In District 37: Rawson is out

County to certify tally following more review

By Todd G. Dickson

State Sen. Lee Rawson has conceded his loss to Democrat challenger Steve Fischmann after it became apparent he wouldn't be able to overcome a 614-vote spread, despite concerns about problems with absentee ballots.

But it was concerns about a lack of federal ballots that kept the Doña Ana County Commission from certifying the election results when it met as the canvassing board on Wednesday, Nov. 12.

In a letter sent to the Bulletin that day (see full text of the letter on Page A6), Rawson acknowledged that the count of absentee ballots in Doña Ana County did not gain him enough votes to win re-election. At Wednesday's canvassing hearing, the count in Doña Ana County was 12,684 for Fischmann to 11,663 for Rawson.

Rawson's Senate District 37 includes portions of Sierra County, but a series of the series of t but even with those numbers added on the New Mexico Secretary of State's website, Fischmann still had 51.2 percent of the vote, 614 more votes than Rawson, who was the Senate Minority Whip.

"I want to thank the numerous people I have represented for giving me this honor and privilege," Rawson wrote. "I have poured my heart into serving each one of you in this unpaid capacity, often bearing your burdens with you, and it has been my joy to work diligently in your behalf.

Rawson said he always had the best interests of his constituents at heart in his actions and took pride in his constituent service.

Fischmann was out of town for the latter part of this week and wasn't available for immediate comment.

Man fights Germans after Nazi regime kills his family

By ROLF MITCHEL

Editor's note: In honor of Veterans Day, Las Cruces resident Rolf Mitchel gave a talk about his experiences at the main post office on Friday, Nov. 7. What follows is a condensed version of his remarkable life story.

My father served in the German military service during World War I. He began his service as a cavalry officer at the beginning of that war and soon switched to the Imperial Flying Corps. By May 1915, he had earned, not only the Iron Cross Second Class, but also the Iron Cross First Class, which was presented to him by the emperor. Later in his career, he was assigned to Pursuit Squadron 11 of the German Imperial Air Service, commanded by Baron Manfred von Richthofen. In short, he became a member of the famous "Flying Circus." Another member of that squadron was Hermann Goehring, who, later, became Hitler's Commander-in-Chief of the Luftwaffe, Germany's Air Force. After being shot down for the third time and being seriously wounded, it was decided that three was enough, and he was released from the service. He came home and became

In June 1923, he married my mother in Berlin. At the time, inflation was rampant in Germany and he often told me the story that when he came home with a week's wages, they barely paid for a loaf of bread because money decreased in value so rapidly.

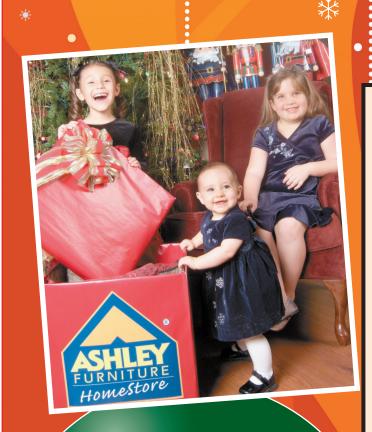

In September 1924, I was born. A few years later, my father was offered a position with the German Army High Command and was assigned to work at the Army Stationing Control Office. We had an official residence, an apartment in the complex where he worked. Two doors from us lived a family consisting of a lieutenant colonel and his wife and a son, who was two years my junior. Later, he was transferred and became quite famous. His name was Erwin Rommel.

One evening, after Adolf Hitler and the Nazis had come to power, there was a knock on the door. Two men from the German Air Ministry stood at the door and, on orders from Goehring, had come with an offer that, if my father would return to active duty, he would be made a colonel and the Fuehrer (Hitler) himself would award him the Knight's Cross and he would be assigned a high position in the Ministry. My father was very opposed to the Nazi regime and he told Goehring's emissaries so and

County commission approves GRT increase for jail services

Mental health care likely use of money

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Starting July 1, 2009, gross receipts taxes in Doña Ana County will increase by one-sixteenth of 1 percent – or 6.25 cents on a $100 purchase – to help pay for the detention center.

Though the increase – which the county commission could pass without taking it before voters – was promoted as needed for providing mental health services, County Attorney John Caldwell said it could also be used to help pay for staffing or other pressing needs of the jail.

Nevertheless, people speaking in favor of the increase on Wednesday, Nov. 12, talked about how the jail has become a dumping ground for the mentally ill because of the government not replacing enough other services in the movement to put the mentally ill in institutions.

Mental health advocate Ron Gurley said the county's jail has become by default "Las Vegas South" — in reference to the state's only mental health hospital in Las Vegas, N.M. The availability of local hospital beds for the mentally ill is lacking, as well as very expensive, he said.

Given the low level of state funding for mental health, any increase is a step in the right direction, said resident Margaret Markham.

Those comments got commissioners complaining about "unfunded mandates" from the state. The jail holds people charged with state crimes prior to arraignment without reimbursement from the state.

County Commissioner Oscar Vasquez Butler said staff has estimated that the county is burdened with $6 million in annual expenses from services mandated by state law without any kind of funding from the state.

County Commissioner Karen Perez said she received many emails from residents against tax increases – two years ago the county commission approved a similar GRT increase to better pay for law enforcement, emergency response and fire safety.

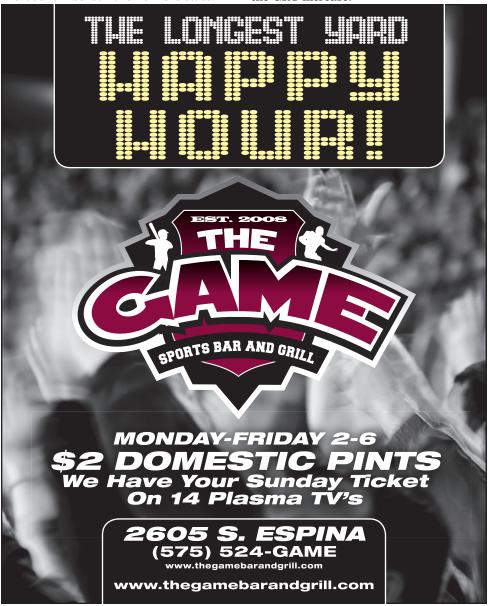

Perez said those complaining about the increase should contact their legislators, not the county commissioners. She said this action was forced on the commission by the state and that the county is trying to stretch the money it has available as far as possible.

"Our budget will only stretch so far without cutting other programs," Perez said.

Commissioner Bill McCamley said he and the other commissioners were in a "damned-if-you-do, damned-if-you-don't situation." If the commission doesn't do something to increase funding for jail services, it puts the county at greater liability for lawsuits if something bad happens at the jail. By not offering financial support for the jail services, the state is "passing the buck to counties," he said.

County Commission Chairman Kent Evans agreed and described it as a no-win situation.

Commissioners unanimously passed the GRT increase.

Philippou offers park options

Council also outlines electric concerns

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

At a work session on Monday, Nov. 10, the Las Cruces city councillors said they want to push El Paso Electric Co. into providing more electricity generated by renewable sources in the upcoming franchise agreement renewal negotiations.

Mayor Ken Miyagishima also urged for councillor involvement in the negotiations supported by public-input suggestions from a committee.

Steve Fischmann of the Southwest Energy Alliance welcomed the council's desire to use the franchise agreement to get the utility to be more responsive to changing energy dynamics, but also cautioned the councillors to strike a balance in these negotiations because the private utility still needed to make a profit.

Whatever is negotiated will still have to be approved by the state Public Regulation Commission.

Also at the work session, developer Philip Philippou told the council he was open to subdividing the Las Cruces County Club property so that some of it could remain open green space if the city can't afford to acquire all 110 acres.

Once Philippou completes the country club's new golf course and clubhouse in his Sierra Norte development, he will own the old country club. Country club neighbors and other residents see this as an opportunity for the city to add some or all of the country club property the adjacent Apodaca Park to create what has been called a "premier park" for the city.

Councillors praised Philippou for being willing to discuss the possibility of the park and provide the options.

Thanks veterans

Last week's celebrations were highlighted with the signing of a community covenant

By DAVID E. McCOLLUM
The Las Cruces Bulletin

McCOLLUM

Last Saturday was a special day. Following our city's annual Veterans Day parade, on a sunny Las Cruces autumn day, the Bulletin was honored to host, along with the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and community leaders, a VIP tailgate party prior to the Aggie football game. The "VIPs" included dozens of WWII veterans who have enlisted in the Honor Flight program, including some of the renowned Navajo Code Talkers whose language provided an unbreakable code that baffled the Japanese during WWII and contributed to the successful outcome of the war. Additionally, we were joined by our friends and neighbors from the expansive White Sands Missile Range, including WSMR's new Commanding Gen. David L. Mann and his wife Robyn.

More than 500 guests were treated to a traditional barbecue featuring Marci Dickerson's best sirloin burgers, beef ribs and sausage along with all the fixings. William A. Mattiace (Bill's son) and Jaki McCollum served special cake for dessert. John Muñoz and his Sitel team generously provided gift bags for all the participants.

vided gift bags for all the participants.

As expected, several of our guests arrived earlier than the designated noon start time. One veteran showed up just after 11 a.m. and announced that he was "hungry as a dog" and was ready to eat. Fortunately, Marci's barbecue team was already set up and was able to begin serving nearly an hour earlier than planned. It was good to have the chance to sit with many of the early arrivals – including former New Mexico State University President Gerald Thomas, and former Aggie basketballer and now pecan farmer Stuart Meerscheidt – and visit briefly about their war experiences and to be able to personally say "thank you" for their service to

The tailgate event went very smoothly, and by 1:30 p.m. everyone had been served. The highlight of the day was the public signing, during half-time of the Aggie game, of the Community Covenant among the military contingent at WSMR and the communities of Las Cruces and Alamogordo.

Several key people assisted in organizing the event including Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima and Mayor Pro Tem Dolores Archuleta along with County Commission Chairman Kent Evans. Bill Connor, head of the chamber's Military Affairs Committee led the planning for the day's events. Bill and his wife, City Councillor Dolores Connor greeted and helped to serve every guest at the tailgate event. Chamber Vice President Bill Mattiace coordinated the Honor Flight attendees, and First Community Bank's Gary Lenzo handled the distribution of the game tickets to each participant. Chamber President/CEO Jim Berry and his GLCCC team helped set up the tailgate area, and, along with Hispano Chamber leaders, President Toby Rue and Executive Director Rachel Banegas, and NMSU's Ben Woods, greeted attendees.

As for the football game, the game sponsors were Wells Fargo Bank, the City of Las Cruces and the Bulletin. The only thing that could have made the day perfect would have been an Aggie win over Hawaii. That did not happen. However, the loss did not detract from the powerful, positive patriotic feelings that were generated by the other events of the day and the public commitment for WSMR and our city to work together for mutual benefit.

Thanks to everyone for making this day possible. And a special thanks to our veterans whose sacrifices have allowed us to celebrate our many freedoms.

Cruzado: Thanks to voters

On behalf of the New Mexico State University system, I would like to thank the voters of New Mexico for their support of the statewide bond issues on Tuesday's ballot.

In particular, voters' support for Bond B, benefiting libraries, Bond C, benefiting health facilities, and Bond D, benefiting education, will help us move the university forward in our continuing efforts to meet the educational needs of our diverse populations. As we strive for that goal, through excellence in teaching, research and service, having this commitment of support from the citizens of New Mexico is essential, and much appreciated, especially so in challenging economic times.

Your vote enables us to move ahead on several fronts, from taking a significant step toward a Center for the Arts at NMSU-Las Cruces that will serve the entire region, to continuing the essential process of updating book and journal collections and subscribing to electronic databases in our libraries. Statewide, voters helped NMSU-Carlsbad with the $3 million Allied Health Center, on Bond C. On Bond D, voters supported NMSU's efforts to improve aging infrastructure at NMSU-Alamogordo ($1 million); NMSU-Carlsbad ($300,000); and NMSU-Grants ($1 million).

For NMSU-Doña Ana Community College, Bond D includes $6 million to help construct Phase Six of the East Mesa Center and $500,000 for the Technical Studies Building. Bond D also included $2.4 million for the New Mexico Department of Agriculture's agriculture facility.

Tuesday's results certainly showed just how much New Mexicans value lifelong learning throughout our state. We will continue to work very hard in strengthening our ties with the communities we serve and our commitment to serving our citizens with excellence in everything we do

Thank you for helping us transform lives at New Mexico State University.

WADED CRUZADO Interim President New Mexico State University

Waiting on the polar bears

Have you seen a polar bear lately? When you do, look hard. They're becoming extinct because the polar ice cap is melting.

Have you bought a car lately? Loans are probably easier if it runs on electricity or natural gas. In Las Cruces electricity is probably the best choice because it's easy to find, and you can add it to a car at a fairly low cost. Your car dealer can arrange it at an increase in the price. Best buy in town. It'll run 100 miles on one charge that will cost about $2. In today's economy that's a good deal. Why wait for Detroit to get around to it?

Reducing our use of petroleum will improve our environment and adding an energy-efficient system to cars will create jobs and improve our finances. All good stuff that we need. Do it!

Is it time to write an epitaph for the Republican Party?

History on the side of another GOP comeback

Is the Republican Party dead? The question is being asked widely at the state and national levels. Some pundits are speculating that the GOP will go the way of the Whigs, who were replaced by the Republican party in 1856 as being outdated.

My answer is the same as it was last week. Republicans will come back. And, if Democrats aren't careful, it will be sooner rather than later. There was a similar euphoria 16 years ago after Bill Clinton won the White House

The Democratic Leadership Conference, composed primarily of Southern governors and senators, had forged a new Democratic Party based on centrist positions that would attract Democrats and Republicans alike.

Clinton had won his share of the Deep South and Border States plus four Rocky Mountain states. His message was compelling, and he delivered it masterfully.

But in the first two years of his administration, the Clintons overstepped their bounds so far that Newt Gingrich was able to put together a new platform for the GOP that swept Republican majorities into both houses of Congress and kept them there for 12 years.

Now that the tide has turned the other direction, some Republicans are suggesting that Gingrich be asked to lead another countercharge. At 65, Gingrich still has the energy and enthusiasm to take on the task, but he may not be the person for the job this time.

Republicans have long been the party of old white men, and that's not selling well outside the Deep South, Appalachia, the Great Plains and some of the Rockies. It's not enough for a winning coalition.

Although some of the states are growing, the influx from the Northeast and the Rust Belt don't usually vote the same way. And these states don't have the large population centers and big electoral votes of the Blue States.

The soccer moms in the suburbs are changing their minds and beginning to vote more Democrat. The young never were with the Grand Old Party, but most of them didn't vote, so it didn't matter. But this time they voted. So did Hispanics – the fastest-growing minority.

One can argue rural over big-city values, but the population is headed the other direction. The GOP must broaden its tent in order to continue winning elections. The focus this time was on appealing to its base, an idealistic group, unwilling to accept anyone but true believers.
Use of the term "the base" may not be wise either. The term has long been used by political scientists, but a group of uncompromising Muslims has chosen the same name. My historical mentor, Dave Clary of Roswell, points out that al-Qaida translates into English as "the base."

Republicans don't have many new faces in the party who can equal the appeal of an Obama. Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal is perhaps the brightest of the stars. Others include Sarah Palin, Mitt Romney and Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty.

But Republicans like to nominate familiar names for president. Since 1952, every winning Republican ticket has included Richard Nixon or a Bush. That's nine presidential terms for a total of 36 years. And there are more Bushes out there in the shrubs.

Republicans don't have much time to turn the tide. Redistricting of state legislatures and Congress takes place in 2011. State legislatures will do the redistricting for both.

The New Mexico senators we elected on Nov. 4 will participate in that redistricting. State House members will stand for election in 2010. If it remains solidly Democratic and another Democratic governor is elected, Democrats will be in position to strengthen election chances for the next decade.

New Mexico Republicans faded big time in 1930, after the stock market crash. No Republican governor was elected again until 1950 and the GOP didn't make a comeback in the Legislature until the late 1960s.

But they came back.

Gallagher: Law makes NMSU's presidential search 'cumbersome'

Search committee will meet on Monday

By Bob Gallagher

With the search for New Mexico State University's new president ongoing, it is understandable that people are wondering where we are in the process. To see where we are now, it is important to know how we got to this point.

Up front, I want to thank my fellow regents and the Presidential Search Committee, who continue to work painstakingly to find the best-possible candidates who can move NMSU forward and who embrace the ideals and visions of this university.

The search for NMSU's next president started in June when we hired the search firm of R. William Funk and Associates from Dallas. They began advertising the president's position nationally in July. As one of our nation's top recruiters for university presidents, Funk and Associates has access to individuals that we simply would not have reached without their services. We continue to be impressed by the number of people interested in this position and the excitement nationally for working at NMSU. Out of this initial effort, the search consultant was able to identify 43 active candidates.

By the end of August, a 25-member Presidential Search Committee was formed made up of faculty, staff, students, alumni and community members that represents the breadth of the university and the State of New Mexico. The search committee serves as the face of the university so applicants for the position of president will see the diverse constituencies this institution serves.

From the 43 active candidates, the search committee eventually identified eight candidates and invited them to interviews at an off-site location, which were conducted on Oct. 11 and 12. Following those interviews, the search committee offered their thoughts and recommended possible candidates to the search consultant for possible consideration by the Board of Regents.

For the last several weeks, the search consultant has been working with the candidates while conducting extensive background checks. Through this process, we are finding that the New Mexico state law requiring NMSU to bring five candidates to campus for interviews has made the search more cumbersome than it should be. This law has proven to be an impediment. Outstanding leaders seldom want their current employer to know they are looking for work, let alone risk competing publicly with a large pool of qualified candidates. The pool of candidates consisted of four sitting presidents and eight provosts from large, recognizable universities, in fact, one candidate has just been named acting president at

The search committee will meet this week to gather input about this process and develop a strategy on how to move forward. The Board of Regents will be meeting on Monday, Nov. 17, to discuss the search and consider recommendations made by the search committee.

We will continue to do our best to ensure that we perform our role as the Board of Regents appropriately and that all the rules and regulations of this state are followed as we move forward with this important selection.

I want to thank everyone for their understanding and support throughout this process. We want to uphold the public's trust and continue to be good stewards of this outstanding institution. I know our work will result in a top-notch president at NMSU, who the entire campus, community, state and nation will be proud of.

Rawson addresses constituents

The Doña Ana County Clerk's Office has now completed the count of the provisional ballots in Senate District 37. Our district, which is the third-largest by number of registered voters, appears to have a new senator to represent us.

I want to thank the numerous people I have represented for giving me this honor and privilege. I have poured my heart into serving each one of you in this unpaid capacity, often bearing your burdens with you, and it has been my joy to work diligently on your behalf.

Your best interests have always been the focus of my efforts, whether it was constituent service, negotiations or a vote. My personal integrity would not allow otherwise.

It has been my goal to honor you by raising the standard in every area, and I believe this has been accomplished. Here are a few examples:

- Constituent service and availability, which is second
- Pre-legislative session surveys, at my personal
- Email notifications of items of importance and interest
- Attendance and voting records that lead the entire
- Restoring the dignity and demeanor of the Senate Rebuilding the Senate to focus together on issues,
- not partisanship positions Issue-oriented campaigns

My successor would do well to build on these higher standards. I anticipate that you will keep him informed of your concerns and interests. I am confident that you will hold him accountable to accurately and diligently represent you.

We have invested about 70 percent of our time serving and working for you. Moira and I, along with our family, are looking forward to reinvesting this time with our family, friends, neighbors, church and business. We lost both of our fathers this past year and a half, will have two more grandchildren in the next three months and are in very uncertain economic times.

We have no regrets as we have joyfully served you whole-heartedly. Our Lord is leading us in a new direction, and we are excited about the opportunities ahead. SEN. LEONARD LEE RAWSON

Chisme: New Mexico public schools will need to let many employees go

By MICHAEL SWICKARD For the Las Cruces Bulletin

"There cannot be a crisis today; my schedule is already full." $\,$

- Henry Kissinger

Chisme has it there is a financial crisis due to hit the next New Mexico Legislature. Where I grew up in New Mexico, the Spanish word "chisme" means something said as an unconfirmed rumor, perhaps gossip, provocative in nature and not necessarily untrue.

Several analysts told me privately that New Mexico has taken a big hit financially in the last couple of months. The projected $400 million surplus is a lost dream, and there will be a huge shortfall next year.

Last year the New Mexico budget was around $6 billion. The projection is that the shortfall might be $1 billion, forcing a $5 billion budget.

Public school budgets are about half of the state budget, and about 90 percent of that is used to employ people. So we are not talking about cutting back on pencils, there must be massive changes in personnel if this is true. Unless the entire half billion is going to come out of some other department. Not likely.

This will require laying people off to balance the books. It will be many people unless the state government discovers a huge financial resource, raises personal income tax dramatically or the gross receipts tax is increased to 15 percent.

To the insiders, it is obvious that many people will have to go. The state cannot go in the red, so cuts must be made. Talk about an ugly scene. In a state that is said to cherish the ability to hire cousins, I see lots of bitter fights tied to protecting cousins.

How bad will it be? The average pay of the 37,098 educational personnel is a bit more than $42,000 a year. The administrative average is about $60,000 while the teacher average is about $46,000. Then there are the educational assistants and support personnel such as nurses. Outside that number are the bus drivers, cafeteria workers, janitors and maintenance workers

Recently, the Gadsden Independent School District was several million behind due to accounting problems. They are laboring over how to save $4 million. Imagine if come Legislature time that financial number to cut for Gadsden is $15 million, then what happens?

The places I hope the state does not fix upon as the easiest to cut are the long-term teachers who have been prodded and pushed into getting higher education degrees with the promise of a hefty raise. There are three pay levels for teachers: beginning (level one, 30,000), journeymen, (level two, 40,000) and master teacher, (level three, 50,000) with some differences depending on school district. Long-term teachers who are Level Three can be making nearly 60,000 a year while first year teachers would make one half of that.

I am not arguing the merits of the pay differential, only the effect of the money. One plan quietly mentioned would reduce the number of Level Three teachers so as to save money. If there was retrenchment of Level Three teachers statewide it would save millions of dollars. It would also be betrayal if the state dumps those more educated teachers simply because they make much more money. You see, for the last couple of decades the state has been pushing teachers to get their master's degree. The increased pay is an incentive for them to get the degree.

Of course, as many teachers say, it does not matter if we have well-qualified teachers, since the state uniformly relies on experts with no classroom experience and does not listen to teachers when it comes to instructional practice. How sad.

The bottom line is we have to deal with this shortfall quickly. When the Legislature is in session is no time to figure out a solution. Between now and the start of the session is when the solution must be made. We have to talk about it now.

Veteran salute law in effect

Flag salutes permitted out of uniform

The New Mexico Department of Veterans' Services would like all veterans to be aware of a new law that broadens the parameters of when a veteran can salute the American flag.

A law passed on Oct. 30 will allow any active-duty or military veteran to salute the flag – whether he's in uniform or not.

Veterans and active-duty military not in uniform can now render the militarystyle hand salute during the playing of the national anthem, "Taps" or at any military ceremonies or gatherings.

The new provision modifies a littleknown change in federal law last year that authorized veterans to render the military-style hand salute during the raising, lowering or passing of the flag, but it did not address salutes during the national anthem.

Last year's provision also applied to members of the armed forces while not in uniform.

Traditionally, members of the nation's veteran-service organizations have rendered the hand-salute during the national anthem and at events involving the national flag while wearing their organization's official head-gear.

"This will allow veterans to salute the flag who may have not felt comfortable doing so because he or she wasn't in uniform," said NMDVS Cabinet Secretary John Garcia. "Before, veterans not in uniform were saluting as private citizens. Now, they can legally salute the flag as the proud veteran that they are."

The most recent change, authorizing hand-salutes during the national anthem by veterans and out-of-uniform military personnel, was sponsored by Sen. Jim Inhofe of Oklahoma. It was included in the Defense Authorization Act of 2009, which President Bush signed on Oct. 14.

NMSU hosts awareness event

Traveling program coming to Las Cruces

P.E.E.R.S., a national drug and alcohol prevention program, is scheduled to be at New Mexico State University from 1 to 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 17.

Along with providing information on drug and alcohol abuse, P.E.E.R.S. will introduce students to a simulator to give them the "virtual" experience of drinking and driving. Besides making students aware of the hazards of drunken driving, they will be shown the consequences.

The simulator will give have the students drive the vehicle sober and then "intoxicated," based on gender, body type and drinks per hour.

The goal of P.E.E.R.S. is to stop drinking and driving, underage drinking and

Reservoir Update

A storm last week increased the snow pack for the Rio Grande Basin to 36 percent of average, but dry conditions for the fall persisted, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation reported in its river advisory.

Return flows from the Middle Rio Grande Irrigation District continue to flow into Elephant Butte Reservoir, and the rate at San Marcial has been 475 cubic-feet-per-second, 32 percent of average flow.

The reservoir storage figures are:

Elephant Butte 588,536 acre-feet, 30 percent of a full reservoir, an increase of 4,228 acre-feet, elevation 4,346 feet, 61 feet below the spillway. Caballo - 18,253 acrefeet, 9 percent of capacity, up 637 acre-feet.

The Tibetan dog reincarnation

In Tibetan lore each Lama (like the Dali) has a temple dog. When a Lama dies it is believed that he is reincarnated as another temple dog. Thus he would serve two lifetimes of strict adherence to ritual worship, chanting, meditating, sacrifice, no TV, no dessert and no squeaky bone toy.

Sid saw Buster abandoned on the highway. At first she thought he was a porcupine. Covered with burrs, leaves and sticks, his hair matted in dreadlocks, he was a pitiful sight, but ... he was a dog!

She pulled over, opened the door and picked up Buster. It was a hot Saturday afternoon in southern Pennsylvania. Sid drove back to the State Police barracks and asked the location of the Humane Society.

"Don't have one in Fulton County," said the policeman.

'A dog catcher?" she asked.

"I saw his wife at the grocery store. He's gone for the weekend. Be back Tuesday," replied the officer cheerfully.

'Is there someplace I could ask about a lost dog report? Like a radio station or newspaper?"

"Nope. But you could take him to the pound in Adams County. Just don't tell them you're from Fulton County or they won't take him!"

