption of the rational human isn't realistic but it has proved to be useful.

Applying heuristics that make sense for our huntergatherer ancestors can lead to irrational behavior in modern society. The gambler's fallacy, for example, is the belief that good luck will even out the bad. Mesilla Valley Foundation for Youth thrives

Court Youth Center empowers adolescents through the arts

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern

For many youth, the hours between 3 and 6 p.m. are an important time to stay busy in order to stay out of trouble. Fortunately, the Mesilla Valley Youth Founda-tion, known as Court Youth Center (CYC), understands the importance of youth programs in the community.

Through the Mesilla Valley Youth Foundation, what was once an abandoned, yet historic building has since become a pillar to the youth's creative process. Kids ages 12 to 18 attend CYC after school, on weekends and during the summer for programs focused on arts and recreation.

These youth increase their creative learning process, their academic performance, problem solving and group interaction skills in order to internalize responsible decision-making and gain a sense of community involvement," said Irene Oliver-Lewis, executive director and artistic founder of CYC. "Court Youth Center has become a hub for youth innovation, participation and creation in afterschool and out of school time."

The Mesilla Valley Youth Foundation originated in 1988 when then state Rep. Ruben Smith approached the city to turn the former Court Junior High School into a facility for youth programs. The foundation was incorporated as a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit in 1993 and began offering programs as CYC under the leadership and artistic direction of Oliver-Lewis in July 1995.

Since then, nearly $6 million has been invested in capital outlay from federal, state and city partners to complete the 40,000-square-foot facility that highlights the performing, visual, literary and culinary arts with dance, visual art projects, studios, a 500-seat theater and two kitchens.

STANDARDS⁸ Two of the major accomplishments for CYC are the creation of Alma d'arte Charter High School, which incorporates the arts strategies and philosophies of CYC, and replicates the after school program at Gadsden Middle School in its integrated program for health, after school activities and parent involvement called Elev8.

Court Youth Center has been very resourceful in major component to financial stability. A percentage of the youth in the Court Youth Center programs would not have the opportunity to participate if it were not for the financial assistance given to the organization."

To maintain sustainability, CYC created an endowment within the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (ČFSNM). Currently, the CFSNM manages 32 endowments for nonprofits within the community. An endowment is a fund created through gifts and bequests where principal remains intact in order to be invested as a source of income forever.

To increase nonprofit sustainability, the CFSNM kicked off the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign with a goal to raise $500,000 by Dec. 31. The campaign will benefit the 32 nonprofits that have endowments within the CFSNM. With each contribution, the CFSNM

Las Cruces DWS to host provider fair

Public invited to explore workforce training options

The New Mexico Department of Workforce Solutions will host an event Friday, Aug. 7, with the goal of linking the unemployed with workforce training institutions throughout southern New Mexico.

The Training Provider Fair, held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Doña Ana County Government Complex, is geared toward getting the unemployed and those seeking education opportunities into specific programs that suit their existing skill set or interests.

The latest numbers released by the state put New Mexico's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate at 6.8 percent, up from 6.5 percent the previous month and 4.1 percent a year ago.

Because the national economy continues to struggle and the local business cycle is feeling more of its effects, the fair will provide an opportunity for recently displaced workers to find new jobs or prepare themselves for a career in another industry.

Training providers at the fair will include, New Mexico State University, Doña Ana Community College, Mesilla Valley Trucking Institute, Computer Career Centers and Business Skills Institute.

For a full list of training providers or to learn more about the upcoming event, contact Raul Rodriguez at

Prices rise for term life insurance

Policy price hike driven by increasing capital costs

In the United States, fewer than 10 percent of

for the lowest rates.

Because premiums are increasing fast, if you need term life insurance or have been thinking about it, now is the time to buy.

The upward trend started in January and the increases range from 5-to-15 percent on average. The reason for the increase is the tighter credit markets and reinsurance costs for insurance companies.

People buy this type of life insurance for many reasons, but most important, they buy it to protect their family should they suffer an untimely death.

There are other types of consumer life insurance, such as universal life, and whole life, which builds cash value. Term life does not feature a cash value. It is the least expensive of life policies to purchase. I tell clients that term life gives them the "biggest bang for the buck."

Term life insurance is just as it implies, only good for a certain term, usually 10, 20 or 30 years. If the insured passes away within that term, a death benefit goes to the beneficiary. It's a very simple and useful financial tool to protect families and businesses.

"I think we have pretty much bottomed out on how low life insurance prices can go," said Donald W. Britton, chief executive officer of ING's U.S. insurance division. ReliStar and other ING subsidiaries are raising term life products about 5 percent this year.

Britton said the price hike is "primarily driven by our cost of capital, which is much, much, more difficult to get and more expensive than it was a year ago and prior."

Prudential Financial raised premiums

Prudential Financial raised premiums an average of 4 percent this year. Lincoln National did the same.

Consumers also saw a price increase in 2000, when insurance companies were forced to comply with new regulations on their cash reserves for long-term policies. A few insurers stopped selling the 30-year term policies, but for the last 20 years, prices dropped as a result of improved mortality rates and Internet sales.

A CEO from an online insurance brokerage said more than three-quarters of the 30 companies that he sells will increase their prices for term life, if they haven't already. It is also believed most companies who market term life will be doing the same in the near future. Not all companies raise their rates uniformly, so ask your agent for help.

Insurers have also been getting tougher on underwriting requirements and being stricter with applicants. So, if you have high blood pressure, diabetes, or are extremely overweight, you probably will be insured, but your premiums will be higher.

ALAN UMSTEAD

In the United States, fewer than 10 percent of applicants qualify for the lowest rates.

As mentioned prior, the reasons are many for buying life insurance. Here are some others:

- Provide a guaranteed income for a surviving spouse and/or children
- Retirees who want to help fund their grandchildren's college expenses
- Realization that a mother's death can trigger the need for years of childcare
- A partnership that needs to be bought out, funding the buy-sell agreement
- A need to supplement Social Security benefits for the surviving spouse
- A way to pay for more than funeral expenses and maintain a standard of living
- Mortgage payments that depend on two incomes
 The list only touches on the many reasons people may require life insurance. Ask yourself this question:
 Are you and your family protected? More importantly, how well are they protected?

Building Las Cruces Walgreens Drug Stores

GABRIEL VASQUEZ I The Las Cruces Bulletin

The foundation is being laid at the site of a new Walgreens Drug Store set to open on the corner of Picacho Avenue and Motel Boulevard in summer 2010. The store, at nearly 17,000 square feet, will sell liquor and have a single-lane drive-thru pharmacy, in addition to its assortment of grocery and convenience items. The builder is F.T. James Construction out of El Paso. The store's opening next year will mark the third new Walgreen's built in Las Cruces in less than three years.

Jim Graham overcomes the hype of going green

Sun & Earth lays the building blocks of energy efficiency

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

Everyone seems to be endorsing green" lately because of rising temperatures, higher energy costs and the endless mantra that seems to ring in every corner of our lives - green, green, green.

Despite the instant recognition people feel when they hear the word, not every product marketed as "green" is what it appears to be.

Sun & Earth Inc. President Jim Graham hopes to clarify the current phenomenon of "green-sploitation" by providing realistic service in sustainable, energy-efficient building and remodeling. Since the 1970s, Graham has been on the forefront of green building in southern New Mexico, making sure that clients get exactly what they expect from sustain

Although green building has changed dramatically since the 1970s, Graham said he is still intent on building houses that adhere to Sun & Earth's strict criteria of aesthetics, accessibility, energy efficiency, ease of maintenance, durability, safety and comfort. Specializing in energy-efficient air conditioning, solar water heating and sustainable roof coating, Sun & Earth Inc. strives to create a service and product that is more than just a buzzword.

"Green building has become more sophisticated since the '70s and focuses not only on the sustainability of the house, but on aesthetics and livability," Graham said. "At one time, green building was pretty raw. It may have been efficient, but it wasn't comfortable to live in or pleasing to look at.

people are becoming interested in green building, Graham said. With more affordable options available, long-term utility savings and a number of tax credits and incentives, Graham said it is becoming easier for indivduals with modest incomes to have their homes remodeled or built to green standards. He said he remembers a time when he only saw a response from those associated with universities and research:

however, he has seen his clientele base broaden, primarily among retirees. "Affordability is a mainstay of what I do. If I do something more expensive than the mainstream it's usually due to nicer amenities," Graham said. "I tailor to the clients' individual needs and I try to be realistic about what I can do for people."

With a lifetime's worth of construction experience and a biology degree from New Mexico State University, Graham continues to challenge himself, creating innovative residences for people of southern New Mexico.

"I've always set a goal of making buildings 80 to 90 percent more efficient than conventional buildings," Graham said. "When conventional buildings get more efficient, it challenges me to build more efficient buildings.

Graham said one of his recent successes has been a two-stage evaporative cooling system, which he calls "one of the best available in the area." Additionally, Sun & Earth offers roof coating that can reduce the amount of needed air conditioning, and ezinc solar water heaters that can shave dollars off utility costs.

Now, after years of service, Graham said he always has the future in mind. He hopes to contribute to a cleaner, safer and more beautiful future, despite what color it may be.

Longtime cultivator helped shape southern New Mexico By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin Years ago, a friend of Adrian Ogaz said to him: Adrian, I heard that you're running for county commissioner again. What's the matter with you? Don't you know people don't appreciate your work? It takes time from your business and family. Ogaz responded in a way that describes his thinking: "Because I enjoy the work. I like getting involved in community affairs. And if people don't appreciate it, I'll still try to a Doña Ana County commison the planning committee to move and build the Memorial General Hospital from Alameda Boulevard to Telshor Boulevard and helped develop the Southern

New Mexico State Fair on a former Air Force radar station on the West Mesa. Ogaz is known for his simple, to-the-point responses. "Everyone should get involved, be available for community service," he said during an interview in his apartment at the Village at Northrise. "That's why I'm here now. I can't serve anymore." Ogaz was born Dec. 10, 1914, in Salem, N.M., the son of Ignacio Ogaz and Irene Apodaca Ogaz, during a time when most community roads were not surfaced and many farmers were using horses and mules for field work.

Ogaz grew up in Garfield where his family raised cotton, chile and alfalfa. He continued farming for 70 years and built a farming operation of more than 300

"It's just a way of life, it's your home," Ogaz said about farming. "You can plant what you want. Sometimes you take a chance with the crops you plant – you have to risk it.'

Two of his sons still are farming Dickie, a chile producer, and Edmund, the treasurer for the Southern Rio Grande Diversified Crop Farmers Association.

His third son, Herman, runs a meat packaging supply service in Omaha, Neb.

Ogaz helped spread the branding of Hatch chile, which eventually led Hatch to becoming the Chile Capital of the World. He was among the group that organized the annual Hatch Chile Festival held on Labor Day.

"Chile has become popular because people like chile dishes," he said.

He also served for many years as director and president of the Garfield co-operative cotton gin. At that time, the valley also had a gin in Hatch, but with the decline in cotton acreage, both have closed.

But that's part of life," Ogaz said. "When he was county commissioner, my father never neglected his farm," said daughter Patsy Ogaz-Trujillo. "He was always on top of everything. He's a very smart man. People have always had so much admiration for him."

He also had a notary public service in Garfield and helped people fill out their income tax forms. For people who could not afford the service, he would accept what they had, which was sometimes

His community service included organizing and directing the Garfield Water Association and organizing the Hatch Valley Credit Union.

He also served on the Rural Conservation Association and was the finance chairman for the San Isydro Catholic Church in Garfield.

When he was into something, he would go all the way, he would put all of his efforts into it," said his son Dickie.

Ogaz has seen many changes during his long career.

"There's a lot of land out there, but people are moving in from all over," he said as he gestured out the window. "Not too long ago, there was no housing out there. The population is getting too big. Water is what counts for agriculture and population."

As a farmer, he knows how erratic the Rio Grande water supply can be. He said he remembers years when there was no rainfall on his home farm.

