Time to save on school supplies

Back-to-School tax-free holiday is this weekend

By TODD G. DICKSON

It begins just after midnight

Friday, Aug. 7, and ends midnight Sunday, Aug. 9.
Following the long, hot summer vacation, it is a time parents anticipate almost as much as the first day of school following the long, hot summer vacation.

It's the annual Back-to-School Tax Holiday. From computers and shoes to pens and crayons, no taxes will be charged on school-related items in stores throughout New Mexico.

"Every year, New Mexicans look forward to the back-to-school tax holiday and this year the anticipation is even higher as families struggle through the current economic climate," said Gov. Bill Richardson. "The tax holiday is much needed-relief for families across New Mexico, allowing them to address their children's back-to-school needs without breaking their budgets."

This will be the fifth year

New Mexico has forgone back-toschool gross receipt taxes. Prior to that time, New Mexicans used to go to El Paso when Texas lifts its sales tax for back-to-school supplies, which this year will be Aug. 21 through 23.

"I would like to thank all retailers participating in this program because it not only makes good business sense, but they're also making a valuable contribution toward the educa-tion of our children," said New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department Secretary Rick Homans. "I encourage all parents to take advantage of this program and save the extra cash.

Nontaxable items include:

- Clothing and footwear $100 or
- School supplies that are typically used in a classroom setting, such as pens and paper $15 or less
- Computers $1,000 or less Assorted computer equipment $500 or less.

The price limits are on each item, not the total amount spent for all purchases. For example, a family could purchase two computers tax-free as long as each computer did not exceed the $1000 limit per computer.

For more specific information on the legislation, definitions, types of sales, rain checks, exchanges, refunds, gift cards, layaways, Internet, mail order and telephone sales, visit the NMTRD website at www.tax.state.nm.us and click on the Gross Receipts Tax Holiday and Tax Holiday List links. The items are listed on the NMTRD home page under the headline "Visit New Mexico Taxpayer Services." Scroll down to Gross Receipts Tax Holiday and Tax Holiday List.

'Rocket with wings' launches and lands in 'perfect flight'

By TODD G. DICKSON

A new rocket system was successfully tested Tuesday, Aug. 4, at Spaceport America, which showed how the new spaceport can provide a most-effective option to companies developing new spacecraft, said New Mexico Spaceport Authority Executive Director Steve Landeene.

This wasn't the first time Spaceport America and its UP Aerospace launching system has been used for a research-anddevelopment launch. Lockheed Martin has conducted two R-and-D launches over the past year, but without news coverage.

But Moog-FTS officials agreed to allow press coverage of this week's test launch of an automated rocket that glides back to the ground.

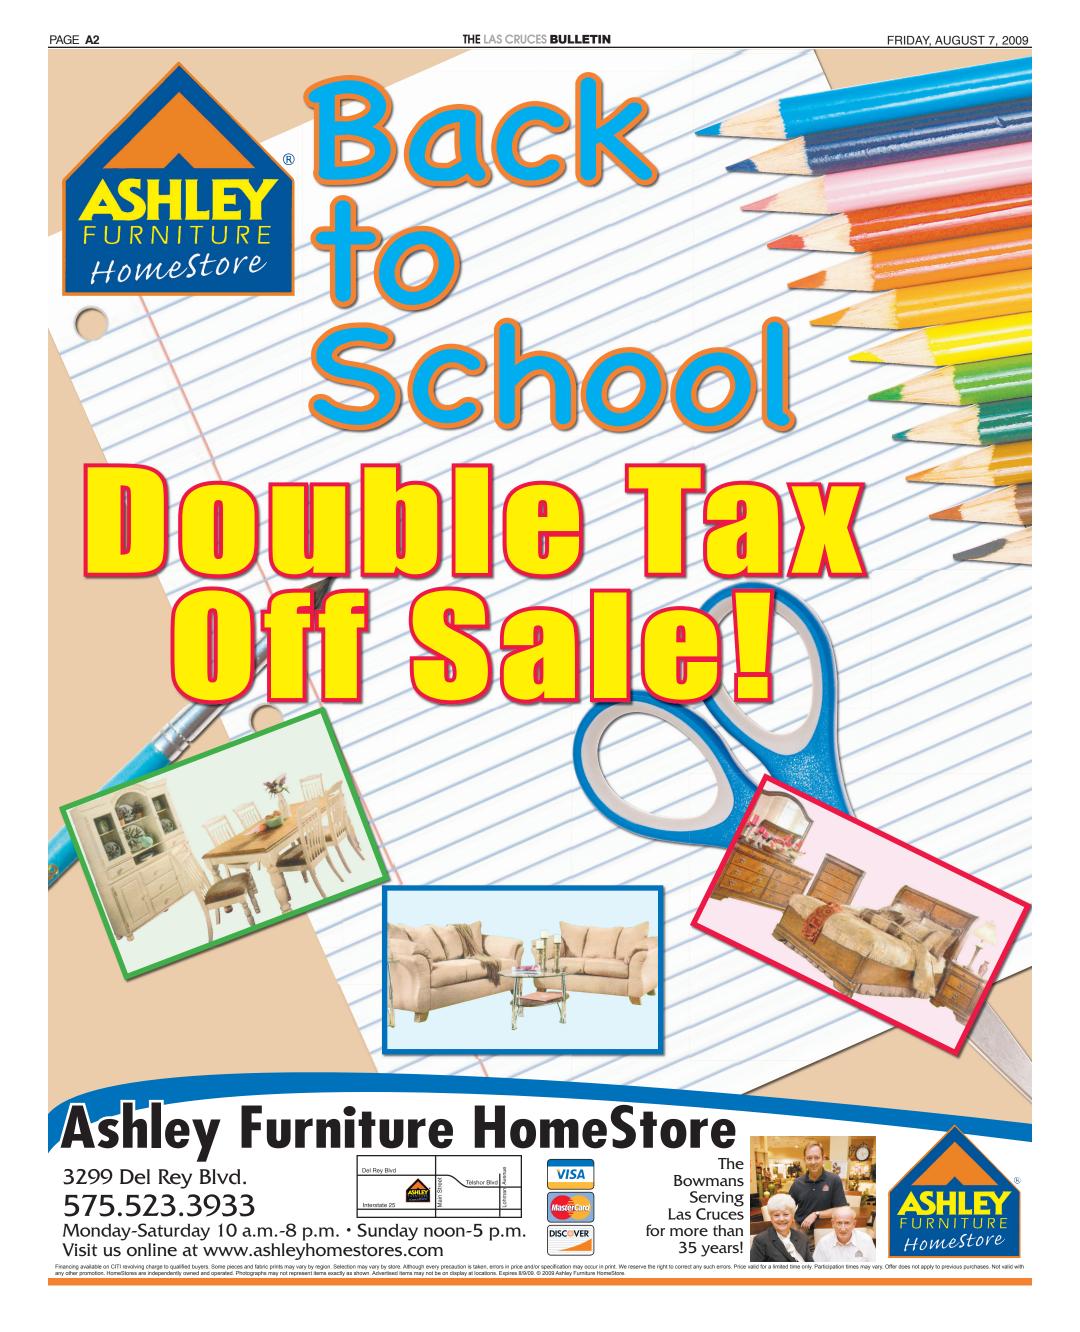

"It's basically a rocket with wings," said Landeene to describing the eight-foot-long spacecraft.

Even more critical than it being a winged rocket was its ability to follow programmed instructions to glide back down to the ground and land on a dirt road "landing strip" after being propelled 2,200 feet in the air.

Landeene said those in the private space industry are looking for ways to retrieve rocket boosters, rather than having them go to waste. This kind of innovation can accomplish that goal, he said, and also is of interest to the military.

The original plan that morning was to have two flights of identical vehicles, but the first rocket's Global Position System guidance system failed – probably due to a static electricity discharge when dust was whipped off it earlier. The GPS from the

Kyrgyzstan film crew shoots pecan orchards

Asian farmers to learn lessons from Mesilla Valley farmers

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Farmers in the Central Asian country of Kyrgyzstan will get an idea of how Mesilla Valley farmers overcome problems through a documentary filmed here July 30 and 31.

'We are filming documentaries on American agri-business and farming to broadcast locally in the Ferghana Valley in our country," said Guljamal Chokmorova, agriculturist and interpreter, while touring a pecan farm operated by Dickie Salopek north of Las Cruces.

She said the Mesilla Valley was selected because the soil and climate are similar to Kyrgyzstan. Farmers in her country want to learn how farmers here deal with fuel and fertilizer costs, climate and water supply stress and world market competition.

"This tour has been very useful for all of our local farmers, film crew reporter Aigul Batirovo through an interpreter.

Cameraman Mamir Abdullaev kept looking around for photographic opportunities.

The film crew members said they have an Asian ethnic background and their language is a dialect known as Kyrgyz.

When asked what kind of crops her country raised, she answered, "everything." When pressed, she provided an impressive list of produce:

Cotton, corn and soybeans, grains such as barley, wheat, oats and rice; several fruits such as apricots, plums and cherries, and field crops such as potatoes, cantaloupes, onions, carrots, cabbage, sweet peppers and squash.

Nut trees were not new to the film crew members because farmers in their country grow walnuts.

"They asked simple questions," Salopek said. "But they were really interested in the pecan harvesting equipment."

The equipment includes tree shakers, orchard floor sweepers to pick up the nuts and the cleaning plant where the darker sticktight nuts are separated out by an electronic scanner.

The documentary crew started its tour in the southern part of Doña Ana County where they visited the farm of Ramon Alvarez, who grows organic cotton.

On the second day, the film crew visited the Ronnie Franzoy farm near Hatch where he grows alfalfa, cotton, chile, onions and pecans.

The film crew members, who had toured farms on the East Coast, said the Mesilla Valley was one of the most hospitable farm areas they had visited.

"For me, it was a wonderful experience to be a host for an international group," said Doña Ana County Extension Service horticulturist Jeff Anderson. "We showed them true New Mexico hospitality.

We showed them different New Mexico crops, New Mexico cuisine like chile dishes and pecans. They had never eaten pecans, and they like the taste photographer Mamir Abdullaev, interpreter Guljamal Chokmorova and reporter Aigul Batirovo.

of pecans. We showed them our sustainable agriculture, how we have a good thing going here and how we would keep it going."

Cameraman Abdullaev said that he would like to return and attend New Mexico State University.

The documentary film crew works for Daston TV and arrived in Las Cruces, Thursday, July 30. They met with NMSU agricultural experts for a driving tour of both organic and commercial cotton production, and later visited Western Blend Fertilizer for a tour of pecan production.

"There is a lot to be gained by developing these relationships, not only within the state but across the U.S. and with other countries. There are some great collaborations that have developed that not only assist us, but also allow us to assist other individuals," said Jon C. Boren, associate dean and director of NMSU's Cooperative Extension Service.

The film crew was also interested in the support NMSU provides to local farming production.

"The university is a great ganization that works with organization that works local farmers and supports them, consults with them and provides a great assistance to them," Batirova said.

The group's visit was a public affairs project sponsored by the U.S. Department of State.

A release from New Mexico State University's University Communications contributed to this report.

Crime Stoppers: Armed robbery

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward for information that leads to the arrest of the two men involved in a recent armed robbery.

Just before 9 p.m. on Friday, July 31, Las Cruces Police were called to investigate an armed robbery that occurred at the Family Dollar store at 1690 S. Solano Drive. Detectives learned that two men, one of whom brandished a handgun, entered the business and demanded money from an employee of the store.

The men were last seen leaving the store and running westbound on Missouri Avenue.

Both suspects were said to be Hispanic, and in their late teens or early 20s. The men were both described as having thin builds and were approximately 5-foot-10inches to 6-foot tall. Witnesses said both men were wearing blue jeans and dark-colored shirts.

If you have any information regarding this armed robbery you are asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 526-8000 or outside the Las Cruces area at 800-897-

City changing utility billing

New system starts Aug. 10

The City of Las Cruces is starting a new utility billing system for natural gas, water, wastewater and solid waste services for municipal and Rio Grande Natural Gas Association accounts.

According to a press release, the new billing system is more efficient, modern and easier for utility customers.

more efficient, modern and easier for utility customers. However, customers should take note of several changes/disruptions to billing and payment services currently ongoing and expected to continue until Monday, Aug. 10:

- E-Pay (online payment system) is being replaced by a new system called Citizen Self Service (CSS); neither system is available until Aug. 10.
- Link 2 Gov for payments by phone is temporarily unavailable.
- August bills will be sent out several days later than usual.
- New connections and disconnections will be handled as normal at Customer Service inside City Hall.
- All other payment options are available at City Hall, at the drive-through window at 1201 S. Solano Drive, or through third-party online bill-paying services.

The conversion to this new billing system will not cause any disruption in utility services provided to businesses or residences, nor will there be any rate increase associated with this conversion.

Every customer will have a new account number. If you use online bill payment services, when you receive your new bill you will have to notify your bank or other online service of your new account number. The new account number will generally be nine digits followed by a hyphen and your new customer number.

Utility customers will notice some changes in the look of their bills, including a more detailed breakdown of charges. For example, franchise fees that are currently passed on to customers will be shown separately from charges for services. Also, the city's logo on the new bill will be printed in black rather than in blue as it was on the old bills.

City gas customers will see a small increase in the gas portion of their bills equal to 2 percent of the cost of gas charge. This is for the franchise fee that the Gas Fund has absorbed in the past but will be passed on to the customer beginning in August. If the cost of gas charge is $50, the customer will see a franchise fee of $1 on their bill. The change is unrelated to the new billing system but will be implemented at the same time.

second vehicle was swapped into the one mounted on UP Aerospace's rocket guide rail and the first rocket launched for a quick flight and landing.

"It landed right on target," reported UP Aerospace President/CEO Jerry Larson. "It was a perfect flight. You could see it was stable through the whole flight. The (Moog-FTS) guys inside (launch control) are just ecstatic."

Though UP Aerospace Vice President Bruce Lee said the team "ran out of time and parts" for the second flight, it successfully showed the system would work and the rocket launch company showed it could provide low-cost testing at its Spaceport America facilities.

"We showed we can do it fast and responsively," Lee said.

Had the company tried to do this kind of test at a traditional government facility, it would have cost much more and taken longer to get approval, he said.

"Moog-FTS is an important player in space research and manufacturing technology, and we are excited to be in a position to provide low-cost, fast-turnaround launch operations for their R&D projects," Larson said.

Landeene said the day's test illustrated other commercial space opportunities for the new spaceport outside of the highly publicized space tourism.

"This is another example of delivering on the unique capabilities of the commercial space sector," he said. "Major players in the space industry like Moog-FTS and other aerospace companies are increasingly becoming aware of the opportunities available at Spaceport America. I'm proud that we continue to set the standard for safe, low-cost commercial spaceflight.'

Progress at Spaceport America continues. Road improvements to the spaceport are now complete, and bids are being reviewed and awarded for construction of the $198 million complex. The latest Requests for Proposal (RFP) and Invitations to Bid (ITB) can be found online at www.spaceportamerica.com.

Spaceport America will have a 10,000foot runway complete by late summer 2010 with the Terminal Hangar Facility for Virgin Galactic projected to be complete by early 2011. Virgin Galactic plans to fly tourists to space for $200,000 a ticket on its mid-air launch system. Recently, Abu Dhabi's Aabar Investments agreed to pay $280 million to Virgin Galactic to become a 32-percent owner in the company. Reportedly, Abu Dhabi's primary interest is the system's development to launch small satellites. Though Virgin has agreed to locate its headquarters in New Mexico, it also plans to conduct flights from other spaceports such as Spaceport Sweden.

Besides Virgin Galactic, UP Aerospace, Lockheed Martin and, now, Moog-FTS, other companies at Spaceport America include Microgravity Enterprises and Payload Specialties.

Back-to-school is one of the important sale periods for retailers, almost rivaling the Christmas shopping season.

With Christmas shopping in mind, children are asking their parents to buy a few extra items for Operation Christmas Child, the world's largest Christmas project. By adding a few extra items to their back-to-school shopping lists and saving the boxes from their newly purchased shoes, they are joining the effort to help 8 million children in more than 100 countries.

Operation Christmas Child, project of international relief and the evangelism organization Samaritan's Purse, has volunteers fill shoeboxes with toys, necessities, school supplies, candy and often hand-written notes. The gifts are then hand-delivered to children worldwide who are suffering because of natural disaster, disease, war, terrorism, famine and poverty.

"With all the sales on back-toschool items, this is the perfect time to start buying items for a shoe-' said Andrea Uhl, Operation Christmas Child Southwest regional director. "It's such an incredible blessing to be involved in a project that lets kids who are suffering in other parts of the world know that someone really cares about them."

For many of these children, the shoebox gift will be the first gift they have ever received, letting them know they are loved and not to the success of our hometown company

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Over the past couple years, people have been amazed that our Las Cruces-based publishing company has flourished while many newspapers and magazines across the country have struggled to stay afloat. The reasons for our success are many, and those reasons have very little to do with being "lucky." And, while I most certainly do not have all the answers, I am pleased to share a few of the core values that Jaki and I hold dear at the Bulletin. Hopefully, some of these ideas will provide encouragement to others

Mccollum

Start with a vision – Any business must have a raison d'etre, or reason for being. You must be passionate about your chosen business because you, as the leader and visionary, must be the champion of your endeavor every day.

Carefully select your market – The market where you choose to operate your business must be dynamic. This means that it should be growing and should provide a solid customer base, both today and into the future. Las Cruces is an absolutely perfect location to start a business, especially when you consider that by 2020, our city is projected to be one of the five fastest-growing markets in the United States.

Hire only the best and brightest - Jaki and I have established a set of guidelines for hiring new employees. Can this person represent themselves and our company well for a reasonable length of time? We have found that it does little good to hire a talented person who stays with your company for a year or less. We typically ask for a minimum of a two-year commitment. Also, is this person trustworthy? Can we and our customers trust this person's word to be good, and will they put in a solid day's work every day? Assuming a person passes these criteria, we then consider a person's skills, education and experience.

Provide a positive work environment – My dad used to tell me that if a job is worth doing, it's worth doing well. At the Bulletin, we place a high value on quality, creativity and accuracy. While we realize that we will never be perfect, we will always attempt do our best every day. Within budget limitations, Jaki and I try to provide all employees with a professional work environment and best tools to do their best work every day.

Consistently provide "over-the-top" customer service – From how we answer the phone and welcome visitors at our front desk to ensuring that our newspapers are delivered to customers on time, every week, we all do our best to ensure that our customers needs and expectations are met or

Be fiscally responsible - Some wonderful local businesses have failed because the owners either did not understand cash flow or they overextended their financial resources by taking on too much debt. A good, straight-talking accountant is a wise investment for any small business.

Build relationships with other successful business leaders – It is always easy to find nay-sayers and pessimists. Avoid these people. Instead, spend your precious time with those who are successful and are constantly trying to improve their operations.

Have a spiritual center – This may be the most important aspect of a successful business. One of the most challenging lessons I have learned is that I, as an individual, cannot control the destiny of my business. I have been blessed with a life partner, Jaki, from whom I have learned that our faith in God is the foundation of our business and of our lives. As difficult as life and business are today, I cannot imagine how anyone can survive without a strong faith and a spiritual center.

Jaki and I are honored to have served Las Cruces through our publications over the past six years. We are excited about our company's expansion into Rio Rancho and Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque. We have been blessed with an incredible group of employees who take great pride in producing our publications each week.

Thanks to Las Cruces residents and businesses for the opportunity to live the American Dream. And thanks to God for giving us the energy, strength and wisdom to serve Him through our publications.

Letters to the Editor

Teague may be shell-shocked

A reader of the Las Cruces Bulletin wrote to complain that Rep. Harry Teague met only individually with residents of Las Cruces. The letter writer wanted to confront the congressmen in a crowd, concluding that Teague was hiding something by having three-minute tete-

Maybe Teague was just shell shocked from the screaming critics of "cap and trade" who attacked him at an open meeting in a Silver

Threatening behavior undemocratic

The loud, rude and even threatening behavior demonstrated lately toward public officials is shameful and undemocratic. Democracy means we all get to speak our opinions without fear of reprisal by the government or any other citizen. Democracy doesn't mean you get to have your voice carry more weight than any other citizen.

I hear many times on talk radio and TV shows that, "the government isn't listening to us, we, the people." It just isn't true. Elected members and hired employees of the government listen plenty.

I think most of the speakers actually mean the government is acting differently than the speaker thinks it should. The government did listen, did hear what all the speakers had to say and then did something that some of the speakers think is not the best way to address the issue at hand.

It is usually at this point the name calling begins.

The purpose of this letter is to say I think it is our patriotic duty to quiet those who are name-calling, to nip the temptation to abuse elected officials in the bud and to restrain our disappointment from slipping into something mean-spirited and ugly.

If the government does something you don't like, work to change it. Don't call the involded officials names. This is what elections are for.

While yelling at elected officials gives some short-term relief, trust me, the very best feeling is electing someone else and sending the patriotic but misguided one home

So, you think New Mexico's got it bad?

Neighboring states budget calamities are far worse than ours

Tough economic conditions sometimes require imaginative, even desperate, solutions. Budget crunches have hit our neighboring Southwestern states with a vengeance. Arizona, California and Nevada have suffered budget deficits of 20 to 25 percent.

New Mexico has come off relatively easily with a 4 percent deficit. It also has more than a 10 percent cash surplus, which could be used to erase that deficit, but lawmakers like to keep a comfortable reserve just in case even worse times are to come.

So New Mexico legislators are talking about furloughs and layoffs of state employees rather than use of cash balances or repealing Gov. Bill Richardson's tax cuts for the wealthy or requiring out-of-state corporations to pay taxes equal to in-state businesses.

They call those "painful" remedies. Any kind of tax increase is painful, even if it is on rich people or rich corporations. Those same rich people and corporations also tend to make big donations to political campaigns.

And we wouldn't want to create an unfavorable business climate for big corporations. Wal-Mart might move out. A host of small local businesses would cheer that.

Our neighbors to the west already have tried the less painful options and are having to get more creative. California has OK'd some offshore drilling and may have to do some more, even off Santa Barbara.

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger wanted to drill there but the Democratic-run Legislature wouldn't approve, so the governor made cuts in education and children's services in retaliation. He also began issuing IOUs.

For awhile California was considering legalizing marijuana, which would have brought in big tax money, but junked it while still considering auctioning off state owned items signed by the celebrity governor.

If you think that's desperate, in Arizona they are considering selling their state capitol buildings and renting them back. Arizona's complex of state capitol buildings isn't impressive. They look just like office buildings, except the old capitol, which is now a museum.

New Mexico would have to get awfully desperate to sell its distinctive capitol, which is full of unique New Mexico art. The art may be worth more than the building.

In Arizona's capitol, we saw prints of paintings by New Mexico artists, including two in the governor's office. And that wasn't during New Mexico-raised Janet Napolitano's administration. The governor at the time was Republican Fife Symington.

Southwestern states aren't the only ones getting hit hard by this bad economy. Several Southeastern states have not yet begun issuing refunds due on individual income tax returns. That is money that would go right back into stimulating the economy.

Although New Mexico state government revenues aren't in as bad shape as most other states, portions of our state are not as well off economically as others.