He gave Sid a pair of plastic handcuffs so she could take Buster out to pee. Bent at the waist, grasping the stiff handcuff leash, she looked like a beachcomber dusting the lawn with a dog food. This was how she arrived at her destination, the house of a friend who promptly said, "You can't leave it here!" She put him in his crate, from which he escaped three times, the last of which was from the crate; duct-taped, bungee-corded, locked and put in the garage ... in 15 minutes! Houdini couldn't have done it better. They all agreed that Buster had adopted Sid.

At a strip mall in Chambersburg she bought a leash, harness, crate and

Later at the dog wash, the attendant recognized the flea-bitten, moth ridden, canine flannel rag mop as a Lhasa Apso, a revered Tibetan temple guard dog. Trying to recreate his recent history, they concluded that after his first life as a Lama, followed by his reincarnation as a lama's dog, both lives spent under strict monastic guidelines, he had finally escaped!

"Free at last! Free at last!" he must have been chanting when Sid picked him up on the highway, handcuffed him, crated him, then the final indignity, had him neutered!

Which just goes to show you that the grass ain't always greener on the other side of the Dali!

told them where the "Fuehrer" could put his Knight's Cross. Shortly thereafter, my father was dismissed, and we had to vacate the apartment. The reason - not only had he insulted the "Fuehrer," he was also Jewish. We moved to a workingclass district, and my mother was directed to cease working her profession as a dentist. The neighbors in the adjoining apartment, a family consisting of a man, his wife, a son and a daughter were very understanding and helpful to us.

My father became very active in the anti-Nazi movement One morning, there was a knock on the door, and a group of men from the Gestapo, the German Secret Police, arrested my parents and hauled them off. I fled to my maternal grandparents in another part of Berlin. Three days later, my mother appeared at my grandparents' apartment door, haggard and drawn after three days of constant questioning and no food. Because she did not know of my father's activities, she was released. My grandfather wrote to three nieces, who were born in the United States and lived in St. Louis and Chicago and asked that they do something to get us out of Germany, that things were getting ugly. They sent documents for immigration to the United States, but only for me – not my mother. Later, my father was sentenced to 20 years in prison on a charge of treason.

My mother was ordered to perform forced labor at I.G. Farben Industries, the major chemical company of Germany. She was not allowed to tell anyone what she was doing. In November 1938, all over Germany, Nazi Storm Troopers committed acts of unparalleled violence upon Jews by destroying their businesses and torching synagogues. That act is known as Krystallnacht (Crystal Night or the Night of Broken Glass). Shortly thereafter, my mother and I were evicted from our apartment. The reason - we were Jewish and the landlady was afraid that Nazi Storm Troopers would damage or destroy her apartment house if she harbored Jews. My mother was assigned a room in an apartment occupied by four families in the Jewish ghetto area. In October of 1939, after the war in Europe had begun, I was called to the American Consulate for examination and received my visa to emigrate to the United States. In November, my mother requested and was granted permission that I could visit my father in prison and say goodbye to him. I had not seen him since his trial and almost did not recognize him. He died on Dec. 4, 1939, of malnutrition and maltreatment.

I sailed on the brand-new liner "Nieuw Amsterdam" and arrived in the United States on Saturday, Feb. 3, 1940. As we sailed past the Statue of Liberty, I swore an oath that I would serve the United States in thanks for providing me with a home when I needed it in the worst way. Had I not escaped from Europe when I did, I would not have survived. Meanwhile, my grandparents and my aunt and uncle, who had been directed to live in a ghetto of Jews, were picked up by German authorities, put into trains of freight cars and shipped to Auschwitz concentration camp where they were gassed to death. In July 1943, I was notified, through the International Red Cross, that my mother had died "after a long illness," in January 1943. I was so angered by that news that I attempted to enlist in the U.S. Army. I could not because, technically, I was an "enemy alien." I could, however, volunteer for induction as a draftee. But, because I was German, I could not, by regulations, be sent to Europe I told the draft board that I would not volunteer unless I had an assurance that I would be sent to Europe to kill as many Nazis as I could. I was told that the only person who could waive the prohibition was the president. I promptly wrote a letter to President Roosevelt explaining the situation and my desire to serve in Europe. About three weeks later, I received a telephone call from the chairman of the draft board, who requested that I appear there. When I went there on the following day, he came out of his office waving a paper and exclaimed: "Who, in the h do you know?"

"What is this all about?" I asked.

"This," he said, waving the paper in my face. "What is this?" I asked him.

"An Executive Order exempting you from the regulation."

"You told me to get an exemption from the president, so I wrote to him."

"And you believed that?"

I was inducted into the Army a short time later and sent to Fort Knox, Ky. After basic and advanced training in Sherman tanks, I was driven to Goodman Army Airfield and put aboard a C-47 transport airplane to McGuire Field in New Jersey. There, we were directed to a C-46 transport, boarded it and took off. At daybreak, all we could see was water down below and the sun rising in front of us. We landed at a Royal Air Force Base at Lands End in England. We had breakfast with the Brits at the base while the airplane was serviced and then flew on to Portsmouth.

A few days later, I found a notice on the bulletin board that they were looking for people who knew Berlin. I reported to the first sergeant at the orderly tent and told him that I knew Berlin well. Two days later, a driver in a truck picked me up and took me to the 93rd Bombardment Group. Five of us were led to a room and a lieutenant put an aerial photograph on the screen and said, "We have been trying twice, now, to bomb this target and the reports all come back that we made a lot of toothpicks and kindling wood but never hit the target.

'What's the target?" I asked.

"I.G. Farben." After looking at the picture, I asked the lieutenant to turn the picture around. As soon as he did so,

I realized what had happened.

"Where have you been bombing?" I asked.

"Right here," he said, pointing to an area to the right of a suburban rail station.

"That's not where the factory is," I told him. "It is on the other side of the station. The fence is about 100 meters from the station and the main buildings are about another 100 neters beyond that.'

"How do you know?" he asked.
"Because I have been there hundreds of times meeting my mother when she came off shift and escorted her home so that she had someone to talk to on the way home.

He left in a hurry and came back with the group commander, who asked me if I would be willing to go on a raid and lead the bombers there. "Of course," I said.

Three days later, I was hauled back to the 93rd Bomb

Group for the mission briefing from the colonel himself. He put the same photograph on the screen, pointed to the real target, and told them that "wheels up" is at 0500 in the morning, introduced me and told them, "Mitchel is going to fly in the pathfinder aircraft, and you fly where Mitchel tells you to fly - understood?"

We took off promptly at 5 a.m. and headed east toward Denmark. After flying over the island of Rügen, we turned southwest and headed for southeastern Berlin. I was jammed between the bombardier and the bulkhead behind him, and after getting into the area of the target, gave the pilot instructions over the intercom. By now, we were encountering anti-aircraft fire and occasionally could hear the "zing" sound of shrapnel penetrating the fuselage. It was an unusually clear day and we had very good visibility. Finally, I pointed to the target over the bombardier's left shoulder, and he signaled that he understood. He opened the bomb bay doors, directed the airplane over the heart of the plant and yelled, "Bombs away," as the airplane suddenly rose after it had been relieved of its load of bombs. The other aircraft in the formation followed suit. We were getting peppered by ME-109s, and our left waist gunner was hit, fortunately, not seriously. He continued to fire to protect the airplane.

We lost quite a few airplanes to the withering fire of antiaircraft batteries and fighters, but most of us returned to our base. After parking the airplane and returning toward the briefing room for the de-brief, we heard an awful metallic sound. Turning around, we found that one of the B-17s had been perforated by fire from the fighters so badly, that its own weight caused it to break in half just forward of the waist gun position. But, she had held together long enough to bring her crew home safely, although several members were seriously wounded.

The next day, I was picked up and returned to my unit. Three days later, the regimental commander walked into our mess tent while we were at breakfast. He told us that one of us had done quite a job in destroying a very high-pri-ority target. "Not one brick left standing on top of another," he said. With that, he called upon me to come forward and pinned the Army Commendation Medal on me. He also announced that the target had been I.G. Farben, and the reason for its high priority for destruction had been the report that they were manufacturing the chemicals used in the gas chambers. When he announced that, I virtually broke down. My entire family had been gassed to death and, now, I realized why my mother could not talk about what she was doing. Because she had been a dentist and knew chemistry well, she had been assigned to work at that plant and, adding insult to injury, she – as a Jew – was helping the Nazis in their effort to exterminate all Jews in Europe.

On June 6, 1944, I landed on Utah Beach in Normandy in France with the third wave of infantry and was assigned as a beach master to guide the LSTs, bringing our tanks and their crews onto the beach. On June 8, the beach had been secured sufficiently to allow the LSTs to land our tanks. After several days of fierce fighting, we managed to penetrate the German lines and proceeded southwestward in an effort to cut off the peninsula at the end of which was the major port city of Cherbourg. We managed to accomplish that and, in the process, trapped three German divisions, which left them no choice but to surrender. Third Army was established commanded by Gen. George S. Patton, a top commander and very knowledgeable in armor tactics. We made good progress across France. Near the city of Tours, we had taken so many German prisoners that, one night, seven of us who knew German were directed to interview the prisoners so that their names could be provided to the International Red Cross, which would then notify the German government that they were POWs. As I was doing that, one of the prisoners spoke his name and service number, his home address and the names of his next-of-kin, his parents. I was shocked. Here was a young enemy soldier who had sat next to me in school and who was my best friend. At the end of the interview session, I went to the stockade, asked him to be brought out, and we spent the entire night sitting on a large rock, talking. Next morning, I took him back to the stockade and the killing resumed. Several days later, our tank was disabled, but the entire crew survived. We got a new tank and continued. Near Chaumont, we were engaged in a fierce tank battle with several German Panzer Divisions, and during that battle, we were hit on the front end of the tank, which set it ablaze and we lost our driver and assistant driver. The three of us remaining, the loader, gunner, and I – I was tank commander then – managed to escape with minor injuries and were evacuated. We soon rejoined our unit and got a new tank with a better main gun. By now, winter had set in. From Nancy, we headed north toward Metz. After taking the city, we suddenly were directed to halt and wait to be re-supplied. After receiving a full complement of ammunition and fuel, we were directed northward. The 82nd Airborne Division had been entrapped in the Belgian city of Bastogne during a German counter attack known as the Battle of the Bulge. We proceeded at top speed, overrunning a number of German positions with very little resistance, getting re-supplied with fuel and ammunition and, in three days, arrived during the night at the southern perimeter of the defenders of Bastogne. The joy of the soldiers of the 82nd Airborne Division, upon seeing us, was absolutely memorable. We had succeeded in relieving them. Then, we turned west toward Germany again toward the city of Saarbrücken on the Rhine River. However, before reaching the river, we were hit by one of Germany's newest tanks, the Panther, which had a fear-some, high-velocity gun. The loss was severe. As if by premonition, I had left the hatch open, a violation of regulations while engaged in combat, and when the enemy shell hit us and blew up our tank, I was blown out of the turret and landed on the ground several yards away with a broken left arm, whereas my crew died in the blast. I was evacuated and treated and, it was decided that three was enough, and I was returned to the States with other wounded personnel and assigned to Fort Knox as a cadre.

In September 1945, I went to the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky in Louisville and was administered the oath of citizenship and became an American citizen. I had re-enlisted in the regular Army and it was recommended that I change branches from armor to military police. I was shipped to Camp Kilmer, N.J., where I boarded a transport, which took me to Le Havre, France and Camp Phillip Morris. After a few days there, we went, by troop train, to Freiburg, Germany, to be assigned. I asked for the 759th Military Police Battalion in Berlin. I was told this unit was in the middle of the Russian Zone of Occupation and did I really want to go there?

"Absolutely!"

"Why?"

"That's were I was born."

When we entered Berlin, I was horrified by the damage that it had suffered during the war. I was assigned to the Special Investigations Section. I asked for permission to visit my old area to see what had happened there. "Take all the time you need." I got on the S-Bahn, the city's rapid-rail system, to a transfer point where I got on the streetcar to my old neighborhood. As I entered the apartment building where we used to live, a strange feeling overcame me. I was home again. I went to the apartment doors on the ground floor where we had lived and noticed that the name of our old neighbors was still on the door. I rang the doorbell, and a strange lady opened the door. I introduced myself under my old German name, and she welcomed me with open arms. The lady of the house had died several years ago and the father had remarried. She asked me lots of questions, and she told me that the family had wondered what had happened to me. Then, for reasons still unknown to me to this day, I did not ask for Fred, with whom I had played as a youngster, I asked for Edith, the daughter in the family. "She is upstairs, in the attic, getting the laundry. I'll get her." She opened the door and called her name. She answered that she is almost finished and will be right down. "There is someone here to see you," yelled her mother. Edith had been engaged to a member of the Luftwaffe who had been declared missing in action in Russia several years before, and her first thoughts were "Could it be Ervin?

When she entered the apartment with a laundry basket larger than she was, full of clothes, she looked at me in amazement and said, "Rolf?" We hugged. That was it for me.

In 1947, while I was in the hospital suffering from laryngitis, the doctor treating me discovered that I was hard of hearing and ordered that I be transferred to Walter Reed Army Medical Center for treatment. That shot down my idea of marrying Edith within 30 days of my planned return to the United States, whereby she could return on the troopship with me as my wife. Instead, we filed a bunch of papers with the American Consulate in Berlin of our intention to marry and that she would be allowed to follow me by civilian transport and we would be married in the United States. I was under the impression that, under the circumstances, she would immigrate under the Alien War Brides Act, a special act of Congress that allowed foreign nationals, who were engaged to American military personnel to immigrate outside the quota for that country.

In late-November 1947, Edith was called to the Consulate to be examined. She had a small sore on one of her feet and was rejected for entry by the doctor that had examined her. Needless to say, I was enraged, and since the Special Act was expiring at the end of 1947, I wrote a rather strong letter to President Harry Truman, telling him that we had just won a war at great costs of lives and other resources to uphold the Laws of Congress and charged the consular officials in Berlin with willful neglect of an Act of Congress and asked him to intervene. A few weeks later, I received a telephone call from American Airlines that "your fiancée, Miss Edith Kurzbach, has booked reservations on Flight 135 on April 26, and will arrive at La Guardia International Terminal in New York at 3 p.m. that day."

When the airplane arrived, she came out, and she was the prettiest girl on the airplane – including the flight attendants. After arriving at my cousin's house, she told me that, one day a policeman came to the apartment door and told her that they had received a telephone call from the American Consulate and she should return the call as soon as possible. She went to the police station with him and called the Consulate. They asked her to come at "her earliest convenience." She went there the next day, was ushered in immediately. They prepared an entire set of documents and sent her to the examining room to await the doctor. While waiting, several consular employees stuck their heads in the door and she overheard one of them saying, "This is the girl the President wrote about." The doctor came in, gave her a cursory examination and told her to take the papers back to the clerk at the front desk. There, she was handed her passport and told to have a good trip. On the way home, she stopped at the airport to make a reservation and was told that she already had one. When she told them that she had never contacted them, she was told that the American Consul himself had called and made the reservation for her. I asked to look at her passport and was flabbergasted to see that the authority for issuance of the visa was an Executive Order Number. The president had ordered her admittance.

In 1960, the couple met Harry Truman at his library in Independence, Mo. Rolf Mitchel told him about the letter he wrote to him in November 1947. "Oh, I remember that letter well," Truman said. "Mr. President, how can you remember one letter," Rolf Mitchel asked. "Oh, that's not difficult," Truman said. "I got a lot of mail. Most of it was derogatory. But your letter really got my attention. In fact, I kept it, and it is somewhere back there in the archives. It was the worst ass-chewing I ever got in my life."

John 'Tuffy' Clayshulte dies at 88

Farmer, beekeeper was active in community efforts

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

John K. "Tuffy" Clayshulte, who died Nov. 4, liked to preserve his family heritage, and he lived his entire life, except for his Army war service, in Mesilla where he ran his honey and pecan businesses.

But he also looked beyond his work. He served on the committee in the 1960s that incorporated Mesilla into a town, served as vice president on the Elephant Butte Irrigation District board from 1980 to 1999, was a founding member of the Western Pecan Growers' Association and a board member with the former Federal Land Bank, now Farm Credit Services.

"This was his home here, and he lived here all his life," said his wife Jeanne. "He loved this area, and his family was very important to him. He wanted to retain his family heritage. I think that was part of the German in him. Germans love family tios"

Clayshulte and Jeanne Sloan of La Mesa were married in 1950. They have three sons and two daughters.

Clayshulte was born in the former Casad home, a two-story adobe home just north of the present Clayshulte home. As the home deteriorated, the adobe bricks were mashed and formed into new bricks to build a new shop.

Clayshulte's father, Nelson "Ned" Clayshulte was a beekeeper. He was a descendant of German immigrants with the name Kleeschultz, according to family research, but immigration officials changed it to Clayshulte.

After working at various jobs in Arizona, Ned Clayshulte became acquainted with Orick Metcalf and Harry Park while he was working as a cook in San Marcial, later destroyed by a flood. Metcalf and Park were partners in the honey business in Mesilla Valley, and they offered him a beekeeping job.

For several years, Ned Clayshulte, worked in the local beekeeping business during the summer and at various jobs in Mammoth, Ariz., during the winter when the bees were not gathering honey. Reportedly, he had a talent for mechanical work and improvising. One winter he married Lena Frances Norton.

Earlier in the Mesilla Valley, farmers grew sugar beets. As farmers turned to more profitable crops and the sugar beet companies pulled out, Ned Clayshulte acquired the seed threshing machines. He also bought the beekeeping business, and for years, he and his sons harvested grain and peddled jarred honey in the community.

At that time, there were not many crops in the valley that needed pollination. Bees collected most of the honey from mesquite in the desert.

John Clayshulte had developed a bee yard before he entered the Army. When he returned, he resumed beekeeping and gradually took over his father's bee hives as he slowed down.

By then, the Mesilla Valley had more crops that needed bee pollination, such as extra-long-staple cotton and onions for seed. John Clayshulte also hauled beehives to mountain orchards to pollinate cherries and apples.

For many years, John Clayshulte sold honey out of his home in Mesilla. Also, the Clayshultes produced honey only for wholesale.

John Clayshulte understood how scarce water was to southern New Mexico, which was changing. He saw the trend of land being taken out of production for housing, and he wanted to protect the agricultural water interests by serving on the Elephant Butte Irrigation District Board.

The El Paso Public Service Board had filed petitions to drill several wells in southern Doña Ana County and pump water across the state line for municipal and domestic uses. The New Mexico Office of the State Engineer denied the petitions and El Paso sued.

New Mexico won when it proved that the underground water here was appropriated and that the state was putting it to beneficial use.

Earlier this year, Clayshulte was able to witness the agreement between the EBID and the El Paso County Water Improvement District that ended 29 years of legal negotiations with a Rio Grande Compact accountability agreement. The EBID agreed to deliver surface water to the EPCWID according to an equation that it had developed in 2006, based on data that the district had compiled from 1951 to 1978.

The agreement is considered a historical accomplishment because it had been made by board of farmer-patrons without going to court.

John Clayshulte and his sons had built up a 600-acre pecan business. Marshall runs the orchards, John Jr. does the harvesting and Nelson runs the shelling plant, their mother said.

"My dad told me that he was first and foremost a beekeeper," Marshall recalled. "But he said he got into pecans to give his employees something to do in the winter."

Clayshulte graduated from New Mexico A&MA in 1943 with degree in Civil Engineering. A ROTC graduate, he was sent to Officers' Candidate School at Fort Belvoir, Va., and then Fort Hood, Texas, where engineers were learning how to rebuild bridges that the German Army had blown up as it had retreated.

He was assigned to the 347th Engineers Regiment that was attached to Gen. George Patton's 3rd Army. He served three years in the war zone, rebuilding bridges to help Army move equipment ahead as the Allies advanced.

Of all the races in Doña Ana County, the state Senate District 37 was the only race where there were enough provisional ballots to have possibly made a difference in the outcome, which was a Democratic sweep powered by an intense early voting push for President-elect Barack Obama.

While the early voting kept Election Day lines short, there were problems in the Bureau of Elections getting absentee ballots out on a timely basis. At Wednesday's canvassing board meeting, Bureau of Elections Supervisor Lynn Ellins dismissed the harsher criticisms of the problem to the large number of absentee ballots being requested making it impossible for staff to process them in the 24-hour turnaround requirement.

"No other county was able to comply with it either," Ellins said.

Maria Silva Sutton speaking for county Republican Party urged the commission to not certify the election results because the problem was too severe.

"The Help America Vote Act was not complied with, and voters were disenfranchised," she said.

The commission didn't certify the elections results, but not because of the provisional-ballot dispute. Instead, the results report was first marred by a computer snafu that swapped tallies for early voting and for absentee ballots.

Also, Commissioner Karen Perez said she was bothered by no recorded votes for early voting provisional ballots nor for federal ballots. Ellins said he wasn't worried by the zero count for early voting provisional ballots, because voter registration can be verified immediately in early voting and any provisional ballot cast in early voting was probably disqualified for that reason. But Ellins said he was concerned about no record of federal ballots – most likely cast by voters in military service who are out of the county, state or country.

Jimemez to be deputy clerk

Doña Ana County Clerk-elect Lynn Ellins has announced that he will appoint Mario Jimenez as his chief deputy clerk when he takes office on Jan. 1, 2009.

Jimenez has worked in the Bureau of Elections since September 2004, and he served as the acting elections supervisor for the 2008 primary and general elections, while Ellins was a candidate for county clerk.

Ellins said he chose Jimenez because of his extensive working knowledge of the Bureau of Elections and his ability to work well with the New Mexico Secretary of State's Office and with both major political parties and their representatives.

In addition, Ellins said Jimenez has a valuable skill set related to system software, running elections, reg-

"Mario has demonstrated time and again that he is dedicated to improving operations where needed," Ellins said. "He is respected by his co-workers and by the public regarding his insistence on providing high-quality customer service.

Ellins said that immediately following the canvass of the 2008 General Elections, he and Jimenez will conduct a thorough investigation into the reasons why some voters did not receive absentee ballots and how many of those who requested absentee ballots actually voted.

"Once those problems are identified," he said, "solutions regarding operating procedures will be implemented locally, and statewide recommendations will be brought to the attention of Doña Ana County's legislative delegation.'

Animal advocates get politically active

By Todd G. Dickson
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Elisabeth Jennings, who heads both Animal Protection New Mexico and its political action counterpart Animal Protection Voters, says animal advocates need to support policymakers who support their issues.

They can support animal-friendly officials by canvassing to keep them elected, by helping them draft regulations to put policies into action and by following through to make sure the efforts succeed, Jennings told the Humane Society of Southern New Mexico on Monday, Nov. 10.

In terms of direct political support, the advocates need to do it as individuals or by joining an animal-focused PAC like the Animal Protection Voters, Jennings said.

The other follow-through efforts after law or policy is made are acceptable for a nonprofit group that isn't a PAC, she said.

Another effective political effort, however, is to form a significant group of voters who narrow their concerns to only animal protection issues, she said. Delivering a block of voters can be very influential in making officials more sensitive to animal-protection issues, she said.

Once animal advocates get a sympathetic politician or official on their side, Jennings said, they need to do all they can to protect them from reprisals for going to bat on animal issues

Jennings also gave a review of issues her group will be focusing on in the upcoming Legislature. One effort is aimed at providing for the removal of family animals from the home in domestic violence cases. She said the animals can be used against conflicting family members in such cases.

ing family members in such cases. With state funding tight, Jennings wasn't optimistic about other efforts that would cost money.

Adoption Day events set Saturday

The New Mexico Children, Youth and Families Department will host a ceremony from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 15, honoring families who have finalized adoptions in 2008. This celebration will be held at the 3rd Judicial District Court Complex, located at the corner of Picacho Avenue and Alameda Boulevard. The celebration is part of National Adoption Day, observed throughout the United States.

National Adoption Day is a collective national effort to raise awareness of the 129,000 children in foster care waiting to find permanent, loving families. Through the combined efforts of courts, judges, attorneys, adoption professionals, child welfare agencies and advocates thousands of children have realized their dream of a permanent, loving family.

According to Children, Youth and Families Department reports, there are more than 2,200 children in state custody at any given time. Many of these children are available for adoption each year.

Since 2006, National Adoption Day has been celebrated in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. In total, more than 300 events are held each year throughout the country to finalize the adoptions of children in foster care and to celebrate all families who adopt. In total, more than 20,000 children have been adopted from foster care on National Adoption Day.

For more information on children available for adoption visit www.cyfd.org or www.heartgallerynm.org.

4-H president speaks against teen DWI

Jail time isn't the worst thing that could happen to a teenager who decides to drink and drive. People die everyday in car crashes caused by drunk drivers and that's a message Thomas Judd, the newly elected Doña Ana County 4-H council president, and a junior at Oñate High School, wants everyone to

Judd recently placed first in both the county and state 4-H general public speaking competitions. He talks about the dangers of drinking and driving during his speech and took that same message to the National Association of Youth Courts during the organization's national meeting Wednesday, Nov. 12, in Albuquerque. Judd also will deliver a similar message Jan. 7-11 during the 4-H Western National Roundup in Denver. The New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service operates the Doña Ana County 4-H through the Doña Ana County Extension Office.

"It's a great honor. I want to inspire other stu-dents," Judd said. "I think drunk driving is a really big topic among teenagers. Something could happen. My friends and the general public need to know.

"Kids need to see there are consequences in life, said Toni Hernandez, executive director of Doña Ana County Teen Court. The agency runs the "Every 15 Minutes" program, where local hospitals, law enforcement, businesses and others come together to show teenagers that the dangers of drinking and driving are real. Doña Ana County Teen Court will take part in the National Association of Youth Courts conference later this month where Judd will speak.

In addition to Judd's first-place finishes in general public speaking, he also placed first in the county and the state in impromptu public speaking, a first in New Mexico history.

Marquee makeover

Scot Barrett sands off the old paint on the Doña Ana Elementary School marquee. Through the generous contributions of the community and through the hard work of parent volunteers, the marquee and the area underneath it have been refurbished.

Lynn students help with dog adoptions

Middle School eighth-grade Advanced Education Services students spent part of a recent Saturday in the parking lot at a local Wal-Mart store helping stray dogs find new homes, said Lynn AES facilitator Mary E. Garcia.

It was part of a student service-learning project, which they conducted in conjunction with the Animal Services Center of the Mesilla Valley on Saturday, Nov. 9.

"Students informed people interested in possible adoption about the dogs' backgrounds and helped to walk the dogs around the parking lot at the Wal-Mart on Walton Boulevard. They made posters to encourage people to adopt the dogs too," she said.

