Long-time lobbyist urges city to finish existing projects

By JIM HILLEY
The Las Cruces Bulletin

At a city council work session Monday, Sept. 8, the council heard presentations on the city's noise and animal control ordinances, legislative priorities and was introduced to the city's new lobbyist, Larry Horan.

But it was the advice of parting lobbyist Ray Davenport concerning the city's legislative priorities and future funding sources that made the biggest impact.

Davenport commended City Manager

Terrence Moore for his selection of Horan to succeed him and recalled many years of working with Horan's father and grandfa-ther. He also thanked Moore for finding a way to allow him to stay on until January to facilitate the transition.

Councillors thanked Davenport for his 19 years of service to the city and voiced their appreciation for his ability to be blunt with them.

Davenport looked at the city's legislative priorities projected on the council chamber walls and proceeded to cement his reputation for bluntness.

"In my 19-and-a-half years or so I have presided over the flow of over $50 million, and I want to commend you for your selection of Horan," he said.

"Many legislators felt like the recent session was 'just to further the résumé of the sitting governor," he said, noting that, in the current funding climate, the

New Mexico State University is awaiting the final count of fall 2008 enrollment numbers, which are showing a promising overall increase to more than 30,000 students, the largest enrollment the university has ever had.

Final enrollment numbers have not been released, but if the count remained steady through the end of the census on Sept. 5, NMSU should see an overall combined increase in enrollment of more than 8 percent. The Las Cruces campus numbers are holding steady at a possible increase of almost 3 percent.

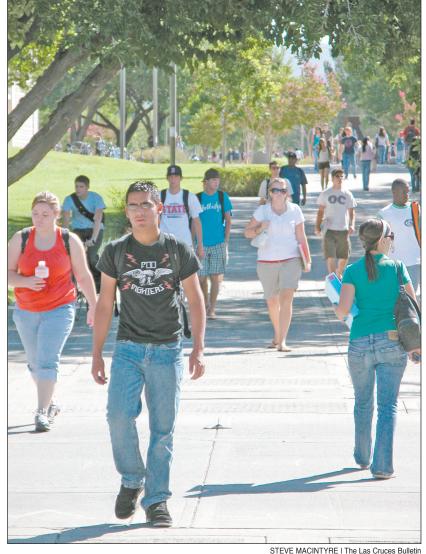

'The largest growth is in our community colleges, which bodes well for us as an institution," said Robert Moulton, interim executive vice president and provost. "Our community colleges offer access throughout the state. They offer smaller classes and help prepare students for upper-division classes. Often we see these students transfer to the Las Cruces campus, but we are also serving the state through distance delivery and other blended delivery methods. Some students can obtain graduate degrees without ever leaving their communities. We're about helping people succeed."

STAN ROUNDS

LCPS Superintendent

Parents and students who violate attendance policies risk criminal prosecution, officials say

The Las Cruces Bulleti

At a press conference Monday, Sept. 8, Doña Ana County District Attorney Susanna Martinez vowed to "reinvigorate" her office's program to enforce school attendance laws.

Martinez, accompanied by the representatives of the three public school districts in Doña Ana County – Superintendent Stan Rounds of Las Cruces Public Schools, Superintendent Bill Coker of Hatch Valley Schools and Deputy Superintendent Efren Yturralde of Gadsden Independent School District – told those gathered that "we have gotten together with the school districts and are now united against parents who are not finding education to be of primary purpose.

She said they will focus primarily on parents of older children who use older kids to babysit younger children instead of sending them to school as well as parents who cannot get their children to school on time. Martinez said that after the schools report 10 unexcused absences, an investigation would be launched by the district attorney's office.

Rounds said he is pleased with the district attorney's involve-ment. "We now have a 90-percent attendance policy, and it is very important that parents get their job done. Our intent in referring students to the DA or JPPO (Juvenile Probation and Parole Office) is plain, we want to make sure kids attend school. We're asking every adult to take responsibility, and that includes employers taking a look at how hours worked might affect a student's attendance." Rounds said the focus would be on parents. "We will work with the DA's office to have a united front," Rounds noted the dropout rate in his district and said that a correlation exists between attendance and the dropout rate. "We want to start early and make sure the right habits will be built."

Students who are continually absent from a particular class or classes will also be a focus of the policy Rounds said, including younger students.

Rounds said that how the state defines attendance is somewhat misleading because the state definition is by half days. "We did a study and found that on any particular day, 25 percent of students are absent for at least one period.'

While the enforcement program will target parents, Martinez said, "We will focus on the child if the child is dropped off at the front door and the child takes action on their own and goes out the back door.'

The Las Cruces schools have a program in place to notify parents when their children are absent after three occasions and more, Rounds said. He also pointed out the school district's policy does not entirely rely on law enforcement. "Don't infer that our policy is strictly what the DA is targeting, attendance is still the issue.

According to Martinez, if a parent is convicted of failing to get their children in school, the first offense is a petty misdemeanor, and the second is a misdemeanor. Offenders will be brought before a district judge and sentences may include probation or remedial classes.

Parents who attempt to avoid penalties by changing schools often will also be targeted.

Rounds said that once a student attends a school in the Las Cruces district and is recorded absent, changing schools would not help the parent avoid responsibility for absenses recorded in the school's database.

Martinez said a revitalization in the enforcement program is needed due to the turnover in the top echelons of the local school districts.
"There was some change in all three districts, and we wanted to make sure the new superintendents are able to pull it together in the entire governor's own GRIP program was "faltering because it hasn't been well funded." He added that $150 million has already been skimmed off to satisfy appropriations made.

'So I urge you not to take on any new projects, focus on what you have now. We got used to a lot of years of good times, but the money available has shrunk while the requests have increased," Davenport said.

"Downtown is absolutely crucial," he said. "All you have to do is look outside and see that it is absolutely booming. The No. 1 top priority is Main Street. It's a grand-looking starting part (of Main Street). Open up Downtown."

Concerning another of the city's priorities, a police training facility, Davenport recommended the council seek out funding from other communities in the region to build it. "I know you have always supported the police, but with cost estimates at $30 million - regionalize it - someday you'll have to start, and that's the direction to go. Don't give up on the facility, but think of ways to do it," he said.

"The second thing to concentrate on is the East Mesa streets. There has just been emergency meetings involving two local legislators. I thing we are turning the corner on that, I urge you to see that through to a reasonable conclusion," Dav-

"We have intense competition in Santa Fe. Almost 10,000 requests for money were made, but only about 900 were funded. Those were all worthwhile things – community centers, fire trucks - we got our share, but we have to go back and work hard," he said.

Davenport spoke in support of the city's massive El Molino flood control project – still only partially completed. "It is a matter of life. Legislators are more persuaded to that – that has sizzle. The aquatic center, the Benavidez Center – Benavidez could go up to Santa Fe and give legislators that smile and a handshake – El Molino streets don't have that charm.

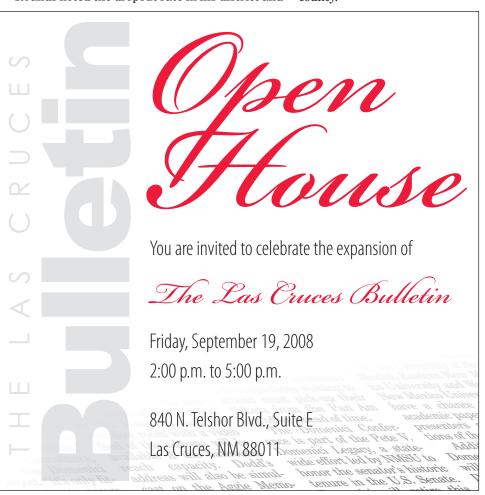

"I would think that at some time the city needs to have a quality-of-life bond issue, we have a naïve reliance that somehow the money's going to flow.

"El Molino has to be finished, El Molino streets have to be finished. You must convince constituents that their lives are involved. You have been elected to make decisions on the behalf of your constituents.

"Legislators like to do things when they feel they can get credit for it, but it's hard to point to a ditch and say 'I did that.'

"You have to stand up and say that what you get from Santa Fe is never enough.'

"Your bonding capacity is quite strong, and you will have to step in and do that, you have quite a bit of money waiting to be spent," he said.

Bulletin celebrates office expansion with Sept. 19 ribbon cutting and open house

By David E. McCollum

McCOLLUM

Anyone who has visited our offices recently at 840 N. Telshor Blvd. has found our office environment to be a bit different. Our main entrance has been moved. Guests now enter the building through two sets of double doors instead of the single door entry that we used for the past four years.

Since March, we have been engaged in a significant (at least for us) expansion project. When we moved to Telshor from our old location on Madrid Avenue a little more than four years ago, we thought our compact 2,400-square-foot office space would serve us well forever. However, after growing from 12 employees to 24 by the end of last year, we were beginning to feel a bit like freshly picked green chiles crammed into a gunnysack.

Our original single-door front entrance offered little protection against the fierce spring winds that typically blew into town from the west. Many times a guest, or fellow employee would open the door on a breezy day and a wall of wind would rush inside, blowing everything including papers, pens, pencils, plants and even paperweights off our office manager's desk. In the winter, the simple task of opening the front door could lower the office temperature by 10 degrees. In the summer, opening the front door would immediately elevate the temperature as our cool, refrigerated air would escape outside into the parking lot. With the new double-door entry we no longer have the wind and temperature-control problems.

With our expansion we have almost tripled our total office space. Also, the layout of the office space is much more efficient. Guests enter the office into the marketing and administrative area and are still greeted with a friendly smile by our office manager. We have doubled the number of sales offices. Each salesperson has a new semi-private, built-in office space. We have also added three administrative offices, an additional conference room and lots of storage space.

The news team has moved into the area previously occupied by sales and administration. Editors and reporters now have their own conference room and have ample wall space for hanging and reviewing page proofs. The design team has been strategically relocated into the center of our operations between the sales and news offices. The designers moved from their cramped space in the rear of the old office into the opened-up area that used to be two separate news offices. Our distribution manager has moved into the space previously occupied by the design team. This has allowed us to expand our newspaper archives.

The expansion project turned out to be a bit bigger than we initially planned. The challenge was to complete the build-outs while we continued to produce our weekly newspaper. However, our contractors helped to make the transition very smooth. We give special thanks to these key local contractors, including our general contractor, Tim Curry Construction, our data line installer, AmeriCom, office equipment provider, Insta-Copy, and our exterior sign builder, Fluorescent Signs.

To celebrate our expansion and to officially open the new office space, we will hold a public open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19. We invite our readers and advertisers to tour our facilities and take a personal look into how we function as a newspaper. We hope you can join us.

"So, let me get this straight . . . I'm paying off my mortgages to Fannie and Freddie, and bailing 'em out with my tax money at the same time?!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Culture shock

I nearly busted a gut laughing at Baxter's Black column several weeks ago, on why cowboys are number one at taking care of number two; or how to survive without toilet tissue. It took me back down memory lane about 60 years ago, when as a lad of age 8, I started summer visits to my maternal grandparents' farm. Like many farmers in Kansas at the time, they had no indoor plumbing, and when nature called, rain or shine, winter or summer, you trotted out the backdoor to their two-hole privy (or outhouse) about 50 feet from the back porch. Although I then lived in a little town of 1,200 people, my uncles considered me a "city slicker," and one of the reasons being that we had the luxury of a indoor bathroom and toilet paper.

Needless to say, my first impressions of visiting the outhouse was definitely fear as well as culture shock. First, there was the fear of the size of hole on which to sit versus the small size (then) of my rear end. Then, the culture shock came from the absence of toilet paper. What were the alternatives? Occasionally corncobs (ugh), but usually outdated copies of the Sears-Roebuck or "Monkey Wards" catalogs. You simply tore out as many pages as you needed.

On a few occasions, we might be treated to the relatively soft texture of the weekly paper, but certainly never any Charmin. My grandparents, like others of their time similarly situated, saw no reason to waste good money on toilet tissue, when so many other free alternatives were available.

You might meditate in the privy during the spring and summer, but in the winter months, in the unheated outhouse, you did not dally in your duty. The outhouse was moved several times as it continued to be used for the next 30 years. Finally, when my grandmother was in her late '80s and in frail health, my uncles felt the time for an indoor bathroom had arrived, and the outhouse was "out."

Grandparents thanks

The Grandparents Raising Grandchildren organization in collaboration with the City of Las Cruces Senior Center Program sponsored a celebration of National Grandparents Day on Saturday, Sept. 6, at Young Park. Approximately 175 people attended the event, which provided a brief respite for the grandparents who are raising their grandchildren and who deserve our recognition.

The day was one of many features - there were musical offerings - the Tequila Nights and the Essencia Band - a Jumping Jacks play enclosure for the little kids and a slew of games and contests. The day was sunny and hot and everyone enjoyed a nice luncheon of hamburgers and hot dogs accompanied by potato salad, chips, melon, juice contributed by Price's dairy, bottled water contributed by Caliche's and Blue Cross Blue Shield, potted flowers contributed by Aldershot and funds for the event from the Elks Lodge 1119, Pepsi Cola Bottling, Casa Tile, Arroyo Salon, Allen Theatres, Sonic Restaurants, Pic Quik Stores, K Mart, Papa Johns Pizza, Business Skills Institute, Barnett's Las Cruces Harley-Davidson/Buell, Moose Lodge 2081, Old Town Restaurant, Dicks Mesilla Chick-fil-A, Ranchway LLC, the folks from RSVP, the Girl Scouts, the volunteers from Action for Youth and the many others who worked so hard to make the event a success. Thank you all for your generosity and support.

Texas misses out on presidential campaign advertising

Only El Paso market gets any attention It's always fun to be a New Mexican subjected to the negativity the presi-

when El Pasoans look longingly in our direction. Such an event occurred last weekend in a front-page story from the Austin Bureau of the El Paso Times.

The article lamented that the presidential contenders wouldn't be spending much time in Texas because it is such a red state. But, it noted, El Paso, with its proximity to New Mexico, would be able to see much more of the candidates, their advertisements and surrogates.

Not that the candidates will be straying across the border, but El Paso media cover New Mexico and candidates running statewide or in the southern part of our state have to advertise in El Paso.

Here's a direct quote from that article: "El Pasoans are going to be treated to advertising the rest of Texas won't see.' So don't groan when you see negative political ads from the two presidential campaigns. El Pasoans reportedly enjoy it and the rest of Texas would consider it a treat to see those ads.

Now, I don't really think most El Pasoans really consider it a treat to be dential candidates are aiming at New

Being tucked into New Mexico's southern border the way they are, El Pasoans are considerably more discerning than your average Texan. Many of them understand, for instance, that the Texas overblown ego is mostly bluster, with little to support it.

Some even under-stand that the mighty

Texas army, upon which the state builds its glorious reputation, essentially was a push over. It lost several battles to the Mexican army before stumbling across President Santa Anna later and taking him captive.

Texas leaders made him sign a document surrendering Texas before they would release him. The document never was recognized by Mexico. It took the Mexican-American War to settle that.

Later, they set their sights on New Mexico, but we whipped them twice. The second time was during the Civil War. Somehow, even though we were on the winning side and Texas wasn't, it won all the boundary disputes and ended up with El Paso. Over the years, New Mexicans have been testy about that. Occasionally, a member of our State Legislature will introduce a resolution calling on the U.S. government to give it back. Sometimes it

It is not only distance,

but culture that makes

El Paso so much more like New Mexico

even involves trading New Mexico's southeast corner to Texas, which we certainly wouldn't want to do.

The efforts, of course, never have gone anywhere. Occasionally, an El Pasoan will even suggest that the city would be much better off in New Mexico, where it would be the largest city and could demand some respect from state govern-

Twice in last weekend's El Paso Times article, comments were made about El Paso being ignored and neglected by a state capital so far away. Probably a dozen small East Coast states could be fit in between El Paso and Austin.

It is not only distance, but culture that makes El Paso so much more like New Mexico than Texas. Our histories are inextricably linked. Oñate, on his way to colonize New Mexico, stopped near what is now El Paso to celebrate a thanksgiving for having made it across the Rio Bravo safely with hundreds of people and thousands of animals.

El Paso was on El Camino Real that ran between Mexico City and Santa Fe. And it was where New Spain's colonists escaped for 12 years during the Pueblo Revolt, along with residents of Isleta Pueblo, who founded Ysleta, southeast of El Paso.

El Paso is a great city, with an international flair. It's not just from Mexico, but from much of Europe, from where many fled during World War II. U.S. immigration restrictions prevented many from coming directly to our country, so they came to Mexico and other Latin American countries and emigrated from there, eventually bringing their families from Europe.

We'd like to have our neighbors back.

Open meetings

One of the most important jobs of the Attorney General's Office is to show public bodies how to comply with the State of New Mexico's Sunshine Laws, the Open Meetings Act (OMA) and Inspection of Public Record's Act (IPRA). City or town councils, boards and commissions or any entity that conducts public business must abide by the rules and regulations set forth in these "good government" laws.

It has long been my belief that meetings held by public officials to discuss public business, particularly when conducted with the public taxpayers' money, are the taxpayers' business. Similarly, when it comes to citizens' right to inspect public documents, the law requires public access to virtually all public records. While there are a few legitimate exceptions, most are available for public inspection. We encourage public officials to be liberal in providing public access and to honor all reasonable and legitimate requests for records.

My AGO Road Show travels to different parts of the state every month to conduct seminars that teach civic leaders and the general public about these laws. Often times, I am able to personally attend these seminars and talk about why the information is so important to the democratic process and to encourage people to learn how to comply. We also teach people about their rights under OMA and IPRA.

I think most public bodies and individuals involved with government want to do the right thing when it comes to carrying out the business entrusted to them by their fellow citizens, and the Attorney General's Office is always

We also do our best to resolve disputes that arise from confusion, unfamiliarity and willful violations of the laws. My office is charged with the responsibility of enforcing OMA and IPRA, including imposing civil penalties if necessary. But again, most people want to do the right thing and most often, violations are remedied or "cured" soon after the violations have been pointed out by my office.

My office also publishes and prints hard copies of two different guides that explain in detail both the OMA and IPRA. These guides are made available at no charge to individuals and groups, such as the New Mexico Municipal League, a nonprofit, nonpartisan association whose membership includes all of the state's incorporated municipalities. The OMA/IPRA guides are also available on our website at www.nmag.gov and can be downloaded and printed by anyone.

Additionally, we have recently added a video/audio feature to this website. Currently available is a short video where I discuss various aspects of both the Open Meetings Act and Inspection of Public Records Act. I especially encourage state employees to access this video and learn about two of the most important laws in New Mexico that help those of us in government provide the best service we can. GARY K. ### Letters to the Editor Fed up with cable

I am fed up paying outrageous charges for 60-plus channels, most of which I don't watch. Several times I phoned Comcast and said $58 per month was too much to pay without getting any premium, ad-free stations, and I wanted only their cheapest, basic service. I was told for about $15 per month I would get only local channels. Each time I complained, instead of switching me to the "local channels" option, Í was offered a six-month promotional rate ranging from $27 to $37.

When I called last week I was told I couldn't get a promotional rate again. So I selected the "local channels" option for $18 per month (including tax) believing I'd only receive network non-cable channels broadcast from El Paso and Las Cruces.

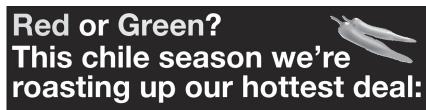

To my surprise what happened was Comcast cut off the channels beginning with 24, so I get every channel from 2 to 23 including the two C-Span channels, Spanish language channels, religious channels and shopping channels, all of which, other than C-Span, I would be

Cable companies lobbied hard for a deregulation law, which Congress enacted in 1997, that allows them to set their own rates. Cable companies promised that competition would decrease charges. Instead now there's a cable TV monopoly that has raised our bills by more than 50 percent. Cable companies counter that we now have more channels, but they're not channels most of us care to watch as most of us watch fewer than 20 channels. The ideal situation would be a-la-carte pricing, paying only for the channels one wants.

How hard could it be to initiate that? I really resent a rise in the rates every time a new channel is added whether or not it interested me.

The Obama-Palin effect Strong personalities make voters care

By Michael Swickard

A real change has occurred in our presidential election. The race has become personal to Americans on both sides. Many Obama supporters already have had a personal epiphany that they really like him, first as a person and second as a candidate. Now, with the introduction of Sarah Palin, many Republicans have gotten into the race in the same way.

I am really happy that we have a presidential race where people will be voting because they care rather than as a "civic duty" of just pulling the lever. More so, they will be voting "for" rather than "against." It energizes our nation to be focused "for" rather than primarily

Some people might say it would be better if they were voting because of some principle of government such as the person's specific view of the legitimate role of government. Still, I will take both sides of the Obama-Palin personally caring phenomenon and cherish it

Too many elections feature the partisans voting as they have always voted without regard to the quality of the candidate, other than the candidate is of the "correct" party. In this way most of the votes cast were a referendum of the party rather than the nominee.

Even more obnoxious is that about 98 percent of incumbents are returned to office reflexively. Partially this is because election rules and procedures introduced and voted on by the incumbents provide small and large advantages to them retaining their office. I like the bumper sticker I saw that said, "Never re-elect

Now any yahoo who uses that quote to say that a single person should not be elected misses the point. Specifically, if Lee Rawson should not be returned to the state Senate, so should all of the other senators from our area. Otherwise, the argument does not work.

One thing that has changed in the last couple of elections is that there has been a strong effort by partisans to register people to vote. There are two results: I have known two people of the other party who found on Election Day that even though they registered to vote, because they were Republican and their register was not, their registrations were not

Second, we may have people registered identifying voters somehow disenfranchises them. It is the other way around.

Getting citizens registered to vote is a ho-hum in my book. What we have found is that when long-term non-voters are badgered into registering to vote, only a very tiny percentage actually votes. Why? They do not really care about the outcome of the election.

I have always thought that we did not need all of the folderol about registering to vote. If we go out and get each citizen to care, we will not have to worry about them registering and voting. If they care, they will vote.

Another change is that with Gov. Sarah Palin on the Republican ticket, much of the hate mongering by Republicans has been replaced by genuine approval of Palin. The hate mongering of Obama has all but disappeared in the items sent to me. Previously, I had gotten lots of rude comments about Obama, switched sides. I have been getting lots of rumor mongering about Sarah Palin. I wish both sides would drop the negatives and talk their own positives. Most people care about their person so it has no effect other than to divide us as a people.

