West Nile kills Doña Ana man

45-year-old first '09 death in NM

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

A Doña Ana County man died from West Nile Virus infection, Tuesday, Aug. 18, at the age of 45, according to a New Mexico Department of Health press release.

The county resident had a more severe form of the disease known as encephalitis and had been in the hospital since Aug. 1. Although more information on the man has not been disclosed, his death marks the first West Nile Virus death in New Mexico in 2009.

"We extend our sympathy to the man's family and friends who are grieving for their loss," said

Health Secretary Alfredo Vigil, M.D., in a press release. "We all need to do our best to prevent mosquito bites so we're safe from West Nile."

A total of three human West Nile Virus cases have been recorded in the state this year, including the Doña Ana County man, a 39-year-old woman from Rio Arriba County who was not hospitalized and a 70-year-old man from Eddy County who is in critical condition at University of New Mexico Hospital.

In 2008, New Mexico recorded eight cases of the virus with no fatalities, while 60 cases were reported in See West Nile on PAGE A4

Health Care Debate

TODD DICKSON I The Las Cruces Bulletin

U.S. Rep. Harry Teague faced a packed County Commission chamber during the Congressman's town hall meeting Wednesday, Aug. 19, in the Doña Ana County Government Center.

Teague survives town hall on health care without incident

By TODD G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

To reform health care or not to reform health care?

That seems to be the question for the opposing sides of the health care debate with local residents from both camps showing up in force at U.S. Rep. Harry Teague's town hall meeting Wednesday, Aug. 18, in Las Cruces.

The public input reflected the national debate. Though more reserved than some town halls, it teetered on turning rancorous at times.

Those concerned that the government can't afford to reform health care during such a fragile time in the nation's economy was reflected by statements from Gen Mitchell. With the debt burden from government spending on programs such as Cash for Clunkers, she said she was worried about future generations. Her concerns were countered by prohealth care reform advocates who say an ill-advised war in Iraq started the deficit.

One person praised his private health care insurance plan and another would tell a horror story. One person touted the quality of his federal health care, only to be countered by tales of life-threatening bureaucratic bungling.

Bingaman: 'Now is the time to cure health care disease'

By Todd G. Dickson

Jeff Bingaman, New Mexico's senior U.S. senator who's in the thick of the Senate's deliberations on health care reform, said the country can't afford not to tackle the problem of rising health care costs.

With those costs rising at a rate much greater than inflation, taking no action will result in rationed, "assembly line" health care and leave more people without health care insurance, Bingaman told a gathering of New Mexico AARP members Wednesday, Aug. 18, in Las Cruces.

Bingaman said he appreciated the AARP taking the lead in trying to keep people focused on the real issues of health care that need to be addressed by speaking out against misinformation about reforming the health care system.

For example, Bingaman said, there is no one single health care bill. There are three bills in the House, and the Senate committees are still in the process of trying to craft legislation.

Bingaman said the Obama administration learned the lesson of President Clinton's failure to reform health care by setting broad goals rather

Schools face challenges at the start

State funding, disappointing test scores sober educators

By Todd G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

As the Las Cruces Public Schools opened its doors this week to more than 23,000 students, educators were grappling with how to make sense of unflattering student achievement results and the possibility of more budget cuts from the state.

At the district's first school board meeting Tuesday, Aug. 18, Superintendent Stan Rounds spent some time talking about the student achievement results, primarily the findings that only five schools of 35 in the district made Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) and that the district's cohort-based graduation rate was 43 percent compared to the state average of 52 percent.

Rounds said detailed data from those results have yet to be available to district officials to analyze, and some of the "big bucket" data is puzzling to administrators, who also dispute the graduation rate methodology.

The five schools that made AYP are Fairacres Elementary, Highlands Elementary, Hillrise Elementary, White Sands Elementary and White Sands Middle School. While many of the district's Hearing set for charter schools

The New Mexico Public Education Commission has scheduled a public hearing at 1 p.m. Monday, Aug. 24, at Milton Hall, Room 171, on the New Mexico State University campus to gain input into the charter school applications for Organ Mountain Community Charter School and the Sen. Dennis Chavez Academy.

During the public hearings, members of the PEC will listen to presentations from the charter schools. Following the presentations, local school district representatives and members of the public will have an opportunity to speak for or against the proposed schools. The PEC will then have an opportunity to question the applicants. Public input about the charter school applications may also be submitted in writing to the PEC by sending letters or emails to New Mexico Public Education Commission, c/o Beverly Friedman, NMPED PIO & PEC Liaison, 300 Don Gaspar, Santa Fe, NM 87501 or Bev.Friedman@state.nm.us. The deadline for submitting public input is 5 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 1.

PEC members will vote to authorize or deny the applications at a meeting scheduled for Sept. 10 and 11, in Santa Fe.

Any questions about the hearings can be directed to the New Mexico Public Education Department's Charter School Bureau at 505-222-4762.

If there was one consistent request from both sides it was that people should have the freedom to choose their health care plans, which Teague said is the intent of lawmakers.

Teague made efforts to assuage concerns from both sides of the debate.

An audience member challenged Teague that if a public option became part of the health care reform, then that should be the health care coverage for all government workers. "Any program I vote for will be my insurance," Teague promised.

After hearing another voice mistrusting of government run health care because of fraud and abuse in the Medicare system, Teague said those caught cheating the system need to "put in some real jail time."

That concern was quickly countered by pro-reform voice that noted that private health insurance also is rife with fraud.

One man attributed rising health care costs to doctors practicing "defensive medicine" to avoid lawsuits and proposed tort reform as key to the health care solution.

"I think health care is the most impor-tant reform we can have," Teague responded, "and there should be no sacred cows and that includes tort reform."

Larry Stocker, a retired teacher, said he knows many people who aren't insured because they can't afford it.

"It's about time our country caught up with the rest of the civilized world," he said.

 $Rev.\ Joshua\ Anna, an\ orthodox\ Christian$ priest and monk, said the legislation as currently drafted is dangerously vague because interpretation will be dictated by whomever is in power. Depending on who's interpreting the legislation's intent, it could allow late abortions, he said. "I expect better out of our government.'

Teague acknowledged the proposed legislation is too vague and has opened health care reform up to much misinformation, such as calling for rationing.

George Griffin ended the town hall meeting by telling Teague and the crowd that political "theology" has clouded what should be a deliberative debate about fixing health care. "Democracy doesn't cure colds or cancer," he said. "The question is, how do we take care of our folks?

Bingaman

than submitting legislation to Congress.

There are some general objectives that the Senate is trying to accomplish with the health care reform its lawmakers are trying to pass, he said.

First, the health care insurance market needs to be reformed, Bingaman said. People with pre-existing conditions shouldn't be refused coverage, or lose coverage if they get seriously ill.

Second, the "cost shifting" needs to stop, Bingaman said, in that people with health insurance are paying the cost of the uninsured through higher premiums spurred by health care providers trying to recover lost revenue. Yet, it is estimated that people without health insurance use about 60 percent of the same medical services as those with insurance, he said.

"If we do nothing. we're heading for a real train wreck in this country," he said.

Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima –

who owns \bar{an} insurance agency – did raise one concern. Bingaman's list of objectives for reforming health insurance included eliminating health care spending limits for individuals. No limits give health insurance providers the need to know what their spending ceiling will be in order to calculate the cost of coverage, he said.

The limit for health care coverage used to be $1 million, but that industry standard has been raised to $5 million, Miyagishima said. Perhaps Congress could raise that spending ceiling to $10 million to essentially resolve that concern, he suggested.

Though the Obama administration wanted to move quickly on health care reform, Bingaman said prolonging the debate is helping lawmakers find answers to health care's very complex questions.

"I think the time we're taking – the extra time – is time well-spent and we need to take time to make sure it's done right," he said.

West Nile

2007 with three deaths, one of which occurred in Doña Ana County according to the New Mexico Department of Health. Additionally, the Department of Health reported three cases of West Nile in Doña Ana County in 2006, one of which resulted in death.

Anyone experiencing fever, nausea, headache and muscle aches should contact his or her health care provider, as the symptoms are common among people with West Nile Virus. On rare occasions, West Nile can lead to meningitis or encephalitis, while people older than 50 are especially susceptible to the virus.

The department of Health reports that most people infected with West Nile have either mild symptoms or no symptoms at all, and less than 1 percent of the people infected develop meningitis or encephalitis. Encephalitis affects the brain, while meningitis is an infection of the lining around the brain.

West Nile is most commonly spread through mosquitoes, as their bites can infect humans with the virus.

Schools

other schools had previously been making progress, Rounds said it wasn't enough for the "rising bar" of No Child Left Behind standards in which a school doesn't meet AYP if it doesn't hit the mark in any of 37 factors evaluated.

No Child Left Behind will continue to raise the level of outcome expectations each year until 2014 when all schools must be at 100-percent and Rounds predicted that every school in the United States will then fail to make AYP.

Although he acknowledged that there will be much to learn about improving what schools can do when the detailed data arrives, some of these initial results have surprised district educators. For example, schools such as MacArthur Elementary that had been making progress showed slippage despite no significant change in staff or curriculum. And previous progress at MacArthur was important, Rounds said, because it has all the factors that impede student success with many of its students coming from homes that are poor and where English isn't the primary language.

Rounds said the snapshot that only five schools made AYP overshadowed progress at many district schools in which deficiencies were greatly reduced. This was especially at Tombaugh, which changed from nine subject areas not making AYP to two and Hermosa Heights going from 11 areas not making AYP to just three.

Rounds said he is making an effort to recognize those schools better than 50 percent progress on AYP deficiencies.

Also, the community should take pride in the progress the district's schools have made in teaching mathematics, Rounds

While there are things to learn from the AYP results, Rounds has problems with the state's methodology for calculating the graduation rate. If the old graduation/dropout method of comparing the number of high school students at the start of classes to those in class by school year's end was still being used, the district's graduation rate would be about

But the graduation rate is now being calculated by following students through all four years of high school, which Rounds said should give a clearer picture of the actual dropout rate. The problem is the method being used rejects students who leave school to get their GED to begin community college classes. "That's not a dropout," Rounds said.

District officials should be able to give a clearer picture about what this all means in about a month when the more detailed data arrives, the superintendent said.

'So stay tuned," he said.

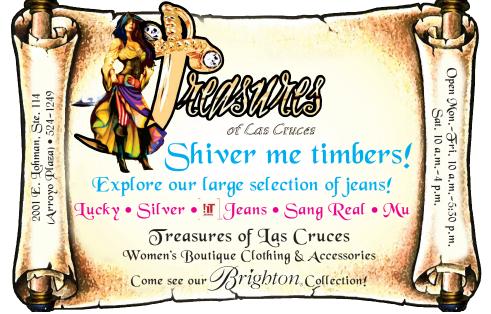

John Hamilton, the parent of a Mayfield High School freshman, said educators shouldn't be finding excuses for not meeting AYP or a better graduation rate.

"I see this AYP as an alarm to the community," Hamilton said. "We are not doing enough."

State funding crisis

Other problems looming on the horizon are the state's finances, which are facing a $738 million shortfall. The Legislature will likely be called into a special session in October to approve new state budget cuts and Rounds said lawmakers are saying that school funding could be cut by 5 percent to 7 percent. Such a cut, he said, would mean a $8.5 million hit to the district's budget, which carried over a reserve cash balance of about $7.7 million.

Rounds urged parents, teachers and others concerned about the schools to "enhance" the debate with state lawmakers.

Pumpkin Festival looking for a princess

Pumpkin Princess will be role model to other girls

The New Mexico Pumpkin Festival is looking for their 2009 Pumpkin Festival Princess. The Pumpkin Princess is an outgoing, positive fifthgrade girl who wants to be a part of a fun fall celebration and be a role model for younger girls.

The Pumpkin Princess will receive a unique prize pack including gift cards to local businesses, a pizza party for her and friends, a tiara necklace and bracelet, and, of course, the princess tiara and sash. Lexi Barra will crown this year's princess and pass on her title as Pumpkin Princess.

The Pumpkin Princess will be the official representative of the Pumpkin Festival and must be present at the Maze Kick Off Party on Thursday, Sept. 24, ride the Pumpkin Festival Float in the Whole Enchilada Parade on Saturday, Sept.26, visit the Mesilla Valley Maze booth at the Southern New Mexico State Fair, attend both days of the festival to award prizes to contest winners and come back in 2010 to crown the new Pumpkin Princess Applications can be downloaded at www.mesillavalleymaze.com/nmpumpkinfestival or are available by calling Helping Hands Event Planning at 522-1232. Applicants must also submit a photo and short essay on why they want to be the Pumpkin Princess.

The application deadline is Saturday, Sept. 12.

Council puts EPE agreement on hold

Downtown market hits critical shade crossroads

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces City Council Monday, Aug. 17, put on hold renewing the El Paso Electric franchise agreement to wait out the state Public Regulation Commission decision on whether to allow homes and buildings with solar generating units to sell power back to utilities.

Outside of that concern, the city and El Paso electric said they made great progress in changing the franchise agreement to better reflect its utility right-of-way purpose, while adding opportunities for regular discussions about adding renewable and other power generation.

Meanwhile, the city finds itself at a critical juncture with resolving the shade conflict with vendors at the Downtown Farmers & Crafts Market before it moves south along the re-opened Main Street to the other side of Las Cruces Avenue on Saturday, Sept. 5.

The original plan was to have the market also cross Griggs Avenue to the south end of the Downtown Mall where permanent shade structures were removed in anticipation of street construction to re-open Main Street. The popular twice-weekly market is moving from the north end of the Downtown Mall so that end of Main Street can be re-opened.

Another option presented at the meeting, however, would be to move the market to the city-owned parking lot off Water Street next to the El Paso Electric offices. The lot can accommodate two 80-by-100-foot tents to give yendors better shade.

With the heavily promoted move coming soon, city officials are looking at the best way this option can work. Renting the tent for a year is estimated to cost about $140,000. A benefit from moving the market to the El Paso Electric parking lot would be that it would allow work to re-open Main Street to be done simulaneously on the north and south ends of the mall, shortening the work from a three-year process to 18 months, said Assistant City Manager Robert Garza.

In other business, the council also approved vendors to furnish the new city hall, convention center and aquatics center, though some councillors objected to the bids going to out-of-town businesses. Maria Griego-Raby of the Albuquerque-based Contract Associations promised her company will still use many local subcontractors.

Searching for NM's best green chile cheeseburger

Through Sept. 30, New Mexicans can nominate and vote for their favorite green chile cheeseburger

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM
The Las Cruces Bulletin

McCOLLUM

Finally, we have something to think about that has absolutely nothing to do with unemployment, partisan politics, recession, war, health care, real estate woes or excessive corporate salaries.

Thanks to the New Mexico Department of Tourism we now have something to debate and a chance to take positive action. Earlier this month, the creative folks at the "Visit New Mexico" offices in Santa Fe announced a statewide contest, the Governor's Green Chile Cheeseburger Challenge. The purpose of this contest is to identify our state's most popular green chile cheeseburger. Currently, the department is accepting nominations and votes from residents and restaurants across the state. As I understand, voters will determine the top-20 green chile cheeseburgers. These winners will be recognized by the tourism department and will become part of the inaugural Green Chile Cheeseburger Trail. Also, the most popular burger will be the winner of the Governor's Challenge.

The contest most likely was inspired by a recent episode of Bobby Flay's Throwdown on the Food Channel where Manny's Buckhorn Tavern's green chile burger in tiny San Antonio, N.M., was preferred by the judges over Bobby Flay's offering Bobby Flay's offering.

Nominations and votes for the Governor's Challenge are now being accepted at the tourism department's website at www.newmexico.org/greenchilecheeseburger. On this site, viewers can nominate the New Mexico restaurant where they have savored their favorite green chile cheeseburger. So far, more than 60 restaurants have been nominated and are on the online ballot. Additionally, live voting will be conducted at the State Fair in Albuquerque, Sept. 11 to 27, and in Las Cruces at The Whole Enchilada Fiesta, Sept. 25 to 27. Online voting ends Sept. 30.

Readers should understand that Jaki and I are burger connoisseurs. We have been known to drive 100 miles out of our way to seek an alleged great cheeseburger. When we lived in Pennsylvania, we suffered greatly after being advised that the best burgers could be found at White Castle. (Obviously, Pennsylvanians did not understand what a great burger could be.)

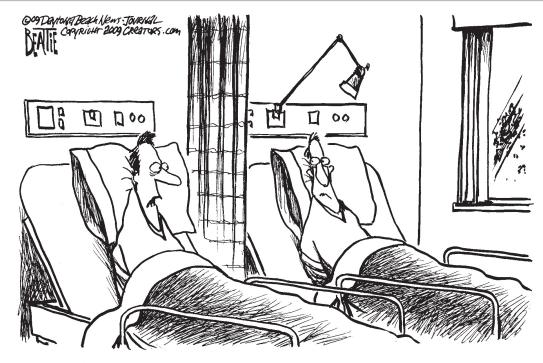

When we moved to Las Cruces, we were puzzled at the term, "green chile

When we moved to Las Cruces, we were puzzled at the term, "green chile cheeseburger." Being more familiar with "chili-burgers," we thought "chile" was more like the Texas-style "chili." We did not understand what the heck "green chile" was. We learned the difference very quickly at our first NMSU Aggie football tailgate event where we put these odd-looking "pickles" on our burgers, only to discover very quickly that these condiments were not pickles, but instead were fiery hot, roasted green chile peppers. It took a few hours and a gallon of liquids including water, Cokes, Coronas and a couple of margaritas plus a couple of dollops of sour cream to put out the fire in my mouth.

Of course, Jaki and I now have become experts in green chile cheeseburgers. Two of our preferred out-of-town burgers are found in San Antonio, N.M., at The Owl Bar and its across-the-street rival, Manny's Buckhorn Tavern. Another favorite place is the Outpost bar and grill in downtown Carrizozo. Our local favorite burger has been at the Burger Nook, complemented with crispy, fresh-cut French fries. However, Double Eagle's Peppers restaurant recent addition of green chile cheeseburgers to menus has caused us to consider their burger as our number one choice.

We encourage all Las Cruces area residents to take the time to vote online and in person for one of our local green chile cheeseburgers. Our recommendation is the Double Eagle's Peppers' giant offering that can easily feed a family of up to five people.

This is one opportunity you have to legally vote early and vote often.

"If we were as hard to kill off as these loony death panel rumors, we wouldn't need health insurance."

Coach thanks community

Our team motto this year is "Invest in Us." It is a statement that is meant to remind our student-athletes of the sacrifices that need to be made in order to achieve our goals for this coming year. This is a theme that we constantly impress upon the players.

We are deeply committed to providing the fans a successful team that they can be proud of. We have encouraged the 2009 Aggies to give of their time and participate in events and to continue being good citizens in the community where they reside, Las Cruces.

Recently, we asked the community to support us by helping us feed our players a nightly snack. You responded positively. People from all walks of life and backgrounds contributed to help our young men. Our players are extremely appreciative of the contributions you have made to our program.

We thank you for your contributions to us. At this time, we are no longer in need of any further assistance in providing snacks for our players.

Medication needed

After reading some recent articles and letters to the editor about health care reform, my only concern with government-sponsored health care is that the proposals don't go far enough.

Judging from what I read in the Bulletin and elsewhere, there is a real need for coverage that includes extensive mental health benefits, something that Congress and the administration have yet to propose.

And, how will the Bulletin reporter who

And, how will the Bulletin reporter who thought that a health care forum with panelists who all oppose the administration's efforts was non-partisan ever get a grip on reality without costly long-term counseling?

Do we really want these folks walking around without some kind of assurance that they have access to a doctor?

I'm being a little tongue-in-cheek here, of course, but I am concerned that the cacophony of disturbed and irrational voices that have been raised in opposition to a public option are drowning out the reasoned debate that a government-sponsored health care plan deserves.

Should the future of health care in America be driven by the desperate lies and misrepresentations of crazed ideologues? I think not. Citizens who want to learn the real facts about health care reform should forget the rant-

Leaders hoping for quick special session

Fix for financial shortfall will require some cuts – but where?

With a special legislative session to balance the state budget now a sure thing, the big question is who takes the hit? Does the pain get spread evenly or will it be prioritized?

With state government more than $400 million further in the hole than predicted six months ago, Gov. Bill Richardson and legislative leaders have agreed that a special session is necessary, probably in October.

The governor had hoped to avoid the session, but the shortfall is big enough and it is dangerous to use all our reserves to plug the gap. The deficit would be even worse without the federal stimulus money the state has received and that won't be available next year.

The plan is for a task force, representing the governor and legislative leaders, to agree on a proposal to be presented to a one-day special session. Some lawmakers have expressed opinions that the plan is overly optimistic, unless the proposal is extremely simple.

But considering the number of proposed solutions voiced by legislators and interest groups, the solution may not be simple.

Gov. Richardson and legislative leaders have said everything is on the table but tax increases. To that, the governor has added his desire not to furlough or lay off any state employees.

Some legislative leaders who have addressed the subject aren't willing to rule out furloughs, layoffs and a reduced number of vacation days.

At least some lawmakers are upset that the state employees union and those representing county, municipal, school and university employees have filed suit challenging the constitutionality of docking their pay 1.5 percent to make up for a similar reduction in the public employer contribution to employee retirement.

The state employees' union and a child advocacy group have suggested numerous ways the state can generate additional revenue through increased taxes on high incomes, large corporations and removal of tax exemptions and deductions given to small interest groups.

The proposals are accompanied by compelling rationale but none will get anywhere because each proposal is opposed by a strong lobbying corps that would extend a legislative session much longer than a day.

That means sacred cows such as education may take a hit. Twice Senate Majority Leader Tim Jennings, D-Roswell has written to school superintendents and university presidents warning them education must be willing to share the pain.

Public schools comprise roughly 50 percent of the state budget. Colleges and universities add another 10 percent. So a small hit on them would raise significant Educators argue that they already took a hit during the regular legislative session early this year. Federal stimulus funds are the only thing that got them close to last year's support level. They wonder if Jennings has sent warning letters to other departments of state government.

Schools are getting some editorial and community support around the state contending that they should be the last place to cut. What other recipient of state JAY MILLER Inside the Capitol funds holds bake sales and collects box tops to make ends meet?

The most popular place to cut seems to be in areas controlled by the governor. Lawmakers argue that without the necessity of legislative mandate, Richardson could be reducing state agency spending, tightening his hiring freeze and cracking down on double-dippers who retire and then return to state government.

And the sorest point of all is the governor's hiring of hundreds of non-essential employees outside the state personnel system. The hiring freeze hasn't reduced those numbers at all.

The task force that will develop the plan to be presented to the one-day session is expected to work behind closed doors. Since it isn't a formal body, openmeeting laws may not apply.

So, when, during a one-day session, is there time for any public input into the final decisions? Lobbyists will be the only ones finding anyone's ear.

Reform needed

Why do people yell, scream, cry and disrupt meetings designed to discuss ideas?

They do it because they lack the language and intellectual skills to formulate a cogent question or discussion point. Rather than sparking a personal fire of curiosity to seek the truth by reading the pro-posed bill, or having civil discussion or debate, they offer themselves up as empty vessels to be filled someone else's ideas and propaganda.

They do it because their convictions have been sacrificed on the slippery slope of external motivations, thereby they live in fear which is expressed in incivility.

They do it because they fear "socialized medicine" yet would not give up their Medicare - single payer/ socialized medicine for seniors – or Social Security.

If your father who died at 90, married four different women and lived with each for more than 10 years, upon his death each of the four women would be eligible for survivor benefits on his Social Security account regardless of whether each did or did not contribute to the Social Security system. Socialism? Not!

They do it because they fantasize about the loss of 'their" America governed by white men from the elite upper class and fear the "melting pot" that we espouse to believe in.

Never have the voices of sane people been more important.

I have taken care of business. My Mother and I will be fine regardless of which way the health care debate goes. However, I firmly believe that some reform is necessary. I do not begrudge people that have less than us to also have good health care and better lives.

I have no doubt you will infer from that statement that we are socialists. Whatever.