"Eighth-grade AES students choose service-learning projects based on their personal interests or 'passion areas.' Adolescents naturally have a strong belief system of right and wrong. These students chose this project because they love animals, have a strong knowledge base about dogs and cats and want to help the shelter become a nokill shelter," Garcia said.

The students are conducting a drive to collect blankets and towels for the animal shelter that continues through Monday,

For more information, or to make a donation, contact Garcia at 527-9445 or mgarcia@lcps.k12.nm.us. Donation are also accepted at Lynn Middle School, 950 S.

Crime Stoppers: 1989 missing woman

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers is offering a reward of $1,000 for information that leads to solving the case of a woman who has been missing since August 1989.

Debbie Misquez Escalante, who was 29 at the time, spent the evening of Aug. 21, 1989, with a friend at a party in Doña Ana, and then at an address on Fifth Street and West Picacho Avenue in Las Cruces.

At about midnight, Misquez Escalante left the party with a male co-worker and went to his apartment on West Las Cruces Avenue.

Investigators learned that shortly after arriving at Ave., Misquez Escalante ran from the residence in the direction of Pioneer Park.

She has not been seen or heard

Anyone with information on the Aug. 21, 1989, activities of Debbie Misquez Escalante, or anyone who may have clues to her disappearance, is asked to call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 526-8000 or outside the Las Cruces area at 800-897-2746.

The Crime Stoppers number is operational 24 hours a day, and you do not have to give your name to collect a reward.

Interim executive director named for missile range

Robert "Bob" Carter has been named as the interim executive director at White Sands Missile Range.

Carter, a career government-service employee from Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., will temporarily take over as WSMR executive director while the Army searches for a permanent replacement for the position vacated by Tom Berard in mid-October.

Carter's regular job is director of plans and operations for Developmental Test Command and he has spent the last 25 years of government service in positions related to test and development.

"I came right out of college at the University of Delaware in 1983 as a mechanical engineer, and a friend of mine told me the Army was hiring at Aberdeen Proving Ground," Carter said. "I was hired on as a test director at Aberdeen Test Center and have worked in test and evaluation jobs ever since.

Carter said that one of his roles as the executive director will be to ensure the Army's interests are looked after. "But, I think all of us, working together here, are optimistic that everyone's needs are going to be accommodated," he said.

Since arriving here, Carter has been surprised at the support given to WSMR by its surrounding civilian communities.

"I've never seen such a strong community support for a military installation ... not just the politicians, but the residents, retirees and friends, too," he said, pointing to the recent Thanks Team WSMR event.

m His}$ history includes various developmental assignments coupled to the Pentagon, and he helped set up the Test Resource Management Center in Washington, D.C. He is a graduate of the U.S. Army War College.

A life-long resident of Maryland, Carter's wife and two of his three children still live at the family home north of Baltimore, while he is on temporary duty at White Sands. He has a married daughter.

Carter said the overall impression he has received from Team WSMR is that they are doing a great job at an exciting time in the installation's history. "White Sands is really one of a kind with a very important capability," he said. "There is so much happening, and I am very excited to be here."

A Mountain open house

The NMSU Astronomy department will host an informal, daytime, open house at the Tortugas Mountain ("A" Mountain) Observatory from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15. Visitors are welcome to drop in for a short visit at any time during this period. No observations or formal presentations will be involved, but visitors to the mountain will be welcomed into the observatory, shown around and presented with some description about the observatory, how it was used in the past, and some possible ideas for future usage.

Public access to the observatory is by foot only, so visitors will be required to hike up the mountain. Preferred access is from the trailhead off of Dripping Springs Road, although it is also possible to hike up the road from the base of the mountain at the end of Geothermal Road. As with all hiking in the area, visitors should wear sturdy shoes, carry a hat and water, and be alert for flora and fauna. Visitors should also be aware that there are no rest room facilities at the observatory.

The open house will be at the dome of the 24-inch telescope, at the highest point on the mountain.

■ BENEFIT PRAISE AND GOSPEL CONCERT

The annual Benefit Praise and Gospel Concert will be at First Evangelical Free Church, 1445 Pecos St., at 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15. Admission is free but donations will be taken to benefit the chaplaincy at the Doña Ana Detention Center. Many talented groups from local churches will be featured. The public is invited to come and enjoy a variety of music including country western, contemporary Christian and Southern Gospel. For more information, call Jim Fox at 532-6419

■ AFRICAN CHILDREN'S CHOIR TO PERFORM

The internationally acclaimed African Children's Choir returns to Las Cruces and will be performing at the First Baptist Church, 106 S. Miranda, at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 18.

The African Children's Choir has been performing community concerts across North America and around the world for more than 23 years, raising awareness of the plight of Africa's most vulnerable, but also showing the beauty, dignity and potential of each African child.

Many of the children in the choir have lost one or both parents to poverty and disease, yet in spite of the tragedies that have marred these young lives the children radiate hope. They demonstrate the potential for a better life for themselves and the millions of other children on a continent in turmoil.

Founder Ray Barnett says, "The needs among African children are so great because of war and the AIDS pandemic sweeping across the continent, yet these children are so full of joy. They truly are ambassadors of hope to the nations."

The children will charm concertgoers with their radiant smiles, beautiful voices and boundless energy. A mixture of traditional African songs and dances, well-loved children's favorites and familiar gospel songs will have the audience clapping, cheering and singing along.

There is no admission charge for the concert. A freewill offering will be taken.

The African Children's Choir is currently providing care and education for several thousand underprivileged children throughout Africa. For more information on the African Children's Choir and complete tour itinerary, visit www.africanchildrenschoir.

First Assembly of God celebrates building completion

Open house, ribbon cutting, concert to take place Nov. 14, at new East Mesa facility

Sunday, Nov. 16, will mark the completion of a journey of nearly five years for Pastor David Vistine and the congregation of First Assembly of God Church, as they officially dedicate their new facilities at 5605 Bataan Memorial West in

Founded in 1927 by the Rev. W.I. Smith, the church started as a group gathering in a rented hall on Church Street, a block south of the post office near the present Federal Building. From 1929-1930, the congregation met in an old, unplastered adobe building on Alameda Avenue near the old Safeway store (now Las Cruces Sun News.) Then six lots were purchased at the corner of Seventh Street and Van Patten for $20

Shortly after, a new church was built on that site, and it remained there and continued to grow until 1966 when the church relocated, temporarily worshipping at a rented facility on Alameda Boulevard (now Hospitality House Senior Center) for nine months during the construction of their new building at 1605 S. Valley Drive.

In 2003, averaging more than 1,000 weekly worshippers, the church, which had seen steady growth for many years, began to look at some of the current and future challenges it was facing as their congregation continued to grow. There was no room for more expansion on the nearly six acres of land they had occupied on Valley Drive since its completion in 1967. With two previous renovations having already expanded their original building to more than 33,000 square feet and land constraints on all sides making it impossible to add more parking, a decision was unanimously approved by the congregation to

In January 2004, they purchased more than 36 acres of land at 5605 Bataan Memorial Highway and began a four-and-a-half year building program they called "The Journey," to plan, develop and construct their new facilities. On May 27, the 15,500-square-foot Children's Building was completed and Noah's Ark Learning Center opened for operation. The congregation, which has now grown to more than 1,400 worshippers, followed just a few weeks later and their first services were held in the new 30,000-square-foot Worship Center on July 6.

The public is cordially invited to join Pastor David and Ilda Vistine and the congregation of Las Cruces First Assembly as they celebrate the completion of "The Journey" on Sunday, Nov. 16. Rev. Alton Garrison, assistant general superintendent of the Assemblies of God, will be the keynote speaker in the morning services at 9 and

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held at 4 p.m. followed by tours of the new facilities and a reception. At 6 p.m., there will be a Celebration of Praise concert featuring Allen Asbury (Somebody's Praying Me Through) and The Brooks Brothers, who have teamed up to form the group Audible Lights. Childcare will be provided for children through age 5 years. Other special guests will include Mayor Ken Miyagishima, New Mexico District Superintendent Rev. Kenneth George and New Mexico District Secretary-Treasurer Rev. Michael Dickenson.

Adopted children can present special challenges to parents

Factual information and memorization are important in the learning process

Are adopted children more likely to be rebellious than children born to biological parents? If so, are there any steps I can take to prevent or ease the conflict? My husband and I are thinking about adopting a toddler and the question has me worried.

Every child is different, and adopted kids are no exception. They come in all sorts of packages. Some boys and girls who were abused or unloved prior to the adoption will react to those painful experiences in some usually negatively. Others, even those who were not mistreated, will struggle with identity problems and wonder why their "real" mothers and fathers didn't want them. They may be driven to find their biological parents during or after adolescence to learn more about their heritage and families of origin. I must emphasize, however, that many adopted kids do not go through any of these personal crises. They take root where they are replanted and never give a thought to the questions that trouble some of their peers. As with so many other behavioral issues, the critical factors are the particular tempera-ment of the child and how he or she is handled by the parents.

I hope you won't be reluctant to adopt that child because some special problems might – but probably won't – develop. Every child has his or her own particular challenges. Every child can be difficult to raise. Every child requires all the creative energy and talent a parent can muster. But every child is also worth the effort, and there is no higher calling than to do that job excellently.

Let me add one more thought. I knew a man and woman who had waited for years to adopt a baby. When a female infant was finally made available to them, they were anxious to know if she was healthy and of good heritage. They asked if her biological parents had used drugs, how tall they were, whether or not they had attended college, etc. Then, the father told me later, he realized what he and his wife were doing. They were approaching the adoption of this baby much as if they would have bought a used car. They were "kicking tires" and testing the

But then they thought, "What in the world are we doing? That little girl is a human being with an eternal soul. We have been given the opportunity to mold and shape her as a child of God, and here we are demanding that she be a high quality product. They repented of their inappropriate attitudes and embraced that child in love.

Adopted children, like all children, are a blessing from God and we are privileged, indeed, to be granted the honor of raising one of His pre-

When it comes to education, you have said that the right factual information can and should lead to conceptual learning. But aren't you putting too much emphasis on the memorization process, which is a low academic goal?

The human brain is capable of storing some 2 billion bits of information in the course of a lifetime. There are many avenues through which that programming can occur, and memorization is one of them. Let me put it this way. If you ever have to go under a surgeon's knife, you'd better hope that the physician has memorized every muscle, every bone, every blood vessel and every Boy Scout knot in the book. Your life will depend on his accessibility to factual information during the

Obviously, I strongly oppose the perspective held in some academic circles that says, "There's nothing we know for certain so why learn any-thing?" Those who feel that way have no business teaching. They are salesman with nothing to sell!

When I'm hungry, I can go to a restaurant or a grocer and get what I want. If I need a prescription, I can get it from a drug store. I know where to get shoes, and I know where to get a book. But, I don't go to a bookstore to buy shoes or expect to get a book at a shoe store. There are particular places, appropriate places, to obtain the specific things that I want or that I need.

So where do you suppose someone should go in order to obtain God's love? Where is the most appropriate place to go if one wants to experience God's grace? Where is it that someone can go who feels alone or afraid? Suppose someone felt confused, anxious and ashamed or was hurting somehow. For relief and hope, or when I feel unloved or unlovable, where should I go? Jesus established his Church to serve as a local distributor of God's love, to be that place where God's grace is freely offered to all. The Church is called and equipped as the appropriate place to obtain hope and healing, comfort and fellowship, mercy and love, where all are supported by God's grace. As God's children gathered into the Church, we are the stewards in whom, and among whom, God's love and grace are made visible. The particular place the appropriate place, to obtain God's love and grace that I want and need, is the Church of Jesus Christ.

My prayer is that your fellowship with us in our common faith may deepen the understanding of the blessings that our union with Christ brings us.

God's love and grace be with you all, amen.

• Mayor Samuel Klein and Town Manager J.J. Turner were given credit for decreasing the operations and maintenance mill levy from 5 to 2.28 cents, which lowered the town budget from $47,274 the previous year to $37,847 to help residents survive the Great Depression. Trustees decreased the labor costs from $18,598 to $17,342, but that did not affect the workers' wage of $2 a day. Klein and Turner said that they could not trim the 15 mill property levy more because state regulations required the town to bring in enough revenue to retire bonds.

- More than 50 carpenters were building barracks on the Jornada Range Reserve northeast of Las Cruces to replace tents for the Civilian Conservation Corps men who had arrived to build fences, roads and continue forestry conservation work.
- New Mexico A&M could only manage one first down in the first three quarters as Texas College of Mines stopped the Aggies 9-0 for their third-straight loss.

The Thanksgiving meal is healthier than you think

By Dr. M. DARVEY FULLER, M.D. For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Turns out, grandma's sweet potato casserole and homemade cranberry sauce may have more nutritious benefits than you thought.

Holiday favorites like sweet potatoes and cranberries, along with a wide array of other vegetables, fruits and nuts, are rich in vitamins and minerals with cancer-fighting potential. A number of holiday ingredients also contain phytonutrients, which are healthy compounds found only in plants and may aid in preventing cancer. Simply choosing a balanced diet rich in a variety of colorful vegetables and fruits as well as whole grains is an excellent step toward protecting your health.

Many holiday favorites are the perfect combination: full of color, flavor and nutrient-rich. New Mexico is expected to have more than 7,500 new cases of cancer this year, some of which could be prevented with proper diet. Since there are few things New Mexicans love more than friends, family and good food, the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center has developed tips to help you easily fill your table with recipes highlighting nutrient-packed holiday staples and feel good about it

Add these colorful, flavorful and nutri-

- ent-rich ingredients to your recipes:
 Cranberries: This tart fruit is a powerful source of flavonoids, and comes with a family of phytonutrients with antioxidant and anti-cancer properties.
- Sweet potatoes: This gorgeous, goldenorange tuber is packed with fiber, which has been shown to reduce the risk of certain types of cancer.
- risk of certain types of cancer.

 Cruciferous vegetables: These vegetables contribute generous amounts of anti-cancer phytonutrients, known as glucosinolates, and include broccoli, Brussels sprouts, kale, cauliflower, cabbage, mustard greens and kohlrabi.

• Citrus: This time of year, markets overflow with oranges, pommelos, grapefruit, lemons and limes. Their vitamin C, folate and fiber are essential for a cancer-protective diet.

- Pomegranates: Pomegranate seeds are high in vitamin C and a good source of fiber. In addition, they contain numerous phytonutrients and contribute vibrant color to many holiday dishes.
- Nuts: Think of nuts as dense bundles of cancer-fighting nutrition – phytonutrients, fiber, "good" fats, protein and a host of vitamins and minerals such as folic acid, vitamin E and selenium.

Recipe quick-tips

Not all holiday dishes have to be fruits and vegetables. After all, Thanksgiving just wouldn't be the same without the traditional turkey and stuffing. The key to enhancing your own holiday favorites lies in adapting those triedand-true recipes so that they can become cancer-fighting recipes. Here are a few quick tips to give holiday recipes and food choices a flavor-forward nutritional makeover:

 Use healthy oils, such as olive oil, canola oil or other vegetable oils instead of butter or lard, whenever possible. $\,$

- Add chopped nuts, such as pecans, walnuts or hazelnuts for added nutrients, fiber, crunch and flavor.
- Make salads colorful using dark, leafy greens and variety of seasonal fruits and vegetables.
- Serve whole-grain bread with meals.
- Incorporate seasonal fruits into desserts.
- Choose dark chocolate with at least 60 percent cocoa, which contains antioxidant polyphenols.

The holidays are filled with warmth and tradition. It's easy to celebrate by using recipes with delicious foods that are hearty, wholesome and packed with cancer-fighting ingredients.

The seven secrets to living a happy life

Senior Circle program kicks off with health fair, luncheon

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

With an overwhelming crowd of Las Cruces seniors in attendance, MountainView Regional Medical Center kicked off their Senior Circle program Thursday, Nov. 6, with a health fair and luncheon.

After visiting with health-related businesses at their individual booths, seniors gathered in the ballroom to hear from speaker Pat Love, a well-known author, workshop leader and lecturer who has appeared on Oprah and the Today Show.

Though Love said it is common to hear high school and college years referred to as "the best years of our lives," in reality, she said the real fun begins after 50.

"The older you get, the greater the level of happiness," she said.

During her presentation, "Seven Steps to a Happy Life," Love pinpointed some of the misconceptions about seniors and gave tips on how they are they are gave tips on how they can stay happy and healthy.

"There is a stereotype as we get older," she said. "You can break those stereotypes. You don't have to give in to it.'

According to Love, seniors must facilitate their mental and physical health with the movement of their bodies, which is the first step in her list.

'I used to think that if it hurts, I shouldn't move it, but it's just the opposite," she said. "One of the secrets is literally to keep moving."

Along with moving their bodies, Love also suggested moving their souls by keeping their minds active.

"Whatever feeds your soul," she said. "Live each day in the moment, and appreciate each moment.'

Second on Love's list of secrets was taking care of their health and being their own medical director. Her four guidelines to maintaining a healthy body include abstaining from smoking, moderating alcohol use, exercising and eating five fruits and vegetables a day.

Along with their physical health, Love said it is essential to take care of their mental health as well.

Her third secret goes hand in hand with maintaining mental health and that is to look on the bright side of life.

When Love had the opportunity to meet the Dalai Lama, she said a friend asked him how he keeps a positive attitude with all the death and destruction in the world. He replied that it is simply not what he sees.

"It's not what he chooses to focus on. He looks on the bright side," she said.

After working with couples for many years as a therapist and consultant, she insists that people will feel better about themselves if they approach life with a positive attitude.

"Emotions are contagious, whether it is living or working with an angry and depressed person," she said. "The only way to prevent catching negative emotions is to be proactively positive."

Secret No. 4, which Love said deals with one of the main misconceptions about seniors, is to keep the libido going.

"There is a stereotype that once you pass a certain age, you are no longer sexual," she said. "Statistically, you are as likely to get married after 65 years as you are between 30 and 65.

Her fifth step was literally to "get over yourself. Don't take yourself, or life, too seriously," she said.

While seniors mainly find solace in their spouse or companion, she said it is important to branch out and interact with other people, which was her sixth suggestion.

"We need three to five people in our attachment circle," she said. "It can't just be one person."

Because the Senior Circle program has an aim of bringing seniors together for learning opportunities, clubs and trips, Love said the program offers the perfect opportunity to make new friends.

Finally, love suggested that seniors never stop being good stewards.

"Find out what your good at and give it

generously," she said.

The Senior Circle is a nationwide program aiming to keep seniors active and involved and give them the resources they need to make healthy choices.

For a $15 annual membership fee, seniors 50 and older can enjoy discounts from businesses both nationally and locally, as well as discounts and educational opportunities provided by MountainView. The program also includes fellowship, travel and entertainment activities. For more information, visit www.mountainviewregional.com and click on Senior Circle.

No more rabbit ears

Digital TV is on its way to the area

In less than 100 days, at midnight Feb. 17, 2009, all full-power television stations in the United States will stop analog broadcasting and will switch to 100-percent digital broadcasting.

This is great news. Not only will the switch free up prime air space for emergency responders, but television viewers will get a clearer picture and more programming options. Even on an older-model TV, the picture will be crystal clear.

However, consumers who own analog televisions and use "rabbit ears" to get network television stations will not be ready for the transition. No, it's not going to be the end of the world or what we all anticipated with Y2K.

People with analog television sets simply need to buy a converter box that plugs into the TV, get cable or satellite service or get a TV with a digital tuner – those televisions are pretty much the only ones available in electronics stores.

For those in households who can't afford any of the above, the U.S. Department of Commerce's National Telecommunications and Information Administration division has launched a nationwide campaign, the TV Converter Box Coupon Program.

The campaign targets those consumers in markets like Las Cruces, which has a higher-than-average number of over-the-air consumers, according to Nielsen statistics.

The coupon program, which will be available through March 31, 2009, provides a $40 discount for digital converter boxes available at certain retailers.

Consumers can apply for up to two coupons per household, and the coupons will be mailed to them, along with a list of participating retailers. Only 22.25 million coupons are available since the program was launched months ago, so the NTIA is encouraging consumers to apply for coupons as soon as possible.

Don't think that a digital converter box is going to give you access to cable or premium channels, because it's not. It would provide the same channels as rabbit ears could receive – network CBS, ABC, NBC and FOX and public broadcasting channels – but not much more. Digital broadcasting also allows those network stations to have "sub-channels." In addition to its normal broadcast, most of the network stations have an all-weather station, like NBC Weather Plus, and a Spanish station, like KRWG's V-me.

Answers to frequently asked questions and coupon applications are available at www.dtv2009.gov or 888-DTV-2009.

Prize brightens Dick's Café

Perez enjoys building customer relationships

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The thing that Ace Perez likes the most about running Dick's Café is mingling with his customers.

"My favorite thing about the restaurant business is getting to know the customers," he said recently between breaks to greet and chat with customers. "I like to sit down with them and talk to them. I get to know a lot of interesting people that way."

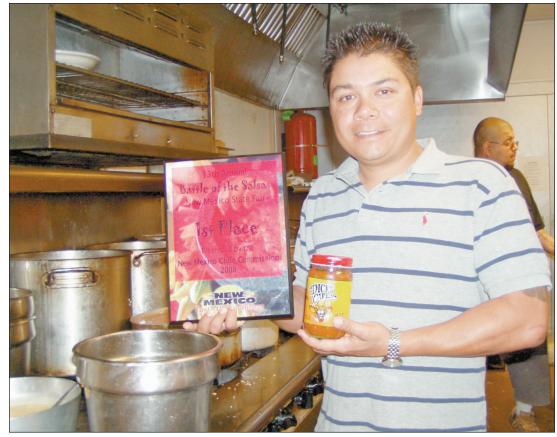

One subject of interest is that Dick's Café Hot Salsa won the 12th Battle of the Salsas at the New Mexico State Fair.

"It was peoples' choice," Perez said. "Fairgoers would come in, taste the salsa and cast their ballots."

Dick's Café makes two salsas – Green Chile as a cooking or dish supplement and the Hot Salsa for chips. This is the first year that he entered his salsa, and he was competing against 34 entrants.

"It's pretty much my grandfather's recipe," Perez said. His grandfather was the late Dick Perez, who started the restaurant.

Home sale benefits nonprofits

Local developer to donate to Boys & Girls Club, Red Cross

NATISHA HALES I The Las Cruces Bulletin

Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces Board of Directors President Ken Hoeksema, Summit Development President Harlo Dynek and American Red Cross Southwestern New Mexico Chapter Executive Director Princess Kang pose in front of a Summit Development home. The proceeds of the home's sale will benefit both nonprofit organizations.

The Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces and the Southwestern New Mexico Chapter of the American Red Cross will benefit from the sale of a home constructed by Summit Development Inc.

After donating to the Red Cross in 2006 when flooding devastated the village of Hatch, Summit Development President Harlo Dynek agreed to the concept, which started as a home sale to benefit the American Red Cross in 2007.

"I feel very fortunate, and I look around and see people that are considerably less fortunate," Dynek said during the groundbreaking for the Red Cross house last year. "I'm a lucky guy, and I feel that other people could use a hand."

Now, the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces also will benefit from the sale of a Summit Development home.

Both organizations rely solely on donations from the community.

"We are a local chapter with local clients who depend on local volunteers," said Red Cross Executive Director Princess Kang. "That will keep our chapter going. It's important to maintain relationships in the community, and Summit Development is a great example of that."

November is Realtor Designation Month

Additional training enhances skills, knowledge and income

Every industry has its areas of specialization, and real estate is no exception. At last count, an estimated 2.6 million individuals currently hold real estate licenses issued by one of America's 50 individual states, possessions or territories. Approximately 1.3 million of those licensees are members of the National Association of Realtors (NAR) and are authorized to carry the Realtor designation.

As members of the NAR, Realtors may

As members of the NAR, Realtors may choose to take advantage of additional training in general real estate practice or in particular areas of specialization. The National Association of Realtors has nine affiliated institutes, societies and councils that provide a wide-ranging menu of programs and services that assist members in increasing skills, productivity and knowledge. To the surprise of the general public and some Realtors, there is an official NAR designation for practically every specialty area in the real estate industry.

How many areas of real estate specialization are recognized by the Realtor organization? In all, 22 individual designations are currently available to Realtor members, with a couple more on the distant horizon. What are these areas of specialization? Let's take an alphabetical tour through the list:

Accredited Buyer Representative or ABR is first on the list. The Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council (REBAC) is the largest association within NAR with more than 40,000 members. Agents with this designation have completed classes on buyer needs and have passed a test and provided documentation of experience representing buyers.

Accredited Buyer Representative Manager or ABRM. Office owners, brokers and managers earn this designation by competing educational courses and provided documentation of past buyer agent management experience.

Accredited Land Consultant or ALC. Agents with this designation are the recognized experts in 5 types of land brokerage: (1) farms and ranches; (2) undeveloped tracts of land; (3) transitional and development land; (4) subdivision and wholesaling of lots; and (5) site selection and assemblage of land parcels. They obtain the designation through educational Certified Commercial Investment Member or CCIM. The approximately 7,500 agents who carry this designation are the recognized experts in commercial real estate brokerage, leasing and valuation and investment analysis, principally in North America, but also in Asia and Europe. Another 7,500 agents are currently candidates for the designation, which is backed by a respected education program and superior technology.

Certified International Property Specialist or CIPS. The CIPS network is comprised of 1,500 real estate professionals from 50 countries who deal in all types of real estate, but with a focus on the "international" market. Some agents travel abroad, while others assist foreign investors or help local buyers abroad. CIPS may also serve immigrants in their local communities.

Certified Property Manager or CPM. This designation helps property managers acquire valuable management skills that give them the competitive edge in every area of real estate management. They acquire the designation through educational offerings from the Institute of Real Estate Management.

Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager or CRB. The Council of Real Estate Brokerage Managers makes available this designation, which is awarded to Realtors who have completed the council's advanced educational and professional requirements. CRB designation holders consistently increase their level of industry knowledge, advance their rearing and career potential and increase their firm's profitability.

Certified Residential Specialist or CRS. More than 35,000 Realtors currently carry the CRS designation, which is awarded to experienced agents who complete advanced training in listing and selling and meet rigorous home-sale production requirements. The designation, first awarded in 1977, is a product of NAR's Council of Residential Specialists.

Counselor of Real Estate or CRE. Only about 1,100 practitioners throughout the world currently carry the CRE designation. This elite group of internationally recognized professionals provides objective advise on real property and land related matters.

General Accredited Appraiser or GAA. This designation is awarded to general appraisers whose education and experience exceed state appraisal certification requirements. It is a product of the National Association of Realtors.

Graduate Realtors Institute or GRI. Realtors holding this designation are involved in residential real estate and are in pursuit of a solid base of information for their practices.