Dual-credit courses offer students great opportunity

By WILLIAM V. FLORES
For the Las Cruces Bulletin

When I was in high school, I took a college math course at San Diego State the summer of my junior year. My parents paid the tuition and fees, and I paid for the textbooks. I had to work harder that summer, but it helped me decide that I definitely wanted to go to college. Nationally, the data shows that students who take college courses while still in high school are more likely to graduate, more likely to be ready for college and more likely to graduate from college on

Gov. Bill Richardson and the New Mexico Legislature have been working together with the New Mexico Higher Education and Public Education Departments on education reforms including Making Schools Work, an initiative to strengthen the high school curriculum and make sure that New Mexico students graduate from high school ready for college and prepared for a career. Dual credit plays a big part in this effort that was spearheaded in the Legislature by Sen. Cynthia Nava. The new statewide dual-credit program allows high school students to earn both high school and college credit. And, it saves money.

Beginning this fall, students in New Mexico high schools will be able to take college courses approved by their school district at a local college campus for very little cost. The college campus will waive tuition and general fees, the school will provide the textbooks and the students (and parents) will pay course fees and provide transportation. The dual-credit courses count toward graduation from high school and toward a college degree or certificate. Dual credit benefits those students who plan to go college as well as those who are mainly interested in vocational training. Twenty-first century careers require some college, and dual credit is for any student who wants to earn above the minimum wage.

Students can take dual-credit courses in academic or career technical fields from any neighboring college or university, or even online at any college or university in the state. Dual-credit students can explore whether they want to become teachers, plumbers, film crew members or film directors or medical professionals. The good news is that students will stay in high school, graduate and then continue to college in the field of their choice. Nationally, the data shows that students who take dual-credit courses are more likely to graduate, better prepared for college and more likely to graduate from college on time. Taking dual-credit courses shortens the path to college and reduces the high cost of college.

If you are a high school student or a parent of high school student and want to find out more about these opportunities talk to your high school counselor or contact me at the New Mexico Higher Education Department at 505-476-6503 or william.flores@state.nm.us or visit www.heds.state.nm.us. Take advantage of the dual-credit program and start college early.

Questions raised about genetically engineered ch

Cross contamination said to be inevitable if GE chile crops are introduced in NM

By ALLEN RICHARDSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

I recently attended the New Mexico State University Chile Field Day in Las Cruces and publicly asked Dr. Paul Bosland about the glaring contradiction between 2007's Senate Joint Memorial 38 and 2008's funding package to NMSU that includes funds to accelerate the genetic engineering of New Mexico chile.

SJM 38 indicates that the entire Legislature of New Mexico apparently agrees that the idea of traditional farmers maintaining crops and seed stocks free from contamination by engineered genes is a reasonable and achievable political goal. In SJM 38, the legislature requested NMSU to work with the New Mexico Food and Seed Sovereignty Alliance on policies to that end.

It seems to me that there are two central questions that arise when we discuss the relationship between genetically modified organisms (GMOs) and traditional crops: One, is contamination inevitable, and two, if so, does it matter?

What's changed recently in debates of this kind is that there is no longer any nuance to the first question. The contamination of the long-grain, white-rice harvest that came to light in 2006 ended any debate on that subject.

Now that there is consensus that genetic engineering is not a containable technology, what is NMSU's, the New Mexico Departmet of Agriculture's and NMCA's position on the protection of the landrace chiles of northern New Mexico? Allow me to suggest that the way to answer these questions is not to talk about the financial motivation to mechanize chile harvesting (a process which includes engineering chile to withstand applications of herbicide) or to assert that genetic engineering is safe. The question is whether the planting and eating of genetically engineered chile will be become de-facto mandatory after GE chile is introduced.

Whether or not it is safe is irrelevant if there is no state policy to protect the crops of traditional farmers who have made it clear they do not wish engineered crops to be forced on them

What is the policy to be? What is the scientifically based policy to prevent the contamination of landrace chile? Surely whatever policy emerges will put the cost on biotechnology interests and not on traditional farmers

The absence of a real policy to protect the landraces sends a message that the issue is not taken seriously. Is protecting traditional crops bad for the economy? Must traditional crops be contaminated in order to save the New Mexico chile industry?

If NMSU, NMDA and NMCA believe that the inevitable contamination that would result from the introduction of engineered chile does not matter, perhaps they could simply come out and say so. If agricultural scientists in New Mexico actually believe it is possible for traditional crops to co-exist uncontaminated alongside engineered crops, would they mind disclosing what data that position is based upon? Does NMSU, NMDA or NMCA have to end seed saving taken by biotechnology companies wherever genetically engineered crops are widely grown? Do they have any comment on the recent legislation in California to protect farmers from that kind of legal action for which there are many precedents? Do they have any comment on the recent ruling that upholds a ban on genetically engineered alfalfa until after the USDA completes a full Environmental Impact Statement?

I look forward to a vigorous and transparent public debate on these topics.

Finally, I'd like to extend an invitation to all to attend the 3rd Annual Symposium for Sustainable Food and Seed Sovereignty happening at Tesuque Pueblo on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 26 and 27. I've been able to arrange VIP status for NMSU staff so that you can attend the event for free. This would perhaps clarify the concerns of traditional farmers regarding genetic engineering in agriculture. It would send at least one representative to the symposium.

Percy Schemiser, the Canadian farmer who was sued by Monsanto after his land was contaminated, will be speaking. After hearing his story, perhaps NMSU, NMDA and NMCA personnel could explain why it is that we should not be worried about such things happening in New Mexico.

For more information or to register, visit www.foodandseedconference.info or call Lorraine at 505-955-7723

Even if you're not registered, we can get you into the event if you identify yourself as NMSU staff or a member of the New Mexico Chile Association. Thank you for your time. I can be reached at 575-779-0270 for questions.

Reservoir Report

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has closed the gate at Elephant Butte Dam to prevent flooding below the dam in response to the heavy rain at the end of August, the bureau reported in its river advisory.

The bureau expects the Rio Grande Project's three irrigation districts to end their irrigation seasons in mid-October. Closing the Elephant Butte Dam gates and holding Caballo Reservoir at its win-ter operations level to allow the bureau to control evaporation, according to its news

Elephant Butte has received some rain runoff from the Upper Rio Grande Basin and the river flow at San Marcial was 702 cubic-feet-per-second. (One cubic-foot-per-second equals 448.8 gallons-per-minute).

The bureau's latest operations plan indicates that the Elephant Butte Reservoir storage at the end of the season will be 569,480 acre-feet, 29 percent of capacity, and 245,990 acre-feet more than last year's storage. (An acre-foot of water contains 325,900 gallons).

- The reservoir storage figures are: Elephant Butte 577,575 acre-feet, 30 percent of a full reservoir, an increase of 4,466 acre-feet, elevation 4,345 feet, 62 feet below the dam spillway.
- Caballo 54,330 acre-feet, 24 percent of capacity and down 5,045 acre-feet.

TWEF folds second beer tent

The Whole Enchilada Fiesta won't be serving up beers to spectators at its new rock-crawling event after all.

The council had approved the fiesta's request for a second beer location at the unfortunately named "Crawlin' in Cruces" exhibition of off-road vehicle slowly climbing over boulders and large objects.

In an email to Mayor Ken Miyagishima and city councillors, TWEF board President Quent Pirtle wrote that "somehow the name of the beer tent was confused with the name of the event. There was never a name intended or given to the beer tent."

During discussion of the request, Councillor Miguel Silva said the name "Crawling in Cruces" gave him the impression it was more of drunk fest and "almost brought me back to my college days." Councillor Nathan Small fretted that it appeared to link drinking with driving.

"After the Las Cruces Sun-News Editorial on Sunday describing how we were supporting and encouraging people to get drunk and drive or crawl home," Pirtle wrote, "I decided it was the last straw. I have cancelled the beer tent at the fourwheel drive competition. I am afraid that the publicity along with some of the comments made at the council meeting will have an adverse effect on attendance at

Water

Water discovered on Mars! That headline stopped me in my tracks! Maybe there's hope for Colorado!

Colorado's burgeoning population has those responsible scouring the state for water to supply the unquenchable suburban growth along the front range of the Rockies that stretches for 200 miles. Other, primarily Southwestern metropoli from Los Angeles to El Paso, are trying to secure a water supply to accommodate their next 25 years of population explo-

But actually locating, seeing and proving that Mars has water beneath its surface is electrifying to me. The accomplishment and findings of this feat rank with putting a man on the moon, the taming of the jalapeño and the invention of insecticides. Four million miles away on a red planet, just a bright dot in the night sky, we landed a toy shovel with a stove and a wireless cell phone with a camera. The picture showed a scrape of the bucket in the Martian dirt with two distinct wet spots in the track. Not a doubt.

It's like making a connection that heretofore had just been a blurb in the imagination of the human mind. Science fiction writers' plots. Scientists' puzzles. Romantics' hopes. Star gazers' dreams. It touches a deep spot inside of us. I concede not everyone is as impressed as I when the University of Arizona proved their theory that H2O existed on Mars. It didn't even make the front page of many newspapers. There was a ho-hum reaction on television news that treated celebrity baby births, campaign promises and political corruption as higher priorities. But finding water on Mars is a watershed in the progress of mankind's earthly knowledge of the universe. Suddenly Mars is no longer a barren, giant rock circling the sun. It is no longer lifeless. It is not as hostile. H2O exists under its surface and with it, oxygen. Basic essentials for life, as Coloradoans can tell you. They are protective of their beautiful canyons and streams and mountains. They have for years voted down attempts to capture more water from the Front Range run-offs. But .. now days, the "environmentalists" are being washed away by the reality of demand.

In Colorado, developers, California immigrants and politicians have spent decades plot-ting ways to beg, buy, borrow or steal water from the agricultural communities. Now they have the numbers. Major water projects are in the permitting process or under construction to expand reservoirs, build new ones, build new dams and install massive new pipelines from distant sources. There is an urgency.

Maybe by the time Denver, Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Phoenix have drained every drop of water from the washrag of neighboring counties, we will be shooting H2O molecules on laser beams from deep wells on Mars and using them to flush toilets and water golf courses in Scottsdale and Aurora!

Hey, anything can happen. You wouldn't believe it! We just found water on Mars!

Signature Event is Sept. 18

Chamber offers professional development opportunity with its daylong presentation

With world-renowned motivational speaker Dan Clark encouraging Las Crucens to develop their personal and professional skills, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce is hosting the 2008 Annual Professional Development Signature Event from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 18, at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

Clark is a humorist and motivational speaker who will discuss team building, sales and personal development. The topics are chosen from a survey of chamber members, but each topic is broadened so that all attendees will come away from the event with valuable information.

Clark presents approximately 150 speeches each year around the United States and Europe, often providing personalized speeches for large corporations to tackle their particular issues.

He earned his induction into the National Speakers Association Hall of Fame in 2005. The association honors professional speakers who have reached the top echelon of platform excellence. Clark was also named one of the top-10 speakers in the world by Achievers North America and Achievers Europe.

Clark is the only professional speaker to ever have been invited to tour a war zone and speak to U.S. troops, giving speeches at bases for 30,000 troops in Iraq, Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Afghanistan, as well as on an aircraft carrier.

Clark is also the primary author to rimary author to have contributed to the "Chicken Soup for the Soul" series, having had his stories included in the original "Chicken Soup"

book, as well as "Second Helping" and "Mothers."

Clark's message centers around helping one's self through helping others and strengthening the bonds of community through the connections made. Although these connections can incidentally improve one's business standing, they also make for a better person and a better community through the effort.

The Signature Event is an all-day presentation that includes a continental breakfast and lunch. The cost to attend the Signature Event is $200 for chamber members or $225 for nonmembers.

To register for the event, visit www.lascruces.org or email chamber@lascruces.org.

the inner campus, rather than somewhere directly off of University Avenue.

An arts complex would bring those activities under one roof and would make them easily accessible by the public.

"The whole concept is to have the complex on the street," said Michael Rickenbaker, university architect.

The arts complex is one of the key buildings of NMSU's master plan to have more buildings along University Avenue facing outward, rather than away from the community, he said. It will be located just east of the future on-campus hotel and the city's convention-civic center.

and the city's convention-civic center.

"This is the right time for us to approach this," Woods said.

The vision for the arts complex's first phase is a 50,000-square-foot building to house a 450-seat drama theater with classrooms, theater department offices and operations, theater support areas and public spaces. The full complex will include a large performance hall, gallery space and a studio or "black box" theater.

Also on Bond D is $6 million for the implementation of Phase VI of the Doña Ana Community College's East Mesa Center. DACC has been seeing steady growth, and the East Mesa campus will build classrooms and laboratory space to help keep the pace.

"The new center will play a vital role in training Las Cruces' workforce with the technical skills necessary to be competitive in today's global marketplace," said DACC President Margie Huerta. "As it stands now, we have insufficient classrooms, laboratories and support areas to fulfill our mission. Ballot D would help us get to the next level."

The building would be located in the academic core adjacent to the preceding construction phases at the center. It will be nearly 30,000 square feet and would be classroom and laboratory space primarily used for instruction. The New Mexico Higher Education Department ranked this project as its top priority, citing the need for additional facilities at DACC.

Overall, Ballot D will provide about $30 million for improvement projects throughout the NMSU system. Other items include $3 million for the NMSU-Carlsbad Allied Health and University Transfer Center aimed at training public health professionals, $2.4 million for and New Mexico Department of Agriculture facility to provide more "real-time" information to farmers, $1 million to NMSU-Alamogordo for classroom renovations and $1 million to NMSU-Grants for classroom renovations and repairs.

All these projects are in keeping with the university's strategy to seek equitable funding for its needs with other institutions in the state, Woods said.

Besides the NMSU-projects, Bond D includes $17 million to the University of New Mexico, $12 million to Central New Mexico Convention College $13 million.

Besides the NMSU-projects, Bond D includes $17 million to the University of New Mexico, $12 million to Central New Mexico Community College, $12 million to Eastern New Mexico University, $10.8 million to New Mexico Highlands University, $8 million to the New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology, $8 million to Western New Mexico University, $7 million to Mesalands Community College, $6 million to Northern New Mexico Community College, $5 million to New Mexico Military Institute, $4.5 million to Luna Community College, $4.2 million for Santa Fe Community College, $4.2 million for Santa Fe Community College, $3.3 million to New Mexico Junior College, $3.3 million to New Mexico Junior College, $3.3 million to UNM-Taos, $3 million to the New Mexico School for the Deaf, $900,000 to UNM-Gallup and $500,000 for the Institute of American Indian Arts.

Passage of Bond D will increase the state property tax by 29 cents per year for every $1,000 of assessed value. That comes to $9.77 a year for a home with an assessed value of $100,000.

By JIM HILLEY

More than 150 people attended an open house at Safe Haven Animal Shelter on Sunday, Sept. 7. Guests were able to view the three-acre facility and view the large, well-shaded pens that are home to the shelter's dog population. Visitors were also able to tour the Juanita Fisher Cattery, where approximately 19 adult cats are able to spend time either inside or outdoors and another structure that holds adoptable kittens. Safe Haven has been in operation since 1996 and has a no-kill policy. Many of the animals are available for adoption, while others have been left in the permanent care of the shelter.

The Safe Haven Animal Sanctuary Thrift Store, 144 Wyatt Drive, it the shelter's primary source of fund ing. To make a donation, contact the store at 527-4544. Donations of any kind are accepted.

The shelter also holds adoption events from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the second Saturday of each month at PetSmart, 2200 E. Lohman Ave. Adoption events will also be from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays, Sept. 20, Oct. 4 and Oct. 18, at Petco, 3050 E. Lohman Ave.

Fall Colloquium lineup announced

Esther Lezra opens series at NMSU on Monday, Sept. 15

The New Mexico State University College of Arts and Sciences has secured the lineup of speakers for the fall semester Colloquium in the Humanities, Social Sciences and Fine Arts Series.

Esther Lezra, an assistant professor of Global and International Studies at University of California, Santa Barbara, will kick off the series at 4 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 15, at NMSU's Science Hall Room 107.

Her presentation, "Vision, Violence and Complicity: From Suriname to Abu Ghraib," will be accented by visual images, said Jeff Brown, history department head in the College of Arts and Sciences. Brown is also the chairperson of the colloquium-planning committee. Each semester, the committee selects a panel of speakers on a variety of topics they consider to be of great value to the university and community. The topics selected are relevant to the areas of concentration in the college.

Lezra said her presentation is about "the representation of torture and the dynamic of complicity we must grapple with when we address it as a historical, social and political problem."

She is a graduate of two NMSU programs and holds a bachelor's degree in languages and literature (December 1996) and a master's degree in English (December 1998). Lezra also holds a doctorate in comparative literature from the University of California-San Diego and was awarded a two-year post-doctoral fellowship from the University of California-Santa Cruz.

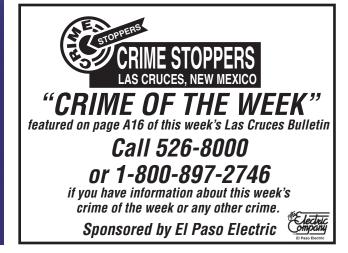

"I enjoyed my time in Las Cruces tremendously, and I made very good, lasting personal connections. It is exciting to be coming to visit," Lezra said, eager to be returning to visit the area after nearly a decade. Her main area of focus is in literary and cultural studies of the Caribbean, Europe and North Africa from the 18th century to present day. She has been published in a number of journals with article topics ranging from Hispanic theory to the study of African ancestors.

The series is sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences Research Center and the Southwest Border and Cultures Institute. Speakers will deliver their lectures on a topic pertaining to the college followed by a question and answer period. These lectures are free and open to the public, and reservations are not required.

This is the third semester the colloquium has run. With each semester, Brown said, the planning committee members get better at determining when students are likely to be the busiest, and therefore tries to increase attendance by scheduling around those times.

"I think that students as well as people in the community should be interested in the topics to be covered, and we expect very good attendance," Brown said. The Colloquium will continue in the spring should funding allow, he said.

- In addition to Lezra, upcoming speakers include: Sept. 29 David Schweidel, University of California at Berkeley, "Where Gold Goes, Blood Follows," 4 p.m. Science Hall Room 107
- Oct. 13 Eleanor King, Howard University, "Apaches, Buffalo Soldiers and the Archaeology of Conflict," 4 p.m. Science Hall Room 107
- Nov. 10 Margaret Jacobs, University of Nebraska at Lincoln, "Cameras and Conquest: The Photographs of G.E. Miller and the Blazer Collection," 4 p.m. Science Hall Room 107.

Election 2008 — Excited Las Crucens return from St. Paul GOP convention

Palin pick re-energizes Doña Ana County Republicans

By Bethany Conway

While Minneapolis-St. Paul saw a great deal of action as the city hosting the Republican National Convention last week, action at the office of the Republican Party of Doña Ana County is heating up as well.

After a confident speech from U.S. Sen. John McCain's running mate, 42-year-old Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, along with those from several other dominant players in the Republican Party, the Las Cruces office saw more foot traffic from party members as well as those wanting to

We began to get some excitement the Friday after the Republican Convention. We got a real up-kick in interest," said Mark Van Dyke, chairman of the Republican Party of Doña Ana County. "The increased foot traffic became hundreds of people coming through the doors."

While many Las Crucens who saw the speeches from their television screen were stirred by the optimism of the event, according to Ceil Levantino who attended the event as a delegate for New Mexico, there is nothing like the real thing.

"There is no way you can watch on a television screen and experience the excitement, the electricity," she said. "I think the genuine optimism that people felt doesn't translate well through a television screen. People were genuinely enthusiastic and ready to go home and work

Though it became clear over the weekend that Hurricane Gustav was headed straight for the New Orleans area and some events at the convention were canceled or put on hold, spirits were still high.

"This year, I think, was very up beat, with the exception of the hurricane. We were concerned, and some of the delegations from the Gulf Coast states - Texas, Louisiana, Ālabama, Mississippi – a lot of those delegates were keeping one eye on the television and the other eye on the convention events."

By far, the most talked-about speech was that of Sarah Palin, a person who many are still trying to get to know.

"Without a doubt, Sarah Palin absolutely rocked" the arena. The electricity in that place was palpable,' Levantino said.

With many controversies to overcome, including misconceptions over when she received her first U.S. passport – the Boston Globe reports it was in 2006 – and doubts about her abilities to act as president should something happen to McCain, Palin is now on her way to informing the American people about her stance on the issues and her history in politics.

"They're the perfect match because they are going to balance each other very well," Levantino said.

Van Dyke added that her speech definitely stirred something in Doña Ana County voters.

"Everybody is absolutely electrified by the speakers, especially Gov. Palin," he said. "Doña Ana County voters are falling in love with Gov. Palin."

McCain's speech, which gave an inside look at his time as a prisoner of war, also served to rouse the crowd, especially veterans and active military.

"I think people were generally aware of his history and the suffering he endured as a POW. But I think the retrospective in his speak really gave people the opportunity to hear the details of just how horrible that experience was. In a way, he was reintroducing himself to the country and allowing them a glimpse in the private hell he lived through."

McCain's wife, Cindy, also raised eyebrows with her speech, which was her first big debut as the potential

"She was the only one who didn't use the podium. She just held the microphone, and she stood on that stage by herself," Palin said.

Other speakers included former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani as well as Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee.

Since the convention, numerous media outlets have reported that McCain realized a substantial increase in the polls and now leads Sen. Barack Obama in many

Democrats pick at Tinsley's lobbying

National restaurant group donated to tainted officials

The state Democratic Party is questioning donations made by the National Restaurant Association, which District 2 Republican Congressional candidate Ed Tinsley has served as a board member and acted as a lobbyist.

In a release, the Democrats assert that the restaurant association contributed more than $120,000 to nine politicians under investigation or indicted for corruption. One of these contributions was to a politician who was under investigation while Tinsley served a chairman of the association, the release stated.

"If Ed Tinsley felt comfortable knowingly giving political contributions to corrupt elected officials, it makes you wonder what kind of ethical standards this Washington lobbyist would have if elected to Congress," said Josh Geise, executive director of the Democratic Party of New Mexico.

Tinsley owns the region's K-Bob's restaurant chain and is opposed by Democrat Harry Teague.

Locke challenges Cote for NM House

GOP candidate warns of liberal swing in politics

By TODD G. DICKSON
The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Republican challenger to Nathan Cote's District 53 state representative seat is focusing his campaign on warning voters of a liberal swing in the Democratic Party. "When you hear the word 'progressive,' know that equates to leftwing liberal politics," said Stanford Locke to a gathering of supporters on Tuesday, Sept. 9.

Locke said he felt compelled to make his first political run for office out of concern for this turn in state politics. Cote, Locke said, is aligned with the progressive players on growth issues and has a liberal voting record in his first term at the Legislature.

If the progressive political movement has a strong-hold, however, it is in the East Mesa, which dominates District 53, though it also includes Chaparral and part of Otero County. Political action organizing by progressives on the East Mesa is credited with unseating Bill Mattiace as mayor of Las Cruces in the last city election by electing Ken Miyagishima, a Democrat whose former city council district included the East Mesa. Efforts to unseat other incumbents targeted by the progressives outside of the East Mesa have been less successful.