"I can't remember when, but one year we had less rain than the Sahara," he said. "We just have to let nature take its course.'

Ogaz served four two-vear terms as county commissioner and two terms as chairman. At that time, there were three commissioners who ran at-large.

Helping plan for the new Memorial Medical Center was another of his ideas of service.
"Working for a new community hospital just comes naturally," he said.

The Southern New Mexico State Fair features a Junior Livestock Sale for 4-H Club and FFA youths. Ogaz is the oldest buyer in years of support, and he still bids at the livestock sale.

"The fair brings people from all over," he said. "And it gives people a chance exhibit their animals, handicraft and

Christmas in July starts the holiday spirit early

Find bargains, help Jardin de los Niños raise funds for local homeless children

We're doing this

children ...

SISTER BETH DADDIO

By Beth Sitzler

The crackle of the fireplace, the lulling voice of Bing Crosby, the sparkle of lights and the moments spent thinking of the less fortunate are just a few things associated with Christmas.

One Las Cruces store, however, will bring the spirit of the winter holiday to the summer month of La Tienda de Jardin, a gently used boutique benefiting the nonprofit organization Jardin de los Niños, will host its first Christmas in July fundraiser Friday, July 31 and Saturday, Aug. 1.

The idea for Christmas in July came from La Tienda de Jardin volunteer Heather Pollard after a Las Cruces woman moving to California donated six van-loads of items, including various Christmas decorations, dishes, jewelry and toys. "There was so much stuff," she said, "we decided to have a Christmas promotion."

Some of the unique items for sale during the fundraiser include holiday decorations, such as villages, angels and Christmas trees; clothing; vintage wicker furniture, which Pollard said has a value of $1,700; costume and semiprecious stone jewelry; and collectable Barbie and Gene dolls with certificates of authenticity.

"They look like film starlets," volunteer Beverley Chavez-Floyd said about the Gene Dolls, which cost anywhere from $50 to $100. "We're pricing them at half off their market value.'

Along with the sale, Chavez-Floyd said the store will hold a silent auction and serve Christmas related refreshments. She said this is the perfect opportunity for customers to get a head start on their holiday shopping while helping a worthy cause.

We really want people to come in and shop and

its grand opening June 19.

It's just like a funky boutique," Pollard said. "The things that are donated are wonderful. We're continuously getting new stock. Some still have the tags on."

Chavez-Floyd, who had previously worked in the retail business, used her merchandising and display skills to create unique rooms. They also received help from artists Rosemary McLoughlin, Kathy Groves, Katherine Holmes, Janice Hartgo and Laurel Weathersby, who each painted a separate room.

To make the rooms even more special. each was given its own name based on its overall theme, such as denim, diamonds and leopard. There is also a Red Hat room, in honor of the Red Hat Ladies.

"We're selling glitzy clothes along with everyday clothes," Pollard said. All of the store's proceeds will go to support Jardin de los Niños, a service center for homeless and near-homeless children.

Sister Beth Daddio and the late Sister Ann Waldschmitt started Jardin de los Niños at Holy Cross Church in 1995, Over the years, the organization expanded its programs and services, and found a permanent home at the Community of Hope, 999 W. Amador Ave., in 2002.

the memory of Sister Anna, who recently passed away," Sister Beth said.

Pollard said she hopes Christmas in July, the store's first fundraiser, will be a success and create enough funds to allow the nonprofit to keep the store's doors open.

"I hope everyone in town will know who we are and what great bargains they can find here," she said.

Chavez-Floyd said they will have special promotions about four times a year to help keep their inventory fresh and turn La Tienda de Jardin into an established retail destination.

La Tienda de Jardin is accepting volunteers, especially those with retail experience.

'We have the most fabulous volunteers in all of Las Cruces," Sister Beth said about the 12 volunteers, who do everything from stocking to checking out customers.

How a lawyer will ease your mind

Robert L. Lovett Attorney at Law

I have represented thousands of clients over the years and one of the concerns I hear more often than not is I didn't want to hire a lawyer because I didn't want to sue anybody.

Clients do not want their case to drag out over time and they think hiring a lawyer means automatically that the lawyer is going to sue somebody. Nothing could be further from the truth. A personal injury lawyer invariably works on a contingent fee basis. This means your lawyer doesn't get paid until this case is resolved. This means two things for you as a client: your lawyer is basically working for free until your case settles and, more importantly, he wants the case resolved as soon as possible just like you do. A lawyer should not resolve your case until he is sure all your medical bills are paid and you know exactly what you are going to receive from the

The contingency fee system assures that you and your lawyer are working together to get your claim resolved as fairly and as quickly as possible. If you have any questions about your personal injury claim, please feel free to give me a call anytime.

Hollywood producers are now covered by Muir Studio

Casting resource fills another filmmaking need

By BETH SITZLER The Las Cruces Bulletin

Hollywood has always ventured to southern New Mexico for its scenic surrounding and pleasant weather. Now, along with a growing industry workforce and tax incentives, there is another reason filmmakers are coming to the area - its new casting agent and production resource.

The Muir Studio, which opened its doors in May, is the only talent casting and production resource in southern New Mexico. Owned and operated by Sandra "Sam" Muir and her husband John, the studio will help turn Las Cruces into a producer's ideal location.

After receiving her teaching credentials in English Language Arts and drama from the University of Virginia, Sam Muir decided to enter the world of acting.

"I decided I wanted to see the world," said the professional actress.

She moved to San Diego and met casting director and future husband John Muir, a Marine Corp combat veteran. They married in 1980 and began working together to scout talent, locations and supplies.

"We found everything. We even found things that the city and county didn't even know existed," Sam said.

One example was when she found an unknown polo field that was used in a commercial about donkey riding polo players.

Although the couple helped grow the emerging San Diego film industry and worked with Academy Award-winning directors such as Otto Land and Conrad Hall, they decided to leave the business in 1984 to start a family.

They moved to Santa Barbra, Calif., where they both worked as teachers. Sam Muir taught theater, while John Muir mainly taught history and government.

After their 15-year hiatus from the film industry, the Muirs decided it was time to retire from teaching and get back to their passion in a new city.

"We have a lot of training opportunities here," she said, referring to the Creative Media reterring to the Creative Media all types of people, University and Creative Media Technology program at Doña Ana Community College. "Now we have a talent caster."

The Muir Studio specializes in finding talent that appeals to a producer, no matter what they're looking for.

"Producers need all types of people, from little, old ladies to high school students," Sam Muir

They said they represent everyone from amateur to professional actors, and even animals.

John Muir said one project he is particularly proud of was a Coca-Cola commercial in which a man is driving a red sports car with a blonde in the passenger seat.

The camera comes up the car and you realize the blonde is an Afghan hound," he said. "I cast that hound and found the location.'

Since coming to town, Sam and John Muir have received support from several facets of the community, including government officials, film liaison for the City of Las Cruces Bill McCamey, director and NMSU professor Mark Medoff and local businesses, such as Digital Solutions, which handles the studio's graphic design needs.

While the couple is "just getting started," the Muirs said they hope to stimulate growth in the Las Cruces film industry to bring more money into the com-

"It's not uncommon for a film crew to spend $250,000 a day in the local community," John Muir said. "They all have to go to local stores, local restaurants, local hotels.'

The Muirs said they want to help form an A-team in Las Cruces, consisting of top talent, actors, technicians, suppliers and locations. To do this, they said it is important for the city to keep trained talent in the area.

If we're giving them great A-team training (through CMI and CMT), then let's also give them the opportunity to make a career here," Sam Muir said. One way to make this possible is by building a back lot, which is used to make outdoor sets.

"We're pushing for a back lot," she said. "Albuquerque and Santa Fe have one. Las Cruces needs one so it can serve southern New Mexico and the borderlands.'

They are also actively involved in the community. Along with being members of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, Sam Muir is a member of the New Mexico Women in Film Association and John Muir is helping with the new veterans museum. He is also hosting a reading of his book "Tigers and Songbirds," about soldiers and what they go through in war. His next reading will be held at the Branigan Library in September.

Sam Muir said that while producers bring in their star actors, they usually need local talent to fill the need of day performers, extras and specialty acts.

"We don't know what the next producer will need, so we need to know everyone in town," she

Not only are they constantly searching for local talent, they also are looking for local technicians and suppliers, such as caterers, as well as unique and useful locations.

"Our job is to keep the producer supplied and happy," she

"People watch movies but they don't know what all goes into it John Muir said. "The filmmaker has to produce everything.

The couple is currently building their registry of talent, suppliers and technicians. They will hold an open call for talent in August.

"No one is too tall, too short, too young, too old, too blonde, too brunette," Sam Muir said. We're looking for the world."

They said they are especially looking for anyone with a special skill or that has a vintage car or unique home.

A New Mexico wonderland

The whole family will enjoy the City of Rocks

By JIM HILLEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

One of the truly unique recreation opportunities in southern New Mexico is the City of Rocks State Park, located on New Mexico Highway 61, three miles off of U.S. Highway 180 between Deming and Silver City, N.M.

Thanks to a massive volcanic event 34.9 million years ago, known as the Kneeling Nun eruption, a thick layer of hot volcanic ash solidified and formed a rock layer known as tuff. The layer cracked as it cooled, and eroded into a fantasy land of rock that is a joy to explore. Whether you are young or just young at heart, the formation is like nature's own amusement park — or perhaps the world's biggest Rorschach test.

When I was a young child living in Lordsburg, N.M., my family would visit the park regularly, and in those days, the formations seemed vast beyond description. Today, when looking at the formations with an adult's eye, I can see that it isn't so big that children could get hopelessly lost, but still big enough to provide hours of hiking, climbing and scrambling fun.

As with any outdoor activity in New Mexico, there is always the possibility of encountering rattlesnakes and other wildlife. During this most recent visit I saw a variety of lizards, rabbits and squirrels. Birdlife at the park is also quite varied, including orioles, hawks, buzzards and crows. The formations seem to be a favorite destination for the large crows, whose odd vocal utterances add to the park's atmosphere. A shower from the previous evening had filled many pits and crevices in the rocks with water, adding to my and the crow's enjoyment of the labyrinth of stones.

The park now includes a modern Visitors Center with an interpretive display, restrooms, shower facilities and a soda machine.

A gravel road circles the formation of pinnacles and boulders, with picnic sites and restrooms located along the road. The first picnic sites visitors come to are primitive and without much shade, but driving farther around to the back side of the formation reveals some nice sites shaded by oak trees. Developed sites are immediately on the right at the Visitors Center.

To reach the park, take Interstate 10 to Deming and then turn right on to Highway 180 – follow the signs for Silver City. New Mexico Highway 61 is on the right after 23.9 miles. The turn off to the park is 3.2 miles up Highway 61 on the left. For a change in scenery, it is also possible to travel through Hillsboro and down the beautiful Mimbres Valley via Interstate 25 and New Mexico Highways 152 and 61.

The distance to the park through Deming is just under 90 miles from Downtown Las Cruces, and around 135 miles going through Hillsboro.

The park is close enough to Las Cruces to visit and return in a single day, but camping at the park for a night will allow more time to relax and fully experience the amazing formations.

The City of Rocks State Park is open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day. The daily use fee is $5, with camping fees of $10 for undeveloped sites and $14 for sites with a shelter and an electrical hook-up. Check-out time for campers is 2 p.m. Each site has picnic tables and grills and there are restrooms located around the perimeter of the park. The shower facilities are located in the Visitors Center and are great for cleaning up after a day of scrambling through the rocks. No glass containers are allowed in the park.

The many pathways carved through the City of Rocks make the park a natural amusement park.

Watercolor and drawing students of Wayne Carl Huber, instructor at the Las Cruces Museum of Art, will be featured in a student show at the Las Cruces Academy, 212 S. Downtown Mall, next to White's Music Box. The work will be on exhibit from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and Wednesday, beginning Saturday, Aug. 1. The Artists' Reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 7, during the Downtown Ramble. The exhibit will run through Saturday, Aug. 8. Call 647-5684 for more information.