$6K for what?

I'm one of those many Americans who supposedly has health insurance. I'm counted as having it because I pay nearly $6,000 a year for my wife and myself to be insured by a major health insurance company in New Mexico.

For that premium each of us is covered for $400 in basic doctor bills – a year. That doesn't cover any prescriptions, any specialists (for example, a dermatologist), or any emergency room visits. Those things aren't covered. For all those things - things that most people assume are part of health insurance – we pay everything – 100 percent. Oh, yes, if I spend $5,000 out-of-pocket (our deductibles, per person), then the insurance kicks in, paying 80 percent. Whoop-de-doo – am I thankful or what? I get to pay $16,000 before the "insurance" covers anything over $800.

restricted and controlled, not by the government - if it weren't for the govern-ment, it would be even more restricted and controlled – but by the whims of an insurance company, one of our capitalist entities whose products are the result of competition.

What a joke! How close to nothing can you get? All for a mere $6,000 a year. It may be good capitalism they get money and I get nothing – but it's awful health care insurance.

Frankly, I can't wait to reach the age for Medicare. I crave a government-sponsored, single-payer plan. Please, please, please, get me something other than what exists now.

I would gladly pay the government my $6,000 in added taxes or premiums to get something approaching real health insurance.

Dońa Ana

I just read the story of state Sen. Mary Jane Garcia's work at restoring Doña Ana in the Las Cruces Bulletin and wanted to take a minute to thank her for her efforts to hold onto our past here in New Mexico.

I am so thankful to those people that feel the necessity to hold onto and to restore our wonderful

New Mexico history and buildings, trails and heroes of the past. Thanks to them for all that they do and continue to do.

I have been here in Las Cruces for about 15 years ministering to Agape Christian Church on the west side of town. Socorro, in the middle valley, is my home.

Thanks to the Las Cruces Bulletin for being the most readable and enjoyable paper in the whole area. As other newspapers in the world are declining and going broke, the Bulletin just keeps expanding. One of the reasons, is their commitment to the facts, and to our history. HERB PINNEY

Government rooting for our deaths New government order doesn't value longevity

The forces of evil

By MICHAEL SWICKARD For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Americans are, metaphorically, waxing deck furniture on the Titanic unaware they are sinking. Health care reform details are on everyone's mind while the change in philosophy that will have a large impact upon them and their families remains unexamined and unchallenged.

Obscured in the dust of political debate are philosophic changes in the government's role in health care that will leave no American untouched. Americans are distracted by the illusionist waving one hand while the other does the nefarious work.

When I was born in 1950, health care was predicated on a long-standing social contract with our government where its role was to enhance American lives in both longevity and quality. Through research and development, governmentenabled medical advances were greeted enthusiastically by Americans.

My cardiologist started his practice in the early 1970s when it was uncommon for heart patients to live robustly past 70. With the advent of new research-developed procedures and drugs, his patients now live actively past 80. This increase in American longevity has been a source of pride up until now, but is at the core of our health care reform debate.

There were worldwide celebrations when polio was defeated. Medical researchers have gotten on top of smallpox, measles and rubella, to name a few. Many people are alive who would not be without modern medicine. What appears as a positive is a negative outcome in the new health care philosophy.

Researchers are working toward eradicating cancer and heart disease. Today's core debate wonders if the society should be curing cancer or is it a natural barrier to long life carrying attractive resource outcomes for our

In the folderol of political debate, the philosophic divide notes the outcome of curing cancer and heart disease is people live longer. Older people disproportionally get cancer and heart disease and, therefore, with a cure will live longer causing the government to pay Social Security and other medical costs longer. That is the rub.

The reform debate is not about saving money for consumers of health care, this is about changing how the government uses it resources based upon a radical change of philosophy. That new philosophy is social justice, which does not take from the young to give to the old. The philosophy of social contract supporting the elderly conflicts with the social justice philosophy, which in effect says to oldsters, you already got yours; we cannot expend resources on the old that could help the young. It is the core of health care decisions in England.

Adopting a social justice philosophy changes the role of government as to who gets government resources.

This is the heart of contention in social justice countries where there are unreasonable delays or outright prohibition of resources for people who are considered too old or of not enough use to the society as a whole.

As a cancer survivor I see the effect of my cancer on the current health care system. Not good. But the new yardstick will reason keeping me alive is good money after bad. I might reacquire cancer, thereby wasting money that could go to young people.

Further, the new government order views my survival of cancer differently than the old government, which was thrilled I survived. The new order says, "Shuckins, if he had died we would not owe him Social Security."

Those people who are busy politically debating health care reform act as if the major issue is which political party wins this battle. They do not see what is in the belly of the beast. The forces of evil are enabled by the media and the public expending their energy on unproductive activities like debating the exact words in the legislation.

We do not need to debate health care details once it is decided to no longer push for longevity and quality of life for older Americans. The health care details do not matter when the government roots for your death.

Assaulted by distasteful rants

My wife discovered your publication shortly after we moved to Las Cruces a little over a year ago, and we both used to enjoy reading The Bulletin.

But I truly don't understand why a usually well-balanced community newspaper continues to publish the extreme right wing views of Michael Swickard. We find him to be out of touch with what we value, if not in direct conflict with most of your content, and feel he should not be a part of your otherwise fine paper, or any quality

So we will no longer be reading The Bulletin. The dread of opening another edition and having to be assaulted by this person's distasteful rants has outweighed the pleasure we once had reading your paper.

The mother of invention

Those of you who watch television appreciate the increasing presence of "hard-sell, direct-buy" commercials on the cable and satellite networks. The pitch involves an inventive but cheaply produced product such as squeegees, stick-on light bulbs, sunglasses, vegetable choppers, political promises and collision-chasing lawyers.

"Only $19.95! It will peel grapes, oranges, window trim, excess hair, heel scurf and tar off sidewalks ... etc, etc, etc!"

The ad companies are always on the lookout for new inventions they can market for millions. On a trip to Cedarville a while back, Rachael and James told me a story and I immediately recognized its mass-market advertising potential.

It seems Uncle Jack had diagnosed bilateral pink eye in one of his Black Angus bulls. (Note: before you say anything, I observed that I had rarely seen pink eye in black bulls, but Rachael stuck to her guns so I didn't quibble.) Uncle Jack decided to treat it with a big shot of LA 200. The bull was difficult to push, much less get into the corral. So, Uncle Jack figgered they could drive up next to him and administer the dose freehand. They tried, but the bull was too skittish.

What to do? What to do? Just as fear is the father of fence chargers and whacking your thumb is the stepfather of cussing, so is necessity the mother of invention.

Uncle Jack set about constructing the Plastic Syringe Injection Extender or PSIE. He used a 35
cc plastic disposable syringe, 4 feet of 1 and 1/4-inch PVC pipe, 4-feet 6-inches of 1-inch PVC pipe, and duct tape. He taped the big PVC to the syringe, then inserted the 1-inch PVC inside the larger to act as a plunger. Voila!

He practiced on apples, Styrofoam, a roasted chicken, an old car seat and his late grandfather's prosthesis. (Note: You can almost see the carnival barker demonstrating this PSIE on sliced cantaloupe or an anesthetized polar bear.)

For the maiden run, they took the pickup. Rachael was driving and James was coaching as Uncle Jack leaned out of the pickup bed shouting directions

"Closer! Too fast! Drop back! Hard right! Go now!" With the coolness of Captain Ahab harpooning a white whale, Jack drove home his PSIE javelin.

With the quickness of a maddened rhino, the blind bull pivoted perpendicular to the pickup, tore off the side mirror and jerked Uncle Jack overboard! Epilogue: "Gosh," I asked James, "Was the mirror the only thing he broke?"

'No," said James, "but that was the one we fixed!"

Lighting ordinance misunderstood

By JOHN GILKISON

For the Las Cruces Bulletin

While the article in the Aug. 7, Bulletin covered most of the basics of the new outdoor lighting ordinance issues, as the chairman of the committee that wrote the original Outdoor Lighting Ordinance (OLO)in 1999, I felt some basic concepts needed explanation.

The first ordinance passed in August 2000 was essentially a full-cut-off ordinance. Full-cut-off (FCO) lighting fixtures limit the emission of light to below the horizontal plane and only allow a small percentage of the light to be emitted in the glare zone between the horizontal plane and 10 degrees below that plane. This keeps light out of the sky and the glare zone except for light that is reflected off of the ground, which little can be done about.

Limits on the amount of light that could be used, known as a foot candle (fc) cap, were introduced because at that time we were seeing gas station/convenience stores being built with up to 100 fc or more in an attempt to attract customers with brighter and brighter lighting. Such a lighting war not only endangers the public safety by literally blinding people with light, but it also increases ground reflectance, which puts more light into the sky.

Because this was controversial even in 2000, a compromise limit of 70 fc was finally picked over the originally proposed limit of 50 fc in our draft ordinance. The lower limit for requiring FCO lighting fixtures was set at 1,800 lumens of light output which is about the equivalence of a 100-watt incandescent light bulb's output. This was chosen because it covers all high intensity discharge (HID) lamps.

Furthermore, a 10-year grandfathering clause was inserted into the ordinance to give businesses a target date to make their outdoor lighting compliant. Without such a date a business could always claim that their outdoor lighting existed before the ordinance was passed, and no one could prove otherwise. Since HID lighting generally has a projected fixture life of only 30 years, this was felt to be a reasonable time period.

The point of a grandfathering clause is to stop entities from claiming their lighting is prior to the ordinance in ad finitum. For that reason, it should be kept as part of any new ordinance that is passed by the city.

One of the biggest complaints we have seen is the fc cap, which is generally misunderstood or sometimes willfully misunderstood. People who consider the lighting in their home to be perfectly adequate for their kitchen – lets say at 30 fc – will complain if the canopy gas pump lighting at their place of business is limited to 70 fc in the existing ordinance or to 50 fc under the new proposed ordinance. They don't seem to know or understand that 30 fc in their home is perfectly adequate for either application.

The problem is most people don't go around with a fc meter, they just rely on their eyes and their brain to make judgments about lighting, which they are illequipped to do.

Our eyes are completely unreliable because they are so adaptable as far as lighting is concerned. Our eyes adapt to the brightest lights in a scene. All lighting close by that is not as bright will seem dimmer.

This is why no one can win a brighter-lighting war.
We can only lose with obtrusive and obnoxious glare from exceptionally bad lighting practices.

Any new outdoor lighting ordinance passed by the city needs to stick to fundamentally sound outdoor lighting principles. It needs to remain a FCO ordinance even if that is extended partially to residential lighting in the form of a 900 fc cap.

Home owners not wanting to purchase FCO fixtures can still use their non-cut-off fixtures, they just can't use bulbs larger then 60 watts incandescent or the equivalent. The 65 degree point-down rule for flood lighting should be kept, and a statement that such fixtures must be made the equivalent of a FCO fixture by shields if they are not pointed down to the correct angle included.

Just because the city is loath to enforce a rule, doesn't mean it should be gotten rid of, or that it is not correct. In this instance, the point-down rule has been completely misunderstood. The language calling for full-cut-off lighting should not be tampered with. The term has a specific meaning in the category of fixture types recognized by the Illuminating Engineers of North America (IESNA), that the words fully shielded do not.

Any traveler coming from a city like Deming, N.M., for example, with no outdoor lighting regulations, would find the night time vistas of Las Cruces remarkable in comparison. Our city streets are safer with less glare, obtrusive lighting and astronomy is being protected by mostly eliminating up-light. Such up light formerly represented wasted electricity costing over Las Cruces businesses over one quarter of a million dollars a year.

Arguing for your right to install excessive, unshielded lighting at night at your place of business simply makes no rational sense. What business model is it that says losing money to outdoor lighting, that never even strikes your property is justifiable? This is not good business sense, it is not even good capitalism.

All the Las Cruces outdoor lighting ordinance is designed to do is help people make rational decisions as if they were operating in their own enlightened self interest or at least understood that self interest. Like the electrical code or the plumbing code, not everyone understands every part of the code, nor do they need to for it work for the benefit of us all.

Court to hear arguments over century-old dispute

By Marvin Tessneer

District Judge Jerald A. Valentine will conduct a hearing on Wednesday, Aug. 26, in Third Judicial District Court to hear arguments on a water dispute that started more than a century ago.

Valentine will hear arguments by Scott Boyd who is taking up the charge launched by his great-grandfather Dr. Nathan Boyd that the United States government is not protecting irrigation farmers' water rights. He is arguing that the government had failed to comply with its own laws when it took over the administration of water in the Lower Rio Grande.

Boyd, who lives in Phoenix, said that his great-grandfather constructed the Leasburg Dam and had started to divert the Rio Grande into a channel to construct the Elephant Butte Dam. He started the project with the Rio Grande Dam and Irrigation Co., a group of community ditch owners that wanted to develop a large irrigation system, Boyd said.

Boyd is being supported by a new local organization, the Mesilla Valley Council of Community Acequias.

Boyd and the MVCCA are asking the court to adjudicate the pre-1906 water rights that had been granted under the Guadalupe-Hidalgo Treaty of 1848, which had ended the war with Mexico. Before 1906, water rights had been protected under the New Mexico Territory community ditch laws.

"The farmers claim that the government didn't comply with the Reclamation Act of 1902 that had recognized the early Mesilla Valley community ditches," Boyd said. "The government just took over the administration of water (but) the farmers had paid for the Elephant Butte Dam."

The government contended that the Rio Grande was a river that could be navigated by ships, and therefore came under the jurisdiction of the U.S. War Department. The government used that to shut down the dam and irrigation company project,

"When the United States took over the administration of water, it made decisions based on its own rules, and it favored Texas over New Mexico," MVCCA President Rebecca Miller said. "Water rights belong to the farmers, but we have lost control. We believe in family farming here in the valley and we're trying to save it."

MVCCA member Sammy Singh Jr. charged that during the years of Bureau of Reclamation control, the EBID has lost one-third of its normal water allocation. His group wants to know why the water was lost and where it went, he said.

Proposed re-zone concerns Holman Road residents

Apartment complex sought on parcel facing two schools

By Todd G. Dickson

Residents living along Holman Road opposed to a proposed apartment complex plan to be present at a Planning and Zoning meeting Tuesday, Aug. 25, when a zone variance request comes before the commission.

The 60-unit two-story apartment complex with a day care center would be located on a 5-acre parcel across from Sunrise Elementary School, which is adjacent to Cesar Chavez Elementary School.

Both schools are at capacity with about 600 students each, said area resident Kate Schultz. Residents are also worried about the additional traffic such a complex would bring to the road, which gets extremely crowded at the start and end of each school day.

But even more important to residents opposing the zone change is that many of them moved to the area because it was zoned for single-family homes away from the city.

"I could have chosen to build a house on Missouri (Avenue) if this is what I wanted," said Leaping Lizard Loop resident Michele Kratzer about the proposed apartments at a public hearing Wednesday, Aug. 19. "They bought it as R1, they should develop it as R1."

Kratzer was one of nearly 70 residents who showed up to the second public hearing on the zone change and the "they" of her statement is Johnny D. and Mary Helen B. Tapia. Representing the couple at the hearing was Greg D. Byres of Summit Engineering.

Byres asked the residents if they would be opposed to the lot being developed into homes and none raised their

That's the crux of the objections by surrounding neighbors to the apartment complex.

In a letter to the city, Douglas Ramsey said he and his wife moved to the area for its proximity to U.S. Highway 70, the great views of the Organ Mountains and desert surrounding and that it was a quiet residential neighborhood.

"Our neighborhood consists of single-family residences that are currently mostly owner-occupied," he wrote. "After having lived outside any city limits during our home ownership in Anthony, (N.M.,) I am a supporter of the stability that properly enforced zoning provides. Many of my neighbors were also drawn by this same stability. The above-mentioned request for zone change injects a level of instability that I do not support.

Many of the opposing residents fear that allowing the apartment complex would open the door to developing several lots along nearby Peach Tree Hills Road that intersects Holman to the north. "We could be surrounded by apartments," Schultz said.

The "elephant in the room," Schultz said, is that single family homes are not selling well lately, but apartments are. While she said she understands the economic pressure to develop the lot into an apartment complex, it will hurt the existing home values.

The Planning and Zoning meeting will be held at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25, at City Hall.

Stars-N-Parks programs

The National Public Observatory (NPO) will hold three of its popular Stars-N-Parks astronomy programs in area state parks in August and September, allowing attendees to view highlights of the late-summer sky such as the Big Dipper, Sagittarius, Scorpius and Jupiter in a dark sky setting.

pius and Jupiter in a dark sky setting. Stars-N-Parks programs will be held at Leasburg Dam State Park and the City of Rocks State Park at 8:45 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22. The programs begin with a nightsky tour lead by a presenter, and continue with the observation of the planet Jupiter and deep sky objects through a telescope. A third program will be held at the City of Rocks State Park at 8:20 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 12.

Attendees should arrive at the parks before sunset so they can become familiar with their surroundings before nightfall. This is also an excellent time for informal instruction and a chance to get acquainted with other participants.

Visitors must pay the $5 day-use fee at the gate when arriving at the park or they may purchase a State Park Annual Day Use pass at any state park or online at www.nmparks.com. The $40 passes are good for one year from date of purchase and can be transferred to another vehicle.

The NPO is a nonprofit membership organization that sponsors the Stars-N-Parks programs. Donations can be made at the program and help pay the expenses of the presenters.

Charter school hearings

The New Mexico Public Education Commission has scheduled a public hearing at 1 p.m. Monday, Aug. 24, at Milton Hall, Room 171, on the New Mexico State University campus to gain input into the charter school applications for Organ Mountain Community Charter School (OMCCS) and the Senator Dennis Chavez Academy.

OMCCS will be a tuition-free elementary school for students in kindergarten through fifth grade for children in Las Cruces and the surrounding area.

During the public hearings, members of the PEC will listen to presentations from the charter schools. Following the presentations, local school district representatives and members of the public will have an opportunity to speak for or against the proposed schools. The PEC will then have an opportunity to question the applicants on their charter application.

Public input about the charter school applications may also be submitted in writing to the PEC by sending letters or emails to New Mexico Public Education Commission, c/o Beverly Friedman, NMPED PIO & PEC Liaison, 300 Don Gaspar, Santa Fe, NM 87501 or Bev. Friedman@state.nm.us The deadline for submitting public input is 5 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 1.

PEC members will vote to authorize or deny the applications at their next PEC meeting scheduled for Sept. 10 and 11, in Mabry Hall in the Jerry Apodaca Education Building, 300 Don Gaspar, in Santa Fe. Each community public input hearing is scheduled for approximately 60 to 90 minutes.

Any questions about the hearings can be directed to the New Mexico Public Education Department's Charter School Bureau at 505-222-4762.

Water safety courses

The City of Las Cruces will hold a Water Safety Instructor class Tuesday, Oct. 13, to Thursday, Oct. 29, at Frenger Pool. Signsup for the class will begin at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 24, at the Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave.

The class will be from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays Cost is $185 per person, which includes all materials and books. Diez y Seis in Mesilla

The Town of Mesilla will host its annual Diez y Seis de Septiembre celebration from noon to 10 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 12, and from noon to 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 13. The holiday commemorates Mexican Independence Day.

Mesilla's annual celebration kicks off with a parade at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 12. along Avenida de Mesilla. The parade route begins at Four Points Gin, located at the corner of Avenida de Mesilla and Union Avenue, and the route ends at the Mesilla Town Hall parking lot just north of San Andres High School. The parade will feature floats, equestrian units, marching bands, color guards, spirit squads, antique vehicles, law enforcement vehicles, fire trucks and other groups. The deadline for parade entries is Tuesday, Sept. 1.

Opening ceremonies for the fiesta are at noon Saturday, Sept. 12, on the plaza. The colors will be presented by the Santa Teresa High School Navy JROTC. Sylvia and Ruben Corona will perform the national American and Mexican national anthems. Consul General Roberto Rodríguez Hernández from the Mexican Consulate in El Paso will take part in the opening ceremonies.

Banda de Guerra y Escolta, Cobach Plantel # 7 de Ciudad Juárez – a military marching band – will participate in opening ceremonies, as well as the parade.

Emily Guerra will serve as the master of ceremonies. Entertainment on Saturday includes Ballet Folklorico Tierra del Encanto, Mariachi Real de Chihuahua, Mariachi Espuelas de Plata, Mariachi Espuelas de Cobre, Las Perlitas del Pueblo and Lucilene de Geus and Paco Antonio Flamenco dance groups. The evening will conclude with the variety band Dulce from 6 to 10 p.m.

Sunday's entertainment includes Ballet Folklorico Tierra del Encanto, Mariachi Azcatitlan, Mariachi Manada de Lobos and Ballet Folklorico Diamantes del Valle. The fiesta will wrap up Sunday with Krucez band from 4 to 7 p.m.

Diez y Seis de Septiembre, the 16th of September, marks the launch of Mexico's struggle for independence from Spain. On Sept. 16, 1810, Miguel Hidalgo de Costilla led the first large revolutionary forces against the Spaniards. The holiday is similar to the Fourth of July in the United States.

About 30 vendor booths will surround the plaza offering a variety of products including art, crafts, games, drinks and food. There will also be a greased pole climb, sponsored by Andele Restaurant in Old Mesilla, and piñatas for kids. Attendees may bring folding chairs for their convenience. Alcohol, smoking and pets are not allowed on the plaza.

Fall convocation honors faculty members

New Mexico State University kicked off a new semester with its fall 2009 convocation ceremony, a semi-annual event where the university honors some of its top faculty members.

Yu-Feng "Winnie" Lee and Manoj Shukla were awarded the Patricia Christmore Teaching Award. The award recognizes and rewards superb junior tenure-track faculty members for excellence in teaching.

Lee, an assistant professor of economics and international business, consistently receives excellent teaching evaluations and high rankings from her students. She previously received the Outstanding Undergraduate Teaching Award from the College of Business.

Shukla, an assistant professor in the plant and environmental sciences department, has helped revive the soil physics program, which now attracts students from different programs of study.

The University Research Council Early Career Award was given to Eric Butcher, Jeremy Smith and Meghan Starbuck.

Butcher is an associate professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering and is the inaugural holder of the Dwight and Aubrey Chapman Endowed Professorship. Since coming to NMSU, he has been a principle or co-principle investigator on grants from NASA, the Air Force, Los Alamos National Laboratories, the U.S. Department of Education and other agencies.

Smith is an assistant professor in the chemistry and biochemistry department. His research focuses on the design, synthesis and reactivity of transition metal complexes as chemical models for important biological and industrial transformations.

Starbuck is an assistant professor in the Department of Economics and International Business. Currently, some of her projects focus on fossil fuels, water and economic development in New Mexico. She also is working with Luz-Elena Mimbela from NMSU's Institute for Energy and the Environment to create a dynamic model of an algae-based biofuel in New Mexico.

The University Research Council Distinguished Career Award was presented to Katherine Giles, the director of the Institute of Tectonic Studies. As director of the institute, Giles funds and performs research with a focus on salt tectonics in the U.S. Mexico and Australia.

the U.S., Mexico and Australia.

NMSU's Outcomes Assessment II committee, which focuses on student life, awarded the Outstanding Outcomes Assessment Award to the NMSU Library. The NMSU Library has consistently performed assessments that focus on the needs of students and faculty.

J. Sean McCleneghan and Kathryn Fuller were awarded the Excellence in Academic Advising Award.

McCleneghan, a professor in the Department of Journalism and Mass Communications, has taught at NMSU since 1982, and served as department head for 12 years from 1982 to 1994. His innovative teaching, research productivity and contributions to public relations higher education have won him numerous awards.

Fuller began her career at NMSU in 2000. Currently, she is the admissions and records coordinator for NMSU Alamogordo. She says she appreciates the life-changing value of higher education, and is thankful for the opportunity to serve students and help them achieve their dreams.

Crime Stoppers: Missing woman

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that helps find a 21-year-old woman who has been missing since 2004.

Crystal Gomez was last seen five years ago, in August 2004, when she was only 16.

