

City seeks solar energy efficiencies

Work session on energy is start of sustainability focus in city policies

We live in an area that has in sustainability.

NATHAN SMALL,

city councillor

By TODD G. DICKSON

Frequent sunny weather in southern New Mexico is often cited in promotions for people to move to Las Cruces.

But its relentless heat also results in significant use of electricity for home cooling and is a drain to the city's water resources as people turn up the sprinklers to keep lawns green.

The sun also is a largely wasted resource to offset some of that electrical usage, and strategic landscaping with trees and shrubs greatly reduce can the need for watering lawns.

Those are some of the lessons that emerged from an afternoon workshop on energy efficiencies held Monday, May 12, at city council.

Councillor Nathan

Small, who organized the presentations, said the topic was not only timely as people struggle with high gas prices, "we also live in an area that has great potential in sustainability."

Frank Burcham, who has been involved with Albuquerque's increased efforts on sustainability concerns, told the council that it will find switching to more energyefficient systems costly in the initial purchases, but those expenditures pay for themselves when balanced against savings from traditional energy use.

"You need to look at the life-cycle cost instead of simple payback," he said. City officials told the council they already are taking steps to keep those energy expenditures down, such as switching to LED lighting for street signs and traffic signals. Though much more expensive to buy, these LED systems require little to no maintenance, and they cut the energy usage by half or more, according to Dan Soriano, city traffic engineer. The department is consider-ing going to LED street lights, he said.

The city also has begun using solar-powered flashing warning lights at school crossings. Also, the Las Cruces airport has been working on using solar energy to power runway lights and hangar lighting. As well, the city has been working on "economizer systems" that, for example, let in cooler outside air in the morning to help cool off buildings, said Brian Denmark, facilities director.

As for bringing solar power to the new city hall under construction, it's too late in the design of the three-story building to add roof support, but city officials will soon be presenting a plan to put solar panels on top of parking shade structures for the same purpose.

"We have a huge area for parking," Denmark said. "Using the parking decks may be better than putting a solar system on the roof."

STEVE MACINTYRE | The Las Cruces Bulletin

Kevin Bixby, director of the Southwest Environmental Center, kneels on the center's roof by its cover of 33 solar voltaic panels that were installed in March. The system that generates six kilowatts of electricity – about a quarter of the center's annual need for electricity - was made possible by a $100,000 appropriation to New Mexico State University to install such as system.

Other sustainability suspects are often misguided.

Joshua Rosenblatt, city water conservationist coordinator, said it's not the golf courses and swimming pools that are big water users. It's more often large, residential vards without shade that he has discovered are some of the city's largest water consumers in the city. That's why Rosenblatt has been holding "Lush and Lean" workshops to teach people how proper selection and placement of trees and shrubs can better contribute to See Energy on PAGE A9

WHAT'S INSIDE Mountain lion kills poodle in city Game officials set traps behind Lowe's

By TODD G. DICKSON

In the early morning hours of Wednesday, May 14, a small mountain lion jumped the wall of a backyard in the neighborhood behind Lowe's Home Improvement store on North Main Street and killed a poodle.

LuAnn Tafoya, spokeswoman for the state Game and Fish Department, said it's most likely a young cat who has been unable to establish it territory against older, larger cats. That's probably why the mountain cat attack came so deep inside the city, she said.

Most of the mountain lion sightings by residents come from the Tortugas Moun-tain area, Tafoya said. While it is likely the cat came from the Organ Mountains, they can be found in all the mountain areas in Doña Ana County, she said.

The department isn't releasing the exact address of the attack to keep people from going to the area, she said.

"We've set a trap there," she said on Thursday, May 15. "As of this morning, we haven't caught him."

Residents in the area are being advised See Lion on PAGE A9

Nature camp offered for kids this summer

The Las Cruces Museum of Natural History will host a summer nature camp for kids in first through eighth grades. Registration is ongoing for three camp sessions, which begin June 2 and end June 27. The purpose of the camp is to provide young campers with an opportunity to experience nature first-hand through supervised hikes, nature games and crafts; to generate curiosity and interest in our desert environment; and to provide a safe, fun and informal learning environment.

Kids will be separated into age groups. The camp for kids in sixth through eighth grades will be June 2-6. Kids in third through fifth grades can participate June 9-13 or June 23-27. First- through second-graders can participate June 16-20.

The schedule for Nature Camp 2008 is as follows:

Grades 6-8	Grades 6-8 (Week I)
June 3	Anthony Gap Cave	8 a.m. to 4 p.m.
	Franklin Mountains State	Park
June 4	Rio Bonito, New Mexico	Noon/overnight

FROM THE PUBLISHER

A publisher's day

By DAVID E. MCCOLLUM

Earlier this week, a young middle school student, an aspir-ing journalist, asked me to explain what a "publisher" does. My top-of-mind response was that I am responsible for overseeing the production of a weekly newspaper for and about the people of the Las Cruces area. The student then asked me to explain exactly what I do in a typical day. I rattled off a few predictable duties of a newspaper publisher, such as participating in meetings, visiting with people, planning, writing and editing. Time did not permit me to go into much more detail. However,

McCOLLUM

I decided to write down my day's activities that I would share with the student and I thought some readers might be interested in a "day in the life of a publisher." Wednesday, May 14, 2008

Jaki wakes me. She is flying to Oklahoma and we need to leave for the El 3:15 a.m. Paso airport.

- Drive Jaki to El Paso and rush to Las Cruces for an early meeting. 4:20 a.m.
- 6:35 a.m. Meet with a local civic club, as guest speaker.
- 7:50 a.m. Review the 300 or so new emails, respond to a few, file the important ones and trash the rest. Answer half a dozen incoming phone calls before receptionist arrives.
- 8:20 a.m. Meet with advertising sales team and approve final layout for high school graduation section.
- 8:35 a.m. Briefly check proofs of pages for Arts and Business sections.
- 8:45 a.m. Review daily assignments for reporters and photographers.
- Review advertising account assignments with senior sales team; set up interviews for potential new advertising sales staff. 8:55 a.m.
- Attend Citizens Bank event with Picacho Middle School. 9:15 a.m.
- Meet our printer, Signature Offset, to discuss the printing schedule. 9:55 a.m.
- 10:15 a.m. Meet with major advertising client to discuss new contract.
 10:40 a.m. Deliver advertising presentation to Wilson-Binkley agency.
 11:15 a.m. Return to office and check on status of remodeling project, contact various

- 1:00 p.m. Drop in on Convention and Visitors Bureau open house.
- Meet with City Manager Terrence Moore and briefly discuss Vision 2040 1:25 p.m. project. Back at office, review plan for Bulletin's page one layout.
- 2:00 p.m.
- Follow up with pending ads for this week's Bulletin. 2:15 p.m.
- Track down new phones that were supposed to have been delivered on previous day. Negotiate with seller to send phones by FedEx. Meet with IT specialists from Ariel to review our plan to relocate our 2:45 p.m. 3:00 p.m.
- computer network. 4:00 p.m. Make telephone contacts for background and quotes regarding major page-one story; proof and edit pages for Homes and Sports sections; review United Way luncheon highlights with Joel Courtney.
- Contact person who was not happy with a news feature. Had to explain 4:45 p.m. we use standard Associated Press style.
- Set up interviews for next day; remind staff about general lunch meeting 5:15 p.m. on Thursday.
- 5:30 p.m. Return about a dozen phone calls; sign some Chamber of Commerce letters.
- 6:00 p.m. Learn that a page one story has fallen through and will be delayed.
- 6:15 p.m. Meet with advertising sales staff to review new assignments. Review and clean up about 500 new emails that had arrived. 7:15 p.m.
- 8:30 p.m. Review plans to move phones, desks and computers to our new office space on Thursday.

9:40 p.m. Pick up mail from post office box; have a light, late dinner.
11:10 p.m. Quietly pray for Jaki's safe travels and for wisdom and inner calmness during the potentially chaotic next day.
11:20 p.m. Sleep soundly until about 4:30 a.m. when the next day begins. After reviewing the day's summary, it's clear that a publisher's job at an independent of the potential demonstration.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Show deserves second opinion

This letter is in response to the paragraph that was written about the art exhibit at the Branigan Cultural Center by Ouida Touchon in her Art Talk column dated May 9. The art show that Ouida is referring to is the Las Cruces Arts Association membership show held once a year. Basically, Ouida's opinion of the show was that most of it was amateur and that most of the awards were not merited, including the first prize, which she states "somehow a digitally manipulated image was elevated" as the top award. I first of all would like to bring out another opinion about the show, from the person who judged the show, Jacklyn St. Aubyn. Jacklyn is an associate professor of art at New Mexico State University. Jacklyn wrote this about the show: "All of the work are very well crafted. I am impressed with the quality of work. It was a difficult decision-making process. I chose those works that have particularly skillful handling of media as a sense of poetry or magic to me." Sounds like Jacklyn and Ouida differ on the quality of the show. I just felt it should be known, art appreciation is in the eye of the beholder, and you, the public, can be the ones to judge and hear another opinion of the show.

I happen to be that winner of the top award. I think that Ouida's opinion was downgrading the medium of art that I work in. I never call my medium a manipulated image, it makes the process sound too simple, and I just do not press buttons to create my work. In this particular award-winning work, I photographed the original landscape scene, and then I spent hours digitally hand painting over the image. It's a magical setting in the countryside outside of my wife's birthplace in London, England.

This is not the first top award I have received. I moved from California a year ago to Las Cruces. In California, I belonged to three art associations and one that the artist had to be juried into (Santa Barbara Art Association). I won numerous awards including the top award. I have entered the last three Las Cruces Arts Association shows and have won an award at each. At the Southern New Mexico State Fair 2007 I not only won first-, second- and sixth-place awards in photography special effects, I also won Best of Show in Photography.

So please Ouida, before you downgrade a show and an artist's medium, do your homework. The Las Cruces Arts Association has great quality work, and digital art is a much warranted medium in the art world. Look what's in the latest show next door at The Las Cruces Museum of Art. The 2008 NMSU Bachelor of Fine Arts Exhibit features three digital artists. KURT VAN WAGNER

Sierra County vote puts spaceport back on track Wide margin in favor of tax shows residents conservative voters in the T or C area would be likely to reject the spaceport. Virgin Galactic had signed a memorandum of underconfident Spaceport America will be a success

Sierra County's overwhelming approval of a spaceport tax is a huge step toward putting Spaceport America back on track.

Although the advocates implied that the gross receipts tax approval was necessary for the spaceport effort to continue, there was enough artful wording to make one suspect that a fallback position was hiding somewhere.

This column suggested that likelihood a month or so ago. It was denied, but a week before the election Lt. Gov. Diane Denish admitted that although there was no backup in case the vote failed, a Plan B would be developed quickly. After all, why bet a $225 million state project on the vote of 3,000 people in one small county? That would be more politically irresponsible than even New Mexicans could imagine.

Although the Sierra County vote would not have been a deal breaker had it failed, it was extremely important. The spaceport creation had been predicated on the creation of a regional taxing district.

Voters in Doña Ana County had narrowly approved joining that district over a year ago. A second political subdivision was needed to create a regional entity.

As it turned out, it didn't have to be a county. Had the vote failed in Sierra County, a positive vote in one of its towns, such as Truth or Consequences, would have been sufficient.

But the 2-1 approval in Sierra County, with a 42-percent turnout at the polls, was such a pleasant surprise that the stalled spaceport creation should get back on track. Basically nothing happened after the narrow Doña Ana County victory.

Once again, I'm guessing, but it's backed up by 50 years of involvement with New Mexico politics. I think the closeness of the Doña Ana victory put a damper on spaceport enthusiasm. Las Cruces was the cradle of spaceport mania. Leaders in that community had been working on the idea for over 15 years.

The opposition came primarily from the Mesilla Valley south of Las Cruces. Activists in the area said the spaceport was OK, but they didn't want to pay anything, and besides, the money really should go to helping people in the poverty-stricken area.

When the Sierra County vote neared, those activists then moved up the Rio Grande to make the same argument. Many political observers predicted that the more

Regents ignore public input

NMSU's official Policy Manual is the peg on which Bob Gallagher, chair of the NMSU Board of Regents, hangs his extended argument (in the recent guest column you published) that things are being handled excellently by NMSU officials, despite media reports.

Further, in the Las Cruces Sun-News story on April 25, it is stated that two Common Cause leaders believe that NMSU has made "great strides" in opening regents meetings to public comment. This is at best a half truth - local chair Steve Carter has not replied to my request for verification of this. Steve Allen, New Mexico executive director for Common Cause, states that he said no such thing

The point is that Policy Manual updating of last October (the most recent updating) left in place the extremely restrictive, detailed and burdensome requirements laid upon anyone with something to say to the regents. The objectionable paragraph was called to their attention in July 2007 (see verbatim minutes). They have done, essen-

Their recent agendas include, near the end, an entry "comment." Thus, perhaps, if their desired two-hour limit for meetings is not threatened or exceeded and if Bob Gallagher is so inclined, a citizen may be recognized to speak. I am not going to hold my breath for this to happen, fearing the sky might fall upon us all.

The evidence is clear: NMSU regents really do not care what the public thinks.

standing to be the anchor tenant at the spaceport and promised that if the Doña Ana vote passed, it would sign a lease. But nothing happened.

Rick Homans then resigned as executive director of the Spaceport Authority to go into private business. A permanent replacement finally was named this past December. But still no lease and no announced progress on obtaining a federal license for the proposed spaceport.

Other disappointments included the departure of Starchaser Industries, which had made big promises in Las Cruces and problems of the Rocket Racing League, with headquarters in Las Cruces, to find enough competitors for events it intended to begin two years ago.

Then there was the disaster at the Mojave Spaceport in California that killed three people working on development of the spaceplane to be used by Virgin Galactic at New Mexico's spaceport. Will that slow the move to Spaceport America? Since Mojave was already licensed as a spaceport, will that slow federal licensing of other spaceports?

All this bad news was not lost on the New Mexico Legislature, which still hasn't come up with all the $225 million cost originally forecast for the project. Lawmakers seem to have lost interest.

Virgin Galactic, meanwhile, is being romanced by emerging spaceports in America and around the world. Dubai is one of those suitors. It doesn't have to worry about money, licensing or environmental impact studies.

But Sierra County's strong statement of confidence in Spaceport America should be just what is needed for everyone to get back on board.

With love to all the mutts 'Pure' breeds come with liabilities

By MICHAEL SWICKARD

Recently there has been a move to change the municipal animal shelter from having to destroy most animals to a nokill facility, which instead places these pets in homes. Success is tied to changing the behavior of people. Let us talk about dogs

Paris Hilton fueled the boutique-dog craze where women want a cute fashionaccessory dog peeking out of their purse. This dog has to be a purebred hoity-toity dog. It cannot be some mutt of unknown origins. Then, when having that fashion dog goes out of style, or when their cavalier attitude toward the dog makes a monster out of it, to the shelter it goes.

Likewise when a Dalmatian was featured in a movie, many people rushed to have a Dalmatian. About a year later, the shelters were full of unwanted Dalmatians

Also filling up the animal shelter are people who have dogs casually much like they have children from casual relation-ships, with no forethought or obligation. When they become problematic, they are left at the side of the road - the dogs, not the children - those are just left. Their dogs breed and fill animal shelters with unwanted dogs. A word about mutts: They are a deal for people wanting love and companionships. But the big dog shows market "pure" breeds. These "pure" breeds can be fine pets, but often come with real liabilities, not the least is if the dog costs lots of money, people will steal it.

Puppy mills market cute puppies born in waves just for the purpose of making money and if not sold, abandoned. These are advertised as "pure" breeds without papers. The concept of "pure owner should get lots breed" is as much the cause of our overabundance of dogs in the shelter as anything else

> At the animal shelter, pets are "what you see is what you get.

Many dogs are mature with a face only a lovely person can love. Those wanting to copy the Hollywood pinheads who have "strut pets" will not find status animals. They can find great pets. Three things the local government and the animal shelter must do: first, they must make ownership of a rescued pet a badge of honor. Next, they must make the transition to having a pet as easy as possible. Finally, the city and county governments must ban the puppy mills and really work to spay and neuter all pets so those populations do not increase. Pouring thousands of puppies into our area, animals who end up at the shelter, is wrong. There could be a provision for show animals that are to be show animals. And, while this would push the activities underground, it would limit them considerably.

One of my rescued animals, Shovel, had a bad habit, which I suspect landed her in the pound. Luckily I had the insight and patience to change Shovel's name to Shadow when she decided that digging was not cool and what Michael wanted was a companion like his shadow.

To make the no-kill center work, experts must be available to train new dog owners on how to extinguish undesirable behaviors and how to work with the dog. Likewise, adopted pets, not just dogs, should have a place where the vet fees for the rest of their lives are inexpensive. Each rescued-pet owner should get lots of recognition, and every effort must be made to market these pets to potential owners.

A no-kill tradition will be hard to achieve, but it is possible if we all work

No-kill confusion

I applaud the hiring of Dr. Beth Vesco-Mock as the new director of our animal shelter. She has vowed to work toward "no-kill" in the next five to seven years. The term "no-kill" floors people because most misunderstand what it means. We are all so brainwashed into thinking that euthanasia is the only solution to pet overpopulation that we miss the logic behind this wonderful hyphenate. No-kill simply means that we stop the systematic killing of most animals that enter our shelters by implementing comprehensive, simultaneous lifesaving pro-grams. No-kill returns the term euthanasia to its dictionary definition, which is to give a humane death to hopeless, ill, injured and irremediably suffering animals and the few dogs that are truly vicious and pose a public threat. The vast majority of animals that enter our shelter and shelters across the country do not fall into these categories.

Michael Swickard and Conrad toward it. The first step is to talk to your neighbors who have not neutered their animals and to continuously talk about the value of mutts over the snooty dogs.

My current dog, Conrad, who is known informally as the Doggie Lama because he brings friendship and love to all who see him, wishes you well and asks that you help make this a no-kill animal shelter city.

Michael Swickard's email is michael@swickard.com

Letters to the Editor

Another great myth is the one that says there are not enough homes for them all, but in the United States, every year, twice as many people are looking for a new dog than enter our shelters, and more are also wanting to adopt a cat than there are cats in shelters. This nation could save 4.5 million of the 5 million it will kill this year by implementing the following programs: feral cat efforts; high-volume, low-cost spay/neuter; rescue groups; foster care; adoption programs; pet retention; medial/behavior rehabilitation; PR/community relations; volunteers; and, last but not least, a compassionate director.

Our city and county hired a great, com-passionate director in Dr. Vesco-Mock, so all we need to do is help her reach these attainable no-kill goals. Other communities across the United States, both urban and rural, have done it. So can we!

EBID manager calls for storm water capture and use

The Lower Rio Grande Water Users Organization seeks support for projects

By MARVIN TESSNEER The Las Cruces Bulletin

When the rain comes in the desert, it can come in monsoonal downpours only to have much of the water drain uncaptured.

At a recent Lower Rio Grande Water Users Organization workshop, Gary Esslinger, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District manager, proposed changing that.

Esslinger said the organization's entities need to work together to capture storm water for aquifer storage and recovery, improve dam safety and establish an early warning system, develop systems for municipal and industrial surface water treatment and wastewater reclamation and reuse.

The Lower Rio Grande Water Users Organization includes Doña Ana County, EBID, Doña Ana Mutual Domestic Water Consumers Association, Town of Mesilla, Village of Hatch, Anthony Water and Sanitation District, City of Las Cruces and New Mexico State University.

The organization needs to be innovative in storm water capture and use, Esslinger said. He showed examples of controlled release from dams to the rivers, canals and drains for municipal and industrial treatment, filtration for aquifer recharge, sediment management and redesigning of flood control structures.

"We want to develop a conjunctive management of our water, to coordinate the Lower Rio Grande Water Users Organization," Esslinger said. "We're not interested in putting money in litigation. We need to put money in state legislation for these projects."

The organization has requested a little more than $41 million from the state for flood planning, aquifer storage and recovery projects, municipal and industrial surface water treatment and wastewater tion." State Rep. Andy Nuñez, D-Hatch, is on the Water and Natural Resources Committee and said the adjudication is dragging out too long. "I'm going to bring up the State Engineer adjudication process during the interim session," he said. The Office of the State Engineer is conducting the adjudication to establish water rights in the Lower Rio Grande Basin.

The workshop noted how working cooperatively can prevent costly and protracted litigation. Last February, the EBID and the El Paso County Water Conservation District No. 1 announced an agreement worked out by nine farmers on the EBID board of directors and the five farmers on the EPCWCD board.