② IN EFFECT GALLERY

Lulu Hedrick, a recent graduate and class valedictorian of Alma d'Arte Charter Art High School, will present a one woman show of her various media explorations at IN EFFECT Gallery, 514 W. Griggs Ave., through the month of August. The opening reception will be from 5 to 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 1.

Hedrick has serious plans for her career in art, already planning to work in a variety of venues including book illustration, screen writing, illustrations and painting. The artist has a truly unique perspective on the art world. One foot solidly in her rich Chinese art culture, the other in "western" approaches to art in various forms.

This expanded view of the art world gives Lulu a wide-open path for her talent to grow.

Her body of work is truly a unique mix of the two cultures, both in comparison and contrast, and this will enable the artist to appeal to many different tastes, while at the same time letting the viewer apply their own interpretations to the work.

© TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature fiber art by Cyndi Clark and Jan Harrison in "Finding a Voice through Fiber." The exhibit opens Monday, Aug. 3, and continues through Friday, Aug. 28. An artists' reception will be from noon to 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 9. The Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces is located at 2000 S. Solano Drive, with regular gallery hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Clark has worked in many media over the years. She focused on clay work for about 10 years before transitioning to fiber art. One of her featured pieces in the show is "Freedom's Price," an art quilt that has a piece of fabric representing every soldier who has died in Iraq and Afghanistan since Sept. 11.

Harrison has been involved in fiber arts as a knitter for more than 25 years and has gradually progressed to weaving on a floor loom and basketry. She has done extensive experimentation in achieving movement and using yarns of many sizes and textures. She also uses unexpected materials and colors. The same techniques go back and forth in her tapestries and basketry. For information, call the church office at 522-7281.

The Main Street Gallery also shows works by some of Las Cruces' finest artists, including the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson's fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst's Spirit Minders, Margaret Berrier's detailed rock-art jewelry, Joanna Bradley's flamboyant gourd artwork, limited editions of Robert Highsmith's splendid watercolors and the skillfully and colorfully fired RAKU works of Rudy Lucero.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 647-0508.

© RIO GRANDE THEATRE

The works of two very different artists fill the El Paso Electric and the Caroline de Mesilla galleries, in the Rio Grande Theatre. Marie Siegrist's paintings encompass a wide variety of subjects, including up-close nature studies, floral themes, landscapes, doorways, windows and candid moments of life. Joe Dominick photographs are in the black-and-white silver print medium, using a 4-by-5 large format camera. The exhibit runs through Friday, July 31. The theater is located at 211 N. Downtown Mall.

MESILLA VALLEY FINE ARTS GALLERY

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery has announced its newest member, Johnny Apodaca from Alamogordo, N.M., who specializes in the art of wood-burned images. For the month of July, Mayanna Howard and Carol Lopez will be featured. Howard, the gallery director, is diverse in original artwork, rendering lovely watercolors of churches, landscapes and objects. Lopez brings to the table more than 25 years of working in a variety of media. She has studied abroad discovering the ancient art medium "encaustic" and has dedicated her efforts to this technique.

In addition, the 30 artists of the gallery offer art in many media, which include original paintings, encaustics, infused glass art jewelry, handmade cards, stained glass, photography, affordable prints and miniature paintings.

The Gallery is located at 2470 Calle de Guadalupe, across from the Fountain Theatre. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. For details, call 522-2933 or visit http://ftp.zianet.com/mvartgallery/home.shtml.

The artwork of Virginia Maria Romero is on display in "Retablo, Metamorphosis, Vision: The Artwork of Virginia Maria Romero" at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, and features the traditional paintings of this talented Las Cruces artist. It will show in the Arts Corridor through Sunday, Aug. 2.

Romero's work, which mostly consists of paintings, is inspired by traditional retablo painting and has recently included more contemporary influences such as totem animals, including wolves and abstract natural forms. The show displays the evolution of her work. Romero's art is in numerous national and international private collections, museum collections, more than 25 books, film and periodicals, and has been featured in more than 50 group and solo exhibits, which include national venues.

Romero paints images and altars that take a contemporary approach, while maintaining old tradition. Through her artwork, she creates a visual bridge between the historical spirituality of the people of New Mexico and the current issues that face people today.

For more information, call 522-4100.

© CUTTER GALLERY

Cutter Gallery, on the corner of University Avenue and El Paseo Road, will host "Two New Visions – Two New Artists," an art show for new artists Carlitta Harvey and Ginny Schoelzel, through Wednesday, Aug. 5.

Harvey has always appreciated the natural landscape of the Rio Grande Valley in its flora, fauna, agriculture, people and architecture. The valley here is her home after growing up on a cotton farm in Fabens, Texas.

Schoelzel got started with her art when she took several classes from the Toledo Museum of Art. Her work includes area landscapes and buildings, still lifes and florals as well as subjects from around New Mexico. She loves color and enjoys hiding living surprises in her paintings – often an animal.

Gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

The show will run through Monday, Aug. 31.

© NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, is exhibiting colorful images by artist Betty LaDuke that illustrate agriculture in its purest form.

"Dreaming Cows: The Artwork of Betty LaDuke" features 21 large giclee prints inspired by LaDuke's work with Heifer International. The exhibit is on display through Monday, Sept. 21.

La Duke toured Uganda and Rwanda in 2003, where she drew sketches of the native people in various agricultural settings. She converted the sketches to colorful paintings in her Oregon studio over the past several years. The paintings also include scenes and people from Poland, Albania, Vietnam, Cambodia, Kosovo, Ecuador and Peru.

NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The New Mexico State University Library's Archives and Special Collections Department has mounted an exhibit of historical letters titled "The Whole Damned World: New Mexico Aggies at War 1941-1945."

The letters were written by former students of NMSU Engineering Dean Daniel Jett from every corner of the world and every branch of the armed services. The exhibit may be viewed in the Milton Gallery on the fourth floor of the Branson Library through October.

The exhibit, which complements the library's recently published book by the same title, includes photographs collected by the Navy and donated to the Archives by Paul Forsberg. Visitors to the exhibit may also listen to an audio stream of former State College president and Army Brig. Gen. Hugh Milton, describing the experience during the Battle of Bougainville that earned him a Silver Star.

Digital photographers of all experience levels can expand both technical and aesthetic skills with a series of workshops offered this summer at the Mesilla Digital Imaging Workshops. "Selections & Image Manipulation (intro to Photo Montage)" will take place from 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays, Aug. 5

If you're comfortable with basic Photoshop operations, this workshop will introduce you to methods for creating photomontage assemblages. The workshop sessions will give instruction and practice using the three operations vital to creating montage/assemblage imagery: selections, masking and content layer operations.

Cost for the workshop is $75. For information and registration for summer Cactus League workshops, visit the Preston Contemporary Art Center in Mesilla, or call 523-8713. Visit www.mdicactusleague.com for schedule updates. Classes in the state-of-the-art digital lab are limited to 16 participants.

9 QUICK TOURS

The Las Cruces Museum of Art is now hosting Quick Tours on Wednesdays from noon to 12:30 p.m. for the duration of the "Las Cruces Collects" exhibition, now on display through Saturday, Aug. 22. The collections offer a unique glimpse into the vibrant community of Las Cruces and the important figures who loaned their art to the exhibit possible. While the collections on display vary greatly, the people behind them have much in common.

They share a love of the community, a passion for history and culture and a willingness to share their experiences with others.

Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St., at the north end of the Downtown Mall. For more information on exhibitions and Studio Programs art classes, call 541-2137 or visit the website http://museums.las-cruces.org

② ARTIST DIALOGUE

In conjunction with the 2009 Summer Exhibition at the Preston Contemporary Art Center, digital painter Myriam Lozada-Jarvis will be featured in the latest of a series of artist dialogues at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 23, at the gallery. Lozada-Jarvis will discuss her digital paintings in the exhibition and enjoy conversation with the audience about her body of work. Admission is free.

Lozada-Jarvis' interest in all things new in art lead her to adopt a computer to create energetic compositions to produce fine art prints on paper or canvas. Her approach to these new tools parallels her traditional use of paint and ink. She creates brush strokes that contain bits and pieces of other images that are photographs or drawings she has made using traditional techniques.

The Preston Contemporary Art Center located at 1755 Avenida de Mercado, at the end of Calle de Mercado in Mesilla. Regular gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday; and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For information, call 523-8713 or visit www. prestoncontemporaryart.com.

§ 50th ANNUAL CHAMBER MUSIC FESTIVAL IN RUIDOSO

On Aug. 8, Chinese pianist Haochen Zhang, 19-year-old Gold Medalist in the 2009 Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

EIGHT DAYS A WEEK -

performs at the Spencer Theater in Alto, N.M., at 8 p.m.

Zhang tied with Nobuyuki Tsuji of Japan for first place – only the second time that there has been a tie in the competition's 50-year history. Zhang is also this year's youngest competitor. The competition is open to pianists between the ages of 19 and 30, and Zhang celebrated his 19th birthday during the competition. This concert will be one of the first for the young pianist as a Van Cliburn Gold Medalist.

The piano concert is preceded by the Fabulous Festival Fling, 6 to 7:30 p.m. in the Spencer Theater's Crystal Lobby. The fund-raising gala, catered by a variety of local restaurants, gives concertgoers a chance to socialize before the concert. Tickets are $25.

CALL TO ARTISTS

@ MAINSTREET SALSAFEST

Main Street between Las Cruces Avenue and Griggs Street will be the site of a salsa "smackdown" Saturday, Aug. 29. Salsa makers will compete for cash and awards in the first annual celebration of this culinary tradition at the MainStreet SalsaFest, an event sponsored by the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership. The MainStreet SalsaFest Coordinator Dave Edwards is inviting local salsa makers and restaurants to test their salsa prowess.

Competitors will be creating their salsa from scratch, on site, at the SalasFest. Categories include: "From My Kitchen (de Mi Cocina)" for home salsa makers – eligible for three cash prizes of $100, $250 and $500; A People's Choice Award for commercial entries that will compete for a travelling trophy and bragging rights for a year; and the Mayor's Award, which spans all entries. Nonprofit groups are also eligible to enter salsa-making teams. Tasters who want to cast their ballots must purchase a wristband for $3 to participate in the voting.

MainStreet SalsaFest applications are available at the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership office at 138 S. Water St. Entry deadline is Friday, July 31. Call the Downtown Partnership office at 525-1955 for more information.

© TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery is calling for submissions for artists to exhibit in the gallery in 2010. Submissions are open to artists within a 150-mile radius of Las Cruces. Non-traditional media or subject matter is welcome. All artwork must be for sale. A submission packet should contain a letter of proposal with information about the artist or group, type of work to be exhibited and a disk of representative images. In the case of a group show, supply a list of the names of all members and one or two images from each member.

Deadline for submission is Saturday, Aug. 1. Submissions should be addressed to: Diane Taylor, Chairperson, Tombaugh Gallery Committee, Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces, 2000 S. Solano Drive, Las Cruces, NM 88001. For details, email tombaugh-gallery@zianet.com or call 522-7281.

© WHITE SANDS INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

The White Sands International Film Festival is looking for entries for its 2010 program taking place April 15 to 18, 2010. The early bird submission deadline ends Oct. 15. Categories are: feature length and short narrative films in the documentary and narrative category with particular focus on multi-cultural themes and background; Latino narrative, documentary features and short; and films that have been made in New Mexico. Proof that at least parts of the films were shot in New Mexico must be included with the submission. Please visit www.wsiff.com for full submission information.

@ NEW DESERT HARMONY SINGERS

The New Desert Harmony Singers, a mixed chorus, will hold rehearsals from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday evenings at the St. Paul's Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave. Potential members are invited to attend to listen or schedule a brief audition to sing in the upcoming Christmas show. For more information, call Dave at 650-4417 or Ann at 644-2797.

