By Todd G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

Classes start next week for both Las Cruces Public Schools and New Mexico State University, and both are expecting mod-erate growth in enrollment. For NMSU, it's very good news when many other colleges and universities nationwide are having to make painful cuts forced by decreased enrollment and less government support.

Total enrollment at NMSU last fall exceeded 30,000 and that growth trend only slowed slightly during the spring and summer semesters.

"We're seeing increased enrollment at the Las Cruces campus and all the community college campuses," said Bernadette Montoya, NMSU assistant vice president for enrollment management. "This means we expect to hit enrollment goals for the fall semester."

There is an increase in the number of freshmen students and also at all the main campus colleges, she said.

Montoya credited the enrollgrowth NMSU's strong recruit-ment efforts, but didn't rule out the attraction of the land grant university's mission to train the work force at a time when many are having to find

WHAT'S INSIDE Doña Ana begins saving its past

Rehab plans drawn for village's oldest buildings

The Las Cruces Bulleti

While the village of Doña Ana may seem like a sleepy town to most Las Crucens, at one time it was the county's only settlement, and an important stop along El Camino Real for settlers and traders passing between El Paso del Norte and Ciudad Chihuahua to the south and Santa Fe to the north.

On Monday, Aug. 10, a preliminary plan to preserve some of the only surviving buildings along the historic Camino Real was presented at a meeting in the Parish Hall of Our Lady of Purification Church in Doña Ana.

Martin Kuziel, an architect with Conron and Woods Architects of Santa Fe, presented plans to stabilize and restore the De La O Saloon building and the adjacent Wertheim Store and residence on the Camino Real route, now labeled Cristo Rey Road. State Sen. Mary Jane Garcia secured funding for the restoration.

Assessment of the De La O building has already begun, and the next phase will involve getting approval from the State Historic Preservation Office to begin stabilization and restoration of the former

According to a release by the architects, plans call for the De La O building to be converted into a "multi-purpose facility that will serve the needs of a visitors center and community space, while also restoring and preserving the original character of the building."

Plans include the removal of a contemporary bathroom in the building, rebuilding a portion of the building that has been

Supporting NMSU student families

Family Resource Center offers more than backpacks

Carla Zubiate and her son Louis, 3, came in for a backpack on Saturday, Aug. 8, at the Family Resource Center on the New Mexico State University Campus.

The Las Cruces Bulletin

The start of the fall semester is a stressful - and an expensive - time for students at New Mexico State University, especially for those with school-age children. Besides dealing with enrolling in classes, buying books and clothes, students who are parents must also be getting their own children ready for the beginning of school.

That is one reason the Family Resource Center at NMSU gives away hundreds of backpacks stuffed with school supplies to NMSU and Doña Ana Community College students every year.

Another reason is to help students become aware of the services the center makes available and give them an incentive to find the facility tucked away off Sam Steel Way in family student housing.

"By giving out the backpacks, it gets students familiar with the center," said Esther Devall, a professor of family and consumer sciences and the director of the center, "and it helps them know where it is.

The center has been conducting the backpack giveaway for about six years. In the first year, the center gave away approximately 60 backpacks, but this year it was more than 230. Each backpack is filled with school supplies appropriate for each child's grade level. Parents were asked to fill out forms in advance specifying the age of their children so the backpacks could be prepared.

"It was a big organizational job," Devall said. "But Noel Martinez (a graduate-student intern) produced a spreadsheet that made it much easier."

The Family Resource Center is a good place for students with families to know

Besides the backpack giveaways, the center also offers parenting workshops, marriage and family therapy, nutrition education, parents' time out, family activities and referral services to on- and offcampus resources.

This year, Devall said, they also have plans to provide child care for the younger siblings of incoming freshmen.

We noticed that a lot of incoming student's families bring along younger children, they get bored and in the way, so on Move In Day, Sunday, Aug. 16, parents can drop off younger kids ages 4 to 12 at Piñon Hall and we will have games and snacks for them," Devall said.

The center will also be announcing the date for their annual welcome-back picnic at Preciado Park in the near future.

The center is funded by the Associated Students of New Mexico State University, but the backpack giveaway is primarily funded by student, faculty and family donations, Devall said.

For more information on the Student Resource Center, call 646-2065, or visit the center at C-100 Cervantes Village on the NMSU campus. To reach the center, by this week's edition of Forbes magazine ranking NMSU much higher than other universities in New Mexico, as well as better than the University of Texas at El Paso.

Although some students have already moved into on-campus housing, the big "move-in" day is Sunday, Aug. 16.

Julie Weber, director of NMSU's Housing and Residential Life, said 350 volunteers will be on hand to help more than 3,000 students move into their resident halls and apartments. That's an increase of more than 230 students from last year and doesn't include on-campus married and family housing.

It will mean that Residence Assistants will have to share their room and there will be some doubling and tripling up, but Weber said NMSU has enough on-campus housing to handle the increase without having to find off-campus living quarters. She said NMSU is committed to providing on-campus housing for students because studies show students living on campus usually do better in academically than students living off campus.

NMSU classes begin Thursday, Aug. 20.

LCPS first-day policy

Classes at LCPS start Monday, Aug. 17, and all students need to show up, said spokeswoman Jo Galvan. The district's new stricter attendance policy starts the first day, which high school students need to understand and follow, she said. Some high school students don't show up for their first class or for school the first few days thinking it won't make a difference, she said. That's not true under the district's new attendance policy, she warned.

"We want to make it clear that every day counts," Galvan said. "Attendance will be taken every period, starting on the first period of the first day."

NMSU Foundation raises $210 million

Goal is $225 million by end of 2010

New Mexico State University's Doing What Counts fundraising campaign has raised $210 million to date and continues to move toward its $225 million goal by December 2010.

The campaign is the most ambitious fundraising endeavor undertaken by the university and has already exceeded expectations. The original goal $150 million by December 2008 was met early in the effort causing the NMSU effort causing the NMSU Foundation Board of Directors to revise the goal to $225 million by December 2010.

"The money raised is helping NMSU achieve even higher levels of excellence," said Nick Franklin, vice president of university advancement and executive director of the NMSU Foundation. "The generous gifts we have received are the reason we continue to grow and transform NMSU."

The campaign was intended to fund academic chairs and professorships that support NMSU's outstanding faculty, to create additional scholarships to attract quality students and to establish funding for several capital projects including the Native American Cultural Center, which will soon be under construction, as well as the Center for the Arts and the Domenici Institute.

In the last five years gifts to the university have made it possible to establish more than a dozen chairs to support outstanding faculty and several hundred student scholarships.

As the campaign moves toward conclusion, the focus will include continued efforts to fund various projects across campus that support faculty and students as well as efforts to raise additional needed funding for the Center for the Arts and the Domenici Institute.

NMSU's Center for the Arts will gather the university's scattered arts programs in one central location, encouraging more collaborative activity and providing the community easier accessibility to the many creative endeavors on campus. It is intended to be a regional arts venue to serve all of southern New Mexico and west Texas.

Named for New Mexico's longest-serving senator. NMSU's Domenici Institute brings together some of the best minds in the country to focus on significant national issues. Among other activities, the institute hosts an annual public policy conference where leading policy makers discuss topics with a real impact on people across the country. This year's conference will be held Sept. 16 and 17 at the NMSU Corbett Center Student Union.

During the campaign, NMSU has discovered many friends and partners who have helped the university achieve its goals. To become an NMSU Partner in Excellence, visit http://giving.nmsu.edu/.

One wish?

Have you ever thought about granting a wish for a special child?

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM

Many of us have occasionally pondered the question of what we would request if we were granted one magic wish. Would we opt for fame, fortune, good looks, world peace or perhaps the greedy option of wishing for more wishes? Our answers can be quite revealing about our personal priorities.

However, instead of asking for something for ourselves, what if we actually had the opportunity to help fulfill the wishes of others? The unselfish action of helping someone else could be even more satisfying than having our own wish granted.

In fact, we now have that opportunity to wish for the latter – in this case, a very special group of New Mexicans – young people between the ages of 2 and 18 who have life-threaten-ing illnesses and conditions. Through the Make-A-Wish Foundation of New Mexico, our generous donations can help ensure that the fondest wish of each of these children can become a reality.

Last year, more than 100 children with life-threatening medical conditions throughout New Mexico experienced the thrill and needed boost of having their special wishes granted. Twelve of those children were from the Las Cruces region, including a 12-year-old boy who wished to be an animator for a day at Pixar stu-dios in California, and a 14-year-old girl who requested a computer. Other children have been granted their special wishes to see the Dallas Cowboys in action, to visit Disneyland, to have a special quinceañera, and to be a police officer, a pilot and even a princess for a day. Some children have even

Here's how you can help these special children's wishes come true. Make-A-Wish Foundation of New Mexico is raising funds to support its program for youth in the Las Cruces region. The national Make-A-Wish organization has offered a $25,000 matching grant, with an Oct. 1 deadline for Make-A-Wish in our Mesilla Valley. Unfortunately, so far only $6,000 has been raised and the deadline is fast approaching.

The average cost of granting a wish is $5,000. This means the funding of $50,000 raised through this matching grant opportunity would help provide wishes for at least 10 children from our area. Many people have learned the joy from wishes granted is multiplied through touching the lives of families, referral sources, sponsors and everyone else who come into contact with these children.

If you, your family, your business or your organization is interested in helping out this incredibly worthwhile cause, please consider making a monetary investment to help Make-A-Wish attain its matching grant for Doña Ana County. It's easy to help a special young person's wish come true – and you don't even need to kiss a frog to do it!

You can contact the Make-A-Wish organization directly at 800-884-5276

or send an email to magic@wishnm.org, and ask about how you can support this nonprofit agency through needed tax-deductible donations, fund-raising activities and volunteering. For more information about the Make-A-Wish Foundation in New Mexico, visit www.wishnm.org. I am confident you will be glad you made the call.

Say no to health bill

The health care reform bill now being crafted in Congress is designed to put authority to determine who lives or dies in the hands of the government bureaucrats.

Outrageous?

This bill, as now written, gives government access to your bank accounts and authority to make withdrawals. This is unbelievable, but true. Read the bill, folks – this bill would give the government bureaucrats the power to make life and death decisions.

This is chilling.

This health care bill being pushed by President Obama and the majority of Democrats (some are opposed) has the potential for totalitarian control by not only the Obama regime, but also future administrations, more repressive than Hitler's or Stalin's governments.

Let's not tolerate this proposed disaster. We demand a no vote from our representatives in Washington: Sen. Jeff Bingaman, Sen. Tom Udall and Rep. Harry Teague.

CATHERINE FULLER

They're coming ...

First the feds came for the Branch Davidians in Texas, and the faith healers and voluntary assisted suicide proponents in Oregon, and I wasn't one of them so I didn't help them.

Then they came for those who feel state or private insurance funds shouldn't be used for male circumcisions, and as my friend was a doctor who "earned" $1,000 a week doing three quick circumcisions and paid for my beer at the parties he invited me to, I didn't lift a finger to help the opponents of circumcision.

Then they came to force people to get kidney dialysis or liver transplants, in violation of the 1991 Patient's Self Determination Act, even though those people would have preferred to die and go to heaven according to their religious faith, and as I wasn't diagnosed, even perhaps falsely diagnosed, with a kidney or liver problem, I didn't help these people even though my income taxes were higher and they threatened to re-impose sales tax on food because of the cost of treating those kinds of people.

But then they came for people who are free hikers, and they came to get people who prefer to use their savings for proper foods, and they came to round up people who don't want to spend a nickle on health insurance or a fitness club membership, and I tried to help such people because I was one of them, but it was too late – the Fed-State stole our savings that we refused to spend on health insurance and fitness club memberships, then threw us in jail, and forced us on junk food and unnecessary medications to enhance the value of their investments in big pharma and the junk food profiteers.

Jay Miller's thoughts on health care

Maybe, if everyone is covered, the world will be better off

With all the talk about health care, I feel compelled to offer some of my thoughts for what they might be worth. I am far from being a health care analyst. These thought are from purely personal experiences.

I've been on Medicare for more than six years now and must say, I love it. I can go to just about any doctor, present my Medicare and Blue Cross cards and never hear another word about co-pays, deductibles or denied coverage. And I know they won't cancel me. That's insurance.

Occasionally I have asked a doctor if an expensive procedure will be covered. I've been told not to worry often enough that I no longer ask. Will the proposed health care plan help me? Not likely. I'm already set for the rest of my life.

Since I already have about as good a plan as I could ever want, why should I support the government extending that guaranteed coverage to everyone else? It will surely raise my taxes regardless of what is being promised so I'll actually come out behind. Besides, the government could lower my Medicare benefits.

So about the only reason to support health care coverage for everyone is that I shouldn't be selfish and maybe having everyone covered will make this a better world. I read somewhere it is my patriotic duty to want health care for everyone.

If I'm going to be patriotic and unselfish, I at least want to see this proposed plan be as good as it can be. There have been some extremely scary claims made about what is going to happen to old people under the proposed plan.

people under the proposed plan.
I'm told President Barack Hussein
Obama is going to send out death squads to decide whether I can live any longer. I find it impossible to believe any member of Congress would vote for that, much less a majority of both houses.

And I think the American Association of Retired Persons, to which all us old folks should belong, would be able to keep something like that from happening.

Actually, in my community, the problem is much the opposite. We're concerned that the new owners of our hospital will require all patients be kept alive as long as absolutely possible.

To me, that's not welcome news. My parents spent the last 10 years of their lives in a nursing home, one with acute dementia, the other with Alzheimer's. They had great care and were in good health but they didn't know where they were, who they were or who I was.

That is zero quality of life as far as I am concerned. I am reaching the age at which they started their long downhill slide and don't want to be a burden on my family. I have a long-term-care policy, which I hope would eliminate the financial burden. I will write this column as long as I can to keep the mental juices flowing.

But when I reach the point that I no longer enjoy life, I don't want to stick around another 10 years. I would like for there to be some end-of-life options. I don't expect the government ever to snuff me out, but I would like for there to be some way to respect my wishes.

JAY MILLER
Inside the Capitol

The main problem in my mind is that the health care effort is being rushed. Obama is said to believe it is now or never. In my mind that means never. Everyone needs to settle down and search for changes all can accept.

It appears to me that the poor and the old already have deluxe coverage. The rich can take care of themselves. And the young have their health. Who really needs help? The middle-aged, middle-class.

And yet, at congressional town halls, they seem to be the ones raising the most ruckus. At one, on TV, almost all raised their hands that they had insurance.

Since people with individual cover-

Since people with individual coverage are at the mercy of insurers, the protesters must have insurance through their employers. And yet, their health is insured only as long as their job is insured. And that isn't much these days.

La Tienda thanks patrons

The Christmas in July at La Tienda de Jardin was a marvelous success, so much so that the sale will continue until mid-August. The Las Cruces Sun-News and Las Cruces Bulletin staff were instrumental in getting the word out to the community, and we attribute the large crowd of shoppers to the great pre-event publicity.

We would also like to thank Barb at Friendly Flowers

We would also like to thank Barb at Friendly Flowers for her balloon bouquets, Jereann Hutchinson for the biscochos and Diane and Hank Greenholdt for running a very profitable silent auction.

Our stellar cast of volunteers included Beverly Chavez Floyd, Patsy Warthen, Kathy Groves, Polly Dias, Barb and Tobey Thie, Becky King, Lanova Sheets, Claudia Durham, Janice Servais, Barbara Allen, Heather Pollard and Louis Samaniego.

La Tienda is located on the corner of South Main Street at Alameda and La Colonia avenues and is open Monday through Saturdays. We welcome all gently used and new donations to our boutique.

We are also starting a La Tienda Guild, and because all our staff are not salaried, we encourage more volunteers, especially those with retail and "shopping" experience. Stop by and see our new look.

Thank you to everyone in the community who attended Christmas in July.

Teague indefensible

Tom Hester (The Las Cruces Bulletin, Aug. 7) defends Rep. Harry Teague's cowardly one-on-one meetings (as opposed to "town hall" format meetings) by claiming that Teague may have been "shell shocked" by "screaming critics" of "cap and trade" legislation in Silver City, N.M.

Hester, like all who try to defend the indefensible, spouts nonsense.

He says: "Maybe Teague realizes that our environment is imperiled by current profligate carbon emissions. Maybe Teague has a grasp of the complex scientific conclusions that demonstrate how we are cooking our globe ..."

Complex scientific conclusions? Time to wake up. There is not a single piece of scientific evidence that shows that "carbon emissions" (I assume Hester means CO2 emissions) are making the world warmer. Not one.

Does Teague have a "grasp of complex scientific conclusions?" No.

There are none to be grasped. What Teague has a grasp on is his desire to maintain his political career and the wallets of his constituents.

Health care fixes

Many moons ago when I was still young, I never thought about getting old, but now I can tell you that being old is the pits. To begin with, your memory starts to fail you. I find that often when I go into a room in my house I can't remember what it was that I wanted. I can't remember names like I used to, and I can no longer ride a horse or a bicycle. Birthdays have long been forgotten.

Speaking of health care (did I mention it before?) I notice that everything is much different now. There are so many more drugs that brag about curing your illness, and they all have similar side-affects, such as nausea, dizziness, vomiting, etc. There are several that give you nightmares and thoughts of suicide. Isn't that just great. I think the FDA should take those drugs off the market, but (alas) money is their promoting factor.

Have any of you gone to a doctor lately, and have had to wait for an hour or more to see the doctor for about 10 minutes or less? I almost forget what I wanted to ask him or her. I just wish the magazines were a little newer. Now, there are even some doctors who will not accept

Now, there are even some doctors who will not accept Medicare, or they charge more than Medicare will pay, and expect you to pay the entire bill up front. They will send in the forms for you, but you have to wait to be reimbursed.

We, the elderly, expect to have more health problems as time goes by, and we'll be spending more time in doctor's offices. The cost will be tremendous.

In my opinion, health care is too complex an issue for Congress to solve. I personally believe in "states rights." I really don't want Congress to decide what is good for New Mexico. There cannot be any comparison between New Mexico and New York, California, etc.

Oh, well, forgive my ramblings. I guess I'm too old to figure out these problems, so I'll leave it to you younger folks to decide.

Trouble in store for legislators

Lawmakers deserve heat when they don't read legislation they intend to vote into law

By Michael Swickard

This is an odd August congressional recess. Usually members of Congress enjoy being back in their district, seeing old friends and holding infrequent town hall meetings marginally attended at best. They look forward to being in their home districts to escape the humidity and heat of Washington. It is usually a time when their names disappear from the newspaper pages.

This recess the Washington heat is nothing compared to the heat in their home districts. In fact, many members of Congress are counting the days until they can go back to D.C. For the record, I did not see this coming. The deer in the headlights look says it all. "Hey, wait, you are supposed to adore us who serve you in Congress, why are you shouting?"

Yes, some citizens are shouting. Parti-sans say the shouters are professional shouters not real citizens from our district. But I am not buying it because some shouters are friends of mine.

These people are venting because of the actions of the members of Congress, who, in response, have canceled public town hall meetings because they hate the yelling. I wonder how they will feel when swept out of office. They may be swept out for acting sanctimonious instead of repentive.

What bothered me the most is they passed profound legislation without reading it. Let me say that again: without reading it. We can argue the merits of the legislation and many do, but the loudest critics are those who can find no reason to have members of Congress who are not reading the bills.

Wonder why Joe Citizen is mad about some legislation? The members of Congress have no idea why Joe is steamed since they did not read it. And the process of introduction made sure that no one read it before voting on it. We have to ask ourselves what was gained.

Maybe it is just me, but I cannot imagine voting for society-changing legislation without reading it. The partisans of each party can say that it is the way things are done, but I do not believe it. Was the Constitution of the United States signed without being read? What might be the liabilities of passing our Constitution without it being read first?

It is from the "Department of Stupid" to have to point out that if our representatives pass legislation they have not read they cannot project possible negative outcomes. Is this news to anyone or is there another game going on?

I know the people who wrote the legislation read it and had time to think of the possible outcomes. But for laughs go ahead and make your case why in our system of government it is important for the representatives of the people to not know what they are passing. Tell me that I just do not understand how things are done in our nation's capital. Go ahead and tell me that somehow things in our country would be worse if our leaders knew what they were approving.

Everyone in Congress should be thrown out of office if they say that passing the legislation is so important that no one has the time to read it. Regardless of party, a vote without reading the bill should result in being voted out of office at the earliest opportunity.

I hope people yell at the members of Congress every day of their term of office and then vote them out of office for not reading the profound legislation before them. It does not appear that anyone can make a case for not reading legislation other than those who want to make the case that a dictatorship is a better form of government because the trains all run on time.

While I prefer reasoned discourse where people are able to disagree without being disagreeable, it is not my place to tell Americans betrayed by their elected leaders to hush.

Reservoir Advisory

The Bureau of Reclamation has projected a snow runoff of 419,000 acre-feet, 73 percent of average, at San Marcial, an improvement from its June forecast for 360,000 acre-feet, the bureau reported in its Reservoir Advisory.

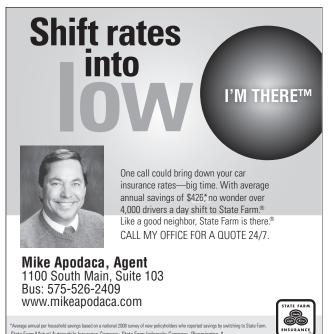

The snow pack runoff has ended, and storage in both reservoirs has dropped:
• Elephant Butte – 516,093 acre-feet, 26 percent of a full reservoir, a decrease of 21,064 acre-feet from a week earlier, 65 feet below the dam spillway.

Caballo – 53,330 acre-feet, 24 percent of capacity, down 2,530 acre-feet.

The 2009 Rio Grade Project allocation is 919,800 acrefeet, 99 percent of a full supply, 288,467 for Elephant Butte Irrigation District; 575,443 for El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1, and 55,890 for Juårez,

Mechanical bull

"So, what's the difference between riding a mechanical bull and riding a real one?" asked the boy

"You will know the difference, my son, the first time you climb over into the buckin' chute and look

The mechanical bull is a carnival ride, it is not a life changing experience. Riding a real bull will affect how you answer one of the questions you will be asked the rest of your life. Whenever PBR comes on ESPN, or Extreme Sports are being discussed, you will have a practiced answer like "I was going to ride one once but I had a sinus infection so I couldn't," or "I was taking piano lessons and worried about injuring my hand," or "Yeah, I rode bulls till my brains

I can't remember the first bull I got down on. I do recall trying to hang onto the back of a steer in a roping chute and being scraped off. I started riding bulls in high school. There wasn't much of a system set up for kids to learn. Most of the rides I made were in rodeos where the money was up.

I tell the story in retrospect years later that I had a friend on the New Mexico State University rodeo team named Charley Engle. He was a good bull rider and I admired him. When I asked him for advice he suggested that I had to practice.

"Practice?" I thought.

Does that make any sense to anyone reading this: "I'm going to have a train wreck tomorrow, I better have one today to practice!"

The difference between riding a mechanical bull and a real bull has less to do with the actual ability to stay on, and more to do with facing your own courage, i.e., how you will deal with an unforgiving, unpredictable, massively strong, dangerously quick force of nature. Riding bulls is better compared to standing outside during a tornado, arm-wrestling an octopus, or walking in a cage with a grizzly bear.