Southeastern New Mexico' economy has Southeastern New Mexico' economy has suffered ever since the end of the oil boom. And the outlook isn't good with many wells in secondary and tertiary recovery.

So, around 25 years ago, the southeastern part of the state began looking at the nuclear industry as a financial savior. JAY MILLER
Inside the Capitol

That isn't something most of our state would accept but it is one of those imaginary and desperate solutions nary and desperate solutions.

First came the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, near Carlsbad, N.M. It has turned out to be an economic boon, while controlling hazards. Now the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has granted its first license in 30 years for a major commercial nuclear facility near Eunice, N.M.

The plant will be the nation's first private fuel source for commercial nuclear power plants. Many other states had turned it down. With the nuclear enrichment plant on its way, talk has turned to construction of a nuclear power plant nearby.

Concerns have been raised about disposal of the waste, for which there is no depository in the nation. That has begun talk of a high-level New Mexico depository. Richardson has opposed the idea, but if the locals and the federal government want one, they might be difficult to stop.

Letters to the Editor

Against health care bill

America's Affordable Health Choices Act of 2009, that's what it's called.

Affordable, what does that mean? To whom is it affordable? The plan is to add, by some counts, 45 million uninsured, of which 12 million are illegal aliens. Rep. Dean Hiller, R-Nev., tried to amend the bill to stop taxpayers having to give free health care to illegals, but that was voted down along straight party lines. The Congressional Budget Office says the cost of this plan is $1.04 trillion. That is more than $9,000 for every household in the United States. That's the low estimate, who knows where it will go. When has the government ever stuck to the original amount?

Testimony from CBO Director D. Elmendorf states "legislation significantly expands the federal responsibility for health care costs," that means it is going to cost taxpayers more. Where is the money coming from? Your pocket, your paycheck, your stocks, your bonds, your IRAs, your $401 \mathrm{Ks} - \mathrm{shall} \ \mathrm{I} \ \mathrm{continue}$? I think you get the picture.

Even House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer, D-MD, indicated that Democrats should go "back to the drawing board." The Blue Dog Democrats are asking hard questions about this bill they know tions about this bill, they know.

What can you do? Tell your public servants (the officials elected to work for you) you are tired of not being heard. Tell them you don't like it when they have a better health care plan than you do. Tell them you are tired of them spending your money, that you know how to spend it better than they do. Call your servants often, it will get their attention. Let them know if they do not serve you, you will vote them out. That will be heard, I guarantee.

SIDNEY BRANNON

Worried about health care bill

I am really worried about this universal health care bill in that it is beginning to look like it is all inclusive. My concern is because I am a disabled veteran in the VA health care system. When I heard the words "end of life counseling," and "denial of services for the aged," well I had a constriction of the anal spot.

Our knees were wrecked jumping out of "helos" in free fire zones, our hearing ruined by explosive concussions, burns, PTSD, blindness, diabetes and our children with birth defects from agent orange, etc, etc.

I am not dumb enough to believe that we will have two parallel federal health care systems. Pelosi, Reid, Frank, Dodd, Obama, et al are not what I would call sympathetic to the military or to the wounded warriors to begin with, so it is a matter of when we will be thrown under the bus.

Early on in this debate, Obama advised Congress to consider saving money by forcing veterans to find other funding for war related injuries – I was born at night, but it was not last night.

BY MICHAEL SWICKARD
The Las Cruces Bulletin

In the last month, I have been occasionally blue thinking of my father who passed away in 1993. Much of his formative years were spent fighting for freedom. First he fought World War II on the frontlines in person and then I have come to realize he fought parts of that war again for the rest of his life in his head.

I went walking the other day thinking of how in just one year America changed. I thought, the thanks he gets for all of those days on the frontlines protecting our country is that after his death America lurches toward a socialist agenda as bad as any he fought against in the service of his country. If he was not already dead, this would kill him.

My father was the son of a combat veteran wounded in World War I so his son could live in freedom. In those first dark days of World War II, my father left high school a semester before graduation to join the military. When his classmates were graduating he was already finishing his advanced training. Then on Nov. 8, 1942, he landed with the first troops in North Africa and the war for him was on until he got back to the states in late 1945

A few years later there was his time in Korea. He also served a tour of duty in Vietnam. In 1967, he retired. He sometimes was still called, "Sarge," at the NCO club by friends who also served in combat.

As our country slipped further and further from freedom into a socialistic government he said little, as was his lifelong habit, but he heard on radio and saw on television those people who protested loudly about our movement away from the freedoms of our forefathers.

Truth be known, most people today are willing jailers of themselves. They rush to give up their freedoms for the illusionary promise that the government will take care of them better than they could take care of themselves. My father would have seen the error of that thinking.

Despite being on the front lines of war for many years of his adult life, my father only had internal wounds of his soul. He did not talk of the horror he had seen, but it seemed as I watched him he would often quietly think back on those days and lost comrades.

My generation has let my father and his generation down in the protection of America's freedoms. Freedom remains only as long as each of us fights for it. Every second there are the forces of evil trying to enslave all of the people of the world. Many people in our world live in countries where they have never tasted freedom. Here in our country, the people who really believe in freedom are heard less and less.

Thundering herds of mindless people jump lemminglike over the cliff into socialism with no understanding or concern that they are giving up their freedom. They forever destroy their own freedom while they also destroy the freedom of generations to come. I am deeply troubled that my father and millions of

I am deeply troubled that my father and millions of other soldiers gave so much. Some gave even their last full measure so future generations could be free. I sometimes think that I am the last generation to have tasted that freedom.

In countless graves are soldiers who fought for freedom in America's wars. Even sadder are the many military graves of unknown soldiers with these 13 words, "Here rests in honored glory a comrade in arms known but to God."

I will visit my father at the Ft. Bliss National Cemetery this week. I hope I can explain to his gravestone and those around it how my generation let their years of fighting totalitarian governments go for naught and inexplicably decided to embrace an America without freedom

In praise of First Lady Michelle Obama's organic garden

Mrs. First Lady Obama's organic gardening is good for all of us involved in agriculture. So few citizens have the time or interest or space to grow anything they eat, that they have no way to relate to the land and what it takes to make it fruitful. Even fewer know how to can or preserve their home-grown produce for the winter's larder.

She, the First Lady, is a modern suburban dweller and has adopted the banner of "organic," which has now morphed into a brand name like NAVY or Danish Ham. I doubt she could explain the difference except to say "no hormones or chemicals" but it doesn't make any difference. Organic has become a great niche market for "real" farmers, too. It is a high-end product like prime beef, wild salmon or Roquefort cheese.

However, home gardening may be making a comeback, whether you choose to use chemical fertilizer or fresh chicken manure, insecticide or to hoe your own weeds. People out of work have more time on their hands and are on a budget. As Steve said, "When you've got enough to eat, you've got lots of problems. When you don't have enough to eat, you have one problem."

This spring a group of my church members planted a community garden. It's the size of a good Iowa farmer's front lawn. I don't know if it's organic, but it takes a lot of work: weeding, watering, fighting bugs, birds, rabbits and all manner of vermin and varmints. It probably won't produce enough food to sustain a family, but it will offer a few weeks of fresh corn on the cob, squash, onions and tomatoes to spice up a meal. And it didn't cost much, just seeds and chicken wire. That's if you don't count the cost of labor, which, of course, farmers never do.

And yes, I do have a garden. It looks like the solitary confinement cell in Cool Hand Luke. It is javalina, jack rabbit, locust, bird, rattlesnake, rat, cottontail and cowdog proof. Good enough for six rows of jalapeños and tomatoes. You'd think I'd have an abundant crop, alas, this morning I called the extension service Master Gardner.

Diagnosis: Blossom-end rot. Etiology: Too much water. Treatment: Stop it!

So Mrs. First Lady, you are setting a good example, as am I. But obviously even with our own gardens, we can't hardly feed ourselves, much less our neighbors. I mean, you must have lots of company. That is why we continue to place the burden of feeding the world on the backs of our country's farmers and ranchers who, by using modern agricultural practices, are able to keep up with the globe's ever increasing appetite.

And we, as a grateful nation, thank them for giving us the time to worry about politics, what to wear, energy, global cooling, writing a column, Supreme Court appointments, bank foreclosures and media critics, because thanks to them we don't have to worry that our children are going to bed hungry tonight.

New faces in new places at LCPS

Superintendent announces several new principals

Las Cruces Public Schools Superintendent Stan Rounds has announced several changes in assignments for principals and assistant principals for the 2009-10 school year. All administrative re-assignments were effective July 1.

Rounds also announced two principals will be re-assigned to oversee federal funding that is earmarked for special education and Title 1 programs through President Obama's American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

"These stimulus funds are provided to school systems with a great deal of accountability attached," Rounds said. "We are fortunate to have several individuals with solid backgrounds in these specialized areas and they will ensure we carry out our obligations during the two years we receive the stimulus funds."

Administrative changes next school year will be:

Rosa Apodaca is the new principal at Doña Ana Elementary School. She had been assistant principal at MacArthur Elementary. Apodaca has 14 years experience with LCPS and has been the assistant principal at MacArthur for three years. She was previously a teacher at East Picacho Elementary.

Former Doña Ana Elementary Principal Irene Gomez has been reassigned to the LCPS Instruction Division as "Principal on Special Assignment" to oversee federal stimulus funds directed toward Title 1 programs. Gomez, who has previous experience with the Title 1 program, has 10 years' experience as a principal and assistant principal.

Valley View Elementary Principal Jamie Jones also has joined the Instruction Division as "Principal on Special Assignment" to oversee federal funds directed toward special education programs. Jones, who has been with LCPS for 18 years, began her career as a special education teacher. She has been a principal and assistant principal

Valley View Elementary's new principal is Sharon Robinson, who has been the principal at Fairacres Elementary since 2003. Robinson has been with LCPS for 22 years and has been a principal and assistant principal for eight of Replacing Robinson as principal at Fairacres Elementary is Kathy Norris. Norris has been the assistant principal at Columbia Elementary for the past two years. Prior to that, she served two years as assistant principal at Fairacres. Norris has been with LCPS for 33 years as a teacher and assistant principal.

Former Camino Real Middle School Principal Angie Holguin-Dotson has become an assistant principal at Mayfield High School, overseeing all aspects of ninth grade, including student academic progress and transition of students from middle school. Holguin-Dotson has been a principal and assistant principal for the last 12 years with LCPS. She fills a vacancy at Mayfield created by the retirement of Assistant Principal Carlos Viramontes.

The new principal at Camino Real is Ralph Ramos. He has been an assistant principal at Vista Middle School for nearly three years. Previously, he was an assistant principal at Sierra Middle School.

Kathy Vigil, who had been an assistant principal at Camino Real Middle School, has taken that same position at White Sands School. Vigil joined Camino Real Middle School in 2009 and was previously the LCPS Director of Community Relations and Student Services. Vigil has also served as principal and assistant principal at Picacho Middle School and White Sands School, respectively. She will continue to be the district's liaison to White Sands Missile Range.

Former Lynn Middle School Principal Gina Rivera has become an assistant principal at Las Cruces High School, overseeing ninth-grade students and their transition from middle schools. Rivera has 20 years' experience with LCPS and has been the principal and assistant principal at Lynn for the past eight years. Rivera will fill a position currently held by Assistant Principal Kathie Davis.

Davis has been re-assigned as principal of Lynn Middle School. She has been with LCPS for 12 years and has been assistant principal at Las Cruces High School for the last three-and-one-half years.

Hillrise Elementary Principal Andrea Fletcher is the "Principal on Special Assignment for Community Relations" in the LCPS Community Relations Office. In that new position, she will assist families with concerns or complaints. Fletcher has been with LCPS for 11 years, spending the last four years as principal at Hillrise. Fletcher will fill a vacancy created with the re-assignment of Student Support Administrator Dr. Offie Hobbs, who will initiate a new LCPS program to help curb truancy.

Hobbs has been named the school district's principal on Special Assignment for Truancy Prevention and Outreach. He will also oversee alternative services for middle school students. He has been with Community Relations for one year and previously was the principal of San Andres Learning Center. He has previous educational experience from Denver Public Schools and school districts in Wisconsin and Kansas.

Replacing Fletcher at Hillrise Elementary is Julieta Marta. Marta joined LCPS in May 2006 as assistant principal at Sonoma Elementary. Prior to that, she was principal of Ladera Del Norte Elementary School with 'armington Municipal Schools for one year.

Replacing Norris as assistant principal at Columbia Elementary is Janie Rios, who has been a second-teacher at Columbia. She is a former LCPS assistant principal.

Replacing Marta as assistant principal at Sonoma Elementary is Melissa Galaz, who has been a second-grade bilingual teacher at Cesár E. Chávez Elementary

Replacing Apodaca as assistant principal at MacArthur Elementary is Carla Rodriguez, who has been a Title I Reading Specialist and instructional coach at MacArthur for the past four years.

Camino Real Middle School's new assistant principal is Fred Montalvo. He was a sixth-grade math teacher at Vista Middle School.

Israel Hernandez Carerra was named the new principal of Mayfield High School on June 24. He replaces Chris Cook, who retired as principal after four years. Carerra will move to Las Cruces from Roswell, where he has been principal of Roswell High School.

Board meetings

The Las Cruces Public Schools Board of Education's meeting schedule for the 2009-10 school year reflects a change from the previous school year in that the board will hold only one regular business meeting per month, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. on the third Tuesday of the month, August through June 2010.

The board also will hold one work session at 5 p.m. on the first Tuesday of each month.

All meetings are open to the public except those that are adjudicatory in nature or pertain to personnel matters. An agenda for each meeting can be obtained from the superintendent's office 24 hours in advance of the meeting.

All meetings will be held in the board room of the LCPS Administration Building, 505 S. Main St., Loretto Towne Centre, Suite 249.

Regular board meetings begin at 6:30 p.m. and are scheduled for Aug. 18, Sept. 15, Oct. 20, Nov. 17 and Dec. 15. Regular board meetings scheduled for 2010 are Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 20, May 18 and June 15.

Work sessions begin at 5 p.m. and are scheduled for Sept. 1, Oct. 6, Nov. 3 and Dec. 1, 2009. Work sessions scheduled for 2010 are Feb. 2, March 2, April 6, May 4 and June 1.

The school board is comprised of Connie Phillips, president; Chuck Davis, vice president; Serena Shoop, secretary; Bonnie Votaw and Maria A. Flores, members. Davis was first elected in 2001 and was re-elected in 2005 and 2009. Phillips and Votaw were first elected in 2007. Shoop and Flores were first elected in 2009.

Early start set for sixth-graders, high school freshmen

LCPS slates two days to help students transition

Las Cruces Public Schools has scheduled two days before the start of the 2009-10 school year for students transitioning into middle school and high school.

Early start for sixth graders entering Camino Real, Lynn, Picacho, Sierra, Vista and Zia middle schools will be from 8:40 a.m. to 3:35 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 12. Busing and lunch will be provided.

Incoming sixth graders at White Sands Middle School will not participate in early start. White Sands schools will host its annual First Day of School Holiday at 1 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 13.

Parent/Freshmen Orientation Night will be at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 13, for all ninth-graders entering Las Cruces, Mayfield, Oñate and San Andres high school.

Freshmen Jump Start will be held from 8:40 a.m. to 12:40 p.m. Friday, Aug. 14, for all ninth-graders. Busing and lunch will be provided.

Studies show that moving from elementary to middle school and from middle to high school are among the most difficult and stressful transitions students will make. Providing an early start for sixth graders and ninth graders allows them to meet their teachers and learn the layout of their new schools before the new school year begins Monday, Aug. 17.

Hospice fundraiser attracts 69 culinary guys

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

In its second year as the main annual fundraising event for Mesilla Valley Hospice, Men Who Cook has sold out.

Hospice officials report that all 500 tickets for the event have been sold.

This year, there will be 69 chefs from the community – some pros, some novices and some novices who should be pros – cooking up their favorite dishes.

Men Who Cook will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 15, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

The tickets ran $60 for individuals or $600 for table sponsorship.

But the fundraising doesn't stop with the audience sampling all the food. There will be raffles of cash prizes and a silent auction.

Nor does it end that evening. A cookbook with recipes from the event will go on sale.

Because the hospice recently completed its four-year, $6.5 million capital campaign to pay for the facility's new expansion, the money raised this year by the Men Who Cook event will help establish a charity care fund to help patients pay for their services, said April Ayana, hospice marketing director.

Since 1992, Mesilla Valley Hospice has grown with the city to provide both home care and residential care at La Posada, which can house 30 patients.

Proponents want teeth in new lighting ordinance

'Dark sky' supporters say rules can be safe

By Todd G. Dickson

As the City of Las Cruces begins work on revising its outdoor lighting ordinance, proponents of "dark sky" rules say they don't want to see it get watered down in the process.

The current ordinance was written nearly 10 years ago and was set to expire through a "sunset clause."

But people involved with writing the existng ordinance had been talking with the city for some time about improving enforcement and responding to new technology – primarily electronic billboards. The Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and some businesses are opposing the revision, saying the existng ordinance has served the city well. (See related story on Page B1.)

In one way, the city's "dark sky" ordinance has helped attract residents – especially retirees – to Las Cruces, said John Gilkison of the National Public Observatory. Excessive light at night not only adds to nighttime "light pollution" for astronomy enthusiasts, but it also can make sleep difficult for people, he said.

The term used for this kind of light at night is "light trespass."

Carol Rehder said she knows this problem well. When a neighbor put in a bright yard light, she had to build a fence to block it out.

"People are unaware of what they are doing or don't care," she said.

Bright light at night, proponents say, doesn't add to safety as much as some people think. The glare can actually make it harder for people to see and create a greater hazard.

Gilkison has heard the safety argument before and said it concerns him that emotional arguments will take over. The standards for levels of light should be based on what can be easily measured and enforced, he said.

"To me, government is about protecting the majority of the people, not a few businesses," Wilkison said. "If this is done right, in my opinion, it could help the bottom line for businesses.

Some of the complaining businesses are responding more from emotion than from reality, Wilkison said. He recently went to one of the new Pic Quiks and measured the light at the gas pumps. Wilkison said the reading was under the proposed level of light.

The real problem with the ordinance for some businesses, proponents say, is with what's called "Full Cut Off," which is the distance that light cuts off from the source. If a bright light is needed, according to the ordinance, then it must be aimed down to the ground so no light shines above the horizonal plane.

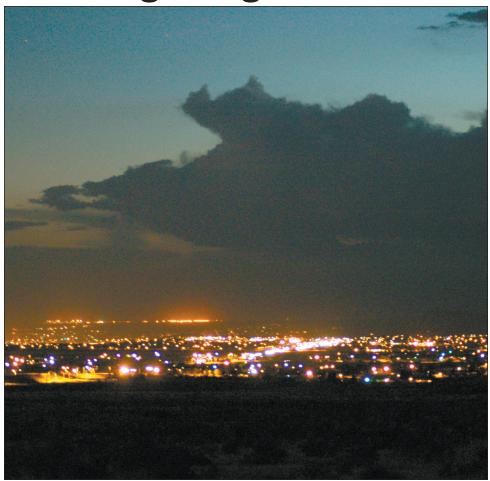

It worries both Rehder and Wilkison that the proposed revision would take out the "Full Cut Off" rule and replace it with a requirement that the light be shielded.

"We need to be careful that we don't take the teeth out of the ordinance," Rehder said.

One other change in recent years, though, is getting much notice in this discussion, Rehder said. That's the concern about energy efficiency. A strong outdoor lighting ordinance would conserve energy, she said.

Rehder notes that a study by the International Darksky Association estimates that 22 billion kilowatts are used on "wasted" outdoor light.

The new rules should require the use of more energy-efficient light bulbs and fixtures, she said.

Growth on the East Mesa has added to the lights of the city at night, as can be seen from this photo just after sunset Tuesday, Aug. 4. Proponents of stricter "dark sky" outdoor lighting enforcement say they are seeing more "light pollution" at night.

Door-to-door sales increase raises concerns with police

Reports of questionable porch pitches rise

Las Cruces Police are asking residents to use caution when dealing with door-todoor sales people who may be after more than just a common transaction.

Recently, residents have called Las Cruces Police about door-to-door solicitations on security alarms, magazine subscriptions and re-roofing work. While some of these solicitations may be legitimate businesses, others may be unlawful and potentially harmful to consumers, according to a police press release.

Las Cruces Police are suggesting that residents refrain from providing personal and financial information to door-to-door solicitors and to exercise caution when opening the door to anyone.

Just as consumers are warned about providing personal or financial information over the telephone, the same caution should be exercised when dealing with neighborhood solicitors.

Residents concerned about a home solicitation can call police at 526-0795.

Submariners on board USS New Mexico eat well in galley named after La Posta

Mesilla restaurant name chosen after competition

A new milestone was reached by the crew of PCU New Mexico (SSN 779), July 28, when they ate their first meal onboard the nation's next Virginia-class submarine.

Crewmembers enjoyed a lunch of prime rib and lobster tail to celebrate the first meal prepared in the galley.

"The guys are very excited," said Cmdr. Mark Prokopius, prospective commanding officer of the New Mexico. To be able to eat on board and sleep on board is a significant milestone that's going to be one of the many that we have coming up as we get ready to go to sea trials."

New Mexico, named for The Land of Enchantment, is in the final stages of construction and testing at Northrop Grumman's Newport News shipyard. The submarine's next significant construction milestone is its initial sea trials, an aggressive series of operational tests that demonstrate the submarine's capabilities.

The first meal took place in the galley – or "mess" dubbed "La Posta," after the famous restaurant in Mesilla La Posta won a competition to have its name permanently affiliated with the crew's mess. One highlight of the competition came last fall, when two crew members spent a few days at La Posta, preparing food, learning recipes and examining overall operations. They also toured Mesilla Valley area chile farms and chile production facilities.

Northrop Grumman Shipbuilding is teamed with General Dynamics Electric Boat to build the Virginiaclass submarines. New Mexico is the sixth ship in the class and, upon delivery to the Navy this fall, will be the most modern and sophisticated attack submarine in the Construction of the ship began in March 2004 and the keel was laid during a ceremony held April 12, 2008. New Mexico was christened on Dec. 13, 2008 and launched on Jan. 22. The commissioning date has been set by the Secretary of the Navy for Nov. 21.

Ags open volleyball practice on Saturday the 2009 season Saturday, Aug. 8. Can freshman Lilly Wolfe play the setter position in NMSU's 6-2 system? If not, there's little sweat. Sophomore Jenna DeVries, a starter there last year, returns. Jordan would like to have both Devries Granted, the loss of Torres, middle hitter Amber Simpson and outside hitter Lindsey Yon really hurt. They carried NMSU to a 26-9 record and a first-place tie for the WAC championship in 2008. The Aggies made the NCAA tournament for the fifth time in six years. Jordan, however, is sky high on transfer Kayliegh Giddens, 6-foot-2 outside hitter who was a JC All-American at Frank Phillips College in Borger, Texas, last season.

"Tremendous athlete," Jordan said. "She'll be one of the best in the conference.

MVCS gears up for inaugural season

One team is the defending state champ, one used to have that title and is aiming to get it back, and the other is enjoying the excitement of high expectations.