@ GFWC PROGRESS CLUB

The GFWC Progress Club invites all artists to once again commemorate Sept. 11, 2001, by participating in their annual "5,000 Flowers and More" art exhibition, which will be displayed at the Branigan Cultural Center, Shannon Room, Sept. 4 to 26.

The exhibit has been expanded to include subjects other than flowers. All mediums are welcome, but pieces to be hung on the wall may not exceed 30 inches wide. Entries should not make a political statement.

The Progress Club will host a reception for all participating artists from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 11, at the Branigan Cultural Center. Entry forms will be available at local frame shops or the Branigan Cultural Center on the Downtown Mall.

The deadline for application is Saturday, Aug. 15. For more information, call 522-8243 or 526-9212, or email mlcourtney@comcast.net.

@ MESILLA VALLEY FINE ARTS GALLERY

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery, located at 2470-A Calle de Guadalupe in Mesilla, has openings for interested fine artists. Call 522-2933 for more information or stop by the gallery to pick up an application.

© DIA DE LOS MUERTOS ARTISTS NEEDED

The Branigan Cultural Center is looking for artists for a Día de los Muertos themed exhibit to be shown Oct. 2 through Nov. 7. Submissions are currently being accepted from artists living in Doña Ana County and surrounding counties. All media and sizes will be considered for exhibition including film and video.

Works must have been completed within the past two years and have not previously been shown at the Branigan Cultural Center.

Three jurists have been selected from the community that possess an understanding of the Día de los Muertos tradition, Latin American culture and an appreciation for individual expression. Works reflecting the joyous celebration of the Dia de los Muertos tradition will be given priority.

Día de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) is celebrated throughout Latin American cultures and includes an interesting blend of European and pre-Hispanic indigenous traditions. In Latin America, death is part of the cycle of life, and rather than being feared, it is celebrated – often with a sense of humor. Coinciding with the Catholic religion's All Saints Day and All Souls Day, the celebrations for Día de los Muertos last for three days: Oct. 31, Nov. 1 and 2.

Full submission details are available online and at the reception desk at the Cultural Center. There is no fee to enter. The Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall. For more information, contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit www. las-cruces.org/museums.

© CITY OF ARTISTS

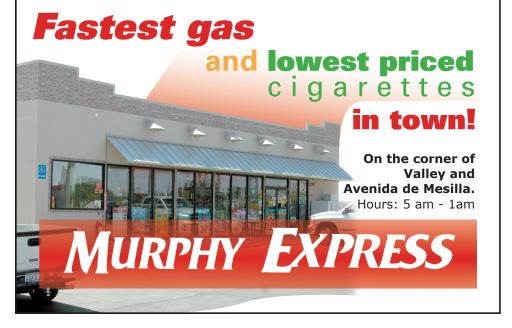

City of Artists Promotional Association was formed to promote the arts in the Las Cruces, Mesilla and surrounding areas. Through our website, local venues, association with galleries and other business groups that are actively building an interest in the arts, CAPA is working to create a nationally-known arts community in Las Cruces. Anyone interested in joining City of Artists should log on to www.cityofartists.org, for a membership form.

@ MUSEUM VOLUNTEERS

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum is looking for volunteers to help educate visitors about farming, ranching and rural life in New Mexico. The museum is also looking for volunteers who can demonstrate crafts such as leather tooling, quilting, weaving, wool spinning, sewing, candlemaking, embroidery and storytelling. Tour guides are also needed. The museum offers a free training program for volunteers. Contact Debbie Holderby at 522-4100, ext. 116, for information about volunteer opportunities.

© NEW HORIZONS SYMPHONY

The New Horizons Symphony, under the direction of Oscar Butler, is an amateur orchestra beginning its fourth season. Rehearsals are Thursdays from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Las Cruces High School, 1755 El Paseo Road, orchestra room. Have fun making music again. For more information, call Oscar at 526-8053.

Jianna Whiteley: Selling art and preparing for the future Greeting card designer is a big hit at the farmers market By Beth Stizier Selling art and preparing for the future think 'Gosh, maybe you should try to sell your stuff,' she said. Now that she has graduated and has more time to paint, she has been able to create the inventory needed to support her farmers market venture. With the growing popularity of her greeting cards, which come in various sizes Whiteley has recently begun to sell framed.

By Beth Sitzler

What started as a hobby has turned into much more for Jianna Whiteley. The social worker-turned-watercolorist has begun selling her art as a way to bring her one step closer to her ultimate ing from New Mexico State University with a master's degree in social work, Whiteley had a difficult decision to make - find a job in her field that would occupy most of her time or focus on her and her husband's five-year journey persue having a baby, which for Whiteley requires medical procedures not covered by insurance.

To keep busy, the mostly self-taught artist began creating watercolor paintings, a pastime she picked up from a friend several years ago.
Raised in Carlsbad, N.M., Whiteley said she comes from a creative family and while she tried other forms of art, including painting with oil pastels, she decided on watercolors because of their calming effect and difficulty to master.

"I thought this was my time, it was meant to be," she said. "This is what I'm supposed to be doing right now."

Setting up a booth next to her sister Aimee Cashion, an acrylic painter and jewelry designer, Whiteley has been successful in selling her work.
Whiteley said the inspiration for her paintings comes from several different places, including the desert and photographs of various landscapes she has visited such as France and Costa Rica.

"I would describe my cards as 'There's something for everyone," she said.

Along with her travels, her home state of New Mexico is a large influence on not only her work, but also her desire to become an artist.

"New Mexico is a very artistic state," she said. "My parents live in northern New Mexico, and there are so many artists there. It's inspiring."
When it comes to her choice of color,

Whiteley said it's about feeling, not thinking.

"I love color, I use it a lot," she said. While she said she is partial to all of her paintings, her favorite is "Costa Rica Plant." She said this painting, which is based on a photograph, is her favorite because it was her most challenging.

Whiteley has learned, however, that just because something is her favorite, doesn't mean it will be a best seller.

My greeting cards are affordable and my framed work is really affordable for original work," she said.

An artistic future

Whiteley said she plans to continue creating and selling both her greeting cards and original pieces. She also remains positive about the future.

"Hopefully we will have the family we've been dreaming of for five years," she said.

Even after she becomes a mother, she said she wants to remain on the Downtown Farmers & Crafts Market circuit.

I believe that every individual has a talent. We all have a gift," she said. "Painting is how I express myself."

Eventually, Whiteley said she would like to get back into social work. Before returning to NMSU, where she also received her bachelor's degree in social work, she worked at the Southwest Counseling Center with special needs children.

In the near future, Whiteley said she will sell her greeting cards at Make Believe, located next to the Boba Café on Espina Street

Even though she didn't expect to be selling her paintings as a way to help her reach her goal of motherhood, Whiteley said she enjoys creating and sharing her art.

Wok N' World: Custom-made food to go

Szechwan and Hunan cuisine at a price that's right

By JONATHAN BUTZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

These days it seems you can have anything customized, from your tennis shoes to your vehicle. But what about your food?

Wok N' World on 519 E. Boutz Road offers nothing less

Wok N' World on 519 E. Boutz Road offers nothing less than custom-made lunch and dinner, tailored specifically to the customers' tastes. Specializing in Szechwan and Hunan cuisine, the restaurant serves high-quality food for a reasonable price.

Owners Sandy and Leo Cheng opened the restaurant in August 2006, but the food business was nothing new to them. Since 1989, they have been serving Las Cruces exceptional food, establishing a strong business presence in the area. Sandy Cheng said after selling their previous business, the Dynasty restaurant, in 2000, people in the community still seek out their service.

"We can see business growing, once people find out we're here. A lot of people in the community know us already and once they find out we're here they keep coming back to us," Sandy Cheng said.

For almost 20 years, the Chengs have been perfecting their food. Offering combo meals and large family-sized meals, the restaurant provides a perfect eating option for any type of occasion, including dine-in, catering service, carry out and free delivery for locations within a two-mile radius of Wok N' World. Additional charges apply for delivery beyond the restaurant's two-mile radius, and a $10 purchase is also required.

Even if chinese food doesn't suit the mood, Wok n' World offers pasta, pizza, wings and dessert.

"Our pizza especially a lot of people like. It's not just traditional pizza. We add a little Chinese spice to it," Sandy Cheng said.

In addition, one will find a large Wok N' World menu to choose from. Sandy Cheng said some of the most popular entrees include orange chicken, sesame shrimp and squid.

"For sure we will serve fresh food – we're not like American-style Chinese food, it's authentic Chinese food," she said

The only thing better than authentic Chinese food is authentic Chinese food made specifically to your preference. It can't get any better with food cooked fresh, especially if it's healthier than other options.

"We do special requests, some people want their food cooked with less salt or no MSG, so we try to cater to the customers' diets," Sandy Cheng said. "I had a customer who used to come every day for lunch and dinner. He had high cholesterol so we developed a special item just for him and now his doctor told him his heart has cleared up and is doing much better."

Although they currently still operate the Dynasty Express at the Frenger Food Court at New Mexico State University, Sandy said she and Leo have dreams of expanding in the area by opening another, larger fine dining Chinese restaurant.

"If we're doing good I was thinking of a bigger restaurant for fine dining Chinese food. Las Cruces needs a nice, high-scale Chinese restaurant to come to. Right now we're in that spot between fine dining and fast food," Sandy Cheng said.

Open 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday, Wok N' World feels nothing like a greasy fast food joint, but rather, a friendly, clean environment that is easy to come back to, and hard to resist. For more information, call 526-0010 or visit www.wokandworld.com.

LAST WEEK'S SOLUTION:

"What do you get when two egoists get together and play? A Freudian slip and an I for an I."

Santa Fe Opera begins its 2009 season

From love to cellos, this summer's SFO series has it all

By GERALD M. KANE For The Las Cruces Bulletin

As in past years, it is a privilege to review the Santa Fe Opera season and bring a taste of the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival to Las Cruces Bulletin

In the rarified air of Santa Fe last week, over the course of four rushed days and late nights, through a variety of musical experiences we were able to explore the familiar, the divine, the ultimate and the puzzlingly new.

Despite the current economic uncertainties, it is reassuring to discover that all of the performances we attended drew respectable crowds and were enthusiastically received by music lovers throughout the country and the world.

Finding the balance

We began our Santa Fe musical foray on a chilly Wednesday evening, despite the heated passion portrayed on the opera stage. The performance was of Mozart's familiar and immensely popular "Don Giovanni." This was a re-staging of SFO's highly praised 2004 production, featuring Lucas Meachem as the alluring and loathsome Don. The ensemble's music and acting skills were fine enough, but there was a darker worldliness - derived from maturity - which seemed lacking.

Mixing and matching time lines, the stage, awashed in shades of passionate reds and pinks, set a perfect palette for the painting of the well known tale of the decadent debauched Don. Japhy Weideman, a new lighting designer, tried brightening the originally darker mood of the piece created so successfully set by Duane Schumer. If it ain't broke, Japhy, why fix it?

Dutch conductor Lawrence Renes is to be commended for his thoughtful yet delicate touch and exceptional pacing, always mainlining a fine balance between singers and orchestra.

'Heavenly' music

Speaking of balance, the following evening we attended a concert for which "balance" was the keynote. This was a part of the "Music of the Masters Thursday" series at the Santa Fe Chamber Music

A crime of passion is the focus of "The Letter," starring Geoff Hammond and Leslie Crosbie.

Festival. The venue was the acoustically phenomenal Saint Francis Auditorium.

In a word - coming from this clergyman- the evening was "heavenly." It began with a Schubert Rondo for four hands featuring pianists Shai Wosner and Mark Neikrug, the Festival's music director. The Rondo is a delightful piece played on one piano, but has such intricacies that two pianist are necessary.

Next, there was a Brahms Sonata for cello and piano, which was at once complex and ultimately conciliatory. The two instruments interacted – played, teased and fought with each other throughout and ultimately joined forces to bring the piece to a magical conclusion. The artists were Wosner and noted cellist Ralph Kirshbaum.