Gomez had a history of being a runaway and, on more than one occasion, left her home on the 400 block of Augustus Road in Las Cruces.

On one of those occasions prior to August 2004, Gomez was found on the streets in Orange County, Calif., and was returned to Las Cruces. On another occasion, Gomez ran away to live with friends in El Paso, Texas. Her family believes Gomez may have returned to California or possibly is in Albuquerque, N.M.

Gomez, at the age of 16, was 5-feet-8-inches tall and weighed approximately 150 pounds. She has brown hair and brown eyes.

Gomez was last seen five years ago.

If you have any information regarding the whereabouts of 21-year-old Crystal Gomez, you are asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 526-8000 or outside the Las Cruces area at 800-897-2746.

The Crime Stoppers number is operational 24 hours a day and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Kids turn 'warriors' at National Guard camp

How do you ensure 28 kids from the greater Las Cruces area have fun, stay safe and learn basic Army values?

Why, invite them to a Junior Warrior Camp run by the New Mexico Army National Guard, that's how.

This Saturday, Aug. 16, that's exactly what happened when children of service members from as far away as Alamogordo and Silver City came to participate in the First Annual Junior Warrior Campheld at the National Guard Armory in Las Cruces.

Hosted by the soldiers of the 1-200 Infantry Battalion and supported by many other agencies, the kids who joined said they had a blast.

Campers were able to try their hand at rock wall climbing, going for a cross country drive in a Humvee, marching with Army drill ceremonies and obstacle course competition. Campers even had a chance to climb onto an OH-58 Kiowa Army helicopter.

The day concluded with an awards ceremony, followed by a sumptuous barbecue dinner for the campers, their families and all the volunteers who helped make the event a tremendous success

Skeet event slated

The Picacho Gun Club and the Bulls Eye 4-H Club are sponsoring a skeet-shooting competition beginning at 9 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 23, at the Butterfield Trail Shooting Range west of Las Cruces.

Proceeds from entry fees will go toward buying new trap and skeet machines for the range.

"This is a great opportunity for people to come out to the range to shoot or observe some friendly competition while money is raised for a good local cause," Garrison said

A variety of shot situations will be available for the event, including incoming, outgoing and overhead targets. Rabbit, single and pair competitions will be featured.

Cost is $30 for 50 clay pigeons, with additional rounds priced at $15.

The Butterfield Trail Shooting Range is located off of Interstate 10 west of Las Cruces.

"He hasn't blown up yet," she said. Granted, that was almost two weeks ago. By now, Jordan has probably fallen off the wagon. Altermatt, New Mexico State's 6-foot-2 senior outside hitter, has been here long enough to realize that her coach is short on tolerance. I'm guessing that he seldom aims his wrath at her. Both Altermatt and teammate Kelli Goodan were recently picked for the all-WAC preseason team by the league's coaches. They don't throw rewards like that around recklessly.

Both will lead the Ags against the Alumni team at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 22, in the Pan American Center.

Before Jordan ordered a recent afternoon practice, Altermatt sat down and talked about the taxing, two-a-day workouts the team endured through Wednesday, Aug. 19.

"I'm tired," she said. "I reported to the training room at 7 a.m. each day, got rubbed down and then we practiced from 8 to 11. Afternoon practices usually went from 3 to 5 p.m.

It's tough on the body."

Jordan, she said, is working his young squad overtime, conducting teaching sessions, mostly. Seven freshmen and four sophomores took the floor for NMSU's first practice Aug. 8. "We have a lot of new faces," Altermatt said.

"Last year we didn't have as many freshmen. We were pretty much a veteran team. We have a lot to cover before the season opens. I think once we all get connected we'll be OK. We have depth. I think we can carry 21 players this season. Last year we carried 18. And we're bigger. Taller than at anytime I can remember.

Bulldawgs must reload for '09

State champions will try for repeat

By Craig Massey

It may be a new football season, but carryover from last year's state championship run could be a real and positive thing for the Las Cruces High School Bulldawgs. The returning players who were reserves got a lot of valuable playing experience last season because so many of the Bulldawgs' wins were lopsided. Also, those returning players are used to winning, carry-ing with them a confidence that is born out of success. They've seen – up close – the rewards of hard work.

The Bulldawgs begin defending their title on Thursday, Aug. 27, with a game at El Dorado High School in El Paso.

Good chemistry

LCHS Coach Jim Miller knows something about defending a state title. The Bulldawgs have won four championships during his time there, including back-to-back wins in 1999 and 2000.

"Having a state championship under your belt helps," said Miller. "These guys have a good work ethic. And a lot of them played last year so they got some good experience. They have good chemistry and they're working really hard.

The quarterback is always the key, especially in Miller's spread offense. Jeremy Buurma, the backup last year to all-star Dante Caro, takes over the reins of the Bulldawg attack.

"We won't have to change too much with him in there," Miller said of the 6-foot-1, 175-pound junior. "He's not as fluid a runner as Dante was, but he throws the ball well and has good vision. He's been on the varsity since he was a While Caro has taken his game to the University of New Mexico, LCHS also will have to replace another all-star who signed a Division I scholarship. While running back James Hall Jr. joins the New Mexico State Aggies, there are four players who will be vying for playing time in his old position.

Miller said the Bulldawgs will probably employ a "running back by committee" approach. Competing for carries will be seniors Dante Ogas and Richard Duran, junior Daniel Martinez and sophomore Xavier Hall, the younger

That's not good news for their opponents.

The Trojans, annual contenders for the Class 5-A state championship, finished with a 9-3 record last year after winning state titles in 2005, 2006 and 2007. Mayfield returns its starting quarterback and several other key players who gained experience last year.

Mayfield opens the season at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 27, with a home game against El Paso Chapin at the Field of Dreams.

Potential on offense

"We have more depth than last year, more speed on offense than last year and we have pretty good size,' Bradley said. "We have the potential to be a pretty good team. We're right on the verge. We could go either way."

Coaches are always more optimistic when they return a quarterback that has talent and fully understands what they want. Austin Hooker was the starter for the junior varsity as a freshman and sophomore and started for the varsity last season as a

"He has a good head on his shoulders," Bradley said of the 5-foot-11, 165-pounder. "He did a good job last year for a junior quarterback. His arm strength has improved and he can run the ball, too. He is fast and pretty tough. He is everything we want in a quarterback."

Hooker's backup is Steven Avalos, a young player the coaches are excited about.

The Trojans' base offense is the wishbone, but when they shift to more of a spread formation, they move one of their running backs into a slot position.

From one school to another

Warner finds home at NMSU

By John Keith

Branden Warner's traveling circus began at Benjamin E. Mays High School in Atlanta, Ga.

From there, he attended Tusculum College, a Division II school in Gainesville, Tenn., then played football for two seasons at Compton, California College. His journey ended at New Mexico State University shortly before fall football practice began Aug. 5. Late, in other words.

There was an "almost" included in Warner's marathon travels. A gifted defensive tackle, he came within a whisker of playing at UCLA. Until, that is, DeWayne Walker left as defensive coordinator for the Bruins to become head coach at NMSU. Walker had recruited Warner at UCLA.

After short deliberation, Warner decided to follow the Aggies' coach to Las Cruces. $\,$

"Coach Walker is the reason I came here," Warner confirmed. "It was a last minute decision. I'm' still trying to catch up on everything."

The Aggies' junior tackle arrived on campus with no clue about NMSU's football program. He missed last spring's workouts and three months of summer conditioning.

Walker said that Warner, at 6-foot-2, 285 pounds, "definitely figures into our plans this year. He's coming along slow. He's learning new techniques and that takes time. He'll be a factor in our defense. He's our quickest and fastest defensive lineman.

"He needs to learn to get down and take a lower pad level when he's playing pass defense. He's a little better against the run."

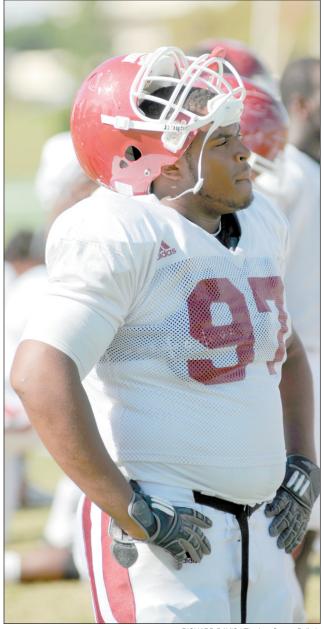

Warner likes NMSU.

"I think we'll have a good team," he said. "The guys listen to the coaches. I like that. At some places I've played, the players haven't paid that much attention to what the coaches told them.

"I like the coaching staff here. They've all been where we're trying to get to."

Since practice opened, the Aggies have often worked in 100-degree heat, alternating two-a-days with one-a-day workouts. Warner said the heat has not affected him. He played high school football in hot, humid Atlanta,. This is dry heat out here," he said. "It's not nearly as bad. Just burns your skin a little here."

Two-a-day workouts are over. When NMSU's fall classes began Thursday, Aug. 20, the team cut to one practice daily, usually working from 3 to 5 p.m. The 2009 season officially begins with a WAC home opener against Idaho on Sept. 5.

Mine That Bird, winner of the 2009 Kentucky Derby May 2, will lead the post parade for the Grade 1, $2 million All American Futurity, the world's most celebrated quarter horse race, on Labor Day, Sept. 7, at Ruidoso Downs.

'New Mexico is our home and everybody in New Mexico has supported said Mark Allen, co-owner of Mine That Bird. "The people deserve to see him and we're excited about being able to parade him for the All American." He teasingly added, "This may be as close as I get to an All American win," although in reality, his quarter horses have been very successful at Ruidoso Downs. Time For A Cigar and Shaboomator swept the top-two spots in the Grade 1, $308,000 Ruidoso Derby June 6; then finished second and third, respectively, in the Grade 1, $480,000 Rainbow Derby July 18.

Mine That Bird's owners also plan an event at Allen's Double Eagle Ranch in Roswell, N.M., so fans can view the gelding.

"The support we have received has been unbelievable, even two months after the Kentucky Derby," said co-owner Dr. Leonard Blach. "There are people still stopping us and congratulating us.

In 1983, when Blach managed and was the resident veterinarian at Buena Suerte Ranch in Roswell, he brought the then 30-year-old old Go Man Go from that ranch to Ruidoso Downs and led him in front of the crowd before the All American Futurity. Go Man Go was a three-time world champion in the 1950s and became a leading quarter horse sire.

"Lincoln County offers a multitude of things to see and do," said Michael Cerletti, Secretary of the New Mexico Tourism Department. "The addition of Mine That Bird to the All American Futurity festivities is just one more reason to spend your Labor Day weekend in this great little corner of New Mexico."

After a few days stay in New Mexico, Mine That Bird will ship to Southern California with trainer Chip Woolley Jr. to prepare for the Grade 1, $5 million Breeders Cup Classic Nov. 7 during the Oak Tree meeting at Santa Anita Park.

"We're very thankful that Mine That Bird is coming to Ruidoso Downs,' said R.D Hubbard, co-owner of Ruidoso Downs. "He has done so much to boost the excitement about racing in New Mexico with his Kentucky Derby win. Mark Allen and Leonard Blach are to be commended for showing how much they appreciate New Mexico and New Mexico racing. It's an historic addition to the All American weekend.'

NMSU attacked early and freshman forward Veronica Subu scored from the right side on an assist from freshman forward Vanessa Thomas. The Aggies took a 1-0 lead four minutes into the match.

In the second period, freshman midfielder Vanessa Novella gave the Aggies a 2-0 advantage with an unassisted goal. Junior midfielder Stephanie Devisser scored the lone Cowgirl goal at the 42:51 mark.

The Aggies concluded the preseason with a 9-0 win over University of the Southwest on Tuesday, Aug. 18. NMSU jumped to an early 2-0 lead within the first 10 minutes with goals from freshmen forwards Lauren Cope and Crystal Burns. Cope scored her second goal of the match at the 28:57 mark. Conner is a special guy

He's the team's unofficial coach on the playing field

More than once I have heard coaches refer to one of their players as their "coach on the field." More often than not, it is a player who can assimilate everything at once, adjust and react in an

I heard football head coach DeWayne Walker use the term in referring to his "Mike" or middle linebacker Ross Conner.

He is a local, played for the championship caliber Mayfield Trojans earlier in this decade and has his game plan for next year ready to go. Conner is an affable young man and comes from a family with a good sense of humor. His pop, Tom, runs Las Cruces Radiator on Picacho Avenue and features clever homilies on his marquee as well as a Santa Claus and other figures made from old auto parts, greeting customers when they pull in. I'll get back to Conner's plans for the future in a second.

Walker had high praise for his "coach in cleats," saying it is Conner's job to correct any mistakes made from the sidelines. If the head man sends in a wrong formation or coverage, "coach" Conner has to correct it in the course of 15 seconds or so before the play is run. Walker added those situations won't come up often, but he has faith that Conner will make the right call if need be.

"He has the IQ factor," Walker said.
"He is tough and is a football guy."

Conner has all the intangibles Walker likes for his "Mike" linebacker position.

He has played a variety of positions in three different offensive schemes at

SHOES

JACK NIXON Jack's Corner

NMSU, so he has to have been a pretty quick study to still be on the squad. Starting with Woody Widenhofer's 3-4, moving to Joe Lee Dunn's approach and now in the middle of a 4-3, this young man has burned the midnight oil preparing each season. That study ethic and a good learning curve will help him with his post football plan, dental school. He earned his degree last spring and is gathering some graduate studies that will help with that step from capping a running back to capping a pesky molar.

Getting back to the preseason drills, Walker said he has been riding Conner a lot to keep him sharp in pressure situations so he can keep his team out of any trouble that might arise from an opponent's audible.

Conner must enjoy his role as the "Mike" linebacker; he is a confident young man who doesn't seem bothered by the task ahead. His background is based in winning and he has learned that you need to be flexible with what a football life can bring you. Sounds like the perfect guy to be a "coach on the field."

Volleyball, soccer, annual banquet highlight schedule

That weekend I told you about is here and there is a special bonus added to it. Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday have events Aggie fans won't want to

First up, the annual alumni volleyball match is Saturday, Aug. 22. Think of the marvelous array of talent that has built New Mexico State volleyball into the dynasty it is today. Even though some of those players have careers, families and lives, they still think enough of their former coach, Michael Jordan, to drop what they are doing, put the uniform on again and give the current crop of Aggies a run for their money.

The Aggies have their first regularseason soccer game and you are more than welcome to join the tailgaters Friday, Aug. 21, at the season lid-lifter at UTEP. These gals have shown some real spark through the exhibition season and if you are like me, you can't wait for the games to count and the victories to start adding up. The fact that nearly 1,500 fans came out for the first exhibition, showed ole Pete that another sport has captured the imagination of fans here in Aggieland

Sunday, Aug. 23, Michael Needham's soccer team has its first official home match versus Idaho State.

There is a great mix of local players and top talent from around the country suiting up for the Crimson and White.

The first ever New Mexico State NCAA athlete from Radium Springs is on the soccer team this year. Sophomore Jordan Banegas grew up in the North Valley and played soccer at Mayfield. This is a team of many firsts, you can believe it. The fun doesn't end on the weekend.

On Tuesday, Aug. 25, you can get a preview of both football and volleyball from the coaches and players themselves at the preseason banquet. The chuck wagon will be set up at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum and the festivities will get going around 7 p.m. The Aggie athletics department is going back to a tradition of previewing both sports at the same time.

If you haven't had the opportunity to meet football coach DeWayne Walker and his staff or his players, here is your chance. There will be prepared remarks from both Walker and Jordan, but there will be plenty of time for informal remarks as well.

See if Kelli Goodan thinks Hawai'i can stay with NMSU. Find out who will take Krystal Torres' spot at libero and reminisce with the Coach of Champions about who he thinks was his best team. Have some questions about Timm Rosenbach's offense? He will be there to give you the lowdown about what to look for this year. This four-day period is gonna be so much fun, Pete can't wait for it all to start.

Rushed golfer needs a warm-up; rules define drops

My son is now a junior in high school and loves golf. He wants to play college golf but a scholarship is unlikely. He is now starting to talk about some kind of program of pro-fessional golf at New Mexico State Univeristy. Can you tell me anything about this?

Jane C., Las Cruces

What your son is doubtlessly referring to is the Professional Golf Management program at the university, which was started in 1987 and is part of the College

Former Aggie golf coach Herb Wimberly, my illustrious partner in Performance Golf Schools, was the initial force in starting up this terrific program. While there are about 20 similar programs around the country, NMSU is one of the few schools with a PGM program to own a golf course. Since its inception, the program has trained nearly 600 PGA professionals employed throughout the United States and internationally.

On a personal note, I have mentored several PGMers during my 21 years in Las Cruces, and I consider it a big plus to have these fine aspiring PGA professionals as part of our golfing community.

The PGM program is sanctioned by the PGA of America and has an average enrollment of 200 students, who typically study a business curriculum while pursuing the rigorous training requirements of

The 4.5-year program leads to a BBA with a major in marketing and a specialization in PGA Golf Management. PGM students have the opportunity to play and practice on a first-class championship golf course, while having a yearlong competitive tournament schedule available to them. PGM students receive coaching as they prepare to pass the demanding Playing Ability Test, and they get assistance arranging summer internships at many golf facilities around the country. Pat Gavin is the director of the PGM program and can be reached at 646-7686. The PGM website is www.business. nmsu.edu/academics/pgagm.

Despite a busy and stressful work schedule I make time for one weekday round of golf. But it always turns out that I'm rushed and barely get to the golf course on time, so I can't hit balls on the range. I then have a slow and awful start and it hurts my pride and my wallet. Do you have any suggestions for a quick warm-up routine? Greg N., Las Cruces Believe me I feel your pain, my friend. It's tough to try and balance work and golf. Happily, I found a possible and promising solution for your pressured arrival and warm-up. It's a short, uncomplicated series of warm-up stretches packaged neatly in a program called "5 Minutes to Tee Time.

The concept of jump-starting your golf round with stretches is not exactly new, but it was refined by New Jersey golfer and fitness expert Michael Bruno.

"Everyone's got five minutes," notes Bruno. "Starting par-par is a lot better psychologically than starting double bogey-bogey.

No question. Bruno actually developed the guts of the routine 10 years ago and said he did it for the guy (or gal) "who doesn't have an hour for the driving range before a round." That's most of the golfers I know.

The program comes in a little booklet, really a travel-size brochure, that has color pictures and a brief description of the key exercises designed to promote rapid flexibility and longer term conditioning. These are very basic yet golf-specific and effective body movements for the shoulders, back, hips and legs, which you hold in a static manner for 12 to 15 seconds. It finishes with 10 full swings. I know that one of the hardest things in starting a round of golf when you are cold and stiff is getting your body to move the way you think it should. Each stretch gets you ready to play in just a few minutes. Several PGA teaching pros have endorsed the "5 Minutes" routine. One said, "It gives all golfers an opportunity to hit the ball solidly from the first tee, (since) the specific movements set up the

Another pro teacher calls the program "the next best thing" to hitting balls, and adds "in today's busy world, not many have the (practice) time of a touring pro-

I guess you can relate, Greg. This cool little manual-kit even comes with a handy bag tag with thumbnail photos of each exercise. It's $19.95 (with free shipping) and you can get one by visiting www.5minutestotee-time.com.

One of my know-it-all buddies insists that when you "drop" a ball because of a penalty or taking relief you're supposed to drop it behind ou and over your shoulder without looking. I say that's not true. Manny R., Mesilla Park

Manny, hope you had a few bucks riding on the debate 'cause you won.

Really, all you needed was a rules book, which every golfer should carry in his bag. Back in the day when the boys stroked it with hickory shafted niblicks, they dropped over the shoulder, but not in the modern game.

USGA rules direct us to hold the ball at shoulder height and arm's length and then drop it without doing anything that might influence how the ball lands (like spinning it).

It's a good idea for all golfers to get familiar with the rules and procedures for where to drop, under what circumstances, when to re-drop (e.g. when a dropped ball rolls out of bounds), placing and replacing a ball, lifting a ball and when a ball is in play. Dr. Charlie Blanchard is a licensed psy brother of James Hall. Vying for playing time at receiver are seniors Jose Garcia and Xavier Armitage and juniors Josh Watson and Tanner Shoemaker. The tight ends will be Jordan Bullard, a senior, and Wes Bannister, a junior.

Experienced line

The Bulldawgs' offensive line will consist of center Jake Avalos (5-11, 290, Sr.), guards Kyle Pannell (5-10, 240, Sr.) and Bobby Rogers (5-11, 195, Sr.) and tackles Chris Todd (5-10, 230, Sr.) and Adrian Garcia (5-11, 180 Sr.). Avalos and Pannell are returning starters and Rogers and Todd saw extensive action last fall as reserves.

Pannell, Todd, Rogers and Bullard also will see action on the defensive line, as will Mark Villegas (5-10, 200), Robbi Trijo (6-0, 210, Jr.) and Jess Segovia (5-11, 180, Soph.). Garcia, Ogas and Duran are the linebackers.

In the secondary, Armitage, Martinez, Hall and Abrien Romero will see action at cornerback and Shoemaker, Watson, Joseph Hernandez and Jake Nevarez will play at safety.

"We're not real big, but we have a lot of speed in the secondary," Miller said. "At running back, we have a mix of speed and power, and our offensive line has some experience. Tight end is a question mark right now.

Another returning starter, Michael Hallock, will likely be the back that becomes a receiver.

"(Hallock) is a great receiver and a very good running back," Bradley said.

The other running backs are senior Robert Alvidrez and juniors Brandon Betancourt and Kiefer Payne. All three will see a lot of playing time and Bradley said Betancourt has a slight edge over Alvidrez heading into Friday's scrimmage versus El Paso Bel Air. The speedy Alvidrez is recovering from a thigh bruise.

Bradley said the fullback position is up in the air with Josh Chacon, Wyatt Tharp and Chris Carrasco vying for playing time. The receivers are seniors Justin Black, James Enriquez and Gabe Munez

The Trojans' offensive line includes center Ricky Avilar (5-9, 220, Sr.), tackle Andrew Anthony (6-2, 230, Sr.), Zach Tingen (5-10, 240, Sr.), Garret Bennett (5-10, 200, Sr.), and Matt Ramondo (6-4, 260, Jr.). Anthony is the only returning starter of the group, but most of the others saw significant playing time last year as reserves.

Ramondo, whom Bradley calls a college prospect, also will start as a defensive tackle. The other defensive down linemen are Anthony, Tingen, Larry Hinojosa (6-0, 215, Sr.) and Manny Sanchez (5-11, 215, Sr.).

Defense solid

Lining up at defensive end will be Michael Ellis (6-3, 200, Sr.) and Jeremiah Willis (6-5, 215, Sr.). The linebackers are Tharp (5-11, 185 Sr.) and Brock Baca (6-0, 195, Jr.), who also serves as the Mayfield kicker. Tharp was the leading tackler last year and the team's defensive most valuable player. "We'll rely heavily on Wyatt Tharp," Bradley said.

The coach likes the talent, speed and depth he has in the improved defensive secondary.

In the Trojans' three losses last season, Bradley said his secondary had trouble matching up with their opponents (Las Cruces High twice and Eldorado). Vying for playing time will be cornerbacks Hallock, Alvidrez and Enriquez and safeties Black, Carrasco and Devante Minor, a junior who started last year as a sophomore.

We need to develop some depth at defensive end, but we're pretty solid at just about every position," Bradley said. "I'm excited about this team."

Ags hire equestrian assistant

Morris to be Western coach

New Mexico State University equestrian head coach Andrea Hanson announced Tuesday, Aug. 18, that Robin Morris has joined the equestrian staff as the team's Western coach.

We are thrilled to have Robin join our coaching staff here at NMSU," Hanson said. "Robin has had tremendous success in both AQHA and IHSA, and brings valuable coaching experience to our program for both the reining and horsemanship events. I feel Robin will be a huge asset to this program and it will be an exciting year for New Mexico State Equestrian."