The 2009 high school football season offers three distinct story lines for the city's Class 5-A teams. Las Cruces High. Mayfield and Oñate are each playoff contenders, approaching the season from three different directions.

Official two-a-day practices for high school football in New Mexico begin Monday, Aug. 10, and it will be the dawn of a new program for the other high school in Mesilla Valley Christian School will field a football team for the first time this fall. The Class 2-A school, under the guidance of head coach Charles Gleghorn, will play a partial schedule this fall, with at least some of its home games at Oñate High School's practice field.

Las Cruces High is coming off of a perfect 13-0 season, capturing its fourth state championship under head coach Jim Miller by defeating Albuquerque Eldorado in the title game. The Bulldawgs rode the talent and experience of 30 seniors last fall and Miller believes last season's success could carry over to this year.

"This senior class is used to winning," Miller said. "They're used to winning, and they know what it takes. We'll pretty much have a bull's eye on our back, but we've been in this situation before. The ultimate goal is the state championship. Our kids understand that and they know they need to work hard."

Miller is expecting 85 varsity players and about 60 freshmen on Monday.
"The kids have responded really well," said Miller, whose team opens with an Aug. 27 game at El Dorado in El Paso. "They can't wait to start the season."

Mayfield is coming off of a 10-2 season that saw their three-year state title streak end. Coach Michael Bradley is expecting 96 sophomores, juniors and seniors on Monday, along with 55 freshmen.

'The summer is important for establishing good leadership," Bradley said. We have some good kids out for football. We've had good participation and the work ethic has been good.

We lost a lot of starters, but we ended up playing a lot of guys last year.

The Trojans open the season at the Field of Dreams on Aug. 27 against El Paso-Chapin.

The Oñate Knights finished with a 5-5 record last year, but the expectations are much higher this season, thanks to a large, talented senior class.

We have most of our team back," said coach Kelly McKee, whose team opens the year on Aug. 28 with a home game against El Paso Bel Air. "The expectations will be a lot higher. We have a bunch of kids that have been starting since they were sophomores.'

If you feel brave, real brave, you might ask Louie Sandoval to do your laundry.

Then duck.

Sandoval makes a living washing clothes. Dirty ones – football jerseys, jock straps For the last 24 years, Louie has been cooped up in the Aggies' athletic equipment room, buried beneath 1,000 towels, 170 helmets, 600 pairs of shoes and a pile of football pants and practice jerseys.

He apparently enjoys the obscurity. Here's a guy with two college degrees – accountancy and business administration finance - who chose to be NMSU's athletic equipment manager instead. "Six coaches," he said, flashing six fingers. "I've worked with six football coaches here. Loved 'em all.

Working around athletes keeps Sandoval pumped. "I guess that's why I'm really here," he said.

Players' faces mean nothing to Louie. It's the numbers on their jerseys that count. "You ask me when Denvis Manns played here and I couldn't tell you," he said. "But I remember he wore No. 32. Cody Ledbetter? All I remember is No. 17. And I remember when he changed to jersey No. 11.3

Sandoval and his staff shifted into high gear on Wednesday of this week when NMSU opened football practice for the 2009 season. He will work 70 hours a week and hike it to 80 when winter sports kick in.

And love every moment. "Actually, my busiest time is around October and November when we have seven sports going at the same time," he said. "Yes, we wash all the uniforms for every sport

For football, Louie issues practice uniforms for approximately 80 players daily. After Wednesday's workout, he dumped dirty jerseys, pants, socks and jocks into four washing machines. "We usually work into the night to get everything washed and clean so the guys can wear 'em in two days. Each player has two uniforms," Sandoval said. "They alternate each day.'

Occasionally, equipment managers work two jobs. I remember that Jack Baer, the football equipment manager at the University of Oklahoma, was also the teams' kicking coach. One year, when OU's punter went into an extended slump, Baer Sandoval faces no such fate. He deals in equipment only. Dirty laundry is challenge enough.

Menzies contract extension is a good move by Regents

Billy Keys finds success in Europe

I heard some good news about a former Aggie hoopster and some good news affecting the men's hoops program last week.

To start with the program, the Board of Regents' extension of Marvin Menzies contract is something I applaud.

As I have written before, Menzies' approach is unlike that which fans have seen here. Building with four-year players is an approach that leads to stability and consistency at the top of the standings. Look at any high major program that has success year in and year out and that is the blueprint.

Menzies now has a deal through the 2012 season, which will be Hernst Laroche, Hamidu Rahman and Troy Gillenwater's senior year. There are incentives in the program that will pay Menzies a bonus if the terms are met. One of the larger rewards is for a team APR of 925. The men's program has been hamstrung by the APR since it was instituted by the NCAA four years ago.

I personally don't think the financial rewards are what drives Menzies. He is a true believer when it comes to building a winner and building men his way.

The former Aggie with good news is Billy Keys. His European Pro team, Maroussi Costa Coffee, reached an agreement with Keys to keep him with the club for two more seasons. Keys has been away from the New Mexico State University campus for almost a decade, but has been back from time to time. His wife and kids live here and he picked up his college degree last summer as well. During the two years in Crimson and White, the saying was, "As long as we have Billy Keys, we'll get lots of victor-ees".

A Big West title and NCAA berth in 1999 and an NIT slot in 2000 were part of the Chicagoan's Legacy.

Last year, Keys averaged 12.1 points and 4.1 assists in 11 Eurocup games and also helped his team finish the Greek League in third place, giving them a berth to the Euroleague qualifying rounds.

Keys also has played for teams in Iceland, Israel, Italy and Spain before moving on to the Greek Isles. He was always a classy guy and a team-oriented player.

I can still remember him scolding freshman Brandon Mason during practice about loafing at the end of a long workout. Keys shared the attitude with another Aggie point guard from Chicago, Randy Brown.

A team that has a guy who will find a way to win or die trying is one that is very hard to beat. Take a look at the team's records during Brown's and Keys' years and you'll see what I mean.

A ticket plan for everyone

Ags offer several options for 2009 football games

Ole Pete has some mathematical equations for you to study to help you find the ticket package that suits you best for the coming football season.

Most Aggie fans seem to want to start in the middle of it all by picking out a seat for the UTEP game and leave it at that, figuring to catch the homecoming show or another game before the season ends. If that sounds like you, get out your calculator and follow along.

A reserved ticket for this year's rival game versus the Miners will cost you a minimum of $25. A season ticket for all six games in that section only runs you $50.

I can hear you saying, "Pete, I love the Aggies, but I know there are gonna be some weekends when my tickets wouldn't get used."

wouldn't get used."

Well, I suppose going to your brother's wedding or taking a second honeymoon cruise might come before seeing head coach DeWayne Walker's squad on a list of things to do, but there's another way to make it happen and save some money.

The Aggie three-pack will get you into Aggie Memorial for the UTEP game and two others for only $40.

Now, if you've got money to burn, you can quit on old Pete, but most of the cowpokes I know are keeping their piggy bank sewed up tight these days. It makes good horse sense to use those dollars wisely and choose a plan that gives you maximum football for a reasonable investment.

There are other three-game packages available at various prices depending on where you want to sit. Of the six home games, four are against WAC foes and the other two are special events against the Miners and the Tough Enough to Wear Pink game against Prairie View. So how are you gonna choose?

To go back to our math lesson, if you go to the UTEP game and one other game, you will spend $45. With the three-game package, you can get those same two games, plus another game and actually spend five bucks less. That's like getting a free game, plus five bucks back when you grab the three-game package.

You can wheel the games several different ways around that UTEP game, so your choices are unlimited. Forty dollars for the Miners and two WAC games is the economic stimulus package dressed up in Crimson and White.

Speaking of season tickets, the stampede for season seats is still in high gear, selling at record numbers. Recent reports show new season ticket holders are in excess of 1,000 – folks who are convinced Walker is on the path to getting it done right. Do the math, be smart with your dollars and don't just think about that rivalry game. The Aggies need you there 'cause we're all crimson.

Great golf events in August and September

Have a ball, raise some money and play golf in these tourneys

With the City Championship and the Burger Time events successfully over, August and September are busy months for some terrific golf tournaments here in

Now into its third year, the First Step Annual Golf Tournament promises to be the most elaborate ever, with a silent auction and "kick-off" party (tickets $25) at

The First Step Center is a remarkable pediatric and women's medical operation dedicated to providing free and affordable health care to a broad range of residents in our area.

Now here's real health care reform: in a single year, First Step medical providers see more than $45,\!000$ patients, for no fee or a minimum fee. Astonishing.

The golf competition is on Friday, Sept. 11, at Picacho Hills Country Club, with your choice of four-person "mix play" or a four-person scramble. The $150 per player fee gets you not only golf, but also a barbecue dinner and fun at the 19th Hole Grand Finale featuring music by The Liars. will be running smooth and true. The camaraderie will be excellent.

New this year, which I really like, is a senior division within the championship flight, where everyone plays scratch, and the low gross score wins. Pay-outs are splendid, especially with the hole-in-one prizes, skins games and closest to the pin contests. Entry forms at available at the NMSU pro shop. 6th Man Club

Even though football season isn't even officially underway, coach Menzies wants us to think basketball. He's hosting his first "6th Man Club" open golf tournament at Picacho Hills on Thursday, Sept. 3. The format is a four-golfer scramble, with merchandise prizes going to the first five teams. Each team will be made up of a player from each of four different ability categories (A, B, C and D), based on handicap, and the kicker is that teams will be drawn at random, which should introduce a real element of chance to the mix. Most interesting is that the round will be played as an eighthsome – two teams on the tee. No mulligans and no fudging scores here.

Your $150 entry fee (partly tax deductible) includes golf and cart and a post-round barbecue feed. Celebrity players will be former Dallas Cowboy Leon Lett and former Aggie and LPGA player Jane Egan Noble. Sponsorships are still available and are fully tax deductible. As a presenting sponsor ($5,000) you'll get an Aggie player and the Sundancers to assist you for the day at the tournament, plus you and three of your best friends will be Menzies' guest at one of the games. There are Aggie "hole host" sponsorships and "prize" contributors available as well.

Tournament organizer Jack Hokkanen has also arranged a Putting Contest (separate entry) with a chance to win $10,000.

"We want a premier, competitive amateur golf outing," Menzies said, "to raise funds for NMSU Aggie men's basketball.'

Proceeds will be used to support scholarships, educational and special academic needs. Pick up an entry form at local golf courses or call Jack at 541-4274.

Showdown at Sonoma

Sonoma Ranch Golf Course is presenting the 6th annual "Showdown at Sonoma" two-man tournament Sept. 25 thru 27, in conjunction with Spence Asset Management. SNAP Classic

Some of us in this town believe that there are far too many dogs and cats for a lot of people to care for in the proper way. Every few months, we read about animal control authorities rounding up hundreds of domestic critters from the homes of animal hoarders, which is truly a crime in my view. There is a group whose franchise is to reduce the overabundance of unwanted pets by limiting their reproduction. The group is SNAP, and they are hosting a golf fundraiser that I find particularly unique and close to my heart. It's the "SNAP Classic" scramble, put on to help end pet overpopulation

Working with local veterinarians and animal hospitals, SNAP stands for Spay and Neuter Action Program, and has funded thousands of surgeries for low-income pet owners in Doña Ana County. The vast majority of pets going to shelters or the "pound" come from folks who can't (or won't) afford to have their pets "fixed."

Some of us in the animal rights area hate to see so many animals destroyed every year. Perhaps you agree. Join us by playing in the SNAP scramble on Saturday, Aug. 29 at Sonoma Ranch. Enter your team for $360 and feel good about doing something to stem the tide of pet overpopulation and needless euthanasia of otherwise healthy and adoptable dogs and cats.

Contact SNAP at 621-4942 or visit www.snapnewmexico.org. I have helped support SNAP in the past and plan to play in this year's event. See you there.

Aggie football practice underway

Season tickets on sale now at the Pan Am Center

The New Mexico State football team opened its 2009 fall camp, Wednesday, Aug. 5, at the football practice field.

Practices are open to the public. The first five days of camp are the NCAA mandated five-day acclimation period before the Aggies jump right into two-a-day practices on Aug. 10th.

The Aggies' annual media day in Las Cruces will be held at noon, Aug. 13, in the football meeting rooms, located on the north end of the stadium.

NMSU opens up its 2009 season, Sept. 5, against Idaho in Aggie Memorial Stadium. Kickoff is set for 6 p.m.

Season tickets are available through the New Mexico State ticket office and they can be purchased in person at the Pan American Center ticket office or by calling 646-1420.

Fall Camp Schedule: August 7 — Shells 3 to 5 p.m. — Practice 9:15 to 11:30 a.m. – Practice 1 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. - Practice 2 August 8 – Shells August 11

Inaugural class of 30 is forging a new path for NMSU

History is often something read about in textbooks or magazines, but the New Mexico State soccer team is making it. The Aggies are celebrating their inaugural season in 2009.

NMSU marked this momentous beginning with its first practice, Wednesday, Aug. 5. The Aggies start with two-a-day practices at 8 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., at the newly constructed soccer practice field located east of Aggie Memorial Stadium.

With the creation of a soccer program, every accomplishment is a milestone for the Aggies. Head coach Michael Needham accepted this position understanding the challenges and opportunities of building a program. Soccer is the 17th intercollegiate sport sponsored at NMSU.

giate sport sponsored at NMSU.

"I think it's a very exciting time," Needham said. "Anytime a university and a community start a program, it's a start of a new era and it's very exciting for everyone that's involved.

"They are not many players in the country that are going to have the same kids are going to have," he said. "We're counting on that to be a pretty solid motivator for them. It's something unique, it's something different and every one of these kids during the recruiting process didn't shy away from it."

The inaugural class consists of 30 student-athletes including 20 freshmen, four sophomores, three juniors and three seniors. New Mexico natives lead the Aggie roster with nine student-athletes including four local residents. NMSU has six Californians on the team and five Texans including three El Paso transplants.

"One of the main things that is exciting about preseason is the chance that every one of them has equal opportunity to play and these kids have embraced that." Needham said.

that," Needham said.

The Aggies have four goalkeepers on the inaugural roster with two transfers and a pair of true freshmen. Senior Katie Graul transferred to NMSU from Loyola Marymount and Lauren Heiman spent a season at Pima Community College while freshmen Mikaela Bitner and Jessica Schutter are also competing for time between the posts.

"Depth at the goalkeeper position is very important and we have it," Needham said. "I feel comfortable with all four goalkeepers and I'm excited for different reasons for each one of them. Depending on experience and how things go, we'll see who rises to the top."

NMSU has 11 defenders this year with a pair of seniors, Johnelle Montoya and Cristianna Smith, and two international players with World Cup qualifying experience, freshmen Gabby Lopez and Alyssa Yard. The squad also includes freshmen Lauren Allen, Aisha Gutierrez, Courtney Irwin, Yolanda McMillion, Elise Nordin, along with sophomore Heather Goldberg and junior Nina Yanes.

"We brought in a lot of defenders," Needham said. "There's opportunity and these kids are going to get to compete everyday. They are pretty unflappable and I think it's a strong group."

and I think it's a strong group."

The midfielders feature freshmen Jazmin Cardosa, Cassie De Leon, Kelly Heiman, Kassie Martinez, Jocelyn Medina, Vanessa Novella, Taylor Reyes with juniors Baili Foutz and Marisa Moya. The Aggie forwards include sophomores Jordan Banegas and Natalie Nichols along with freshmen Crystal Burns and Vanessa Thomas. In addition, freshmen Lauren Cope and Veronica Subu are vying for time at both the midfielder and forward positions.

"This is a solid core of players," Needham said. "There is a mix of experience with youth. There are some special players in there."

With each practice, match and road trip, the Aggie soccer program is forging a new path and making history one step at a time.

at a time.

"We are developing a culture that ultimately is going to lead us to winning games in the future," Needham said. "The biggest thing we wanted to do was make sure we cultivated a competitive environment everyday. This environment is going to be right for them to compete. It's going to be interesting."

Ticket sales going strong

Skills clinic Aug. 15

The New Mexico State soccer program has reached another milestone in its inaugural season with 100 season tickets already sold as of Thursday, July 30.

day, July 30.

With seven home matches this season, and two home exhibitions, Aggie fans have many opportunities to catch the soccer team in action.

"The support of the Las Cruces community is outstanding," head coach Michael Needham said. "I have coached in several markets and have never had such a tremendous start to season ticket sales."

Tickets for the inaugural season of the newest Aggie program went on sale in June. Needham and his staff have been working hard to spread the word in the community about the potential of the program.

"Crossing the 100 mark was a great milestone for our program, it is very important that we have a home field advantage when we play at Aggie Memorial," Needham said. "I am excited to see even more of the Aggie faithful jump on board and take advantage of the nine home dates we have this fall."

Season tickets for the inaugural

Season tickets for the inaugural season cost $19 for adults and $17 for seniors, military members and NMSU faculty and staff, which make the per-game prices only $2.11 and $1.88, respectively. Single game tickets are $5 for all fans. Kids 12 and under are admitted free to Aggie soccer all season long.

Two Fresno State athletes honored

Mendonca, Gloria recipients of Kearney Award

Fresno State baseball player Tom Mendonca and women's tennis player Melanie Gloria are the 2008-09 Western Athletic Conference Joe Kearney Award winners.

Mendonca is the second-consecutive Bulldog baseball player to win the award, while Gloria is the first-ever women's tennis player to win it.

Named in honor of former WAC commissioner Joe Kearney, the awards are given annually to the top male and female student-athletes in the WAC.

Mendonca, a junior third baseman from Turlock, Calif., was the 2009 WAC Player of the Year after he led the league and ranked third nationally in home runs (27). A semifinalist for the Dick Howser and Golden Spikes National Player of the Year Awards, he was named to five All-America teams in 2009.

Mendonca led his team to three consecutive WAC Tournament titles and the 2008 NCAA Championship, as he was named Most Outstanding Player of the College World Series after tying a College World Series record with four home runs. In just three years, he blasted 56 home runs, shattering the Fresno State career record by 13 and tying for fourth place all-time in WAC history. His 174 career RBI also ranks third in Fresno State history. Mendonca earned a gold medal with Team USA at the 2008 European Championships and was a second round draft pick by the Texas Rangers.

Gloria, a senior from Montreal, Canada, is a four-time WAC Player of the Year and led the Bulldogs to four consecutive WAC titles. The 2009 ITA Northwest Region Senior Player of the Year, she was a third team Academic All-American and was named Fresno State Bulldog of the Year as a senior. Gloria also made her third appearance at the NCAA Doubles Tournament and received her fourth invite to the NCAA Singles Tournament in 2009.

Gloria concluded her career with 123 singles wins, good for second place in school history. She reached No. 1 in the ITA doubles national rankings in 2008, and earned All-America status in both singles and doubles, becoming only the second two-time All-American singles player in school history. The Bulldogs also advanced to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament in all four of her seasons, a program first.

Ryan Grinnell, Boise State, track & field; Eleni Kafourou, Boise State, track & field; Tom Mendonca, Fresno State, baseball; Melanie Gloria, Fresno State, tennis; Solomon Elimimian, Hawaiʻi, football; Amber Kaufman, Hawaiʻi, track & field/volleyball;

Mac Hopson, Idaho, basketball; Allix Lee-Painter, Idaho, cross country/track & field; Antonio Baker, Louisiana Tech, football; Amberly Waits, Louisiana Tech, softball; Matt Bowman, Nevada, baseball; Brittany Puzey, Nevada, softball; Bryan Marquez, New Mexico State, baseball;

"STICKS FOR KIDS" TEE BOX PROGRAM

12-week (two classes per week) golf-instruction workshop for kids between the ages of 6-12 years. Open registration until classes are filled. Program fee is $30.00 per child.

"Sticks for Kids" Tee Box program offers a year-round program that includes instruction in both the classroom as well as on the golf course. Youth sized golf clubs will be made available for any youth interested in playing the game who may not currently own their own golf equipment. Participants will have the opportunity to learn from local golf course professionals about such golf fundamentals as stance, gripping, pitching, chipping, putting and swinging. Participants also learn golf safety, etiquette and discipline.

Disorganization makes for unfocused, failing students

Children can ventilate feelings without sacrificing respect

Our junior high schooler is the most disorganized kid I've ever seen. His life is a jumble of forgotten assignments and missed deadlines. What can I do to help him?

You'll have no trouble believing what educational consultant Cheri Fuller considers to be the most common cause of school failure. She says it is not laziness or poor study skills. The primary problem is what you see in your son – massive disorganization.

Show me a student's notebook, Fuller says, and I'll tell you whether that individual is a B student or a D student. An achieving student's notebook is arranged neatly with dividers and folders for handouts and assignments. A failing student's notebook is usually a jumbled mess and may not even be used at all.

Some children are naturally sloppy, but most of them can learn to be better organized. Fuller said this skill should be taught in the elementary school years. Once they enter junior high, students may have as many as five teachers, each assigning different textbooks, workbooks, handouts and requirements from various classroom subjects.

It is foolish to assume that kids who have never had any organizational training will be able to keep such detail straight and accessible. If we want them to function in this system, we need to give them the tools that are critical to success.

You might consider having your child evaluated to see if he has Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder or some temperamental characteristic that makes it difficult for him to organize. When you've determined what he is capable of doing, work with an educational consultant or a school psychologist to design a system that will teach him how to live a more structured life.

My 6-year-old has suddenly become sassy and disrespectful in her manner at home. She told me to "buzz off" when I asked her to take out the trash, and she calls me names when she gets angry. I feel it is important to permit this emotional outlet, so I haven't tried to suppress it. Do you agree?

I'm afraid I don't. Your daughter is aware of her sudden defiance, and she's waiting to see how far you will let her go. If you don't discourage disrespectful behavior now, you can expect some wild experiences during the adolescent years to come.

With regard to your concern about emotional ventilation, you are right in saying your daughter needs to express her anger. She should be free to say anything to you provided it is said in a respectful manner. It is acceptable to say, "I think you love my brother more than me," or "You weren't fair with me, Mommy."

DR. JAMES DOBSON

Focus on the Family

There is a thin line between what is acceptable and unacceptable behavior at this point. The child's expression of strong frustration, even resentment and anger, should be encouraged if it exists. You certainly don't want her to bottle it inside.

On the other hand, you should not permit your daughter to resort to name-calling and open rebellion. "Mom, you hurt my feelings in front of my friends" is an acceptable statement. "You stupid idiot, why didn't you shut up when my friends were here?!" is obviously unacceptable.

If approached rationally, as described in the first statement, it would be wise for the mother to sit down and try to understand the child's viewpoint. She should be big enough to apologize to the child if she was wrong.

If she feels she was right, however, she should calmly explain why she reacted as she did and tell the child how he or she can avoid a collision next time. It is possible to ventilate feelings without sacrificing parental respect, and the child should be taught how to do it. This communicative tool will be very useful later in life, especially in a possible future marriage.

Local churches on Channel 98

Getting the word out one broadcast at a time

Thanks to an arrangement with the Las Cruces Channel, several local churches now have a voice on cable by airing their own shows on Comcast channel 98.