"They got together and made an agreement that saved the state millions of dollars in litigation," Gutierrez said.

State Rep Joni Marie Gutierrez, D-Mesilla, said she was impressed that everyone at the workshop was working cooperatively on water projects.

"Tm going to work hard in the Legislature to get some of these projects funded," Gutierrez said. "Tm very interested in collection and treatment of surface water for treatment so we'll have more water."

State Rep. Jeff Steinborn, D-Las Cruces, also liked the message of community solutions, but added that he was disappointed to not hear more emphasis on water conservation.

"I think it's important that we do this before taking such radical steps to start building dams in every significant arroyo in Doña Ana County in attempts to capture storm water," Steinborn said. "Drip irrigation offers opportunities for farmers to get the same production while using as little water as possible. This is the direction that we need to be headed for more water conservaIn 1979, EBID and El Paso took over the delivery system from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. They were required to make an operation agreement about the allocation and delivery of water to meet the requirements of compacts. But during the next 29 years they were distracted by lawsuits.

One river compact mandate is that upstream irrigation district operations should not harm others. An example was the Texas lawsuit charging that the New Mexico Pecos River district had been diverting water from the river by excessive well pumping and was not delivering the amount of water to Texas as mandated in the compact. Texas won, and the litigation cost New Mexico about $1 million.

One early El Paso complaint was that EBID was diverting too much water from the river by excessive well pumping from the aquifer, which was depleting delivery downstream.

In the new operations agreement, EBID forged a compromise and is permitted a well pumping level based on its 1951-1978 volume.

"These things are seldom settled out of court, but we did it," EBID consultant Phil King said in an earlier interview. "The farmers are really the ones who made the settlement."

Horse slaughter ban a year later

"You can die of good intentions." That is the best summary I can give of an editorial I read recently about the bill to ban horse slaughter that was passed last year.

The editor and I had discussed the issue when it was a hot topic. At the time she could not imagine 'a horse being dragged across a kill floor with chains around Iits legs." A gruesome description that elicits a sickening feeling in the heart of any sensitive being. But a few short months later, some of the bill's supporters are taking a new look.

One of the factors that hastened the disintegration of the bill's good intentions has been America's economic pinch. Most horses in civilized countries today are luxury hobbies. Backyard horses are an expensive pet, easily thousands of dollars a year for most owners. Today, gas is more than $3 a gallon. Food is up. Essentials like cell phones, iPods, computers, big screen televisions, video games, golf course fees and movies are up. A triple-shot large latté five times a week now costs more than $20! And you have a real estate license and have been trying to sell your house for a year!

The kids have gone or outgrown the horse in your backyard. The hay, fly control, regular vaccinations and worming continues and the vet says your 18-year-old equine has ring bone (diagnosis including radiographs, nerve blocks and advice was $325). You'd love to sell the horse, but people aren't stupid. You make a call or two to the horse rescue and retirement pasture. They're either full or they want money from you to feed it. The thought of a professional euthanasia, then a winch truck or front end loader to haul it to the dump ... "a chain around the horse's legs being dragged across the field."

The editor said all the reader response to her editorial was negative. On her follow up she found the majority of callers she talked to didn't own a horse! Couldn't afford it! But they thought slaughtering horses was cruel and you shouldn't eat them.

Good intentions, no responsibility. We see it a lot. Critics, columnists, movie stars, reporters, politicians. We've now gotten into the mess the good-intentioned created and it's getting worse. And where are they now? Offering to pay your euthanasia and burial fee? Offering to take your horse and care for it? Not a peep

It's no secret whose going to be cleaning up after them. The same people who always clean up after the well-intentioned. In this case, the real animal lovers; the humane, the sympathetic and the practical ... and they'll do it with no thanks or rec-ognition. That's not why they do it. They do it for the horses.

We're not hoping for a difference. We're making one.

AARP has launched Divided We Fail to raise the voices of millions of Americans who believe that health care and lifetime financial security are the most pressing domestic issues facing our nation.

Only half of all American families have saved money in a retirement account of any kind, and the typical family has saved less than $35,000. Recent changes in pension and investment protections and the rising cost of health care are making it harder for Americans to achieve lifetime financial security. The time for action is now.

to not leave pet food and pets in their yards overnight. The cat mostly likely was hungry, Tafoya said, after being chased out. Other wild animals in the area include foxes, raccoons and javelinas, Tafoya said. Although cat attacks on people are very rare, Tafoya said people should not run away if they come across a mountain lion and back away slowly. If the cat makes aggressive advances, then the person should try to "make themselves larger than the animal" through stance and shouting, she said.

More detailed advice on what to do when coming across wild animals can be found on the Game and Fish website at www.wildlife.state.nm.us.

Community Foundation offers grants to women entrepreneurs SpringBoard! grant given to local woman to cover travel to state cosmetology exam

SpringBoard!, a program of the Com-munity Foundation of Southern New Mexico that works to provide young women with opportunities for a lifetime, is proud to announce its award of a $500 grant to Norberta Silva.

Silva is attending BSI Cosmetology and Barber School in Las Cruces, seeking her cosmetology license.

This grant is funded by the Domanica Foundation to provide start-up funds for women establishing their own small businesses. It will help Silva with travel expenses to Albuquerque, state board exam expenses, purchasing necessary tools and equipment and/or pay her startup booth rental fees.

SpringBoard! makes grants to women who need help launching their careers. Grants range from $200 to $500.

Application deadlines are March 31, June 30, Sept. 30 and Dec. 30. Grant applications are available from the Community Foundation Office at 301 S. Church St, Suite H, or online at www.cfsnm.org. The Community Foundation of Southern New Mexico is a charitable resource linking donors with community needs. Founded in 2000, CFSNM helps facilitate individual, family and organizational philanthropy through targeted grant making, educational scholarships, advocacy and unique program expertise.

Interested donors are encouraged to call CFSNM at 521-4794 or visit www. cfsnm.org.

water and energy savings than the stereotypical xeriscaping.

Noting that how Rosenblatt's work is yielding important water savings to the city, Steve Fischmann of the Southwest Energy Alliance recommended that the city hire someone to work on sustainability issues so these concerns become part of the process in the city's decision making.

Making a sustainability guide policy for growth and management will be the real leadership test for the city, Small said.

Besides resources like energy and water, the city needs to look at other issues, such as transportation and recycling.

'This is not just about energy," he said. "It's about putting all our puzzle pieces together until we have a total sustainability focus.

Based on his experiences in Albuquerque, Burcham said city leaders will need to bring everyone to the table - including developers and builders - to forge compromises on behalf of improving sustainability without hindering economic development.

"This is truly a partnership," he said. "It's going to require give and take on both sides.

Learning the real work of the real world EXCEL program brings students to actual work sites

BY TODD G. DICKSON

On any given work day all over Las Cruces during the school year, there are high school students out of school and in the workplace, learning about what it takes to succeed in the work world and if a career they're interested in is right for them.

For Oñate High School senior Laura Beeson, that has meant donning medical scrubs in the morning when she provides assistance to nursing staff at Memorial Medical Center's Family Practice Center.

Although she still might look into studying chemical engineering when she goes to college, this experience has the 17-year-old mulling over the possibility of going into a medical profession. While the nurses she assists by taking weight and blood pressure measurements would love to see her go into nursing, Beeson admitted she's more interested in being a doctor or a pharmacist.

Despite the active portrayal of the medical professions on television and in the movies, Beeson said she has discovered that the work is more routine than she imagined. She had no idea that nurses handled so much of the paperwork and filing.

Katey Wahlen, 18, a Mayfield High School senior, checks on the IV monitoring machine for dogs in kennels at the Calista Animal Hospital on Monday, May 5.

Beeson has been going to the medical center this school year through her par-ticipation in a Las Cruces Public Schools program called EXCEL, which stands for Experience-based Career Education and Learning. EXCEL has more than 500 work sites for district high-schoolers to choose from and explore different career interests.

"They're all so young," said Brenda Figueroa, an EXCEL job site facilitator. "At that age, who has any idea about what they're going to do?" Working out of one of the medical offices is one of the more popular EXCEL classes. Also as popular is a different kind of medical care – veterinary services. Calista Animal Hospital takes full advantage of all that interest, where one morning recently they had three students helping them catch up with a backlog of sick animals.

At the animal hospital, the students get a little more hands-on with the patients, and the students had the bite and scratch marks to prove it.

Jeff Williams, a Mayfield High School senior, said he's done so well at the animal hospital that he is now leaning more to entering this kind of work than culinary arts, which he had previously considered.

Fatima Guaderrama, a Las Cruces High School senior, also says the experience has helped her find a profession she'll continue pursuing.

Katey Wahlen, a Mayfield High School senior, noted that she had a taste of the work before at Better Life Pet Foods, but she is now more certain about her plans to study animal science at New Mexico State University.

Whereas there's plenty of hustle and bustle at Calista, EXCEL's Diego Carreon was dealing with the shuffle and rustle of paperwork that same morning as he collated a proposal for ASA Architects. Still, Carreon said he has greatly enjoyed the experience at ASA in which he has helped design certain elements of projects at the firm. He is planning on taking drafting classes in college.

Brenda Figueroa, job site facilitator for the Las Cruces Public Schools EXCEL program, left, checks in with Oñate High School senior Laura Beeson, 17, at Memorial Medical Center's Family Practice Center.

Jeff Williams, 18, a Mayfield High School senior, right, holds down a cat Monday, May 5, as Calista Animal Hospital veterinarian Amanda Stout draws blood from an anemic cat. Williams spends his mornings at the animal hospital through the Las Cruces Public Schools EXCEL career and technical education program.

EXCEL is available to the district's juniors and seniors as an elective course in which they spend half their school day at a work site.

In the News County firework law left unchanged

A proposal to allow limited year-round sales of some restricted fireworks fizzled at the Doña Ana County Commission meeting Tuesday, May 13.

Commissioner Bill McCamley, who offered the proposed change as a way to help vendors along major highways attract tourist customers, tried to postpone debate on the change until later this month, but he couldn't gain a majority of the commis-sion to approve the rescheduling.

McCamley's proposal would have essentially allowed two vendors along interstate highways to sell aerial fireworks and some ground fireworks that make noise as long as the customers were not from Doña Ana County. McCamley said he wanted to make the change to buffer the loss of jobs and revenue to the county from firework sales.

The county's new "safe and sane" ordinance bans aerial and exploding ground fireworks. It was the fact that the new ordinance hadn't even gone through its first Fourth of July that swayed commissioners Oscar Vasquez Butler, Karen Perez and Dolores Saldaña-Caviness to vote against publicizing the proposed revised ordinance. Without notice, there couldn't be a public hearing, which killed the change. Besides McCamley, Chairman Kent Evans voted to publicize the revision.

Spaceport tax district meetings slated

 $The \, Do {\tilde n} a \, Ana \, County \, Legal \, Department$ has announced a series of three public meetings to solicit input about whether the county should enter into a contract with Sierra County to form a regional spaceport district, now that voters in both counties have approved a new gross-receipts tax to support infrastructure development at Spaceport America.

- The meeting schedule is as follows: Thursday, May 22, 6 p.m. at the Hatch Valley Community Center, 835 Highway 187, in Hatch.
- Friday, May 23, 8 a.m. at the Doña Ana County Government Center Commission Chambers, 845 N. Motel Blvd., in Las Cruces.

Election 2008 – Evans vows to be an independent voice

Roads, growth and flooding top issues for chairman's wife

By TODD G. DICKSON

Although she is the wife of County Commission Chairman Kent Evans, Anna Mae Evans is telling voters she won't be his "surrogate" if she gets elected to replace him to represent District 4.

Yes, the two have been married for 45 years, but Evans said she doesn't always agree with her husband. "We do advise each other," she said. "But there are times where I tell him, 'Kent, I don't think I would have done that.'

Evans describes her marriage as an equal partnership, which included joining her husband on the campaign trail eight years ago when he ran for commissioner.

So, when she's knocking on the doors of the district's mostly East Mesa residents, Evans is a familiar face, but they are sometimes surprised to learn she is the candidate, not her husband. "It's been great," Evans said. "I love knocking on doors and talking to people.'

Listening is a skill Evans said she'll bring to the com-mission if she is elected. First, the Republican must win out over opponent Doyle Pruitt. If she wins the primary, she'll face Democrat Scott Krahling in November.

Another quality Evans said she'll bring is an open truthfulness. "I believe in always being honest, then you don't get into trouble," she said. Evans said she is well versed on the issues of her district and the county as whole.

"I have been a constant presence at nearly every County Commission meeting, ETA, MPO, plus many city, state and national meetings, too," she said. "If you want to know what is going on, then you have to get involved and understand how these organizations work."

Evans emphasized she takes a cooperative approach with these organizations and county staff. She promised to not break the chain of command as some commissioners have done in the past, but take her concerns to the county manager as is proper protocol.

Evans said she has seen great improvement in the pro-fessionalism of county staff and gave her approval to current County Manager Brian Haines, whom she described as "very capable." "That's the way it should be," she said. "When you see it working, it works right."

Also, when she makes a decision, Evans said she will always explain why she voted one way or another.

TODD DICKSON I The Las Cruces Bullet

Ana Mae Evans is depending on her many years of community involvement to carry her through the primary election in her bid to replace her husband, Kent Evans, on the Doña Ana County Commission.

Evans said she agrees with residents that growth must be well planned, with roads and drainage planned out ahead of time. While she will work to secure funding to improve roads and drainage in her district, Evans said she will be a commissioner who makes decisions on what is best for the entire county.

But she said her district is an area that will most likely feel the strain of keeping up with growth, especially from the troop build-up at White Sands Missile Range.

"Where else do you think they're going to live?" she asked. "We must concentrate on planned progress in our growing community and Doña Ana County Commission District 4 is in the heart of all the growth."

Besides learning about government at her husband's side, Evans said she also has been active in a number of community groups and has sat on their boards, such as serving on the board for the American Association of University Women and The Whole Enchilada Fiesta.

When her children were in school, Evans was active in parent and school organizations, as well as local chapters of the Boys and Girls Scouts.

Evans has bachelor's degrees in psychology and social work from the University of Miami and has lived in the Elks Drive area for 33 years. Evans said she has seen first-hand how one day you can be living at desert's edge, only to have the view blocked by new housing a year later. "That's just the way it goes," she said.

Election 2008 — Teague tries to change image Candidate disputes 'oil man' description

By TODD G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

At a rally held in Young Park last week, Lea County Commissioner Harry Teague began by attacking how he has been described as "rich oil man."

Teague, who is running to be the Democratic candidate in the Second Congressional District race against Doña Ana County Commissioner Bill McCamley, said his story is more symbolic of the "American Dream" than anything his party's voters shouldn't support.

Teague said he started out working in the oil fields as a "rough neck" when he was 17 for a mere $1.50 an hour.

He eventually started up his own oil business servicing the oil industry that he has grown to around 250 employees. Teague's supporters are quick to point out that he has provided health insurance for all his employees and has put their children through college.

It's this kind of commitment to providing access to health care and increasing educational opportunities that he'll bring to the job of Congressman, if elected, he said. "Let me be that person to defeat the Republicans and be your representative in Congress," he said to more than 200 people gathered at the park.

Teague added that he is for ending the war in Iraq soon and "bringing our troops back as safely as possible."

Using his business experience, Teague said he will work to provide more economic opportunities in southern New Mexico, which he said could become a leader in renewable energy development.

Edgar Lopez of Las Cruces, who introduced Teague, described the candidate as "a self-made man" whose business success shouldn't be used against him.

McCamley has criticized Teague's ties to the oil industry and his ability to loan large amounts of money to his campaign.

Lopez said the majority of Teague's employees are Hispanic, which makes the benefits he provides even more significant.

benefits he provides even more significant. "Actions speak louder than words," Lopez said. "Harry Teague will bring about results instead of dreams. And let me tell you, we have a lot of dreamers in this race."

Harry Teague, Democratic candidate for Congressional District 2, answers questions at a gathering in Young Park held last Thursday, May 8.

Greer gets Hispanic GOP endorsement

The Republican National Hispanic Assembly's New Mexico Chapter this week endorsed C. Earl Greer as their choice for Congress in New Mexico's Second Congressional District.

"We wholeheartedly endorse Earl Greer for Congress," said Dan Garza, state chairman. "He is a man of great integrity, uncompromising morals and solid character. He reflects our proud Hispanic values, and we would be very honored to have him represent the Hispanic community and the second district in Congress. In our opinion, he is the best candidate for New Mexico's Second Congressional District." "I am truly honored that my fellow

"I am truly honored that my fellow Hispanic Republicans have chosen me

The mission of the RNHA is to build a membership organization to foster the principles of the Republican Party in the Hispanic community; to provide Americans of Hispanic heritage with a forum to play an influential role in local, state and national Party activities; to increase the number of Hispanic Republican elected officials; and to create and maintain a network of Hispanic Republican leaders.

Greer is a fifth-generation New Mexican with a background in ranching and real estate.

THE LAS CRUCES BULLETIN

Lions hold annual reading program Dream Center will host computer summer camp

New Mexico Lions Crane Reading Foundation is putting on a Computer Reading Camp this summer at the Dream Center, 1400 Sixth St.

The camp will run one- and two-hour sessions from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Morning camp will be held from May 27 to June 26. Afternoon camp will run from June 2 to July 3.

New Mexico Lions are looking for students who wish to learn to read efficiently using the latest technology.

The Lions Foundation is just completing its sixth session at the Dream Center since it opened its computer reading lab 15 months ago. Most students gain one to three years in reading in five weeks.

Dyslexic, learning disabled and gifted students are welcome. The center can challenge any person. The camp is open to students 6 years old or older. College bound students and students who are no longer in school are welcome.

Depending on their level, students will learn basic reading skills and/or increase their reading efficiency, speed and comprehension. For students with allergies, Lions use body movement programs getting their brains organized and ready to learn. The Lions Reading Lab can challenge and help anyone read better, making their future education easy and fun.

Pre-testing for the Lions Computer Reading Camp will start immediately. Testing includes the Visagraph visual efficiency test and a reading skills placement test. The Visagraph has four infrared sensors in a pair of goggles that record eye movement as a student reads silently. Applicants should call 373-0561 to set up an appointment and enroll. Students will be enrolled on a first-come, first-served basis. Missed sessions can be made up on the home computer.

Cost for the program, if paid in advance, is only $100 for 20 hours ($200 for 40 hours.) If paid weekly, the cost will be $30 a week for a total of $150. New Mexico Lions Crane Reading Foundation is a 501(c)3, therefore, donations are tax deductible. Family rates are available and need-based scholarships will be offered. In 20 hours on computers, students will be well on the way to reading proficiently. In 40 hours, most students will be reading proficiently and for pleasure. We're going to move to another state in a few months. I know it's going to be tough for Chuck and Marcie, who have so many little friends at school. How can I get them ready for life in a new city?

Moving to a new school or a new town can be an unpleasant experience for children, but there are some ways to make it easier for them.

Preparation and forethought are the keys. Educator Cheri Fuller recommends those who are about to relocate to call a family meeting to talk about what's going to happen. Begin to lay plans together. It's sad to say goodbye to good friends and it's hard to make new ones. Try establishing pen pals for your children in the new school long before the move is to occur. Relationships can blossom through the mail so that the kids are not entirely unknown in the new location.

It's also helpful to create curiosity about the new city or neighborhood you're moving to. I'd encourage you to take full advantage of the Internet since every Chamber of Commerce has a website. Representatives of these organizations will welcome your request for additional information. When your children begin to understand the adventure of moving, they may develop a more positive attitude toward leaving. A bit of preparation and a healthy dose of communication can help clear the way for a smoother journey to a new home.

Why can't parents get children to obey just by explaining what they want them to do? Why is it so often necessary to punish or raise our voices to get them to cooperate? Why can't they just accept a few reasonable rules and avoid all that conflict? It just doesn't add up to me.

After working with children for years, I'm convinced that their challenging behavior is motivated in part by the desire for power that lies deep within the human spirit. From a very early age, they just don't want anyone telling them what to do. They are also great admirers of strength and courage. Maybe this is why mythical characters like Superman, Robin Hood and Wonder Woman have been so prominent in the folklore of children. Perhaps it is also why kids brag that "My dad can beat up your dad!" (One child said in reply, "That's nothing, my mom can beat up my dad, too!")