Before joining the New Mexico State Equestrian Team coaching staff, Morris served as coach of Texas Tech's club team while pursuing her master's degree. While at Tech, Morris coached 18 individual Regional Championship qualifiers, 12 individual Zone Championship qualifiers, five individual National Championship qualifiers, one individual Reserve National Champion and a Reserve Champion at the National Reining Horse Association (NRHA) Collegiate Championships.

Ags to tailgate at UTEP

NMSU plays UTEP Miners in soccer

The New Mexico State Alumni Association is hosting a tailgate party to kickoff Aggie soccer prior to the season opener at UTEP at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Aug. 21 in El Paso. The tailgate is located in Lot R-5, across from the facility services.

New Mexico State University takes on the Miners in its first-ever match at 7 p.m. Ticket prices for the tailgate are $12 for adults and $10 for children ages 2 to 10. The menu includes herb roasted chicken, homemade barbecue sauce, spare ribs and grilled sausages with corn bread, potato salad and assorted soft drinks.

Register online at http://alum.nmsu. edu. For more information, contact the alumni office at 646-3616 or alumni@ nmsu.edu.

For match tickets, contact the UTEP Ticket Center at 915-747-5234.

Volleyball

Birmingham are battle tested vets. Designated leaders. Especially Altermatt. Last season, when the Aggies finished 26-9, she registered 283 kills, 17 assists, 29 service aces, 315 digs and 39 blocks.

"She's our best all-around player," Jordan said.
"She's a smart attacker. She's a competitor and her experience is a big, big asset to the team.

Altermatt has her sights set on being a team psychologist after graduation. "I'm majoring in psychology," she said. "A lot of sports teams hire psychologists to work with their players, steer them toward positive thoughts, help them through tough times mentally in school and in competition.

'Come be Greek'

Greek Food Festival to be held in El Paso Aug. 28 to Aug. 30

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The parishioners of St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church, 124 S. Festival Drive, in El Paso, encourage visitors to "Come be Greek this week" by attending the 23rd Greek Food Festival, held Friday, Aug. 28 through Sunday, Aug. 30.

Barbara Rammos, owner of Tiffany's Pizza, said, like other Greek festivals held throughout the United States, the event will showcase Greek culture while raising funds for the church.

"All of us get together to bake and cook food," she said.

Parishioners began cooking and selling their food in Downtown El Paso when the church was still a mission operating out of a bank. In 1985, after the mission became an established church, they decided to begin the festival as their main source of income.

Several booths are set up during the event, each featuring a different dish, such as lamb, baked chicken, Greek meatballs and gyros. Rammos will man the gyro table

"Everything is authentic, homemade Greek recipes," she said.

Other items include feta cheese turnovers known as tyropita, baklava and spanakopita, a Greek-style pie made with spinach.

Live Greek music by The Aegean Sounds from Albuquerque and performances by the Greek dancing group the Hellenic Dancers will take place throughout the weekend.

Father Photios Bouton will give tours of the church and presentations on the Greek Orthodox religion.

"He's going to give lessons on where the religion comes from, how far back it goes, things like that," Rammos said.

Rammos said the festival offers participants the opportunity to visit Greece and experience its unique culture, all while helping the church keep its doors open.

Rammos said about 30 parishioners and volunteers cook the food for the 5,000 to 7,000 event participants, which generate more than $80,000 for the church.

"(The church) helps keep us together," Rammos said of the Greek community. "It helps us remember our culture and our language."

The Hellenic Dancers will perform traditional Greek dances during the Greek Food Festival Friday, Aug. 28 through Sunday, Aug. 30, at of St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church, 124 S. Festival Drive, in El Paso.

Admission to the festival is free, but donations are accepted. Food prices vary depending on the dish.

The festival will take place from 5 to 10 p.m. Friday, noon to 10 p.m. Saturday and noon to 9 p.m. Sunday.

To get to the church from Las Cruces, take Interstate 10 to Mesa Street, exit 11, and head north. After about 3 miles, turn right on South Festival Drive. The church will be on the left hand side.

For more information on the festival, call Rammos at Tiffany's Pizza at 532-5002. For information on joining St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church, call Father Bouton at 915-833-0882.

Violent shows, toys should be a concern to parents

Pointing out other's parenting mistakes is often risky

I'm concerned about the violent content of some children's cartoon shows and the toys and other products connected with them. My husband thinks they're harmless. What's your point of view?

I share your misgivings. There's a trend toward a brand of violence in some of today's cartoons and toys that I see as a dangerous departure from the more traditional combat-type games in which boys have always engaged.

For one thing, the characters tend to be adults involved in adult activities, some of which are highly questionable. I don't feel they are appropriate role models for impressionable young children. In addition, there's an occult or New Age flavor to many of these programs and products. The settings are mythical or futuristic, and the action often revolves around superstition, sorcery and magic. For these reasons they concern me for spiritual as well as psychological reasons.

The electronic media has incredible power to "sell" these dubious heroes and their exploits to our children. Studies have measured actual physiological changes that occur when kids are watching a violent television program or movie. The pulse rate quickens, eyes dilate, hands sweat, mouth goes dry and breathing accelerates. It should be obvious that this kind of "entertainment" has a dramatic emotional impact – especially if it's repeated often enough.

The toys that are marketed as "spin-offs" from such programs only serve to reinforce or extend those negative effects. What's more, there's no balancing positive, healthy or educational component to these products.

That's why our organization, Focus on the Family, and others have made major investments in high-quality videos and other materials for children. We must provide alternatives for families that want their kids to have wholesome entertainment and are determined to protect them from the popular culture. We will continue to do what we can to meet that need.

I have a friend whose children drive me crazy when I'm around them. They are the most undisciplined brats I've ever seen. We can't even talk when they are around. I would love to help my friend with a few disciplinary tips. How can I do this without offending her?

When you want to point out a flaw or shortcoming in someone else's behavior or character, you do it the way porcupines make love – very, very carefully. Otherwise, you're likely to lose a friend.

Pointing out parenting mistakes in others is even riskier. You're liable to get your ears pinned back for trying it — even when your motives are honorable and you have a child's interest at heart. That's why I never offer unsolicited advice about other people's children, no matter how badly I think it is needed.

If you insist on telling the other mother what she doesn't want to hear, let me suggest that you first invest some time and effort in your friend. When a relationship of confidence has been carefully constructed, you'll have then earned the right to offer her some gentle advice.

There are no shortcuts to this process.

What causes Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder?

It is believed to be inherited. Russell Barkley of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center estimates that 40 percent of ADHD kids have a parent with similar symptoms, and 35 percent have an affected sibling. If one identical twin is affected, the chances are between 80 and 92 percent that his or her sibling will be also. ADHD is 2-to-3 times as likely to be diagnosed in boys as girls.

The cause of ADHD is unknown, but it is probably

The cause of ADHD is unknown, but it is probably associated with subtle differences in brain structure, its neural pathways, chemistry, blood supply or electrical system. As of this writing, some interesting hypotheses

• After a meeting with more than 25 residents, mostly service station operators, city Mayor J. Benson Newell and commission members Samuel Klein and Manuel Nevarez agreed to drop a proposal to impose a 1-cent tax per gallon of gasoline.

• Las Cruces Union High School named Clifford "Red" as football coach.

• Aggie football coach Warren Woodson was named to Helms College Athletic Foundation Hall of Fame.

• The County Health Department reported the eighth poliomyelitis case for the year, a 4-year old Anthony boy who had not received the Salk inoculations.

• The Plaza Theatre was featuring the popular Mexican singer Pedro Infante in "Pablo y Carolina."

 A series of rain storms hit the Mesilla Valley, bringing the August rain total to 4.37 inches compared with 1.84 inches for the same period the previous year. Water that poured down arroyos from the East Mesa flowed down Lohman Avenue, El Paseo Road and Walnut Street, in some areas a foot deep. Residents requested sandbags on Elks Drive,

A new season brings in more fitness options

Las Cruces is still a great place to maintain health

By Jonathan Butz The Las Cruces Bulletin

Although the future of the health insurance industry is in question, Las Cruces still offers plenty of fitness options, allowing community members to take health care into their own hands.

Consider an active lifestyle a form of private health insurance – its only requirements being persistence, plenty of exercise and a proper diet.

Ranging from the traditional to the alternative, different venues and facilities throughout town make it easy for anyone to develop their own, individualized fitness plan. As a new season approaches, it's time to start getting fit.

New opportunities

One of the newest programs to hit the local health scene is the Aggie Fit program, affiliated with the New Mexico State University Health & Wellness department, which seeks to offer the community a fitness option that is comprehensive and convenient. Although the program launched in July, it has already seen an influx of new enrollment and activity, said Michael Dougherty, coordinator of marketing and promotions for Health & Wellness.

We're trying to make it easy for the community to get healthy,"

Dougherty said.
In addition to access to all of the facilities at the campus Activity Center and the natatorium, members enrolled in the Aggie Fit program will have admission to the program's website, www. aggiefit.org, which offers valuable information and resources to help participants keep record of their exercise, progress and goals.

Eye on progress

The Aggie Tracker, an application on the Aggie Fit website, allows users to keep track of their exercise on a daily, weekly and monthly basis.

Each time a participant records his or her exercise, they earn "Aggie Minutes," which are collected and added to a cumulative bank of points that represents the total number of minutes exercised by every participant in the program. The Aggie Fit website notes its goal of accumulating 1 million minutes

"The tracker program allows people a benchmark. It makes it so much easier to stay motivated when you have a benchmark to start from," Dougherty said.
The website also offers information on proper nutrition and exercise techniques, as well as tips to help participants reach their fitness goals

Dougherty said he hopes the

program will reach out to the community and give people an opportunity to design their own fitness plan. He said the program wasn't intended to compete with other local fitness options, but rather as an opportunity to provide yet another resource for people in the community.

"It's an option for people – we're not trying to push it on people or say we're better than other places in the community. It's about whatever works for people's lives," Dougherty said.

Resources

Complete with a full workout room, an indoor track, exercise bicycles and more, the Activity Center matches any commercial gym. Additionally, Aggie Fit allows the option of working with a personal trainer or enrolling in different classes, including yoga, meditation and aerobics.

Participants also have opportunities for a free equipment orientation, while body composition analysis, full fitness assessments and circuit training programs are available for an additional fee.

Aggie Fit is available to all

NMSU students, faculty and staff, in addition to NMSU alumni and affiliates. The required fee for Aggie Fit services is included in tuition for full-time students part time students are charged $40 to $53 per semester, based on the number of class credits. Faculty and staff are charged $10 per month for the annual plan and $13.34 per month for the 9-month program. NMSU retirees, however, pay no fee at all. The program also allows for members to include their spouses or children in the program for an additional charge.

Las Cruces resident Rita King enrolled in Aggie Fit and said she really enjoys the service provided, adding that the rates were "pretty cheap." She and Aggie Fit personal trainer, Chris Markle worked together to develop a fitness plan specifically designed for King.

I just love it here, I've tried other places, but this one seems to work for me," King said.

Shon Meyer, assistant director of Fitness & Wellness at NMSU, said working with a personal trainer requires setting specific times and dates for workout sessions, making it easier for people to commit to a fitness plan. Working out with other people, Meyer said, also helps reduce the temptation to abandon a fitness plan.

'It creates instant accountability because you're working with set dates and times that you have to commit to," Meyer said.

Although keeping fit on a regular basis does not dispel the need for health care completely, a healthy lifestyle can improve one's disposition, immune health and even susceptibility to injury. Dougherty said keeping fit is a cost effective way of adding a little assurance to one's life.

"It's healthier in the long run, because healthier employees are more productive, while an active life can lead to feeling happier and more well-adjusted," Dougherty said.

For more details, visit www. aggiefit.org or www.wellness. nmsu.edu.

In the community

Las Cruces offers many different paths people can take while designing a fitness plan. In addition to the campus Activity Center and the Aggie Fit program, Las Crucens have several options when choosing a gym or fitness Located across from the university on 763 E. University Ave., Snap Fitness of Las Cruces offers a clean and safe environment for members looking for a traditional gym close to the campus area.

Molly Brouw-er, Snap Fitness said manager, there is always plenty of space available at the gym and long lines and waiting times are scarce. For more information on hours and rates, call 521-7626.

Tom Young's tness Center, Fitness on 305 E. Foster

Road, offers a variety of equipment and services in a community atmosphere. Manager Ronda Mitchell said the gym is a place for everybody.

"I think it's a gym that offers everything because we cater to both the young and elderly," Mitchell said.

For more information and rates, call 526-4477 or visit www. tomyoungsfitnesscenter.com

Mind and body

When developing a fitness plan, it's important not to forget the mental aspects of a healthy lifestyle.

Stress cannot only create mental strain, but strain on the body as well. The Aggie Fit program offers a number of courses in meditation, while Tom Young's also offers weekly yoga classes that focus on relaxing and innerstrength.

Another option is the Alegre Health Haven, located on 920 N. Alameda Blvd. Facilitator Carol Wortner said Alegre Health Haven provides a relaxing environment for Las Crucens to gather and participate in a number of classes designed to reduce stress. Among others, Las Crucens can choose from a number of courses in meditation, yoga, Qigong and body prana movement.

We have a smaller setting, while we offer service to all ages, from people in their 20s to their 60s," Wortner said.

Activity counts

No matter what fitness plan one chooses, it's ultimately up to the individual to make progress. It's never too late to get active and many community members are eager to help and offer advice.

Mitchell said she thinks it's important for people to realize the key role cardio-fitness plays in the body's overall health.

"Get plenty of cardio exercise in your routine because if your heart's not healthy, than nothing else matters," Mitchell said.

Meyer said he thinks people should get a minimum of 30 minutes of activity a day.

"People should remember that any activity counts. Even if you don't have the time to be active a full 30 minutes, try breaking it up into three bouts and all of those will add up," Meyer said. "Anything is always better than nothing."

He also recommends working out with friends, as it is both a good way to make exercise enjoyable and create a support network of old and new friends.

Art Monsiviaz of Chinese Kenpo Karate

Southwest, on 102 Conway Ave., said any fitness plan comes down to discipline. He teaches at the dojo, which offers classes in karate, kick boxing and boxing, with operating hours 3 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 3 to 6 p.m. on Friday.

"It all depends on the person," Monsiviaz said regarding a healthy lifestyle. "If you really invest in yourself, there's no way you can fail.'

Most importantly, a fitness plan should be fun. Mix routines up to avoid boredom and always consult an expert before trying any new type of technique or program.
With discipline, determination and a little creativity, a healthier lifestyle is not so far out of reach

If you really

invest in yourself,

West Nile Virus: a serious threat

Disease can be avoided

With three West Nile Virus deaths occurring in Doña Ana County over the last four years, the New Mexico Department of Health is urging area residents to be on guard against the virus, which can lead to more serious and fatal complications such as meningitis and encephalitis.

To protect yourself from West Nile:

- Use insect repellent on exposed skin and clothing when you go outdoors. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends repellents containing DEET, Picaridin, oil of lemon eucalyptus or IR3535 for use on skin, and permethrin for use on clothing. Always follow label directions when using insect repellents.
- When weather permits, wear protective clothing such as loose-fitting, long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks.
- The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for mosquitoes. Take extra care to use repellent and protective clothing, or avoid outdoor activities during these times.
- Eliminate water-holding containers where mosquitoes lay their eggs, such as old tires, and regularly change the water in birdbaths, wading pools and pet water bowls. Make sure rain barrels are tightly screened.
- Keep windows and doors closed if not screened. If you leave your house doors or windows open, make sure they have screens that fit tightly without holes.
- Vaccinate your horses to protect them from West Nile Virus and Western Equine Encephalitis, which is also carried by mosquitoes.

Common West Nile Virus symptoms are fever, nausea, headache and muscle aches. In rare cases, West Nile Virus can cause meningitis or encephalitis. If someone has these symptoms, they should see their health care provider.

Another school year, another flu season

Flu vaccinations are coming to a clinic near you

By Kristine Sandrick
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The beginning of another school year means another flu season is just around the corner and community health officials are gearing up to launch flu shot clinics to help area residents cope with the viruses.

Chris Minnick with the New Mexico Department of Health said the seasonal flu usually hits the area in October, but because the vaccination is not yet available, the shot clinic schedule has not yet been determined.

"We don't yet have the vaccine in the state, so we haven't planned those clinics yet," Minnick said. "We usually get it the first part of September, and that is still on schedule."

The Department of Health is not the only provider for seasonal care, Minnick said, adding that shots are available from other sources such as urgent care clinics, hospitals and individual doctors.

"People should start thinking about where they can get them," he said. "MountainView Regional Medical Center and Memorial Medical Center have had shot programs for the community in October."

Twyla Anderson, Memorial Medical Center's employee health and infection control and prevention nurse, said community health officials are planning shot clinics to get vaccinations to those who want them.

"We're targeting the later part of October for our flu vaccination clinics, which we've been holding for the public annually for 14 or 15 years," she said.

Add H1N1 to the viral soup

Complicating this year's flu prevention program is the H1N1 virus that erupted in the spring and by June had reached pandemic status, according to officials at the World Health Organization, because of its geographic spread to more than 120 countries. As of Aug. 6, the number of infected countries had grown to 170.

"We're still seeing cases in New Mexico, but we're not tracking every case in the state," Minnick said. "It

Dr. Sangeeth Shanbhag welcomes

was unique in the spring because it was a novel virus. But now we will not be tracking every case – just the most severe hospital cases of H1N1."

On Aug. 10, the New Mexico Department of Health announced it confirmed the state's first death caused by H1N1 influenza. The 45-year-old female from Sierra County had end-stage liver disease and had been hospitalized for nearly three weeks before she died.

On Saturday, Aug. 15, the Alamogordo Daily News reported that Alamogordo resident Felicia Wright had been hospitalized with H1N1. Wright said she was at higher risk because she is diabetic and also has auto-immune syndrome.

One shot or two?

The CDC reports that while every flu season has the potential to cause a lot of illness, doctor's visits, hospitalizations and deaths, it is concerned that the new H1N1 flu virus could result in a particularly severe flu season this year.

Vaccines are the best tool we have to prevent influenza, according to the CDC. The CDC advises people to go out and get vaccinated against seasonal influenza as soon as vaccines become available at their doctor's offices and in their communities.

The Centers for Disease Control has not yet advised the state health department when they will be receiving that vaccine, "so it's impossible for us to know when we can start those (vaccination) clinics. The earliest we might receive it is mid-October," Minnick said

The CDC adds that the seasonal flu vaccine is unlikely to provide protection against novel H1N1 influenza. However, a novel H1N1 vaccine is currently in production and may be ready for the public in the fall. The novel H1N1 vaccine is not intended to replace the seasonal flu vaccine – it is intended to be used along-side seasonal flu vaccine.

Minnick said there will be two different shots, one for the seasonal influenza that starts in October in New Mexico and runs through early spring.

"We do not know availability of the H1N1 shot," Minnick said, "but from what the CDC is saying, we can give a flu shot in one arm and the H1N1 in the other. But it's way too early to know when the shot will be available."

Even if both shots are available at the same time, health care officials have been stating the proper dosage for the H1N1 flu shot may be two injections.

Medicare, medicaid, self-pay and most insurances accepted.

Checking for cancer signs: Screenings urged for all ages

Screening exams

important since

earliest stages ...

By Dr. DARVY FULLER For the Las Cruces Bulletin

The National Cancer Institute estimates that more than 1.4 million people in the United States will be diagnosed with cancer this year, and more than half a million will die because of cancer. It's possible that up to 35 percent of premature cancer-related deaths could have been avoided through screening, according to the National Cancer Institute.

The latest report from the Health Information National Trends Survey states that most Americans are not even aware of how often they should see a doctor for cancer screening exams, such as mammograms and colonoscopies. Screening exams are extremely important since they allow cancers to be diagnosed at the earliest stages and treated when treatment is most effective.

At Southern New Mexico Cancer Center, experts know screening can save lives. We recommend specific timing for screenings based on age, gender and type of cancer.

All ages: People of all ages should check their skin once a month for changes in moles, freckles and other marks. Women should conduct regular self-exams to determine if their breasts feel different, and report any changes to their physician.

Women in their 20s: Women in their 20s should check their breasts for lumps every month and have a clinical breast exam every one to three years. Women should have a Pap smear to screen for cervical cancer at least once a year beginning at age 21, or three years after a woman begins having sexual inter-course, regardless of whether they have received the HPV vaccine. Women with an increased risk of breast cancer should discuss beginning screenings earlier with their doctors.

30s should continue to have clinical breast exams and Pap smears every one to three years. Women with a high lifetime risk for breast cancer (greater than 20 percent) - associated with defined genetic profiles - should discuss MRI screening with their physician.

Women in their 40s and 50s:

Women in their 40s and 50s should have an annual mammogram and should continue clinical breast exams, Pap smears and an annual MRI screening if recommended by their doctor.

Women and men in their 50s: Beginning at age 50, men and women should begin screening for colorectal cancer. A physician can recommend the best option for colorectal cancer screening, including colonoscopy, flexible sigmoidoscopy, fecal occult blood test, double contrast barium enema or fecal immunochemical test.

People with increased risk factors for colorectal cancer should discuss beginning screenings earlier than age 50.

Men in their 40s and 50s: At age 50, and then as recommended by a physician, men should have the prostate-specific antigen (PSA) blood test and a digital rectal examination (DRE) to screen for prostate cancer. Men with a high risk of prostate cancer (African American men and those with a family history of the disease) should begin screenings at age 45, and those with even higher risk of prostate cancer should begin testing at age 40.

Practicing proper nutrition and sun safety and engaging in physical activity are ways to help prevent cancer. But regular screenings can detect cancer at an early stage when it's most treatable. No matter the age, it is important to screen for cancer.

Registry for organ donors

a website and registry that will make it easier for New Mexicans to sign up as organ donors. The new Donate Life Donor Registry website will enable residents to sign up to give the gift of life without having to go to an MVD office.

The new website will provide New Mexicans with another way to register their decision to save lives, any day, any time. You no longer need to wait until you renew your driver's license or obtain a new license or an identification card," Richardson said. "The Donate Life Donor Registry website will make it easier for people who want to sign up for organ donation.

The Donate Life Donor Registry website can be found at www.nmdonor.org. It is a highly secured registry that will house information on organ donors who have signed up with the Motor Vehi-cle Division while getting or renewing their driver's licenses or ID cards and those who will register online. More than 900,000 New Mexicans have registered as organ donors through the motor vehicle division offices.

"Donating organs saves lives and this new website will make it easier for people to become donors, and more quickwhen every minute counts," said Taxation and Revenue Secretary Rick Homans.

New Mexico was one of the first states in the nation to add the organ donor designation on its drivers licenses. For the past 30 years, New Mexicans have been choosing to save lives when they register as an organ and tissue donor at their local motor vehicle division offices. New Mexico has one of the highest organ donor registration rates ranking among the top 10 in the country. About 50 percent of New Mexicans who have a license or ID card have registered to give the ultimate gift of life.

The new website and registry were created through $115,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services; and is a collaborative effort between the Motor Vehicle Division, New Mexico Donor Services and New Mexico Lions Eye Bank.

In the absence of a driver's license or identification card on a deceased person, first responders and emergency physicians could contact the New Mexico Donor Services to verify if that particular individual is a registered organ donor. This registry will help in making critical decisions in a timely fashion.

Ruling could prompt tax law review

Judge: 'Tax lightning' is unconstitutional

By Gabriel Vasquez

"Tax lightning," part of a state law that often results in new homeowners paying much higher property taxes than existing homeowners in similar homes in the same area, is a violation of the state constitution, ruled Second Judicial District Judge Theresa Baca in Albuquerque last week.

The law, created in 2001, unfairly creates a class of people who pay more for property taxes because of the time of purchase, Baca said.

"It's like this all over town – all over the state," said Gary Sandler, owner of Gary Sandler Inc. Realtors. "That's just the way the rules are."

The 2001 law that includes the potential for "tax lightning" was drafted to protect low-income families and the elderly from rapidly rising property values, placing a 3 percent annual limit on property tax increases in assessed value, unless the home changes ownership, in which case the property taxes are adjusted to their current "true" assessed value.