NAR'S Sustainable Property Designation. This new designation goes to those Realtors who are trained in greenbuilding concepts, including LEED certification, Energy Star and other energy-saving rating systems as well as consumer awareness campaigns

Performance Management Network or PMN. This new designation that brings real-world skills to keep Realtors that keeps them on top of their respective markets. Skills required for this award include: negotiating strategies and tactics, networking and referrals, business planning and systems, personal performance management and cultural differences in buying and selling. This designation is awarded by the Women's Council of Realtors

Realtors Association Certified Executive or RCE. Realtor associations from coast-to-coast are administered by folks who we refer to as association executives. Only those AE's that are interested in demonstrating commitment to the field of Realtor association management pursue this designation.

Residential Accredited Appraiser or RAA. Similar to the GAA designation, this award is obtained by appraisers whose education and experience exceed state appraisal certification requirements.

Senior Real Estate Specialist or SRES. This designation is awarded to Realtors who seek to specialize in the needs of those of us who are age 50 and over. Modules include how to ethically and profitably serve the needs of our older clients and customers.

Society of Industrial and Office Realtors or SIOR. Individuals certified with this designation are top producers in industrial and office real estate brokerage. The 2,800 members of this organization operate in 480 cities in 20 countries on six continents. The society's mandatory recertification requirement assures clients that his or her agent excels in the field.

At Home With Diversity Certification or AHWD. This certification puts the public on notice that those certified have been professional trained in and are sensitive to a wide range of cultural issues inviting a wider volume of business from a greater variety of cultures

E-PRO or Electronic Professional.

Realtors holding this designation have been trained and certified as Internet professionals. In addition to understanding internet technology, this certification also addresses internet communication and client services.

REPA or Real Estate Professional

Assistant. This comprehensive course provides an in-depth introduction to the real estate business and specific ways support staff can become valuable assets to their employers.

RSPS or Resort and Second-Home Markets Certification. Looking for a specialist to handle your second home or vacation-home needs? This designation assures clients that agents are up-to-date on the state of second-home markets and the intricacies of the tax-deferred exchanging of properties.

TRC or Transnational Referral Certification. The goal of this designation is to train agents to make and receive compensated international referrals using the Transnational Referral system developed by NAR and the International Consortium of Real Estate Associations. Awardees pledge to follow a code of conduct in business dealings.

In addition to adding a few letters at the end of one's name on a business card, statistics show that Realtors who carry at least one designation also have higher incomes than do agents who don't pursue a designation.

According to the 2008 survey data, Realtors with at least one designation earned a median income of $67,900. Members who did not pursue a designation had a median income of $33,200 – a difference of $34,700. Since agents don't earn more until they sell more, it is obvious that chances of success are significantly enhanced when your agent has a few extra letters at the end of his or her name.

KAREN BAILEY

Community Foundation key supporter of nonprofits

Within the community, there is an organization that knows the meaning of charity, and how to help connect people who care with causes that matter.

Established in 2000, the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico (CFSNM) was created with the key purpose of building permanent funds, or endowments, which benefit the transfer of wealth from one generation to the next. The outcome is a long-term support system spanning the next 100 years and beyond.

"This is the heart of the community," said Lou Sisbarro, a businessman and charitable giver who was a founding board member of the CFSNM. "You cannot have a wonderful community without a good foundation."

When Sisbarro began working with the CFSNM, he wanted to see $20 million in endowments in the next 20 years. Now, seven years later, the CFSNM has nearly $4 million in endowments. Sisbarro said he believes the $20 million mark will be met, and community agencies will have one foundation to turn to for monetary requests.

Through 2007, the CFSNM granted $7,501,391 to the community. Currently

cf NATIONAL STANDARDS

there are 30 private endowments – permanent funds – created for the CFSNM and invested over time, and 31 agency endowments, held and managed by the CFSNM for nonprofit organizations.

George Ruth, past president of the CFSNM Board and current supporter, said the Foundation serves as a key support mechanism within the community, with the ability to raise funds for non-profits as well as manage those funds.

"I look at the longterm support of the nonprofits, and when I say long-term, I mean the next 100 years," Ruth said, regarding the Foundation's ability to serve as a fiscal supporter while building a future for the nonprofits.

One example Ruth touched on was nearly $500,000 of federal grant money through U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici secured by the CFSNM for Child-Safe/NiñosSeguros.

"The community had to find a solution to child abuse and death," Ruth said. "We stepped in and were the entity that helped. That is a prime example of how the Community Foundation can help others succeed."

The Healthcare Foundation of Southern New Mexico, a supporting organization of the CFSNM, has its own board of trustees, makes many of its own decisions and receives many of the advantages of a stand-alone foundation. The HFSNM currently manages 98 endowments and income distributed from the endowments in 2007 totaled $89, 397.

Karen Bailey, the current President of the Board of Trustees for the HFSNM, was a part of the Capital Campaign for the building of the First Step Center. The Campaign became a pivotal point in the community when the group raised $6.4 million to build a new facility for the First Step Center.

"Without the generous support of our community, that dream would never have been a reality, and the building stands as a reminder of unselfish giving to those who need it the most," Bailey said about the center that provides prenatal and pediatric care for women and children with little or no health insurance.

As in the case of the First Step Center, Bailey said she believes the CFSNM will become more significant within the community as time goes on.

The Community Foundation of South-

Karen Bailey, Lou Sisbarro and George Ruth have played integral roles on the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico Board of Trustees.

Jaki and David McCollum of the Las Cruces Bulletin, center, accept the Spirit of Service Award at a banquet Wednesday, Oct. 29.

NMSU honors 'Spirit of Service'

New Mexico State University recognized the Las Cruces Bulletin and Dan Delany with the Spirit of Service Award at a banquet Wednesday, Oct. 29. The Spirit of Service Award recognizes corporations or individuals that have given of their time and talent to assist the NMSU Foundation and New Mexico State University.

Accepting the award for the Las Cruces Bulletin were Jaki and David McCollum. The Las Cruces Bulletin is a 50,000-circulation weekly community newspaper serving the greater Las Cruces area in southern New Mexico. This year marks the 39th anniversary of the Bulletin, which was founded in 1969. The Las Cruces Bulletin has always covered and supported any of New Mexico State University's fundraising, academic, athletic or public service initiatives.

Dan Delany also received the award. Delany is a 1978 graduate of NMSU with a bachelor's degree in agriculture and a minor in animal science. He is a charter member of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics (CAHE) Alumni Association. He served on the board for three years and has volunteered countless hours in support of the Department of Animal Science. He has served on the President's Associates Scholarship Board since 2006. Delany's willingness to "open doors" for the university has been instrumental in creating new opportunities to expand and enhance NMSU's most prestigious undergraduate scholarships.

Dick's Café

Dick Perez opened his first restaurant in 1959 in Tortugas. But he had to make way for Interstate 10 construction, and he moved to Mesilla Park and eventually to 2305 S. Valley Drive where he made his reputation.

his reputation.

In March, fire damaged the Valley Drive restaurant, and now Dick's Café serves customers in Monte Vista Plaza site on South Main Street. Perez is renovating the Valley Drive location and is planning to move back in a couple of weeks.

The Monte Vista Plaza seats about 75 customers, but the old Dick's Café, now being renovated, could handle about 100.

"But I want to keep the down-home feeling there so that customers will feel at home there," he added.

The restaurant hours are 7 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday.

"We serve regular Mexican dishes, tacos, enchiladas," Perez said. "And we also serve steaks, chickenfried steaks and a lot of hamburgers. And we're famous for our homemade French fries. We only use Idaho potatoes because they cook up the way we like them."

His grandfather, who died earlier this year, became semi-retired in 1990s. "But he'd keep coming back into the restaurant, busing tables and carrying ice buckets," his grandson said. "He liked hanging out in the restaurant, talking to customers, seeing old friends. A lot of his old customers kept coming back to see him."

coming back to see him."

Dick's Café's Hot Salsa and Green Chile is manufactured by Ol' Gringo Chile Co. on Archuleta Road.

Perez markets the salsa in Save Mart, Toucan Market and Solamente Gift Shop in Old Mesilla.

"But any grocery store that would take it, we'd sell it to them," Perez said.

He buys his thick-bodied jalapeño chiles for his salsas locally, but he obtains the other ingredients from suppliers.

Perez grew up in the restaurant business.

"When others have days off or get sick, I fill in as cook, I wash dishes and wait on tables, what ver has to be done," he said. "That's part of the business."

He graduated from Las Cruces High School and earned a degree in Criminal Justice at New Mexico State University.

State University.

"I remembered busing tables in the restaurant when I was about 8," Perez said. "I washed dishes for years after that, and I cooked in the kitchen every day for several years. After I graduated from college, I decided to stay in the restaurant business because it's been good to my family."

His father, Bobby, runs the two Las Cruces Chilitos; his aunt Rosie Hendrix, has Dick's Café in Mesilla; his uncle Jimmie Rodriguez, runs Escondido on El Paseo, and two cousins, Gabriel and Luis Montoya, are keeping up the family tradition with Cha Chi's Restaurant on Locust Street.

"Everyone learned what they know about the restaurant business at Dick's Café," Perez said.

"The Battle of the Salsas provides a great venue to showcase and promote the many New Mexico salsas," said Dr. I. Miley Gonzales, New Mexico secretary of agriculture, in a New Mexico Department of Agriculture news release.

Chile ranks eighth in New Mexico among agriculture commodities. In 2007, state chile growers planted 11,000 acres of chile and harvested 49 million tons that generated more than 232.5 million in cash receipts, Gonzales said.

Money's tight, but loans still available

The Loan Fund has helped build businesses for years

for a loan.

By F. LEROY PACHECO

The credit crunch is a new nightmare for some borrowers, but entrepreneurs and start-ups of modest means were only too familiar with being turned down for traditional financing even before the economy went sour

Private alternative lenders such as The Loan Fund have helped such borrowers build self-sufficient businesses for years. Since the Wall Street meltdown, we've been getting more referrals from loan officers at local banks who know we have more flexibility than they do and can make a loan or authorize a line of credit of up to $1 million.

Bankers aren't bad people; our board of directors includes several of them. They want to help business owners, but their hands are often tied by federal regulations and mandates from above — and those restrictions have only increased recently. One banker told me applicants must now have a minimum credit score of 650 and three years of profitable financial reports before the bank even considers making a loan.

Because we're a private group that balances social benefits and fiscal responsibility, The Loan Fund has more flexibility when it comes to helping our clients get (and keep) going. One such client, Carley Preusch of Silver City, was turned down by four banks that considered her profit margin "too low." We loaned her $125,000 in July to expand her assisted-living center.

The Loan Fund isn't the only game in town, but we're here to help people who come to us with a business plan, reasonable credit history, realistic cash-flow projections and some evidence that their business provides a benefit to the community.

What's the plan? A business plan is necessary no matter where you turn for a loan, but one of our experienced loan officers can explain how to create one if you haven't already done it.

Credit where credit is due: The Loan Fund tallies your credit score when deciding whether to lend money, but we also consider how well you've paid your bills in the past. We're looking at commitment to pay, not just ability to pay. If you've fallen on hard times but are working to meet your obligations, we'll take that into consideration.

Reality check: I recently sat down with a hard-working entrepreneur who has struggled for financing. He had plenty of optimism, which is critical for success, but he hadn't balanced the enthusiasm with a realistic assessment of all the potential pitfalls his business could encounter. Revenues aren't the same as profit, and every business owner must know what he or she will do if the cost of supplies or rent increases, the owner gets sick or a key employee leaves. That's why we ask potential clients for a business plan and cash-flow projections. We have to start somewhere to ensure they're not getting in over their heads.

Paying it forward: There's more to business success than dollars. One of The Loan Fund's core values is community development, which includes helping people help themselves and their communities. Examples of positive social benefits include creating and preserving jobs that pay sustainable wages and benefits; providing basic services and affordable housing in disadvantaged communities; preserving and advancing traditional communities, cultures and ways of life; and contributing to the revitalization of urban and rural communities.

Lenders are conservative – for their good and yours – but we can help you weigh all the "what ifs" in managing your revenues and put together a finance package you can live with. The Loan Fund's loan officers have many years of experience and can quickly see what's possible and what will or won't work for you. We have "patient money," so we can lend you what you need for as long as you need it.

There's always money out there to back good ideas, so don't let the doom and gloom stop you before you even start. You can find The Loan Fund at www.loanfund.org.

Becoming a destination for Las Crucens

Ramada Palms continuously upgrading property

By NATISHA HALES The Las Cruces Bulletin

For Las Crucens and those passing through the Mesilla Valley, the Ramada Palms Resort and Conference Center is truly an oasis in the desert.

Although located near busy Interstate 10, the Ramada Palms still promotes relaxation. Surrounded by palm trees, the grounds include 114 lodging rooms and the largest commons area and conference area in the city, according to Sales and Marketing Director Russ Smith.

"We are really trying to be at the top level of performance and service," Smith said. "Once a guest is here, they can rest and relax. Our facilities help set that stage."

The property, which was formerly a Holiday Inn for many years, was recently purchased by Raj Singh and Monika Denton. While the hotel has had its own history in Las Cruces, Russ said the owners have plans to stay involved in the community.

To assist with that, they've brought in Smith, who has held his position with the Ramada Palms for more than six weeks. Smith has some plans of his own to assist in community outreach and recruitment of

"There is a willingness to participate as a partner in the community," Smith said, "and my efforts go hand in hand with the same theme."

He said he'd like to tap in on an important resource – the Internet.

"In the website, you will see a difference," he said. "The emphasis on the Internet is growing, and I think it's a powerful tool. Of course, I'd like to shake hands, visit and communicate with every person I can, but in today's day and age, the Internet is a tool that can expand outreach even more, and I want to be good at it."

Though he said the updates are a work in progress, there should be a new website up "within weeks." The Internet isn't the only untapped resource available for the Ramada Palms. While the owners get much of their business from out-of-town guests and conferences, there is still a desire to position the Ramada Palms as a destination for Las Crucens as well.

Complete with a full-service lounge, The Bar, Smith said the Ramada is not seen as a nightclub destination.

Currently, The Bar has been closed awaiting a new theme.

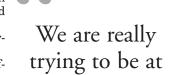

"We closed down the bar, and in January, we hope to re-open with another theme," Denton said. "We're ready to move forward on that."

The restaurant, Sabor, also is another element of the resort that has been redesigned. Opening at 5 p.m. for dinner every day with a full-service bar open at 4 p.m. daily, Sabor is the newest version of several themes.

"Sabor has a theme of bringing European, American, Asian and a Hispanic menu together," Smith said.

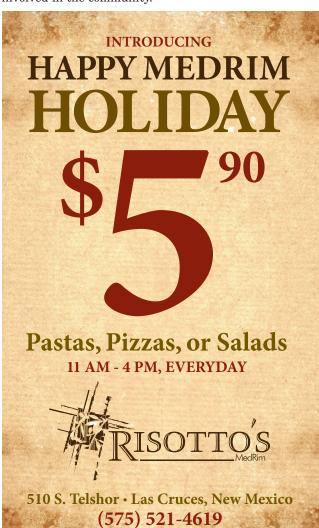

While guests are frequent diners of the unique restaurant, Smith said there is now more of an effort to reach out to local diners.

"We're working with the chefs to learn to get aromas of the kitchen out here into the commons area," he said.

Across from the kitchen are a "street of shops" and the new San Juan room, a meeting room for small groups.

Of course, there is plenty of banquet space at the Ramada Palms to accommodate larger groups as well, Smith said.

More recently, the Tourism Association of New Mexico hosted 100 attendees at its researching and marketing conference in the hotel's banquet rooms. With help from the Las Cruces Convention and Visitors Bureau, the Ramada Palms was selected from 15 properties throughout New Mexico, said ČEO Sharon Shultz.

"Basically, what it came down to was what the facility offered and the issue of affordability," Schultz said. "The winning factors were the room rate and the sponsorship level of the CVB."

The CVB plays an important part in the hotel and tourism industry in Las Cruces, and Denton was recently elected to the board.

"The CVB is big on tourism, and that's what we're all about," she said. "They're working on bringing more business into the community and the surrounding areas. Besides the CVB, Denton said she also attends meetings that will benefit all businesses in the area and said it's important to join both the Hispano and Greater Las Cruces chambers of commerce.

"I support local organizations so we can all work together in business," she said. "This is a small city, and we'll keep running into each other and keep bringing different ideas to each other.'

Those ideas include the new convention center, which is going to be constructed very close to the resort. Although it's too early to reveal any plans, Denton said she is working to continually upgrade the

"We're like a turtle," she said. "We keep going, but we're taking it a little slower.

Businesses see Las Cruces economy slowing down

Is it time to say that the city is in a recession?

I am optimistic about our local economy, despite the national financial meltdown. We are in better shape than other communities in that we depend less on manufacturing and more on services. (Services tend to be more stable over the business cycle than manufacturing.) We benefit from expansions at White Sands Missile Range and Fort Bliss. While I am optimistic, it is hard to ignore the signs of economic slowdown. I've talked to a lot of pessimistic business people in the last few weeks and the picture they paint isn't pretty.
Business people from wide variety of industries all report downturns – from uto dealers to contractors to retailers to restaurateurs, all have seen sales drops. But for economists, who need to rely on hard data, not just anecdotes, calling a recession isn't easy. This is especially true when talking about a small local economy like Las Cruces. Local data is available only with a delay, which means economists are always looking out the rear-view mirror. Talking to business people around town, none of them are very happy about the current situation. Auto dealers report sharp declines in sales. We don't have local numbers, but nationally, domestic auto sales declined 31 percent in September. That's the lowest rate of sales since 1948, adjusted for population. Local dealers don't find this number inconsistent with local sales. Real estate sales are in the dumper, which is hard on real estate agents, who, after all, only make a commission on sales. Contractors have seen business fall off also; building permits are down 23 percent (year to date). Perhaps the most troubling statistic is gross receipts tax revenue, which was down 6.8 percent in August compared to a year earlier (the latest numbers we have).

The financial meltdown is impinging on the local economy.

But the news isn't all bad. The latest job numbers, from August, indicate growth of 1.2 percent. And some sectors are doing quite well. Retail employment, for example, is up 2.8 percent. Looking closer at the employment numbers and what you see is an economy that is choppy. Sectors sensitive to credit are hurting. Other sectors continue to see growth.

The financial meltdown is impinging on the local economy. New credit is harder to come by. Business people report local banks are cutting back on lending. Credit card companies are tightening, which will impact local consumer spending. Local car dealers are bragging that they have credit for buyers with normal credit ratings. Poor credit, don't bother.

CHRIS ERICKSON

State of the Economy

So has the national recession pushed Las Cruces over the edge? Historically, a 1-percent change in the growth rate of the national economy translates into a one-halfpercent change in local economic activity. But the current situation is not typical. It is common to say that we are in the worse financial crisis since the Great Depression, but this understates the uniqueness of the current crisis. In a very real sense, the financial meltdown is without precedent. Conclusions drawn from past business cycles may not be valid.

Whether Las Cruces is in recession is a close call. Clearly, the city's economy is stalling. Economic growth is very slow, but has it gone negative? Over all, the data is mixed, but I think when we will look back a year from now, we will say that a recession started locally in September. You heard it here first.

Post-election investment opportunities are available

Inter-bank loans appear to be more promising

Over the past few weeks, the country's attention has been riveted on the presidential election. Of course, we didn't exactly forget that we're in difficult economic times, but we did have something else on which to concentrate our thoughts and energies. Now, however, the election is over, and, for many of us, it's back to focusing on the economy and our investments. By taking a closer look at the current state of affairs, you may find that the situation is more promising than you remembered, back before your thoughts were diverted by polls and prognos-

To begin with, let's look at what's been happening to an economic indicator that, while actually quite important, may not be well known to you or many other investors.

LIBOR (London InterBank Offered Rate) is the interest rate that banks charge each other for one-month, threemonth, six-month and one-year loans. This rate is initially charged by London banks, and is then published and used as the benchmark for banks rates all over the world. The LIBOR rate can matter to you in several ways. First, if you have an adjustable-rate loan, such as a mortgage, and your rate resets, it is usually based on the LIBOR rate. Even if you have a fixed-rate loan on, say, a credit card, and you pay it off each month, an increasing LIBOR will affect you by making all types of consumer and business loans more expensive. This reduces liquidity, which slows economic growth.

And that's why it's such good news that LIBOR has fallen steadily for the past few weeks. A lower LIBOR can significantly ease the flow of credit - and, as you'll recall, the frozen credit market was one of the chief culprits of the financial meltdown.

Apart from a falling LIBOR, what other positive developments have we seen in the financial markets? For one thing, talk about a coming "depression" has largely faded from the scene. Furthermore, stock prices, while still volatile, have shown some upward movement in recent weeks. Before the two-day plunge of Nov. 5 and 6, the S & P 500 closed 17.7 percent higher than its low of 848.92, reach on Oct. 27. A 20-percent rise would have technically marked the end of the current bear market and the beginning of a new bull market. But even after the sharp two-day drop; the S & P 500 was up nearly 10 percent from its Oct. 27 low point.

Still, no one can say that the stock market has already hit bottom. With the economy struggling, it's unlikely that corporate profits will be robust in the months ahead – and corporate profits are a key driver of stock prices.

But there may be a bright side to this picture: Based on traditional measures of value, stocks are now relatively inexpensive. Much of the poor economic news may already be reflected in current stock prices, so, based on today's price levels, high-quality stocks could very well provide attractive returns in the long run. Over the short term, though, be prepared for continued volatility, possibly including large day-to-day price drops.

These are challenging times for investors, but good opportunities are out there. To take advantage of them, you need courage, discipline and patience. Remem-

Arrowhead Center launches Dataline

Knowledge is power, especially in the world of business. Whether a small business is already well established or yet to get off the ground, New Mexico State University's Arrowhead Center wants to help by providing important business information with the Arrowhead Business Dataline. Anyone with a question about state or local economic or business conditions can call 646-7460 or send an email to data@arrowhead.nmsu.edu for an answer.

'Accurate and timely business information is critical to the success of small business," said Jim Peach, co-director of policy analysis for Arrowhead Center. "Too often, small businesses don't have the resources to find the data they need. Examples include demographic characteristics of markets and income levels and workforce data. This kind of data is essential to developing business plans and investment strategies.

Arrowhead Center is a nonprofit organization owned by NMSU. It specializes in fostering economic development in the state of New Mexico through various operations. Experts at Arrowhead Center's Entrepreneurship and Small Business program will provide data and projections on a variety of business-related topics in response to Business Dataline requests. Information on current or projected demographics throughout the region, employment and industry data as well as labor-force statistics will also be available. Questions and answers that are not company-confidential are later published under the Policy Analysis FAQ page at www.arrowheadcenter.org.

"Businesses that don't know the economic and demographic characteristics of their own market often make the wrong investment decisions and incorrectly spend advertising money," Peach said. "The right information can really mean the difference between making it and not making it.

Peach said small business is vital to the state of New Mexico. While there is no agreed upon definition of what a small business is, nearly 90 percent of businesses in the state have fewer than 50 employees.

Hoeksema appointed to lottery board

HOEKSEMA

Las Cruces resident Ken Hoeksema has been appointed by Gov. Bill Richardson to the New Mexico Lottery board of directors.

"Higher education is a stepping stone to greater success in life," Hoeksema said. "I am excited to represent the southern part of the state, and I feel a deep responsibility to help as many students as possible obtain Legislative Lottery Scholarships to attend college.

The sale of lottery games benefits an in-state college tuition program.

Since 1996, the lottery has raised $371 million for education and more than 50,000 students have attended college on Legislative Lottery Scholarships. As of the Spring 2007 semester, 5,200 high school graduates from Doña Ana County have received $22.7 million in Legislative Lottery Scholarships while more than 13,600 students have received $61.3 million in scholarships to attend the New Mexico State University main campus and Doña Ana Community College.

Hoeksema is self-employed as a business consultant after working 28 years in senior management positions with Amway Corp., most recently as vice president of sales and marketing for Amway Korea Ltd. He also serves as board president of the Boys & Girls Club of Las Cruces and as a board member for Catholic Charities-Diocese of Las Cruces.

Hoeksema has a bachelor's degree in economics from Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Mich., and a master's degree in public administration from Grand Valley State University in Allendale, Mich. He and wife Winnie have been married since 1969 and have three adult sons.

The New Mexico Lottery board is composed of seven members. Board members are unpaid citizen volunteers appointed by the governor and confirmed by the state senate. By statute, board membership must include professionals in the field of accounting, law, business and law enforcement.

Board responsibilities include maximizing net revenue for the Legislative Lottery Scholarship program, supervising the lottery's chief executive officer, setting and overseeing the lottery's annual budget, and determining lottery games to be offered. Hoeksema's term on the lottery's board expires in June 2013. Information about Legislative Lottery Scholarships is available at www.nmlottery.com.

Economic Development Department signs agreement with Juarez

The New Mexico Economic Development Department and the Economic Development Department of the City of Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, announce the signing of an MOU agreement that will coordinate their economic development efforts in the following areas:

- Each agency will serve as a resource of information for each other's staff and constituents. Both entities will discuss and share information on industry sectors that hold the greatest promise of success for each other.
- Each agency will work together to mutually strengthen their science and technology related industries by facilitating collaboration between public and private sector institutions and businesses.
- Both agencies will provide information to each other on potential maquiladora supplier recruitment leads.
- Whenever appropriate, both agencies will seek to include each other in cross-border site visits when the New Mexico-Ciudad Juárez region is being presented to potential maquiladora supplier leads as a whole.
- Both agencies will provide information to each other on potential trade leads and joint-venture opportunities. When either New Mexico or the City of Juárez are cho- sen as a film production location, both agencies will cooperate to offer potential sites or other resources that may better suit the production's needs.
- Both agencies commit to sharing information on each other's respective markets in order to foster cross-border opportunities.
- Each agency will include the other on its mailing lists and invitation lists to trade and cross-border related
- Whenever possible, each agency will promote the other's programs and capabilities to potential clients and constituents.
- Both agencies will work together to help promote the economic development goals of the region. They will work together to facilitate the cooperation of our respective state and local governments' economic development efforts, wherever practical.

The MOU was signed by the Mayor of Juarez Jose Reyes and Cabinet Secretary Fred Mondragón on Wednesday evening at a dinner hosted by the Economic Development Department in Albuquerque.

Both organizations are already in the process of planning activities such as the 2009 NAFTA Institute/Supplier Meet the Buyer Conference, industry recruitment and future trade missions.