Holy Cross Church, Heart for the World Church, New Beginnings Church of God and Etz Chayim (Tree of Life) Messianic Congregation are now airing programs beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

"It's all about local family programming," said Chris Soular, owner and director of new program acquisitions for the Las Cruces Channel 98. "That's what the station is working to bring to the Las Cruces area."

Holy Cross Church will air "Notes

Holy Cross Church will air "Notes from the Cross," a new pastoral teaching program from Reverend Monsignor John Anderson, at 9 a.m. each Sunday.

At 10 a.m. on Sunday, Heart for the World Church will provide a onehour show called "Break Through" with Pastor Dale Walker. Included in "Break Through" is a rebroadcast of the church's Sunday sermon.

Las Crucens can see "New Beginnings" at 11 a.m., which features Pastor Richard Mansfield from the New Beginning Church of God in Albuquerque. The New Beginning Church is utilizing the Las Cruces Channel to get the word out about its new church that is coming to Las Cruces.

Cable subscribers can also tune in at 11:30 a.m. Saturdays to "Restoring Our Hebrew Roots" with Rabbi Mordecai Silver of Etz Chayim (Tree of Life) Messianic Congregation. This program offers a valuable opportunity to learn about the role of the Torah in Christianity.

The Las Cruces Channel 98, which started in April, airs from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and Sunday. The channel was established to promote local programming.

"We want the Las Cruces community to know that they have a voice now on television," Soular said.

More information on the Las Cruces Channel 98 can be found on the website www.lascruceschannel.com, or call 650-3398.

This week in the history  of the Mesilla Valley **

MARVIN TESSNEER Out of the Past

75 years ago 1934 • The sisters at the Good Shepherd Convent in Mesilla Park held a garden party to raise funds to pay off their mortgage. They had arrived here in 1928 from Mexico and bought 16 acres in Mesilla Park that had an $18,000 mortgage. They raised funds by raising produce and selling chickens and livestock with the help of 25 sisters, 50 "magdalenas," women who had not taken vows, and about 35 orphans. They also raised money with a laundry service, sewing and embroidery, including the famous Cluny lace. They also worked on the construction of the convent, which had 15 rooms for orphans and a grotto that held an image of Our Lady Lourdes which had been built by Tortugas Fiesta de Guadalupe members.

- The Elephant Butte Irrigation District approved a fee of $1.10 for the first acre-foot of water, 50 cents for the second and 20 cents each for more than two.
- Cantaloupe growers had shipped 100 rail freightcar loads out of Mesquite and expected to ship 150 more loads.

50 years ago 1959

• City residents were asked not to water lawns for at least three days so storage could build up in the Griggs and Missouri storage reservoir tanks and increase water pressure. Some residences above Stull Drive had inadequate water services.

• The Doña Ana County Health

Before the flood prevention dam was constructed above Telshor Boulevard, excessive rain flow from arroyos would flood Picacho Avenue. Note the viaduct that had passed over the railroad in the background and the gasoline price, 19 cents a gallon.

• U.S. District Judge Howard Bratton ruled that New Mexico could limit the amount of water it exported across the state line if it fulfilled several criteria. El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers welcomed the decision since it would allow both parties to discuss the criteria in an amiable manner. The litigation started when New Mexico rejected El Paso's application to drill 320 wells in southern Doña Ana County and transport the water over the state line.

- Hot weather forced EBID farmers to order 23,500 acre-feet of water within two weeks. During the same period the previous year, they had called for 19,000 acre-feet.
- David Patton earned his Eagle Scout badge for organizing a group of Scouts to restore portions of a Gila Forest trail.

• Two county youths were elected to State 4-H Council positions, Becky Price, secretary, and Mark Graves, recreation director.

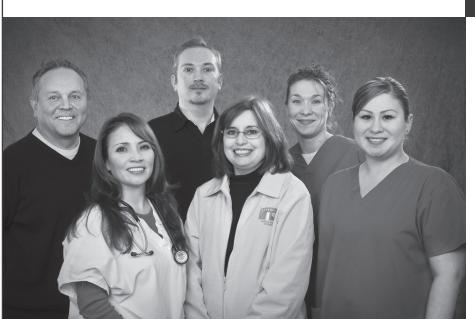

10 years ago • Excessive rains in Sierra County poured out of arroyos and forced the Rio Grande over its banks, flooding some stretches of Highway 185 and residences in Radium Springs

• The EBID installed 12 new radio telemetry sensors on canals to better manage delivery and to conserve water.

- The county authorized the expenditure of $110,000 in funds and services to construct six soccer fields.
- The New Mexico Border Commission moved its office from the Loretto Towne Centre to the Santa Teresa Port-of-Entry.

HEALTH NEWS

La Clinica de Familia leads the way during National Health Center week

A wealth of valuable health information available

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

In light of National Health Center Week, which runs Sunday Aug. 9 through Saturday, Aug. 15, La Clinica de Familia is having a free health fair Wednesday, Aug. 12, in Las Cruces and other healthcare sites in the area.

La Clinica CEO Harriet Brandstetter said the fair will serve as an opportunity to inform local residents about the benefits of health care centers such as La Clinica. Area residents can also expect to find information on family medicine, gynecology, education and social services.

"For us it's an opportunity to let the community know what we are and what services we provide," Brandstetter said. "It's a wealth of information, or I like to call it a resource sharing festivity."

As part of the fair, people will be able to get free health screenings, blood pressure checks and diabetes screenings, among many other services. With a large response from local vendors, Brandstetter said community members will be able to network and ask questions concerning their health, dental, preventive care and eligibility for services.

Although this is the 10th year La Clinica is participating in the health fair, Brandstetter said she has never seen such a huge response from local vendors.

"I'm still getting calls from vendors wanting to help, but there's just no room anymore," Brandstetter said. Vendors such as TMO Sports, The Vendors such as TMO Sports, The Imaging Center, BabyCheeks and United Blood Services are just a few local organizations that will be offering services and information to the community.

The Chaparral Medical Clinic on 510 E. Lisa Drive in Chaparral, N.M., will hold its from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. From 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., East Mesa Medical on 8600 Bataan Memorial East, will focus its fair on health care for the homeless. The Community of Hope will be collecting donated essential items at that site as well. The Las Cruces Medical/Dental Clinic on 1160 Mall Drive will hold its from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., while The Las Cruces Women's Clinic on 1180 Mall Drive, Ste. B, will host from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The San Miguel Clinic on 18424 S. Highway 28 in San Miguel, N.M., will hold its fair from 8 a.m. to noon and the Anthony Medical/Dental Clinic on 855 Anthony drive in Anthony, N.M., will hold its fair from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Additionally, the Sunland Park Medical/Dental Clinic on 2625 McNutt Road, in Sunland Park, N.M., will hold its fair from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

National Health Center week recognizes the importance of community and health, while focusing on the medically vulnerable throughout the country. However, Bransdtetter emphasized that the event is allinclusive, available to all demographics, regardless of health insurance status or elegibility.

"It's not just for the underinsured or the underprivileged ,but for the entire community," Brandstetter said. "Our mission has always been to help whomever is in need."

For more information, call 526-1105 or visit www.lcdfnm.org.

Are two developers' Lighting ordinance plans going flat?

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ

Claims of unpaid bills, legal battles and lack of compliance are among some of the problems facing local developers during one of the housing industry's most trying times.

During a national recession – and as Las Cruces and Doña Ana County continue to grow - problems seem to be mounting for builders Philip Philippou and Desert Sage Building and Development Inc.

The latest in a string of legal battles comes on behalf of Golf Works, Inc., a company that Philippou – Doña Ana County's largest private property owner – subcontracted to build a golf course in the Sierra Norte subdivision on the East Mesa to be the future home of the Las Cruces Coun-

The lawsuit, filed in Las Cruces' state District Court by Golf Works' attorney Mickey Beisman, alleges that Philippou and the various entities he represents – Katerina Inc., Greco Enterprises Inc., Logos Development Inc. and Philippou LLC – committed one count of fraud and one count of loss of economic opportunities for Golf Works Inc., based in Austin, Texas.

The lawsuit states, "Defendant Philippou, acting individually, and through defendants Katerina, Greco, Logos and Philippou, LLC, as his alter ego, fraudulently induced Golf Works to enter into a transaction to construct and then to continue constructing the project by intentionally creating a false impression of the material risks involved concerning the water necessary for the project," reads a portion of the

Is darker better?

Almost 10 years after the city approved an ordinance to regulate the installation and use of outdoor lighting, dark sky proponents say current regulations are too lax, claiming that glaring outdoor lights are marring Las Cruces' nighttime sky.

The culprits? Businesses and homes, according to the group.

Advocates of the proposed change refer to any adverse affect of manmade light as "light pollution." That means billboards, signs, architectural lighting, LED, security lighting and similar light sources that prevent potential sky gazers from getting a clear view of the stars and celestial bodies.

"The proposed ordinance is badly designed," said former Las Cruces mayor William Mattiace, who now serves as vice president of the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce's Governmental Affairs. "If it was just on the businesses, it wouldn't be so controversial, but the changes would affect residential areas as Mattiace said aside from the cost to businesses to retrofit existing lighting and signage, the proposed ordinance raises a question of public safety.

"Four-thousand signatures were collected at Pic Quik stores (in opposition to the proposed ordinance), with the concern for safety," he said. "They want their young children, senior citizens and students to have a safe area when taking care of their fuel needs or buying goods and services.

Developing dust concerns

Group pushes for new building standards

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

A group of local homeowners recently banded together to combat what they claim is manmade "fugitive" dust being created by developers who "strip and scrape the land," causing adverse health effects to nearby residents and property damage and devaluation.

Las Crucens for Dust Ordinance Enforcement, comprising of seven homeowners in Districts 5 and 6, are working to modify the existing dust control ordinance so it can be better enforced, said group member Carol Reynolds.

These people have sustained property damage, property devaluation and health problems as a result of the reckless behavior of irresponsible developers and builders," Reynolds said. "The current ordinance that has been in place for about 10 years has never been adequately enforced.'

Reynolds said developers' stripping and scraping activities disturb the natural "crust" or "seal" in the desert floor and create a fugitive dust source that is affecting homeowners' properties – both damage and devalua-tion – and respiratory problems, mainly in the form of Valley Fever - a fungal infection similar to bronchitis.

"We are only at the tip of the iceberg regarding the health issue," Reynolds said. "Infected persons can suffer from fever, chest pain and coughing.'

Paul Dulin, director of the Office of Border Health, is leading the way to conduct a four-year public health study to better identify the source and severity of local Valley Fever illness.

"The cocci (Valley Fever), fungus, is found ubiquitously throughout the soil of the Čhihuahuan desert," Dulin said. "If you've got a piece of machinery grubbing a subdivision site and wind is whipping up at 20 mph, all this is getting into the Dulin said the first year of the publicly funded study will focus on training local physicians to identify and diagnose Valley Fever, which is especially prevalent in dust-heavy states such as Arizona and California.

Antonio Granillo, who owns a home in the Parkhill Subdivision off of Del Rey Boulevard, said excess sand kicked up by developers regularly piles 3 to 4 feet high in his backyard.

THERESA MONTOYA The Las Cruces Bulletin

The changes would require businesses including gas stations that have LED, neon and similar light fixtures - use semi-opaque or frosted shields to reduce glare, with maximum light levels from unshielded light fixtures at 20,000 lumens

Lumen is a unit of measurement of the rate at which a lamp produces light. A lamp's lumen output rating expresses the total amount of light the lamp emits in all directions. A 100-watt incandescent lamp produces about 1,800 lumens.

Mattiace said under the proposed requirements, safety cameras may be "inefficient in preventing problems and catching perpetrators," at places such as gas stations and other retail businesses.

Oscar Andrade, owner of Pic Quik stores, called the proposed changes "totally unnecessary" and "unrealistic.'

"We went through this 10 years ago," Andrade said. "When the first night sky ordinance came into play, they used my Del Rey store as an example of what a convenience store should look like.

Andrade said he's made one of the strongest efforts of all business owners to reduce the amount of power and light emitted from his stores' exteriors since the ordinance was first enacted, spend-"four times as much" to use energy efficient fixtures that far exceled the city's current requirements.

T've been 'green' for a long time," he said. "We already use 20 watts per fixture, versus the 400 watts per fixture the traditional convenient stores use. We have received a lot of national awards for our design to eliminate light."

Because Andrade uses high compact fluorescent light bulbs rather than metal halides, it would be "impossible" to lower the amount of lumen output at his stores. "You cannot dim a fluorescent fixture," he said.

Proposed changes to the existing ordinance would also require billboards, signs and architectural lighting to be turned off at 11 p.m., or close of business, whichever is later – a measure that Andrade calls "ridiculous."

"The cost for me to go out there every night and turn off every hard light would be ridiculous. How in the world would anybody do that?" he continued.

Although businesses with lighting currently up to city code would be grandfathered under the proposed ordinance, the changes would require lighting fixtures be updated if a business resumes operation after a year of inactivity, installs an addition or modifies its property, changes occupancy or modifies 25 percent or more of its existing outdoor lighting.

"This is going to affect the remodeling industry, affect sales at Lowe's, Home Depot and other places," Andrade said. "People will not take out building permits for fear of having to pay extra.

Andrade said if he were to remodel one of his older facilities, to the tune of $150,000 for exterior improvements, he would subsequently have to pay another $100,000 to upgrade its electrical fixtures.

"Economically, this just doesn't make sense," he added. "Instead of improving the city's image, people are just going to say it's not worth remodeling or it's not worth taking a permit out."

The gas station owner added that acquiring permits to build his two most recent stores was a "complete nightmare, and that increased regulation would make him "hesitant to build a new one.

In places such as Hatch, Anthony and Tortugas, Andrade said, "I have never had an issue dealing with the building inspectors there."

Proposed changes to the existing ordinance also include regulating "intrusive lighting" in the residential sector, effectively making it illegal for "light trespass" to spill into neighboring properties or for security and floodlights to be aimed up. Security lights, no more than two, would have to be deactivated by a motion sensor remaining on no longer than 12 minutes.

Mattiace and Andrade said this would make the new ordinance "un-enforceable" and at a great cost to the city to become the "light police."

Tom Hutchinson, owner of La Posta restaurant in Mesilla, said the proposed ordinance leans too heavily on special interests, and not enough on those of the general public.

"Anytime that you suggest things that are not enforceable - such as when you start talking about lumen parameters and percentage of lights that need to be on or off – you create a burdensome ordinance that's tough for people to obide by," he said. "The bottom line is that every ordinance should be passed with the public interest in mind, not with an agenda for a special interest. I think this (ordinance) might be a tad heavy on the special interest side '

The recent appointment of a former elected official to head the southern office of an Santa-Fe-based nonprofit group has created some confusion because of similar organization names.

Former state representative and state Public Regulation Commission member E. Shirley Baca of Las Cruces accepted the position of development director for the New Mexico Community Foundation's southern New Mexico office.

In that role, Baca will be working for the statewide nonprofit, supporting that foundation's southern New Mexico outreach. But Baca's organization

"The CFSNM is a local, autonomous community foundation, with its office in Las Cruces," the letter stated. Dust control

After a similar health-training program was initiated in Tucson, Ariz., "Cocci cases jumped from 40 cases a year to 6,000 cases a year," Dulin said.
"We will most certainly see the numbers

David Roewe, executive officer for the Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico, said more studies should be conducted before the finger can be pointed at developers.

"The biggest offenders of disturbing soil are farmers," he said, "not builders. Let's get real here.

Isaac Chavez, director of governmental affairs for the Las Cruces Association of Realtors, agrees that developers alone should not bear the burden for area dust problems.

"We are still waiting to see where this discussion leads, but we don't feel that this is solely a builder and development prob-lem," Chavez said. "I think it's very unfair certain people in the community are trying to blame this on the builders.

According to the New Mexico Environment Department, anyone can potentially be harmed by breathing too much dust, but infants, children, the elderly, people with asthma or lung problems, people with heart disease, pregnant women and outdoor workers are at a higher risk of developing serious health problems.

The NMED says that each year, Doña Ana County has between six to 18 days when dust levels are too high according to federal health standards.

"Throughout most of the year, the air quality in Doña Ana County is very good and the air is considered clean," an NMED dust control briefing states. "Most of the exceedances recorded in Doña Ana County have been caused by high winds. However, Las Cruces is probably beginning to add to ozone and smog pollution bit-by-bit as the area continues to grow quickly."

The briefing continues, "It is unreasonable to expect that all dust can be controlled. No one, not even the EPA, believes we can control Mother Nature.

Reynolds, who lives in The Pines neighborhood off of Del Rey Boulevard, said homeowners in her area have sustained landscaping damage and property devaluation because their homes "are adjacent to extensive areas that have been stripped and scraped and then abandoned or not developed as planned."

"The folks already have a pretty grim situation in regard to the sale of their residences," she said. "Many of them have had to re-landscape their yards repeatedly and if the situation is not remedied, they will be required to undertake future repairs.'

Isaac Apodaca, who owns a home in the Las Colinas neighborhood off of Roadrunner Parkway, said excess dust from an undeveloped land parcel behind his home has damaged his landscaping and

"I understand that we live in the desert but this is totally ridiculous," Apodaca said. "These mountains – sand dunes – are literally towering over our house and we have a bunch of sand coming into our yard. You can't even tell we have rocks in our backyard."

Apodaca said his neighbor has already replaced the roof on his home because of the excess dust, and fears his roof will need to be replaced soon.

"We're just regular people trying to make it," he added. "We work hard for everything we have and it's being destroyed.

At a City Council meeting July 6, Cameron Flower, senior environmental manager for Kitchell Environmental Services, presented the council an overview of "fugitive" dust sources and how to best prevent the overblowing of particulate matter into the air.

He said proven solutions have been educating the general public and building industry, taking an emissions inventory, regulating the private industry through public ordinances and enforcing penalties.

"What appeared promising from Mr. Flower's presentation were a number of low-cost measures that would cut down on blowing dust," said Erin Ward, environmental expert at New Mexico State University. "Cameron had other low-cost measures that wouldn't require much effort - just a little creative thinking and willingness to listen.'

The city plans a special work session Thursday, Aug. 6, at the Council Chambers, to further discuss dust control measures and mitigation considerations.

"I hope homeowners and land developers are willing to invest a little time and attend Thursday's workshop," Ward said. "It may result in a high benefit to the community at a low cost to the developers.

Developers

The East Mesa golf course, which Las Cruces Country Club President Ed Perez said was "70 percent complete" in early June, was designed to be a championship-type course, he said, and is embedded into the new Sierra Norte development, which is just short of 2,000 acres. Because the "economy hit Philippou really hard," Perez said, the project was "purchased by a third party" earlier this year - but the problems associated with the course seem to have followed Philippou.

"There's a lot happening right now – ownership, city permits, road construction," Perez said in June. "If not for economic troubles, the course would have been done by now.

The lawsuit cites several occasions in which Golf Works representatives were informed there was an adequate amount of water to sustain the project, but that those representations were false, and forced Golf Works to commit its own resources to perform work without a contract between January 2007 and March

"Because the substantial amount of money owed by defendants to Golf Works for work already performed under the contract remains unpaid, Golf Works' bonding capacity has been reduced by $5 million and a $200,000 letter of credit has been revoked by its bank," the lawsuit states, adding that the defendants' actions were "reckless" and "malicious.'

Adding to Philippou's troubles is a lawsuit filed by the City of Las Cruces in the Third Judicial District Court in July that claims Philippou and his development entities failed to comply with subdivision requirements imposed by the city on various projects.

In addition to drainage work, the complaint identifies roadway, utility work and rock wall improvements that alleg-edly have not been completed in several other Philippou-owned subdivisions.

Earlier this year, Philippou paid more than $200,000 to the city for an outstanding water bill after liens were placed on several of his properties.

In a statement to the Albuquerque Journal, Philippou's attorney Kyle Moberly was quoted as saying I expect that Mr. Philippou will want to tell the public his side of the story."

A phone call to Moberly's office was not returned.

Philippou is not the only developer feeling the heat. Just last week Desert Sage Building and Development Inc., which specializes in custom home-building, filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy protection.

Documents filed July 23 with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Albuquerque, list 147 creditors and $5,262,121 in total liabilities for Desert Sage, with $5,267,052 in total company assets. Claims to local creditors include

New HUD rules encourage borrowers to shop wisely

Protective guidelines go into effect Jan. 1

How many times have you overheard someone relating the story about going to closing on a real estate purchase or refinance and finding that the closing costs were far higher than expected? Maybe it's because I'm in the real estate business, but I hear that sort of grievance on a regular basis.

According to the Real Estate Settlement and Procedures Act (RESPA) passed in 1974, however, you and I are not supposed hear such stories. Why? Because the HUD regulations enacted at that time and which remain in place today require that mortgage lenders and brokers give to their borrowers at the time of application a Good Faith Estimate (GFE) of the types of services, fees and costs they might expect to encounter in connection with their purchase or refinance transaction. So, what's the problem?

While the GFEs did serve to take some of the mystery out the makeup of the behind-the-scenes costs of the products and services "sold" to borrowers during their real estate transactions, RESPA rules have never required the closing costs contained in the estimate actually match the costs that that are ultimately charged at closing.

As a result, many borrowers have been surprised to find the true cost of their transactions were far in excess of the amount outlined in their original GFEs. Effective Jan. 1, 2010, however, new HUD guidelines will require mortgage lenders and brokers to provide GFEs that are, in one word, accurate.

According to HUD, the new GFE will substantially enhance disclosure of the most important aspects of the loan by requiring the lender or mortgage broker provide a more comprehensive overview of the borrower's charges and fees. Highlights of the new rules include:

- Disclosure of the loan amount, term, initial interest rate, whether the rate is adjustable, whether negative amortization is allowed, whether reserves for taxes and insurance will be required and whether the loan has a prepayment penalty or balloon payment
- Disclosure of the lender or broker's total origination fees and third-party fees and taxes, whether the borrower will pay points to get a lower interest rate or if the borrower will accept a higher interest rate in exchange for lower closing costs and how much the mortgage broker will be paid by the lender (currently known as Yield Spread Premium, or YSP)
- Access to a table that allows the borrower to compare the trade-offs between paying points and getting a lower rate, as well as access to a "shopping cart" table that allows borrowers to enter information from multiple GFEs so they can compare mortgage offers side-by-side Included in HUD's new rules is a ment, which is the form used to tally the final accounting of the costs. The new form now includes a table that borrowers can use to determine if their lenders have been honest with them by comparing the final closing costs on the HUD with those contained in the original GFE.

According to HUD, the revised RESPA

According to HUD, the revised RESPA regulations will save borrowers an estimated $700 in fees for each transaction closed. Given that a 2008 study conducted by Bankrate.com showed that New Mexico homebuyers and home refinanciers pay the sixth highest closing costs in the nation at $3,466 per transaction, the new rules couldn't come too soon.

By the way, even though use of the

By the way, even though use of the new GFEs won't become compulsory until Jan. 1, 2010, HUD is encouraging lenders and mortgage brokers to begin using the new disclosure form now.

I don't know about you, but if I were shopping for a loan, I'd certainly give additional consideration to the lender or broker who chose to compete for my business by volunteering to disclose the new information to me now, rather than waiting until he or she is forced to do so.