Baca's ruling came on an appeal brought by Stephanie and Robert Dzur of Albuquerque, who encountered tax lightning in 2008. The couple was disputing decisions by the Bernalillo County's Valuation Protest Board and County Assessor Karen Montoya.

"It's like two identical pair of shoes and they place different taxes on them," Sandler said. "But I see it from both angles.'

Baca's decision could birth new court challenges around the state from other homeowners with similar concerns.

The Albuquerque Journal reports that Montoya said she's happy the judge's decision could spur reform in the state Legislature, but that she will review the decision and decide whether to appeal.

The Dzurs will be refunded the "extra taxes" they have paid if the decision stands.

Sandler said the current system works well to protect low-income families and the elderly, but can create

Blockbuster disappearing act

Final store's liquidation a bittersweet bargain for many

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

With movie kiosk operator Redbox and online movie renter Netflix comfortably riding the wave of the resurgent movie rental market, Blockbuster has beached itself - at least in Las Cruces.

The city's last Blockbuster video store closed Monday, Aug. 17, and liquidated its remaining inventory – most at dirt-cheap

"It was probably a mix of the bad economy and cheaper competition," said Richard Gibson, who was at the store Tuesday, Aug. 18, to buy $5 DVDs. "I came to return a movie yesterday and they told me they were closing. There's so many different versions of (kiosk) boxes popping up everywhere, that I'm not surprised.

Doug Alexander, regional manager for Blockbuster, said little about the store's closing, except that "everything will be liquidated" and that approximately 13 employees at the Main Street store would

Funkhouser continues tradition

Keeps Tatreault legacy alive

By Marvin Tessneer

Barbara Funkhouser continues to take care of customers with the tradition of the Tatreault Vineyard, which was named after her stepfather, L.E. 'Sparks" Tatreault.

Tatreault established the vineyard in the 1950s.

"This vineyard is a legacy to Sparks Tatreault," Funkhouser said. "My stepfather was a different kind of man. He thought differently. He was a genius. He could fix anything. I enjoyed him very much.'

Funkhouser took over the vineyard in 1990 when she retired from the El Paso Times after 30 years on the editorial staff. Funkhouser was the first woman to be named editor of the El Paso Funkhouser sells 12 varieties of grapes, including Black Monucca, Italia, Exotic and Ribier eating grapes and Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel, Carignane and Rubi-Red wine varieties.

"I get several hundred pounds from each variety," Funkhouser said. The vineyard is a "you-pick-your-own" outlet.

Sparks Tatreault came to New Mexico from California as an electronics technician with McDonald Douglas, first at Holloman Air Force Base, then at White Sands Missile Range and finally at the Physical Science Laboratory from which he retired.

Every year, Barbara Funkhouser says it's her last year of selling grapes. "But I just continue on. It would be a big job to take the vines out. Some are very old," she said.

Blockbuster's financial performance nationally has been no mystery.

The Los Angeles Times reports that Blockbuster revenue plummeted 22 percent in the second quarter, with shares falling 16 percent, in an effort to repay mounting debt and because of declining consumer interest.

Redbox and Netflix grew their revenue by 110 percent and 20 percent in the last quarter, respectively.

Blockbuster offers a DVD-by-mail rental service similar to Netflix, but has a much smaller selection and customer base. It is now partnering with NCR Corp. to deploy Blockbuster-branded vending kiosks all across the country similar to Redbox machines.

Some former customers however, think it's too late for Blockbuster to reclaim its once thriving market base.

"We used to come to Blockbuster all the time," said Rose Narvaez. "But it's just not convenient anymore. Nobody was coming to Blockbuster."

Carlos Paredes said Blockbuster had been "getting killed" by competitors for

"Hastings, Redbox, Netflix - they're all better priced," Paredes said. "And all the old school people that used to come, the younger people have taught them how to use Redbox.

In 1955, he married widow Lucille Funkhouser, and had a vision of expanding the agriculture opportunities. He started planting grape vines he had brought from California on the Funkhouser farm with the idea of developing a valley co-operative

"I think that he was the first one to bring in authentic wine grapes," Funkhouser said.

Co-operatives were not new in the Mesilla Valley. Cotton was a major crop, and many farmers belonged to gin co-ops. Many farmers had small vineyards, but they were reluctant to take the chance of developing grapes into a major crop, so they continued with the more stable cotton and alfalfa, Funkhouser said.

But Tatreault kept developing his vineyard until he had 1,200 vines with 32 varieties on two acres. He died in 1969.

"Mother kept the vineyard going," Funkhouser said. "She had always been in farming." Her mother died

Kenneth and Lucille Funkhouser came to the Mesilla Valley in 1922 after hearing about the successful Elephant Butte Irrigation District. They acquired 50 acres and grew cotton, alfalfa, melons and sugar beets.

Kenneth Funkhouser served in the Navy during World War I, and was active in the American Legion and the Picacho Farm Bureau. Funkhouser recalls that her parents participated in Fairacres community dinners and square dances.

Funkhouser's father died in 1936, from an ailment that he had suffered during the war. She said she remembers that he had to take frequent trips to veterans' hospitals in Fort Bayard and Albuquerque.

Funkhouser was active in the 4-H Club with livestock projects. In 1952, she was selected by the 4-H International Farm Youth Exchange program to live with farm families from Belgium and Luxembourg for six months.

"It was very different, but I loved it," she said. "The families were very kind. They considered Americans as their heroes. You have to remember, the war had ended in 1945, and they still had memories that the Americans had freed them from the unfair situations for homebuyers.

"It protects people – the longer you're in your house, the more protection you have against rising property taxes," Sandler said, "but is it fair to new homebuyers? Depending on the economic circumstances, I think there should be an incremental increase over a two- to three-year period until those property taxes reflect the assessed value.

Sandler said a new state law which went into effect July 1 requires prospective homeowners be notified of their total property taxes before they buy their homes, although there are no penalties yet associated with that law.

"What this does is take away the sticker shock that buyers suffer when they get a letter from their lender telling them they have to pay an extra 50 dollars a month for their property tax reserve, because of the new assessment," he said. "This way, the increase can be budgeted for in the beginning. The law is designed to give advanced warning of that sticker shock.

State Sen. Steve Fischmann, D-Las Cruces, said he supports the current law.

"I believe the intent of the current tax law is good," he said. "Protect those who are retired and low-income people from losing their homes to rising taxes due to escalating property values.

He added that he didn't realize it created what Baca calls an unfair tax base.

"It had not occurred to me that there was anything unfair about the existing law since the rules are applied equally to all buyers and all holders of residential property," he continued. "All homebuyers are informed of their prospective property tax liability prior to signing a purchase contract, and do not have to close a deal if they do not like what they see. All homeowners then enjoy the annual 3 percent cap.'

Fischmann concluded by saying he would be open to reviewing the current

"If there is consensus that this system is not fair, I am open to reviewing the tax structure in the Legislature," he said. Viable options must continue to protect retirees and low income folks from losing their homes, while still producing funding for basic local services such as police, fire, roads and parks.'

NMSU is a complex institution

University does outstanding job of developing local youth

As the new academic year begins, thoughts naturally turn to the future of New Mexico State University. Since the 1880s, the economic fate of Las Cruces and NMSU has been closely linked. NMSU is the city's largest single employer and is a major component of the local economic base. The future of NMSU is critical for the city.

The shear complexity of the university is often underappreciated by faculty and staff – not to mention students and the general public. Important in this complexity is the wide variety of roles undertaken by faculty. At one extreme are world renowned biologists who may teach relatively little in the classroom, but mentor graduate students mainly in laboratory settings. At the other extreme are English professors at Doña Ana Community College who teach five courses a semester chock full of freshman.

Measuring output at such an institution can be difficult. In engineering and sciences, very often success is determined by grant dollars generated. NMSU does well here, being in the top-100 universities without medical schools. In my field, economics, we don't need to buy many test tubes or equip laboratories, so grant funding isn't as important. Instead, research productivity is measure by refereed journal articles.

Of course, the major purpose of a public university such as NMSU and its major mechanism for promoting economic development is the education of our children. Here, it can be argued, NMSU truly does an outstanding job. Indeed, we are a far better university than is generally thought.

What NMSU does better than other universities is take relatively poorly prepared students and turn them into well-educated productive individuals able to compete in the 21st century economy.

A number of studies pointed to this. For years, we have appeared on a number of best-buy lists. Certainly, the combination of low tuition and quality education is hard to beat. Most recently, a study by Forbes, which focused on value to students, ranked NMSU 25th among public universities, best among the three state schools in New Mexico ranked.

Familiarity can breed contempt, and the Las Cruces community often focuses on the problems at NMSU. Certainly, there are problems – revenue shortfalls in Santa Fe, instability in the president's

These issues are important, but they should not obscure the basic facts: NMSU does a very good job in research and in educating our children educating our children.

Interim President Manuel Pacheco started his first semester at NMSU earlier this week. I wish him luck. I would not want his job as certainly he will be subject to minute scrutiny. Fortunately, he is an experienced administrator, used to the hot seat. With a little luck, he will hand off to the next president a university ready to continue a legacy of excellence.

Funding the kids' or grandkids' education

Planning is key to ensure a bright future

ALAN UMSTEAD Senior Finance

Everyone was up early at my house this week and in a rush as the kids headed back to school, which brings me to the topic of higher education and the funding and planning it requires.

One of the goals of parents and grandparents is to make sure their kids and grandkids go to college and get a good education. Educational funding is an area of concern for many families, as it is one of the many financial burdens they will face.

Educational costs have outpaced inflation over the last 10 years or so, by an average of 6 percent. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) during that same time averaged around 2 percent. In addition to the increased spending, families should consider the number of years a student will remain in school and the possibility of postgraduate education.

Families should plan well for funding higher education and set realistic goals to meet the expense.

Sources of available funding may include a savings account, financial aid, state and federal grants and 529 plans, or Qualified Tuition Plans (QTPs).

When considering what plan to execute, one of the most important aspects to consider is the number of years remaining before the child enters post-secondary education. Those in the best position to plan have very young children and many years of saving, planning and investing ahead of them.

As with all planning, whether it is for retirement, medical costs, vacations or education, the sooner it is started the better. Time allows savings to grow, interest to compound and investments to mature.

When executing a savings plan, inflation will cut into the bottom line. Tuition costs will continue to rise. It is much to our advantage to have at least a decade to save. This may be even harder should a family decide on a private elementary or secondary school.

Some parents and grandparents feel the best way to cut their higher education expenses is to have the child pay for a portion of his or her education. This could be used as a lesson in fiscal responsibility. Decisions such as these are to be made by the family, as not all families have the financial means to put money aside for secondary education.

A good place to plan for future expenses is to forecast where the child will go to school. What are the expenses for that university today? Once the expenses are known, they should be adjusted for about a 5 to 9 percent increase per year for tuition and other expenses. Don't forget the costs of books, transportation and miscellaneous supplies, such as a laptop or personal computer.

Some state universities and certain private schools allow for prepayment of tuition at current prices for future enrollment, some for as long as 10 years before the student graduates high school. But there are risks involved. Be sure to read the fine print on any of these contracts.

The U.S. Armed Forces also offers

The U.S. Armed Forces also offers many programs that pay for college tuition. Many students at New Mexico State University, for example, also serve as ROTC cadets.

We are fortunate to live in Las Cruces, where we have an excellent university at a relatively low cost.

a relatively low cost.

If you have small children or grand-children, look into starting a savings plan now. It could be time to stop buying toys and the latest shoes, and instead start putting a few dollars into their savings accounts.

My uncle Bill – he's a big contractor in Virginia and showed me a lot throughout the years. He's a very positive person, lives a good life and loves what he does.

What is your business philosophy?

When quality counts, the customer is always right and do it right the first

Where do you see your business in five years?

I see it being very successful if God is willing. I want to expand into commercial spaces.

What's your opinion of the local business climate?

Most of the business people here are fair and honest. In this part of the country, a lot of people still believe that when you shake man's hand, that's his word.

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

Having kids. It gave me the drive to succeed and to give them a better life than I had when I was growing up.

some valuable skills along the way everything from fixing sinks to installing custom cabinets.

"I started off really small, doing maintenance work and eventually built up to room additions and big remodels," he said. "One of the biggest challenges for me has been hiring and keeping reliable people."

McCowan, who had a rough upbringing - "I was really lost and it took a lot of hard lessons to change my ways," McCowan said - had always dreamed of being a builder, of "making something out of nothing." It was his way out of a tough life.
"Ever since I was a kid that's all I wanted to do," he said. "Construction, building things. I remember my mom saying I was destined to be a house builder.

McCowan said he's thankful for the contractors who took him in at an early age, while he was mostly inexperienced but hungry to work.

"While I was working for them, I always had the legitimate goal in mind to someday work for myself," he said. "It's always been a passion for me – to take some-thing ordinary and make it really beautiful.'

Not only building and remodeling homes, McCowan also is building up the self-esteem of troubled youth and is remodeling their outlook on life.

"My wife and I did treatment foster care for about five years," he said. "We stopped doing it about two years ago, and at that time we said we weren't going to do it anymore, but we were contacted by a Christian foster care organization and started up again."

McCowan not only takes kids in, but also takes kids to work.

"At first we started doing it as an emergency service to help take care of kids, but one time I took a kid in, started working with him, training him. He became my apprentice," he said. "He didn't come from a good environment, and if it wasn't for us, he would have been sent up north.

Now, McCowan regularly trains and teaches young kids in foster care, usually from 12 to 17 years old, by teaching them the construction trade and instilling the values of hard work and independence.

"They help me out quite a bit," he said. "If they're good, I tell them that I will have a job waiting for them when they're done (with the program). Even if they don't come work for me, they develop skills they can use later.

GARRIEL VASQUEZ | The Las Cruces Bulletin

Neal McCowan has been working in construction for more than 12 years and mentors adolescents in foster care looking to learn the trade.

Although a construction apprenticeship doesn't work out for every kid that walks through McCowan's doors, It's always been a McCowan said he gets satisfaction from mentoring kids passion for me – to who are in the same life situation as he was when he take something ordinary and make was younger.

"Many of them are lost, just like I was," he said.

"And just like I wished I had someone that reached out to me, now I'm doing

He added that several of the foster care children who have grown into independence have called him years later to comment, "Hey, I remodeled my bathroom by myself, thanks to you," or "Hey I fixed my brother's toilet, thanks," among other expressions of gratitude.

McCowan said the toughest project he's tackled so far is a historic house whose basement had caved in, and the family desperately wanted to repair, not rebuild. "It was really nerve racking," he said. "The basement was caving in and we spent two weeks underground excavating. We had to put the house on jacks.

Looking back at the situation, McCowan said he was overly ambitious, and that "I probably should have agreed with the other six contractors who said it couldn't be done.'

But just as he learned to succeed in life through trial and error, he's learned to succeed at work in much the same way. He said he's built a steady customer base from loyal homeowners who call him for just about every task, big or small.

"Word of mouth advertising is all I've ever had," he said. "And thankfully, it has McCowan said he eventually wants to tackle commercial remodeling, but for now is mostly dedicated to residential.

'I'm pretty much as loyal, honest and hardworking as they come," he said. "And I stand by my jobs.'

Las Cruces area home sales surge

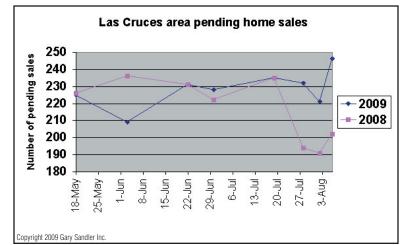

Area pending sales up 20 percent

Sales of new and existing Las Cruces area homes, townhomes and condominiums reported as pending during the first two weeks of August outpaced by almost 20 percent the number of pending transactions reported during the same period in 2008, according to statistics culled from the Multiple Listing and Information Service (MLIS) arm of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR) on Monday, Aug. 17. A sale is considered pending when the purchase agreement has been signed but the transaction has not yet closed.

During the first half of August, the MLIS database showed 246 pending sales of new and existing homes, townhomes and condominiums awaiting closing. That's a 39-unit or 19.3 percent increase over the 202 units reported pending a year earlier and a 37-unit, or 17.7 percent increase over the 209 sales pending in early June.

What's driving this increase in sales? The $8,000 federal tax credit, according to the National Association of Realtors (NAR). Confirming NAR's observation, the IRS reports that at least 1.1 million buyers have applied for tax credits through amended returns. More are expected when income taxes are due in April.

NAR also projects additional buyers will plunk down earnest money deposits in the next couple of months as the Nov. 30 expiration of the tax credit approaches. It takes an average of 10 weeks for a buver to find a home today, according to NAR's 2008 Profile of Homebuyers and Sellers, and another month-or-so to close on the purchase. To be able to safely close prior to the November deadline, buyers must locate a home at least 30 to 45 days prior to the expiration of the program. That means if a buyer isn't actively looking now and is not "under contract" by mid-to-late October, his or her chances of qualifying for the tax credit begin to wane.

The success of the tax credit is prompting the House and Senate to consider expanding the program. Even though our legislators are currently on break, lobbyists are busy working on a major campaign to extend the credit. The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) and NAR have dispatched local teams of members to meet with congressmen and senators in their local districts. The idea behind the visits is to urge our representatives to not only extend the credit beyond Nov. 30, but to expand the concept to include all homebuyers, not just the first-timers.

Even though it appears the measure is gaining bipartisan Congressional support, there's no such animal as a "sure thing" in Washington. If I were contemplating whether or not to wait for a larger payoff, I'd take the advice of Woody Allen and "take the money and run." If you do indeed heed his advice, it won't be long until I.

See you at closing.

Performance-excellence programs worth the investment

Commitment to customer service and self-assessment is a 'quality journey'

By Deborah Gorenz

Courtesy of Finance New Mexico

Many small businesses view performance-excellence programs as being too expensive and time-consuming to be worthwhile. My organization, Hospital Services Corp., spent many years without a performance-excellence framework until we became involved with Quality New Mexico, a nonprofit organization that fosters and promotes performance excellence to all New Mexico businesses and organizations.

The New Mexico program is modeled on the performance-quality system pioneered by former Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, which aims to help organizations enhance their competitiveness by delivering ever-improving value to customers and improving overall organizational performance. Every year, the president bestows the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award to businesses of all types and sizes, in addition to education, health care and nonprofit organizations that have demonstrated outstanding performance in seven areas: leadership, strategic planning, customer and market focus, measurement, analysis and knowledge management workforce focus, process management and results. Hospital Services Corp. became involved with the program in 2004, at which time we were introduced to the concept at a Quality New Mexico conference. As a relatively small company with only 50 employees, we didn't have a department that could lead the rest of us on our "quality journey."

Some of our employees trained as examiners – people who receive intensive training in performance-quality concepts and serve on the Board of Examiners that names the annual New Mexico Quality Awards winners. We also took advantage of the many workshops and conferences hosted by Quality New Mexico and networked with other organizations striving for performance excellence.

 $\overline{}$ The results for our company show why performance excellence should be important to your business:Our monthly customer retention averages now exceed 99 percent

Operating margins have exceeded targeted levels in each of the last five years

Operating revenues have grown by more than 62 percent over the past four years

Employee turnover is down by 33 percent over the past four years

We submitted our first application for the New Mexico Quality Award in late 2004.

In 2005, we received Piñon recognition, the first level of the award system, for our "commitment to performance excellence.'

In 2006, we achieved the next level Roadrunner recognition – for "progress toward performance excellence.

In 2008, we applied for the best-inclass Zia Award, and each year we make an incremental step in that direction. One day, we hope to apply for a National Baldrige Award.

The value of participating in the awards process is the feedback report that identifies an organization's strengths and opportunities for improvement.

Implementing a performance-excellence program takes time and commitment, but the benefits can be enormous. The tools and resources are available to all New Mexico businesses. To learn more about the program, visit Quality New Mexico at www.qualitynewmexico.org.

Salvation Army creates newest endowment

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

In 1865, London Minister William Booth walked away from his pulpit and out into the streets to reach the poor, homeless, hungry and destitute.

In an effort to make the poor feel more comfortable in the pews of the church where regular churchgoers attended washed and clean, Booth founded the East London Christian Mission. Thirteen years later, Booth created an annual report for his new church with the headline reading "The Christian Mission is a Salvation Army." From those words, the Salvation Army was born.

The organization, an integral part of the Christian Church, has grown over the years, offering a well-organized structure that has offered much-needed services such as women's social work, the first food depot, the first day nursery and the first Salvation Army Missionary Hospital.

programs for more than 2 million beneficiaries. With 1,155 Goodwill Centers and 1,603 thrift and charity shops, the Salvation Army also provides jobs for more than 100,000.

In Las Cruces, the Salvation Army focuses on children and vouth, crises support. emergency and safety services, hunger and religion. The organization is constantly adding to available programs ranging from youth recreational facilities to emergency family services and emergency disaster services with the help of generous donors and companies such as the Rehabilitation Hospital of Southern New Mexico, an Ernest Health Inc. facility.

"Ernest Health's involvement with the Salvation Army originated with our corporation's founders," said Tony Hernandez, CEO of the rehabilitation hospital. "We believe in their mission that states they are 'committed to serving the whole person, body, mind and spirit, with integrity and respect, using creative solutions to positively transform lives.

Ernest Health Inc., which develops and operates rehabilitation and related post-acute healthcare facilities, focuses on charitable objectives to support the Salvation Army. The support is in honor of Maj. Ernest Robert Toplis, who served as an officer in the Salvation Army and for whom the company is named.

Recently, the Las Cruces Salvation

pital of Southern NM in an effort to maintain financial sustainability.

The strengths of the community foundation lie within its ability to help campaign for nonprofit agencies," said Hernandez, who is the current chairman of the Investment Committee for the community foundation board and past vice president. "The outcomes of the campaigns provide these agencies with the ability to sustain operations and work toward accomplishing their mission in our community.

The CFSNM kicked off the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign in April with a goal to raise $500,000 by Dec. 31 to help 33 nonprofits who have endowments within the Foundation. With each contribution to the campaign, the CFSNM will designate 50 percent to an emergency fund for nonprofits that have endowments with the foundation and 50 percent will be designated to a matching fund created to build the nonprofit endowments, leading to the long-term sustainability for the organizations within the community. The principal from an endowment continues to grow forever, providing financial security even in hard times.

For the Salvation Army, that's good news. The nonprofit not only provides clothing, furniture and other goods in its store, it also assists families with commodity food items, an emergency food bank, rent and utility assistance and emergency shelter – primarily based on its revenue from the thrift store. When times are tough for the community, needs within the Salvation Army increase making support from agencies such as Ernest Health Inc. and the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico much more important.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Donors are encouraged to inquire about donating to the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign. Call the CFSNM at 521-4794 or visit www.cfsnm.org for more information.

Comcast to close local call center

A Comcast representative has reported that Comcast plans to close its local call center, as well as call centers in Phoenix and Albuquerque. Comcast will consolidate by opening a large call center facility in Denver, the representative said. The call center's employees, "down to 12 people," the representative said, will be laid off.

Rio Yamaha closes

Rio Yamaha, 1390 N. Main St., has closed its store. According to the company's website, the chain is consolidating its dealerships. The Las Cruces location has merged with Sunland Park Yamaha, 159 Sunland Park Drive.

Calabrese Hair Studio opens

Calabrese Hair Studio, 1625 S. Main St., has recently opened and is offering hair services including color, highlights and facial waxing. The storeowner said her salon is open Tuesday through Saturday and services are available by appointment.

Tourism Dept. awards $1 million in co-op funding

New Mexico nonprofit organizations and local and tribal governments will share in $1,000,000 awarded this fiscal year through the New Mexico Tourism Department's annual Cooperative Marketing Program. Cooperative marketing funds are made available through the program to help these community outreach organizations promote their areas as a visitor destination. The City of Las Cruces Convention & Visitors Bureau received $19,500; the Diocese of Las Cruces foundation received $8,600; and the Old Mesilla Association received $9,800.