You cannot control the outcome, yet you drop down on his back with a leg on either side. You glance at the spread of horns as big as baseball bats three feet in front of your face. Your muscles are as tight as tarp rubbers as you slide your rosined hand into the rope. They pull it tight.

"Good?" they ask.

"More," you say. You have squeezed your mind into a steel jacketed blue tip laser flame of concentration. You have gone inside your mind as the mechanics of mounting swirl around you. You take your wrap.

The bull bangs his horns on the steel chute. He mashes your leg into the side. You can feel his body heat and taste his feral tension. It smells like a storm coming. You scoot up on your hand, lean back. You are so in tune, you can feel your nerves running through your veins like sand in an hourglass. You are totally spring-loaded shivering focused.

Dad says, "Nod your head when you're ready."
The son nods his head and they explode from the chute together.

This is the second year of the conference, hosted by NMSU's Domenici Institute. Named for New Mexico's longest-serving senator, the institute brings together some of the best minds in the country to focus on significant national issues. This year's topics will include the U.S. economy and national debt, homeland security and the U.S.-Mexico border, national security and nuclear energy.

"For this conference, we are specifically targeting issues with a real impact on people across the country," said Garrey Carruthers, NMSU vice president for economic development and director of the Domenici Institute.

Napolitano will headline the session on homeland security and the U.S.-Mexico border the first evening. The following day, Mexico's perspective on the issue will be Cartwright will speak during the session on national security along with former Congresswoman Heather Wilson. Wilson is also a former member of the National Security Council.

David Walker, former director of the Government Accountability Office, will speak about the U.S. economy and the national debt. Alex Flint, senior vice president at the Nuclear Energy Institute, will speak about nuclear energy.

Sen. Chris Dodd and former Sen. Pete Domenici during the 2008 Domenici Public Policy Conference.

"We encourage everyone to participate in this event," said Ann Morgan, project manager for the Domenici Institute. "The public often doesn't have a chance to see and hear from this many people who create and influence policy in our country."

As in last year's conference, students from universities around the state, including NMSU, New Mexico Tech, the University of New Mexico, Eastern New Mexico University, Western New Mexico University, Northern New Mexico College and New Mexico Highlands University, will have a chance to interact with the conference speakers and ask about their views at the conclusion of each session.

Conference registration costs $25 and is available online at http://domenici.nmsu. edu. Student registration is free. For more information, call the Domenici Institute at

Council revisits Downtown plans

Plaza hold-up created unexpected difficulties

By Todd G. Dickson

With the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market on the Downtown Mall due to move to the re-opened portion of Main Street next month, the City Council reviewed the original Downtown revitalization master plan in a work session Monday, Aug. 10.

City officials assured councillors that providing adequate shade for the popular market was always part of the plan, though some unexpected issues have arose.

Though vendors looked at the future plaza as their home, the original master plan envision the outdoor market also spilling out from the future plaza and running up and down the re-opened Main Street.

The envisioned re-opened Main Street, however, also imagined stores putting up awnings and overhangs like the original Main Street shops did. The problem is that many of the buildings – especially on the southern end of the Downtown Mall – are vacant with owners in no apparent hurry to re-open and put up storefront shade

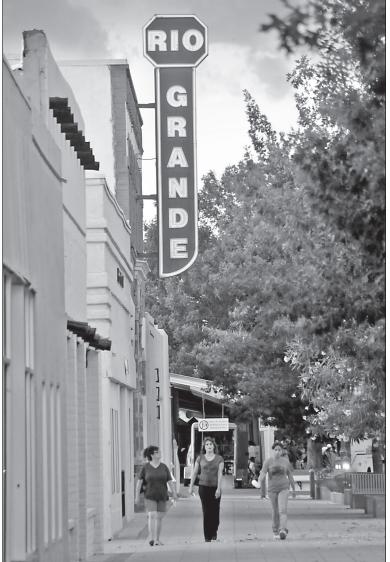

Negotiations with the Bank of West to acquire its drive-through section for the plaza broke down, leaving city officials to focus on finishing the re-opening of Main Street to take advantage of funding – especially state money that needed to be spent right away or be recalled.

Designs for re-opening the rest of Main Street will include basic shade structures such as those seen on the first section of re-opened Main Street. But vendors say that won't be enough shade.

Assistant City Manager Robert Garza said he'll look into what kind of other shade can be provided, such as erecting a tent during the morning market held twice

Instead of relocating the market to the far south end while the north end is worked on, the market will be moving to the re-opened section of Main Street by Las Cruces Avenue starting Sept. 5.

From left, Olga Valverde, Denise Valverde and Tonisha Valverde enjoy the early evening air as they take a stroll in the re-opened portion of Main Street along the Downtown Mall Tuesday, Aug. 4. The twice-weekly Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market will move to the street starting Saturday, Sept. 5, so work can begin on reopening Main Street on the north end of the mall.

Empty Bowls tickets on sale

Event supports El Caldito Soup Kitchen

Empty Bowls, the Las Cruces Potter's Guild annual fundraiser for El Caldito Soup Kitchen, will be held from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 16, at St. Paul's Methodist Church, 225 W. Griggs Ave.

Each ticket holder chooses a handmade pottery bowl and enjoys a soup lunch donated by local restaurants. Take-out orders are available. The pottery bowl is taken home as a reminder of hungry people in the community.

A silent auction will precede Empty Bowls and, this year, it will be part of the Arts Hop from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 2, at the Rio Grande Theatre in the Downtown Mall. Clay art objects by Potter's Guild members will be featured along with other art work. A handmade quilt will also be part of the silent auction.

Tickets are $15 when purchased at the door, but may be purchased in advance from local merchants for $13.

Tickets are for sale at: Glenn Cutter Gallery, 2640 El Paseo Road; The Potteries, 2260 Calle de Santiago; Mountain View Market, 1300 El Paseo Road; Ris-ing Sky Artworks, 415 E. Foster Road; Unravel Yarn Shop, 300 N. Downtown Mall; Enchanted Gardens, 270 Avenida de Mesilla; Spirit Winds, 2260 S. Locust St.; El Caldito Soup Kitchen, 999 W. Amador Ave.; The Hair & Body Shop, 2448 Calle de Guadalupe; and Boudreau Glenn Cutter Jewelry, 2001 E. Lohman Ave.

El Caldito Soup Kitchenis a volunteer organization that feeds more than 60,000 people each year at its location in the Mesilla Valley City of Hope, 999 W. Amador Ave. Meals are prepared every weekday as well as a sack lunch on Saturday. El Caldito also provides an annual appreciation meal for local veterans as well as special holiday meals on Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Some food is donated, but much of the food and other items must be purchased.

Potters' Guild members are making more than 1,000 bowls for the event. Local restaurants donate soup, which is collected by New Mexico State University students. Pepsi Bottling company donates drinks. St. Paul's Methodist Church offers facilities. El Caldito kitchen volunteers serve the public their "soup kitchen" lunch.

Miyagishima said he's looking at the issue in response to constituent concerns.

County hires two

announced the hiring of two high-level county employees. William E. Noland has been brought on board as the county's new director of finance and Bob L. Bartlesmeyer joins the Doña Ana County Bureau of Elections as elections supervisor.

Noland comes to Doña Ana County from Oakland, Calif., where he was the City of Oakland's director of finance and management since 2003. He served as the city's controller from 1999 to 2003 before being promoted. Prior to that, he served as the accounting manager and interim director of finance for the Contra Costa Water District. He has a total of 26 years of experience in governmental and private-sector financial management.

Noland holds a master's degree in international management and finance from the Thunderbird School of Global Management in Glendale, Ariz., and a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Cincinnati in Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Having Bill Noland on board is good news for all of us in Doña Ana County," Haines said. "He brings to the team a wealth of experience and knowledge, all of which enables him to lead the department during these uncertain economic times. Doña Ana County is financially stable, but there is always room for improvement in budgeting and managing assets."

Bartelsmeyer has more than 25 years experience with elections management, including 22 years as a county clerk, a position to which he was elected at age 21 and then served six consecutive terms. Most recently, he served as absentee ballot coordinator for Palm Beach County, Fla. He has attended both Oral Roberts University and Missouri State University.

Bartelsmeyer was introduced to the Doña Ana County Government Center Tuesday by Doña Ana County Clerk Lynn Ellins, who praised his newest employee as driven, motivated and highly qualified for the position vacated when Mario O. Jimenez was appointed chief deputy county clerk.

Park and Ride coming to El Paso commuters

Gov. Bill Richardson said Friday, Aug. 7, that a new Park and Ride route will be established between Las Cruces, and El Paso, Texas, starting Monday, Aug. 31.

Richardson said 30,000 commuters travel between the two cities each weekday.

The new route will reportedly cost about $900,000 annually.

The route will have 19 bus trips each weekday. Ten buses will travel from Las Cruces to El Paso in the morning and evening. Five buses will run from El Paso to Las Cruces in the morning and four in the evening.

The buses will operate between El Paso's Sun Metro terminal in Anthony, Texas, to Las Cruces' New Mexico State University and the Downtown terminals. Two stops on the route will connect Las Cruces to White Sands Missile Range.

Fares are expected to cost $3 each way or $90 for a monthly pass.

Stonegarden gets more funding

Department of Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano announced an additional $30 million in Operation Stonegarden grants to states along the U.S.-Mexico border.

The funds – of which $2.5 million is earmarked for New Mexico – are intended to enhance the department's capabilities to coordinate with state, local and tribal law enforcement in order to effectively deter violence, enforce immigration laws and combat illegal trafficking.

"Operation Stonegarden grants direct critical funding to state, local and tribal law enforcement operations across the country," Napolitano said. "I am proud to announce an additional $30 million in funding specifically for the Southwestern states to ensure our first responders are equipped with the resources they need to confront the complex and dynamic challenges that exist along our southern border."

These grants, funded through the Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2009 passed by Congress and signed into law by President Obama, will be directed to states along the U.S.-Mexico border, including Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and California.

demolished and building a new restroom facility east of the existing structure.

For Garcia, it is the culmination of a lifetime of work.

In 1977, the Catholic Church was contemplating tearing down the old church in Doña Ana, but Garcia was among those who objected to the demolition of the church, which dates to around 1850.

"I told them you can't just tear down an old church with 2-foot-thick adobe walls in New Mexico," Garcia said, "They said that if we could get it restored they would keep it."

For at-risk youth

A committee was soon formed to save the church, Garcia said, but it wasn't until 1990 that she was able to secure funding for an at-risk youth program to rebuild the church.

"The first year, Gov. Bruce King vetoed the program, because he thought it was for all of Doña Ana County," she said, "The next year, we made it clear it was for (the village of) Doña Ana.

"There were three components, the kids had to get a GED, a degree or learn a trade, they had to get out of gangs and they had to accept free counseling.

"I was highly criticized at the time," Garcia said. "What are you doing with kids like that, are you crazy?""

"The kids and other people saw me out there making adobes and they said 'What is this?' They started to learn that they are connected to the community, they are a part of it.

"Little by little the community realized that what we had done was good.

"When I did my oral history thesis, people learned about it and they would bring me stuff they had that they felt was historic. People brought old deeds and old civil papers, and I learned that I was a descendent of one of the original 14 colonists, of Jose Garcia and his wife Francisca Perea.

"In return I tried to give them a sense of cultural identity," Garcia said.

"I went to school with these kids' mothers and grandmothers, they didn't know that this community is diverse and made of different people," the senator continued. "Many didn't know their fathers or grandfathers because they were soldiers at Fort Selden and that they have diverse ethnic backgrounds."

Garcia said Anglo names were often "Hispanicized" over the years and their mixed heritage was forgotten.

Perserverance pays off

With private donations and a lot of perseverance, the church restoration was completed in 1998

"Out of 40 kids we only lost two, one to a drive-by shooting and one was sent up to Santa Fe for a long time for another shooting, she said ing," she said.

"When we had the dedication ceremonies, I saw one of the kids in the corner crying, a big kid, about six foot two, I asked him why he was crying, and he said he never thought he would be here to see it.

"Now many of those kids are the cornerstones of the community," Garcia said.

As Garcia toured the buildings on Cristo Rey Street with Kuziel, her pride in the history of Doña Ana was evident, and she spoke about the many buildings that have been already lost.

"There used to be a beautiful zaguan (a passageway into a central patio) right here," pointing out the remains of a foundation, "when they tore it down they sold it to a church in Las Cruces."

She pointed out a residence that once was a courthouse. "This is the oldest public building in southern New Mexico.

"On that side of the street they were all brothers, all dead now, you can only tell where one house ends by the color."

She shows an adobe that belongs to one of her relatives. During her most recent re-election campaign she was roundly criticized for attempting to get public money to stabilize it.

"Look, the wall is gone now, it is only covered by a tarp, we lost it." she said.

To the south of Doña Ana, Christo Rey Road ends in a sandy arroyo, which, according to Garcia, was scooped out by the federal Corps of Engineers as part of a flood control project many years ago. What remains of the old Camino Real to the immediate south was destroyed.

If one stands in the Cristo Rey Road looking to the south, the Franklin Mountains above El Paso loom in the distance.

One wonders how many Camino Real travelers took in that vista, either to remember a home left behind or to catch a glimpse of the road ahead. With the street still lined on either side by the remaining ancient adobes, a visitor can still sense that it is not just another street in a dusty New Mexico village.

A huge amount of New Mexico's cultural heritage rattled up that street and beyond to the Jornada del Muerto and distant Santa Fe. Before there was a Las Cruces or even a Mesilla, down that street came the Americanos and a new era of history.

Thanks to the work of people like Garcia, that history has a chance of being preserved, and the cultural heritage of a diverse little village of soldiers, farmers, traders and saloonkeepers will still be available to those that come behind us in the journey that is New Mexico.

Gutierrez leads San Miguel effort

State Rep. Joni Gutierrez visits with Carmen Olivas, one of the Tres Manos weavers at San Miguel's old parish hall.

Former school to become new village center

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Carmen Olivas is one of a dozen women weavers at the Tres Manos program held in an old parish hall in San Miguel.

The quarters are cramped for the 12 weaving stations, she said, and it's not safe for grandchildren who are cared for by several of the women in the program.

That's why Olivas said she is grateful that state Rep. Joni Gutierrez has taken an interest in the community and wants to convert a unuseď school nearby into a community center, which would provide a new home to the program with safe, supervised activities for children.

Starting two years ago, Gutierrez has been working with San Miguel residents to covert the old school into a community center.

In the last Legislature, Gutierrez secured $930,000 in coordination with state Sen. Cynthia Nava - who is superintendent of Gadsden Independent School District, which owns the old school to allow Doña Ana County to buy the unused elementary school and turn it into a new community center.

Gutierrez said she found the funding from monies used to improve colonias - unincorporat-

"This is a dream come true for all of us," Gutierrez said. "The possibilities are endless.

To maximize what the center can do for San Miguel, Gutierrez has been holding town hall meetings to hear what people would like to see in the new community

"We set the creation of a community center as a primary goal that would include multiple indoor and outdoor recreational opportunities for the community of San Miguel," Gutierrez said. "Now, that is possible and we are anxiously waiting for Doña Ana County to conclude their negotiations with Gadsden.'

Barbara Simmons Rains - 1938-2009

Former dean of NMSU College of Education was mother, community supporter and world traveler

Barbara Simmons Rains (Dr. Barbara Simmons) was born Feb. 15, 1938, in Whitesboro, Texas, to Pauline (deceased) and William Arthur Mathews of Tyler, Texas and died Aug. 6, 2009 in Las Cruces.

She is survived by her husband of 31 years, Doug Rains of Las Cruces; son, Eric Hunter Simmons of Lubbock, Texas; Brian and Terry Rains of Houston; Mike and Janet Rains of Austin, Texas; sister Rose Anne George of Paris, Texas; brother William A. (Bill) Mathews of Carrollton, Texas; five grandchildren; one great-grandchild, four nieces and one nephew.

Barbara graduated from Paris High School, Paris Jr. College and the University of Texas before beginning her professional career. She taught elementary grades in the Lubbock Public Schools.

The tragic death of her 8-year-old daughter, Lisa, in 1963 created a large void in her life. She partially filled that void by completing her master's and doctoral degrees. She then became an adjunct assistant professor in the College of Education at Texas Tech University. Her career at Texas Tech included teaching graduate and undergraduate courses, serving as chair of the Early Childhood/Elementary Education Department, and as full professor and associate dean of the Graduate School. Barbara was named an "Outstanding Alumnus" of Texas Tech in 1993.

Barbara's academic accomplishments included publishing more than 100 articles in professional journals. She developed teaching kits for commercial sale including Talking Books for Texas Instruments and "First Encounters: Teaching Computer Literacy Skills to Young Children," for Apple Computer.

In addition to teaching, writing, conducting research and serving as a national and international consultant, Barbara provided leadership at the state, national and international levels. She loved to travel. She worked at sites such as Beirut, Costa Rica, Dominica, St. Lucia, Mexico, Cairo, Alexandria, Egypt, Rome and Barbados.

In 1985, Barbara became dean of the College of Education at New Mexico State University. In her 12 years of service she brought many changes to the college, continued to hire excellent faculty, increased external funding and promoted new resources.

Under her leadership, the "Children's Village was created to provide child care for students and NMSU employees. In 1991 she was selected to receive the Governor's Award as an Outstanding New Mexico Woman" for her efforts in ensuring that the college received positive recognition and the highest ranking by accreditation teams.

After retiring, she continued to support NMSU, KRWG-TV, the Community of Hope, Keep New Mexico Beautiful and the Board of Advocates for the College of Education.

A memorial service and celebration of Barbara's rich life was held Monday, Aug. 10. at Getz Funeral Home.

Five-week program gives elementary students a jump start

Students entertain parents at Conlee to celebrate completion of K-3+ program

More than 170 students in kindergarten, first, second and third grade completed Conlee Elementary School's third year in the Las Cruces Public Schools K-3+ program with a special evening of student performances at the school on Thursday, Aug. 6.

The program, funded by the New Mexico Legislature and administered by the New Mexico Public Education Department, focuses on literacy, numeracy and social development and is designed to give economically disadvantaged students a "jump start" on the new school year, said LCPS Director of Elemen-tary Instruction Elizabeth J. Marrufo.

Participating schools, including Conlee and six other LCPS elementaries, were selected because at least 85 percent of their students are on the free and reduced lunch program.

The Conlee Elementary cafeteria was completely full as students in all four K-3+ program grades performed for their parents and other relatives. For the first time since the program began at Conlee Elementary, Principal Jennifer Terrazas said she had to limit the number of people attending the closing ceremony to avoid violating the fire code.

"Over the past three years, we have seen our K-3+ program grow from 35 students in 2007 to 90 students in 2008 to almost 200 students this year," she said. "The parents and staff are seeing the difference that five additional weeks of qualityfocused instruction make to our students.

"Our staff is dedicated and chooses to give up five weeks of $their precious \, summer \, to \, serve \, our \,$ students. That is dedication, Our scores are showing significant gains in many areas with growth shown in almost all areas of New Mexico Standards Based Assessment. Without dedicated teachers, educational assistants and custodians, as well as car-ing and supportive parents, this would not have been possible,'

Moonlighting on the course

JOHN KEITH

Sports Editor

I asked Scott Lieberwirth if he's officially the Aggie men's golf coach or if it's merely a cover.

He recently put his job on hold, grabbed his clubs and won the Sun Country PGA regional golf tournament for assistant professionals by 10 strokes. He shot 65-68-72 for a 54hole total of 205, 11-under par. Golf coach?

Yeah, but I got to have a summer job, too," Lieberwirth laughed. "I think I won something like $2,000. I got to make a living somehow.

That, I can believe. Golf coaches do not work for six figure salaries.

Lieberwirth won this tournament on University Golf Course, where his team is headquartered and where he plays often. I call that home field advantage.

He says I'm wrong, that there is no such thing in golf, that every day the course plays differently.

Scott's victory qualified him for the Assistant Professional National Championship in Port St. Lucie, Fla., Oct. 1 to 4.

He does not, he said, need a caddy. I applied, but to no avail.

Lieberwirth said that he will play against approximately 41 PGA sectional champs in Florida.

Scott is a New Mexico State graduate. He played for the Aggies in 1996-2000, winning the Big West Conference championship his junior year and was voted the league's Most Valuable Player as a senior.

He said he is still good enough to hang with the players on his team. That says loads, considering that NMSU won the WAC championship last spring. "I can't hit it as far as they do," Lieberwrith said. "But I'm older and a lot more experienced than they are.

"My bad rounds aren't as bad as theirs are. I don't take the risks they do on the course. I don't make a whole lot of errors. Young guys often do.'

Lieberwirth tries to play whenever possible. "I'm not going to let my

The battle at quarterback for the Aggies right now is between Trevor Walls and Jeff Tanner Rust comes well advertised, but he's a freshman. Good athlete, though. Don't count him out.

Walls, a redshirt freshman and holdover from Hal Mumme's team last year, throws well, is accurate, and, like coach DeWayne Walker said "he's a bigger guy."

There's a problem, however.

"Our style of offense calls for a mobile quarterback," Walker said. "Trevor has a different style. When he's in there, we'll have to alter the offense a little to fit his style.'

Walls, 6-foot-5, 221 pounds from Waverly, Ohio, was recruited to be a pocket passer. That was Mumme's priority.

But he's working hard to adjust to New Mexico State's new attack and he's very much in the mix.

"They say that Jeff runs to run and I run to throw," Walls said. "I guess that's pretty accurate."

Walker said the decision on which of the three candidates winds up No. 1 "might be ongoing, maybe until each one gets some game exposure.

Walls, a good looking, soft spoken electrical engineering major, likes NMSU's new offense. "It's more balanced," he said. Mumme's philosophy was pass on almost every down.

"We're running a pro style offense with more accent on the running game," Walls a physical and mental challenge. It's a yelling, getting in your face technique. "I like it," Walls said. "It's intense. When you make a mistake they let you know about it. Gets you more focused."

When Mumme was fired after last year's 3-9 season, Walls sat tight, waiting to see who would replace his ex coach. "No, I wasn't nervous about who it would be," he said. "I liked coach Mumme. But I'm excited the way things turned out. New coach. New system.'

Walls said he wants the team to win, no matter who plays quarterback. "Me and Jeff room together during two-a-days," Walls said. "Me, Tanner, Jeff, we're all good friends.

It's competitive during practice but we leave it on the field."

The team, he said, is more focused under the new regime. "We're just ready to turn this thing around."

Until pre-season practices are over on Aug. 20, Walls and his teammates belong to Walker. "We have very little time of our own," he said. "After one-a-day practices, we eat dinner then hold meetings and hit the sack. There's curfew. In the mornings we eat breakfast, go to meetings and eat lunch. We meet again, then practice. It doesn't change.'

Trojans no surprise this season

Mayfield considered to be title contender

By Craig Massey

The Mayfield High School volleyball team surprised a lot of other teams on its way to winning the state championship last year.

The Trojans won't be surprising anyone this year.

Mayfield, which was a low seed entering the tournament, got hot at just the right time and steamrolled its way to its second state title in the last five years. With all but one key player coming back, the Trojans are considered a title contender right out of the gate.

"Our expectations last year were to do what we did," said Mayfield coach Michael Sautter. "That's always our goal and it hasn't changed.