East Mesa have been less successful.

Cote's election to District 53 – in which he unseated conservative Alamogordo Republican Terry Marquardt – illustrated the East Mesa growth and influence on voter demographics.

Cote has gone to bat on one issue of concern to progressives – he has challenged the legality of East Mesa development arrangements brokered by State Land Commissioner Pat Lyons. Cote, along with Sen. Mary Jane Garcia, asked for the state Attorney General's Office to give an opinion on the State Land Office's awarding of a planning and development lease to a local development for large sections of state trust land on the East Mesa.

Locke said Cote's allegiance to the progressives also can be found in his support of creating designated wilderness areas in the county.

"People have been using these back roads since the '30s," Locke said. "What they want to do is take that away. If it's wilderness, the only way to enjoy it is on foot. No wheelchairs, no bicycles and no jeeps or off-road vehicles."

People can have access to these areas without hurting the land, he said. Wilderness supporters, he said, want people to only live in the city "like in a zoo."

But Locke said he has found by going to door-to-door that residents in the district also are concerned about more fundamental concerns, especially the need for infrastructure improvements. They want to see more paved roads, more access to sewer systems and improved police protection, he said.

Locke retired from industrial machine and equipment sales and has an insurance business in Las Cruces with his wife, Deborah. He is best known for helping different groups and organizations get flags through his involvement in the local Woodmen of the World group.

If elected, Locke said he would oppose a state-run health care system, though he does admit that health care needs to be better. Health care professionals need to be brought to the table to help come up with solutions to make health insurance for small businesses other than a government-run approach, which Locke said would bankrupt state government.

Gutierrez tries to reclaim treasurer's office from Schoonover

Former treasurer endorsed by former internal auditor

By Todd G. Dickson

David Gutierrez, the former county treasurer seeking to take back the office from Jim Schoonover, got a boost this week from a notable endorsement - his opponent in the primary election.

Jill Johnson, a former county internal auditor who was critical of Schoonover's running of the office, said she met with Gutierrez after losing to him in the primary election. In that conversation, Johnson said, Gutierrez reassured her that he shared her two chief concerns – improving internal controls and supporting local banks.

In a letter to the editor announcing her endorsement, Johnson noted that her auditing of his department brought to light controversies surrounding the use of his name on pencils that some saw as similar to his campaign logo and conducting Elks Club business at the office. In her letter, she challenges Schoonover's decision to use an investment broker, rather than depositing county money in the state investment pool.

"The audit uncovered thousands of dollars of revenue generated by the broker's investments that had not been paid to the county," she wrote. "The county recovered most of this. Also, the bills submitted by Schoonover for payment to the broker

David Gutierrez, former county treasurer stands with Jill Johnson, former county internal auditor, who is endorsing his candidacy to return to the office were incorrect and ended up being thousands of dollars less."

Johnson cites these events as mismanagement by Schoonover and said she believes that Gutierrez will run the office in a more transparent manner.

In an interview with the Bulletin, Johnson and Gutierrez both said the office as it is run by Schoonover has lacked oversight in making sure that money handled by the office's cashiers is secure and has a good accounting trail.

Johnson said cashiers have access to other cashier drawers and that paper receipts written when computers are down lack adequate tracking. "There has to be a recording of everything," she said.

That lack of control has led to the recent audit finding of a cashier embezzling money, Gutierrez said, and resulted in criminal charges filed against that cashier.

Schoonover may say he's taken corrective steps to tighten internal controls, Johnson said, "but I know it's still going on." Too many people have access to the cash drawers and safe, she said.

When he was treasurer, Gutierrez said, cashiers could only have access to the drawers they were given in the morning after a head cashier had reconciled the previous day's tallies. Also, there should be surprise spot checks of the cashier's drawers periodically, he said. "When I was in office, we were doing that," he said.

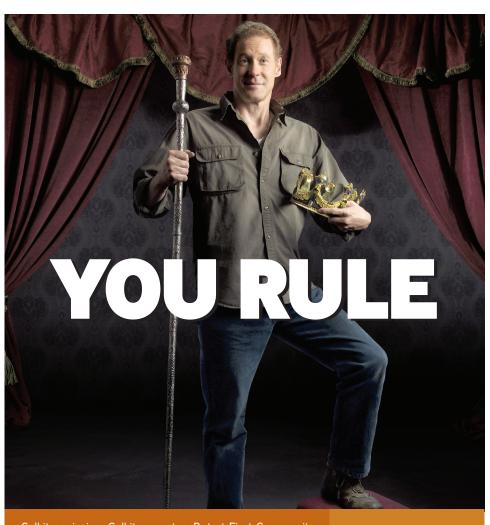

The office also has lost good employees, Gutierrez said, and he disagrees with Schoonover's decision to use the investment broker – which Johnson said was accomplished by requiring banks to provide a 102-percent guarantee to be able to take deposits. Previously, the county only required banks to put up a 50-percent guarantee, which allowed more local banks to handle the money. Gutierrez said he supports going back to the old policy because that is local taxpayer money, and it will help local banks support its customers and the local economy.

Schoonover says he has gained a greater rate of return by going with an investment firm rather than the state pool, but Gutierrez said he doesn't agree when the investment firm fees are factored in, as well as a boost of cash from the sale of Memorial Medical Center that occurred at the start of Schoonover's term.

The dispute about the investments, the pencil spending and the Elks Club controversy prompted the county commission to censure Schoonover, which Gutierrez said is the only thing that can be done because the county treasurer can't be fired.

"The only way is to vote him out," Gutierrez said. "I my opinion, this gentleman (Schoonover) has mismanaged this office in every way.'

Former local GOP chairman running for county cl

Goddard: Voting problems persist despite some progress

By Todd G. Dickson

When Sid Goddard was the county chairman of the Republican Party, he would urge GOP members to get involved rather than just complain about things.

That's why, Goddard said, he quit the chairmanship to run for county clerk.

As chairman, Goddard was especially forceful in challenging the county's slow voting counts and sought the state's intervention into what he saw as voting irregularities.

When the state didn't step in, Goddard said he decided to step up. "I just got tired of it," he said of fighting county election officials. "I used to tell people, 'If you know a better way to do it, then run for office yourself.' So, I followed my own advice.

To Goddard, there is no more important local elected office than county clerk. It's where the votes are counted, and he said ensuring votes are cast and counted correctly is essential to a democratic system, which he added transcends party allegiances.

Running for county clerk on the Democratic side is Lynn Ellins, who is the director of the county's bureau of elections. Incumbent County Clerk Rita Torres lost by 185 votes to Ellins, who is credited with improving the county's election process.

Goddard acknowledges there has been some progress, but not enough. Too many people still run into problems at the voting locations, he said, and there are way too many people not purged from the voting rolls.

"In this county, voting is a joke," Goddard said. "It's about time that Doña Ana County stop being the poster-

Galaxy Explorers registration open

Do you know what a supernova is or how about how hot the sun is? Maybe you'd like to live on Mars? The City of Las Cruces is currently accepting registration for the Galaxy Explorers program.

Participants will meet once a month at the Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave., beginning Saturday, Sept. 20. Each session is from 10 a.m. to noon. The membership fee is $30 per participant. Register now and receive a free T-shirt.

The class is for kids between the ages of 6 and 12 who like space, science, launching rockets, building robots and making friends. Participants will be members of the Federation of Galaxy Explorers.

For more information, contact the Meerscheidt Recreation Center at 541-2563. The TTY number is 541-2661.

If Ellins gets credit for improving the elections bureau, Goddard is the one who recommended to the county commission that it establish a task force to find ways to improve the process, which springboarded Ellins into his current position. And Goddard said he concerned that Ellins still heads the bureau as he runs for county clerk.

If elected, Goddard said he would work to ensure the process keeps its integrity and promised there would be no "deal-making" if he became county clerk.

Goddard said he would improve transparency by not holding counts behind closed doors and even open to television camera coverage.

"I want people to feel that we are not hiding anything," he said. "I wouldn't allow things to become chaotic, but we need to make everything as transparent as possible.'

Goddard says that candidates shouldn't have to wait for days to find out if they won or lost. A former tive with Toyota, Goddard said he would use his human resource management skills to improve the clerk's office.

"The people working in the clerk's office are great and very talented," he said. "But without organization and clear direction from leadership, their abilities are wasted and they are blamed for ineffeciency, and that's not their

Goddard cited problems persisting as recently as last

June's primary election.

"More than 20 precincts weren't in at 11 that night, and when citizens inquired what happened, we were told that a truck bringing ballot boxes out of the southern part of the county had broken down. Then we were told that the keys to the truck were lost. Regardless of what really happened, it was days before the community was given primary results.

■ JAZZ CONCERT, NONVIOLENT COMMUNICATION

Unity Church of Mesilla Valley, 125 Wyatt Drive, will present "the dynamic duo" of Barbara Logan on keyboard and Mike Norris on drums in a jazz concert at 2 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14.

The performers will "move your feet, hands and heart, and renew your energy." Attendees should come early to get a good seat.

In addition, the church will present "Learning the Language of the Heart," with Cathleen E. Straley, from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 20. Straley is certified in nonviolent communication and will introduce the concept of compassionate communication and teach the ability to communicate more honestly and compassionately internally and with other people. Based on the work of Marshall Rosenberg, Ph.D., the presentation will cover the four basic steps; observation, feeling, needs and requests. A love offering will be accepted.

This sanctuary at University United Methodist Church was restored after a 2007 fire. A celebration of the restoration will be held at 10 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 14.

Sanctuary restored at Methodist Church

After an accidental fire in the front of the sanctuary on July 11, 2007, University United Methodist Church, 2000 S. Locust St., will celebrate the restoration of their worship space on Sunday, Sept. 14. David U. Jones, pastor, is inviting the public to join UUMC in celebration with a combined worship service at 10 a.m., followed by a picnic lunch and hymn er to ensure that programs continued as usual.

With the assistance of Ted Shelton, church member and principal of ASA Architects, the trustees developed a plan for updating several sanctuary features, including lighting and acoustics, and a budget was developed for that additional work. The congregation voted unanimously to go forward with the improvements in addition to the work covered by insurance, and the project was under way.

Under Shelton's guidance, the church was able to secure the services of Wooten Construction, a Las Cruces firm experienced in fire restoration, who completed the job with a high degree of professionalism and respect for the sanctuary.

The large screen was replaced by two monitors above the pulpit, and audio and video equipment was replaced and upgraded as needed. The organ was replaced with an enhanced model, set on the expanded chancel.

Dramatic changes in body chemistry result in suddenly rebellious teenagers

Though cute, cuddly and loveable, toddlers can also be selfish, demanding, destructive and hard-nosed

My teenage son is becoming increasingly difficult to get along with. Isn't there some way to avoid this blackout period and the other stresses associated with the adolescent voyage?

Not with some teenagers, per-haps not with the majority. Tension occurs in the most loving and intelligent of families. Why? Because it is driven by powerful hormonal forces that overtake and possess boys and girls in the early pubescent years. I believe parents and even some behavioral scientists have underestimated the impact of the biochemical changes occurring in puberty. We can see the effect of these hormones on the physical body, but something equally dynamic is occurring in the brain. How else can we explain why a happy, contented, cooperative 12-year-old suddenly becomes a sullen, angry, depressed 13-year-old? Some authorities would contend that social pressure alone accounts for this transformation. I simply don't believe that.

The emotional characteristics of a suddenly rebellious teenager are rather like the symptoms of premenstrual syndrome or severe menopause in women, or perhaps a tumultuous mid-life crisis in men. Obviously, dramatic changes are going on inside! Furthermore, if the upheaval were caused entirely by environmental factors, its onset would not be so predictable in puberty. The emotional changes I have described arrive right on schedule, timed to coincide precisely with the arrival of sexual maturation. Both characteristics, I contend, are driven by a common hormonal assault. Human chemistry apparently goes havwire for a few years, in some more than others, affecting mind as much as body.

I have a 2-year-old boy who is as cute as a bug's ear, and I love him dearly, but he nearly drives me crazy. He throws the most violent temper tantrums and gets into everything. Why is he like this, and are other toddlers so difficult?

Your description of your toddler comes right out of the child development textbooks. That time of life begins with a bang (like the crash of a lamp or a porcelain vase) at about 18 months of age and runs hot and heavy until about the third birthday. A toddler is the most hard-nosed opponent of law and order, and he honestly believes the universe circles around him. In his cute little way, he is curious and charming and funny and lovable and exciting and selfish and demanding and rebellious and destructive. Comedian Bill Cosby must have had some personal experience with toddlers. He is quoted as saying, "Give me two hundred active two-year-olds and I could conquer the world."

Children between 15 and 36 months of age do not want to be restricted or inhibited in any manner, nor are they inclined to conceal their opinions. Bedtime becomes an exhausting, dreaded ordeal each night. They want to play with everything in reach, particularly fragile and expensive ornaments. They prefer using their pants rather than the potty, and insist on eating with their hands. And most of what goes in their mouths is not food. When they break loose in a store, they run as fast as their little legs will carry them. They pick up the kitty by its ears and then scream bloody-murder when scratched. They want mommy within three feet of them all day, preferably in the role of their fulltime playmate. Truly, the toddler is a tiger - but a precious one.

I hope you won't get too distressed by the frustrations of the toddler years. It is a very brief period of development that will be over before you know it. With all its challenges, it is also a delightful time when your little boy is at his cutest. Approach him with a smile and a hug. But don't fail to establish yourself as the boss during this period. All the years to come will be influenced by the relationship you build during this 18-month window.

X MARKS THE SPOT

There are many important letters in the American inhabitants are gone. Jesus was trying to teach His listeners, alphabet. One of the least thought of, but most important, is the letter X. The letter X stands as a symbol for a longer ord or meaning. The following are a few examples:

X = the Roman numeral ten. X = is the sign for Railroad Crossing. X =the unknown to an algebra problem. X is short for Xmas or Christmas. X stands for the spouse who has been divorced. And lastly, but most meaningful to me is the pirates form of locating the treasure on a map.

Jesus, while upon this Earth used many illustrations of farming, agriculture and weather to teach His listeners how to hear the Word of God. In Matthew 6:19, Jesus drew a comparison of the treasures of this world versus the treasures in the Kingdom of God. He said not to lay up for yourselves treasures here on Earth where thieves break in and steal, where moths and dust corrupts, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven where your heart will be.

The most important thing Jesus was trying to teach is you can't take things from this world to the world beyond the grave. It's just not going to happen. The tombs of the Pharaohs are full of treasures from this world that stayed here; however, the decayed mummies remain, but the PARCES CHURCH and to us today, not to prepare for the here and now, but for the future. We are talking about heavenly investments. A good example would be to pray for people who have done you wrong. Who actually owns the problem? The person who committed the act or the person upon whom the act was done to? The person who committed the act is not worried about what they did. However, the person who has been wronged continues to dwell on something to which they are the only ones who can do something about it. Jesus simply said, "Forgive them." He did this to His accusers on the cross. "Father forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing." When we do the right things in this world, the Father takes note of it and rewards us in His world, which is His Kingdom.

Oh, by the way, the real X that marks the spot was the place that Jesus died for all of our sins. Why not ask him to take yours away?

We have an X marks the spot for you and your family at the Las Cruces Church of God Sunday Morning Service at 10 AM.

La Clinica de Familia celebrates 30 years

Community health organization to honor contributors

In a state with the second-highest rate of uninsured people in the nation, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, community health centers like La Clinica de Familia (LCDF) are breaths of fresh air.

For 30 years, the clinic has provided primary care for uninsured and underinsured residents of Doña Ana County, and the organization is celebrating that milestone by honoring those who made contributions over the years at a gala Friday, Sept. 19.

"Thirty years is a great accomplishment," said LCDF CEO Harriet Brandstetter. "We invited the people who have made a contribution to La Clinica's success, those who have joined us on this journey. We've made such a strong alliance with so many people.

That strong alliance has evolved from a rich history in the Mesilla Valley.

In 1976, with five employees and 800 square feet of office space, La Clinica de Familia began in Las Cruces as a migrant health initiative of the statewide Health Education Livelihood Program.

In 1978, LCDF was incorporated as a state not-forprofit organization governed by a board of directors, with 51 percent of the board comprised of users of the clinic's

Over the years, LCDF services branched into San Miguel, Mesilla, Anthony, Chaparral and Sunland Park. Within the first 10 years, 8,000 residents relied on LCDF for health care services, and more than 100,000 patients had used its services, which included at least 1,000 deliveries.

Over the course of its history, the mission has remained the same - to provide quality health care to the uninsured, the underinsured and to the general public.

"We are funded to help those that don't have insurance some might have catastrophic insurance, but no outpatient coverage," said Brandstetter, who has been with the organization for 21 years and has served as LCDF's CEO for 17 years. "But our doors are open to the public. We accept Medicare, Medicaid and probably 90 percent of all insurances.

Now, the community health organization has its hands full, Brandstetter said, serving 26,000 residents from Las Cruces to the southern part of Doña Ana County. With 260 employees, including physicians, behavioral health consultants, registered nurses and medical support staff, LCDF provides comprehensive primary care from prenatal care to geriatric patients and everyone in between.

Las Cruces is home to an internal medicine facility, a women's health center, a family practice and dental clinic. Off of U.S. Highway 70 on the East Mesa, another family practice facility serves residents, and more family practice centers are found in San Miguel, Anthony, Sunland Park and Chaparral. A school-based health center is located at Santa Teresa High School, and Anthony, Sunland Park and the East Mesa also have dental centers.

"We cover the whole gamut, we have 24-hour coverage and our doctors have privileges at both hospitals (Memorial Medical Center and MountainView Regional Medical Center)," Brandstetter said. "The need is so great, the demand is so much, and we try to see as many patients as we possibly can."

For Brandstetter, her career with LCDF is more than just a job

"I feel this is my calling in life," she said. "Before La Clinica, I worked for another community health center, and a strange thing happened. When La Clinica was applying for the grant, my boss and I actually wrote the grant, never knowing a few years later I'd be working there.

"This is something I have a passion for and get a great deal of satisfaction from.'

While Brandstetter has served LCDF for more than 20 years, she and the staff at La Clinica will honor Certified Family Nurse Practitioner Sheila Sachs at the 30th anniversary celebration for her long-term commitment to the organization. Sachs has worked with the organization while it was still under the umbrella of the Health Education Livelihood Program.

"She's been with La Clinica probably for about 32 years," Brandstetter said. "She has a following. Patients born 32 years ago are still going to see her. That is a real

What's happening to El Paseo?

Center of town shifting to the east

It seems to have the same elements as a viable retail corridor, but El Paseo Road is not considered as much of a destination as it once was.

Nearly 40 years ago, when my mom was a senior in high school, it was the place to be on the weekends, and as I was growing up, El Paseo was one of the main roads we used – for eating out, buying auto parts and grocery shopping, at least. While I was a student at Las Cruces High, one of the hardest decisions for my friends and me to make wasn't about the normal peer pressure stuff – it was about where we were going to go for lunch.

El Paseo is still a widely used corridor to get from University Avenue to Main Street and beyond, but now it's not a place many people choose to make a stop. Once the grocery store in the location that is now the Community Action Agency closed its doors, the surrounding businesses in the complex moved out, either closing their doors forever or moving closer to a grocery store. Now the Community Action Agency is even selling the building. There has been a slight pick-up in that area, but it still looks more like a ghost town, especially with the old McDonald's location boarded up after the new one was constructed closer to Cruces High.

K-Mart has probably seen more cars in its parking lot this week than it has for a while, but that's only because a local car dealership has set up shop there. The Jack in the Box has just closed, despite the fact that most surrounding businesses have not closed or moved. There is still construction happening along the road, but keep in mind, it's not for anything new – Walgreens is just moving across the street.

Other than the current state of

Other than the current state of the economy, which seems to be the answer for everything these days, why is the road that was once considered to be a retail hub becoming more of a desolate area?

Well, for one, as Las Cruces grows, it continues to grow toward the east, and businesses that are along El Paseo Road have second, or even third, locations on that side of the city. The intersection of Lohman Avenue and Telshor Boulevard is more the "center" of the city, as thousands of cars zoom through that intersection to get from work to their homes on the east side of town, go shopping, eat out – sounds like the El Paseo of old.

Rains upset harvesting schedules

Cotton growers hope for more heat and sunny weather

By MARVIN TESSNEER
The Las Cruces Bulletin

Summer rains have been upsetting irrigation schedules as the Mesilla Valley field crops are nearing harvest, according to a news survey to a news survey.

Phytophthora capsici, commonly known as root rot, is showing up in chile fields with heavy soils that retain the excessive rains. But in the sandy soils where the water can percolate deep into the soil, "the chile is doing well," County Extension Service horticulturist Jeff Anderson reported.

reported.

"The chile yield will be down due to diseases, insects and the weather and because less chile was planted," he said.
"But what chile that is out there is very good."

The continued rains are causing problems with alfalfa and corn silage as well. "If a grower cuts his alfalfa and it rains,

When the rains soak corn silage fields, growers cannot move their machinery into the fields to cut the stalks.

Dickie Ogaz gave a rundown on his chile crop via telephone while dealing with customers at his roadside stand. He grows about 110 acres at Garfield, Derry and Arrey

"Our crop is doing wonderful," he reported. "We've had a little phytophthrora, but I don't know how the other fields are doing."

He raises and sells several varieties of chiles – long green, jalapeños, yellow hot. "You name it, and we've got it," he said.

In addition to running a roadside stand,

Farmers are watching their chile crops for root rot, which is already showing up in some fields that retain water from the area's recent heavy rains. One horticulturist reported this year's chile yield will be down due to diseases, insects and the weather.

Ogaz transfers truckloads of fresh chile to Los Angeles where an associate sells the Mesilla Valley chiles directly to consumers, a business that he has been conducting for about 15 years.

The rain and cloudy weather has also hampered cotton maturity, Bob Sloan reported.

reported.
"Cotton likes heat, and we've been having daytime temperatures in the 80s and in the 60s at night," he said. "Along with the rain clouds, we're using less water. But we really need temperatures above 95 degrees.

"If we don't get some good weather in September, it's going to put the cotton crop behind, and with this delay, we might not be able to finish out the crop. And from mid-October on, we could have a frost, and that would be the end of your cotton."

The Las Cruces City Council approved an increase in the amount of industrial revenue bonds issued for F&A Dairy Products to complete its expansion in the West Mesa Industrial Park. The issuance of a bond will allow F&A Dairy to be exempt from paying gross-receipts taxes on equipment or other costs directly related to the company's expansion.