It is a fact that most boys, and some girls, care about the issue of "who's toughest." Whenever a youngster moves into a new neighborhood or a new school district, he often has to fight, either verbally or physically, to establish himself on the hierarchy of strength. There is usually a "top dog" in a group of children who bosses everyone else around. There is also a little defeated pup at the bottom of the heap who takes the brunt of everyone's abuse. And each child between those extremes usually knows where he or she ranks in relation to the others.

I believe this admiration for power also makes children want to know how tough their leaders are. They will occasionally disobey adults for the precise purpose of testing their determination and courage. Thus, whether you are a parent or grandparent or Boy Scout leader or bus driver or Brownie leader or a school teacher, I can guarantee that sooner or later, one of the children under your authority will clench his little fist and challenge your leadership. He will convey this message by his disobedient manner: "I don't think you are tough enough to make me do what you say." The way you handle that confrontation is being watched closely by every child in the group. Your reaction will determine how soon another occurs and with what intensity it is driven.

Facing the Next Step in Life

"And if it is disagreeable in your sight to serve the LORD, choose for yourselves today whom you will serve: whether the gods which your fathers served which were beyond the River, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land you are living; but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD." Joshua 24:15 (NASB77)

Last weekend I attended several graduation celebrations for students from NMSU; this weekend, I'll be attending my own son's graduation. These are exciting moments for the graduates and joyous times of celebration for the families. They are also critical junctures where each individual will be facing the challenge of defining for themselves who they will be vocationally and who they will be spiritually.

In the passage above, nearing the end of his era of leadership, Joshua called the nation together to reflect over who they would be, both individually and corporately. He recalled for them all the times in ancient and recent history when God had taken the initiative on their behalf. However, Joshua knew that every generation and ultimately every individual must make a conscious choice either to follow God or bounce among the vacillating, politically correct worldviews. In a day when morality grows ever more subjective and the standards of God are marginalized, we need standard-bearers to issue forth the same sense of spiritual challenge. With intentionality, Joshua exhorted them to "put away the foreign gods ... and incline their hearts to the LORD, the God of Israel." By the force of his personal fidelity, Joshua made a lasting impression on the spiritual psyche of his generation. As we face our own junctures in life, we too must decide with respect to this timeless question. Joshua's generation made the right choice. I pray that ours will as well.

Guidelines set for future NMSU tuition increases Regents approve limit of 6 percent a year

New Mexico State University's Board of Regents approved an agreement with student leadership to limit tuition and fee increases to 6 percent per year or less from 2009-2014.

A similar agreement between the board and students expires at the end of fiscal year 2008-2009.

"It is important for the budgetary planning of both our students and the university to have a multi-year plan for tuition rates," said Jennifer Taylor, senior vice president for Business and Finance. "We are committed to keeping NMSU accessible through our pricing policy. This agreement was a cooperative effort between the students and the university, led by Associated Students of New Mexico State University President Marisa Ortega."

A statement from ASNMSU outlined the partnership between students and the university

"The five-year tuition plan established by past ASNMSU leadership and renewed continually by the Board of Regents from 1989 through 2009 has substantially benefited the students of New Mexico State University by giving them a voice in tuition decisions," said the statement, submitted by Ortega. "This plan has provided predictability and consistency with respect to tuition, allowed for more prudent financial planning and helped ensure that tuition/fee decisions are consistent with the goals and objectives of the university and the New Mexico State Legislature.'

The agreement covers tuition and fees for full-time students. If a tuition credit is imposed by the Legislature in any given year, the increase shall not exceed 6 percent in addition to the percent obligated by the tuition credit. The agreement also calls for the university to aggressively seek grant and loan funds to assist students and parents in meeting increasing educational costs.

"The objective of this five-year tuition and fee guideline is to provide a balanced check on budget growth and student educational costs," said the statement. 'ASNMSU recognizes that neither the university's nor the students' growth and quality of education can improve without the other, and each depends on the other. ... With continued stable and predictable tuition rates and fees, current and future students, as well as their parents, will be more capable of developing dependable financial planning."

Francisco Mario RTIZ

Francisco Mario Ortiz, a local attorney, is asking for your vote for the State Magistrate Court Judge position. There is only one position open in this election. He is the only candidate with a law degree and the only candidate who is a practicing attorney.

Experience:

I have 57 years of life experience. I have been a trial attorney since 1986. I have practiced in the Federal, State, County and City Courts in Albuquerque and Las Cruces; also in the Federal Courts in Santa Fe and Roswell; in the State Courts in Silver City, Deming, Alamogordo, Roswell, and Hobbs; in the City Courts in Socorro and Mesilla; and the State Magistrate Courts in Anthony and of course Las Cruces. I have seen and experienced the best-run Courts and the worst. I have seen what works and what does not work.

PUBLIC SERVICE:

I served on the Southern NM Legal Aid Board of Directors for over six years, and the UNM Alumni Board of Directors for four years. I have been a volunteer at the Pro Se Clinic at the District Court for over six years. I have been a strong supporter of MMSU's KRWG National Public Radio, especially during their drives. I am a member of AARP. I was the president of the Doña Ana County Bar Association for two years.

Thank you for your consideration. Paid for by the committee to elect Francisco Mario Ortiz. Rose Chavarria Treasurer.

New driver's licenses coming to Las Cruces Hi-tech license to debut here May 19

The state's Motor Vehicle Division (MVD) unveiled a new hi-tech driver's license to better protect the public from identity theft, with bio-metric facial recognition technology at work, that will start May 19 at the MVD office in Las Cruces.

The new license has several new security features on it, to make it even harder to forge. The new license program compares a current photo with former photos on file in the MVD database.

The new licenses will be issued at the MVD office in Las Cruces

The new license procedure now starts with a temporary license extension first. Because the process of confirming the photo identity Lani Sample CLASS takes time, applicants for licenses will now leave the MVD office with a temporary license extension, which they will use with their hole-punched license until their regular license arrives in the mail within seven to 10 days.

The temporary license extension is only valid when presented with the individual's hole-punched license.

The state launched new public affairs campaign to alert the public that the temporary license extension exists and to alert businesses that the temporary license extension should be accepted as valid identification when presented with the hole-punched license. The campaign, called "Take the Temp!" will seek to alert law enforcement, airports, hospitals, schools, retail outlets and anywhere else an ID is required.

Las Crucens are cruisin' for St. Jude's Hospital

Five stops and free entertainment featured on rally run

By BETHANY CONWAY

Whether it's by motorcycle, hot rod or the family car, everyone is invited to participate Saturday, June 7, as Las Cruces cruises for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

In its first year, the St. Jude's Rally Run, a "cruisin' event" to raise funds for the well-known children's hospital, will feature five stops, each offering live music from local bands.

Sponsored by several local businesses and coordinated by Tudy Guadian, local motorcycle enthusiast, the event was organized to raise funds for children of the world who are stricken with diseases like cancer, AIDS and Sickle Cell Anemia.

The third largest health care charity in the country, St. Jude Children's Research Hospital normally takes on patients with the toughest cases, and no patients pay for treatment beyond what is covered by their insurance.

Justin Estes of Primetime Fitness, one of the event's major sponsors, said that all vehicles are welcome to cruise the city and raise money for the cause.

"This is our first one and it is going to be

Domenici works to improve brain and neurological illness research

Sen. Pete Domenici today joined Sen. Patty Murray (D-Wash.) to introduce bipartisan legislation to increase federal investment and coordination for research on neurological illnesses, including mental illnesses and other diseases of the brain. The National Neutrotechnology Initianeurological illnesses, disorders or injuries. "With so many more Americans suffering from some kind of neurological illness, disorder or injury, I believe it is time we take a serious look at how we approach and fund research into neuroscience and neurotechnology," Domenici said. "Neuroscience dovetails nicely with the work I've long advocated for greater research on the brain and nervous system diseases and disorders, particularly in relation to mental health."

Both Domenici and Murray said their legislation has broad implications for an aging Baby Boom generation, as well as a growing number of military servicemen and women whose lives have been affected by combat-related brain injuries and posttraumatic stress disorder.

"While our ability to understand how the brain works grows each day, our ability to understand and repair brain illnesses remains limited," said Murray. "For the millions of Americans that suffer from a brain related illness, and the thousands of Americans coming home from Iraq and Afghanistan with traumatic brain injury and PTSD, a new federal commitment to research and treatment can't wait. This bill will place a premium on sharing the information researchers gain every day and will support ongoing, but underfunded, programs at NIH." The Murray-Domenici legislation is

The Murray-Domenici legislation is designed to address key issues currently slowing the development of neurological treatments, such as: a lack of coordination between agencies that conduct brain and neurological research – including the National Institutes of Health; delays in translating basic research into treatments; and time-consuming and costly approval of new neurotechnology drugs, diagnostics and devices.

Domenici said the bill, which outlines $200 million annually for neuroscience research, could have a positive impact on such New Mexico institutions as the Albuquerque-based MIND Research Network that will have a stronger chance of applying for research funding.

"The MIND Research Network does amazing work on these issues," Domenici said.

From Primetime Fitness the cruise will move to the La Mesa Ball Field, at the corner of Josephine Street and San Jose Road in La Mesa, from 1 to 3 p.m. where the band 28 Chiefs will provide the entertainment.

From 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. TBA will perform at Palacio Bar, 2600 Avenida de Mesilla, and Zia Soul will play at El Patio Bar, 2171 Calle de Parian, from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

"We will wrap up at Elks lodge with food from 5 to 6:30 p.m. provided by Santa Fe Grill," said Guadian.

The event will end with a special performance at the Elk's Lodge, 3000 Elks Drive, featuring Algo Nuevo from 7 to 8:30 p.m., and The Liars will finish the night with a show from 9 p.m. to midnight.

"Everyone is playing for free and throwing in something to contribute," Estes said. "Every dollar we earn goes straight to St. Jude."

Those who do not purchase a full-day ticket can still enjoy the show at the Elk's Lodge.

"Everyone is welcome to show up at the final run (at Elk's Lodge) and it is $5 at the door," Guadian said.

Inspired by friends who have relied on the services of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, Guadian spent the last three months promoting the event and gaining interest from local organizations and individuals.

"There are a lot of people who have had family members in St. Jude's, and they know how important it is," Guadian said

"We are going to do this every year. We want to put Las Cruces on the map and let people see that we contribute to nationwide causes," Estes said.

All stops on the cruise will accept extra donations for St. Jude's. For more information, call Primetime Fitness at 532-9093.

Prom project supports underage drinking prevention 'Promfits' provides affordable prom dresses and tuxedos

What started out to be a project to help a friend go to prom on a limited budget, has turned out to be a successful entrepreneurial adventure for a Mayfield High School student and her Mom, Beth Davis, a teacher at MHS. After helping her friend, Natalie Davis wanted all teens in Las Cruces to be able to attend prom no matter what their financial status was. She took dress donations from the Rio Grande Theatre and Renee's Bridal, purchased dresses from thrift shops and received tuxes from Judy Lozano's warehouse buys. She even advertised on the radio to get the word out and held special fitting times for students to make their prom purchases at only $10 each.

Now Natalie Davis and a few supportive friends are turning their efforts and fun into another good cause by donating their profits to Doña Ana Action for Youth for next year's Prom Promise and underage drinking prevention projects. This is the first time recycling dresses for Prom will also produce recycled funds to help prevent the tragedies of underage drinking that are sometimes associated with prom.

Junior Grace Sarabia said, "This was my first prom and an experience I'll always remember." Mayra Vallez added, "It was fun to help with a program and play dress up too!" Junior Wendy Sanchez went to the ROTC Military Ball and appreciated getting a beautiful dress to wear.

Natalie Davis is graduating this month and will be attending NMSU in the fall to study clothing design as a career. She plans to continue the program next year and work further with Action for Youth for the goal of preventing underage drinking. She can be reached by emailing natty@nmsu.edu.

Natalie Davis gives the profits from her project "Promfits" to Jeri Lyn Renley, executive director for Doña Ana Action for Youth.

Mary M. Hoke, a professor of nursing at New Mexico State University and member of Sigma Theta Tau, nominated Rawson for the award because she said

Rawson has actively sought to improve the health care of the residents of the state throughout his 20 years serving in the New Mexico State Legislature.

"Senator Rawson has consistently sought to understand the reasons for the nursing shortage and worked with nursing education leaders to positively impact the situation," Hoke said. "Senator Rawson has worked to improve nursing edu-

Volunteers, Thank you.

Each year, over 200 Auxilians and Pastoral Care volunteers dedicate thousands of hours to Memorial Medical Center. Their selfless dedication and tremendous contribution to improving the health of our community is truly appreciated.

Caring is what we do best.

Memorial Medical Center is much more than just the sum of its parts. The people who work here, from the professional clinical staff to the laboratory techs to the food and nutrition personnel, all understand that they are part of something much bigger than their individual jobs - they are part of improving the health of an entire region. In honor of National Hospital Week, May 11-17, we thank all of the team members who work together at Memorial Medical Center to care for the community with compassion and respect.

SLO taking bids for Sierra Norte

Housing, commercial uses blended in new East Mesa development

By TODD G. DICKSON The Las Cruces Bulletin

State Land Commissioner Patrick Lyons is going ahead on taking bids to develop 270 acres of 323 acres of state land called La Cienega de la Sierra Norte.

Located in a tract of land called Section 16, it is in the heart of the Sierra Norte development and will make up the majority of the development's housing leading to the The Fountains at Sierra Norte where the new tournament-class Las Cruces Country Club golf course is being built.

Originally, the State Land Office was to begin taking bids on the land last month, but that was delayed after state Attorney General Gary King questioned a similar development lease with the same developer, Philip Philippou. The AG's office questions if state law allows the State Land Office to reward the developer with a portion of the land-sale proceeds in return for putting in infrastructure and master planning. Lyons contends that his state constitutionally mandated role of earning money from state trust lands gives him the authority to enter such leases in order to get a greater return than from raw land sales.

Although the two state offices haven't come to an agreement in the dispute, Lyons has decided to go ahead with the Section 16 releases. The Sierra Norte business lease was negotiated in 2005, according to a State Land Office release.

La Cienega will be a mixed-use com-munity, offering residential and commercial properties, along with reserved open space. It is designed to "sustain itself and rely less on other areas of the city for residential, recreational, retail, service and industry needs," the release stated.

The master plan calls for 217 residen-tial acres, of which 196 acres is zoned for single-family homes. That will translate into between four and 12 homes per acre.

The other 21 acres will be for multifamily residences, which will be neighborhoods feeding into 53.5 acres zoned for shops, restaurants, offices and open space.

Individual parcels for sale range from 55 acres for single-family homes to eight acres for commercial businesses and open space.

La Cienega de la Sierra Norte, a portion of the Sierra Norte development project north of U.S. Highway 70 off Sonoma Ranch Boulevard, is being released for bid by the State Land Office. La Cienega includes 270 acres of land to be developed for residential and commercial use.

City getting more attractive High-tech facilities are community assets

By NATISHA HALES

Las Cruces continues to be a desirable place for businesses, especially those that are centered on high technology. However, challenges still arise in the growing city, according to executives of local companies. The Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance, at its regional economic development forum May 9, reported that while the unemployment rate in Las Cruces is hovering just below 4 percent and is below the state and national rates, the average annual wage per job is just $29,244, which is 70 percent of the national average of $41,991.

There are several advantages to having a business in Las Cruces, however.

High-tech facilities such as New Mexico State University, NASA and White Sands Missile Range are assets to the commu-nity, according to Wendell Hull of Wendell Hull & Associates, a global leader in oxygen safety and equipment testing.

"There is a real benefit from (the university's) co-op pro-grams," Hull said. "We don't have great difficulty hiring from NMSU. Some of the pioneers of the area are full-time employees or consultants of my company."

tion period at NMSU several months before students graduate to provide training in the specialized field of atmospheric science, which is not offered as a major at the university.

While NMSU students also are valuable to the Advanced Care Hospital of Southern New Mexico, CEO Suzanne Quillen said the nationwide nursing shortage is a challenge.

"We're getting health care workers, but we're taking them from somewhere else," she said. "Five hundred nurses graduate each year in New Mexico, but less than half stay in the state.'

Even with the challenges, Las Cruces is still an attractive place to start a business, Hull said.

"Las Cruces has everything people need or want with the exception of too much traffic and skyscrapers," he said. "The weather is positive, it's an adequately sized town and the crime rate is reasonable.

MVEDA completed eight projects as of September 2007, bringing 636 new jobs to the area with an average salary of $12.77 per hour, an annual payroll of $16.9 million and $15.2 million in capital investment.

NATISHA HALES I The Las Cruces Bulletir Jaynes Construction has begun work on the new Las Cruces City Hall on Main Street next to the Thomas Branigan Memorial Library. The $26 million construction project will combine offices of the current City Hall and the city office center on Alameda Boulevard.

The 117,000-square-foot, three-story building is expected to be complete by the early part of 2010.

PROFILE Gary Sandler: Putting all his irons in the fire Long-time Realtor is also an author, publisher and talk-show host

By NATISHA HALES

Being a real estate agent is definitely a full-time job, and while many find they have little time for anything else, Gary Sandler devotes well more than the traditional 40 hours a week to his job and the community.

While his full-time job is president of Gary Sandler Inc. Realtors, he also is publisher of the monthly Real Estate Connections newsletter, author of the Real Estate Connections weekly newspaper column and host of the weekly Real Estate Connections radio show.

But he doesn't stop there. He has recently stepped out of his boundaries as Realtor and has given more of his already-limited time to the Board of Directors of Las Cruces Downtown.

"I really enjoy doing this. I suppose a juggler enjoys what he or she does," Sandler joked. "I really enjoy the fast pace, the deadlines and making it all work.'

With as many irons as Sandler has in the fire, it would be difficult to excel at just one task, but Sandler has the plaques on his wall to prove he can do all he has undertaken extremely well.

While a Realtor in Carlsbad, Calif., Sandler was the No. 1 Coldwell Banker agent. When he moved to Las Cruces in 1993, he continued as a top-selling agent while working for RE/MAX and was named the No. 1 agent in New Mexico and West Texas by the Electronic Realty Association.

He also was named the 2007 Talk Show Host of the Year by the New Mexico Broadcasters Association for his radio show that airs from 4 to 6 p.m. every Monday on KSNM-AM 570. He beat out other hosts in Las Cruces, Santa Fe, Roswell and Farmington.

Local listeners enjoy the 2007 Talk Show Host of the Year, according to an Arbitron survey conducted last fall that revealed Sandler's radio show has the most loval listeners during his time block. He beat out 25 other radio stations in Las Cruces and El Paso, as listeners reported keeping their tuners locked on Sandler's show for six of eight quarter-hours.

His first love, however, is real estate, and Sandler has been a Realtor for 33 years, the last 15 of which have been spent in Las Cruces.

After high school, Sandler joined the U.S. Air Force. After four years, he entered law enforcement, but soon followed in his father's and grandfather's footsteps. "They were retailers before malls

became big, and then they switched over to real estate," Sandler said. "They've been doing it for over 50 years.

Since Sandler became an agent, he's seen many changes. "It's just amazing," he said. "In California, I started selling entry-level houses for $39,000, which are now

He moved to Las Cruces in 1993 for a change of pace, and he found the market was

> "I moved looking for higher quality of life and a slower pace," he said. "In 1993, homes were selling at $39,000 and now are $150,000. And it's just going to continue on. Sandler started his own company - Gary Sandler Inc. Realtors – in 2004.

"I wanted more say in how customer service was provided,' he said.

Shortly after he started his own business, Sandler started the newsletter, column and radio show. Each medium of communication provides people in the area with information on what's going on in the local real estate market, including interest rate and credit information. In his newsletter, readers also may find a recipe or two.

"There's no single source in the area for that type of information," Sandler said. "I found myself filling a need. People want to know.

Despite recent reports of a national slowdown in homebuilding and the real estate market, Sandler said his business is still succeeding in selling commercial, residential and investment properties as well as land. "Businesses have to adapt to whatever the market conditions require," he said. "After this long (in the real estate business), I should have figured out how to adapt."

After making Las Cruces his home, Sandler started to get involved in the community. He began by serving on the Board of Directors for The Whole Enchilada Fiesta and has also volunteered to be one of the 10 Most Wanted, a fundraiser for the March of Dimes. He served on the board for the local chapter of the American Red Cross before joining Las Cruces Downtown as a board member.

"I wanted to be part of the revitalization and to be able to help build something for the community," Sandler said.

While his office is located on South Telshor Boulevard, moving his home and his business Downtown is something Sandler said he would love to do.