"A lot of people will be talking about what we should be doing, but we can't worry about that," added Sautter. "Hopefully, the kids won't listen to the preseason hype. We just need to train hard and prepare for everything. We have a lot of work to do before November."

Experience will be in abundance for the Trojans. Mayfield returns four-year starter Jessica Groen and three-year starters Katie Diaz and Kristen Romney. The 6-foot-2-inch Groen is the only

Ags announce swim schedule

Three home meets highlight promising season for NMSU

After the most successful season in school history, the New Mexico State swimming and diving team returns to the pool in 2009-10 with a very competitive schedule, featuring three home meets and three Pac-10 dual meets, head coach Rick Pratt announced.

The Aggies hope to build on the third-place finish at the WAC Championship a year ago as they begin the new season with the Crimson and White meet on Wednesday,

The Aggies travel to San Jose, Calif., for the WAC Shoot-Out (Oct. 9-10), which is the season opener for the second consecutive year after the inaugural meet was held in Las Cruces.

This year's schedule is unique because we're swimming every school in our conference, including Hawai'i for the first time in a long time at the WAC Shoot-Out, Pratt said. "We also have three nationally ranked Pac-10 programs scheduled, and some great home meets. Dual meets are an exciting way to showcase swimming and perform under pressure, which will help us when we peak for the WAC Championship meet and

Golf tourney moved

Mesa, Ariz. to host WAC

The Western Athletic Conference announced today that the 2010 WAC Women's Golf Tournament will be played at Longbow Golf Club in Mesa, Ariz. The Mesa Convention & Visitors Bureau worked in tandem with the WAC to secure the neutral site for the event that will take place April 19-21, 2009, and will feature the teams from Boise State, Fresno State, Hawai'i, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico State and San Jose State.

"The WAC is extremely pleased to announce the move of our Women's Golf Tournament to Mesa, Arizona and the Longbow Golf Club," said WAC Commissioner Karl Benson. "Our coaches have stressed the importance of a neutral site in recent years and we believe Longbow and the surrounding community will provide a top-notch event for our teams.

The tournament is the first of two WAC championships that will be played in Mesa in 2010. It was announced this past May that the city would host the WAC's baseball tournament for the next three years.

Other kev returnees include two more seniors in libero Bre Diaz and defensive specialist Amanda Medina, and juniors Mariah Lawson, Callie Chambers and Tiffany Diaz.

"Our strengths are experience and volleyball IQ," said Sautter. "And we're a good-sized team. We don't have near as many pieces of the puzzle to put together as we did last year."

Las Cruces High School

The Bulldawgs return all but three starters from last year's District Championship team, but those three players were All-Stars.

Coach Keith Leupold will count heavily on returning three-year starters Cori Perrault and Devon Mulheron, as well as Jessica Gobble, Brigitte Lucero and Sarah Fountain.

"This is a pretty good group overall," said Leupold. "We should be good defensive and good at serve receives and hopefully that will serve us well."

The Bulldawgs began the season at 12:01 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 10. The players brought air mattresses and sleeping bags and slept on the gym floor.

"We did some team-building stuff and played some games," said Leupold. "We've done this before. I like to think we're the first volleyball team in the state to

Oñate High School

Being in the same district - and city - as perennial powers Mayfield and Las Cruces High makes every season a challenge for the Oñate Knights.

"Our biggest obstacle is getting the kids to believe they can win," said Coach Jennifer Jordan. "Confidence is so important and it's always the hardest thing to get."

Jordan begins her second year in charge of the program and she has seen dramatic improvement in her players. Oñate returns six players who saw a lot of action last season. They include seniors Cindelle Rodriguez, Brieanna Lara, Biyisola Oroyinyin, Brianna Leyva and sophomores Ryanne Medore and Kayleigh Mitchell.

"Our seniors all give us good leadership," said Jordan. "And the chemistry is amazing. They do things together outside the gym, too.

"Strength, speed, fundamentals ... all of the kids have improved a lot," she said.

Mesilla Valley Christian Schools

Misti Melendez, a Las Cruces native who has experience coaching volleyball in Kansas, is the new head coach at Mesilla Valley Christian Schools.

The SonBlazers are trying to replace several outstanding players from last year's district championship team.

"This is a rebuilding year," said Melendez. "We have a lot of girls who have never really played on the varsity level before. They'll learn what it is this year and they're going to have to step up."

Key returnees for Mesilla Valley include seniors Cassidy Peterson, Nora Hurad and Rebekah Pelzel and sophomores Merrily Gomez and Aspen Narvaez. Another key player will be Las Cruces High transfer Kristi Krohn, who will become eligible in October.

This is a good group of girls and they're working hard," said Melendez.

Scouting Aggie football

Coming together in two-a-day practices

In less than a month, the Aggie football team will have played two games in the DeWayne Walker era. The workouts through the first week of two-a-day practices have seen the head man challenge his squad to impress him with their desire and with what they have learned.

Walker takes his time with various groups of players and then sits down with them over a film and review session. One drill is the "tough drill." The solid hitting is Walker's way of keeping his team from becoming complacent and lazy about their practice day. He calls it "jump-starting the practice" and has seen it lead to spirited work sessions.

Offensive coordinator Timm Rosenbach is also seeing progress with his side of the ball. Small steps equal progress early in August practice drills. Rosenbach has seen his quarterbacks learning how to control the offense and, thereby, the game. He has added another tight end to his arsenal and he has good size.

Kyle Hipp is in from San Diego at 6-5, carrying 250 pounds, he joins the race for blocking and receiving with Kyle Nelson and Ronny Torres. The quarterback battle has two candidates with experience and a freshman eager to learn. Jeff Fleming appears to be a rambling, scrambling man who has benefited from opportunities to run from the pocket if there is no one open in the patterns. Rosenbach has seen the learning curve increase but wants more consistency as game day approaches.

The defense got a boost with the addition of Branden Warner from Georgia, who attended Compton Junior College. Warner switched from his initial plan of attending UCLA but was happy to stick with Walker when a plan B was needed. If he lives up to his billing, he would be the first blue chip defender for New Mexico State University since Fredd Young. Stopping the opponents will be a new wrinkle in the Aggie attack.

new wrinkle in the Aggie attack.

New Mexico State has had some good defensive players of late but none that would put them in the forefront of the team's image.

The fan-friendly approach at practice isn't likely to change either. "If Pete Carroll can do it, we can do it," is Walker's philosophy in showing his fans what he is building. Although most of the named wide receivers have departed, Marcus Anderson will be flanked by the improving talents of Todd Lee and Julius Fleming as well as the arrival of Marcus Allen, the wide receiver.

I suppose hope springs eternal within my heart at this time of year. This staff with their experience and patience in teaching keeps my opti-

Why you should attend Aggies' soccer opener

NMSU plays host to NM Highlands

There are some reading along who were there with Pete for the first night baseball game at Presley Askew field in the 1990s, and more than a few who were on hand for the first football game in the present day Aggie Memorial Stadium. But this is different in so many ways.

Memorial Stadium.

No one reading this was there for the first football or basketball game played at NMSU but we can all be there for the inauguration of this new sport. This is gonna be a year of firsts at NMSU, ole Pete is certain. I've told you time and again about the work ethic that head coach Michael Needham has put into developing this team. Aggie fans have to take up the same amount of enthusiasm to help build this program to the competitive level of the WAC opponents the Aggies will be facing. It will be easy to be there when the door opens for the first time. It is something else to give the program love with your attendance over the course of this and coming years.

I see the good folks who have taken up the cause for Mike Jordan's volleyball team and rallying around the soccer program. That is a good start and the fact that more than 140 season tickets are in the hands of the fans is encouraging too. But again, you have to have it deep in your heart to take to a sport that is new to many potential fans. I won't try to tell you Pete is a learned soccer fan, but I am eager to learn. I have had some prep work from Needham but seeing the real thing is the best way to learn.

All of this goes back to something Pete has told you before. Being a fan at the start of a season is like waiting to go on the biggest, wildest roller coaster at the county fair. You finally get going, you yell, scream, holler and cry a little for the twists and turns the crazy thing takes you through. When your ride ends, you shake your head, take a deep breath and get right back in line to do it all again.

It's true, of course, for all the teams and their seasons, but for an historical event like the birth of a brand new sport, it's time to set down a good foundation. That's true, whether you are building a good house or a winning

he unwritten rules of golf

Golf manners are governed by consideration for others

There is an

that includes

Golf has long been regarded as a genteel game played by polite folks who were not the sort to whack you in the back of the leg with a nine iron, much like a hokey player might do if the ref weren't looking.

No, there has always been a behavioral code – even a fairly common mindset - that separated golf from other competitive endeavors. At Augusta National, for example, where the Masters is perennially played, if you so much as issue a snide remark, such as "Nice yip, Sergio," you are liable to get thrown off the grounds with no questions asked. There is an etiquette to golf that includes everything from little gestures to simply sportsmanlike behavior. Regrettably a lot of golfers are not completely aware of the unwritten

For me there are thee levels or categories of etiquette, mostly based on how familiar you are with the game and how much you care about your fellow rules of the game.

My three species of golfers might be best exemplified by the fans at the Phoenix Open, that wonderful PGA tournament in the winter in Scottsdale on Super Bowl afternoon. The Sunday I was there, police had to disarm a fan because he had a gun in his backpack (level one), there were the over-served fans on the par three 16th hole who were louder than some Super Bowl crowds (level two) and then there were most normal golf fans who followed the players and didn't make a peep when they were swinging (level three).

Deaf ears

Let's start with our first level, the "don't do anything stupid" group, which includes driving motorized carts and making your way around a golf course without drawing attention to yourself.

If you are new to golf, go to the practice range and take some lessons before going out onto the actual golf course. Naturally, this plea is falling of deaf ears, since anyone who would need to know this most likely wouldn't be reading a golf column.

Don't wear gangbanger pants, wifebeater shirt and flipflops to play golf. Don't drive the golf cart into the desert over the protected areas that you really don't care about but others do. I find it really interesting that at New Mexico State University Golf Course they now have electric carts equipped with WiFi signals that shut off the cart motor when the cart is driven off of the defined boundary area. Some idiots try to drive carts into the darndest places.

Also for this group of "golfers," don't bring your toddlers out onto the golf course to chop at the ground with little clubs and think they'll be the next Tiger Woods just because they're your offspring. Other people want to actually play. I know you paid your $40 but there are other people to think about. Again, these are the people who dump their old mattresses at the end of my street and aggressively cut me off in traffic. Level one.

Level two is the "normal behavior" classification, which includes not yacking in my backswing and not stepping in the line of anyone's putt. Most weekend golfers fall into this category and these are folks who play golf for enjoyment, mostly play by the rules (sans an occasional foot wedge or mulligan) and can manage a conversation about the game at the bar.

I have to admit that I was recently playing with a putter-challenged bloke who I thought was in this group, when as we're on the green, this fellow walks up to the cup, stamps down the turf around the hole so it would make a sort of funnel into the cup and then sank his putt. I was horrified. You never know

It should be routine for normal, courteous golfers to repair their divots in the fairways, fix ball marks on the greens, rake the bunkers and stay quiet when other people are about to play. Seems simple, but it isn't.

Show respect

I play with plenty of "experienced" golfers who routinely play out of turn, don't know the rules, have no clue about the options after hitting their ball into a water hazard and have to ask about penalty drops.

Slow play is a penultimate etiquette issue and perhaps the utmost in inconsiderate behavior, since it suggests that not only are you not aware or not considerate of other golfers on the course, you just don't care. Watch others' shots so you can help look for a ball in hiding. Shake hands after the match. Pay all bets promptly. Ask yourself, "does my attire show my respect for the game?"

Every golfer should aspire to level three in golfing etiquette. Maybe the best practical guide to golf etiquette has been written by a gentleman by the name of Peter Post, the great-grandson of manners-maven Emily Post.

It's "Playing Through: A Guide to the Unwritten Rules of Golf.'

As in everyday life, Post looks at golf manners like any manners in life, governed by a consideration for other people. I notice this seems to be less and less common on the golf course.

Believing that golf is "the measure of who you are," Post urges us to practice sportsmanship, courtesy and respect while enjoying the beauty of the natural surroundings along with the joy of camaraderie of our playing partners. This book would make a great gift for a golfer you know.

My favorite quote in "Playing Through" is:

DR. CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

"Unfortunately, when it comes to golf etiquette, some people are beyond help.

In the book, Post discusses "a time to talk and a time to keep quiet," an issue that piques my interest, along with pointers on cell phones. What permitted me to make peace with cell phones on the golf course was a call I got recently informing me that one of my geriatric patients had told the nurse she intended to kill herself. This was immediately after I wanted to slash my wrists after yipping a four-footer. We all have to remember that phones come with a "vibrate" feature

Anger management

For our experienced players who should have graduated to the most sophisticated etiquette class, I'd like to remind you that temper tantrums are not permitted.

An occasional verbal outburst – OK. But regular club-throwing, swearing and emotional outbursts and $flare-ups-not\ OK.\ I'll\ refer\ you\ to\ anger\ management$ therapy. You don't make friends and impress others by spinning out of control, and you'll create an image of "bad boy" golfer, especially if you're playing business golf.

Here are a few afterthoughts on behavior and etiquette. Play the tee markers the fit your game, ego aside. Tip adequately if not generously. Be nice to volunteers, golf course employees and your companions. Think twice before you actually lodge a formal complaint – you may be wrong. Play by the rules of golf, or some semblance there-of. Example: don't keep playing your ball when it has been hit out of bounds. Tend the flagstick when you are done putting; don't just throw a ball down to practice. Stand somewhere other than directly behind the golfer playing keep out of his vision line. Avoid walking in the throughline of anyone's putt – that's the six feet past the hole where a ball might go. Try not to make any sudden moves while someone is hitting or preparing to hit their shot. In a word, just make like a traditional tour caddy, show up (on time); keep up and shut up. Or, as Post cautions, just saying "fore" doesn't excuse you from behaving properly.

Aggies host Highlands in soccer on Saturday

It'll be a first in school history

The New Mexico State soccer team takes the field for the first time in school history at 2 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 15, at Aggie Memorial Stadium, when the club hosts New Mexico Highlands in an exhibition match.

"The group is really looking forward to playing some outside competition on Saturday," head coach Michael Needham said. "We have been competing every day and getting to know each other. The next challenge for us is to put it all together in a

The inaugural class consists of 29 players including 20 freshmen, five sophomores, two juniors and two seniors. New Mexico natives lead the Aggie roster with eight athletes, including three local residents. New Mexico State has six Californians on the team and five Texans as well as three El Paso transplants

The Aggies have the second and final home exhibition match of the season at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 18, against University of the Southwest. NMSU hosts seven home matches this year and opens the regular season at UTEP, Friday, Aug. 21.

"This is an exhibition game, so we will be trying a number of different things on both sides of the ball," Needham said. "I have been truly impressed with the level of support we have received to this point and have explained it to the players, but this is a great opportunity for the fans to show the players what Las Cruces and Aggie Fans are all about.

This fishing report has been generated from the best information available from officers and anglers. Conditions encountered after the report is compiled may differ, however, as stream, lake and weather conditions alter fish and angler activities.

Night terrors eased by gentle, assured comforting

DR. JAMES DOBSON

Focus on the Family

My son certainly fits your definition of the "strong-willed child." But tell me how to get him through these tough years. He is tough as nails. What specific suggestions do you have for us?

Here is a summary of some approaches or ideas that I think are important:

- 1. You should not blame yourself for the temperament with which your child was born. He (or she) is simply a tough kid to handle, and your task is to rise to the challenge.
- 2. He is in greater danger because of his inclination to test the limits and scale the walls. Your utmost diligence and wisdom will be required to deal with him.
- 3. If you fail to understand his lust for power and independence, you can exhaust your resources and bog down in guilt. It will benefit no one.
- 4. For parents who have just begun, take charge of your babies. Hold tightly to the reins of authority in the early days, and build an attitude of respect during your brief window of opportunity. You will need every ounce of "awe" you can get during the years to come. Once you have established your right to lead, begin to let go systematically, year by year.
- 5. Don't panic, even during the storms of adolescence. Better times are ahead.
- 6. Don't let your son get too far from you emotionally. Stay in touch. Don't write him off, even when every impulse is to do just that. He needs you now more than ever before.
 7. Give him time to find himself, even if he appears
- not to be searching.
- 8. Most importantly, I urge you to hold your children before the Lord in fervent prayer throughout their years at home. I am convinced that there is no other source of confidence and wisdom in parenting. There is not enough knowledge in the books, mine or anyone else's, to counteract the evil that surrounds our kids today. Teenagers are confronted by drugs, alcohol, sex and foul language wherever they turn. And, of course, the peer pressure on them is enormous. We must bathe them in prayer every day of their lives. The God who made your children will hear your petitions. He has promised to do so. After all, He loves them more than you do.

And a concluding word: remember that anyone can raise the easy kid. Guiding a strong-willed child through the rebellious years takes a pro with a lot of love to give. I'll bet you're up to the task.

Did either of your children experience night

No, but our daughter once had a very unusual nightmare. When she was 4 years old, she woke up screaming at about midnight. When I came to her bed, she told me excitedly that the wall was about to collapse on her.

"It's falling! It's falling, Daddy! The wall is falling!" she screamed

She was obviously very frightened by the dream. I took her hand and said, "Danae, feel that wall. It has been there a long time. It isn't going to fall. You are OK. Now go back to sleep."

As she settled down in the covers, I went back to bed and was quickly asleep again. But six hours later, a powerful earthquake rattled the city of Los Angeles and shook my wife and me right out of bed. I rushed to Danae's room to bundle her up and get her out of the way of that wall, which was jumping and shaking like crazy.

Did our 4-year-old have some kind of forewarning of the earthquake in the midnight hours? I don't know, but I'll tell you this: I made up my mind that day to believe her the next time she told me the wall was going to fall.

The September performance of the "St. Paul" will be the first performance of this dramatic oratorio in the Las Cruces area. For more information, contact Minister of Music Doug Weeks at 526-6689.

Looking Back

This week in the history # of the Mesilla Valley **

MARVIN TESSNEER Out of the Past

75 years ago 1934 • Drought shut down many irrigation systems and slowed down the Elephant Butte Irrigation District deliveries. But Mesilla Valley farmers had adequate water for their alfalfa and other crops, Rio Grande Project Manager L.R. Fiock reported. Elephant Butte Reservoir held 628,000 acrefeet compared with 1.3 million acre-feet the feet compared with 1.3 million acre-feet the previous year at the same time. The reservoir level had dropped 34 feet, seven feet during June and eight feet during July. The Rio Grande snow runoff had slowed down to 218 cubic-feet-per-second during May at San Marcial, and then the flow dried up.

- The Women's Improvement Society appointed a committee to discuss the possibility of building a local hospital. Its members Mrs. O.H. Brown, Mrs. Charles Happel and Mrs. Frank Islas.
- From April to July, the Doña Ana Welfare Office, 30 local stores and the federal government donated food to 2,514 families. The amounts listed were 13,300 pounds of pork, 5,198 pounds of beef, 890 pounds of beans, 48,000 pounds of flour, 1,758 pounds of lard and 2,820 pounds of cheese.

50 years ago 1959

- The County Health Department reported two cases of poliomyelitis, one boy and one male adult, bringing the year's total of confirmed or suspect cases to nine.
- El Paso Electric Company reported having 7,274 residential customers in Las Cruces, and, by using a multiple of 4.1, that brought the estimated city population up to about 29,800.

- The federal government increased an initial grant of $166,209 to $315,678 to build a new junior high school on the east side and to enlarge the high school
- The Las Cruces National Guard unit, which was attached to the 716th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion, left for training on the Oro Grande Firing Range.
- 25 years ago
- Heavy rains and flash floods from arroyos forced 12 Sunland Park families to leave their homes and find temporary shelter in a former school building that was provided by the county. Flooding also reached some homes in Chaparral and Anthony and closed state Highway 478.
- The Las Cruces Public Schools named three new principals: Martha Cole, Valley View Elementary; Mary Helen Garcia, East Picacho Elementary, and Cecilia Lujan Pincomb, Hillrise Elementary.

- More than 60 teams were competing in the Girls 12-and-Under Fast Pitch National Tournament at Maag Park.
- 10 years ago 1999
- Farmers were estimating a 50 percent chile crop loss as spotty rains, ranging from 5 to 13 inches, were leaving standing water in the furrows. The water was depriving plants of oxygen, causing root rot and emitting hot vapor under the plants, making them susceptible to mildew.
- The Mesilla Board of Trustees administered the oath of office to Nora Barraza, the newly appointed board member succeeding Jo Anna Maese who had resigned to fill the position of town clerk and treasurer.
- Desert Groves, an affiliate of Stahmann Farms, opened a gift shop in the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

© CROHN'S AND ULCERATIVE COLITIS SUPPORT GROUP

Crohn's and Ulcerative Colitis are collectively known as Irritable Bowel Disease or IBD. As many as 1 million Americans have IBD and both illnesses are similar. They are marked by an abnormal response by the body's immune system and include chronic inflammation of the intestines. There are no cures, but management of the diseases includes medications, diet and surgery.

The primary symptoms are fatigue, painful intestinal cramping and diarrhea. The support group focuses on sharing coping strategies and listening to each other. It is an opportunity to be with others who understand the nature of long-term illness. The Crohn's and Ulcerative Colitis support group meets from 3 to 5 p.m. the second Sunday of every month in the Community Education Room of MountainView Regional Medical Center, 4311 E. Lohman Ave.

The support group is sponsored by the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of America (www.ccfa.org). For more information about the Crohn's and Colitis support group, call Jo Tice Bloom at 382-0722.

Local doctors express opposition

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

As part of a community organized, nonpartisan forum on the proposed health care reform legislation, America's Affordable Healthcare Choices Act of 2009, Las Crucens gathered, along with a panel of local medical experts, at the Court Youth Center, 402 W. Court Ave., Tuesday, Aug. 11, to discuss and clarify the possible outcomes of the proposed plan.

The forum was coordinated by private citizens and represented a broad perspective of the health care plan. The panel was comprised of Drs. Anthony Levatino, Denise Leonardi and Terry McMillan, as well as Angie Carver, a certified nurse practitioner. Although all viewpoints were open for discussion, the majority of those present were opposed to the proposed legislation. One aspect of the Affordable Healthcare Choices Act seeks to create affordable health care for the nation's 45 million uninsured by implementing a single, government-controlled health care system.

Those opposing the legislation, including all members of the panel, said they were against the plan because of its vague nature, in addition to its possible lean toward a single-payer system. Many present said they believed the legislation is being rushed at the risk of overlooking other options.

How much is a trillion?

The Congressional Budget Office anticipates the plan to cost $1.04 trillion, much of which will come out of the pockets of all Americans, McMillan said.

Levatino said the proposed budget of more than $1 trillion dollars is an unfeasible amount of money that would have great impact on the nation. The proposal is so massive, he said it doesn't make any difference where the money would come from, it would still affect every American.

"From the original Christmas day, when Christ was born, if you spent $1 million every single day without fail until today, you would not have spent a trillion dollars," Levatino said.

Those present expressed concern that the legislation will affect the private insurance industry – as well as employers who do not provide health care – by creating a bureaucratic system.