PRC issues order to Qwest

The New Mexico Public Regulation Commission "NMPRC" or "Commission") has issued an order establishing further proceedings on Qwest Corporation's proposed "Residence and Business Competitive Response Program" (tariff change).

Qwest competitor Cyber Mesa has challenged Qwest's proposed tariff changes as anticompetitive, unlawful and not in the public interest. The Commission will hold a full hearing on the matter in mid-December. In the meantime, the Commission ruled, the new Qwest tariff may go into effect, but only if it is modified so as to remove all eographic pricing discrimination. The Qwest AFOR II Plan, a landmark regulatory order issued by the NMPRC in November 2006, withholds from Qwest the ability to discriminate geographically on pricing in its New Mexico service territory.

The Commission will hold a prehearing conference at p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 12, in the commission's fourthfloor hearing room of the PERA Building, 1120 Paseo de

ACI hosts climate change forum

The New Mexico Association of Commerce & Industry (ACI) recently hosted a forum about the environmental and economic challenges of global climate change for community and business leaders in New Mexico.

Widespread attention to the issue of climate change has sparked debate nationally and in New Mexico regarding policy proposals to address it. Some of these climate change proposals, like establishing cap and trade programs, could have significant economic impacts on businesses and families in the state. A cap and trade program sets a cap on greenhouse gas emissions and allows facilities that reduce emissions below the cap to generate and sell credits to facilities that are unable to make reduc-

Tom Mullikin – a nationally recognized environmental attorney who frequently speaks to legislators, environ-mentalists and business leaders nationwide regarding climate change - spoke about the consequences of climate change policy proposals that only address the issue on a state or national level, but fail to address emissions from rapidly developing countries like China and India.

"If policy makers ignore the global nature of climate change, it will drive U.S. companies to relocate overseas to low-cost nations where there is little or no environ-mental regulation," Mullikin said. "This relocation fails to accomplish the goal of reducing global greenhouse gas emissions, and will likely make global emissions worse."

For example, Mullikin said that China's carbon dioxide (CO2) emissions increased more in one year (2006-07) than U.S. emissions have increased in the last decade (1997-2007). In 2007, China passed the United States and now accounts for 18 percent of the world's CO2 emissions releasing more than 800 million metric tons more CO2 than the United States last year.
The shift of clean, regulated American industry to nations with little to no environmental regulation will result in lost U.S. jobs, he said. Proposals like a cap and trade program will also increase energy prices for consumers

A study by the National Association of Manufacturers showed the potential impact that federal cap and trade legislation could have on New Mexico, particularly if developing nations do not agree to reduce their emissions:

- New Mexico is at risk of losing more than 11,000 jobs
- and up to $1.2 billion in gross state product by 2020; New Mexico's household income could decrease by almost $2,300 a year by 2020;
- Electricity prices in New Mexico are estimated to increase by up to 133 percent by 2030, while gasoline prices are estimated to rise by up to 140 percent.

Mullikin is a senior environmental attorney with the law firm Moore & Van Allen, based in Charlotte, N.C. He has a comprehensive policy background on the issue of climate change and works to assist businesses in identifying shared interests with others in their communities to craft smart public policy to address it. He has traveled with a team of experts to Antarctica, the Namib Desert in Africa, the Amazon in Peru and the Great Barrier Reef in Australia over the last three years to further explore the global nature of climate change.

New Mexico is in 'land rush' for wind

More than two dozen wind developers looking for property

At times, the formidable winds known across much of the western United States can be unpleasant, but now, western farmers and ranchers are seeing dollar signs in the wind as they look to lease portions of their land to wind-farm developers.

We are seeing a wind land rush in New Mexico by more than two dozen wind developers of all stripes and shades," said Robert Foster, associate director of New Mexico State University's Department of Agricultural Economics and Agribusiness in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. He also is a program manager for NMSU's Institute for Energy and the Environment.

Three elements necessary for a successful wind farm, Foster said, include land with a good wind resource, access to transmission lines and a contract to sell the energy. A piece of land is considered optimal for a wind farm if it has average annual winds greater than 15 mph.

Since financing for large wind-power plants requires millions of dollars, landowners usually lease the land and receive a royalty from the energy produced by the wind turbines, similar to the oil and gas industry. The difference is that the wind resource can be fully determined before large amounts of money are invested and even more important, the resource will never run out," he said.

According to Foster, the U.S. has installed more than 4,000 megawatts of wind-energy generators this year alone and has a total of more than 21,000 megawatts of wind plants. One megawatt is equal to one million watts, enough energy to supply approximately 1,000 people. New Mexico is ranked 12th nationally with 500 megawatts of wind farms installed and another 100 megawatts under development.

On average, a wind farm's footprint with roads and transmission lines is only about 10 percent of the land, so 90 percent is still available for livestock or Livestock are not scared of wind turbines, and you'll often see cows sitting in the shade of a turbine. Birds can easily see wind turbines and avoid flying through them. There are occasional bird kills, but usually during bad weather, such as fog, when they cannot see the turbines. That's generally not a problem in New Mexico," Foster said. Currently, ranchers in New Mexico receive about $1.8 million a year for leasing their lands for wind farms.

"Normal wind farm leases are from 25 to 30 years," Foster said. "Landowners should beware of companies that are only going to flip their land lease over to another developer and instead try to deal with an actual wind farm developer, not just a land speculator."

Foster said royalties on production vary. The most common approach is a royalty based on a percentage of production, normally ranging from 2 to 5 percent per year with an escalation clause possible after a few years. Wind resources can naturally vary as much as 20 percent from year to year, so royalties vary as well. A flat royalty per turbine typically ranges from $2,500 to $5,000 per megawatt, depending on the wind resource, transmission capabilities and other factors. Some contracts give landowners a combination of percentage and flat rate amounts. In the Midwest, some landowners sign "flip models" where they receive nothing for the first few years, and later own everything including all electrical production and maintenance.

The landowner should maintain access to his land as part of the agreement. Be sure to negotiate on road building and land restoration. A rancher should get a knowledgeable lawyer to help with contracting to avoid being taken," Foster

High Heels for High Hopes fundraiser to benefit N.M. March of Dimes programs

Style gala dinner and silent auction set for Nov. 20

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

More than 550,000 babies nationwide are born prematurely, and recently, that number is rising. Now, there is a way Las Cruces residents can help make a difference by providing support for the March of Dimes through the High Heels for High Hopes campaign.

This is the second year the High Heels for High Hopes fundraiser has helped raise money for the March of Dimes. Last year, the event raised $47,000, and this year, the goal is $60,000. To help that happen, 14 celebrity models have come together and pledged to raise $4,000 each in various ways to help this cause. In addition, the High Heels for High Hopes Style Gala Dinner and Silent Auction will take place beginning at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 20, at Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces, 705 S. Telshor Blvd.

"Babies need to get the best chance of being born as healthy as possible," says Becky Horner, March of Dimes division director for Southern New Mexico. "I have two healthy children of my own, but have had family members who have gone through the trauma of having babies born prematurely."

Horner says the March of Dimes in Southern New Mexico continues to focus on their Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) Family Support program, which offers families of babies born prematurely a support system in the form of a family support specialist that provides case management, management, networking between families and answers questions on what to expect in any situation. "The NICU Family Support program provides families with someone to help them through one of the most difficult situations they will face," Horner says.

In addition, the area March of Dimes provides these families with transfer kits that include a glossary of terms, contact information for various entities, toiletries, coupons for meals at dining establishments, gas coupons and much more.

"When babies are transferred to any of the state's NICU's, it is often last minute and a stressful time for families," Horner says. "With this transfer kit, we can provide families with some comfort and information on who to talk to through this time."

The event, which will help sponsor programs such as this through the March of Dimes, features a fashion show and a silent auction to help raise money toward the $60,000 goal. The 14 women who have volunteered to help raise money will be honored and are currently taking donations through the High Heels for High Hopes website, www.highheelsforhighhopes.com. On the left side of the screen, click on the model to support, then make a contribution on the secure site.

"All of the money raised goes directly to programs that address all of these issues premature babies face," Horner says.

One woman participating as a celebrity model has been personally touched by premature birth. Janet Mazdra's son, Spencer, was born 16 weeks early in 2002 and spent the first four months of his life in the Thomason Hospital Neonatal Intensive Care Unit. Mazdra says some of the medicines that were developed through March of Dimes funding helped save her son's life.

"This is my way of giving back," Mazdra says. "There are so many families who go through what we went through. It's not a good way for a child to begin his or her life. The March of Dimes can make sure that doesn't happen to another family."

FEATURED ARTIST-

Joanna Bradley: Making art through nature

Gourd artist leaves her mark in the Southwest art scene

By JENNA FROSCH

Joanna Bradley is no stranger to hard work. Whether it is running her own business or spending a lot of her free time creating masterpieces from a simple gourd, Bradley does it all with a little spark.

Bradley has been in advertising most of her life, which included launching and owning a radio station, a television station, a television production studio, a printing operation and advertising agencies, and she owns a small advertising agency today. In this business, she does television advertising for the remodeling industry with clients in New York and Miami, and many more from throughout the country.

While these ventures paved the way for a successful career, Bradley is seeing success in her passion: gourd art.

Having been recognized by the Rio Grande Arts and Crafts Festivals and the Angel Fire ArtsFest as a unique artist, Bradley has become known for her gourd art at fairs and festivals throughout the Southwest.

Four years ago, Bradley was reading a magazine about creating art from gourds and she became interested in trying it herself.

"I don't know how to paint

"I don't know how to paint or draw, and many would argue that gourds are not fine art, but I've seen some that will knock your socks off," Bradley says.

The gourd is a member of the squash family, and for the gourd to be used for art it must be completely dry. Gourds vary in their thickness and there are tools artists can buy specifically made for gourd art. Bradley says gourds can be highly toxic, so when cleaning, she suggests using a mask or respirator.

The colors on the gourds Bradley creates are from dyes specifically created for gourd art, or anything with color that can be sealed.

"For the most part, I never know where I'm going when I start out," Bradley says. "So, (the gourd and I) are pretty good friends by the time I end up with a finished piece."

Bradley's work is almost exclusively in gourds, but she has expressed interest in carving wood. Before taking up gourd art, she created ceramic pieces, clothing, dolls and floral arrangements, among other things.

In general, Bradley creates vessels, masks, Kokopellis, statuettes, spirit dolls and quail. One of her more unique projects is jewelry made from gourd shards that are cut out, dyed, sealed and decorated with embossed enamel, and then molded into something that meets Bradley's interests and decorated with beads, metal pieces from a junk yard or rubber stamps.

Bradley's larger pieces include wall art of three gourd masks mounted on a twisted Yucca. Some of her larger works can be 5-feet wide by 3-feet high. One of her newest pieces is a shadow box that contains two masks made with pheasant feathers and butterflies.

"It's fun — it really is," Bradley says. "No two things are ever exactly alike. You'd find that to be true with any two gourd artists. Every gourd artist puts their own spin or person into a project."

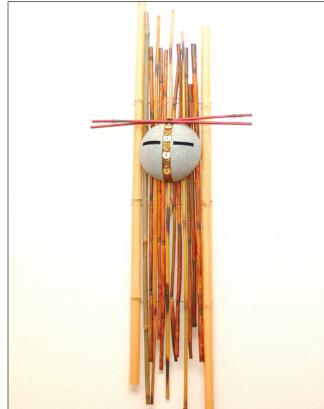

Bradley says she finds inspiration in many places.

"Creativity, self expression – it's not two-plus-two-is-four. It can be two-plus-two-is-five if you want it to be," Bradley says. "In any medium, you do it to your own rules and boundaries, not necessarily someone else's."

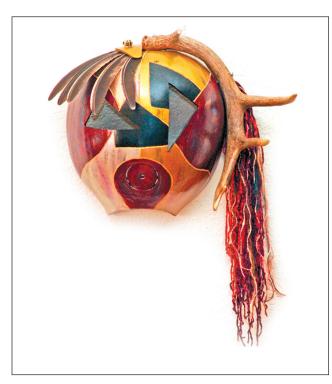

Bradley is a member of the City of Artists Promotional Association and ArtForms and shows her work in the Main Street Gallery on the Downtown Mall and Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery in Mesilla, across from the Fountain Theatre. She will participate in the La Casa Bazaar and various crafts fairs around the Southwest.

"When I see a piece, I want to smile and feel good," Bradley says. "When people stand at an art exhibit, they see my colors – I like color – it makes me feel good."

For more information about Bradley's gourd art, call her at 522-3479.

Exhibit to open Friday, Nov. 14

A new gallery opening called "Andy Warhol's 15 Minutes at New Mexico State University" will be hosted at the NMSU Art Gallery with a 5 p.m. reception Friday, Nov. 14.

The gallery will exhibit 28 of Andy Warhol's original photographs with examples portraying both color Polaroid images and black and white silver gelatin prints. This work reflects his interest in celebrities, New York and other items of "pop" culture. Warhol used repetition in his images as a compositional strategy, said Preston Thayer, NMSU's art gallery director. The images selected for display are seen as "evidence of the way he looked at the world," Thayer Warhol's use of repetition is exhibited in the silk screened images and is a signature of his work. Multiples of Jackie Kennedy or Elvis are among his most iconic works. The photos are part of a permanent collection now owned by the university. NMSU received a $60,000 grant from the Warhol Foundation to host two past exhibits, one in 2007 and one in 2005. The Warhol Foundation also provided the university museum with some of Warhol's photographs to include in its permanent collection.

This will be the first time these particular photographs will be exhibited and Thayer's first show as gallery director at NMSU. This collection will be featured through Tuesday, Dec. 23, at the gallery

NMSU students, local artists come together for the Rio Grande

Dance-filled celebration to raise awareness

Much has been said about the legendary waterway, the Rio Grande. Poets and songwriters have waxed lyrical, historians and social commentators have espoused its importance to our cultural heritage, while economists and ecologists have acknowledged its role in our civic development.

Now a salute by the dance community, praising its inspirational importance, entitled El Río En Vivo, Living River, will take place along the banks of this very special tributary, at 1 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16. Presented as a collaboration between New Mexico State University dance students and local dance professionals including Joseph Putman, Nikki Lemmon and Jessica Trembly – the afternoon of dance, music and words was conceived and conceptualized by visiting choreogra-pher and adjunct professor Hilary McDan-

Local author Denise Chávez will also take part in the event, reading original works dedicated to the river, while a small improvisational musical ensemble made up of local musicians, including Sam Sullivan of Liquid Cheese, Aaron Barbera of the Las Cruces Symphony and others, will accompany both the dancers and Chávez.

The event is free to the public and will be presented at the south end of La Lloro-na Park River Walk Trail, where Calle del Norte crosses the Rio Grande. The dance numbers will be improvised and include both terrestrial dance and Aerial Fabric Dance, a specialty of McDaniel-Douglas and Putman, who are also encouraging other visual and/or musical artists to come out and participate in the improvisation.

"It's an invitation to artist and art lovers alike," McDaniel-Douglas says. "We call it 'site-specific' art, a re-embracing of the area in which we find ourselves, actually using the space we derive inspiration from against a beautiful backdrop.

9 BOOK SIGNING AT BRANIGAN LIBRARY

Author Corey Recko investigates one of New Mexico's most perplexing unsolved crimes in his book, "Murder on the White Sands: The Disappearance of Albert and Henry Fountain," just released in paperback. Recko will discuss his book and sign copies at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14, at Thomas Branigan Memorial Library, 200 E. Picacho Ave., in the Dresp Room.

Recko's book provides readers and local history buffs with a thorough account of the mystery surrounding the Fountains' disappearances and the subsequent investigation and trial. Who was behind the 1896 murders of Col. Albert Jennings Fountain and his son Harry? No one was ever convicted, but Recko has his own compelling theory about "whodunit."

For more information on the book signing, contact Mark Pendleton at 528-4001, mpendleton@las-cruces.org or visit the author's site at www.coreyrecko.com.

MASU CHOIRS HOLIDAY CONCERT

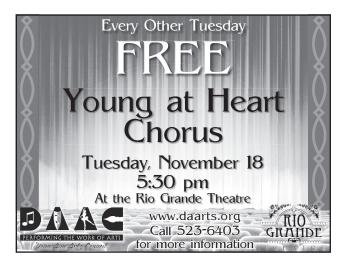

The New Mexico State University Choirs Holiday Concert will be held at 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14, and 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15, at the NMSU Music Center Recital Hall. The concert is being held before Thanksgiving, so the group will give thanks to the audience members who have attended their holiday concerts over the years. The concert is about food, fun, familiar favorite and fabulous fourpart harmonies.

Friday will be a Festival of Food, with children of all ages and adults invited for light food from Andele Restaurant. At 7 p.m. Friday, a Festival of Song will take place featuring the Campus Choir, Gospel Choir and the new men's choir, Crimson Chord Company, with familiar holiday songs. At 8 p.m. there will be a Festival of Classical Choral Music. The second musical section is designed with a more classic selection: University Singers will showcase incredibly beautiful, innovative songs by the wunderkind contemporary American choral composer Eric Whitacre. Masterworks Chorus will present Benjamin Britten's Ceremony of Carols and Combined Choirs will sing the section's finale.
On Saturday, the Festival of Food will be at 3 p.m., Festival of

9 LA SOCIEDAD PARA LAS ARTES PRESENTS POET TATIANA SHCHERBINA

Tatiana Shcherbina, who has been called "one of the most significant figures in contemporary Russian poetry," will be in Las Cruces to give a bilingual reading at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14, at Hardman Hall, room 106, on the New Mexico State University campus. Literary translator J. Kates will read the English versions of her work, and will translate questions and answers afterwards. The reading is free and open to the public.

Shcherbina wrote in the vanguard of the poets who emerged from the Soviet Union's underground shadows into the full light of perestroika and glasnost. A representative of the "New Wave" of the 1980s, her poems blend the personal with the political, drawing on classical literature, Russian culture, and French and German influences. Five volumes of her poetry were published in "samizdat" before 1990; at one point, she was denounced as an enemy of the Soviet state and left to live in Germany and France for many years. The readings are part of Zephyr Press' ongoing "World in Poetry" series, which brings international poets and literary translators to the border region for readings and workshops. The Las Cruces reading is co-sponsored by La Sociedad Para Las Artes of NMSU, the NMSU English Department and the NMSU Dean of Arts and Sciences. It was made possible with a generous grant from the New Mexico Humanities Council.

9 TELEBRATION! AT GOOD SAMARITAN VILLAGE

Telebration!, a worldwide storytelling event will be celebrated from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15, at the Good Samaritan Village.

Telebration! Originated in Jonesborough, Tenn., in 1988, when J.R. Pinkerton began a tradition of families and communities gathering on Nov. 15 to tell stories. The idea spread from town to town, eventually spreading throughout the United States and around the world. The event will feature storytellers, poets and writers from southern New Mexico and west Texas. The tales are suitable for children as well as adults. Admission is free. Call 522-3799 or 526-5940 for more information.

OPERATE SAND CHOCOLATE FUNDRAISER

The Las Cruces Academy will host a Cherries and Chocolate fundraiser from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 15, at the Fountain House, 2250 Calle de Picacho, in Mesilla. This fun, elegant evening in Mesilla will include drinks, live acoustic music, a silent auction with items from around the world and unlimited dessert tasting.

The proceeds will go to help start Las Cruces Academy, a new private school emphasizing science, math and language arts for gifted and academically advanced students. They still need to buy furniture and more educational equipment.

Tickets are $50, $40 of which is considered tax-deductible. Ticket sales will be limited, so buy one now. They may be purchased at Durango Bagel, 1495 S. Solano Drive, Enchanted Gardens, 270 Avenida de Mesilla, Jesse's Kansas City BBQ, 230 S. Church St., and Ocotillo Roasters, 315 N. Main St.

FESTIVAL OF THE CRANES

The sandhill cranes are beginning to arrive at the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge south of Socorro, but it isn't too early to start signing up to attend this year's festival.

This year's festival begins Tuesday, Nov. 18, and runs through Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22, with events at a variety of venues, from the Bosque to Elephant Butte Reservoir, the VLA to Trinity Site, the Quebradas and Sevilleta and in Socorro itself.

There are workshops, tours and activities for those interested in the birds: seeing them, identifying them by sight and sound, attracting them, studying their habits and their habitats, learning their evolutionary history. There will be activities for non-birders: photography, painting, writing, gardening as well as tours and lectures on geology, Native American and early New Mexico history, geocaching and Tai Chi.

Visit http://friendsofthebosque.org/crane or call 575-835-2077 for more information.

® NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY ART GALLERY

The New Mexico State University Art Gallery will exhibit a selection of 28 Warhol photographs beginning with a gallery reception at 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14, through Dec. 23. Original photographs taken by Andy Warhol between 1970 and 1987 capture artists, celebrities and socialites as color Polaroid images, while the streets of New York were the subject of many of the black and white silver gelatin prints.

Warhol used photographs as the basis for his paintings, and so there are multiple, often repetitious images of any given subject. This, in turn, fed into the repetition seen in his silkscreened images – multiples of Jackie Kennedy or Elvis being among Warhol's most iconic works.

The gallery is located at 100 Williams Hall, Solano Drive at University Avenue. Call 646-2545 for more information.

® BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

What do Maori warriors, Popeye, Angela Jolie and the Branigan Cultural Center have in common? Tattoos! "INK: Tattoos as Personal Expression" opens at Branigan Cultural Center from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 14.

Tattoos have become increasingly common in today's visual landscape. This exhibition focuses on the art form, the technology and science behind tattooing, local expressions and the reasons people choose to mark their bodies with ink. "INK: Tattoos as Personal Expression" runs through Jan. 24, 2009.

Tattoos are found throughout Las Cruces and the Mesilla Valley, around the world and in virtually every culture. With the help of tattoo artists, historians and artists, the visitor can investigate the fascinating world of tattoos. Interviews with local tattooists, images, historical artifacts, a photo essay by local photographer Chris Mortenson and a recreation of a modern tattoo parlor are included in the exhibition.

The Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Call 541-2154 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org for more information.

Take Tea and See, the Ten O'clock Club's new exhibit is now showing at Abraham's Bank Tower Restaurant, fourth floor of the Wells Fargo Bank building at the intersection of Main Street and Lohman Avenue.

The Ten O'Clockers find hot tea a favorite beverage for the winter season and a solace for the shorter days and longer nights. Ten O'Clockers strive to stop whatever they are doing for a minimum of 10 minutes each day to hone their art skills.

Participants include Las Cruces artists Jean Smith, June Decker, Jan Addy, Penny Duncklee, Alice Dressler, Susan Rivera and Margaret Bernstein.

Take Tea and See runs through January. The gallery hours are 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call 523-5911 for more information.

© BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

"La Charreada: Fotos de ¡Los Charros Magnificos!" will show through Dec. 27 at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St. Photographer David Shaw happened on a procession of pick-up trucks and horse trailers traveling down a dusty road in Encinitas, Calif., and on impulse followed them. This led to Shaw's discovery of the world of La Charreada, the Mexican Horse Rodeo. An exhibit of silver gelatin prints celebrating the people, Los Charros and the event, "La Charreada," is the culmination of three years of travel into this centuries old competition and exhibition of horsemanship.

Supplementing the photography will be information panels providing the history of La Charreada and describing the various events and feats. The panels will be presented in both English and Spanish.

Shaw has been involved in photography for more than 40 years. Inspired by Edward Weston's "Daybooks," he began working in black and white using a 4-by-5 view camera. For the Charreada series, Shaw used a twin lens Mamiya camera. Now settled in Las Cruces, he has established Estudio Azul and continues exploring new subjects with his camera.

The Branigan Cultural Center is located at the north end of the Downtown Mall in Las Cruces. The exhibit and reception is free and open to the public. Galleries are open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Call 541-2154 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org for more information.

MAIN STREET GALLERY

Nancy Begin will be the featured guest artist during November and December. She is exhibiting her fantasy works, which depict her pleasingly peculiar watercolor world and her equally curious "Monster Boxes" which can only be described as irresistibly grotesque pets ... the kind you want to take home. The adorably quirky hand-painted and hand-carved characters are liable to charm and compel one into an adoption frenzy.

The Main Street Gallery continues to exhibit some of Las Cruces' finest artists including the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson's fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst's Spirit Minders, Amy Rankin, a graduate of New Mexico State University, and potter Russell Mott team up for an art show at Glenn Cutter Jewelers and Gallery which will run through Nov. 21.

Rankin received her BA and MFA from the art department at NMSU in 1998. While working toward her MFA in painting and drawing she developed a strong interest in printmaking. Since completing her degree, she has focused on all three disciplines of painting, drawing and printmaking. Currently, she teaches all three areas at the University of New Mexico Taos Branch, where she lives. The show will contain some new samples of her printmaking as well as florals, limited edition copperplate etchings of women with snakes and other charcoal still life works and oil paintings.

Mott came to ceramics late in his life. He woke up one day and decided he wanted to be a potter. He decided to learn to throw pottery first and let the other techniques in pottery come to him later. He works in his studio every day and he finds that Raku is his first love, which includes throwing, trimming, drying, glazing, firing and torching. Mott has learned from and apprenticed with Steve Hemingway, Claude W. Smith III and Alex Williams early in his career.

More than 100 pieces of original student artwork from the Las Cruces and Gadsden public schools have been installed in the first-floor corridors of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. The exhibit includes paintings, etchings, drawings and fabric designs. The artists range from elementary students to high school students.

The student art shows have been a rotating fixture for Doña Ana County's main lobby since 2000, with hundreds of works by local student artists displayed for the public during that time.

The student art exhibit complements the permanent art collection within the Doña Ana County Government Center, which includes a series of historical photographs in the upstairs rotunda, as well as a spectacular photograph of the Organ Mountains donated in 2007 by Las Cruces artist R. Frederick Silva. The piece, titled "Fall Splendor," hangs on a second floor east wall, adjacent to the main entrance to the administrative offices of the Doña Ana County Board of Commissioners and the county manager.

The public is invited to view the student art show, Caballo de Las Cruces, "Fall Splendor" and "Heart of the Problem" at any time during normal county business hours.

"Recycled," the Las Cruces Art Association's 2008 Theme Show, will run through Tuesday, Dec. 2, at the Southwest Environmental Center's Cottonwood Gallery, 275 N. Downtown Mall.