Originally approved to be issued in the amount of $9.9 million in November 2007, the company asked the city to approve an increase in the principal amount of the financing for the project to $15 million as well as providing additional funding to enable F&A to redeem approximately $4.5 million in outstanding prior bonds.

Denny & Geraldine Calhoun: Raising money to find a cure

C4CR co-chairs are leaders in the local fight against cancer

By NATISHA HALES

Though they've come off a recordbreaking year in 2007 after contributing $350,000 to the Cowboys for Cancer Research (C4CR) Alma Cohorn Memorial Endowment at the University of New Mexico, C4CR Committee Co-Chairs Denny and Geraldine Calhoun won't stop when it comes to raising funds for cancer research.

"It's not hard for me at all to initiate a conversation and ask for money for Cowboys for Cancer Research," said Denny Calhoun, a lifelong Las Cruces resident who just stopped farming in December. "The reason it is so easy is because it's such a great cause. It's almost impossible to find anyone who hasn't been touched by the disease."

The organization was started with humble beginnings after Alma Cohorn died of breast cancer in 1981. Cohorn's husband and sons were involved in team roping events, and a family friend, Rawley Jackson, decided to hold a fundraising roping event to help money to fight the disease.

"Everything was donated and everyone volunteered," Denny Calhoun said. "I'm not sure how much was raised, but I think it was in the neighborhood of $700 that they donated to the cancer research and treatment center at UNM.

"They asked him where they wanted the money to go, and he told them to use it where you think it would do the most good. That was the mind set until 1999." In 1999, the Cowboys for Cancer Cowboys for Cancer Research Co-Chairs Denny and Geraldine Calhoun have recently celebrated two milestones. Their 50th wedding anniversary was Jan. 25, 2008, and the Cowboys for Cancer Research raised a recordbreaking $450,000, including in-kind donations, while celebrating the organization's 25th year in 2007.

Research Alma Cohorn Memorial Endowment was started. Although Denny Calhoun had participated in the roping events, the Calhouns did not become heavily involved with the organization until 2001, when they were asked to host the team roping competition at their Calhoun Arena, eight miles north of town.

There were more changes to the organization – the committee was increased from five or six members to a committee of 20 representing a broad cross-section of the community – professors, veterinarians, retirees and business people.

"At that point we began to really expand," Denny Calhoun said. "We saw fantastic growth"

In 2001, C4CR raised $20,000, and by 2006, the organization donated $140,000 to the endowment.

to the endowment.

2007 was C4CR's biggest year yet, as the organization teamed up with the New Mexico State University Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign.
The Tough Enough to Wear Pink campaign, started by breast cancer survivor Terry Wheatley in 1994, has successfully raised funds in the name of breast cancer throughout the country. Because Wheatley's son participated in professional rodeo, the campaign is widely recognized in the agricultural and roping communities. After visiting with the Calhouns at a Tough Enough to Wear Pink event hosted by the NMSU rodeo team, June Mumme, breast cancer survivor and wife of football coach Hal Mumme, approached the Calhouns about having another breast cancer awareness event at the university.

With approval from NMSU, the campaign – with NMSU Regent Laura Conniff, Sisbarro Dealerships Vice President Pat Sisbarro, June Mumme and Magellia Boston, wife of NMSU Athletic Director McKinley Boston, serving as cochairs – was launched around the Aggie football game against Arkansas-Pine Bluff Sept. 29.

The campaign raised more than $250,000, and when C4CR celebrated its 25th year with the annual dinner dance and team roping competition, the organization was able to donate a record-breaking $350,000 to the UNM endowment.

"We had over $100,000 of in-kind sponsors, so the total raised was $450,000," Geraldine Calhoun said. "We can't say enough 'thank-yous' to New Mexico State and the generosity of the businesses and people in Las Cruces and the surrounding areas."

ing areas."

The fundraising comprised the largest Tough Enough to Wear Pink-sanctioned event in the United States. It would have been the largest in the world, but the Calgary Stampede in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, raised more money than the Las Cruces event.

"This year we're hoping to be No. 1 in the world," Denny Calhoun said. "That's our goal."

Although they're entering "crunch time" during the quest to meet their goal – their 26th annual dinner dance and team roping are scheduled for Oct. 10-12 and the NMSU Aggies ARE Tough Enough to Wear Pink events will be held the following week – the Calhouns are sure to get the response they received last year if not more last year, if not more.

"We are very humbled by the generosity and participation of everybody," Geraldine Calhoun said.

Raising more than just awareness, the Cowboys for Cancer Research have started a movement. The Doña Ana County Sheriff's Posse started their Ride for a Cure last year, and the Las Cruces Professional Firefighters picked up the pace when Tough Enough to Wear Pink T-shirts were sold out. The high school volleyball in Artesia even organized a Tough Enough to Wear Pink event and raised $1,200 for C4CR.

"It's just been embraced more," Denny

"It's just been embraced more," Denny Calhoun said. "People are doing events all year long."

"We hope to get the volleyball team, baseball, basketball and all the sports involved," Geraldine Calhoun said.

All the work of the organization has not gone unnoticed. In 2007, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce presented C4CR with the Nonprofit of the Year award, which is well-deserved, since it's the largest, single consistent contributor to the University of New Mexico Cancer Research and Treatment Center. That money doesn't just stay at UNM. Both NMSU and UNM work together in conducting groundbreaking research, including the discovery of an estrogen receptor that will dramatically impact the way breast cancer and other women's cancers are diagnosed and treated.

"Cancer doesn't care whether you're a Lobo or an Aggie," Geraldine Calhoun said. "We put aside our ideas and work toward a common goal."

That goal has grown to raise more than $1 million in the name of cancer

Summer selling seasons shrink

Pending sales hit new low in Las Cruces

Two months ago, almost to the day, I reported in this column that it appeared our 2008 summer selling season may have reached its peak in May - and it

During the last day of the month of May 2008, the Multiple Listing and Information Service (MLIS) arm of the Las Cruces Association of Realtors (LCAR) reported that 247 buyers and sellers had executed purchase agreements and were "waiting in line" to close. One hundred fifty-seven, or 63.6 percent, of the buyers purchased an existing home, townhome or condominium, while the remaining 90 purchasers, or 36.4 percent of the total number, opted for newly constructed properties. Each time a purchase agreement is signed, another hash mark is added to the list of pending home sales.

During our 2007 selling season, the numbers were quite different. Difference No. 1 has to do with the month in which the selling season peaked. According to LCAR-MLIS figures, our hottestweather month of the year was also the hottest-selling month of the year, with 403 purchase agreements making up the list of pending transactions in June. Since May was indeed this year's peak production month, it means that this year's summer selling season was shorter than last year's by a full month.

Difference No. 2 has to do with a change in buyer preferences. This year, about one-third (36.4 percent) of the buyers who purchased residential properties during the peak month of May chose new homes over existing homes. In 2007, almost half of all buyers (48.6 percent to be exact) opted to purchase new homes during that year's peak month of June. How about 2006, when markets all across the country – including Las Cruces – reached their respective peaks? Interestingly, MLIS numbers indicate that 2006's summer selling season didn't peak until the month of September. That means that 2006's selling season was a month longer than 2007's season, and twomonths longer than this year's summer rush. Our peak year of 2006 was also the best year for local builders, who garnered 54.8 percent of the homebuyers who signed contracts during the month of September.

OK, that concludes today's history lesson. What buyers, sellers, lenders, title insurers, home inspectors, appraisers, furniture retailers, home centers and appliances outlets really want to know is: What's happening now? Well, according to an Aug. 31 report from the LCAR/MLIS folks, there were 171 buyers and sellers of single-family homes, townhomes and condominiums "under contract" and waiting for their respective seats at the closing table. Sixty percent of those were contracted to purchase existing-homes, with the remaining 40 percent preferring to buy new homes.

The 171 pending sales reported on Aug. 31 represent the lowest number of sales reported pending over the past 36 months.

Two months ago, almost to the day, I also forecast that, based on our the numbers at that time, sales production in the months to come would undoubtedly continue to wane as we progressed through the fall and winter seasons. I can't tell you how sorry I am that my forecast appears to be correct. Since that projection, however, the government has taken some measures that will hopefully combine to prove me wrong.

The most significant of those measures is the U.S. Treasury's bailout of Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae that took place last weekend. Together, the two Government Sponsored Enterprises (GSE's) hold or guarantee about half of the country's $5.3 trillion in mortgages. The impact of the takeover has yet to be determined, but lenders are cautiously optimistic that more money will soon be injected into the mortgage market.

GARY SANDLER'S

To facilitate doing just that, Treasury has set up a program under which it will pump money into the system by purchasing mortgage-backed securities currently held by Freddie and Fannie. It also said that it would begin buying Mortgage Backed Securities (MBS) later this month, and will continue to make such purchases until their authority to do so expires at the end of this year. Once sufficient monies are deposited into the system, mortgage money will be more abundant and easier to find.

For more information on the Mortgage Backed Securities market, where Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and the government have guaranteed bonds backed by home loans, visit to www.treasury.gov. Once there, click "Press Room" on the left side of the screen.

For more information on what's going on in Las Cruces real estate, visit this column next week. Until then, I hope

Tax increment financing an effective tool

New Mexico law may be too generous to developers

A question that plagues local government is how to finance needed improvements. One solution is to use tax increment financing (TIF).

The idea is simple. The improvement will increase property values, which, in turn, will generate property taxes. Why not funnel the increased tax revenue to developers? The developers can then use the tax revenue to back bonds to finance the improvement.

The beauty of this approach is that it harnesses the power of the market place. TIF bonds will only succeed if the market thinks the incremental taxes are sufficient to repay the bond. Improvements that don't make it economically are weeded out.

The logic of tax increment financing is compelling, and 49 states and the District of Columbia have adopted versions of TIF. (The only state not to have adopted TIF is Arizona.)

and counties to create "Tax Increment Development Districts (TIDDs)." These districts can pledge up to 75 percent of future incremental gross receipt and property tax revenues to underwrite bonds to finance infrastructure construction costs.

The New Mexico law has been criticized as being overly generous for including both gross receipts tax and property tax. Most states only include property tax. The New Mexico law has also been criticized for including state and local revenues when most states include only local revenues.

The fear is that the unusually generous New Mexico law may lead to erosion of the tax base. If the revenue diverted to TIDDs truly would not have happened without the TIDD, then the tax base is left unaffected. A problem arises when the diverted tax revenue is not the result of the TIDD, but would have occurred anyway. Perhaps the revenue has been shifted from existing taxing authorities or perhaps the eco-nomic development might have occurred without the TIDD.

The establishment of a TIDD can mean tens of millions of dollars of tax revenue is diverted to developers. If the TIDD does not increase revenues, then a TIDD can represent substantial sums diverted from the tax base to developers' pockets.

Another criticism of the New Mexico law is the use of TIF to finance new developments. TIDDs have been used to finance the massive Mesa Del Sol and Suncal projects near Albuquerque. Here in southern New Mexico, the Verde Group sought last year unsuccessfully to establish TIDDs to finance their development near Santa Teresa. The use of TIDDs to finance new projects is problematic in that it can contribute to urban sprawl. Moreover, new developments are more likely to impose new costs on local governments, yet the TIDD diverts funds from local and state government to developers.

All and all, TIDDs can be a useful tool for development, but care must be taken in execution. Certainly, tax increment financing is a boon to developers. One hopes, it also benefits to New Mexican tax payers.

cotton near La Mesa. He serves on the Elephant Butte Irrigation District board and the Mesa Farmers Co-op board. He also is chairman of the South-Central New Mexico Boll Weevil Control Commission and was able to report that field men have not trapped any weevils this year.

Some cotton fields are putting out blooms, but the rain and cloudy weather has put the cotton behind schedule. Now growers are concerned that many plants will not mature enough to produce lint. Unless hot weather returns, cotton probably has had its last irrigation, according to observations by Ramon "Dosi" Alvarez in the lower Mesilla Valley.

"We need more sunshine and heat in order to mature cotton bolls, Alvarez said.

He grows 750 acres of organic Pima cotton, which he sells to Swiss and Japanese textile mills.

"European textile mills are very organic conscious," Alvarez said.
"But the organic interest also is growing in the United States."

While watching the weather trends, he is getting equipment ready for harvesting. He also is president of the Mesa Farmers Coop Gin, the only gin in Doña Ana County, and serves on the EBID board. The cotton market outlook is mixed, Calcot Cotton Marketing Service Manager David Hand reported.

"The Upland cotton market is quite weakened because in the past few years the United States has grown too much cotton and has outstripped the demand," he said. Therefore, in 2008 we are overburdened to too much stocks of cotton."

But the opposite is true for extralong staple Pima because there are not many Pima stocks.

"Therefore, the price for Pima looks very promising," Hand said.

Usually in the price differential, the price of Pima is about 150 percent of Upland. Example – If the price of Upland is 70 cents a pound, the price of Pima could be about $1.05 a pound. "This fall, if the current trend continues, the value of Pima cotton may get very close to two times the value of Upland," Hand said.

Pecan orchards are in what is known as the off-year or lower yields in the production cycle. Last year, pecan grow-er David Daviet harvested 2,000 pecans per acres, but he expects the yield to be much lower in this off-year.

"But the rains have reduced irrigation," he said. "For every quarterinch of rain, I can go an extra day without irrigating," he said.

Doña Ana County Farm Bureau.

Rancher Tom Cooper described the rain-rejuvenated ranges as "fan-

The ranges are better than we have seen them in a long time," he said. "The first good rain came in early July - 12 to 15 inches in some spots and 8 to 10 inches in others. It started grass and covered bare spots. All of the ranges are normal plus. Rainfall in many of the places has been substantially in excess of normal." Cooper runs cattle on 150 sections in Las Uvas, Broad Canyon and the Butterfield Trail, formerly the Lazy E, which he operates with Steve Wilmeth as a partner.

He grazes cross-breeds and Beefmasters, a mix of Brahma for desert conditions and Hereford and Shorthorn for meat and milk production.

The precipitation measurement in Las Cruces through August was 6.89 inches, 116 percent of normal, according to the New Mexico State University

ment of Plant and Environmental Science campus gauge.

The heavy rainfall in the Mesilla Valley started in July, according to Danny Carrillo's Elephant Butte Irrigation District gauges. The Hatch July rain measured 8.18, and in Rincon, Mesquite, Chamberino, La Union and Anthony it was more than four inches in that month.

The totals for the year through August, according to the EBID gauges, are:

7.88; Garfield, 5.79; Arrey, 7.88; Garfield, 5.79; Hatch, 10.53; Rincon, 8.09; Leasburg, 6.70; Picacho, 7.48; Mesquite, 6.87; Chamberino, 7.48; Las Union, 7.95, and Anthony, 5.70.

"The City of Las Cruces is most fortunate to be in position to support industrial revenue bond issuance to assist F&A Dairy, and their business and operation expansion plans respectively," said City Manager Terrence Moore. "Leadership and direction to this effect will likewise augment economic development activity at West Mesa Industrial Park, consistent with goals, objectives and expectations of the mayor, city council and the community at large.

The cheese factory was one of the earliest tenants of the West Mesa Industrial Park, opening its Las Cruces plant on the West Mesa in 1995 as a state-of-the-art plant that processes 1.7 million pounds of milk into mozzarella, provolone and whey products. In 2000, the plant expanded by 25,600 square feet to shred, dice and grate

The company continues to reinvest in the industrial park, as F&A worked a plan with the city to purchase another 6.2 acres in the park for its Wisconsin associate, D.R. Tech, to open offices, which is the reason for the financing.

D.R. Tech, headquartered in Grantsburg, Wis., services the food and dairy industry with process flow systems and stainless-steel fabrication.

City council will officially authorize the transacation in the coming weeks with the adoption of an ordinance once F&A receives the finance agreement from the company's private lender.

Western Stoves & Spas grows with Las Cruces

By NATISHA HALES

The mild Las Cruces climate is ideal for successful businesses like Western Stoves & Spas - the warm summer nights are great for grilling, yet the winters are just cold enough to enjoy a cozy evening by the fire or even a dip in the hot tub.

Since 1995, Western Stoves & Spas, 1103 E. Lohman Ave., offers homeowners the opportunity to get the most of the region's excellent weather with its products and

With a background in finance and banking, Jim P. Flores recognized the potential of the business when he purchased it in 1995.

"Las Cruces did not have hearth specialty stores (at the time)," he said, "and the business grew every year that I've had it – right along with the growth of Las Cruces."

The original business, Western Spas, sold fireplaces and baths to builders. The original owner worked out of his home, but Flores said he knew he should open a store in Las Cruces as soon as possible.

With his commercial location, Flores continued to sell spas, but he also added hearth products - including wood, gas and pellet stoves as well as wood, gas and electric fireplaces – along with all the accompanying accessories to those items - venting pipe, chimney pipes and other

The business is divided into two major areas - fireplaces and stoves. Whatever the preference, Western Stoves & Spas will handle the order, coordinate with builders, do the installation, obtain required permits, ensure proper installation and set up the inspection.

The business also has moved with the trends of the area - including outdoor living, going "green" and increasing cost efficiency - and provides a product for each trend and fireplaces fulfills each need for customers.

"Pellet stoves have been a growing sector of our business in the last three or four years, and wood continues to hold its own," Flores said. "Our stoves are highly efficient because they offer zone heat – you heat the area you spend the majority of your time in. You don't have to have a gas furnace that blows throughout the house - you can do that with gas, wood or a pellet stove."

The wood and pellets used in stoves also are environmentally friendly, which is a plus for consumers who are growing more and more environmentally conscious each day.

"They're clean-burning and renewable fuel sources, and they're aesthetically pleasing," Flores said. "We've been talking green for 12 years, but there has been a renewed interest in the last couple of years, and there's an anticipated surge in clean, green machines because of the dramatic increase in fuel. It's already happening in New England. Manufacturers are getting more and more orders, and some companies are on allocation from October to February. Fortunately, we had our products brought in ahead of time.'

Just as the business has grown with the growth of the city, the slowdown has also slowed down some of his business, and increasing commodity prices have also affected Western Stoves & Spas.

"The price of commodities – steel, copper – has gone up, and the manufacturers have had to pass that cost on to us," Flores said. "We've had to tighten expenses."

But that hasn't stopped the company from expanding. For added convenience, Flores said plans are in the works to add a 4,000-square-foot warehouse at the East Lohman location and shift off-street parking to the east of the building.

"Our warehouse is off-location, and this will bring everyone back under one roof," he said.

Despite the challenges that have come with competition from big-box stores and the economy, Flores said his business is still successful. Why? Because his employees are nationally certified in the products they install by the National Fire Place Institute, and they also are certified in wood-, gas- and pellet-burning products.

"There is a continuous training of installers and service personnel to the extent that we will work on any manufacturer's product, not just the ones we sell," Flores said. "That sets us head and shoulders above our competition."

It also gives them the chance to work toward their goal and become the go-to guys for fireplaces and hearth

IN GOOD COMPANY: WESTERN STOVES & SPAS =

Talking business with President Jim P. Flores

What inspired you to go into business

I have had a 40-year business career and have owned several small businesses for 27 of those years. The realization of the importance of having control of my own destiny led me to return to school to obtain my MBA at Texas Christian University.

What is unique about your business?

This business is unique because of the fact that it is a specialty store that requires expertise in the selling and installing of fireplaces and wood, gas and pellet hearth products. Hearth accessories are also available as well as replacement parts. The additional products of our business are the unique pellet barbecues, gas barbecues, whirlpool baths and Baja hot tubs that are available in our show room. We strive to give our customers the best service by listening and having our customers tell us what their expectations and needs are.

Who are your customers?

Our customers are the wonderful people of the Mesilla Valley and southern New Mexico. Approximately 50 percent of customers to whom we provide products and services are homeowners seeking efficient heating alternatives.

Where do you see the business in five years?

This community has so much to offer to current and future residents that we hope to be the company that is considered the "go-to guys" to get customer value and quality as well as offering "green" hearth products. The manufacturers we work with are putting resources into developing and testing products that will provide quality heat while allowing consumers to also be good stewards of the environment.

What is your business philosophy? To provide quality products and services at a fair price. We strive to treat our customers and our employees the way we want to be treated and to keep people coming back, not only as customers, but as friends. We are a family-oriented business, and the atmosphere we hope to offer is one that is positive and friendly.

What is the best part of your job?

The best part of my job is the privilege of living in Las Cruces and meeting new friends as they come in the door of our store. Being the boss allows me the opportunity to grow my business into one that offers quality products and services as well as an opportunity to provide jobs that will offer opportunity for employees – both young and old – to learn and grow professionally and be contributing members and consumers in our community.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

Constant quality improvement., listening to our customers and our employees, being aware of national and local concerns and trends and not being afraid of changes or challenges. We strive to constantly improve our products and services through education and participation in the national and local organizations that relate to our industry.

How are you marketing your

We use all avenues available. Our location and the signage on the property are especially helpful, and the fact that we are on a busy, one-way street. The best marketing tool is a satisfied customer who passes the information about Western Stoves & Spas on to his neighbors and friends. Participation in community activities and events and as members of the Las Cruces Home Builders Association, the Greater Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce and supporting the activities of New Mexico State University are just a few of the ways we market and network.

What do you look for in an employee?

We see our employees as an extension of our business and the first and last contacts that customers have with us. We want to have employees who like their job, who treat customers the way they would want to be treated - with honesty and trustworthiness - and who will be respectful of each person's needs.

What is the best business decision you've made so far?

Well, of course, it is having the good sense and foresight to have a business in Las Cruces. The other good decision was to purchase the old Christian Electric building here at 1103 E. Lohman Ave. when Dorothy and Ted Christian decided to sell. We are now expanding to remodel the showroom to add more burning displays so customer can see products in

What best prepared you for entrepreneurship?

Learning at a young age from my paper route in my hometown of Monahans, Texas, the pros and cons of having my own business. My parents were great teachers of responsibility and provided guidance. The other things that prepared me were my education and years of experience. I also had good mentors and role models who showed me that you can have a dream that you can make a reality with hard work and perseverance.

What advice would you give to others starting a business?

Education, education, education. Have a business and financial plan. Know and understand cash flow and money management. Have a good banker.

What is your most popular item?

In the past few years, pellet stoves and inserts have really grown in popularity. Also, the Environmental Protection Agency-certified wood fireplaces and stoves are growing in demand. Clean, green and sustainable is becoming a concern and interest of many customers.

What is your opinion of the Las Cruces business climate?

The climate is positive and even more so for long-term growth. As business owners, we need to be active and involved in our city, county, state and national politics.

What obstacles do you face or have you overcome?