"I would love to be able to wake up, walk downstairs, get a cup of coffee and a croissant and go to the office, all the while with my car kept in the garage," he said.

He owns the building where his office is located, so that makes it difficult to move his business to the "heart of the city," but living Downtown is "high on my priority list," Sandler said.

Though his career and civic duties take up a lot of time, Sandler still is able to pursue other hobbies.

He plays the piano and has had gigs around time, including the Azul lounge at the Hotel Encanto de Las Cruces and the re-opened Meson de Mesilla. On the weekends, Sandler said he likes to travel as much as he can.

After his position as B-52 crew chief in the Air Force, aircraft remains on Sandler's list of hobbies. While he has five skydiving jumps under his belt, presidential aircraft especially interests Sandler, and he recently returned from a trip to Seattle's air museum, which showcases the plane Vice President Lyndon Johnson took to Dallas after President Kennedy was assassinated.

No matter how far his travels may take him, Sandler will return to his home of Las Cruces.

"This is my absolute home," he said. "The real estate market is as bright and sunny as the area. It's very positive based on job growth, migration and the military presence. As soon as the lull is over, we're going to pick up where we left off and regain our momentum."

Interest in wind energy increasing

Carlos Rosencrans, who will conduct the annual windmill workshop next week at New Mexico State University, said that he is seeing more interest in the natural energy source with the current green movement.

He has received more than 30 applications for the windmill workshop that will be conducted Thursday, May 22, through Saturday, May 24.

About 10 applicants are from the Navajo Nation, but there also are a few from northern California, Texas and Missouri

NMSU is the only university in the United States that offers a windmill workshop.

The windmill helped the United States to settle and hold the West as the nation expanded across the continent. It supplied water for farmers and ranchers and for railroad watering stations when steam locomotives were powered by wood and coal.

Ranchers place windmills so that their cattle spread out over the ranges to prevent over-grazing.

"A lot of the range land would not have been used for pasture if water hadn't been available from the wind-mills," Rosencrans said. "The cows go just so far to graze, and then they come back for water."

Windmills, which have wheels made of "sails" to catch

NMSU hosting workshop the wind, vary in size. The gearboxes, or "motors," also have different sizes, corresponding to the wheel sizes. The motors drive rods through the drop pipe.

The valves are enclosed tightly in a cylinder. When the motor drives the rods down, the pressure closes the bottom valve. During upward movement, the bottom valve opens to allow water into the system. And when the rod pushes down again, the top valve is opened and the water is lifted to the surface in the drop pipe.

The wind velocity also affects the windmill rotations and how fast the rods pump. "It's a slow process," Rosencrans said. "The water volume is measured in gallons per hour.'

The check valves are sealed with "leathers," a term used for former leather seals. Now, manufacturers use a rubber compound for seals.

But the friction against the cylinders wear out the seals.

"That's the part that wears," Rosencrans said. "Cowboys have to pull the sucker rods to replace the seals.

But this natural energy resource also can be erratic. The winds diminish during the hot, dry months of July and August.

"The windmills have a hard time keeping up with the cattle water demands," Rosencrans said.

The windmill motors have not changed much through the years. Previously, bearings had to be rebuilt, but they can be replaced with a hardened plastic compound. Windmill motors require little maintenance other than lubricating the gearbox once a year, Rosencrans said. During the regular school semester, Rosenscrans teaches agricultural mechanics.

Mesilla Valley drought hard local "Bank your forage so that you can pro-Last rainfall recorded in February

By MARVIN TESSNEER The Las Cruces Bulletin

Cattle ranchers are going through a critical period. May and June are the hottest and driest months of the year, New Mexico State University range specialist John Fowler said.

The last rainfall recorded by the Department of Plant and Environmental Science at NMSU was in February – .17 inches. The area did not receive any winter moisture, and there is a lack of cool-season grass or weeds.

But in this part of the Chihuahuan Desert, the time to prepare for droughts is 10 to 20 years before they occur, Fowler advised. "At this time of year, calves are growing fast, and they draw down their mother cows by nursing," he said. "So what happens when it's dry and hot and the mother cows have big calves that are demanding a lot of nutrition? She needs green feed so that she can recycle and be bred again."

Ranchers should prepare for droughts by maintaining multiple water sources for their cattle, including redistribution of pipelines from windmill tanks and earthen tanks that catch rain runoff, lining earthen tanks with plastic or clay to retain water longer or covering large steel-rim tanks to reduce evaporation.

"You have to save your forage resources to survive in the Chihuahuan Desert,' Fowler said. The Chihuahuan Desert has a fragile ecological system. Range specialists use the Palmer Drought Severity System, which shows drought cycles from 1895 to 2008.

duce high-value calves that you can sell at the peak of the cycle," Fowler said. "Rest your range when the prices are low. You can take advantage when other ranchers are selling off for liquidation or high culling rates. You can buy heifers real cheap then or maintain your own numbers.

Tom Mobley said the range is as dry as he has ever seen it, and he is supplementally feeding his stock north of Las Cruces.

"We haven't had any rain on my place since August," he reported. "I've got a lot of old grass that has gone dormant, but most of my cattle are holding up pretty well." Leedrue Hyatt also said that his range in Luna County did not receive any winter moisture or cool-weather forage, and his herd number is down to 60 percent of allotment.

'We haven't had any rain since November, and we're just trying to hold on to what we have," Hyatt said.

Commercial Properties

for your showing.

Are you a landlord with a no-pet policy?

You may have to make an exception

According to our friends at the U.S. Census Bureau, a total of 74,654 individual housing units were providing shelter for homeowners and tenants in Doña Ana County at the close of 2006. Housing units include single-family homes, townhomes, condominiums, mobile homes, apartments, a group of rooms or a single room that is used as separate living quarters. More than 32 percent of those units, or 24,363 to be exact, were occupied by renters.

Our friends at the Census Bureau also noted that at the end of that same period, people who were disabled in one way or another occupied 16.3 percent of those housing units. By my fuzzy math, that's a total of 3,955 renters in Doña Ana County whose housing situations fell under the protection of the Americans With Disabilities Act. Today's numbers are thought to be substantially the same. If you're a landlord, you are also governed by the Act when it comes to accommodating our friends, family and neighbors who are considered disabled. How so? The answer is abundantly clear.

The Fair Housing Amendment Act requires landlords, condominium associations and other housing providers to make reasonable accommodations for the disabled, including "reasonable accommodations for service animals." What is a reasonable accommodation? According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Department of Justice (DOJ): "A reasonable accommodation is a change, exception, or adjustment to a rule, policy, practice or service that may be necessary for a person with a disability to have an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling, including public and common use spaces."

Okay, that's clear enough. The question now is what constitutes a service animal? The Fair Housing Amendment describes it as being "any animal that assists someone who is disabled. Can a horse be considered a service animal? Yes, according to the act. For practical purposes, however, we're talking animals of the canine variety here.

Service dogs come in many shapes and sizes and provide numerous and diverse types of assistance for people with virtually any type of disability. "Service dog" is actually the generic term for dogs that help physically or mentally disabled persons. The animals are trained to provide specific types of assistance and are categorized by the type of assistance they provide. Here are just a few of their categories and job descriptions:

Mobility Assist Dogs pull a person's wheelchair, carry items in a backpack, retrieve items dropped by people, open and close doors and help his or her handler dress and undress. Walker dogs help by balancing or acting as a counter balance for the handler. Hearing dogs, on the other hand, are specially trained to assist deaf people, alerting their owners to such noises as doorbells, phones, crying babies and even teakettle whistles.

Seizure Alert/Response Dogs are trained to respond to a person's seizures and either stay with the person or go for help. Some are even trained to push a button that dials 911, then bark when the operator answers the call. A Psychiatric Service Dog helps people with mental disabilities such as agoraphobia (not being able to go outside alone) and can help them stay focused. There are also dogs trained to assist people with autism. Some dogs are cross-trained to assist people with multiple disabilities, such as a guide dog that also assists with mobility.

While landlords and housing providers are bound by law to make accommodations for service animals, they are strictly prohibited from inquiring into the nature of a person's disability. Landlords are allowed to ask for information or documentation to determine if an accommodation is actually required due to a dis-ability. But what if the landlord already knows about the disability and the need is readily apparent or known? In that case, the landlord is prohibited from inquiring further regarding the nature of the disability. For example, if is obvious that a person is blind and that person asks permission to keep a seeing-eye dog on the premises, the permission must be given without further inquiry.

Well, there you have it. If you're a landlord, and one of your tenants or pro-

IN GOOD COMPANY: SUN-TECH SERVICES INC. = Fueling alternative energy solutions for 26 years

Sun-Tech Services provides cost-saving water treatment

By NATISHA HALES

While the current costs of oil are fueling a need for other forms of energy, Sun-Tech Services has been providing alternative energy solutions for businesses and residences for 26 years.

Owned by Hale Huber, who has lived in Las Cruces since 1970, Sun-Tech Services opened during another time when the focus was placed on alternative energy. In 1982, federal and state solar energy tax credits were offered, and Huber's business was one of 26 solar companies in the area. The federal tax credits were no longer offered in 1985, and by 1986, Sun-Tech was the only solar company left. His business focused on servicing and repairing solar energy systems, but Huber said he had to find a new direction for his business.

"It was at about that time that I learned about Kinetico water-treatment systems, Huber said.

He learned Kinetico used potassium chloride as the regenerant for water-softening systems instead of sodium chloride, or salt. "Potassium is a positive mineral, the same found in bananas," Huber said. "When water is softened, some of the potassium goes into the water, which is good for us, and we could also use it for watering house plants. With sodium chloride, the softened water would have salt in it. Most of us already get more salt than we need in our diets.

Ready

Because of the salt used in the watersoftening process, Huber said people with certain medical conditions that restricted sodium from their diets were unable to have "soft water" until he tried the Kineti-co system. "I was pleased with the quality of Kinetico and realized that a salt-free water softener had real potential," Huber said, "so I became a dealer, and sales have increased every year." In addition to the potassium chloride used in the water treatment system, the system needs no electricity to operate.

"Without any electrical components, there are less problems with maintenance, and it's 50 to 80 percent more efficient than one with electrical components,' Huber said.

Sun-Tech also offers a reverse osmosis purified drinking water system, a solar energy pool heating system and a passive solar energy water-heating system.

While the interest in alternative energy cooled down over the years, interest has now picked up, even with the economic downturn, Huber said.

"Whenever there is a substantial increase in fuel cost or electricity, there's an immediate interest in alternative energy. he said. "What I've found is now has been a positive time because of the increases in gas prices. People are very aware of energy costs, and they are getting much more interested in solar energy.

There are still some challenges, however.

"My biggest challenge is to keep up with the changes of technology in water treatment and solar energy," Huber said. "I have to find new, creative ways to inform the people of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County of what is available to them regarding water treatment and solar energy savings.

Huber has found a creative way of informing the community through his involvement in the Las Cruces Home Builders Association. During the associ-ation's Spring Showcase of Homes, Fall Parade of Homes and the Home Improvement and Lifestyle Show, Sun-Tech Services displays its products, which are used in most of the homes showcased.

"Over the years, we've had gradually increased interest or involvement with new construction because we have been working closely with the Las Cruces Home Builders Association," Huber said.

In addition to providing his customers with cost-efficient water treatment systems, Huber also is involved with Las Cruces' sister cities of Lerdo, Mexico, and Leinburg, Germany. Huber, who happens to speak both German and Spanish, has visited both cities several times and is currently the president of the Las Cruces Sister Cities International Program.

"Las Cruces is a very accepting community, and I am very, very connected to being a citizen of Las Cruces," Huber said. "I feel very good about investing in Las Cruces.

What inspired you to go into business?

I saw a need for a professional service company providing Las Cruces with highquality water treatment and solar-energy systems.

What is unique about your business? We are a local business that has been in Las Cruces for 26 years. I have based my water-treatment business on using potassium chloride as the regenerant rather than salt. Potassium is good for the environment and us.

What is your business philosophy?

Provide quality equipment, professional installation and dependable service. Treat our customers the way we would like to be treated.

What is the best part of your job? Working with a staff of dependable, positive employees and having thousands of satisfied customers.

How do you keep your competitive edge?

I try to treat each employee and customer as an individual and relate to them in a respectful and positive way. As a result, I have several employees who have worked with me for more than 20 years and thousands of customers who return to Sun-Tech for all their water treatment and solar needs.

How are you marketing your business? I use a wide variety of marketing tools and have been active with the Las Cruces Home Builders Association. I also encourage customer referrals.

What is the best business decision you've made so far?

The best decision I made was to use my aptitudes and follow my interests to get into business.

What adjustments or improvements have you made so far?

Over the past 26 years, I changed the primary focus of my business from solar-energy systems to water-treatment systems. With the return of the solar tax credits two years ago, I am now focusing part of my business back to solar systems.

Describe the items you carry, in brief, and their price ranges. Kinetico salt-free, non-electric water softeners and reverse osmosis purified drinking-water systems. Passive solar hot water heating systems and Fafco solar swimming pool heating systems. Sun-Tech Services owner Hale Huber, left, and his staff provide cost-efficient water treatment systems for commercial, residential and industrial locations.

NATISHA HALES The Las Cruces Bulletin

What is your most popular item? The most popular water treatment products are the Kinetico Whole House Water Treatment System including the salt-free, non-electric water softener and reverse osmosis system.

What is the most important thing about your business that you wish people knew?

The hard water, chlorine and sulfur, and other problems with the water of Las Cruces and Doña Ana County from both wells and community water systems can be easily solved with Kinetico watertreatment equipment.

Who are your customers?

Environmentally aware people in Las Cruces and Doña Ana County who want soft water, purified drinking water for their homes and reduced energy

FINANCIAL CORNER The employee benefits challenge Just 63 percent of smaller businesses offer health insurance

After four consecutive years of doubledigit increases in employer-sponsored health insurance premiums, it's no wonder there are more than 5 million fewer jobs offering health insurance than in 2001. While it is difficult for any employer to absorb the skyrocketing cost of health care, small and mid-sized employers may be the hardest hit. In fact, only 63 percent of firms with between three and 199 employees offer health insurance, as compared to 99 percent of larger companies with 200 or more employees, according to the Society for Human Resource Management.

This puts some smaller employers between a rock and a hard place. The rock: skyrocketing costs of health care. The hard place: the need to attract and retain quality employees who are accustomed to high levels of coverage at little or no out-of-pocket costs. Fortunately, there are several options available to build an employee benefit plan that is both valued by employees and cost-effective for the employer.

Getting creative

Nowadays, offering a competitive benefits plan can be a critical factor in attracting and retaining quality employees in a competitive labor market. One way employers are beefing up their benefits package is by including a number of "voluntary benefits," which employees select and pay for themselves, in some cases, with pre-tax dollars. The cost to the employer is limited to administration charges, which are offset by the savings in FICA tax.

Of the most popular voluntary "family-friendly" benefits offered by any size company, dependent-care flexible spending accounts are most common. Life insurance for dependents ranks second in frequency with flextime in third place. Along with many others, these options are gaining popularity, even in small companies' packages, and allow a company to bring more to the benefits table without jeopardizing the bottom line.

The challenge

Selecting an appropriate benefits package that offers the best value and fits into a company's overall strategy can be challenging. Gone are the days when an employer could call a broker and simply "order" a health insurance plan like a burger at a drive-through window. In today's world of three-tier prescription benefits, in- and out-of network pricing, multiple flexible spending account options and consumer-driven health care options, the choices are seemingly endless.

New products are introduced on a regular basis, prices often fluctuate and the laws and regulations surrounding benefit plans can be complicated and change rapidly. Not only that, but determining which benefits the employees truly value can vary from company to company. Making an informed decision often requires a great deal of time, manpower and resources that smaller companies don't always have.

Communication is also important when making any benefits changes. Employees need to see the wider value when cost non-traditional

benefits can go a long way ...

structures or benefit choices change. Companies need to be able to respond favorably and honestly when employees ask, "What's in this change for me?"

> The help of an expert While the decision makers in small to midsize companies often wear multiple hats, relying on the expertise of an employee benefit specialist can prove to be extremely beneficial and cost efficient. This is an effective way to become quickly educated on a variety of options and new ideas currently in the marketplace. For companies that come to that conclusion, the result is often a plan that provides even greater benefit to both the company and its employees. This can be accomplished for the same or even lower cost of an existing plan.

Many insurance representatives will provide a free-benefits consultation.

Although other financially-oriented organizations are following suit, not everyone is qualified to give benefits advice. Employers should look for representatives with a track record of benefits experience, references and/or professional certification such as a certified employee benefits specialist, a registered health underwriter or a registered employee benefits consultant.

A skilled benefit specialist will also help communicate a new plan to employees. In some cases, communication is one of the most critical factors in getting employees to fully understand the total value and scope of their benefits package.

The right combination of traditional and nontraditional benefits can go a long way in terms of attracting and retaining employees. The trick is discovering that perfect mix.

Dig yourself out of debt with dignity

A small payment

made regularly is more valuable to the lender ...

Communication with lenders should be a priority

By KIM T. BLUEHER Director of Lending, WESST Corp.

America's debt crisis is a collective one. Our government is spending beyond its means, and so are businesses and individuals.

How much debt is too much? When we can't afford to make payments on time.

How did we get here? Sometimes we spend too much. Sometimes divorce, illness or unexpected unemployment affects our ability to meet financial obligations. A sudden drop in sales can evaporate cash flow for a small business. And if loan payments are late, that business might have trouble ever getting another loan.

A successful relationship with your creditor depends on communication. At the first sign of difficulty, warn lenders of your predicament. They will respect you for taking responsibility and are more likely to be flexible about restructuring your payment plan.

I recently received a letter from a borrower who owns a small publishing business. She had lost an order, income was down and she worried about her ability to make payments on time. She wrote all her creditors to alert them and said she would do her best to meet payments. To date she has not missed a payment, but if she does, I'll know why and be prepared to work with her.

When clients miss a payment, it's often because they mailed it late or simply forgot to write the check. But sometimes the business is in trouble and the owner is too embarrassed to talk about it. Such avoidance causes stress and frustration for lender and client. As humiliating as it is to admit we can't pay a bill, most lenders are willing to restructure debt and set up payments more suitable to a business's or individual's resources.

Because a lender's goal is to be repaid, enabling the borrower to resume regular payments – even if it takes longer for the loan to be repaid — is best for everyone. The lender then has money to lend another client, and the entrepreneur maintains a good credit rating and a sense of pride at overcoming adversity.

When renegotiating a payment plan, the goal should be to design a payment that can be made every month. A small payment made regularly is more valuable to the lender and your credit record than a larger payment made irregularly. Consider the case of one of our first clients, who obtained a small loan for her cleaning company. When health problems forced her to close the business. she spent the next few years moving around the country. Despite her hardships, she faithfully sent us $25 every month. It took her almost 10 years to pay off a three-year loan. But to me, this woman's character and moral fiber are unparalleled. Another client whose sales fell short of expectations after she moved to a larger location managed to keep up with payments on her small-business loan, but not on her personal mortgage. She decided to sell her house and found the mortgage company willing to work with her because she keeps in touch and the lender knows she is actively working to sell the house and pay off the debt.

If you have loans that are already overdue or have been turned over to a collection agency, it's past time to get over your embarrassment and contact the lender to negotiate a mutually acceptable arrangement. Before you start negotiating, learn as much as you can about the options available to you and the best strategies to use. You can research resources on the Internet or go to www.moneymanagement. org for more information.

Also, don't hire a debt-consolidation agency or consultant before you're sure it's reliable and won't ruin your credit for years to come.

John Christopher, Vice President of Southern New Mexico for Comcast, and Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima joined volunteers painting Žia Middle School on Comcast Cares Day.

Comcast Cares Day a success

On May 3, approximately 200 local Comcast employees and their families and friends, along with more than 175 Zia Middle School teachers, parents, students and staff volunteered to paint Zia Middle School. Las Cruces' project stemmed from Comcast's seventh annual Comcast Cares Day. Las Cruces' efforts were part of a statewide success; more than 2,000 New Mexicans volunteered and nationally 50,000 participated in the day of service.

Local Comcast volunteers teamed up with Bravo Mic 101 Gold, the Las Cruces Bulletin, Las Cruces Sun-News, Turner Network, International House of Pancakes and KWAL Paint to paint the entire exterior of Zia Middle School and the patio area. In all, a grand total of 1,500 hours of volunteer labor, 400 gallons of paint and 80 gallons of trim paint. The Comcast Foundation also donated more than $1.5 million in grants to local community partner organiza-tions across the country on behalf of each employee and family member who volunteers on Comcast Cares Day. The grants will help Comcast's community partners continue their mission of serving the community throughout the year.