Levatino said he was mainly concerned the legislation was intentionally vague, because it is the government's attempt to control America's health and well-being.

Not an easy read

"Reading through it is like stirring concrete with your eyelashes," Levatino said of the lengthy legislation. "My overall impression is that this is one gigantic piece of legislation enabling the administration to set up opportunities for controlling health care."

Leonardi said she didn't believe in the bill because of its potential negative impact on the overall quality of the health care system.

"When I look at it – the goal of covering 45 million of the uninsured – it means we're going to have to cut services and I think choice will be diminished," Leonardi said. "I understand the need for basic coverage for all citizens, but I'm concerned about the lack of choice that will affect us down the road."

Much of the opinions the panel expressed were reaffirmed with applause from the majority of those present, many of them elderly Las Crucens. The forum at times represented a church service as shouts of "Amen!" rang throughout the meeting room.

Very few residents had perspectives contrary to the opinions of the majority and the panel; however, those few opposing viewpoints were quickly silenced with shouts and jeers from the audience. One audience member also complained that the forum and panel was not evenly represented

Las Cruces resident Darell Hall expressed concern about the hasty nature of the bill.

"I read the entire bill and I thought about the monumental problem that we are trying to race to some conclusion within a few months time, but we haven't had a chance to break it down. You could talk about each section for a year or two, but I see no input from insurance companies, doctors and other health care providers — I see only politicians who have an agenda," Hall said.

When asked about the uninsured and the underprivileged who currently cannot afford health insurance, Levatino argued that of the 45 million uninsured Americans, approximately 9 to 10 million people already qualify for medical insurance, Medicaid or other programs but are not applying.

He also mentioned the 9 to 10 million people who are transitioning between insurance programs and jobs. Additionally, he said about 10 to 15 million of the uninsured are illegal aliens.

The panel encouraged the community to contact members of congress and ask for bipartisan cooperation, less government control over health care and a discontinuation of health care provided for illegal residents.

Citizens interested in expressing concern may contact Congressman Harry Teague at 522-3908, Sen. Jeff Bingaman at 523-6561, or Sen. Tom Udall at 526-5474. A copy of the bill in its entirety is available at www.opencongress.com.

H1N1 death confirmed

State's first victim is high-risk woman

The New Mexico Department of Health announced Monday, Aug. 10, that it has confirmed the state's first death caused by H1N1 influenza.

The 45-year-old female from Sierra County had end-stage liver disease and had been hospitalized since July 25. She died over the weekend.

"Our condolences go out to her family and friends," said Health Secretary Dr. Alfredo Vigil. "She was in the high-risk category for developing complications from H1N1, and we are investigating how she may have contracted the virus."

The Department of Health is planning mass vaccination clinics for H1N1 influenza when vaccine becomes available. The U.S. Center for Disease Control and Prevention expects to begin shipping vaccine as early as mid-October. This year, people need to get vaccinated against H1N1 flu and seasonal flu.

"The best step you can take to protect yourself and your family from influenza is to get vaccinated. This is especially important if you are at high risk for developing complications," Vigil said. "We are carefully monitoring H1N1 disease in New Mexico and will keep (the public) informed of new developments with the spread of disease, availability of vaccine and health officials' recommendations."

Who's at risk

CDC's Advisory Committee recently issued recommendations about priority groups for H1N1 vaccination. The recommendations target people who are the most likely to develop complications from H1N1 flu and or spread the disease to vulnerable individuals. They are:

- · Pregnant women
- People who live with or care for children younger than 6 months old
- · Children and young adults age 6 months through 24 years
- Health care workers and emergency services personnel
- People age 25 through 64 years who have health conditions associated with higher risk of medical complications from influenza

Avoiding the flu

Suggestions from the World Health Organization on how to prevent the spread of H1N1 include:

- · Avoid touching your mouth and nose
- Clean hands thoroughly and regularly with soap and water or an alcohol-based hand rub (especially if touching the mouth and nose, or surfaces that are potentially contaminated)
- Avoid close contact with people who might be ill
- Reduce the time spent in crowded settings if possible
- İmprove airflow in your living space by opening windows
- Practice good health habits including adequate sleep, eating nutritious food and keeping physically active.

Stop the spread of germs that make you and others sick!

Top Volunteens are recognized at Memorial Medical Center

Angel Guerrero and William Hendricks were named Memorial Medical Center Junior Volunteens for the year at the summerending ice cream social on July 31.

There are two categories for Junior Volunteens of the Year: summer-only and year-round. Guerrero won the summer-only award for his work in the Imaging Services Department. Hendricks won the year-round award for his second year of service in the Emergency Department.

More than 60 teenagers ages 14 to 17, volunteered with the MMC Auxiliary Summer Volunteen program, which began June 1 and ran through the end of July.

This year's group of Volunteens worked more than 4,000 hours, the highest number of hours worked in a summer since the auxiliary has been keeping track. The Volunteens helped in multiple service areas of the hospital, including admissions, the gift shop and the information desk.

"A young person's life is like a piece of paper, and their service at Memorial Medical Center will leave a caring positive mark. The young people who choose to participate in the Junior Volunteen Program are appreciated for giving their time, talent and energy to make a difference," said Director of Auxiliary Services Lynda Taylor.

Both Guerrero and Hendricks will be submitted to the statewide competition. Last year, the MMC summer-only nominee won the New Mexico Hospitals and Health Systems Association's 2008 Youth Volunteer of the Year.

By JONATHAN BUTZ The Las Cruces Bulletin

In its continuing efforts to help children of underprivileged families, Jardin de Los Niños is implementing the "Tía Project," a donation drive that seeks to provide diapers for children in need.

Due to an increase in the number of homeless families, Jardin volunteer Carleene Wimberly said the project is greatly needed, as there has been an increased demand for help.

"We decided to start this project again because there is such a need," Wimberly said. "Many clients of Jardin can't afford such basic essentials, and we're here to step in as Tías and

Tía and Tío are Spanish for aunt and uncle, but in this case, refers to those who are willing to step up to serve as friends to these families in need.

Community members who are interested in becoming a Tía or Tío are asked to drop off packages of diapers and baby wipes at the Community of Hope or La Tienda de Jardin, the nonprofit's thrift store. All sizes and styles of diapers are accepted and participants may bring as many or as little diapers as possible.

"We're not making it difficult," Wimberly

She said they wanted to make it easy for people to help with the diaper program, adding that people can simply pick up a pack of diapers or wipes at the grocery store, and stop by on the way home from Jardin founder Sister Beth Dadio said the program will be a great asset to the community.

"Anytime we get involved in the community and give to children and families in need, it's a wonderful thing," Dadio said.

Sister Dadio began Jardin de los Niños - a nonprofit center for homeless and near-homeless children in the Mesilla Valley – along with the late Sister Anna Waldschmitt in 1995 at the Holy Cross Church. After expanding its services, the organization moved to its permanent home at the Community of Hope, 999 W. Amador Ave.

Jardin is a full-service program not only for children, but also for parents. As a National Association of the Education of the Young Child (NAEYC) accredited program, the childcare component of the nonprofit provides daily care for children ages 6 weeks to 6 years. This includes developmental evaluations, play therapy, on-site health care and referrals.

The Family Program offers services such as case management, a family support team, parenting and health sessions and arts and crafts.

As a way to grow its connection to the community, Jardin opened La Tienda de Jardin in May 2009. Run solely by volunteers, the boutique-like thrift store offers a wide-selection of items, including toys, kitchen accessories, furniture and clothing. All proceeds go to support Jardin de los Niños.

La Tienda de Jardin is located at 335 La Colonia Ave., on the corner of Main Street and Alameda Boulevard. It is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturdays. Anyone interested in becoming a "Tío" or "Tía" may call

City partially settles suit with Philippou

Public to benefit

The City of Las Cruces announced Monday, Aug. 10, a partial settlement stemming from lawsuits it filed against local developer Philip Philippou. The settlement resolves two of three lawsuits the city filed against Philippou seeking compliance with its subdivision requirements.

The initial settlement results in Philippou conveying to the city clear title to approximately $530,000 in Philippou-owned real estate.

In return, the city releases for development, 48 to 50 residential lots Philippou owns.

"The release of the lots is a direct benefit to the public, because those lots are ready for – or were already in the process of – being developed for first-time homeowners," said Mayor Ken Miyagishma. "While it's the City's desire to resolve outstanding issues with Mr. Philippou, it's also important that the families waiting to get into their new homes, many of whom stand to benefit from the first-time homebuyer incentive offered under the federal stimulus package, be allowed to proceed with their plans."

The city said by allowing construction to proceed on the lots, it is helping increase local economic activity.

In addition to releasing the lots, the city will permit previously terminated utility service to those lots; and will dismiss a judgment the city won against Philippou in Las Cruces Municipal Court stemming from a sewer line issue in the North Fork Arroyo.

"While the City has made significant progress in its legal dealings with Philippou, there is more to resolve," said Assistant City Manager Robert Garza. "Still outstanding are numerous Philippou-owned lots in eight subdivisions within the city," Garza said.

Garza said both parties continue to negotiate in good faith so that unresolved issues can be settled quickly.

Philippou is still involved in litigaton with Golf Works Inc., an Austinbased golf course development and construction company he allegedly hired to help build the Sierra Norte Golf Course on the East Mesa – a project that has been delayed.

Teague hosts town halls to spur more reform discussion

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ

On July 25, President Barack Obama said creating an insurance exchange program for small businesses along with tax credits – provisions included in the latest health care reform bill – would help cover the 13 million or so uninsured small-business employees.

On Monday, Aug. 10, speaking to a group of small business owners at the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces, U.S. Rep. Harry Teague said health care reform "can't be paid for on the backs of small businesses alone.

"I sure hope we are able to put in the right incentives, so people can feel comfortable starting a small business," he added.

The White House Council of Economic Advisers released a study July 25 that concluded many of the nation's small businesses lack the bargaining power to secure affordable health insurance rates, and as a result, pay as much as 18 percent more for employee plans, leaving millions uninsured.

As the health care debate rages in Washington, D.C., local small business owners are left wondering if a health insurance mandate is imminent and if they'll be able to bear the burden of the new taxes.

town hall meeting hosted by U.S. Rep. Harry Teague Monday, Aug. 10, at the Hispano Chamber of Commerce de Las Cruces.

'Reality check'

Al Perez, President of Ariel Technologies, a local designer and manufacturer of fiber-laser applications, said health care reform is "absolutely needed," but thinks the White House's proposed plan will eliminate the private health insurance market.

"I printed off the entire (1,018 page) bill," Perez said. "While going through it, I found there is too much of a burden on small businesses. This plan will lead to a single-payer system."

A single-payer insurance system, as used in Australia, Canada and Taiwan, is an approach to health care financing with only one source of money for paying health care providers—in Perez's reference, the government would be the single payer.

"What the (White House) has laid out on what insurance companies can and can't do — mostly what they can't do — will drive them out of business and lead to a single-payer government-run system," he said. "There will be

Work to revamp Downtown continues

Regional TIDD not raising enough money

By GABRIEL VASQUEZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Las Cruces Downtown Tax Increment Development District "isn't bringing in a whole lot of money right now."

That was the message delivered by Downtown Development Coordinator William Slettom to Downtown business owners and proprietors Thursday, Aug. 6, during the monthly Downtown Business Breakfast.

The Downtown TIDD, approved by the city and county in 2006, requires around 150 businesses in the Downtown district to report their gross receipt and property taxes to a specific Tax and Revenue account that directs 75 percent of GRT and property tax growth since 2006 to be used to help fund Downtown revitalization. The problem, Slettom said, is only about 39 Downtown businesses have contributed to the fund since its inception.

"This is not optional," Slettom said. "This money is used to build a fund, issue bonds and make infrastructure improvements."

The Downtown TIDD doesn't require business owners in the district to pay a higher tax rate, just to report their GRT and property taxes to a different tax and revenue code.

"This has no impact on you or your businesses," said provide electricity without charge? And cell phones will be available for free? This is a recipe to wipe out the insurance industry.

According to the White House's website, under the "Consumer Protections" link at www. whitehouse.gov/realitycheck, insurance companies would have to abide by the following rules under the new bill:

- No discrimination for preexisting conditions
- No exorbitant out-of-pocket expenses, deductibles or co-pays
- No cost sharing for preventative care
- No gender discrimination
- No annual or lifetime caps on coverage
- Guaranteed insurance renewal This is a reality check," Perez said. "It all leads to a singlepayer system."

Talking taxes

Perez, who has 20 employees, said he has recently opted out of offering health benefit packages to his employees, but offers them instead "in-lieu" benefit packages based on his employees' tenure.

The longer they've been with us, the more we pay them," said. "We have some people, that because of their longevity, are making $1,500 a month in in-lieu benefits.

Perez said if government were to place a health insurance tax mandate on his business, which under the proposed bill would require businesses paying $500,000 to $750,000 per year or more in payroll to pay an 8 percent tax, he would be forced to cut his staff and reduce his workers' hours to make up for money lost. "I'd have to possibly get rid of employees," he said.

Companies with total annual wages below $500,000 would pay no tax penalty under the proposed reform.

But is it enough to win over anxious small businesses? No, said Anna Emerick-Biad, sales and marketing director for Biad Chili Products, which employs about 80 workers during its peak season.

"I'm a very detail-oriented person, and I'd like to see more on how this would affect us before supporting a health care bill such as the one that's on the table," she said. "My biggest concern is how the bill would be paid for. In our current economy, we need to be careful how we spend our money, and I just don't see how the government is going to pay for this bill."

Biad added that she lacks confidence in the federal government's ability to run an efficient health care system, "as they have not efficiently run organizations such as MediCare and Social Security," she said.

What makes the government feel they can now run health care when they can't keep up with what they already have on their plate?" Biad, who also attended Teague's forum, said she was appreciative of the congressman's efforts to get feedback from his constituents but feels that "none of the questions were answered in detail," and there needs to be more dialogue in the community.

'I still think the general public has no clue as to how this bill would work," she said.

A doc's perspective

Dr. Anthony Levatino, a local physician who specializes in obstetrics and gynecology, said he supports health care reform, but doesn't buy into the White House's current plan.

They say that we can't afford to do nothing, so we need this bill right now," Levatino said. "But the president and the Democratic leadership are presenting us a false choice. We need reform, but not necessarily this reform."

Levatino said two critical components of true health care reform have yet to be addressed.

"No. 1, there needs to be reform of the medical liability system,' he said. "One out of every four dollars is being spent defensively in medicine. It's eating us alive as practitioners in Las Cruces. We need to reform that system.

Second, Levatino said, is to change health insurance from being an employer-provided benefit.

There's a lot of good things in the current bill, like the insurance exchange system and having companies compete against one another," he said, "but again, you could not possibly reform health care without addressing the liability system. The president isn't going to touch that.'

Levatino, who also attended Teague's health care forum Monday, said he thought the dialogue between business owners and elected officials should be ongoing, but more direct.

"(Teague) consciously made an effort to do more listening than talking," Levatino said. "I asked him some very specific questions ... which he didn't answer. But the meeting was respectful and I thought it was very good of the congressman to be there. I look forward to talking with the congressman again.'

What's next?

Obama, at a town hall meeting in New Hampshire on Tuesday, Aug. 11, said he "welcomes vigorous debate" on the issue. There's likely to be plenty more discussion, as Congress has missed the chance to pass health care reform before the summer recess. That means lawmakers in their home districts will have to listen to their constituents in various ways, whether it is civilized town hall meetings or angry protests.

think that each town hall meeting has to start off by dispelling some of the misinformation that people bring up that is very obvious," said Roque Garcia, CEO of Rio Grande Behavioral Health. "I'm very surprised that many times these people are told it's not true and they still choose to believe it."

Obama had urged for floor votes on the reform prior to the summer recess to keep the bills from being bogged down, but that did not happen.

"Something has to change, and I think the sooner the better," Garcia said. "The person that has to consider every possibility before taking a step spends their life on one foot. We need to take action. We can't get everything perfect on this. We need to do it now or else we'll never do anything."

Teague is expected to continue hosting town hall meetings across southern New Mexico in the coming weeks.

"There is a lot of misinformation, and people get scared – I don't blame them," he said. "But the credits and incentives in the health care bill are changing. We just have to wait."

Cindi Fargo, executive director of Las Cruces Downtown. "It's just about changing the code you are reporting to. As you all know, this is a rare opportunity to have a direct impact on where your money goes and see it put to good use.

During the state legislative session earlier this year, the Downtown TIDD was not passed because House Speaker Ben Lujan failed to call it up for vote on the final day of the session.

The proposal, the highest priority legislation for Las Cruces, was sponsored by state Sen. Mary Kay Papen, D-Las Cruces and cruised through Senate Committees unopposed.

Fargo said she was hopeful the proposal would be revived in an upcoming legislative special session, but City Councillor Dolores Connor said it guaranteed" the Downtown TIDD would be voted on.

The state TIDD would have created somewhere around $7 million for revitalization, said Assistant City Manager Robert Garza.

Plans for the Amador Hotel

Also discussed at the breakfast were plans for the 143-year old Amador Hotel, 180 W. Amador Ave.

Jamie Fletcher, elected last month as president of the Amador Museum Foundation, said a study conducted by Cornerstones Community Partnership determined the historic gotel was structurally sound and fit for a variety of uses.

'They said it's a strong building – that it was going to last a long time," Fletcher said. "It needs some cosmetic attention but the structure is sound."

Additionally, an architectural assessment was conducted that confirmed the historic hotel's viability "for the next 20 to 30 years," Fletcher said.

The outcome of several town hall meetings and interviews with local dignitaries was that the hotel should be turned into an event center, with a restaurant and meeting space for local nonprofits, Fletcher added.

That was the feedback we got from the citizenry of Las Cruces - they thought this would be the best use for the hotel," he said. "This is a good way to have a minimal impact on the historic property."

The Amador Hotel is a city landmark, and once served as a safe haven for teamsters and freight travelers going from Chihuahua to Santa Fe. Don Martin Amador built the property for his family in 1866.

Fletcher said the problem with restoring the hotel to its original purpose is that it would have to undergo significant remodeling to add modern-day amenities and features.

"We're trying to keep its historic integrity." he said.

Fletcher will present the recommendations of the Amador Hotel Foundation to the city at a future council meeting, at which time the best use of the historic property will be decided.

We're hoping that in 2012, we can restore the Amador Hotel so that we can throw a big party to celebrate the 100year anniversary of the statehood of New Mexico," he said.

SalsaFest celebration coming

SalsaFest, a celebration of local salsa makers and restaurants, is coming to Downtown Las Cruces for the first time.

Scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 29, SalsaFest promises event-goers an afternoon of "all things salsa," including salsa tasting, a salsa-making competition and salsa music and dancing.

People will be coming out of their own kitchens, with their own ingredients and making salsa at the event," Fargo said. "Restaurants and vendors will also be participating." So far, 30 local "salsa chefs" are scheduled to prepare their fiery concoctions for the event, but organizers are still looking for more, Fargo said. Participants may enter for free and $3 is required to vote for your favorite salsa.

"They say in Las Cruces we don't do things until things move closer to the deadline, so I'm holding my breath," Fargo said. "We're really excited about

Spaceport America begins awarding contracts

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Contracts for construction at Spaceport America are being issued and the New Mexico Spaceport Authority (NMSA) is now soliciting contractor bids to provide the on-site electrical system for the facility.

The NMSA board last week picked contractors for three construction-oriented bid packages:

- $4.8 million to Smithco Construction of Las Cruces to build water utilities, a storage tank and a booster pump
- $2.3 million to AUI Inc. of Albuquerque to build wastewater utilities and a treatment plant
- $778,173 to FNF New Mexico

LLC of Albuquerque to build a fuel storage facility

With Sierra Electric Co-op picked to provide electricity to the spaceport in the desert between Las Cruces and Truth or Consequences, Spaceport America now needs a system to connect onsite infrastructure to the off-site 10-megawatt electrical substation and distribution from a 115 kilovolt transmission line. Interested contractors are encouraged to get details of the bid package and attend a pre-bid conference.

NMSA Executive Director Steve Landeene said the electrical system bid package is critical for the spaceport and its surroundings.

"These utilities will be underground to minimize view shed impacts from the El Camino Real as well as provide a more protected electrical system for Spaceport America operations," Landeene said.

Interested service providers need to attend a mandatory pre-bid conference at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 18, at the Ralph Edwards Civic Center in Truth or Consequences. A tour of the Spaceport America project site will take place immediately after the pre-bid meeting. Cop-

Charles Andrews, director of the Helix Foundation, wanted to make a difference in the community. Through careful consideration, he is doing just that thanks to a land donation to the Community Foundation of Southern New COMMUNITY

When Andrews met with CPA Don Beasley, the two invited CFSNM Executive Director Luan Wagner Burn and Gift Planning Officer Patsy Duran to tell them more about the foundation and the impact they are making in the community. What Andrews heard prompted him to give 24 acres of land, showing that giving back to the community can be diverse and efficient.

"This gift of land illustrates the variety and diverse nature of gifts the Board of Directors may accept for the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico," Burn said. "This is just one type of planned gift giving individuals may make that will positively impact our community."

The land is located on the East Mesa, adjacent to Bureau of Land Management (BLM) land with a spectacular view of the Organ Mountains. The more than 24 acres of land will eventually be sold and the proceeds will be used for charitable

Because the gift is an unrestricted gift, the CFSNM Board of Directors will determine how best to use it.

Andrews and his family are no strangers to giving. Over the years, they have made substantial gifts to the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, with the intention to keep their gift giving local. The CFSNM has launched a two-part $500,000 campaign to help 32 local nonprofits in southern New Mexico who need emergency funds in order to provide services in the hard economic times and build long-term sustainability. One part of the campaign will provide emergency funds for the 32 nonprofit that have endowments with the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico while the other half is designated for FOUNDATION a matching fund to build the endowments of the nonprofits, therefore building long-term sustainability.

Gifts, like the one from Andrews and his family, support the foundation's mission of helping donors do good, forever.

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Founded in 2000, the CFSNM uses knowledge to help connect people who care with causes that matter. Donors are encouraged to inquire about donating to the Nonprofit Economic Crises Campaign. Call the CFSNM at 521-4794 or visit www.cfsnm.org for information about making a charitable contribution to your community or to see the nonprofit endowments within the Foundation.

Andrews' land gift

The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico will soon be selling a generous gift of land from Charles Andrews with the following features:

Recession adversely affecting state revenues

No good alternatives present themselves

Last year, state lawmakers faced with falling revenues cut government services by 9 percent. Now, new forecasts are expected to indicate the need for another 5 to 6 percent in cuts. How to cover these new revenue shortfalls is not obvious Covering shortfalls by cutting additional government services is a painful prospect, considering the cuts made during New Mexico's last legislative session. While the national recession has affected state revenues, it has had the opposite effect on the demand for services. Food stamps, TANF, unemployment compensation, training and education are all government programs for which demand traditionally increases during recessions. This recession is no exception.

Increasing taxes is a possible solution. An obvious idea would be to reverse the income tax cuts enacted during Gov. Bill Richardson's first term. Increasing taxes on natural gas or oil production is also a suggested perennial. But raising taxes – never popular is a particularly dubious proposition during a recession. Businesses and consumers are already facing tough times. Higher taxes could further depress spending.