For "Recycled," each of the 25 artists has taken work that was going to be thrown away and remade it, or used objects that were seemingly useless or were found somewhere, and put pieces together for the exhibit. Artists participating in the show include Diana Ayers, Nancy Frost Begin, Margaret Bernstein, Alice Dressler, Pamela Eberly, Nancy Fairbank, Toni Graywolf, Doris Harrington, Shirley Hawkins, Mayanna Howard, Rosario C. Jeremias, Carol Kennedy, Julia Koontz, Patricia Lawrence, Judy Licht, Meredith Loring, Sally Marsh, Jim R. Moore, Ruth Housworth Park, Susan Rivera, Billie Roberson, Richard Spellenberg, Mary Talaminil, Danny Wade and Naida Zucker.

As the oldest arts association in Las Cruces, LCAA quietly endeavors to promote artistic responsibility in the community. "Recycled" is one of these efforts.

© PRESTON CONTEMPORARY ART CENTER

The Preston Contemporary Art Center in Mesilla will introduce the work of seven artists of various media in their 2008 Fall Exhibition running through Sunday, Dec. 21. Artists featured include Marika Bordes, wood sculpture; Daniel Boylan, painting; Anki King, painting and sculpture; Shelley Lake, photography; Gregory Litinsky, watercolor painting; Frank Morbillo, sculpture; and Sue Simon, painting.

PCAC director Paul Schranz says the exhibition provides an interesting mix of figurative works, both painting and sculpture, in strong, expressive and abstract presentations. Also on exhibit are gorgeous panoramic photography and dynamic sculptures of steel, bronze and glass. Works by three artists with roots in the Ukraine, Norway and Haiti maintain the intent to show pieces with an international flavor. Additionally, works by two artists in the 2008 Fall Exhibition are included in the settings of feature films scheduled for release this winter.

The Preston Contemporary Art Center is located at 1755 Avenida de Mercado. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, 1 to 7 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Visit www.prestoncontemporaryart.com or call 523-8713 for more information.

© NEW MEXICO STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

During October and November, the New Mexico State University Library will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the introduction of the New Deal Arts Projects. The celebration, intended for children and adults, will bring to light hundreds of works created during the New Deal and introduce community residents to these treasures and the artists who created them.

The upcoming anniversary provides an occasion for the NMSU Library to illustrate some unusual ways that government funding was used to enrich our culture and provide much needed employment during a period of extreme hardship in the country's history. The celebration will feature a self-guided tour brochure in English and Spanish directing visitors to all publicly accessible New Deal Art in southern New Mexico. The brochure will be available at many locations in Las Cruces. To accompany the tour, a 75-piece traveling photo exhibit created by the National New Deal Preservation Association will be displayed on the fourth floor east gallery in Branson Library through the end of November.

During the two-month celebration, an exhibit of federal government documents, including the bill that authorized the New Deal Arts Projects, and related materials illustrating their importance will be displayed on the second floor west of Branson Library in the Government Documents area. A slide show of New Deal art will run in the lobby of Branson Library. A display of New Deal crafts will appear at the University Museum in spring 2009.

Many of the project activities were made possible by a grant from NMSU's Southwest and Border Cultures Institute. For more information, contact reference librarians Sylvia Ortiz at 646-7481 or sortiz@lib.nmsu.edu or Mardi Mahaffy at 646-6925 or mmahaffy@lib.nmsu.edu.

© NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

A strange mix of agriculture and spiritualism in the Mesilla Valley is weaved together in a new exhibit at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum. "Shalam Colony: Dream in the Desert," will be on display through May 2009. The exhibit was co-curated by the museum staff and T. Robin Riley.

In late October 1884, a group of two dozen men, women and children pitched their tents on a sandy piece of land at a prominent bend of the Rio Grande north of Las Cruces, about a mile west of the village of Doña Ana. It was here that they began to build the new "Children's Land" called Shalam.

A few months earlier, John Newbrough and fellow faithist Joseph Grill had traveled to the Southwest to purchase land for their grand experiment — a self-reliant utopian community dedicated to raising orphans. The first winter at Shalam was harsh, and the colonists' survival was only ensured by help from their new neighbors in Doña Ana. Those neighbors showed the newcomers local crops and foods, made adobe bricks, and helped build many of the structures. Between 1884 and 1907 as many as 200 people from the village worked at what they called "La Colonia."

The buildings, houses, stables, wells and irrigation system at the Shalam Colony were unlike anything that existed at that time in New Mexico Territory. Eventually encompassing 1,490 acres with up to 35 buildings, Shalam Colony became known for its developed grounds as much as for its "peculiar" reputation.

The New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum is located at 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Call 522-4100 for more information.

ONO GRINDZ

Kurt Van Wagner's digitally exotic display of the Hawaiian Islands will be on exhibit at the restaurant Ono Grindz (Hawaiian restaurant), 300 N. Downtown Mall. Van Wagner's tropical-theme show features his new Aloha creations depicting luscious swaying palms, magnificent coastlines and all the delights that make Hawaii such a wondrous place. Van Wagner has traveled numerous times to the islands of Maui, Kauai and the Big Island of Hawaii to capture these vibrant and colorful scenes that make you want to pack your bags and get on that flight today. After Van Wagner discovers and photographs the magical tropical scene, then the fun and creative work begin. He digitally hand paints and textures over his photographs using the computer and pen tablet. The results are works of art that are a blend of the realism of photography and the paintbrush of the painter. Van Wagner describes this new digital art as the best of two great art mediums. Ono Grindz owner Rachel Faulkner said she is excited to add another art venue to the Downtown area. Call 541-7492 for more information. Ono Grindz is open during the lunch and dinner hours Monday through Friday and on Saturday for lunch.

Restaurant calls Mesilla home

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

It's a fine dining restaurant housed in one of the Mesilla Plaza's oldest buildings, built in 1840 and rich with history.

The Double Eagle restaurant offers an impressive wine list, gourmet dishes and a knowledgeable staff, according to General Manager Jerry Harrell. The restaurant has been recognized by Wine Spectator magazine with the Award of Excellence in 2007, 2008 and 2009. Double

"We have an award-winning wine list, and we train our servers to ask appropriate questions of the customer to find the right wine for them," Harrell says. "Whether they are an expert or novice, we www.double-eagle-mesilla.com deliver a common touch on what that person is looking for."

Hours: Monday-Saturday The building Double Eagle Sunday 5 to 9 p.m. calls home has seen many historical events, including the Mexican-American War of 1846, the confirmation of the Gadsden Purchase on the plaza in 1853 and the Secessionist Convention declaration as the capital of the Arizona Territory in 1861. Fifth-generation Mesilla descendent C.W. "Buddy" Ritter restored it in 1984.

The restaurant contains many original antiques that have been collected over the years, along with a parlor and enclosed courtyard for patrons. The 30-foot hand-carved oak and walnut Eastlake style bar is one of the highly praised attractions in the restaurant and is a must-see for many tourists and patrons alike. The backlights in the bar are French "Corones" with Lalique shades dating from the 1890s. Highlighting the decor of the Maximilian Room are the classic French baccarat chandeliers measuring seven feet by three feet, each containing more than 1,000 handcut glass crystals.

Each room in the restaurant contains something unique. There are several rooms within the restaurant that can be rented out for the classiest of private events, luncheons, meetings or parties.

Double Eagle offers fine-dining options, with one of their most popular dishes being the Delmonico Ribeye, a 12-ounce or 16-ounce cut of meat, aged 28 to 35 days. The Filet Mignon is also a favorite, offering tenderness and flavors of hickory bacon, garlicky mushrooms and a red chile enchilada.

Another favorite is the Chicken Mesilla, a tender breast of chicken, seasoned and grilled, served over sautéed sweet onions and topped with roasted Hatch green chile and creamy Monterey Jack cheese. As an appetizer, many patrons will enjoy the Baked Brie with Roasted Pecans and Green Apples, which is imported Brie roasted with Salopek Farm pecans, served with a sliced green apple and crispy lavosh cracker bread.

Harrell says one of the most important things the Double Eagle offers is a knowledgeable staff, everyone from the dishwashers to the cooks to the servers.

"Our kitchen staff have all been here a number of years, so we have well-trained and experienced staff who have a passion for cooking and delivering quality to the customer," Harrell says.

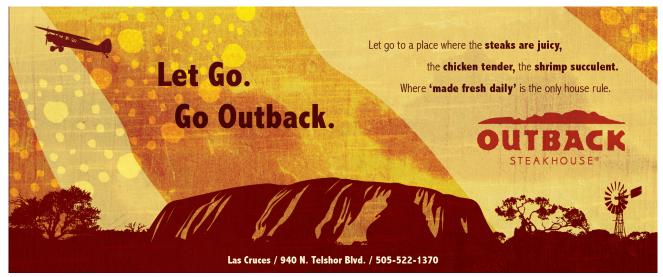

The Double Eagle is gearing up for their annual Thanksgiving Dinner, which has three seating times for 150 people each. Reservations are required and Harrell says the list fills up quickly.

They also offer their popular Sunday Brunch Buffet each Sunday with seatings at 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. The buffet offers appetizers, exotic fruit, salads, omelettes with a choice of fillings, breakfast items, luncheon items, muffins, breads and desserts. Reservations are recom-

@ LAS CRUCES MUSEUM OF ART

The Las Cruces Museum of Art is currently accepting proposals for solo and group exhibitions by artists living and working in New Mexico, Arizona and Texas to exhibit work in 2010. The prospectus is available online at the Museum of Art website http://museums. las-cruces.org and includes more information on proposal requirements. The deadline for submissions is June 19, Artist proposals must include a brief statement on the proposed exhibit including media, general content of the show and proposed use of floor space. The proposal package should also include artist résumé, artist statement and 10 to 20 thumbnail images of works for each of the artists included in the proposal.

Prominent members of the New Mexico artist community have been selected as the jurors including Cyndi Conn, visual arts director/curator of the Center for Contemporary Arts in Santa Fe, Arif Khan, gallery director of the Tamarind Institute in Albuquerque and Preston Thayer, director of the University Art Gallery at New Mexico State University. This is a wonderful opportunity for regional artists to show their highest quality work and receive museum level exposure. Past exhibitions have included installations, sculpture, large-scale drawings and a variety of other media.

Documentary: Dam to uproot 2 million people

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG

"Up the Yangtze" is a beautifully rendered and shot documentary that follows the plight of several families and the effect that the Three Gorges Dam, the behemoth Chinese equivalent to the Glen Canyon Dam, has had among the common people of the river (similar to Lake Powell, except this project has uprooted about 2 million people and put numerous towns and villages under water).

This project was initially proposed in 1919, but no action was taken on it until the 1950s when Mao took it up again, and even with that, construction did not start until 1994. United States engineers were involved and helped train some of the Chinese engineers who designed the massive structure. When it is finally completed in 2012, the 7,575-feetlong concrete structure will have displaced 102,600,000 cubic meters of earth, has enough steel to build 63 Eiffel Towers and will be 377 feet thick.

Cost estimates are $30 billion and the environmental concerns remain numerous. Although the Chinese government claims that the new technology will help reduce greenhouse gases, aid in forestation, etc., it has yet to be proven just what the reality truly is. The human part of the dam is somewhat different.

"Up the Yangtze" runs through the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla for one week beginning Friday, Nov. 14. It is not rated, but has nothing objectionable. Running time is 93 minutes. It is in Mandarin (subtitled) and English.

Filmmaker Yung Chang boards one of the numerous small cruise ships that currently ply the river, doing what are called "farewell" tours to a region that will soon no longer exist. He changes his original focus somewhat, shifting from a piece that only covered the dam to one which makes the picture slightly discordant, as he steps out from showing us what is happening and how it came to be, to a narrative of two young people who are working on the cruise ship. One is more or less doing so at her poverty ridden families request, and slowly learns the "advantages" of capitalism as European tourists tip her for her services, the other, already somewhat ensconced in western "culture," seems destined to become a business man until his ever-smiling boss gives him the bounce because he is too "open" with the boat's Pasted in with these two very moving and insightful stories are sidebars from some of the other displaced people and tiny bits of history about what is already, or will soon be, lost when the dam is complete.

This film is awesome in its presentation, but muddled in the editing. It does indeed show some of the consequences of such a plan, one that has also buried 1,300 archeological sites.

I ended up feeling that the non-monetary cost far outweighed the "benefits" of the project.

But hey, what price "progress," eh?

'The Grey Fox' at Mesilla's Fountain

Story of a train robber

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla for Saturday, Nov. 15, is "The Grey Fox" (1983, 110 minutes, not rated). This beautifully photographed and written film is based on the true story of train robber deluxe Bill Miner, who served 33 years in San Quentin for stage-coach robbery. When he is finally released in 1901, he finds a job in the oyster beds of the Pacific Northwest and stays for a while with his sister, but leaves because, "I got ambition in me that just won't quit."

A viewing of the first Western ever made, "The Great Train Robbery" in an unforgettable movie house scene, sparks those "ambitions" and soon Miner is again on the wrong side of the law. Along with a new partner, he pulls off several train robberies. Miner then settles down in a small Canadian town, falls in love with a feminist photographer and even impresses the young constable with his charm. But the Pinkerton's are on his trail.

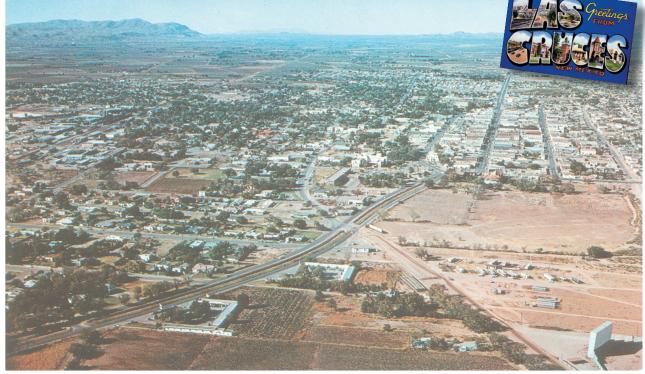

Richard Farnsworth (a New Mexico resident until his tragic death) brings the legendary Miner to life with an offbeat grace and wisdom. This extraordinary actor emanates roguish strength and independence. Director Philip Borsos capitalizes on the beauty of the environment, the universality of the emotions aroused and the simplicity of his tale in this award-winning Canadian film.

"The Grey Fox" is one of the most thoughtful and beautiful westerns ever committed to film, which is further enhanced by a beautiful music score.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for everyone except film society members, who are admitted for $1. The Fountain Theatre is at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe in Mesilla. Call 524-8287 or 522-0286 for more information.

'Role Models' delivers a laugh a minute

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH

It all started with a bad day that got progressively worse. Paul Rudd's character, Danny, picked a fight with a barista, then his girlfriend broke up with him and he realized his job sucks. That's what drove him to hijack his own company truck from a tow truck and damage school property (in a scene you have to see to believe).

That's how Seann William Scott's character, Wheeler, and Danny become role models and big brothers to two lost souls in a mentorship program. But these aren't normal kids.

Augie Farks, played by Christopher Mintz-Plasse, is a kid who wears a cape and is obsessed with a fantasy world involving kings and trolls. Danny is paired with relationship.

Wheeler, on the other hand, has been paired with Robbie, played by Bobb'e J. Thompson, a spitfire kid who has a mouth like a sailor and a chip on his shoulder. While causing problems for Wheeler, Robbie tests him to see if he will leave, but since the assignment is court ordered, no amount of abuse can get rid of Wheeler.

Through roll-on-the-floor laughter, the movie delivers a raunchy, funny and touching story of the oddest pairs of friends and the lengths at which they will go to be there for each other.

Rudd, who also co-wrote the screenplay, is brilliant, as we've seen in many of the past few years' slapstick comedies – "Knocked Up" and "40-Year-Old Virgin." His dry sense of humor is evident in this film, with just the right amount of genuine, nice guy mixed in to really keep the attention of the audience.

Scott is best known in his role as Stifler in the "American Pie" series, and in this movie, his role hasn't changed a whole lot from the movies that made him a household name. He is still raunchy and chauvinistic in this character, but seems to bond with his co-star Ronnie after connecting on that level. They both have fathers who weren't around and after a few mishaps when they first meet, the two realize they are more friends than enemies.

Elizabeth Banks plays Danny's girlfriend who dumped him, which was the straw that broke the camel's back, so to speak. She has appeared most recently in "W." opposite Josh Brolin, and is every bit as loveable in this movie as many of her last ones.

Throughout the entire movie, audience members were entertained, and it wasn't one of those movies that show all the funniest parts in the previews. Instead, the movie had many moments that set it apart from most, including the mixture of touching and twisted.

The movie boasts big laughs and a highly entertaining plot line and just might be enough to put a smile on your face for a few days to come ... perhaps

It was food for thought

JOHN KEITH

Sports Editor

Leaning on journalism's reputation for freeloading, the Aggie media relations department surprisingly brought food to their weekly press conference Monday.

Hot dogs and soft drinks. That's OK. It was the gesture that warmed our hearts, not the menu.

The only guy missing was Herb Taylor, New Mexico State's associate athletics director for an obscure area yet to be defined. Taylor, in case you have not heard, is the school's renowned mooch.

Another surprise Monday was the upbeat attitude of football coach Hal Mumme and a few players we were allowed to interview. None verbally waved the white flag, despite four straight losses and a 3-6 overall record that has thrown NMSU's hopes for a bowl bid in jeopardy. If the Aggies lose at Fresno State Saturday, it's officially over. NMSU needs to win all three of its remaining games to be bowl eligible.

Derrick Richardson, the Aggies' safety whose 104 tackles leads the nation, said the team's mood was positive despite last week's 42-30 loss to Hawaii. "Everything's fine," he said. "After the game, there was no fighting between players. No finger-pointing. Every guy was still upbeat."

Linebacker Sam King also voiced optimism. "We're still a family," he said. "You're not going through anything different than the guy next to you. We have to smooth out the little things that have stopped us.'

Mumme, who escaped questions about his job security, praised his seniors. "Good things may still happen," he said.
"I thought the latest version of our offensive line played pretty well against Hawaii," Mumme said. Quarterback Chase Holbrook was finally permitted enough time to throw for 394 yards and four touchdowns.

Injuries have forced Mumme to try and create an effective O-line each

"It's hard to overcome eight guys missing from the lineup," he said. Fresno State (5-4, 2-3 in the WAC) is also fighting injuries. "They're a lot like us," Mumme said.

Saturday's game features, according to Mumme, the league's top-two NFL prospects at quarterback. He was referring to Holbrook and Fresno State's Tom Brandstater. Both are tall, tough and strong armed.

"Chase really took some licks against Hawaii," Mumme said. "He just gets up and keeps on trucking."
"Any more questions?" asked Tyler Dunkel, the Ags' media relations director who chairs this weekly event. Nobody had any, signaling that it was time to bring out the food.

Or, more accurately, the hot dogs.

Well-traveled Gabriel lands at NMSU

Aggies' 6-11 center is work in progress

The Las Cruces Bulletin

From Capetown, South Africa, all the way to Patterson Prep School in Lenoir, N.C., back to JSorra Cathell W. , back to JSerra Catholic High School in LaHabra Heights, Calif.

From there, Chris Gabriel, all 6-foot -11 of him, finally landed in Las Cruces where he will play basketball at New Mexico

Gabriel, a soft spoken, well-mannered freshman, realizes that he is a work in progress. A rookie who found basketball only four years ago. In the two years he played at JSerra Catholic High, he averaged 14 points and "12 or 13 rebounds, I can't remember which," he said.

Gabriel admits he is short on what he calls "physicality." "I need to get stronger. I think I have the skills. And I came here because I was recruited to play right away."

NMSU needs big men. Hatila Passos,
Justin Hawkins and Martin Iti, the Ags' inside force the last two seasons, are gone. Right now, Gabriel and redshirt freshman Hamidu Rahman, another 6-11 center, are it, period. Both are green, inexperienced players with huge potential.

Both are expected to play in Saturday afternoon's regular-season opener against UC Riverside. Tipoff is set for 1 p.m. in the Pan American Center. The Aggies leap into deeper water Tuesday when they travel to Los Angeles to face Southern Cal, an NCAA tournament team last season. The Trojans are coached by Tim Floyd, former assistant to Don Haskins at UTEP.

How much Gabriel plays against USC remains a question. Even Marvin Menzies, NMSU's coach, can't be sure.

"I feel good about Chris' future," Menzies said. "He's going through a new regimen with classwork, university life and basketball at the Division 1A level."

Gabriel agrees. "It's kind of a problem going from high school to college," he

In South Africa, Gabriel played basket-ball in the "Hoops for Hope," and "Bas-ketball without Borders," two nonprofit programs for upcoming hopefuls.

In charge was Thierry (pronounced Terry) Kita, an acquaintance of Menzies. It was Kita who brokered the deal that sent Gabriel to NMSU.

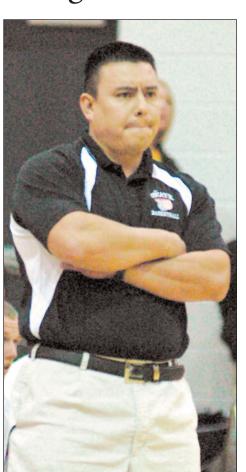

"I played AAU ball with Troy (Gillenwater, NMU's 6-9 swing player) and Jonathan (Gibson) in California," Gabriel said. "Knowing those guys was another reason I came here. We're old friends."

Chris Gabriel traveled far and wide and finally landed at New Mexico State. The 6-foot-11 center is still a work in

It's a year of change for Oñate basketball

Ortega, ex Sandia coach, takes over Knights' program

NIKI RHYNES I The Las Cruces Bulletin

Adrian Ortega is Oñate's new boys basketball coach.

By Craig Massey

In an election year when the promises of change signal a fresh start, the Oñate boys basketball program has a new administration of its own.

After 14 years in Albuquerque, head coach Adrian Ortega will come to southern New Mexico and take over the controls of the Knights. Ortega, who took the Sandia Matadors to the state playoffs the last three years, replaces longtime coach Richard Robinson, who resigned last summer. Ortega's Knights are among the four high school boys teams in Las Cruces that will be aiming for the state playoffs. The season tips off this weekend.

Ortega, a native of Las Vegas, N.M., and a longtime friend and former teammate of another Las Vegas native – LCHS girls coach Matt Abney - said he is excited to be in Las Cruces.

"There are friendly people here and Oñate is a great school," said Ortega, who likes his new schedule that gives him more time to prepare for practice and more time with his players than he had in Albuquerque. "This is a good opportunity."

Ortega said the transition has been smooth while he installs a new program that stresses discipline.

"The three pillars of our program will be academics, character development and competitiveness," he said. "The kids are buying into a disciplined program and they're excelling academically. We probably average above a 3.0 grade-point average.'

On the court, Ortega said he has been creating a system that best suits his players.

"When you take a job, you have to see what you have and come up with an offense that is compatible with the players you have," he said. "We're going to have to overachieve. Height-wise, we're undersized, but there's no questioning their heart or their character."

Four seniors lead the Knights this year: guard Steve Melendrez (5-7), wing Isaac Bonnett (5-11) and posts Alex Wright (6-2) and Jared Bielcik (5-10).

"Steve can shoot it, but he has some things he needs to improve on, too," Ortega said. "Isaac can get to the basket, has a nice mid-range shot and will be our defensive stopper. We hope Alex will be our leading rebounder, and he's a leader. Jared is going to have to play bigger than he is. He's hard-nosed and tough as entering his 12th year at the school.

Leading the way is 6-4 senior forward Lucio Luttrell, who averaged 23 points per game last year. Smith believes Luttrell is one of the top-three shooters in the state.

The other returning starters are Fabian Vigil (6-0), Charles Chavez (6-4) and Javier Montova (6-1), all seniors. Vigil is one of the Bulldawgs' most improved players, according to Smith, and is a good outside shooter. Chavez will be in the post, and

Aggies host San Jose Spartans in volleyball

NMSU overcomes slow starts on the road to extend streak

The New Mexico State volleyball team, 19-7, 13-1 in WAC play before Thursday's match against Utah State, will host San Jose State at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Pan American Center.

The Aggies were guilty of slow starts against both Nevada and Fresno State last week before rallying to win both matches. Against The Wolf Pack, NMSU trailed 2-0 then ran off three straight victories to claim the match.

At Fresno State, the Ags lost the first game before winning the next three. Senior middle hitter Amber Simpson led all players with a season-high 15 kills. NMSU fell in set one, 25-19, before winning the next three sets 25-16, 25-14 and 25-18. Simpson also added three service aces, four digs and four total blocks.

'She was unbelievable tonight," said coach Mike Jordan. "She was definitely the MVP of the match. One on the Fresno players tried to get in Amber's head, but when you do that, she will play really tough and will be hard to stop.

Senior outside hitter Lindsey Yon (San Antonio, Texas) added 14 kills, two aces and eight digs, while junior outside hitter Krista Altermatt (El Dorado Hills, Calif.) had a double-double in the match with 10 kills and 15 digs.

Senior libero Krystal Torres (Las Cruces) played well on the defensive side of the net, as she once again had a match-high 21 digs. She added three assists and one service ace. As a team, the Aggies had 11 blocks with junior middle hitter Erin Birmingham's (Riverside, Mo.) match-high seven total blocks, including one solo block.

"We came out tight in the first set, and we can't be satisfied with our play," Jordan said.

It seemed NMSU gained their confidence back winning set No. 2 by the margin of 25-16. After five ties, with the last coming at 9-9, NMSU went on an 11-3 run to take a 20-12 lead. NMSU hit the ball better in set two with a .269 hitting percentage and only three errors. Simpson added three kills in the set and did not commit any errors.

"We served a little better in set two and started to get them out of their system," Jordan said.

NMSU took control of set three, winning 25-14 with 16 kills on 30 attempts with only three errors for a .433 hitting percentage. You and Simpson tallied four kills each, while Altermatt had three. NMSU scored the first point of the set and never looked back.

Senior, Football

Against Hawaii Nov. 8, senior wide receiver Chris Williams recorded his second 200-yard receiving game with seven catches for 221 yards and three touchdowns. The 221 yards tied a career-high for Williams, as he accomplished the same feat last season against UTEP. The 221 receiving yards in a game is the third-highest total in a game in school history. It was also the third time in his career that Williams has caught three touchdown passes in a single game.

Keep swinging right into the winter season

Golf your appointed rounds snugly by layering

My rule of thumb is, if my thumbs are numb

it's too cold for golf.

It's getting cold – have you noticed? Maybe not in Palm Springs or Palm Beach, but winter is upon us here in the high desert. Nighttime temps have plummeted to the low 30s, and frost delays have already started. This may be the right time for you to get the right tips and the right gear to keep you comfortable on the golf course as the mercury drops further.