The final offering was another work by Brahms, a string quartet featuring the world-acclaimed Johannes String Quartet. It was a privilege to be present to hear this intricate piece come together so effortlessly and magnificently.

For one seeking balance, elegance and spiritual nirvana, this concert filled the bill to perfection. It is my hope to be able to bring you additional concerts from the festival in future years.

A twist to a familiar opera

Our second opera, which we attended on Friday, although very familiar to us, was dazzling and quintessential. If we were never to experience another version of "La Traviata," we could be content in the knowledge that we have witnessed defining and ultimate production.

Giuseppe Verdi's "La Traviata" is one of the most popular and well-known operas in the world. The current production playing on the stage of the SFO was no ordinary interpretation of the opera. This masterwork "Traviata" stars the international singing sensation Natalie Dessay and places the music, story and setting into exceptionally clear focus.

Together with director and costume designer Laurent Pelly of the French National Opera, Dessay and the SFO technical and artistic team brought a rare form of magic to our Land of Enchantment.

Dessay's Violetta combines flashes of the glamour of Greta Garbo's classic film interpretation, the passion of the work Maria Callas, the pathos of the Violetta of Licia Albanese - not to mention the flaming red hair and artistry of Beverly Sills.

Dessay's highly anticipated first interpretation of the courtesan-turned-soulmate-turned-tragic heroine was worth the wait. For once, the music made clear sense to me. Pellev envisioned the opera as a flashback, following a staging of the usually unnoticed somber prelude.

The dashing Saimir Pirgu's light tenor as Alfredo underlined the strength, nuance and color of Dessay's work, and the deep richness of Dessay's real-life husband, Laurent Naouri as the elder Germont completed the ensemble with panache.

Finally, we attended Saturday evening's world premiere of "The Letter," an SFO commissioned opera noir adaptation of the extremely popular 1940 William Wyler directed film starring Bette Davis.

The film is based on a true story that took place in 1911 when an English woman killed a neighbor, saying he had attempted to rape her. As later discovered, this was a crime of passion and the couple were lovers for years. The woman was convicted, sentenced and then pardoned. This was the kernel of a story adapted by W. Somerset Maugham in 1924, which in turn was the basis for a series of film adaptations.

The music by Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Paul Morovec and libretto by the exceedingly talented Wall Street Journal Theatre critic Terry Teachout work well together and spotlight a brilliant cast headed by Santa Fe favorite and Metropolitan Opera star Patricia Racette.

The opera plays like the film - uninterrupted 96 minutes. Scene changes flow and fade magically into each other. The arias, the gothic touches, the entire production is one of great theatricality and wit.

In attendance at Saturday's opening was the General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera. I would not be surprised to see "The Letter" on an upcoming list of productions in New York.

My one quibble is with a tampered, controversial, albeit dramatically powerful ending, quite different from the film. I think I understand why the critical change was made. It certainly beat the "fade out" of the film, but somehow, I am uncomfortable making too many changes in a well-known classic source.

In sum, it was an honor to be in attendance and to meet Teachout personally. This work has a great future ahead of it. If you get a chance, I would urge you to contact the opera to see if you can obtain a seat for this remarkable work.

We are eager to return to Santa Fe on Aug. 5 and 6 to bring you reviews of the final two operas, Gluck's "Alceste," featuring Metropolitan opera's noted soprano Christine Brewer, and a frothy updated version of Donizetti's comic opera "The Elixir of Love."

'Shoot the Piano Player' can't trick this viewer

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

So here I am again, faced with the reviewers challenge ... do I write up this classic film in the way film historians and people who are really into the so-called "masters" – Francois Truffaut in this case – would appreciate it or shall I be honest and say what I really think of this non-poignant little number, which I was not fond of.

Cinematinee flick looks at an isolated teacher

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, Aug. 1, is "The Visitor" (2007, 100 minutes, PG-13).

Sixty-two-year-old Walter Vale (Oscar nominated Richard Jenkins) is a professor of economics at a Connecticut college. He's lost his zest for teaching and doesn't seem to care about anything anymore. A widower, he spends his days on campus in lonely isolation.

Sent by his department to read a paper he co-wrote at a conference, Walter heads to New York City, where he still has an apartment. He is startled to find a couple living them.

Tarek (Haaz Sleiman), a Syrian, and Zainab (Dania Gurira), his Senegalese girlfriend, have been duped into renting the place by a real estate scammer. They hurriedly pack to leave, but in the first of a series of risks, Walter opens his closed-off heart and says they can stay for a few nights.

Walter attends the conference in the day as Zainab sells jewelry she has created on the streets and Tarek pursues his passion for drumming at various jazz clubs. It is their mutual interest in music that draws Walter and Tarek together in a slowly unfolding friendship. He begins to teach the aging academic how to play the African drum. It is another key that unlocks Walter's heart.

This is the first film written and directed by Tom McCarthy since his stunning debut "The Station Agent," another character-driven drama. Here we see how the alchemy of music and friendship transform a burnt-out man. It is fascinating to watch as Walter, long used to withholding himself from others, enters the alien world of Tarek and Zainab, who are so different from him in every way. He listens to this exuberant Syrian musician perform in a local jazz club and then joins him in a Central Park drum circle.

Returning from that adventure, police stop Tarek in the subway and wrongly accused him of jumping a turnstile, and take him away. Walter learns from Zainab that they are both illegals in the country without documentation, meaning that Tarek will be held for possible deportation and we sense Walter's shock to discover that these people he has grown to know and like could not "belong" in America like could not "belong" in America.

So many movies present the barriers that keep people, and especially strangers, apart from each other. This one dares to celebrate the deep human connections that can be forged out of racial, cultural and religious differences. Best of all, music is the glue that lifts the spirit and brings people together in new and interesting ways.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287.

Let's go with the latter ... I doubt if there are many film historians in Las Cruces anyway.

Another disclaimer — I am not a fan of the work of Truffaut's because, in the past, I have felt a lot of his work attempts to, more or less, trick the viewer into seeing something that really isn't going on. It can feel plodding and aloof.

Such is the case with "Shoot the Piano Player."
Charles Aznavour is cast as Charlie, a singer and piano player who was once a former concert pianist.
An homage of sorts to American film noir, Truffaut has made an occasionally funny film, which features bungling hitmen and gangsters, instead of sociopathic bad guys and a sweet waitress, who is completely devoted to Charlie.

Unable to get over the loss of his philandering wife,

Unable to get over the loss of his philandering wife, Charlie has taken up employment at a bar. All is going OK until the dopey gangsters catch up to him, thanks to his louse of a brother. Charlie is also a caretaker for another, younger brother, and is friends with a local tart who offers up some late night loving from time to time.

Chase scenes and murder ensue, most of it for naught, since the film is like watching a series of still photographs, rather than an ongoing work of cinema. The plot meanders back and forth, the comedy is dry and punctured with harder hitting dramatic scenes,

This was Truffaut's second feature film, his first being the much more interesting "400 Blows."

Later, he was contracted in Hollywood, where the first film made from his work called "Dark Passage," starred Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, and is considered a classic of the film noir genre.

Subsequent films made from Goodis' writings were hit and miss, but he kept writing nonetheless, and is said to have "prowled the underside of Philadelphia, hanging out in nightclubs and seedy bars." He died in 1967 of cirrhosis of the liver.

Anyway, Truffaut has done better work and lesser work. This is a "don't miss" film for his fans, and an interesting pick of a picture for the curious, and, of course, a must for film historians, amateur and real.

Let Gerard Butler tell you 'The Ugly Truth'

Latest chick flick is entertaining, fun

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH

Abby (Katherine Heigl) is a control freak morning show producer with ratings that are disappearing as fast as her chances at a date.

Mike (Gerard Butler) is a vulgar, despicable excuse for a man with a basic cable television show and a knack for making people react.

Throw the two together and you have a wild ride down the road to love.

After all, this is a "chick flick." Heigl and Butler, the two big names of the cast, carry the film with their notso-obvious chemistry - often falling into the traps of clichéd romantic comedy, but managing to garner enough audience attention to keep it interesting.

1 hours, 37 minutes

In one of the opening scenes, Abby is pushed into a date with someone she has met online, a guy played by Kevin Con-nelly. In the first 10 minutes of the date, she has managed to alienate him with her obsessive-compulsive behavior and her overwhelming urge to criticize and overanalyze their compatibility (she has a check list, people - which isn't uncommon, but still manages to make her seem a bit ... ridiculous).

Mike and Abby meet initially after her boss makes the announcement that they need to "shake things up" on Abby's show. In walks Mike with his bare bones way of looking at relationships and what every man wants from one. Abby is forced to compromise her journalistic integrity for inevitably higher ratings, yet finds fault with everything for which Mike stands.

To make the story really interesting, Abby meets Colin next-door neighbor who is an orthopedic surgeon, built like a god and loves cats (yeah, right). She is desperate for him to ask her out. In a fit of fury toward Mike, she asks Colin out, and Mike tells her exactly what to do to get this guy - right down to hair extensions and sexy lingerie. Mike coaches her through the first few dates, letting her know what to say, how to act and what not to control (or complain about). Without giving too much away, the chemistry between Mike and Abby is undeniable. The sexiness (and Scottish brogue) that is Butler is ideal for a character like Mike, because inevitably, you know that it's possible for him to actually believe what he is preaching (although, at times, you realize his character really isn't that crass).

Heigl, on the other hand, is her charming, witty self, bringing a similar character to this production, but managing to remain a fresh face among most comedic actresses. For example, her stint with a pair of black vibrating underwear at a corporate dinner will make even the most cynical romance critic roll on the floor with laughter. Heigl truly is capable of physical acting.

Problems with the script plagued some of the dialogue, and after moviegoers made "The Hangover" and other Judd Apatow-esque comedies popular, this flick tries to follow suit, without the success. In parts, the movie is just plain raunchy, but it redeems itself with the performances of Heigl and Butler.

Men and women alike will agree that this date movie has a little something for everyone - a little half-naked godlike Eric Winter for the ladies and busty twins wrestling in Jell-O for the gents.

Built in 1907, the Thomas Tate house is now up to speed

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

Growing up in the Alameda-Depot District, Cliff Schlothauer always had an affinity for the turnof-the-century styles that make up the historic neighborhood.

That's why, when it came time to purchase a home of his own, there was no question where he would choose to hang his hat.

"My dad's parents also owned a house here and lived here when he was a teenager," Schlothauer recalled. "The family roots are deep in the neighborhood."

After renovating a craftsman style adobe at 233 Miranda St., a home that Schlothauer described as "the worst house on the block," in 2008, he took on the biggest restoration project of his life with 603 Las Cruces Ave.

Built in a Tudor Revival style, sometimes called Medieval Revival, the home is found on the National Register of Historic Places and was built in 1907 for Thomas Tate, who owned Las Cruces Lumber Company. Employing the services of builder Chris Hansen, a native of Denmark, Tate set out to build a home with attributes never seen before in Las Cruces.

Bought by the Papen family in the 1950s, the home has become an important part of the neighborhood's history, and Schlothauer couldn't bear to see it go to waste.

With the help of builder Kevin McGinley, who is known for his experience in restoring historic adobe homes, Schlothauer began laying down plans for "a total gut rehab" in spring of 2008.

The idea was to make the more than 100-year-old, uninhabitable piece of history as energy efficient and functional as a brand-new home while holding onto its historic integrity.

We were of same mind on that, but from different sides of the street – me from the side of the contractor and Cliff as the homeowner," McGinley said. "We always seemed to meet at the same place."

With help from Miles Dyson of Inspection Connection LC, the city's only Certified Home Energy Rater, Schlothauer saw his dream come to fruition in July.

Sure there were bumps in the road, but it helped that everyone involved had the same hopes for the project.

"At the end of the day, we really appreciate renovating and extending the life of historic properties as we have done with some others in town," McGinley said. "It's rewarding to have a client that really wants to see it through because it's not easy."