Send us your agenda items!

Local organizations and businesses are encouraged to send their workshop and meeting items to be included in the Business Section of the Las Cruces Bulletin. Send general information about the event, as well as the date, time, location, contact and cost, if any, to business@lascrucesbull etin.com. Agenda items must be received by noon Friday for consideration in the next week's Bulletin.

named David Oakeley as executive director of marketing for Buffalo Thunder Casino. In his position, Oakeley oversees all marketing operations for Buffalo Thunder Resort Casino, Cities of Gold Casino and all other Pueblo of Pojoaque enterprises. "David Oakeley's extensive marketing background, local presence and OAKELEY his experience and knowledge of the Pueblo enterprises will greatly ben-efit our strategy of offering the best gaming experience in New Mexico at Buffalo Thunder Resort Casino," said Allen Mosley, CEO of Pueblo of Pojoaque Enterprises. Oakeley, a native New Mexican, has managed the marketing operations for Cities of Gold Casino and Hotel, the Sports Bar Race Book & Casino, Towa Golf Course and all Pueblo of Pojoaque owned businesses since 2000. His background combines 30 years of experience in media and public relations including 10 years in radio and television broadcasting. He is a former press secretary for the New Mexico Governor's office and directed the marketing, promotions and in-house broadcast operations for the athletic depart-ment of New Mexico State University for nearly 10 years. Oakeley has also managed marketing, promotions, public relations and special events such as concerts and open-air market operations for the New Mexico State Fair.

2008 NAFTA Institute approaching

The New Mexico Economic Development's Office of Mexican Affairs, the City of Juarez, the Mesilla Valley Economic Development Alliance, the New Mexico Small Business Development Network, Western New Mexico University and the International Business Accelerator have joined together to co-host the "2008 NAFTA Insti-tute/Supplier Meet the Buyer Conference," which will take place on June 26 and 27 at the Sunland Park Racetrack and Casino in Sunland Park.

This unique event combines the activities of the "NAFTA Institute" and the "Supplier Meet the Buyer Trade B2B sessions." The conference is designed for businesspeople interested in selling their products to the North American market, importing products from Mex-ico and/or becoming a supplier to Mexico's maquiladora industry. The organizers of the conference will match potential Mexican buyers/sellers with participants in private business-to-business sessions. Anybody interested in learning the mechanics of doing business with Mexico or Canada will also benefit from the NAFTA Institute ses-sions. During the event, topical experts will be discussing the various aspects of conducting cross-border business.

An inauguration will begin the conference late afternoon on June 26, followed by a review of the North American Free Trade Agreement; and the border security effort's impact on cross-border trade. A dinner will be held later that evening accompanied by live entertainment. On June 27, various experts will be presenting on cross-border trade topics, and companies will be participating in business-to-business sessions with various buyers/sellers.

The cost to participate in this event is $79, which includes meals, materials and entry to all sessions. A special rate of $30 will be charged companies only wishing to participate in the business-to-business sessions. Interested parties are urged to sign up quickly, as space is limited. Special hotel rates for conference participants have been arranged with area hotels. A limited amount of scholarships providing special pricing for this event are available on a first-come, first-served basis. Detailed information on the agenda can be found at www.nmiba. com. For questions or specific information, contact the International Business Accelerator at (505) 589-2200 or info@nmiba.com.

Boberg renamed to economic development chair

BOBERG

Kevin Boberg, associate business dean at New Mexico State University and CEO of NMSU's Arrowhead Center, will continue as the Garrey E. and Katherine T. Carruthers Chair in Economic Development for NMSU's College of Business.

Boberg has held the economic development chair position since 2005. The position must be renewed every three years. "Kathy and I are absolutely delighted with this decision," said NMSU College of Business Dean Garrey Carruthers. "He's done a wonderful job by taking an active role in Arrowhead Center and working with many economic development projects in our state.

The economic development chair was created by a $500,000 gift from Carruthers and his wife. The chair received a $1 million match from the state. Earnings from the $1.5 million endowment are used to support the salary of the faculty member holding the chair, as well as program development and other needs.

I'm humbled and honored by the opportunity," Boberg said. "Governor and Mrs. Carruthers' contributions to the state through public and private life, and through philan-thropic endeavors are well known. I look forward to con-tinuing the work they began and we have continued – specifically in regard to our most important mission, serving our students and those in the state of New Mexico."

Arrowhead Center is a nonprofit organization created to commercialize new technologies and stimulate eco-nomic growth in New Mexico. Boberg earned his Ph.D. at Pennsylvania State University in 1983. He taught at Penn State and the University of Hawaii before joining the NMSU faculty in 1987.

There are now four, $1 million or more chairs in the College of Business. They include the Mountain States Insurance Group Endowed Chair, the Garrey E. and Katherine T. Carruthers Chair in Economic Develop-ment, the Robin T. Peterson Endowed Chair in Marketing and the Stan Fulton Chair in Business.

Mayor's Jazz Fest brings two greats to the Las Cruces stage

Music in the Park series celebrates its 15th year

By JOEL COURTNEY

Every year since 1994, the City of Las Cruces gives a wonderful gift of a variety of music – from jazz to country and Tejano to ska – available for free to the public in the serenity of the city's largest parks.

The 15th annual Music in the Park series will begin, as is the tradition, with the Mayor's Jazz Fest, which brings in internationally renowned players to perform in Las Cruces. This year's Mayor's Jazz Fest will feature Ritchie Cole on saxophone and Bobby Shew on trumpet. The Mayor's Jazz Fest will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday, May 25, at Apodaca Park, 801 E. Madrid Ave.

Cole, who grew up in Trenton, N.J., began playing alto saxophone at the age of 10. He quickly became addicted to the sounds of bebop. Although his high school had no stage band, Cole learned on his own playing with a local named Jackie Vee on the steps of Trenton's Fantasy Lounge each Sunday.

Cole studied with Charlie Mariano and Phil Wilson at the Berklee School of Music in Boston. He then toured the world as a drummer with Buddy Rich's big band.

Shew was born in Albuquerque, and he also began his musical journey at the age of 10. After beginning his career playing with the Tommy Dorsey Band, and alongside Woody Herman and Buddy Rich. Shew has traveled as a lead player with Robert Goulet, Paul Anka, Della Reese and Steve Allen.

Along with numerous performances and private teaching, Shew also conducts clinics and master classes at universities around the world. He has also served on the board of directors for the International Trumpet Guild and has acted as the National Trumpet Chairman for the International Association of Jazz Educators for 16 years.

The rest of the Music in the Park Series continues through the end of August, cycling through a wide variety of music each week. Each concert in the series is held at 7 p.m. on Sundays

In addition to providing a venue for local favorites like Steve Smith and Hardroad, Bayou Seco and Liquid Cheese, the concert series also gives Las Crucens a chance to see regional and national acts they wouldn't normally be able to experience. This includes acts like the Spanish pop sound of Albuquerque-based Sorela or the cowboy tunes of Syd Masters from Tijeras, N.M.

"We want to support local acts, but also pull in acts you don't normally see in the area," City of Las Cruces public liaison Robert Caldwell said.

The national act for this 2008 series is the folk duo of Brewer & Shipley, known for their 1970s' hit "One Toke Over the Line," which has been a folk music hit through the years.

The concert series will move each month, to better make use of the city's parks and allow more residents to enjoy the Music in the Park series. This year features Apodaca Park, Young Park and Klein Park.

Performances at Apodaca Park will be even more enjoyable than last year, due to the clearing of diseased trees which hampered stage visibility, Caldwell said. Caldwell recommends that attendees bring water, Caldwell recommends that attendees bring water, their own shade and something to sit on for each concert. By City Council policy, pets are not permitted at special events held at City of Las Cruces facilities.

NSTC opens 'The Last Five Years' this Friday Unique musical comedy tells couple's story from the beginning and end

No Strings Theatre Company presents "The Last Five Years" opening Friday, May 16, and running through Sunday, May 25, with 10 performances at the Black Box Theatre, 430 N. Downtown Mall.

"The Last Five Years" is directed by Tom Smith and stars Carrie Oliver and Cade Surface. Trae Blanco is the musical director.

Tony-winner Jason Robert Brown took home Drama Desk Awards for both Best Music and Best Lyrics for this piece. His musical revue, "Songs For a New World," was presented by No Strings Theatre Company in 2006, which also starred Carrie Oliver.

The musical chronicles a young couple's romance in a unique way: her story starts at the end of their relationship; his begins on the day they met. Cathy Hiatt is a struggling actress, and the highs and lows of her relationship with Jamie Wellerstein, an up-and-coming novelist, is the core of the story. It is an intensely personal look at a relationship from both people's perspective.

Oliver received her master's degree of music in musical theatre performance from Arizona State University and currently teaches private voice lessons with Las Cruces High School. Besides performing, she has served as music director for several shows in Arizona as well as Las Cruces, which include "Seussical the Musical" and "Christmas Carol" with American Southwest Theatre Company. She's been seen at the UTEP Dinner Theatre in "A Grand Night for Singing," as well as "Viva, El Paso!," "VeggieTales Live," "Carousel," "The Secret Garden," "Into the Woods," NSTC's "Songs for a New World," Las Cruces Community Theatre's "I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change" and originating the role of The Quiltmaker in "The Quiltmaker's Gift" with Phoenix Theatre Cookie Company.

Cookie Company. Surface is a visiting artist from The University of Michigan. While at UM, he has been a member of the University of Michigan Chamber Singers and the University of Michigan Chorale for two years. He performed with the Flint Symphony Orchestra and served on the arts advisory board at the Flint Institute of Music. Surface has received state championships in solo and ensemble work nine times since 2003. 'Caramel' brings viewers into the real lives of four women without clichés

REVIEW BY JEFF BERG For the Las Cruces Bulletin

Melted caramel is a key ingredient in this gentle, luscious and well-made film, imported from Lebanon. In spite of the fact that the charm, directing, story and cinematography were all high points of interest, one thing that really sticks with me is that warm, melted caramel was used to remove body hair from several clients at the Beirut based beauty salon where much of the action in this film takes place. What price vanity? Do people really do that? Ouch!

The story revolves around five women, all of whom are frequent customers or employees of the shop. It touches on various aspects of their lives, but most splendidly, on their love lives – or lack of. Importantly, this is not a shrill, nonsensical piece about the angst of love and life, but rather it is multi-generational and very real. Humor blends with worry, worry blends with drama, and all of it melts together.

The characters include: a brideto-be who must resort to culturally induced surgery so that her husband to be thinks he is marrying a virgin; a shop employee that - like many who are ensconced in adulterous affairs - thinks that her lover is going to leave his wife for her while ignoring the quiet flirtations of a handsome and single traffic cop who gives her a daily parking ticket - perhaps on purpose; an older woman who runs a tailoring shop that becomes gently smitten with a slightly odd French customer, a most dapper gentleman who has a keen eye for her as well; the older woman's mother, perhaps wrongly portrayed as comic relief, but who is actually probably suffering from undiagnosed dementia or Alzheimer's; and lastly, a lesbian hairdresser who is infatuated with a mysterious repeat customer, another bride-to-be, who silently questions her own sexu-ality on her frequent silent stops at the salon.

Ås directed by Nadine Labaki (who also stars), "Caramel" has a sensually pleasant feel to it. Labaki carries her characters and story well, not allowing them to ever become parodies of themselves nor allowing us to view the lives of these women as anything other than real.

"Caramel" becomes another in an extremely refreshing spate of films that have come to us from Middle Eastern filmmakers that does not dwell on war, cultural clashes or politics. The humor within is gently parallel to that of "The Band's Visit," which played to enthusiastic crowds a few weeks ago, and the wonderful Israeli film "Jellyfish," which hopefully will play here this summer. As each story draws to a finale of sorts, it was not hard for me to note that I had been invited in to the most private part of these women's lives. I was allowed to look at their hearts and souls, albeit briefly, and allowed to make my own conclusions on what would happen next, sans judgment, and how well they would fare as time went on. "Caramel" avoids almost all of the clichés that could have accompanied it and is an intelligent look at the stickiest of emotions.

I recently tried using melted caramel to remove nose hair. Not recommended. jeffberg@lascrucesbu lletin.com

Country music at its boldest 'Payday' features a wild story and excellent acting

The CineMatinee film at the Fountain Theatre for Saturday, May 17, will be "Payday" (1972, Rated R, 102 minutes).

A musician finds his life and his career jumping off the rails in this moody, intelligent drama. Maury Dann (Rip Torn) is a singer and songwriter struggling to hold on to his footing as one of the top names in country and western music. This being 1972, long before the Nashville sound had gone "mainstream," Dann has a new Cadillac and a small entourage to show for his efforts, but most of his shows are one-nighters at beer-soaked honky tonks in the Deep South.

Onstage, Dann comes off as a soft-hearted good ol' boy, but off the stand, Dann is a mean-spirited hell-raiser with a nearly unquenchable appetite for booze, pills and women. Over the course of a seemingly typical day and a half, Dann steals a fan's girlfriend; ditches his longtime mistress, Mayleen; picks up a naïve groupie, and gives her a crash course in life on the road; fires his guitar player (and best friend) and hires a starry-eyed teenager as his replacement; tries to bribe a disc jockey with booze and free records; has a harrowing run-in with his speed-addicted mother; discovers he's missed his son's birthday by four months; and, in cahoots with his manager Clarence, fast-talks his loyal driver, cook and go-fer, Chicago, into taking a possible murder rap. While "Payday" earned excellent reviews (par-ticularly for Rip Torn's superb performance as Maury Dann) and a handful of awards (Daryl Duke's direction won him a citation from the National Associa-tion of Film Critics, and Don Carpenter's screenplay received a prize from the Writer's Guild of America), the film's downbeat themes made it a tough sell. How-ever, "Payday" has gained a cult following, and more than one "outlaw" country star of the 1970s has tried to claim that the film was based on him.

A potpourri of movies, past and present, often with an emphasis on life in the West – which could mean the new West, the Old West, or anything in between - the CineMatinee series is designed to offer area residents a brief tutelage of various types and genres of film. At least one film each month for this series will have a "New Mexico Connection," drawing from the vast pool of movies made in the state or perhaps featuring a star/story drawn from New Mexico talent.

Unless otherwise noted, screening time for CineMatinee is 1:30 p.m., and admission is $4 for every-one except Mesilla Valley Film Society members who are admitted for $1. The theater is located one block south of the Mesilla Plaza. For more information, call 524-8287 or 522-0286.

Dance for Hope with DanceSport

NMSU team holds charitable event on heels of big win at Stanford competition

By JOEL COURTNEY

The New Mexico State University DanceSport Club is a diverse group of individuals who share a love for the beauty of rhythm and movement, and they enjoy sharing that love with the community.

Now the team is sharing even more by presenting a special spring event, the Dance for Hope, and a portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Mesilla Valley Community of Hope.

The Dance for Hope will consist of three performances, at 3 and 7 p.m. Saturday, May 17, and at 3 p.m. Sunday, May 18, all at the Hershel Zohn Theatre on the NMSU campus. Tickets are $10 and are available at the NMSU Ticket Office, 646-1420, and the Hershel Zohn Box Office, 646-4515.

NMSU DanceSport is actually two dis-tinct entities, the DanceSport Team and the DanceSport Club. The team is made up of members of a dance class at NMSU, while the club is made up of members of the team and the community who share a passion for dance. The DanceSport Team consists of graduate and undergraduate students from a wide variety of majors with Eric Fierro serving as coach and Debra Knapp serving as adviser. Although the NMSU DanceSport Team holds a dance performance each spring to raise funds for costumes and trips to competitions, the DanceSport Club has opted to hold its own performance to benefit the community.

"We really hope to get the support of the community," DanceSport Club President and team member Jennie Giron said. "We're all really excited about this performance."

Giron originated the idea for the Dance for Hope, but she said the committee that helped organize the event has put in numerous hours of hard work to make it a reality. In addition to the committee, a majority of the team's 35 members will participate in the event, which has called for hours upon hours of choreography and rehearsal time to make the show as polished as possible.

"Our members have worked really hard, selling tickets, practicing and choreographing for this event," Giron said.

Guests to the Dance for Hope will get to enjoy a wide variety of Latin, swing and ballroom dance by the NMSU DanceSport Team, including the waltz, paso doble, tango, samba, rumba, salsa, jive, foxtrot and more.

The dancers are hot off their recent victories at Stanford University's ninth annual Cardinal Classic Ballroom Dance Competition held April 26 and 27.

The 26 NMSU performers walked away from the Cardinal Classic with 29 top-six placements in a variety of events, including 10 first-place showings. According to Giron, the competition was fierce, paring NMSU against such schools as UC-San Diego, Berkeley, Stanford, San Jose State and UC-Santa Barbara.

For more information about the NMSU DanceSport Team or the DanceSport Club, call 644-0262 or visit http://dance.nmsu. edu/dancesport.

Providing music for the high society

Ron Thielman has a history of great music and leads three diverse bands in the Las Cruces area

St. A.

BY JOEL COURTNEY The Las Cruces Bulletin

Many Las Crucens have enjoyed the musical offerings of Ron Thielman, leader of the big band High Society Orchestra, the German band Eidelvies and the Doo Dah Dixieland Band over the years.

This rare talent has performed as part of some of the biggest-name bands in the business – Tommy Dorsey, Guy Lambardo, Sammy Kaye, Art Kassell and many more – but outside of a touring gig, Thielman calls Las Cruces home.

Thielman was born in Stuttgart, Ark., but his family moved to Jonesboro, Ark., while he was still in junior high school. Had it not been for that move, he would have spent his adolescence playing football rather than discovering a love of music.

Jonesboro, unlike Stuttgart, started its kids on football at the fifth grade, so Thielman found himself way behind the curve to make the team, so he went to the band.

With trumpet and saxophone always the favorites for students, Thielman followed his band director's recommendation that he play the trombone.

"The band director taught me a B-flat scale and stuck me in the band. So my folks bought me an old steel trombone for $5 from a pawn shop," he said. Although he didn't

Although he didn't always see eye to eye with the band director, Thielman said he loved his time in the band and even became the first student in Jonesboro to attend summer band camp, a tradition he kept up every year through high school.

Throughout high school, Thielman was entirely dedicated to his musical craft, practicing four to five hours each day in addition to regular band class.

"For me, practice was never a drudge. They had to make me stop," he said. "And as a brass player, if you lay off for a day, there go the chops."

Although Thielman's parents weren't musically inclined themselves, they supported their son's pursuit, allowing him to travel to nearby Weiner, Ark., each week to receive a free trombone lesson from the city's mayor.

Thielman moved on and excelled in college, studying for his music education degree. His trombone teacher, Victor Hardt, who was also an accomplished piano player, first introduced Thielman to composing, and since then he has published approximately 50 works for concert band.

After college, Theilman went into his first teaching gig, working as band director for a poor school located between the small Missouri towns of Heytown and Portage.

Although the band room was only an old, one-room schoolhouse someone had dropped off, Thielman said he loved his time as a public school teacher.

"It was a great experience for me," he said. "I learned 10 times more than the kids did I'm sure."

Thielman went on to teach at the University of Mississippi and New Mexico Highlands University. His love of teaching brought Thielman to Las Cruces to serve as director of bands at New Mexico State University in 1969.

Thielman retired from NMSU in 1998, which would have been a chance for most people to slow down, but Thielman was looking forward for the chance to "change hats and concentrate on playing."

Nearly 25 years ago, Thielman began the High Society Orchestra which has become a conduit for many local musicians to shine. "We have some awfully good folks (in the band), and I've seen a lot come and go," he said. In fact, Thielman has been a part of the Las Cruces music scene for so long, that he taught many of the current members of the orchestra. He has even had two generations of players participating in the band. The High Society Orchestra has a wide repertoire, with Thielman's library of nearly 4,000 arrangements at his home for big and small bands. At any given job, he will have around 700 arrangements on hand for the band to > work from. Thielman even has arrangers he has known throughout the years write pieces specifically for the High Society Orchestra.

"For a while, I was doing four to five cruises a year in the Carribbean and the Mississippi River," he said.

Although the cruise gigs have slowed in the past two years, Thielman and the High Society Orchestra stay busy with plenty of weddings and their weekly Thursday 8 to 10 p.m. performance at the Las Cruces Country Club, 2700 N. Main St., for the Big Band Dance Club.