For the next couple of months we can expect daytime highs in the 50s and 60s – but those are highs, with the average much lower. Sure, we're blessed with a climate that offers year-round golf, but many days in December, January and February can be pretty harsh. The stiff winds can make a 40-degree afternoon feel like it's 28. We simply have to be heads-up about how to cope with the changing conditions.

Two of the dangers always lurking where folks are active in the frigid outdoors are hypothermia and Raynaud's. Hypothermia is a serious consequence of unprotected exposure to cold temperatures and is exacerbated by wind and rain. Your body's core temperature can drop to a dangerously low level even in seemingly mild conditions (like 50 or 60 degrees) when dampness and wind-chill gang up on you. Telltale signs are noticeable discomfort, shivering, unsteadiness, numbness, feeling weak and stiff, and of particular concern to us golfers, mental dullness and poor judgement. When you're really cold, you don't think Raynaud's is a condition caused by vascular overresponse to the cold where the small blood vessels (especially in hands and feet) are damaged to the point of shutting down, causing painful numbness and whitening of the affected skin areas. Once major damage is done the condition persists for many years and is triggered by less extreme cold. (Please consult www.webmd.com for more detailed data.) My Raynaud's started 30 years ago in Detroit when my hands froze on a dark night in numbing, freezing rain, as I trudged on for the final five miles of a 20 mile training run. That's why I like to say warm while golfing.

What's the best way to stay warm? The secret is layers. It doesn't matter if you're bicycling or hiking or skiing or fishing. Layering is the answer. Understand that priority one is warmth, while a very high priority two is minimum restriction of movement, as in being able to make a normal golf swing all suited up. Forget about bulky long johns and heavy woolies. Michelin Man can't make a full turn with a five iron. We're talking about dressing lightweight, fashionable, functional and high-tech.

It starts with your compression base layer, a nextto-the-skin, body-fitting shirt (usually of a stretch type fabric) that increases muscle support and control while providing warmth and moisture wicking. You don't want anything sweaty, cold and clammy next to your skin on a biting winter day. Under Armour products make good base-layer stuff.

Then add your thermal mid-layer, which might be a nylon or laminate vest or shell, worn mainly for retaining body heat and blocking the wind from penetrating to your torso. Bear in mind that your layers should be fairly thin, permitting freedom of movement, and so they can be added or removed as the conditions fluctuate. You might recall Payne Stewart during the 1999 U.S. Open improvising his shell layer by cutting off the sleeves of his rain jacket. Zack Johnson wore a high collared vest during much of the windy 2007 Masters.

To complete your ultimate layering protection, affording you ease of movement while staying toasty and ventilated, you need an outer lightweight weatherproof jacket. Raingear manufacturers are constantly producing outerwear that is very lightweight and designed to improve your game in bad weather, not restrict it. Ideally a good golf jacket should be one with adjustable cuffs, sealed seams, vented shoulders and sewn from fabric that is waterproof, windproof and breathable. Be wary of "showerproof" labels, and be careful of cheap imitations of weather-shielding fabrics, which typically can be like a rubber suit and make you very uncomfortable.

Often forgotten about by many golfers, windproof and waterproof trousers are just as essential as any jacket when wet weather sets in. Buy your rainy day trousers a bit longer than your usual trousers so they fit over your regular golf slacks, and slightly over your shoes. I recommend a full golf rain suit with matching jacket and pants. Goretex remains the standard for breathable, waterproof sports outerwear clothing. My favorite rain suit is the Zero Restriction (brand) full Goretex rain suit, although there are a number of high quality, top name golf garments available. By the way, to cope with soggy fairways think in terms of Goretex golf shoes so you're not left with golfer's trench foot at the end of eighteen holes. They're more expensive but worth it.

DR. CHARLIE BLANCHARD

Golf Doctor

For accessories, don't forget hat and gloves. Remember, major heat escapes above the neck, and that's not even when your steamed over missing a four-footer. I like a soft fleece ski type cap.

My rule of thumb is, if my thumbs are numb it's too cold for golf. On those winter days on the edge of unplayable, gloves are a must. When it come to gloves made expressly to suit golfers, Titleist gives us a couple of nice options: sturdy five-finger winter gloves with leather palms for gripping even in dampness; or fleece mitts with open-ended tips that you slip over your golf glove and then slide up your wrists. Also, small chemical hand warming packs are a must of really chilly days.

Some of our readers are new to southern New Mexico and may not be aware of the often volatile weather patterns. The sun can be calmly shining one minute, and a storm cell can move in the next minute, dropping the mercury 20 degrees with rain and sleet blowing sideways. And another thing, we have four golf courses here in Las Cruces and the conditions are usually different at each one of them, sometimes dramatically different. If I'm traveling to El Paso to play or to Elephant Butte or White Sands, I always check the weather report for that specific area. I advise snowbirds to carry some form of cold wether gear in your golf bag at all times, if only just a light pullover. On cold but playable days I like to bring along a Thermos of hot cocoa or broth. A few sips seem to take the edge off. To the golfing Scots, however, our wind and cold are nothing. Scotch takes the edge off.

Aggie volleyball, men's and women's hoops on tap

A big weekend of athletics at NMSU

Pete is packing up a bedroll and some vittles for a campin' trip this weekend. I'm not going to the Gila or the Robledos or up to Capitan. I'm camping out at the Pan Am Center 'cause there is a whole passel of Aggie action taking place that began Thursday. It's like a buffet of sporting events with seconds and thirds available. Two volleyball matches, three basketball games, two for the women and one for the men. I'll tell ya it's an Aggie fan's delight to have these events lined up perfectly for our enjoyment.

The WAC leading Jordanaires hosted Utah State, Nov. 13. Now we all know who the real Aggies are, they wear Crimson and rope steers. Those well-meaning folks from Utah State think an Aggie wears blue and is a steer. The coach of champions teaches another lesson in volleyball excellence to these Navy-clad Aggies. On Nov. 15, Jordan's team is in action again when they host San Jose State in the final WAC regular-season game of the year. There will be one more match for the senior salute. It will be on Thanksgiving night, so don't get to thinking that Saturday's match is the last one of the year in the Pan Am.

Women's hoops open its regular season Friday, Nov. 14, when the Aggies host the Anteaters from UC Irvine. They are familiar foes from the old Big West days and are prime victim material for Darin Spence's crew. They won't have much time off either as they swing back into action Sunday, Nov. 16, versus Cal Poly, also from the Big West. After shutting down the Melborne Roos, Nov. 5, the "D" in Darin Spence's first name, seems to stand for defense. The Roos could shoot only 20 percent from the floor. Do you see the pattern here?

Aggie sports for the whole weekend. In fact it will be the only sports activity in town this week, so you can focus in on your crimson and white duds for four-days straight.

Marvin Menzies takes the wraps off of this year's men's basketball model for the regular season opener Saturday, Nov. 15. UC Riverside makes its first-ever visit to the Pan Am Center. Now, UC Riverside is a newcomer to the Division I ranks, but their coach is very familiar with competition at the top level. Jim Wooldridge is looking to build the UC Riverside program after a coaching stint at Kansas State.

It's the kind of week that always shows up in November – plenty of games, plenty of fun and plenty to cheer about. If you are like Pete, you won't pick and choose like a fussy eater at the chuck wagon. You'll have a full plate of Aggie sports from Thursday, Nov. 13 through Sunday, Nov. 16.

Calling all softballers

Aggies will host girls' camp for ages 9-12 on Nov. 16

For young women who think softball 12 months a year, there is a great opportunity coming up Sunday, Nov. 16. You can find out what it is like to be an Aggie softball player for a day. NMSU softball head coach Kathy Rodolph and her team are hosting a camp open to girls ages 9-12. The format is a one-day event where instructional workouts like speed, base running, proper throwing, hitting and pitching techniques are conducted in the morning and a scrimmage is played in the afternoon.

This is a great chance for possible future Aggies to work with the NMSU staff and train like an Aggie for a day. It starts at 9 a.m. and ends around noon. There is also a camp for coaches and teams who want to get into prime shape just after the holidays. The coaches camp is held Jan. 23 and the team camp Jan. 24-25. It is open to as many teams as can be accommodated.

The coaches and team camps were designed to get a jump start on the 2009 season. They are held in an interactive environment, working with both the NMSU coaching staff and the team. Athletes are not only going to get to play live scrimmages, but are also going to learn NMSU's most productive drills and strategies. The timing is ripe for softball players to get tuned up and it also serves as a fundraiser for Rodolph's program. Call the NMSU softball office for details.

Relief is coming: The Aggies are saying thank you to their fans with an economic relief package for the final home football game of the season against Louisiana Tech, Nov. 22. All tickets are $2, which means the 50-yard line, the end zones and everywhere in between have a price tag of just $2. Concession-stand items are $2 as well. The appreciation doesn't stop there. A hot tub, a ski weekend and other major prize items are going to be given away to those in attendance. The Aggies are facing an improving Louisiana Tech squad and it is the final home game for seniors Chase Holbrook, Chris Williams, A.J. Harris and company.
B The NMSU swimming

B The NMSU swimming and diving team, ranked second nationally for top team grade point average, defeated North Texas at the Mean Green dual, Nov. 8. The Aggies lost close dual meets to Colorado State, SMU and Arkansas but continue to show they are title timber for the WAC Championships.

Amber Simpson Senior Volleyball

Senior middle hitter Amber Simpson kept the Aggie volleyball team's winning streak alive as she averaged 2.78 digs per set while hitting .500 percent at Nevada and percent at Nevada and Fresno State. She also added 1.33 blocks per set and four service aces. Simpson tallied 10 kills, one ace, one dig and a match-high eight total blocks in a five-set win over the Wolf Pack. Simpson continues to lead the league in blocks, averaging 1.42 per set. She kept the consistency on as she posted 15 kills on 22 attempts with no errors for a .682 hitting percentage to lead NMSU to a 3-1 win over Fresno State.

At the Mean Green Duals against meet host North Texas, SMU, Colorado State and Arkansas, Nov. 8, Spies collected a pair of second-place showings in the 100 and 200 breaststroke.

Aggies host Cowboy Casino

NMSU's rodeo slated for Saturday

The Aggie Rodeo Team is kicking off it season with a Rodeo Royale Cowboy Casino fundraiser tonight and a collegiate rodeo Saturday, Nov. 15, Coach Jim Dewey Brown announced.

The Cowboy Casino will be conducted from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. today at Dickerson's Event Center, and action in the rodeo will start at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Southern New Mexico State Fairgrounds arena. Slack or qualifying will start at 11 a.m. Saturday, Brown said.

The Cowboy Casino will include a silent auction and dance to raise funds to support the collegiate rodeos. Admis-

The rodeo will bring 10 teams from the Grande Canyon Region, Brown said.

Last year, Brown's Aggie rodeo students won four national championships:

Johnny Salvo, Tie-Down Roping

Ortega

Smith said he has good hands, good inside moves and improved focus this season. Montoya is yet another strong shooter, who also has improved on the defensive end of the floor.

The Bulldawgs' point guard is 5-8 senior Alejandro Briseño, a strong effort player who combines intelligence and toughness.

"I'm excited about this year and the kids are too," Smith said. "The district is tough as usual, but I'm confident we'll do a good job.'

Mayfield

The Trojans are the reigning District 3-5A champions, but they'll be defending their crown with a team that returns just two starters.

Nate Abeyta, a 6-2 do-everything performer, will be a key player this year for head coach Tommy Morrow's team. Abeyta played inside last season, but Morrow said his all-district standout will play more on the perimeter this year.

"He's a big wing, and a very creative guy," Morrow said. "He's playing great basketball right now and he's the key to our season.

The other returning starter is senior Jon Allen, a 6-3 inside player, who is coming back from a serious shoulder injury sustained last spring. Mayfield is counting heavily on Allen's interior defense.

Other key players are 6-3 senior Sky Stevers, 6-6 junior Josh Trujillo and guards Javier Ybarra, Gabe Ybarra and Zach Layer. Javier, a senior, and Gabe, a sophomore, are brothers.

"Javier is probably our best shooter and he has great competitiveness," Morrow said. "Sky was a junior varsity guy for us last year who can pass the ball out of the post real well. Gabe is a lefty who will probably be our point guard. He has very good instincts.'

"We feel like we have a chance to be good," Morrow said. "We need to be lucky to stay healthy because we're not very deep. A key injury could devastate us."

Mesilla Valley Christian Schools

The SonBlazers came up just short in the Class AA state championship game last March, but head coach Terry Adler returns most of the standouts from that great team. Only Jeremy Roman is gone, and the 6-2 forward is now a key player for York College in Nebraska.

Leading the returnees for Mesilla Valley is Zach Adams, arguably one of the top guards in the state, regardless of classification. Adler says the 6-0, two-time allstate performer is "phenomenal.

Adams leads an experienced, explosive team that features 6-2 Tommy Adler, 6-2 Ryan Diaz, 6-4 Scott Adler, 6-1 Cody Correa, 5-7 Greg Patti and 6-1 Kyle Vasey.

"Tommy is one of the top rebounders, and

great shooter. Kyle is our Mr. Versatile."
Mesilla Valley competes in District 5-2A along with Tularosa, Lordsburg, Capitan and Cloudcroft.

"The main difference this year is we'll try to apply a lot more pressure defense, three-quarter and full-court," Adler said. "We'll press more to open things up."

Aggie women open season against UC Irvine on Friday

The Aggie women's basketball team, labeled as all of the above, opens the regular season against UC Irvine at 7 p.m. Friday in the Pan American Center.

Darin Spence, New Mexico State's coach, likes his team's potential. "Defensively, we play pretty well," he said, basing his verdict on NMSU's two exhibition victories over Western New Mexico (58-49) and the Melbourne, Australia Roos (64-36).

"Offensively, we just need to get everybody on the same page," he said. "We're moving the ball well. We're running the floor better. We're blocking out better and shooting well. We have more depth. And we're a bigger team than we were last Niki Holt, NMSU's 6-foot-4 center, underlines NMSU's height gain. She's playing healthy now after missing much of last season with injuries.

Besides Holt, Spence has been satis-Spence and Tyshae Walton. "Tyshae is doing her usual good job of stopping people on defense," Spence said. "She's scoring baskets, too."

Madison Spence has apparantly won the battle over mononucleosis and is playing with renewed energy. "She's shooting a lot better," said the Aggies' coach.

when Winter was an assistant coach in the NBA. "It's hard to grasp," Spence said. "It's a read-based offense. You react to the other team's defense. It's especially hard for guards to run. They have to learn how to play without the ball.

Spence said that Irvine has a new coach (Molly Goodenbour) and good returning talent. They're good rebounders.

"Let me give you a statistic. We've played them three times. They beat us here, and we beat them twice at their place. So I'm not sure home court means much in this series."

Spence says his starting lineup will probably include Madison Spence, Walton and Danisha Corbett at the guard positions. Holt will start at center and Tabytha Wampler at forward.

WAC honors NMSU swimmer

MARIA SPIES

New Mexico State freshman Maria Spies has been named WAC Swimming Athlete of the Week, the conference office announced

She is the first Aggie to earn the WAC honor this season.

A Magdenburg, Germany native, Spies swept the breaststroke events at Houston and Rice, Nov. 6. En route to taking top honors, Spies broke the school record in the 100 breast (1:03.74) and then improved her school record in the 200 breast (2:17.40). She was also a member of the 400-free relay team, which posted the WAC's fastest time of the season (3:30.70) and earned a third-place finish.

"For a freshman to come in and break school records and race as well as she does says a lot about her future with our team," head coach Rick Pratt said. "I think her potential to be an NCAA qualifier and compete on a national level are really there. Her training has improved a lot since she has been here and her attitude is great. And I think she has really embraced the team atmosphere that she might not have necessarily had in Germany.

"She's definitely a great racer. There are not a lot of breaststrokers that could finish the way she does. It's a big honor to have her as WAC swimmer of the week but it probably won't be the last one."

Spies earned a pair of second-place showings in the 100 and 200 breaststroke at the Mean Green Duals against meet-host North Texas, SMU, Colorado State and Arkansas, Nov. 8.

In addition, junior diver Raquel Bartlow from Hawaii was named the WAC Diving Athlete of the Week.

Did politics axe Oñate Knights from playoffs? Alamogordo gets seed despite losing conference record

Last Saturday New Mexico Activities Association facilitator Mario Martinez called the 5-A high school football seeding and selection meeting to order in Albuquerque.

Participating were: Danny Lujan, Tom Horton, Tom Knauber, Lawrence Johnson, Bruce Dollar and David Williams. When the evening was over, Alamogordo (3-7) learned that it is better to have political influence working for their team on an NMAA selection committee than a higher win-loss percentage on the playing field.

For this NMAA committee, the elimination of Alamogordo from playoff consideration should have been a no-brainer. With two fewer wins during the regular season than either Hobbs or Oñate, Alamogordo had no claim whatsoever on a playoff bid. However, with Athletic Director Lawrence Johnson of Alamogordo on the NMAA selection committee, there was a first-hand opportunity for him to delude the rest of the committee into thinking there was somehow a three-way tie for the final two spots in the 5-A playoffs. How did he do this? Nobody really knows. Since the decision to put Alamogordo in the playoffs was so absurd. Let us wonder out loud.

Surely, behind those closed committee meeting doors, Johnson must have based his amazingly successful charade on the calling for head-to-head results to be used as the ultimate selection standard. We surmise that using this standard, the remaining six accomplices on the NMAA committee were conned into buying the idea that putting Alamogordo in the playoffs ahead of Oñate (5-5)

But how could this be? Each team involved in Johnson's mythical three-way tie had a 1-1 record in their three-team round-robin competition. Oñate had beaten Hobbs (5-5). Hobbs had beaten Johnson's Alamogordo Tigers. And Alamogordo had beaten Oñate.

JIM SPENCE

Radio Booth

It is also worth noting that Alamogordo had the benefit of playing its games against both Oñate and Hobbs at home. Hobbs lost to Oñate at home and beat Alamogordo on the road. The Knights played both games against these particular opponents on the road.

Somehow, after the committee put Alamogordo into post-season play, the head-to-head measuring standard the same standard that was used like magic to get the Tigers in the playoffs - must have been immediately tossed out of the committee's selection thought processes. No doubt former Alamogordo football coach Bruce Dollar (a Lawrence Johnson buddy from their days together in Alamogordo) was arguing for Hobbs. Dollar no doubt was also forced to somehow successfully lobby for eliminating any credit due to Oñate for the Knight's head-to-head win, on the road, at Hobbs.

Amazingly, in the end, the smoke and mirrors reasoning of Alamogordo's Lawrence Johnson worked. The NMAA seeding committee allowed him to leave the selection meeting with his three-win team actually stealing a bid for postseason play. This NMAA appointed committee also sent Bruce Dollar on his way back to District 4 with a post-season bid for a team that had an identical record to Oñate, but head-to-head home loss to Oñate on its 2008 résumé. The only thing the Knights program didn't have going for it in Albuquerque last weekend was a committee with members paying attention to the gross contradictions involved in putting both Hobbs and Alamogordo ahead of the Knights. The Knights had a much better overall record than Alamogordo, and they also held a head-to-head road win over Hobbs.

There are inescapable conclusions to this latest administrative travesty by the NMAA. Short-sighted cronyism and politics continue to prevail. Kids got a quick lesson in how it feels to be cheated or unjustly rewarded. And most assuredly, the NMAA's ability to create committees capable of maintaining an overriding sense of fair play and integrity remains elusive.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO COUNTY OF DOÑA ANA THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

No. CV-2008-2095

TAYLOR, BEAN & WHITAKER MORTGAGE CORP., Plaintiff,

DAVID R. MUNOZ, and if married, JANE DOE MUNOZ (true name unknown), his spouse; TAXATION AND REVENUE DEPARTMENT OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO; and JOHN DOE and JANE DOE, (true names unknown), tenants, Defendant(s).

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on December 10, 2008, at the hour of 10:00 a.m., the undersigned Special Master will, at main entrance of the Doña Ana County Judicial Complex, Las Cruces, New Mexico, sell all the right, title and interest of the abovenamed Defendants in and to the hereinafter described real estate to the highest bidder for cash. The property to be sold is located at 1222 Onate Street, Anthony, and is situate in Doña Ana County, New Mexico, and is particularly described as follows:

Lot 32, DOS LAGOS SUBDIVISION, PHASE II, in the County of Doña Ana, State of New Mexico, as shown and designated on the plat thereof, filed in the office of the County Clerk of said county as Plat No. 3734 on 03/20/2003 in Book 20 Page(s) 289-90 of Plat Records.

THE FOREGOING SALE will be made to satisfy a judgment rendered by the above Court in the above entitled and numbered cause on November 4, 2008, being an action to foreclose a mortgage on the above described property. The Plaintiff's judgment, which includes interest and costs, is $250,660.86 and the same bears interest at 6.875% per annum from October 11, 2008. The amount of such interest to the date of sale will be $2,880.02. The Plaintiff has the right to bid at such sale and submit its bid verbally or in writing. The Plaintiff may apply all or any part of its judgment to the purchase price in lieu of cash. The sale may be postponed and rescheduled at the discretion of the Special Master.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the real property and improvements concerned with herein will be sold subject to any and all patent reservations, easements, all recorded and unrecorded liens not foreclosed herein, and all recorded and unrecorded special assessments and taxes that may be due. Plaintiff and its attorneys disclaim all responsibility for, and the purchaser at the sale takes the property subject to, the valuation of the property by the County Assessor as real or personal property, affixture of any mobile or manufactured home to the land, deactivation of title to a mobile or manufactured home on the property, if any, environmental contamination on the property, if any, and zoning violations concerning the property, if any.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the purchaser at such sale shall take title to the above described real property subject to a one (1) month right of redemption.

A rooftop patio can offer views from anywhere in the Las Cruces

By BETHANY CONWAY

With its great weather and views, Las Cruces has continued to see outdoor spaces evolve to never-before-seen heights, and the recent Las Cruces Home Builders Association Fall Parade of Homes proved to be no different.

Setting their sights on Sonoma Ranch, GL Green & Associates built a show-case entry that received rave reviews all around.

"We were anticipating getting some positive responses, and we thought we would do very well, but it was just a wild success. It was tremendous, and nobody could stop talking about it," said Anthony Linus, director of marketing and business development for GL Green.

With an asking price of $399,000, what surprises people most about this 2,100-square-foot home is that it is the complete package with all the luxuries one could imagine had to come see it and comparing it to million-dollar houses," Linus said.

After winning awards for their entrylevel homes and recognizing that most of the homes selling in today's market are those in the more moderate price range, they decided to create a more affordable home that could compete with those in the upscale price range.

"We wanted to build something that was affordable, in the Sonoma Ranch area and do some fantastic stuff with outdoor living," Linus said.

They found an exceptional lot on Calle Belleza and created a home that includes more than 1,000 square feet of outdoor living space ing space.

"This particular home is something that we wanted to do right in terms of outdoor living because we are moving in that direction," Linus said. "What you have is the open-air interior courtyard, the enclosed living space and the rooftop patio."

With an open-air courtyard that could serve as an outdoor dining room complete with a built-in bar and grill, a covered seating area with a fireplace and area for a flat-screen television and a rooftop patio, the space features three living areas in one.

"Given the environment here in Las Cruces, the climate and such, it's amazing that no one has done anything like that before," Linus said.

Along with the outdoor-living spaces, this three-bedroom abode includes all of the amenities and accents that come with any GL Green home any GL Green home.

"It's the Tuscan villa signature style that the company has won numerous awards for. The only real difference is the outdoorliving space," Linus said.

With exposed wooden beams in the roof, all travertine tiles, brick and stone accents as well as an incorporation of outdoor elements inside, the home has a rustic, Old World feel. The master bedroom also includes several corbels decorating the ceiling, and the master bathroom is equipped for a flat-screen television, which can be enjoyed from the centrally located tub.

While the home is moderately sized, it has an undeniable sense of openness.

"I think a lot of that has to do with the great room being seamlessly integrated with the outdoor space and the ceilings are 13 feet tall," Linus said.

Inviting Realtors and friends to come see their newest creation, they have witnessed first-hand how all of the home's living spaces can be enjoyed.

"We've had several events here, and the dynamics are great," Linus said. "People had different places to gather, and the dynamics were phenomenal for entertaining."

ing."
Since Las Cruces is the perfect place for this type of building and people have seen what can be done, members of GL Green & Associates are hoping it will catch on, and Linus said people are asking for it.

"If we weren't a custom design-build firm, and if we didn't have the capability to custom-design homes, this home would have sold because it generated so much excitement," he said. "But because we can make modifications and build elsewhere, we are already building this home on a slightly larger scale with some additional modifications."

Because its rooftop patio is located a step above the rest, he said this floor plan can find a home anywhere in Las Cruces.

"What is so ideal about this house is that this design can be built literally anywhere, even on an interior lot that doesn't have magnificent views," he said. "When you have the rooftop patio, there is no way you can't have views."

After hearing the reactions from paradegoers, they are confident that they are moving in the right direction with their emphasis on outdoor living.

"So many people were speechless," Linus said. "It was wonderful."

With 20 construc-

"Despite concerns about the housing market and a general slowdown in the national economy, GL Green & Associates stands to have its best year ever," Linus said. "People seem to love courtyards and comfortable outdoor living spaces. This is very exciting, especially because of our new courtyard homes under construction in Estancias del Valle and the many we currently have in the design phase."

Linus said the group attributes their success to their marketing and long-term business planning, along with their costumer service and the individuals that play important roles within their company.

"Key persons, including co-owner Matt

"Key persons, including co-owner Matt Adams, who is the firm's in-house architectural designer, give GL Green & Associates a design-build competitive advantage," he said. "We have honed our ability to sit down and really listen to our clients and to help them understand how easy and fun building their new home can be."

Lighting is one of the most important aspects when it come to designing your interiors, and it is relatively inexpensive when designed before construction.

Whether you install a dramatic chandelier, accent your house with outdoor lighting or simply plug in a beautifully designed table lamp, lighting does more than complete the décor – it boosts the value of your home, enhances the atmosphere and helps to express your personal style.

The reason lighting is one of the most economical investments for homeowners is that it can make a great difference without involving major renovation expenses. Adding a touch of light, drama, mood, dimension and function can dramatically affect the look and feel of the room.

Lighting can be divided into several categories. General lighting is what determines the overall light level of the room. This is best accomplished with ceilingmounted or recessed fixtures. Another category is task lights, which are intense, localized light sources that are usually focused on work areas and are helpful when reading a cookbook or preparing food, using a computer or general reading areas. Decorative accent lighting is a favorite among designers, as it enhances architectural details, floor levels, counters, artwork and artifacts. Accent lighting includes picture lights, cove lighting, chandeliers and ceiling-suspended low-voltage rails or cables.