"One thing I will never forget about this project is Kevin telling me, 'Every day is a new day,'" Schlothauer added.

When they began the restoration, which included replacing every window except those in the kitchen and the gable on the north side. they were first surprised at the home's strategic placement. Many of the windows, including the gables, are positioned to take advantage of the surrounding landscape. For example, the front Palladian window lines up exactly with the southwest corner of Pioneer Park.

"The way this house was done. there are a lot of mathematics in the structure that you really don't comprehend," Schlothauer said. "It was built during a time when people took a lot of time and care to do these

Schlothauer approached the home's restoration with that same care. Conducting research on every aspect of the Tudor style and searching for ideas in numerous magazines, he had McGinley recreate many turn-of-the-century traits, including the crown moldings. The crew's carpenters replaced a great deal of the damaged woodwork, including the living room mantle and many of the

Though Schlothauer said his favorite room in the house is "the room that he is in at the time," the sunroom on the east side of the home, which was enclosed in the 1950s, is the reason he bought the property.

You step in here and the park is just so pretty," Schlothauer said.

When he first saw the home, the sunroom had a level, 9-foot ceiling. After tearing down the ceiling, Amanda Zaorski, design-er and drafter for McGinley for Construction, had the idea to lift it.

"It made the space totally different," McGin-

"Vaulting it as Amanda did is just stunning," Schlothauer added.

In the kitch-

"The whole frame and everything is curved, so the cabinets are built on that curve, and that was really important," McGinley said of the cabinets by Kowalski.

Along with holding onto its historic elements, Schlothauer actually ordered the majority of the light fixtures and artwork to match the house. There is the French Empire chandelier in the dining room dated 1865; the 6-foot wide, 5-foot tall Victorian mirror from a sea captain's mansion off the coast of Maine over the living room mantle; and the stained glass windows in the library from a mansion in Detroit.

"They are architectural elements that I thought the house really needed," Schlothauer said.

Heading up the custom-made switchback stairs to the loft, one finds yet another piece of Las Cruces' past. When a house built in 1870 on Court Street was falling into the ground, Schlothauer was able to save the staircase made of black walnut, a very rare species of wood. McGinley then incorporated the wood into the Tate House's staircase railing.

"It's part of the history of the district," he said.

Upstairs, the loft includes the original fir wood floors.

"This was a giant cave," Schlothauer said of the attic. "What I wanted was a New York-style loft area that was adaptable to different lifestyles. This would make a gorgeous master suite, you could put children up here, it could be a game room or guest room – you can do many things with it."

Today, the space is made bright by several skylights and includes a wet bar and a mantle made of courtesan oak, also from the early 1900s and most likely made by European craftsman.

Now that Schlothauer is all moved in, he is happy to have brought new life to the area in which he grew up. He didn't know how important the home was to the surrounding residents until he began the restoration.

"The response to this property has been absolutely amazing," Schlothauer said. "Everyone loves this house."

When it came time to move in his furniture, people honked and waved all day long.

"I just don't think any of these mammoth houses that are being built that cost millions of dollars would have this response," Schlothauer said.

Hopefully, he added, more people will follow the trend.

"There has been quite a lot of activity here the last 10 or 15 years," Schlothauer said. "I still think it's a fantastic area for investment for those who want an older home."

The switchback staircase incorporated black walnut posts Cliff Schlothauer was able to save from a dilapidated home in the historic district.

Dating from 1865, the French Empire goldover-bronze, crystal chandelier from Paris is an architectural element Schlothauer ordered specifically for the house.

RT Electric Inc. can help with a thermal imaging inspection

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Whether you are a buyer, seller or homeowner, knowing what is behind the walls of your residence is a top priority.

From mold and moisture to missing insulation, there are several factors that may not be seen by the naked eye, and Las Crucens will be surprised at what could be hiding in homes both new and existing.

Offering thermal imaging services for more than eight years, RT Electric offers a way to identify issues such as mold growth and trapped moisture, and according to the company's owner, Kevin Tegmeyer, no one should buy a home until they get a thorough inspection of the property.

"What a huge tool for a buyer. Here they are getting ready to throw all their money down on a new investment, and they need to know what's there," Tegmeyer said.

Using high-resolution, infrared cameras, Tegmeyer and his company's certified tomographers can identify problems by analyzing temperature variations in a home's walls and ceilings.

According to their brochure, "within minutes, thermal imaging can detect signs of leaks behind walls, missing insulation and any thermal anomaly that can compromise the structural integrity of your property or compromising your health."

From air-leakages in an HVAC system to over-heating electric conductors, which could result in a fire, they can literally find everything.

"It's not an audit. That's not what we are doing," Tegmeyer said. "We are checking for missing items like insulation, the presence of moisture and or mold, roof leaks and window and door leaks."

While the buyer can use the results as a negotiation tool, the seller can use the test to show that their home is a great buy or to identify any improvements that are needed.

"From a sellers standpoint, I think it gives then an opportunity to be proactive," Tegmeyer said. "This is a great sales tool."

All homes that go through the process will be issued a certification stating that the home has passed a thermal imaging inspection.

Members of RT Electric gave a presentation recently at Steinborn Inc. Real Estate, and Tegmeyer said the inspection is gaining interest among Realtors.

Aside from the buyer and the seller, homeowners who wants to make some needed improvements will find a thermal imaging inspection beneficial as well, especially with the stimulus dollars available to those who want to make their homes more energy-efficient and environmentally friendly.

Though Tegmeyer said the majority of customers are calling for a complete home inspection, Tracy Reed, sales manager with RT Electric, said thermal imaging also comes handy with roof inspections.

"Typically, when somebody has a roof leak and they call the roofer, it is like looking for a needle in a haystack as far as pinpointing where their leak is," Reed said. "We are able to provide a report that will tell them exactly where the leaks are."

For Richard Stack, who is selling his Tuscan style residence at 2631 Monte Bello Drive, thermal imaging presented the perfect solution. After an intense windstorm, the Stacks wanted to make sure their roof was still in tact.

"Since we are putting the house on the market, we wanted to make sure ahead of time that we were in good shape," Stack said. "We thought that it was a good marketing tool. Now, the home is ready to be shown to any buyer."

While the cost of a roof inspection is $195 plus tax, RT Electric will inspect a 2,200-square-foot residence, inside and out, for $400 plus tax. Each client will be able to view the end result in a report put together by an RT Electric tomographer, which includes visual examples.

"The crazy thing about this is, once it's done, everyone understands how this works and how this benefits them," Reed said. "We like to educate the consumer. As we go through (a home), we will freeze images in the camera and let them know what they are seeing. By the time they get the report they pretty much already know how this works."

Blending historic charm with modern convenience

Ceramic tile offers sustainability, timeless beauty

Easily distinguishable from their contemporary counterparts, most older homes hold a notable grace and provenance. They have a look so inspiring that many of today's home owners are attempting to capture this essence of the Old World when building new or remodeling their current home. The "latest revivals" trend seamlessly blends history with modern conveniences.

"Many newer homes are infused with architectural details from the past. Good traditional design is about creating a home with heritage and character while incorporating elements that have proven to stand the test of time," said Nancy Berry of New Old House magazine.

One way to capture the look of classic architecture is to work with ceramic tile, which offers supreme durability, sustainability and timeless beauty. Versatility in design, size, format and texture also allows it to be applied in some unexpected ways. Advanced technology allows for replicate finishes virtually indistinguishable from the real thing. You can achieve the look of wallpaper, wainscoting, wood, stone and textiles, with the durability and property advantages of tile. Both flooring and wall tiles do not show wear and do not require heavy cleaning.

Once installed, ceramic tile will not require costly replacement and repair. It offers durability, thanks to the impervious glazed surface, and a longer lifespan than most floor and wall coverings. Unlike wood that rots and needs refinishing or carpeting that loses its pile and shows wear, ceramic tile lasts up to four times longer.

Additionally, ceramic tile is chemically inert, so there is no mold or mildew buildup or chance of damage from outside sources. It's frost-resistant and fire-resistant, meaning it will not burn or give off smoke or toxic fumes.

You can achieve a classic style with easy maintenance and sustainable characteristics. Since warm water and neutral cleaners are the only cleaning products required, ceramic tile does not contribute to toxic cleaning products being flushed into our ecosystem by materials that recommend the use of chemicals, soaps, shampoos, waxes, strippers and solvents.

Five ideas for an elegant and Earth-friendly bathroom

There are many ways to "go green" nowadays. It can often be difficult to decide which sustainable elements to incorporate into your own home. Instead of being overwhelmed by all of the options and trying to be the greenest house on the street, follow these suggestions to create an elegant and eco-friendly bath that's fit for a greener lifestyle.

Rethink surfaces

Green materials do more than upgrade the sustainability and style of your bath: They also provide sound health and hygiene practices — and the surfaces within your bath are no exception. Most materials have more features than simply being environmentally friendly. For example, bamboo is anti-microbial and waterresistant, and it can be used in a variety of applications. It's an elegant and versatile choice for flooring and countertops.

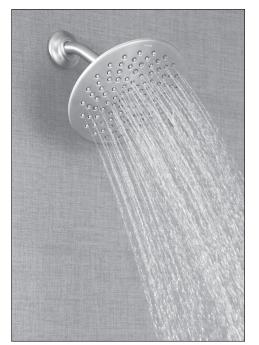

Not interested in using wood? Natural linoleum has similar qualities to bamboo, but it's also biodegradable, non-toxic and easy to maintain. Best of all, natural linoleum will last for nearly 40 years and is available in a large selection of colors, patterns and borders.

Spruce up the vanity

Looking to create a new focal point in your bath? Do so by updating your vanity. Fight the urge to run out and purchase a brand new cupboard or cabinets; reusing existing furniture can be the best and kindest choice for the environment. Try repurposing an old chest you already own or find one at a garage sale, antique store or flea market. Use

Many shower heads will allow you to have a rain drenching experience in the shower, while using up to 20 percent less water than the industry standard.

Can't find a piece you love in the used marketplace? Try to buy responsibly and find something made from sustainable materials or that has environmentally friendly certifications. Look for Greenguard and MBDC Cradle to Cradle certifications on products, as well as items that utilize Forest Stewardship Council-certified wood. These indicate that the products have been produced in a sustainable fashion with little environmental impact. If you're planning to build a new vanity, utilize eco-friendly, raw materials, including bamboo, beech wood, reclaimed lumber or bent plywood. For an added benefit, try to buy locally; you'll avoid shipping costs and reduce the carbon footprint associated with your purchase, which is even better.

Smart water savings

The most important environmental benefit of a green bathroom is reducing the amount of water used. In order to get the most out of your eco-friendly bath, be sure to install fixtures that use less water and energy. The easiest upgrade to make is switching to a water-efficient showerhead.

Another way to reduce your water consumption is to install a lavatory faucet that is certified to meet WaterSense criteria. WaterSense, a program of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), aims to decrease indoor and outdoor water use through water-efficient products and simple, water-saving practices.

Earth-friendly accessories

Want to make a sustainable impact on your bath without remodeling? Be aware of how you decorate the space. For example, a rubber bath mat or plastic shower curtain can wreak havoc on your indoor-air quality, especially if you have a poor ventilation system.

In the shower, look for PVC-free plastic or natural fabrics, such as cotton or bamboo, for your next shower curtain and liner, as PVC emits off-gassing chemicals that can be dangerous. You can always go for a more permanent solution, like hemp, which is naturally resistant to mold, as long as you keep your bathroom well ventilated.

To increase the elegance of your bath, incorporate towels and rugs made from organic cotton. Since organic cotton is grown using methods and materials that have a low impact on the environment, it's an unbeatable and hypoallergenic option for you and any guests.

Updates that last

One of the main components to greening any space is to consider designing for longevity. Ensuring your new bath is built to last is key – the amount of waste that goes to landfill sites from new construction and remodeling is massive; nearly 40 percent of all waste. A well-designed bathroom also means less maintenance and fewer repairs, and can even postpone the need for costly remodels. So be sure to consider materials and products that are durable and can withstand the rigors of everyday use.