"We've played for the dance club for 20-some years," he said. "Plus four times a year for the Munson Swinging Seniors."

The call for big band was diminishing through the years, but Thielman said the success of reality TV shows like "Dancing with the Stars" have really helped to allow a new generation to enjoy the Latin and big band sounds.

Solution, tips and computer program at www.sudoku.com

Complete the grids below so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains every digit from 1 to 9 inclusively. It is a game of logic, not math, and there is only one solution per puzzle. Have fun and exercise the grey matter.

GALLERIES & OPENINGS

"Butler's Retreat" by Kurt Van Wagner at the Branigan Cultural Center

CONTINUING THIS WEEK

MAIN STREET GALLERY

Main Street Gallery's will introduce Kim Carpenter and her original Southwest oils as the gallery's guest artist through the end of June. Daphne Wirthlin is introducing some new designs on ceramic tiles. In addition, the Main Street Gallery continues to feature the works of Alice Terry, Judy Licht, Daphne Wirthlin, Lois Wilson, Don Boyd, Lynn Unangst, Margaret Berrier and Joanna Bradley. The Main Street Gallery is located at 311 N. Downtown Mall. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. For more information, call 647-0508.

BRANIGAN CULTURAL CENTER

The Branigan Cultural Center will be exceptionally busy during the month of May opening three separate exhibits on each of the first three Friday's of the month. Already open is the Las Cruces Arts Association Membership Show. The 46th annual mixed-media art exhibit will feature works by more than 25 members. The Las Cruces Arts Association has been exhibiting at the Branigan Cultural Center, formerly the Branigan Library, since 1971. The exhibit runs through Saturday, May 31, in the Shannon Gallery of the Cultural Center, 501 N. Downtown Mall. There is no charge, and the gallery is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday. For more information, contact the Branigan Cultural Center at 541-2154 or visit http://museums. las-cruces.org.

TOMBAUGH GALLERY

The Tombaugh Gallery will feature original prints, silk paintings and watercolors by artist Sudeshna Sengupta. The exhib-it will run through May 30. Painter/print-maker and textile artist, Sengupta stud-ied art for seven years at Visva-Bharati University at Santiniketan, India, receiving her bachelor's degree in painting in 1983 and master's degree in graphic Arts in 1985. The Tombaugh Gallery of the Unitarian Universalist Church is located at 2000

BLACK GOLD FROM THE SUN

In May, Black Gold from the Sun presents a "Celebration of Fabric from Africa the Mother Country." During this time the Sunspot Gallery will have a special presentation on the history of mudcloth, which for the most part is created by women. Mudcloth has its ties to the very root of our being. Made popular in Western eyes during the '70s, it has been a part of the Bogolon culture for centuries. Several local collectors have consented to share a portion of their valuable fabrics for public viewing and there will be a variety of pieces available for sale. Regular store hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

RIO GRANDE THEATRE

Reflecting the balancing and blending of two careers in the visual and healing arts, the latest solo exhibition by painter C.C. Cunningham is entitled "Balancing Act." Cunningham is passionate about being a visual artist as well as a massage thera-pist/Reiki Master. The exhibition represents balancing the comfortable and familiar with the urge to explore and express emerging themes, all the while using new techniques, style and color combinations. The abstract figuratives include delving into the realms of the psyche, relationships and spiritual concepts and the florals are funky, bold and brightly hued. The familiar earthy, highly textured "contemporary primal" series is included for comfort. The exhibit will continue throughout the month of May. FARM & RANCH HERITAGE MUSEUM

The New Mexico Farm & Ranch Heritage Museum's Heritage Gallery has recently added a recreated general store as part of the "Going to Town" portion of the "Farm Life in New Mexico: Then & Now" exhibit. When museum visitors walk into the mercantile, they are stepping back into an early 1900s version of what has become the mega retail store of the current times. The mercantile exhibit features hundreds of artifacts and props that would have been in an early 1900s store serving a rural community. There are food bins with beans, rice and produce, as well as other canned goods and hard candy in jars. There are pots and pans, traps and rifles, fabric and dresses. These old stores were not just a place to buy and sell items, but also a meeting place for people in the rural communities to gather and visit. Nestled on one end of the store is a replicated post office, including a window and individual mail boxes from actual southern New Mexico post offices. The museum staff researched the planned exhibit by studying old photographs of general stores from this time period, and visited an original mercantile at Chloride, N.M. Staff and volunteers from the museum's exhibits department created the exhibit store, which is one of the museum's most ambitious exhibit projects ever. The "Home Sweet Home" portion of "Farm Life in New Mexico: Then & Now" is a cozy, two-room floor plan that includes a kitchen and a parlor created to look like the inside of a rural New Mexico home in the 1920-30s. The exhibit includes a walkway between the rooms so museum visitors can get close to the objects and enjoy the feel of actually walking through the home. The museum's staff researched the subject - including studying old photographs - and designed and built the tworoom exhibit. Among the many interesting artifacts in the exhibit are a 1927 General Electric Monitor-Top refrigerating machine, a 1923 Brunswick Model 101 portable phonograph, a wood-burning stove and mission-style furniture, along with numerous kitchen gadgets, canning jars, crockery and personal items that give a glimpse into life on a New Mexico farm in the early 20th century. "Home Sweet Home" is one of the four major components of the "Farm Life in New Mexico" exhibit. The other three are "Moving Around," which focuses on transportation and includes wagons, maps and a façade of a railroad depot; "On the Farm," which includes a tool shed and various farm implements; and "Going to Town," which focuses on commu-

■ DOÑA ANA COUNTY GOVERNMENT CENTER

More than 100 pieces of original student artwork from the Las Cruces and Gadsden public schools have been installed in the first-floor corridors of the Doña Ana County Government Center, 845 N. Motel Blvd. The exhibit includes paintings, etchings, drawings and a gigantic papier-mâché and fabric dragon hung in the rotunda. The artists range from elementary to high school students. The student art exhibit complements the permanent art collection within the Doña Ana County Government Center, which includes a series of historical photographs in the upstairs rotunda, as well as a spectacular photograph titled "Fall Splendor" of the Organ Mountains donated in 2007 by Las Cruces artist R. Frederick Silva. On permanent display downstairs is an original oil painting titled "Heart of the Problem" by Las Cruces artist Alice Terry, donated to the Doña Ana County Government Center last February for permanent display. Also on semi-permanent display in the main lobby is one of New Mexico's most famous painted ponies, "Caballo de Las Cruces" by local artist Julienne Hadfield. The public is invited to view the student art show, "Caballo de Las Cruces," "Fall Splendor" and "Heart of the Problem" at any time during normal county business hours.

Image making

Art Talk

What is image? Where does it come from? I have been reading a story in Sunday's New York Times about an energetic artist and writer, Lynda Barry. The article's title: "How to think like a Surreal Cartoonist" hints at its main point of attraction. She has been a syndicated cartoonist for alternative weeklies; her 30-year-old weekly strip, "Ernie Pook's Comeek," made her a star of new-wave comics. She has published several books and collections with "The Good Times are Killing Me" becoming an Off-Broadway sensation. Now she offers workshops on her art-making method as well as freeing up a writer's ability to craft with words. "Writing as if they don't even know they are writing." Something about selecting random words and summoning memories of "unexpected and filmic details" and writing about this by hand for a set period of time. Her reason – "limitation creates structure."

What I found most thought provoking was her notion of image making; the image being "at the center of everything we call the arts." Her method has more to do with allowing the image to come through as children do when they sit down with paper and crayons or paint. A child freely expresses in the most direct and unaffected way what she or he is imagining. "Whenever I get jammed, a lot of times, it's because I am thinking I need to know what it is I am going to do before I start working. I think it's better to follow the original way that we worked, when we were kids, that we went to the drawing space or to the page to find something, to have an experience. I feel like as adults we have it backward. We think that we need to have an experience in order to write (and/or image make) about it and I've found from teaching this class that it's actually the opposite. We are writing (or imaging) in order to have an experience."

We have all saved those time-worn drawings that lived on the refrigerator door for weeks before being relegated to a box or folder, torn and browning around the edges, and saved for what they mean to us: pure and free expression of a child's imaginingimage making.

Many of us who are visual artists rely on images, sometimes abstracted, sometimes analytically observed and recorded with slavish precision. Ultimately it is not only content and form, but subtle energetic resonance that brings meaning and sensation to the viewer. From the heart through the hand, and then to the eye, we see something that feels right or does not. Unsureness, hesitation and ambivalence are impossible to disguise, no matter the method or media. It's a matter of degree, the pivot point on whether we scrape it down, erase it, or put it on the wall. What I am considering is that we may be best off to have an "experience" ourselves as we create what will be or will not be received by those who view it at some point in its life. Make it authentic; make it in the moment and it will be full of the nuance and memories that we bring to it from our lives as artists, as humans, as citizens of the world. There are lots of formal considerations to complicate things, but beyond those, the resonance must be there.

I wish you good work.

Yes, Ags are still improved

On April 25, not many dust storms ago, the Aggies' baseball team began its run to legitimacy in the WAC race. Probably.

A four-game sweep of then thirdplace Sacramento State on the 25th established New Mexico State's credibility in a conference loaded with parity. Equally as encouraging was the Aggies' four-game split at leagueleading Fresno State one week later. Those two victories shoved NMSU into the WAC's post-season tournament for the first time since joining the league three years ago.

And when the Ags won games one and two against Hawaii here last Thursday and Friday, coach Rocky Ward's club seemed destined for infamy. Then came Saturday's disaster. The Rainbow Warriors won a 7 1/2-hour, 56-run doubleheader, erasing the Ags' momentum and throwing their season back into question.

their season back into question. Worse, NMSU could have won Saturday's nightcap but decided to blow a 12-6, sixth inning, game-losing lead instead. They've done lots of that this spring.

So what now? "NMSU closes the regular season with a four-game series against Louisiana Tech here this weekend. "A sweep would probably leave us in fourth place in the final standings," coach Rocky Ward said. "Maybe even third. No sweep and we might wind up as the fifth seed in the tournament." That's not bad, considering the Aggies endured a 5-11 start to the 2008 season.

Rocky's program has definitely taken a huge step forward since then. His team has won eight of its last 12 WAC games.

The pitching is better. Tyler Sturdevant is 6-5 with a 5.4 ERA. Heath Goin stands 6-2 with a 4.9 ERA, and Sebastian Vendette is 2-4 with a 7.58, but has made key contributions anyhow.

The Ags stand among the WAC's best in hitting. Left fielder Ty Hardt leads the team with a .395 batting average that includes seven home runs and 36 runs batted in.

"We're not clean defensively," Ward says. "We're great offensively, but not quite good enough on defense to survive defensive mistakes."

NMSU takes a 14-14 conference record (fifth in the WAC standings) into this weekend's series with La Tech. No matter what happens, the Aggies will still play in next week's conference tournament.

There is nothing wrong with that.

Aggies lean on Hardt's bat NMSU outfielder setting record pace at the plate

By JOHN KEITH The Las Cruces Bulletin

In Ty Hardt's mind, baseball outranked graduation ceremonies last Saturday afternoon.

Easy choice. No second thoughts still, even though New Mexico State lost two to Hawaii in a 56-run marathon that same day in a game that mercifully ended at dusk. Long after Hardt would have stepped off the stage clutching his diploma.

"I'd just rather be out there playing baseball than going through those ceremonies," he said. "Besides, that diploma won't run away."

It was a smart choice as things turned out. Despite a 15-14 Hawaii victory in Saturday's nightcap, Hardt went five for six at the plate, drove in one run and scored three more.

A typical performance lately for the senior left fielder who leads the team in hitting at .395. Included are seven home runs, 13 doubles and 36 runs batted in.

Baseball hasn't always been smooth for Hardt. There were injuries. A bad knee limited his production earlier this spring. "My hitting rhythm started getting better when I got more at bats," he said.

Moreover, Hardt spent last season kicking himself each time things went bad. "When he went zero for four at the plate everybody in the dugout knew it," coach Rocky Ward said. "Now nobody does."

Hardt has, in other words, conquered the self-destruction that hindered his performance likes to joke with the other guys now. He's loosened up. He's just a baseball kid. Full of fun. And I'd have to say that he's the best hitter on the club day in and day out."

Last Thursday, a few hours before NMSU would open the four-game series with Hawaii, Hardt sat in the dugout, comfortably dressed in shorts and T-shirt, and reviewed the Aggies' team he's helped improve as the season progressed. "We had a slow start," he said. "But we're playing pretty well now." The Aggies, who opened the year at 5-11, have now won

The Aggies, who opened the year at 5-11, have now won eight of their last 12 WAC games. They're sitting in fifth place in league standings at 14-14. They've already qualified for the conference tournament at Louisiana Tech that begins Wednesday, May 21.

Hardt, who bats left handed, credits NMSU's pitching for its leap forward. "We're pitching better," he says. "We're better defensively. Early this season we had a lot of errors. We still do, but not so many.

"We know we can win now. Before I think we questioned ourselves. Yeah, coach Ward got on us. He told us that our losing was an anomaly. That we were not playing like he knew we could. That we could be one of the better teams in the conference if we believed it."

NMSU's heavy emphasis on offensive play lured Hardt, from Dixie, Utah, Community College.

A native of Sierra Vista, Ariz., Hardt earned his degree in business management.

All local prep teams in state tourney

Oñate is top seed

By CRAIG MASSEY The Las Cruces Bulletin

All six of the city's Class-5A baseball and softball teams qualified for the state playoffs. Now the focus will be on which teams can advance.

The Oñate baseball team is the highest-seed at No. 3 after capturing the district championship with an 11-1 mark. The Knights were 18-8 overall.

The Knights were 18-8 overall. "The kids are playing really consistent baseball," said Oñate coach David Reyes. "This is a different type of atmosphere now. The records are over and done with."

The Knights began play in the playoffs on Thursday night with an opening game against No. 14 Los Lunas at Apodaca Park. Game 2 and possibly Game 3 of the best-of-three series will be played Friday, beginning at 1 p.m.

beginning at 1 p.m. Oñate got off to a slow start this season, due in part to injuries and inexperience, but put it all together in April.

"This team had a lot of guys with no varsity experience and we had some injuries," Reyes said. "It was a blessing in disguise because we found out a lot about the other guys. Now we have depth at every position and the kids have accepted their roles."

The Mayfield baseball team finished 9-3 in district and locked up the No. 7 series. The Trojans also began the playoffs at home, taking on No. 10 Cibola at Apodaca Park at 7 p.m. Friday. Game 2 will be played at 1 p.m. on Saturday and Game 3 will follow if it is needed.

The Las Cruces Bulldawgs enter the playoffs with the No. 11 seed and played at No. 6 Carlsbad in a doubleheader on Thursday.

The second round of the Class 5A state baseball playoffs will be on May 21 at Rio Rancho and Albuquerque, followed by the semifinals on May 22 and the championship game at 7 p.m. on May 23 at Isotopes Park in Albuquerque.

Joseph Scaperotta Senior, Baseball

Senior Joseph Scaperotta hit three home runs against Hawaii to give the Aggie baseball team a series split over the weekend. He was 5-for-19 at the plate and scored five runs. In the second game of the series, Scaperotta had a .400 batting average with a double and a grand slam, his second of the year, to lead the Aggies to a 13-8 win. The home run was No. 20 of the year for Scaperotta, which tied him for eighth on the Aggie single-season list with Chris Weekly, who hit 20 homers in 1998. Mark Aranda was the last Aggie to hit at least 20 homer runs in a season, and he recorded 22 in 2005. Scaperotta tried to guide the Aggies to a series-finale win when he hit a two-run home run to even the score at 14-14 in the bottom of the seventh. Currently, he is third in the nation in home runs with 21 and is just two behind the national leader.

Ags' Auten honored for academic work NMSU first baseman registers 3.81 GPA

The College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) named New Mexico State baseball player Chris Auten to the ESPN The Magazine Academic All-District VI baseball team. Auten (Agovra Hills, Calif.) is a junior Auten (Agovra Hills, Calif.) is a junior at NMSU and has a 3.81 cumulative grade point average. He is a finance major and plans to graduate with a bachelor's degree in the spring of 2009.

"Chris is a very intelligent guy, and this honor shows it," coach Gary Ward said. "He's unique in that he's not very vocal so it kind of surprises you how intelligent he actually is."

The Aggies have depended on the bat of Auten all season long as NMSU has qualified for the Western Athletic Conference Tournament for the first time since joining the WAC.

"He's a very hard worker, both on and off the field," Ward said. "I never have to worry about Chris doing what needs to be done, especially on the road this season. We have had a tough road season this year, and to do what he has done is extraordinary."

Auten joined the NMSU baseball team after playing at Saddleback junior college in Mission Viejo, Calif., where he earned first team all-league honors in the Orange Empire Conference. Over the last few years Auten has learned how to balance school and baseball.

"You have to plan things out and have good time-management skills," Auten said. "You have to be really efficient with your time to be successful."

Auten, who injured his right shoulder in high school, reinjured it in the middle of the season last year had a second shoulder surgery in May 2007. That forced him to realize that his injury will limit his playing time on the field in the future.

"I love baseball more than anybody, but I'm also a realist and I understand that Chris Auten, New Mexico State's first baseman, was named to the ESPN the Magazine Academic All-District First Team. Auten, a junior, owns a 3.81 cumulative GPA.

I'm not a first rounder in the draft," Auten said. "The chances of making it to the next level are small so I want something to fall back on."

Auten thought going into finance would be interesting because he likes money and would like to handle other people's money. He would even like to open up his own business someday. Auten continues to learn about life both in the classroom and on the field and plans to take those skills into the "real" world with him.

"With baseball, you have to learn how to fit in with the team and work with others," Auten said. "When you get into the work place, you also have to learn to work with others."

Auten was one of only four players out of the Western Athletic Conference to make a first team all-district team and the only player in the state of New Mexico to be a first-team academic all-district member.

One of golf's mysteries Taking your range game to the golf course

It's been said that the longest 100 yards at the golf course is the distance between the practice tee and the first tee. The refrain goes something like this: "Doc, I hit it great over on the range, then I'm on the course, and I can't hit it out of my shadow." I hear it all the time.

There is no doubt that one of the biggest challenges in golf is taking our practice game to the golf course. And it's universal. Chiding himself for leaving his swing on the practice tee, Tiger Woods recently remarked sarcastically in a press conference, "I really turned into Ranger Rick today." It's all too common to see an accomplished player shake his head in disgust after laying the sod over a wedge shot and muse, "I didn't miss one of those on the range earlier."

Golfers ask me why they can't take the range to the golf course. But after studying this situation for years, I have concluded that we actually need to take the golf course to the range – not the other way around. If you want to transfer your practice – and especially your warm-ups – to solid performance on the golf course, you have to match the sensation and conditions you're going to find later while on the range. That means practicing your routine.

Most unskilled golfers go to the range and rake ball after ball and hit like they are on a time schedule. They fire those balls out into space, without purpose, intention or destination – like there's a prize for most balls hit in a minute. Juniors do what I call "machine-gunning" range balls. It's amazing that they can hit any good shots at all with such attention deficit. Practicing and warming up like that seems to me like a concert pianist playing only scales, and then expecting to play Rachmaninov perfectly.

Next time you're on the practice range, take some time between shots. Do what you do on the golf course. Pick a precise target; make your usual waggles; line yourself up properly; check the target once; take a nice breath; and swing like you mean it. Don't just flail away at balls aimlessly. (Incidentally, if you are taking swings and not hitting any shots that are worthy, stop hitting shots and get some help. I see golfers on the range all the time who can't even get the ball airborne, but don't seem to have a clue that they need instruction. Please don't let that happen.) If you have a set routine you go through on the golf course (where it actually "counts"), why don't you go through the exact same routine when you practice or warm up? Surely you are not lazy or brain-dead. So let's use our heads and take the golf course to the range.

An additional secret to unlocking your range game is to simulate certain shots you know you're going to face out on the golf course. While on the practice tee pick a particular hole on the course, and a particular shot; then visualize yourself standing in that very situation. Go through your routine and make the swing. If you do that enough, the golf course will seem less scary.

Back in 1974, Curtis Strange won the NCAA golf tournament by hitting a one iron to the final hole and making eagle. Later, on a trip to Japan, he shared with Herb Wimberly that he had practiced that shot and that scenario in his mind "a thousand times." Strange had rehearsed the one iron to the green to win the tournament so many times, with the precise thoughts and emotions in place, that when it came time to execute the real thing, he felt totally comfortable and confident.