A third idea is to draw down operating reserves. The feasibility of doing this critically depends on whether or not the economy recovers in the next 12 months.

The state constitution forbids the state from running a deficit. Operating reserves are meant to meet modest shortfalls that might arise over the course of the fiscal year. But once reserves are used up, the only alternative is to cut spending.

If the economy turns around, then drawing down reserves would allow state government to continue providing services without increasing taxes. But this option means paring reserves down to dangerously low levels, somewhere in the neighborhood of 5 percent. Should the recession turn for the worse, spending would have to be cut dramatically. After all, a 5 percent budget cut forced into six months is harder to pull off than a 5 percent cut spread over a year.

So it comes down to this. The choice between tax increases, spending cuts and using reserves depends critically on the outlook of the national economy. There is growing evidence that the national economy has turned the corner, moving from recession into recovery, but how strong the recovery will be is an open question. The consensus is for growth during the next 12 months of around 2.5 percent. Should the national economy recover and should this increase demand for oil and natural gas, the state budget shortfall could disappear quickly. But predicting such an outcome before it happens is problem-

So what will the Legislature do? Chances are, they will cut programs and also use operational reserves to cover shortfalls. A tax increase seems less likely. Hopefully, the economic recovery evident in the national economy will have gained sufficient momentum by the time of the special session, and program cuts will be relatively modest

USDA acts to help dairies survive

Dairy farmers win price support

By Marvin Tessneer

Following a meeting with U.S. Sen. Tom Udall and U.S. Rep. Harry Teague, Secretary of Agriculture Tom Vilsack said the United States Department of Agriculture has agreed to extend Dairy Product Price Support Payments (DPPSP) to help New Mexico dairy farmers.

The DPPSP increases will extend through October and the USDA estimates they will increase dairy farmers' income by $243 million.

"I am pleased that the USDA will be doing more to help New Mexico dairy farmers weather today's incredibly tough conditions," Udall said. "I am also pleased that they chose to do this in the way that I requested, not by relying on programs that do not do enough to help New Mexico farmers.

I want to thank Secretary Vilsack for taking the time to meet with me and my colleagues and for agreeing to our request for additional assistance."

Udall's office estimates the extension will increase the price for nonfat dry milk from 92 cents per pound to .97 cents, from $1.31 to $1.40 for cheddar blocks and from $1.28 to $1.37 for cheddar barrels.

"Today's announcement is a critical step in addressing the needs of New Mexico's dairy farmers so they can continue to employ workers across the state, provide healthy and nutritious food for our families and contribute to the economic recovery of our nation," said Teague, the congressional Dairy Farmers Caucus vice chairman.
The USDA Agricultural Market Service reported:

"Dairy programs assist the dairy industry by producing stability and orderliness in the dairy market place, while at the same time assuring the availability of an adequate supply of high-quality milk and dairy products for United State consumption."

Sharon Lombardi, executive director for the Dairy Producers of New Mexico, explained the difficulty of setting the right prices.

"Dairy pricing is extremely complex, and the dairy industry has to look at all of the formulas that are used by the USDA because they will affect all dairy farmers, not just in New Mexico," she said. "Dairy products are the No. 1 agriculture commodity in New Mexico, and what happens to dairies will affect the entire state economy."

The average New Mexico dairy farm produces 44 million pounds of milk per year, which have an estimated value of $5.8 million dollars, according to the New Mexico State University Dairy Extension.

New Mexico has 166 dairy farms, down from 173 in 2008, which employ more than 4,200 people. New Mexico also has the largest average herd size -2,000cows – in the nation, and ranks seventh nationally in milk production, the Dairy Producers of New Mexico reported.

Doña Ana county has 20 dairy farms, according to the USDA Market Administrator's Report.

Dairy MAX, which represents about 1,250 dairy farmers in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, sees the extension as a critical development. "This step by the USDA will raise farm level milk prices at a critical time and is another important effort that the USDA has made to help dairy farmers survive the worst recession in their lifetime," said Teresa Wagner, Dairy MAX media spokesperson. "We appreciate the attention that this issue has gotten in Washington, the USDA and in Congress.'

Dairy farmers are watching the price support extension to see how it will actually benefit their programs.

"I'm losing $3.50 a day per cow, so what I get in price support money is gone in three days," Mesquite dairyman Joe Gonzalez said. "What kind of help is that?"

He said in an earlier dairy industry report that in 1986 dairymen had received an average of $12.81 hundred weight of milk, and this year the price has dropped to $12.12 per hundred weight.

Dairymen also are cutting back on their herds. "You've got to sell cows to pay the payroll and bills because the money you were paid for milk isn't coming," Gonzalez said.

Questions for the mature woman

ALAN UMSTEAD Senior Finance

It happens to many women trying to live with modest incomes, desperately trying to keep up with everyday expenses.

The cost of medical care, utilities and housing are rising and can be overwhelming. Many women do not expect to live through their retirement years in financial hardship, but it's a fact of life for a growing number of our mothers, sisters and friends.

Women's retirement incomes are generally lower than men's. Adding to the problem of reduced retirement dollars is a generally longer lifespan, creating a situation in which women are quickly outliving their savings.

Of all retirees, women should be the most diligent in terms of the safety and security of their money. There is less room for error and a greater need for competent financial advice. An effective retirement plan should be ongoing during the working years and into retirement.

If a woman in your life is retired or nearing retirement, or perhaps you are that woman, there are certain financial questions to answer. I have listed a few questions to start discussing and thinking about. In the No. 1 spot is the question that seems to be the most vital for all

1. Are you concerned about outliving your savings? Will you be able to pay your bills? While there is no right answer for every situation, exploring the purchase of an annuity might make sense. An annuity can guarantee a monthly income for the entire life of a loved one. There are many different types of annuities available. A reverse mortgage may also be worth considering if you are age 62 or older. An important note on a reverse mortgage is as long as the homeowner lives in the home, he or she does not have to repay the reverse mortgage. Consult with a financial planner or do some research on your own.

2. Do you have a financial advisor and a tax specialist? To help avoid financial mistakes that could hurt you, you should have a plan to make sure you avoid common pitfalls and misconceptions about money management.

3. How much do you spend each month on prescription drugs? Health care costs can be a major drain on your retirement dollars and savings. Sadly, health care costs can deplete your savings. Medicare Part D offers some relief, but out-of-pocket costs can still drain the bank account.

4. Are you getting the preventive medical care you need to stay as healthy as you can? Don't skip doctor's visits and other preventative measures if possible. Again, the outof-pocket costs can be expensive, but this is one area where you should be getting all the care you need with regular health screenings.

5. Have you been asked to get involved in questionable financial dealings, loans, home improvement plans or other schemes? This is an area of great concern, because these cons seem to be ongoing. Financial abuse and fraud are too common among the elderly. Strangers are not the only perpetrators; family members could also be guilty. Talk to your financial advisor, attorney or accountant whenever a deal seems too good to be true. Never give out financial information, such as bank account or credit card numbers over the phone. Lastly, watch out for each and every one of your elderly neighbors. Often they can use our help, but seldom do they ask.

Hatch schools receive donation from Helena

Hatch Valley Public Schools announced last week it has received a donation of $30,000 from Helena Chemical Co. to help complete the installation of a new air conditioning system at Garfield Elementary School. The donation was made after the New Mexico Environment Department (NMED) rejected a Supplemental Environmental Project (SEP) by Helena, which would have provided $150,000 in funding for the project. The total cost of the project to upgrade the school's air conditioning is $650,000.

County hires finance director, elections supervisor

Doña Ana County Manager Brian Haines has announced the hiring of two high-level county employees. William E. Noland has been brought on board as the county's new director of finance, while Bob L. Bartlesmeyer joins the Doña Ana County Bureau of Elections as the elections supervisor.

IMAX closes temporarily for maintenance

The Clyde W. Tombaugh IMAX Dome Theater in Alamogordo, N.M., will be closed Aug. 19 through Aug. 21 for repairs and maintenance. "We're sorry for the inconvenience," said Museum Marketing Director Cathy Harper, "but this is necessary work for the continued enrichment and enjoyment of our audience." The theater will reopen Saturday, Aug. 22, and will feature "Sharks" and "Destiny in Space."

Tourism department piques visitor appetites

Riding the wave of national and international interest in New Mexico's unique culinary heritage, the New Mexico Tourism Department has announced new initiatives to promote one of the fastest growing segments of today's travel industry. The Culinary Trails will focus on traditional Hispanic and Native American cuisine as well as contemporary chefs and restaurants creating their own signature cooking styles, plus the world of global flavors available here too, from couscous to Korean barbecue.

Emily Coss plans for Downtown café

Emily Coss of Coss Real Estate plans to open a restaurant within the existing Coss Real Estate property at 212 W. Hadley Ave. She said pending city approval of a rezoning request and a parking variance, the "Water Street Café" could open for business sometime after October. She plans to offer soups, sandwiches, salads, pastries and coffee.

Convention center manager selected

Global Spectrum, operators of the soon-to-open Las Cruces Convention Center, last week named David Hicks as the first General Manager of the 55,000square-foot convention center. Global Spectrum, which manages more than 80 public assembly facilities through North America, is a subsidiary of Comcast-Spectacor. Hicks, a veteran of the convention center sales and marketing industry, will oversee the day-to-day operations of the new center, including hiring and training of a full and part-time staff, all financial aspects of the facility, and scheduling, booking, and marketing of the events.

Dickey's Barbecue Pit opens

A new restaurant has opened at 1660 S. Valley Drive in front of Wal-Mart Supercenter, taking over the space previously occupied by the American BBQ Factory. The restaurant will offer take-out, delivery and catering services. It will serve traditional barbecue dishes such as pulled pork, brisket, ham and pork ribs. The local Dickey's Barbecue is a franchise of the Dallas-based company founded in 1941 with various locations around the country. For more information, call 525-2525.

Are you a landlord with a no pet policy?

Federal law says you may have to make an exception

According to our friends at the U.S. Census Bureau, a total of 76,805 individual housing units were providing shelter for homeowners and tenants in Doña Ana County at the close of 2007. Housing units include single-family homes, townhomes, condominiums, mobile homes, apartments, a group of rooms or a single room that is used as separate living quarters.

separate living quarters.

More than 32.5 percent of those units, or 24,961 to be exact, were occupied by renters. Our friends at the Census Bureau also noted that at last count, 31,450 Doña Ana County residents were identified as being disabled in one way or another.

So what do those numbers have in common? If the 32.5 percent ratio of renters-to-owners also applies to our area's disabled population, the numbers indicate that around 10,221 of our area's disabled population are probably renting a home or apartment and are protected by the Americans With Disabilities Act.

What does that mean to landlords? A lot. The Fair Housing Amendment Act requires landlords, condominium associations and other housing providers to make reasonable accommodations for the disabled, including "reasonable accommodations for service animals."

What is a reasonable accommodation? According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Department of Justice (DOJ), "A reasonable accommodation is a change, exception or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling, including public and common use spaces."

OK, that's clear enough. The question now is what constitutes a service animal? The Fair Housing Amendment describes it as being "any animal that assists someone who is disabled." Can a horse be considered a service animal? Yes, according to law.

Service animals come in many shapes and sizes and provide numerous and diverse types of assistance for people with virtually any type of disability.

"Service animal" is actually the generic term for dogs and other animals that help physically or mentally disabled persons. The animals are trained to provide specific types of assistance and are categorized by the type of assistance they provide. Here are just a few of their categories and job descriptions:

Mobility Assist Dogs pull a person's wheelchair, carry items in a backpack, retrieve items people drop, open and close doors and help his or her handler dress and undress. Walker Dogs help by balancing or acting as a counter balance for the handler. Hearing Dogs are specially trained to assist deaf people, alerting their owners to such noises as doorbells, phones, crying babies and even teakettle whistles.

Seizure Alert/Response Dogs are trained to respond to a person's seizures and either stay with the person or call for help. Some are trained to push a button that dials 911, then bark when the operator answers.

A Psychiatric Service Dog

helps people with mental disabilities such as agoraphobia (not being able to go outside alone). There are also dogs trained to assist people with autism. Some dogs are cross-trained to assist people with multiple disabilities, such as a guide dog that also assists with mobility.

While landlords and housing providers are bound by law to make accommodations for service animals, they are strictly prohibited from inquiring into the nature of a person's disability. Landlords are allowed to ask for information or documentation to determine if an accommodation is actually required due to a disability, however

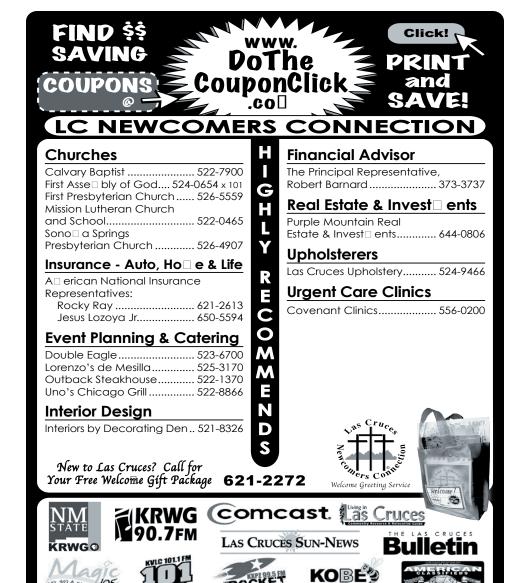

But what if the landlord already knows about the disability and the need is readily apparent or known? In that case, the landlord is prohibited from inquiring further regarding the nature of the disability. For example, if it's obvious that a person is blind and that person asks permission to keep a seeing-eye dog on the premises, the permission must be given without further inquiry.

Well, there you have it. If you're a landlord and one of your tenants or prospective tenants asks to bring a service animal onto your premises, think twice before you ask illegal questions or refuse to rent. The consequences for noncompliance are steep – up to five years in prison and/or a $50,000 fine.

See you at closing.

Duo combines passion for arts, crafts and healthy alternatives

By Gabriel Vasquez

My Place is a gathering spot for women. A place where you can find "this and that" for every occasion, gift-giving or not. Mostly, though, My Place is for casual conversation, forging new friendships and renewing old passions.

Susan Jewell's and Elizabeth Comparin's place, 140-A Wyatt Drive, offers plenty of vintage and hard-to-find clothing and accessories - some "very exotic," Jewell said – a full lineup of massage and spa services and drum, dance and art classes.

There's more. Hot Rocks therapy, lymphatic drainage, Swedish massages, reflexology, pregnancy therapy, detoxifying herbal wraps and odorless acrylic manicures and pedicures are just some of the other services My Place offers. "I wanted to go back to my first love, which was sewing and teaching dance and art," said Jewell, a retired schoolteacher, who, with husband Bruce started the business in February 2008. "An older lady described our store as a 'head shop' for women who were born in the '60s.

Just as Jewell re-discovered her early passions, her patrons are doing much of the same – re-discovering the benefits of good physical health through dance and therapy, all the while feeding their spirit with art and good friendship.

"We also just opened a studio next door for performing arts and dance," Jewell "We're helping other instructors that lack the facilities to teach their classes."

Comparin, raised in Las Cruces, is no stranger to hard work and entrepreneurship. Having been raised on a farm – she "rodeo'd" at 4-years-old - and as an independent contractor for most of her professional life, Comparin said she's glad to have finally found a place to call her own. "I've ridden horses all my life," Compa-rin said. "But I started getting worn out to the point I couldn't sit in a chair and do secretarial work. My friend suggested I go to massage school, and I ended up loving it. It changed my life and I feel that now I can really help people."

Business partners Elizabeth Comparin and Susan Jewell have recently expanded My Place to include a 25-by-35 foot dance and performing arts studio at 140-A Wyatt Drive, next to Red Wing Shoes.

The people that Comparin regularly serves soon become part "of the club," she said. Not an exclusive, constraining social group of "haves" and "socialites," but a club of warm, caring, baby boomers who often "don't have" the support they need to lead fulfilling and healthy lives, Comparin said.

"Our customers are our friends," Jewell said. "That's the difference between the chains and small businesses. The customers can come in and talk to us. They can shop, weave or dance and they're not going to rip a hole in their pocket doing it – they're not overwhelmed."

With two children, Graft moved to Las Cruces in 1972, seeking a job in the gears to pursue another passion.

"I really had interest in architecture,

She became a licensed Realtor, taking her first job with Jim and Ethel Haslam of Gallery of Homes. From there, she took a "Back then,

Two-time Citizen of the Year Sid Graft has seen Las Cruces grow from a dusty cow town into the thriving metropolitan center of business, education and health care it is today.

The native New Yorker – raised in Levittown, Long Island – has an accomplished and colorful past in Las Cruces. As a Realtor in the '70s, owner of Las Cruces' first real estate publication in the early '80s and as an outstanding citizen and advocate for the building industry throughout the years, Graft has been a staple in the real estate community for nearly four decades. "When I started in real estate here, the high-end neighborhoods were on Telshor, the Las Cruces Country Club rectangular brick houses were very popular. Later, the pueblo- and adobe-style homes came. Now, Las Cruces is right along side with some of the trend-setting areas across the country.'

As a youngster growing up in New York, Graft had a passion for physical education. She thought it would be her life's calling.

"It stayed with me all through college,"

In 1965, Graft made the move from the Big Apple to New Mexico, embarking on a journey that would end up with Graft becoming one of the most well known marketing experts in southern Graft attended Highlands University in Las Vegas, N.M., and earned a degree in physical education. Although she had been accepted to several colleges some in upstate New York and others around the country - Graft chose New Mexico to help her high school Spanish teacher's daughter – who had a physical handicap – get through school in a small-town setting.

'I thought it was a good idea, so

I started on my own. It was very successful. The pages were constantly in the 90s, sometimes in the 100s.

Graft sold the publication in 1995 and took a break from the professional world to take care of her ailing mother.
From the '70s to the late '90s, Graft was heavily involved with the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, Las Cruces Association of Realtors and the Las Cruces Home Builders Association (now the Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico) and also worked with Paul Curry Homes and Mountain Dreams Publisȟing.

In addition to helping thousands make their nest in Las Cruces, Graft was a goodwill advocate, a community champion and a so-called "transplant" who truly made New Mexico her home.

During that time, both the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and the Las Cruces Association of Realtors recognized Graft as Citizen of the Year.

"I'm very proud of those awards," Graft said, "and I'm really glad that my life took a different direction, because over the years, I have been blessed to wake up every morning and enjoy doing what I do - working with Realtors and the building industry

Now, Graft manages another real estate publication – Las Cruces' newest – HouseHunt, published by the Las Cruces Bulletin.

This publication is for anybody interested in real estate, buying, selling, looking to rent or hoping to make his or her first purchase in Las Cruces," she said. "It's a very good listing tool for agents and serves as a good promo piece for Las Cruces."

When asked what the future may hold for Las Cruces, Graft said simply, "People that come here will stay here.

Mesilla Valley Hospice Men Who Cook are ready for another year of fun, food and fundraising

By BETH SITZLER

After a successful first year, community members will once again gather for the annual Mesilla Valley Hospice Men Who Cook, from 6 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 15, at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

The idea for last year's event, which was held to raise funds for the organization's capital campaign, came from local retirees from the Wisconsin area.

"Men Who Cook is originally from Oshkosh, Wis.," Mesilla Valley Hospice Development Director Terra Van Winter said about the nine-year-old event held to support a local domestic violence shelter. "Many of them attended it there and then brought it here."

During the event, Van Winter said, 60 to 70 men from the community, along with an assistant, volunteer their time and ingredients to prepare bite-sized samplings of appetizers, soups, entrées, side dishes or desserts for 100 people.

"Attendees purchase a ticket and eat until they're full," said April Anaya, marketing coordinator of the hospice. "They can have a three-course meal, several times over."

Last year, with 65 chefs and 500 tickets sold, Anaya said more than 700 people participated in the event, raising about $36,000.

Everyone from City Manager Terrence Moore and Mayor Ken Miyagishima to fire fighters and Van Winter's husband Eric participated in last year's event, she said.

Along with traditional recipes, such as pulled pork and posole, Van Winter said there were several other favorites.

"There were different things people wouldn't think of cooking," she said.

One such dish was First National Bank President Joe

Bullock's Spam Surprise, which consisted of Spam, sweet onions, new potatoes, sweet corn and green chile.

"It was very good," Van Winter said.

Dessert also was a popular category with delectable items such as State Rep. Jeff Steinborn's Mesilla Valley Truffles made with finely chopped chiledusted pecans, John Hummer's Kahlúa Mousse and Moore's Easy Bake Peach Cobbler, which quickly disappeared.

This year, Gerry Schurtz' Peanut Butter Firecrackers are already receiving attention, as is another Spam recipe from Bullock.

While there will be seven different grill related recipes, including hot wings, brisket and smoked salmon, Anaya and Van Winter said participants won't run into duplicated recipes.

Van Winter and Anaya said they have big plans for this year's event. With 69 chefs signed up and all 550 tickets already sold out, they said they hope to raise $65,000 to support the Charity Care Fund.

The Charity Care Fund helps those who can't afford hospice care. Van Winter said the Charity Care Fund is a great way to reach out to those in need.

Along with the cooking festivities, a raffle and silent auction also will be held. As a way for Las Crucens to take the event home with them, the Men Who Cook cookbook will be sold at $10 for the 2009 edition and $5 for the 2008 version.

"It's so neat to get to try these unique recipes at home," Van Winter said.

Firefighters Gordon Nelson and Ryan Busch of the Las Cruces Fire Department served up fiery dishes of Korean-style short ribs and saucy chicken kabobs. The two were a part of the inagural Mesilla Valley Hospice Men Who Cook event, which displayed the culinary talents of men from the Las Cruces community.

Anaya said participants should come out for the fun, social environment.

"It's a lot of fun," she said.
"Even working it, we had a really good time. I wish we could accommodate more people."

"It highlights how great our community is," Van Winter said, explaining that the annual event has given Las Crucens the opportunity to view Mesilla Valley Hospice in another light.

Event eaters aren't the only ones who find the event rewarding – the chefs do as well. Last year, Van Winter said Blaine Mynatt and Matt Holt of Holt Babington Mynatt, thanked her for giving them the opportunity to do more than write a check or buy a ticket.

"They said (putting the meals

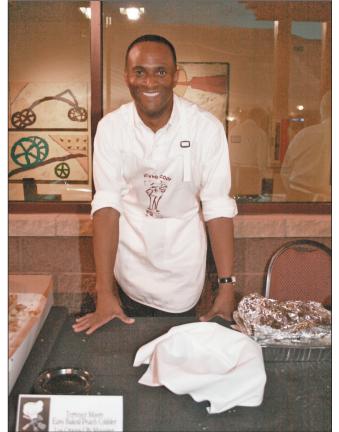

"They said (putting the meals together) made them feel like they made an impact," she said.

Van Winter and Anaya said they hope all will be inspired to participate in future Men Who Cook events. They also said they would like to expand the event to include more participants and possibly even bring in a celebrity chef.

Those who would like to reserve tickets or be a chef for the 2010 Men Who Cook can do so by calling Mesilla Valley Hospice at 525-5709. Anyone interested in volunteering also is encouraged to call.

Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima serves California rolls and dumplings to Anne Woodling and Diana Hurd during last year's fundraising event held at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum.