If you'd like to dig a little deeper into the details of the new regulations, log on to HUD's official website at www.hud. gov and enter "New GFE" into the search field. You'll find more than enough information there to keep you busy for quite some time to come.

See you at closing!

The potential for renewable energy in agriculture and eastern New Mexico's contributions to biofuel efforts will be topics of interest at the annual field day at New Mexico State University's Agricultural Science Center at Clovis, N.M. The featured keynote speaker at the event will be U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman. The field day is scheduled for Tuesday Aug. 18. For more information, call 985-2292 or email marsalis@nmsu.edu.

Statement from president on "Cash for Clunkers"

A statement from President Barack Obama released July 31 by the White House Office of the Press Secretary regarding the Cash for Clunkers program reads: "I want to thank leaders in the House of Represen-

"I want to thank leaders in the House of Representatives for working quickly and in a bipartisan way to pass legislation that will use Recovery Act funds to keep Cash for Clunkers going. This program has been an overwhelming success, allowing consumers to trade in their less fuel-efficient cars for a credit to buy more fuel-efficient new models. It has given consumers a much-needed break, provided the American auto industry an important boost and is achieving environmental benefits well beyond what was originally anticipated. The program has proven to be a successful part of our economic recovery and will help lessen our dangerous dependence on foreign oil, while reducing greenhouse gas emissions and improving the quality of the air we breathe."

CFSNM director leads fundraising

Courtesy of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) is continuing its support for local nonprofits with the help of Executive Director Luan Wagner Burn. Burn began her first official day with the CFSNM July 20 and immediately started on a campaign that commenced the same day Burn was announced as the new director. The CFSNM launched the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign in April with a goal to raise $500,000 by Dec. 31 to help 32 nonprofits who have endowments within the foundation.

"People everywhere are talking about sustainability," Burn said. "Through this campaign, we will be able to meet emergency needs while building endowments that will keep giving forever."

With each contribution to the campaign, the CFSNM will designate 50 percent to an emergency fund for nonprofits that have endowments with the foundation. The other 50 percent will be designated to a matching fund created to build the nonprofit endowments, leading to the long-term sustainability for the organizations within the greater Las Cruces community. The principal from an endowment continues to grow forever, providing financial security even in hard times.

Burn married Las Cruces local Keith Burn and began a year-long commute from Arizona, where she worked as an executive director for the Arizona Youth Partnership. Once she began to build relationships within the CFSNM, she was recruited to her current position.

'I am excited to be a part of an organization that the community has faith in, knowing that funds will be appropriately handled," Burn said. "I am also excited about working with a variety of nonprofits and connecting those organizations with donors."

Burn's previous position allowed her to grow her grant writing skills and her ability to encourage nonprofit growth. During her time at AYP, Burn grew a budget from $200,000 a year to $3 million. She has been through hard times, however. At one point, Burn had to lay off 22 staff members.

"I learned along the way how to be sustainable," said Burn, who received her Ph.D. in human development from Ohio State University. "My experience might give me more credibility with people as I explain the situation the nonprofits are in right now."

Burn's experience will also help her meet the needs of nonprofits through the workshops and support the CFSNM provides on issues such as business needs, taxes and fundraising. Along with the CFSNM's supporting organization, the Healthcare Foundation of Southern New Mexico, Burn said she is looking forward to building

"I'm very happy to be in a community that connects donors with community needs," she said.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM uses knowledge to help connect people who care with causes that matter. Donors are encouraged to inquire about donating to the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign. Money 101 for your spouse

Do both partners know where their money is?

During my university days, a lot of beginning classes were numbered

We had Art 101, History 101, Psychology 101.

I never ran across a Money 101 class, but I find myself teaching it from time to time with clients who have lost their spouse and need financial guidance.

Since I work mainly with seniors, I find most of them have devised a division of labor in their partnership. For the most part, the financial "labor" was largely the men's responsibility.

Women and men both need to share this responsibility, or at least give their partner the basic information needed to keep the household running. Household finances are vital to every family, so a partnership is necessary. Too often, the person who controls the finances becomes incapacitated or passes way, leaving the surviving spouse with little to no knowledge of financial survival.

A family's finances - even a family of two – should be treated similar to a business. Where and what are the assets? What do they own and what investments do are the family's liabilities? What bills do they owe and to whom, and when must they be paid? When does the money come in and from where? If the individual who has this knowledge does not share it, the spouse is at a huge disadvantage and is being done a great disservice, unintentional

When working with seniors, I suggest creating a binder with a handful of "how to" categories. This is a simple way of creating an efficient and extremely helpful tool that can be used to teach your spouse the financial basics. It also may prove to be invaluable should the financially savvy spouse become unable to carry on with his or her duties

Sit at the kitchen table with your spouse and discuss the categories of your assets, liabilities, insurance policies, legal documents, wills, etc. You have drafted a will, right?

In my own experience, my father's stroke left him bedridden for three years. My mother had no experience dealing with finances, and she had to

My mother even had to be taught how to fill the car with gas! In the old days, she would go to the gas stations and attendants would refuel her car. When those gas stations no longer had attendants, my mother drove until the needle showed less than a quarter of a tank and would park the car at home until my father refueled it. This problem could have been easily resolved by taking a joint trip to the gas station and some easy hands-on training. It's the same with finance. It was hard for me to believe they co-existed this way, but it's true.

I suggest the person in the house who does not pay the bills take over this task with some guidance for a few months. This person should also review the financial documents that arrive in the mail and take a peek at documents that have been filed away. Couples should also give some thought to including another mature member of the family or other third party into the financial lesson plan, given they are comfortable with it.

Government insults professor, calls his car a clunker

But will he accept cash for trusted friend?

The government says my car is a clunker, despite having reasonable gas mileage and great reliability.

My ride is a 1991 Volvo 740 Sedan and it is sweet. Well actually not. I've never really liked it that much – no cup holders – but I still don't want the government telling me it's a clunker. No sir, no sir indeed.

The thing came with my wife. She had bought it new before we started dating and when we married the car was part of the deal. For the first 12 years, it was her primary car and I only used it occasionally. Then, she bought a Mitsubishi Endeavor and my daughter got a driver's license. My daughter won't be caught dead in an 18-year-old "grandma car" that's older than her. So, she drives my Toyota Camry. I drive the Volvo and our family has found a happy equilibrium, that is, until the government stepped in.

The Volvo really is in good shape. It never needs a repair, doesn't leak oil and gets around 25 mpg on the highway. Heck, even after 183,000 miles, the sunroof doesn't even leak. The engine is probably good for another 100,000 miles. Oh, the leather seats need replacing and there is a big hole where the radio used to be, but these are minor details.

According to Kelly Bluebook, the car is worth about $1,500. But here is the rub; I know it is worth more than that. Dependable and trustworthy, I can't buy a car as good for less than $4,500. No one will give me its value, so I just keep it, content with my decision.

Then the Cash for Clunkers program comes along. They tell me my car is worth $4,500 as a trade-in for a new car. This just offends my Yankee sensibilities. First, to be a clunker, a car has to get less than 18 mpg. While this might be true for Volvo 740s in general, it isn't for my well-maintained specimen. Second, if I do take advantage of the Cash for Clunkers program, they pour solvent into the engine of my little beauty, turning its innards into pudding. Destroying a perfectly good car that could run for years without a problem just galls me.

The thing that really burns me is that under the Cash for Clunkers program, someone could turn in a Hummer that gets 14 mpg and receive a $4,500 rebate to buy brand a new SUV that gets 18 mpg. This is crazy; subsidize the purchase of a new gas-guzzler while destroying my chunk of heaven that gets 20 mpg even on its worse days.

Not to mention the pollution that results from manufacturing a new car. And this is real cancer causing, heart attack provoking, view-obscuring pollution, not that new-age-global warming-carbon stuff, although producing a new car causes plenty of that too. You need a pretty substantial increase in mileage to make up for the manufacture of a replacement auto.

Will I turn in my beloved Volvo for cash? Well maybe. Like I said, I have Yankee sensibilities and if you do the math, it makes sense for me to buy a new car to take advantage of the program. Detroit needs my help, after all.

Hey, the waste implicit in the Cash for Clunkers program may offend me, but I'm also a realist. You can't fight city hall and you can't win against Washington. But I may not get a chance to turn in my clunker whether I want to or not. As I write this, the first billion dollars is gone and the Senate hasn't yet approved the second billion. Perhaps this means my car isn't a clunker any more.

Federal money available for inventors, innovators

Risky startups are eligible for federal funding

By GAIL AND JIM GREENWOOD Greenwood Consulting Group Inc. on behalf o Northern New Mexico Connect

Article courtesy of Finance New Mexico

Two federal programs dedicated to funding highrisk research and development into new stand to get money from stimulus package develop products, technology or services that solve pressing problems in agriculture, defense, education, energy, transportation, the environment, space exploration, health and other areas. The Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) program requires the business to collaborate with a nonprofit research laboratory or university that can share its technology or expertise with the innovator. The 11 federal agencies with SBIR programs include the departments of Defense and Energy, NASA, National Science Foundation and National Institutes of Health. (NIH exempted $250 million of its additional stimulus funding from the SBIR program, but outcry from small businesses prompted it to set aside $50 million to $100 million for SBIR-like initiatives.) Five agencies have STTR programs.

SBIR and STTR grants don't have to be repaid and don't require the developer to give up equity. The business, however, has to abide by federal procurement regulations and has to do the work that was promised.

Help when it's needed

SBIR/STTR grants are designed to support unproven research and development that many investors won't risk money on. In Phase I of an SBIR/STTR project, a business gets about $100,000 to study how its innovation can be applied toward solving a pressing problem. In Phase II, the business gets as much as $750,000 to expand and complete R&D.

In Phase III, the business is expected to commercialize its invention – to move it from the lab into the marketplace, so consumers, industries, soldiers, doctors or farmers can use it. While the government doesn't subsidize this phase, SBIR/STTR awards can help a business attract funding from traditional lenders and venture capitalists once the merits of an innovation have been demonstrated and a working prototype has been built.

Given the sluggish economy, proposers are under greater pressure to identify viable, sustainable markets for their innovation before requesting SBIR/STTR funding.

Barker retains quality control level

Company to open new plant

By Marvin Tessneer

Barker Produce is wrapping up its onion-packing season and looking forward to opening its new processing plant now under construction in the West Mesa Industrial Park.

The processing plant will trim tops and bottoms and outer layers from the onion buibs, of which about 60 to 70 percent will be shipped to processors, manager Brandon Barker said.

"We supply Campbell Soup and Pace Picante with their onions year round," Barker said. "They use about 15 semi-loads or 600,000 pounds of onions a week. And those are just a couple of our processors.

The Barkers estimate that consumers and processors use about 14 million pounds of onions per day.

"We'll start running the processing plant in January when we'll be bringing in onions from Colorado. We'll be able store onions here, so we'll be running the packing plant for four and a half months and the processing plant for 12 months."

The new processing plant equipment was designed and built in the Netherlands, Barker said.

This equipment can peel 12,000 pounds of onions an hour," he said. "We're (planting) more acres of (onions) next year to supply this equipment."

Usually, Barker Produce finishes its packing season in mid-August. But this season, the plant's farmers harvested 400 acres, about 100 fewer than average.

"We had right around 25 million pounds this year – a good yield for the acreage," Barker said. "Last year, we had 30 million

Larry Barker, Brandon's father, started the business 19 years ago and moved his operation to the West Mesa in 1994.

Fairacres producer Steve Lyles grows the onions in the Mesilla Valley for the packing plant. He grows about 20 varieties of yellow, white and red onions, which can change every season as seed companies keep introducing new varieties. They run test plots, and Larry Barker and Lyles monitor the mature plants for improvements.

"If we like the new varieties, we get more seed to try them out," the elder Barker said. "We're looking for new varieties all the time to improve our onion crops."

Barker follows a planting schedule to provide a steady supply. "Our business is mostly packaging, and we plant our onions so that we can supply our processor through the summer," he said. For example, short-day onions, which can survive the shorter winter daylight hours, are planted in September and October for harvest in May and June. Others varieties are planted in

As the season ends, the Barker plant is receiving and packing onions from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Barker's office fixtures include a Cowboys for Cancer Research saddle he won in 2007 as a heeler in team roping. He also owns a header buckle that he won in last year's C4CR roping contests. "The roping contests bring the community together for a good cause," Barker said.

He has a roping arena next to the onion plant where he and his team-roping buddies can practice.

Barker also is proud that his plant has received its fourth consecutive Good Handling Practice certification from the New Mexico Department of Agriculture, marketing director Edward Avalos announced.

The NMDA conducts audits on food processing plants, and the Barkers won their certification while maintaining current

"It's good for the entire onion industry," Brandon Barker said.
"Food safety is so important now. Food processing plants are going to have to be a little more strict."

The GHP certification allows us to sell onions to major processors and retailers throughout the country," Larry Barker said.

Talking business with manager Brandon Barker

What is your business philosophy?

Barker Produce is committed to growing, harvesting, packing and shipping the highest quality onions with honesty and integrity.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

Barker Produce continually participates in Agricultural programs at NMSU, whether it be research and development of better seeds or helping to teach growing techniques to Future Farmers of America.

What would you like people to know about your business?

We actively support small businesses in our area and encourage others to do the same. We are very proud to be a part of this community.

Where do you see your business in five years?

Las Cruces is growing and we're growing with it. Barker Produce is currently expanding to the industrial center in the West Mesa.

What is the best part of your job? I have many opportunities to meet new people from around the U.S. and other countries. Our local farmers are great people, and I feel lucky to work with them.

From soap to nuts, farmers and crafts market has it all

Produce, arts and crafts just some of the local treats

Las Crucens and visitors are attracted to the Downtown area every day for the galleries, bookstores and theaters. On Wednesdays and Saturdays, however, visitors come to get their goods.

The Las Cruces Farmers &

Crafts Market on the Downtown Mall began the summer of 1974, after the city closed part of Main Street to make way for urban renewal.

"Farmers started selling produce out of the back of their trucks," said Downtown events coordinator Olivia Hennessey.

Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts

Market

On the Downtown Mall

8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Saturdays year round

According to Hennessey, the city took over the twice-a-week event in 1999 from a group of vendors known as the Farmers Market Association. While the city kept the rules and regulations established by the association, it increased advertising.

"The vendor's fees go to advertising," she said. "Everything taken from the farmers market goes back into the farmers market.

Held year round, the farmers market has about 63 vendors on Wednesdays and more than 200 on Saturdays. Hennessey said the most popular time of the year for the market is produce season, which runs from May through the end of October.

"Another big season is from October through December around the holidays," she said. "It slows down in January and February, but picks up again when the weather is warm."

Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market shoppers can find anything from produce and gourmet food, to artistic items and crafts.

"Everything is either hand-made or homegrown. It's all local," Hennessey said. With arts and crafts vendors from Doña Ana County and produce vendors from all over New Mexico and El Paso County, there is something for everyone.

began Southwest Kettle Korn nine years ago as a way for this Seattle couple to earn extra income.

"It's fun. It's an excellent way to connect with the community,' Brian Peterson said.

Along with selling kettle corn on the weekends, Brian Peterson is the principal of Sunrise Elementary School and Ester Peterson is a first-grade teacher at Jornada Elementary School.

For soap maker and owner of New Mexico Soaps Diane Black, the farmers market has allowed her to sell her old-fashioned soap while meeting new people.

"I wanted to share my lush product with people," said the four-year market veteran. "It's wonderful, there's nothing like it. It's a place to meet people and make friends."

The farmers market is also a place for new vendors to get their foot in the door. Mike Smith, who began creating digital paintings about a year ago, recently became a market vendor as a way to find an audience for his work.

"I thought this was a hobby that I could make a dollar at instead of just spending money on it," Smith said.

There is also entertainment at the farmers market, such as mariachi performers, acoustic guitarists, singers and jugglers.

"There's festive entertainment. It's a giant party every week," Hennessey said.

She encourages all Las Crucens to support local vendors by attending the farmers market.

For Las Cruces residents Dee and Danny Hernandez the farmers market gives them an opportunity to enjoy locally grown treats.

"(We come) for the fresh veg-etables," he said. "It's also nice to get out and walk."

On Saturday, Sept. 5, Hennessey said the farmers market will cross the street to the south end of the Downtown Mall while the northern area is being revitalized.

"We're picking it up as it is and moving it four blocks," she said. While everything will basically remain the same, Hennessey said there will be some space changes. Vendor spaces will expand from 5-by-10 feet to 10by-10 feet to accommodate vendors that choose to bring their own canopies.

Once construction is completed, she said vendors will have the choice to move back to the north area or stav on the south end. She also said she thinks the revitalization of the area will help the farmers market grow and increase its vendor base.

Before selling at the farmers market, all vendors must attend an orientation. While it is free for vendors to participate at Wednesday's market, there is a $2 fee for Saturday's market. Visit www. las-cruces.org for more informa-

I have full coverage. I'm covered, right?

Robert L. Lovett Attorney at Law

Wrong. As an auto accident attorney practicing for 15 years, I hear a lot of clients that say they're not worried because they have "full coverage." Full coverage is in no way full enough to cover you for personal injuries. This type of coverage means you have liability and collision coverage. Liability pays someone else if you cause an accident. It doesn't cover you. Collision coverage covers your car itself. This means if you're in an accident, collision coverage will pay to fix or replace your car. Full coverage does not cover your personal injury claim. So what kind of insurance should you have to make sure you really are fully covered?

Uninsured motorist. A recent study stated that 1 out of every 4 motorists in New Mexico get behind the wheel without insurance. New Mexico has the dubious distinction of leading the nation in the number of uninsured motorists. Uninsured coverage provides protection for your medical bills, lost wages, and pain and suffering should a driver cause an accident and he's one of the four that doesn't have insurance. Uninsured motorist may also cover you even if the other driver has insurance, but doesn't have enough insurance to fully cover your losses.

It's scary enough to be in an auto accident. It's worse to be not covered for that accident. Please feel free to give me a call anytime to discuss your personal injury

Soldier Show at Oñate High School

Lights! Camera! Action!

That's the theme of the 2009 U.S. Army Soldier Show, scheduled at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11, and at 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 12 in the Oñate High School Performing Arts Center, 5700 Mesa Grande Drive.

The audience is going to have the rare experience of feeling and being in a live television studio, including commercial breaks," said Soldier Show production director Victor Hurtado, who spent much of the past year working on TV productions "Nashville Star," "America's Got Talent," "Clash of the Choirs" and country performing artist Michael Peterson's "My Real Life – Strong For America Tour," presented by the U.S. Army.

The 2009 U.S. Army Soldier Show is a high-energy, 90-minute live musical review showcasing the talents of active-duty soldiers who were selected by audition from throughout the Army. They are amateur artists who have a passion for music, dance and performing. They come from aviation, biological, infantry, medical, musical, signal, transportation and other tactical units. The show is assembled in five weeks, and then tours for six months.

Once on the road, soldiers work an average 14-hour day, seven days a week for seven months. Totally self-contained the cast and crew offload, load, assemble and dismantle 18 tons of equipment at each stop on the tour, including 4 miles of cable and 100 theatrical lights. During the tour, they will handle more than a million pounds of electrical, sound, stage and lighting gear. Some soldiers have described it as their toughest duty outside of combat.

The 2009 U.S. Army Soldier Show is made possible through the generous support of its main sponsor, I. A.M. STRONG, the Army's Prevention of Sexual Harassment and Sexual Assault Program and supporting sponsor AT&T.

The Soldier Show comes to Las Cruces as part of a six-and-a-half-month tour with more than 100 performances on 46 installations, including stops in Hawaii, Korea and the storied Warner Theatre in Washington.

Among the cast members of this years's show is Spc. Victoria Chang, a preventive medicine specialist at White Sands Missile Range. Chang's musically-inclined parents encouraged her to sing while she was growing up in Reno, Nev. She participated in choir from elementary through Clark High School in Las Vegas, Nev., but upon military enlistment did not imagine an opportunity to sing for the U.S. Army Soldier Show. Chang thanks her family and friends, along with her unit at McAfee U.S. Army Health Clinic, for their support.

The show will open with Kirk Franklin's upbeat "Declaration (This is It!)," co-written by Kenny Loggins and Michael McDonald, which addresses survival of the everyday trials and tribulations through a positive declaration of one's purpose in life.

"It makes use of the tune of Kenny Loggins' 'This is It," Hurtado said. "But it has been completely redone in a very inspirational way.

Another scene features the new retro sounds of Duffy's "Mercy," Dominican Juan Luis Guerra's "La Llave de Mi Corazon," which translates in English to "Key to my Heart," and "I Decided," by Solange Knowles, younger sister of Beyonce.

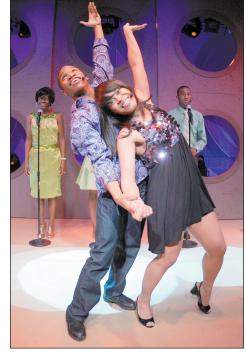

"It has a little bit of English, a little bit of rap, it's all meringue – so it moves," Hurtado said. "There are also some really cool Kanye West and Rhianna numbers, with black lights and interesting drums – a lot of visuals.

A lot of dance, rap, English R&B, visuals, patriotic tunes, movement, love of country – even a roller skater – will grace the stage of the 2009 U.S. Army Soldier Show during the 90-minute theatrical concert production.

Soldier-performers will wear traditional attire from India during "Jai a soundtrack piece from "Slumdog Millionaire," the 2008-09 Oscar Awardwinning best motion picture of the year.

The soldiers will perform Frankie Smith's 1981 funk song, "Double Dutch Bus," while playing the streets of Philadelphia-acclaimed jump rope game on stage. Raven-Symone covered the tune in 2008 and it was released to promote the film "College Road Trip." There also will be a throw forward to modernized versions of more '80s hits, complete with choreography and costuming reminiscent of the "Solid Gold" television show.

For the finale, the troops combine "The Warrior's Anthem," by Michael Peterson,

'Lights! Camera! Action!" is the theme of the 2009 U.S. Army Soldier Show with the late Robert Humphreys' "Warrior's Creed" set to music.

"It's a combination of that and a song called 'Make Them Hear You," Hurtado said. "It's a declaration of being heard."

That, in itself, is the director's goal for the Soldiers' show.

"I'm an artistic person by nature," said Hurtado, who during the past year founded Martenvee Media to help expand the entertainment horizon for enlisted troops who aspire to perform. "Just being able to focus on that, and to work from the stage back, is where I'm most comfortable, especially in working with the music.

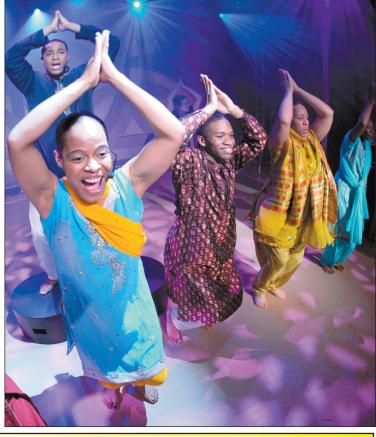

"This is basically writing an hour-anda-half record with feet and hands and clothes and hearts – and a roller skater this time. I'm really an artist at heart, although I have an organized side of myself that comes in handy.