On the range you can picture hitting shots under real conditions. Feel the emotions. You can do the same thing when you're warming up on the practice putting green. First, get a feel for the speed of the green by hitting a few 20- and 30-foot putts. Follow that by taking one ball and picturing a few putts you're very likely to be facing later. Execute your normal putting routine with one ball. Dropping three balls on the warm-up green is fine once in a while, but it will mostly get you better at putting the second and third ball. During a match you only get one ball. Remember, practice is more about quality than quantity.

One of the reasons that many avid golfers hit better shots on the range than they do on the course concerns their mental set-up. One of my friends, who in part prompted this article, told me: "On the range I don't think much about it. I aim, get set and shoot. And hit mostly solid shots." Whereupon I invited him to use his abbreviated, but more efficient and effective, pre-shot range routine during his next stipulated golf round. He did – and hit mostly solid, well-played shots. He'll thank me next week.

The pros on all the professional tours have plenty of time to practice and warm-up on the range before their competitive rounds. After all, that's their office. NBA players have more "shoot-arounds" than Mexican drug gangs. But for you and I, we can be pressed for time, and don't always get to the golf course when we want to. We're sometimes forced to play without the leisure of a nice relaxed warm-up on the practice range. Fine. Do some stretching and loosening. Take a couple of clubs and take some nice smooth swings like a batter in the on-deck circle. Hit a few two- and four-foot putts, since you will inevitably need to make some of those, and see what the day brings to you. As golfers, when we are in our comfort zone, we feel pretty good. It's funny how different we tend to do things once we have a pencil and a scorecard in our pocket.

Aggie caravans head into a busy summer It's time to meet and greet

Back when this old cowpoke was a tenderfoot, I heard about the wagon trains that would bring shows to the Old West to liven up an afternoon. The Aggies have been bringing similar entertainment to the towns of our state, but they aren't traveling in a Conestoga any more. They arrive in planes, cars and trucks.

The Aggie caravans are gearing up to cross the Land of Enchantment with plans for coaches to meet and greet the faithful, share a meal and also play a little golf. Yep, the caravan idea has caught on, and every year the Aggies have been crossing the state, their visits drawing a bigger group of fans every time. There will be a golf outing June 1 in Sunland Park. Fans and alumni from El Paso and southern Doña Ana County will be there, but all Aggie fans are welcome.

Football head Coach Hal Mumme, members of his staff, basketball coaches and even Athletics Director Dr. McKinley Boston will be hitting the links and spreading the good word of the latest in Aggieland. You might be playing in a foursome that has Scott Lieberwirth or Jackie Booth in it and, you might get a few tips on your game

With visits planned in Gallup, Albuquerque, Santa Fe and other locales you know, Dr. Boston is making good on his vow to make New Mexico the prime marketing area for Aggie sports. With the goodwill caravans giving fans from all over the state the chance to get to know the coaches and develop a better connection to the team. you know that is gonna lead to a greater involvement in the stands, in the booster clubs and in every way you can imagine.

The best way to sell a product is to put the buyer into the realm. In other words, car salesmen want you to take a test drive. You always get a tour of a home you might buy, and who can resist a fancy looking pair of boots when they fit just right on your size-11 feet? It's the same with getting folks on board the Aggies bandwagon.

The Aggies' great showing this year in the WAC Commissioner's Cup race shows that so many teams are making headway on their march to excellence. With that in mind, Dr. Boston has included all of the coaches in some manner on these caravans. It started out with Mumme and former men's basketball head coach Reggie Theus makin' the rounds.

Now the concept has caught on, the fans demanded to meet as many of the Aggies' head men and women as they can and the caravan has just grown like a crop of chilies in the fertile county soil. For more information, get a hold of that ole wrangler Bump Elliott at the athletic department, you don't want to miss the fun when it comes to vour town.

Ags' baseball a hit NMSU has won eight of its last 12 in conference competition

opportunity this weekend to root

for the Aggies and keep that momentum

rolling...

The last weekend of NMSU's competitive season is upon us. Rocky Ward's baseball squad has one last home stand before WAC tournament time, and the Aggies are ending the season with their best surge of momentum all year. They have won eight of their last 12 league games. Louisiana Tech comes into Las Cruces having struggled all year with a 5-21 record in WAC play. A doubleheader Friday, May 16, and single games

Saturday, May 17, and Sunday, May 18, will end a season that has improved as the year has gone on

The Aggies have been able to score runs in their normal fashion. With Tyler Hardt and Chris Auten leading the way for averages and Joseph Scaperotta and Franky Busani belting out 21 and 15 home runs, respectively, the Aggie offense is rock solid. To win tournaments, you have to have some pitching though. Ward has relied on Heath Goin and Tyler Sturdevant as his main starter, with Erik Nyquist taking on the role of stopper out of the bullpen. Goin and Sturdevant each have six wins, while Nyquist has six saves.

Auten is a leader in the classroom as well, the College Sports Information Directors of America named him to the ESPN The Magazine Academic All-District team last week. He is a junior that has a 3.81 cumulative GPA. Auten is majoring in finance and plans to graduate with a bachelor's degree in the spring of 2009. He was one of only four players in the confer-> team all-district accolades and the only player in the state of New Mexico named to first team also. The hope of a big league career mixed in with reality for Auten during his prep career. He injured his shoulder in high school and hurt it again last season. That forced him to realize that his injury will limit his playing time on the field in the future. A degree in finance is a valuable one since the world of commerce will always be a part of our lives. Take this opportunity this weekend to root for the Aggies and keep that momentum roll-ing to the WAC tournament in Ruston, La.

Celebrity Update: In previous columns, I wrote about former Aggie quarterback David Chisum and his starring role on One Life to Live. His latest film is out on DVD. "Flight of the Living Dead" isn't going to replace 'Casablanca" or "Citizen Kane' in Hollywood, but it is a film that is fun to watch and fun to see old friends in a new career.

Heath Goin Junior Baseball

Junior Heath Goin led the Aggie baseball team to a 13-8 victory over Hawaii as he threw seven complete innings. After giving up five runs early in the game to the Rainbows, he shut them down and didn't allow another run. Goin had a career- and season-high seven strikeouts while he only walked one batter.

Stephanie Herrera Senior Softball

Senior utility Stephanie Herrera capped off her Aggie softball career when she was named to both the second team All-WAC and WAC All-Tournament teams. Herrera led the Aggies to a 26-36 overall record. She broke the NMSU single-season batting average record with a .399 mark at the plate. She also concluded WAC play leading the league with a .360 batting average and 23 stolen bases

Ashley Maroda Freshman Softball

Freshman third baseman Ashley Maroda earned WAC All-Tournament team honors following her performance in the league championship. In the tournament, she recorded a .556 batting average. Maroda also led the team with three RBIs. In addition, she had a team-high 12 home runs this season.

Ags at WAC track meet

NMSU sends 18 athletes

The New Mexico State women's track and field squad is currently competing in the 2008 WAC Conference Championships, Wednesday, May 14, through Saturday, May 17, at the Bronco Stadium in Boise, Idaho.

NMSU has 18 student-athletes competing at the conference championships including six sprinters, seven distance runners and the five athletes in the field events.

"We were about as prepared as we can possibly be at this point in time for the conference meet," assistant coach Paul Harkins said. "We are confident in the team and are ready to get there and see what we can do."

NMSU's six sprinters are junior Isabel Chea, sophomores Leah Benton, Candyce Allen and Lekeah Durden and freshmen Devin Brooks and Derrhea McLiechey.

Chea recorded her strongest mark in the 100-meter hurdles at the Colorado State Ram Open (April 19), when she crossed the finish line with a time of 15.71.

On the field, Chea has competed in the long and triple jump, along with javelin throw throughout the season. Both of her season-best jumps were set at the Don Kirby Memorial Invitational, in Albuquerque. (May 5). In the long jump, Chea recorded a leap of 18-2.5 and in the triple jump she recorded a mark of 37-4.50. She recorded her season-best throw, in the javelin at the Ram Open with a launch of 125-1.

Benton is one of NMSU's strongest sprinters and currently ranks sixth in the WAC in both the 100-meter and the 200-meter dashes. She recorded her season-best time in the 100-meter dash at the Willie Williams Classic in Tucson, Ariz. (March 21), with a time of 12.14 and in the 200meter dash she recorded a time of 24.81 at the UTEP Invitational in El Paso, Texas (April 12).

In the 400-meter open, Benton recorded a personalbest time of 56.11 at the Don Kirby Memorial Invitational.

Allen competes in both the sprints and the jumping events for the Aggies. In Albuquerque, Allen recorded her fastest time in the 100-meter dash with a time of 12.35 and in the 200-meter dash Allen clocked a season best time of 25.65 at the Willie Williams Classic.

In the high jump and in the triple jump Allen recorded season-best marks at the UTEP Invitational. In the high jump Allen leaped 5-1 and in the triple jump she recorded a mark of 35-3.75.

Durden competes in the 100-meter and 200-meter dash for NMSU. In Albuquerque, Durden recorded a personal-best time of 12.40 in the 100-meter dash and also recorded a personal best in the 200-meter dash with a time of 25.42 at the same meet.

Brooks ran her way to ranking second on the NMSU all-time record list in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 14.29, which was set at the Springtime Invitational, in El Paso, Texas (March 29).

In the 100-meter dash, Brooks has posted a time of 12.29 which was set at the Don Kirby Memorial Invitational, and in the 200-meter dash she recorded a time of 25.35, which was also set in Albuquerque.

McLiechey has competed in the 100-, 200- and 400meter dashes throughout the season. She posted a lifetime best in the 100-meter dash at the Willie Williams Classic with at time of 12.57. She also recorded a seasonbest time in both the 200-meter dash and the 400-meter dash at the Springtime Invitational, with a time of 25.35 and 57.19, respectively.

The seven distance runners who are competing at the conference meet are senior Andrea Leitner, junior Christina Herrera, sophomores Caprice Bradshaw, Ingrid Flores and Brittany Hurtado and freshmen Amy Arenas and Brandi Gutierrez.

Leitner has competed in the 1500-meter run and the 5000-meter run throughout the season. She recorded a season best in the 1500-meter run at the UTEP Invitational with a time of 4:55.62. In Albuquerque, Leitner set her season-best mark in the 5000-meter run with at time of 19:08.94.

In the 1500-meter run, Herrera recorded a personal best in El Paso when she crossed the finish line with a time of 4:45.35. This time ranks her 10th on the NMSU all-time record list. In the 5000-meter run she clocked a lifetime-best mark of 18:22.71 in Fort Collins, Colo.

Bradshaw has competed in the 800-meter run, 1500-meter run and in the steeplechase for the Aggies. At the Willie Williams Classic, Bradshaw stopped the clock at 2:22.50, which marks a personal best in the 800-meter run.

In the 1500-meter run she recorded a time of 4:43.58, which was set at the Willie Williams and in the 3000-meter steeplechase, Bradshaw clocked a personal best time of 11:25.14. This time places her fourth on the NMSU all-time record list.

Flores has competed in the 1500-meter and 5000meter runs for the Aggies this season and recorded personal bests in both at the UTEP Invitational.

In the 1500-meter run Flores crossed the finish line with a time of 4:45.83 and in the 5000-meter run Flores posted a time of 18:01.24, which ranks sixth in the NMSU all-time record book.

Hurtado recorded both of her season-best marks in the 800-meter and the 1500-meter runs at the Willie Williams Invitational. She recorded a time of 2:25.00, in the 800-meter run and a time of 4:56.61 in the 1500meter run.

Arenas and Gutierrez have both competed in the 1500meter and 5000-meter runs for the Crimson and White this season.

Arenas recorded her strongest 1500-meter time at the UTEP Invitational as she stopped the clock at 4:55.62 and in the 5000-meter run she recorded a season-best time of 19:08.61 at the Willie Williams Classic.

Gutierrez's best time in the 1500-meter run was set in Albuquerque with a time of 4:52.92. Her best 5000-meter time was set at the Willie Williams Classic as she stopped the clock at 18:47.27.

Devin Brooks posted a time of 14.29 in the 100-meter hurdles this year, placing her second on NMSU's alltime record list.

The remaining student-athletes who are going to be competing in the field events are junior Randi Grimes, sophomores Jordan Veney, Jennifer McConnell and Michelle Barnard, along with freshman Tara Blanco.

Grimes holds a fifth- and sixth-place rank in the javelin and the hammer throw in the conference, respectively. In the hammer, she recorded a mark of 179-1, which was set at the Ram Open and is a regional qualifying mark that ranks her third on the NMSU all-time record list. In the javelin throw, Grimes threw for 142-5 in Tucson, Ariz.

Leading the way in the WAC for NMSU is Veney, who ranks first in the discus. Veney's regional qualifying mark of 168-8 is not only her personal best, but also shatters the NMSU all-time record by almost 10 feet.

Veney also ranks eighth in the shot put with a throw of 44-8.25. Both of the marks were set at the Ram Open.

McConnell has recorded three personal-best marks this season and they were all set in El Paso, Texas. In the discus throw, McConnell recorded a launch of 133.5, in the shot put she threw for a mark of 35-10 and in the hammer throw she recorded a toss of 152-3.

Bernard has posted personal-best marks in two different events this season. The first was in the discus throw with a launch of 123-00 and the second was in the hammer throw with a mark of 152-3.

Blanco is the lone Aggie to compete at the WAC Championships in the pole vault. In Albuquerque, she recorded a personal-best leap of 11-01.75. This mark ranks her second on NMSU's all-time record list.

Last season, Louisiana Tech won its third consecutive WAC Outdoor Track and Field title with 162 points, followed by Nevada in second with 123 and Idaho in third with 121 points. Boise State finished fourth with 116.5 points, followed by Utah State with 97.5 points. Hawaii came in sixth place with 97 points, Fresno State was seventh with 82 points and New Mexico State finished eighth with 20 points.

"To have Kim and Sammie selected to the Academic All-District Team is a great honor and one that we take a lot of pride in," Rodolph said.

This is the second consecutive year that Watson has received this honor, but marks the first for Dillard.

Kim Watson, New Mexico State junior right-handed pitcher, also made ESPN the Magazine's 2008 Academic All-District Second Team.

Watson has received several other academic honors throughout her career as an Aggie and currently holds a 3.85 GPA in marketing. Besides earning this award last season, she also been selected to both the 2007 and 2006 Academic All-WAC teams and was a 2006 NFCA Scholar Athlete.

Watson has appeared 42 times in the circle this season, while making 32 starts. Her overall record sits at 17-18 on the season and is an even 4-4 in conference play. Watson has sat down 178 batters and has had three shutouts, while maintaining an ERA of 2.66 in 200 innings of action.

Dillard is currently pursuing her Masters in English and has maintained a Grade Point Average of 3.71 throughout her entire collegiate career. She was also a 2007 Academic All-WAC selection.

Registration for adult basketball in progress

Four divisions will compete this summer

The City of Las Cruces is holding registration for the Adult Basketball League summer season at Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave., until 5 p.m. Friday, June 13.

The league consists of four divisions: The Open Division, ages 18 and up; the Over the Hill Division, ages 29 and up; the Jack Benny Division, ages 39 and up; and the George Burns Division, ages 49 and up.

The fee is $395 per team. A deposit of $150 must be received prior to the June 13 deadline. Slots fill up quickly, so teams should registered early.

Bring the following information when registering: a copy of your team's roster, completed waivers for all members of the team and a complete acknowledgement of rules signed by all members of the team. Packets containing all the necessary paperwork and other important information are available at the center.

Games are played from 6 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. The league is tentatively scheduled to begin play on Monday, June 23.

For more information, contact the City of Las Cruces Athletics Office at 541-2560 or Meerscheidt Recreation Center at 541-2563.

The TTY number is 541-2661.

Ags hire academic advisor Bolden held same position at Marquette

New Mexico State Associate Athletics Director for Student Development James Hall has announced the hiring of Tyree Bolden as an academic advisor, Wednesday, May 7.

Bolden joins the Aggies from Marquette University where he held a similar position.

At Marquette, Bolden coordinated support services for student-athletes. He was also a graduate admission counselor at the Chicago School of Professional Psychology prior to his time at Marquette.

Bolden spent one year as a championship administration intern with the Big Ten Conference in 2005. His responsibilities included assisting with the league's business administration, compliance, rules officiating programs and community relations. In addition, he provided support for the championships staff with the daily operations of the 23 sporting events. Bolden also has experience with the Minnesota Timberwolves as a game operations intern and sales executive.

Bolden graduated from the University of Minnesota with a bachelor's degree in communication studies and a master's degree in athletic administration. He was a four-year member of the Golden Gophers men's basketball team. THE LAS CRUCES BULLETIN

With its colors, use of glass block and yard art, the home has a distinctive look that makes it impossible not to notice when driving down Conway Avenue in Mesilla Park.

Richard Parra designed his home to be very open and airy, from its two lofts to its main living spaces, and also included numerous spaces to display his large collection of art. On the left is one of many pieces by artist Stephen Hansen.

In one corner of the Parras' garden, past their sprawling vegetation, is their barbecue area where they grill on sunny days.

Their main living room features restored furniture from the '50s by Heywood Wakefield that Richard Parra found in the Antique District of West Picacho Avenue.

What is most noticeable, both inside and out, is the use of glass block around the home's two staircases. It not only allows natural light in during the day, but gives the house an amazing glow at night.

One of Richard Parra's favorite colors is purple, as demonstrated by the color of his coffee shop, Sprit Winds. He incorporated the color into his home as well with this purple room along with several other purple walls.

A dwelling with many dimensions Built to house a unique collection of artwork, this home has become a work of art in itself

By BETHANY CONWAY

Surely those who have driven down Conway Avenue have noticed the dark-grey, strikingly modern home of Richard and Marlane Parra. Its large walls of glass block are normally lit up from the inside, catching the attention of those passing by at night.

Though it stands out among the old adobe and brick homes of the former professor's row, after 18 years its mature landscape and artistic attributes have helped it find its place in Mesilla Park.

When he bought the property some years ago, Richard Parra, owner of Spirit Winds Coffee Bar and Gift Source, first planned to restore the home already present, but after inspecting it, he and builder Ralph Salas decided it needed to be torn down.

"We wanted to do something that wasn't your everyday walls and hallways and square rooms," Richard Parra said. "We enjoy the open concept because it makes it easier for entertaining.

Designed to feature his extensive collection of art pieces, the home begins with a large, open area containing two living areas, the dining room and the kitchen.

'For the size of the house it doesn't have that many rooms because the rooms are all big," said Marlane Parra, speech and language pathologist and an educational consultant.

While the home was finished many years ago, the couple said the home has always been an ongoing project when it comes to furnishing and decorating and developing its landscape.

"For 18 years we've worked together to furnish it and decorate it," Marlane Parra said. "Two years ago we completely gutted the kitchen area and remodeled it."

Designed with a combination of curves and angles, the kitchen features woodwork by Rodger Atkins contrasted by black-granite countertops and a slate-tiled floor.

"Rodger Atkins worked with us on the project. Richard really collaborated with me on the design of the kitchen because I cook for a hobby, and I knew exactly how I wanted the space to function and exactly what size cabinets I wanted to a tee. Richard then designed the aesthetic features, and Rodger executed it," Marlane Parra said.

Along with the kitchen, the entire home has a great deal of lighting from the light fixtures to the decorative neons found throughout. The most noticeable light fixture in the kitchen is by an artist from Germany and is called "84 Lamps."

"At night is when the house really looks the best because we have all of this lighting," Richard Parra said.

In fact, a glow comes from its two walls made of glass blocks, which surround the staircases leading to the second floor of the home's two lofts.

The first loft, which was built for Richard Parra's two daughters, features a Jack-and-Jill bathroom and is now used for guest quarters.

The second is found in the two-story master bedroom, which, at first glance, looks like another living area with its downstairs lounge and bathroom.

While the home is a work of beauty in itself, its furnishings and artwork can keep one occupied for hours.

With work from local artists such as Stephen Hansen, Suzanne Kane and David Rothermel, some of the Parras' many pieces were given to them as gifts, and many they stumbled on while perusing galleries across the country.

Along with their fantastic art collection, the furniture also has its own one-of-a-kind look.

'A lot of our furniture is all second hand. There's a lot of stuff here from flea markets - Richard has a really good eye. He is able to find something very cool in a pile of junk, " Marlane Parra said.

This includes the furniture found in the main living area designed by Heywood Wakefield in the '50s, which Richard Parra found on the sidewalk of Picacho Avenue and had restored.