Life is full of challenges and from them we both learn and grow, or we just give up and blame someone else and say it isn't my fault. We all have the choice to earn our success. While there are no guarantees for success, failure is a sure thing if you don't

FINANCIAL CORNER

Financing decisions in the real world

Understanding external forces helps strategic development

By Tom Stephenson

Raising equity capital for your business never happens in a vacuum. External forces inevitably affect when, how and where you hunt for investors, just as they affect your decision about how much money you'll need to support your company for a few years until you start showing a profit.

External forces include the financing market - the universe of people and institutions that constitute funding sources for your company – as well as the larger business market in which you operate. Understanding these forces will help you develop a strategy for fundraising.

Beware the bubble

Pure financial investors are in the game to make the most money they can from their investment in your company. But even they can make mistakes and act impulsively.

Investors have no more insight than you do into how a market or an individual company will evolve. They, too, can misread the economic signs and underestimate or overestimate the market appeal of a particular product or service. Their fallibility is one reason why certain market segments get "hot" and others get "cold."

The most obvious recent example of this was the Internet bubble that grew and burst at the beginning of this decade. Investors believed Internet companies would revolutionize commerce, and some certainly did. But, dazzled by the success of highprofile ventures such as eBay and Amazon, many investors poured huge amounts of money into Internetbased companies based on overstated valuations and unrealistic expectations.

Bubbles based on such speculation usually burst, and that's bad for everyone in the long run. But a savvy entrepreneur can take advantage of modest bubbles to raise money for his or her business at favorable rates.

will always have an impact on financing. If you predict the economy is stuck in a period of slower growth that will last awhile, you should put money in the bank to survive these lean times.

If you're small and growing quickly, the economy's fits and starts might not shake you up too much. But if your company is mature and more vulnerable to economic turmoil, you're better off raising more money early in the downturn than doing it later, when terms might be less attractive and costs higher.

No one, of course, can accurately predict what the economy will do in the near or distant future, but paying attention to what's happening in the world of business is wise for anyone planning to raise capital.

Most businesses that choose the path of equity financing undergo up to three rounds of fundraising to reach profitability. Where you end up in that range should be a result of careful strategic planning rather than chance.

Finance New Mexico is an initiative of the New Mexico Small Business Investment Corporation (NMSBIC) and tits partners to assist individuals and businesses in obtaining skills and fund-ing-resources for their business or idea. To learn more about resources available to New Mexico businesses or to use the capital search-tool, go to www.Finance-NewMexico.org.

A savvy

Some like it hot

If you're fortunate enough to find yourself in a market that financiers consider hot, you should capitalize on it. In a hot market, many investors chase deals, and valuations are exceptionally attractive. That makes it a good time to raise money, particularly if your industry regularly cycles through busts and booms.

A current example is the market for oil and gas. Because the market is booming and oil-exploration companies know it won't always be that way, they raise money and drill while they can - while investors are most willing to back them.

If you're in a hot market, now is the best time to raise more money. If you're in a cold market, it's best to figure out how to manage on as little capital as possible.

Apart from hot or cold markets, the overall business climate

Local nonprofit receives grant

The New Mexico State Fair marks the beginning of the first statewide gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and questioning (GLBTQ) community needs assessment. New Mexico GLBTQ Centers, Inc., a Las Cruces based nonprofit creating GLBTQ Community Centers statewide has received a $9,800 grant from The Gamma Mu Foundation of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to partially fund the comprehensive statewide GLBTQ Community Needs Assessment. The New Mexico GLBTQ Community Needs Assessment will look at the needs of New Mexico's diverse GLBTQ community in areas of health care, mental health care, senior programs, youth programs and other issues. The survey, which will be used to develop Center programs, will include both urban and rural areas of New Mexico.

"According to the Movement Advancement Project, the GLBTQ population of New Mexico is 68,411 people," said David Stocum, interim executive director of NM GLBTQ

Centers. "We know many of these residents feel isolated and afraid. This assessment is a step in ending that isolation and fear, a step in fully including ourselves in the community of New Mexico."

The Arrowhead Center at New Mexico State University completed a market analysis during the summer as part of the New Mexico GLBTQ Community Needs Assessment. The market analysis found that "The development of the GLBTQ Centers will be a positive improvement on the well-being of the GLBTQ population. Building on improving the lives of this population is necessary for economic and social development.

With assistance, many individuals in the rural areas will achieve a higher standard of living, and over time the centers have the potential to effect positive change throughout the entire state of New Mexico."

NM GLBTQ Centers will be at the New Mexico State Fair with other GLBTQ community groups and will be recruiting survey participants and volunteers to assist with the community needs assessment. Anyone interested in assisting may also contact the centers at info@newmexicoglbtqcenters.org.

First Student provides new buses for LC schools

Las Cruces Public Schools will be adding 92 brandnew yellow school buses to their fleet as First Student, Inc., North America's leader in student transportation and a subsidiary of FirstGroup America, assumes student transportation services in Las Cruces this year. Nearly 2,000 brand-new buses sent to districts across the nation are part of the first wave of school bus deliveries First Student will take by the end of 2008 under its recently announced agreement with Navistar's IC Bus, LLC.

The average age of First Student's active fleet is just six years old, which compares favorably to the industry's national average of nine years.

Through an agreement with IC Bus that extends to 2010 with options through 2012, First Student will spend up to $1.2 billion on new buses. All 48 buses are conventional front-engine mounted CE Series school buses.

The buses are built to the school district's specifications and are equipped with front safety crossing gates, an electronic child-check reminder system, and steering wheel mounted door and warning light controls to meet First Student's mandatory safety requirements. Global positioning systems are also being installed over the next two years on all First Student buses.

two years on all First Student buses.

The EPA-certified MaxxForce<sup>TM</sup> diesel engines that power the new IC Bus CE Series school buses are 7 to 13 percent more fuel efficient than 2006 International® engines and have even lower emissions than required under 2007 EPA emissions standards. CE Series school buses are among the cleanest buses on the road today and are renowned for their durability, reliability, and serviceability, while providing the latest innovation for passenger and driver protection and comfort.

First Student operates 60,000 yellow school buses in North America, transporting 4 million students to and from school every day. In the U.S., 25 million children ride in school buses daily. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, school buses are the safest way for children to get to and from school – as much as 13 times safer than other forms of transportation, including the family car. School bus transportation also plays an important part in ensuring all children have access to education, since for many, it is their only means of getting to school.

Bulletin adds two to sales staff

KLIMA

JOHNSON-BURICK

The Las Cruces Bulletin has recently added two consultants to its advertising team.

Stephanie Johnson-Burick and Susan Klima will work with managers Claire Frohs and Jaylene Watkins. Johnson-Burick will oversee the territory north of University Avenue and east of Don Roser Drive, and Klima will cover the area north of University to Idaho Avenue and west of Triviz Drive and the town of Masilla

Stephanie Johnson-Burick is a sixth-generation native of Mesilla. Her great, great, great grandfather was Col. Albert Jennings Fountain, a pioneer in the Mesilla Valley and a very instrumental figure in the town of Mesilla, as well as in the founding of New Mexico State University.

Prior to Johnson-Burick's employment with the Bulletin, she was the executive director of the Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico and the Healthcare Foundation of Southern New Mexico. She was also a human resources specialist at New Mexico State University, where she served in admissions and was a human resources administrator/training coordinator with Doña Ana County. Johnson-Burick earned bachelor's degrees in criminal justice and psychology from New Mexico State University, and has a master's degree in education, along with her teaching license and is very active in several community and civic organizations. She and her husband, Ron Burick, reside in Mesilla in the home that belonged to her grandparents.

Klima, also a native of the area, graduated from Mayfield High School. She and her husband Michael raised five children in Las Cruces and have six grandchildren. In her spare time, Klima enjoys singing and writing music, painting and making jewelry.

Send us your business briefs!

The Las Cruces Bulletin encourages organizations, businesses and individuals to submit business and personal briefs for publication in the Business section. Please send information via email to business@lascruce sbulletin.com. Email is preferred. You may also drop them off or send them to the Bulletin at 840 N. Telshor Blvd., Suite E, Las Cruces, NM 88011.

People stories with photos have a better chance of being published. A mug shot is fine. Photos may be emailed, brought in or mailed in as either high quality prints (non-digital printout is preferred) or in electronic forms, i.e., CD, memory stick, floppy or zip disks. PDFs, TIFs and JPGs are the best formats to ensure good reproduction quality. Resolution must be at least 300 dpi.

Business and personal briefs must be received by noon Friday for consideration in the next week's Bulletin. Stories may be edited for length or content.

Diez y Seis de Septiembre a celebration of independence

Festivities offer music, food and entertainment

By Marvin Tessneer

At noon Saturday, Sept. 13, Mexican Consul General Roberto Rodriguez Hernandez will open Mesilla's Diez y Seis de Septiembre celebration with "El Grito," the cry that priest Miguel Hidalgo y Costillo shouted in 1810, calling for Mexico's break from Spain.

Mesilla's ceremony will anticipate Mexico President Felipe Calderon's official "El Grito," which he will give on Sept. 15 in Mexico City's historical Zocalo, which is lined with the Spanish Virrey buildings including the National Cathedral. The official Independence Day is celebrated on Sept. 16, but the festival will take place from noon to midnight Saturday, Sept. 13, and from noon to 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14.

"It is important for the Town of Mesilla to celebrate an event such as the Mexican Independence Day because the Mexican culture and history is a big part of Mesilla's own history," said Kristie Medina, Mesilla special events coordinator. "Many people from this community have Mexican ancestors, so cultural events such as this one are celebrated. The fiesta also provides for an ideal family atmosphere with a parade, dancing, music, food and games.

The celebration will kick off with a parade at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 13, along Avenida de Mesilla, following the theme "Bridging Communities: Sister Cities Mesilla and Ascension." The parade route begins at Four Points Gin, located at the corner of Avenida de Mesilla and Union Avenue, and ends at the Mesilla Town Hall parking lot. The parade will feature floats, equestrian units, marching bands, color guards, spirit squads and much more.

"El Grito" will be read as part of the festival's opening ceremonies on Saturday, along with a performance by Banda de Guerra y Esclolta, Cobach Plantel No. 7 de Ciudad Juarez, a military marching band.

About 30 vendor booths will surround the plaza and offer a variety of arts, crafts, games, drinks and food. There will be a greased pole climb sponsored by Andele Restaurant in Mesilla and piñatas for the kids.

The history of the event includes the discontent that led up to Hidalgo's El Grito, which had been growing in Mexico. The Spanish crown identified two types of Spaniards - Peninsulares, who were born in Spain, and Criollos, who were born in Mexico. The Peninsularies were granted privileges in government and business, and the Criollos contended that they were denied their

The Indios and Mestizos, people of mixed races, also believed that they were being treated as a separate class without privileges. Although of different classes, the Criollos, Indios and Mestizos were drawn together by the desire for independence and equal rights.

A group of "conspiraciones" took up the cause, Miguel, a Criollo known as "el padre de nuestra independencia," Ignacio Allende, Ignacio Aldama, Josefa Ortiz de Dominguez and her husband, Miguel Dominguez, a magistrate.

> They had not set a date for an uprising, but they believed that their plans had been discovered, and Miguel issued "El Grito" on Sept. 15 in Dolores, Guanajuato. The revolution started the next day, diez y seis de septiembre.

A memorial stands in Guanajuato in recognition of the Mexican spirit and the bravery of the Indian miner Pipila. When Hidalgo and his troops entered Guanajuato, he urged the Alhondiga de Granaditas Fort commander to surren-

The Indian Pipila made it possible for the attackers to break through by tying a rock to his back to protect him from the Spaniards' gunfire, crawling to the fort gate and setting it on fire, opening the way for the Mexican

But eventually, following a series of victories and bad decisions, Hidalgo and some of his top men were captured, including Allende, Aldama and a man named Jimenez. They were executed by firing squad, and the Spaniards exhibited the four heads in small cages on each corner of Alhondga de Granaditas.

Although Mexico had broken with Spain, the country did not attain full republic status until 1824 when its congress adopted a constitution. Earlier, Spain had refused to recognize Mexico's independence and named Agustin de Iturbide emperor of Mexico. But he did not receive support from most Mexicans, who kept the idea of independence alive. Later, a movement led by Antonio Lopez de Santa Ana, of Alamo fame, forced Iturbide to

FEATURED ARTIST -

Ramon Escalante: Self-taught artist with a unique vision

Wood and leather art present more possibilities

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Retirement hasn't been all fun and games for Ramon Escalante, who retired as director of the support services division with the City of Las Cruces after 29 years of service in 1991. Instead, Escalante has made a new career out of his creativity and hobby.

Escalante has always fiddled around with his art, first dabbling in fine-line etching in wood in 1984 and participating in his first show at Mesilla Valley Mall in 1989. He practices his art in mixed media, using acrylics, pastels and, at times, colored pencil to create his work. With no formal training, Escalante has created a technique that is all his own.

First, Escalante makes a sketch of whatever work he would like to do, then transfers it onto wood or leather and incises (etches) it with electric tools, creating delicate detailed lines that are so prevalent in his work. His most common canvases are wood (birch, oak, poplar and myrtle) and leather (pigskin and tanned cowhide). He says he prefers to use hardwoods because they are easier to carve into. The paints are then added and then several layers of polyurethane are applied to seal the work. The end result is a touchable, waterproof piece of in Casas Grandes, Mexico, and was a Mexican farmer, rancher and cowboy. His mother was born in Silver City and was a miner's daughter, raised in Casas Grandes. She gave her son a strong sense of Southwestern/Mexican esthetics. He likes to create artwork that reflects the diversity of the border and of the Mesilla Valley, which deeply influences his art.

"I have always been interested in Native American art and lifestyles," Escalante says. "My grandfather was a member of the Yaqui tribe, and I have a real interest in that."

Escalante will also do custom work on cabinets or antique wood artifacts like an old wooden ironing board or a large slab of cedar. He utilizes antique doors and shutters, tile molds, cabbage slicers, quilting frames, horse hames, latia and barnwood, which is reflective of his desire to reach in to his roots, using objects from the past and his heritage. He has a small gallery in his home that he uses to display his varied artwork.

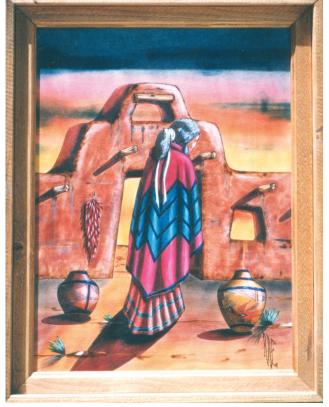

"He does a lot of research on different tribes and different types of pottery and designs that are unique to that tribe," says Escalante's wife of 30 years, Jan. "His works truly are designs from that particular tribe."

Every piece Escalante does is one-of-a-kind and is not reproduced. His work can be found at the Mesilla Mercado most Sundays. He and Jan often travel to arts and crafts shows around the country to show his work. They used to travel to 10 a year before gas got a little too expensive. Now, they make it to three a year and still keep busy developing more and more artwork.

Within the last three to four years, Escalante has started creating new artwork, building stone and metal sculptures.

"The paintings came first," Escalante says. "The metal pieces were just something different. We are doing our first show without anything but the sculptures this October in Tucson."

He says his art is very popular in other parts of the country. "My art is so different and unique – you can't find it anywhere – so no matter where we go, it

Pianist Willis Deloney to perform at NMSU

Jazz and classical selections fit for any audience

Deloney will perform a combination jazz and classical recital at the New Mexico State Music University Center Recital Hall at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 19. Classical works will include Chopin's "Polonaise-Fantasy' as well as "Andante Spianato," "Grande Polonaise" and "Sonata No. 2" by Dello Joio. Jazz selections will feature Delony's arrangement of "Afternoon in Paris" and a movement from a iazz dance suite by David Baker. Virtuoso tubist Jim Shearer will join Delony for a tuba/piano finale, including "Manhattan Hoedown.

'Dr. Delony's ability to move seamlessly from Mozart to Prokofieff to jazz and back again is a rare gift," Shearer said. "It is a great honor to perform with him. He is one of the teachers who inspired me to become more involved in jazz. For me, it is my playing career coming full circle.

Delony has won national and international acclaim as a jazz and classical pianist, conductor, chamber player, commercial composer and arranger. His concert explorations of the jazz and classical piano worlds are showcased in a recent recording of music by American composers entitled "Double Dance Classical and Jazz Connections II," which was released by Centaur Records in 2008. A previous album, also on the World A' Comin' – Classical and Jazz Connections."

In a "Fanfare" magazine review of "A New World A Comin'," Peter Burwasser writes, "[Delony] plays with gusto and finesse, and with an especially nimble rhythmic sensibility, a proper combination of attributes for jazz, or any other kind of music-making, for that matter.'

Delony has appeared as piano soloist or conductor with numerous orchestras nationally and abroad. His international solo appearances have included classical and jazz recitals in France, Germany, Switzerland, Mexico and the former Soviet Union.

Red Ribbon Bash returning for its tenth year

Camino de Vida Center for HIV Services holds annual fundraiser

By Bethany Conway

It's time again to gear up with goodies for a commendable cause at Camino de Vida's Red Ribbon Bash, taking place at 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 13, at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road.

The organization's largest fundraiser, the bash is now in its 10th year and the staff has high expectations for this "Evening of Hope."

"We have a goal of $50,000," said Donny Grooms, chairman of the event, who added that last year's event raised $43,000.

Along with a sit-down dinner, attendees will be able to participate in a live auction, peruse the event's many silent-auction items and enjoy music provided by La Cella

Once again, Shawn Reeves, clothing designer for the soap opera Guiding Light, has provided Camino de Vida with clothing, jewelry and accessories worn by the show's actors to be auctioned off at the event. Austin's Jewelry and Appraisals has also donated some must-have jewelry, and other donations include those from area businesses and several pieces of art.

"Lots and lots of art is coming in," Grooms said. "We have some peoples' passion and soul on canvas.

The organization will even auction off lunch with Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima.

Red Ribbon sponsors for the event include the Southern New Mexico Cancer Center and ARAMARK Campus Dining, and Best Buy has also given more than $5,000 in financial support throughout the year.

Along with auctions and entertainment, Camino de Vida will also present the second annual La Esperanza Award, which will be given to U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman for his work to raise funding for HIV and AIDS.

The award itself was created by Chihuahua-born artist Carlos Estrada-Vega, whose works have graced galleries across the United States.

"That award is going to be presented to Sen. Bingaman because of his efforts and the amount of support his office has been able to provide in the fight against HIV and AIDS," said Harry Day, chair of public relations for Camino de Vida's Board of Directors.

With more than 200 clients in 10 counties, Camino de Vida Center for HIV Services provides support for clients in all of southern New Mexico.

"The Center for Disease Control estimates that each year 40,000 people are going to be infected with HIV or AIDS in the United States alone," Day said. "Funding has not increased in the last 10 years to counteract this influx of infections.

Through the money raised at the Red Ribbon Bash, the agency is not only able to provide medical assistance for their clients, but also prevention outreach.

"We all have choices, and we are pulled infinitely in all different directions because there are a lot of worthy causes out there," Grooms said. "One day, unfortunately, everybody in going to be either affected or infected by this pandemic. This is our one opportunity a year to get the yord out that AIDS is not going away.

Tickets for the Red Ribbon Bash cost $75 per person and can be purchased at the door or reserved by calling 532-0202. For more information on Camino de Vida, visit www.caminodevida.org.

KLCB Volunteers Repair Triviz Murals

Beautiful volunteers Denali Wilson, left, and Ashley Sosa, both sophomores at Mayfield High School, repair a graffiti-damaged mural near the Triviz Drive walkway underpass. The girls initiated the project after Wilson's father noticed the damage as he bicycled past the mural on his way to work. Wilson and Sosa plan to design and paint two additional murals on the Telshor Boulevard side of the walkway underpass. KLBC, part of the Las Cruces Police Department's Codes Enforcement office, has several programs designed to fight graffiti. The KLBC graffiti hotline is 528-4723.

■ NEW MEXICO FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

A strange mix of agriculture and spiritualism in the Mesilla Valley is weaved together in a new exhibit at the New Mexico Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum. "Shalam Colony: Dream in the Desert," will be on display through May 2009. The exhibit was co-curated by the museum staff and T. Robin Riley.

In late October 1884, a group of two dozen men, women and children pitched their tents on a sandy piece of land at a prominent bend of the Rio Grande north of Las Cruces, about a mile west of the village of Doña Ana. It was here that they began to build the new "Children's Land" called Shalam.

A few months earlier, John Newbrough and fellow faithist Joseph Grill had traveled to the Southwest to purchase land for their grand experiment – a self-reliant utopian community dedicated to raising orphans. The first winter at Shalam was harsh, and the colonists' survival was only ensured by help from their new neighbors in Doña Ana. Those neighbors showed the newcomers local crops and foods, made adobe bricks and helped build many of the structures. Between 1884 and 1907 as many as 200 people from the village worked at what they called "La Colonia."

The buildings, houses, stables, wells and irrigation system at the Shalam Colony were unlike anything that existed at that time in New Mexico Territory. Eventually encompassing 1,490 acres with up to 35 buildings, Shalam Colony became known for its developed grounds as much as for its "peculiar" reputation.

The museum is located at 4100 Dripping Springs Road. Call 522-4100 for more information.

■ STUDIO OF MARIA CRISTINA

Cruces High School where she was a member of MESA (Math Engineering Science Achievement). She is currently enrolled at NMSU seeking a degree in Mechanical Engineering Technology.

At the age of 12 she was introduced to origami, which sparked an interest in different techniques of paper folding. These techniques led her to begin making handcrafted greeting cards that are quite unique. She is also skilled in the Mexican art of Papel Picado, and creates not only paper banners, but also beautiful one-of-kind portraits. This young woman also learned to apply her natural gift as an artist toward digital free-hand drawing. She completed lessons from Maria Cristina in the unusual technique of free hand drawing using Microsoft Word. Call Maria Cristina at 312-9530 for more information.

■ MESILLA VALLEY FINE ARTS GALLERY

The Mesilla Valley Fine Arts Gallery will feature two local artists during the month of September. Carol Bernstein, a self-taught photographer, lived in the Mesilla Valley for more than 35 years photographing primarily in black and white, exquisitely detailed and sometimes stark subjects. Carol has enhanced her creative eye and continues to utilize everything she sees. Phil Yost is not a student of art but has become completely captivated by the watercolor medium. Phil retired from teaching high school science after 30 years during which time he also coached wrestling and soccer.

Phil was accepted into the New Mexico Watercolor Society as a Signature Member in 2005. In addition, the 30 artists of the Gallery offer art in many mediums, including original paintings, encaustic's, infused glass art jewelry, handmade cards, stained glass, photography, creative gourds, affordable prints and miniature paintings.

The gallery is located at 2470-A Calle de Guadalupe, across from the Fountain Theatre. Hours are Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday noon to 5 p.m. Call 522-2933 or visit www.zianet.com/mvartgallery for more information.

■ BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

"Three Dreamers" will show at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Main St., and is a two-man, one-woman group art show featuring the work of George Mendoza, Virginia Maria Romero and Paul Hoylen Jr. The work will remain on display through Oct. 25. Mendoza, Romero and Hoylen are internationally recognized, self-taught artists. They are known for their outsider, visionary artwork. Collectively, their art is spiritually motivated, mystical, symbolic and has vibrantly colored imagery. Each draws inspiration from nature. Mendoza is a legally blind artist whose painting defies categorization. His paintings are bold and range from scenes of tranquility to chaos. Eyes are a recurring motif in Mendoza's work. Romero's work is distinctive in its original contemporary approach to age-old formats. Her works reflect on the mystical essence of life utilizing mythology and archetypal dream-like imagery. Hoylen is a storyteller through a visual media. His work is based in a folk-art style that is whimsical and somewhat primitive in nature.

The exhibit is free. Gallaries are open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit http://museums.las-cruces.org for more information.

■ TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature "Masks and Mirrors," a themed juried show that deals with masks, mirrors, reflection, disguise, subterfuge and masquerade.

Juror Becky Hendrick, an artist who teaches "Whole Art," an integrated multidisciplinary program at the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP), chose 32 pieces by 28 artists: Jan Addy, Mary Barce, Nancy Begin Frost, Margaret Berrier, Pat Bonneau-White, JoAnna Bradley, Beegee Brandhorst, Martha Randall Brown, Carolyn Bunch, June M. Decker, Beverley Denney, Juliet De Larichelier, Toby de Voss, Alice Dressler, Trina Dunbar, Penny Duncklee, Aline Fister, Mike Groves, Glen Holgersen, Rosario Jeramias, Kelly Lynn, Caryl A. Kotulak, Susan McNeill, John Northcutt, Arlene Tugel, Kurt Van Wagner, Laurel Weathersbee and Lucia Wilcox.

The media presented is as varied as the artists, with watercolor, multimedia, jewelry in silver and semi-precious stones, Gourd art, collage, charcoal drawing, acrylic, pastel, photographs, oil painting, fabric sculpture, sculpture, assemblage and digital art all being represented. Refreshingly, the art will be affordable, with all works in the $50 to $1,200 dollar range. Most pieces are in the low to middle range.

The show will run until Saturday, Sept. 27. The Tombaugh Gallery is located in the Unitarian Universalist Church of Las Cruces, 2000 S. Solano Drive. The gallery's regular hours are from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

■ BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

Whoever said, "good things come in small packages" must have known about the International Shoebox Sculpture Exhibitions. Organized by University of Hawaii at Mänoa, this traveling exhibit was the brainchild of professors Mamoru Sato and Fred Roster. The pair wanted to see the work of sculptors from around the world. Because of the often large and awkward nature of sculpture, national and multi-national exhibitions are cumbersome and costly, so they restricted entries to a size no larger than a shoebox. Dozens of small sculptures from around the world show how artists have handled the challenges of space and scale dictated by the size of an ordinary shoebox. It has attracted a large number of well-known artists from Hawaii, the United States mainland, Australia, Belgium, Canada, Finland, Germany, Great Britain, Japan, Mexico, Norway, the Netherlands, South Korea, Taiwan and Vietnam. Each sculpture speaks for itself. Some works are conceptual, some reflect the artist's cultural heritage, and others are universal in expression. To create their sculptures, artists have used almost every imaginable medium. Cast metal, carved wood, blown glass, woven fiber, paper maché, molded clay, found objects, glass beads, feathers and human hair have been components of Shoebox sculptures.

The small sculptures will remain on display through Saturday, Sept. 13, in the Richardson Gallery at the Branigan Cultural Center, 501 N. Downtown Mall. There is no charge, and the galleries are open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 pm. Saturday. For more information, contact the Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit the Center's website at http://museums.las-cruces.org.

■ MAIN STREET GALLERY

Maritza Jáuregui will be the featured guest artist at the Main Street Gallery. While her themes are mostly abstract, she likes to explore realistic settings and portraits as well. Maritza looks for the sparkle in daily scenes and transforms them into art. They will also continue to exhibit the etchings and pastels of Winfrey Hearst, the impressionisms of Annetta Hoover, Judy Licht's brilliant dyes on silk, Daphne Wirthlin's whimsical fantasy scenes, Lois Wilson fused and dichroic glasswork, Lynn Unangst Spirit Minders, Margaret Berríer detailed rock-art jewelry, Joanna Bradley's flamboyant gourd artworks and the authenticated limited edition prints of Robert Highsmith's superb watercolors.

Main Street Gallery is located at 311 N. Downtown Mall and gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. Call 647-0508 for more information.

Lucas left home at age 15 to work in the oil field where he first began working with steel, eventually ending up in New Mexico where he discovered that he had and aptitude for the artistic sciences. He has had several local gallery showings of his steel sculptures and is now presenting his first photography show, of images all taken within two miles of the historic town of Mesilla. Assisted by his feline friends, Lucas, who has only been working in photography for two years, prints from his impressive collection of 15,000 images then handcrafts each frame. Included in this collection will be feline portraits as well as local architecture and old vehicles. Call Janet Skaggs at 635-2275 for more information.

■ LCPS FACULTY/STAFF CENTRAL OFFICE ART EXHIBIT

The annual LCPS Faculty/Staff Central Office Art Exhibit continues through Oct. 31 in the Administration Building's lobby gallery. 505 S. Main St., Loretto Towne Centre, Suite 249. ### ■ OLD TORTILLA FACTORY

The work of Tesa Madrid, a 12-year-old artist from Washington, will be on display in the Old Tortilla Factory in Mesilla, 1910 Calle de Parian. Madrid's artwork consists of free-hand Japanese animation-style drawings using a variety of drawing programs in the computer. Her work is popular among teenagers and young adults who frequently request customized Japanese animation portraits of themselves or their loved ones. Madrid's work ranges in size from 5-inch by-7-inch to 8-inch by 10-inch framed pieces. This will be Madrid's debut as an artist. Her artwork will be on display until Sept. 30. Call 521-4694 for more information.

■ ONO GRINDZ

Kurt Van Wagner's digitally exotic display of the Hawaiian Islands will be on exhibit at the restaurant Ono Grindz (Hawaiian restaurant), 300 N. Downtown Mall. Van Wagner's tropical-theme show features his new Aloha creations depicting luscious swaying palms, magnificent coastlines and all the delights that make Hawaii such a wondrous place. Van Wagner has traveled numerous times to the islands of Maui, Kauai and the Big Island of Hawaii to capture these vibrant and colorful scenes. After Van Wagner discovers and photographs the magical tropical scene, then the fun and creative work begin. He digitally hand paints and textures over his photographs using the computer and pen tablet. The results are works of art that are a blend of the realism of photography and the paintbrush of the painter. Van Wagner describes this new digital art as the best of two great art mediums. Ono Grindz owner Rachel Faulkner said she is excited to add another art venue to the Downtown area. For more information, call 541-7492. Ono Grindz is open during the lunch and dinner hours Monday through Friday and on Saturday for lunch.

■ RIO GRANDE THEATRE

Continuing and new board members of the Doña Ana Arts Council will display their artwork throughout the months of August and September. Board members Kathleen Squires, Molly Gamboa Barth, Martha Duran, Judd Wright, Caryl Kotulak and DAAC program coordinator Cati Waterman will display paintings, fiber art and original costume creations. The Rio Grande Theatre galleries, located in the lobby of the historic Rio Grande Theatre at 211 N. Downtown Mall, are open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays. Gallery volunteers are needed; contact the DAAC office at 523-6403 for more information.

■ NEW MEXICO FARM AND RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The Farm and Ranch Heritage Museum, 4100 Dripping Springs Road, in the new Traditions Gallery will host an exhibit featuring beautiful Spanish glassware that dates back to the 18th century. "Real Cristales:

Royal Crystals of La Granja, Spain," features about 70 pieces that were produced in a glass factory under the direction of the King of Spain. Most of the pieces were created around 1760 and were later sold in Mexico. The exhibit continues through Dec. 7. The glassware of La Granja was of such superb quality that an Englishman wrote in 1786, "The glass manufacture is here carried to a degree of perfection unknown in England." In comparison with glass made elsewhere in Spain during the same period, the crystals made at the Royal Factory of La Granja de San Ildefonso stand apart from the rest. La Granja crystals were produced using a variety of decorative schemes, including engraving and the use of multicolored glasses. For more information, call 522-4100.

Pickamania! offers variety of bluegrass, folk in Silver City

Former Caballo Lake festival makes its move

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Formerly an informal event held at Bill Bussman's 54-acre ranch, Pickamania! will celebrate its first year in Silver City as part of the city's fall events staged by the Mimbres Region Arts Council (MRAC) on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 13 and 14.

Similar to the blues festival held in Silver City each spring, the event will be free and open to the public and will fill the air at Gough Park, 12th and Pope streets, north of Downtown.

Ten bluegrass and folk groups will perform starting at noon on Saturday, ending at 6 p.m. on Sunday. Headliners include Chatham County Line, Robin and Linda Williams, Boulder Acoustic Society and Red Molly. Silver City groups Bayou Seco, Gypsy Feet Band and the Silver City String Beans will also perform.

"It is a highly requested genre of music in this area – people want more bluegrass and folk," says Diane Miller, volunteer coordinator for MRAC. "We already have people wanting to play in next year's event."

in next year's event."

Miller said MRAC
Executive Director Faye McCalmont and Bussman have been discussing the festival move for a while now, since it had outgrown its venue at Bussman's ranch.

Between 1985 and 1991, it was an annual, one-day event. Bussman, a musician and mandolin player, invited friends to his place to play and listen to bluegrass and other kinds of music. Over the years, the event grew, and by 1991, 300 players and spectators took part. In 1992, 700 people showed up, and since then, there hasn't been an event at the ranch. However, the idea never went away and Bussman and McCalmont decided it was time to take the event to Silver City.

was time to take the event to Silver City.
Other events will take place in addition to the music, including a Band Scramble in which anyone with an instrument and who wishes to play may be selected to perform as part of a group. Each group will be given time to practice before performing and being judged.

A handmade mandolin valued at

A handmade mandolin valued at $2,400, and donated by Bussman, will be raffled off just before the final performance of the evening. Tickets are $5 and may be purchased at the MRAC office inside Wells Fargo Bank, at 12th and Pope streets in Silver City, online at www.mimbresart.org and at Pickamania!

Free admission is made possible by generous donations from event sponsors. There will be food vendors and beverages available. Festival attendees are encouraged to bring blankets and chairs to enjoy the performances on.

For more information, contact the MRAC at 575-538-2505 or visit www.mimbresarts.org.

Red Molly, an Americana band, will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14.

Local favorite Steve Smith and Hard Road will take the stage at 1:45 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 14, with their traditional old-time, bluegrass, gospel and folk blend.

Bayou Seco, the husband-wife team of Ken Keppeler and Jeanie McLerie, will play at 1 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 13, at Pickamania!

Si Señor offers traditional Mexican fare

Drink specials and happy hour make it a local hot spot

By JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Whether you are in the mood for a hearty meal, or appetizers and drinks with friends, Si Señor in Las Cruces is a great choice. Offering a unique atmosphere and great patio, Si Señor has something for every-

The history of the highly successful Si Señor chain began in Deming, N.M., when Martin and Irene Castillo opened the original location. Soon, the family opened more restaurants in New Mexico and Arizona, offering tasty New Mexican food in one of the toughest markets around. The owners of Si Señor attribute this success to courteous service, unique menu items and their use of Hatch chile in many of their recipes.

Corina Almanza, a manager in the Las Cruces location. says the restaurant offers a unique dining experience.

"Ît's the ambiance, food and service we provide in the restaurant that makes us unique in Las Cruces," Almanza says. "We expect our employees and servers to give the best possible service.

Happy Hour 2 to 6 p.m. Monday-Friday After work, patrons can enjoy a number of their special margaritas during happy hour from 2 to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, including the famous Señor Presidente Margarita, a refreshing classic margarita topped with their imported Presidente brandy. Patrons can enjoy happy hour throughout the restaurant and on the patio - and with loads of sunshine throughout the year this is something patrons can enjoy almost anytime.

They offer daily lunch specials at $6.50 that come with beans and rice, including Ground Beef Stuffed

Pancake Alley Diner

A combination of homemade, delicious food along with an atmosphere that takes to you the days of Betty Boop, Marilyn Monroe and Elvis is what you will find when you visit the Pancake Alley Diner. You will also enjoy seeing large, stuffed Mickey and Minnie Mouse figures, pictures, vintage artifacts and listen to old-time music as part of the ever-changing décor while you sip on an old-fashioned, hand-dipped ice cream shake. Ms. Wood, who has owned the diner and Royal Host Motel for 10 years used to enjoy visiting old diners when she lived in Colorado. From her visits, she enjoyed the step-back-in-time feeling from the diners. This nspired her in designing the diner when she remodeled four years ago. The servers wear various uniforms. It might be the bright red uniform, the "Blast from the Past" T-shirt, Betty Boop or maybe even Mickey and Minnie Mouse. "We make excellent Mexican food, which is muy bueno, and salsa that will knock your socks off," Wood said. "Breakfast is served all day with some great choices, and our homemade specials will become your favorites. "The diner also has homemade pies and other desserts. One of the philosophies of the Pancake Alley Diner, Wood says, is there's always room for dessert. Whether it's a handmade shake, James Brown sundae, chocolate surprise pie or ice cream sundae, you will want to taste a delicious dessert or take one home for later. So come on in to enjoy delicious homemade food, sing, reminisce or just have fun! We serve "food so good your tongue will slap your forehead! "Pancake Alley Diner is located at 2146 W. # Solution, tips and computer program at www.sudoku.com

Complete the grids below so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains every digit from 1 to 9 inclusively. It is a game of logic, not math, and there is only one solution per puzzle. Have fun and exercise the grey matter.

Finding potential in 'What I Did Last Summer'

Dalton

Gorden is an

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Set in 1945, "What I Did Last Summer" follows the growing pains of one 14year-old boy, Charlie, played by Dalton Gorden, and his family during wartime.

Charlie is out of school for the summer, and after flunking Latin, is stuck in tutoring, but growing more bored by the day. He decides to get a job with "the pig woman," Anna, played by Nikka Ziemer. Through her teachings and her trying to get him to "realize his potential," Anna creates a monster in freethinking Charlie, who begins disobeying his mother, Grace, played by Kathi-Jane.

Through a series of arguments with his mother, Charlie winds up at odds with her decision to send him off to boarding school.

Meanwhile, his friends, Bonny, played by Tina Hartell, and Ted, played by Brooks Gorden, can't seem to understand his connection with this "pig woman," and chaos ensues.

The play, written by A.R. Gurney and directed by No Strings Theatre Company's Artistic Director Ceil Herman, is an adventurous one. It is complicated and has audience members guessing what will come next convincing as the angst-ridden teenager trying to figure out what's what, absent a father figure (his father is fighting in the war).

My personal favorite, Bonny, played by Tina Hartell, is adorable and lovable and will certainly be a star on the Las Cruces theater scene. Opposite her in a lot of scenes was Brooks Gorden, who played Ted, and despite a few errors, played the role of the "frenemy" very well.

Kathi-Jane and Nikka Ziemer gave the best performances as Grace and Anna, respectively, and you could tell the two had done this before. Ziemer is powerful and concise in her delivery, while Kathi-Jane is able to incite sympathy easily from audience members.

"What I Did Last Summer" runs through Sunday, Sept. 14, with shows at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. on Sunday. Tickets are $10 regular admission and $9 for students and seniors over 65. Reservations may be made by calling 523-1223 or online at www.no-strings.org. Season tickets are also available.

Don't miss the "What I Did Last Summer" art exhibit by members of the Las Cruces Arts Association in the theatre gallery. A variety of different media, including watercolor, fabric art and photographs are on display. The gallery is open an hour before performances or by appointment. Call 523-1223 for more information. The exhibit will run through October.

'Maldeamores': Three tales of the hazards of love and loss

Puerto Rican movie offers sweet love stories with a kick

Maldeamores starts Friday,

Sept. 19, at the Fountain

Theatre in lovely Mesilla.

A good date movie, it runs for 90 minutes and is rated R. In Spanish,

Review by Jeff Berg For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Finding, not having and losing love are the hazards encountered in this neat little film, "Maldeamores," a rare entry from Puerto Rico.

The opening scene, which will only make sense for those who stay for the films credits, gives a humorous touch of things to come.

A young couple, apparently on a road trip, begins to quarrel about chewing gum, and, as do so many similar arguments by "loving" couples, it escalates into a firefight about all of their pet peeves about one another. From there we are introduced to three, and later a fourth story of love by generation.

Flora, a no-nonsense woman who is getting up there in years, lives with her second ex-husband, Cirilo. Cirilo is a pain and has plenty of aches and pains to go with that, and is nearly driving Flora around the bend. She explains that "these things take time" when asked why her ex still lives with her after 10 or so years of divorce. When her daughter comes home and begs Flora to take in Flora's errant first ex-husband (the daughter's father), who is also in declining health, things start to change in this clever elder citizen "ménage a senior." Cirilo, fueled by jealousy, focuses all his energy on a new "pain," Pellin, when he notices that even after many years, there are still sparks a-flyin' between Pellin and Flora.

The second story (these stories never intertwine – they just run parallel to one another), has Miguel, a man who is too old to still be living with his doting and controlling mother, boarding a bus that he thinks will change his life. Marta, the bus driver, doesn't know Miguel, but Miguel has been watching her for quite some time. He proposes. Just like that. And from there, things swing out of control. Determined that Marta will marry him, and deluding himself to think that she does love him, he pulls a gun and creates an odd hostage situation with the other passengers becoming a great cast of characters who decide a wedding might be fun after all.

Then, we have Ismael and Lourdes. Lourdes' mother has just died, and they are on the road to attend her funeral. She is beside herself with grief, even as Ismael tries to reassure her that Abuelita had a long and productive life, and that she will be well taken care of in the "next life." The couple's son, Ismaelito, seems to have mixed feelings about the passing of his grandmother, but tries to be supportive to both Mom and Pop. Ismael stops at his brother's house for a pit stop, and his drunken lout of a brother, Macho, spills the beans on Ismael while talking with Lourdes who is waiting in the

All three stories carry well to car. It seems that Ismael and has been

tors, Carlitos Ruiz Ruiz and his wife, Mariem Perez Riera. And even though each story is about an overused subject, Ruiz and Riera make it feel and look refreshing, and it is also a definite plus that they have made this low-budget (it shows sometimes) film in their homeland of Puerto Rico. Most of the actors are relatively new to the trade, except for native Puerto Rican Luis Guzman, who has played in numerous films and television episodes, and does a nice job here as Ismael.

Grade

At the end of the film, a fourth love story is set up at Lourdes mother's funeral, as young Ismaelito gets his first taste (literally) of the emotion that guides so much in our lives. A sweet post script to the troubled love of the adults. Highly recommended, especially if you can overlook the slightness of the sets and locations and concentrate on the gentle humor and touches of drama and reality that speckle this neat little picture.

Fountain Theatre presents one-time screening of breathtaking chronicle

'The Rape of Europa' follows art during World War II

Screening only at 11 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 14, at the Fountain Theatre in Mesilla, "The Rape of Europa" tells the epic story of the systematic theft, deliberate destruction and miraculous survival of Europe's art treasures during the Third Reich and World War II.

In a journey through seven countries, the film takes the audience into the whirlwind of fanaticism, greed and warfare that threatened to wipe out the artistic heritage of Europe. For 12 long years, the Nazis looted and destroyed art on a scale unprecedented in history. But young art professionals as well as ordinary heroes, from truck drivers to department store clerks, fought back with an extraordinary effort to safeguard, rescue and return the millions of lost, hidden and stolen treasures, including works by Rodin, who is currently featured at the Las Cruces Museum of Art.

"The Rape of Europa" begins and ends with the story of artist Gustav Klimt's famed "Gold Portrait," stolen from Viennese Jews in 1938 and now the most expensive painting ever sold.

Today, more than 60 years later, the legacy of this tragic history continues to play out as families of looted collectors recover major works of art, conservators repair battle damage, and nations fight over the fate of ill-gotten spoils of war.

Joan Allen narrates this breathtaking chronicle about the battle over the very survival of centuries of western

"A Day in Heaven," directed by David Valdez and Philip H.R. Gunn of Rio Rancho – A lighthearted comedic adventure about Rudy Dominguez, a humble man from rural New Mexico. After the death of his beloved wife, he builds a flying machine to see her in heaven (14 minutes).

"Sounds of the Underground," directed by Bryant Botero of Albuquerque – A documentary about the lives and experiences of four groups of subway performers, revealing how these artists are perceived by society (27 minutes).

"A Return Home," directed by Ramona Emerson of Albuquerque – After 37 years in the city, Navajo artist B. Emerson-Kitsman learns how difficult life can be on the reservation – but, through her art, she learns to bridge the gap (32 minutes).

"Underway," directed by Paul Marcus of

"Underway," directed by Paul Marcus of Santa Fe – At a stopover between worlds, a woman discovers that her past and future are simultaneously in progress (17 minutes).

All filmmakers are the Mesilla Valley Film Society's invited guests, and those in attendance will partake in a question-and-answer session regarding their work.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time is at 1:30 p.m. The admission for this CineMatinee is free. The Fountain Theatre is located at 2469 Calle de Guadalupe, one block south of the plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 or 522-0286.

'Bangkok Dangerous' is a real thrill ride

REVIEW BY JENNA FROSCH The Las Cruces Bulletin

Rarely do I see a movie that makes my heart ache for a cold-blooded hired assassin, but I found myself saddened and a bit sympathetic toward Nicolas Cage in "Bangkok Dangerous," a movie about a ruthless killer.

A thinning on top Cage plays Joe, an independent contractor for killing, who travels to Bangkok, Thailand, on a job. In each case, he takes in a "helper," hiring them to run his errands, drop-offs and pick-ups for his assignments and then kills them when he is done with them. In this case, he hires Kong, a pickpocket, played by Shahkrit Yamnarm. He runs packages to and from a club and a dancer named Aom is the contact.

Joe's mission is to kill four people in Bangkok, and along the way, he begins to think fondly of Kong, and instead takes him under his wing as his student. Three of the men he kills Kong says are "bad men" and Joe says they're "bad for somebody." The fourth, however, is a politician who Kong looks up to, which triggers something in Joe – a conscience, perhaps – and when he attempts the assassination, he hesitates and is spotted by those protecting the man.

The movie is a remake of a Thai film, and Cage's production company bought the rights to reproduce it. It was No. 1 at the box office, taking in $7.8 million during a slow movie weekend – one of the lowest-grossing No. 1 films ever.