"Either way, I answer to the same boss: the soldiers in the show."

The Soldier Show is free and seating is on a first come, first-served basis

For more information, call 678-1256.

Cast members rehearse one of the many music and dance numbers that will be performed by male and female soldiers at the U.S. Army Soldier Show at Oñate High School on Tuesday and Wednesday Aug. 11 and 12.

Community welcomes La Catrina String Quartet

NMSU's new Quartet-in-Residence ready to improve music department

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Las Cruces and New Mexico State University celebrated the addition of La Catrina String Quarter, the university's new faculty Quartet-in-Residence, during a welcome reception held at Luna Rosa Winery Saturday, Aug. 1.

La Catrina members Jorge Martínez, viola; Daniel Vega-Albela, violin; Alan Daowz, cello; and Blake Espy, violin, formed the quartet after graduating from Western Michigan University in 2001.

The quartet began as a casual group, but received the opportunity to enter the professional world in 2004 when its members started their master's degree in chamber music at Kent State University and performed with the Miami String Quartet, Vega-Albela said.

Vega-Albela said the master's program not only allowed the quartet to work on their craft, but it also helped them with networking and marketing.

Three years ago, shortly after they finished their degrees, they found a manager, Lisa Sapinkopf. With her help, the quartet began performing around the country, including the recent Medowlark Music Festival in Nebraska.

At the same time, the Las Cruces Friends of Chamber Music was being formed and was working with Sapinkopf to bring big name groups to Las Cruces, such as the St. Petersburg String Quartet.

"Lisa said we had to hear La Catrina," said Barbara Toth, Las Cruces Friends of Chamber Music administrative director and founding board member. "In November of '07, they came and hosted a concert at St. Albino's ... People were just crazy about the young men and we were delighted."

The quartet came back the following year for a weeklong visit, during which they worked with NMSU students as well as Mayfield High School orchestra students, who were included in the quartet's concert at NMSU.

"We went to master classes with kids in the string department (of NMSU)," Vega-Albela said, adding that some of the students would attend the quartet's rehearsals, which lasted three to four hours. "They were starving for guidance. They were starved for that kind of attention needed to become a professional musician."

Toth said she began discussing with Music Department head Ken Van Winkle the possibility of bringing the quartet to the university as faculty members after their residency with the Western Piedmont Symphony was completed.

"When (the process of bringing La Catrina) was finally done, Dr. Van Winkle was practically dancing down the halls. He said this instantly pushed them 10 years ahead," she said.

Coming to Las Cruces was ideal for the quartet because Vega-Albela said it will allow them to spend more time with their families and less time on the road.

Vega-Albela has an 11-yearold son Jacobo, who will attend Lynn Middle School this year. His wife Crystal is currently finishing her master's degree in human rights.

Martínez, and his wife Veronica, who will be seeking a master's degree in accounting, have family in Mexico and look forward to visiting relatives with their 16-month-old daughter Valeria.

The group is also excited to work with the NMSU students.

"It's great to be in a place that you know the kids are eager to learn," Vega-Albela said.

He said the quartet will spend most of their energy on recruiting students for the music program, which will include going into the community.

"There needs to be buzz about the string department at NMSU," he said. "Hopefully we will do a great deal of teaching at the high school level. We want students to consider doing their undergrad in performing (arts) at NMSU."

The quartet will also continue to perform at the university, in town and around the country.

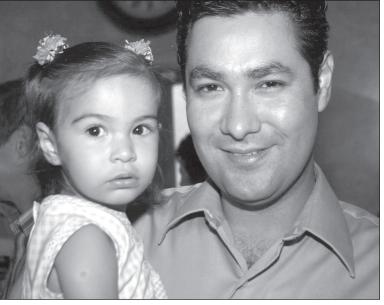

"We want the kids to see what a professional group sounds like," Vega-Albela said.

By building the NMSU string department, La Catrina will help grow the entire music department.

"For an orchestra, one of the most important things to have is a core of string players," he said. "There is no better tool for an orchestra than a string quartet."

Ultimately, the quartet would like NMSU to have two graduate and two undergraduate string quartets, which will lead to an orchestra.

"There currently is no student orchestra. They're building it from the ground up," Toth said.

"Once we have a good student orchestra, then we can host guest artists," Vega-Albela said. "The opportunities are almost limitless."

It may seem like a challenge, but Vega-Albela said they are excited to build the string department from the ground up.

"The opportunity to be given cart blanch ... you can't put a price tag on that," he said about his "new baby."

Toth said she is excited about the addition of the quartet, which has won numerous awards including Western Michigan University's All University Research and Creative Scholar Award, the Bascom Little Fund Grant and the North Carolina Arts Council cARTwheels 2009 and 2010 touring program.

LAS CRUCES Museums

Make a difference at the museums

CHERYL FALLSTEAD

President, Foundation for the Las Cruces Museums

When visiting a museum, most of us don't think about how it gets the money for the exhibits on display or pays for the building, staff or even the electric bill. We just take for granted that these places are here for us to enjoy and that they always will be. Likewise, we don't think about where the money will come from to improve the museum collections or add new programs. Again, we just expect it.

Museums everywhere, however, have been facing financial problems reflective of those faced by the nation as a whole. Right here at home, our four city-operated museums have been subject to budget reductions along with other city departments and have seen a drastic reduction in funds dropped into their donation boxes.

What does this mean to our museums and their programming? Just like any other entity, if funds are not available, something has to be cut. It could mean fewer exhibit changes, lectures, concerts and other free programs could be offered, or reduction in communication such as newsletters for museum patrons.

Museums have always been the cultural center of a community. They offer us the opportunity to learn about art, history, science and culture and serve as the repositories of our community memory. They serve an essential role and must be nurtured in order for us and our children to be nourished in return.

So what can we do to help? The Foundation for Las Cruces Museums is a nonprofit organization that exists for one reason – to support our city's museums. We raise funds to supplement the museums' budgets and advocate for them. Our small board and group of friends can't do this alone. We need your help.

One painless way to support the museums is to go shopping. El Mercado de los Museums (the museum market or store) offers a broad range of merchandise from high-quality Mata Ortiz pottery and colorful, hand-carved and painted Oaxacan animals to locally made jewelry, art prints by Gabriella Denton, note cards featuring work by our very own Stephen Hansen, toy trains, science toys and a wide range of books related to local history or by local authors. Every purchase supports the foundation and through it, the museums.

Another wonderful way to support the museums is to become a Friend of the Las Cruces Museums. Museum Friends have benefits, such as special tours of exhibits and the opportunity to preview some of the bigger exhibits. We are also planning trips just for our Friends. You can sign up to become a Friend at El Mercado or through our website, www. flcm.blogspot.com.

up to $1,000. The goal was to raise enough funds to completely remake the model train layout. Not only did donations meet the necessary $1,000, but have now exceeded the goal, totaling $3,300. All because one person offered to lead the way in making a difference.

You can see the progress on the model train layout at the Railroad Museum, thanks to people who believe museums are important to support. The foundation thanks the anonymous donor and everyone who has made a donation for this effort.

Perhaps times are tough for you right now, too. You don't have any extra money to drop into a donation box or to buy a Friends membership, let alone anything in the gift shop. There are still two gifts you can give to show your support of the

The simplest thing you can do is to come visit our museums. Have you seen the Las Cruces Collects exhibit at the Museum of Art, featuring work owned by local art collectors? Or the two new exhibits at the Branigan Cultural Center, one highlighting work by local artists and the other the camera collection of Don Brenner? How about Let's Get Active at the Museum of Natural History or the permanent exhibits at the Railroad Museum? All of these exhibits can be viewed free of charge.

Finally, give a gift of your time. Volunteer at a museum. Join a committee of the Foundation for Las Cruces Museums. Share your knowledge and expertise to help make our museums better for everyone. We need the support of everyone in the community to keep moving in a forward direction. You can make a difference.

The works of more than a dozen ladies ranging in age from the late 50s to the early 90s from the Monday Studio Group will be on display in the Rio Grande Theatre through the month of August, beginning with a reception for artists to coincide with the First Friday Downtown Arts Ramble at 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 7. Working in watercolor, colored pencils, oils and pastels, the artists of the Monday Studio Group explore many styles of expression and have found they need all of their energy and enthusiasm as they tackle the difficulties involved in portrait and figure painting. The exhibit will run through Monday, Aug. 31. The theater is located at 211 N.

® BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

Two new exhibits will open at Branigan Cultural Center Friday, Aug. 7. "Batteries Not Required" is a display of historic cameras, while "Light Fantastic" is a display of an historic craft of quilts in its newest form. The opening reception for both exhibits is from 5 to $7\,$ p.m. as part of the monthly Friday Ramble. The exhibits remain on display through Saturday, Aug. 29.

"Batteries Not Required" features more than 70 manual cameras from the collection of Don Brenner. Among the cameras to be displayed are an 1884 Blair with mahogany frame and cherry wood base, a 1909 Graflex with extensible front lens rack and a 1927 Ansco Memo featuring a vertical frame box body using a tubular view finder on top. Also included are early "spy" cameras, various Kodak models including the Brownie, Exaktas and much more.

'Light Fantastic" is an exhibit from New Mexico Art Quilters. Art quilts echo the practical and decorative skills of quilt making from yesteryear, and take new life as an art form equal to watercolor, acrylic and oil paintings. This juried show features 31 quilts by 14 artists from across New Mexico.

② LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART COLLECTION

"Las Cruces Collects" offers a rare look into the private art collections of area residents. Featured art works range from European Old Masters to American Contemporary, in a wide variety of media and artistic styles that shed light on the passions motivating collectors of fine art. Organized by the Las Cruces Museum of Art, "Las Cruces Collects" is on display through Saturday, Aug. 22.

In a community as dedicated to the arts as Las Cruces, it should come as no surprise that the area's art collections are as diverse as its residents. Made possible through the assistance of Sally and Glenn Cutter, works are on loan from the private collections of J. Paul Taylor, Kent F. Jacobs and Sallie Ritter, Gayle and Delano Lewis, Stephanie and Mark Medoff, Toby and Richard White, Mireille Dohmen and Mary Streett. The exhibition includes Civil War antiquities, Pueblo pottery, surrealist sculpture, African and Mexican folk art, religious iconography and many other surprises.

Exhibition hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free. Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature fiber art by Cyndi Clark and Jan Harrison in "Finding a Voice through Fiber." The exhibit continues through Friday, Aug. 28. An artists' reception will be from noon to 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 9. The Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces is located at 2000 S. Solano Drive, with regular gallery hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Clark has worked in many media over the years. She focused on clay work for about 10 years before transitioning to fiber art. One of her featured pieces in the show is "Freedom's Price," an art quilt that has a piece of fabric representing every soldier who has died in Iraq and Afghanistan since Sept. 11.

Harrison has been involved in fiber arts as a knitter for more than 25 years and has gradually progressed to weaving on a floor loom and basketry. She has done extensive experimentation in achieving movement and using yarns of many sizes and textures. She also uses unexpected materials and colors. The same techniques go back and forth in her tapestries and basketry.

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, is exhibiting colorful images by artist Betty LaDuke that illustrate agriculture in its purest form.

"Dreaming Cows: The Artwork of Betty LaDuke" features 21 large giclee prints inspired by LaDuke's work with Heifer International. The exhibit is on display through Monday, Sept. 21.

La Duke toured Uganda and Rwanda in 2003, where she drew sketches of the native people in various agricultural settings. She converted the sketches to colorful paintings in her Oregon studio over the past several years. The paintings also include scenes and people from Poland, Albania, Vietnam, Cambodia, Kosovo, Ecuador and Peru

Heifer International is a humanitarian organization dedicated to ending world hunger and protecting the earth by providing livestock, trees, training and other resources to help the poor around the world become self-reliant. Since 1944, Heifer has assisted 9.5 million families in more than 125 countries, helping to lift many up from poverty and hunger.

Museum visitors also are invited to view a segment from the film "Betty LaDuke: Art Reflecting Life," documenting her travels to Africa on behalf of Heifer International. The film is shown in the theater twice daily, immediately following screening of the museum's welcome video at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. (Sundays at 2 p.m. only).

the armed services. The exhibit may be viewed in the Milton Gallery on the fourth floor of the Branson Library through October.

The exhibit, which complements the library's recently published book by the same title, includes photographs collected by the Navy and donated to the Archives by Paul Forsberg. Visitors to the exhibit may also listen to an audio stream of former State College president and Army Brig. Gen. Hugh M. Milton, describing the experience during the Battle of Bougainville that earned him a silver star.

ONO GRINDZ

Kurt Van Wagner's digitally exotic display of the Hawaiian Islands is on exhibit at the restaurant Ono Grindz (Hawaiian restaurant), 300 N. Downtown Mall. Van Wagner's tropical-theme show features his new Aloha creations depicting luscious swaying palms, magnificent coastlines and all the delights that make Hawaii such a wondrous place.

Van Wagner has traveled numerous times to the islands of Maui, Kauai and the Big Island of Hawaii to capture these vibrant and colorful scenes that make you want to pack your bags and get on that flight today. After Van Wagner discovers and photographs the magical tropical scene, the fun and creative work begin. He digitally hand-paints and textures over his photographs using computer and pen tablet. The results are works of art that are a blend of the realism of photography and the paintbrush of the painter. Van Wagner describes this new digital art as the best of two great art media. Ono Grindz owner Rachel Faulkner said she is excited to add another art venue to the Downtown area. Call 541-7492 for more information.

Historic El Paso theater hosts 10-day movie fest

Concert series kicks off Friday, Aug. 7 during the Plaza Classic Film Festival

By Beth Sitzler

It may comes as a surprise, but there was a time when Hollywood made movies that went beyond the obvious blow-'em-up plotline. This Golden Age of Hollywood, will be revisited at the Plaza Theatre Performing Arts Center in El Paso puts on its Classic Film Festival.

Now in it's second year, the festival began on Thursday, Aug. 6, and run continue through Sunday, Aug. 16, at the Plaza Theatre, 125 Pioneer Plaza.

"It's the largest known festival dedicated to classic film in the country," said Eric Pearson, executive vice president for the El Paso Community Foundation.

The Plaza Theatre opened in the 1930s as a modern film house that also featured stage productions. The theater closed in the late 1970s and fell into neglect. When plans to turn the historic theater into a parking lot began to form, members of the community came together to save it from destruction.

Pearson said the El Paso Community Foundation, a nonprofit organization that provides a wide-range of charitable services in the region, decided in 2006 to restore the Plaza Theatre. Once the $41 million restoration project – funded by the community and the City of El Paso – was completed, the foundation turned it back into a working movie theater.

The foundation was then faced with a $difficult \ decision-choosing \ the \ first \ film$ to be shown.

"We came back with 100 titles," Pearson said. "We decided to turn it into something big."

"For the most part, our formula was to show movies that could have played during the plaza's heyday from the 1930s to

Enticed by the wide-selection of unique and well-known titles, more than 30,000 moviegoers participated in last year's event, encouraging the foundation to turn the classic film festival into an annual

This year, the festival will include 71 films, such as cinema classics "Breakfast at Tiffany's," "Gone with the Wind" and a rare screening of George Lucas' origi-nal "Star Wars." Along with the timeless flicks, Pearson said the festival will also include independent and art-house films as well as work from students at New Mexico State University's Creative Media Institute.

There will be some well known classics and some movies they may never seen before," he said. "It's an opportunity for people to expand their horizons."

Free film talks will also take place throughout the festival before the screening of films such as "Cabaret," "Chinatown," "Some Like It Hot" and "Vertigo."

The festival will also host three free concerts. Sleeper Car, a side band of El Paso native and Sparta singer/guitarist Jim Ward, will kick off the concert series at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 7. The series will continue with the multi-genre Mano Sol at 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 8, and funk band Fungi Mungle at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 14.

"We're really excited (about the festival)," Pearson said. "Everyone in Las Cruces should come. It's really affordable. None of the movies are over $8

Most movies are priced at $2 or $6 for two films. The foundation has been able to keep the ticket cost down thanks to the festival's numerous corporate sponsors. Pearson said low ticket prices will make the festival open to everyone.
"It's so much fun," he said. "It's a great opportunity for people to appreciate what s region has to offer in terms of art.

Jim Turrentine: Finding himself through portraitures

His passion led him to return to Las Cruces and the love of his life

By BETH SITZLER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Jim Turrentine's passion began with the click of the shutter and the excitement of an image.

Beginning as a childhood hobby, he found a creative outlet in the darkroom, delighting in the technical aspect of developing film, said the owner of Big Picture Digital Image Lab and Main Street Gallery.

"In the fourth grade, I had my first little brownie camera and I would take photos of my classmates," he said. "It was a magical experience to capture something on film.

As the years passed, he continued with his art and went to school to study commercial photography. He worked for several years as a photographer and found he especially enjoyed creating portraits in his

"Over time, passion diminishes. It becomes just work," he said. He said he had a knack for assembling multiple images to create a message, and produced a diverse selection of projects. Although he had a thriving career and a home in Colorado, he decided after the death of his older brother to take a leap of faith and follow his passion.

Coming back home

Turrentine said he decided to leave Colorado for California. Before heading to California, however, he came to Las Cruces to decompress and tie up a few loose ends after his brother's passing.

"After my brother's death, I thought that I could be next," he said. "I asked myself, What do I enjoy out of life?' And

He said the most powerful image and the show's centerpiece will be the portrait of his wife Kris after she had completed her chemotherapy treatment for breast cancer. The image, titled "Hope Emerges from the Shadows," was shown at the Branigan Cultural Center as part of its cancer survivor exhibit.

"It's overwhelming. I see my wife, but I also see a cancer survivor," he said.

Tiffany's Pizza: A taste of Greece

Gyros only one of the authentic Mediterranean dishes

By Beth Sitzler

A trip to Greece is a lot closer than Las Crucens may think. Located in the Telshor Tower Plaza is a Mediter ranean getaway also known as Tiffany's Pizza.

Husband and wife team Anastasios and Barbara Rammos began serving delectable cuisine after moving to the city from El Paso in February 1997.

"He's always been mixed up in restaurants," Barbara Rammos said. "Cooking is his thing. Cooking and serving – feeding the people."

Once the natives of Greece decided to take the leap and open a restaurant, they knew it could serve only one thing - Greek recipes that had been passed down from generation to generation.

Barbara Rammos said their most popular item is the gyro sandwich, which consists of shaved beef and lamb.

"It's 60 percent beef and 40 percent lamb. That's the best combination," she said, explaining that they can make any combination of meat.

The second most popular dish, she said, is the mousaka. This authentic Greek dish is comparable to lasagna, with alternating layers of fried eggplant, zucchini and ground beef.

"We cover it in a special cream sauce and bake it," Barbara Rammos said.

Although the restaurant also serves salads and sandwiches, it isn't called Tiffany's Pizza for nothing.

"We use a lot of toppings and our own pizza sauce," she said. Of the four varieties of pizza, Barbara Rammos said the most popular is the Greek, which has gyro meat, tomatoes, onions, peppers, feta cheese and black olives.

A close second in popularity is the Tiffany's pizza, which has sausage, pepperoni, pastrami, bell peppers, onions and mushrooms.

With only two servers and one dishwasher, the couples handle the rest, working 12 hours a day, five days

"We're a little mama and papa place," she said. "We do all the labor. He does all the prep and cooking. He doesn't trust anyone else on the grill."

Family is very big at Tiffany's Pizza. Their eldest daughter Tiffany, for whom the restaurant is named, put herself through college working for her parents. Barbara said their youngest daughter was raised in a playpen in the back.

Even restaurantgoers can't help but feel related when "We treat our customers like family," she said, adding that some customers have even helped bus tables when they've been busy. "Some of them have been with us since our opening day ... I want to thank them for being with us and trusting us."

Barbara Rammos said she isn't sure what the future holds for the restaurant, but has a few ideas, which include possibly expanding to a bigger location or growing Tiffany's Pizza catering into a separate business.
"It changes day to day," she said.

Even though they're tucked in the back of the plaza,

Barbara Rammos said they have the best view of the city and encourages everyone to come to Tiffany's Pizza and "find out what Greek food really is."

"It's about the Greek environment and hospitality," she said. "It's how we treat people. We make them feel like they're at home.

At Christmas in July

Kathy Wolford from Deming, N.M., purchases a purse, slacks and a Christmas picture frame during Christmas in July. The event held Friday, July 31 and Saturday, Aug. 1, at La Tienda de Jardin, a boutique featuring gently used items, located at 335 La Colonia Ave.

A cake in the shape of a Louis Vuitton purse was part of the silent auction held inside the store to benefit Jardin de los Niños.

Volunteer Becky King arranges a holiday centerpiece to place on display.

Be a part of something Big.

You can transform the life of a child. Each of us remembers the adults, other than our parents, who brought a little magic into our lives. By becoming a Big Brother or Big Sister, you can do the same for a child.

Volunteer Bigs give their time and energy and, in doing so, find they get as much back as they give.

The 2009-10 Black Box Theatre season opens Aug. 14

Whether one bowls or not, the 2009-10 season opener at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Main St., "More Fun than Bowling" guarantees an evening of hilarity.

Opening at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 14, and running through Sunday, Aug. 30, Steven Dietz's two-act, five-character philosophical comedy directed by No Strings Theatre Company's artistic director Ceil Herman, combines suspense and humor in a small Midwestern town.

"More Fun than Bowling's" well-conceived dialogue drives the action on a most unlikely set, three large mounds of dirt, uniquely conceived by designer Peter Herman. Along with the preciousness of life, acceptance of the moment and one man's way of approaching surprises and responsibilities, "More Fun than Bowling" tickles the imagination through its take on ownership of a family business, acceptance of death and its unique approach to a fanciful plot line.

Actors Jeff and Dale Peckham, father and daughter in real life, play Jake and daughter Molly. Jeff Peckham has been seen in Las Cruces Community

Dale Peckham and Megan Thompson star in the philosophical comedy "More Fun Than Bowling."

Theatre's "I Remember You," "Barefoot in the Park" and "And Then There Were None."

Dale Peckham has been seen in LCCT's productions of "Lil' Abner," "West Side Story" and "Scrooge." At Oñate High School, she was stage manager for "Grease" and performed in "Charlie Brown – The Musical" and "Sometimes I Wake Up." She is attending New Mexico State University this fall as a piano music major.

Jake's two wives are played by Katie Richardson as Lois and Megan Thompson as Loretta. Richardson has appeared in NSTC's productions of "Almost Maine," "Baby With The Bathwater" and "What I Did Last Summer." Thompson has performed in LCHS's production of "Beauty and The Beast" and has performed with Missoula Children's Theatre.

Danny Wade, usually involved with the technical aspects of NSTC's productions, makes his stage debut as the mysterious Mr. Dyson.

The actors convince audiences that while "More Fun than Bowling" could be a metaphor for the incongruities of life, they themselves are right there on stage having a good deal of fun bringing the play to life.

The scenic and lighting design is by NSTC's resident designer Peter Herman and costume design is by Cortney Newtson. Leah Angelo is the stage manager and Rorie Measure is assistant director.