While the walls come in a number of palettes, of course there is lots of purple, Richard Parra's signature color, which is also found on the exterior of Spirit Winds. There is even a purple elephant in the bathroom.

"It kind of christened the house like a gargoyle," Richard Parra said.

When it comes to the home's exterior, the landscaping is also a project that has taken the Parras many years to complete.

With five patios including a fire pit and barbecue area, it is one of the couple's favorite areas to relax. From owls to birdbaths to wind meters, their collection of yard art ranges from pieces by New Mexico State University students to those by local artist Olin Calk.

"I think that is one of the biggest improvements we've made to the property," Marlane Parra said. "This isn't like your normal backyard. We've tried to create outdoor spaces and different rooms outside so that it really feels like the outside is part of the inside.

In a statewide contest conducted by Rowland's Nursery in 2006, their landscaping won Best Yard Makeover. "It's kind of like a maze. I look at it more three dimensionally," Richard Parra said.

When it came to choosing the lot for this artistic home, Richard Parra said there was no better place than Mesilla Park

"It's an old neighborhood, you don't get a lot of this in Cruces anymore. You still see a lot of people coming out here, and even if they don't live in the neighborhood they come out here and they park and walk," Richard Parra said. "It's the feel. This used to be considered professor's row in the 1930s. Most of the professors were here. The last one that passed away lived a block away, and he would always tell me stories. They used to come get them in a horse and buggy.'

While his home surprised long-time residents of the neighborhood when it was first under construction, Richard Parra said it will have its place in Mesilla Park for years to come.

"This house will always be in style," Richard Parra said.

Working together on their home's décor, Richard and Marlane Parra have made their contemporary home a work of art.

Easy steps to start a remodeling project

Company has more than 10,000 building products online

While the housing market has slowed significantly, remodeling has taken a sharp rise in the homebuilding business. Any successful remodeling project requires a good deal of forethought before work actually takes place, and you don't need to wait until a contractor is hired to start this process.

I have discovered the best place for information online with more than 10,000 building products. It has become an invaluable reference tool for finding who makes what in the world of building products. The website is www.ebuild.com. The website's wealth of building-product information has been integrated into Builder Online (www.builderonline.com).

One-click gives access to product information by category, including manufac-turers, product details, pictures, catalogs, news articles, videos and hot brands. With 10,000 manufacturers, you can browse all 25 categories. A growing collection of PDFs will let you search, sort and view product lines online without having to dig through hard copies of the manufacturers' catalogs. An example is the appliance category, with manufacturers listed from A to Z and categories include central vacuum systems, cook tops, dishwashers, dry-ers, freezers, garbage disposals, kitchen ranges, microwave ovens, range hoods, refrigerators, wall ovens, warming ovens, washing machines and more.

Here are three easy steps to keep in mind as you kick off your remodeling project. Step one: Plan the remodeling Think your remodeling project through from beginning to end. Examine the home carefully and make notes of necessary repairs, then list the practical and aesthetic improvements. Plan ahead and determine future needs as well. A contractor can help you plan renovations that accommodate your changing needs as well as your budget. Review your homeowner's insurance policy and make necessary adjustments for the added value of the work being done. Step two: Design and function

When planning a remodeling proj-ect, consider the type of lighting that is required, including skylights and recessed lighting. Don't forget the location of electrical outlets, telephone jacks, cable hook-ups and current and future storage needs. Incorporate universal design features to accommodate the needs of people through their lifetimes.

Step three: Develop a realistic budget

Decide how much money you can afford to spend on remodeling. A good rule of thumb is to allocate as much as necessary to create that dream home if you're planning to stay there five years or longer. If you're planning to move, keep your remodel within standards of homes in your neighborhood and within a reasonable budget. Keep 10 percent of the total budget as a reserve to cover any change orders or incidental charges. Stick to the original plan – changing direction in the middle of a project or asking the contractor to make improvements in other parts of the home is the surest way to destroy the budget.

If you are interested in green building, www.buildinggreen.com has a listing of more than 2,000 environmental preferable products.

Home improvement loans are available through many banks and lending institutions. Be sure to contact your lender and incorporate in your budget any costs that will be associated with these loans.

Las Cruces Tour of Gardens returns June 7

Doug and Barbara Rains will show how they developed their outdoor spaces at 1144 Cave Springs Trail.

Six Sonoma Ranch entries to display their landscaping

The 13th annual Las Cruces Tour of Gardens will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, June 7. This year's tour features six gardens in the Sonoma Ranch area.

Visitors can begin the tour in any garden and proceed in any order. Signs in front of the homes help identify the gardens, which are shown on the map provided on the ticket.

The original art featured on this year's Tour of Gardens poster is "Spring Show," a 12-inch-by-9-inch oil on panel by Kathleen Squires valued at $400. She donated the painting to the Tour of Gardens, which is holding a raffle for the artwork. Tickets can be purchased during the tour.

This year's annual garden tour is presented by Desert Daubers, Hi Hopes and Mesilla Valley Garden Clubs of Las Cruces. The proceeds of the tour are donated to garden-related beautification and educational projects in the community.

Tickets are $7 per person, and children

12 and under are free. Refreshments are served at one of the gardens on the tour from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. There are no toilet facilities available at the homes on the tour. Children should be supervised, as many plants are fragile and some may be poisonous. In addition to the raffle of the painting, there are drawings for gate prizes

Tickets can be purchased at the fol-

With the support of family, success will follow Sal Telles finds a creative outlet in homebuilding with Jactell Construction

By Bethany Conway

If there is one phrase that characterizes Jactell Construction, it's that the business "is a family affair." Owned by Sal and Christine Telles and named after their children, Jeremy, Adrian and Clarissa, the company has been around for more than 30 years, and its success has come to depend on every-one involved.

"It truly is a group effort," Christine Telles said. "Our older son Jeremy is our graphic design artist, and our daughter Clarissa Peña works at South Valley Tile, and they do a lot of our tile work."

100% Satisfaction Guarantee

Their son, Adrian Telles, has been working with his father since he was 15 and is now Sal Telles' foreman at White Sands Missile Range and oversees many of their projects.

Along with their children, their nephew Gino Telles owns Extreme Design and does most of their architectural work. "Gino is incredible. He knows about all kinds of building materials and trends. He has this great vision and helps us out a lot," Christine Telles said.

Though their company has grown to involve several members of their family, it started with the backhoe and dump truck Sal and Christine Telles bought to do excavations when they first were married. "I have been in the construction business for 34 years, ever since I got out of college," Sal Telles said. Though he now spends his time building custom homes, when he began building he was heavily involved in commercial construction.

"Our basic income has been from commercial and government contracts. We have been doing government contracting for the last 15 or 20 years," he said. "I've done a lot of different types of steel fabrication buildings and high fences for the state parks and (the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish). I used to manufacture cattle guards for the BLM (Bureau of Land Management) and have done all different types of steel work.

While working for the state, he helped build a police station at White Sands, has built restrooms at state parks all over New Mexico and has also built numerous visitors centers. He also helped to build the fences for the DreamWorks movie "Transformers" when it was filmed at White Sands in 2007

While they have been involved in both residential and commercial construction for many years, Christine Telles also worked as a hairdresser for 36 years, and Sal Telles owned a pool business and has even installed pools into his custom homes

Building houses all over Las Cruces, Sal Telles does the major construction work while Christine Telles occasionally does the interior design and also helps with clean up and with the designing of the floor plans.

We are the cleaning crew, so we do everything from the very beginning to the end," said Christine Telles, who is also a Realtor with Coldwell Banker.

When it comes to building custom homes, Sal Telles said it's all about taking your time, making the customer happy and avoiding last-minute changes by having a well-thoughtout plan.

While commercial building mainly focuses on "the bottom line," Sal Telles said that in homebuilding he gets to be more creative.

"At this point in my life I like custom homebuilding. I've done the government contracting for years, I've done the commercial work, and I really want to just concentrate on the custom homes," he said. "If you really want to get where you can be creative, this is where it's at."

"It's a lot more gratifying because you can see people enjoying what you build," Christine Telles said.

Recently, Jactell Construction had an impressive entry in the Picacho Mountain subdivision in the 2008 Las Cruces Home Builders Association Spring Showcase of Homes, and Christine Telles said building with Picacho Mountain is as good as it gets.

"This has been one of the best experiences that we have ever had. It's a wonderful community," she said of Picacho Mountain. "This is where I would love to live if we build another house."

Though he likes the creativity involved in building custom homes, Sal Telles said that when it comes to upper-end homes it's still about creating a comfortable space.

"Building a custom house is not about winning showcase or building something so majestic that you can't get it dirty. It's got to be a livable area and a place that you call home, it's got to be comfortable," he said.

Staying on top of building trends in many different ways, Christine Telles peruses local kitchen and cabinet showrooms while Sal Telles reads construction magazines and attends seminars discussing topics such as building green.

In the future, Christine Telles said they are excited to watch their son Adrian Telles' building career blossom and want to step aside and give him the reins to their company.

"Sal and I are getting tired, so hopefully Adrian will pick up where we leave off. Eventually we would like to work for Adrian part time and just do houses and let the kids take over," she said. "We don't take them for granted, and they don't take us for granted. We know we need each other. We are more like friends than parents. Everybody has an input.

"Hopefully it will always be a family business. That's what Jactell Construction is all about."

Seed chiles in a snap <

Pepper seeder a much-needed tool for chile lovers

By BETHANY CONWAY

For many from the Southwest, there is no such thing as too much chile. This includes everything from long green chile to jalapeño peppers to habanero peppers. The Bulletin features recipes with chile peppers weekly in Sunny Conley's column Chile Knights (page E11), which can help Las Crucens get their chile fix, and the pepper seeder can help with the preparation of many of those recipes. This gadget can help with everything from cleaning newly grilled green chile to coring jalapeños for stuffing.

Best Year Ever!

What is it?

The chile seeder is a small gadget with a long metal hook that cores and de-seeds jalapeños, habaneros, Italian hot peppers and more. With the simple crank of the handle, peppers can be ready for stuffing in minutes.

How does it work?

First cut the stem off the pepper. Then insert the metal hook into the pepper and crank the handle by

Gina Schweinebraten! Look Who's Forty! We love you, The Casey Carpet Crew Have The

The rotating handle and hook of the chile seeder makes it easier to remove seeds and membrane from peppers.

turning it in a circular motion. This action removes the seeds and membrane within the pepper, preparing it to be stuffed with a filling before smoking, baking, frying or grilling.

Where can you find it?

The chile seeder can be found at www.jalapenocafe. com or at some local kitchen specialty stores.

How much does it cost?

The chile seeder costs $5.99, which does not include shipping if ordering online.

Helpful hints:

The uses of the chile seeder don't end with peppers. They can also be used to core squash, cucumbers, zucchini and tomatoes.

Featured Kitchen Gadget: Pepper Seeder

Jalapeño Poppers

1 pound fresh jalapeños

- 16 ounces cream cheese
- 8 ounces grated pepper jack cheese
- 1 cup flour
- 2 cups and 1 tablespoon milk
- 2 cups bread crumbs Oil (enough to submerge poppers completely)

Prepare the jalapeños by removing stems and using the chile seeder to remove all seeds and membranes. Set jalapeños in fridge to chill.

Combine cream cheese, grated pepper jack cheese and 1-tablespoon milk with a mixer until smooth. Stuff cheese mixture into jalapeños until mounded slightly.

Preheat oil to 400. Pour 2 cups milk into a bowl. Place flour on a large plate and bread crumbs on a separate plate. Dip poppers in milk and then roll in flour. When all poppers are completely covered, dip again in milk and roll in bread crumbs. Place poppers in oil and fry for 2 minutes.

Spinach Stuffed Squash

12 medium yellow squash 2 (10-ounce) packages frozen chopped spinach 1 cup sour cream 1 tablespoon butter Seasoned salt Black pepper Cracker crumbs

Parmesan cheese, grated

Cut squash in halves lengthwise. Scoop out and discard the seeds. Cook in salted water until just tender. Cook spinach and drain well and squeeze out excess moisture. Combine spinach with sour cream, butter, salt, onion and pepper. Stuff squash; sprinkle with cracker crumbs and cheese. Bake stuffed squash at 325 degrees for 30 minutes.

Colander not just for cooking Protect food and delicates, and get creative

By Bethany Conway

Perhaps taking up more space than most around-the-house items, the colander, a sieve used for cooking, can come in handy for more than just draining pasta noodles. The idea behind the sieve has been around since ancient times, and the device is commonly used to separate desired elements from unwanted material. Coming in handy for draining vegetables before cooking or preparing salads, the col-ander is ideal for draining and rinsing, and after reading the following suggestions, one will find this doesn't always mean food.

1. Shoo flies: For those numerous summer barbecues, invert the colander and use it as a bug tent. Place it over steaks, burgers, brats and buns during a cookout to keep pesky insects away.

2. Create a casual luminaria: Line the inside of a metal, free-standing colander with a clear plastic bag, fill it with water and place tea lights or votives inside. A few tea lights in a large colander makes an attractive centerpiece when eating outside on the patio at night.

3. Wash your delicates: Don't throw hand-wash-only articles into the sink to be washed. Peroxide from some toothpastes and caustic agents from other cleansers can bleach, stain, degrade and even disintegrate delicate fabrics. Instead, put a clean colander in the sink and wash the garments inside.

4. Make a kid's Halloween costume: A stainless-steel colander is a perfect Martian helmet. Attach ribbons to the handles and tie them under the chin

5. Sift flour: Pour flour into a colander and shake it back and forth over a larger bowl to sift. Use a wooden spoon to break up lumps, if necessary.

Chile Lore, Tales & Tidbits..... Salsa is the Southwest's No. 1 condiment

Two weeks of unbelievably spicy salsa recipes for pod lovers

Salsa dethroned ketchup as the No. 1 condiment in America 17 years ago. Sassy salsa was outselling ketchup in 1991 by $40 million in retail stores, according to a New York Times article printed March 11, 1992. Americans had grown tired of the sugar-based "processed-type" sauce and were eager to experiment with an "ethnic product (that) embodies that fresher, unadulterated image that they want." Our hankering for salsa continues. We use it as a dip, as a topping and as an ingredient in recipes, the latter of which is becoming increasingly popular. In fact, my Rolodex of recipes listing salsa as one of the ingredients has grown so crammed that it will take two Chile Knights columns to publish 'em all, or three if pod lovers email their favorites (sunnyconley@earthlink.net). I welcome recipes! This is part one of two columns filled with savory salsa-embellished recipes.

Chicken Breast Salad with Salsa Dressing

- Salad Ingredients: 1 bag of Romaine or butter lettuce 2 grilled chicken breasts, sliced 1 sliced red bell pepper 3 ears grilled corn (remove corn from husk) 1 can of black beans, rinsed and drained Chopped scallion or red onion (I prefer red)
- Grated cheddar cheese Crushed tortilla chips
- 1 avocado, chopped and tossed with a bit of lime juice

Dressing ingredients: Bottled ranch dressing Favorite salsa Fresh lime juice Chipotle powder

Arrange all salad ingredients on a platter as desired. Place the dressing ingredients in a blender and blend until smooth. Top the salad with salsa dressing or mix salad ingredients in a large bowl and toss with dressing. Serve immediately. Refrigerate leftover dressing, if necessary. Serves 2 to 4.

Easy Salsa Dressing

1/2 cup favorite salsa Zest and juice of one lime (about 2 tablespoons) 1/4 cup fresh cilantro, chopped 1/2 cup water (to create more volume without calories) Salt to taste Olive oil to taste, 1/2 to 3/4 cup

Mix all the ingredients in a blender except the oil. Then drizzle oil while processor is running. Makes about 1-1/2 cups. (Adapted from Mexican Everyday, Rick Bay-less, W.W. Norton, 2005)

Salsa Meat Loaf

1 large egg 2 pounds 80-percent-lean ground beef 1-1/3 cups medium-hot chunky tomato salsa (divided) 1/3 cup rolled oats 1 tablespoon minced garlic 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper 1 tablespoon vegetable oil

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Lightly oil a shallow baking dish or coat it with cooking spray. In a mixing bowl, beat the egg with a fork. Add ground beef, 1-1/4 cups of the salsa, oats, garlic, salt and pepper. Mix together well. Transfer the mixture to the prepared baking dish and form it into a 9-by-5-inch loaf

Providing a healthier option than most dips, fresh salsa can be added to a number of dishes for that needed kick.

In a small bowl, stir together the oil and remaining 1/2cup of salsa. Spread the mixture over the meat loaf. Bake for 60 to 70 minutes, or until the meat loaf is no longer pink at the center. Serves 8.

Grilled Salsa Turkey Burger

3 ounces ground turkey

- 1 tablespoon medium-hot salsa
- tablespoon crushed baked tortilla chips
- (1-ounce) reduced-fat Monterey
- Jack cheese slice (optional)
- 1 whole wheat hamburger bun, split 1 lettuce leaf

Additional salsa

Combine turkey, 1 tablespoon salsa and chips in a small bowl; mix lightly. Shape into patty. Lightly oil grid or broiler rack to prevent sticking. Grill over medium-hot coals or broil 4 to 6 inches from heat 6 minutes on each side or until no longer pink in center, turning once. Top with cheese during last 2 minutes of grilling time, if desired. Place bun, cut sides down, on grill during last 2 minutes of grilling time to toast until lightly browned.

Cover the bottom half of bun with lettuce; top with burger, additional salsa and top half of bun. Serve immediately. Serves 1. (Adapted from the editors of Easy Home Cooking Magazine)

Corn-Salsa Pita Sandwiches

Sandwich Ingredients:

- ears of corn or 2 (8-ounce) cans of corn,
- well drained (but fresh is best)
- 1-1/2 cups shredded red cabbage 1 green bell pepper, stemmed, seeded and chopped
- 1 tomato, chopped 6 bacon slices, fried or microwaved

6 pitas 1-1/2 cups sharp cheddar cheese, shredded

Salsa Ingredients:

- 1 cup sour cream 3 tablespoons lime juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped onions
- 1 garlic clove, minced 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper or to taste

Mix all the salsa ingredients well and chill. For sandwiches, first remove husks from corn, remove corn silk and snap off ends of stalks. Have a pot of salted water boiling rapidly. Drop in corn ears, cover and cook for 5 to 7 minutes. Řemove corn from water, drain and cut corn from cob.

Combine finely shredded cabbage, green pepper, tomato and cooked, crumbled bacon in a large bowl. Stir in 3/4 cup of the salsa mix, blending well. Cover and chill mixture. When ready to serve, fill pita bread with corn mixture, top with remaining salsa and shredded cheese. (Adapted from fooddownunder.com)

Baked Salsa Chicken with Broiled Asparagus

2 boneless chicken breasts 10 to 12 crumbled Club crackers 2 tablespoons olive oil 1/2 cup favorite salsa, juice drained and reserved 1 bunch of fresh asparagus spears

Crush the crackers into a bowl. Add olive oil and mix until all the crackers are uniformly saturated with oil. Add salsa and lightly mix. Coat a baking dish with olive oil and place the chicken breasts in the dish. Completely cover the breasts with the cracker and salsa mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for approximately 40 minutes.

About 10 minutes before the breasts are done, remove from the oven and gently pour the salsa juice evenly over the chicken and continue cooking until cracker mixture begins to get dark and crisp on top. While chicken is cooking, wash the asparagus and break or cut off the hard portion of the stems. Put approximately 2 or 3 tablespoons of olive oil in a large bowl with salt and pepper and a touch of garlic powder. Toss asparagus until lightly coated with oil. Evenly spread the asparagus on a cookie sheet covered with aluminum foil. Broil for about 4 to 6 minutes then turn over and broil until they just begin to blacken. Serves 2. Sunny Conley, a former Las Crucen, is an award-winning cookbook author and food columnist. If you have a chile recipe or idea to share, contact Sunny at sunnyconley@earthlink.net.

A second living room found adjacent to the kitchen gives the Parras another space to relax while cooking.

Voted Best Yard Makeover in a 2006 statewide contest held by Rowland's Nursery, the Parras have spent much time and effort developing their backyard into a maze of plants and art.

Filled with curves and angles, the kitchen is their most recent renovation and includes woodwork by Roger Atkins and a light fixture called "84 Lamps."

An artistic backyard fire pit is found in one of five patio areas in the Parras' backyard.

The two-story master bedroom has a very open feeling with the master bathroom and a small living area located on the bottom floor.