Seeing crop circles?

The leaf cutter bee is on the loose

Have you been seeing crop circles lately? Well maybe not exactly.

If you have semi circles cut out of the leaves of some of your trees or shrubs, the leaf cutter bee is the culprit. It is a small grey bee that makes its nest out of the missing pieces of leaves that you worked so hard to plant.

This is an important pollinating insect, so you really should not kill this annoying critter. Read up on dwindling bee populations and what it means to our food supply.

it means to our food supply.

The good news is that it won't kill your plant, it just makes is look bad. (Good news? Yeah right.) This insect usually attacks new plantings. After the second season the damage is much less evident. It can attack roses, lilac, crape myrtle, pear trees and chitalpa, among other plants.

If you tend to over fertilize and/or over water your plants, you usually will produce lush soft tissue growth that the bee just can't pass up. Avoid high nitrogen fertilizers or use organic fertilizers instead.

Try using a garlic spray as a repellent. There used to be a product on the market specifically for this, but due to label requirements from the state, it is not for sale in New Mexico. It was just concentrated garlic juice. It worked on array of insects and kept the leaf cutter bee away.

If you can live with a few holes in your leaves for a season without losing sleep, then you win. If it the circles really bother you, then plant more trees and shrubs or have your neighbor plant more trees and shrubs (it doesn't hurt to try). I figure the more leaves the bee has to choose from, the less damage each plant will receive – in theory of course.

The man with a plan

Denton has his hands full with DVI, EPIC and, coming soon, Amaro Winery

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

He's an architect, planner and builder, but more than anything, Harold Denton is a problem solver – always has been. "I like architecture and design, and I like doing things that you can see happen," Denton said. "I can sit down and design something, and eight hours go by and it seems like no time at all."

His passion for design has made for plenty of late nights at the drawing board, which in recent years has been replaced with a computer screen. Co-owner and principle architect for DVI and vice president and co-owner of EPIC Construction, Denton has 40 years of experience in construction management and design, and his list of projects could fill a book.

A licensed architect in six states, including Colorado, Texas and New Mexico, his work can be found throughout the region and ranges from restaurants and commercial buildings to upscale homes and entire neighborhoods.

Influenced by regional architectural greats, such as Frank Lloyd Wright and Mexican architect Ricardo Legorreta, through the years, Denton has developed his own signature style – a modern look with open spaces and eye-catching exterior colors. Perhaps the best example of this is Denton's personal home in Picacho Hills.

"This is an upside-down house where the living quarters are upstairs and the bedrooms are downstairs," he said, sitting in the dining room. "It's like living in a tree house."

Though he can conquer any style, Denton admits he gravitates toward a more urban look.

"I am pretty contemporary with what I do," he said, "but I think it is Southwest contemporary."

"He has a cool sense of style," added daughter Kelly Allen of Property Consultants LLC.

Making his way to Las Cruces in 1989 after working in Kan-sas, Missouri and Colorado, Denton entered the local scene in the midst of the technological revolution that has reached all aspects of his profession. Architects were beginning to approach their profession in a new way with the advent of software programs that would forever replace hand-drawn blueprints.

"We spent the first six months or more on the computer taking four times what it could have taken us to do by hand," Denton said. "At the time, we were the only one's doing it."

Today, Denton, his wife Barbara and five other members of DVI provide architecture, engineering, planning and urban design services to the growing city of Las

Large-scale projects of which DVI has been a part include the Poco Lomas subdivision on Morning Star Drive and the Pueblos at Alameda Ranch. Coming soon will be the Metro Verde subdivision, a green, sustainable community on the East Mesa that DVI planned for a local Designed around a 2 acre Village Plaza, Metro Verde will be its own community with recreation areas and retail stores. In this "happier, healthier community," rainwater will be harvested off the roofs of commercial building for irrigation and Permeable concrete, which allows runoff to seep through and return to the aquifer, will be used for the roads and walkways.

"Metro Verde is a whole new animal,"

Denton said.

While design is his forte, Denton's duties extend even further with EPIC Construction. Along with partner Tatt Everhart, Denton, who also has his general contractors license, gets to par-ticipate in a project's actual construction.

"I like taking something from conception and planning – develop-ing the urban design and the architecture - and in some cases even being involved in the development process, and then building it," he said.

Doing mainly commercial projects, the members of EPIC help clients design their project, set a budget and timeframe and keep them involved during its construction. They currently have a contract to build a new motor vehicle department and Continued on following page build a new motor vehicle department and are also doing an addition to the Calista Animal Hospital.

Whether it's project for DVI or EPIC, the approach is basically the same.

"I always start with the client's wishes and the site's requirements and constraints," Denton said. "I am not the kind of architect that can start designing a house based on the kitchen or the bar. You have to get to know the client, and then you have to work with the site because it is such a determinant of what can done."

With Barbara by his side as accountant for both DVI and EPIC, Denton has made an undeniable impact on the face of the city. As the technology has evolved so has Denton's approach.

DVI planned the Poco Lomas subdivision and designed the houses therein, creating a uniformed, contemporary-themed neighborhood.

"We are about to see another revolution coming up with BIM, which is Building Information Modeling. It basically means that everything is going to be done three dimensionally," he said.

Three-dimensional computer models will include information on the materials needed for a project, all the way down to the screws and bolts.

'It not only works for the architect, but also for the builder," he said. "If you're a builder and you don't have the BIM, you are not going to be able to compete. I don't know if it is a matter of choice.

Aside from keeping up with advances in his field, these days Denton is involved in planning of a different sort. Sometime in the next year, the Dentons, along with Allen and her husband Sean, will be opening their own winery in Downtown Las Cruces.

Located at 601 W. Amador Ave, a historic building they are restoring and renovating, the Amaro Winery will include a tasting room, large patio and an area for wine storage and production.

"The key to our success is we have a very good wine maker," Denton said.

According to Allen, they will serve roughly 12 wines from sweet whites to mellow whites to very strong reds, including a gewürztraminer, zinfandel, cabernet sauvignon and tempranillo. They hope to feature artwork and live music and become a regular stop for those shopping and working downtown.

Denton sees it as just another way of adding to the city. "Everything is related, even the winery," Denton said. "I have been in private business for 35 years and architecture and planning is not all that much different than running a business

Along with building a new home for he and Barbara, Denton is far from finished with his architectural career and said he can't wait to do more – a lot more.

"He is the kind of person where he builds something, and he is proud of what he builds, but he sees the next thing and what he can do different," Allen said. "He sees the next thing as his biggest project.

Don't put purses in jeopardy

Time to meet the 'instant handbag hanger'

Throughout my stint as homes editor, I have always tried to choose gadgets that appeal to both sexes. If it were any other week this would still be the case, but being that this is my last week at the Las Cruces Bulletin, I have decided to give a shout out to the women of Las Cruces.

Don't worry; there are no hard feelings. I am off to grad school and will miss the Bulletin and its staff with all my heart. But I just couldn't leave without spreading the word about a little gadget that could bring joy to your life.

For those who don't know it vet, most women crave handbags with the same intensity as they crave shoes. They contain our wallets, our phones, our makeup, our jewelry, essentially our lives. Whether small and compact or big and bulky, we just can't leave the house without

So why should we have to place our beautiful purses in places where they are at risk of falling on the floor, such as the side of a chair, or, even worse, directly on the floor. These items don't come cheap, and the less wear and tear the better.

So next time, before putting your bag in jeopardy, check out this week's gadget, cleverly named the Clipa.

What is it?

Described as jewelry for your handbag, the Clipa is a sleek circular handbag hanger that clips to any handbag strap.

The Clipa, which means "instantly" in Romanian, is made from high-strength zinc alloy.

It protects and extends the life of handbags, preventing germs, water, dirt and more from coming into contact with the bag.

Measuring 3 inches in length, the Clipa has nonslip clip pads on the end and can hold the bulkiest of bags, even backpacks. It can be used for single- or double-strap bags, diaper bags, umbrellas – you name it. It will always stay hooked to the strap of your handbag.

To fasten the Clipa to your purse, simply open one end and slide it onto

the strap. The spring mechanism will automatically close.

To hang a handbag, place one end of the Clipa on the table or other surface and hang the bag from the other end. When you're ready to leave, simply pull the handbag strap and let the Clipa fall back onto the bag, ready for next time.

This widget is great for restaurants, cars, pools, outdoor cafes, concerts, movie theaters and especially bathroom stalls. It works on tabletops, chair arms and backs, counters, fences and even sinks.

How much does it cost?

The Clipa sells for $24.95 and comes in polished silver or gold, brushed gold or hematite (gunmetal).

Where can it be tound?

In Las Cruces, the Clipa can be found at LuLu's – one of my faves – which is owned by Matt Bleything. It can also be found at www.clipa.us.

or business paying only $87. Earlier this year, the Renegade Direct Marketing 101 Seminar and Workshop was held in El Paso. Mike Santamaria, Mountain Vista Homes and El Paso Association of Builders past president, coordinated the event at his local home builders association and was pleased with both the turn out and the quality of the seminar itself.

'I just sat through a four hour marketing seminar that blew my socks off," Santamaria said. "I have been in contact with (The Oliver Group) for about two years and have really been impressed by them. If you want help selling more of anything they are great. I truly considered myself a savvy marketer and now realize I know nothing. I would highly recommend to (our) group that we consider having them give the same seminar at our next meeting. They are awesome.'

This fast-paced seminar is geared towards any kind of business. Oliver of The Oliver Group said it provides real tools and strategies that can be implemented right

"One of the purposes of this seminar is to allow owners to take 'hold' of their business and quit wasting time, money and energy on sporadic advertising and marketing that is not helping them," Oliver said.

Oliver, who has been a national public speaker and professional marketer for over 20 years, said that regardless of the type of company, the goal for being in business remains the same.

"Whether you have a retail or wholesale service company, a retail store, if you are a professional services provider or any other kind of business, the reason for your being in business is to attract new customers and clients, increase sales to these current clients and create a steady stream of referral business. If you learn and utilize just one or two of the tools that will be revealed at this event you will increase your sales and your profits – guaranteed," he said.

Looking for ways to improve your home?

Weekend DIY projects mean lasting home improvements

With the national median home price down double digits from the same time last year, it's no surprise that many homeowners are deciding to stay put.

As a result, many are looking for ways they can improve their homes. Luckily, there are many do-it-yourself, cost-efficient home improvement projects that will do just that.

Right now, people are looking for ways to get more enjoyment from their homes because they know they are going to be living in them longer," said Tom Sullivan, founder of Lumber Liquidators, the largest specialty retailer of hardwood flooring in the United States. "However, with the economic uncertainty, homeowners are focusing on projects that provide a big return without a big investment.

Build a new backsplash

Building a new backsplash is an easy way to showcase personality and add character to the kitchen. Character can be added by implementing tile design tricks, such as placing tile diagonally to add dimension to a room or placing tile in patterns to form interesting mosaics.

No matter which design you choose to create, the most cost-effective way to build a new backsplash is to research several tile options before making a final tile purchase. Experts, in general, ceramic and porcelain tile are the best options in terms of cost, starting at $10 per

Replace an old bathroom vanity

Standalone vanities are a hot trend in bathroom design because they provide the look of furniture, adding a more comfortable feeling to a bathroom. Vanities are available in many different styles and sizes, ranging from small sizes, which are about 18 inches in width, to large sizes, which are about 72 inches in width. With such diverse vanities to choose from, there is a vanity to suit any taste and replacement timeline.

Vanities can be installed in only a matter of hours with the correct number of people. Installing a vanity usually requires at least two people in order to make the installation process move quickly and smoothly. However, the size of the vanity will determine how many people should help to install it.

Wood flooring can increase value and add style to a living room. Light woods can make a room appear larger, medium woods can make a room appear more traditional, and dark woods can make a room appear warmer.