Cage offers the audience his typical character: brooding, introverted and the complete inability to smile – even when he meets a beautiful deaf-mute Thai girl and begins a romance.

On a more shallow note – Nic, you need to cut your hair. And who said you look good with it dyed black? No one, that's who.

Typical of his previous movies, it is narrated in his deep, matter-of-fact voice, similar to that of "Lord of War." He is somewhat bland in the movie, but keeps the label of bad to the bone in my book.

The cinematography was a bit out of place. At times, it was just plain awful, but in some places, there were pretty good stunts and the awkward romance between Cage and the deaf-mute girl (her name is never revealed) was somewhat entertaining revealed) was somewhat entertaining.

The movie will keep you on the edge of your seat, if anything, and offers a plot that unravels quite excitingly. There is never a dull moment, and with a surprise ending, you just may have to go watch a happy movie afterward.

It all depends on when you met Mr. Dunn

Somewhere, buried in the miasma of the early 1980s, a small group of us dignitaries decided we'd turn Joe Lee Dunn's name around to Joe Dunn Lee.

Was it over drinks? Probably.
Maybe it was on the University of New Mexico's football field where Dunn coordinated the Lobos' defense then. Anyhow, it was the kind of joke that vacant minds often amuse themselves with.

Mr. Dunn still goes by two names, depending on when you first met him. His defensive responsibilities these days rest with New Mexico State, and his focus is currently on trying to find a way stop Nebraska's offense. Or slow its progress.

The Aggies open with the heavily favored Cornhuskers at 5 p.m. our time, Saturday in Lincoln, Neb. With, we should add, no games under their belts while Nebraska has already played twice with victorious results.

"They're good on offense, let me tell you," Dunn said unnecessarily. The Huskers have traditionally scored

"We'll be dealing with a size factor," Dunn said. "They're so much bigger than we are.

"And their quarterback (Joe Ganz) can throw. We need to figure some way to get to him."

In two games, Ganz has passed for 561 yards and four touchdowns.

Dunn's 3-3-5 defensive scheme has always been effective in confusing enemy QBs.

Asked to define NMSU's defensive personality this season, Dunn said, "Speed. We'll have to use speed to try and offset their (Nebraska's) size."

Dunn says he has whittled his defensive lineup down to 15 players. "I don't know if they're any good or not," he says. "I can't tell until we've played a game. You learn by playing games. Not by practice.

"I'd like to have a few more big linemen. They're hard to find. Most of the good ones usually go to the bigger programs – Southern Cal, Texas, teams like that. So we'll have to try and get by with littler, faster guys.

"Which might be OK. Since they legalized holding a few years ago, linemen on the other teams can grab hold of your linemen and slow your pass rush or run defense. They have a harder time trying to grab hold of smaller, speedier guys."

Dunn's defenses at UNM are still legend. They helped the Lobos improve their records from 4-7, 4-7-1 and 10-1 his first three years there.

Back when we started calling him Joe Dunn Lee.

Finally, Ags open football season

Nebraska is (gulp) 25-point favorite 66-

The Las Cruces Bulletin

Anybody.

"They'd play the New York Giants right now," said Hal Mumme, the Aggies' coach.

Nebraska, not the Giants, will be NMSU's opponent in Lincoln, Neb., Saturday. Kickoff is scheduled for 5 p.m. MDT. And, yes, Nebraska is favored by 25 points.

The Cornhuskers have two games already tucked under their belts and were victorious in both. Mumme's troops should have played once, but Hurricane Gustav scared Nicholls State away in a game that was scheduled for Sept. 4. Luckily, Alcorn State came to the rescue and will face the Ags here on Oct. 4, filling out the original 12-game 2008 schedule.

Mumme and four of his players took the stand at NMSU's weekly press conference Monday. Quarterback Chase Holbrook who holds 37 of NMSU's 27 total offense and passing records, was impressed watching Nebraska on film. "They're big, athletic guys," he said. "We might have some firstgame jitters, but they'll go away after we get going."

"A dream come true," said senior safety Derrick Richardson about playing after 32 straight practices. "We're frustrated with practicing," he said. "You can tell we need a game because there's a lot of nitpicking fights going on during workouts."

Wide receiver Wes Neiman agreed. "Too many practices," he said. "All work and no rewards yet."

Davon House, sophomore defensive back, voiced his frustration with all practice and no play. "We're tired of beating up on each other," he said. "We turn on the TV and watch LSU and the other teams playing and you wish it was you out there instead of them."

The Aggies are also anxious to grade Joe Lee Dunn's 3-3-5 defense against the bigger, deeper Huskers. Their main objective will be stopping Nebraska's passing attack, fueled by quarterback Joe Ganz who has thrown for 561 yards and four They'd play the New York touchdowns. His team is averaging 399 yards of total offense, Giants right 280 of it passing. Dunn's defense, small but quick, hopes its speed will counter now." Nebraska's size. "They're so much HAL MUMME, bigger than we are," Dunn said.

Offensively, NMSU football coach NMSU predicts improvement from last year. Quarterback Chase Holbrook, who is a bonafide NFL suspect, has speedy receiver Chris Williams back plus several others who clock 4.4 seconds or better in the 40-yard dash. For Jacob Ceniceros, there's nowhere he would rather be than on a football field on a Friday night, lined up deep in the I-formation, waiting to take the handoff.

What usually happens when the Mayfield running back takes the ball on a handoff is something any football fan would appreciate. It's several seconds of rapid acceleration, followed by some dodging and weaving and often ending with a sprint in the open field.

"Before I get the ball, I look over the defense to see where they're lined up," Ceniceros said. "As I get the ball, I look for my blockers and see where they're taking their guy. I read the blocks, then cut off of that. After that, it comes natural. Sometimes I feel a defender come up beside me. I also use my peripheral vision."

In the Trojans' season opener against El Paso Chapin, Ceniceros took the handoff 30 times and the result was 246 yards of Sun Bowl real estate. Mayfield returned to El Paso last week, and Ceniceros carved up the Montwood defense for 208 yards on 27 carries. After just two games, he is almost half way to 1,000 yards, has scored four touchdowns and is averaging almost eight yards per carry.

Senior outside hitter Lindsey Yon led the NMSU volleyball team against UTEP, Sept. 3, and in the Hotel Encanto Classic Sept. 4-7. She tallied double-digit kills in four of the five matches. Yon started the week with 12 kills against the Miners, before she opened the tournament with 17 kills and a season-high .467 hitting percentage against Florida Gulf Coast, Sept. 4. In a five-set thriller against Houston Sept. 5, Yon recorded 14 kills and 14 digs for her fourth double-double of the season. Her dig-performance was also a season high. Versus No. 4 Texas, Yon had nine kills and wrapped up the tournament with a season-high 19 kills against Utah.

The Golf Doc addresses your questions

Most folks who watch the Tour with any regularity probably think that putting is Vijay Singh's weak suit. Now, I just recently read somewhere that Vijay had ranked near the bottom of the PGA Tour putting stats, and then all of a sudden he wins. Then the write-up said that Vijay "simply willed himself into becoming a wizard with the wand." Is this possible?

Robert D. Las Cruces

What a great question. You're right, Vijay has always been a great talent, especially as a ball striker and with his legendary work ethic. The thing that has held him back from more splendid greatness has been his putting. Over the last few years he has gone to more different grips and shaft lengths and putter heads than even Mark Calcaveccia. Like Calc, he has hot putting streaks and then goes cold for long periods. When Vijay missed the cut at the PGA Championship at Oakland Hills he blamed poor putting on "ugly" greens. I hope he wasn't asking us to believe that the moss at Oakland Hills was in poor shape. I was there (see my column in the Aug. 15, Bulletin), up close and personal, and I can tell you the greens were perfect. Vijay probably meant ugly in the vein of unbelievable and sadistic slopes and undulations. Nevertheless, after turning his season around by winning the WGC-Bridgestone at Firestone CC, Vijay then won the Deutche Bank and the Barklay's in successive weeks in

Here's what Vijay had to say about his putting turnaround in a recent Golfweek article: "... it kind of gets to your head that you're not a good putter. So I made a point after last week (PGA) that I'm going to change that attitude, and I believed in myself that I'm the best putter. I came out there (Barclay's) with a different attitude, and I putted great this week." My conclusion about Vijay? Attitude is everything. I think that's true in putting, in golf, in business and in life. In my opinion, that is what makes Tiger Woods such a great clutch putter. Tiger putts like his very survival depends on it. He's not nonchalant, like he doesn't care. He grinds, and with a killer instinct. As for your head-scratcher, can a ball be "willed" into the cup, I don't know. I do know that laser-like focus can be willed, and steady nerves can be willed, and true aim can be willed; and a visual picture of the putt going in can be willed; and perfect tempo with a pure stroke can be willed. They said Jack Nicklaus could "will" a ball into the hole. Probably not. Probably he willed all those other things. The most telling part of Vijay's new-found success with the flatstick? "I convinced myself that I'm the best putter."

I saw a newspaper story that talked about a 12-year-old girl who qualified for the Womens U.S. Open over this past summer. I found that unbelievable. I watched the Olympics and some of those gymnasts seemed awfully young, but this is golf, and that girl isn't tiny. What's the story?

Margo F. Las Cruces

The girl was Alexis Thompson, and she was 12. But she was a mature 12. She didn't make the cut, but it does raise the question about how some girls seem to be able to compete with older girls at such an early age. You might remember that Morgan Pressell was also 12 when she qualified for the Open. But she was nine days short of 13 and the qualifying was only 18 holes. (Pressel is still the youngest winner of an LPGA major, winning the Nabisco at age 18 this year.) Thompson shot 72, 71 in a 36-hole qualifier. What you probably didn't read was that, a couple of years ago, Thompson missed qualifying for the Womens Open at age 10 (that's right 10!) by a single shot. Today she's 5-foot-6-inches tall and hits a 240 yard tee shot. Hillary Lunke didn't hit it that far when she won the Open a few years ago!

All of this begs the question, why don't 12 year-old boys get in the Open and go on Tour? To be sure there are plenty of 12-year-old males lurking around golf clubs all over the country who can hit it every bit as far as tour players. But the game is different at the highest echelons of mens tours. One of the senior writers at "Golf Digest' recently made the point that girls may be emotionally better equipped to handle the social pressure of competitive golf sooner than most boys of equal age. It is a developmental fact that girls mature faster than boys, and this may be the telling factor. The business of whether these kids should be "pushed" on to the world stage of golf in their pre-teen years is a whole other issue.

You have mentioned several times in previous articles that we should "workout" to become better golfers. You have said that tour players now workout routinely, and that we should be more fit if we expect to perform better and get the most

Aggie tennis receives national recognition

Pete has got a tale to tell you about a great start for some Aggie teams that don't always get the headlines.

Tennis coach Don Ball has been a regular around the Aggie campfire longer than any other coach on the staff. His men's team has received some lofty praise at the start of the season. The No. 1 doubles pair of senior Roman Stoisavljevic and junior Eduardo Salas along with junior Gustave Diep, its No. 1 singles player, have been selected in the 2008 preseason rankings by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association.

Stoisavljevic and Salas came in at No. 30 in the first poll of the season while Diep was No. 107 in the nation. Three other Aggies play in the prestigious All-American Championships, in Tulsa, Okla. Last season, Stoisavljevic and Salas became the first ranked doubles team for the Aggies since the end of the 2000 season. They spent two weeks at No. 52 after they beat the No. 2 team from Texas Tech, Feb. 24.

Diep becomes the first Aggie singles player to be ranked since Marc Legris in 2000.

While the men's tennis team is getting ready to serve and volley, the Aggies cross country teams are getting high marks too. Junior distance standout Ingrid Flores led the New Mexico State women's team across the finish line at the ninth annual Lobo Invitational in Albuquerque. Flores brought home the bronze medal in the 5k race with a time of 18:45.00. Ian Ruybalid led the men in his Aggie debut when he recorded a 16th-place finish with a time of 26:45.96 in the 8k race. There wasn't formal team scoring, but multiple Aggies set personal

Sophomore Amy Arenas was three spots behind Flores as she significantly improved her personal-best time by more than a minute. Sophomore Brandi Gutierrez was the third Aggie to cross the line and finished eighth, Junior Brittany Hurtado claimed 13th place, while senior Christina Herrera was 16th. On the men's side, sophomore Michael Hart came in second for the Crimson and White and 18th overall. Two NMSU freshmen rounded out the top 20. Victor Sanchez placed 19th and right on his heels was Anthony Ellis with a time of 27:04.35. The Aggies run again Friday, Sept. 12, at the Lori Fitzgerald Invitational in Santa Teresa

A little 'Husker history

Nebraska is working its way back to football prominence

The Aggies football season is finally going to start before the third-largest city in Nebraska, housed in Memorial Stadium near the University of Nebraska campus. I want to share a little of Nebraska's football history to give you some perspective on this game.

tive on this game. Nebraska had Big 7 Championship teams in the early 1950s that began to dissolve in 1955. Until Bob Devaney made the scene in 1962, the Huskers were near the bottom of the league standings every year. There only bright moment was in 1959 when they upset Oklahoma to end its national 47-game consecutive win streak. Devaney brought a new attitude and recruiting acumen to Lincoln and the glory years really started. He knew it was going to take money to try to replace Oklahoma at the top of the standings and he traveled statewide to secure the financial backing it would take to turn things around.

Two national titles and a Heisman Trophy winner later, he handed the reins to Dr. Tom Osborne who won a pair of national titles himself before retiring the job to another member of the Husker family Frank Solich. Osborne had been a longtime member of Devaney's staff, but played college ball in his hometown of Hastings, Neb. He had a season with the 49ers before deciding coaching was his thing. Solich had been a star for Devaney in the 1960s and did his best to hold it together but the top-10 seasons were not happening anymore for the Huskers.

The new athletic director Steve Pederson wanted to put his mark on Nebraska football in the worst way. He succeeded. Pederson felt the best way to do that was to get rid of Solich and bring in someone that had no ties to the beef state, Bill Callahan. Huskers are very loyal to their own and when the team's fortunes plummeted like never before, $2 million buyouts led to Pedersen and Callahan's departures.

Now, Bo Pelini is back to rebuild all sorts of Husker traditions that were trashed under Pederson and restore the swagger that Husker fans had gotten used to during their three decades of dominance.

Nebraska has won its first two games over Western Michigan and San Jose State but has had to work to do it.

There will be a Mesilla Valley reunion in Lincoln. Former Aggie coaches Barney Cotton, Jeff Jamrog and Marvin Sanders are on the Huskers payroll and former NMSU Ag Dean John Owens now works for the Huskers as well.

Keep in mind; Nebraska's rebuilding has been made easier with millions of fans and their dollars for use in the reconstruction. There may not be as much money available in the Aggie coffers, but there is no reason to not have that type of loyalty.

Aggies host tennis invitational

Arizona heads 5-team field

The New Mexico State men's tennis team kicks off what promises to be its best season since the Aggies' 2000 berth in the NCAA Tournament by hosting its annual Aggie Fall Invite at the NMSU Tennis Center, Sept. 12-14.

Abilene Christian, Arizona, Monterrey Tech, Northern Arizona and Western New Mexico will all be competing with the Aggies in their first tournament of the fall.

The tournament is comprised of two singles flights and one doubles flight, both of which will have back draws as the purpose of the fall season is to get the players more experience.

"It's our first event of the year and we'll find out who played competitive tennis over the summer,' Aggie coach Don Ball said. "This is our best team we've had on paper in years, and we're excited to see them get out there and play.

'We're going to try to get everybody a lot of matches to get them ready for the all-American and regional championships later this fall. We can work out our kinks and shake off any rust this weekend and get ready for those two tournaments that really matter.'

A lot of hype surrounds the men's team this 2008-09 season. They return five of their top-six singles players from last year's team that went 13-7 and finished in a tie for third in the WAC. NMSU also has one singles player and one doubles team ranked in the preseason Intercollegiate Tennis Association national rankings.

Junior Gustave Diep is No. 107 on the singles side and senior Roman Stoisayljevic and junior Eduardo Salas are No. 30 on the doubles side. Diep is the first Aggie singles player in the rankings since Marc Legris in 2000. Last fall he went 10-5 for the Aggies and he was 21-10 overall on the year.

Stoisavljevic and Salas spent two weeks last season at No. 52 in the polls. They finished the 2007-08 year with a 11-9 record together.

Despite there being less of an emphasis on the fall season (since it is not the regular season), the NMSU student-athletes have been very successful in tournament play. In the fall of 2007, senior Stefan McKinney posted a 15-5 singles record while sophomore Jim Brouleau went 14-5. In 2006 Stoisavljevic went 13-5 and was named the WAC's Player of the Month in September.

New Mexico State dominated the 2007 Aggie Fall Invitational. Brouleau won the A singles draw and he and Diep teamed up to win the doubles flight. Stefan McKinney was able to finish in third place in the top singles draw in what was his first meet as an Aggie.

Arizona is the best team of the five that are coming to Las Cruces. The Wildcats feature three singles players in the preseason national rankings and one doubles team, so they give the Aggies a good look at where they are really at.

This weekend will be a good warm-up for the Aggies, who two weeks later travel to Waco, Texas to compete in the Baylor Invite, Sept. 26-28. That is one of the top fall tournaments and last season there were 34 ranked players competing in the annual invitational.

As a junior last year, Ceniceros rushed for 1,089 yards and 12 touchdowns on a state championship team that struck through the air as well as on the ground. Mostly because of personnel, the 2008 Trojans have spent more time running the ball.

"We have other running backs, too," said head coach Michael Bradley. "Right now, we're still getting a feel of what we can and can't do."

Put running the ball with Ceniceros on the "can

Bradley is faced with the dilemma of getting the most of out of his standout running back, without overloading him physically. The runner carries 145 pounds on his 5-6 frame. The coach expressed some concern about the number of carries Ceniceros got in the opener.

"Even a big running back carrying the ball that many times is tough," Bradley said. "But the way he's running right now, he could probably go all season long because it's hard to get a real good hit Ceniceros admits to getting tired at times late in the game, but he says it doesn't last long.

"I just think about my teammates and they're going through the same thing," he said. "That helps me pick myself up."

Ceniceros makes up for his lack of size with a variety of obvious physical skills mixed with intangible qualities. Speed, strength, effort and intelligence can take a player a long way.

"He's like a ball of muscle," Bradley said. "He makes decisions on the run and he makes them quick. He's a north-south runner. He's a hard worker and he's smart. He's one of those extraordinary guys.

The kind of extraordinary guys that Mayfield seems to have every year.

The three-time defending state champions are off to a 2-0 start, but they're aware of what their past success means.

"We have to work even harder because every single team is gunning for us," Ceniceros said. "We have to climb that mountain every week and get better, cutting out the mistakes.'

The Trojans return to action Friday with a 7 p.m. game against Carlsbad at the Field of Dreams. In other action, the 2-0 Las Cruces Bulldawgs play La Cueva on Friday at Wilson Stadium in Albuquerque and Oñate took on Silver High Thursday night at the Field of Dreams.

Two in September, one in November

The New Mexico State softball program is hosting its final three Aggie Prospect Camps of the year Sept. 15-16 or Nov. 18.

The Aggie Prospect Camp presents an opportunity for advanced players, grades nine through 12, to showcase their abilities to the NMSU softball coaching staff.

The format is a one-day event where instructional workouts (such as speed, base running, proper throwing, hitting and pitching techniques) are conducted in the morning and a scrimmage is played in the afternoon.

Senior wide receiver A.J. Harris has already set the school record for pass receptions with 191. He needs 125 more to set the NCAA's all-time mark.

There's more depth in the offensive line and at running back. Junior Tonny Glynn and JC transfer Marquell Colston give the Aggies breakaway speed at running back.

Mumme confirmed that Saturday's game provides a serious challenge for his team. "The biggest challenge of going to Lincoln, besides playing the entire Husker Nation, is that they already have two games of reps on us," he said. "Usually you make your best improvement in your first three games. We need not to play like it is the opening game for us. They (Nebraska) have the advantage of ironing out the first-game kinks."

Asked if there was any advantage to practicing 32 times without playing a game, Mumme said, "I can't think of any.

"We're going to Lincoln to play a Big 12 school in front of 85,000 people who hate us — no, I can't think of any advantages. I'm curious to see who plays well for us."

Bringing a home 'back from the brink'

Artistic touches give this historic home undeniable character

By BETHANY CONWAY

Three years ago, when Dan and Judith Picker of Las Cruces Fine Properties set out to renovate 226 Willoughby Ave., they knew it was no small task. Coming upon the home when it was in dire straits, the couple, who have been renovating homes for more than 30 years, had a feeling about this classic adobe bungalow in Downtown Las Cruces.

"When I walked in the door, I saw that it had fabulous bones," Judith Picker said. Though the porch was nearly collapsing, and the home was rampant with cracks, the couple only saw the possibilities.

"Nothing scares me," Judith Picker said. "You have to see past a lot of things some people would freak out about."

With a goal of giving the home the "beauty that it deserves," the couple set out to create a gem in Downtown while preserving the historic integrity of this adobe from the 1920s.

We chose this home to renovate because it is in a historic district, and we wanted folks to see that there is an alternative to the new 'indigenous' pueblo construc-tion," Judith Picker said. "It is important that Las Cruces residents see the value of living in our Downtown neighborhoods because they are so much a part of the heart of Las Cruces. To lose these homes because of neglect or lack of investment is to lose our history.'

Employing the construction skills of Tony and Patti Gruessing of ALP Renovation Group and the interior design skills of Karen Leyendecker Padgett of A.S.I.D., the pieces were in place to create a stunning renovation.

Built in a craftsman style, common to the houses on Alameda Boulevard and those found near Pioneer Park, the Pickers were first attracted to the house because of its open space, hardwood floors and French doors. Of course, the first task was bringing the home up to speed technologically, which meant wiring every room for cable and telephones, installing a new heating and cooling system and replacing all of the windows.

"I think one of the hardest things we did was getting wires through these adobe walls," Judith Picker said. "Today, it is state of the art as far as technology."

After the main updates were done to this three-bedroom, two-bathroom home, the next step was adding its colors and artistic attributes.

"To do this little house bland would be a sin," Padgett said. "It had to have some character.'

With a mix of greens, blues and yellows, they created a bright and inviting environment, complete with custom artwork done by Judith Picker herself.

"When we renovate houses, we will always add something unique to them that nowhere else has," she said. From the details over the fireplace to

For those involved in this "labor of love," the home's greatest attributes today are its front porch, large courtyard and separate studio, all of them with their own special artistic touches.

While large front porches such as this are becoming a thing of the past, this beautifully renovated space shows they can present one of the best spaces of the home.