Performances of "More Fun Than Bowling" are at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, at 2:30 p.m. Sundays, Aug. 23 and 30 and at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 27. Tickets are $10 regular admission, $9 students and seniors over 65. All seats on Thursdays are $7. Preferred Patron Packages season tickets may be purchased during the run of "More Fun Than Bowling." Regular PPP season tickets are $50 and student and senior PPP tickets are $45 for the six shows of the 2009-10 season. Reservations can be made by calling 523-1223 or online at www.nostrings.org.

Robby Randall, Brandon Brown, Lennie Rainwater and Megan McQueen star in "The Musical of Musicals" at Boba Café.

'The Musical of Musicals!' at Boba Café

Five of genre's greats are reinterpreted in this theatrical adventure

Boba Cabaret is opening its first full-length production, "The Musical of Musicals! (The Musical)," Friday, Aug. 7.

Creators Eric Rockwell and Joanne Bogart penned the show, which will run through Saturday, Aug. 22, as five mini-musicals in the styles of five creators in the genre.

"This show will be equally funny for people who love or hate musicals," said director Megan McQueen, who saw the original performance in New York City. "It captures the essence of what most people love about all these musicals ... which is also what some people love to hate."

The first musical is in the style of Rodgers and Hammerstein. Titled "Corn!," it captures the elegant simplicity of their music and lyrics, as well as the community-focused theme of their shows. It highlights actor Brandon Brown in the role of Big Willy, the hero.

The second musical, "A Little Complex," is in the style of Stephen Sondheim, the creator of "Sweeney Todd." The complexity of the music and intricacy of the rhymes combined with the cerebral theme to capture the essence of Sondheim. Pianist Robby Randall, doing double duty in the role of the landlord in all the shows, is prominent in this story as the demon artist Jitter.

"Dear Abby," the third piece, imitates the great "Hello Dolly" creator Jerry Herman. Its combines infectious melodies and playful rhymes in a skillful ode to the composer. Lennie Rainwater, as the wise friend, will play the star. Abby

Andrew Lloyd Webber, who created "Phantom of the Opera," is evoked with the fourth story, a highly dramatic, sung-through "Aspects of Junita." McQueen is featured as the bold Evita-esque Junita.

The final section of the show is a tribute to Kander and Ebb, the writers of "Chicago," called "Speakeasy." Catchy vamps, saucy lyrics and Fosse-like movement make for a zany end to a fun show.

"Though it's a costly undertaking, we're really excited to license our first musical at Boba. We're hoping it will be the first of many to come," said Boba owner Chris Waggoner.

Dinner will seat at 7 p.m. with show time at 8 p.m. The $25 ticket includes hors d'oeuvres, dinner entrée, a beverage (beer and wine included) and gratuity. This show will offer an intermission during which additional drinks or dessert may be purchased.

Reservations are recommended by calling 647-5900. Boba Café is located at 1900 S. Espina St.

No amount of cinema can make me like Tyson Documentary marks ninth anniversary for reviewer at the Las Cruces Bulletin Review by Jeff Berg that they enhanced his life, which is a very sad thought), briefly lighting up when he talks about his sexual con-

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

Not that you asked, but I'm going to tell you anyway. I do not like Michael Tyson. I never have and I never will, in spite of his attempts to redeem himself, in part, through "Tyson," a sometimes enlightening documentary. I like to think of myself as a forgiving person, and if I had some real personal reason to actually forgive Tyson for his miscreant behavior over the years, I might have done so before seeing the film. But now? Probably not.

Filmmaker James Toback allows Tyson to pretty much be the only person to talk about Mike Tyson while on camera. While we do get historical clips of fights and a few of those whose life he has affected (none can say

Mob chases Walter Matthau in New Mexico

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, Aug. 8, is "Charlie Varrick" (1973, 111 minutes, rated PG, Nevada stars as New Mexico).
"Charley Varrick" stars Walter Matthau as a former stunt pilot reduced to robbing banks with his wife and a hot-headed young criminal. Matthau and his cohorts successfully rob a small-town bank for more than $750,000 in a heist that claims Matthau's spouse/getaway driver.

His partner's elation is tempered by Matthau's grim realization that the money belongs to the mob, which isn't about to accept such a substantial loss

Joe Don Baker costars as an icy hitman dispatched to recover the mob's ill-gotten loot and kill anyone who stands between him and the money. From there, the noose gradually tightens around Matthau's neck as the feds close in and the long tentacles of organized crime make their presence felt as far as sunny New Mexico.

Matthau delivers his usual sterling performance as a savvy operator working doggedly to finagle his way out of a seemingly impossible situation, but the film's real revelation comes from Baker, whose racist, sexist, ass-kicking brute of a henchman oozes malevolent magnetism.

A low-key, tough little thriller punctuated by casual bursts of deadpan humor, these characters take on a surprising poignancy and emotional resonance.

In another movie, Matthau's minimalist grieving might seem callous or wildly inadequate, but in this tough little film noir-ish crime caper where the overwhelming instinct for self-preservation trumps less practical concerns, it becomes nothing short of a grand romantic gesture. Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located onehalf block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287.

Tyson goes from beginning to end describing how he was picked on as a youngster, never knew his father, how he ended up in the boxing ring partially because he was afraid – very, very afraid – and how the loss of a pet pigeon to bullies became a turning point.

to failed champion, to his last unenthusiastic comeback attempt in 1999. It is like an editor-less biography by a man who can barely write.

Through it all, Tyson seems at least, if nothing else, amazingly brutally honest. It is refreshing, on some level, to hear him describe sleazy promoter Don King or adoration for Cus D'Amato, who was his trainer and mentor for many years until his unfortunate passing when Tyson was 19. D'Amato appears to be the only man Tyson had any respect for, and his passing one year before his first stint as heavyweight champion, the youngest ever at age 20, became another emotional catalyst for the young man.

Tyson's tattooed face remains stoic through most of this process,

"Tyson" opens Friday, Aug. 7, for a week run at the Fountain Theatre, playing for 90 minutes. Not rated, it does have salty language, brutish behavior and sexual braggadocio.

quests and his description of how he "likes" his female partners to acquiesce to his wants.

We are witness to historical footage of his victories, his entrance and exit to jail, his whirlwind courtship and unfortunate marriage to Robin Givens and the squandering (or theft by sycophants) of the millions of dollars he made in his career.

In the end, after losing it all, Tyson, although not plagued with ego, seems not very contrite. He behaves like the world still owes him another chance because he was picked on and someone killed his pet pigeon.

Toback allows us to draw our own conclusions, and two that I reached were as follows:

I wish Toback would not have used montage sequences that were more annoying than clever, and which also blocked part of the dialogue, as it overlapped, somewhat Robert Altman-ish.

I have no empathy for Tyson or others of his ilk, such as Michael Vick. He still comes across as being what he looks like – a fallen, would-be hero, a once wealthy thug who could have had it all, but now has nothing.

Too bad, too sad. As a bonus, however, Nicole Martinez will perform at 7 p.m. before the Friday, Aug. 7, showing.

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH

Judd Apatow, in his third goround as writer-director, takes a walk on the serious side in "Funny People," starring Adam Sandler, Seth Rogen, Jonah Hill, Eric Bana and a plethora of well-known comedians (plus one rapper).

Sandler plays successful, well-known (and often lonely) comedian George Simmons. At the beginning of the movie, Simmons has been diagnosed with an incurable blood disease, and told the experimental drugs he has been given have an 8 percent success rate.

After the diagnosis, George has somewhat of an epiphany, taking pause on his movie career to return to where it all began – doing stand up in dive bars where he meets Ira Wright (Seth Rogen) and Leo (Jonah

He asks Ira to be his personal assistant, write jokes, accompany him on stand up gigs and talk him to sleep (George seemingly can't be alone, hence his lack of close friends).

Apatow's comedic prowess is consistent throughout the film, although mid-way, we see a shift to the unreal, including the end of George's battle with the disease. This comes with a hilarious scene in which Ira and George mess with the large Swedish doctor that bears the

While George finally begins telling his colleagues about his illness, a slew of well-known comedians step in to add that something extra to the film – George has dinner with Eminem, while Ira hangs out with Ray Romano ("I thought everybody loved you," Ira says to Romano). Sarah Silverman and Andy Dick make cameos, as Tied in with comedy is the real drama in George's relationship with his ex, Laura (Leslie Mann). Upon hearing the news that George is sick, the two reconcile and, quite predictably, her marriage has gone the way of her acting career – south. George and Ira go to San Francisco to visit her after a personal appearance, and the trip turns into an extended vacation when George and Laura "reunite.

Things get sticky when her husband Clarke (Eric Bana) returns from a business trip to find out his wife has cheated on him with George and from there, chaos ensues. Throughout the ordeal, George doesn't really change at all, and things come crashing down around him.

Sandler shows off his ability to be flexible in this role, balancing the funny with the serious and giving audiences a reason to cheer (and jeer) his actions. He meshes well with Rogen, and the two feed off each other's unique comedic characters – Rogen with the raunchy, slightly less annoying spin, and Sandler with the voices and guitar bits that made him famous. Apatow even uses images of Sandler's actual career (circa Saturday Night Live and MTV) to establish George's comedic past.

While the slightly larger version of Rogen – Hill, according to George – doesn't have as big of a roll as in other Apatow films, he manages to add a bit more to the movie by way of comedic genius and pause. The two comedians are roommates and live with their successful friend Mark (Jason Schwartzman), who plays on a tween series that airs on the teen network, the

CW. The jokes never cease on that front.

Apatow delivers sheer comedic genius in his new film, but adds an extra-special element of character development that will take him further than the slap stick comedy for which he is known. The film delivers on many levels, and may leave you with a sense of closure – and a case of the giggles.

Alameda House gets new life

A house older than Las Cruces is restored to its original splendor

By JONATHAN BUTZ

Older than the city in which it resides, the Alameda House has been witness to more than 160 years of Las Cruces history, making it one of the oldest historic properties in southern New Mexico.

After all the growth and change experienced throughout Las Cruces, the house remained silent in its Downtown location, leaving much of its story untold. However, in late August the Alameda House will have a new voice with the help of owners Wendall Eugenio and Suzanne Tent.

Moving to Las Cruces from Los Angeles, Eugenio and Tent began renovating the house in October 2008, after watching it on the market for almost two years. They said they knew the project would entail arduous labor but were eager to get started.

"From the time we saw the house it took us maybe about five seconds to decide that we wanted it," Tent said.

Now, after almost a year's worth of hard work, Eugenio and Tent are getting ready for a grand opening ceremony in late August. As the house's main function will be to host weddings, meetings and banquets or any other large-scale of events, Tent said she hopes the community will become reacquainted with the house and its history.

"It was a house that was used to entertain a lot of guests in the past and really had a social presence in the community," Tent said. "We'd like to welcome the house's social history back into the community."

Home to only four families in its 160-year lifespan, the house's original design and concept has been preserved. United States District Attorney Major William Henry Harrison Llewellyn was one of the most notable occupants, mainly because of his relationship with Theodore Roosevelt and the Rough Riders in addition to his fight to make New Mexico an official State.

Built on a Spanish land grant in 1848, the house spans 8,000 square feet and still retains much of the charm that made it so identifiable in the early 1900s.

Tent based the house's redesign on 1920s style, which works well with much of its original design. With walls in some parts of the house as thick as 28-inches, its three-stage adobe design helps keep things cooler, while also insulating the house from outside noise

Aside from refinishing and restoring much of the interior, Tent and Eugenio had to spend three months just tidying up.

"We had to clean out the entire house. We were cleaning out things that have been stored and accumulating here for almost 60 to 80 years," Tent said.

One of the biggest renovation challenges Eugenio and Tent faced was restoring the backyard and pool area. Eugenio has included getting the backyard ready and presentable before the house's grand opening.

Tent added that they hope to

Tent added that they hope to have the house fully restored and ready for an open house by the end of August; however, work on the house is still in full swing. The renovation process included copious amounts of mechanical work and utility restoration followed by the removal of all the old carpet and flooring. The two said the task

Despite all the changes that have been made, the best parts of the house are still the little details that made it so desirable 160 years ago. Its high ceilings and large windows give it a bright, airy atmosphere, while much of the fixtures and hardware are original.

Possibly one of the best features of the Alameda Home is its ability to blend the outdoors and indoors into one seamless experience. Putting the final touches on the 'Platinum Trailblazer'

By BETHANY CONWAY

Editor's note: This is the third article in a series following the construction of Las Cruces' first Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Platinum certified home. Though owners Don and Beatriz Rudisill will not know whether they achieve this certification until their home is complete, sharing their story will help others on their journey to becoming green.

It's been two years since Don and Beatriz Rudisill began designing the "Platinum Trailblazer" at 4367 Isleta Court.

Set to be Las Cruces' first Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Platinum certified home, it is now in its final stages, and on Tuesday, Aug. 4, Don Rudisill was up to his ears in swatches.

"It's getting closer and closer," Rudisill said of the home's completion in September. "The date is much more real now."

The word green may bring to mind energy efficiency construction, but there is a lot more to it when you're trying to fulfill the highest level of LEED certification. Everything, down to the cabinetry and tile, has to be chosen carefully.

Though a home's interior accents aren't incorporated until late in the process, Rudisill began collecting interior design elements before the home's construction began - even before he knew which green build program he would try to qualify for.

Now, with the help of interior designer Maureen Villmer, he is putting the final touches on a home that could make Southwest history.

Rudisill hopes to gain points for purchasing products produced within a 500mile radius of his home, such as the countertops that will grace his kitchen from Solid Surfaces Unlimited in El Paso and the American Clay that covers his walls, which was brought in from Albuquerque. He also hopes to gain points for using cabinets and carpet made from recycled materials and the use of Masonite Safe 'N Sound doors, which are filled with recycled wheat grass.

To sum it all up, he said, they are earning the "maximum points on a moderate budget."

"We are getting about half the points, and we are doing it at a very good price,"

For those interior elements that he won't gain points for, such as the tile and lighting, Rudisill takes comfort in knowing that he has done his best to be frugal and environmentally friendly.

Initially, Rudisill thought he would shoot for Build Green New Mexico certification and was told that if he bought small, leftover batches of tile, it would count toward the use of recycled material. So he headed down to a parking lot sale at Casa Mexicana, where he bought several batches of mix-matched tile.

Then we went with LEED, and LEED does not give you credit. LEED says that, to be recycled, the materials must have been in use in a building for five years, not just scraps," he said. "But I had already bought it."

Many other aspects of the interior design mirrored the tile in the way they were attained, including some of the cabinets and lighting. Rudisill bought used cabinets in 2007, which would have earned him points under BGNM, but not under LEED, which requires that 90 percent of the cabinets be recycled to receive any credit.

That doesn't mean Rudisill wasn't on the right track to being thrifty.

This all saves you money if you can reuse scraps or buy scraps," Rudisill said.

Now it's Villmer's job to sort through the stacks and come up with a cohesive, aesthetically pleasing design.

"My three-car garage was filled with light fixtures, tile and cabinets from bottom to top," Rudisill recalled. "I showed it to Maureen and said, 'We have to work with this.

"It didn't scare me," Villmer said. "It just took more time to do it than it would in a natural home because I had to piece-

She began by taking an inventory of everything Rudisill had and then devised a plan in which all the pieces would come together. She even created a grid that pinpoints the exact location of each light

"It's been a jigsaw puzzle – the whole thing," she said. "The cabinets have been a part of the puzzle, the tile."

She has already demonstrated her design abilities in the sunroom, which is a mixture of two different kinds of tile.

"If you hear the story, it's a bunch of mixed and matched tiles that we bought trying to get green points," Rudisill said, "but if you look at the end result, it looks like a designer did this for the effect."

Though Villmer has more than 35 years of experience in interior design, this project is something she has never encountered before.

That was one reason why I wanted to do this – so I would, after 38 years of doing this, learn new things," she said.

Like all aspects of the home's construction, Villmer and Rudisill see the implementation of the interior elements a learning experience.

Rudisill said he always hoped others could learn to be green from this complex project, and his advice continues to grow.

"I think we learned some lessons, like if you are going to try to reuse cabinetry you need to try and find a kitchen bigger than your own so that you have leftover pieces instead of having too few," he said. "And don't start buying things until you know what program you are going under," he added laughing.

Along with knowing she was a part of the city's first platinum certified LEED home, Villmer will apply the lessons she learned on the Rudisill home to future

"I think I can take what I have learned here and apply it elsewhere. I want to be able to pass what I have learned onto clients so they don't have to go through the same thing," she said.

In the end, she added, it's all about what's best for the homeowner.

"Whether it's a green home or a nongreen home, matching (the clients') needs is the most important thing," she said.

Choosing a color scheme

Start with the colors you love and go from there

There are many ways to characterize colors: primary, secondary, tertiary, warm, cool, accent, shades, hues and tones, in various strengths, intensities and values. Many colleges teach color theory classes on the use of color to create mood and specific environments

But what if you haven't had all those courses? Where do you begin to develop a color scheme for your home that creates mood or environment you want?

We see millions of colors every day: the blue of the sky, the brown of the desert, the green of the cactus, the orange and red of the sunsets. Color is all around us.

Take a look.

What colors do you like to be around? How do you feel in a red room, in a yellow room or in a blue room? What is your favorite? I've personally always had some space in my home painted red – not a lot but always a little. I feel comfortable in red. I wear red. It's my favorite color.

Don't know where to start?

I often tell my clients to start with the colors you like. Believe it or not, some people have a hard time telling me what colors they like. My suggestion is to "open your closet and see what you wear constantly." You usually surround yourself with colors that look good on you. You know, the outfit that everyone says "Oh, you look great in that color?" That's the color you could use to start developing your color scheme. Next, you might go fabric shopping to find a fabric you love that includes that color. In addition to your "favorite" color, the fabric will undoubtedly include other complimentary colors. From this fabric, you can "pull" colors to use for various purposes in your room.

What's important is that you like the colors and can live with them for a long period of time.

Villmer based the color scheme in her own home on this peice of

I once had a client who brought me a tissue box that had a color she loved. We built an entire room with those colors. You can use many different things to help set your color scheme - rugs, pictures, a piece of china, a picture out of a magazine or a book, a quilt or bedspread, a piece of pottery, or something from nature. What's important is that you like the colors and can live with them for a long period of time.

Now that you have your basic color scheme, how much of each color should you use?

First of all, if you have used a fabric, quilt, etc., to develop your color scheme, you probably don't want to use too many of the colors from it – just a few. I often can use the 60-30-10 rule - perhaps 60 percent of a warm color, 30 percent of a cool color and 10 percent of an accent color.

You could also take a "monochromatic" approach by using different hues of the same color. It could be various shades of blue, using either the darkest or lightest shade of the color as your accent color.

You want to use your colors to "pull the room together." This is usually done by repeating one of the colors several times in various parts of the room.

Have some fun finding an excuse for developing a new color scheme. Spend each day in the colors that you love. Let your color choices change the mood of your life.

Homeowners warm up to tax credit for wood- and pellet-fueled heat

Sustainable living can pay off in more ways than one

Although it's 100 plus degrees in Las Cruces, now is the time to plan for the chilly fall and win-

For warmth and beauty in the home, it's hard to beat the ambience of a real wood-burning stove or fireplace. Homeowners now have another reason to warm up to one – a federal tax credit of up to $1,500 for purchasing and installing a 75 percent efficient wood- or pellet-burning (biomass) stove in 2009 or 2010. Thirty-percent of the total cost, including the appliance, installation and piping, can be claimed.

Also qualifying for the tax credit are wood- and pellet-burning fireplace inserts, which, when installed into existing inefficient fireplaces, quickly transform into energy-efficient home heaters.

The tax credit is part of the federal government's efforts to encourage homeowners to choose green, energy-efficient home products. The choice is good for the environment and homeowners' wallets, said Dan Henry, chief technical officer for Quadra-Fire and Harman Home Heating, which offers more than 30 products that qualify for the tax credit.

It is now more convenient than ever to heat your home with renewable fuels.

Chief Technical Officer for Harman Home Heating

'Today's wood- and pelletburning units are considerably more efficient than dated models, producing more heat with less fuel to provide warmth and comfort for many hours," he said. "They are thermostatically controlled, easy to maintain and feature advanced burn technology that produces less ash and low outside air particulate emissions. It is now more convenient than ever to heat your home with renewable fuels, save money on heating bills and contribute to a greener Earth."

There are several advantages to supplementing home heat with a biomass stove or fireplace

 Controlled heating costs, since prices for wood and pellets are much more predictable than a price for the prices. able than prices for propane, oil and natural gas, which can fluctuate greatly

Reduced contribution to greenhouse gases by burning wood or pellets for heat, which are considered carbon neutral since only the carbon the tree or plant absorbed when growing is released into the air

It is now viable to enjoy a fireplace while remaining environmentally friendly

Eligibility for the tax credit if the homeowner purchases and installs a qualifying high-efficiency product
After the purchase is made, the homeowner obtains an Official Manufacturer's Certificate from the manufacturer's website or the retailer. The certificate validates that the product qualifies for the tax credit and should be retained by the homeowner for tax purposes.

It's now possible to live green and save some money while enjoying the ambiance of a crackling fire at home. Find qualifying products and visit one of the several Las Cruces hearth dealers for details.

Meek explored the North America before settling in the Wild West

The best part

Spending her days as a Realtor in the sunny Southwest, one could almost say Mary-Catherine Meek is enjoying a sec-

Anative of New Bedford, Penn., Meek spent the majority of her years dealing with the type of winter weather most Las Crucens can only imagine.

"I grew Pennsylvania up between Pittsburgh and Cleveland," she said, recalling her days in the upper Midwest.

After graduating from Youngstown State University with a bachelor's degree in art, Meek went "from bad to worse," when she moved to Winnipeg, Manitoba, near the eastern edge of the Canadian prairies.

"There were blizzards. It wasn't just snow," Meek said. "You would spend all day shoveling the snow out from behind your garage so you could get your car out the next morning and go to work."

She ended up moving further west to Edmonton, Alberta, near the Canadian Rockies, where she learned to cross country ski.

"It was a little adventure, that's how we looked at it," Meek said. "I was in Canada for 19 and a half years.

In 1987, she "got her feet wet in sales" selling advertising for a suburban newspaper owned by the Toronto Star. She later moved to a small publisher that produced a specialty trades magazine before making her way to the Maclean-Hunter publishing house – the largest in Canada at the time.

After spending many years in the cold, who could blame Meek for making her way to warmer pastures?

I had known for wanted to be in the desert

Campbell, whom she knew as the family cowboy, had lived in New Mexico since the 1930s. As a young girl she made several trips to child she was enthralled with the land-

Adding to this was the fact that much of her childhood entertainment featured

"What we were watching on television was Roy Rogers and Hop Along Cassidy and the Cisco Kid," she said.

Meek finally moved to Las Cruces in 1999 and lived in a 40-foot fifth wheel with her husband Michael for nine months while their home near Lake Roberts, N.M., was completed. Coincidentally, she said, Canada and New Mexico share some similarities

What I liked the most (about Canada) is something that New Mexico has, too," she said. "I liked the fact that you could drive out of town about an hour and you were out in the middle of nowhere in the wilderness communing with nature.'