Last year, City Manager Terrence Moore's peach cobbler was sold out by 7:15 p.m.

How a lawyer will ease your mind

Robert L. Lovett
Attorney at Law

I have represented thousands of clients over the years and one of the concerns I hear more often than not is I didn't want to hire a lawyer because I didn't want to sue anybody.

Clients do not want their case to drag out over time and they think hiring a lawyer means automatically that the lawyer is going to sue somebody. Nothing could be further from the truth. A personal injury lawyer invariably works on a contingent fee basis. This means your lawyer doesn't get paid until this case is resolved. This means two things for you as a client: your lawyer is basically working for free until your case settles and, more importantly, he wants the case resolved as soon as possible just like you do. A lawyer should not resolve your case until he is sure all your medical bills are paid and you know exactly what you are going to receive from the settlement

The contingency fee system assures that you and your lawyer are working together to get your claim resolved as fairly and as quickly as possible. If you have any questions about your personal injury claim, please feel free to give me a call anytime.

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Do yourself a favor and see "The Musical of Musicals (The Musical!)" playing at the Boba Café Cabaret, 1900 S. Espina St., through Aug. 22.

An original New York production created by Eric Rockwell and Joanne Bogart, "Musical" is a smart and fast-paced parody of more than a dozen popular Broadway musicals that all follow a familiar storyline ("I can't pay the rent." "You must pay the rent." "T'll pay the rent." "My hero.")

Five mini-musicals are based – somewhat hauntingly and definitely quirkily – on the works of composers Rogers & Hammerstein, Stephen Sondheim, Jerry Herman, Andrew Lloyd Webber and Kander & Ebb. "Musical" schmushes together songs and scenes from well-known Broadway productions. For instance, "Oklahoma" meets "The Sound of Music" and "Phantom of the Opera" meets "Cats."

Queen McQueen

Directed and choreographed by Megan McQueen, who has staged more than 25 productions in the Las Cruces area, "Musical" is a lyrical and musical mind-bender with nearly familiar tunes and words. There's no time for name that tune, as one must be alert to hear how cleverly "Musical" twists words, phrases and notes to play off the original show tunes.

Joining McQueen are Brandon Brown, Lennie Rainwater and Robby Randall. Each cast member showcases his and her own talents and strengths (that McQueen girl can really belt out a show tune), but the ensemble plays so well together that the show is pure entertainment.

Act I opens with "Corn!" ala Rogers & Hammerstein. Remember "Oklahoma," with Curly singing, "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning" and "Carousel" with characters Billy and Julie? The mixed up "Musical" version features Big Willy and June, plus Mother Abby and Jidder.

The mini-musicals move quickly. Big Willy sings about the wonders of corn, then, rather than Julie and Billy singing "If I Loved You" ala "Carousel," its June and Big Willy singing "I couldn't keer less about you," even though people would say they're in love.

There's a nod to the Reverend Mother from the "Sound of Music." Even the King of Siam has a cameo.

If you love corn, you'll love this production.

Multiple personalities

It gets more entertaining, twisted and a bit bawdy with each page of the musical score.

"A Little Complex," is in the often-dissonant style of Stephen Sondheim who brought many musicals to the stage including "West Side Story," "Sunday in the Park" and "Sweeney Todd."

The little complex is an apartment building wherein resides Jeune, who won't pay the rent, Billy her creative suitor, Abby the drinking, smoking realist of a friend and Jitter, the edgy landlord with more than an axe to grind. Jeune won't pay the rent, but Jitter – thumbing a knife ala Sweeney Todd – plans to kill them all anyway.

Act I closes with "Dear Abby," a nod to Jerry Herman's big productions, "Hello, Dolly," "Mame" and "La Cage aux Folles." Rainwater as Auntie Abby, making her grand entrances from the top of a ladder, does a great job of belting out the tunes.

Plan to enjoy one of the last four shows to hear "Aspects of Junita" ala Andrew Lloyd Webber where Jitter sings to Junita/Evita, then turns into a character from "Cats." "Speakeasy," in the style of Kinder & Ebb who wrote "Chicago," "Cabaret" and "Fosse", among others, closes out Act II. But the show's not over until the cast sings, "Done."

Las Cruces is fortunate Boba Café owner Chris Waggoner supported McQueen who saw the original performance in New York City and wanted to bring it home.

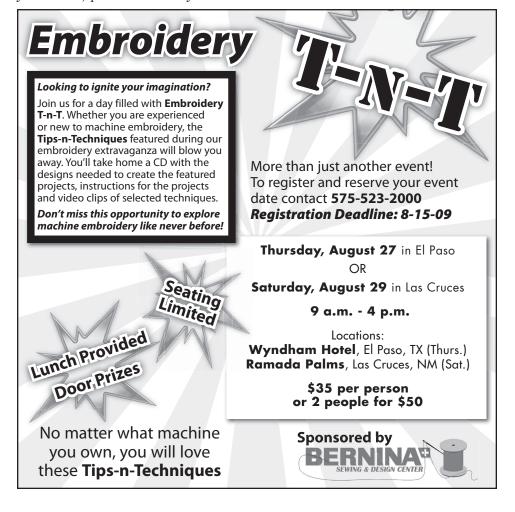

This is a short-run production, with only two more weekends.

Dinner seats at 7 p.m. with show time at 8 p.m. The production itself is worth the $25 ticket, but Boba Café Cabaret includes an appetizer, entrée, beverage (beer and wine included) and gratuity. Make a reservation at 647-5900.

GALLERIES & OPENINGS

"Something Very Dear" by Jan Harrison at the Tombaugh Gallery

Continuing this Week

MAIN STREET GALLERY

The work of Jim Turrentine will be on display at the Main Street Gallery, 311 N. Downtown Mall, during the month of August. The retrospective examines portraiture work he has completed over the last four decades.

The gallery is also showing works by some of Las Cruces' finest artists including the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson's fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst's Spirit Minders, Margaret Berríer's detailed rock-art jewelry, Joanna Bradley's flamboyant gourd artworks, limited editions of Robert Highsmith's splendid watercolors, the skillfully and colorfully fired RAKU works of Rudy Lucero and the newly released limited editions of world class western pencil artist, Robert "Shoofly" Shufelt.

The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Call 647-0508 for more information.

② LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART COLLECTION

"Las Cruces Collects" offers a rare look into the private art collections of area residents. Featured art works range from European Old Masters to American Contemporary, in a wide variety of media and artistic styles that shed light on the passions motivating collectors of fine art. Organized by the Las Cruces Museum of Art, "Las Cruces Collects" is on display through Saturday, Aug. 22.

In a community as dedicated to the arts as Las Cruces, it should come as no surprise that the area's art collections are as diverse as its residents. Made possible through the assistance of Sally and Glenn Cutter, works are on loan from the private collections of J. Paul Taylor, Kent F. Jacobs and Sallie Ritter, Gayle and Delano Lewis, Stephanie and Mark Medoff, Toby and Richard White, Mireille Dohmen and Mary Streett. The exhibition includes Civil War antiquities, Pueblo pottery, surrealist sculpture, African and Mexican folk art, religious iconography and many other surprises.

Exhibition hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free. Funded by the City of Las Cruces, the Las Cruces Museum of Art is located at 491 N. Main St., at the north end of the Downtown Mall. Call 541-2137, or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org, for more information on museum exhibits and Studio Program art classes.

© TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature fiber art by Cyndi Clark and Jan Harrison in "Finding a Voice through Fiber." The exhibit continues through Friday, Aug. 28. An artists' reception will be from noon to 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 9. The Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces is located at 2000 S. Solano Drive, with regular gallery hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Clark has worked in many media over the years. She focused on clay work for about 10 years before transitioning to fiber art. One of her featured pieces in the show is "Freedom's Price," an art quilt that has a piece of fabric representing every soldier who has died in Iraq and Afghanistan since Sept. 11.

Harrison has been involved in fiber arts as a knitter for more than 25 years and has gradually progressed to weaving on a floor loom and basketry. She has done extensive experimentation in achieving movement and using yarns of many sizes and textures. She also uses unexpected materials and colors. The same techniques go back and forth between her tapestries and basketry.

For information, call the church office at 522-7281.

® BRANIGAN LIBRARY

If you are going to the Branigan Library, plan to visit the second floor Terrace Gallery for the Las Cruces Art Association art show, "Everything Goes." Artists include Carol Groves, Olivia Solomon, Mary Lacy, Kurt Van Wagner and Judy Licht. The show runs through Friday, Aug. 28. Paintings of all media as well as photographs and a stained glass mirror are featured. Most artwork is for sale and can be purchased for $200 or less.

© SUSAN EISEN FINE JEWELRY & WATCHES

Native American jewelry has deep roots. Historic, religious and spiritual themes from ancient and modern cultures are visible in past and present designs handmade by Native American silversmiths and artists. An exhibit of vintage turquoise, coral and sterling jewelry along with contemporary designs created by current Native American artisans will be shown in the gallery at Susan Eisen Fine Jewelry & Watches, 5857 North Mesa Suite 19, El Paso. The show will run through Monday, Aug. 31.

② IN EFFECT GALLERY

Lulu Hedrick, a recent graduate and class valedictorian of Alma d'Arte High School, will present a one woman show of her various media explorations at IN EFFECT Gallery through the month of August.

Hedrich has serious plans for her career in art, including working in screen writing, illustrations and painting. The artist has a truly unique perspective on the art world. One foot solidly in her rich Chinese art culture, the other in western approaches to art in various forms. This expanded view of the art world gives Hedrick a wide-open path for her talent to grow.

Her body of work is a unique mix of the two cultures, both in comparison and contrast, enabling the artist to appeal to many different tastes, while at the same time letting the viewer apply their own interpretations to the work.

For more information, contact the gallery, located at 514 W. Griggs Ave., at 526-1551, or email ineffectgallery@mac.com

RIO GRANDE THEATRE

The works of more than a dozen ladies ranging in age from late 50s to early 90s from the Monday Studio Group is on display in the Rio Grande Theatre through the month of August. Working in watercolor, colored pencils, oils and pastels, the artists of the Monday Studio Group explore many styles of expression and have found they need all of their energy and enthusiasm as they tackle the difficulties involved in portrait and figure painting. The exhibit will run through Monday, Aug. 31. The theater is located at 211 N. Downtown Mall.

® BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

Two new exhibits are at Branigan Cultural Center. "Batteries Not Required" is a display of historic cameras, while "Light Fantastic" is a display of a historic craft of quilts in its newest form. The exhibits remain on display through Saturday, Aug. 29.

"Batteries Not Required" features more than 70 manual cameras from the collection of Don Brenner. Among the cameras to be displayed are an 1884 Blair with mahogany frame and cherry wood base, a 1909 Graflex with extensible front lens rack and a 1927 Ansco Memo featuring a vertical frame box body using a tubular view finder on top. Also included are early "spy" cameras, various Kodak models including the Brownie, Exaktas and much more.

"Light Fantastic" is an exhibit from New Mexico Art Quilters. Art quilts echo the practical and decorative skills of quilt making from yesteryear, and take new life as an art form equal to watercolor, acrylic and oil paintings. This juried show features 31 quilts by 14 artists from across New Mexico.

The Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. For more information about exhibits, contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit the center's web site at las-cruces. org/museums.

® BLACK BOX THEATRE

In August, thetheatregallery located in the lobby of the Black Box Theatre presents "Theatre Magic – The Designers' Art," a photographic exhibit featuring the work of Peter Herman. During his 10 years as set and light designer at the Black Box Theatre, Herman has taken numerous rehearsal photographs. The show highlights the contribution of design and technical theater to the total theater experience. thetheatregallery is open an hour before performance time and by appointment by calling 523-1223. A wine and cheese reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4, in conjunction with the September Downtown Ramble.

© NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, is exhibiting colorful images by artist Betty LaDuke that illustrate agriculture in its purest form.

"Dreaming Cows: The Artwork of Betty LaDuke" features 21 large giclee prints inspired by LaDuke's work with Heifer International. The exhibit is on display through Monday, Sept. 21.

La Duke toured Uganda and Rwanda in 2003, where she drew

La Duke toured Uganda and Rwanda in 2003, where she drew sketches of the native people in various agricultural settings. She converted the sketches to colorful paintings in her Oregon studio over the past several years. The paintings also include scenes and people from Poland, Albania, Vietnam, Cambodia, Kosovo, Ecuador and Peru.

The Border Artists present a group show at the New Mexico Farm & Ranch Museum in August.

Heifer International is a humanitarian organization dedicated to ending world hunger and protecting the earth by providing live-stock, trees, training and other resources to help the poor around the world become self-reliant. Since 1944, Heifer has assisted 9.5 million families in more than 125 countries, helping to lift many up from poverty and hunger.

Museum visitors also are invited to view a segment from the film "Betty LaDuke: Art Reflecting Life," documenting her travels to Africa on behalf of Heifer International. The film is shown in the theater twice daily, immediately following screening of the museum's welcome video at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. (Sundays at 2 p.m. only).

The museum is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens and $2 for children 5 to 17. For more information, call 522-4100.

© PRESTON CONTEMPORARY ART CENTER

An explosion of color, texture and form highlight the 2009 Summer Exhibition at the Preston Contemporary Art Center, 1755 Avenida de Mercado. The exhibition features works by abstract painters Arturo Loya, Diane McGregor, John Ochs and Allison Renshaw and digital artist Myriam Lozada-Jarvis. The show, which celebrates the beginning of the gallery's second year, runs through Sunday, Sept. 27.

ONO GRINDZ

Kurt Van Wagner's digitally exotic display of the Hawaiian Islands is on exhibit at the restaurant Ono Grindz (Hawaiian restaurant), 300 N. Downtown Mall. Van Wagner's tropical-themed show features his new Aloha creations depicting luscious swaying palms, magnificent coastlines and all the delights that make Hawaii such a wondrous place.

Van Wagner has traveled numerous times to the islands of Maui, Kauai and the Big Island of Hawaii to capture these vibrant and colorful scenes that make you want to pack your bags and get on that flight today. After Van Wagner discovers and photographs the magical tropical scene, the fun and creative work begin. He digitally hand-paints and textures over his photographs using computer and pen tablet. The results are works of art that are a blend of the realism of photography and the paintbrush of the painter. Van Wagner describes this new digital art as the best of two great art media. Ono Grindz owner Rachel Faulkner said she is excited to add another art venue to the Downtown area. Call 541-7492 for more information. Ono Grindz is open during lunch and dinner hours Monday through Friday and on Saturday for lunch.

ARTIST DIALOGUE

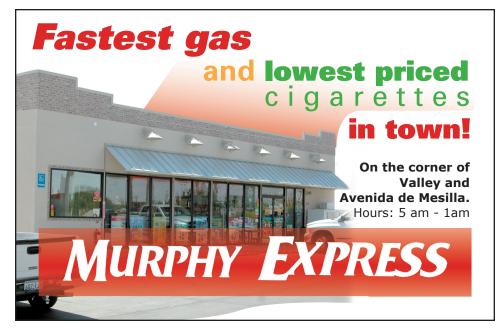

In conjunction with the 2009 Summer Exhibition at the Preston Contemporary Art Center, digital painter Myriam Lozada-Jarvis will be featured in the latest of a series of artist dialogues at 1 p.m. Sunday, Aug 23, at the gallery. Lozada-Jarvis will discuss her digital paintings in the exhibition and enjoy conversation with the audience about the body of work. Admission is free.

Lozada-Jarvis' interest in all things new in art led her to adopt a computer to create energetic compositions to produce fine art prints on paper or canvas. Her approach to these new tools parallels her traditional use of paint and ink. She creates brush strokes that contain bits and pieces of other images that are either photographs or drawings she has made using traditional techniques.

The Preston Contemporary Art Center is located at 1755 Avenida de Mercado, at the end of Calle de Mercado in Mesilla. Regular gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday; 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday; and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For information, call 523-8713 or visit www.prestoncontemporaryart.com.

Larry Jenkins: It's all about the rock

Jeweler creates contemporary work from one-of-a-kind glass

By BETH SITZLER

Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but for one Las Cruces man, it's all about silverwork, dichroic glass and

Jeweler Larry Jenkins said he never considered himself to be artistic until he met his wife Bea, a crafts show

"In high school, my brother (and I) played a lot of golf," he said. "I had never done (crafts).

After marrying his wife 20 years ago, the Utah native transferred from the Dugway Proving Grounds to White Sands Missile Range, where he now works as an electronic technician.

He attended the Las Cruces Farmers & Crafts Market with his wife. As she sold her porcelain dolls, he sat back and watched, until he decided one day to get in on the

He began selling wood items he carved with a scroll saw. While he had success at first, he said his wooden art pieces stopped selling, so he decided to switch media.

"I took a look around at what was selling. Food, jew-elry and clothing were selling," he said about his decision to enter the world of silver work.

After a friend taught him how to solder and he attended a class in Albuquerque on jewelry making, he began creating rings, earrings, brackets, pendants and bolo ties.

Learning mostly through trial and error, Jenkins progressed from stringing beads to creating his own dichroic glass, which is an ionized metallic material that has been placed in a vacuum chamber with glass.

To create his pieces, Jenkins said he cuts his own designs from sheets of the glass, which have been coated with the ionized metallic material in the vacuum chamber. After the piece has been cut, he places a clear cap on top and fires it in a kiln. The two objects melt into one piece, a process known as glass fusion.

"Dichroic glass is kiln made," he said. "The kiln is a big expense, but since my wife does porcelain dolls, we already had one.

What makes the dichroic glass unique, Jenkins said, is that it has two color properties – a true color and a reflective color. Often, Jenkins combines various colors to create one-of-a-kind pieces.

"Sometimes, it doesn't cut right and I end up with weird shapes," he said. "They're like puzzle pieces that I have put together.

Along with dichroic glass, Jenkins said he also uses semi-precious stones in his jewelry. When choosing a stone, there are two things Jenkins said he looks for color and shape.

"I go to gem shows and find stones that I think are pretty," he said. "I use a whole lot of different stones."

He said the most popular stones he uses are charoite, a purple stone from Siberia; larimar, a pale blue stone found only in the Caribbean and the Dominican Republic; and Apache dendrite rhyolite, a brown stone mined in the Deming, N.M., area.

To create his jewelry, Jenkins said he usually finds the stone first, then designs around it. Once he has determined what it will become, he creates the bezzle, which goes around the stone or piece of glass to hold it in place. From there, he adds the "accessories," which include feathers and filigree.

A countdown to January 2010

imagination and other jewelers' work.

"I want to try things I've seen before, but modify to fit my own ideas," he said.

Jenkins said he tries to stay away from the traditional Southwest style of jewelry because he wants his jewelry to catch a shopper's eye by being unique and

'Since so many (vendors at the farmers market) use turquoise, I try to do very little turquoise work,'

Through his work at the farmers market, Jenkins said he has been able to meet new people and make new friends.

"It's like a big family," he said.

With plans to retire on Jan. 2, 2010, Jenkins said he would like to continue to improve his jewelry by taking more advanced classes in Albuquerque and at New Mexico State University. He said he also would like to venture into lapidary work, which involves cutting his

"I have some ideas that require a certain shape stone, but I can't find a stone that shape," he said. Along with selling his work at the farmers market and the art festival, Jenkins said he would one day like to sell his pieces in a local jewelry store.

Until his retirement comes, however, Jenkins said he will remain busy with favorite pastimes – jewelry making, caring for his 100 pecan trees and spending time with his family, which includes 12 grandchildren.

He immigrated to the United States when he was 16 and he learned many of the restaurant's dishes from his mother. Also, his brother Tony has his Thai Delight restaurant in Florida, where Feldt learned how to transfer those traditional Thai dishes into

To ensure freshness, Feldt said workers in local produce stores know him well as he is constantly checking with them to get the freshest produce.

"When you come here, it is as close as you can get in Thai food next to being in Thailand," he said. "My customers tell me there's nothing around here like my Thai food."

"It's here for them if they want it," Feldt said of making Thai hot orders. How hot is Thai hot? "You will 'pop' your ears," he said with a laugh.

Feldt said his two most popular dishes are the Pad Thai, a stir fried dish of rice noodles, egg and scallions served with bean sprouts, crushed peanuts and lime, and Thai Fried Rice – a vegetable-filled fried rice with egg and that distinctive Thai

Thai curry is different than Indian curries, but similarly awash in coconut milk. Think you know stir fry from Chinese cuisine? Thai stir fry takes it to a different level with its center-stage use of fresh herbs such as basil, garlic and ginger.

Feldt also has created two of his own dishes – Shrimp Thai Delight and Beef Thai Delight.

Branigan Cultural Center showcases two aspects of the art world during August

By Beth Sitzler

Las Crucens are in for a treat this month with the showing of two exceptional exhibits at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St.

The opening receptions for "Batteries Not Required" and "Light Fantastic" were held Friday, Aug. 7, during the Downtown Art Ramble. While the exhibits covered two separate spectra of the art world, each were designed with the center's diverse audience in mind.

"We change monthly," said Garland Courts, director of the Branigan Cultural Center. "There's something for everyone."

"Light Fantastic," which features art quilts, and "Batteries Not Required," about the history of the camera, will be on display through Saturday, Aug. 29. "Light Fantastic" showcases the work of the Studio Art Quilters Association, a worldwide organization with more than 2,500 members who add a new twist on the traditional craft of quilting.

"They're not utilitarian," said Patricia Gould, the association's regional representative, who lives in Albuquerque. "They're

She explains that many of the quilts incorporate various layers of materials including fabric, stitching and paint. Her own piece "Door No. 1," just one of five pieces she is showing, uses all of these elements to recreate a photograph she took while in Hungary.

Of the 56 pieces submitted, Gould said the center will exhibit 31 works of art from 14 artists, including Las Cruces quilter Ann Angelo and Silver City, N.M., resident Jean Cowie.

While each piece has its own subject and style, Gould said they all are connected by a common theme – their unique use of light.

"We noticed that each had this great quality of light," she said about the inspi-ration behind the exhibit's name. "They all exhibit some quality of light."

Courts said he thinks "Light Fantastic" will be a hit with viewers.

"Quilting is very popular," he said.
"People come out to see it because they're quilters themselves or they just appreciate the artwork."

"Batteries Not Required" features the extensive camera collection of Don Brenner, a cabinet maker from Chicago who retired in Las Cruces.

Brenner's fascination with cameras and photography began in 1947 when his father gave him an old Argus C3 and he learned to develop film.

"I fell in love with the magic of the darkroom and pictures," he said.

He began collecting cameras for fun and not for use in the 1980s. Over the years, he has collected more than 100 cameras, 80 of which are on display at the

The cameras, which span three decades with the oldest being from 1884 and the newest from 2001, demonstrate the camera's transformation into an everyday

"It's amazing to see how the camera has evolved and to see the craftsmanship that went into the old cameras," Courts

He said after World War II, cameras were made smaller, lighter and were easier to use. Companies such as Nikon began producing models with interchangeable lenses, making professional quality equipment accessible to all.

Along with his cameras are photographs taken by Brenner, an amateur photographer.