Rick Stoes: Local broker brings national market to Las Cruces

Stoes a facilitator for retailers, representative for southern NM

By Gabriel Vasquez

As a fourth generation Las Crucen, Rick Stoes was prepared to take more risks than his family ever had before.

Born with a passion for the fast life – fast motorcycles, fast money, fast thinking - Stoes bought his first commercial property and started a business in his early 20s.

"I started the first Computer Aided Drafting business in southern New Mexico," Stoes said. "I was working with builders, working on commercial projects and designing. From there, I decided to become a builder."

Stoes, now qualifying broker for the New Mexico division of Grubb & Ellis, one of the largest real estate services and investment companies in the world, first earned a commercial contractor license and then transitioned into brokerage.

"It was very hard at first," Stoes said. "I was young, didn't know a lot of people. I learned a lot through trial and error. But it worked."

Stoes founded Venture Real Estate & Development Corp. in 1998, and since, has been serving retail communities in southern New Mexico and west Texas.

We are fortunate here. he continued. "In Cruces, we haven't seen all the 'go-dark' businesses. El Paso hasn't seen them either. But we are a bit stagnant."

To counter the slow commercial real estate market-mostlyretail, Stoes said - Stoes has had to diversify.

Everything has just gone a little slower this year," he said. 'So we've had to expand our reach a little further, like brining Wal-Mart to Truth or Consequences. We've had to stretch out pretty hard."

Stoes also has represented such national retailers as Home

Depot, Sonic, Smith's Food & Drug, Kinko's, Hollywood Video and Subway, helping bring several of those businesses to Las retail tenant and landlord representation to site selection and built-to-suit facilitations.

He said he's hopeful two of his developing contracts will be successful – one for a tenant in the former Bountiful Baking Co. space at 3050 E. Lohman Ave., and another for an undeveloped commercial lot on Telshor Boulevard.

"But they're not quite done yet," he said.

Adding to his growing portfolio and experience, Stoes has recently opened an office in El Paso, managing properties for sale and lease such as the Burlington Coat Factory space on Yarbrough Drive and a former Dairy Queen on Alameda Avenue.

"I go back and forth a lot now," he said. 'Sure, it's hec-been especially crazy for everybody (in commercial real estate)."

Stoes said his favorite part of the job is site selection, driving to and fro around southern New Mexico and west Texas looking for the perfect opportunity.

The signs now are pointing toward an economic recovery that shows promise for commercial real estate, he said.

"Banking money is very hard to get today so you've got to work really heard to seek out alternative financing," he said. "And retailers have bunkered down. The ones that aren't in financial trouble are still not expanding because they want to see what the market is going to do. Everybody's very cautious. Just lately, though, people are starting to loosen up. I've seen some great activity. We're actually seeing more activity at our office now than we have seen all year."

body," and that retailers are still "a bit gun-shy with their He credits Bob Fein-

for much of his success, calling him a mentor and lifelong business partner.

"He helped me get my foot in the door," Stoes said. "The guy knows everybody."

Aside from work, Stoes is helping lead the effort to revitalize Downtown, serving on the economics committee for the Downtown Partnership and as a member of the Amador Museum Foundation. His great grandfather owned the former Las Cruces Furniture store, "once the largest commercial space on the plaza," Stoes said.

"Revitalizing Downtown is a great idea," Stoes said. "We've officed in Downtown since 1998, including the Armijo House for almost 10 years. It's going to be nice to walk around, eat at local restaurants and enjoy the plaza. I plan to stay down here.'

Stoes also has long been involved with the La Mesa Lions Club, as past president and chairman of the Doña Ana County Council of Lions.

"The Lions Clubs is incredibly important to me," he said.

And when he's not on a journey to find the perfect commercial property for one his clients, Stoes is bungee jumping, scuba diving – possibly somewhere in the Caribbean – or laying poolside at a hotel in Vegas.

"What can I say, \bar{I} travel as much as I can," he said. "I've jumped the Royal Gorge (in Colorado), gone on a bungee jumping tour of New Zealand and I love Jamaica, I hit Jamaica three to four times a year if I

Be careful talking ball around Stoes, though.

"I'm a huge Phillies fan," he said. "I know a lot of the guys down here don't like that, but I am. It was a good year for us last year but we're looking for better this year.'

New MainStreet SalsaFest brings chile lovers back to Downtown

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Crucens in search of a savory delight are in for a treat next weekend during the first ever MainStreet SalsaFest held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 29, from Griggs to Las Cruces avenues on the Downtown Mall.

The SalsaFest, presented by the Downtown Las Cruces Partnership, will feature everything salsa related – from salsa dancing and music to salsa making and tasting.

"There are a lot of chile and salsa festivals held throughout the United States," said event coordinator David Edwards. "We thought it was a great way to bring interest and life back to Downtown. We're hoping it will be an annual thing."

Inspired by a similar event held in Albuquerque, Edwards said a salsa festival was perfectly suited for the area because of its deep roots in chile and salsa.

During the event, salsa – which is the No. 1 condiment used in the U.S. – will be made onsite by competitors striving to earn the title of the best.

"There's some dynamite salsa being made in peoples' homes," Edwards said.

"We're hoping to bring those people out of the kitchen right on to Main Street," said Cindi Fargo, executive director of the partnership. "We set up the event to showcase two categories – restaurants and home salsa makers."

About 30 salsamakers will compete in the two categories, including nonprofit organizations, which will be in the "From My Kitchen (de Mi Cocina)" section for homemade salsas. Winners in this category will be awarded a cash prize of $500 for first place, $250 for second and $100 for third.

The winning restaurant will receive a traveling trophy and bragging rights.

A Mayor's Choice award will be give to the overall winner. The winner of the peoples' choice will have their salsa bottled and sold.

Local artist Rosario Jeremias created the one-of-a-kind trophies. The traveling restaurant trophy is a bowl filled with salsa ingredients, while the Mayor's Choice trophy is a stack of chile peppers.

Along with the competition, vendors will also be on hand selling and offering samples of their products on chips provided by Andele.

The salsa-making competition and salsa tasting aren't the only events that will take place during the Saturday event. Along with a performance by Dance Universe, local Latin jazz band Ritmo Caluroso will play on the main stage, during which salsa dancing and lessons will be given.

In addition to the main stage festivities, the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Downtown Mall, will host entertainment including a performance by the Pan American Dance Institute, among others. Twenty-five pieces of artwork, created by children ages 5 to 12 during the city's summer recreation project, will be displayed in the theater. The pieces were designed to celebrate salsa and its staple ingredient – chile.

"We're always looking to engage children," Fargo said. "They're the future of Downtown."

Designed to bring Las Crucens back to the Downtown area, which is being revitalized, the SalsaFest has already created a stir within the community, Fargo said.

"We're really glad everyone is excited about it in its first year," she said. "We want this to be an annual event and become part of the celebration calendar in Las Cruces."

Fargo added that she hopes the SalsaFest will create more street life Downtown by connecting to the community culturally.

"We see the festival being as big as the Whole Enchilada Festival and the Albuquerque salsa fest," she said.

Edwards said they have plenty of plans for future SalsaFests, including setting up a Downtown partnership booth to help encourage community members to create and consume locally grown produce, as well as promote recycling.

"We're going green at the same time we're going green and red," he joked.

Fargo said everyone should attend this family-fun event and enjoy locally made treats. Food and beverage vendors will be on hand as well.

Tasters who want to cast a ballot must purchase a wristband for $3 to participate in the voting.

Robert L. Lovett Attorney at Law

Wrong. As an auto accident attorney practicing for 15 years, I hear a lot of clients that say they're not worried because they have "full coverage." Full coverage is in no way full enough to cover you for personal injuries. This type of coverage means you have liability and collision coverage. Liability pays someone else if you cause an accident. It doesn't cover you. Collision coverage covers your car itself. This means if you're in an accident, collision coverage will pay to fix or replace your car. Full coverage does not cover your personal injury claim. So what kind of insurance should you have to make sure you really are fully covered?

Uninsured motorist. A recent study stated that 1 out of every 4 motorists in New Mexico get behind the wheel without insurance. New Mexico has the dubious distinction of leading the nation in the number of uninsured Uninsured coverage provides protection for your medical bills, lost wages, and pain and suffering should a driver cause an accident and he's one of the four that doesn't have insurance. Uninsured motorist may also cover you even if the other driver has insurance, but doesn't have enough insurance to fully cover your losses.

It's scary enough to be in an auto accident. It's worse to be not covered for that accident. Please feel free to give me a call anytime to discuss your personal injury claim.

Mesilla welcomes newest gallery

Los Artesanos owned and operated by four local artists

By Beth Sitzler

ArtsHop visitors will have a new destination on Friday, Sept. 11, thanks to local artists Latana Bernier, Greta Burger, Ramon Escalante and Rudy Lucero.

The four artists are now the proud owners of Mesilla's newest gallery, Los Artesanos Art Gallery, located in the historic Old Tortilla Factory at 1910 Calle de Parian. While the artists knew each other from the art community, they were brought together by a local fundraiser.

Jan Escalante, wife of Ramon Escalante, said the artists, along with 13 others, participated in the Relay For Life Benefit art shop, held at the factory June 5 and 6.

It was Sunday morning and we came in to clean up," Burger said. "We thought it was such a great room, it was great for displaying art ... we started talking about going in together.

As a high-end gallery, the quartet said Mesilla seemed like the perfect location for their new venture because the historic district draws many visitors.

"It seemed karmic," Burger said. "We looked at other locations and this one always came out on top."

Ramon Escalante and Lucero said the gallery is different because it is owned and operated by the artists, allowing for the artists, who greated the displayed work to allowing for the artist who created the displayed work to be present to discuss his or her art.

Another aspect of the gallery that sets it apart is the variety of work and media that will be on display.

"You don't see this stuff in other galleries," Lucero said.

"Each piece is one-of-a-kind."

Lucero specializes in pottery, creating decorative and functional pieces of art. He said he uses several unique firing techniques including Raku, saggar, copper matt and borse bair

Ramon Escalante creates wood and leather engravings that are authentic Southwestern and Native American designs. He also creates sculptures from river stone and metal in the form of animals and figures to represent various Native American societies.

Bernier, who moved to the area from Charlottesville, Va., a little over a year ago, creates sculptures from gourds. Along with carving, she also incorporates other media into her work, such as paint, wood burning and inlay.

Burger's eclectic pieces of fused glass use both warm and cold glass techniques. By layering her glass she can create flat or 3-D pieces. She also combines copper in her work. As the only owner who isn't retired, she said she welcomes the new responsibilities the gallery will bring.

"It's a challenge, but its a lot of fun and these are fun people," she said.

The group said they will also exhibit other artists' work at the gallery. The first non-owner artist showing is photographer Elaine Frink.

In addition to the gallery, they are putting together a museum in the factory's halls to display historic items associated with the building and the families that owned it.

'It seems like since it's so historic it would be ridiculous not to," Jan Escalante said of the museum.

Though they were introduced to the art community on Saturday, Aug. 15, and will participate in the September ArtsHop, the gallery's owners still plan on holding a grand opening celebration in the near future.

SumArtFest celebration to emphasize collaboration

Area artists, students 'Engaging in Education'

By JENNA FROSCH

Born of an idea to bring together area artists, students and educators in a collaborative environment, SumArtFest will take place Friday to Sunday, Aug. 21 to 23, at Mikey's Place, 3100 Harrelson St., in Mesilla Park.

Coordinators and New Mexico State University students Daniel Aguilar and Chris Bardey met while planning "Art of Democracy," an art show held at In Effect Gallery. During that time, the two discovered a shared passion for art in public schools and began planning an event that would bring the two together.

'Having worked in the public school system for six years, and with local art groups, our main focus is bringing together local artists and students to invoke deeper thought about various subjects," says Aguilar. "Students are exposed to so much commercial art through the media, and they need to have examples for creating art of their own that will be a more expressive representation of themselves.'

The SumArtFest theme is "Engaging in Education." Each day, there will be artists on hand to answer questions and offer demonstrations, as well as sell their artwork.

The events are free and open to the public, with the exception of the Saturday night band performances, which will be $5 at the door.

Each day, there will be food served and various demonstra-tions, courtesy of the event sponsors, including the Preston Contemporary Art Center, Concilio CDS Inc., the Shed Restaurant, Artsy Fartsy Metal Works, Mountain View Market, COAS Booksellers, the NMSU Center for the Arts and other private donors.

The three-day festival will feature more than 20 visual artists, numerous educational workshops, spoken word and open mic events, dance and performance art and music by various Las Cruces bands. A raffle for prizes will end at 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 23.

Mikey's Place is an 8,000square-foot warehouse dedicated to nurturing the arts in New Mexico, including a dance studio, as well as a 2,700-square-foot workshop for events and activities.

"This has really been a com-munity-wide effort to engage the artistic community and educators," Aguilar says. "This is a great way to raise awareness and enlighten students about what art is and what possibilities lie

Temporary installation educates about regeneration

New Mexico Arts T.I.M.E. project comes to Las Cruces

New Mexico Arts, a division of the Department of Cultural Affairs, the City of Las Cruces Museums and the Doña Ana Arts Council, present "Temporary Installations Made for the Environment (T.I.M.E.)," for the first time in Las Cruces starting Friday, Sept. 11, in conjunction with ArtsHop.

Six regional artists created unique and interactive artworks based on this year's theme of regeneration. These artworks are exhibited at galleries and museums throughout Las Cruces.

This year's participating artists are Susannah Mira, Glenn Schwaiger, Joe Barrington, Tasha Cooper, Mary Lucking and Pete Goldlust and James Wissing. The exhibition runs through Wednesday, Built from discarded textiles and tubing, "All in Knots" by Mira showing at the Cutter Gallery, 2640 El Paseo Road, is a playful monument to recycling and re-use. Even the materials in the piece will be reused for subsequent artworks. The knot is a symbol of community, interconnected actions and the west.

"Meltdown" by Schwaiger at the Las Cruces Railroad Museum, 351 N. Mesilla St., is a unique piece that consists of a pyramid of solid ice surrounded by an earthen damn. As the ice melts it will fill the moat, reminding us of the perils of global warming,

The "Ouroboros," by Barrington at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., is an ancient image, found in many cultures, of a serpent in a circle eating its own tail. The sculpture, which rotates like the earth on an axis, is made of discarded tires and salvaged steel.

A kinetic sculpture, with the use of a wind turbine, "Symbiotic" by Cooper at the Las Cruces Museum of Art, 491 N. Main St., generates the electricity required to light an integrated fluorescent lamp. The blades of the turbine are shaped like human hands and the sculpture at the Rio Grande Theatre, 211 N. Downtown Mall, is an architectural installation composed of colorful, soft-sculptures, woven together from worn-out clothing. Together the garments take on new, whimsical lives in plant, animal and human forms.

James Wissing embraces the idea of transformation in "Growth," at the Museum of Nature and Science, 411 N. Main St. The large hand sculpture with small branches sprouting from each fingertip continues to grow while on display. The sculpture is self-watering and made with recycled and recyclable materials The T.I.M.E. project was inspired by the emerging public art trend to engage artists interested in creating more spontaneous and immediate artworks with short life spans.

Oktoberfest in the Southwest

This German holiday comes to Holloman in September

Officials with the German Air Force and the 49th Fighter Wing are preparing for the 13th annual Oktoberfest from 3 to 11:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at the GAF Maintenance Hangar.

Tickets for the event, which is open to the public, are $12 and can be purchased off base at all Otero Federal Credit Unions and the Chamber of Commerce. On base purchases are available at the community center, outdoor recreation and the German Air Force headquarters building, Room 2231. Individuals will have the opportunity to purchase tickets the day of the event at the Holloman front gate for $15.

Included in the price of admission is a beer stein and first filling, in addition to bus shuttle service to and from Holloman.

The event will include original and authentic German food such as bratwurst, schnitzel, potato salad, red cabbage, giant pretzel and cheese, soft drinks and Oktoberfest beer. This year's band is Die Lustigen Eyachtaler and will feature polkas, blasmusik, oldies, swing and modern hits.

Shuttle service will be provided with stops at several locations. For a complete list, visit www.holloman. af.mil. Three routes will run in order to accommodate everyone wishing to attend

Individuals who do not possess a military or dependent ID must take the bus to get on base. Tickets and a form of identification are required for entry

The history of Oktoberfest in Germany began with the Royal Wedding on Oct. 12, 1810. Crown Prince Ludwig, later to become King Ludwig I, was married to Princess Therese of Saxony-Hildburghausen. The citizens of Munich were invited to attend the festivities held on the fields in front of the city gates to celebrate the happy royal event.

The fields were renamed "Theresienwiese" ("Theresa's Fields") to honor the Crown Princess.

Horse races in the presence of the royal family marked the close of the event that was celebrated as a festival for Bavaria. The decision to repeat the horse races in subsequent years gave rise to the tradition of Oktoberfest.

Today, the German version of Oktoberfest is the biggest fair in the world and is known worldwide. What's special and attractive about the Oktoberfest is its ability to combine a celebration for the locals and an international mega-event, a combination of traditions and high-tech, new ideas and influences. And why does Oktoberfest start in September?

Well, it does finish in October, but due to the cool weather in Germany, the organizers decided it would be better to start it on the third weekend in September.

GALLERIES & OPENINGS -

Continuing this Week

MAIN STREET GALLERY

The work of Jim Turrentine will be on display at Main Street Gallery, 311 N. Downtown Mall, during the month of August. The retrospective examines portraiture work he has completed over the last four decades.

The gallery is also showing works by some of Las Cruces' finest artists including the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson's fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst's Spirit Minders, Margaret Berrier's detailed rock-art jewelry, Joanna Bradley's flamboyant gourd artworks, limited editions of Robert Highsmith's splendid watercolors, the skillfully and colorfully fired RAKU works of Rudy Lucero and the newly released limited editions of world class western pencil artist Robert "Shoofly" Shufelt.

The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Call 647-0508 for more information.

© TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature fiber art by Cyndi Clark and Jan Harrison in "Finding a Voice through Fiber." The exhibit continues through Friday, Aug. 28. The Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces is located at 2000 S. Solano Drive, with regular gallery hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Clark has worked in many media over the years. She focused on clay work for about 10 years before transitioning to fiber art. One of her featured pieces in the show is "Freedom's Price," an art quilt that has a piece of fabric representing every soldier who has died in Iraq and Afghanistan since Sept. 11.

Harrison has been involved in fiber arts as a knitter for more than 25 years and has gradually progressed to weaving on a floor loom and basketry. She has done extensive experimentation in achieving movement and using yarns of many sizes and textures. She also uses unexpected materials and colors. The same techniques go back and forth between her tapestries and basketry.

For more information, call the church office at 522-7281.

© TERRACE GALLERY

The Terrace Gellery, in the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, features art by the Las Cruces Art Association through out August titled "Everything Goes." Artists include Carol Groves, Olivia Solomon, Mary Lacy, Kurt Van Wagner and Judy Licht. The show runs through Friday, Aug. 28. Paintings of all media as well as photographs and a stained glass mirror are featured. Most artwork is for sale and can be purchased for $200 or less.

© BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

Two new exhibits are at Branigan Cultural Center. "Batteries Not Required" is a display of historic cameras, while "Light Fantastic" is a display of the historic craft of quilting in its newest form. The exhibits remain on display through Saturday, Aug. 29.

"Batteries Not Required" features more than 70 manual cameras from the collection of Don Brenner. Among the cameras to be displayed are an 1884 Blair with mahogany frame and cherry wood base, a 1909 Graflex with extensible front lens rack and a 1927 Ansco Memo featuring a vertical frame box body using a tubular view finder on top. Also included are early "spy" cameras, various Kodak models including the Brownie, Exaktas and much more.

"Light Fantastic" is an exhibit from New Mexico Art Quilters. Art quilts echo the practical and decorative skills of quilt making from yesteryear, and take new life as an art form equal to watercolor, acrylic and oil paintings. This juried show features 31 quilts by 14 artists from across New Mexico.

The Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. For more information about exhibits, contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit the center's website at las-cruces.org/museums.

An exhibit of vintage turquoise, coral and sterling jewelry along with contemporary designs created by current Native American artisans will be shown in the gallery at Susan Eisen Fine Jewelry & Watches, 5857 North Mesa Suite 19, in El Paso. The show will run through Monday, Aug. 31.

② IN EFFECT GALLERY

Lulu Hedrick, a recent graduate and class valedictorian of Alma d'Arte High School, will present a one-woman show of her various media explorations at In Effect Gallery, 514 W. Griggs Ave., through the month of August.

Hedrick has serious plans for her career in art, including working in screen writing, illustrations and painting. The artist has a truly unique perspective on the art world — one foot solidly in her rich Chinese art culture, the other in western approaches to art in various forms. This expanded view of the art world gives Hedrick a wideopen path for her talent to grow.

Her body of work is a unique mix of the two cultures, both in comparison and contrast, enabling the artist to appeal to many different tastes, while at the same time letting the viewer apply their own interpretations to the

"Las Cruces Collects" offers a rare look into the private art collections of area residents. Featured art works range from European Old Masters to American Contemporary, in a wide variety of media and artistic styles that shed light on the passions motivating collectors of fine art. Organized by the Las Cruces Museum of Art, "Las Cruces Collects" is on display through Saturday, Aug. 22.

In a community as dedicated to the arts as Las Cruces, it should come as no surprise that the area's art collections are as diverse as its residents. Made possible through the assistance of Sally and Glenn Cutter, works are on loan from the private collections of J. Paul Taylor, Kent F. Jacobs and Sallie Ritter, Gayle and Delano Lewis, Stephanie and Mark Medoff, Toby and Richard White, Mireille Dohmen and Mary Streett. The exhibition includes Civil War antiquities, Pueblo pottery, surrealist sculpture, African and Mexican folk art, religious iconography and many other surprises.

Exhibition hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free. Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Ray Baird offers "impressionistic expressionism" in his choice of rural structures and international landmarks. Baird paints with translucent, complimentary oils to give his special touch to architectural and natural subjects that have endured over time.

Hal Fore is primarily an oil painter whose design strategy transforms his subject matter into realistic caricature subjects. His road to art began with cartoons. He has an extensive art background and was a special education teacher in Las Cruces.

In addition, the 30 artists of the gallery offer art in many media, which include original paintings, encaustics, infused glass art jewelry, handmade cards, stained glass, photography, affordable prints and miniature paintings.

The gallery hours are 10 a.m. to

© NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The New Mexico State University Library's Archives and Special Collections Department has mounted an exhibit of historical letters titled 'The Whole Damned World: New Mexico Aggies at War 1941-1945."

The letters were written by former students of NMSU Engineering Dean Daniel Jett from every corner of the world and every branch of the armed services. The exhibit may be viewed in the Milton Gallery on the fourth floor of the Branson Library through October.

The exhibit, which complements the library's recently published book by the same title, includes photographs collected by the Navy and donated to the Archives by Paul Forsberg. Visitors to the exhibit may also listen to an audio stream of former State College president and Army Brig. Gen. Hugh M. Milton, describing the experience during the Battle of Bougainville that earned him a silver star.

© ONO GRINDZ

Kurt Van Wagner's digitally exotic display of the Hawaiian Islands is on exhibit at the restaurant Ono Grindz (Hawaiian restaurant), 300 N. Downtown Mall. Van Wagner's tropicalthemed show features his new Aloha creations depicting luscious swaying palms, magnificent coastlines and all the delights that make Hawaii such a wondrous place.

Van Wagner has traveled numerous times to the islands of Maui, Kauai and the Big Island of Hawaii to capture these vibrant and colorful scenes that make you want to pack your bags and get on that flight today. After Van Wagner discovers and photographs the magical tropical scene, the fun and creative work begin. He digitally hand-paints and textures over his photographs using computer and pen tablet. The results are works of art that are a blend of the realism of photography and the paintbrush of the painter. Van Wagner describes this new digital art as the best of two great art media. Ono Grindz owner Rachel Faulkner said she is excited to add another art venue to the Downtown area. Call 541-7492 for more information. One Grindz is open during lunch and dinner hours Monday through Friday and on Saturday for lunch.