A successful kitchenlighting design balances functional and aesthetic requirements that require lighting for preparation, cleaning, eating and entertaining. I also include countertop lighting, cook-top lighting and general lighting from recessed incandescent fixtures in kitchen design.

In addition to the aforementioned lighting, I include lighting above cabinets, pendant lighting, chandeliers, cabinet lighting, toe-kick lighting and decorative spot lighting when possible. All of the lights should be on dimmers. A lighting system will help to cut out the need for multiple switches and can be used for many functions. Often, it's not until after a home is lived in that those deficiencies in lighting, such as in the kitchen's work areas, become apparent.

Another space that deserves attention to the lighting is the wine room.

Whether it is with a chandelier or more modern fixtures, lighting can add value and beauty to a home.

While designing the lighting, the heat and UV factors have to be considered and addressed with valances and filters in order not to adversely affect the fine wines stored and displayed in the space. The use of rope lighting can be built into the crown of the wine racks and illuminates the ceiling and walls.

Proper attention to the lighting design and selection of lighting systems for all spaces will result in environments that are interesting, inspiring and supportive of the critical tasks to be carried out. Lighting must be on the top of the priority list when building and living in a home, as it is the key to creating a special and memorable space to live and function.

Adding to the complexity of lighting,

Adding to the complexity of lighting, in the future, energy-efficient lamps and fixtures will play an important role in the design as we move into a more energy-efficient world of both LEDs and compact fluorescent lamps (CFLs).

LEDs aren't light bulbs, but tiny semiconductors encapsulated in plastic. Over the past couple of years, manufacturers have figured out how to make LEDs last for 50,000 or more hours. The super-efficient light source uses as little as 6 watts of energy to produce the same amount of light as a 30-watt incandescent light bulb. Interesting, the light bulb as we know it expends 95 percent of its energy to make heat and just 5 percent on light. The LED is cool to the touch.

According to the Lighting Source Group, they are adding embedded pencilpoint-sized, sensor-controlled LED chips into millwork, drywall, cabinets and quarter round that will light up when someone enters the room. The wall-mounted light switch could become obsolete.

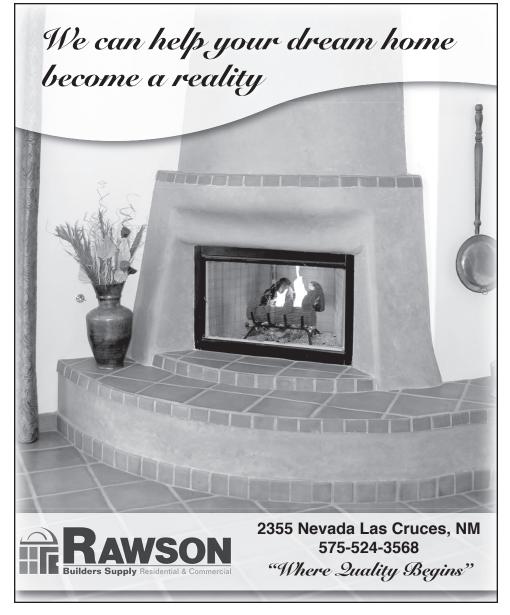

Today, you have a table lamp with a lampshade and you put a bulb under the shade. In the future, the shade itself will be the light source. The surface of it will light up, and you can make it slowly change the color of light. Modern tech lighting uses a low-voltage system and has eliminated the need for wires, the current being carried by the structure of the lamp itself.

The future of lighting is changing dramatically, and in a few years you won't buy a light bulb, you will buy a light bulb like you buy furniture. The steady rise in energy and fuel costs has heightened public awareness and the energy-hogging incandescent that lights 99 percent of American homes will change just like the Internet has changed the way we communicate.

We will be witnessing the biggest revolution in the light-bulb technology in 100 years. By 2012, the federal government will hold lighting manufactures to more stringent energy-efficiency standards. California already requires half of kitchen lighting in new homes to be high-efficiency lamps, fixtures and motion sensors.

Dollar-for-dollar, lighting adds more to your home because it makes an impact. One of the easiest and most affordable ways to add value or redecorate your home is with lighting. With the new technology, it will be exciting to see what the future lighting of a room will look like.

Check out these amazing uses for this common condiment

By BETHANY CONWAY

Found on the tables of every restaurant and in the cabinets of every kitchen, salt, or sodium chloride, is one of the most commonly used minerals in the world.

Occurring naturally all over the planet, it is sold in several different particle sizes depending on its intended use. Salt for human consumption is produced in three different forms: unrefined salt (such as sea salt), refined salt (table salt) and iodized salt.

While modern societies enjoy the luxury of a refrigerator, up until about 200 years ago, salt was the best-known food preservative, especially for meat.

Going back to as far as the ancient Egyptians, salt was included among funeral offerings found in ancient Egyptian tombs and actually served as a form of currency during the Roman Empire.

Today, the manufacturing and use of salt is one of the oldest chemical industries. Though it stings the eyes at the beach and should not be eaten in excess, salt is essential to life and makes up .28 percent of the human body's weight. It is also used to enhance the flavor of foods and performs important functions in terms of food processing.

while its most popular use in the Southwest is possibly around the rim of a margarita, its uses do not stop in the kitchen. The next time salt is spilt on the table, think twice before throwing it over the shoulder and put it to use in these surprising ways, especially during the winter season.

1. De-ice the driveway: While ice on the roads may not be a major factor in Las Cruces, it is important to note that salt is the most effective, readily spilled on the table, put it to use rather than throwing it over the shoulder.

The next time salt is available and economical highway deicer in use today. It assures winter driving safety and continued mobility, even under the most severe conditions. If the driveway or concrete stairs leading to the front door are icy, it could be dangerous. Sprinkle rock salt on the icy areas and let it go to work.

2. Stop the frost: Waking up in the morning and scraping the ice off of car windows before leaving to work can be a major hassle. Along with de-icing the driveway and entryway of a home, salt can be used to keep car windows from frosting over in the winter. Just wipe them down with a mixture of salt and water.

3. Line-dry during the winter: For those who hang their clothes outside to dry, use a dash of salt in the final rinse cycle to keep clothes from freezing on the line. Salt water can also be rubbed on the clothesline to keep it from freezing.

4. Ease fireplace cleanup and danger: When turning in for the night, douse the flames of a still-glowing fire with salt. The fire will burn out quicker, which will create less soot.

5. Soothe a bee sting: In order to stop the pain of a bee sting, wet the sting right away, then cover it with salt.

6. Repel ants and fleas: Sprinkle salt around doorways, windowsills and anywhere else ants manage to get into the house. Ants won't walk across salt, and they will stay outside where they belong.

Also, sprinkle salt around the doghouse and even clean the doghouse with a mixture of salt and water to repel fleas.

7. Kill weeds: When spring comes around and those pesky weeds begin to reappear, pour a boiling salt solution containing one cup of salt and two cups of water on them, or just cover them with salt and watch as they diminish to dust

8. Clean a dirty iron: To remove brown spots from the bottom of an iron, sprinkle salt on a sheet of waxed paper, slide the iron across it and then rub lightly with silver polish.

9. Remove wine from the carpet: When a fun gathering leaves the homeowner with wine spilled on the carpet, don't fret. First, while the red wine is still wet, pour some white wine on it to dilute the color. Then clean the spot with a sponge and cold water. Sprinkle the area with salt and wait about 10 minutes. Now vacuum up the whole mess.

utes. Now vacuum up the whole mess.

10. Remove watermarks from wood:
To remove watermarks from the coffee or dining room table, mix one teaspoon of salt with a few drops of water to form a paste. Gently rub the paste onto the ring with a soft cloth or sponge and work it over the spot until it's gone. Then restore the shine of the wood with furniture polish.

11. Restore a sponge: Hand sponges and mop sponges usually get grungy beyond use long before they are really worn out. To restore sponges to a pristine state, soak them overnight in a solution of about 1/4 cup salt per quart of water.

12. Clean a fish tank: When clean-

12. Clean a fish tank: When cleaning a fish tank, rub the inside with salt to remove mineral deposits from hard water. Make sure to rinse the tank well before reinstalling the fish. Use only plain, not iodized, salt.

13. Shell handpicked nuts: Pecans and other nuts are beginning to open and it's time for harvest. For those who gather a large bag of handpicked nuts such as walnuts and pecans, they are easier to shell if they are soaked in salt water first.

14. Stop food discoloration: After peeling and chopping apples and potatoes, cover them with salted water to keep them from changing colors.

15. Soothe mouth sores: For cankers, abscesses and other mouth sores, rinse with a weak solution of warm salt water several times a day.

16. Keep chicken or turkey moist:

16. Keep chicken or turkey moist: Rub salt in the cavity of the bird before cooking so that it comes out moist and juicy.

Meet the LCAR, MLIS incoming presidents

For Coss and Martin, there is no better time to serve their industry

By Bethany Conway

As the housing market enters a new year with new challenges, Realtors Michelle Martin and Emily Coss will be ready to meet those challenges head on in leadership positions within their industry.

After being installed into their roles at the recent Las Cruces Association of Realtors Installation Banquet, Coss will serve as president of LCAR and Martin will take on the position of president of the Multiple Listings and Information Service in 2009.

With both women bringing different backgrounds in real estate and community service, they are ready to put their heads together to reach a common goal.

"It's going to be a great year," Martin said. "I am really honored to be able to serve the Martin, who is a Realtor with Steinborn GMAC Real Estate, has been described by John Hummer, the company's owner and broker, as a leader in the industry, is a second-generation Realtor and has always been heavily involved in LCAR.

"I remember the first week I was licensed, I signed up to be on the education committee, and I have remained on it through the years," Martin said

Coss, who has owned several of her own businesses including her current company, Coss Real Estate, is not afraid to admit that the idea of serving is new to her.

"I have never served on the board. I have not even been on a committee," Coss said.

While her experience serving on boards is limited, her enthusiasm for the new position is evident.

"I've been in the trenches, and I am not afraid to try new ideas, and I am not afraid of failure. work until you try it," she said. "We are going to put our heads together and try to come up with new ideas and bring back all of the ideas that we learn from the National Association of Realtors conferences and the different Multiple Listing Service conventions."

On their way to a conference in Orlando, Fla., this week for that very purpose, one of their most important responsibilities is networking with other boards throughout the country while attending statewide, regional and national conventions and conferences. All of the useful information they learn, they will bring back to their individual entities.

"To me that's inspiring, because when we are able to travel for the purpose of furthering our education in order $% \left(1\right) =\left(1\right) \left(1\right)$ to bring that back to our members on our board and our industry as a whole in Las Cruces, you're able to meet other people – small-sized boards, medium-sized boards, huge boards – and see that we are all talking about the same things, just on a different scale," Martin said. "It allows us to know that we are right in there with everybody else."

Along with traveling to conventions, they will also preside over their organization's monthly board meetings, and both serve as directors for each other's organization as well as directors on the state level.

"My goal is to run efficient meetings," Martin said. One individual goal of Martin's for MLIS, a nonprofit organization wholly owned by LCAR, is to continue improving the accuracy of information they provide.

"This year's goal was to really increase the accuracy of data within our Multiple Listings Service database, and with that comes challenging times for the officers, the board and the members," she said. "But we've seen a huge increase in accuracy of data, and I expect for that to continue."

Both have a goal of broadening communication between their organizations, their members and the public.

"We've talked about town-hall meetings or networking groups. I think we are both open to feedback," Coss said.

Martin especially is interested in an open-door policy.

"Emily and I have both talked about how important it is for us to create an environment in both organizations that is open, communicative and informative. It is really important to us," Martin said.

Coss also has her own goals for LCAR, which include offering more educational options.

"There are a lot of businesses and real estate schools coming up throughout the region, so I would like to increase the choices for education that are provided by LCAR," Coss said.

Both Coss and Martin have spent the last year preparing for their new roles and getting to know the people with which they will be serving.

"It's extremely important to have that year as president-elect," Martin said.

"It is very challenging for me, but I did learn a lot this year," Coss added. "You learn how to run a meeting and just basically how the whole system works."

Since their roles within the organizations are completely voluntary and require a great deal of their time, both said time management plays a major role.

"It is a lot of time and dedication, and we are going above and beyond our usual meetings to do the town-hall type of meetings," Coss said.

While they are both excited about their new roles within the real estate industry, they are also aware of the fact that they are taking on this responsibility during a challenging time.

"It's a great opportunity, but it is a difficult time to come into this position," Coss said. "The industry is changing, and sometimes the membership has a hard time with those changes."

organization's

According to Martin, the best thing they can do is set an example for those around them.

"One of the most important things we can do as industry leaders is to maintain a positive attitude," Martin said. "In a time such as now, where clearly (Realtors) will tend to have a little more free time than they did in our market a few years ago, now is the very best time to get involved in your industry and give back to it. You can concentrate on honing your skills and increase your continuing education."

With the Realtors Association of New Mexico annual conference being held in Las Cruces in 2009, those in the local real estate industry have something to look forward to in 2009.

"What is exciting for us is it is only held here once every five years," Coss said. "Usually, when it is held up north, we don't have a lot of participation from Las Cruces. We are hoping that, because it is here, we will have more members attend the classes and the meetings and the banquets and learn more about the association."

It's turkey time

Transfer meats easily from pan to platter

By Bethany Conway

The turkey is done, the aroma in overwhelming and all that is left to do is remove the beautiful bird from the oven or roasting pan. Easier said than done.

Removing the turkey from the roasting pan or oven can be a messy ordeal, and no one wants the bird they have slaved over all day to end up on the floor. Enter the turkey lifter, which derives its name from its most common use.

What is it?

Coming in the design of small pitchforks, as a rack with handles and even in a silicone form, turkey lifters can come in handy for transferring a turkey to a serving platter, especially when cooking an extremely large bird

In terms of the pitchfork model, which is made of stainless steel, the best designs are those that are sturdy enough to hold a 30-pound turkey and have a non-stick

In addition to lifting turkeys, these forks can also be used to hold a turkey in place when carving.

Green is everywhere, but what does it mean? Green means environmentally friendly products that reduce harmful emissions of Carbon Dioxide CO² or lower the amount of energy used. It can also mean keeping "green" in your pocket. Sun-Tech Services, Inc., wants you to know it pays to Go Green!

Going Green can mean lower monthly energy bills. Sun-Tech has a ProgressivTube Passive Solar Heating System. Don't let the name fool you, it's not complicated!

What the Passive Solar Heating System does is "pre-heat" your water with heat generated by solar panels. Although simple in design, the ProgressivTube can save you up to 80% of your costs for heating water for your family. Plus the ProgressivTube doesn't require pumps, controls, or any mechanical or electrical devices to operate.

Another advantage to going green is the available tax credits. Did you know that there is now a 30% solar tax credit, which can help reduce the cost of your Passive Solar Heating System? Sun-Tech has many green products, so you can go green and save!

Save energy and keep warm during the holidays with these simple tips

BY BETHANY CONWAY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

It's getting colder in Las Cruces, and no doubt residents have taken out their sweaters and jackets, turned on their heater and began to prepare for the winter season.

But getting ready for the holidays doesn't just mean bundling up. It also includes getting the home ready so that it stays in tiptop shape and conserves energy during the colder months.

According to Jesse Micander of Mica

According to Jesse Micander of Micander Construction, a company known for their energy-efficient building practices, there are simple ways to prepare a home, and many solutions can be put into practice easily by the homeowner.

For Micander, the most important

For Micander, the most important thing a homeowner can do is have their home sealed off properly from outside air.

"Sealing leaks is the biggest part of winterizing a home," he said. Using a device called the Blower Door, Micander can actually pinpoint major leaks that need to be sealed.

"Blower Door testing really does play into it," he said. "With the Blower Door testing, the main point is identifying where the leaks are."

The Blower Door is a powerful fan that mounts into the frame of an exterior

The Blower Door is a powerful fan that mounts into the frame of an exterior door. The fan pulls air out of the house like vacuum, lowering the air pressure inside. According to Micander, it simulates 20 mph winds blowing on the house from all sides. Any air leaks from the outside get sucked into the home, and one can actually feel the air coming in around light fixtures, electrical plugs, light switches, doors and windows.

Through the end of the year, Micander will be offering his "Winterization Special" with a 20-percent discount on Blower Door testing, which starts at $250 and increases depending on the size of a home. The test includes free estimates on what can be done to seal a home after the Blower Door test is finished.

"We can recommend fixes using the Blower Door results," he said. "A lot of them are real basic fixes that the owner can do."

This includes adding in more insulation and spray foam and sealing doors and windows by checking weather stripping and replacing it as needed.

Along with adding more insulation,

Along with adding more insulation, one easy way a homeowner can reduce leaks is to seal off swamp-cooler vents. Of course, this only applies to vents that are dedicated to the swamp coolers, not those that also are connected to a home's heater.

For those who have central heating, according to the U.S. Department of Energy, a home with this type of system can lose up to 60 percent of its heated air before that air reaches the vents if ductwork is not well connected and insulated. If a central-heating system is not working like it is suppose to, the homeowner might want to have a professional evaluate the ductwork.

Aside from leaks, one major way to save money on monthly bills is to upgrade to a programmable or digital thermostat. This way the homeowner can actually program the unit to be off while they are at work and turn on when they will be returning. For those who commonly leave the house and forget to turn off the heater, this upgrade can really come in handy.

"With some of those, you can actually

"With some of those, you can actually program it for the days of the week," Micander said

Micander also suggests getting a home's furnace serviced every two years to make sure it is running properly, doesn't have any gas leaks and is not leaking any carbon monoxide poison.

"It could be pretty deadly," he said.

As for fireplaces, it is important to have a chimney cleaned regularly to remove soot and creosote and inspect a fireplace damper for proper opening and closing.

For those with older, single-paned windows, an inexpensive and helpful option is covering them with the clear, plastic film that can be purchased at any hardware store or large grocer. The plastic film can be placed over windows using heavy-duty tape or attached to windows using a heat gun.

"It does work. It keeps the drafts from coming in," Micander said.

Probably his easiest suggestion is opening blinds on south-side windows during the day to let in the sunlight.

"That's going to give you free solar energy," he said.

Along with preparing the inside of one's home, Micander also suggested some ways to protect outdoor elements such as swamp coolers and hose bibs.

He said it is important to drain swamp coolers of their water in order to get them ready for the next season. "The water removal is so that the freezing.

While all of these can apply to older homes, Micander said they could also come in handy with newer homes as far as opening blinds, covering hose bibs and sealing ductwork.

More pests on the horizon

Global warming's impact on insects far reaching

The impact of global warming temperatures on insects and humans is far reaching – forest and food crops could be affected and diseases spread by insects could have a wider range.

Nature has a delicate balance, and it

Nature has a delicate balance, and it doesn't take much – a slight temperature variation, or even a movement in the course of a river – to cause changes that move throughout an ecosystem. When the weather gets warmer, the deck gets stacked in favor of insects.

Here is a look at where America's pests have been and where the future might find them:

Fire ants

Fire ants have made plenty of progress since being introduced accidentally to the United States in Mobile, Ala., in the 1930s. Now, the aggressive, and in some cases deadly, ants are found in New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland and Virginia.

Fire ants are highly adaptable and can survive in temperatures as low as 16 degrees. A 2005 study on the predicted range of red imported fire ants has them ranging as far north as Seattle on the west coast and New Jersey on the east coast within 100 years.

But as we've seen with fire ants, they don't waste time moving. Last year, red imported fire ants were found in the Philippines after hopping a plane that originated in Texas. In 2001, they were also found in Australia and were believed to have been introduced the same way there as the United States – by hitchhiking on a ship.

Avian flu

Avian flu is probably the most closely watched disease in a decade. Every new case is reported and health officials are keeping close tabs on its spread.

The strain of avian flu that has

The strain of avian flu that has grabbed headlines around the world is H5N1. The strain caused bird deaths in 1959 and again in 1991. In 1997, however, the first human victims were reported in Hong Kong. Of 18 cases, six died of the flu. As of May 29 of this year, there have been 224 cases of H5N1 and 127 deaths in Africa, Asia and Turkey.

in Africa, Asia and Turkey.
In addition to spreading through birds, there is a fear that H5N1 can also be spread through flies, mosquitoes and fleas – based on research done on the spread of a much weaker strain called H5N2.

It's more important than ever to control and limit contact with these insects.

Formosan termites

Formosan termites are highly destructive insects that are native to China. They are best known as the target of a $5 million effort by the agriculture department called Operation Full Stop that kicked off in 1998 in New Orleans. Formosan termites are responsible for $1 billion damage a year.

Scientists believe the termites entered the U.S. in the 1930s with a ship that off-loaded infested crates and pallets at Galveston and Houston, Texas; as well as Lake Charles and New Orleans, Louisiana; and Charleston, S.C. The crates and pallets were buried, giving the termites a perfect environment to grow and spread. It wasn't until the 1960s that they were discovered, since their populations were low and they looked like native dry-wood termites.

Since then, the Formosan termites have spread to 11 states: Alabama, California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas.

Temperature plays a big factor on how these termites spread – their eggs won't hatch if the temperature is below 68 degrees. With the rise in average temperatures, there's no telling how far north the termites can go.

Forests and crops

Warmer temperatures may allow some bug-eating bird species to expand their range northward, according to National Geographic, which may leave forests vulnerable to insect infestation.

A study published recently in the Proceedings of the National Academies of Science, found that temperature swings could tip the balance in favor of leaf eaters like certain caterpillars, which could affect crops and forestland.

Spice-able recipes from 'The Complete 15-Minute Gourmet'

Yes, it's possible to create a complete 15-minute gourmet meal. And furthermore, you don't have to be a chef to pull it off. Paulette Mitchell's newest cookbook, "The Complete 15-Minute Gourmet: Creative Cuisine Made Fast and Fresh," shows the way. The palate-pleasing cookbook boasts 350 recipes, many of which were inspired by Paulette's world travels. Not all recipes include chile, but each recipe can be tweaked by adding a pinch or a potent punch. As a bonus, Mitchell includes tips on "flawless execution and attractive presentation."

"Fast and easy doesn't make a dish less desirable, nor does it mean sacrificing complex flavors or a beautiful appearance," Mitchell says. "If you plan ahead and get organized, you'll be astonished at what's possible in 15 minutes."

"The Complete 15-Minute Gourmet" hit bookstore shelves in October and can be purchased at Amazon.com for $18.24. Visit Paulette's website, www.paulettemitchell. com, for more tasty tips and recipes.

Spanish Garlic Shrimp with Sherry

ing hot as a light entrée with rice or at room temperature as part of an array of tapas with lots of crusty bread for dipping in the delectable juices. For traditional Spanish flavoring, use the pimentón, a smoked and dried pepper powder. To preserve its color and vibrant flavor, all paprika should be stored in a cool, dark place for no longer than 6 months.

1/2 cup coarsely chopped onion
6 garlic cloves, thinly sliced
12 ounces medium (26 to 30 count) shrimp, peeled and deveined
1/2 teaspoon paprika or Spanish pimentón
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1/3 cup dry sherry
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes or to taste
Salt to taste
Finely chopped fresh flatleaf parsley for garnish

Heat the oil in a large sauté pan over medium heat. Add the onion and garlic; cook, stirring constantly, for 15 seconds.

Spanish Garlic Shrimp with Sherry is definitely gourmet, yet it's not difficult or time consuming to prepare. Cookbook author Paulette Mitchell shows home chefs a fast and easy way to prepare this scrumptious meal in her new tome, "The Complete 15-Minute Gourmet."

Mediterranean Seafood Stew

All around the Mediterranean, fish soups are made from the day's catch, and each region has its own different and wonderful variation. Traditionally, fish heads are simmered in seasoned water to make fish stock; but, for quicker preparation, I substitute canned chicken broth. Also, to speed things up, I ask the fishmonger to remove the fish skin for this stew, which is elegant enough to serve to your most discriminating holiday guests.

2 teaspoons minced garlic 1/4 teaspoon saffron threads, crushed, or more to taste

1 tablespoon hot water

2 (14-ounce) cans reduced-sodium chicken broth

1 (14-ounce) can diced tomatoes

3 small red-skinned potatoes cut into 1/2-inch cubes

1/8 teaspoon red pepper flakes, or to taste 8 ounces firm white fish (such as sea bass, mackerel or monk fish), remove and discard skin, cut flesh into 1-inch squares

leaf parsley for garnish

Heat the oil in a Dutch oven over medium-high heat. Add the onion, carrot and garlic; cook, stirring occasionally, for 4 minutes or until tender.

Meanwhile, mix the saffron with the hot water. Set

Pour the chicken broth and tomatoes into the Dutch oven. When the liquid comes to a boil, stir in the potatoes, red pepper flakes and the saffron mixture. Reduce the heat to medium; cover and cook for 3 minutes or until the potatoes are nearly tender.

Stir in the fish; cook for 3 minutes. Stir in the scallops; continue to cook for 2 more minutes or until the potatoes are tender and the fish is thoroughly cooked. Garnish the servings with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

Tip: Saffron, the yellow-orange stigma of a small purple crocus, is the world's most expensive spice. Each flower provides only three stigmas, which must be handpicked. It takes 14,000 of these to equal 1 ounce of saffron. A little goes a long way and there is no substitute for its exquisite flavor and earthy aroma. Be sure to purchase whole saffron threads. Powdered saffron loses its flavor more readily and can easily be adulterated with less expensive powders like turmeric. Heat releases the flavor, so pinch the threads between your fingers and then soak them in hot (but not boiling) water before using. Store saffron in an airtight container in a cool, dark place for up to 6 months.

Jamaican Chicken with Black Beans

Spices have played an important role in the history of the Caribbean islands beginning with Columbus, who came looking for spices when he sailed from Spain. Allspice, also known as Jamaican pepper, comes from a berry that grows on the indigenous pimento tree. Serve this aromatic dish with basmati rice for a wholesome meal the whole family will enjoy.

12 ounces skinless, boneless chicken

1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh thyme

1/2 teaspoon ground allspice

1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes, or to taste

1/2 teaspoon pepper, or to taste

Salt to taste

Coarsely chopped fresh cilantro for garnish

Heat the oil in a large sauté pan over medium-high heat. Add the chicken, onion, curry powder and garlic; cook, stirring occasionally, for 5 minutes or until the chicken is thoroughly cooked and the onions are tender.

Stir in the remaining ingredients. Reduce the heat to low; cover and simmer for 5 minutes or until heated