Next she simply needed to find a way to channel her creative energy. As a longtime art lover and painter, she was hoping to find a career in which she could put her interest in aesthetics to use.

"(Art) was something that I was always interested in since I was a kid," Meek recalled. "When I was 2 or 3 years old, I can remember being scolded for drawing on my mother's wallpaper with cravons.

Along with a passion for art, she had a longtime appreciation for architecture. It seemed only natural that Meek establish a career in real estate.

"I have always been interested in building," she said. "Art was something I always loved, but I was always interested in houses and architecture."

After receiving her real estate license in November 2007, she began making the two-and-a-half-hour commute to Las Cruces once a week, working as a new homes sales rep for a local builder.

Procuring sponsors for the weekly Realtor's Caravan, she quickly met others in the business, including Marti Wells, owner and broker of Accent Real Estate.

When Wells and associate broker Stephanie Keepers asked Meek to join them in volunteering for the Special Olympics, she new she had found the right real estate

"Way back in another life, back in the early '70s, I worked at a workshop for mentally and physically handicapped adults," Meek said. "So for me it was kind of a natural thing.

She joined Accent Real Estate in March of 2009.

"It's a really friendly atmosphere. Everybody helps everybody," Meek said. "Marti has 22 years of experience, so she is a very seasoned broker and she is very helpful and patient."

Aside from Wells' breadth of experience, Meek also liked the firm's versatility. With properties in Truth or Consequences as well as vacation properties near Caballo Lake, Accent Real Estate's license covers a great deal of southern New Mexico. The company's inventory includes everything from large acreages to mobile homes to million dollar manors.

Wells said she is happy to have Meek on board.

"Mary-Catherine is a very nice person and has great ideas," Wells said of Meek. "She brings her own expertise and Accent Real Estate is very lucky to have her.'

In her newest career, Meek still trades stories of her past life, especially with clients moving to town from the Midwest. She is currently working with a buyer who is originally form Canada and has also had clients from Pennsylvania.

The best part (about real estate) is what I have always liked about sales – you get to meet a wide variety of very interesting people," she said.

When she is not thinking real estate, Meek's flexible schedule allows her to continue publishing the Sunshine Seniors Newspaper, which she has been producing since 2001.

"The newspaper has taken on a life of its own," she said.

Distributed to six counties in southern New Mexico, the publication includes crossword puzzles, information on pet adoption, listings of senior programs in the area, recipes and feature stories.

Old shoelaces not just for your feet

Shoelaces have an infinite number of different uses

By JONATHAN BUTZ

The new school year is at hand and as parents rush to get their children prepared, every little bit of ingenuity and resourcefulness can help to ease the process along.

If you're waiting for the next paycheck to buy your child a new pair of shoes, you may be able to hold off for a little while longer with the help of the ever-reliable shoelace.

Although the exact origin of the shoe lace is not certain, some experts have found traces of early laces in 12th century Europe, while items resembling shoelaces were recently discovered along with bronze-age Ötzi the Iceman, who lived around 3,000 B.C. It's no wonder people are still using the things. A simple string with tapered ends can do just about anything.

Dig around the house to see what you

1. Revamp your old shoes: A new pair of colorful shoelaces can turn an old shoe into something new. The more laces with bright colors and shapes you can find, the better, and the less your child will notice that you're trying to recycle his or her old

New laces can work especially well with girls' flats or sandals by tying the laces into decorative bows and fastening them to the tops of your daughter's shoe or sandal. You can even use laces to create a colorful pair of ankle straps. Simply string laces through the loop at the heel of each shoe and then cris-cross the laces around the ankles or

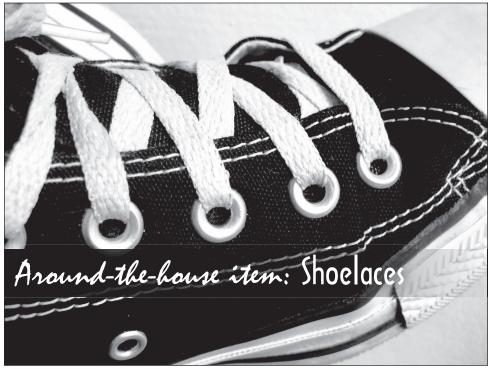

2. When in doubt, add color: A pair of bright green or blue laces might suit a classic boys' tennis shoe style such as Converse or Nike. Many shoe vendors feature a variety of laces with different prints such as stars, sports themes or skulls and cross bones. Some cheap, store-bought dye could also work great with older laces to make bright, different colors or a tie-die effect.

3. Arts and crafts: A fun option would be to challenge your children to come up with new and interesting ways they could use their old laces for the upcoming school year. Laces can be woven decoratively to make a nice bookmark, bracelet or can also work to hold books and materials together.

Laces also provide a great opportunity to engage your children in crafts and creative projects. With a couple of laces and a few items tied to one end of each lace, you could create an interesting wind chime.

4. Around the house: As for around the house, a shoelace can come in handy as a practical item and can be used as any piece of string would be used.

5. In the wilderness: Even if you're stranded in the wilderness, a single shoelace could mean the difference between life and death. Bear Grylls of the Discovery

Channel's "Man Vs. Wild" has often used stray laces to hold up tarps for collecting water, snaring small game and creating a tourniquet. It's never a bad idea to throw in a few old laces with your camping gear before you head out the door.

No matter how you decide to us_your old laces, have fun and be creative. There is really no limit to what you can do with a piece of string and a creative mind.

Keep your pad hip, your landlord happy

Moving into a new rental property and wondering how much your landlord will allow you to decorate to make it feel like your own? You're not alone. According to a recent Apartments.com survey, 90 percent of renters will decorate when moving to a new apartment; with 81 percent decorating within the first three months of the move.

Luckily, there are many landlord-approved updates that can turn the bland white walls of a rental into a warm and personal space.

Living large

In the living room, accessories such as clocks and art work will add personal style and a splash of color. Strategically placed mirrors can also help the room appear larger in size.

Worried about nail holes? New wall hooks from companies such as 3M attach using a removable adhesive that won't damage the walls. Or, vinyl wall stickers, like those from www.wisedecor. com, are another option to add design and color to the walls -- and they peel off easily when you move out.

Finally, focus on floors and windows. If your rental has less-than-perfect hardwood floors or carpeted areas, throw rugs are a perfect solution to add a soft touch, a hint of color throughout your space, or to cover up blemishes. Hanging curtains or drapes, such as the Hutlet drape from IKEA, can also be an inexpensive way to add soft texture and make a personal design statement.

Add beauty to the bath

As one of the most used rooms, the bath should be a beautiful and inviting space. However, most rental bathrooms are small and border on the blah side. Installing a Moen curved shower rod, hanging a new shower curtain and accessorizing with plush towels can pull the look of the bathroom together, provide more space and give a more upscale Swapping out your showerhead is another option that not only creates a more enjoyable spa-like showering experience, but can also save water. Moen's new Nurture water-efficient showerheads, available at Lowe's, feature three distinct settings to suit any mood -- and they use up to 30 percent less water while still providing a superior, full-body shower experience. They're a great way to help you enjoy your daily shower and lower your monthly bills.

Kitchen rental re-do

Cook up some style in the kitchen by adding colorful placemats and a centerpiece, such as plant or glass vase, on the kitchen table or breakfast bar. Posting pictures of family, friends and pets on the refrigerator can also help make your rental feel more like home. Finally, add decorative chalkboard or dry-erase board to help spruce up the kitchen walls and provide a clutterless place for notes, recipes and grocery lists.

Love to cook? Start by purchasing quality knives and a cutting board to keep the countertops safe. Next, add compact -- yet multi-functional appliances -- such as a Cuisinart Griddler Jr. to allow you to grill burgers or paninis indoors

Finally, upgrade the kitchen faucet to a high-arc, pulldown model. It will make a beautiful focal point in the kitchen. It will also make cleaning or filling large pots and pans, and cleaning fresh produce easy, while also allowing you to reach outside the sink to water plants or fill a bucket.

Soon after moving in, your rental space will go from bland to grand and will feel like home in no time.

For more information about showerheads, faucets and accessories from Moen, visit moen.com, or call (800) BUY-MOEN.

Protective barrier deters children from burns

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

If you have a young child who is constantly wanting to touch the hot stove, some would tell you to go ahead and let the child touch the stove. That way, he or she will have a meaningful experience teaching them the fact that hot objects will burn. From burned fingers comes a respect for fire, but burned fingers usually can't be afforded.

An adjustable stove guard, such as the Prince Lionheart Adjustable Stove Guard, is a great way to deter your toddler's wandering hands from the hot flames of a cooking stove.

What is it?

Most stove guards come adjustable from 24 to 36 inches, fitting most conventional stovetops. The stove guard uses a heat-resistant polycarbonate plastic barrier that extends out beyond the stove surface using clips and adhesive to fasten onto the edge of your stovetop.

How does it work?

It's best to start off with a clean stove before you begin mounting your guard. A clean, oil-free stove surface will ensure the adhesive provided with the guard will bond firmly. Once that's done, attach the provided clips to your stove guard and then apply the adhesive strips to the backs of each clip.

Finally, adjust the guard to your stove's size and firmly fasten to the stovetop's edge. You can mount the guard on top of your stove at least 1 and a half inches from the burners or in front of the stove above the heat knobs.

Once the guard is set to preference, unclip the plastic barrier and leave the clips over night so the adhesive will have an opportunity to cure properly.

Most prices range from $16 to $25, depending on product quality or brand name.

Where can it be found?

Stove guards are available locally throughout town at common locations from Target to Walmart, or online at www. princelionheart.com.

Helpful hints:

Although using a stove guard should never substitute responsibility and safety in the kitchen, it is good to have a little added assurance that your child is not tempted to reach into the heat of your cooking stove.

Steps for safely mounting your flat-screen TV

Mounting directly to the wall is safer and more practical

Your new 46-inch flat-screen TV may be your pride and joy, but did you know it can also be a safety risk to something else precious in your life? Like other types of heavy furniture, improperly secured flat-screen TVs can tip over, crushing, injuring and even killing small children.

Between 2000 and 2006, the most recent data available, 180 Americans died beneath fallen furniture, and 80 percent of the deaths involved children younger than 10, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Thousands more adults and children are injured by fallen furniture each year. The problem is so serious, the CPSC ranks danger from tipping furniture and TVs among its top-five hidden home hazards.

Each year, injuries suffered beneath fallen furniture and TVs send an average of 15,000 children younger than 18 to the emergency room, according to a recent study by Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio. The injury rate has increased more than 40 percent in the 10-year study period.

"This trend demonstrates the inadequacy of current prevention strategies and underscores the need for increased prevention efforts," study senior author Dr. Gary Smith, director of the hospital's Center for Injury Research and Policy said.

So how do you ensure your flat-screen TV stays put – and your children stay safe? The experts at Sanus Systems, makers of furniture and mounts for TVs and other electronic accessories, offer some basic advice:

• Don't underestimate – The sleek, thin build of a

- Don't underestimate The sleek, thin build of a flat-screen TV may lull you into a false sense of security about its overall size and heft. Keep in mind that these televisions can pack 100 pounds or more into their compact design. They need to be well secured with mounts specifically designed to hold them safely.
- Wall mount well Wall mounting a flat screen TV has numerous advantages, including aesthetic appeal and keeping your expensive investment out of reach of little hands. When done properly with a high-quality device, mounting a flat screen on the wall is much safer than placing it atop furniture.

Look for a product, such as Sanus' VisionMount series, which incorporates a wall plate that secures into the studs behind the wall, and attaches to the TV with mounting brackets. All mounts within the Sanus offering lock securely to the wall and all are rated by Underwriters Laboratories, an independent organization that subjects products to rigorous safety testing.

• Stand can deliver – While wall mounting is the safest way to display your flat-screen TV, some situations might make it impossible to do so – if you're renting with strict rules about what you can put on the walls, or simply don't have enough open, secure wall space. If you must place a TV on furniture, keep in mind both the TV and the furniture piece tend to be top heavy. You should secure the top edge of the TV to the back of the furniture, and the furniture itself should be secured to the wall, following the manufacturer's guidelines.

Still, the safest, most practical mode of displaying a flat-screen TV and all its components (DVR, video game, cable or satellite receiver, etc.) is to mount the TV on the wall and place the components beneath it on a piece of furniture specifically designed for that purpose. Sanus offers a full line of home theater furniture designed to hold all your home electronics.

Weekend home upgrades: Fast, affordable fix-ups can pay off big

are available for

as little as a few dollars at local home centers ...

With today's falling home prices, one family's well-worn dwelling can quickly become another's dream "starter" home.

Interest rates are at historic lows, meaning buyers can get more house than they could a year ago for the same monthly mortgage payment, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

But affording a new home is one thing; affording to remodel it is another. Here are some cost-efficient upgrades that are easy enough to accomplish in a single weekend.

Start at the front door

Whether you're fixing up a newly purchased home or upgrading your current home to attract a buyer, nothing creates a better first impression than a new front entry door. Installing a new entryway door increases the perceived value of a home by up to $24,000, according to a national valuation study conducted by Therma-Tru and TNS, an independent research organization.

Beyond adding curb appeal to your home, installing an energy-efficient door is an important consideration if you're fixing up an older home. Houses built before 1939 use about 50 percent more energy per square foot than those built after 2000, according to a Time magazine report. The main culprit is tiny cracks and gaps that can expand over time and let in outside air.

Try to choose a door that is Energy Star qualified, which provides five times the insulation of a wood door and will not rot or split such as wood or rust. The doors create the tightest seal possible, creating an energy efficient envelope that stabilizes interior temperature and helps you decrease your home's energy costs.

As an added value, homeowners who purchase and install certain styles of Therma-Tru doors may be eligible for a tax credit of up to $1,500 per household through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (also known as the Economic Stimulus package). Visit www. thermatru.com for more information.

Set the stage with lighting

Upgrading the interior lighting can also make a big difference in your home. Designers often use "layered" lighting – a combination of ambient, task and accent lighting – to create a quality of light that not only looks and feels better, but is also better-suited to activities that can take place in any given room.

While you may not be in a position to install an entirely new lighting system in your home, there is a simple and affordable upgrade within easy reach. Light dimmers are available for as little as a few dollars at local home centers and hardware stores and can be installed by any do-it-yourselfer in minutes. (Just remember to turn off the circuit breaker before starting.)

According to the Department of Energy, artificial lighting consumes almost 15 percent of a household's electricity use. Dimming an incandescent bulb by just 15 percent reduces energy use by 15 percent and doubles the life of the bulb. The more you dim the light, the more energy you save.

Make a splash with color

Adding a new coat of paint is another easy, inexpensive upgrade. Depending on the shade you select, your room can be dramatically different or simply refreshed.

The paint you choose can also keep your home looking fresher over time. For example, Duration Home Interior Latex from Sherwin-Williams is perfect for hightraffic hallways, bathrooms, kids' rooms and anywhere long-wearing durability, antimicrobial properties and stain resistance is a must. It's tough enough to withstand repeated cleanings without visible wear, no matter what shade is selected (choose from 1,200 colors, including deep accent shades).

As you add color, add a splash of sustainability, too. A low-VOC (Volatile Organic Compound) and low-odor paint such as Duration Home can help ensure better indoor air quality, and it's manufactured using sustainable processes. For paint tips and ideas, visit sherwin-williams.com or your neighborhood Sherwin-Williams store.

Capsaicin in chile can heal

Take two of these and call me in the morning

A shot (or two!) of chile may help nourish an ailing body back to health according to numerous sources

When the body takes in capsaicin, the chemical that makes chile hot, the body reacts by increasing circulation. This increased blood flow has many medical benefits including enhancing the production of protective juices in the stomach, intestines and lungs, making them more resistant to injury and infection. The increased blood volume helps to keep the blood vessels clear and also nourishes the heart.

You've undoubtedly heard rumors that chile may cause damage to the stomach lining. Despite the bad rap, medical evidence has proven repeatedly that capsaicin is harmless. According to www.sizzlingsolutions. com, one of the most convincing capsaicin studies was conducted by a team of doctors at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas.

The team inserted a video endoscope (a miniature internal camera) into the stomach to visually inspect it while introducing a series of test items to the stomach. They introduced bland food, plain aspirin, hot Mexican food and pizza and then inspected the stomach for 'gastric erosions' on the stomach lining. By far the most damaging meal was the bland one combined with aspirin," according to the report.

To further test capsaicin, the team injected "30 grams of jalapenos directly to the stomach lining. There was no visible damage." They concluded "that although capsaicin increased gastric acid secretion in the stomach and causes discomfort, it does not appear to cause stomach lining damage.

In fact, further reports that some gastroenterologists suggest that capsaicin "increases the stomach's production of protective juices, thus protecting the stomach from damage that may be caused by other things such as aspirin or alcohol.

Need further proof? The effects of capsaicin on heartburn were reported in the June 2002 issue of AARP: "Those fiery, belly-burning little peppers may in fact ease chronic indigestion."

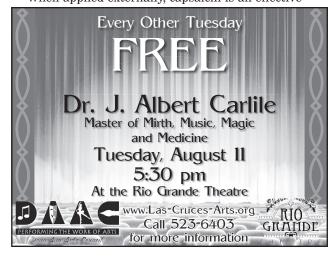

Some participants in an Italian study took capsules of capsaicin before meals for five weeks, while others took a placebo. All participants had chronic digestive problems without a known cause. Those taking capsaicin, rather than a placebo, experienced a 60 percent decrease in pain, feelings of fullness and nausea. In addition, researcher Mauro Bortoloot reported in the March 2002 New England Journal of Medicine that capsaicin may block pain signals going from the stomach to

Other interesting chiletoids

Capsaicin increases anti-clotting properties. Studies have shown that large doses of chile on a daily basis may lower the incidences of thromboembolism (blood clots that cause strokes and heart attacks).

The British Medical Journal reported on a study where ulcers were healed when red peppers were consumed on a regular basis.

The Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer showed that capsaicin might contain cancer-blocking properties. When applied externally, capsaicin is an effective local pain reliever. It's an active ingredient in many over-the-counter arthritis medications. Capsaicin has also been used topically to treat the pain of shingles,

In times not long ago, each adult family member was responsible for braiding chiles into a ristra. To ensure a supply of dried chile throughout the winter months, the ristra needed to equal in size to half the stringer's

Depending on which specialist is asked – botanist, chemist or nutritionist – chiles may be referred to as a vegetable, spice, fruit or berry. Nevertheless, fresh chiles are vegetables; dried chiles are spices. Chiles still on the vine are referred to as fruit.

Some early Spanish priests, mindful of the native peoples' obsession for chiles and unsure of chile's mysterious powers, assumed the fruit was an aphrodisiac and advised against consumption, which undoubtedly added to chile's popularity among the adventurous newcomers. George Washington and Thomas Jefferson are both

Indian tribes tied ristras to their canoes to ward off evils that allegedly lurked in the waters beneath.

The U.S. Territory of Guam is the world's largest per capita consumer of Tabasco sauce, according to McIlhenny Company. Pacific Islanders consume the equivalent of almost two 2-ounce bottles of Tabasco sauce each year, a statistic unmatched in any other country.

To celebrate the upcoming chile harvest and chile's obvious health benefits, I share two jalapeno Two Shot recipes. Enjoy!

Corn and Tomato Garnish

2 ears corn, roasted or boiled,

kernels cut off and reserved

2 Italian Roma tomatoes, seeded and diced ${f 2}$ scallions, washed and sliced into thin rings ${f 1/2}$ teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon pepper

1 tablespoon crème fraiche or sour cream

Stir together corn kernels with all other ingredients

Serve 2 spoonfuls on top of Jalapeño Shots Soup.

Two Jalapeño Shots Soup with Avocado Soup Garnished with Corn and Tomato

1 tablespoon canola oil

2 yellow onions, about 2 cups chopped

4 cloves garlic, chopped

2 jalapeño chiles, stemmed, seeded

if desired, and minced 4 to 5 ripe Haas avocados, peeled

quart chicken stock

1/2 cup crema, crème fraiche or sour cream

1/2 cup chopped cilantro

2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice

Two shots of peppers, por favor. Not only do they add zest to almost any dish, including brownies, but chile has been proven to aid in reducing heartburn, feelings of fullness and nausea.

Heat oil in Dutch oven (covered pot) over low heat; add onions, garlic, jalapeños, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, for about 10 minutes or until translucent. Add avocados and stock and bring to the simmer. Simmer 15 to 20 minutes or until avocados are soft. Add cream, being back to a simmer, then purée with immersion blender until very smooth. Stir in cilantro and lime and serve, topped with Corn and Tomato Garnish. Serves 4 to 6.

Two Shots Jalapeño Quiche

1 frozen pie shell, baked (not browned)

1/2 cup ham, chopped 4 slices bacon, crumbled

1 cup Swiss cheese, grated

1 cup cheddar cheese, grated 1/4 cup onion, chopped

1 medium tomato, chopped 2 jalapeño peppers, chopped

2 tablespoons mushrooms, chopped

4 eggs, beaten

1 teaspoon dry mustard

1/2 cup sour cream

Layer the first nine ingredients in pie shell. Combine eggs, sour cream and mustard; mix well. Pour over ingredients and bake at 350 degrees for about 45 minutes, or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. If the edges of the pie crust begin to get too brown, cover with strips of aluminum foil.

The female carpenter bee carves into soft woods as well as desert plants such as yucca and agave.

Carpenter bee is hard at work

Is it the buzzing of a bee or a buzz saw – or some combination of both? If you're talking about the carpenter bee, you're definitely talking about both.

This industrious creature doesn't need electricity to power its cutting tool – its jaws are the implements of choice. It will bore through wood as precisely as a carpenter on an HGTV series – although certainly not as fast.

The female carpenter bee carves her circular entry and gallery into soft woods as well as desert plants such as yucca and agave. For her, "location, location, location" means housing eaves and unpainted wood structures.

The bee, a solitary insect that doesn't live in a colony, is building a nest and will lay eggs and leave food supplies so her offspring will thrive. And, of course, while collecting those supplies, the carpenter bee is providing a valuable service in pollinating plants.

It will take about six days for the carpenter bee to cut through an inch of wood. Typically, she'll bore an inch into a wood surface then make a 90-degree turn and continue tunneling for as much as 6 inches. The bee would prefer to modify a nest that has already been carved, understandably, considering the effort that goes into a new one.

The female, who is solely responsible for building the nest, is not aggressive, although she will sting if handled. The male, whose life is short, can be threatening – but it's a show. He has no stinger.

The damage the carpenter bee inflicts on wood is usually superficial, although after repeated uses, a tunnel system can grow large enough to weaken structures and wood must be replaced. Following are some tips to help prevent carpenter bees from nesting or to eradicate them.

- Paint wooden surfaces thoroughly (stain isn't sufficient), and inspect regularly to detect weathering.
- Seal entries that already exist to keep new bees from nesting.
- Keep bees out of their current nests by plugging the hole with a sealant such as wood putty or caulk. If it's possible, fill the interior with a sealant first. Bees trapped inside won't chew their way out.
- Locate entrances during the day, but actually do the work at night when the bees are quieter. Make sure to wear protective clothing.
- Insecticides are also available. Visit your home improvement center, garden store or pest control company.