ARTIST DIALOGUE

In conjunction with the 2009 Summer Exhibition at the Preston Contemporary Art Center, digital painter Myriam Lozada-Jarvis will be featured in the latest of a series of artist dialogues at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug 23, at the gallery. Lozada-Jarvis will discuss her digital paintings in the exhibition and enjoy conversation with the audience about the body of work. Admission is free.

Lozada-Jarvis' interest in all things new in art led her to adopt a computer to create energetic compositions to produce fine art prints on paper or canvas. Her approach to these new tools parallels her traditional use of paint and ink. She creates brush strokes that contain bits and pieces of other images that are either photographs or drawings she has made using traditional techniques.

② ARTIST RECEPTION

In conjunction with ArtsHop, the Las Cruces Museum of Art will host an artist's reception for sculptor Michael Naranjo from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 11.

While serving in the Vietnam War, a grenade exploded and he was left totally blind. Finding himself without sight and with minimal use of his right hand, he was determined to find a way to sculpt. Depending on visual images from the past, and despite a great deal of trial and error. he found a way to work through his disability.
Today, his sculptures are represented in individual and museum collections worldwide, including at the Vatican and the White House. He currently resides in Santa Fe. Carved in alabaster, "Reclining Nude" is a larger-than-life work depicting a female figure. The piece is currently on display at the Museum of Art. Naranjo invites visitors to touch and explore this work of art.

Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is one of 14 participants in ArtsHop 2009. The Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St., at the north end

FEATURED ARTIST

Tom Green: Seeing the world through his lens

From the Organ Mountains to White Sands, this artist has the region's landmarks covered

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Beginning 40 years ago with a single purchase, photographer Tom Green has transformed his passion for photography into another career.

After the buying his first camera while in Vietnam in 1969, the former clothing store owner progressed with photography trends, shifting from film and the lab to digital and the computer "light" room.

"It's a creative outlet," he said. "Digital offers so much more. The quality surpasses film. It's a lot more fun and is a more creative venue.'

The Amarillo, Texas, native, graduated from West Texas State with a biology degree. He came to Las Cruces in 1973 with his wife Linda, whom he met on "the only blind date" in his life.

"It was love at first sight," he said. "When I saw her walk across the room, I said in my mind I would marry her.'

After several ventures in retail, at age 49, Green decided to put his biology background to use and began studying nursing at New Mexico State University. After graduating, he began a 15-year career in the home health care field.

"I wanted to work with the community," he said. "I loved doing it."

Creating the perfect image

Selling his work Downtown every Saturday, has enabled Green to market himself locally. Offering his work for as little as $5 for an unframed piece and $250 for framed work, his professional photography is accessible to everyone.

Tom and

BETH SITZLER

Linda Green

"I'm not trying to get rich," he said, explaining that his goal is to provide art to those who may not be able to afford it.

Green said most of his photographs begin with an idea and after he has a mental plan he sets out to shoot his subject. He works the image in Photoshop, spending days, even weeks, adjusting color, the overall look of the image and cropping until it is perfect.

"I'm trying to create something I can really be proud of," he said. "That's why it's so satisfying when someone buys it."

Green prints his images on canvas because he thinks glass diminishes the image's quality. He also does all of his own framing.

"Canvas really jumps out at you," he said, adding "anyone can take a photo, put a mat on it and hang it on the wall."

Proclaimed as a "nontraditional" photographer, Green said he likes to create big images, sometimes as large as 44

"I don't like to do what everyone else does. I try to be more creative," he said. With his "eclectic" style, Green said he shoots anything that appeals to him, such as landscapes, flowers and wildlife. He said he leaves shooting people to Linda, who also is a photographer.

To photograph his flowers, Green said he uses a macro-lens and natural light to capture every detail. When it comes to shooting his favorite subject, horses, Green uses a similar approach focusing on the animal's detail.

"I love shooting horses," he said. "The real the animal and its character. It's difficult to do sometimes.

Capturing the Southwest

Although his horse images are big sellers, his most popular photographs are those that showcase the region's landscape.

With some of his most popular images being local attractions, such as White Sands National Monument and various old missions, Green knows how to cater to his clientele.

"You have to give people what they want - within reason - or it will just sit there," he said.

One of his most used – and most popular – backdrops is the Organ Mountains. Green said since he began at the farmers market he has sold more than $2,000 worth of prints on just one of his Organ Mountain images.

Green said he has big plans for future Organ Mountain images, explaining that once fall arrives he will concentrate on photographing the mountains during sunrise and sunset.

"I want to get the full moon over the mountains with the windmill (located behind A Mountain)," he said.

Adventures in retirement

Photographing the Las Cruces landmark isn't the only thing Green has planned for himself and Linda this fall.

In May, the ex-power lifter made the decision to "semi-retire" from nursing. Now that he is working every other weekend, he said he will be able to attend the farmers market on Wednesdays and Saturdays with Linda and their daughter Natalie, who is the manager of the framing section at Hobby Lobby.

Along with celebrating their 43rd wedding anniversary in September, the couple is also planning on traveling and photographing northern New Mexico, Arizona and Maine, among other areas, for arts and craft shows.

"Starting this fall, my dance card will start filling up pretty quickly," he said.

One area he plans to grow pairs Bible scripture with his images, which he began creating three months ago. While customers have chosen their favorite verse and image, Green said he usually has to decide what fits with what.

"The most difficult part," he said, "is choosing the scripture and figuring out what image to put with it.

Through it all, Green said he plans to continue to do what he likes and wants to improve his craft.

'You're always evolving and changing," he said. "And the more you do it, the better you'll be.

but customers drive menu offerings

Monday through Saturday

8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

This week marks the two-year anniversary of Jake's Café and the diner in the village of Doña Ana continues to evolve.

For Jake Harkness, who owns the restaurant with his wife Norma, customizing his restaurant to the tastes of his customers has been an essential element, as important as serving quality ingredients, to the café's survival. He took a chance to pursue his dream of opening a restaurant when he left his job as an assistant manager at Walgreen's to convert what had been a sports-themed restaurant into a diner with personality.

Jake's Café is best known for its burgers, made with fresh-ground local beef and custom-made to the customer's tastes. The regular is a quarter-pound burger, the big is a half-pound and the Monster weighs in at 1 pound.

"We'll make it any way they want it," Harkness said. "Everything is made to order – fresh."

One of those custom burgers made for a former New Mexico State University football player became so popular it became part of the menu. Called the Suvia, it is four patties, four slices of cheese, green chile, bacon and ham on a bun with onion, let-tuce, tomato and pickles. Harkness said he has one customer that occasionally drives in from El Paso to order up a

Along the way, other menu items have evolved to fit customer tastes. For example, Harkness makes a mean chicken fried steak, but his customers were more prone to have it smothered in Hatch green chile than the traditional gravy – and, so, that's the way it's found on the menu.

Call ahead for takeout Harkness said he'll still make chicken fried steak with the gravy
– as long as one calls ahead. Making a good gravy takes some preparation, he said. Though it's not on the menu, he has a regular breakfast customer who will sometimes call ahead to fulfill a hankering for biscuits and gravy.

The same goes for Jake's Café's dinner menu that includes Mexican food. If a customer wants tostadas - which isn't on the menu - and as long as he has the ingredients, Harkness figures, "Why not?"

Likewise, the customers have helped add to the café's ambiance with artwork of hot rods and the display of toy cars and other antiques.

Jake's Café sees the bulk of its customers during the lunch hour. The line starts forming at about 11:30 a.m. as people order burgers, rolled tacos, pulled barbecue pork sandwiches, burritos, quesadillas and hogies with bratwurst, Polish sausage or Philly cheese steak.

A popular side dish is Jake's potato salad, but Harkness has recently added hand-cut fries.

Another recent addition is an assortment of fruits and vegetables for sale – onions, apples, garlic, limes, jalapeños, etc. Also for sale is a line of Boylon sodas, which are made with real sugar in adherence to original fountain

Ôn the horizon, Jake's Café is looking at adding a lunch buffet to pull in more people on the go. Though always evolving, there is something about Jake's that still evokes the burger joints of past times, when diners were just as much a part of the community as a library or courthouse.

La Posta de Mesilla

One of their most famous dishes, the "Tostada Compuesta," originated at La Posta in 1939. This dish consists of a toasted corn tortilla cup filled with frijoles, red chile con carne, topped with chopped lettuce, diced tomatoes and grated cheddar cheese. If you prefer green chile, the local" favorite is the sour cream enchilada. This dish consists of corn tortillas smothered with green chile sauce, topped with grated cheddar cheese or monterey jack cheese and sour cream, and includes refritos, rice and our very tasty Mexican slaw. Other La Posta favorites include their compuesta salad, red enchiladas, folded and rolled tacos, beef or chicken flautas, chile rellenos, as well as a wonderful selection of desserts including their very delicious homemade flan and empanadas. Perhaps one of their best kept secrets is their tasty succulent steaks, served with your choice of baked potato, red enchilada, or steak fries, and includes a side of their green chile (of course!).

'More Fun than Bowling' a hit

Local play, quirky and bittersweet

By Jonathan Butz

Even if you don't enjoy the occasional game of bowling, the quirky, romantic and often poignant comedy, "More Fun than Bowling," about a man and his struggles with love and marriage, may be right up your alley.

may be right up your alley.

The No Strings Theatre Company and the Black Box Theatre bring to life this comedy, which uses bowling as a template to parallel the unpredictable crashes and spins of life, while using clever dialogue, careful plotting and a strong cast to create an exceptional portrayal of the pains and joys of love.

and joys of love.

Directed by NSTC Artistic Director Ceil Herman, "More Fun than Bowling" introduces us to Jake (Jeff Peckham), a bowling fanatic who owns and operates the "Dustbowl," a lively bowling alley located in the small Midwestern town of Turtle Rapids. With the help of his young daughter, Molly (Dale Peckham), Jake struggles to operate the "Dustbowl" while navigating his way down life's lane of heartbreak and death.

Tensions rise as we also discover a shadowy figure new in Turtle Rapids known only as Mr. Dyson (Danny Wade), who keeps a watchful eye on Jake, gun in hand.

Originally written by Steven Dietz, the play works well with the Black Box Theatre's small space, playing out in two acts over a minimal set. The music of Tom Waits accents the feel and tone of the play, while the atmospheric lighting effectively carries the story and creates a truly surreal and dream-like tale told through flashbacks and memories.

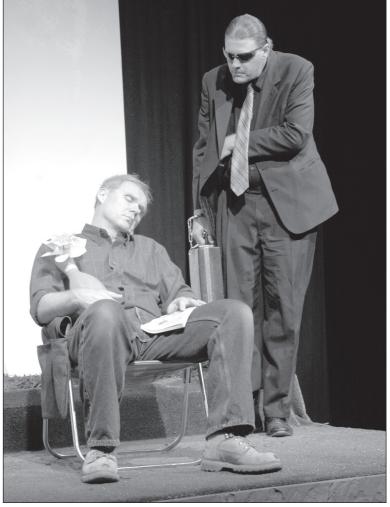

The entire play takes place on a hilltop overlooking the "Dustbowl" and the town of Turtle Rapids. Atop the hill lie the graves of Jake's two former wives, Lois (Katie Richardson) and Loretta (Megan Thompson), both of whom we meet through the dreams and memories of Jake and Molly.

Each scene takes us to a different point in time atop the hill, which serves as a significant meeting point for the characters, to discuss life, bowling and marriage – often through monologue.

All the while, the audience is still aware of the quiet figure of Mr. Dyson, who occasionally offers his own insight, which comically evokes the narrative qualities of Rod Serling.

What really set this production apart were the performances of all the actors. The dynamics between Jeff and Dale Peckham, who are a real-life father and daughter are authentic. The two seem to have moments of true father-daughter affection, while they're playful banter and riffing creates the feeling of a genuine relationship at work. Additionally, Dale Peckham's portrayal of Molly effortlessly brings a sense of wisdom to the play that seems to surpass the age of both the actress and the character.

Thompson as the sweet and simple Loretta and Richardson as the witty, matter-of-fact Lois also offer tremendous support to the play's lively, playful and bittersweet feel. Despite the sad and challenging nature of the play, the characters all have something to offer that offsets the tragedy with sharp, bowlingladen humor.

'Look Homeward' brings Thomas Wolf novel to life in Las Cruces

Latest LCCT production is an American classic

Come and enjoy the latest offering from the Las Cruces Community Theatre, "Look Homeward, Angel," adapted to the stage by Ketti Frings from the novel by Thomas Wolfe and directed for LCCT by Nikka Gornitzka Ziemer.

The show opens Friday, Aug. 21, and runs through Sunday, Sept. 6, at the Las Cruces Community Theatre, 313 N. Downtown Mall.

An authentic American classic, "Look Homeward, Angel" is a powerful and vital play that captures the sardonic humor and the grief, both private and universal, of Wolfe's novel about a youth coming of age.

The story concentrates on the last third of Wolfe's story that traces the coming of age of Eugene Gant in the small town of Altamont, N.C. His mother Eliza is a woman who likes to make "deals" both in business and with people. With the proverbial iron hand in the velvet glove and almost equal concern, she runs the seedy boarding house, Dixieland, with an alcoholic husband, a daughter and two sons.

The play adaptation was awarded the Pulitzer Prize and the New York Critics' award as best play of the season.

The LCCT production stars Evan Hadfield as the troubled

Eugene Gant and Kathi-Jane as his pennypinching and overbearing mother Eliza.

The performance includes numerous regulars to the Las Cruces stage as well as a couple of newcomers, including Dylan Sweet, Autumn Gieb, Heather Castillo, Shaun Hadfield, PJ Waggaman, Mike Cross, Fran Boldt, Cyndi Simpson, Janet Smith, Les Boyse, Desirée Greenwood, Carrie Hakes, Ken Eastlack, Joe Pfeiffer, Bob Singer, Nancy Clein and Jacob Greenwood.

"Look Homeward, Angel" opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 21, with a gala celebration, catered by Lorenzo's de Mesilla, following immediately after the production

Subsequent performances will be at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights and at 2 p.m. Sundays. Tickets are $8 for regular admission, $7 for students, seniors and active military or $5 for children age 6 and under. Rates of $6 per ticket are available for groups of 10 or more.

The struggles of the complicated muse

'Séraphine' explores the life of a misunderstood artist Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletin Being the plebian that I am, I must admit, I'd knew little of the artist Séraphine de Senlis (or Séraphine Séraphine kept her talents secret, painting in her free time, using the simple things of life, such as flowers and her own spirituality, as her models. Being the plebian that I am, I must admit, I'd knew little of the artist Séraphine de Senlis (or Séraphine Louis) until the release of this film.

It was with good fortune that the film was playing a few weeks ago when I was at the Seattle International Film Festival (home of the snottiest paid film fest staffers in the United States – not so of the volunteers).

As directed by Martin Provost, who follows the historical content of Séraphine's life quite accurately, the artist is not romanticized in any way. Rather, we see her as she may have really been.

A charwoman, who had no formal art education,

Caine shines at the CineMatinee

Father-son relationships featured at Fountain Theatre

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, Aug. 29, is "Around the Bend" (2004, 85 minutes, rated PG-13, made in New Mexico).

Director Jordan Roberts' feature debut pulls off the dizzying high-wire act of being both a misty-eyed glimpse into four generations of the men in the Lair family and a steely meditation on manhood, parenting and the pitfalls thereof.

He shares the family home with his grandson Jason (Josh Lucas), his great-grandson Zach and all his memories and mementos until a grimacing, wirehaired wraith appears at the front door one evening and turns quarathing around. and turns everything around.

That wraith is Jason's long-estranged father Turner (Christopher Walken), who walked out on his son and his father some 30 years before, following the death of his wife – and the maiming of his son – in an automobile accident.

Jason is less than thrilled at this possibly malignant returner, a former heroin addict and professional sneak thief, but Henry is exultant, and he takes them to the local Kentucky Fired Chicken for a final meal and then pens a last will and testament that takes the surviving trio on a road trip across the country.

The men head cross-country, stopping here and there at various KFCs to read another Post-It note instruction and a revelation or two. This sort of thing rarely works these days – it's just too difficult to steer the modern audience through the treacherous twin perils of brimstone and treacle without capsizing your craft amid gales of laughter – but somehow Roberts manages to make it work, against all odds.

Caine, of course, owns the screen every second he's on it, but after his character exits the scene, it's up to Lucas and Walken to battle it out, and battle they do. There's an exquisite "fine-tunedness" to the screenplay that belies the occasional gush of sentimentality, and a final grace note that will, yes, mist the eyes of all but the most cynical in the audience.

A fine, familial elixir to remedy despair and soften hardened hearts, "Around the Bend" is likely just the first of many feathers in Roberts's shiny, new directorial cap.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one-half block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287.

The Ionarts blog notes, "these vibrant colors ... are one of the hallmarks of her work. The subject of almost all of her paintings is the flora of the region where she lived, generally viewed from close up and refracted through the bizarre lens of Séraphine's inner vision. She claimed that heavenly voices directed her to paint, visions that later became delusions strong enough to land her in a mental asylum in Clermont. These plants, often dotted and striped like caterpillars or other insects, seem to quiver with life, making them seem more like the fauna of a psychotic landscape.'

I have also read that her work with color may have derived from her admiration of the stained glass windows at her church.

She is mostly ignored by the community as she goes about her daily work – which started when she was 13 – of cleaning homes and running errands for the wealthy and for a convent, her place of solace and quietude.

Then one day, quite by accident Wilhelm Uhde, a wealthy art collector and critic, who was one of the first to recognize the talent of Picasso, discovers a still life Séraphine has done, and talks its owner, a staid and crusty woman who Séra-phine works for, into selling it to him. He is astonished to find out that it was Séraphine who has done this work, and becomes her mentor and financial backer.

Séraphine, quiet and very withdrawn (most of the dialogue in this piece is by the other actors), begins to take a liking to the better life that Uhde has offered her, but as World War I opens, Uhde is forced to leave France, and doesn't return until the 1920s

Finding Séraphine still hard at work, both in the homes of others and at her art, their partnership soon goes haywire as Séraphine begins to go on spending sprees and shares gifts with so-called friends, while at the same time, she starts to lose focus, both on her art and her own emotional state of mind.

The depression takes more of a toll, both on Séraphine's mental health and Uhde's finances, helping to progress a riff between them that becomes hard to repair.

This biographical drama is quiet and moving, and fully depicts the passion and talent that all of us have for something important to us. Séraphine overcame a lack of appropriate supplies, the umbrage of the human race and, for a while at least, her own emotional and mental demons, to create her work, which remains of interest to many today.

Repeatedly, we see movies that walk the same thin line between the arts and mental illness. Of course, we all know that anyone who paints, sculpts, writes or makes movies has to be slightly askew to begin with.

All too often we see artists of note who stumble on that line, who lose their dignity and sanity, only to be "discovered" after they are long gone. Such is the case with Séraphine, a finely detailed and bittersweet film with nary a stumble.

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Improbable. Impossible. Unexplainable. Don't even try – the idea of time travel leaves one with a plethora of questions – How? Why? When? What? And these all may be racing through the minds of those who sit through "The Time Traveler's Wife."

through "The Time Traveler's Wife."

Based on the best-selling novel by Audrey Niffenegger, this flick, directed by Robert Schwentke, explores the woes of a man who is capable of time travel, Henry (Eric Bana). Henry learns of his abilities while traveling with his mother on an icy highway – just before an out-of-control semi-truck strikes their car.

Before you jump to conclusions — no, he doesn't have the power to change the events in the past or the future. He also travels sans clothes — arriving naked in the middle of the woods, or on a busy street, and everywhere in between. This leaves Henry in some precarious positions, often leading to breaking and entering or stealing clothes off the backs of others (even females aren't safe — as evidenced in one scene). It is this key element to time travel that leads him to meet his future wife.

Time traveling often takes Henry to the same places over and over again – drawing him into places where the "big events" of his life happen. One such big event is the fateful meeting of Clare Abshire, a little girl in a field behind her house. When he first appears, he is naked and the little girl offers her blanket to him. They quickly become friends, and he returns several more times throughout the little girl's life.

The same little girl grows up – played by Rachel McAdams – and finds Henry as he works in a library in the present. One downside to this film is that sometimes, the past, present and future become tangled and you may not know which one is actually being played out – this definitely isn't a movie that allows a bathroom break.

The two pursue a relationship despite the obvious

problems with Henry's situation, and the movie explores the power of their connection and Clare's willingness to see beyond the missed Christmases and issues that plague them. One such issue is Henry's genetic mutation that is passed on to their child tion that is passed on to their child.

Bana and McAdams are magical in their on-screen romance and McAdams has really found her niche in these novel-based movies, which include tear-jerker, "The Notebook."

She is talented. End of story. And in this film, her talents are well-tested and she finds just the right balance of emotion and sincerity to portray the role of Clare.

Bana is coming off the release of "Funny People," where he plays an entertaining supporting role, but his performance in "The Time Traveler's Wife" solidifies his talent for playing the leading man. He's handsome and damaged, and his ability to play both self-deprecating and sincere is impressive.

The film itself, although plagued with holes that perhaps the novel could answer, is a good way to spend an evening – it's romantic and exciting, at times, and will have audiences clamoring for more info and insight into the world of time travel – whether real or make-believe. But really – How? Why? When? What?

The back of this postcard reads, "The Old Leasburg Dam, New Mexico. Just off Highway 85, between Las Cruces and Truth or Consequences, the Rio Grande River is halted momentarily in its course from Colorado to the Gulf of Mexico by the Old Leasburg Dam."

Thanks to Carol Gaines for her postcard contribution.

Close to nature and city amenities Find peace and quiet in this spacious mountain retreat

By KRISTINE SANDRICK The Las Cruces Bulletin

Gorgeous mountain views, peace and tranquility await within this beautiful, well-designed and solidly constructed homestead at 15554 Space Murals Lane. One can only imagine the love, care and dedication that builder Harry Stryker put into this home he designed, built and shares with his wife Donna Stryker and their family.

Located just off Highway 70 at the Baylor Canyon Road exit, the house – built on the side of the mountain – is just 15 minutes from shopping, restaurants and services. The 2,862-square-foot home – with a 1,250-square-foot heated, cooled and insulated garage – sits on 5 acres bordering Bureau of Land Management land. A 500-foot paved driveway, bordered with rock walls, takes one up to this mountain view perch.

Views from every room

Since the home site is carved out of the side of the Organ Mountains, they literally rise up from the house's spacious east side courtyard. Off the patio on the west, the valley, city and western mountains afford breathtaking sunset views.

"We selected this site because of the views and the seclusion," Stryker said. "When we moved out here, we were the only house. We loved the views." Since the property borders BLM land, Stryker said it's not likely another house will block the south and west views.

The home was designed in a Southwestern contemporary style and was built to sit lengthwise on the property from north to south. Stryker said that made it somewhat easier to excavate, but more than that, it maximizes the view from every window.

In fact the mountain views are spectacular; there are even great views from the spacious laundry room, guest bath, large office and spectacular courtyard.

Harry and Donna Stryker put a lot of love into the home they designed and built off Highway 70 at Baylor Canyon Road.

"The home is a sanctuary from everyday life," Donna Stryker said. "If I sit in the front garden, I see the mountains and hummingbirds. If I sit on the back porch I see the valley ... I can watch lightning storms. No matter where I go in the house there is a bit of sanctuary."

Green home that's built to last

When he built it in 1998, rather than framing the house, which is typical of many homes in Doña Ana County, Stryker used Insulated Concrete Forms.

ICFs are "stay-in-place forms used to build a superior concrete home," according to industry sources. This construction is known for its excellent energy efficiency, which provides not only a structurally sound home, but also one that is very quiet.

"This is the best energy-conserving house I could build at the time because of the insulation factor ... the walls offer R36 insulation, at a minimum," Stryker said. "It's also very solid. When you close a door, nothing else moves and when you're inside, the house is very quiet."