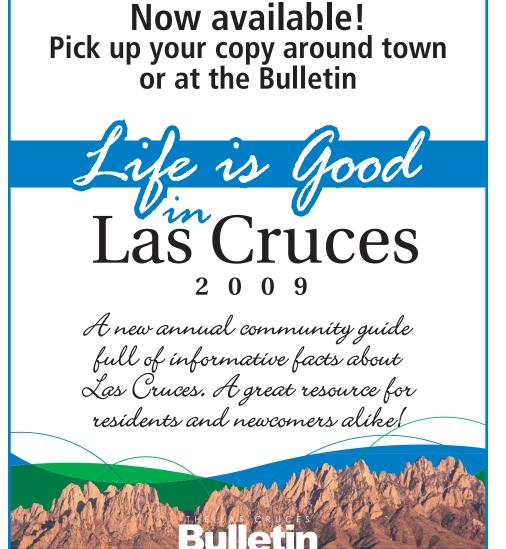

Courts said the show will present not only the history of the camera, but also will take people back to the age before digital devices and the need for batteries.

'There's something unique and endearing about film and the development process," he said. "I think (viewers) can get an appreciation for the art of photography

Patricia Gould from Albuquerque stands in front of her quilts titled "Sentinel" and "Solitude," now showing in the Branigan Cultural Center.

Santa Fe Opera saves the best for last

'Alceste' and 'The Elixir of Love' close out 2009 season

By GERALD M. KANE
For The Las Cruces Bulletin

On the evening of our fifth and final opera of this year's season of the Santa Fe Opera, "The Elixir of Love" by Donizetti, a rainstorm blew in before the opera began. Tailgaters hustled to pack away their crystal, china and other finery while many others ran for cover. This is not an unusual occurrence in Santa Fe on a hot summer's eve.

What made this storm so unique is that after it passed over the opera grounds, a radiant, perfect double rainbow appeared in the sky and arched its way across the opera's lush grounds. It bathed the opera grounds with such intensely bright color that it literally took my breath away. It was a complete rainbow — a full arc, accompanied by a fainter one above it.

In many ways, this natural phenomenon symbolized the opera's 2009 season. There was the sunny brightness of "La Traviata" and "The Elixir of Love." There was passion and richness of "Don Giovanni," there were the darker tones of "The Letter" and "Alceste."

My first review which, appeared on page C20 of the Bulletin's July 31 issue, focused on "Don Giovanni," "La Traviata," and "The Letter." This week's reviews will discuss "Alceste" and "The Elixir of Love."

All about the voice

To be candid, we were not prepared to enjoy "Alceste," a rarely performed opera seria sung in French, with music by Cristoph Willibald Gluck and libretto by Ranieri Calzabigi in Vienna 1767.

In 1776 the libretto was translated into French, which is the version used to this day. The story is based on "Alcestis," the earliest surviving play by Euripides, replete with frequent interactions between the human world and the mystical world of the gods.

The score is demanding and the challenging title role brought fame and acclaim to many formidable sopranos such as Eileen Farrell, Maria Callas, Jessye Norman and Kirsten Flagstad.

We were privileged to hear American soprano Christine Brewer's voice fill the opera house. Brewer received notoriety several months ago while rehearsing the role of Brunhilde for the "Ring Cycle" at the Metropolitan Opera. She injured her knee and had to withdraw and recuperate in St. Louis, her current home.

The Santa Fe staging of "Alceste" by Francisco Negrin attempted to accommodate Brewer's physical challenges by having her move deliberately and slowly, and by having her seated for many sections of the opera. Only rarely could we sense the strain on her strong, rich voice.

The staging was "quirky" to say the least. The sets were odd, dominated by a structure which resembled a bloody cracked egg, and the costumes by Louis Desire were a hodgepodge of classic gowns and togas along with dark contemporary clothing for the "earthly" characters and chorus. As a counterpoint, there were Mexican death masks and extra-terrestrial, heavy metal KISS concoctions for the attire of the gods.

The choreography by Ana Yepes was, in a word, bizarre.

In all, it was the singing that kept us there – most especially the power of Brewer, matched mightily with the passion and strength of Lake Charles, La., tenor Paul Groves.

"Alceste" was clearly not everyone's shot of ouzo, but it provided many with an understanding of why this opera, although rarely staged, still merits our attention.

Take a trip to Italy

The "dessert" of our fivecourse opera banquet was truly worth the wait. It was a delightful staging of "The Elixir of Love," performed by a vibrant and talented young cast headed by Jennifer Black, Dimitri Pittas, Patrick Carfizzi and Thomas Hammons, that sent us out into the rain-cleansed air smiling and

It is the unique scenic and costume design by Ashley Martin-Davis and the direction of Stephen Lawless that makes this production so special.

Gone are the traditional touches of a Basque countryside and a "Doctor ex machina" who arrives in a hot air balloon to save the day. Rather we are transported to World War II Italy, in a town square with an olive oil factory to our left, an auto-repair shop to our right and a huge bill-board that is utilized in so many clever ways throughout the performance.

Vintage cars and a scooter play key roles, along with overthe-top, tongue-in-cheek B movie overacting and, of course, a Hollywood ending.

Together with a toe-tapping score and opportunities for the principal singers to show off their fine vocal, comic and acting skills, this is an opera that merits your attention and will provide a rainbow of enjoyment for a hot summer evening.

There's still time

For the month of August, the Santa Fe Opera schedules Tuesday to Saturday performances of all five operas in the repertoire in sequence.

A tour of the large SFO parking lot boasts license plates from every state. Also there are numerous tour buses bringing folks to the opera's serene venue high in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains, on the outskirts of Santa Fe. They make the pilgrimage annually to see innovative interpretations of classic operas, along with new and rarely performed works.

Reviewers round the globe from every major newspaper and magazine are assigned by their editors to make the trip, even in this time of economic anxiousness.

From reports and responses to my annual reviews for the Las Cruces Bulletin, it appears that more and more Las Cruces residents are making the 275 mile (approximately four hour) drive up I-25 to take in what is known as one of the most innovative and important summer opera seasons in the world.

Coupled with the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival, the town becomes a music lover's paradise, and we are so fortunate to be so geographically close to this international venue.

The Santa Fe Opera season concludes Saturday, Aug. 29. The Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival concludes Friday, Aug. 24. There is still time, and there are still tickets for a quick trip north to get your cultural musical fix for this summer.

For more information and for ticket prices and reservations at the Santa Fe Opera, visit www.santafeopera.org. For information about the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival, visit www.sfcmf.org.

Gerald Kane has reviewed theatre and opera for NPR stations and newspapers in New Orleans, Phoenix and Kansas City as well as for the Las Cruces Bulletin. A former member of the American Theatre Critics Association, he is the Rabbi Emeritus of Temple Beth-El, he has reviewed the Santa Fe Opera productions for the Bulletin for the past six years and the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival for the past two years.

This Hitchcock remake leaves much to be desired

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

Maybe it was because only a few hours prior I had seen one of the funniest movies I have seen in a long time (Woody Allen's "Whatever Works," coming to the Fountain in late September), or maybe it was because of Jessica Biel, a dull script and an abundance of clichés, but "Easy Virtue" wasn't easy to view.

On paper, this remake of the Hitchcock film based on a little known Noel Coward play, "Easy Virtue" might have looked good. But beyond the nice costuming, good cinematography and Colin Firth's performance, this picture is just not fun, although it is supposed to be.

We open with a cleverly rendered scene featuring Biel

Singer's desire to change showcased at CineMatinee

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, Aug. 15, is "Tender Mercies" (1983, 96 minutes, rated PG).

"Tender Mercies" is a riveting, compassionate, touching and thoroughly remarkable film. The screenplay by Horton Foote (winner of the Academy Award for "To Kill A Mockingbird") and the cinematography by Russell Boyd ("Gallipoli") are exemplary models of taste and simple beauty.

Mac Sledge (Robert Duvall) is a burnt-out countryand-western singer/songwriter whose life has become a series of disappointments. He has lost track of the reasons to keep on going. One morning Mac awakes from a drunken stupor in a room at the Mariposa Motel in the middle of a dry Texas prairie. The rundown place is managed by Rosa Lee, a widow whose husband was killed in Vietnam. Mac volunteers to stay on as a handyman and work off his kill stay on as a handyman and work off his bill. Sonny, Rosa Lee's 10-year-old boy, is curious about this wanderer with a guitar and a face that reveals he has seen much of what there is to see in the world.

Although Sonny wants to accept Mac, the outsider, he first must deal with the father he never knew.

Mac stops drinking and finds satisfaction in the slow, isolated existence at the combination gas station and motel. Without much fanfare, Mac and Rosa

Mac still writes songs, but, afraid that his career is over, he keeps them in a trunk. He is not sure that he can turn his life around and hesitates when a country rock band tries to pull him into the spotlight Director Bruce Beresford has stated: "This film is about changing relationships. The man is finding a new life, the woman a new husband and the boy a new father. It is a story of growing together and of "Tender Mercies" is a very poignant movie about the healing powers of love. The country-and-western songs, delivered very nicely by Duvall, lend their own special light to the many themes of the drama.

Mac, Rosa Lee and Sonny drive away the shadows of the past in order to become strong in the broken places of their lives. In the tradition of all memorable storytelling, "Tender Mercies" entertains, illuminates and inspires as Larita, winning a car race, an anomaly of the times - 1920s and 30s - and from afar, John, a somewhat younger man, has a bad case of love at first sight.

Snobs all, as expected, mama (pronounce that mahmah), played chillily by Kristen Scott Thomas, instantly dislikes this American commoner, as does the rest of the group that might remind one of Cinderella's extended family, even more so as Biel launches a semicontinuous barrage of dainty fake sneezes, thus creating appall for Veronica (mahmah), who relishes growing things that create and contain pollen.

Try as she might, Larita just cannot break the ice, although she does break the bones of a Chihuahua dog, which is a little funny the first time she accidentally parks her derriere on the unfortunate, but yappy and annoying hairless-rodent size dog but it becomes forced when she has to keep doing it to hide the dog from meddling in-laws. Other household scandals brew and stew, all involving the fact that Larita just doesn't fit in, nor does she want to. Yawning at the social culture of the English and their Victorian type tastes and values, Larita soon finds gentle solace in Veronica's husband, Jim (Firth), a shattered World War I veteran who keeps away from the family for the most part, only on occasion offering indignant swipes at Veronica and his own offspring, and their haughty boorish behavior.

During the day, he hides out in his garage, tinkering with a car and motorcycle, which becomes a co-star of sort throughout the movie.

Scenes that are supposed to be funny weren't – at least not to me. Larita's use of a motorcycle during a foxhunt and another derriere-induced scene are too choppily edited and just bland.

"Easy Virtue's" director, Stephen Elliott, has largely been absent from the film scene since his major hit from the 90s, the genuinely silly and funny, "Priscilla, Queen of the Desert

With this film, he takes a giant step backward. Again noting the good cinematography, costuming, some of the Cole Porter-ish soundtrack and a mostly believable turn by Firth, Elliott has created something slightly larger than a made for cable piece and by casting Biel, who really doesn't fit the part, he makes a pretty bad mistake. Biel's other works include turns with Adam Sandler in "I Now Pronounce You Chuck and Larry," and the equally as stupid "Next," which haven't polished her up much for a role in a film based on the work of someone as legendary as Coward.

I fully except to be called on the carpet by three of the five readers of these reviews, since I'm sure many of you have tastes contrary to mine, and are willing to offer up 95 minutes of your life for this fluffy piece.

But please be kind, I could have been a lot more ornery than I was ...

Here's to you Mrs. Child and the art of French cooking

REVIEW BY BETH SITZLER

I may not have known much about the women before hand, but after watching "Julie & Julia" I can proudly declare that I love Julia Child, especially when she is played by Meryl Streep.

"Julie & Julia" follows the lives of two seemingly different women as they navigate through the trials and tribulations of pursuing their passion of food.

The movie opens in Paris, it's 1949 and Julia and her husband Paul Child (played by Stanley Tucci) are moving into a palatial French apartment. The views are beautiful and the furniture is exquisite – except for the tiny bed, on which the 6-feet tall Julia doesn't quite fit.

The movie flashes forward to 2002. Julie and Eric Powell (played by Amy Adams and Chris Messing) are moving from Brooklyn to Queens, where the views are less beautiful and the apartment fixtures are crumbling.

As the two stories progress, we learn that both women are searching for something meaningful, something to give them purpose.

Julia, no longer working for the government, has to find something to fill her day. She takes a hat making class and learns to play bridge, but while these activities fill the time, they don't fill the void.

After a lovely day of eating French food and some encouragement from her husband, Julia decides to take cooking lessons from the famous Le Cordon Bleu cooking school for master chefs.

The audience sees Julia transform from someone who struggles with cutting onions into an egg whipping, lob-ster killing, fearless master chef. Her achievements are remarkable as she works to make French faire accessible to "servantless" Americans by writing a cookbook with her French friend.

Julie, we learn, was a writer who gave up on her novel, and now works for the Lower Manhattan Development Corporation, which handles everything post-9/11 related. The work should be rewarding, but the constant barrage of complaints, insults and heart wrenching stories takes it's toll.

Inspired to do something different, Julie decides to start a blog in which she conquers "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" by Julia in a year. That's right – 365 days, 524 recipes all in one tiny Queens kitchen. It's a joy to watch these women work toward a goal and overcome any road blocks that come their way, including a few meltdowns and several naysayers.

It couldn't have been easy for writer/director Nora Ephron to jump between the two stories, but he does a wonderful job of adapting Julia's autobiography "My Life in France," and Julie's memoir "Julie & Julia."

Adams was endearing as the women on the verge of collapse who is saved by a passion and admiration for a legend. She was a little whiny at times, but it was still fun to learn along with Julie. For example, did you know that if you crowd mushrooms they won't brown properly?

Tucci and Messing are wonderful as the loving, caring, supportive husbands. Tucci was especially great. He often plays the jerk, so it was a nice change of pace to see him play a man who is so obviously in love with his

The biggest delight and the show stopper of "Julie & Julia" was Streep. It comes as no surprise, but the woman is a genius. I was worried that the iconic actress wouldn't be able to capture the famous TV chef, but she did. From her one-of-a-kind voice to her laid back manner-a celebration of two women and their passions, but ultimately it's a love story about the love of food, the love of a spouse and especially the love for a mentor.

A forest retreat in the Las Cruces desert A large home fitting any living arrangement or lifestyle

By JONATHAN BUTZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

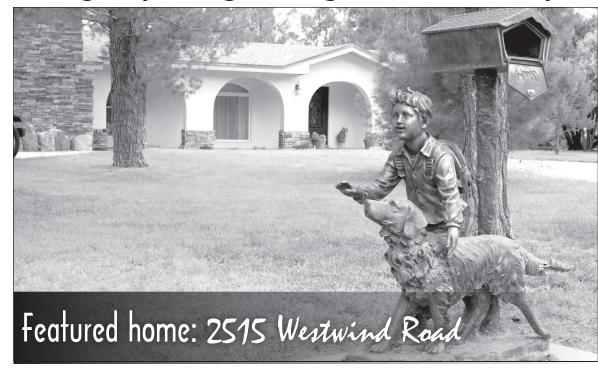

Traveling far north on Valley Drive at dusk, it's easy to get lost in the scenic views and setting sun, but it comes as a great surprise when one finds themselves in the midst of a pine tree forest, which isn't common in the Las Cruces area.

Drive into the unexpected forest a little farther and the home on 2515 Westwind Road seems to jump right out onto the road.

At first glance, the brain has a hard time processing its surroundings – is the house located somewhere in the Gila National Forest or is it really in the middle of the Las Cruces desert?

The 4,980 square-foot home is not just a house, but rather a country living experience. With its contemporary design and a massive rock wall as the facade's main focal point, the house is easily recognizable from the road

Sitting on a total of 5 acres of land, which includes 4 acres of pecan orchards, the area is a great retreat from busy city life. The home rests quietly in a safe and scenic area, nestled in a patch of tall pines, giving the home and the entire surrounding neighborhood constant shade cover and a natural pine fragrance. Thriving with a front yard of foliage and trees, the home's appeal is evident before one even has the opportunity to step inside.

Around the back of the house is an in-ground swimming pool surrounded by the shade and privacy of pines, in addition to the view and comfort of the vast pecan orchard. The large blue barn in the back is a necessary amenity for storing maintenance equipment for the pecan orchards.

Accent Real Estate owner Marti Wells said the home is a viable living option for anyone. The home is spacious with a split-level design, divided into two bedrooms, two master bedrooms and three and a half bathrooms, making it perfect for large families. Accent Real Estate lists the home for $1.1 million, which includes the 5 acres of land, the pecan orchard and the barn.

The home was originally built in 1975 but was recently remodeled and expanded in the early 2000s

"Changes to the home were the large open den where the garage area had been, the master suite and bath, a large threecar garage, an exercise room, in addition to opening up and enlarging the kitchen to the living areas," Wells said.

At the front entrance

Visitors are immediately greeted with the opulence and style of fully tiled floors, wrought-iron fixtures and lofty ceilings. The entry room features a sunk-in, carpeted living area and rough-cut beams on the ceiling, giving a rustic feel to the home without sacrificing its luxury. With an open design, the entry room flows naturally into the dining area and kitchen.

The high ceilings throughout the house give an air of space, while the impossibly large window in the main living area allow the outside pine forest to spill into the living space, creating a relaxing and soothing environment.

In the kitchen

The kitchen maintains a strong connection to the rest of the house because of its open design and wide, adobe arches. With granite counter tops and a versatile cooking island, the kitchen is nothing short of luxury and convenience. The stainless steel fridge also adds a nice contemporary touch to the overall design, while maintaining a classic southwestern feel. The kitchen is great for entertaining guests because its open design allows for conversation between the dining area, the kitchen and the other two living areas.

designs, to the master suite's entrance, which overlooks the main living area below, making use of the living room window's overflow of light

What catches the eye upon first entering to the suite is the double-tray ceiling, which affords an artistic touch. A vast amount of space highlights the area, allowing for plenty of shelves and storage, in addition to a reading nook. With an entrance to the back balcony overlooking the pool and pecan orchard, the room offers everything that comes along with a high-scale living experience

In the master bath

Travel farther back and the suite leads to the master bathroom. Featuring granite counter tops and basin style sinks, the bathroom also has a sauna shower and a jet tub, solidifying its luxurious feel.

Wells said the house's design works well because it allows for privacy among the individual rooms, while maintaining an open feel to the rest of the house. She said the master suite is one of her favorite rooms in the house.

"It's a really special house with beautiful views from the master suite and all the space," Wells said. "You really won't want to leave the master suite.

Additional rooms

In addition to the main master suite, the home features a second master bedroom on the opposite side of the house, complete with its own bathroom as well. In addition to two other bedrooms, Wells said the house is ideal for any type of living situation.

"I think it will appeal to all kinds of people. If you have a large family or even if you're single you can live on one end of the house and have total privacy from whomever may occupy the other end," Wells said.

Wells mentioned previous occupants lived as a family on one end, while the other end allowed for the family's mother-in-law to live in privacy from the rest of the house.

Aside from maintaining the vast pecan orchard and the open front-yard, prospective owners will also have an exercise room to keep busy and in shape. The room sits at the rear of the house, near the back patio and pool. With possibilities as a game room or home theater, Wells said the room can serve any purpose.

With so many great features, the home at 2515 Westwind Road seems like a dream; however, it's one dream you won't have to fall asleep to enjoy. Wells said she is eager to show the house and hopes it will bring new occupants years of happiness.

"I think it will appeal to all kinds of people, but definitely people who are willing to grow and maintain the pecan orchard," Wells said. "But it's really conducive for family activities and a great place for children to roam and play."

For more information on the house at 2515 Westwind, contact wells at 644-7070 or at www.martiwells.com.

The high ceilings in the main living area convey extra space and light.

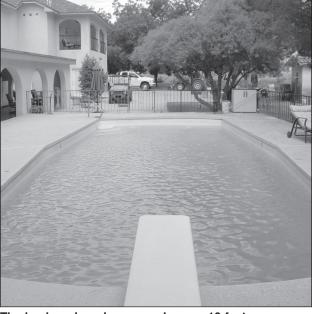

The stairway to the master suite showcases intricate wrought-iron hand railings.

MILES DYSON Living Green

Last month, on a hot July day, I started a home inspection on a beautiful old centennial home in the Alameda area. I happened to notice how the shade from the roof eaves covered the windows on the south side of the wall to roughly 2 inches below the bottom of the window frames. My first thought was "that's pretty lucky!' After a more thorough look at the design of the home, I realized it was not "luck" that provided the relief from the blazing summer sun, but very careful planning by a turn-of-the-century builder.

This home had been carefully laid out with the longest walls and most of the window glass facing directly north or south, as well as a strategically calculated roof eave width-to-window height ratio. This orientation and window placement obviously does a great job of keeping the heat out of the house during the hottest days of summer. But as fall approaches and the sun's angle drops toward the winter solstice position, the cozy homeowners enjoy welcome rays of warmth penetrating the windows far into the rooms of the home.

So was this early 20th century builder some kind of early green building and energy efficiency guru? More likely he was following very well known and established practice for the time – before we knew the convenience of relatively inexpensive power to heat and cool the home.

The surge of post WWII residential construction brought an end to many of the passive heating and cooling design considerations seen in earlier homes. Subdivision lots were laid out for ease of access. Homes could be heated or cooled with new technologies that used cheap power, which helped to make up for less efficient design.

I think current and anticipated energy challenges make it worthwhile to take a look back at proven technologies of the past.

This Alameda home had other seemingly modern green and efficient features incorporated in the design. Deep, screened porches original to the front and back of the home provided important UV protection for west and east facing walls and windows - heat energy that never enters a home does not have to be removed. These porch areas served as outdoor living, dining and sleeping spaces in the summer months and took advantage of our high desert's cooler evening temperatures and summer's lingering daylight to complete household tasks and entertainments (no gas lamps or electricity needed).

Transom windows were originally installed high on the walls over each of the exterior doors in the Alameda home. Important then, as now, properly designed fresh air ventilation is key to energy efficient home design and comfort.

These windows and their placement allow warm air rising to the ceiling to be moved from the home by natural convective air movement with no energy cost incurred.

All of the home's exterior doors were set well under porches or overhangs. This feature contributes to the durability of any home, limiting moisture entry and sun damage to wood doors and trim (how does the trim look on the side door at your house?).

Indoor air quality is not a new problem. The dust issues being hashed out in town today could hardly compare to those seen when the dry (or periodically flooded) caliche dirt streets of early Las Cruces where trod by mules pulling heavy loads and model A's dripping grease and belching blue smoke.

They knew then what we are learning again now – that most household contaminants are brought into the home on our feet. Dedicated areas on the porches gave a place to trade soiled work or traveling boots for cleaner "house shoes".

Out back of the Alameda house there stands a mighty oak. This thing is big, and I am not a tree expert, but it looks like the type of oak that loses its leaves in the winter. The tree's location was my main interest. It was located west and just a little north of the back of the home. As I was finishing my work on the property later in the afternoon, more than half of the roof and walls of the home were basking in the shade of the big tree (I noted stumps of trees in a row at the back of the property that had been less fortunate than the standing specimen). The early "green" builder had implemented another "modern" efficiency technique using deciduous trees to shade of the home's west walls. Of course as fall arrives, the leaves fall away and allow the warming sun to heat the walls on chilly afternoons.