Where once there was once a failing overhead roof, there is now a front porch that presents a wonderful place to relax in the evening or morning with a cup of coffee or glass of wine.

With artwork on every wall, the backyard's courtyard is now an area to relax and enjoy an outdoor dinner or perhaps throw a small soirée with friends.

Where previously only a workshop stood that was damaged by flooding and neglect, there is now a 250-square-foot studio, perfect for the artist or musician.

Inside, Judith Picker and Padgett also managed to add a few modern elements to the full bathroom with a brand-new glassblock shower and cabinets that seem to hover over the floor.

The kitchen features both modern and older elements as well. Entered through a pair of original French doors, its attributes began with an old teakwood cup-board, which set the tone for the rest of the room's new cabinets and granite countertops.

Now that the project is finished, the Pickers, Padgett and the Gruessings are happy to have shown those in the neighborhood and in Las Cruces just what can be done with the historic homes of Las

"It's a nice example that adobe can be used in a number of styles," Padgett said. "It doesn't have to be adobe architecture, it can be used in craftsman, mission and the rest of the styles that were indigenous to many areas. It makes this house kind of unique in that it is adobe, but it is definitely not a pueblo-territorial style.

In the future, the Pickers, who live on Alameda Boulevard, hope to see more homes in the area preserved and improved through renovation.

That's what happens when you do this kind of thing - it kind of catches on,"

Deviating from the traditional look of the home, the full bathroom includes many modern features, including a glassblock shower, simple, elegant sinks and fixtures and cabinets that seem to hover off the ground.

The area of the home with the most artistic detail is the courtyard, which is a great place for relaxing in the evenings and enjoying a meal outdoors.

An ideal item for storage and transport

Laundry baskets can make the perfect tote

By Bethany Conway

If there is one thing everyone hates, it's doing laundry. Piles of dirty clothes constantly add up until the laundry basket is overflowing with whites, colors and ever-fading darks.

While there is no real solution to the laundry problem, one item involved in the process can afford other solutions when it comes to cleaning up things around

Since laundry baskets can hold so many things, it's no surprise that people can use them for more than just storing their dirty clothes. This carrying case of sorts, which comes in a variety of shapes, sizes and colors, lends itself to a multitude of purposes, from organizing a child's play room to transporting some materials that are commonly found in the Southwest.

From the traditional wicker basket to the modern plastic version, laundry baskets are perfect for odd jobs when they are not full of clothes or are perhaps too old to serve their purpose

1. Have a picnic: Whether it's in the park or in the wilderness of Aguirre Springs, picnic items can be toted to the desired destination in a laundry basket. Wicker baskets can be perfect for this purpose. After the food is distributed, flip the basket over and use it as a table.

The .86 acre Corner Lot provides ample room for adult and kid toys alike. Oversized Two Car Attached Garage including Attic Storage. Additional 28X24 Detached Two Car Garage which could be converted to a Casita. Gated access to the side yards with Two RV Storage Areas including Hook-Ups. A Rock Wall completely surrounds the property and divides the backyard into two areas, separating the Pool from the main yard. The Established Xeriscape in front and Lush Lawn in the back with Automatic Irrigation System makes this home an Oasis.

2. Create a homemade cooler: When there are too many drinks and not enough coolers in which to put them, line a plastic laundry basket with a trash bag and fill it with ice to make a cooler for impromptu parties.

3. Keep a hose under control: To keep it from making its way around the yard or getting chewed up by the dog, store a coiled garden hose in a laundry basket. This can also be a stash spot for sprinklers, nozzles and other attachments.

4. Protect plants: In order to keep the weather from beating down on delicate plants, place a laundry basket upside down over them during a rain or hailstorm.

5. Store kids toys: If toys are simply getting out of control in the play room, set out a large plastic laundry basket and tell kids they must put everything they play with into in when they are done.

Around-the-house item: Laundry Basket

6. Store magazines: For those people who receive a plethora of magazines on a daily basis, keep them in a plastic or wicker laundry basket under a side table or in a corner. This also makes transportation easy when it is time to take them to the curb or recycling center.

7. Supply guests with clean linens: When the family comes to visit, fill a laundry basket with extra towels, washcloths and blankets, and place it in the guest room. When they're getting ready to leave, they can use the same laundry basket for their dirty linens.

8. Transport hay: Here is an interesting one for those who own a couple of horses. When it comes feeding time, use a rectangular plastic laundry basket with secure handles to take hay flakes to the stalls and also out to the pasture. It makes them easier to handle and also cuts down on waste because it prevents flakes from falling on the ground on the way out to the pasture.

9. Keep groceries in tact: Place a plastic laundry basket in the back of the car to hold shopping bags. This will keep the bags and their contents from shifting and possibly making a mess from spillage while driving home.

10. Pick fruits and veggies: When picking apples, pears, pomegranates and other fruits from their trees, gather them in a laundry basket for easy transport to the house.

11. Pull weeds: Laundry baskets can also help those who have a multitude of weeds that need to be pulled during the monsoon season. Place weeds into a laundry basket and empty it when it's

12. Keep babies safe in the tub: For those with twins, trying to manage two babies in a tub with only two hands can be tricky. To help keep them secure, plastic laundry baskets make great bath seats for older babies and young toddlers. They are the right size to contain their little bodies and keep them upright so they don't slide around in the tub. Use them with only a small amount of water in the tub with babies who are old enough to sit up.

Along with helping to transport clothes from the laundry room to the bedroom, laundry baskets can be used for picnics, gardening and organizing a kid's play room.

Desert patios give enjoyment year round

Sometimes the favorite room is the one found outdoors

Maybe the most charming element of Southwest design is the blending of courtyards and patios with the various styles of today's desert homes. It has become a favorite setting - a place where patios and courtyards merge house and

There's something about sitting outside that's very different from kicking back on the living room couch. The sound of birdsong, the beautiful butterflies fluttering by and the gentle touch of the breeze are all reasons that strengthen the desire to spend more time outside.

The concept is missed, however, because people tend to think of their outdoor environment as something they see rather than something they experience. By viewing the outdoor room as an extension of the home, you can create continuity and movement of energy between interior and exterior

Patios have typically been located on the back of the house and are often just a slab of concrete. With some planning, even a modest amount of effort can transform a simple patio into an inviting outdoor living area.

Desert patios should have some sort of overhang or covering as a protective shield from the sun. Look at adding a covered area, awnings or trees to provide the proper shade.

Welcoming entry patios and courtyards, perhaps reminiscent of the old front porch, are also popular.

From cascading water to shooting streams, fountains are a focal point of any outdoor space. While flowing water is tranguil, the sound also masks unwanted noise such as nearby road traffic. Fountain designs are virtually endless, but should be planned in conjunction with the home's architecture and outdoor landscaping. With proper exterior lighting, fountains can be enjoyed any time, day or night.

Gardeners love the desert's year-round growing seasons. Containers and flower beds blaze with vivid desert blossoms and accent plants. With some research and planning, butterflies and hummingbirds flock to desert flora adding yet another dimension to garden life.

If they are done right, outdoor spaces can be the most enjoyable area of a home.

By blending the unique textures, forms and colors of the area's native cactus, gardens reflect the casual spirit of the desert. Even an ordinary backyard becomes a living work of art.

Gardens and outdoor spaces evolve over time, and the work and patience are well worth the wait. When desert

Homebuilding as a hobby

Southern Comfort Builders provides pure satisfaction

By BETHANY CONWAY

Unlike most builders who depend on the profession for their bread and butter, for Tony and Teresa Calderon, building is more of a pastime that allows them to express themselves in new and creative ways.
"We do it more for a hobby," Tony Calderon said.

Building rock walls throughout the city for companies like D.R. Horton, Veloz Homes, Jones Construction and Planet Development for many years, Tony Calderon has always been a part of the construction industry.

We do about 80 percent of the rock walls here in Cruces," Tony Calderon said.

While they would later build custom homes, including one for the Las Cruces Home Builders Association Spring Showcase of Homes, they started out building their own.

"After building a couple of houses for ourselves and seeing how things worked, we decided to take the challenge and build (for others)," Teresa Calderon said.

When Tony Calderon received his contractor's license

ning under the name Southern Comfort Builders. "It's a southern part of the United States, and we are into comfort," Teresa Calderon said. "We try to focus on entertainment, relaxation and tranquility for customers. So a lot of our houses will have a separate porch, an extra fireplace, a Jacuzzi tub, a nice big shower.

When their homes began selling before they were even finished, they knew they could satisfy their customers.

We are not big builders, but at the same time we are custom builders, and we do a great job," Teresa Calderon said. "It's not quantity, it's quality."

Building stylish custom homes in every price range, the couple prides themselves on the fact that every home is different and is custom built to the customer's satisfaction.

"Since we started building our first house, we have stuck with the same subcontractors," Teresa Calderon

While Tony Calderon does all of the construction aspects of the job, Teresa Calderon handles the books, helps design the floor plans and does all of the interior

"We try to use earth-toned colors so it is more relax-

Though she has bachelor's degrees in accounting and special education from New Mexico State University and is currently going to NMSU for her master's in speech and language pathology, Teresa Calderon said if she could do it all over again, she might have taken a

"If I could go back and change what I do, I would probably be a designer," she said.

Born and raised in Las Cruces, the couple met at Las Cruces High School and, according to Teresa Calderon, their company's quality product is a result of their strong work ethic and care for the customer.

'Tony's parents were migrant workers, so he has always worked hard," she said. "He has always been in construction."

After building 12 homes with an average of three to five a year, the couple said that most of their clients have become their friends. In fact, they commonly have their customers over for sporting events and dinner.

"Our customer service is very important, even on the rock walls," Tony Calderon said. "The most important thing is that we work for the customer.

For U.S. Border Patrol agent Edgar Hernandez, his current home by Southern Comfort Builders was a real find.

"We saw a house that said Southern Comfort, and we fell in love with it," Hernandez said. "It's been a year, and we still keep in touch."

According to Teresa Calderon, two, even three years after the sale they still help when problems arise.

"We give up a lot. Sometimes we will paint homes ourselves so that we can save people money," Teresa Calderon said. "When you become friends with your customers and you hear good things about yourself, that's the most rewarding part."

On top of working with her husband in the building business, Teresa Calderon also has her hands full as a special education teacher at Sunrise Elementary where she has worked for 10 years.

Luckily, they have the help of their son Benjamin and daughter Desiree, who also work for Southern Comfort

"It's kind of a family thing," Teresa Calderon said.

On the side, the couple also spends their time developing another favorite hobby – horse racing. They race their prize-winning horses at Sunland Park, Ruidoso and

"We have had some semi-runners. It's really fun," she said.

Measurements made easy Today's baker has # plenty of gadgets to smooth the process

By BETHANY CONWAY The Las Cruces Bulletin

The Aug. 15 edition of the Las Cruces Bulletin's Homes and Southwest Living section featured a handy adjustable teaspoon that made small measurements easier than ever.

This week's gadget almost goes hand-inhand with the teaspoon - it simply makes larger measurements. The adjustable measuring cup is another gadget that helps when it comes to making a variety of measurements for baking. It's also a great space saver in the kitchen.

What is it?

The adjustable measuring cup helps one measure any number of ingredients for recipes without utilizing several different cups

An inside piece acts as a suction cup to prevent liquids from leaking, while an adjustable outer plastic sleeve makes measurements easy and also helps to push thicker ingredients out once they have been measured. It measures both dry and wet ingredients and features one side of measurements in cup increments and another side of measurements for liquids in ounces and milliliters. The measurements are listed on the sides of the outer sleeve so it is easy to read.

It is ideal for measuring thicker ingredients especially honey, shortening, pumpkin pie filling, melted chocolate and peanut

Even better, this gadget can be purchased with either a one- or two-cup capacity and comes apart easily for cleaning.

How does it work?

To use the adjustable measuring cup, first set the outer sleeve to the desired measurement. Fill the cup with the desired ingredient and make sure to pack all dry ingredients down tight. Then simply add the ingredients to the recipe.

If using dry or thick ingredients, push the bottom of the cylinder upwards into the sleeve to aid in pushing out the ingredient. It doesn't require a lot of force to advance the sleeve and dump out the ingredients, and it is a lot easier than using a standard measuring cup and a spatula or spoon.

How much does it cost?

Depending on its capacity (one or two cups) the adjustable measuring cup costs from $9.99 to $19.99. Like all gadgets, it can sometimes be found for a bargain price on

Where can it be found?

It can be found at local kitchen specialty

Helpful hint:

Because the numbers on the outer plastic sleeve are not raised, it is important not to scrub the outside heavily so the numbers stay in tact. Washing this gadget in the dishwasher is preferable.

Nectarine and Blackberry Cobbler

1-1/4 cups plus 1/2teaspoon sugar tablespoon cornstarch 2-1/4 pounds (7 medium) nectarines, pitted and cut into 1/2-inch thick wedges 3/4 pound (2-1/2 cups) blackberries 2 cups all-purpose flour 2 teaspoons baking powder 3/4 teaspoon salt

1-1/4 sticks (10 tablespoons) cold unsalted butter, cut into 1/2-inch cubes 3/4 cup whole milk

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Whisk together 1-1/4 cups sugar and cornstarch in a large bowl, then add nectarines and blackberries and toss to combine well. Transfer to a 12- by 10-inch buttered baking dish and bake in middle of oven until hot, 10 to 15 minutes.

While fruit bakes, whisk together flour, baking powder and salt in another large bowl, then blend in butter with your fingertips or a pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Add milk and stir just until a dough forms.

Drop dough onto hot fruit mixture in 6 mounds and then sprinkle dough with remaining 1/2-teaspoon sugar. Bake cobbler in middle of oven until top is golden, 25 to 35 minutes. Serve with lightly sweetened whipped cream.

Rains bring out more creepy crawlies

Box elder bugs beginning to bug homeowners

With unseasonably hot weather followed by on-and-off rain all summer long, as we head into autumn, one of nature's biggest nuisance pests is beginning to swarm. Box elder bugs, which normally live in and feed off of maple trees, are starting to appear on the exterior walls of homes in large numbers, causing headaches for hom-

Our manager in El Paso, Texas, whose location services Las Cruces, tell us this time of year, they will start to see thousands of box elder bugs on a homeowner's wall. Fortunately, they do not spread disease, but they are a serious annoyance to homeowners.

Similar in look to Florida's love bugs, which pose no threat other than being an automobile windshield nuisance, the box elder bug is black with red lines. During the winter months, they search for a place to keep warm, causing them to hide in a home's cracks and crevices, attic and window casings. The shift in temperature brings them out into the open, and though they pose no threat to humans, their excrement spots on draperies and walls are hard to remove.

By the time autumn rolls around, the nuisance factor for the box elder bug reaches its highest point, and people become interested in ways of treating them. However, one of the difficulties with this particular insect is that many pesticides that eliminate other insects simply don't work on the box elder.

We recommend a household vacuum cleaner and household spray cleaners as temporary measures in combating them during their life cycle. The other proven way to assert control over this pest is being proactive in screening or sealing cracks throughout the home.

By taking simple precautions each year and understanding why the box elder appears when it appears, a homeowner can begin to fight back.

A look at the top design trends for great kitchens

The experts have pinpointed some of the top products

Incorporating current trends into kitchen design not only helps to create a stylish and updated room, but also increases functionality. From the latest colors to the newest materials, good design can ensure an enjoyable new kitchen.

A recent national survey of kitchen designers conducted by the National Kitchen and Bath Association (NKBA) and luxury appliance manufacturer Thermador, identifies several trends influencing today's kitchen design – from popular colors and finishes, to new materials and even new technologies being incorporated by designers

Style and color

More than half (56.8 percent) of the kitchen designers surveyed said "traditional" was their most-often requested type of kitchen design. However, designers identified contemporary and clean, simple lines as kitchen design trends to

For cabinetry, the top two most used finishes in kitchens are cherry and maple, while paints and exotic woods tied for third. This is a departure from the oncedominant oak cabinetry. Moreover, designers identify stainless steel as the top color scheme in today's kitchen designs, followed by beige and bone colors.

Appliances

Stainless steel continues to lead the way as the most popular finish for appliances. However, appliances with custom paneling to match cabinetry are more commonly incorporated into today's kitchen designs. The appliances that receive paneling most often are dishwashers and Designers identified modular refrigeration, along with induction cook tops and speed-cooking ovens as one of the most exciting kitchen technologies.

Countertops and backsplashes

The countertop material used most frequently is granite, and with unlimited stone colors and designs, it's highly customizable. However, another stone material - quartzite, noted for its durability - comes in a strong second. Additionally, the top-three backsplash materials are tile, followed by granite and glass.

Functionality and layout

Today's households often function with more than one cook, so kitchen designs frequently incorporate multiple cooking stations such as a range and a wall oven, or a range and a cook top. Appliances are also occupying islands to add cooking space. Additionally, prep sinks are showing up on islands or other locations in the kitchen for increased functionality.

"Kitchens are more commonly becoming a household's hub," says Ed Pell, manager of marketing research at the NKBA. "With multiple cooks working in the kitchen, and more entertaining and family activities conducted there, designers want to fulfill their client's desire for increased functionality with efficient work areas."

Consumer attitudes

When it comes to appliances, designers indicate that homeowners believe highend options are a good home investment. In fact, designers say premium appliances are the top "dream" item amongst their clients - winning over custom cabinetry and special countertops.

Upcoming trends

When designers were asked to name new trends to take note of, many identified new color applications. Specifically, greater use of color in cabinets was cited as an up-and-coming trend, as was the use of two-colored cabinetry and molding, and the overall bolder use of color.

From festivals to fairs, Cruces hops with a plethora of activities, especially at this time of year. Every weekend – or so it seems – is jam-packed with something to do, leaving little time to cook. Nevertheless, diehard, weekend-chef types manage to whip up favorite recipes or to try out new and tasty blends.

While surfing the net recently, I came across several While surfing the net recently, I came across several flavor choices that are certain to whet and satiate appetites. The Spicy Black Beans with Walnut Sauce will undoubtedly become a favorite. Few recipes list both ham and bacon in their ingredients. This combination along with chile paste, garlic and onions is a delicious taste-bud surprise.

Yet the Peruvian-Style Potato Salad may also top your list of favorites. Rather than standard tater salad, try this recipe heated with roasted serrano peppers, made crunchy with peanuts and whisked with soda cookies.

Cooks.com, where I gleaned the soda cookie recipe, added an interesting historical tidbit: "When the covered wagon rolled west in 1849, the women had a big barrel full of these cookies. They kept as well at the bottom of the barrel as they did at the top."

Dessert? White Chocolate and Chile Ice Cream of course! Double cream goodness punched with two pepper varieties – de arbol and habanero. This recipe hails from the United Kingdom. It's a festival all of its own!

Spicy Black Beans with Walnut Sauce

2-1/2 pounds black beans, cooked 1 pound ground walnuts 1/2 cup whole milk

Chile pepper paste to taste (available in 2-3 ounce jars in most grocery stores)

1 pound chopped ham
2 garlic cloves, peeled,
chopped and toasted
4 onions, peeled,
chopped and toasted
1/2 to 1 cup olive oil
1/2 pound chopped and fried bacon
1 hard-boiled egg, garnish Oregano
Salt
Pepper

Puree black beans in a blender. Set aside. Put the onions and garlic in a baking pan and bake at 350 degrees until browned. Fry the bacon until crispy.

Add 1/2 cup more of oil (more or less) and add the onions, garlic, walnuts, ham, oregano, colt, papers and next. If garlic, walnuts, ham, oregano, salt, pepper and paste. If necessary, add more oil. Mix well.

Put half of the mixture in a pot and add the beans. Cook stirring with a spoon and pour milk, little by little, until preferred consistency. Add remaining paste if desired. Top the beans with remaining sauce and garnish with grated or chopped hard-boiled egg. Serve with white rice. Serves 8 to 10. Recipe can be halved. (Adapted from Peru-recipes.

Peruvian-Style Potato Salad

3 yellow serrano peppers, toasted 1/2 white onion, finely chopped 2 garlic cloves, peeled and finely chopped 1 tablespoon toasted peanuts 1/3 cup of milk 4 ounces fresh-grated cheese 2 sprigs mint 3 soda cookies (see recipe below) 1/3 cup of vegetable oil 6 yellow potatoes, cooked 2 hard-boiled eggs, sliced

Toast serrano peppers in an iron skillet. Put peppers in a small bowl and cover with water. Soak for 5 minutes. Using the same iron skillet, fry the onion and garlic. Add toasted serrano peppers to the fried onion and garlic, toasted peanuts, cookies, mint, milk and cheese. Cool. Put mixture in a blender and puree. Add more oil if desired and salt and pepper to taste. Pour sauce over cooked potatoes and garnish with hard-boiled eggs.

Soda Cookies

2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 cup lard (or substitute shortening but it won't taste the same!)
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 to 6 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon baking powder

1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream sugar, eggs and lard together, add sour milk, vanilla and nutmeg. Sift soda, baking powder and salt with flour; mix to a stiff dough. Roll out on bread board about 1/8-inch thick. Cut with cookie cutter. Sprinkle with additional sugar. Bake in 275- to 300-degree oven until done.

Fresh-churned white-chocolate ice cream underscored with bits of chile de arbol and habanero pepper is a grand way to celebrate this festival-packed season.

White Chocolate Chile Ice Cream

Recipe requires an ice cream maker. Follow manufacturer's directions.

10 ounces whole milk 1 to 2 small dried chiles (tepin or de arbol), stemmed and seeded 1 large cinnamon stick

4 large egg yolks

See Chile Knights on PAGE E12

Chile Knights

1-3/4 ounces baker's sugar 3-1/2 ounces white chocolate, finely chopped 10 ounces double cream

Heat the milk with the dried chiles and cinnamon until almost boiling. Remove from the heat, cover and leave for at least 20 minutes. Whisk the egg yolks and sugar together until thick and pale.

Remove the seasonings from the milk, and then reheat it until almost boiling. Add the chopped chocolate to the milk and stir until it has melted completely. Pour the chocolate milk onto the eggs, stirring all the time with a wooden spoon.

Heat the mixture gently over a pan of hot (but not boiling water) for 3 to 4 minutes, until slightly thickened. Do not heat this mixture over direct heat or the chocolate may cause it to burn. Leave custard until cold, the mixture will cool quicker if transferred to a clean bowl, then chill thoroughly for at least one hour.

Lightly whip the cream until thick and floppy, and then fold it into the chilled custard just before churning. Spoon or scrape the mixture into the ice cream machine, and freeze-churn until ready to serve. Add the chopped habanero, if desired, to the ice cream just before churning is complete.

The ice cream can be hardened and stored in the freezer for about two months, but allow it to soften before serving. Add a swirl of favorite jam to top it off.