Las Crucens can attest to the spring winds, and Stryker said the building style is good during windy days, the house is solid. He added that ICF uses 70 percent recycled Styrofoam.

That's not all that's green about 15554 Space Murals Lane. Stryker incorporated a gray water system, which allows the soapy water from showers, tubs, washers and bathroom sinks to irrigate the property's many trees and plants.

The open rooms, with 15-foot ceilings, feature picture windows with views of the western skies, plus clerestory windows that bring the outdoors in and also open to allow fresh air to circulate.

A gourmet kitchen with custom maple cabinets, upscale appliances and an island with a prep sink make this a great place to cook while entertaining guests.

"It's a very welcoming space," Donna Stryker said. "Since the moment Harry and I opened the door for Christmas – three days after we moved in – everyone has felt warm and welcome ...
the space flows so nicely."

Large picture windows in the living room, dining room and kitchen afford spectacular views of sunsets, valley lights and the distant mountains. Hummingbirds zoom in and out of the west side patio, just off the great room.

To the right of the kitchen is the hallway to the garage/workshop, laundry room and half bath, plus the master bedroom, bath and walk-in closet.

Views dominate the master living areas, including those from the window over the garden tub. Rather than typical sinks, glass bowls sit on top of granite vanity tops.

Guests can find their home away from home on the other side of the house. The main guest room has it's own door with access to the west patio and great views of the valley. Even the spacious office affords views of the mountains.

Hangin' with the hawks

In addition to entertaining human guests, this home is a regular haunt for hummingbirds, hawks and a great horned owl with a 6-foot wingspan - that hangs out near the garage.

We have all of that view, beauty and closeness to nature, but we're only 10 minutes from I-25 and Highway 70. It's 15 minutes to the Downtown Mall," Stryker said. "We have the solitude but we can be at every convenience Las Cruces offers in no more than 15 minutes."

The master bedroom has wood flooring, a walk-in closet and a built-in alder dresser with granite top.

Local market hosts its first solar cook-off

By Jonathan Butz The Las Cruces Bulletin

It's no secret that modern man has developed an addiction for all things electric and high-tech. Constantly in front of a glowing screen, today's humans often forget to look up and notice the sunshine that has been lighting our planet for eons.

Hoping to spread more of that sunshine, the Mountain View Market, 1300 El Paseo Road, will have its first annual South West Solar Cook-Off, from 10 a.m. to 2p.m., Sunday, Aug. 23. Participants will have the opportunity to compete in a cooking contest using only a solar oven.

In conjunction with MVM's Peak of the Season Sunday Growers Market, MVM Coordinator for Community Outreach Heather Rische said the event intends to spread more awareness about the benefits of cooking with solar energy.

"It's really about promoting economically friendly ideas and I hope people see how easy it is to cook while using less electricity and conserving resources that aren't eternal," Rische said.

Recent "green" trends have sparked a movement toward harnessing and using solar energy to heat houses and provide electricity; however, few realize the potential solar energy has in the culinary world. Although solar ovens have been on the market since the '80s, people are starting to warm up to the idea of cooking without a stove.

Rische said the event was conceived in response to the popularity of solar ovens at many of MVM's weekly Sunday Growers Market. A few of the frequent growers at the market began making their own solar ovens and would bring them to the events, Rische said. Eventually Rische and others at MVM became inspired to launch the cook-off.

Las Cruces resident Randy Harris has been building his own solar ovens for some time and said there are a number of benefits of solar cooking.

"The food comes out delicious, it's really moist and it cooks evenly, while there's no risk of burning or overcooking the food," Harris said.

Although there are many different types of solar ovens available on the market, Harris said it is fairly easy for one to construct one's own solar oven.

Most solar ovens use a simple design that redirects and amplifies sunlight, concentrating its heat to cook food.

Harris said solar ovens have countless applications and can cook just about anything a conventional oven can cook. Along with cooking vegetables, chicken, beef, breads and pastries, Harris said solar ovens can also be used to sanitize drinking water and eliminates the need for fire on camping and hiking trips.

"Expect to see different kinds of ovens and lots of different foods," Harris said of the event. "There are a wide range of ovens with wide range of different applications."

Recently, Las Crucens had the chance to meet with a solar oven expert when Sun Ovens President Paul Munson visited on Saturday, Aug. 15 to demonstrate his company's solar oven.

Sun Ovens coordinates outreach programs to educate people in developing nations about the benefits and ease of solar cooking. Munson said the company uses money from its U.S. sales to offset the costs of working internationally. He said solar cooking has become a vital part of food preparation in developing and impoverished areas because it requires no electricity and doesn't produce any harmful by-products.

Munson has been on tour promoting his products throughout the Southwest, including Arizona and Utah. He said he was interested in visiting the Las Cruces area because its weather is ideal for solar cooking.

"There are big financial savings, especially in cooling costs because you don't have to heat up your house by turning on a conventional oven, and you're not using electricity or gas," Munson said.

Although solar ovens have only recently gained popularity, Munson said he thinks solar ovens will continue to receive notice because of their ease of use. He said he thinks it took the idea of solar cooking a while to take off because many people aren't used to alternative cooking methods.

"I remember my grandma refused to use a microwave when they first came out. It's the same thing with the solar oven," Munson said. "It's not exactly a method that Americans are used to. It took rising energy costs to help the idea take off."

Rische said people still have time to participate in the cook-off and may arrive as early as 8 a.m. to begin preparing. All dishes must be ready to sample by 1 p.m., and any non-solar food preparation must be disclosed. Chefs are also encouraged to bring copies of their recipes to share. All participants will receive a free T-shirt commemorating the event, while winners will receive prizes.

Along with the Peak of the Season Sunday Growers Market, the cook-off will feature live music, food sampling and a variety of activities. Anyone interested may call 523-0436.

Getting to know your designer pays off

Avoid costly mistakes with careful planning

Have you ever thought, "Gee, I wish I had help in this decorating project?" but you didn't know who to ask or were afraid you couldn't afford it?

Do you have a project that needs more help from a good friend who has good taste?

Here are a few things to help you find an interior designer, prepare yourself to interview him or her and make it a successful joint-venture.

First, ask yourself why you should use an Interior Designer. There are a number of good reasons why you might want to do so. They can help you avoid costly mistakes and can also help you avoid a result where you start saying, "Gee, I wish I had...."

Since the average person remodels every 12 years, designers can bring you up to date on the latest and most cost-effective materials. The 4-inch tile on you shower is now replaced with a minimum of 12-inch tile (less waste to install and easier to keep clean).

A good interior designer can bring extra knowledge and creativity to the project. They have a tendency to think "outside the box" and may be able to bring new thinking about how to achieve your objectives.

One of the best places to find a designer might be references from others who have used an interior designer. You'd want to know that their projects were of the same scale and type as your project. And, you would want to know how well the designer listened to clients and helped meet the objectives.

When searching for an Interior Designer, you need to know the scope of their work. Some designers specialize in drapery, space planning, color and material selections, or staging for home sales.

Be sure your designer has the skills and experience in the areas you need.

If your project will involve construction, your designer has to know something about construction.

Before you start to interview designers, you have some homework to do, which will save you both time and money in working with him or her.

First, start a file for the project. Establish a budget for your project and have a clear (reasonable) idea of what needs to be accomplished within your budget.

Know what your "style" is. Are you a traditional, contemporary or eclectic person? Be prepared to explain to your designer the use you will be giving the area or room. Be able to express your personal likes and dislikes.

Collect materials for your project folder such as paint samples or pictures from magazines that have specific ideas or "looks" that you like. Know what furniture and accessories you want to keep in this area and which ones you would like to take away. See if there are pieces you want to bring in from other areas of the house.

You should now be ready to meet with the designer. In my next column we'll talk about what you need to accomplish with the designer in that first meeting, and how you would want to work with him or her during the actual completion of the project.

Maureen Villmer is an interior designer in Las Cruces with 35 years of experience. If you have questions you would like answered in her column, email her at Maureen@environsonline. com, visit www.environsonline.com or call 575-406 7605

Cordless tool confusion?

How to find a reliable cordless tool

When you use tools every day, you know the benefits of going cordless. But when it comes to finding the best, most powerful and technologically advanced cordless tools for the job, do you know what to look for?

With so many options out there, choosing the right power tool for you can be overwhelming. "A cordless tool isn't all

"A cordless tool isn't all about the battery, although it is a critical factor. Safety, ergonomics and durability as well as battery charger technology and versatility are all key," said Terry Tuerk, product manager at Metabo USA — a leading manufacturer of professional-grade portable electric power tools.

Tuerk offers some top tips to help you find the best cordless tools:

- Pay attention to the latest technology. Lithiumion batteries are lighter, deliver more power and last longer than older battery technology.
- When you're looking for the highest quality tools, check out your local tool distributors. You wouldn't go to the grocery store's freezer section for fresh vegetables, you would go to the local farmers market. The same principle applies to tools. Shop where the experts shop, not at bigbox retail stores.
- Handle the tools before purchasing them. Look for agile tools in compact sizes that fit better into tight spaces. A smaller

- The charger, and how quickly it works, are as important as the tool itself. Metabo cordless tools have batteries that fully recharge in just 30 minutes. Air-cooled charging technology cools the battery during charging to shorten the process by nearly 30 percent. Cell protection technology extends overall battery life and makes the battery last significantly longer between charges.
- Shop around for special features that best fit your needs. For example, some cordless drills have a removable chuck, exposing a recessed hex spindle that allows you to drive screws in tighter spaces. Look for tools that have a built-in LED light for better visibility in low-light areas. "Bottom line, find the "Bottom line, find the tool that performs how you need it to," said Tuerk. "The power behind lithium-ion batteries combined with advanced ergonomics makes the newer 18-volt tools rugged enough for tough applications, while providing user comfort and ease of use."

Keep the big picture in mind and calculate the return on your investment. When you purchase high-quality, professional-grade tools they may cost a bit more up front, but they last longer, perform better and are more powerful than typical consumer cordless tools. In most cases, the tools are also covered by long-term warranties.

The dynamic duo of Las Cruces real estate

Lisa Conway and Estelle Vipond bring clients a fresh perspective

By JONATHAN BUTZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The homes market isn't as bad as some people would like to think – at least not in Las Cruces, and at least not to local Realtors Lisa Conway and Estelle Vipond.

Conway and Vipond have a fresh outlook on the homes market, as they are the newest members of the Coldwell Banker de Wetter Hovious team.

The two decided to form a business relationship after their recent move to Coldwell Banker, and said it was a natural pairing. Serving as the dynamic duo of local real estate, they said they formed a bond because of their ability to work well together, in addition to their shared interests and personalities.

Vipond said their working style has a strong emphasis on customer service, something in which both Realtors said they have specific experience.

"It's more than selling houses, it's about customer service," Vipond said. "If you don't satisfy the customer, then there's no point in the first place."

Vipond got her start as a music major and earned a bachelor's degree at Cameron University in Oklahoma. Aside from her musical talents as an oboist, Vipond used to own and operate two flower shops. She sold one in 1987 and sold the other to her daughter, Marie, in 2004.

Vipond has lived in California, Texas and Oklahoma; however, her roots in Las Cruces eventually pulled her back home.

Vipond said she was interested in real estate because she initially wanted to remodel homes. After receiving her license, Vipond remodeled eight different houses. Vipond's desire to remain active also led her to real estate, as many other people her age began to retire. Now, after five years in the business, Vipond said she is still enthusiastic and eager about her job and the quality of service she provides her clients.

"It came time for me to retire, but I didn't want to," Vipond said. "I'm too active to retire."

Although Vipond has a natural ability in sales and design, she soon found herself in need of some extra help — in walked Conway.

"Lisa came along and she was new to the area and the real estate business, but we found we worked well together and she was really enthusiastic," Vipond said.

The duo said their new relationship has helped them tremendously, especially while marketing their services. In fact, the pair's recent union helps save marketing dollars. Because the two are able to advertise together, they get more ad space, exposure and advertisement in local real estate publications. Many will be able to find the two in a number of local publications including the Real Estate Press and HouseHunt.

Conway, although fairly new to the business, said her experience traveling around the world, in addition to her experience in restaurant and food service management, has given her a strong sense of customer service, something she said is an integral part of the real estate business. She earned a bachelor's degree in business at Penn State and an associate's degree from Paul Smith's University in hotel and restaurant management.

"We've both spent a good amount of time working in customer service, so we connected right away," Conway said of she and Vipond.

A change in Conway's husband's job caused them to move overseas, an experience which eventually took Conway out of the restaurant management business and into the world of real estate.

While living in Germany, Conway met a man who worked in real estate, but struggled with English. Because the area's location near a NATO base presented a vast population of different English-speaking nationalities, Conway stepped in to act as an assistant to the German real estate agent and his clients.

It was during her time in Germany when Conway was able to learn about the real estate business, while carefully honing her newly acquired business skills. She later returned to Las Cruces with a hunger for local real estate.

The dynamic duo is now running at full speed as they continue to help Las Crucens find and sell homes, regardless of what the current housing market may imply.

Vipond said Realtors are often misinterpreted as salespeople who are only interested in their own personal gain. Vipond and Čonway, however, said they are the opposite because they consider the specific needs of their clients, in addition to the emotional weight of selling or buying a new house.

"For a lot of people, selling their house that they've lived in for years is the single largest event in their lives. It's an emotional decision, so we want to treat their home the way they feel about it," Conway said.

They said they are open to help anyone find a home, but they also said they don't discriminate based on financial circumstances. Conway said they focus on entry-level home buyers and people with a limited budgets.

"A lot of marketing is based on retirees and that definitely fits a higher-priced market. But we also want to give those other folks a lot of attention. That's the whole point, is getting people in," Conway said.

Despite the recent crisis in the housing industry, they said now is still a good time to buy a house in Las Cruces, particularly with the tax credit recently made available by the U.S. government. Qualified first-time homebuyers purchasing a principal residence on or after Jan. 1, and before Dec. 1, can receive a tax credit of up to $8,000. Additionally, the loan must be closed by Nov. 30.

"It's a good time, not a bad time, to buy or sell a house," Vipond said. "If you have to sell, you can do it."

Prospective buyers may save money in the long run by finding a Realtor as soon as possible, Vipond said.

Why waste your gas driving around when you can call us and we'll drive you around and find something. Why not just use our gas and our knowledge?" Vipond said.

ground into a small, powder-like substance to be brewed. Coffee grounds can be found at every grocery store and coffee house. Store-bought grounds offer a quick and easy way to make a cup, but what about freshness?

One way to assure you get the freshest ground coffee beans is by simply grinding them yourself. This may sound like a labor-intensive task, but thanks to electronic coffee grinders, the job can be done

What is it?

A coffee grinder is a technological gift to man. This handy machine makes brewing this morning staple fool proof. Simply put, a coffee grinder is a mill that grinds coffee beans to a desired consistency.

The device is available in a variety of sizes to accommodate any grinding quantity. For those who want to use the grinder for one pot of coffee, a small hopper - the part of the grinder that holds the beans is preferred.

For those who wish to grind a large quantity of beans at once, find a grinder with a hopper with a larger capacity.

Grinders come in two forms - blade and burr. While they both produce coffee grounds, they work in different ways.

How does it work?

A blade grinder, generally the less expensive of the two, cuts the beans with metal knives. It sometimes produces uneven-sized grounds, which can lead to an inconsistent brew quality.

A burr grinder, on the other hand, crush the beans between a moving grind wheel and nonstick surface. The position of the wheel regulates grind size, leading to ground consistency.

Coffee grinders come in a wide-variety of prices, depending on the type, its capacity and special features, such as grind settings. A simple, blade coffee grinder can cost as little as $19, while a high-tech, burr grinder with multiple features can cost as much as $200.

There are two different types of burr grinders: wheel and conical. Wheel burrs

As with most kitchen gadgets, the coffee grinder can be found just about anywhere, including Target, William-Sonoma, Best Buy and the on the Internet.

Helptul hints

Be careful when grinding flavored or oily coffee beans since they will most likely clog the machine. If you wish to grind such beans, purchase a conical burr grinder because it doesn't have this problem.

How long you grind your beans is very important because if you grind them for too long, the coffee can taste bitter. Most home coffee grinders don't have grind settings, so the best way to prevent over-ground beans is by timing how long you grind. Here are some guidelines: Plunger pot (French press pot) course grind: 6 seconds. Flat bottom drip pot

Cure what ails you with aloe vera

Medical plant conquers skin problems and makes hair shiny

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

With the summer quickly coming to an end, families may have left over bottles of aloe vera – a common sunburn treatment.

Instead of throwing them away, put the gooey-goodness to use in alternative ways

Aloe vera, also known as a medicine plant, is a succulent, as is the cactus, which is a water-retaining plant. By retaining water in its leaves, stems and roots, aloe has a swollen, fleshy appearance not found with other plants.

Inside the swollen leaves is a rich, gel-like substance that has been used for centuries to cure a variety of ailments, both topical and oral.

Orally, aloe can be used to cure several stomach illnesses such as ulcers. For oral uses, be sure to use commercial, certified products.

For topical uses, however, both fresh and bottled aloe can be used.

- 1. Eliminate infections: Aloe vera can be used to treat bacterial and fungal infections on the skin's surface, such as athletes foot, because it's enriched with natural compounds that reduce inflammation, pain, burning sensations and redness.
- 2. Take care of blemishes: Regular application of aloe vera can help get rid of blemishes and discoloration of skin. Unlike some other commercial products, aloe can be applied on all ranges of skin types, including sensitive skin.
- 3. Want radiant hair?: Lush, shiny hair begins with a healthy scalp and aloe can help. Eliminate dandruff and keep hair texture silky smooth by combining aloe vera, coconut milk and wheat germ oil and massage into the scalp. You can also speed up hair growth by massaging aloe in the scalp and letting it sit for 30 minutes. Be sure to rinse out both concoctions.

Take the guesswork out of flooring

If you haven't shopped for flooring in the past few years, prepare yourself. The vast array of hard-surface options is extensive, to say the least.

From stone to tile, wood to vinyl, linoleum to laminate, the choices can seem endless. How do you sift through the features and benefits of each to choose the product that is best for your home and your needs, from installation to maintenance and upkeep? Equally important, how much is it going to cost to get the floor of your dreams?

New flooring, no matter what type you select, is more affordable than you may think. The key to success in finding the right floor is to go to a reputable, high-quality flooring retailer who can help you make sense of all the choices available in today's diverse marketplace.

"Besides offering great service, the latest designs and an extensive array of product choices,

There are some great flooring products, such as Tarkett FiberFloor, a resilient sheet vinyl that offers unique designs and the performance consumers prefer for day-to-day living.

today's quality flooring retailers also compete when it comes to price," said Gary Finseth, director of marketing for Tarkett Residential, a large flooring manufacturer. "But, their greatest ability is to differentiate themselves with professional sales people who can educate you to make the best purchasing decision for your home and your lifestyle."

A knowledgeable flooring retailer will help you identify the best floor covering choices that complement your style of living, as well as the colors and finishes that suit your individual tastes. This includes more than just showing samples of various flooring options. A quality flooring retailer helps consumers understand how traffic, cleaning needs and other factors can influence a flooring decision – especially when performance and value are the key factors in most every decision.

For example, you might love the look of real hardwood floors, but if your home has a lot of traffic and activity, an indent and wear-resistant laminate might be the best (and far more affordable) choice for you. Today's laminate offerings are designed so authentically to mimic wood and other surfaces, it's often hard to tell the difference.

If you're looking for a more performance-based flooring option, some great new products offer unique designs and the performance consumers prefer for their day-to-day living. One option retailers recommend is Tarkett FiberFloor, a fiber-backed resilient sheet that is warm and comfortable underfoot, which is resistant to water and moisture, stands up to scratches, scuffs, stains and indentations, and is easy to maintain.

Or, if you're interested in a high-end flooring look such as

The search for the state's best green chile cheeseburger kicks off the department's new Culinary Trails campaign. The trail is designed to showcase the best restaurants, farmers markets, wineries and microbreweries the Land of Enchantment has to offer.

Any New Mexico-based restaurant is eligible for nomination in the Trail, as long as it serves a burger – beef, bison or "veggie" – with cheese and New Mexican green chile.

Among the statewide burger hopefuls are a few local favorites. Double Eagle in Mesilla, Burger Nook in Las Cruces and Jake's Café in Doña Ana are all in the running for the elusive title.

marble, stone or ceramic tile but don't like their cold, fragile and pricey applications, many floor-covering retailers recommend turning to luxury vinyl tile. Products such as NAFCO's PermaStone duplicate the look of natural ceramic and stone tile, but are warm, soft and even come with multiple grout options (or none at all) for installation.

Installation is part of the complete package of details and services that comes with a specialty flooring retailer especially if you don't have the time, tools or temperament to do a quality install yourself. The best retailers take care of all the details so you don't have to worry about them.

A good retailer will provide you with recommendations and services such as:

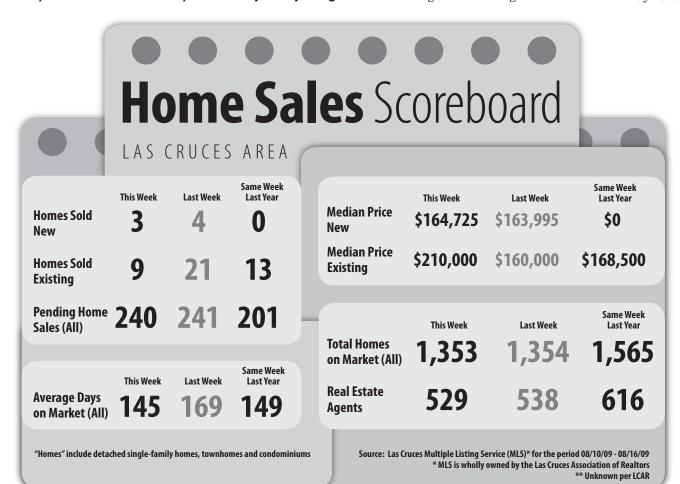

- Suggest the proper moldings and why moldings are needed for certain flooring transitions.
- * Recommend premium underlayments, such as Tarkett's

Quiet-Cor, which provide better sound insulation and moisture penetration.

- Proper measuring and estimating services to avoid waste or materials shortages
- Complete installation, including the necessary cutting of door jambs and other accessories
- All the right tools, including specialty saws and underlayment tape (these are tools that most do-it-yourselfers wouldn't think to purchase)
- Full installation warranty
- Individualized follow-up, usually 30 days after installation, to fix any problems
 Most people don't shop for floor-

Most people don't shop for flooring every day – or even every year – so with so many choices, styles, prices, features and benefits available, it's nice to know that today's quality flooring retailer is there to help.

Chile questions

Is it possible to make enchiladas and freeze them for about a week before thawing and heating? When put in the freezer, should they be precooked or uncooked? Barbara H.,

I prefer baking the enchiladas first without the cheese on top. Once thawed, I reheat them in the oven sprinkling the cheese on top during the last few min-utes (less rubbery). I think freezing them uncooked takes away from the flavor.

Sizzlin' Chile-Hot Apple Pie

Prepare your favorite pastry dough recipe, enough for two crusts. Divide it in two balls and wrap each separately in wax paper.

- 6 green chiles, roasted, peeled, seeded and chopped
- 6 to 8 medium size tart apples, peeled and quartered, cored and cut into 1/2-inch slices
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 1/2 tablespoons butter

Toss apples with sugar, flour, lemon peel, nutmeg, cinnamon and chiles. Set aside. Place oven rack at its lowest position and heat oven to 425 degrees Roll out 1/2 pastry dough and gently fit into pie plate; trim edges, leaving a 1-inch overhang. Spoon filling into pastry-lined plate. Dot with butter. Roll out remaining dough. Moisten edges of bottom crust with water. Place second crust on top to seal; flute or crimp edge. Brush top crust with a mixture of egg and water. Cut leaves or little apples with remaining dough and decorate top of pie crust. Bake 40 to 50 minutes or until apples are tender and crust is golden brown. If crust browns too much near end of baking time, cover loosely with foil. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 1 pie or 8 servings.