Don't get me wrong, I love comfort and I don't want to trade the conveniences and efficiency of my 1990s home for the under insulated, un-air-conditioned, coalfired home of 1908. I am a proponent of doing more with less and I think my Alameda house example gives some great insight on what can be done in your home to blend proven comfort, health, durability and efficiency strategies of the past with today's green building science breakthroughs.

Simple secrets to spice up your shower

Spice up a drab shower with modern touches

Showering is about so much more than just getting clean. Especially in stressful economic times, the bathroom can be a sanctuary – the private spot in the house where we are free to be totally ourselves, singing loudly and off-key in the shower and indulging ourselves with lather, rinse and repeat.

The average American adult spends eight to 10 minutes in the shower every day, according to several surveys on the topic. Upgrading your shower can help elevate those minutes from soothing to sensational. Plus, bathroom improvements are a proven way to increase your home's value.

So what are some hot trends and easy ways to make the most of your shower time? Here are a few ideas:

Showerhead secrets

If you're still showering under the same old showerhead that provides only a mediocre spray and coverage, it's time to try something new. From single- and multi-setting massaging showerheads to rainfall options and bodysprays that pour a soothing sprinkle overhead, today's showerheads create a wide variety of experiences. Check out your local home improvement store or kitchen and bath showroom to get an idea of the options avail-

Adding a handshower - either to replace an old one or to enhance an existing shower – is another easy, costeffective option for punching up your shower experience. Long valued for their flexibility - handshowers are a great way to keep kids, pets and the shower itself clean. The handshower is also getting a smart upgrade with products such as Kohler's new, affordable Flipside hand-

While traditional handshowers have featured just one sprayface, the Flipside offers four sprayfaces that rotate. Each sprayface provides a different experience in an easy-to-hold and use handshower, including a traditional spray for maximum water coverage, a denser and enveloping downpour, a drenching spray and an invigorating massage spray. Visit www.kohler.com to learn more.

Dress up doors

Most of us probably don't think about our shower doors until it's time to clean them. If your shower door sports scratched acrylic, lime build up and dirty, corroded door tracks, you can boost the look of your shower - not to mention your mood - by installing a new door.

Beauty and practicality are the watchwords of modern shower doors. Manufacturers such as Sterling have given these necessary items a touch of class and elegance, blended with a healthy dose of functionality. The manufacturer offers 17 different decorative shower doors, from frosted with a viewing portal to a style that evokes the designs of Frank Lloyd Wright.

A quick way to add a finishing touch to your shower area, the doors include easy-to-clean features such as CleanCoat, which helps the door shed dirt and soap buildup, and a unique bottom track system that features smooth tracks that lack the crevices where grime builds up in traditional shower door tracks. What's more, some models, like Sterling's Finesse line, install in as little as 15 minutes with just an Allen wrench. To learn more, visit www.SterlingPlumbing.com.

You're surrounded

Finally, if you just can't bear the chipped pink ceramic tile straight out of the 1950s, or the rust-stained porcelain tub that was old when your grandparents were young, a bath/shower surround can be a quick, easy way to put a fresh, modern face on your shower.

A bath/shower surround incorporates three walls, the bathtub and shower doors into a single, seamless unit that is easy to install and maintain. Installing a surround is frequently less costly and quicker than creating one piecemeal with separate tub, shower walls and doors.

For those really looking for ease of installation, consider the Sterling Accord bath/shower. It's affordable and fast to install with an innovative click-together, caulkless wall system that saves time and money.

Spend money to save money

New appliances can trim bloated utility bills

Sometimes you have to spend money to save money. The average household spends about $2,000on energy bills every year. If you switched to appliances and lighting products that are Energy Star rated, you could save $75 a year in energy costs.

According to the Energy Star website, the money you save on your utility bills can more than make up for the cost of a more expensive - but more efficient - Energy Star model. General Electric offers a wide range of Energy Star appliances that can save consumers money.

If your refrigerator was manufactured before 1993, it may be time to say goodbye. In fact, if you want to see just how much your old refrigerator is costing you compared to that meets Energy Star guidelines, there's a calculator on the Energy Star web-

GE Energy Starqualified refrigerators are at least 15 percent more efficient to operate than other refrigerators for sale and at least 50 percent more energy efficient than refrigerators manufactured machines also offer energy, water and money saving opportunities. An Energy Star-qualified clothes washer can save you $550 in operating costs over its lifetime compared to a regular clothes washer. A new GE frontload washer uses as little as 10 gallons of water for a small load and can save more than 5,800 gallons of water each year. In fact, its total energy and water savings can pay for the initial cost of the washer, based on average use over an estimated 12 years.

If you still wash your dishes by hand, you're probably wasting more than just your valuable time. Over an average 11-year lifespan, Energy Star-qualified dishwashers can save $465 in energy and water bills and 55,000 gallons of water - that's a lifetime supply of drinking water for more than four people. Choosing an Energy Star dishwasher instead of a regular dishwasher saves an average of $120 over the life of the prod-

A new tankless gas water heater uses less energy than a standard tank gas water heater because it only activates when you need hot water, and it immediately deactivates when you turn off the faucet. A GE tankless gas water heater could help homeowners save up to 25 percent

Setting the standard in interior design

With 30 years of experience, Hines is a leader in the local industry

By JONATHAN BUTZ

Interior designer Connie Hines sees the world differently than most people. She has a natural eye for balancing shape, form and harmony, but what really sets her apart from the rest of the scope of experience.

The Studio, Connie
Hines Interior Design, located at 665 E. University Ave., Suite C, is a culmination of Hines' artistic analysis of the world around her.

"I have always been interested in mentally dissecting things and seeing how all the different parts come together to make a whole," Hines said.

As a consultant, Hines makes it a priority to remain flexible when working with clients, while striving to create something that is not only aesthetically pleasing, but functional as well.

Her showroom and studio focus on custom furnishings, accessories, art and one-of-a-kind accent pieces, in addition to complete design services for residential and commercial clients.

"It's an important part of interior design to put together a pretty or desirable presentation, but it's also the interior designer's job to look for the comfort, health and well-being of the client," said Hines, describing her philosophy of inte-

"From early on I was extremely observant. As a child, I was always trying design world is a strong work ethic and a broad Most people think to see what made things work ethic and a broad Most people think look the way they did," Hines said.

She got her start as a residential painter, creating murals for a number of organizations, including universities, hospitals and large-scale facilities. Soon after her painting career, Hines got involved in 2-D and 3-D design, which she said was a major contributor to her repertoire and skill set.

"Most people look at things on one plane, but when you're working with two and three dimensions it allows you to view the whole picture," Hines said.

Now, after almost 30 years working with interior design, Hines is a major leader in the local industry as a statelicensed professional interior designer. Hines is consistently active in the community, as her resume seems to stretch for miles. She serves on the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, the Building Industry Association of Southern New Mexico, the Doña Ana Arts Council and the Downtown Design Committee, among others.

She has also served a number of committees and organizations that have helped shape the design industry throughout New Mexico and the world, Interior Designers, the New Mexico State University Art Gallery Board of Trustees and the International Interior Design Association.

Hines also helped set the standard for New Mexico interior design when she served on the Standards Committee of the New Mexico Board of Interior Design, in which she helped develop the Code of Standards and Ethics of Professional Conduct for Licensed Interior Designers in New Mexico. She was also recently appointed by Gov. Bill Richardson to the ew Mexico Interior Design Board.

Hines said she has always believed in being active in the community, and emphasized the work that goes into keeping abreast with the ever-changing design industry. In order for designers to maintain their status as state licensed professionals, Hines said there are countless classes and design courses required.

The great pumpkin comes to Las Cruces

Local gardener breaks state record for growing the largest pumpkin

By JONATHAN BUTZ

Halloween is still more than two months away, but there seems to be a little early Hallow's Eve magic at work in the back yard of local gardener Danny Oxford, owner of Haydens Hard-

As of now, Oxford has a giant pumpkin weighing more than 400 pounds thriving in his garshrivels in comparison to records set throughout the country.

Oxford said New Mexico does not provide an ideal climate for growing giant pumpkins, which is why his 400-pound, orange mass of seeds and pulp seems to be so special.

"I originally decided to grow the pumpkin because someone told me I would never be able to

The local business owner said he has been gardening since he was a child. Coming from a family of eight children, he said gardening was an integral part of his early life, serving as sustenance for himself and his siblings.

Growing a total of four giant pumpkins, Oxford plans to have his largest pumpkin officially weighed and documented Thursday, Aug. 18. He also intends to con-weighed in on subsequent dates, with hopes of breaking his own record. One of the pumpkins, however, has already split, due to its rapid growth, disqualifying it as a record-setting pumpkin.

Although Oxford said he has enjoyed growing his pumpkins, he said they require a large amount of maintenance, along with the care and attention of a devoted parent. He has even gone so far as naming his pumpkins, the largest being "Jimbo," followed by the "Old Lady," the "Old Man" and the "Runt."

"It's a lot of maintenance, a lot of pruning, covering the vines and assuring the new vines start," Oxford said. "I was constantly coming out here and checking on the pumpkins."

"I want to assure myself of beating the record with Jimbo, but I want to let the others keep going so I can try and break my own record.

The pumpkins grow at a rate of about 15 to 20 pounds per day and Danny said the process is very long and tedious, requiring constant attention, especially due to the warm New Mexico weather. Unlike other giant pumpkin growers on the east coast, Oxford said he keeps his pumpkin patch surrounded in grass to keep everything cool, while he also has fixed each pumpkin with its own shade tarp. From incubation to the full-grown specimen, Oxford has been along side his pumpkins through the whole process, protecting them from hot weather, curious cats that like to scratch the pumpkins' surface and fungus.

"I use cayenne pepper to keep the cats away, because they like to come and sharpen their claws on the pumpkin's surface, causing it to eventually break and split apart. For some reason the pepper keeps the cats away," Oxford said.

Additionally, Oxford had to use mill's paper, a smooth, porous material, which he placed beneath each pumpkin. He said without the paper, the pumpkins grow so fast that they cause the surrounding soil to build up along the base, retaining moisture and making the pumpkins more susceptible to fungus and mold.

"The mill's paper is nice and slick, so it allows the pumpkin to grow and spread out smoothly without any friction," Oxford

Oxford said he has been extremely grateful for the help he received from the Master Gardeners of New Mexico State Uni-

The local community has also showed a response, especially local children who constantly come record-setting pumpkin.

Oxford also kept a diary of his growing process to verify and legitimize his efforts. Though he is excited about setting a new record for the state of Mexico, Oxford Oxford said he has mostly enjoyed the actual growing of the pumpkin.

"It's not just about the pump-kin, but about the growing process and watching it develop," Oxford said.

There is no doubt of Oxford's success, as he has technically already broken the state record; however, he said he doesn't plan on growing giant pumpkins again. Though the process takes devotion, he said just about any-one can grow their own giant pumpkins with the right amount of caution and attention to detail. As of next year, it will be up to someone else to carry Oxford's pumpkin legacy.

Flatten your colanders and measuring cups to save space

Students trying to cook may find collapsible items invaluable

By JONATHAN BUTZ
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Some people starting college may avoid cooking altogether because it can be not only time consuming, but space consum-

Simple items used in cooking can pose some storage problems, as they are often large, bulky and awkward – especially when space is limited in a new dorm or apartment.

Although it may be convenient to reach from your futon to your microwave without getting up, some students may find cooking a feasible option with the help of some space-saving collapsible kitchen items.

Many local vendors feature variety of kitchen items that fold up and collapse into more manageable shapes, making for easier storage.

What is it?

Collapsible items range from colanders and measuring cups to over-the-kitchen sink strainers and flat-storing bowls.

Colanders especially take up a significant amount of space, but there are other, more economic colanders such as the OXO Good Grips Silicone Collapsible Colander, which features non-slip handles and can withstand up to 600 degrees of heat.

Other collapsible items include the Chef'n SleekStor Collapsible Measuring Cup Set, which features different size cups for precise measuring. When you're done, the cups can be flattened and stored away.

How does it work?

Most collapsible kitchen items have components made of pliable silicone material, which can be compressed and expanded without losing the item's original shape. Other items use a terrace design, allowing for flat storing. All collapsible items are easy to fit into a dishwasher and clean up relatively easily.

How much does it cost?

Depending on the type of item and the brand, most collapsible kitchen gadgets range from $15 to $30. Most collapsible colanders cost about $29, while a set of collapsible measuring cups or bowls may run about $20.

Where can it be found?

Many local vendors, such as Bed, Bath & Beyond and Las Cosas Kitchen Shoppe & Cooking School, feature collapsible kitchen items. Bed Bath & Beyond sells a large variety of colanders, while Las Cosas has a variety of measuring cups, funnels and bowls.

Helpful hints:

Despite their flimsy, plastic appearance, most collapsible kitchen items are actually incredibly durable. If you take care of your items, they will prove an invaluable part of your cooking repertoire. Lastly, be sure to use caution while in the kitchen, no matter how small it may be.

A collapsible colander available at Bed. Bath & Beyond may prove useful in crowded kitchens.

Keep your lips smooth plus everything else

Use lip balm to stop bleeding, groom a mustache and make a stuck zipper zip

By JONATHAN BUTZ

Lip balms are often lifesavers, especially while traveling under the hot New Mexican sun.

Excessive heat or cold can easily split one's lips in no time, which is why lip balm is often No. 1 on the hiker's or backpacker's list of required items.

Lip balms come in a variety of colors, shapes and flavors and most are made of beeswax, petroleum jelly, menthol or camphor, while others add vitamins, alum or salicylic acid to the mix.

Lip balm first made an appearance in 1880 when Dr. C. D. Fleet invented Chap Stick, which was made by melting wax and pouring it into a brass tube for easy access and storage. Other brands of lip balm, such as Carmex and Blistex, made their first appearance in the early 1930s and '40s.

Although lip balm is commonly used on the kisser, very few people know of the many uses for lips balm around the house.

- 1) Prevent car battery corrosion: If crusty battery terminals are a constant problem, rub some lip balm around the terminals to protect and preserve them from corrosion.
- 2) Stop bleeding while shaving: For most men, shaving can be a dreadful and even dangerous experience. Blood can be spilled if a big enough knick is made on the right part of the neck. In case of one of those nasty cuts, grab some lip balm and apply to the wound. The balm will help to stop bleeding and seal up the cut opening.
- 3) Groom a mustache or eyebrows: Wild mustaches and eyebrows are not only unattractive, but itchy as well. Keep facial hair in line by applying a small amount of lip balm to hold and smoothen. Lip balm works especially great with certain complex mustache styles.
- 4) Prevent hair coloring from dying your skin: Some people change their hair color more often than their clothes. If you constantly struggle with different dyes and coloring products, you can apply some lip balm along the edge of your forehead to prevent the dye from staining. Now every-one will think that pink mohawk is all natural.

Lubricate a zipper: There's nothing more frustrating than a tricky zipper that's always getting stuck. A stuck zipper is especially irksome on a hot day, making it impossible to get out of one's clothes. For future reference, don't become a prisoner locked inside your jeans. Keep your zippers lubricated with lip balm. The balm will reduce friction and allow your zipper to function prop-

6) Lubricate nails and screws: For construction projects, lip balm can be just as important as a screwdriver and hammer. If there is a particularly tight spot on your next project, just bathe your screws and nails in lip balm for easier and smoother driving.

7) Remove a ring stuck on a finger: Sometimes pesky jewelry won't budge without the proper lubrication. If you can't get a ring off your finger, try using some lip balm to slick up your finger and the ring will slide right off.

Around-the-house item: Lip balm

8) Lubricate furniture drawers and windows: If drawers or windows in your house keep getting stuck, dab some lip balm on the casters for lubrication. Your drawers will be able to open smoothly without the harsh smell of WD-40.

Be creative when using your lip balm, just be sure to keep it clean. It's also probably a good idea to keep a lip balm specifically for your lips, while a second balm can be used around the house. Balms away!

Chile pepper harvest comes to our lush-green valley

A New Mexican staple, here to stay

The sweet and delicious aroma of roasting chile is officially sweeping the valley and the world famous Hatch Chile Festival is only weeks away. In celebration of this year's harvest, I share several recipes - recipes that are sassy and sizzling and simply savory!

The following old-fashioned hometown recipes appear (as is, a little tweaking) in the cookbook, "Recipes from Hatch N.M., Award Winning Recipes," published by the Hatch Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America, date unknown.

Meat Burritos

(June Rutherford, owner Hatch Chile Express store, Hatch, N.M.)

1 pound ground beef 1/2 pound ground pork 1 small onion 4 medium size potatoes 2 cups roasted green chile, chopped 1 tablespoon dry chicken bouillon 1 pound grated asadero cheese dozen flour tortillas Garlic

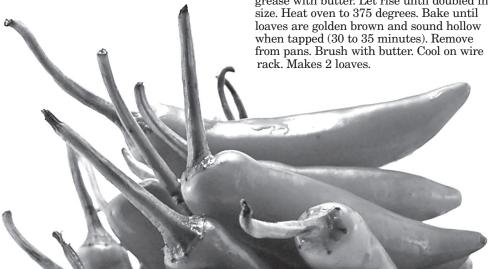

Dice potatoes and boil with a little salt until tender. Drain and set aside. Fry ground meat with chopped onions and add seasoning to taste. When done, add diced potatoes and green chile. Mix in chicken bouillon. Warm up flour tortillas. Spoon meat mixture across the tortilla. Add grated cheese. Roll up separately. Wrap in wax paper until ready to eat.

Green Chile Rellenos Sandia

(Toni Berry)

6 Sandia chiles, peeled 2 large eggs 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 pound longhorn cheese, cut into 1/4 to 1/2 inch pieces 1 cup flour

Beat 2 egg whites until thick and foamy. Beat in yokes, if desired. Split chile lengthwise. Stuff cheese into split chile. Roll and mix with salt and flour on a paper towel. Let rest. While oil heats to medium hot, dip chile in egg. Then brown on both sides. Drain and blot on paper towels. Serve immediately.

Salsa Fresca

(Helen Trujillo)

1 1/4 pound red ripe tomatoes chopped 1/2 cup onion, finely chopped 1 tablespoon hot red or green chiles, chopped 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar

1 teaspoon garlic, finely minced 1 teaspoon crumbled dried oregano Salt to taste

1 tablespoon fresh cilantro, chopped 1 tablespoon lime juice

Put all ingredients in a bowl. Stir and serve at room temperature or cold.

Chile Crust Bread

(Shaina Franzoy)

2 packages yeast 2 cups warm water 1 tablespoon New Mexico Red Chile Powder 1/2 cup sugar 1 tablespoon salt 2 eggs 1/4 cup oil 6 to 6 1/2 cups flour

Dissolve yeast in warm water in a large mixing bowl. Stir in sugar, chile, salt, eggs, 1/4 cup oil and 3 cups of the flour. Beat until smooth. Mix in the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Turn dough onto a lightly floured surface. Knead dough until smooth and elastic (about 8 to 10 minutes). Place in lightly greased bowl, and then turn greased side up. Cover. Let rise in warm place until doubled in size, about 1 hour.

Punch down dough. Divide into halves. Roll each half into a rectangular shape. Place loaf, seam side down in greased baking pan (9-by-5-by-3). Brush with oil or grease with butter. Let rise until doubled in size. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Bake until

A sea of chile peppers are ready to be harvested, prepped and stored for later use.

Green Chile Enchiladas

(Mrs. Gene Parker)

3/4 pounds of hamburger 7 Chiles, roasted, peeled an chopped 1/2 clove of garlic, minced

1 can cream of chicken soup 1 can cream of mushroom 1 can of water Tortillas Grated cheese

Mix and cook ingredients together. Let simmer 20 minutes. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Put some of the soup mixture in the bottom of pan. Then add generous layer of tortillas (have tortillas overlap). Put soup mixture on top. Then add a generous amount of grated cheese. Then add another layer of tortillas, soup mixture and cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Then sprinkle cheese on top when you take it out of the oven.

Maggie Gamboa's Chile Sauce Recipes

(from Maggie's cookbook "Recetas del Valley, Mesilla Valley Recipes," 1988 Saint Albert the Great Parish and Newman Center, Las Cruces, N.M.)

Red Chile Sauce

This is your basic red chile sauce for enchiladas or red chile con carne.

While dry pods or chile powder may be used in making red chile sauce, fresh red chile can also be used. Pungency is largely in the veins of the chile. For a milder sauce, remove veins.

Remove stems, seed and veins from 12 to 24 red chile pods. Wash pods in warm water. Place in a pan and cover with boiling water. Let the pods stand in the water until the pulp separates easily from the tough outer skin. Place eight chiles and 1 cup of water in blender. Process until chiles are broken in medium size pieces. Do not puree. Put through a colander, adding enough water to remove

If sauce is very thick, thin with water to desired consistency. Continue process until all red pods are processed.

Enchilada Sauce

For enchilada sauce, heat 1 1/2 tablespoon lard or oil in a medium saucepan. Stir in 1 1/2 tablespoons flour until mixture is smooth. Cook about 1 minute. Add pureed chile, 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder, 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin and salt to taste. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Cook and stir until slightly thickened. Taste and add ore salt if needed.

Red Sauce Made with Ground or Powdered Chile

Most people agree that sauce prepared from chile pods is the most desirable, but if pods are not available, the following sauce is quite good. Ground or powdered chile can be found in most supermarkets but for the best results, make sure to get only pure ground or powdered chile rather than a blended chile powder.

1 quart boiling water 2 tablespoons fat or lard 1 teaspoon salt 8 tablespoons ground or powdered red chile 2 tablespoons flour

Add fat and salt to the boiling water in a large sauce pan. Mix the powdered chile and flour together, then add enough cold water to make a paste. Stir in the paste into the boiling water slowly, stirring constantly until the sauce thickens. If the sauce is not desired consistency, add more powder. If it is too hot, add more flour.

Grasshoppers have been portrayed in all different lights.

Grasshoppers Inspire Goodwill

Small creatures are a normal part of our culture

Grasshoppers are among the lithe jumpers of the insect world, sporting large hind legs and short thick antennae.

They're often seen hopping around in the grass throughout the world – but like many insects, they also are permanent inhabitants of our culture, taking a place in literature, movies and history, and in recent films including "A Bug's Life." Sometimes the characterization's are kindly, and others are fearsome – an emotion based both on fiction and reality in the case of this bug.

Locusts are in the fear-inspiring category, historically swarming to ravage crops and ruin food supplies in locales around the world. Locusts are short-horned grasshoppers that change in color and behavior when the population becomes dense.

Names like the katydid form softer thoughts of quiet summer nights. Plenty will also think in terms of the cicada that spends most of its life quietly underground and emerges briefly to create an almost electric buzz. In reality, however, neither katydids nor cicada are grasshoppers, according to New Mexico State University's website.

wing or abdomen, or make sound from wing-to-wing contact. The chirping – as well as display flights – are functions of mating and territoriality, according to NMSU.

They primarily eat vegetation, but will eat other damaged insects – including other grasshoppers – to supplement their protein. Birds, robber flies and hunting wasps are among the grasshopper's prime predators in New Mexico.

This is an insect that's also a foodstuff, providing a source of protein. They are eaten by cultures around the world, including in Africa, China and Mexico.

In addition to the introduction of natural predators, grasshopper populations are controlled in part by tilling the soil – where grasshoppers lay eggs and nymphs live – in addition to using insecticides.