"The introduction of so many new species, colors and types of flooring in recent years allow homeowners a lot of options when renovating a room at various price points," Sullivan said. "At the same time, innovations such as click flooring have made it easier for do-it-yourselfers to install a new floor.

Installing wood floors on your own can cut down on the overall cost of a flooring project and can easily give a living room a beautiful new look from between $1,000 and $2,500, depending on the size of the room. For more information on wood flooring, visit lumberliquidators.com.

Nothing gives a room new life like wood flooring.

Great in a tight spot

Pipe cleaner goes beyond its intended use

By BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

So pipe cleaners are used to clean pipes, right?

Actually, with fewer and fewer men using the traditional Sherlock Holmes method of smoking, pipe cleaners have taken on a whole new life in the 21st Invented in the early 1900s by John Harry Stedman and Charles Angel of Rochester, N.Y., the uses for this simple device could probably go on forever. Besides cleaning smoking pipes, they can be used for any application that calls for cleaning small bores or tight places. They are even used for cleaning out medical equipment and in engineering applications.

Made of two lengths of wire, called the core, which are twisted together, trapping short lengths of fiber between them, they can be decorative, practical or just plain fun. Make sure to keep a stash in your top drawer should one of the following needs arise.

- 1. Use as an emergency shoelace: Kids can wreak havoc on their shoes. After providing them with a new pair, it takes no time at all for the shoes to become grungy and worn down. If the kids are having a ball playing in the backyard and a shoelace meets its doom, replace it with a pipe cleaner for a temporary solution. It will save you the trouble of unstringing another pair or running out to the store.
- 2. Decorate a ponytail: This suggestion is mainly intended for young girls. If a gal wants her ponytail to look extra special, try using a pipe cleaner to add a touch of color. It can be bent in a number of shapes, such as a bow or butterfly.
- 3. Clean gas burners: Those who have an old gas stovetop might struggle with burners that fail to fire from all their jets. When the burner is off, poke a pipe cleaner through each tiny vent. This cleans the burner and allows it to work effectively. It can also work for pressuresafe valves or pressure cookers.

4. Hang Christmas ornaments: The holidays may be far off, but when the time comes to put up the tree, keep a collection of pipe cleaners around for those ornaments that will inevitably need hooks. Just bend the pipe cleaner into a hookshape and secure the ornament on the

For those who already want to get into the Christmas spirit, check out Christmas in July at La Tienda de Jardin, 335 La Colonia Ave., Friday, July 31 and Saturday, Aug. 1. For more information about Christmas in July, see Page C2 in the Arts and Lifestyles section.

5. Keep safety pins in one place: Safety pins come in so many sizes that even the most organized person will find it hard to keep them from getting jumbled. An easy solution is to thread safety pins onto a pipe cleaner through the bottom loop of each pin.

6. Arts and crafts galore: From creating tiny people to long caterpillars, pipe cleaners present a great pastime for kids, whether in the classroom or at home. For more ideas, check out "Pipe Cleaners Gone Crazy: A Complete Guide to Bending Funny Sticks" by Laura Torres

7. Secure a bouquet: For those brides who are cutting costs by making their own flower arrangements at home, pipe cleaners can come in handy. Before wrapping the stems with a ribbon, use a pipe cleaner to make sure they are bundled nice and tight.

8. Make napkin rings: Instead of using elegant napkin rings at a picnic or barbecue, use colorful pipe cleaners. Just twist one around each napkin and place them on the table. If you want to get adventurous, use two - one for the napkin ring and one for decoration. Bend the extra pipe cleaner in the shape of a heart, shamrock, flower, curlicue or anything else and then attach.

Around-the-house item: Pipe cleaners

9. Use as twist tie: If you run out of twist ties and need to close a smelly bag of garbage, substitute with a pipe cleaner.

10. Use as a mini-scrubber: Pipe cleaners are great for cleaning because they can reach tight spaces. Use it to clean in tiny cracks, crevices, corners and small holes.

11. Decorate a gift: Out of ribbon? Finish off that birthday or Christmas gift with a pipe cleaner in the shape of a bow. A pipe cleaner can also be used to fasten a card to the handle of a gift bag.

Double Eagle presented 2009 Award of Excellence by Wine Spectator

In a ceremony on July 22, Win Ritter, food and beverage service director of the Double Eagle Restaurant, was presented with the 2009 Award of Excellence by Wine Spectator Magazine representative Nathan Wesley.

The magazine recognizes restaurants worldwide that offer outstanding wine selections, which are appropriate to the cuisine and appealing to a wide range of wine lovers' interests. This is the third year the Double Eagle has received the distinguished

The wine list must include vintages and appellations for all selections listed, including wines by the glass, and offer a well-chosen variety of quality producers. The appearance and overall presentation of the wine list are judged as well as a thematic match to the menu in both price and style.

The Award of Excellence is given to restaurants whose list typically offers about 300 selections. The Best of Award of Excellence is given to those offering more than 400 selections and the Grand Award is given to those with 1,500 or more selections.

'GourMANd' fundraiser sold out!

Men who Cook returns to the Farm & Ranch Museum

Mesilla Valley Hospice presents its Second Annual Men Who Cook Fundraiser Saturday, Aug. 15, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum. Sixty "celebrity" chefs from Doña Ana County, including the honorable Mayor Ken Miyagishima, will prepare a favorite dish or gourmet specialty.

Chile pepper is a key ingredient in several recipes, some of which are shared in today's column. More than $26,000 was raised at last year's event.

"We have officially sold out of tickets," said Mesilla Valley Hospice Marketing Director April Ānava.

Five hundred tickets were snapped up for this highly successful and popular event that includes cash prizes and live and silent auctions. A cookbook featuring celebrity recipes will also be sold for $10.

If you were unable to obtain a ticket to the "gourMANd" feast, a waiting list has been generated. Cookbooks are available at Mesilla Valley Hospice, 299 E. Montana Ave. For more information, call 575-525-5757.

Smoked Chicken & Green Chile Wontons

By Darrel Smith, Picacho Hills Country Club

2 boneless, skinless chicken breasts 1/2 cup cream cheese 1/4 cup Boursin cheese* 1/4 cup green chilies, diced 2 dozen wonton wrappers 1 quart oil for frying

Start first by smoking the chicken breasts. Place the chicken breasts on a wire rack in a 4-inch deep oven pan. Place a few hickory chips in the bottom under the rack, cover with foil, place on a burner under a well-vented area and heat until smoke appears (be careful it does not get too hot). After about 15 minutes of light smoking, remove from stovetop and place in oven, uncovered, to finish cooking. Then dice very small.

To assemble, lay store-bought or homemade wontons out on a table. Place a small amount of cream cheese, Boursin, diced green chilies and smoked chicken in each one. Using water, seal each wonton and fold gently. Set

Heat fry oil 325 to 350 degrees and fry in small batches. Lay fried wontons on paper towels and let drain. Serve with dipping sauce, the sweeter the better. Yields 2 dozen appetizers.

*Boursin cheese from France is usually flavored with herbs, garlic or coarse ground pepper.

Stuffed Pork Loin with Green Chile and Chevre Cheese

By Sam Resch

1 whole pork loin (4 to 6 pounds) Olive oil, as needed 1 medium, yellow onion, diced 5 cloves garlic, minced 1 tablespoon Mexican oregano 1/2 teaspoon cumin 8 ounces green chile, diced 1 pound chevre cheese

Sauté the onion in olive oil until clear. Add the garlic and herbs and cook until garlic is aromatic. Add diced green chile and cook approximately one more minute, then remove from heat and let cool. When cool, mix with chevre cheese to complete filling.

Using a long, thin knife or clean sharpening steel, cut a hole in the middle of the pork loin. Start at each end, working towards the middle so as to create a "tunnel" the length of the loin. You may have to cut the loin in half and treat each half this way, depending on the length of the loin. Stuff loin with filling, then tie the roast with butcher's twine to prevent filling from squeezing out while cooking.

Heat the roasting pan on stove top with more olive oil. Sear the entire roast until evenly brown, starting with the fat side. Once roast is browned, transfer pan to a 350-degree oven for approximately one to one-and-ahalf hours, or until the internal temperature of the roast measures 165 degrees with a meat thermometer. Remove from oven and allow it to rest for about 10 minutes before slicing and serving. May be accompanied by your favorite green chile sauce.

Green Chile Stew

By Eli Estrada, Pat Campbell Insurance

Note: This is a great dish using fresh zucchini and green chile in the early fall. Serve with a touch of grated Monterey jack cheese and a warm flour tortilla.

1 pound beef, cut in half-inch cubes 1 tablespoon olive oil 1 small onion quartered

1 zucchini, split lengthwise and diced into 1/2 inch slices

1 yellow squash, diced the same as above 2 medium potatoes, cut into 1-inch cubes 2 carrots, diced 1 (14.5 ounce) can diced tomatoes 2 teaspoons garlic salt

peeled and chopped (preferably fresh) 2 cups water

In a medium pot, preferably cast iron, heat olive oil and brown the meat with 1 teaspoon of garlic salt. Once all the meat is browned, add 2 cups of water, onions, potatoes, carrots, bay leaf, remaining garlic salt and pepper. Bring all this to a boil, then reduce heat and let this simmer 10 to 15 minutes, or until the potatoes begin to soften. Next, add your can of tomatoes, zucchini, squash and green chile. Let simmer for another 10 to 15 minutes, add salt to taste and more chile if necessary. If the stew is too thick add a bit more water.

West Nile virus slowly stinging into U.S. this summer

As outbreaks of West Nile virus among humans have slowly started to occur this summer, now is the time for people across the United States to be on their toes, according to Jonathan Day, professor of entomology at the University of Florida.

"As of mid-July, according to the Center for Disease Control, they have already seen multiple human cases of West Nile virus on both U.S. coasts," Day said. "With summer now in full swing, people should be ready to protect themselves, their families and their pets as best they can against mosquito-transmitted viruses and other mosquito-horne diseases."

other mosquito-borne diseases."

Last year, there were 1,356 West Nile virus cases throughout the U.S., with 44 fatalities. While the numbers are down from 2007's total of 3,630 cases and 124 fatalities, they show how serious this threat should be taken each year. As professor Day suggests, now is the time for people in the U.S. to be on their toes. As a reminder, there were eight cases in New Mexico last year.

West Nile virus is a mosquito-borne disease that was first seen in North America in 1999. Mild symptoms include fever, headache, body aches, skin rash and swollen lymph glands. As there is no specific treatment for infection or vaccine to prevent it, the most serious manifestation of West Nile virus is a fatal inflammation of the brain in humans and horses, as well as mortality in certain domestic and wild birds.

BARRY MURRAY

The Bug Guy

Transmitted to humans through an infected mosquito's bite, there have already been 14 confirmed cases of West Nile virus this year. Of these cases, while none have resulted in fatalities, it is important for people to understand the importance of seeking medical care as soon as possible for anyone who has symptoms suggesting severe illness. The 14 cases have occurred in Arizona (2), Arkansas (1), Idaho (1), Minnesota (1), Mississippi (2), Nevada (2), South Dakota (2), Tennessee (1) and Texas (2).

There are several ways to help control the mosquito population to best prevent these diseases from gaining a stronger foothold. It is important to drain any sources of standing water in the yard. In addition, emptying old flower pots, tires and other containers of water can also help prevent the spread, as still water is a magnet for breeding mosquitoes.

Please remember that any attempt to prevent mosquito bites should also include the following elements:

- From now until October, minimize your time spent outdoors, especially at dawn and early evening, when mosquitoes are most active.
- Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors
- Apply insect repellent repeatedly to exposed skin and clothing.
- Make sure doors and windows have tight-fitting screens.

As national spokesperson for Truly Nolen of America, Barry "The Bug Guy" Murray has more than 20 years of experience in the pest control industry. Murray brings an informative and uniquely entertaining perspective to pest problems of the 21st century. Founded in 1938, Tucson, Arizona-based Truly Nolen of America is one of the largest family owned pest control companies in the United States.
